

Tight Controls Expected On Food-Price Increases

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration may give the food industry an early release from the 60-day price freeze, but sources said today that new government controls on food-price increases will be tight.

readied an announcement on Phase 4 wage-price controls to follow the freeze. President Nixon remained in Bethesda Naval Medical Center recovering from viral pneumonia. The White House said Nixon planned to take no part in the announcement. "Food will be center stage," one source said of the Phase 4 unveiling. The food industry says it has been hurt by the freeze. Processors have complained of a profit squeeze, some farmers are withholding supplies from the market and the industry has predicted some spot shortages. Meanwhile, a former governor of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange said higher food prices were largely caused by insiders who are manipulating the commodity futures market. Harry H. Fortes told a House Judiciary subcommittee studying food prices that a recent jump in soybean prices from $3.31 a bushel to $12.90 could not have happened without manipulation. Fortes, a Chicago lawyer who left the exchange in 1970, recommended that the Justice Department investigate the futures market for possible anti-trust violations. The administration has hinted broadly that the freeze, due to expire Aug. 12, will be lifted in stages, remaining the full 60 days in some industries and coming off early in others. John T. Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council, told newsmen that the new controls program will be "fairly tough." A congressional source said it would allow processors and middlemen to raise their prices, on a dollar-to-dollar basis, to recover such costs as wage increases and higher prices for raw materials. But wages were to be subject to roughly the same rules on the books now. Generally, this means that pay boosts are to be held to 5.5 per cent a year. Anne Armstrong, a presidential adviser and a member of the Cost of Living Council, said she does not think there will be any additional wage constraints. The administration has said repeatedly that Phase 4 will be tougher and more comprehensive than either the mandatory wage-price control system known as Phase 2 or the largely voluntary system of Phase 3.

They said the nation should expect closer monitoring of price increases by the Internal Revenue Service, tougher enforcement and a larger staff of IRS agents to do the job. Currently, about 3,000 agents are charged with nationwide enforcement of price controls.

Alaskan Pipeline Foes Gird For House Battle

By JAMES PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Stung by defeat in the Senate, environmentalists moved to the House today in their battle to block construction of the Alaska oil pipeline. The shift came after the Senate Tuesday passed a bill to remove all legal barriers to immediate construction of the pipeline. "We're hoping that wiser heads will prevail in the House," said Richard Olson of the Wilderness Society. "If the House should follow the same faulty line of reasoning as the Senate, that would be the end of the ballgame." The Senate bill declared that the federal government gave adequate consideration to an alternative pipeline route through Canada in preparing an environmental impact statement. And it granted a consortium of oil companies the right-of-way across federal lands. Similar provisions were included in a pipeline bill reported out of a House interior subcommittee Tuesday. The two issues were the basis for the lawsuit filed by the Wilderness Society and other environmental organizations that have blocked construction of the pipeline for more than three years. If the House upholds the Senate, Olson said, "I think this would be the end of the lawsuit. I don't know of any basis for a legal challenge." Most observers predict the House will concur in the Senate action. If so, construction could begin by late fall or early spring. Backers of the pipeline contend immediate construction is essential to bring crude oil from the North Slope to the lower forty-eight states to alleviate the energy crisis. The Senate action came the same day the Federal Trade Commission accused the nation's eight major oil companies of anti-competitive practices. The FTC said the firms caused higher gasoline prices for consumers and distorted supply patterns, inflicting heavy casualties among independent marketers. Environmentalists oppose the pipeline out of concern it would lead to widespread oil spills that would despoil the Arctic tundra and Northwest coast.

Give Up Job

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — An Albemarle County grand jury charged with deciding what constitutes pornography in the county has given up the job after less than a full day's deliberation. The Circuit Court grand jury, convened Tuesday morning at the request of county Commonwealth's Atty. Charles R. Haugh, reported later in the day that it would make no finding. One member of the all-white jury of five men and two women told newsmen it had decided it was not competent to set obscenity standards for the entire county, which has a population of 40,000. Haugh said that as a result of the grand jury's decision, the county will not seek to enforce state obscenity laws.

Greenville Man On Board Of Transportation

A 36-year-old Greenville attorney, Robert Browning, is one of six members of the old North Carolina State Highway Commission named to the new state Board of Transportation by Gov. James Holshouser yesterday. Browning, a Greenville High School graduate who attended Duke University before receiving his law degree from the University of North Carolina, was among nine persons—six of them former NCSHC members—named by Holshouser to the Transportation board that will help oversee the state's highway system. The new Board of Transportation was created by the 1973 General Assembly as a Secondary Roads Council to watch over the state's network of secondary roads. Browning said this morning, "Of course I am happy with the appointment... at being selected by the Governor for the job." He said, "I hope the Transportation Board will continue to emphasize the need for a major revamping of our inter-city road system. I'm sure also that the Transportation Board will be looking into the need for mass transit in North Carolina. The New Board of Transportation is composed of 12 members—nine of whom are appointed by the Governor, and one each appointed by the lieutenant governor, the Speaker of the House and the joint minority caucus leader. It replaces the 23-member Highway Commission. Browning, active in the Holshouser campaign, is a member of the Greenville City Parking Authority. He was named to the old Highway Commission in January, shortly after the state's first Republican Governor of this century took office. A Greenville native, Browning served on active duty with the U. S. Navy from 1957 to 1962 and is currently a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve. He is married to the former Mary Ann Williams of Virginia Beach, Va., and they have two children, Michael and Scott.

ROBERT BROWNING

Bypass Opened

The US 264 bypass at Greenville was opened to traffic officials at the N.C. Division of Highways announced. A final inspection of the project was made Tuesday by state engineers. The project, on which work was started in 1971 is 5.3 miles long and runs from US 264 Business northeasterly to NC 11 and US 13, bypassing the city on the eastern side. It is a four-lane highway and includes a bridge across the Tar River. The contract cost was $3.1 million. The Barnhill Contracting Co. of Tarboro, which did the work on the project, actually finished two weeks ahead of the August 1 completion date called for in the contract.

Urge Shipping U.S. Soybeans

BRUSSELS (AP) — Common Market leaders have ordered their chief farm executive to Washington to try to keep soybeans moving to Western Europe despite official American curbs on the animal feed. Under Tuesday's order, Pierre Lardinois, in charge of agriculture on the executive commission, flies to Washington on Thursday to see Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz and Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz.

Home On Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon gave approval for Phase 4 economic controls from his hospital suite Tuesday, and got word from his doctors that he can go home Friday. The chief executive had his busiest day at the hospital since he became ill with viral pneumonia last Thursday. And his visitors, including Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Senate leaders Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott, found him relaxed, alert and in good spirits. The doctors reported Nixon free of lung congestion for the first time, with a normal temperature and so much improved that they let him increase his work schedule. It also was announced Nixon will go to Camp David, Md., Friday to begin his recuperation over the weekend. He is to return to the White House late Monday. Nixon held meetings involving seven of his top aides, including an hour's session with Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and counselors Melvin R. Laird and Bryce Harlow. Emerging from the hospital afterwards, Shultz told reporters "we have all the presidential guidance we need." The Phase 4 controls were scheduled to be announced today.

Request Nixon's Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee has given President Nixon "just a very short period of time" to reply to its request for the presidential tape recordings that have become central to the investigation. A majority of the seven-member committee is on record as favoring a subpoena for the tapes if President Nixon invokes the doctrine of executive privilege and refuses to surrender them voluntarily. At the same time, it was learned that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox also plans to ask for the tapes. Since Cox is a member of the executive branch the separation of powers or executive privilege doctrines presumably might not bar him from obtaining the files. The President invoked the executive privilege doctrine Tuesday in refusing to allow members of his Secret Service guard to describe the presidential listening system to the committee, say how the tapes are stored or who has access to them. And Nixon Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters that the taped recordings of every conversation the President has had in his executive offices since the spring of 1971 are considered to be presidential papers, which Nixon already has refused to send to Capitol Hill. The committee voted unanimously Tuesday to renew its request for the documents and to ask the President to supply the tapes of all conversations bearing on the Watergate affair. Later, Samuel Dash, the committee's chief counsel, told reporters, "We're allowing for just a very short time for a reply."

Crop Duster's Last Flight

CRASHED—A routine day of crop dusting ended in tragedy yesterday when the plane in which Gary Malpass, 26, was piloting crashed in a bean field near Snow Hill on N. C. 48. According to Greene County deputy sheriff J. G. Harris, witnesses said the plane apparently hit the top of a large sycamore tree, then banked around and nosedived in a bean field about 200 yards off highway 58. The farm Malpass was dusting was reportedly that of William Suggs. Malpass was employed by Craft Spraying Inc., of Farmville. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Builder Introduced To Hospital Board

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Ralph Hall, an engineer with Freeman-White Associates was introduced to the Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees last night. Hall will have an office here from now until the hospital is completed, working closely with the construction company. He is now studying the plans and specifications for the building. The letting of bids hoped for this summer is being delayed because of technicalities in the bond indenture agreement as seen by the N.C. Local Government Commission. A meeting is set for next Tuesday to try to iron out these small problems and go forward with the project, giving a 60-day notice for bids. Miss Jean Owens, director of nursing, reported on the hospital's nursing program. The hospital now has 265 full-time and 33 part-time members of the patient-care team, she said. These include registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, nurses' aides, and male attendants. Each unit is staff according to the ratio of nurses needed to patients. For instance, the coronary care unit has one RN for every six patients. Every person now dealing directly with patients has had specialized training, she said. An aide must have 160 hours of training at Pitt Technical Institute. Hospital Administrator Jack Richardson reported that an inspection team has given the hospital full accreditation. Arrangements have been made to pay back some 155,000 to Medicare-Medicaid at a rate of

Tobacco Growers Vote To Keep Quota System

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County tobacco growers followed the trend of the state Tuesday in giving overwhelming support to the continuation of acreage-poundage marketing quotas for the next three years. According to W.F. Tyson, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, 99 per cent of the growers voting in the county in yesterday's referendum gave their approval to the flue-cured tobacco program. Tyson said that 2,491 voted in favor of marketing quotas for the 1974, 1975, and 1976 crops and only five voiced their disapproval of the program in Pitt County. Statewide, the issue was approved by 98.91 per cent as 65,317 voted for quotas and 719 voted against. A favorable vote of two-thirds or more of the total votes was necessary to continue the marketing quota system. The county chairman reported that, as a result of the referendum, price support will be available to a grower whose harvested acreage is within the farm's flue-cured tobacco acreage allotment. Marketings up to ten per cent above the poundage quota will be deducted from the farm's quota for the following year, Tyson continued, with a penalty applying to all marketings above the 110 per cent of the farm's quota. He explained that if less than the poundage quota for a farm is marketed in any year, the difference will be added to the farm's quota for the following year. Two other important issues also received approval by lopsided margins in the county as well as overall state voting. Growers in Pitt County voted

State Sen. Kirby Opines Med Study Panel To Offer Alternatives

WILSON — State Sen. Russell Kirby of Wilson said Tuesday that the minds of a five-member medical study panel named by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors to survey the medical education needs in the state are "not completely closed." Sen. Kirby's comment was based on a meeting with the

"I thought it was a very useful meeting," he said. "I think as far as people of this sort even do, these... appeared to have an open mind. Certainly their minds were not completely closed." As a result of last week's meetings with a number of politicians, Kirby said the panel is "now aware of a number of relaxations we made to them. We made a point with them that the General Assembly has gone on record... many years ago... in favor of a medical school at East Carolina University... and repeated after the original commitment the General Assembly has recommitted themselves to follow up on the medical school at East Carolina. "I let them know t would be a great breach of faith if anything came along to keep the medical school from developing at ECU." The five medical experts — all from out of state — are expected to report sometime this fall with recommendations as to what course the state should follow in the field of medical education and how best to provide medical services for rural areas of the state where physicians are in such short supply. "I pointed to the size of the area of Eastern North Carolina," Kirby explained, "and that it contains some two million people... bigger than 16 states..." He told the study committee the question of medical care "is probably the rawest nerve as far as the general public is concerned the lack of medical facilities." Kirby — a Wilson attorney formerly in partnership with Lt. Gov. Him Hunt — said the committee was told that supporters realize that the establishment of a degree-granting medical school at ECU is "not a panacea, but at least a step in the right direction. "We realize," Kirby told the committee, that North Carolina "is not a rich state, but on the other hand, we can afford it... and the medical school can be paid for. Ultimately he stressed, "It is only a matter of priority." The senator said he predicts the panel "will recommend alternatives... different approaches that can be taken to solve the medical needs of the people."

"I think," he said, "one of the big concerns they (the panel) have is the fact that there is no teaching hospital for students once they get through the academic phase of their training. That will be a big thing in their report," he theorized. "They consider that a deficiency at ECU. Doctors tend to locate where they have residency programs."

Mother And Daughter Were Both Adopted

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 By Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old woman. I am working part-time, doing graduate work in college, and also taking care of a terminally ill mother at night.

Two months ago I gave up my newborn illegitimate daughter for adoption. Her father was my one and only relationship, and he doesn't know about the birth.

I wanted more than anything in the world to keep my baby, but felt that since I had given her life, I had an obligation to give her a decent future. Abby, there was no way I could have done it at that time.

While I carried her, I would stroke my stomach hoping she would somehow be aware of it, as it was the only physical affection I would ever be able to give her. I might add that I, too, am adopted. Maybe that's why I made the decision in favor of adoption. My parents were absolutely wonderful.

The people who adopted my baby were childless. I heard they both wept when she was handed over to them.

My question: How can I learn to live with the thought that I have a child somewhere in the world, without yearning to see her, and without wondering what she is like? Do mothers ever get over a thing like this? EMPTY ARMS

DEAR EMPTY: Don't dwell on your loss—dwell on your child's gain. As an adopted child, with happy memories of your own childhood, you have answered your own questions.

Now you can put yourself in the place of your natural mother who loved you so much she gave you up for your sake.

Have patience. Your day will come, and you will be rewarded for your unselfish decision.

DEAR ABBY: I have a 5-year-old nephew who really worries me. He is exceptionally bright, but I don't know where he got this thing about money. He is absolutely fascinated with it.

He has a "piggy" bank which he can open himself, and he makes a game out of counting his money. He has no interest in toys, he just plays with his money.

I say it's unhealthy. His parents think it's cute. He gets a wild look in his eye when he handles money. It's really frightening.

Neither of his parents is money mad. Would I be out of line if I told his parents they should try to encourage him to find another hobby? Or am I concerned over nothing? CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: A preoccupation with anything can be unhealthy. Tell his parents of your concern. But it's even money they won't do anything about it.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90009. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Handwriting Analysis Won't Tell Fortune

By VIRGINIA CHURN Times-Dispatch Writer RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Give Lillian Perlow a sample of your handwriting and the first thing she does is look at how you cross your t's.

Mrs. Perlow is a specialist in handwriting analysis, and she says there are 37 ways in which a "t" can reveal a character trait. Tall t's mean pride; a t crossed low on the stem indicates a lack of self-confidence.

"Handwriting is the mental image of what we are," Mrs. Perlow said. "It is brainwriting. Studies show that even when a person has no arms and has to hold the pencil or pen in his mouth to write, his character traits come through just the same.

The proper title for Mrs. Perlow's specialty is graphoanalysis, a term that is defined by the International Graphoanalysis society as the study of the individual strokes of handwriting to determine character and personality of the writer.

Mrs. Perlow, who is certified as a master graphoanalyst by the society, often teaches college courses.

She says a person's handwriting is as distinctive as his fingerprints. Formation of strokes, spacing of letters, and the slant and depth of the writing can give the trained observer information about the writer's goals, thinking abilities, fears, defenses, integrity and imagination—all traits that lead to what makes up an individual, she said.

From a person's handwriting, Mrs. Perlow says she can tell "whether he cool and objective; how he relates to others; if he's responsive, impulsive and warm-hearted; how he thinks—is he a quick learner or does he need repetitive instruction; can he dig up his own facts of does he want to rely on someone else's judgment."

Mrs. Perlow is quick with a comment that graphoanalysis does not belong in the occult category.

"One of the first things I say is that I'm not a fortune teller," she added.

Graphoanalysis, she said is a scientific method of personality assessment based on more than 50 years of research. Handwriting analysis has acquired a reputation as a parlor game because many of the early analysts sat in fortune telling booths at fairs, she said. Serious students and practitioners of graphoanalysis, Mrs. Perlow said, are trying to eradicate that image.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Home Economics Extension Agent

This hasn't been an easy decade for dictionary editors—not with the word "housewife" in dispute.

The term which entered the English language some 700 years ago has recently come in for much lively discussion among its practitioners, their husbands, and other interested parties including Women's Liberation exponents.

While suggested alternate terms have ranged from "Household engineer" to "domestic economist," as many a "housewife" will tell you it's not so much the terminology as its interpretation that's at stake.

Whether you accept Webster's definition of "A married woman who occupies herself with the domestic affairs of her household and who engages in employment for no pay or profit," or the Random House's "... wife who does all or most of the cleaning and cooking in a household and who holds no other job," or opt for the more informal "the one who stays at home and runs things," you are likely to find a loophole somewhere, many claim.

While housewives devote a bulk of their days to cooking, washing, cleaning and generally picking up ("I know half the time I spend on housekeeping is wasted," says one, "The trouble is that I never know which half") it has remained until now for household work to be recognized formally as a social effort.

An ongoing study under a grant from the U. S. Department of Agriculture now gives families and others interested in the relationship of household work to the national economy a measure of what it would cost to replace the work at home with hired services.

Here is how some of those figures add up: In an average family with two children, one a five-year old, the other an infant, the mother puts in seventy hours a week. The dollar value of her labor amounts to $146 on a weekly basis.

A woman with three older children between the ages of six to eleven would be performing services worth $108 a week. If there are four children between the ages of six and eleven, the value of the wife's labor would amount to $117 a week.

According to Dr. Kathryn Walker who has surveyed some 1,378 families to update New York, the findings should go a long way toward improving the current depiction of the "housewife."

"With a useful definition of dollar value for this work," she says, "we can dismiss the demeaning attitudes toward women and household work that exist in one form or another."

According to the Institute of Life Insurance, among the 51 million women insured for an estimated $225 billion worth of life insurance at the end of 1972 were a great many housewives whose loss could prove financially disastrous to their families if they had to be replaced with hired services.

Yet another word in the dictionary which may have to undergo some scrutiny is "leisure," according to some women. After all, furs their argument, unless a "housewife" and her family come to grips with just how much time she devotes to household work, how is she to know where she fits in our new "leisure" society?

Some wives will tell you that their definition of spare time covers the period after the dinner dishes are put away and they get to put up their feet in late evening. Some, in fact, claim they have clocked this "leisure" cycle and they have come up with anywhere from thirty to as much as forty-five minutes a day.

Mrs. Dan K. Wooten, former extension agent, is busy making draperies for her new house. Phyllis is using the new iron-on fusible to hem her draperies. There are several brands available at local fabric shops; one brand can be purchased by the yard, another comes in pre-packaged strips. Just think of the time Phyllis is saving, not to mention the fact that there will be no stitches to show the hemline.

When was the last time you had to cut your child's hair because it had chewing gum in it? Mrs. Hubert Wheelock of Greenville suggests that you try peanut butter next time instead of scissors. Yes, you read it right—peanut butter. Sylvia says you just put some peanut butter where the chewing gum is and gradually work the gum down and out of the hair.

Alimony Reverses In Italian Suit

BOLZANO, Italy (WNS)—Women's Lib in the Italian Tyrol: Carolina Sottoperra was so unhappy with the meager earnings of her husband Frantz that she went to work herself. With her pay, she bought a tobacco shop and built it into thriving success. The more the shop prospered, the more Frantz failed, physically and morally. Finally, Mrs. Sottoperra could take no more: she left her husband and sued for divorce. The court has granted the divorce, but Carolina must pay Frantz $45 a month in alimony.

Port Expansion Is Essential

Hopefully state authorities will make it clear that there are no plans to close the Morehead port. A controversy was stirred last week when Jack Hawke, deputy secretary of transportation reported that three shipping executives had recommended closing of the port.

Subsequently Hawke issued a statement saying that state "plans are for improvement, not abandonment" of the Morehead port.

Earlier Hawke had reported that Morehead was losing money, while a profit is being shown at Wilmington.

Well, the Morehead port is still very new as ports along the Atlantic seaboard go. It must be given time and the resources to develop so that it will eventually show a profit.

For the present, we are convinced that the expansion of the Morehead port is absolutely essential to the continued economic development of the more heavily populated central belt of the Coastal Plains. We also believe that some of the astounding recent industrial growth of the Central Coastal Plain as been due to the access of the Morehead port. Thus if we continue to develop the port then the industrial development should continue and we can anticipate a profit on the Morehead operations in a reasonable time.

North Carolina needs both of its ports. Lack of port facilities held us back for far too many years and we have had a lot of catching up to do. If Morehead is given the facilities it needs to compete in the world of modern shipping we have no doubt that it will be a successful operation.

'102 Per Cent' For Kissinger

By ROWLANDEVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The polished corridors of the State Department last week echoed a mocking sound: ridicule of Secretary of State William P. Rogers for what one of his underlings called "a faux pas that anyone in his job for four years should have avoided."

Behind that soft mocking is the beginning of a new low-keyed move to pry Rogers out of the State and replace him with Dr. Henry A. Kissinger. True, Kissinger is loathed by some Foggy Bottom diplomats for usurping U.S. foreign policy as President Nixon's alter ego. But he is also seen as the one man who could reestablish State's traditional control and arrest the abysmal decline of morale there.

The Rogers faux pas, as perceived by foreign policy experts both as State and elsewhere in the Nixon administration, was suddenly broaching the subject of U.S. diplomatic recognition of East Germany with Otto Winzer, East German foreign minister, in Helsinki 10 days ago.

Some Western European diplomats defend Rogers on grounds he was merely confronting a future probability. Nevertheless, the fact is that he approached the East German official without any plan, without authority from President Nixon and only because he happened to find himself seated near Herr Winzer.

Likewise, Rogers's subsequent, highly-publicized visit to Prague—the first official visit by a NATO foreign minister to the capital of Czechoslovakia since the Soviet invasion in 1968—stuffed senior U.S. diplomatic officials.

As one asked rhetorically: "Why should Rogers make himself the first Westerner to crash the barrier?" His answer: "Because the President sends Kissinger to Moscow and Peking and he has nowhere else to go."

Unfair or not, it is precisely such backbiting criticism that makes life miserable at middle and top levels of the State Department.

The demoralization there can be measured. Early in the Nixon-Kissinger-Rogers years, Rogers's top deputies valiantly tried to find out what U.S. policy really was, begging Rogers at morning staff meetings to tell them.

Soon, however, they discovered that Rogers himself did not know. Today, therefore, the questions simply are not asked at staff meetings. One example: there has been no informed discussion at top State Department levels of Kissinger's forthcoming trip to Peking. Another example high-ranking diplomats in the State Department are convinced that neither they nor Rogers himself possess all the details and background of the second Nixon-Brezhnev summit last month.

"We don't even ask for memcons (memoranda of conversations) any longer," a high-level State Department official told us. "We know we can't get them."

Some administration policymakers outside the White House, moreover, worry about possible damage to U.S. foreign policy by what they consider systematic exclusion of the regular bureaucratic machinery from submitting advice and participating in policymaking. The danger, as these officials see it, is that the tight control of information flows by Kissinger's small staff could lead to dangerous mistakes.

Naturally, Kissinger's associates at the National Security Council (NSC) deride all such talk, contending Rogers had all the facts about the second Soviet summit and other key events. They dispute the charge that the President and Kissinger make policy in a vacuum. Finally, they defend secrecy about Kissinger's forthcoming Peking trip on grounds it is nobody's business but the President's.

Even if this NSC rebuttal is accurate, it does not change the fact that State Department professionals feel morale there is deteriorating so badly that Kissinger must replace Rogers.

Kissinger says nothing, but all Washington knows he would love to cap his spectacular career by becoming Secretary of State. The problem is Rogers. After three agonizing years in Kissinger's long shadow, he has learned to live with his impotence and apparently cherishes his ceremonial role. White House insiders say only a direct command from his old friend Richard Nixon would persuade him to leave.

Nevertheless, some presidential advisers far removed from the foreign policy field feel a switch of Kissinger for Rogers has now become essential to stop the State Department from descending into complete bureaucratic paralysis.

They say, moreover, that Mr. Nixon's post-Watergate policy of decentralizing White House power back to the cabinet departments would be stunningly dramatized by moving Kissinger to State.

Strength For Today

ONE AIM, ONE FRIEND

When in the seventeenth century a rapid change of monarchs in England brought a rapid change in the established faith, a Vicar of Bray gained notoriety by twice changing his religion and twice changing it back again. A verse written about him: "And this is the law I will maintain Until my dying day, Sir; That whatsoever king may reign, I'll still be the Vicar of Bray, Sir."

His spirit still lives on in the modern world. Today it is not so much a matter of men changing their religious faith as it is in changing their opinions, their moral standards, their political affiliations in the interest of self-aggrandizement. When confronted by any novel situation requiring choice, people of this sort ask only one question, "What do I get out of this?" Like the Vicar of Bray, they have only one aim—personal advancement—and one friend—themselves.

Things We've Learned

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—While all the facts in the Watergate have not come out yet, it is time to sum up what the country knows so far about this fascinating affair.

The average cost of a White House aide's honeymoon is $4,800. It cost American Airlines $100,000 to fly Herbert Kalmbach from New York to Washington.

John Mitchell, who told the country to "judge us by what we do, not what we say," can't remember what he did. The only person in the Nixon Administration whom the country still believes is Julie Eisenhower.

No one approved of G. Gordon Liddy's plan to break into the Democratic Party headquarters. He did it on his own, against the protests of everyone in the White House and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President.

The best time to go to the bathroom when watching the Watergate Senate hearings is when Sen. Joseph Montoya is questioning the witness.

No one talked to the President of the United States from June 17, 1972, until March 22, 1973, about his own political campaign.

It takes $20 million to get an incumbent President nominated by his party for a second term.

The only person in the Watergate affair who doesn't have a good lawyer is the President of the United States.

If you commit a crime involving the Administration, the first thing you should ask for is immunity.

John Ehrlichman's favorite hobby was recording the conversations of people who came to his office.

E. Howard Hunt has a thing about red wigs. John Dean was running the White House alone for the past year.

The CIA does not launder money in Mexico. L. Patrick Gray might now be head of the FBI if he only knew enough not to burn state's evidence.

The biggest problem the Nixon Administration faced in the first four years was how to prevent an "enemy" from eating dinner at the White House.

If Charles Colson didn't like you, you could expect an audit by IRS.

The White House did not earn interest on the $350,000 kept in H.R. Hademan's safe.

Had the President known what was going on in regard to the Watergate, according to John Mitchell, he would have taken action and would have lost the election.

Sen. Howard Baker, as far as the American housewife is concerned, is the "cutest" member of the Ervin committee.

When people commit a burglary for a political party, their lawyer's fees should be paid in cash and their

World Is Mad, Not You

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Did it ever occur to you that you may not be neurotic after all? Have you ever had the sturdiness of mind to think that the rest of the world may be mad — but that you aren't? Well, in the distraught and fouled-up world we live in, it is important now and then for everyone to check his relative sanity level and to compare it with his peers.

Here is a simple way for you to find out. Simply answer the following questions:

Are you storing away an unnecessary amount of things to meet a possible shortage? For example do you have 15 rolls of toilet paper or 25 shopping bags taking up space in your closet, when you couldn't possibly need more than a third that many at any one time?

Now that Communists are acceptable socially, at least internationally, do you look under your bed at night for something else to be afraid of like, say, muggers?

Can you remember the exact year and place that you last saw a live bluebird?

If you had an apartment overlooking the patio of a friend and peeked down one afternoon and saw your friend's wife welcoming erotic advances from a strange man, would you (1) spray the couple below with a kettle of cold water; (2) phone your friend at his office; (3) call the police emergency and report a theft in progress, or (4) just keep right on peeking?

Suppose you had to borrow $250 in a hurry. Could you get it from a friend, or would you have to go to a loan company?

If the FBI or any other investigative agency checked three of your neighbors about your character, how many of those neighbors do you suppose would report the incident to you? All three? Two? One?

Letters submitted for publication must be limited to 300 words, and signed.

To the editor: Recently there was an article in this newspaper which stated a few amusing facts.

The only thing that wasn't amusing was the amusing facts. Approximately 50 men became somewhat disturbed. The men of the Greenville Fire Department read of a 16 per cent increase and were informed of a five per cent cost of living raise. My immediate response was one of great enthusiasm—could see an extra vegetable or even an extra piece of bread. The only thing I can see now is an $8 deduction in my paycheck.

One of the amusing facts I mention is that 1969 figures were quoted as being my new pay scale. Therefore, there is no 16 per cent increase in pay, which is definitely misleading to the public. A long meeting with the city manager found us two pay brackets under the Police Department. It is the personal opinion of the city manager that the Police is more valuable to Greenville than the fire Department or Rescue men. I am not saying we are better, but simply that we are equal.

Citizens of Greenville, wake up and respond with interest to our cry. We protect your home 24 hours a day. We stress safety, happiness, and well being throughout our land. We need your support and interest.

To the editor of The Daily Reflector, I challenge an expression of feeling toward this immoral misfortune.

Less Levy Due Interest Rate

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Aside from creating controversy, the lifting of interest rate ceilings on savings accounts is likely to have another very visible and sobering impact on the lives of Americans.

It will, of course, have a profitable impact too. Passbook savers at commercial banks will be able to get 5 per cent instead of 4.5. And at savings banks and associations, a 5.25 per cent rate is an improvement over 5 per cent.

But despite this good news, it is likely that there will also be an immediate de-emphasis of levity at the local bank and a reassertion of that grey, sober mood that once was considered so appropriate when money was involved.

When savings institutions became aware 30 years ago that ordinary Americans were accumulating substantial bundles of money they were forced to recognize that they must be catered to. Consumers were a growing force.

As they accumulated capital, the savings institutions learned, they might just as often come through the doors with a fistful of money to deposit as they might come with empty pockets and in need of a loan.

Consumers, they concluded, must be encouraged, even entertained if need be. And so, deprived by federal regulations from competing for the consumer dollar by offering higher interest rates, the savings institutions discovered the lure of "fun 'n games."

Having made this discovery later in life than others, the money men found themselves in an unrestrained revel. Savings institutions began to look like catalog stores, offering furs, trips and assorted household hardware.

In some communities, competition seemed to depend on who offered the biggest premium, and it was rare in some neighborhood for a new outlet to open without creating a carnival to lure depositors from other banks.

But now, just as super-markets were forced to return competition from sweepstakes and stamps to prices, the banks also seem destined to return to at least part way to more serious, more realistic competition.

One provision of the new regulations is that banks and thrift institutions can offer a savings certificate of $1,000 with no interest ceiling at all if left to maturity in four years.

Seldom have saving institutions been given such an unfettered opportunity to compete for dollars. And knowing this, many savers will be unwilling to accept transistor radios in lieu of higher yields.

One innovation, already introduced by First Pennsylvania Banking & Trust Co., would guarantee 7.5 per cent, plus a cost of living bonus, on four-year certificates. The smallest certificate is $1,000.

The inflation bonus will be paid each year at the rate of 1/4 per cent interest for every 1 per cent increase in the consumer price index. A 4 per cent CPI rise means a 1 per cent higher interest payment.

Nuclear Protest Boat Under Tow

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP)—A French warship was believed towing an American schooner out of the danger zone around France's nuclear test area in the South Pacific today.

David Moodie, skipper of the 86-foot schooner Fri, radioed the New Zealand frigate Otago that 15 French sailors boarded his boat Tuesday after he rejected a written request to leave the area around the Mururoa Atoll. The test site is 850 miles southeast of Tahiti.

According to the Otago, the last message from the Fri said: "French have own radio on board and say they are taking our radio."

The schooner said the French minesweeper Dunkerquoise and a frigate were standing by. It was assumed that the minesweeper took the protest boat in tow.

The Otago, which is also in the area to protect the nuclear explosions believed imminent, said the Fri reported it was boarded in international waters 28 miles northwest of Mururoa. The radio report said Moodie earlier had sailed his schooner to within 12 miles of the atoll.

Moodie, 27, is from Sausalito, Calif., and has an international crew of seven men and three women aboard. One of the women is six months pregnant.

The New Zealand navy had said previously that the Otago would not interfere if the French took the Fri in tow.

Another private protest boat was reported headed for the test area today. Robert Wignall, 34, former senior prosecutor in Australian New Guinea, sailed from Tahiti in his 30-foot yacht, Carmen. He said he expected to reach the danger zone by Friday.

France warned all ships and planes to stay 72 miles away from Mururoa beginning last Wednesday. The weather in the area for the past few days has been reported perfect for a nuclear explosion.

The failure of the French to go ahead with the first blast has resulted in speculation that technical difficulties have developed.

approved a project. The inference was obvious, particularly when he says that he always inspected roads before he approved them for paving.

Property Owners Participate

Ken Mauney, the district highway engineer, says, however, Sunrise Circle is considered a subdivision road that can be paved by the state only if the property owners on each side of the unpaved quarter-mile put $2 a front foot each. It's not a through street, and is primarily used by residents, no matter how old the houses are, he says. The point system, revised by Republicans, does not qualify it in terms of churches, schools, but routes and other criteria.

Mrs. Farmer and Mrs. Tessener aren't buying the explanation. All they know—and the feeling was repeated across the state as Democrats gave way to Republicans—is that their road isn't being paved while others are. The explanation for some others' being paved in Cleveland County is officially that physical work beyond staking had already been begun, and the road was finished even if they didn't qualify under the new criteria.

As for Mrs. Farmer and Mrs. Tessener, who say they can't use their yard for the dirt stirred up by passing cars: "We sure got let down."

Await Details On Kidnaping

ROME (AP) — The mother of J. Paul Getty III says she is waiting for ransom instructions from her son's kidnapers after receiving a letter from the 16-year-old saying he was in good condition and wanted the ransom paid.

Mrs. Getty, the divorced wife of a son of oil billionaire J. Paul Getty, said on Tuesday that she was now convinced her missing son had been kidnaped and that the kidnapers had been in touch with her.

"We have asked the police not to interfere, and we are now asking the press to help us," she said. "We want them to carry the message that the contact has been made and the family is ready."

In London, the boy's grandfather said he would not pay the ransom. Getty said he loved the boy but payment of ransom "only encourages kidnapers."

Mrs. Getty said the abductors did not specify a ransom figure in their contact Tuesday afternoon.

Later Tuesday, she received the letter from her son through Martine and Marie Zacher, German twins who are close friends of the youth. Police said the letter was mailed to the girls' home although it was intended for the boy's family.

Martine told police she was certain the handwriting was Paul's.

The postmark on the envelope was illegible, police said.

Known in the Italian press as the "golden hippie" because of the circles he frequented in Rome, young Getty was last seen on the night of July 9 leaving a Rome discotheque and then talking with a Belgian girl at the Piazza Navona.

His mother, the former actress Gail Harris, returned home two days later from her country home and was told by an anonymous telephone caller that Paul had been kidnaped and a ransom demand would be made later.

Police launched a nationwide hunt for the youth. But until Mrs. Getty's report Tuesday, there had been doubt that he had been kidnaped. He often had disappeared for several days at a time.

Library Has Shows Set

Three puppet shows and a children's play have been readied for presentation at East Branch Library on East Tenth Street tomorrow afternoon.

Two showings have been set, the first for 2:30 p.m. and the second at 4:00 p.m.

Mrs. Kay Taylor, librarian at East Branch, says the trio of puppet shows to be performed are The Princess and the Pea; The Boy Who Cried Wolf; and The Three Wishes.

The puppet shows are being directed by Charlie Hayek.

Miss Kim Carpenter has adapted and will direct Sleeping Beauty, the play that will be part of the children's program.

About 16 local children, ranging in age from 8 to 16, are taking part in the productions.

All children of school age are invited to attend the puppet shows and play. There is no admission charge.

Will Throw A Football

Beginning at noon Friday, and continuing through 10:00 p.m. Saturday night, the Greenville Jaycees will conduct a football "Throw-A-Thon" at Pitt Plaza.

The local chapter will have someone throwing football for 34 consecutive hours in support of the Boys Home All Star Game and Boys Home at Lake Waccamaw.

The Jaycees will have available, for sale tickets for the 11th annual Boys Home Game to be played Saturday, July 28th, beginning at eight p.m.

The local chapter is once again host chapter for this state Jaycee project.

According to ticket sales chairman, Joe Ratcliffe, "The Greenville Jaycees underwrite this game, and have pledged to sell 3000 tickets locally."

The 1973 North-South clash is dedicated to the memory of the late coach Rube McCray, founder and director of Boy's Homes of North Carolina at Lake Waccamaw and Huntersville, N.C.

"If you plan to attend the game and wish to purchase advance tickets or make a donation, this will be an excellent time to do so," Ratcliffe said.

Honor Grad At Ceremony

2Lt. Andrew Kraus of Greenville received the Erickson Trophy and an engraved saber in recognition of his being named Distinguished Graduate during commissioning ceremonies recently at the North Carolina Military Academy.

Kraus was one of 26 second lieutenants receiving their gold bars upon completion of the final phase of a 12-month officer candidate program. He was one of six new lieutenants recognized for outstanding achievements.

2Lt. Samuel E. Barger of Kinston was presented a bronze replica of the Infantryman's "Follow Me" statue and a plaque awarded by the Association of the U.S. Army for having displayed outstanding qualities of leadership.

N.C. Military and Veterans Affairs Secretary, John J. Tolson III, addressed the graduates.

"The Great American Train Robbery," produced in 1903, was the first movie with a plot.

The U.S. Is Out, But War Grinds On In Vietnam

EDITOR'S NOTE — It is more than six months since the Vietnam cease-fire accords were signed in Paris. Where does that embattled country stand now? What of the future? Peter Arnett, a Pulitzer Prize winner for his coverage of the Vietnam war, recently returned to that country for the following report on Vietnam now.

By PETER ARNETT
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — The Vietnam battlefield is taking final, predictable shape. War has raged across it for three decades, and troops from six foreign nations have gambled with death here. The war is still on. The two cease-fire agreements signed in January and June this year have only slowed it down long enough for the United States to pull out entirely. The French Foreign Legion left 18 years earlier. The Australians, the New Zealanders, the Thais, and the South Koreans left more recently but without a backward glance or commitment.

On the battlefield now, alone for the first time, are the Vietnamese. And also for the first time in three decades it is possible to deduce the probable outcome on the battlefield if a political solution is delayed, and the war continues.

Here is how the battlefield looks to both sides:
The South Vietnamese.
The United States came to Vietnam to win the war, but when it became too costly in men and money, tactics were changed and the concept of "Vietnamization" was introduced. The idea was to build the Saigon army into a copy of the American one, as far as weaponry was concerned. The American strategy remained the same until the cease-fire agreement in January: Win the war.

Has "Vietnamization" worked? The answer has to be no. First of all, Saigon has had to yield an enormous part of the country to the Communist side, as much as 25 per cent according to some estimates. This lost terrain includes the sites of some of the most famous American battles—the Ia Drang Valley, Dak To, Khe Sanh, War Zone C.

Secondly, "Vietnamization" never did fill the holes left by the departing allied troops. "I have not been able to fill up the vacuum left when the South Koreans went home," said the chief of coastal Khanh Hoa Province, Col. Ly Ba Pham. The 3rd U.S. Marine Division held Quang Tri Province until the Americans went home. Now yellow-star Communist flags dot the hillsides there.

The same flags fly in Kontum Province, Loc Ninh, and the other "holes" left behind when the allies went home. "Vietnamization" never did work in weaponry, either. Saigon has one of the world's biggest air forces, but few planes that can do adequate aerial combat with the Hanoi government's MIG21s.

What about the combat soldiers? Last year the Saigon forces held Kontum and An Loc despite major Communist attacks, and fought back into Quang Tri City. But this was with the help of the whole U.S. Air Force arsenal.

The South Vietnamese soldier has grown used to attacking with massive air support. The Communist soldier has grown used to fighting under those American bombs.

Take away American planes and you have a much stronger Hanoi soldier and a much weaker Saigon one.

Here is how the Communist side shapes up.
The North Vietnamese are linking up territory captured inside South Vietnam via a road network estimated at 500 miles long. Truck traffic indicates a buildup of military equipment as massive as that which preceded the major Communist offensive of last year. Free from American bombing for the first time since 1965, the Communist side is laying in surface to air missiles around lengthened airstrips at Khe Sanh and the Asahau Valley, and building small towns.

The offensive last year brought the Communist armies to within touching distance of the major population centers. Heavy guns are within range of Kontum City, Quang Tri and Hue, and possibly Da Nang. The environs of Saigon are within a day's march of Communist regiments in War Zones C and D.

The whole Cambodian border along the populous Mekong Delta is in the hands of Communist troops, giving easy access to the population.

What is likely to happen? What is the shape of the future?

The hope was that the cease-fire agreements would put an end to the fighting this year, that zones of control could be determined, and that an orderly transition would be made to a political settlement.

At best the Communist side would like participation in a coalition government such as that in Laos; at worst, recognition by the Saigon government, and official acknowledgement of Communist control over occupied territory.

How effective can this guerrilla regeneration be? Knowledgeable Americans point out that while the South Vietnamese regular army is loyal to Saigon, the local militiamen who number in the hundreds of thousands, are loyal to the hamlets where they were born. Some fought for the Viet Cong before the government in Saigon extended its control in the late 1960s. Presumably they could fight for the VC again if government control erodes.

Another Communist option is this, the long-term indoctrination of selected South Vietnamese who are taken North. Such people returning to South Vietnam in the late 1950s created the Viet Cong insurgency.

Now from every province in the country there have been reports of young people from 12 to 18 years of age, either kidnapped or willingly leaving home, going North. In Binh Thuan on the coast 90 young persons were taken in April and May.

The Communist side is already repopulating Quang Tri with some of the more than 20,000 people it took North after overrunning the province in the 1972 offensive.

There is a third option: Another full-scale Communist offensive launched from secure base areas against Tay Ninh, An Loc, Kontum, Pleiku, Binh Dinh Province, Hue and selected Mekong Delta targets.

While anything can happen in Vietnam and often does, knowledgeable Americans and Vietnamese see the Communists using a combination of all their options.

Firstly, they will continue to strengthen their territory with roadbuilding and resettlement. They will attempt to build the Viet Cong back into a powerful military force. And they can launch the occasional "mini-offensive" that will help demoralize the Saigon army and grab more terrain.

If all this were to fail, then the Communists could take the long-term viewpoint, methodically building up a reinvigorated cadre from those Southerners now being taken North, and sending them down South some day to start the whole thing over again.

This last possibility — failure — seems the most unlikely. "The main purpose of the North Vietnamese these past few years has been to oust the foreigner," said Khanh Hoa Province Chief Col. Pham. "Now they have us all alone."

How might America fit into this somber future? Less and less as the days go by, it seems. Apparent American disinterest in the course of the war effort has led to a breakdown in the close U.S. adviser relationships that were built up over a decade.

The Saigon high command has retreated into secrecy, and the few American military men left are finding it near impossible to maintain an accurate accounting of what is going on in the field.

With U.S. military advisers completely out of the countryside, the American officers and civilians attached to the small American defense establishment in Saigon often have to resort to waking up Vietnamese generals from their siestas, or corraling them during tennis matches, to plead for information about what big actions are going on.

This sudden huge information gap could be disastrous in the event of another major Communist offensive. U.S. officials would have great difficulty in judging the accuracy of Vietnamese reports and the United States no longer has intelligence sources of its own to verify targets and Communist troop movements.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take some time for meditation that can be helpful in both your personal and business life. Make sure your diet is right so you keep your body in fine trim. Steer clear of that gabber tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Think out how you can have more money and property in the future and stop worrying about lack, which can automatically vanish as a result. Don't spend your money foolishly, lavishly. Think.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can now get into those activities that most please you and have right results. Do not think that others are your enemies. They could be your best and cleverest friends in disguise. Be kind.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Try to spend some time where you can do deep thinking about the future undisturbed, and come up with fine and clever ideas. Some limitation you may have can be easily overcome now. Think positive.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Listen to what allies and friends have to suggest for your advancement in the future and for putting your finest ideas to work. Gad about socially as much as you can. Show you are a person of determination.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day for being very active in the business world and getting ahead fast. Do charitable work that is important. Sit down with some influential person and discuss your future. Get to bed early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You know exactly where to go and what to do today, so start early and keep active. Get the fine results you desire. Sitting down with one of different culture from yours in p.m. is fine. Have fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day for self-analysis and knowing where to make the improvements necessary so you become a more dynamic, successful person. If you have a good voice, why not try to cultivate it? Make more money in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Discussing with a partner your joint aims can bring about fine results and it is important to do this now. An eye to pleasure away from the home brings much enjoyment now. Dress in excellent style.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Keep busy doing nice things for persons who have been good to you in the past and show your appreciation. Get routine work done early and free more time for yourself. A fine evening for fun.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact those people either in business or in homes where you get a feeling of peace and contentment and yet produce excellent results. Get in touch with advisers you can really trust. Keep active.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he or she will be one of those highly sensitive young people who requires special handling and attention during early youth and much care given to diet so your youngster can mature into a most stable and productive member of society; otherwise there could be one of those unfortunates emerging here who will never accomplish much. Slant the education along such lines as music, art, or acting, where the sensitivity will find excellent expression.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Church Halting Fund Drives To Stress Religion

NORTH ANDOVER, Mass. (AP) — In an effort to concentrate more time and energy on religion, St. Paul's Episcopal church has suspended all fund-raising events, the youth group, women's auxiliary, church choir and women's club.
The Rev. Kenneth L. Jones persuaded his parishioners to drop the extra activities for a year so that the church could re-evaluate its role in the community and determine how the extra organizations fit into the church.
St. Paul's has a total membership of 550, including about 150 adults and 50 youths who are active churchgoers.
The church will be able to gauge how parishioners feel about the experiment in the fall, when St. Paul's collects its annual pledges — its only source of support for the next year.

OK Switch To Food Stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has designated 14 counties in seven states, including Yadkin County, N.C., to switch from distribution of surplus commodities to food stamps for the needy.
The counties will begin issuing food stamps as soon as details can be worked out between the department's Food and Nutrition Service and state welfare authorities.

Widower Declares Open Season On Visiting Ladies

by SUSAN GILLETTE
Winston-Salem Sentinel
Written for the AP
WAGRAM, N. C. (AP) — J. T. Rowell, a 73-year-old widower, has declared open season on every female who drives up to his little store about five miles from here.

Rowell's seeking a bride and doesn't want to waste time talking with married women. He doesn't want to waste time talking to reporters either. So he courted this one with every trick of his romantic experience as he told the story of his search.

The white-haired store-keeper—who still has a strong and hearty hug—was widowed in January after 50 years of marriage. Single life doesn't suit him. He started his search for a bride with a classified announcement in the Southern Pines newspaper, The Pilot. A reporter for the paper paid him a visit and took his picture. So he had that full-length shot put in a bigger ad.

It's titled "Seeks Bride" and Rowell, clad in overalls, beams out at the reader. The ad offers "a good home and security." Rowell says he needs a wife because he can't run the dry goods and the grocery sections of his two-room store at the same time. Also, he says, he doesn't like to do his own cooking. And he needs a good Christian to teach his 4-year-old grandson, who lives with him, to pray.

Rowell believes there are sound reasons why any eligible woman should jump at the chance to marry him. And he makes it clear he would snap her up in five minutes. He says a woman can come one morning, marry him that afternoon and move in that night.

new oak paneling. The car is being repaired. His bride will have to drive it, because he doesn't have a license. He's confident that the right woman—a really smart woman—will come by and stay.

That's the angle he used to convince the reporters. "You got a head for business," he said. "You and that woman from Wendell were the only two with a thimbleful of brains. All this would be yours," he said.

And as the reporter locked herself into her car to drive away from the dusty little store, he promised to call and made one last try: "Write that story so you can come on back."

Conversations Taped By Two Other Presidents

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It now seems that even former presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy had recordings made of their conversations.

of Eisenhower and various people. But he said at least some of the second parties involved, and possibly all of them, were aware that their words were being recorded for posterity.

Johnson immediately protested that such recordings were made infrequently and, when they were, the other party was informed about it.

He claims that when he gets through selling most of his 120 acres of pine and crop land, he'll have about $30,000 in the bank. Rowell says that money, plus the store and two houses, will be left to the woman he weds.

Vocational Education Definition Is Changed After Student Review

A high school rising senior's definition of vocational-technical education is changed and broadened after four weeks of in-depth study in vocational and technical courses.

This is the consensus of 40 Pitt County high school rising seniors who are this week completing four weeks of study at Pitt Technical Institute. As participants in the "High School Research Project" at Pitt Tech, the rising seniors have been exposed to all the vocational-technical curriculums and have joined the regular classes for in-depth study of two curriculum programs.

The majority of the students admitted that prior to attending Pitt Tech they believed vocational-technical education to be only hand skills, or carpentry or brick masonry. Many of these same students now indicate that vocational-technical education is certainly broader and more sophisticated.

The following represent some of the most often heard statements from the rising seniors:

"I didn't realize that technical institutes offered so many different programs—such as Commercial Art, Mental Health, Business Administration, Practical Nurse Education, Air and Water Resources, etc."

"The knowledge I have acquired will help me in selecting the school I will attend and the specific career I plan to pursue."

"I had planned to stop going to school after I graduated from high school. After seeing the many opportunities for employment for those with only one or two additional years schooling, I may plan to attend a technical institute or community college."

"I really enjoyed being able to learn at my own pace, rather than having to be under the pressure of keeping up with the crowd."

"We liked the individualized instruction approach Pitt Tech uses. The faculty surely is oriented toward treating each student as an "individual."

As the students return to the high schools which they represent, no doubt much of what they have seen and heard will be shared with fellow students.

The major purpose of the research project was to determine if the attitudes and values of high school students relative to vocational-technical education would be altered after exposure to such courses or programs.

"While we can't say, today, that all students have changed their attitudes, we do know that a majority of the students in this project profess a change," said Ed Warren, Coordinator for the PTI project.

"To what extent this exposure to the vocational-technical education programs will have upon the students' final selections for their post-high school education, we will not know until fall, 1974, when the students enroll at their chosen schools," Warren stated.

Upon completion of the Research Project, the data will be shared with local and state educational agencies for whatever use they deem appropriate.

East Africa Caught Up In 'Oil Fever'

By RAY WILKINSON
NAIROBI (UPI) — Oil fever has struck East Africa.

With the world energy crisis becoming ever more acute, Western oil companies are taking another look at countries clustered around the Horn of Africa on the Indian Ocean.

Kenya recently signed its eighth oil exploration agreement, the latest with the Canadian company Wainoco Inc. Natural Resources Minister William Odongo Omamo remarked: "The search for oil and gas in the area is hotting up."

Neighboring Ethiopia signed similar agreements earlier this year with two American companies—Louisiana Land and Exploration of New Orleans and Whitestone International of Texas.

The Sudan News Agency reported natural gas had been found in that country's Eastern Territory bordering on the Red Sea and added "there are high hopes" for the discovery of oil.

This sudden potential bonanza, however, has sparked a major political row in the area, according to some diplomatic reports.

Somalia recently revived old claims to Ethiopia's Ogaden region, and these reports suggest that it was partly because natural gas had been discovered there.

The giant Anglo-Dutch conglomerate Shell-BP has spent $30 million prospecting for oil in Kenya since 1954 but found nothing.

Other companies are willing to take a second look because of the runaway world demand for petroleum and the unpredictability of such traditional suppliers as Libya under Col. Moammar Khadafy.

In addition to Wainoco, other companies prospecting in Kenya's arid northeastern and coast provinces are:

Superior Oil Ltd. of Calgary, Canada; Louisiana Land; Whitestone; Total Oil Exploration, a subsidiary of Compagnie Francaise des Petroles; Chevron Oil Company of Kenya, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of California; Adobe International U.S., which is in partnership with Burmah Oil of Britain; and Cities Service of New York.

American Univ. T-Shirts Are French Choice

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — Paris looks like an American college campus this summer.

The big fashion sensation for both males and females on the streets of Paris as well as on the Riviera beaches is American T-shirts emblazoned with—could this be France?—the names of U.S. universities.

The academic T-shirt craze marks the third consecutive year that French summer fashions have been stolen from the young of the United States.

Last summer the French dressed like cowboys in faded blue jeans, the raggedier the better (still in style).

The year before, the big unisex summer fad was American GI uniforms and insignia (now out of style).

This season a secretary hurries to work on the subway in jeans and a U.S.-made green T-shirt imprinted "University of Texas." She says she's never been to a university or traveled outside France, let alone to Texas.

A French television cameraman photographing U.S. presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger's last visit to Paris was wearing white trousers, a white T-shirt with navy blue letters spelling "University of Vermont" and a white jacket with that university's badge.

Parisians from children of 5 to men of 25 to chic ladies of 50 are sporting yellow shirts labeled "University of Indiana" or navy blue shirts proclaiming "University of Wisconsin."

One boutique, The American Store, which specializes in blue jeans and other Americana, is selling 150 of the university T-shirts a week.

"Everybody's crazy for the T-shirts," manager Xavier Sagnier said. "One huge fat man is demanding a college shirt but I can't find one big enough."

A U.S. importer recently rushed into The American Shop to ask Sagnier where he could buy French T-shirts saying "University of Paris." He was crushed to hear that European universities do not have such customs, Sagnier said.

"Maybe that explains why the fad is such a hit here. It's different," he said. "Also, it's foreign. There are bicycle racing T-shirts in France labeled with names of our mineral waters but the French kids want those that say Pepsi Cola."

In 1914, only about 1,000 acres of soybeans were grown in the United States, compared with more than 47 million acres planted in 1972.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THE ALL-ON-ONE-FLOOR Western ranch home is America's most popular design. This one, Plan HA766M, takes advantage of the sprawling effect with a wide H shape, and the "lacked-on" garage gets it away from formal balance. The front wings form a sort of encirclement for an approaching visitor, which creates a feeling of being within the walls before going inside. The 29-foot front porch multiplies this feeling as well as providing weather protection. Inside, the sleeping area is isolated from service and family activities. Architect Rudolph A. Matern, 89 E. Jericho Turnpike, Mineola, N.Y. 11501 has designed for 1,852 square feet. Anyone wishing to know the price of the blueprint can write to Matern.

Urge Rouse Re-Election

STATESVILLE — The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Federation of College Republicans this weekend unanimously passed a resolution urging Frank A. Rouse to seek re-election as Chairman of the North Carolina Republican Party.

The resolution, called Rouse a "tireless leader" who "has shown honesty and understanding with all members of the GOP." The resolution also noted Rouse's efforts in the previous election in which Republicans elected a Governor and a Senator and complimented him for taking "the steps necessary to 'Win More in '74.'" North Carolina Republicans will assemble in convention this November to elect a new chairman. No candidate has yet announced for the party's top post and Rouse has not indicated that he will seek re-election, the Executive Committee noted.

Plane Crash Killed Three

KINSTON, N. C. (AP)—A twin-engine private plane which reported losing a door at about 15,000 feet crashed near Kinston Tuesday, killing the three persons aboard.

The Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta identified the pilot of the plane as Dr. Grant Miles Bennett of Plantation, Fla., and said the other victims apparently were his wife and young son.

Highway Patrol Sgt. J. S. Briley said he understood the plane, a Piper Apache flying from Charleston, S. C. to Norfolk, Va., reported losing a door at about 15,000 feet.

The plane was reported to have been cleared for descent to 5,000 feet, Briley said, and crashed shortly afterward in a wooded area about 15 miles southwest of Kinston.

The crash occurred about 1:45 p.m., Briley quoted a witness as saying.

Officers and rescue workers reached the scene after wreckage was spotted by a Marine Corps rescue helicopter from the New River Facility near the Camp Lejeune Marine base.

Bodies were taken to Lenoir Memorial Hospital in Kinston.

Officers were investigating wreckage believed to be a wing and engine about half a mile from the main wreckage when darkness fell.

Missing: 5-Ton Wrecking Ball

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — When workers returned to a demolition site Tuesday morning, they found that the company's five-ton wrecking ball was missing.

It had been suspended about 200 feet up on a crane's cable, said Loran Dowling of Dowling Construction Co.

"I can't figure out what someone would do with a five-ton metal ball," he said.

Urges Initiative By Counselors

BOONE, N. C. (AP) — "Something is wrong when home economics is only for girls and wood work is only for boys," says Dr. Elizabeth Koonz, former director of the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Mrs. Koonz, of Salisbury, N.C., addressed guidance counselors from across the nation Tuesday at a workshop on career problems facing women. She said the counselors are in a position to take the initiative so women do not fall into stereotyped roles.

The workshop at Appalachian State University continues through Thursday.

Pirates Power Past Pembroke By 7-0

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

Jack Elkins and John Narron provided the big hit and Bill Godwin the pitching as the East Carolina Pirates rolled to a 12-hit, 7-0 shut-out over second place Pembroke.

The Pirates are now 10-13 in the Summer Collegiate Baseball League. Pembroke is 12-9. ECU has also won four of its last five games with two in a row. The Pirates will be looking to extend the string as they host UNC-Chapel Hill in a twin beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Bill Godwin went all the way for the Bucs getting the win. He struck out five, walked none and gave up only five hits. He had not given up a single until the fourth and that one was not out of the infield.

Ron Rudd got the loss for Pembroke striking out three Pirate batters and walking four.

The Pirates got men as far as second base in the first two innings and in the third came up with three to take the lead. Four more went up in the sixth as Elkins unloaded a grand slam homer for a 7-0 lead.

Carl Summerrell got the first East Carolina hit in the bottom of the first. He slapped a one out single to left and moved to second when Ron Staggs grounded to second. The ball was thrown away there and both runners were safe. They could go no further as a double play ended the frame.

Rick McMahon walked in the second and moved up on a passed ball but he too failed to score.

Pembroke had put a man on in the second. He went to third when Fred McDaniel's third strike was missed by McMahon but a ground out ended his trip around the diamond.

In the third the Pirates finally broke through with three runs. With two down, Summerrell singled to center and both Staggs and Troy Eason walked to load the bases. Narron bashed a double to right-center scoring all three runners.

Pembroke got a cheap hit off Godwin in the fourth as Wayne Pyrtle hit a chopper down the third baseline. The Pirates got him at second in a double play. Jeff Petty got the first clean hit in the fifth but it came with two out and he could not advance.

ECU started a rally in the fifth. Jimmy Paige led off with a hit to center but was forced at second by Summerrell. Staggs got a hit. A double play ended the inning.

The Pirates finished out their scoring in the sixth in style. Narron led off with a hit and fly was dropped, he singled to deep third base. McMahon got a hit to load the bases and Elkins blasted his second home run of the season over the fence in left field scoring all three runners. Godwin tried to keep it going with a single to right and Paige drew a walk. Paige was cut down in a double play and a second grounder ended the rally.

ECU threatened again the seventh as Eason singled and went around to third on a single by Narron but they could not score.

Pembroke put together the makings of a rally in the ninth but did not get a run. Pete Preston led off with a single and was wild pitched to second. Pyrtle walked and Randy Ledford singled to center. Preston was caught off third as he made his turn and Elkins tagged him out. Johnson hit into a fielder's choice to end the game.

Ledford had two hits to lead Pembroke. Hannon had three for ECU while Summerrell had two.

Dallas Is Not At All Happy

By ANDY LIPPMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

One thing the Dallas Cowboys are not at this stage of their pre-season is one happy family. The latest person to stray out of the Cowboy family circle was center Dave Manders, who Tuesday announced his retirement after contract negotiations with Tex Schramm, Cowboys' general manager, fell through.

Manders had been one of three players absent from the Cowboy football training camp—quarterback Craig Morton and defensive tackle Bob Lilly were also missing and subject to fines.

According to his wife Ann, Lilly is planning a press conference for today to discuss his future with the Cowboys. He earlier flew back to Dallas from the Cowboy camp after deciding not to report until Cowboy management "gets things straightened out."

Dallas has been contacted by several clubs, including Green Bay, about Morton, who wants his contract renegotiated and who left camp Monday.

Defensive tackle Jethro Pugh and cornerback Charlie Waters remained the only unsigned members of the team.

While the players were unhappy in the Dallas camp, Washington Redskins Coach George Allen wasn't exactly ecstatic Tuesday about the absence of Larry Brown, his star running back from training camp.

Allen, who said he did not appreciate anyone not beginning preparation for the 1973 season, said Brown would be fined $300 a day for every day he misses practice.

Brown's attorney has issued a statement that Brown had some "important personal matters" and would join the team shortly.

Defending NFL champions, the Miami Dolphins announced the signing of wide receiver Ron Sellers, acquired during the off-season from the Dallas Cowboys.

Four Seasons Moves Closer With Big Win

Three games were played in the City League last night, all having been postponed from earlier dates.

In the first game, Four Seasons took a 16-1 win over Hallow's. Hardees took the second from GUCo by forfeit while Balentine's blasted Daily Reflector 25-3.

Four Seasons got all they needed in the second inning pushing over two runs. Tommy Jordan reached on an error and William Moye singled. Jordan was forced at third when Donnie Brewer hit into a fielder's choice. Charles Meeks singled to drive in Moye and an out scored Brewer.

They added two in the third, five in the fourth and seven in the sixth. Hallow's scored in the third.

Balentine's came up with five in the bottom of the first to beat the Daily Reflector. B. Angle doubled and R. Phillips got a hit. J. Briley forced Phillips at second. J. Phillips homered for three runs and J. Medlin kept it going with a single. M. Briley got a hit and they scored on singles by B. Jackson and G. Vincent. Ballentine's added six in the second, four in the third, eight in the fourth and two in the fifth. Daily Reflector scored in the sixth.

Otis Not So Sure About Stroke

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Sports Writer

A couple of days ago, Amos Otis thought he had discovered the reason for his new-found home run stroke. Now he's not so sure.

After homering in Kansas City's 10-2 rout of the Detroit Tigers Monday night, Otis pointed to slugger John Mayberry, the Royals' clean-up hitter and the major league leader in runs batted in, as the key to his own success.

"I'm batting in front of Mayberry, so I get some good pitches to hit," explained Otis, a starting outfielder on the American League's All-Star team, after Monday's game.

Now he has to revise that notion.

Even though Mayberry was taken out of the starting lineup Tuesday night, Otis slammed two home runs, powering the Royals to a 4-3 victory over the Tigers.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Chicago White Sox swept a day-night doubleheader from the Boston Red Sox 8-4 and 5-0; the New York Yankees took a twinight doubleheader from the Minnesota Twins 4-3 in 12 innings and 4-1; the Milwaukee Brewers topped Texas 6-3, the California Angels beat the Cleveland Indians 3-1 and the Oakland A's defeated the Baltimore Orioles 3-1.

White Sox 8-5, Red Sox 4-0
Wilbur Wood and Stan Bahnsen, who have combined for 30 of Chicago's 48 victories this season, added one apiece in the day-night doubleheader against Boston.

Wood, who leads the majors in victories, raised his record to 18-12 in Chicago's 8-4 triumph in the day game. Ed Herrmann hit a three-run

Oakmont Takes 14-1 Victory

Oakmont got three in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Presbyterian grabbed the lead in the first but St. James tied it in the bottom of the frame. Presbyterian got two in the second but St. James took the lead with three in the second. The lead went back to Presbyterian in the third, 8-6, and they increased it to 10-6 in the fourth.

St. James closed to 10-9 in the fourth but Presbyterian stayed on top with four in the fifth. St. James came up with two in the sixth but could not pull it out.

Schoendienst Not Worried About Cards Fifth Straight

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

"We're not getting too worked up...yet."

That's typical Red Schoendienst. He wasn't panicking a couple of months ago when his St. Louis Cardinals crashed headlong into the basement right at the start of the season and seemingly locked the door.

"I'm not getting excited about it—not losing any sleep," Schoendienst said after St. Louis reeled off its fifth straight victory Tuesday night, a 2-1 squeaker over the San Francisco Giants, to trim the lead of Chicago's once runaway Cubs to a scant one-half game in the National League East.

In the rest of the National League, the San Diego Padres humbled the Cubs 1-0, the New York Mets stunned the Atlanta Braves 8-7, the Los Angeles Dodgers belted the Pittsburgh

Pirates 8-4, the Montreal Expos whipped the Houston Astros 7-2 and the Philadelphia Phillies nosed out the Cincinnati Reds 2-1.

Padres 1, Cubs 0

Steve Arlin, San Diego's pitching dentist, twirled a five-hitter and scored the game's only run in outdueling Chicago's Milt Pappas. Arlin walked to open the fifth inning, Johnny Grubb also walked, Dave Roberts singled to load the bases and Nate Colbert hit a sacrifice fly.

Mets 8, Braves 7

Ralph Garr, Marty Perez and Hank Aaron slugged home runs and, with just three outs to go, the Braves, leading New York 7-1, appeared easily en route to their fifth straight victory. Then the roof caved in: Rusty Staub and John Milner hit two-run homers. And a few minutes later Jim Beauchamp hit a run-scoring single. Suddenly the Mets were down by one run, two men were on and Willie Mays was pinch-hitting.

Bang! He punched a single to right-center field, and Beauchamp came in with the run that beat the Braves 8-7.

Dodgers 8, Pirates 4

The Pirates did most of the giving until the ninth inning when they chased pitcher Andy Messersmith with three runs on four hits, including a two-run homer by Al Oliver. Until then, Messersmith had Pittsburgh pretty well tied up in knots with a two-hitter.

Expos 7, Astros 2

Montreal, trailing 2-1 in the seventh inning, erupted for five runs to down Houston 7-2. Ron Fairly tied the score with a single, Boots Day put the Expos on top with a two-run single off Don Wilson, then Bob Stinson and Pepe Frias completed the rally with run-scoring hits.

Philis 2, Reds 1

Cesar Geronimo broke an 0-for-27 slump with a fourth-inning homer for Cincinnati. But the Phillies broke a 19-inning scoreless slump in the sixth on successive doubles by Gerg Luzinski and DEL Unser and Larry Bowa's RBI grounder to turn back Cincinnati 2-1.

You hear a lot of wild claims these days. But not from Mazda.

Mazda tells you what owners tell us.

With gas rationing already a fact of life, Mazda believes car makers should talk realistically about mileage.

The mileage that counts is the mileage owners can count. Our owners tell us they get 17 to 21 miles per gallon. Some get even more; some get less, depending on driving conditions.

Good, respectable figures. Even better because Mazda isn't an underpowered little boing-boing. They're realistic figures, too.

We don't quote mileage figures on our smallest car. We quote them on our largest car.

We don't advertise fuel-economy figures from the Environmental Protection Agency's emission-control tests. The EPA has said they don't apply to everyday driving.

We don't hire professional drivers to make test runs under ideal economy conditions.

Besides good mileage, there's another way to save. The rotary engine humms along just fine on the cheapest gas you can buy. Regular, low-lead or lead-free. We even urge the oil companies to produce a much lower-octane gas for cars, like 80 octane.

Any Mazda owner will tell you about the good gas mileage. Any Mazda dealer will let you test-drive the good performance.

The Mazda goes HMMMM.

Nuclear Blasts May Be Used For Thailand Canal

By ROBERT KAYLOR BANGKOK (UPI) — Use of nuclear explosions to dig a "supercanal" sounds like something from the 21st Century but it may be just around the corner.

The proposed canal would open a new route for mammoth 1,500-foot, half a million ton tankers carrying oil between the Persian Gulf and Japan. American technical and economic consultants are already looking into the project that would cut across the Kra Isthmus, the trunk-like section of southern Thailand that separates the Indian Ocean from the Gulf of Thailand and South China Sea.

The most ambitious proposal of its kind ever suggested, the idea is a pet project of K.Y. Chow, a Shanghai-born businessman and oil refinery magnate based in Bangkok. Chow has put up $400,000 of his own money to finance the first "prefeasibility" study.

"Personally, I am crazy about this idea," said Chow, 60, who envisions the canal as the nucleus of a trading and industrial center for all of Southeast Asia, possibly within the next 15 years. "This project is unique."

Chow has interested others in his plan, including nuclear physicist Edward Teller, whose discoveries led to creation of the hydrogen bomb, and economist Herman Kahn, head of the prestigious Hudson Institute.

Nuclear Controversy
Everything about the Kra Canal is in terms of superlatives, from the size of the ships that would use it to the costs, which could total $13 billion or more, including the interest on loans to finance the project.

Chow, Teller and some 50 technical and financial experts from seven countries are meeting in Tokyo this month to discuss the final report of the current study of the canal excavation, which is due by Sept. 1.

After that a decision will be made on whether to go ahead with a detailed two-year survey at a cost of $5 million, with Thailand's government having the final say.

Some opposition has already been aroused. Particularly controversial has been the suggestion that underground nuclear blasts be used to pare costs and

Tensions Spur Stomach Acids

NEW YORK (UPI) — What's eating you? Probably your stomach acids—an excess of which can be triggered by stress and tension. So says Dr. James Fitzgerald, of Georgetown University Medical School. He is an internist.

"A happy mind," says Dr. Fitzgerald, "should produce a happy stomach."

construction time by 30 to 50 per cent.

Nitipat Jalichan, Secretary General of Thailand's National Energy Authority, went on record earlier this year in opposition to the nuclear blasts. He charged they would "poison more than 7,200 square miles with fallout."

Safety First
Experts disagree, and Chow says that "anything new always gets resistance. I believe in nuclear energy for peaceful uses as one of my ambitions. Naturally, we will have to consider the element of safety foremost."

Teller, in a visit to Bangkok, emphasized that the use of nuclear explosions was only a possibility. Lawrence Livermore Laboratories, a research arm of the University of California, was brought in as an unpaid consultant to look into the idea.

Japanese business firms are interested, particularly because tankers carrying some 300 million tons of oil yearly to Japan from Middle East now must go through either the narrow Malacca Straits between Malaysia and Indonesia, or through two other passages totally under Indonesian sovereignty.

Malaysia and Indonesia served notice in 1971 that they regard the Malacca Straits as territorial waters and claim the right to restrict traffic.

Expounding on his theory of a trade center in Kra, Chow points out that most Southeast Asian ports are located on rivers that limit the size of vessels they can accommodate.

Envisions "Superport"
Ships now often spend days waiting for the right tide conditions, negotiating the winding channels and finding berths, often to load or unload only a few hundred tons of cargo at each stop.

Chow envisions a "superport" where containerhips of 50,000 to 60,000 tons could unload and load in a few hours, speeding

Has 'Shortcuts' To Exercising

NEW YORK (UPI) — Are you a flabby American who's too busy to exercise? If so, why not try out some short cuts from Dr. Margaret Kenrick, chairman of the physical medicine and rehabilitation department at Georgetown University?

Her shortcuts include: walking up steps instead of taking the elevator, parking your car farther away from entrance, walking rapidly to offices instead of using the intercom, taking longer sweeps with the vacuum cleaner, and, while sitting at your desk, stretching your neck and legs.

their return to Europe or the United States, with a fleet of smaller coastal vessels taking the cargo on to its final destination.

A total of nine different routes across Kra are under consideration. So far technical experts are most interested in one that starts near the east coast port of Songkhla 500 miles south of Bangkok and runs about 65 miles to a point near the Malaysian border on the west coast in Satun province.

Cut Out 2,100 Miles
Livermore Laboratory experts believe nuclear energy could be used to excavate the western portion of the route, using from 46 to 136 controlled underground blasts, depending on the length of the nuclear excavation and whether the canal is to be one-way or two-way.

Preliminary survey work indicates several explosions could be set off simultaneously with the population temporarily evacuated from a 30-by 40-mile zone around the blasts.

Although fallout is predicted at a safe level, winds would most likely carry it over Sumatra, raising the possibility of objections from the Indonesian government.

The Kra route would cut 2,100 miles from the present 8,000 miles now sailed by the biggest supertankers from the Persian Gulf to Japan through straits between the Indonesian Islands of Lombok and Bali.

Science To Study Holy Shroud Argues Plants Are Intelligent

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
UPI Senior Editor
PORT CHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — The shroud venerated by Roman Catholics for 600 years as the burial cloth of Jesus will be subjected to science's most modern investigative techniques in an effort to solve the mystery of the image of a crucified man on the 14-foot linen strip.

Former King Humberto II of Italy, owner of the relic, has given permission for the first scientific examination of the shroud in 42 years. It is expected to begin next fall at the Cathedral of Turin where the shroud is kept, according to the Rev. Peter M. Rinaldi. Father Rinaldi is vice president of the 6,000-member Holy Shroud Guild in the United States and author of a recent book on the shroud.

The Guild, which is headquartered at Corpus Christi Church in Port Chester, is raising funds by selling pictures of the face on the shroud to pay for such expensive processes as holography, a lensless photographic technique using laser beams. In addition to holography, Catholic authorities in Turin are considering spectroscopy, the Carbon 14 test, infra-red or ultra violet photography, and neutron activation analysis.

It was established in 1931 that the image is not a painting, but the Vatican has taken the position that it is not within the church's doctrinal definition to declare the authenticity of any relic. Despite this, several Popes have openly revered the shroud and Pius XI dedicated a prayer to it.

International Commission
"There is no way to prove the shroud authentic beyond a shadow of a doubt," Father Rinaldi said. "What we're doing is challenging modern sciences to prove it is a fraud. The Vatican will not support authentication and is leaving it to the public for an objective evaluation which touches almost every field of science." Father Rinaldi said an international commission will carry out the examination. The guild is pressing Turin to use three-dimensional holography because it has the ability to deblur optical images, a process developed by Dr. George W. Stroke of the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

The guild hopes that this will provide a distinct picture of the faint, rust-colored human imprint which permeates the linen. There is even a possibility that holography will provide a three dimensional concept of the man-in-the-shroud.

Spectroscopy would establish whether stains on the shroud are traces of human blood. Carbon 14 would establish the approximate age of the linen, which already has been identified as a Middle Eastern weave and pattern of the first to third centuries A.D. Neutron evaluation would identify the fibers and make it possible to pinpoint where they were grown. Father Rinaldi said there is no assurance that science can identify the means by which the frontal and dorsal image of a five-foot-11 man of majestic, bearded countenance was ingrained in the cloth. A favorite theory is that powdered aloes, which were spread on Christ's shroud according to the Bible, reacted chemically to vapors from the body. Those who describe it as a quasiphograph of Christ produced by the radiance of the Resurrection.

Truth in Nature
"I believe the truth lies in nature," said the priest, who viewed the shroud in 1933, when it was last on public display. "There were images of atomic bomb victims blasted into the walls of Hiroshima. Can science explain a possible radiation flash or can it duplicate how the shroud was removed from Christ's body without sticking when the blood had dried?" Testimony of medical authorities who have examined the shroud strongly supports superficial evidence that it once covered the corpse of a man with wounds on his hands, feet and side, and traces of 125 lash strokes. All anatomical details of the nude image are correct as they would be in rigor mortis and consistent with death while hanging by the arms. Blood-colored specks and trickles on the front and back of the head print could have been caused by thorn punctures.

"No man we know of in history was crucified with a crown of thorns, except Christ," Father Rinaldi said. That a shroud said to be Christ's existed in Jerusalem is a matter of documentation as early as 120 A.D. when visiting St. Braulio of Seville viewed it. By 1201 the shroud was kept in a chapel in Constantinople,

Argues Plants Are Intelligent

By JOHN VIRTUE
CARACAS (UPI) —Orchid grower Alfredo Blaumann contends that plants have intelligence.

"Man can make a decision in an instant," Blaumann said. probably brought there by French crusaders. It turned up in France in the 14th Century and was given to a Savoy ancestor of King Humberto in 1452.

Turin was the Savoyard dynasty's capital, and the shroud has been kept there rolled on a wooden staff in a narrow silver chest in the cathedral's royal chapel since 1578. It has been scorched, stained by water and patched, and may even be threatened by modern Turin's industrial smog, but its essential mystique remains—awaiting the verdict of modern scholarship.

"The thought of a plant might take 100 years." To back up his point, Blaumann cited the orchid, the most advanced of plant life, which he said has evolved into shapes identical to those of some insects the orchid wants to attract.

"There is a Mediterranean orchid called the 'ophrys' which looks so much like a female wasp that the male wasps try to mate with it," he said.

"How can a plant produce something so perfect without eyes? How can it imitate the colors? If they don't know smells, how can they produce the perfumes?"

"I've talked to botanists who are friends and they think I'm a bit crazy. I'm just telling them things that are there. I'm not saying that orchids get together at night and hold a dance in the clearing."

Born in Germany and raised in Norway, Blaumann came to Caracas in the late 1930s as a sales representative for several German firms. What started as a hobby soon became a business as Blaumann developed one of the largest orchid gardens in Venezuela, where 1,000 of the world's 22,000 known varieties are found.

"The German philosopher Emmanuel Kant said things can't be done without will," Blaumann said. "Plants must have enormous will-power to be able to transform their cells. Can something be created by accident?"

"No imagination is possible in science. A scientist will say, 'There is no will in plants because we haven't found the brain cells.'"

Disclosure By Pentagon Spur Fresh Attacks

By HARRISON HUMPHRIES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon disclosure of more than 4,000 secret bombing sorties in Cambodia in 1969 and early 1970 has provoked charges that administration officials "deliberately lied" to the Senate Armed Service Committee.

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said Tuesday that still classified reports of Indochina air operations furnished for the committee in 1971 and early 1973 show "a long list of zeroes" for B52 bombing in Cambodia for every month up to May 1970.

"They deliberately lied to the Committee," Hughes told newsmen after the "very major campaign" was disclosed by Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim.

Hughes said Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the committee, has agreed to call administration officials under oath "to tell us precisely what happened in these bombing operations and falsification of reports, who ordered them and how they were conducted."

"This revelation of deliberate deception in official information requested for the Armed Services Committee brings to a head the most fundamental issue of all-civilian control of the government as provided for by the Constitution," Hughes said.

The Pentagon admitted the secret bombing for the first time Monday, after former Air Force Major Hal M. Knight told the committee that he helped carry out secret raids against North Vietnamese sanctuaries in Cambodia in March and April 1970. He said that he obeyed orders to burn documentary evidence and falsify reports.

Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger told the committee in a letter that the bombing missions in Cambodia were "fully authorized" and that special security precautions surrounded them because of a sensitive operational and diplomatic situation.

The United States at the time of the raids was professing publicly to be observing the neutrality of the Cambodian government under Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who was deposed early in 1970.

After the Lon Nol group took over the Cambodian government, U.S. and South Vietnamese ground troops were sent into Cambodia to clean out North Vietnamese sanctuaries.

Friedheim said Tuesday that U.S. B52s ran "hundreds of sorties" into Cambodia during the 14 months from March 1969 through April 1970. He acknowledged that this information was omitted from a statistical report to Congress.

Pentagon sources said later that the number of B52 sorties were up to 4,000.

Gardner McKay Is Now Writing Plays

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A decade ago when he played the intrepid skipper of the Tiki on television's "Adventures in Paradise," Gardner McKay received more fan mail than any other 20th Century Fox actor.

Since then, McKay, 39, has lived as a recluse in the Sahara Desert and the jungles of Venezuela. Today he is finally doing what he's always wanted to do: write plays.

McKay is putting the finishing touches on "Me," a play he wrote and directed for television's Public Broadcasting System. The play, about a retarded, spastic child and his family, is to be shown next winter.

McKay says acting never was his real interest.

"My acting was a fluke," he claims. "It was something that wandered by. It was like I opened an invitation by mistake intended for someone else."

He says that, when "Paradise" was canceled in 1963, he turned down a $200,000 movie offer.

He retired to desert and jungle to shed the popularity television had given him.

In the desert, McKay was an adventurer and rode with the Egyptian camel corps. By the time he got to the South American jungle, he was writing.

First, it was "How to Eat a Piranha Before It Eats You," for Sports Illustrated. But soon he was mailing manuscripts to California. Five years ago, he returned to Los Angeles. Since then, he has directed several of his plays in local workshop theaters.

At his Spanish-style home on a hillside here, shelves and closets are filled with McKay's writings. But he is reluctant to talk about his work. He says he has finished three full plays and 25 short plays and is working on a book of short stories.

Wanted In Train Death

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss. (AP)—Authorities said they are looking for a North Carolina man in connection with the death of a man who had his throat cut, reportedly by one of his two companions in a railroad boxcar trip.

Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan Ladner said Tuesday Carl Harvey Smith, 39, was charged in the case. Ladner said Smith was a native of Salisbury, N.C., but apparently had no permanent address.

The body of Clarence Edward Malone, 34, of Greenville, S.C., was found early July 10 near the Louisville and Nashville Railroad tracks at Bay St. Louis.

Malone's throat had been cut and he had other wounds which officers said apparently resulted from his being thrown from the moving freight train.

A third man on the boxcar, Ernest Porterfield, said the three had hopped an eastbound freight after being released from Central Lockup in New Orleans on misdemeanor charges.

Porterfield said he awoke from a nap on the boxcar to see Smith pushing Malone out of the boxcar. Porterfield said Smith then attacked him with a razor blade and a board. Porterfield said he escaped by jumping from the train when it slowed.

Unable Replace Severed Arm

DURHAM (AP)—Surgeons at Duke Hospital found that a boy's severed arm was too badly damaged for them to try to put it back on.

A hospital spokesman, Joe Sigler, said the right arm of 14-year-old Mitchell Cadle of near Spring Lake had been cut off about midway between the right elbow and the shoulder in a motorcycle accident.

Another 14-year-old boy, Michael Arnold Lovelace, was decapitated when their motorcycle hit the guy wire of a utility pole near Spring Lake Monday night. He was the son of a sergeant at Pope Air Force Base. Cadle also is the son of a Pope sergeant.

Hunts Gas To Bus Students

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Maynard Stephens is looking for gas.

He needs 750,000 gallons of gasoline to drive school buses in Memphis, Tenn., this fall, 2.5 million gallons of propane to keep chicken houses going in Gainesville, Ga., and another 1,000 gallons of diesel and 4,000 gallons of gasoline per month to keep a crab shipper in New Iberia, La., in business.

As one of 10 regional directors of the U.S. Office of Oil and Gas administering a federal program of voluntary fuel allocation, Stephens sits at the crux of the fuel shortage in the Southeast.

"I'm trying to keep the filling stations running, trying to keep all the truck lines running, the food suppliers, the hospitals, the fire departments," he said.

Government guidelines call for fuel suppliers to distribute on the basis of what their customers received during a 12-month period ending in September 1972.

But the first 10 per cent of the supplier's stock goes to priority customers, defined by the guidelines to be such industries as food, health and transportation and government agencies.

The companies say, "All right, we're following the voluntary allocation plan, but any deviation from that plan, you decide," Stephens says.

"They're throwing the monkey on my back. Is this a farmer who needs extra oil to get his soybeans planted? Is this a tobacco grower who needs extra fuel to dry his tobacco? Should I take away from that man and give oil to somebody else?"

So the airlines, the truckers, the school boards, the shrimp fleets and the two-pump gas stations turn to Stephens for help.

"I can give you a hundred letters right here," he says, "where people are crying because even under the allocation plan they're not getting enough."

Particularly hurt by the shortage are new customers—those who didn't exist during the base period or those who have expanded their operations and can't make it with the amount of fuel they received a year ago.

"We didn't have any allocation plan until May 23 of this year," Stephens says, so "this hit them like a wet rag across the face."

The guidelines include new customers in the priority list, "but there are already too many people in the priority—it's all gone, it's all used up."

When a request comes for more fuel or for inclusion in the priority group, Stephens hunts for a supplier, as he did for the city of Atlanta which needed fuel for its buses and couldn't find anyone with enough gas to sign a supply contract.

"I really through personal friendship, got the contract," he said. "Now I'm about to use the same tool for the Memphis School Board. I'm going to harass somebody, some of my personal friends, into taking the contract. I've done everything but make love to them."

Last year at this time, some 80 million barrels of propane were supplied by two reservoirs that "don't even have a puff of a smell" to them now, he told a propane dealer over the phone.

"I wonder where all the propane has gone. We've got a high level government task force looking for it."

Stephens admits that the threat of mandatory controls—"they're not quite sure which big stick we'll pull out of the closet"—persuades fuel suppliers to go along with the voluntary program. "Oil companies like to be on your team," he says, and it's true they get the same price no matter who they sell to.

Mandatory controls have already been approved by the inter-agency Oil Policy Committee and Stephens said, "I thought they would be here by now," although he says the voluntary program seems to be working and he doesn't know of any companies forced out of business by the shortage.

But for now, waiting for the 16 staffers he's been promised of the 50 he requested, getting 50 phone calls a day, solving 5 or 10 cases a day, Stephens is looking for gas.

And he's reminded each day of the urgency of his job. Like the neatly typed letter, across the top of which was scribbled in red: "Maynard, I have got to have some help—NOW."

Plead Guilty In Gun Trial

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Five of eight men indicted in January on a charge of conspiring to buy about 3,500 pistols, mainly inexpensive so-called Saturday night specials, and take them to New York City for sale, pleaded guilty Tuesday. The other three went on trial in U.S. District Court.

The government's opening witnesses, Rufus B. Roberts and Blakely T. Roberts, documented with government-required forms the sale of large quantities of handguns from their store in Greenville, S.C., Roberts Trading Post, to four persons allegedly financed by the defendants.

Those who pleaded guilty were Robert Edward Grubb of Charlotte; two men from South Carolina, Bobby James Scates of Spartanburg and Larry Eugene Searcy of Campobello, and two men from New York City, Edwin Acevedo and German Rosario. They face a maximum of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000. Judge Wilson Warlick postponed sentencing.

The 'Worry Clinic' Lives Shaped By Attitudes

Diane's tragedy illustrates 2 laws of psychology. First, our identification with our pets till they seem like members of the family. Second, the "feeling tone" that has developed with reference to odors and food items. New brides, note well!

By GEORGE W. CRANE Ph.D., M.D.

CASE X-562: Diane was married to a chemistry graduate student at the University of Chicago.

During the Thanksgiving season, Diane decided to prepare a big turkey dinner and invite another couple as guests. Since Diane was a new bride, she was especially eager to make a good impression both her husband, as well as the guests.

She bought a live Tom turkey a week before the event. "What'll we do with him," she then exclaimed when her husband got home for the chem lab. "Oh, we can put him in a cardboard box on our little back porch," he replied.

So they fed and watered the turkey till the day before the big dinner party.

Alas, they had begun to regard Tom as a pet, so they couldn't cut his head off as he stared into their eyes.

For Tom seemed like one of the family.

"Wait, I have an idea," her husband suddenly announced. "We have some ether over at the chem lab. I'll get some and we can put Tom to sleep so he will not feel anything."

They wrapped a cloth around his head and poured on the ether till Tom was still.

Then Diane gave her husband a big butcher knife, with which he severed the head from the body.

All went well and Dinae was feeling quite proud of herself when she served the turkey next day at the dinner party.

Tom had inhaled so much ether (which is quickly absorbed by fatty tissue) that he still reeked of ether.

Since ether suggests hospitals, it thus tends to arouse vague nausea in most people.

So the dinner guests, as well as Diane and her husband, could eat only the salad, the cranberry sauce and the pumpkin pie.

They couldn't even enjoy the dressing (stuffing) or the gravy, for they also were flavored by ether.

The bride doesn't cook as well as his mother did, is also due to gastric "feeling tone."

For the new bride often tries many fancy menus from the various cookbooks she received as wedding presents.

But her husband is not accustomed to these new menus, so he wants the standard food items that his mother prepared.

Brides, men aren't as fond of a variety of foods as you girls, so find out the 5 or 6 standard menu items his mother cooked and then give them to your mates!

Thus, they'll be far more likely to compliment your culinary art!

Send for my "Compliment Club" booklet, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, and give it to all newlyweds!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs) queen of hearts was led to the king, giving the defenders their book.

The secret of winning bridge is counting. West applied this principle successfully in today's deal to defeat South's vulnerable game.

The temptation to lay down the ace of clubs was great, but West paused to count. Declarer had five heart tricks and a diamond. He was marked by the auction with the ace-king of spades, to bring his total to eight tricks. Also, he had shown up with nine cards in the red suits, leaving him with only four in the blacks.

The defenders stood to make either a spade or a club trick: the question was, which? West found an elegant solution to his dilemma.

Since South had only eight tricks, one more would do him little good. Accordingly, West led a low club! Declarer won this in the dummy and discarded a spade from his hand, but there was nothing he could do with his remaining spade loser. Eventually, he had to concede a trick to West's queen of spades for down one.

Note that declarer can make his contract if West leads any card other than a low club. If he plays a spade, dummy's jack wins the trick. If he leads a diamond, declarer discards a spade from dummy while ruffing in his own hand, and can then set up his fourth spade by trumping the third round in dummy. And the ace of clubs sets up three clubs in dummy for discards with the jack of hearts as the entry.

Since his major suit stoppers leave something to be desired and his holding is barren of intermediate cards, West's decision to make a takeout double rather than overcall with one no trump meets with our approval. When North showed some values by bidding freely, South elected to jump directly to game in hearts, for the chances of finding North with a reasonable spade fit were remote.

The defenders started with three rounds of diamonds, declarer's queen winning the third round. The ace of hearts was cashed and the

Recycling Done By Legislature

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The New Hampshire Legislature this year recycled tons of paper through a local school recycling project.

All newspapers, given free to lawmakers, and other recyclable papers were collected by Project SEE, a cooperative effort of Concord elementary schools.

Several tons of paper were gathered monthly and trucked to a recycling plant in Massachusetts.

This is another example men call "feeling tone."

For that turkey meat, though still very nourishing, aroused a hospital nausea in the diners.

Indeed, first time visitors to a hospital or state institution of any sort, whether for the deranged, the feeble-minded or criminals often feel squeamish about dining with the inmates.

Yet the food may be delicious! But the visitors' mental attitude flavors it with a squeamish "feeling tone."

One reason why a young husband complains that his
