

Landmark Test In Supreme Court Is Fast Shaping Up

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The demands of Watergate investigators for access to presidential tapes and documents have moved into the courts and onto a road leading toward a landmark Supreme Court test.

In a rapid series of legal moves Thursday, President Nixon rejected subpoenas from the Senate Watergate committee and special prosecutor Archibald Cox. The committee and Cox then moved to force him to comply.

The committee voted unanimously to seek a court order directing the President to honor its subpoenas. Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., said the committee petition probably would be ready for filing in court next week.

Cox was in court less than two hours after receiving notice the President would not honor his subpoena. He asked U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica to order the President to show cause why he should not comply with the subpoena.

White House aides delivered letters from Nixon to Ervin, Cox and Sirica shortly before the 10 a.m. deadline for compliance with the subpoenas.

"I cannot and will not consent to giving any investigatory body private presidential papers," the President told Ervin.

In his letter to Sirica, Nixon said that in declining to obey the subpoena he was following "the example of a long line of my predecessors as president of the United States who have consistently adhered to the position that the president is not subject to compulsory process from the courts."

In a number of communications to the committee, the President has cited the doctrine of separation of powers.

Asked for his opinion of the President's legal argument, Cox, a Harvard Law School professor and former solicitor general, said, "I think it's quite wrong."

Sirica set Aug. 7 as the deadline for the White House response.

Charles Alan Wright, professor of law at the University of Texas, and a special consultant to the President, told newsmen Nixon would abide by "a definitive decision of the highest court."

Wright, who said he would argue the President's position in court, said some Supreme Court rulings are "less than definitive."

The White House did supply two groups of documents requested in the Cox subpoena. They were the political matters memoranda written by former White House aide Gordon Strachan and a document on the transfer of E. Howard Hunt Jr., convicted Watergate conspirator, from the White House staff to the President's re-election committee.

But the President refused to supply the tapes of conversations he had with aides either in his office or on the telephone.

Whichever way the lower court rulings go, they are likely to be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Drastic British Action

LONDON (AP) — The Bank of England hiked its basic lending rate to a record 11½ per cent today in a determined bid to halt the slump of the pound sterling.

The pound, aided also by what dealers called "massive purchases" by the government-controlled bank, rallied sharply.

The jump of 2½ percentage points in the interest rate followed a rise of 1.5 points last Friday. The rate governs most lending in this country.

The aim was to drive interest rates here up to the high levels in Europe and attract investment money to Britain. It was the outflow of such funds over past weeks that brought on the pound crisis.

The pound, which had opened 1½ cents down at $2.4725, jumped to $2.51 after announcement of the lending rate hike.

The dollar, meanwhile, strengthened in European exchanges, thanks in part to support from the West German government bank.

The price of gold weakened in the London and Zurich bullion marts.

In early dealings today the pound declined and Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber delayed his departure for international monetary talks in Washington because of the sterling crisis.

Tobacco Prices Inch Upwards

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Prices for flue cured tobacco continued to inch upwards as the first week of trading ended on the 19 auction markets of the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt.

The average Thursday was 83.54, reflecting an increase of $1 in some better grades and decline of some nondescript grades. The average for the first week of sales in 1972 was $81.20.

The Federal-State Market News said Thursday's sales were characterized by heavy volume with offerings still of a generally low calibre, normal for this point in the season.

Receipts of the Stabilization Corporation amounted to only .3 per cent of the total offering

Farmville Plant Will Be Closed

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—International Paper Co. today announced plans to close its Farmville, N.C., Flakeboard plant by Sept. 15. The plant employs about 215.

Company officials said the plant was being closed primarily because of higher labor costs, raw material availability and cost, and general plant obsolescence.

A spokesman said employees of the Farmville plant who wish to take jobs at other International Paper plants would be given primary consideration when vacancies occur.

The plant was built by American Cyanamid Co. in 1958 and was purchased by International Paper in 1968.

Wage Bill 'Consensus'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate-House conferees have agreed on a $2.20 minimum wage bill amid indications there may not have been enough compromise to suit President Nixon.

Consensus on the bill, which extends coverage to an estimated eight million workers, was reached Thursday after a three-day conference.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., a cosponsor of the Senate bill, said, "I will do my utmost to bring the President to sign it." But he did not predict that will happen.

During Senate debate last week, Republican opponents repeatedly said a veto was almost certain. They contended the 36 per cent raise granted most covered workers would hurt the President's fight against inflation and increase unemployment of marginal employees.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., chairman of the Labor Committee that drafted the Senate bill, said the Senate is expected to vote on the compromise next week. House action would follow.

There were few major differences between the House and Senate versions, with both chambers agreeing on the ultimate $2.20-an-hour rate for the 47 million workers now covered.

Under the compromise, the present $1.60 rate for most covered workers would go to $2 in 60 days, then to $2.20 next July 1.

Employees covered for the first time in 1966, mainly workers in large retail stores and government employees, would be raised from $1.60 to $1.80 in 60 days, to $2 next July 1 and to $2.20 a year later.

The $1.30 rate for farm workers would be increased to $1.60 in 60 days, to $1.80 on July 1, 1974, to $2 a year later and to $2.20 on July 1, 1978.

The bill extends the minimum wage to domestic servants. Full-time domestics, including babysitters, would receive the minimum plus overtime pay, but live-in workers would not qualify for overtime. The measure exempts the occasional babysitter.

Smaller retail stores that are part of a chain would gradually lose their exemption from paying the minimum wage.

The number of hours that firemen, policemen and other government security workers must put in before receiving overtime pay would be lowered gradually.

Overtime coverage would be extended gradually to workers who process agricultural products, beginning next Jan. 1.

During House and Senate debate on the legislation, Republican opponents backed a $2.30 minimum over a longer term with no extension of coverage.

Skylab's Crew Ready To Go

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Anxious to get started, Skylab 2's astronauts had a physical examination today and made final preparations for their launching Saturday on a record 59-day space voyage.

Alan L. Bean, Dr. Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma discussed the flight plan with space agency officials, but generally they planned to relax in their crew quarters five miles from the launch pad. They'll retire early tonight and awaken at 2 a.m. EDT for a final physical exam. Then they'll suit up for the orbital trip, which is to start at 7:11 a.m.

The countdown continued on schedule, with crews getting ready to pump tons of fuel into the Saturn 1B rocket tonight and early Saturday. No problems were reported.

"We're all anxious to get up there and put out 100 per cent," said Bean, an Apollo 12 moon walk veteran who will command the second mission to America's first space station.

The astronauts flew here Thursday after concluding their training at the Johnson Space Center near Houston, Tex.

The Saturn 1B is to push the astronauts and their Apollo ferry ship into an initial orbit ranging from about 100 to 200 miles above the earth.

With Bean at the controls, the spacemen will execute a series of six engine firing maneuvers that will enable them to catch and hook up with the orbiting Skylab laboratory 270 miles high after an 8½-hour pursuit. Shortly after docking, they'll open a connecting tunnel and inspect the station. It has been unmanned since Skylab 1 astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz left it June 22 after a 28-day mission.

"We know Pete, Joe and Paul left the spacecraft in good shape," Bean said Thursday. "We're going up there and live rent free for two months. And we'll leave it in good shape for Jerry Carr, Bill Pogue and Ed Gibson."

He referred to the Skylab 3 crew scheduled to rocket up to the laboratory for another marathon flight in October or November.

After two days of laboratory activation, the Bean crew will settle down to a routine of conducting medical, earth resources, solar astronomy, materials processing and other experiments.

N.Y. Bank Ups Prime Rate To 8.75 Per Cent

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's First National City Bank, the nation's second largest commercial bank, announced today it was raising its prime rate to 8½ per cent, the highest prime rate in history.

The increase by ¼ percentage point from 8¼ per cent had been expected. At least two other banks followed suit immediately.

Marine Midland of New York and Girard National of Philadelphia also boosted their prime rate to 8½. The new rates go into effect Monday.

The prime rate is the minimum interest rate charged by banks to their largest and most credit-worthy customers. While the rate is not directly tied to small-business loans and consumer loans, an increase in the prime rate often signals general increases in the cost of borrowing money.

Most commercial banks had increased their prime rates two weeks ago to 8½ per cent, matching the previous record high of the 1969-70 credit crunch era when many businesses found it extremely difficult to borrow money because of the high costs involved.

However, some credit analysts have said the present situation is different because there has been such a huge consumer demand for goods and services that although the costs of borrowing money have steadily increased, corporations still find it profitable to borrow for expansion.

The credit analysts attributed the steadily increasing prime rate to ballooning costs of short-term credit, the heavy demand for bank loans by corporations and the Federal Reserve, which is deliberately tightening up the money supply in an effort to cool economic expansion and inflation.

Order Stayed

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals today stayed a lower court injunction that would have halted American bombing of Cambodia by 4 p.m. this afternoon.

The three-judge panel, hastily assembled over the past 24 hours, granted the stay requested by government attorneys pending an appeal set for Aug. 13, two days before the bombing cutoff date set by Congress.

Whitehurst Is New Chairman

Election of officers on Thursday night for 1973-74 to serve on the Greenville Board of Adjustments resulted in William B. Whitehurst being named chairman.

Whitehurst succeeds Sam Brooks, who is retiring August 31 as a member of the Board of Adjustments.

For the post of vice-chairman, Charles G. Clark was appointed. He succeeds Howard Porter.

Mrs. Ginger Barber, who has served as secretary since October 1972, was re-appointed to that position.

All the positions are effective for a one year period.

At the regular July meeting Thursday night, two agenda items, both public hearings, were approved.

The first was a request for variance and special use permit by Bill Ippock. His requests were to construct a convenience store and to place gasoline pumps on property located at the northwest corner of 14th and Charles Streets.

The second agenda item was a request by Noah G. Raynor to obtain variance to erect a 12 foot cantilevered shed on a structure located at the southeast corner of 14th and Charles Street.

Conferees Progress On Comprehensive Farm Bill

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional conferees have cut $430 million from a food stamp reform plan and have tentatively agreed to make most Communist nations eligible for favorable credit sales under food-for-peace programs.

Along with these steps, the Senate-House conference committee progressed Thursday towards settling other issues in the comprehensive farm and food stamp bill. A third round of work was scheduled for today.

The conferees put off the biggest disputes, involving a planned new system of income protection for cotton and grain farmers and a House-passed ban on food stamps for most strikers. The word was that they would make these decisions near the end of their closed session.

The panel gave temporary approval to a provision making the Soviet Union, China, Cuba and other Communist nations except North Vietnam eligible for low-interest, long-term dollar credit sales agreements under the U.S. food-for-peace law.

The President would have to find a sales pact would be in the national interest and would have to tell Congress the reasons for his decision.

The provision would cover any country eligible under the law's donation section, which permits U.S. food to go to underfed or disaster-stricken foreigners.

Current law is more restrictive in defining a country's eligibility to join the sales program than in permitting gifts of food for humanitarian purposes. This new provision would abolish that distinction and put dollar sales and donation eligibility on the same basis. The 1954 law has been responsible for $20 billion in farm exports.

The conferees also gave preliminary approval to knocking out a Senate-passed ban on military use of foreign currency generated by the food-for-peace law. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the ban's sponsor, said it would have cut off $162 million of such spending by Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Meantime, the conferees carved $430 million out of a $1 billion package of Senate-passed amendments to the food stamp law. They accepted a $336 million version of a plan for semiannual adjustment of coupon allotments to reflect price changes, rejecting one that would have cost $579 million.

The conferees decided to retain a present asset test for food stamp beneficiaries—$1,500 per household and $3,000 for those with at least two people aged 60 or older.

Second Chance Is Given The Unwanted Children

By PEGGY WEIMER
Reflector Staff Writer

To provide homes for needy, underprivileged, and homeless boys and girls, A.D. Peacock of

A.D. PEACOCK

Whiteville established Boys Home in 1954 and is working to expand Girls Haven which was founded in 1970.

Given a second chance after being caught as a juvenile delinquent at the age of 12, Peacock resolved to repay his rescuer by saving a boy like himself. From this pledge came Boys Home at Lake Waccamaw.

He explained that "Girls Haven is a Boys Home for girls—it's to help the sisters of these boys." He first thought of forming the girls home years ago when he was picking up a boy for the Boys Home and the child's sister asked, "Can't you take me too, mister?"

"North Carolina has one of the worst juvenile systems in the nation," stated Peacock. Organizing the first of any such homes in the state, he feels that these children need another chance coupled with love and security instead of being sent off to some reformatory or left on their own.

"Men's clubs (Kiwanis, Jaycees, Optimist, Rotary, Civitans, and Lions) donated the money for the six cottages at the Boys Homes which are named after the organizations. However, Girls Haven will consist of three cottages at a location, with eight girls and house parents in each cottage. The various complexes will eventually be located in 11 areas all over the state. To de-emphasize the institutional aspect of the homes, no signs will be located in front of the buildings and, as done at Boys Home, the houses will be operated in a homelike atmosphere.

Like Boys Home, Girls Haven depends solely upon contributions for its maintenance. This financial support comes from individuals, civic clubs, churches, foundations, and some assistance from the counties from which the girls come. It has received the support of the N.C. Federation of Women's Club.

Peacock stressed that Girls Haven "is not a home for unwed mothers. If a girl becomes pregnant, the agency that sent her will remove her from that particular home until after the birth and adoption of the child. The girls will then be sent to another unit where she will be able to begin again."

Applicants are accepted only from the juvenile court and the social service agency. Both of the homes only take children that people turn down; children that could go to an adoption agency are not accepted.

The children remain in the Homes until their family environment improves, until they are placed in a foster home/or until they complete high school and secure employment. The Homes also help them to further their education if they desire.

The dream originated as a three-bedroom brick house with four girls near Burnsville. Ground was recently broken at the site of the first unit, six miles from Asheville, adjoining the Camp Mundo Vista grounds. At the present, 430 girls are on the waiting list—two 12-year-old and four or five above 16 years of age with the majority between the ages of 13 and 16.

In addition to founding them, Peacock has served as the first director of both Boys Home and Girls Haven. His first book, "To Save A Boy," relates the history of Boys Home. The book is not officially for sale; rather, it is given to contributors to the Girls Haven fund. He is presently completing a movie of the story of his life and is working on another book.

The Greenville Joycees contribute to the Boys Home fund by their annual Boys Home All-Star Game. Sixty recently graduated high school football players and 30 cheerleaders, along with six coaches, are selected from all over the state to participate in the contest of the "North and South" teams. Celebrating its 13th season, the 1973 All-Star Game will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday in Ficklen Stadium. Miss North Carolina, Miss Heather Lee Walker of Hendersonville, will be present.

Last year the "North" team won and $15,000 profit was netted from ticket, donations, and general proceeds.

TANKER OVERTURNED—A gas tanker truck loaded with 9,000 gallons of propane gas overturned near Scuffton, just inside Pitt County yesterday. The driver of the tanker was identified by Trooper S.F. Padgett as Robert Hilton, of Gainesville, Ga. Padgett said that Hilton lost control of the truck in a sharp curve and ran off the road. The wreck pinned him in the cab. A small hole was reported in the tank and fire units stood by. No fire was reported. Damage was estimated to the tanker by Padgett at $25-30,000. Hilton was charged with exceeding a safe speed. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

A Review H.M.S. Pinafore Brings An Evening Of Pleasure

There's only tonight and tomorrow night left for those who have not yet taken the opportunity to enjoy the polished production of H. M. S. Pinafore on stage at McGinnis Auditorium.

The star attraction, as has been the case in any production I've seen, is the play itself. Just short of being a century old (first performed in 1878), H. M. S. Pinafore is a stubborn old workhorse that refuses to die—with good reason, it's plain fun.

And the ECU Summer Theater cast, judging from the spirited performance Thursday night, seems to be infected with the spirit of zaniness and bombast of the musical satire, without falling into the trap of burlesquing what is already a rich burlesque on the mores of Victorian England.

I cannot recall having heard a finer orchestral support for Pinafore than that given by Barry Shank and the ECU summer musicians.

From the first note of the overture, the score sparkled, fresh and clean-cut, not once overpowering even the most modest singing voice (and one or two voices could have used a little more projecting power).

In an altogether competent cast, Jacqueline Somers radiates roguish feminine rascality as the plump, pink and life-loving Little Buttercup. Miss Somers not only has a lovely voice, who adds the necessary impishness that makes her Buttercup one to remember.

Charles M. Smith, as Captain Corcoran, cuts a fine figure of the immaculate commander of Pinafore.

He is consistently creditable both as the concerned father, slightly pompous, and the red blooded man not reluctant to indulge in a bit of non-Victorian dalliance with the handy Buttercup.

John Canary, as Ralph Rachstraw, the young able seaman who creates romantic chaos by daring to cast his affections on the daughter of the commander, is physically a splendid choice for the role. There were times, however, when his vocal powers succeeded with only a small margin between being heard and not being heard.

As Joesphine, the captain's daughter, June Laine adequately measures up as a maiden both shy and yet determined to win the heart of the man she loves despite his lowly birth.

In lesser roles, David Faber as Dick Deadeye and Robert Beard as Bill Bobstay, are excellent.

Robert Beard has a remarkably fine voice—that deserves to be heard in a major singing role. His solo in "A British Tar is A" is certainly one of the high spots in the ECU production of H. M. S. Pinafore.

The only detraction—and one I hope can be remedied tonight and tomorrow night—has nothing to do with H. M. S. Pinafore directly. We know the tight schedule required to produce plays in rapid sequence calls for almost round the clock work, but please, no more hammering and sawing in the workshops beneath the auditorium during performance time.

Having made that complaint, let me hasten to add that Edgar Loessin has directed a zestful, happy, fast-paced Pinafore that brings out the best in this much performed old favorite. Don't miss it.

New President Of 4-H Clubs

RALEIGH (AP)—A second ballot victory Thursday night saw 18-year-old Mary McLaurin of West Jefferson selected president of the North Carolina 4-H clubs.

Miss McLaurin ran on the slogan "I've gotta be me."

Other officers elected were David Palmer of Clyde, vice president; Marvin Watts of Morganton, secretary-treasurer; and Dee McNamara of Kernersville, reporter.

Meat Handlers See Rush To Buy: 'Nothing Like It'

By HUELL WARREN
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Out where the beef grows, even many of those who have it are figuratively standing in line for hamburger.

"I've sold more meat this week than any time since I came here 13 years ago," said Alvin Roepke, who slaughters and cuts meats for home freezers at Waterville, Kan.

Even if you are a farmer with a prime young steer, or a relative or friend of a farmer who will sell you one, Roepke can't get around to cutting it up, grinding it, wrapping it and freezing it for you until Aug. 14.

A somewhat larger and long-time operator in Kansas City, Kan., John Bichelmeyer, stopped taking new orders for sides of beef on Wednesday when he built up a backlog that will keep him busy 30 to 45 days—if he can get the cattle.

You can call Scheerer's Freezer Meats, another big operation on the southeast fringe of Kansas City, and get nothing but a busy signal all day.

Old and steady customers are being put on a waiting list at the rate of 50 to 60 a day.

Safeway, which has promoted the sale of freezer meats in its city stores, isn't offering beef anymore. Neither are any of the other big supermarkets in Kansas and Missouri.

A Safeway spokesman said it cannot buy cattle on the uncontrolled livestock markets and sell under the retail freeze without losing money.

President Nixon elected to keep ceilings on beef prices until Sept. 12 under his Phase 4 program, but the industry is crying for immediate relief.

The Nixon administration has made it clear it has no intention of changing the Sept. 12 deadline.

None of the processors who are taking orders, or compiling waiting lists are saying anything about price. Orders they fill before the freeze is lifted will have to be at their ceilings, which are running from about 82 to 95 cents a pound.

Laird Says He Is No Quitter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Melvin R. Laird says he's a "stayer" and has no plans of resigning his position as chief domestic adviser to President Nixon.

Laird, who met with newsmen Thursday, said widely published speculation that he was unhappy and was planning to quit might be attributable to his candor in speaking with the press.

Laird said he had no trouble gaining access to the President, although "my advice has not always been followed."

Two recent examples of that were his suggestions that Ronald L. Ziegler be removed as chief White House spokesman and that the President make tapes of White House conversations available to the Senate Watergate committee.

Elsewhere, Colorado cattle growers were asked by the Colorado Farm Bureau Thursday to withhold beef from the market until the ceiling on beef is lifted.

Also on Thursday, Swift Fresh Meats Co. of Chicago announced the closing of two of its seven packing plants, citing market conditions.

The American Meat Institute in Chicago described the beef industry as fraught with "chaos and disruptions." Meanwhile, representatives of nearly 80 meat purveying and supply companies, meeting in New York, agreed to fight the beef price ceiling by seeking a court injunction.

Herrell De Graff, president of the American Meat Institute, said he still hopes a meeting he requested Wednesday with White House officials might be set.

Ervin Tries To Halt Applause

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. telling his Watergate spectators not to applaud is like a stripper telling her audience not to stare.

The "old country lawyer" with the dancing eyebrows and puckish grin is getting tough with his fans. They don't seem to mind—but they don't always listen, either.

The chairman of the Senate Watergate committee has become something of a folk hero to the more than 1,000 people each day who crowd in and drift out of the rear section of the Old Senate office building Caucus Room.

They cheer "Senator Sam" and boo his unworthy adversaries.

No one much minded at first when they laughed at his down-home North Carolina stories and cheered his Bible-based wisdom, but lately they have even taken to applauding his entrance after every recess.

"I am going to respectfully request the audience not to make any kind of a demonstration or indicate in any way their approval or disapproval of anybody or anything, including myself," Ervin told the spectators Wednesday.

The transcript of the afternoon session duly noted the chairman's admonition was followed by laughter.

But the spectator turnover is constant throughout the day. Ervin no sooner finishes scolding one crowd before another unprepared group has moved in to replace it.

Ervin, aware that the committee's constitutional confrontation with the White House has drawn it deeper into controversy, has sought to avoid having the hearings branded as a circus, and now makes it a practice to ask for audience silence every hour or two.

Turn Backyard Picnic Into Four-Star Delight

By RON COHEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It's time for all you men who are closet gourmet cooks to come out of hiding to practice that most American of cooking rituals, the outdoor barbecue.

But disabuse yourselves of the belief that hotdogs, chicken and hamburgers are the outer limits of your barbecue horizons. Cooking out need not necessarily mean weekend after weekend of the same old menu from now until Labor Day. A little imagination, a little elan can turn your backyard picnic into a four-star delight.

Two of the most important ingredients in outdoor cooking are good recipes for a marinade and a piquant, tasty barbecue sauce. Here are a couple of the best."

WINE MARINADE.

- 1 1/2 cups of peanut or cooking oil
- 1 cup of soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
- 2 tablespoons dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons salt
- 1 tablespoon fresh ground pepper
- 1 cup dry red wine or sherry
- 2 teaspoons dried parsley flakes
- 1/2 cup fresh lemon juice.

Combine all ingredients in a quart jar, cover tightly and shake vigorously. Place steaks, chops, chicken in the marinade in a long shallow pan. Turn occasionally. Marinate as long as two days in the refrigerator. Marinade can be drained off, frozen and reused. Makes about 3 cups.

ROBUST BARBECUE SAUCE

- 1/2 cup light molasses
- 1/2 cup prepared mustard
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon sauce
- 1 teaspoon liquid red pepper sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

In small saucepan, gradually blend molasses into mustard, stir in remaining ingredients, heat to boiling. Brush meat (spare ribs, steak, chops, chicken, or hamburgers) frequently with sauce.

These are good basic recipes. Since many chefs like to improvise, use the recipes as a starting point and add or subtract as you like. For example, you might want to toss in a couple of teaspoons of tarragon into either recipe when you're cooking chicken.

Now for a suggestion that can give you the opportunity to test the barbecue sauce.

GIANT HAMBURGER

- TURNOVERS
- 2 pounds ground chuck
- 2 eggs
- 1 1/2 teaspoons seasoned salt
- 1/4 teaspoon seasoned pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce
- prepared mustard
- 1 cup diced mozzarella or cheddar cheese
- 1/2 cup diced pimiento
- 1/2 cup diced sour pickles
- 1/2 cup diced black or green olives

Robust barbecue saace or bottled sauce spiked with liquid red pepper sauce.

Combine meat with eggs, salt, pepper, garlic powder and worcestershire. Divide into 6 portions. Using a 7 1/4-inch bowl as a guide, draw a circle on a sheet of waxed paper. Lay 1 portion of meat at a time on the paper and pat it until it fills the circle. Spread mustard lightly over the meat and sprinkle half of it with 1-6 of the cheese, pimiento, olives and pickles, leaving about 1/2 inch bare at the outer edge. Lift paper to fold bare half of meat over filling and press edges firmly to seal. Repeat with remaining ingredients to make 6 turnovers. Grill to desired doneness, turning once and basting with barbecue sauce. Serve hot on split Italian hero buns.

ONION-STUFFED STEAK

Get two 1 1/2 pound porterhouse steaks cut 1 1/2 inches thick. Slash fat edge of steak at one inch intervals, being careful not to cut into meat. Slicing from the fat side, cut a pocket into each side of the meat, almost to the bone. In a skillet cook 1/2 cup chopped onion and 1 large clove of garlic, minced, in 1 tablespoon margarine. Season with dash of salt, pepper and celery salt. Stuff the pockets with the onion mixture and skewer the pockets closed. Brush with combination of 1/4 cup of dry red wine and 2 tablespoons soy sauce, place on grill 25 to 30 minutes for rare or desired doneness, turning once. Slice across grain. Serves 4.

Office Is Not The Place For Personal Problems

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will print this letter to my secretary. There must be many other executives who have this problem and don't know how to handle it tactfully.

Take a letter, Mrs. Brown:

You are an excellent secretary, but I wish you would leave your personal problems at home. I am not a marriage counselor or a financial adviser, and I haven't the time or energy to listen to problems concerning your children.

When you confide your personal problems to me, Mrs. Brown, altho I may appear interested and sympathetic, the truth is, I am very uncomfortable, and I resent using my time [and yours] on such matters.

I value your services and don't want to seem unfeeling or unkind, but I would like our relationship to be strictly impersonal and professional.

YOUR BOSS

DEAR BOSS: I don't know how many bosses share your view, but I'm sure many of their wives do. When a secretary starts crying on her boss's shoulder, she frequently ends up in his arms. The only way to discourage personal conversations [in the office and out] is to abort them at the onset.

DEAR ABBY: We are a one-car family, and because I want to use the car during the day, my husband is picked up every morning by Harry, a coworker. Harry also gives my husband a ride home every evening. [My husband pays him well for his trouble.]

A few months ago Harry and his wife separated, so Harry started coming a few minutes early to have "coffee" with my husband. Pretty soon Harry came a little earlier and had a "bite" of breakfast. Now he comes good and early and sits down to a full course breakfast with us every morning.

Not only that, but after work Harry doesn't just drop my husband off, he comes in for a "drink." Then he sits around hinting that he has no plans for supper, so I have to ask him to stay. I am up to here with that guy. My husband doesn't want to insult Harry because he has to work with him, and I don't think it's my place to tell him off. What do you suggest?

HAD IT WITH HARRY

DEAR HAD IT: How about letting your husband take the car to work for a while? The inconvenience of being without wheels would be a picnic compared to putting up with Harry.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl and I've never seen a problem like mine in your column.

A friend of mine, I'll call her Susan, was raped four months ago and she is pregnant. [She's my age.] Well, my Mom heard about it thru the neighborhood grapevine and now she won't let me go over to Susan's house anymore. Susan doesn't want the baby, and she doesn't believe in abortion, so she is giving it up for adoption when it's born.

They never caught the rapist, and my Mom thinks the rape story is a big lie—that Susan's boy friend [I'll call him "Jeff"] did it to her. I know Jeff pretty well, and I don't think he would do anything like that to Susan.

Anyway, I don't think it's fair that I am not allowed to go to Susan's house. She called me once and asked why I didn't come over anymore and I didn't know what to tell her.

Susan needs friends to comfort her right now.

What should I do?

SUSAN'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Well, one thing you can't do is to disobey your mother. Since she didn't tell you you couldn't write to Susan, why don't you send her cheery cards and letters now and then? I agree, Susan does need friends right now.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HATES TO ARGUE BUT ALWAYS DOES IN HARTFORD: No one said it better than the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis when he said, "Behind every argument is someone's ignorance." Just be sure it isn't yours.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Offer Solution To Blood Bank

Getting enough donors to the Bloodmobile on each visit to make the county's quota has always been a hassle. The program falls behind for several visits, then a big effort is made and it is swamped on a given visit.

The Greenville Moose Lodge, which has long been active in supporting the Bloodmobile, hopes to do something about the situation. It is spearheading an effort to form a "donor pledge bank" which hopefully will help meet the needs of the blood bank.

Leon Smith, a leader in Bloodmobile campaigns, explained to the Moose, "We're going to need the names of 5,000 people who can and will give a pint of blood once a year. That's the heart of the whole program.

Man To Blame For Floodings

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It is man, not Mother Nature, who must shoulder the blame for recent floods across the state.

And the way things are going, Carolinians can be on the lookout for more floods — untill land development patterns and practices change.

That's the viewpoint of Dick Folsche, 35-year-old former Kansas farmboy who now heads up the statewide watershed program in North Carolina for the Soil Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"We're gonna continue to have more and more floods such as those we've seen lately," Folsche (pronounced Fol-shee) said.

"Eighty-eight of the 100 counties in this state have at least one city or town that is built-up to the point that flood problems are likely. And construction will have some effect on streams," he said.

Paving The Ground
"As we continue to develop, mostly in urban areas, we increase the amount of water runoff. We put in shopping center roofs and streets and pave parking lots with asphalt — covering the soil surface so that water is not absorbed into the ground.

"And then we put in streets and storm-drain channels that deliver even more water downstream.

"And then we run sewer linesup the creeks and development follows and soon you have more buildings and streets and parking lots — and more surface water poured into the streams," Folsche said.

"Is it going to get worse? The answer has to be yes if we go on doing things the way we are now, it will get much worse," he said.

It is bad, now, all over the state. But mountain areas where resort home developments, camping grounds, amusement parks and ski slopes are multiplying is developing potential for trouble down the road, Folsche feels.

North Carolina has been hard hit by floods this year. In late May at least 12 people were killed and an estimated $27.8 million in damages done in 22 western counties centered around Ashe, Alleghany, Buncombe, Haywood, Henderson, Jackson, Transylvania and Watauga counties.

The deaths are largely attributed to houses or mobile homes located in floodplains along creeks.

Raleigh's Crabtree Valley shopping mall and office complex has been flooded twice this year; Charlotte has had flooding; other areas of the state, and nation, had been hit.

"Even in the smallest town, whenever a hamburger stand or a motel or "any kind of construction at all takes place, it will have some effect."

Streams Blocked
Compounding the increased water dumped into creeks by land development is "the sediment which development creates. Folsche described the problem this way:

During construction a great deal of raw soil is exposed and washed into creeks. Even after construction, additional raw land often is left uncovered and the soil flushes downstream.

The silt and sediment builds up further downstream and eventually creates a blockage that reduces the size of the stream; the water runs faster and faster in the smaller channel, tearing away vegetation along the creek bank — which creates more sediment and more blockage.

Since land development is to blame, developers will have to bear the burden of correcting the problems, Folsche believes.

Costs Go Up
"Development costs will be rising because we have to stop this problem. We are moving very slowly right now, and until we get into some sort of land use planning we aren't making much headway. And, Folsche said, "state law needs to be implemented and much more positive action taken."

Folsche's post is primarily one of education and planning for local communities. He does not wield any real power in the form of laws from the federal level — but he thinks that may chance soon unless local governments take action.

Folsche insists there are ways developers can control the flooding problems they are creating. Some states now require builders to take care of the increased water flow.

Small sediment traps can be built between construction sites and creeks; buffer strips of woods and foliage along creekbanks can be required; planting of open areas can be demanded; and in some cases even underground storage — or parking lot storage — of overflow waters can be designed. Dams along streams can also be required.

"And all of this," Folsche said, "may become part of development costs."

He said the program will have to have widespread acceptance, along with the cooperation of other civic and service clubs.

The plan is to set up an index of volunteer donors who could expect a call once a year. Using a master plan, this would assure a uniform flow of donors on each of the Bloodmobile visits.

Regular donors are often frustrated by long waits at the collection center under the present system. By following a schedule as envisioned under the program, much of the waiting would be eliminated and regular donors would have to visit the Bloodmobile only once a year.

Smith sees building the donor pledge index as a long range job. "It will take more manpower than we ourselves can provide." Meetings will be held with other organizations in the county to solicit support.

It seems to us that the Moose Lodge is on the right track in developing a program which could assure a steady blood supply for the Red Cross blood program. Regular donors could be called once a year, just as for a dental appointment, and by careful scheduling the slow days and rush days could be evened out.

If enough potential donors can be signed up and they will cooperate, many of the problems of conducting the Red Cross blood program can be eliminated. Since an adequate blood supply is so essential, it seems that implementing this procedure is a must for Pitt County.

The New Haig White House

By ROWLAND EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Watergate crisis transformation of President Nixon's White House staff has signalled a change from the total Haldeman-Erlichman domination at the top into a loose federation of division heads under Gen. Alexander Haig's overall direction and growing influence.

But while power at the White House has been fragmented, Mr. Nixon shows signs of sticking to old habits in facing this historic crisis of government. He obviously prefers to spend more time with chief of staff Haig and press secretary Ron Ziegler, both new to high national politics, than the seasoned Melvin R. Laird and Bryce Harlow. Haig and Ziegler, though lacking the Haldeman-Erlichman power monopoly, resemble those departed lieutenants in being far less likely than Laird to confront the President with unpleasant recommendations.

The new arrangement, wholly unique in Richard Nixon's presidency, was clearly evident in the condition of employment laid down by Laird when he reluctantly agreed to join the White House staff as domestic counsellor. In conversations with Haig, Laird rejected involvement in Watergate.

It is unlikely Laird intended his self-imposed limit as a signal he wanted to steer clear of the Oval Office except on domestic policy legislative questions. Yet, Laird has not been given anything approaching the access to Mr. Nixon enjoyed by his predecessor as domestic chief, John D. Ehrlichman.

In short, Laird has become the operating divisional head for domestic policy, period. Whereas Ehrlichman's role as intimate presidential adviser spreadeagled all political and ideological issues, Laird's scope is strictly limited.

This limit on Laird has enhanced the role of Haig, just transferred from the Pentagon with concepts of a brilliant staff officer carrying out the wishes of his chief. By steering clear of Laird, Mr. Nixon will avoid the kind of blunt advice that has always irritated him. Indeed Mr. Nixon rejected key recommendations from Laird during his first days as domestic chief. Old Nixon-watchers feel that even in this crisis the President is maintaining his antipathy toward advisers who actually give advice.

In the event, there is no doubt of the accretion of power in each of the major White House operational divisions.

The President's new legal staff, headed by ex-law partner Leonard Garment, now has independent authority John W. Dean III never had. Likewise, William Timmons, chief White House lobbyist, enjoys a new autonomy. Roy Ash, head of the Office of Management and Budget, has also, in words of one White House insider, "been expanding his perimeter"—and may soon bump into Laird's operation.

While power has thus been scattered in the White House, Ziegler has been jockeying to replace Haldeman, not in power but as the White House aide closer than all others to Mr. Nixon. "Ron doesn't care about the power of being close to the President," one presidential aide told us. "He wants the form of Oval Office entree, not the substance."

Ziegler alone of the old Nixon staff emerged from the Watergate scandals with prestige publicly enhanced by the President (who elevated him to "Assistant to the President").

With his two most intimate aides gone, Mr. Nixon has taken to spending literally hours with Ziegler, whom he treats like a son. When Laird publicly suggested Ziegler's standing with the press was so low he should be removed as the President's spokesman, Mr. Nixon personally authorized a flat contradiction in the President's name.

But while Ziegler has the intimacy, it is Haig who now appears to be the most formidable influence with the President. Haig reminds old friends that he didn't give up his brilliant military career to "shuffle papers" as chief administrative officer in the White House.

Haig ended a potential struggle over control of White House personnel on his own terms, rejecting proposals from Laird and others that all Watergate-touched aides be dismissed in the President's interest, whether directly guilty or not. Haig has ruled out the firing of these old Haldeman-Ehrlichman aides. (Continued On Page 5)

Strength For Today

THE JOURNEY'S END

There is probably no such thing in the world as a completely satisfied person. Someone has remarked that everyone goes arm in arm with disappointment. Often the men who have achieved the most have bitter moments when they recall some cherished ambition they have not fulfilled.

And why should it be otherwise? What obligation rests upon God to make us happy every moment of our lives? Even Jesus learned obedience by the things he suffered. If he had to be taught in that stern school, how much more necessary is it for us to be so disciplined.

We may complain about the fact that we have to travel arm in arm with disappointment, but this unpleasant companion is really a good friend, hard though it is for us to see it. He journeys with us not to harass us but to keep down our pride and keep up our faith. If the pathway of life were always easy, there would be no triumph at the journey's end.

That Watergate Fantasy

WASHINGTON—Everyone has his favorite fantasy after watching the Watergate hearings. I got mine when I watched Tony Ulasewicz testify last week how he left manila envelopes filled with $100 bills in phone booths and airport lockers to pay off defendants and lawyers involved in the trial.

My fantasy is that I have to call my wife, so I walk into the lobby of a lawyer's building and head for a public phone booth. I dial my number and get a busy signal. I hang up, wondering how long she'll be on the phone. Then I notice a plain brown envelope taped to the side of the phone. I tear it open and find inside a wad of $100 bills.

I immediately call my wife again. "Remember I told you this morning we couldn't buy any steak for a month? Well, that statement is inoperative. Go out and get six of the most beautiful sirloins you can find." I look in the envelope again. "And you can buy some lettuce, too."

"But we can't afford it," she protests, "I just bought a dozen eggs."

"Don't argue," I say. "We're going to eat steak for a week."

I hang up, shove the envelope in my inside coat pocket and nonchalantly leave the booth.

A burly man with a part in the middle of his black, greasy hair comes up to me. "What are you doing with that manila envelope?"

"What business is it of yours?"

"It's my envelope."

"It doesn't have your name on it."

"If you don't give it to me I'll break your knees with a baseball bat."

Just then a man comes out of the elevator and goes to the phone booth. He searches it and comes out looking puzzled. Then he comes over the burly man and says, "I thought you told me my $25,000 legal fee would be in the phone booth."

"It was in the booth," the burly man says, "but this joker took it out and he won't give it to me."

"There's a law against stealing someone's fee," the lawyer says.

"Show me where there is anything in this manila envelope to indicate this is a lawyer's fee," I reply.

"Well, for one thing," the lawyer says nervously, "I always get paid in $100 bills."

"In a phone booth?"

"Our accountant is on vacation," he blushes.

The burly man says, "I better call Mr. Novak." He goes into the booth.

"Who's Mr. Novak?" I ask the lawyer.

"That's the code name for Kalmbach, the President's lawyer."

The burly man speaks into the phone. "Mr. Novak, this is Mr. Rivers. . . No, I didn't pay the lawyer because some guy picked up the lettuce in the phone booth before the lawyer got there. . . The guy won't give it back. . . Should we turn him over to the plumbers? . . . Well, you better (Continued on page 5)

South Africa Change

By KENNETH L. WHITING

Associated Press Writer
PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — South African officials have begun attending multiracial diplomat parties, easing a nine-year ban on such appearances. Apartheid, or separation of the races, is official policy here.

Brand Fourie, senior civil servant in the South Africa foreign ministry, and three undersecretaries attended the American Independence Day celebration this month at the residence of U.S. Ambassador John Hurd.

It was later confirmed that he attended "with the knowledge and the approval" of Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller.

Earlier a member of parliament for the ruling Nationalist party and two undersecretaries showed up at the British envoy's reception to mark the birthday of Queen Elizabeth II. Both affairs were attended by black South Africans as well as those of mixed ancestry classified here as coloreds.

As far as diplomats and political observers can recall, the two affairs reflected the first relaxation of this aspect of official race segregation since it was imposed by the late Prime Minister Hendrik J. Verwoerd in 1964.

Verwoerd told parliament then that diplomats previously respected customs and traditions of the country in which they were assigned. He suggested that the British and American ambassadors had deviated from this by mixing races at social gatherings.

His government, said Verwoerd, couldn't go along by attending parties "at which things were done which can in a way be regarded as undermining the traditions of this country . . ."

Verwoerd's word was final in those days and multiracial diplomatic functions became off limits to cabinet ministers, Nationalist politicians and other senior officials.

Muller told parliament last year that the old Verwoerd policy was still in force.

His staff refrained from attending mixed gatherings, said Muller, because they were "contrary to our traditions and customs which are aimed at eliminating friction amongst our national groups . . ."

Greenville snapped out of the lethargy of the last several months with the resumption of operation today of the stemming plant of the Greenville Tobacco Company. Officials of the organization announced this morning that over four hundred employees were put back to work and this number was expected to increase. The opening of the tobacco market is always a sign for improvement of business in this section of the state.

Employees of the Pitt County court house went to Morehead City yesterday for their annual picnic. Virtually every office and department was represented and some relatives accompanied the employees.

Recession Fear In France Over Dollar's Decline

By BERNARD LAVALLÉE
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — The French government is worried that continued decline of the dollar on European money markets could lead to a recession in France and social and racial unrest.

President Georges Pompidou and his economic advisers are said to fear that if the dollar's troubles continue, French exports to America will drop, American exporters will take business away from the French in other countries, and American businessmen will reduce their activities and investments abroad.

With the franc now worth about 25 cents, Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing said in a recent interview that a return to the former value of 21-22 cents is vital for the French economy.

"If we accepted that the franc should be highly overvalued as compared to the currency of the world's first economic power," he explained, "we would see whole sectors of our economy driven out of export markets."

Pompidou's advisers say they think social tensions can be avoided after the summer vacation period provided the dollar does not drop any lower.

"If it doesn't," one source said, "none of the government's plans could be soundly implemented, particularly its social and development programs calling principally for increased pensions for old-age people and extension of the highway and telephone systems.

"And the program of the left wing could not be put in force either," the source added, referring to a social and economic program jointly prepared by the Communist and Socialist parties as an alternative to Pompidou's policies.

What is commonly referred to here as the "economic war" or "aggression" by the United States in other markets is worrying both the government and the leftist opposition. But the Left rejected a tentative call for unity against the American "menace."

The government's chief worry is unemployment. The number of jobless presently stands at less than 600,000—a relatively low 2.5 per cent—but any increase might upset the situation.

"We hope that the Americans meanwhile realize they have to support their currency for fear of an economic slowdown in their own country," one source said.

I take the phone.
"What's your name?"
Novak asks.
"Gemstone Sedan Chair II," I reply.

"I undersatnd you found $25,000 in cash in a phone booth."

"That's correct," I reply.
"And as a lawyer you should know whatever someone finds in a phone booth belongs to him."

"It does not," he says. "It belongs to the phone company."

"Okay, I'll give the $25,000 to the phone company."

"No. Don't do that," Mr. Novak says. "All right, let us for the moment assume the money is yours. Would you be willing to donate it to a defense fund for the poor families and starving lawyers who are trying to help the misguided individuals who broke into the Democratic headquarters early in the morning on June 17?"

"Nope."
"Give me Mr. Rivers again."

Rivers takes the phone. "I gotcha, Mr. Novak... Let the guy keep the $25,000 and leave another $25,000 in the phone booth for the lawyer... I'm sorry, Mr. Novak, for the botchup... Yes, I agree with you... There just aren't any honest people in the world any more."

des, so long as they perform well, as a "moral issue," and the President has clearly backed him all the way. Ziegler, too, is protected on the "moral issue" basis.

Clearly, the man to watch in the dangerous aftermath of Watergate is not Laird and certainly not Ziegler but Al Haig. While Haig does not even seek to concentrate power in the Haldeman-Ehrlichman manner, the question not yet answered is whether his advice to the President will be better than theirs.

Nixon's GOP Allies Keep Trying New Curate Will Be To Convey Their Rising Concern Installed On Sunday

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's Republican allies in Congress are trying to convey to him their concern over his refusal to yield tapes and documents to Watergate investigators.

Most have been using private channels to warn Nixon that political problems accompany his legal stand against release of the material. Sen. Robert J. Dole, former GOP national chairman, is one of the few to express his fears publicly.

"The President may be totally justified," Dole said. "But the great majority of Americans aren't going to discuss executive privilege and separation of powers," Nixon's stated reasons for refusing to produce the tapes and documents.

"They're going to discuss 'did he know or didn't he know?'" the Kansas Republican said, echoing a theme Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. has emphasized at the Senate Watergate hearings.

Congressional Republicans are seeking to convince Nixon that something will have to be done about what they feel is a widely held, though mistaken, public view that his refusal to yield the material is a tacit admission of guilt.

Some were encouraged by a possible move toward accommodation in Nixon's statement to the committee Thursday that "it is quite possible" other presidential documents might be made available in response to specific requests.

Committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., rejected the idea, saying, "You can't identify a document you've never seen."

However, Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., said Nixon's willingness to make other papers available has "greatly strengthened his case in court."

Baker, the committee vice chairman, persisted in seeking an out-of-court settlement. The Tennessee senator repeated a suggestion first proposed by Scott that an independent panel review the tapes and documents to determine which are related to the Senate investigation.

A number of key Republican senators and congressmen have issued individual public statements that they hope a way can be found to make the tapes available.

Congressional sources say the GOP lawmakers so far have been treading warily, working primarily through White House aides believed sympathetic to their position.

The Rev. Joseph W. Arps Jr. will be installed at the 10 a.m. service Sunday as the Curate of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rector, Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr., will preside at the installation and preach.

The Rev. Arps is a recent graduate of the Virginia Episcopal Seminary, Alexandria, Va. As a seminarian, he served St. Alban's Church in Washington, D. C. His clinical training was pursued at Bethany Hospital, Kansas City, Kan., and his parish internship was served at St. Anne's, Jacksonville.

He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and taught at Buxton on the Outer Banks prior to entering seminary. He is a native of Plymouth.

The new Curate has been at St. Paul's since July 1. He is a bachelor and resides at the Tar River Estates.

Mrs. Rogers Guest At Choir Festival

Mrs. Eve Rogers of the "Together With Eve" television program will be guest of honor at the first annual Choir Festival of One Thousand Voices, sponsored by the Voices of Zion of York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church Sunday at 3 p.m.

A number of choirs from Greenville and Pitt County will render selections of their own choosing and midway the program, all choirs will combine into one mammoth choir, according to Mrs. Esther Staton, president of the Voices of Zion. Mrs. Rogers will lead the 1000-voice singing.

Mrs. Rogers writes, directs, and is the interviewer on a Sunday morning television program which deals with Black Culture on WNCT, Channel 9. She also works for the Pitt County Social Services department and is a member of the Greenville Human Relations Board. She is the wife of Ray Rogers of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

She graduated from Eppes High School here and from Bennett College in Greensboro, attended Governor's School in Winston Salem, and has done further study at East Carolina University. She is a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

The Sunday afternoon program is open to the public.

Initially the independents had proposed that the Phase 4 ceiling for independent marketers be eliminated, claiming that independent dealers would be forced out of business no matter what base price date was chosen.

The group told Owens that they must be allowed to pass increased costs along to consumers as soon as those costs are incurred. Under the Phase 4 programs scheduled to go in effect Aug. 12, both independent and major gasoline retailers would operate under a ceiling that could only be raised by the Cost of Living Council.

Park Zoo Is Not For Mac

NEW YORK (AP) — Central Park, it appears, is not for the birds.

Mac the macaw took off for parts unknown Thursday during ceremonies at which his owner, Prof. Gerard Wolfe of New York University, was giving him to the zoo to replace Poppi, another macaw pilfered last weekend.

"I've always had that effect on pretty birds," said Parks Administrator Richard Clurman.

Mac was sitting on Wolfe's shoulder when he took off for a perch in a tree-top. Emergency measures were taken.

Hooked Big One On Opening Day

RICHFIELD, Utah, (UPI) — On the opening day of the 1973 Utah fishing season Boyd Lorenson reeled in a 27-pound German brown trout at Fish Lake near here.

The fish, 27 1/4 inches in girth and 37 3/4 inches long, was believed to be the biggest of its kind ever brought in on a rod and reel in the state.

Price Base Is Hit By Dealers

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Computing Phase 4 gasoline ceiling prices from base prices on Jan. 10 will force many independent dealers to shut down, a group of 40 independents told a Cost of Living Council representative Thursday night.

The dealers from North Carolina and South Carolina recommended June 1-8 as a base price period instead.

Max Jackson, executive director of the Carolina Independent Oil Marketers Association, said a gas price war throughout the Carolinas in January had pushed some prices as low as 26 cents a gallon on Jan. 10. He said many dealers were operating at cost then and under Phase 4 would have to buy oil at the higher wholesale prices in effect May 15.

The dealers told Charles Owens, special consultant to John Dunlop, director in charge of energy matters for the Cost of Living Council, that prices had reached a degree of stability in June after adjusting to the nationwide energy shortage in the spring.

Jackson said today that although no conclusion was reached, he is encouraged by the attitude the Council expressed at the meeting. He said he feels an effort will be made to minimize damage to independent marketers.

Soft Drinks Surpass Coffee

NEW YORK (UPI) — Liquid consumption studies place soft drinks as America's No. 1 beverage, ahead of coffee for the first time, report researchers at Royal Crown Cola Co. An estimated 84 per cent of all Americans over 13 years of age are soft drink consumers who last year imbibed more than 3.5 billion cases of carbonated beverages, the researchers said.

MRS. EVE ROGERS

He contended that consumers would not be hurt even if ceilings were completely eliminated for the independents. Jackson said that the independents must sell gasoline cheaper than the major companies in order to compete, so would be selling under the majors' freeze price even without an independent ceiling.

Jackson said that the independents must sell gasoline cheaper than the major companies in order to compete, so would be selling under the majors' freeze price even without an independent ceiling.

Nothing worked.

Mac, his red body, blue and green wings and black and white head flashing in the sun, just flew off—this time to a high oak.

"When he gets hungry he'll come down," said Wolfe.

But Mac, who speaks pretty good English, took off for the West. His last words were "Help," "Apple," "Banana."

Mac was sitting on Wolfe's shoulder when he took off for a perch in a tree-top. Emergency measures were taken.

The professor played a tape-recording of Mac's own voice: a cherry-picker, a mobile platform normally used for pruning trees, was put in place; Captain Hook, another macaw, was brought over to try to coax the bird down.

The game of golf reveals something fundamental in the character of man. For when man builds a golf course he deliberately creates hazards for himself. He builds his fairways between clumps of trees . . . dots them with bunkers and sand traps . . . often terraces his greens with confusing slopes. The whole idea—to make things harder for himself!

It is this same trait in human character that constantly concerns our churches. Christianity doesn't teach that life can be—or should be—easy. It teaches us that hazards must challenge us to choose the right way. And it teaches men how to recover from their mistakes—with God's help.

For thousands who find themselves in one of the traps of life . . . our religion offers precious help and reassurance.

Limited Sales For Greenville Leaf Market July 31

By J.N. BRYAN
Supervisor Of Sales
Greenville Tobacco
Board of Trade

The Greenville Tobacco Market will open on July 31 with a limited sale of two sets of buyers and on August 27 with its regular allocation.

For the convenience of tobacco growers wanting to sell early, on July 31 there will be four sets of buyers assigned to the Eastern Belt with two sets coming to Greenville. On August 7 and additional nine sets of buyers will be assigned to the Eastern Belt, making a total of thirteen sets of buyers for the Eastern markets. Then, August 27 will be the beginning of the regular marketing season for all markets in the Eastern Belt.

The most sought after varieties and the most superb quality of tobacco will appear on the warehouse floors in Greenville. Representatives of all the major tobacco buying companies in the world will be here awaiting their chance for competitive bidding for this outstanding quality tobacco to be offered for sale during the 1973 season.

A.A. Forbes, Jr. is president of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade. J.B. Belcher is vice president and J.N. Bryan serves as secretary and supervisor of

J.N. BRYAN
Supervisor of Sales
Greenville Tobacco
Board of Trade

The following buying companies are located in Greenville (also listed are the presidents and branch managers): American Suppliers, Homer Compton, branch manager; Export Leaf Tobacco Company; Joe Gaston, branch manager; Carolina Leaf Tobacco Company; Inc. (E.B. Ficklen Tobacco Company Division), William B. Glenn, president; Greenville Tobacco Company, C.W. Howard, Jr., president; Imperial Tobacco Company, Ltd., H.B. Bruton Jr., buying supervisor; International Tobacco Company, Inc. P.K. Andresen, president; Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company, A.B. Ayers, head buyer; J.P. Taylor Company, Carter Bell, buying supervisor; and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Gene Averette, branch manger.

Many years of satisfactory business dealings with the tobacco trade over the world has built up for the companies in Greenville an enviable reputation of being the finest purchasers, graders, handlers and processors of leaf tobacco in the world. Knowing the world's finest smoking tobacco is grown in Pitt and the area served by the Greenville Tobacco Market, Greenville's tobacco companies have taken advantage of this fact. By constant improvement, over a period of many years, they have succeeded in adding perfection in tobacco purchasing and processing to an already perfect natural product.

There are 19 tobacco warehouses and seven firms in Greenville with the largest one of these warehouse floors covering over eleven acres.

The floor space in Greenville devoted exclusively to the sale and processing of leaf tobacco is well over three million square feet.

The names of the owners and operators of these warehouse firms are as follows:

Cannon's Warehouse, W.T. Cannon, Carlton Dail; Farmers Warehouse, W. Arthur Tripp, Jack Warren, T.P. Thompson, Harold L. Watson and Willie Edwards, Sales Manager; Keel's Warehouse, J.A. (Buddy) Worthington, J.B. Worthington, Fenner Allen; New Carolina Warehouse, Larry Hudson; New Independent Warehouse, J.B. Belcher, W.A. Pruitt, T.W. Pruitt, W.E. Pruitt and Harold Forbes; Raynor-Forbes and Clark Warehouse, Noah Raynor, A.A. Forbes, Jr. and Billy Clark; Star-Planters Warehouse, B.B. Sugg, Sr. and Harding Sugg.

Bryan stated that farmers should schedule their tobacco for sale with the warehouseman of their choice in order to sell it in an orderly manner and said that most of the warehouses have been further mechanized this year to speed up getting tobacco on the sales floors.

A.A. FORBES, JR.
President of Greenville
Tobacco Board of Trade

Bryan called attention to the fact that last year the Greenville Market recorded the highest average in the 82 years of its operation, which was $9.30 per hundred above 1971. The total sales for 1972 were 46,870,956 pounds for $41,098,971, a season's average of $87.69 per hundred pounds. The Greenville Market paid out over a million dollars per day on 27 of its sales days during the 1972 season, Bryan noted.

There is every indication that 1973 will be an even better season than 1972, which was the most successful season in the history of the Greenville Tobacco Market.

Butz Will Speak At N.C. Meeting

RALEIGH (AP)—U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz is scheduled to address the North Carolina Agribusiness Council in Raleigh on October 5.

"We are fortunate to have Secretary Butz at the council meeting," said former Gov. Bob Scott Thursday. Scott is executive vice president of the council.

Scott said Butz would be speaking to a group of about 1,000 farmers and agribusinessmen. The talk will be open to the public.

'The Original Thirteen' Oppose Commercializing Of Bicentennial

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Fighting attempts to commercialize the United States' 200th birthday, the first 13 states are having some of the same problems getting together that they faced in 1776.

Calling themselves the Bicentennial Council of the 13 Original States, two delegates from each of the states began exchanging information three years ago because of the federal government's failure to fill the need.

"I now appreciate what the 13 states encountered when they first got together," the council's executive secretary, Clifford M. Clarke of Georgia, said in a news conference Thursday.

Ford Defends Price Increase Plans In Face Of Big Profits

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. says its profits for the first six months of the year climbed to record levels. The news caused the United Auto Workers to call for a price increase moratorium.

Ford said Thursday profits were up 41 per cent from the first six months of 1972. Sales also were at record levels, the firm said.

Ford said it earned $755 million on sales of $12.4 billion for its worldwide operations during the six-month period. During the first half of 1972, the firm earned $535 million on revenues of $10.2 billion.

Per share earnings totaled $7.57 for the first six months of 1973 and $5.17 for the same period of 1972.

Earlier this week, Chrysler Corp. also announced record earnings and sales for the first six months.

Ken Bannon, director of the UAW's Ford division, said he was "aghast" at the size of Ford's earnings.

"That they are asking for price increases on top of this is also unbelievable," Bannon said. "The company talks about inflation, yet what actions are they taking to combat rising prices?"

Ford Chairman Henry Ford II and President Lee Iacocca had a different view.

"We have continued to absorb cost increases without adequate price increases and, as we have stated previously, prices of 1974 models will have to be raised," they said in a statement.

"Absorption of these costs caused the company's profit margin in the United States to decline in the first six months of 1973 compared with the corresponding period of 1972 despite record sales volume."

name on. The kind of product has to be a very high quality.

"We have been asked to endorse books, paintings, watercolors, very expensive plates, reproductions of antique pewter. And for every proposal we see, there must be 10 more."

The danger of commercialization, he said, is that "people might be sick and tired of the Bicentennial before it ever gets here."

Trade publications for salesmen and business keeping repeating the theme that "there's green in the red, white and blue," he said.

"They say paint it red, white and blue and call it bicentennial, and it'll sell." Despite the commercialism, the council hopes to make the bicentennial an educational, worthwhile experience, he said.

While all 50 states have bicentennial commissions and are planning some activity for the commemoration, it is the original 13 that will receive the most attention and the most tourists, Clarke said.

Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and the Carolinas are the states expecting the largest increase in visitors. But the others in the 13—New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Georgia—are also bracing for the influx of dollars and problems, "like parking, housing, food, and interpreters for the many foreigners expected."

With the dollar dropping in value compared with other currencies, it is difficult to predict how many foreigners will visit the country. Tourism is expected to be especially heavy from nationalities tied to U.S. history, "like Poles, Germans, the English and French, who will want to see the statues of their heroes."

Many of the visitors to the 1976 Olympics in Montreal are also expected to come south from Canada.

The council isn't bothering to promote travel to the area, Clarke said. It figures the best it can do is help the member states get ready for the inevitable onslaught.

Hope Is Based On Negotiation

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The

United States still believes the best hope for a lasting peace in the Middle East depends on negotiations between Israel and the Arabs.

Moreover, Washington clings to this belief while freely conceding through a State Department spokesman that "in recent months it's quite clear the negotiating ball has not rolled forward."

This is the clear implication of the veto cast by the United States Thursday killing a UN Security Council resolution that strongly deplored Israel's failure to withdraw from territories gained in the 1967 Six-Day War.

By its wording, the resolution would have demanded that Israel yield not part but all of these territories. It also would have led inevitably to a pronounced UN role in enforcing an Israeli withdrawal.

Through its veto, Washington provided support for Israel at a time when some observers claimed relations between the two nations were slipping based on U.S. desires to mend fences with oil-supplying Arab states.

Marine Band At All-Star Game

The Greenville Jaycees announced that the 2nd Marine Division Band from Camp Lejeune will appear here Saturday during the half time of the Boys' Home All Star Game.

Historically, the public performances of the 43 man band have included appearances before the President of the United States and the Queen of England as well as other dignitaries of international prominence, officials of our government and governors of the states.

The range of travel for many of the engagements has included the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, the Orange Bowl in Miami, the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Illinois State Fair, the New York World's Fair, the Armed Forces Day Parade in New York City, the "Mardi Gras" in New Orleans, plus cruises in the Caribbean and Mediterranean.

The Marine Band performs annually in the Azalea Festival in Wilmington and the Miss North Carolina Beauty Pageant in Raleigh. During the past year, it was invited to perform in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans and it completed a tour of the Azores.

The consummate total of performances is more than 400, it was pointed out, with over 12,000 miles of air and ground travel logged. In marching, alone, the Band estimates it travels 1,200 miles yearly.

Teams Ready For Boy's Home All-Star Game

Final preparations for Saturday's Boy's Home All-Star game were being made today as both teams polished up their offenses and defenses and worked on their kicking games.

Both Perry Pearson of the South and Russel Blunt of the North felt that their teams were getting. Said Blunt, "We're getting it together, we will have to be quick. We have got some good receivers and they can catch the ball if we can get them open." Asked if all were healthy and able to play, Blunt said, "Yes, we don't have any injuries and we will have to play every body."

Pearson feels his charges are getting the system down now. At first, the line was slow at the snap but Pearson attributed this to the players having a learn the plays and where they were supposed to go. "Our passing game has improved a lot in the last day or so. We'll be all right and ready to go tomorrow night." Tommy Hawkins, also of the south, added to Persons' comment on the receivers. "They are looking 100 per cent better," he said. "Everything is becoming automatic now. Earlier, they were not sure where they were going on each play but now they know and are catching the ball."

Probable starting lineups for the South will be, on offense at the split end will be either Freddie Brown or Willie Duncan. The tackles will be Alan Howard and Hamrick. Chip Post and Alan Hunter will be at guard and David Clayton will be at center. At quarter, Scott Curtis; halfback Reggie Perkins and Aubrey Mitchell and at flanker Randy Finch.

For the South: Ends: Dwight Ange and John Dinan; tackles: John Dupree and Donald Culler; guards: Howard McCullough and Grover Battle; center: Wade Lewter; halfback: Carl Cheek and Vince Evans; Quarter: Mike Weaver; Flanker: Prince Deese.

At tonight's players banquet, the guest speaker will be N.C. State Lou Holtz.

Rogers Showing Just What He Really Can Do

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

It hasn't taken long for Steve Rogers, a Missourian from the Show Me State, to show the folks in the National League what he can do.

"I've done everything I'm capable of doing in these last two games," Montreal's 23-year-old right-hander said Thursday night after firing a one-hitter—Jose Pagan's topped roller down the third base line in the fifth inning—in pitching the Expos to a 4-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in the opener of a doubleheader.

Although he came within a hair of becoming one of the few rookies ever to pitch a no-hitter, Rogers said it never crossed his mind.

"I'm not disappointed," said the 6-foot-2, 177-pounder, who was born in Jefferson City, Mo., and lives in Springfield, "because the hit came too early in the game to be thinking of a no-hitter."

Steve Renko and Mike Marshall checked the Phillies 5-1 on six hits in the nightcap and Hal Breeden hit a home run.

An adopted Missourian, Bob Gibson of St. Louis, also showed 'em. The veteran hurler drove in five runs with a grand slam homer and a single while pitching the Cardinals to a 13-1 rout of the New York Mets in their opener. St. Louis also took the nightcap 2-1.

Bernie Carbo threw out two runners on the basepaths and doubled home the game's first run as the Cardinals completed the sweep. Joe Torre's home run in the eighth proved to be the winning run.

The Cards' sweep of the Mets boosted their lead in the NL's East Division to 1½ games over the Cubs.

In other National League games, the Los Angeles Dodgers shaded the Houston Astros 3-1, the Chicago Cubs outlasted Pittsburgh 10-9 in the completion of an April 21 suspended game but the Pirates took the regularly scheduled contest 3-2, the Cincinnati Reds downed the Atlanta Braves 5-3 but lost the nightcap 6-4 and the San Francisco Giants won two from the San Diego Padres 10-2 and 6-5 in 10 innings.

Bill Russell's bases-loaded single highlighted a three-run sixth inning that carried the Dodgers over the Astros. Tommy John allowed six hits and blanked Houston until the ninth, when the Astros scored on a walk and two singles.

Richie Hebner's tie-breaking home run in the fourth inning carried Dock Ellis and the Pirates over the Cubs after Chicago won out in the suspended game.

Chicago held a 10-8 lead after six innings of a contest called three months ago because of darkness. The only additional run was a homer by Rennie Stennett with two out in the ninth. Hebner led off the fourth inning of the regularly scheduled game with his 15th homer off loser Rick Reuschel.

Hank Aaron stole his first base of the season in the eighth inning and scored the tie-breaking run on Mike Lum's single, helping the Braves gain a split with the Reds.

Dan Driessen hit his first major league homer for the Reds in the opener while Dave Johnson homered in each game for the Braves.

All-Star hero Bobby Bonds drove in five runs with his 26th and 27th homers to power the Giants' sweep of the Padres, but it was Tito Fuentes' run-scoring single in the 10th inning that gave San Francisco its victory in the nightcap.

A three-run homer by Bonds capped a four-run rally off Steve Arlin in the sixth inning of the opener as the Giants backed Ron Bryant, the NL's winningest hurler at 15-7, with a 20-hit attack.

In the American League, New York edged Milwaukee 1-0 in 12 innings, Baltimore beat Cleveland 8-4 but dropped the nightcap 6-4, Detroit nipped Boston 6-5, Minnesota took two from Oakland 5-1 and 7-5 in 10 innings, Chicago defeated Kansas City 7-4 but lost the second game 1-0 and Texas swept California 1-1 and 8-0.

Oakmont Takes Tourney Win

Oakmont finished off St. Gabriel last night with a 4-3 win. St. James was beaten by First Christian, 7-6 and Trinity eased by Memorial, 10-9.

Oakmont went in front in the second with two runs. Gabriel came up with three in the sixth to take the lead but Oakmont got two in the one in the sixth and one in the seventh to win it. Martin led off the seventh with a hit and scored on hits by E. Carraway, Harrell and Russell.

Maranatha got one in the first and ran out to 7-0 in the top of the second. Black Jack went on the boards with a run in the second. Three more came in for Black Jack in the third.

Both teams added runs until the seventh when Black Jack got a run to tie it at 13-13. Maranatha got three in the top of the eighth to win it. Brinkley tripled and Brock singled him in. Gould singled to score Brinkley and a hit by Sutton scored Brock and Gould.

Black Jack got one more in the eighth.

Memorial grabbed the lead in the first but Trinity tied it 2-2 in their half of the frame. Two more went up for Trinity in the second giving them the lead. Two in the third made it 6-4. Cayton singled for Trinity in the sixth and scored on a hit by Selby. Gordon flew out to score Selby with the winning run for Trinity.

REMEMBERS CLEMENTE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jose Pagan of the Philadelphia Phillies and Roberto Clemente were the closest of friends when Pagan played seven seasons with the Pittsburgh Pirates. "Roberto was the most misunderstood man in baseball," says Pagan, who starred for the Pirates in their 1971 World Series victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

In the second, Beltone rallied for six in the sixth to win the Crown. Potter, Sawyer, Davenport, Barnhill, Pfiel, Cheely and Jenkins all scored to give them the win.

Beltone Is Ladies' Champ

Beltone upset regular season Ladies League Champ Little Mint last night in two games to take the Tournament championship.

Beltone took the first game 5-4. LM had gone ahead 1-0 in the first but Beltone moved in front with three runs in the third. They added one in the fourth. Little Mint closed to 4-3 with two in the bottom of the fourth but a triple by Davenport and an error let the winning run score for Beltone.

In the second, Beltone rallied for six in the sixth to win the Crown. Potter, Sawyer, Davenport, Barnhill, Pfiel, Cheely and Jenkins all scored to give them the win.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Fans think relievers are old starters who are on their way out," says Sparky Lyle, the 29-year-old New York Yankee who has matured into one of the best relievers in major league baseball.

"Nowadays, relievers are specialists," says Lyle. "There are not too many pitchers who can do the job."

Lyle, has done and is still doing an exceptional job. The left-handed hurler has accumulated 26 saves already this season and is well on his way to breaking the American League record of 35 saves that he set last season.

Lyle was one of the few bright spots for the American League in the All-Star game Tuesday night in Kansas City. He pitched one inning, struck out Willie Mays and didn't allow a run.

"I'm a pressure pitcher," Lyle said. "Pressure affects me in a good way. I enjoy coming in with runners on base because I've been groomed for that so long. I've never pitched good when the game was not close. One run games really turn me on."

Lyle, honored Thursday as Life Saver of the Month for June said, "When I was nominated I thought it was a joke. Chris Evert and other people were also nominated whose feats were a lot greater than mine. I thought Bobby Bonds just had to win."

Sparky had 11 saves during that month and his save against Baltimore on June 20 helped move the Yankees into first place in the American League's Eastern Division.

Lyle didn't play high school baseball and was given a professional contract after a scout saw him in a sandlot baseball game where he struck out 31 men in a 17-inning game.

The Pirates are at home tonight hosting the Tar Heels of UNC at 7:30 p.m.

single combined with Paul Splittorff's three-hit pitching for the Royals' victory in the second game and designated hitter Ken Henderson's three-run homer helped the White Sox take the opener.

Henderson's homer, his fourth of the season, came in the seventh and erased a 2-1 Kansas City lead.

Bobby Grich clobbered a grand slam homer, highlighting a five-run Baltimore sixth, in the first game and Charlie Spikes and John Ellis combined to drive in five runs as the Indians rebounded to take game No. 2.

In the first game, Oriole pitcher Dave McNally was sent writhing to the ground in pain after being struck in the head by a ball from the bat of Chris Chambliss. He suffered a bad bruise and cut near his left ear and went home after being treated at a local hospital.

Managers Earl Weaver of Baltimore and Ken Aspromonte of Cleveland were ejected from the second game after arguing with officials over a disputed play.

Big Frank Howard crashed two homers and Eddie Brinkman unloaded a game-winning blast that carried the Tigers to victory.

The Red Sox had taken a 5-3 lead in the seventh when Orlando Cepeda hit a two-run homer.

Thurman Munson's single in the 12th inning scored Bobby Murcer from second and gave the Yankees their victory.

Jim Colborn had held the Yankees to eight hits until the 12th and started his way to a loss by issuing a walk to Murcer. Pat Dobson handcuffed the Brewers on four hits through 11 innings before being relieved by Sparky Lyle in the 12th.

National League results were: Montreal 4-5, Philadelphia 0-1; Chicago 10-2, Pittsburgh 9-3; St. Louis 13-2, New York 1-1; San Francisco 10-6, San Diego 2-5; Cincinnati 5-4, Atlanta 3-6 and Los Angeles 3, Houston 1.

The Pienhurst tourney is being sponsored by the Diamond-head Corp. and the Carolinas Section of the PGA. It will consist of 36 holes of stroke play with competition in three age divisions: age 12-13, 14-15 and 16-17.

Winners of the Captains Choice at Greenville Golf and Country Club on July 21 have been announced as follows:

First place team — Reg Akin, T. K. Andresen, Peggy Barnes and Celeste Wilkerson;

Second — Joe Hallow, G. Henry Leslie, Jeaton Creech and Gail McClelland;

Third — Ed Monroe, J. C. Whitehurst, Chris Andresen and Eddie Aikin; Fourth — Mike Dilanciano, Reid Hooper, Peggy Hallow and Lib Proctor.

Greenville Golf and Country Club has announced Junior Championship tourney play will be held on August 17.

Entry is limited to boys, 15 or younger, who are sons of members.

The event will consist of an 18-hole play for championship flight. Tee-off will be at 9:00 a.m.

Junior members are required to sign up for the tourney by August 15.

A Weiner roast and refreshments will be held at conclusion of the tournament.

Brook Valley

O. E. Dowd had his best nine hole score recently. He shot a 39 on the back side. Steve Lawler recorded his best nine also with a 42 on the front. Joe Taylor made his best 18 hole score shooting a 74. Glenn Cox broke 80 for the first time with a 40-39-79 split.

Wally Howard sank six birdies for a 33 on the front and had a 39 on the back nine for an 18-hole score of 72. Betty Higgins came up with her first eagle ever recently as she sank a wedge on the par five sixth, for a three.

Ken Clark recorded his best nine with a 41. He was playing with his father, Julian Vainwright and son. John Nabors had his best 18, a 36-37 playing with Billy Wells, Tap Adams, and Dick Bailey at the time.

Jeanette Thomas canned her second hole-in-one of her career on the fifth hole hitting the shot with a five wood. Playing with her at the time were her husband, Harold Thomas, and the shot was witnessed by Judson Blount Jr. and Rusty Darden.

The member-guest tournament scheduled for Aug. 11 & 12 is almost full. Any interested member should contact the pro shop immediately.

Ayden

A superball was held at the Ayden Golf and Country Club recently with the team of Brooks Barwick, Lloyd Eichorn, Ray Joyner and Alton Cherry taking first place. Second went to Sidney Roberson, Mac Roebuck, Morton Congleton, and Nancy Fleming.

The team of Brownie Tripp, Adrien Waters, Al Tenpenny and Chris Joyner took third. Fourth was won by Jimmy Walls, Norman Wooten, Roger Walker and Pat Joyner. Two teams tied for fifth. Lindsey Hardee, Steve Abenece, Allen Moye and Goldie Chapman tied Emmett Koonce, Roger Jordan, Bill Cleve and Debra Hardee.

Carol Roebuck had her best 18-hole score of a 78. Bobby Congleton carded his best nine, a 34. He also had his best 18 shooting a 42 on the back for a 76. Carl King eagled No. 3 with a wedge. Boyce Barwick carded one of his best scores, a 68.

Club Champ, Tim Boyd made an eagle on eight holing out an eight iron. Norman Wooten had a 76.

Irwin Elects To Stay In Bed

By BOB GREEN

Associated Press Golf Writer MONTREAL (AP) — Hale Irwin took one look at the lowering gray skies and the cool, drizzling rains and decided he'd rather stay in bed.

"I don't like to play in rain," Irwin said. "I wear glasses. Anybody who wears glasses knows it's tough to play in rain. It's the worst I've been in some Besides, I'm lazy. I just felt like taking a day off."

"I was hoping it would get rained out."

But it wasn't and Irwin became a reluctant hero, shooting a sparkling, seven-under-par 65—73 while Masters title-holder Tommy Aaron and defending Canadian Open king Gay Brewer were at 74.

The rock-steady Irwin, who hasn't won since 1971 but has collected some $170,000 in prize winnings since then, five times stroked irons within two feet of the cup as he pulled in front of a strong field in this national championship.

Irwin owned a two-stroke advantage over British Open champ Tom Weiskopf, Hubert Green and tour sophomore Forrest Fezler, tied at 67.

"I'm still playing pretty good," said the streaking Weiskopf, winner of four titles in his last seven starts. "I see no reason I should have a let-down. I'm going to try to not let it happen."

The group at 68, four under par on the 6,905-yard Richelieu Valley Golf Club course, included Lee Trevino, South African Bobby Cole, big Bob Lunn and Leonard Thompson.

Arnold Palmer had to struggle for a 70. He had seven birdies and five bogeys and said he "played just terrible. It's the worst I've been in some time."

But he was two in front of U.S. Open champ Johnny Miller and leading money winner Bruce Crampton of Australia, tied at 72. Gary Player had a 73 while Masters title-holder Tommy Aaron and defending Canadian Open king Gay Brewer were at 74.

Here are the top first-round scores:

Hale Irwin	33-32=65
Forrest Fezler	33-34=6u
Tom Weiskopf	33-34=67
Hubert Green	34-33=67
Lee Trevino	35-33=68
Bobby Cole	35-33=68
Leonard Thompson	34-34=68
Bob Lunn	36-32=68
Bobby Mitchell	34-35=69
Ralph Schlicht	34-35=69
John Mahaffey	36-33=69

Riva Ridge, Secretariate Meet At Belmont

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP) — "I love them both," says Ron Turcotte who will only be able to ride one of them when Secretariat and Riva Ridge meet in an unusual $250,000 match race Sept. 15 at Belmont Park.

The match race raised some eyebrows when it was announced Thursday because both Secretariat, the Triple Crown winner, and Riva Ridge, a million-dollar winner, are owned by Meadow Stable.

The question of which colt Turcotte will ride will be answered a few days before the race, trainer Lucien Laurin said.

But Helen Tweedy, operator of Meadow Stable, laid to rest questions that might arise over the purse—$200,000 to the winner and $50,000 to second—when she said the money would go to charity.

"I'm very excited about this race," said Mrs. Tweedy. "They probably wouldn't meet under normal circumstances and in my heart I've always wanted to have them meet."

"It should be a heck of a race."

Apparently she is not alone in that feeling. Philip Morris, Inc., put up $200,000—the other $50,000 comes from the New York Racing Association—for the opportunity of calling the race the Marlboro Gold Cup and CBS announced it will nationally televise the 1 1/4-mile event from 4 p.m.-5 p.m., EDT.

Both the 3-year-old Secretariat and 4-year-old Riva Ridge currently are at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., for the Saratoga meeting in August.

The race will be the first match race in New York since Armed beat Triple Crown winner Assault by six lengths Sept. 27, 1947 at the old Belmont Park. Because of the uncertainty of Assault's condition, both owners agreed before the race to give the $100,000, winner-take-all purse to charity.

FELLED BY LINE DRIVE—Baltimore pitcher Dave McNally writhes in pain after being hit on the side of his head with a line drive in the first inning of Thursday night's American League game against Cleveland. The ball was hit by the Indians' Chris

Chambliss. Coming in to help McNally is Orioles' third baseman Brooks Robinson. McNally was rushed to a hospital where doctors said his injury was not serious. (AP Wirephoto)

All-Stars, Dolphins Meet Tonight

By JERRY LISKA

Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO (AP) — The mysterious College All-Stars and the proven Miami Dolphins clash here tonight in the 40th All-Star Football Game. The National Football League champions are figured to make it 10 straight for the pros.

The past pro record—28-9-2—certainly backs that up. So why haven't the talented All-Stars been out there killing practice field grass?

Coach John McKay of Southern California discarded almost entirely the usual head-knocking practice. He conducted only one real scrimmage and limited workouts to one a day.

So his 51 charges are healthy, happy and eager to prove themselves the prize pro prospects that the NFL draft last winter declared them.

The game marks the opening of the NFL exhibition season. There is another game Saturday afternoon in Canton, Ohio where New England plays San Francisco in the annual Pro Hall of Fame game.

The Dolphins are fresh from the growl, grunt and bruise training camp of Coach Don Shula, who says "we'd hate to be one of the few pro teams ever to lose to the All-Stars."

Still, the Dolphins will be without some of their top talent. Fullback Larry Csonka will start after shaking off a pulled thigh muscle, but Mercury Morris, also a 1,000-yard rusher last season, and linebacker Mike Kolen have been declared out of the All-Star Game.

Additionally, the Dolphins will operate without their ace safety, Jake Scott, voted Most Valuable Player in Miami's 14-7 Super Bowl triumph over the Washington Redskins, who is a contract holdout.

But the Dolphins, undefeated in 14 regular NFL games last season, still are pegged a 15 to 17 point favorite against the heavier All-Stars, who last defeated the pros in 1963.

The Soldier Field game, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune, is expected to draw a capacity crowd—55,000. The game will be televised nationally by ABC at 9:30 p.m. EDT.

There were several deals among the NFL clubs Thursday.

The most prominent was the trade of wide receiver-place-kicker Jim O'Brien by the Baltimore Colts to the Detroit Lions for undisclosed draft choice.

O'Brien won the 1971 Super Bowl game for the Colts against Dallas with a 32-yard field goal in the last five seconds. He is the 12th veteran to be traded by Colts' General Manager Joe Thomas since Jan. 22.

In another transaction, the Philadelphia Eagles traded running back Al Davis to the Buffalo Bills for an undisclosed draft choice. The Eagles also released wide receiver Speedy Thomas, acquired recently from Cincinnati.

The Bengals will start quarterback Ken Anderson in their full scale scrimmage Saturday. He has been throwing the ball "especially well" said Coach

Paul Brown.

Oakland put veteran kicker Jerry DePoyster on waivers, leaving the punting job wide open for Ray Guy, the Raiders' unsigned No. 1 draft pick.

Guy, in Chicago with the College All-Stars, said "I haven't signed yet, but we're actually very close."

GAME WINNER—Richie Hebner (3) of Pittsburgh Pirates swings at pitch by Chicago Cubs pitcher Ricky Reuschel (48) during Thursday's game at Chicago. Hebner hit tie-breaking homer in fourth inning to lead Pirates to a 3-2 victory. Chicago Cubs Catcher Randy Hundley waits for ball to reach his glove. Cubs posted a 10-9 triumph earlier in day for finish of suspended April 21 game, halted due to darkness. (AP Wirephoto)

CARROLL RICHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Richter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An adverse day if you attempt to make a snap judgment of others, or if you become involved in any arguments with overly sensitive persons. Postpone making any serious commitments until a better time. Avoid undue criticism of others. Don't make any new commitments.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Conditions may be difficult at home so engage in outside activities and accomplish a great deal. Put off shopping until tomorrow. Take health treatments and make sure that you have a good diet.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Being careful in motion is most important right now. Don't become angry when one makes a sharp comment. Take care of your purse when out shopping and losing credit cards should be avoided. Be alert.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have ideas about finances that could bring arguments with close ties, so be careful. Don't spend lavishly when you can't afford it. Some advisers could be off the track. Use own judgment.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Although you may be thinking others are imposing on you, look at things objectively and you find it is not so. Take care of your health and appearance. Avoid one who bickers.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You feel hemmed in by things you cannot control and you get little assistance from loved one who is busy now with other matters. Attend to important duties that need handling quickly. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your reliable friends could be quite confused so don't rely on them today. Forget forcing anyone with regard to a personal aim you may have. Take time to engage in your favorite hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try not to do anything that could jeopardize your position with higher-ups, or where the public is concerned. Make sure that you pay your bills. Attend the social tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't engage in any new interests right now or you could get into a heap of trouble. Take part in routine affairs. A friend needs your help so don't fail. Sidestep one who belittles you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you keep promises made to others and don't expect thanks. It is your duty. Being too forceful with mate could lead to trouble. Show that you are a thoughtful person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid an associate who is upset with personal problems. One who opposes you should also be avoided. Become involved in outside interests. Think along economical lines. Improve your image.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't take any risks now. Attending public affairs at this time can be helpful to you and others. Make sure you don't criticize others, even though it may be due. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do those things that have been satisfactory to you in the past. Don't engage in any activity that you can't afford. Keep busy at creative matters. A good day to meditate and clear your thoughts.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those capable young people who knows how to solve troublesome situations, so direct the education along problem-solving lines. Teach objectivity in personal and emotional matters and life becomes successful. The study of languages would be very helpful in career. Give good spiritual training early in life.

OUT OF ORDER

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Diane Hemming, 31, lost her suit for damages resulting from a dog bite which she claimed had ruined her ability to dance properly.

Rejecting her claim, the judge said the dog had been generally "amiable" and the attack was "completely out of character."

Opening lead: Queen of ♠
As a result of an opposing barrage, South found himself declarer in a precarious grand slam contract. However, impeccable technique changed a guess into a certainty and brought the contract home.

West's preempt over South's forcing two-bid robbed his adversaries of most of their bidding room. However, it did not stop North-South from getting to seven spades. North's five diamond bid should be forcing because with nothing but long diamonds he could pass and come in after his partner has taken action. South's cue-bid of six clubs showed excellent diamond support and a desire to play a grand slam. When North supported spades, South decided that North had to have the king of spades and at least five diamonds to the ace to justify his bidding. A grand slam in spades seemed to depend either on locating the diamond queen or perhaps finding North with a sixth diamond. In any event, it would be a reasonable proposition.

West led the queen of clubs, and it seemed that declarer would have to guess how to bring in the diamond suit. However, with a little care declarer was able to place the opposition cards exactly.

After winning the first trick with the king of clubs, declarer played the ace of trumps, and was not really surprised when West showed out. The ace and king of hearts were cashed, dummy was entered with the king of spades and a heart was ruffed in the closed hand. Declarer was pleased when West failed to follow suit.

After drawing the remaining trumps declarer cashed the ace of clubs. This time East showed out and the count of the hand was complete. West had started with no spades, only two hearts and nine clubs. Therefore, he had to have exactly two diamonds, and the queen would drop.

Note declarer's technique in taking the apparently useless heart ruff. It was a vital step in his campaign to obtain an accurate picture of the opposing distribution.

The 'Worry Clinic' Turned Off By Motherly Type

Gwen said she despised me! But later she broke down and cried as I showed her how she had lost much of her "sweetheart" image by slipping into the stereotype of a "good old motherly soul." Boudoir cheesecake beats topnotch culinary artistry!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE X-571: Gwen Jr., aged 31, is the wife who was shocked at finding pornographic pictures in her husband's office desk.

"Dr. Crane, I despise you!" she tearfully exclaimed, after I had told her the true diagnosis.

For I had said those nude pictures were more an indictment of her than of her husband.

"They simply mean you have lost much of your stimulating value in the boudoir.

"Instead of having an affair with an outside siren, your husband is actually trying to remain true to you.

"But he requires a reasonable amount of erotic allure from you, in order to function as a husband.

"You apparently aren't furnishing it to him.

"So he is merely adding what might be termed artificial boudoir cosmetic aids to your waning sexual charm.

"Do you create an image of a good old motherly soul, preoccupied with the kitchen stove and the children?

"Or are you still an alluring siren in the bedroom?"

"For example, his erotic ardor is far greater than yours, for a man's sexual hunger is several times that of his wife's.

Mass Vaccination Clinics May Return

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Mass vaccination clinics, reminiscent of the "Sabin Sundays" of the 1960s, may be on the return for the United States, health officials say.

The U.S. Center for Disease Control, concerned over declining levels of immunization, said Wednesday the agency will lead a concerted effort in October to immunize Americans.

The CDC plans to bring in the resources of several health agencies to find the thousands of Americans who are not immunized or who are inadequately immunized and get vaccinations to them.

Health officials said it is possible that mass vaccination clinics such as the "Sabin Sundays", in which millions of Americans stood in line for hours to receive vaccination against polio, may be on the return.

However, such clinics would likely be on a smaller scale, immunization officials said.

The concerted effort will be made to immunize against polio, rubella, measles, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

Immunization levels against polio have been declining at a steady rate during the past few years and now say the levels have reached a dangerous low, doctors said.

"Even so, a husband expects some seductive 'appetizers' to whet his basic virile hunger.

"Do you wear a flannel nightgown on winter-nights or greet him in a deaphanous nightie?

"Do you apply your most exotic perfume just before going to bed at night or do you hoard it all you go out to some social event?

"Have you developed into a good old motherly soul or do you still retain most of your honeymoon fervor?"

"Remember, men do NOT grow ardent toward their mothers!

"So when your image changes from that of a sweetheart to that of a mother, beware!"

"For then your mate is likely to become platonic.

"And impotent husbands grow snarlish, hypercritical, caustic and even miserly.

"They'll 'chew you out' in public as well as before your kiddies there in your own home!

"Then they may make unflattering remarks about you in public calling you their 'ball and chain.'

"And begin to advise their unmarried friends against ever getting 'hooked' into a wedding ceremony.

"Remember, men who still are ardently in love, don't downgrade marriage!

"It's the platonic husbands who belittle marriage and also tell the lewd stories in the locker rooms at the Country Club.

"For salacious stories are a cousin to pornographic pictures, since both are employed (usually by platonic males) to whet their vanishing erotic ardor.

"And the main reason why straying husbands pick girls half your age, is because such sirens fit the stereotype of a 'sweetheart' rather than that of a stodgy 'old motherly soul.'

"So you wives better spend less time at cooking clinics, poring over dining room recipes!

"It's the boudoir cheesecake that wins husbands away from even the topnotch culinary artists!"

Air Support Of Phnom Penh Is Continued Today

By DENNIS NEEDL
Associated Press Writer
PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — American B52s and fighter-bombers kept up a steady attack today in support of Cambodian government troops attempting to outflank a creeping insurgent advance on Phnom Penh from the south.

Black smoke could be seen billowing up from the combat zone six miles below the city as U.S. aircraft screamed overhead.

A government communique claimed more than 400 insurgents were killed by the aerial bombardment and in heavy fighting south of the village of Preteah Lang.

Five government battalions, backed by a regiment of about 600 men in armored personnel carriers, fanned out from Highway 3 Thursday toward the village, where another government battalion has been encircled for a week.

They ran into heavy mortar, rocket and small-arms fire and were reported stalled a mile from the village.

The government communique said the operation was aimed at dislodging the Communist-led rebels from the area of Kompong Tool, nine miles southwest of Phnom Penh and some two miles behind the forward insurgent troops.

The Cambodian insurgents have an estimated 5,000 men concentrated along the Prek Thnot river. The object of the government operation appeared to be to sweep around their western flank and relieve pressure on the town of Takhmau, which is on the eastern end of the rebels' line of advance.

"Violent fighting" was reported two miles south of Takhmau at the village of Prek Ho which has been the focus of recent rebel attacks. Three insurgents were said to have been killed and many wounded. Several government soldiers were reported wounded.

The government defense perimeter around Prek Ho is under attack from three sides. Should the village fall, there will be little to prevent an insurgent advance to Takhmau, which is regarded as a suburb of Phnom Penh, only three miles from the edge of the capital. Meanwhile, a convoy of more than 350 trucks and trailers arrived in Phnom Penh Thursday night from Kompong Som, on the coast. The highway was closed briefly Thursday by rebel infiltrators 10 miles west of Phnom Penh, but they melted into the surrounding rice fields at the approach of a government force.

The government is pushing in convoys of trucks and river boats to the capital to build up stocks of food and ammunition before American bombing support is cut off on Aug. 15. Beyond that date Phnom Penh's lines of communications will be even more precarious than they are now.

In Saigon, the South Vietnamese command said fighting had risen to its highest level since June 17 and major battles for control of supply routes were continuing.

The biggest battle raged between Highways 13 and 1A about 25 miles north of Saigon.

Nixon In Pattern Of Rigidity: Analyst

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Watergate situation has made President Nixon more determined to squelch his opponents and forced him into a pattern of rigidity from which he will not retreat, says Dr. James Barber, a political scientist whose specialty is presidential behavior.

The President's refusal to release the tapes of conversations in his office to the Senate Watergate investigating committee follows such well-established pattern of rigid behavior, Dr. Barber, chairman of the political science department at Duke University, said in an interview with the Winston-Salem Journal.

He ruled out any possibility of mental breakdown for the President under the Watergate pressures, but said it is possible that Nixon might resign. However, he said that at present Watergate has likely made Nixon more alert and attentive to what he is doing, and to his timing.

"He has said before," Barber said of the President, "that he is most alive in crisis—that he finds it exciting and finds that struggle is an enlivening experience." In his book "The Presidential Character," published last year, Barber said that American presidents have generally followed one of several highly predictable patterns of behavior. He predicted then some form of disaster for Nixon, saying the President's appetite for crises and his basically pessimistic outlook made a dangerous combination.

Barber said in the interview that the greatest danger to Nixon in the Watergate crisis is that it will confirm his basic feeling that "life is just one damn thing after another," and lead him into a tragic course that some other presidents have followed. The professor said other presidents with similar character makeups had been ruined when they made the mistake of becoming rigid. He cited Lyndon Johnson, who, he said, could not get rid of the Vietnam crisis, and Herbert Hoover, who in his view could not cope with the Depression.

Barber characterized Nixon as an "active-negative" presidential type, one with a psychological orientation leading him to believe "one has a lot of enemies and life is a hard, tough battle." Barber said this active-negative philosophy probably led the Nixon administration to the Watergate situation in the first place.

Barber said he thinks Nixon may be reaching the point where he will "make a stand and refuse to compromise. From his perspective he has already been compromised by getting rid of (aides) Hal-de-man, Ehrlichman and Dean. His refusal to release tapes sound like a flat 'no.'"

Crash Of Blue Angels Kills 3

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
LAKEHURST, N.J. (AP) — Three airmen were killed and a fourth hospitalized when two F4J Phantom jets of the Navy's Blue Angels precision flying team crashed a short distance from here.

The crash Thursday ignited numerous brush fires in a wooded area a short distance from the Lakehurst Naval Air Station.

The accident was witnessed by 200 Navy League members and their wives attending a party at the station in honor of the Blue Angels.

The team flew up from Pensacola, Fla., for a performance at a Saturday air show at the Naval Station, site of the 1937 crash of the German dirigible Hindenburg.

Killed were the pilots, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Skip Umstead, 30, of Detroit; Marine Capt. Mike Murphy, 29, of San Antonio, Tex., and Navy Petty Officer

IC Ronald Thomas, 30, of Ponca City, Okla. Injured was Navy PO I.C. Gerald Harvey, 37, of Sweeney, Tex.

Cmdr. William McNett of the air station said three of the four airmen "deployed their parachutes," ejecting themselves a split-second after the collision.

He said the four Blue Angels jets were in a diamond formation, and that one broke away. He said three then went to a "slow roll," then began to rise, and as they went up, two collided. The Blue Angels normally fly in formations with their wings overlapping, with the wing tip of the upper plane 36 inches from the cockpit of the craft below it.

He said the planes were flying at about 1,000 feet at 300-to-400 miles per hour.

Before Thursday's crash, seven members of the Angels had been killed since 1954. Four died in accidents near El Centro, Calif., the training site for the team.

Storekeeper Is Killed In Blast

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A 73-year-old storekeeper died in a Charlotte hospital late Wednesday, 12 days after an explosion leveled his grocery and grill near Lincolnton.

His 51-year-old wife, also injured in the explosion, had died the day before in the hospital.

They were Mr. and Mrs. Steve C. Harrison, who operated the County Line Grill on N.C. 16, a concrete block building near the Catawba and Lincoln County line. Authorities said the explosion was caused by leaking gas while the grill was being cleaned after hours. No one else was injured.

Not One, But Two Who's Who Coming

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—By the end of this year, North Carolina may be blessed with not one but two "Who's Who" directories, something the state has had to get along without until now.

Currently, however, there are two Georgia-based companies operating in the state, soliciting biographies of "distinguished" people and attempting to sell them copies at prices ranging from $19.95 to $30. The president of a company called Names of Distinction, Inc. arrived in Raleigh Thursday and talked with both the state attorney general's office and the Associated Press.

Eugene Frank of Marietta, Ga., said he was upset about the negative publicity the attorney general's office gave last week to the U.S. Public Relations Service, which began soliciting by mail on July 17.

The Consumer Protection Division called the solicitation "deceptive."

Frank said his company was in the state before USPRS and he resented the negative image given to Who's Who directories.

Both companies are trying to publish Tar Heel directories for the first time.

Frank said he has done exhaustive research into the lives of various state residents and noted that he was tailoring his solicitation letter to meet the standards set by the Attorney General's office.

Earth-Mover Kills Operator

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP)—The operator of an earth-moving machine was killed in an accident at the Tungstee Queen Mine 15 miles north of Henderson Thursday.

He was Ernest Delisle, 30, of Williamsboro in Vance County. Authorities said the machine hit a bump, threw him off, and overturned on him.

'Miami Beach-North' Plan In A Bitter Tug-of-War

By THOMAS FERRARO
SANDY POINT, Md. (UPI) —
Miami Beach north?

Yes, if realtors, developers, financiers and some landowners have their way.

No, if the environmentalists can help it.

The object of this tug-of-war is Ocean City, a somewhat seedy, sandy, 10-mile strip on the Atlantic Coast.

It has become a dream to developers and a nightmare to environmentalists because of a controversial and expensive 3.98 mile bridge over Chesapeake Bay near Annapolis.

Superhighway Access
The bridge provides large scale superhighway access to the ecologically rich Maryland eastern shore. The area near Ocean City is one of the nation's last major unspoiled breeding and nesting grounds for fish and migratory birds. It is a classic conflict between profits—very large ones—and ecology. The bridge is the catalyst of the conflict, for it makes Ocean City an easy one day drive from the Midwest and only a three-hour drive for the 6 million people in the Baltimore-Washington corridor.

Eight years of legislative, political and legal battles welded the $120 million bridge into reality June 28 when the three lane span opened. It is parallel to a two-lane bridge built in 1962 that for years had been clogged with traffic on weekends. The second bridge was expected to eliminate traffic jams and open up the eastern shore to thousands, perhaps millions more visitors.

The shore already was readily accessible from the north and south.

The More, the Better
Worcester County Commissioner Louis J. Hickman, a realtor whose county includes Ocean City, boasts, "We're going to turn Ocean City into another Miami Beach, you watch. The more people, the more development, the better."

"Miami Beach, here we come," he said with a chuckle. But Joseph Fehrer, president of the Worcester Environmental Trust, shakes his head. "Another Miami Beach maybe, but who wants it?"

Fehrer and his group of 90 sympathizers have urged caution. So far they have achieved little success. They fear high rises, roads and shopping centers will "stomp to death the charm of the shore."

Ocean City, with its boardwalks, convention center and miles of beaches, condominiums, hotels and motels, already attracts 150,000-250,000 persons on spring and summer weekends, but most do not come from long distances.

Wetlands Endangered
It is surrounded by marshes or "wetlands" inhabited by a tremendous variety of birds and fish, including many rare and endangered species. Farther inland are the aristocratic remnants of the old Southern estates, plus chicken and soybean farms and a unique maritime culture that until now has been pretty much isolated from the rest of the world.

J. Frank Bernhiesel, president of the Maryland Conservation Council, fears development will destroy the wetlands.

Explaining that the wetlands provide the first link in the food chain for ocean life, he said that "if it is destroyed, it will directly affect other life, such as clams, oysters and crabs. The fishing industry is very concerned about it."

Real estate interests already are trying to get approval for a 1,000-unit development, called Harbor Town, amid the wetlands.

The second bridge originally was planned in 1964 but was defeated in a referendum in the 1966 election, the year Spiro T. Agnew was elected governor.

Agnew Helps
The next year, with the support of Agnew and the state attorney general, the legislature approved another bill, classifying it as "emergency legislation" so that it could not be petitioned for referendum.

Already the eastern shore is undergoing rapid change. New developments are under construction or being planned. Land prices are climbing and speculation is rampant.

Many residents fear "our way of life" will be destroyed but others welcome the boom. Farmers, teachers, barbers and plumbers are moonlighting as real estate speculators.

Ocean City Mayor Harry Kelly welcomes the growth. He and the rest of the city council are considering lifting the limitations on high rise buildings to squeeze more people into the resort.

"When I'm out in the water and I turn to face the beach and all those buildings, I feel very proud," Kelly said.

Realtor-County Commissioner Hickman feels that if two bridges are good, another would be even better.

"I feel the state should begin studies on a third bridge right now, near the Delaware line, so we can have a steady flow of traffic to the eastern shore from three bridges. The more people who come, the better. I don't think we could have too many," he said.

Maine Tries To Restore Family 'Doc'

By JIM MCGREGOR
AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) —
The State of Maine always has made efforts to protect its heritage so it is only fitting that it be the site of a pioneer project to restore a bit of medical Americana—the family doctor.

A unique residency program designed to guide young doctors away from such specialized fields as heart and brain surgery to a general family practice recently was initiated here.

The residency program, designed to prepare doctors for a general family practice in rural areas or even large cities, began with three participants. However, the number is expected to be expanded to 18.

"The oldtime general practitioner was a dying breed," said Dr. C. Philip Lape, a Veterans Administration physician who is the overall director of the program. "There is, however, a tremendous increase in the number of young doctors who are wanting to forsake specialization and go into family medicine. I think over the last few years there has been a basic re-examination of values. They are not interested in making their fame and fortune by discovering some famous thing. They are more interested in human services."

Lape said the problem with most residency programs is that the doctor trains almost exclusively in hospitals and comes out knowing nothing about running a practice.

"In this program the doctors will keep office hours, will see kids with sore throats and will counsel families with problems," he said. "They also will learn how to manage the finances of a practice and such things as how to hire or fire a nurse."

Lape was a practicing surgeon in Portland for 20 years before becoming more interested in now medical service was distributed to patients.

"It is not enough to learn to treat diseases unless a doctor knows how to deliver it to the people," he said.

He said he hoped participants would be willing to work in rural areas of Maine where doctors are scarce. "We would encourage them to make house calls as part of their overall program," he said.

Lape explained that in the past two years two-thirds of the doctors starting to practice in Maine had located near large cities where only one-third of the population is centered.

The first three doctors to enter the program come from varying backgrounds but share a common enthusiasm for Maine.

Dr. Virginia Soules took her most recent training at the Chestnut Hill Hospital in Philadelphia. Dr. William Davis, who attended George Washington Medical School, worked for two years in the accident ward of the Eastern Maine Medical Center at Bangor. The third member, Dr. David Elperin, interned at Vancouver, B.C., and has completed dermatology residency at Bellevue Hospital in New York City.

Lape said he felt the program would fill a gap in the medical training program in Maine. The state has no medical school and the only residency program has been at Portland.

Pepsi-Cola explodes a shopping myth.

Pepsi-Cola in this 6-pack of returnable quarts with reseal caps costs just about the same, ounce for ounce, as most of the brands that claim to be bargains.

It's true. Ounce for ounce you spend just about the same for Pepsi-Cola in this 6-pack of returnable quarts as you do for those brands you thought were bargains. And when you add in Pepsi-Cola quality, we think you'll agree that Pepsi is a real bargain. Next time you shop, compare.

Pepsi. A real bargain.
