

Attorney General Opening $84.46 Day For To Intervene In School Fees Suit Greenville's Leaf Market

W. W. Speight, attorney for the Pitt County Board of Education said today that the North Carolina Attorney General has decided to intervene in a case against the school board pending in U.S. Eastern District Court.

Speight said the case involves the right under the North Carolina Constitution, not the U.S. Constitution — of schools to levy student fees for certain classes and other activities.

The suit against the Pitt school board was filed with Denise Anderson, a minor, as plaintiff in the case. A class action, the suit was filed on behalf of about 400 students suspended for not paying student fees last fall.

The complaint charges that suspending students who cannot or will not pay the fees denies the right to free public education (as provided for under the North Carolina Constitution) and discriminates against indigent students.

The suit also contends that charging fees discriminates against poor students and asks that the court declare the fees unconstitutional.

According to Speight, the local board contends there is no discrimination in charging the fees. "The fees are charged to all students regardless of race, creed or color," he said, "and are essential to insuring each pupil an adequate education."

The attorney general, Speight said, "agreed to intervene for the State of North Carolina in this case...because it involves not only a constitutional question under the North Carolina Constitution...but the legality of school fees charged by schools in all 100 counties of North Carolina..."

The attorney noted that all the students that were suspended for non-payment of fees "were reinstated in school," with some being "allowed to work in the schools to pay the fees."

Speight said if the laws permitting the various boards of education to charge fees for certain classes are declared unconstitutional, it would leave many schools in the state without necessary funds to supplement the education and courses necessary to insure pupils an adequate education.

"Especially this is true at this time since neither the legislature, which is not in session, could appropriate funds for this measure, nor could local tax-levying authorities, since all budgets have been completed for current fiscal year."

Local school units across the state set their own fees. Fees in the Pitt County Schools range from a five-cent library fee to fees of several dollars in some High School programs. ($15 for typing and aviation science).

Pitt School Superintendent Arthur S. Alford said there is a potential income of about $75,000 in fees in the Pitt system. He noted that he is looking for legislative support for a $12 million annual appropriation from the General Assembly to replace student fee income across the state.

If student fees could be abolished, Alford said, it would "be a boon for teachers," riding them of the clerical duties of collecting fees and writing receipts. Speight took issue with the plaintiff's bid for relief in the case by a Federal Court.

"The proper procedure to have a state law in-

The Greenville Tobacco Market, although falling short on overall tobacco quality as compared with last year, opened Tuesday on a limited basis with a respectable average of $84.46. While the average was only about $1.46 per hundred pounds less than the 1972 record breaking opening day figure, it reflected a general decrease in the quality of leaf offerings.

Tobacco officials had forecast higher prices in spite of the expected decrease in quality but from the opening prices chanted yesterday morning as auctions began on through the first sale, it was evident that the average would be down from 1972.

Prices improved somewhat as sales progressed during the day and tabulations of the opening activities at the day's end showed that Greenville warehouses sold 769,918 pounds Tuesday for $650,243. Both figures were significantly above the 1972 statistics when 513,710 pounds sold for $441,369 in averaging $85.92.

A spokesman at a local warehouse this morning said that following an opening sale, prices appeared to be improving today with much of the tobacco selling in the $85, $86 and $87 per hundred pounds range.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor for the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, said today that he was "disappointed in the opening day prices" posted here. "I had hoped they would be higher than they were but some of the tobacco on the floor was not quite as good as last year."

Bryan continued, "I believe things look a little better this morning and I am certainly looking for both quality and prices to improve as the sales continue."

Rocky Munt, opening with Greenville as the Eastern Belt began auctions in July for the first time in history, also experienced a lower quality offering of tobacco and prices there did not meet pre-season expectations. The market sold 765,453 pounds Tuesday for $631,652, averaging $82.52 compared with the 1972 average of $84.94.

Totals for Greenville and Rocky Mount were 1,535,371 pounds for $1,281,895 for a belt average of $83.49. Last year, seven markets opened on a limited basis and averaged $85.85.

The Federal-State Market News Service in Wilson reported that Stabilization receipts on the two markets totaled only 5,839 pounds yesterday or less than one percent of overall receipts.

The following tabulation, compiled by the News Service, shows the opening day results of the Greenville and Rocky Mount markets.

MARKET	POUNDS	MONEY	AVERAGE
Greenville	769,918	$650,243	$84.46
Rocky Mount	765,453	$631,652	$82.52
TOTALS	1,535,371	$1,281,895	$83.49

Haldeman Recalls No IRS Pressure

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman testified today he recalls no specific request to make the Internal Revenue Service more responsive politically, but conceded it was possible the White House was asked by others to approach the service.

"It's quite possible that was done," he said in beginning his third day as a witness before the Senate Watergate committee. "These would be inquiries that would come in from friends of the administration about foes of the administration."

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., announced at the start of the session that the panel will hear six more witnesses and then recess until after Labor Day. The witness scheduled to follow Haldeman is Richard Helms, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency and now ambassador to Iran.

Ervin took Haldeman again over the Sept. 15, 1972 meeting he and former counsel John W. Dean III had with the President. The senator pointed out that newspapers had printed extensive accounts of the Watergate break-in and the seven men who were indicted.

"All those facts had appeared in newspapers," Ervin asked.

"Did you discuss any of those with the President?"

"I'm sure I did when they appeared," Haldeman said.

Q. Didn't that engender in your mind a reasonable suspicion that something was wrong in the Committee for the Re-Election of the President?

A. It certainly did—the question was who was wrong and how high did it go.

Haldeman said Tuesday the absence of Justice Department evidence of Democratic plotting against Republicans last year supports his claim that the subject hasn't been investigated. The committee says it is exploring whether violent demonstrations were used as tactics against President Nixon.

Haldeman kept up his denials Tuesday that he or the President were involved in the Watergate wiretapping or cover-up.

He said he believes if President Nixon ever supplies the committee with tape recordings of his White House conversations, the tapes will back up those denials.

"My opinion is that any reasonable person who listened to the tape as I did would come up with the same conclusion as he and I did," Haldeman said.

Under questioning by Republican counsel Fred Thompson, Haldeman took the offensive, reviewing a long list of acts he said were taken against the President, his family and his supporters during last year's presidential campaign.

Haldeman said these included violent demonstrations, heckling of Nixon and other speakers, burning of a campaign headquarters in Phoenix, Ariz., bombing of another in Hollywood, Calif., a "considerable amount" of vandalism, tire slashing and trash fires during demonstrations at the Republican convention in Miami, splattering of convention guests with eggs and tomatoes, indecent exposure and attacks on policemen.

Haldeman said there has been no investigation of these events and little publicity. He said he has supplied the committee with documented evidence that some of them took place with the knowledge and consent of agents of last year's Democratic presidential nominee Sen. George McGovern. He said others were planned by persons who supported McGovern but didn't take orders from him.

Ulbricht Is Dead

BERLIN (AP) — Walter Ulbricht, the spade-bearded East German Communist leader whose monument is the Berlin wall, died today, the official news agency ADN reported. He was 80.

Ulbricht had been ill since he was replaced as party first secretary by Erich Honecker in May 1971. He retained his post as chairman of the State Council, making him titular chief of state until his death. He remained a member of the party's Central Committee and Politburo.

ADN reported earlier that Ulbricht suffered a stroke July 19.

The ADN announcement said that a doctors' bulletin stated that Ulbricht died of heart failure.

The news agency's communique said in part:

The ADN announcement of Ulbricht's death made no reference to his illness or to the cause of death. It stated:

"The Central Committee of the Social Unity Party of Germany, the State Council of the German Democratic Republic, the Presidium of the People's Chamber and the Presidium of the National Council of the National Front, announce with deep sorrow that our comrade Walter Ulbricht died today, 1 August, 1973 at 12:55 p.m. ..."

Iran Agrees

SAIGON (AP) — Iran, an ally of the United States, has agreed to replace Canada on the international peacekeeping commission, official sources reported today. But whether the Communists will accept the Iranians is not known.

President Nixon selected Iran for the four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervision, and the South Vietnamese government agreed.

Aycock Is Sworn

A Greenville attorney, Burt Aycock Jr. took the oath of office today as an assistant district attorney for the Pitt-Craven-Carteret-Pamlico Counties district.

As an assistant district attorney, Aycock joins chief District Attorney Eli Bloom of Greenville and assistants, Cherry Stokes of Greenville, William Barker of Morehead City and Sam Whitehurst of New Bern in handling cases in the District and Superior Courts in the four counties for the State.

Born in New Orleans, Aycock was raised in Greenville and graduated from Rose High School here. He received an undergraduate degree in political science from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and received his law degree from the UNC law school in 1968. He practiced law in Tarboro for two years prior to returning to Greenville as an associate with the law firm of Gaylord and Singleton.

He is married to former Ann Branch of Chapel Hill and they have two children.

VISTA Project Is Off To Full-Fledged Start

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

After more than a year's planning, VISTA in Greenville is getting off a full-fledge start in what all concerned emphasizes is a project "to help people help themselves."

Charles Alan Lance recently arrived on the scene to head the local Pitt County VISTA. The son of a former Greenville resident, Captain L.J. Lance of the Highway Patrol, Charles is a 1967 graduate of Rose High School and Florida State University in 1971. Last September, Charles entered graduate school at East Carolina University, where he is majoring in rehabilitation Counseling. He is married to Christina Morreale of Oakland, N.J.

Charles and two local men — Lawrence Behr, president of Telecommunications Associates and of Lawrence Behr Associates; and Rev. Daniel T. Earnhardt, chaplain of the Wesley Foundation of Greenville — talked about achievements to date and expectations for the future.

Behr and Earnhardt are contributing time as volunteers in laying the groundwork to launch VISTA in a full one year beginning program. Lance is the only paid full time person in VISTA. Behr is chairman of the Finance Committee, of VISTA; and Rev. Earnhardt is closely allied to VISTA since the Wesley Foundation is the project's sponsoring agency.

"I'd like to make it clear," Rev. Earnhardt said, "that while the Wesley Foundation is the sponsor, no religious instructions or requirements whatsoever are involved." Political or labor union involvement is also ruled out in VISTA's operations.

He mentioned that the Walk-for-Greenville Development this spring, an activity that provided the initial Greenville share of funds for the salary of a local VISTA coordinator, was a fine example of the total community involvement slant in all phases of planning and work.

"In fact," Lance said, "we are seeking support from the

Scott Advises Capitulation On ECU Med School

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott says he thinks the Board of Governors of the new University of North Carolina system should recommend construction of a four-year medical school at East Carolina University before the General Assembly makes the decision.

And, Scott said in a recent interview, if the 1974 General Assembly has to make the decision, the influence and prestige of the board of governors will be drastically weakened.

Scott was chief architect of the new university governing system back in 1971 when he was governor. It is supposed to make policy decisions for the 16-campus university system.

Scott said he favors development of the current ECU one-year medical school into a degree-granting institution because "we need more doctors now, and the need is only going to get worse as the population increases."

Scott, who is now executive vice president of the North Carolina Agribusiness Council, stated last year when he was chairman of the Board of Governors, that the board "at times will have to be firm in saying 'No' to the ambitions of particular institutions, of faculties, of chambers of commerce."

But now is not the time to be firm, he said. Instead, the board should look for a way to "save face" and recommend construction of the school "before the legislature has a chance to override it."

"If the board could prove a cause against the ECU proposal, I think it might be able to hold firm," Scott said. "But I don't think they can prove it."

Scott said that a face-saving capitulation by the board to political pressure on the ECU issue would not prompt a wave of political efforts by other schools to secure their own pet projects.

The ECU med school issue, Scott said, is one that predates the board of governors and should be considered separately.

The former governor said he does not agree that construction of the medical school would in itself mean that doctors would be available in rural areas of eastern North Carolina.

One Survived Jetliner Crash

BOSTON (AP) — "People were scattered all over the ground. There was no sound. They were all dead," nurse Maureen Kennedy said in describing the scene of a jetliner crash in which 88 persons died. "There was nothing humanly possible to be done for those people. I never felt so helpless in all my life. I never felt so inadequate," she said after returning from the burned wreckage of a Delta Airlines DC9 that lay on a foggy runway at Logan International Airport.

One person survived Tuesday morning's crash, the worst ever at Boston. Air Force Sgt. Leopold Chouinard, 20, of Marshfield, Vt., was hospitalized in critical condition with burns over most of his body.

Delta Flight 723 sliced through a 2½-foot-high seawall and disintegrated while attempting a landing at the airport.

Move For Impeachment Is Introduced In House

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move to impeach President Nixon has been introduced in the House because of the secret U.S. bombing in Cambodia, but the prospect of action on it appears remote.

The impeachment resolution by Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., was greeted coolly by the Democratic leadership and the chairman of the committee to which it was assigned said no early action is planned.

Drinan himself told newsmen after he filed the measure Tuesday that he had decided against a "procedure to force prompt consideration, believing members should have to consider the idea."

"A hearing on impeachment by the House of Representatives is the only possible way by which the questions of citizens of America can be answered and their confidence in government restored," he said.

This was the fourth time since Nixon took office that impeachment moves have been filed against him.

Drinan also said the House should consider what he called "impeachable offenses" committed by the President in connection with the Watergate scandal.

But Drinan, a Roman Catholic priest and frequent critic of Nixon's war policies, said it was not Watergate that prompted him to file the measure so much as "the recent revelation that President Nixon conducted a totally secret air war in Cambodia for 14 months prior to April 30, 1970."

Last year, during the controversy over bombing in Cambodia and the mining of Haiphong Harbor, three impeachment resolutions were introduced. They died without action.

Drinan's brief resolution "that Richard M. Nixon, President of the United States, is impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors" drew an immediate rebuke from Democratic House leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., also of Massachusetts.

O'Neill said in an interview that he had tried to dissuade Drinan from filing the resolution before either the Senate Watergate committee or special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox finished their probes.

ACCORD EXTENDED

GENEVA (AP) — The international cotton textiles agreement has been extended to the end of the year. Talks on an agreement to include wool and synthetics are expected to be completed by then.

Would-Be Driver Fears Her Past

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 By Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who is about to make application for a job driving a school bus is worried about her past catching up with her.

She got a dishonorable discharge from the service 17 years ago, and is afraid that when her application for this job is received, they will start a thoro investigation of her past, which will include her service record, and everything will come out.

She has no criminal record of any kind, but she understands she has to have FBI security clearance for this bus driving job. The only flaw in her record is this dishonorable discharge which, I may as well tell you, came about when she and another girl were discovered having a romantic relationship. It was only a passing fancy, or an experimental thing, you might say, and never occurred again. She is now married, has a family, and is living a normal life.

Must she be branded all her life for this single incident?

DEAR ANXIOUS: Driving a school bus does not require FBI clearance. Furthermore, the response from the Army to an inquiry about this person would be: "Dishonorable discharge—unsuitable for military life." [Unless national security was involved, nothing else would be divulged.]

DEAR ABBY: Last November I became engaged. I was so excited at the time that I asked a girl I work with [I'll call her "Mazie"] to be one of my bridesmaids. I had seen Mazie only at work, never outside the office.

Now that I know her better, I am very sorry I asked her to be a bridesmaid. She gets drunk and talks dirty. She is very loud and extremely pushy where men are concerned.

Worse yet, my fiance can't stand her. He's afraid she will ruin our wedding with her drinking and dirty mouth.

To give you an idea of what kind of girl Mazie is, she keeps telling me she hopes the bridesmaid's gown will be plenty sexy so she can show off her "38s."

How can I get rid of her politely? Or am I stuck with her?

SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: There is no way you can get rid of her "politely," which means either you are stuck with her, or you will have to get rid of her impolitely.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the young couple who couldn't find a church and minister for their post-pregnant wedding:

You should do a service to others in such straits by informing them of Unitarian-Universalist churches and ministers. They value individuals for honesty and candor; one need not "belong" to a Unitarian-Universalist church to use the building. Witness the many Unitarian-Universalist churches that serve as forums, or centers for unusual music, art debate, or whatever in the search for truth and for meaningful living.

If the couple are straightforward, and respect the prior scheduled commitments of the organization, I am sure they will find a sanctuary in a Unitarian-Universalist church, and a friend in the minister there.

She Trains To Earn Engineer's Cap

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Gentlemen! Start your model railroad engines. Dream about sitting in the cabs of powerful locomotives, pushing and pulling multiton cars surrounded by the magic noises.

Then eat your hearts out.

There's a wisp of a woman — a girl really — in the Santa Fe Railway yards in Albuquerque who's doing it for real. She's alone in the cab, her hands on the throttle of a 20-ton switch engine, doing what yard hostlers do with switch engines. The pretty, dark-haired hostler's face shows a wide smile when she talks about her place in a tough man's world.

"I like it and they seem to be taking it pretty good. I'm glad. They give me my share of work," says Christene Gonzales, 20, who is a hostler in the roundhouse yard and on her way to earning an engineer's cap within the year.

She's to be in the yards for another five months, after which she will go through several weeks of simulator training school before receiving engineer assignments.

Will she make it? "I expect to be an engineer before too long," Christene says.

She already appears to be at home in the cab of the switch engines, shifting her 130 pounds on a 5 foot 7, 36-27-36 frame into the driver's seat as easily as the women in the Santa Fe business offices find their places at their desks. Her long hair is tied in a knot for safety purposes. She works in blue jeans. The men in the yard smile and wave friendly greetings when they notice the attention "Chris" gets from outsiders. "She was carefully screened," a Santa Fe spokesman said. "She's the first woman engineer trainee in the Santa Fe System. I've been told there's a woman running an electroliner or something back East but I don't know of any others."

Women's lib had little to do with her decision, Chris says, although the challenge of becoming a woman railroad engineer was part of the motivations.

"I decided I wanted a railroad job. I didn't think I could be a brakeman, so...An engineer's pay is very good and it's better than sitting behind a desk."

"If I thought I could have stayed in school, I had thoughts about becoming a veterinarian. I come from a railroad family and I always thought about railroading but I never really dreamed about becoming an engineer until a couple of months ago."

Her railroading family includes her brother Frank A. Gonzales, of El Paso, Tex., who is a conductor on the Southern Pacific run between El Paso and Lordsburg. Her mother, Betty Jo, is secretary to Santa Fe trainmaster William Orr in El Paso. Her mother's father was a conductor on the Southern Pacific until he retired a couple of years ago. Her fa-

Green beans should be canned in the pressure canner. So should any other low-acid food such as butter beans, corn, okra, peas, squash, potatoes, and meats.

The reason? They require a temperature higher (240 degrees F.) than can be reached in a boiling water bath (212 degrees F.). Therefore, the pressure canner should be used to be sure of killing bacteria that cause dangerous spoilage.

A pressure saucepan may be used if it has a gage that will register and control steam at 10 pounds pressure and if it's tall enough to hold the jars with a rack on the bottom. Just follow the directions for using the pressure canner but add 20 minutes to the processing time. (Pressure rises and falls faster in the pressure saucepan than in the pressure canner since the metal is usually thinner and the pan is smaller.)

Q. Why is liquid sometimes lost from glass jars during processing?

A. Loss of liquid may be due to packing jars too full, fluctuating pressure in a pressure canner or lowering pressure too suddenly.

Q. Should liquid lost during processing be replaced?

A. No. Never open a jar and refill the liquid—this could let in bacteria and you would need to process again. Loss of liquid does not cause food to spoil, though the food above the liquid may darken.

Q. Is it safe to use canned food if liquid is cloudy?

A. Cloudy liquid may be a sign of spoilage, but it may be caused by the minerals in hard water to by starch from over-ripe vegetables. If liquid is cloudy, boil the food. Do not taste or use the food that foams during heating or that has an off odor.

Q. Why does canned fruit sometimes float in jars?

A. Fruits may float because pack is too loose or syrup too heavy; or because some air remains in tissues of the fruit after heating and processing. Fruits canned by raw-pack method often float.

Q. Is it safe to can foods without salt?

A. Yes. Salt is used for flavor only and is not necessary to prevent

Q. Is it safe to can fruits without sugar?

A. Yes. Sugar is added to improve flavor and to help stabilize color and texture. It is not added as a preservative.

Q. Why do the undersides of metal lids sometimes discolor?

A. Natural compounds in some foods corrode the metal and make a brown or black deposit on the underside of the lid. This deposit is harmless.

ceremony was conducted by the Rev. W.B. Moore.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. William Foust, all of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by the Rev. J.H. Taylor III, organist, and Charles Gatlin, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of sheer nylon organza. Clusters of simulated pearls and polyester lace bands trimmed the bodice, stand-up collar, fitted sleeves, cuffs and skirt. The A-line skirt featured a full length chapel train. Her nylon tulle veil was attached to a headpiece of sheer nylon petals and loops.

Miss Velma Taylor of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Gloria Savage and Miss Linda Gallope, both of Greenville.

The flower girl was Patricia Donaldson and Derrick Stewart of Greenville was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Charles Gorham and Tommy Taylor, both of Greenville.

After a northern wedding trip, the couple will reside in Washington, D.C.

The bride attended C.M. Epes High School and is a graduate of Elizabeth City State University. She is employed by the Department of Justice, Washington, D.C.

The bridegroom attended C.M. Epes High School and served in the U.S. Army.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

Guests were received and introduced to the receiving line by Mrs. Pauline Moore, who directed the wedding. Mrs. Fraeger Sanders registered guests.

Mrs. Milton Carr Jr. and Mrs. J.W. Grimes said good-byes.

A Reprieve, But No Tax Relief

Like most of the commentaries we read and hear, the idea of a mutual reliance on each other's natural resources between the U.S.S.R. and the United States is most appealing to us.

It is not difficult to envision a point in time (and not so distant, either) when this growth of mutual dependence will lead to a tacit understanding that nuclear weapons can not and will be used during a period of confrontation.

Like the poison gas of World War I, they will hopefully become tools to have but not to be used. For that we can be thankful.

Unhappily this does not represent any savings for the taxpayer.

"Conventional" arms don't come cheap; and unless there is an overnight beating of swords into plowshares, our country faces

(a) continuing need to replace military aircraft;

(b) the necessity of replacing our aging ships of the Fleet;

(c) the continuing maintenance of a ready and able ground force to cope with foreseeable contingencies;

(d) continuing weapons research and development

"Confrontations" between governments are a way of life, a fact of life. Being what we are, Americans can be reasonably sure their involvement in affairs of the world also includes entanglement in those periods of stress.

A true nuclear weapons detente, as seems to be shaping up, does not spell relief from budgetary needs; it does, however, mean a reprieve from a too-recurrent nightmare.

Restless Scott Looking Ahead

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Former Gov. Bob Scott is a restless rodeo horse out to pasture, and you can bet your bumper sticker that if he decides to trade fields of clover for a horseshoe of roses in a few years, he'll be running for governor again.

In a relaxed interview recently, Gov. Scott slammed doors right and left regarding the U. S. Senate, U. S. House, or other state posts.

But he made certain to leave that door to the Governor's Mansion on Blount Street at least slightly ajar.

"Any former governor across the nation will tell you that once you've been a governor, you can't really find any office as satisfying—short of being president of the United States or vice president."

for a while before he moved to another subject.

But before getting to that point in the conversation, Scott pointed out that right now he doesn't know what the future holds.

No Predictions.

"I'll make no flat predictions at this time. I have no plans at this time to seek another public office," he said.

He is currently commuting from his Haw River farm to the Agribusiness office he occupies in north Raleigh office park. He spends about 90 per cent of this time working from that office, and the rest working for the statewide Community College system or farming.

Wearing a blue knit pullover shirt and casual slacks, and slightly out of breath from just moving into storage a roomful of files and mementoes from his four years in the governor's office, Scott said he is more relaxed and fitter now than when governor.

He is enjoying life with his family, and points to four teenagers in high school and one pre-high schooler as a special reason to stay out of politics right now.

"I need to be with them at this time more than political life will allow," he said.

He also feels that a man's productive life runs till about age 65; that he has spent a third of his life growing up; he has spent a third of his life in public service (lieutenant governor, governor, military service etc.); that a third of his life is left to him.

"What am I gonna do with it?"

"My inclination is to get out of the pressure of public life where I can have more latitude to earn a living, start a business or so on, which you can't do in public office," he said.

Old North State

Those thoughts kept coming back to North Carolina.

Asked if he is asking himself or others about the possibility of running for governor again, he said:

"I'm not asking myself or others about the possibility of running for governor again, he said:

"I'm not asking other people that. But I am asking myself that from time to time.

"It's never been done in recent times. Oh, somewhere way back when the Legislature elected the governor somebody did it, but not in public election.

"But that is not a reason to run again. Just to say you had done it.

"The only way I would run for governor again would be if I felt like there was something positive that needed to be done—a positive reason for wanting to get back into office to accomplish something. Well, yes, then I'd have to say that the office of governor would be the one that offered the greatest challenge and opportunity.

"And, it has its prerogatives which no other office has: the mansion, the aides, all that hoopla, and the prestige," Scott said.

"And, there his thoughts—or at least his words—ended

The Televised Hearing Is Not Like Show Biz

We can better appreciate these days the reluctance of responsible spokesmen of governmental bodies to have their proceedings telecast or broadcast.

The temptation to play to "the gallery" must be sometimes overwhelming; and the camera and microphone provide audiences to be wooed, swayed or influenced as the speaker is inclined.

The Senate Watergate Committee hearings, in addition to its task of seeking the truth, also offers a stage for the politically ambitious. One can sense the temptations such circumstances provide; the distraction is ever-present.

Cannot Ignore Charles Percy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The recent Harris poll showing astonishing strength for Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, universally derided by politicians and fellow pollsters, is convincingly confirmed by our own interviewing in a Nixon New Majority blue-collar neighborhood.

Liberal Republican Percy not only beat Kennedy but ran better than both Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York and former Gov. John Connally of Texas in presidential matchings we conducted during a Jersey City political tour last week.

Equally surprising was the awareness of Percy. A Midwesterner closely connected to big business and the liberal elite, Percy was as well known in Jersey City as Rockefeller, Connally and Vice president Spiro T. Agnew. Only Agnew did better against Kennedy than Percy, but only marginally.

The results of our interviews (with national pollster Oliver Quayle), among 92 voters, mainly ethnic Democrats who voted Nixon last year:

Agnew 37 voters, Kennedy 34 voters, not sure 21. Percy 36, Kennedy 34, not sure 22. Kennedy 36, Connally 33, not sure 23. Kennedy 39, Rockefeller 29, not sure 24.

These findings back the widely doubted report of July 16 by pollster Louis Harris that Percy was running ahead of Kennedy nationally by 46 per cent to 44 per cent (the balance undecided).

The explanation for Percy's sudden presidential popularity is murky, but its existence should be a loud signal to his party: Chuck Percy must be taken very seriously as a 1976 presidential prospect.

Democratic Gag

The Democratic National Committee last week on orders of Chairman Robert Strauss secretly imposed a gag rule forbidding its staffers from talking to any reporters — outdoing even the restrictive Malden-Ehrlichman White House in trying to close doors.

The gag was ordained last Tuesday by Mary Lou Burg, deputy national chairman, in a confidential memorandum to staffers. Paying lip service to an "Entirely open" policy to the press, Miss Burg imposed unprecedented restrictions on reporters.

Miss Burg, noting the appointment of Vince Clephas as the National Committee's press secretary, ordered that "all press inquiries should be directed to him and him alone." The memo continued:

"He (Clephas) in turn will confer with the chairman and his staff, the finance director and his staff, and will reply to these inquiries. There is absolutely no need for other staff individuals to respond directly to these press calls. If the press contacts you, courteously refer to them to Vince. He will decide on the proper response. And if a more detailed reply is necessary he will assign the person to make the reply."

Miss Burg, while refusing to show us the memo, told us the gag rule is merely intended to keep Clephas informed of what other staffers tell the press.

In truth, Miss Burg's gag rule was directed by Chairman Strauss (who has always been entirely open with the press) in spontaneous reaction to a young employee in the committee's finance division discussing with us a $10,000 contribution by the milk lobby. Miss Burg, a Wisconsin Democratic leader, let it be known she wanted no more underlings talking to the press. Strauss, vacationing in California, did not see her memo.

Strength For Today

A MODERN IDOL

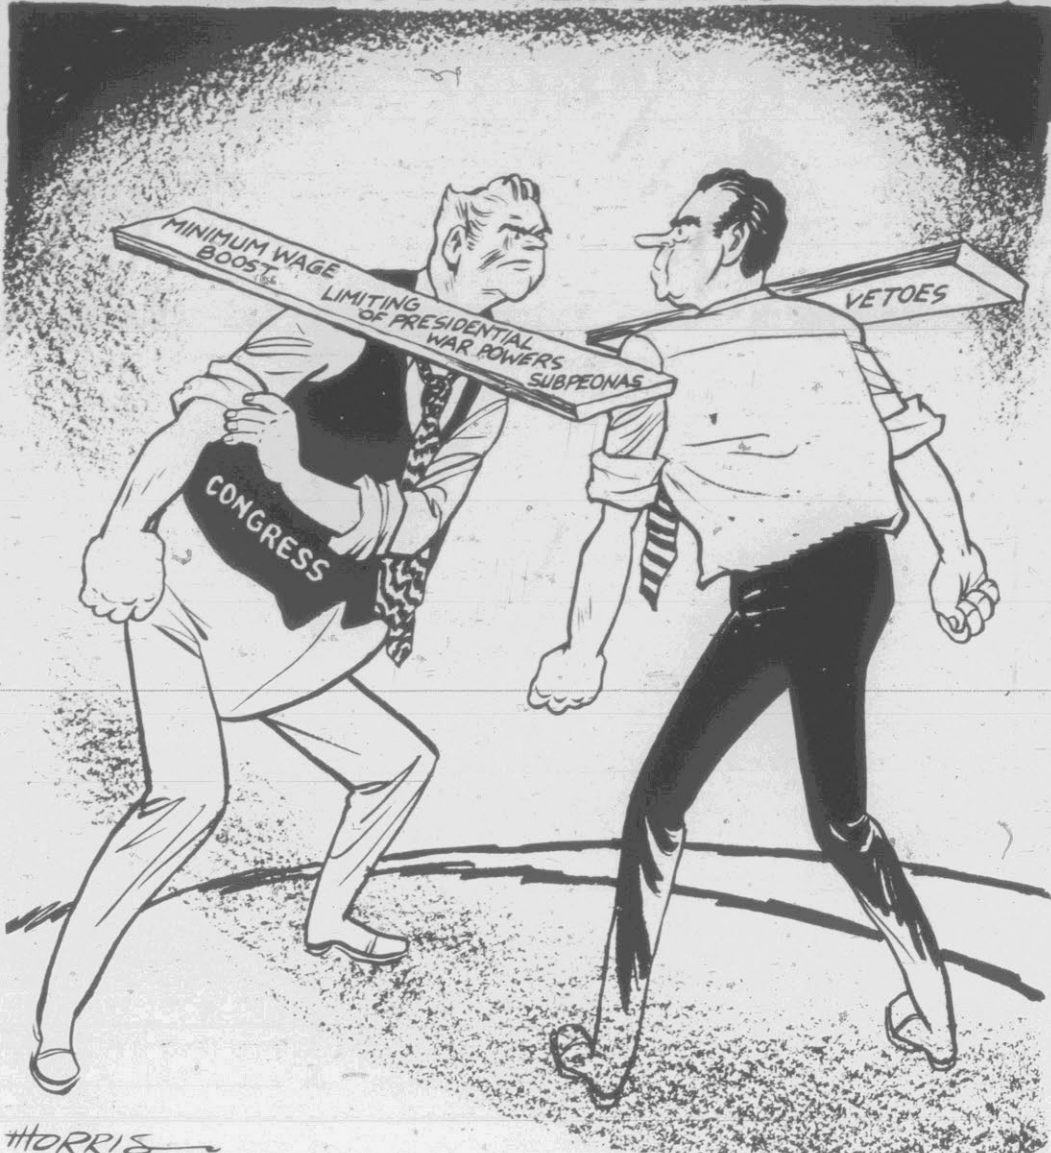

Just a little over one hundred years ago Karl Marx called upon men to drag God off the throne of their thinking and crown in his stead a usurper whom Marx called "dialectical materialism." For years he lingered long in the library of the British Museum combing the pages of history and interpreting everything he found there in terms of economic determinism. He ascribed no independent reality at all to spiritual factors and influences.

Some people think that the worst aspect of Marx's labors was providing the stimulus for the erection of the monolithic communist states which oppress their people and deprive them of their heritage of natural and civil rights. But perhaps a more disadvantageous effect of Marx's work was creating a philosophy of materialism which has penetrated every corner of the civilized world. Unconsciously, millions of people have become economic determinists and ignore spiritual values. They are certainly the poorer for it, and will find that the god economics will give them no peace, merely anxiety and cupidity.

Sitting On The Tapes

WASHINGTON "Ron, have you seen my tapes?"

"You sitting on them, Mr. President."

"Oh yes, I forgot. No one is going to get these tapes, Ron. I want to make that perfectly clear."

"I know that, Mr. President. But you've been sitting on them for three days. Don't you think you ought to get some sleep? We could put the tapes in a safe."

"I'm not going to let them out of my sight. They would love to have me go to bed and leave my tapes in my safe."

"They?"

"All of them out there who are trying to get me, Ron, do you know they're trying to hang me with my own tapes? Well, I have a big surprise for them. I've heard these tapes and I'm innocent. But they'll never hear them. For the rest of their lives, they'll always wonder what was on them."

"That's true, sir. But you can't keep sitting on the tapes for the rest of your Administration. Why don't you give them to someone you trust to safeguard them for you?"

"Ron, I learned a long, long time ago that you can't trust anybody. That's why I made all these tapes. Now they can't say they told me one thing when they told me another. I've got them, Ron, and they know I've got them."

"But most of the people you bugged, Mr. President, are those who worked for you."

"What about the March of Dimes child? The Maid of Cotton? What about the Boy Scouts of America when they came to the White House? I'm sitting on it all, Ron. That's what's driving them nuts."

"Aren't you uncomfortable sitting on them day and night?"

"No, Ron, and do you know why? Because I'm sitting on history. When future Presidents sit on these tapes they're going to say, 'God bless Richard Nixon for not giving them to the Watergate Senate committee.'"

"All the same, sir, the Secret Service has assured me any time you want to give up the tapes, they will make certain that no one gets them."

"Ron, I have only 903 days as President of the United States, and do you know what I'm going to do with that time?"

"No, sir."

"I'm going to sit on these tapes."

"That's wonderful, Mr. President."

"They can threaten me. They can subpoena me. They can even impeach me, but they're not going to get one spool."

"You're a real Profile in Courage, Mr. President."

"Now I know there are some people who are going to say, 'Tricky Dick is up to his dirty tricks.' And I know there are some people who are going to ask, 'If he's innocent, why doesn't he turn the tapes to Cox?' And I know others are going to say I doctored the tapes."

"But when I took this office in 1968, I vowed I would never do the easy thing, the popular thing, the political thing. Ron, the toughest decision I ever had to make was whether I would tape some of the people all of the time, or all of the people some of the time. It was only when I talked with Butterfield that I found out I could tape all of the people all of the time. It was probably the greatest day of my life."

"You sure you don't want to go to bed, Mr. President?"

Letters submitted for publication must be limited to 300 words, and signed.

To the editor:

This letter is an attempt to thank the Greenville Day Camp and to let mothers of Greenville know what a great experience their children are missing by not having taken advantage of the Day Camp.

First of all, it's free to the public and the camp lasts from 9 to 3 o'clock five days a week. The children take a bag lunch and 20 cents for a drink.

The camp provides three ECU counselors. These girls have the patience of Job, a rare quality. They are diligent workers and provide the children with arts and crafts, games, stories, baseball, hikes, and tennis.

On Tuesday, the children go bowling. Wednesdays they play Putt Putt Golf, and on Friday they swim from 3 to 5.

They also have special days on which they have had a tour of Bath, picnics, a movie, Mary Poppins.

There were three sessions lasting two weeks each.

The child had a complete summer and met many new friends.

This is their last week, but there is always next summer and I urge the mothers to enroll their children next year. It would be a shame not to take advantage of an opportunity such as this.

My children and I have come from out of town for the summer and I can't express my sincerest gratitude to the Greenville Park Board and the three counselors, Connie Matthis, Katrina Wilson, and Sylvia Crocker, for making my children's summer a happy and fun-filled one.

Rebelliousness Over Phase Four

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Two weeks old today, Phase 4 seems not only to have failed in selling itself but to have fostered confusion and aroused a small but incendiary-looking rebelliousness.

The latter, for the moment, may seem to be isolated among beef raisers who decline to ship their product to market until after Sept. 12, when Stage B of Phase 4 will permit higher prices.

Meanwhile, packinghouse workers are being laid off and butchers in some areas are forced to limit sales to customers. At once, therefore, the heat of rebellion threatens to spread to labor and housewives.

Claims by Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, that the shortage is unnatural and artificially induced by suppliers does little to make the problem less real, nor does it remove responsibility from government.

The fact is that in a series of phases, the federal government has assumed the role once played by the market place. If suppliers are withholding their product from market, well then, what is government going to do about it?

But this question is merely one small problem in the midst of a larger one, which is Phase 4 itself, whose stated goal is for "eventual decontrol through increased supplies and productivity."

Is it effective? Anyone can keep his own scorecard by referring to these stated objectives:

—To moderate the rate of inflation which has existed in the United States during the first six months of 1973 with a minimum adverse effect on supply.

—To continue expansion of the U.S. economy to fulfill its potential with further increases in employment.

—To strengthen the international position of the dollar.

—To build confidence of business, industry, agriculture, the Congress, and consumers necessary to promote an increase in capacity and supply and to reduce long run inflationary forces.

—To work with business, industry, agriculture, and the public to terminate controls as soon as possible in a manner which will avoid unacceptable rates of inflation after Phase 4.

Growing price pressures that haven't yet been felt at the retail level now pose an

Strain Leaves Mark

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their eyelids droop and faces sag. Sometimes their tempers flare. Early mornings and late nights, and 32 days of hearings over nine weeks have left their mark on the seven Watergate committee senators.

The senators and their staffs are plainly tired.

Three of them want to stop for a rest, but four want to continue working.

"When you see Chairman Ervin cock his elbow and poke Sam Dash in the ribs, he's not mad at him, he's just trying to keep him awake," one senator remarked of Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C. and Samuel Dash, the chief counsel.

Since the Senate Watergate hearings opened last May 17 senators have examined 29 witnesses whose testimony is now spread over more than 6,500 pages of official transcript.

The committee staff has conducted more than 200 private interviews with witnesses and potential witnesses.

It has sifted through thousands of pages of records and documents and recordings, and spent scores of thousands of hours trying to get answers to the constant questions of who, what, where, how and why?

"It's really hard to describe how tired the staff is," said Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who has been one of the main advocates of a month-long August recess.

"Everybody is snapping at everybody ... and it's not a gauge of anything in my mind except how tired everybody is," said Baker.

Baker and two other senators contended the country needed a rest from Watergate as much as they did. They said it would be far better to take an August vacation and come back fresh in September.

Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., and three other senators contended that no matter how tired people got, the hearings must go on without interruptions until the question of possible presidential involvement had been thoroughly explored.

The final vote to continue the hearing after Congress recesses Aug. 3 was taken in private and the names of who voted which way were not released.

"After we voted to go on after a four to three vote, everybody started snarling at each other," said Baker.

"All the same, sir, the Secret Service has assured me any time you want to give up the tapes, they will make certain that no one gets them."

"Ron, I have only 903 days as President of the United States, and do you know what I'm going to do with that time?"

Ervin Under SBI Guard

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Bureau of Investigation agents guarded U.S. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, on recent visits to Charlotte and to Atlantic Beach, N.C.

This was confirmed Tuesday by SBI Director Charles Dunn who said the requests for guards came from Hall Smith, Ervin's news secretary.

Smith said in a telephone interview from Washington he felt Ervin should be guarded as a "precautionary step" but that there had been no "serious" threats against Ervin received since the Watergate hearings began.

Smith described the security operation as "a loose thing. They don't follow him 24 hours a day."

An SBI source said that two agents were assigned to guard Ervin for both his Charlotte and Atlantic Beach trips. He said such protection would probably be continued on subsequent trips.

The source said it was not clear whether a standing request for security had been made.

"To our knowledge there have been no overt threats," the source said. "Apparently he (Ervin) has had more letters" containing possible threats.

No Beef For N.C. Schools

RALEIGH (AP)—State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham says beef supplies for the North Carolina school lunch program are not in sight.

Graham made this comment Tuesday after contacting meat industry spokesmen and school officials.

"Suppliers and packers are reluctant to submit bids to the school systems in the state due to current shortages and the belief that the situation will deteriorate during the coming weeks," Graham said.

VEPCO Appeals Ruling In N.C.

(AP)—The Virginia Electric and Power Co. has appealed a recent ruling of the North Carolina Utilities Commission to the State Court of Appeals.

VEPCO Tuesday asked the court to stay an order by the Utilities Commission and to allow the company to continue collecting its proposed higher rates pending a court decision on its request.

Last month, the commission granted VEPCO approximately 38 per cent of its requested $2.5 million rate increase. The company has been collecting the higher rates since March 1.

VEPCO serves about 60,000 retail customers in northeastern North Carolina.

Secret Service Suit Gets 'Go'

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Secret Service may not exclude persons from public presidential appearances because of their dress or political philosophy, a federal judge ruled Tuesday.

But Judge James B. McMillan said assuring the personal safety of the president is a valid reason to keep individuals away from the chief executive.

McMillan's ruling in U.S. District Court came after lengthy hearings in a $840,000 civil suit, filed by 14 youths. They said their constitutional rights were violated nearly two years ago when they were forcibly prevented from attending Billy Graham Day ceremonies at which President Nixon was present.

McMillan gained national attention earlier in 1971 with his precedent-setting desegregation order for the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County schools, in which he said busing was a permissible tool to break up black-white attendance patterns.

In a 62-page document McMillan ordered a trial in the suit against Secret Service Director James Rowley and local officers. No date was set.

McMillan said the 14 youths and others "were abused, man-handled and excluded from a public gathering without apparent just cause or excuse." He said none had a history of law-breaking, violence or disruption of public proceedings and found that none intended violence toward Nixon.

The judge said John Grimes, head of the Charlotte Secret Service office, testified that plans were made to exclude certain people from the Charlotte Coliseum Oct. 14, 1971, during the ceremonies for evangelist Graham in his hometown. But he said Grimes "refused to answer questions as to the criteria for exclusion or the description of those who were to be excluded."

McMillan noted the Graham Day activities were public and were held at a public building, the 14 youths had valid tickets and none was suspected of having weapons or dangerous materials.

He said those excluded from the interior of the building by Secret Service guidelines either advocated peace in Vietnam, opposed the administration, carried signs or banners uncomplimentary to the President, or were "long-haired people, mostly young."

He added, "The overall compelling inference from this evidence is that the things done to the plaintiffs and others were directed towards the expression of dissent or demonstration of dissent from reigning points of view."

McMillan said the trial may reveal who made the decision about exclusions. He said that decision "may have been made by unknown and undisclosed agencies or persons of the executive branch other than the Secret Service."

Then there's the fun and hoopla of the campaign and the heady feeling of winning a hard fought battle.

At issue are affidavits, obtained by private investigators hired by Republican National Chairman George Bush, alleging political espionage against the Republicans in the 1960 presidential campaign. They name as chief spy Carmine Bellino, chief investigator of Ervin's Watergate committee.

Before he unveiled them last Tuesday, Bush privately showed the affidavits to Ervin and Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, the committee's Republican vice chairman, a week earlier. Ervin was stunned. He had known Carmine Bellino for 20 years, he told Bush, and he could not even consider these ridiculous charges.

Bush left the meeting with the impression Ervin would do nothing, leading to GOP innuendos that the chairman had his own cover-up.

However, Ervin soon clamed down. As the Watergate hearings progressed on national television, a whispered conference between Ervin and Baker agreed the affidavits could not be ignored.

Consequently, Ervin and Baker showed Bellino copies of Bush's affidavits. Bellino vigorously denied the charges. Ervin then suggested Bellino obtain his own affidavits to rebut Bush's. What the committee does next depends on Bellino's rebuttal.

Are the players of today better than the stars of years gone by?

There is no question but that, over the years, bidding theory has made tremendous strides. A team of modern experts would outbid the stars of three decades ago with comparative ease.

In the play of the hand, tho, the difference is less marked. The skill needed in whist and auction bridge was as great as that needed today for contract. To back up my contention, here is a hand played some 40 years ago by the late Willard Karn, one of the finest players of his day.

The auction is a model even by today's standards.

When Karn, South, rebid his hearts despite the fact that North had bid both black suits, his partner realized that he probably had a six-card suit and that the combined holding should offer a good play for game.

West made his natural lead of the queen of diamonds. Declarer's chances were relatively good if he could prevent West from leading thru the king of spades. Dummy's clubs could be used for discards after the king was driven out.

Declarer's urgent problem was an entry to his hand. If he could get there, he could make his contract if West held either the king of clubs or the king of hearts.

Declarer overcame his entry difficulties by overtaking the king of diamonds with the ace! The queen of hearts was led, covered by the king and won by the ace. Declarer reentered his hand with the jack of hearts, in the process drawing the outstanding trumps, and led the ten of clubs. When West turned up with the king in this suit as well, declarer made all thirteen tricks, discarding his three losing spades on the clubs.

Had West failed to cover the first heart, declarer should not repeat the finesse. Instead, he should abandon trumps for the moment and switch to the club finesse.

VISTA Project . . . Award-Winner Is With Music Show

"There is a unique factor in the VISTA project," Earnhardt pointed out. "Of all local projects, VISTA is the only one set up to unite the efforts of Pitt Technical Institute, East Carolina University, the community at large and ACTION resources."

"One of the major points of impact," Behr said, "is that of consumer education to improve the quality of family living standards."

Some of the factors the three listed as having a real impact on the need for a local VISTA project include:

—31.4 per cent of all rural farm families in Pitt County being in an income bracket below the poverty level;

—a need for fuller employment that exists in both the urban and rural sections of the county, among both whites and blacks;

—a need to get underemployed people out of a "feast to famine" attitude and to give them something to look to in the future.

"But the most important point, really the theme of all VISTA efforts," Lance said, "is an effort to help people help themselves. Most of our work can be viewed as an enabling agency, one supporting community services already existing."

Another part of the overall goal of VISTA that Lance emphasized is that of finding the job for the people who need jobs.

"This many in some instances require training. In such cases, that's where we'll introduce people to skilled training, for example, through Pitt Tech."

All three spokesmen agreed the project centers largely on available resources—as Behr put it, "the people."

"There's one particularly important benefit in VISTA," Behr added. "That is the cost-benefit ratio. Since VISTA is operating under a budget of less than $15,000, if the project gets only a dozen new employees placed, that alone will generate about $50,000 to $60,000 new income for the community."

All expressed hopes, however, that VISTA would reach many more than a mere handful of people.

Established originally in 1963 under the Office of Economic Opportunities (OEO), VISTA was taken out of OEO by President Nixon in 1968. After that, it became a volunteer agency under ACTION, which include Peace Corps, PACE, SCORE and other agencies and projects.

Following the successful Walk For Development drive in Greenville this spring, the way was finally paved to provide Greenville's share of funds for the minimum cost required to open a VISTA project here.

"We have plans very soon to meet and discuss the project with members of both the Greenville City Council and the County Commissioners," Lance said. "VISTA has also received endorsements from Pitt County Health Department, the governor's office and other agencies."

One factor mentioned by Rev. Earnhardt is that "we're not seeking to establish things that cannot be done, but are trying to find out if a job is available, and then work toward filling it."

He also explained that background preparation for inaugurating VISTA has included an Advisory Board "which has been working on this project for over a year. The Advisory Board people come from all segments of the community, black and white, of low and high incomes from all communities of the county. Forty people serve on this board and will continue to meet monthly."

On August 13, Lance informed, "nine national volunteers will be coming here directly from 13 days training in Atlanta. These are part of a national group, a domestic group that parallels the Peace Corps."

Lance said those coming here are people who are "taking a year off from their regular professions for volunteer service. They come from various professional fields. Some are students."

In Greenville, according to Lance, this group will continue through August "by community orientation sessions to receive opinions and impressions of local needs."

At the same time, efforts are now being undertaken to seek out and recruit local people to become involved. "We're ready now to accept local volunteer help," Earnhardt said. "Especially needed are skilled people in fields like home demonstration, consumer awareness, home and job financial counseling."

Behr noted that other forms of support are also needed. "A car, for instance, and bicycles as transportation for volunteers. And of course, money." He notes any contributions are tax deductible and that VISTA is a non-profit, incorporated agency.

"Much of our success, the chance to continue the program for a second year," Lance said, "will depend largely on the success of recruiting local volunteer workers and local support."

Currently, VISTA is located at 503 East Fifth Street. The office is usually manned from 8:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., and has an automatic 24 hour answering service.

Anyone interested in seeking assistance, or persons who can volunteer to give assistance are asked to come by the VISTA office at 503 East Fifth Street or to make contact by telephone. "Now that we're started," Lance said, "we're anxious to do all we can to get VISTA into full operation."

Right-Of-Way Easement Asked

FARMVILLE—Farmville Commissioners are asking Norfolk Southern Railroad for an easement on railroad right of way to pave a portion of South Contentnea Street extended which connects with South Main Street.

The request was decided on in a call meeting Friday afternoon. During the same meeting, the purchase of a backhoe tractor for use by the Water and Lights Department was approved and Lloyd Englehardt was named to the Farmville Housing Authority, replacing Thomas Anderson, who has resigned.

BILLY "CRASH" CRADDOCK

Country music singer Billy "Crash" Craddock, a Tar Heel native (Greensboro), is one of four acts coming to Greenville on Friday night in a Greenville Police Department benefit show to be held at the Moose Lodge.

The award winning singer — 1971-1972 in annual Billboard, Cashbox, Record World and Music City News awards — has to his credit hits such as "Knock Three Times," "Afraid I'll Want To Love Her," "Dream Lover" and "Your Better Move On," among others.

Other acts scheduled for the two performances Friday (one at 7:00 p.m., the second at 10:00 p.m.) are Freddie Hart and The Heartbeats, Tom Pall and The Glaser Brothers, and newcomer Kathy Lynn.

Tickets are now available at $4.00 ($5.00 reserve tickets) from any member of the Greenville Police Department or from Music Arts at Pitt Plaza. Proceeds will go to the Greenville Police Department to assist in the construction of a indoor firing range.

Bennett, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., is former U.S. 6th Army commander and a 1938 graduate of West Point.

He will command the 8th Army, a major element of the 42,000-man U.S. force in Korea, and has operational control over the 600,000-man South Korean armed forces, except for the garrison command guarding the capital and the presidential palace.

Bennett will be reassigned to Hawaii as U.S. Army Pacific commander.

Defends His Fishing Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman E. Talmadge has defended his Caribbean vacation last winter with a major government contractor as a fishing trip with an old friend.

In a statement issued Tuesday, the Georgia Democrat confirmed a report in the Washington Star-News that he flew to Bimini on Feb. 9 on a plane owned by Rockwell International.

The firm formerly was North American Rockwell Corp. and is the third largest contractor for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Al Rockwell Jr. has an operation in Albany, Ga.," the senator said. "He has been a friend of mine for quite a number of years. I've hunted with him in Georgia on several occasions. He invited me to join him on a fishing trip and I went."

He said Rockwell "has never asked anything in return."

Talmadge is on the Senate Watergate committee but is not a member of any Senate committee with direct power over space agency appropriations.

Commander In South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Gen. Richard Giles Stilwell took over command of U.N. and U.S. forces in South Korea today from Gen. Donald V. Bennett.

Stilwell, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., is former U.S. 6th Army commander and a 1938 graduate of West Point.

He will command the 8th Army, a major element of the 42,000-man U.S. force in Korea, and has operational control over the 600,000-man South Korean armed forces, except for the garrison command guarding the capital and the presidential palace.

Bennett will be reassigned to Hawaii as U.S. Army Pacific commander.

Scott Advises . . .

(Continued From Page 1) "There would have to be programs and incentives designed to get them to rural areas," he said.

The former governor indicated that the ECU medical school issue is clouded by two factors: the "prejudice" against ECU on the part of Board members and administrators who were part of the old Consolidated University of North Carolina; and the "pushiness" of Eastern legislators and ECU administrators.

"There's no question but that the UNC people are prejudiced," Scott emphasized. "Anything of that calibre (a medical school), they want for the old Consolidated University. It's a matter of competition for funds."

He said he would also include the state's medical "establishment" in the group of people opposed to the ECU proposal because of prejudice. "Medicine is like any other self-regulated profession. They protect their own. It's awfully hard to get admitted to the club."

Scott said on the other hand, "there is no question that pushiness and regional and institutional pride" are among the major factors in the ECU bid.

Pushiness and pride is not entirely bad, however, Scott suggested. "We need a new medical school. I think the reason it should go to Greenville is because they've shown over a long period of time that they have the desire for it."

"We are quite pleased with Scott's support of the ECU Medical School," School of Medicine Dean Wallace Woolees said this morning.

"We know the former governor speaks from great experience with the needs of the state and that he reflects the opinions of a large segment of the population."

"Having a man of his stature publicly recognize the establishment of a four-year school here as the best way to provide more doctors for the people of this state is tremendously encouraging to us who believe so completely in this aim."

On Schedule At Newtown Area Scouts To Jamboree

Approximately 30 area scouts left this morning to attend the Boy Scout Jamboree-East being held this year at Moraine State Park in western Pennsylvania.

The scouts, representing various troops in the Greenville area as well as troops from Bethel and Farmville, left on chartered bus and were scheduled to tour Washington, D. C. on the way to Pennsylvania.

This year's quadrennial Jamboree, which is expected to attract some 70,000 scouts from around the world, is being held in two places for the first time. Jamboree-East, the event that the Greenville delegation will attend, is being staged at Moraine while Jamboree-West will get underway at Farragut State Park in Idaho.

The local group will be part of some 40,000 expected at Moraine and approximately 30,000 are expected at Jamboree-West. The area scouts will be away from Aug. 1-11.

Ralph Hall, site inspector for the Newtown Project, told Housing Authority commissioners during a workshop session Monday night that the project is proceeding some three to five per cent ahead of the planned schedule.

Hall said that the project lost no time due to the weather during July and the manpower shortage that had cost some construction time earlier appears to have been resolved.

The clerk-of-the-works reported that all 31 units on the west side of 14th Street are now under temporary roof and interior work is now scheduled to begin. The 31 units should be ready for tenant occupancy by November, hopefully, he said.

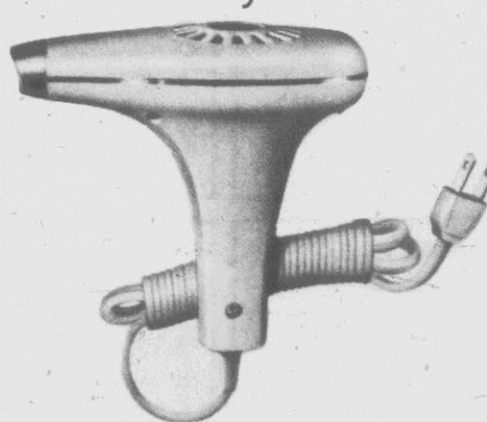

The Authority, after taking up several routine business matters during the workshop meeting, will not have a regular August meeting on Monday night, it was noted.

Keep the ants off the picnic table. Saturate small pieces of blotting paper with insect repellent. Put under table legs.

George Reedy Recalls 2 Presidents He Knew Best

By FRANK S. SWERTLOW
NEW YORK (UPI) — The first thing that strikes you about George Reedy is his pipe. He chews it. He pokes at it. And sometimes he smokes it. Reedy, LBJ's former press secretary, was in town to plug his latest book, "The Presidency In Flux." It's a little book, all about America and politicians and what's wrong with both. As a man who once walked in corridors of power in the White House, he talks, naturally enough, about Watergate and the two presidents he has known best, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon. Different Types "They were essentially two very different types of men," he said. "Johnson liked to gather a lot of people around him and try to dominate them. "Nixon, on the other hand, is a more isolated, introverted man. I knew him quite well when he was a young congressman and I worked for the United Press. I spent two years of my life devoting 75 per cent of my time to him during the Alger Hiss case and the amazing thing was that after all that time how little I knew of him—practically nothing.

"But the one thing I did learn was that this was a man who keeps very close counsel with himself. There is something locked in him. This man does not want to reveal himself. I know of no newsmen who ever really knew him." Although President Nixon was re-elected by one of the largest majorities in the history of the country, Reedy believes the Watergate scandal is eroding his political power. "Now I don't think that President Nixon ever had much of any political power, at any time. He was elected on a lot of negatives — McGovern scared the hell out of a lot of people and they went over and voted for Mr. Nixon. Power Vanishing "His major amount of power, has been that the majority of the American people are loyal to their president and they are willing to obey the laws and follow his leadership. But that power is rapidly vanishing because of the impact of Watergate. "And I think that he won't have too much for the next couple of years, and by and large, it will be negative power. He will be able to keep up the house-keeping function of the White House and he will be able to do the sorts of things a president can do if he doesn't have to go to Congress. "For instance, he can exchange all sorts of representatives with China, but if he has to go to Congress for something, I think he will be in an awful lot of trouble. Turning toward the political campaigns that now use high-priced public relations men as gurus, Reedy said he really doesn't like them because they reduce the dialogue between politicians and their constituents. "The public relations man is now the high priest of politics. I used to really enjoy listening to politicians. They used to talk about people. Now all you hear is talk about their image. You can't sell a man the way you sell a bar of soap." Dim Image Perhaps a man whose image was dimmed the most by electronic politics was President Johnson. "During his early days of the presidency, he was quite colorful, holding press conferences in haystacks and in airplanes. But he did not come across well in a formal television press conference. He felt he was bound by the rules of rhetoric that are laid down in a high school debating class. He was really at his best when he forgot that the TV camera was on. "There were two occasions at press conferences when he forgot about the camera and he began to stomp up and down the stage and for awhile the American people had a glimpse of a really magnificent man. But you really didn't see this too often because somehow he thought he had to make these respectable appearances on television."

Reedy, however, said he is not willing to guess whether or not historians will have a more favorable view of President Johnson's years in the White House, especially because of start, not necessarily looking good, but looking big."

"But somewhere along the line," he said, "he's going to be remembered as a man who was good, but looking big."

Fire Dept. To Begin Using Aptitude Test

The Greenville Fire Department will begin using the U.S. Employment Services General Aptitude Test Battery (GATB) and employment preference tests for screening prospective Fire Fighters beginning today. The decision to begin using aptitude and preference tests came after discussions by Chief Ray Smith, Assistant Chief's Jennis Allen and Paul Nethercutt, and City Manager Bill Carstarphen with Jim Hannan, Director of the local office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission. The United States Employment Service General Aptitude Test Battery has been used since 1947 by the State Employment Services affiliated with the United States Employment Service. Since that time, the GATB has been included in a continuing program of research to validate the tests against success in many different occupations. Because of its extensive research base, the GATB has come to be recognized as the best validated multiple aptitude-test battery in existence for use in vocational guidance. Aptitudes measured by GATB include intelligence, verbal aptitude, numerical aptitude, spatial aptitude, form perception, clerical perception, motor coordination, finger dexterity, and manual dexterity. "The increasing complexity of a Fire Fighter's job, together with the growing property values and number of lives which Fire Fighters protect, require the continued professionalization of the Fire Fighter's service. Carstarphen said, "Use of the Employment Security Commission's recruitment and testing services will continue to strengthen and upgrade the professionalization of our department". The broader recruitment base will also help us in securing needed, additional personnel." The Fire Department is the second City Department to begin using the General Aptitude Test Battery during the last few months. The Police Department also uses these services.

ECU Med School Priority Given N.C. Residents

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina's three degree-granting schools of medicine are giving greater emphasis to in-state applicants, but the ratio of resident to out-of-state students has grown only slightly.

Medical schools at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, at Bowman Gray in Winston-Salem and at Duke University in Durham have admitted a total of 313 students to their freshman classes this year. Of that number 173, or 55 per cent, are native Tar Heels.

UNC is required to hold out-of-state admissions to 15 per cent or less of its first-year class. For 1973 the class of 110 students has 11 from out of state.

Bowman Gray and Duke, private schools which have received state financial subsidies since 1969 to encourage admission of North Carolina students, voluntarily have increased the number of Tar Heels accepted.

For the new class Bowman Gray will have 46 North Carolinians and 43 students from other states. Duke, the largest medical school in the state, has 28 North Carolinians among 114 students.

East Carolina University has 20 students in its one-year training unit, which by law sends its graduates to UNC for the final three years of medical school. Dean W. A. Wooles said ECU has shunned a quota and gives first priority to North Carolinians seeking admission.

Each member of the current ECU class is a resident student.

Strong priority to in-state applicants also is given by state supported schools in neighboring states.

The Medical University of South Carolina, at Charleston, is permitted by law to allot no more than 10 per cent of its 165-seat first-year class to out-of-state students. The registrar's office said no more than 5 per cent of the last three classes has been from out of state.

In Memphis the University of Tennessee Medical School has restricted virtually all admissions to in-state applicants.

Jerry Milchin, assistant director of the Tennessee school, said the only exception is a "nonresident applicant who is the son or daughter of an alumnus and has attended a University of Tennessee undergraduate college."

Milchin said Tennessee accepts 204 students a year. "Our present experience is that we are no longer sending applications to out-of-state applicants," he said.

The question of priority for in-state applicants has arisen repeatedly in the last few years, spurred at least partially by East Carolina University's effort to establish a four-year school of medicine. ECU supporters contend another degree-granting school would help alleviate a reported shortage of physicians in the state.

A survey of the four North Carolina schools indicated each encourages students to remain in the state, but there is no arm twisting.

UNC reported that 7 per cent of its graduates are practicing in North Carolina. Duke said 25 per cent of its graduates practice in the state.

Dr. William G. Anlyan, vice president for health affairs at Duke, said his school encourages a North Carolina practice by affiliations with community hospitals and clinics, summer scholarships that enable students to work with community physicians and hospitals and clinical opportunities at Highland Hospital in Asheville, Sea-Level Hospital in Carteret County, Cabarrus Memorial Hospital in Concord and at facilities in Warren and Halifax Counties.

"We hope by their presence here in North Carolina that they will discover that this is a good part of the United States in which to live," Anlyan said.

At Chapel Hill Dr. William Cromartie, associate dean for clinical sciences, said students are given "every opportunity to continue their training here in residencies."

"There is ample M.D. support throughout the state and through contacts with these physicians in our affiliated hospitals across the state, we hope to make the communities as attractive as possible to the students," he said.

At ECU Dr. Wooles said the first-year students are told "we hope they will meet the needs of this state where they exist."

ECU students are given on-the-spot training in hospital emergency rooms and with community physicians, and practicing physicians serve as guest lecturers.

"We think that strongly influences these students,"
Wooles said.

East Carolina, restricted by law to 20 admissions, had 428 applicants for the 1973-74 class.

Wooles said ECU tells its applicants that "residents of North Carolina judged to be qualified will be given preferential consideration" for admission.

"It is our opinion we are a state school established to meet the needs of the state. In even two years...we feel there are plenty of qualified applicants from North Carolina," he said.

At Bowman Gray Dr. B. Lionel Truscott, assistant dean for admissions, said the entering class has averaged 50 per cent in-state students for the last few years.

"I think they guided themselves by the fact that certainly we ought to have at least 50 per cent from North Carolina so that we don't train the whole class to go out of state. And of the out-of-staters, last year over 5,400 applied to Wake Forest," Truscott said.

He added, "One of the things
I try to do is to encourage those from rural areas, especially, to remain in rural areas."

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market took a nosedive today in active trading. Analysts blamed profit taking, inflationary worries, and rising bond market yields.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had fallen 10.54 to 915.86 by 11:30 a.m., while declines led advances on the New York Stock Exchange by more than 9 to 2.

The general rise in interest rates has sent bond yields skyrocketing, and this has taken money out of the stock market, brokers said.

It also has raised fears about the ability of business to obtain sufficient funds to meet their capital-expenditure needs, analysts said.

Delta Air Lines was down 1 to 50 1/2. A Delta jet crashed Tuesday in Boston.

Western Union, mentioned unfavorably in Barron's weekly magazine, fell 1 1/2 to 12 1/2.

Other NYSE prices included Tandy, down 1 1/2 to 21; Fairchild Camera, off 1 1/4 to 49 3/4; and Motorola, off 1 1/4 to 52.

School Lab Is Lost To Blaze

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—A laboratory in the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry was destroyed by fire early today.

The blaze occurred in a 1,200-foot square lab on the third floor of the school's research building. A fire department spokesman said the entire third floor suffered smoke and water damage.

The lab was used for routine tissue processing.

The fire was discovered shortly before 5:30 a.m. and was brought under control about an hour later.

The cause and amount of damage were not determined.

More Violence In Okla. Prison

MCALISTER, Okla. (AP)—One inmate was stabbed to death and another was severely beaten Tuesday night as violence broke out anew in the riot-torn Oklahoma State Penitentiary, officials said today.

The death brought the official toll to three since the outbreak of rioting and burning last Friday which destroyed much of the prison's interior. National Guard troops have been searching the rubble, checking rumors that more inmates died.

Officials said today they are in control of the situation at the prison. But trouble has flared every day since the rioting was brought to end on Sunday.

Ed Hardy, Gov. David Hall's press secretary, said the inmate who was killed Tuesday night has been identified, but the name was not immediately released. Hardy said the assailant is known to officials but "it's too dangerous to go in and try to get him."

Friend-Maker

KANSAS CITY (AP)—George Riley found a sure-fire way to make a lot of people happy. He gave away about 2,600 gallons of gasoline.

After a sign announcing "Grand Closing—Free Gasoline" appeared Tuesday at his station in suburban Overland Park, Kan., Riley and his attendants pumped the underground tanks dry.

The station is one of about 40 Gulf Corporation outlets in the Kansas City area being closed and Riley said he wanted "to show my appreciation for the customers who have traded with me over the last 11 years."

Pirates Rally To Top Campbell

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina University's Pirates kept their hopes alive for a playoff berth last night with a 3-2, come-from-behind victory over last place Campbell College at Harrington Field.

The game turned into a pitching duel between Russ Smith of the Pirates and Randy Hobbs of Campbell, until Hobbs was lifted in the seventh after being tagged for a lead-off single. After that, Campbell's fortunes steadily went down hill.

At the time, the Camels held a 2-1 lead over the Pirates. Three pitchers followed Hobbs to the mound in the next three frames, but none proved to be as effective as he had been, and the Bucs took advantage, scoring two more runs, getting only one more hit.

The winning run actually came over in the ninth before anyone was retired.

The Bucs got only four hits off the four Campbell pitchers, and were held without a baserunner by Hobbs for four and a third innings. But Ron Staggs finally broke the bubble with a ringing double, coming in on the next play when John Narron cracked out a triple.

From there, the Bucs came back to tie it in the seventh and win in the eighth.

While Hobbs was keeping the Bucs off the bases, Smith was doing almost as well against the Camels. Only one man reached in the first four innings, and unfortunately for the Bucs, he didn't stay long at any base, just long enough to touch them. John Whitehurst led off the second with a booming homer to deep center putting Campbell into a 1-0 lead. The angered Smith then fanned the next three batters to retire the side.

Campbell came up with its other run in the fifth inning. Wes Grout opened with a single to center and Butch Sigmon sacrificed him to second. He moved on to third on an infield out, then scored on a wild pitch. Dave Adorno followed with a walk and Hobbs singled to put a third runner in scoring position, but another infield out kept the Bucs within striking distance.

Campbell offered two more threats the rest of the way. Townie Townsend reached on a single and advanced when the ball was misplayed in the sixth. Then, in the eighth, Bo Gainey singled and moved up on an infield out.

East Carolina finally got something going with Staggs came up with his fifth inning, one-out double to right center. Narron followed him with a smash in nearly the same play, but this time it fell in for a triple, easily scoring Staggs to cut the lead to 2-1. The Bucs failed, however, to get Narron over with the tying run.

Another threat in the sixth failed. Jimmy Paige reached on an error and Jack Elkins sacrificed him up, but he died there.

In the seventh, however, Staggs came back up and scored the tying run. He opened with a single to right chasing Hobbs. Mark Percifield came on and hit Narron with the first pitch. Bobby Harrison grounded to second, and Narron was easily tagged out, but the thrown on the first was way off target, and Staggs came on to score the tying run.

The Bucs threatened again in the eighth. Paige reached on an error and Elkins was hit by a pitch, but the rally died there.

Finally, in the ninth Staggs led off with a walk and Narron also picked up a free pass. As the fourth pitcher came on, Craig Overcash, Harrison greeted him with a single up the alley in the center, scoring Staggs with the winning run.

The Bucs will play host to North Carolina on Thursday in their final home game of the year. That game will be sponsored by NCNB and Booger Scales. Game-time is 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field.

In the National Division, unbeaten Immanuel downed Marantha, while Grace was ousted by University-Mt. Pleasant, and Black Jack dumped Arlington Street.

Thursday night, two more games are scheduled in each division. In the National, University-Mt. Pleasant meets Black Jack, with the winner taking on Marantha, immediately following. The winner will join Immanuel in Friday night's finals.

The two divisional winners will meet for the overall Church League title next week.

In the opening game on Field One, Black Jack rolled to a 16-2 win over Arlington Street. Black Jack pushed over three in the first for all they needed. J. B. Hudson singled and T. Adams got a hit. J. T. Muff tripled them in and scored on B. Elks double for a 3-0 lead.

St. Gabriel picked up two more in the bottom of the fourth and scored another in the sixth. Trinity, however, rallied for six in the seventh to take a 13-12 lead.

Reichardt Earns His Pay Against Old Team

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

There wasn't enough money in Chicago to keep Rick Reichardt there. So he left the White Sox for the greener pastures of Kansas City where the Royals agreed to pay Reichardt what he thought he was worth. He thanked his new employers at the expense of his old employers Tuesday night by doubling home both runs in the Royals 2-1 victory over the White Sox.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland nipped Minnesota 4-3 in 11 innings; Baltimore topped Cleveland 5-1; New York edged Boston 5-4; Detroit took two from Milwaukee 6-5 and 9-3 and Texas knocked off California 4-2.

A's 4, Twins 3
The Minnesota Twins held a 3-2 lead over the A's going into the eighth inning. A loss would have dropped Oakland out of first place in the American League West for the first time since July 3, putting the Royals in the top spot.

But that never happened. Bill North was walked by starter Dick Woodson. Then the Twins sent in three pitchers, trying to keep North on first.

None succeeded although none surrendered a hit. Sal Bando laid down a sacrifice bunt against Ray Corbin, North moving to second. Then Eddie Bane got Reggie Jackson on a ground out, North racing to third.

Bill Hands became the fourth Minnesota pitcher of the inning and he promptly wild pitched North home.

The A's won the game in the 11th when Ray Fosse's 11th-inning sacrifice fly scored pinch runner John "Blue Moon" Odom with the winning run.

Rangers 4, Angels 2
Alex. Johnson singled twice, setting up one Texas run and knocking in another to help rookie David Clyde defeat the Angels.

Clyde allowed only four hits in seven innings and struck out five as he evened his record at 3-3 and sent the reeling Angels down to their 16th loss in 21 games. The victory was the ninth in 11 games for the Rangers.

Yanks 5, Red Sox 4
Bobby Murcer's two-run single with the bases loaded capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning that carried the Yankees to the victory.

The triumph, which snapped New York's four-game losing streak and nine straight defeats at Fenway Park, kept the Yankees in first place in the American League East, one game ahead of Baltimore.

Orioles 5, Indians 1
Jim Palmer, probably the best pitcher who didn't make the American League All-Star staff, Tuesday he continued to pitch superb baseball, stopping Cleveland on three hits to raise his record to 13-6.

Successive doubles by Al Bumbury and Rich Coggins triggered a four-run fourth, backing Palmer's effort.

Tigers 6-9, Brewers 5-3
Bill Freehan singled home the decisive run in a three-run seventh for Detroit's victory in the opener of the two-night doubleheader.

Then in the second game, the Tigers raised their winning streak to seven on the strength of two-run homers from Willie Horton, Dick McAuliffe and Jim Northrup.

Scrambling Lou Brock Really Didn't Have To

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

"We're not used to big leads," said Lou Brock. "We're usually scrapping for one or two runs late in the game."

The St. Louis Cardinals didn't have to do any scrapping late in Tuesday night's game against Montreal—but they did, anyway. With a five-run lead in the ninth inning, Brock beat out an infield single...and promptly stole second base...and third base, too.

It paid off as Brock scored on an infield error, offsetting a meaningless Montreal run in the ninth and enabling the Cards to post a 10-5 victory over the Expos.

In the rest of the National League, the Cincinnati Reds swept a doubleheader from Atlanta 9-5 and 13-11, Philadelphia rebounded from a first-game 4-3 loss to Chicago to beat the Cubs 6-5 in the nightcap, Houston edged Los Angeles 3-2, Pittsburgh downed New York 4-1 and San Francisco whipped San Diego 5-1.

Reds 9-13, Braves 5-11
"Just a number right now," said Hank Aaron following homer No. 701 of his career and 28 of the year. What tarnished the shot was that it came in the bottom of the ninth inning, with the Braves already out of the first game. It added just one more run in the 9-5 loss. "It just seems to be that way," said Aaron, noting that many of his homers have come in losing causes.

Aaron barely missed No. 702 in the 13-11 second-game loss.

Cubs 4-5, Phils 3-6
Ken Brett, the pitcher with the .286 batting average, knew that 4-3 wasn't going to be enough.

"I was making mistakes, bad pitches," he said, "and I figured two runs would get me over the hump."

So he drilled a two-run single that gave him just the cushion he needed for a 6-5 victory.

The Cubs won the opener 4-3 as Randy Hundley and Don Kessinger hit run-scoring doubles in a three-run third inning and Billy Williams knocked in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly.

Astros 3, Dodgers 2
With Los Angeles down 3-1 in the ninth, Bill Russell, Dave Lopes and Manny Mota singled. One run, right?

Wrong. Coach Tom LaSorda flagged down Russell at third. Lopes never saw the stop sign. And as Russell was scrambling back to third from the home plate side, Lopes barreled in from second.

Doug Rader ran over with the ball. "I touched them both just to make sure one of them was out," he grinned.

Pirates 4, Mets 1
The Pirates, with their 10th victory in the last 13 games, moved within four games of the Cardinals and just two back of the Cubs, beating the Mets 4-1 on the strength of a combined four-hitter by Dock Ellis and Ramon Hernandez and Richie Zisk's timely hitting.

Giants 5, Padres 1
Juan Marichal's ninth victory of the year, a 5-0 eight-hitter, was also the 236th of his career, once again tying him with the Cards' Bob Gibson for the most victories among active pitchers.

American League scores: New York 5, Boston 4, Baltimore 5, Cleveland 1; Kansas City 2, Chicago 1; Texas 4, California 2; Oakland 4, Minnesota 3 in 11 innings and, in a doubleheader, Detroit 6, Milwaukee 5, then Detroit 9, Milwaukee 4.

All interested youth may register at the first clinic, Saturday.

Hank Homers, But Unhappy

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Hank Aaron had cracked his 701st career home run only moments earlier, but there was little joy for the Atlanta slugger.

The Braves had just lost the opener of a two-night doubleheader to the Cincinnati Reds Tuesday and Aaron's 28th home run of the season in the ninth inning only made the score read 9-5 instead of 9-4.

"It just seems to be that way," said Aaron, referring to the fact that many of his homers this year are coming in losing causes.

Aaron, however, provided some excitement for the 25,506 fans in the second game when he narrowly missed No. 702.

Aaron came on in the fourth inning as a pinch hitter with the bases loaded and ripped a long drive which Reds' center fielder Andy Kosco caught with his back against the fence. It went as a sacrifice fly, capping a three-run inning and giving the Braves a 10-5 lead. But Atlanta lost the second game, too, 13-11.

East Takes Star Win

GREENSBORO (AP)—Behind the 25-point performance of Leon Dickens of Roxboro Person, the East broke away from a stubborn West team and won the 25th annual North Carolina High School Basketball All-Star Game, 110-99, Tuesday night.

The total score broke a six-year-old record.

Dickens, who will go to North Carolina A & T this fall, got 14 points in the second period, including eight straight that pulled the East from nine points down to a four-point margin at halftime, 53-47.

But the West's balanced scoring tied the game nine times at the end of the third period and the beginning of the fourth.

Then Dickens hit a free throw that put his team in front for good, 96-95.

The West was led by Hildebran's Randy Abernathy, who had 16 points. Bruce Dye of Charlotte Olympic had 13, as did seven-footer Jeff Crompton of Burlington Williams.

For the East five persons, in addition to Dickens, were in double figures. Cleveland Howard of Rocky Mount and Cedric Maxwell of Kinston hit 13 apiece.

Irving Is Dealt To NY Nets

NEW YORK (AP) — Julius Erving, who has bounced around the American and National basketball associations for the past two years and touched off a heated legal battle for his custody, is expected to join the New York Nets of the ABA today.

The Associated Press learned Tuesday that the Nets had acquired Erving, the ABA's leading scorer last season, from the Virginia Squires. Details of the transaction, which reportedly will send forward George Carter to the Virginia team, are to be announced at noon, EDT, news conference in suburban Old Westbury, N. Y.

The Nets, 34-50 last season, would neither confirm or deny the Erving deal Tuesday. However, a spokesman for Squires Owner Earl Foreman said "it is substantially true... but there is more involved than just a player swap." He said it involves "arbitration over the status of Erving" that goes back more than a year.

There also were reports that the Milwaukee Bucks of the NBA, who had drafted him after his college class was graduated, had been paid off to relinquish their rights to negotiate with him.

General Manager Wayne Embury denied the report Tuesday night.

"As far as I know, we still maintain the NBA rights to Julius Erving," he said. "There is no payoff, no compensation. I just plain deny it. This just sounds like another chapter in the Julius Erving story."

The story began in April of 1971 when the 6-foot-6 guard quit the University of Massachusetts after his junior year to sign a lucrative, four-year contract with the Squires.

He averaged 27.2 points for the Squires during the 1971-72 season and was named the ABA's Rookie of the Year. Last year he led all ABA scorers with 31.9 points per game in the Squires' 42-42 season.

He jumped to the Atlanta Hawks of the NBA before the start of last season, reportedly for some $2 million, although he never got to play. Erving was sent back to the Squires who had complained that he had not upheld his end of the deal.

Erving filed suit, saying he had signed with Virginia without knowing his agent also was a representative of the ABA.

The court ruled the Squires contract was "voidable, terminated and of no further force."

In the meantime, the Bucks picked him in the college draft.

Even though a temporary federal appeals court ban kept Erving from playing for anyone other than the Squires, the Hawks squawked about the Milwaukee draft. But the NBA Board of Governors ruled in favor of the Bucks.

The court later ruled Erving must fulfill his obligation with the Squires before he could talk with Milwaukee.

The Nets play in Nassau Coliseum, near Erving's hometown of Roosevelt, N. Y., where he played high school ball.

When he joined the ABA, he was compared to Elgin Baylor and Connie Hawkins, but his prowess proved he was in a class by himself.

Former Nets star Rick Barry, who like Erving jumped leagues but was ordered by the courts to return to the Golden State Warriors of the NBA, said last year that Julius would become the greatest forward of all time.

"He's almost reached that point already," Barry said.

"He's blessed with everything it takes to be No. 1, jumping ability, speed, soft touch, big hands, desire to excel and the great attitude."

Webster Believes He Is Bait For Trading

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Sports Writer
LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers are loaded with talented linebackers, and former All-Pro George Webster realizes that makes him potential trade bait.

"I've kind of felt it," the 27-year-old former Michigan State All-American said before a recent training camp workout. Pittsburgh is shopping for some help at wide receiver, and that makes the angular, broad-shouldered Webster even more expendable.

An All-Pro for three seasons with Houston before being hampered by knee injuries in 1970 and 1971, he came to Pittsburgh last season in a trade that sent wide receiver Dave Smith to Houston.

Webster said he believes his knee trouble is a thing of the past and that he can perform with his old efficiency.

He reported to camp shortly after having four wisdom teeth pulled, so he wasn't up to par in initial workouts.

He's come on strong in recent drills, but the cold fact exists that he's competing at the most top-heavy positions on the Steeler team.

Meanwhile, defensive end Craig Hanneman was carried from the Pittsburgh Steelers' practice field with an injured right knee Tuesday. The extent of his injuries will be determined later today.

The Steelers said another second-year man, wide receiver Stahle Vincent, would undergo surgery on his right knee today. Vincent, who injured the knee last week, spent all of last season on the injured reserve list with an injured ankle and thumb.

Around other NFL training camps Tuesday, Minnesota Viking Coach Bud Grant sent his team through its longest scrimmage yet, a session highlighted by defensive end Carl Eller's charge into the backfield that sent rookie running back Tony Chandler reeling for several yards after a pitchout.

Center Mick Tingelhoff was kept out of action after he was hit on a knee while running back Clint Jones sat out the afternoon practice after his knee developed some fluid.

At Normal, Ill., Coach Don Coryell of the St. Louis Cardinals stressed fundamentals as his team went through a double practice session in preparation for its first preseason game at San Diego Aug. 11.

The New Orleans Saints had running back Pete Van Valkenburg, third-round draft choice from Brigham Young, back in action. He rejoined the squad for the first time since pulling a hamstring muscle two weeks ago.

Tackle Don Croft, one of the Buffalo Bills' few defensive standouts last season and seemingly assured of a starting position this season, underwent surgery at Buffalo General Hospital for torn ligaments in his right knee. He injured the knee in scrimmage Monday and will be out for an indefinite period, the Bills said.

The Dallas Cowboys said wide receiver Bob Hayes and outside linebacker D.D. Lewis are the only doubtful starters for the team's exhibition opener against the Los Angeles Rams Friday night.

Hayes is complaining of a sore knee and Lewis pulled a groin muscle during workouts.

Business Has Hurt Her Game

By ERIC PREWITT

Associated Press Sports Writer
EMERYVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Billie Jean King, home briefly at Watergate West, admitted that the booming business of tennis has taken its toll on her performance.

"I've hurt my own performance level to help the game make it," she said in an interview on the tennis courts at the Watergate apartment complex here, where she lives with husband Larry when not in tournaments or on business elsewhere.

The five-time Wimbledon champion and her partner, teaching professional Dennis Van der Meer, who formed TennisAmerica, Inc., three years ago, have hired an outsider to run the chain of tennis schools.

"We realized we didn't have the necessary expertise in the management part of it," she explained.

The business venture began at Incline Village, Nev., where 200 students took lessons in 1970. This year, TennisAmerica is employing about 200 teachers and giving lessons to some 3,000 students at 14 locations.

"I couldn't have predicted it," says Mrs. King. "We were never sure where it would go. The growth of tennis has surprised a lot of people."

"I love business," says Billie Jean, who would be one of the world's richest tennis players even without sideline success.

She has won more than $100,000 in prize money the past several seasons and could pick up a quick $100,000 by beating Bobby Riggs in a challenge match later this year.

But, after losing to Francoise Durr in an exhibition match last weekend, she said that she were calling the odds, she'd "make Riggs about a 4 to 1 favorite."

Weiskopf Goes Again

By BOB GREEN

Associated Press Golf Writer
HARRISON, N.Y. (AP)—Tom Weiskopf, suddenly the hottest property in golf, seeks a further domination of the pro tour in the rich Westchester Classic this week, but troubled Lee Trevino will be among the missing in the $250,000 event.

Weiskopf, who has won the British and Canadian national titles in his last two starts and is the winner of five of his last eight starts, is the favorite for the $50,000 first prize in the 72-hole tournament that gets underway Thursday.

The site is the tight and tidy Westchester Country Club course, at 6,164 yards one of the shortest the touring pros play all season. But it's hills and vales, woods and glens make it a demanding test with a premium on driving.

But while Weiskopf was geared up to continue his streak, Trevino took some unscheduled time off. He'd committed to play in this event but decided to go home to El Paso, Tex. and his wife, who is expecting their third child. Trevino indicated that he may skip the PGA next week as well.

He, along with Billy Casper, are about the only glamor names missing in the 147-man field.

Weiskopf's chief challenge comes from powerful Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion who hasn't played since the British Open three weeks ago.

He's a four-time winner this season, ranks third on the money list and—at least until Weiskopf began his heroics—generally was regarded as the game's premier performer.

Other top attractions include Australian Bruce Crampton, a former Westchester champion who has won four times this year and tops the money winning list with more than $241,000; South African Gary Player; U.S. Open titleholder Johnny Miller and the still-dangerous Arnold Palmer, who has finished 10th or better in four of his last five starts.

The final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by Hughes Sports Network.

GREENVILLE, S. C. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons' top draft choice, Greg Marx, whipped through a 45-minute scrimmage session that brought smiles from Coach Norm Van Brocklin and his staff.

Marx, a defensive end from Notre Dame, knocked down one pass, had a quarterback sack and also tackled a runner behind the line of scrimmage Tuesday.

The single touchdown of the session came on a 15-yard pass from quarterback John Madeya to veteran tight end Larry Mahlik.

No player cuts were announced.

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Terry Youngbluth, of South Euclid, Ohio, has been elected captain of the Army swimming team for the 1973-74 season. As a junior, Youngbluth specialized in the butterfly stroke.

Allen Sample, of Frankford, Del., will captain the indoor track team for Army. He was a consistent performer in the 35-pound weight throw.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Capital Bullets of the National Basketball Association announced Tuesday the signing of Nick Weatherspoon, their No. 1 draft choice, and Tom Kozelko, their No. 3 selection.

Weatherspoon, 6-foot-7, was the all-time leading scorer for the University of Illinois with his 20.9 point average.

Kozelko, 6-8, had a career game average at the University of Toledo of 20.8 points.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ray Lunny, the young boxer from nearby Redwood City who has stirred up interest in boxing here, takes on former contender Jimmy Robertson in a battle of lightweight at the Cow Palace tonight.

Promoter Babe Griffin is hoping for a gate of more than $20,000, which would be the biggest yet attracted by Lunny. The local fighter is undefeated in 12 professional bouts.

Crawford, the more experienced boxer from Los Angeles, is hoping for a title bout with Rodolfo Gonzales if he beats Lunny.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight former college football stars, all consensus All-Americans, and two coaches have been named to the Citizens Savings College Football Hall of Fame.

The coaches picked are Michigan State's Daugherty and Bob Devaney of Nebraska.

Two running backs were selected, Ernie Davis of Syracuse and Howard Cassady of Ohio State.

Disillusioned Juror Trying To Improve The System

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dr. William R. Pabst Jr., recently had an experience common to many Americans: he was called as a juror but sat on only two or three trials in an entire month.

He whiled away the rest of the time in the jury lounge or went back to his regular job on days his services as a juror were not needed.

Many individuals who see jury service as an essential civic duty are disillusioned by similar experiences. Some never get inside a court room. Much less in a jury box. And many lose money in the process.

Federal jurors get $20 a day and 11 cents-a-mile travel allowance. Most states pay less. And while some people continue to collect their salaries, others lose financially.

Study Grant
Gripping is all most can do.

But Pabst, a systems analyst in Washington, D.C., thought he could do more. First he wrote a paper for the American Statistician. Then he obtained a small grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) and started a study of District of Columbia courts.

Now he is working on state courts in Georgia and Colorado on a $100,000 LEAA grant.

"I think we're going to be able to create the basis for a lot of reforms this year," he told UPI.

The Federal Judicial Center here also is attempting to save money and promote efficiency in juror utilization.

Federal Judge Alfred P. Murrah, director of the Judicial Center, is particularly concerned with citizens' attitudes toward the judicial system because jury service is the only court experience for millions of Americans.

Improve Attitude
If people "don't have to stand around in jury rooms patting their feet and getting asthma from cigarette smoke" they will find their duty more agreeable and will have a more positive attitude toward it, he feels.

"By just exercising a little prudence and by training ourselves and thinking about it we can effect substantial economies," Judge Murrah added.

Only about 10 per cent of all lawsuits in this country are settled by jury trials and Murrah estimated that a jury trial costs roughly $750 a day.

In the year ending June 30, 1972, jury fees cost the taxpayers $10.6 million. Total jury expenditures, including subsistence, mileage, meals and lodging, came to $13.5 million.

Sift Voting Lists
Federal jurors are chosen from the general population by a sifting process starting with the voting lists. Joseph L. Ebersole, the Judicial Center's director of innovations and systems development, described it:

Numbers 1 to 10 are placed in a hat. Someone picks a number, say 7. Then every seventh name on the voting list is picked up. This could sift out about 100,000 from a population of a million.

These names are placed in a master "wheel," a mechanical or computerized device designed to choose people at random. In the old days, a rotating wheel actually was used and some one reached into it to pick names.

The "wheel" is set to produce names of about 1,000 persons, who then are sent juror questionnaires. Some excuses are received and the number falls to about 850.

Jury Box
"This is called a qualified wheel," Ebersole explained, and about 150 individuals are summoned at random to report the first of a specified month. Perhaps 10 per cent have excuses and the rest go into a jury pool.

There are now 135 people available for trials at the beginning of a typical month. These may be divided into four panels, which go to separate court rooms. Eventually, after both sides in a lawsuit exercise challenges to particular individuals, 12 people finally are sitting in the jury box and the trial can start.

The Supreme Court has ruled that both civil and criminal cases may, under the constitution, be tried by juries of fewer than 12 persons. But Pabst doesn't see this development as of great consequence.

"More important is the way jurors are brought into court and the way they are treated while there," he said.

Uncertainty Reigns
Uncertainty as to when jurors will be needed is the main problem. For instance, an impending civil trial can be eliminated by a settlement on the courthouse steps. Pre-trial motions are unpredictable; they can take half a day. A criminal defendant can change his plea to guilty.

The chief judge sometimes determines the size of the jury panel or all the judges may agree among themselves.

The Judicial Center discovered that in 95 per cent of civil trials a panel size of 23 would have been sufficient whereas the average actually ranged from 30 to 32.

William A. Stoeber of the Institute of Judicial Administration in New York conducted a study for the federal district courts in that city and came up with the two-thirds rule.

Two-Thirds Theory
It was determined that 40 was a maximum panel for criminal cases and 25 for civil cases. Thus the theoretical maximum for two criminal trials and one civil trial would be 105, but the jury clerk now works with two-thirds of 105, or 70. He calls 54 or 80, depending on trial starting times. Those remaining from the first one of two are available for the third.

From January through June of 1972 this plan saved about $278,000, according to Ebersole.

James Davey, clerk of the district court in the District of Columbia, said efficiency has improved there but more can be accomplished.

Davey, over some objections, got in touch with charitable organizations and as a result juror volunteers with time on their hands are stuffing toys at children's hospital.

"No matter how hard you try, there's going to be some waiting time," he said.

More Gifts To Universities
NEW YORK (UPI) — Fifty-one colleges and universities (a comparative sampling used in a special study each year) report a total of $476 million in gifts and grants for 1971-72. The figure does not include bequests.

Brakeley, John Price Jones Inc., fund-raising counsel, made the report. The agency said the figure is up 10.7 per cent from the previous year. Including bequests, the schools in the sampling received $587 million. That is the second highest total ever recorded for the institutions, but it was 1.8 per cent less than last year. Bequests show wide fluctuations from year to year, according to the agency.

Some Turn To Cremation As Cost of Dying Soars

By RODNEY ANGOVE
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — With the cost of a funeral with cemetery plot and headstone averaging about $1,700 nationally, a growing number of Americans are signing up for cremations for as little as $250. They would rather use the difference — about $1,450 — to bring their mortgages up to date or help their grandchildren through college, say the businessmen who offer this "minimum service."

But don't jump to the conclusion, they say, that people who sign up in advance for their own low-cost cremations are poor people. The fact is, they say, most are from the affluent middle class and have above-average educations.

The trend does not frighten the funeral industry, its spokesmen say. They characterize the inexpensive cremations as nothing more than a "disposal service," which they say few Americans want. And in case someone does, they say a conventional mortuary can supply the need as cheaply or cheaper. Nevertheless, the industry lobbied in the California Legislature last year for a bill that the director of a cremation service said would hamper if not kill his business.

The mortuary spokesmen said they were concerned mainly with public health, and believe that any handling of human bodies should be regulated the same way they are. The bill died in committee.

The cremation service that fought the bill was the Telophase Society of San Diego, whose founder and director, Thomas B. Weber, says it is unique in the nation.

Weber won his point with the legislature by saying the funeral industry "is trying to bury us." But another similar bill was introduced in this year's session and scheduled for a committee hearing Aug. 8. Also this session, a San Diego legislator introduced a "truth-in-funerals" bill requiring the itemization in advance of all funeral costs, and a bill which would not permit changes in the funeral arrangements that a decedent makes himself in advance. Both bills were killed in committee.

Weber says Telophase signs up individuals for $25 — senior citizens $15 — and waits for telephone calls reporting their deaths.

A 24-hour crew picks up the bodies in a station wagon and turns them over to an independent licensed cremator for cremation at rented facilities and disposal of ashes at sea.

An office staff handles the paper work. The survivors are billed a flat $250, which is less than the death benefits paid under Social Security.

While Telophase itself sees to the disposal, there are 11 funeral and memorial societies in California — and 130 nationally — which operate differently.

The funeral and memorial societies enroll families for a flat $10 fee, then place them in contact with regular funeral homes with which they can contract for cremation at similar low prices. Once the member has contacted the mortuary, the role of funeral or memorial society ends.

The main difference, Weber says, is that with Telophase the survivors cannot change the arrangements, but with funeral and memorial societies, the survivors can go to the funeral home, where renegotiation for added services such as embalming — with added costs — is always possible.

Weber, a Ph.D. in biochemistry, says he believes the deceased should have the final word.

"Everyone I talk to says,

"When I die, I want the simplest thing possible," Weber said in an interview. "You never hear anyone say, 'I want a $10,000 coffin and all the rest.'"

He quoted a recent survey by the Wharton School of Business as saying the national average cost of a funeral — including cemetery plot and headstone — was $1,690.

Death is a normal consequence of life, says Weber. He often uses the word "thanatology," defined as the description or study of the phenomena of somatic — bodily — death." He said thanatology courses are being offered in a growing number of high schools and colleges.

The title Telophase comes from the Greek-rooted term "telo phase," meaning the last stage of cellular division, Weber said.

Despite the biological approach to handling physical remains, Weber said there is no reason why survivors cannot organize separate memorial or religious ceremonies, and many do.

Telophase started three years ago, signing up five members the first month and 20 the second. Membership is now more than 3,000 with 431 signing up in one recent month.

Cremations were running one a month only a year and a half ago, but have since increased to about one per day.

Weber said a survey of the first 2,000 members revealed that fewer than 10 per cent were hard-pressed financially.

While most listed "cost" as the chief reason for signing up, Weber said "surprisingly, they are more affluent than the norm. Many live in La Jolla," an upper-middle class city in San Diego County. "In education, they are about 2.2 years higher than the norm."

"By religion, about 15 per cent are Roman Catholic," Weber said. "There is a high percentage of Jews. Protestants are well distributed, although we have fewer of the fundamentalist type denominations."

Similar findings are reported by the vice president of the California Federation of Funeral and Memorial Societies, E.A. Pesonen of Sacramento.

Pesonen said the Sacramento Valley Memorial Society, which he heads, has mostly white-collar members, many from nearby Davis where a large campus of the University of California is located.

The nonaffluent and the minority groups need our services more," Pesonen said in a telephone interview, "but they seem to have emotional hang-ups."

The Sacramento group started in 1959 and its membership doubled to about 3,500 during its last operating year, Pesonen said.

As Pesonen and Weber see it, they are offering the first alternative to normal funerals, on which they say Americans spend $3 billion to $3.5 billion a year.

But funeral directors aren't impressed.

"Only about one-half of one per cent of the population is involved with them — maybe even less," said George Williams of Fresno, executive secretary of the California Funeral Directors Association.

"Only about five per cent of the dead are cremated in the United States," Williams said, "and this has grown only about one per cent in the last 10 years."

"What they're offering is just a disposal service," Williams said. "You can't qualify that as a funeral service."

"They don't offer embalming or religious services. It's just not the right way to do it. It's a completely pagan method of disposing of remains."

The Glory That Was Paris Is Today Believed To Be Waning

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — As a world capital, Paris has slipped. A report published this summer says Paris has lost out as a center of the modern arts, as headquarters for international businesses and as a political center. And it's losing its personality that for centuries made Paris the world's favorite international city.

Based on two years of interviews with businessmen and others in the United States and Europe, the report made for city officials concluded, "Paris once was the capital of Europe, perhaps even of the world. Now it is neither one nor the other."

The 143-page report, "Paris, International City," outlines the city's failure in three areas: culture, economics and politics. London has become the capital of the arts, London and Brussels tie as European headquarters for American and multinational firms and Brussels is likely to be the capital of the united Europe, the report warns.

Paris De-fizzed

As for culture, "Paris no longer is the site of creative effervescence. Avant garde theater, new music, new clothing ideas come today from London," the report begins.

"Until the '50's, aspirants were obliged to go to Paris to enter the tight circle of creators. Artistic personalities breathed here the air of liberty indispensable to all research, creation, interchange of ideas. Paris was the international culture center."

"Now the rigors of French bureaucracy tend to normalize attempts at originality and artistic creation. Paris is too classic and not adapted to the new dimension of culture of advanced industrial societies—the culture of the masses."

The report said few experimental artistic events originate

School-To-Job Program Helps

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Public Schools recently sponsored a school-to-industry job development program. The idea: give seniors employment assistance.

The students involved in the program in Pittsburgh, Pa., received instruction in filling out job applications. Job placement centers were set up in 13 high schools. At the centers representatives of business and industry interviewed seniors.

A VIEW OF PARIS—Some critics say the historic city is losing its personality. In foreground is the Palais de Chaillot; in the background are skyscrapers which do not please all Parisians. (UPI Telephoto) in Paris such as "The Great Magic Circus", which had great success in New York and London. French artistic personalities such as Pierre Boulez and Maurice Bejart must emigrate to find expression for their talent. Contemporary plays in Paris come from England, Germany or the United States.

The report decided Paris still has two advantages of culture: "Intellectual and political debates and the publication of theoretical works in history, philosophy, still take place first in Paris. Secondly, the artistic heritage of Paris, architecture and monuments, the beauty of certain quarters such as the Left Bank, Montparnasse, Montmartre...."

"Not Like Detroit"

But this second point in Paris' favor is threatened by the current scramble to "Manhattanize" Paris with skyscrapers and snack bars, the report says.

"The current modernization of many Paris sections was necessary or otherwise the capital would be underdeveloped. But haven't we gone too far?" the report questions.

"The building evolution under way is altering seriously the personality of Paris. A great city is a great city only through its personality. We must stop building Paris as Detroit...."

In the economic field, the report stresses that Paris to regain its crown as the No. 1 international city must attract multinational firms to establish their European headquarters here. But a University of Pennsylvania survey made for the report says Brussels and London now attract the most headquarters.

The report noted that London is the financial center of Europe and Paris does not boast headquarters of one European banking association.

As for being a political capital, the report urges that Paris try to become the center for trade and relations with the Communist world, and for the third world of African countries.

Denver Schools Cold No More

NEW YORK (UPI) — Denver made news last winter when cold closed several schools. They ran out of fuel during a frigid spell.

This summer, the city is installing extra storage tanks so the crisis won't be repeated. Four 20,000-gallon tanks costing about $15,000 each will raise the combined school storage capacity to nearly 500,000 gallons.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early day can have some small disappointments, but shortly thereafter excellent planetary positions favor a happy and productive result in anything undertaken with others, particularly connected with social popularity, romance and reaching new understandings.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you sit down with others in a very conciliatory manner, you can reach a far better understanding. Try not to lose your temper and all will be fine. Take it easy tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make your dwelling more attractive and gain the cooperation of working pals. Buy the new clothing you want and look your best. Seek out whatever brings you more happiness in p.m. Avoid one who likes to fight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into the amusements you really enjoy with the people you truly like. Working on your best creative ideas is fine and you get excellent results. Drive with utmost caution.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study your abode well and see what can be done to make it more attractive. Some entertaining at home could be very pleasant. Try to save more money instead of spending so lavishly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you make those appointments early so your life becomes more successful and happy, you get excellent results. Evening should be spent with people of same ideas as yours. Think wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study debts and credits and improve your financial standing. A clever business person will big-heartedly give you advice you need. Follow it and you get excellent results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can be very charming with others now and can do much to gain their goodwill, benefits, favors they can bestow. Get out to some social affair that can be very good for you. Be sure to dress well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can have a delightful time with one you like, but be sure you do not confide in others. Get the data that you need so you can put it to use quickly. Make sure you do not disturb others, though.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Look to a good friend for the information you need at this time to gain some important aim. Social activities are fine later in the day and congenials are in an excellent mood. Don't be glum.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact congenials and officials and improve your image both in private and in public, get their support for your aims. You can get that civic matter on the road, also. Save time for fun with mate in p.m.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have unusual outlets to get into and this is a good day for that; get the support and approval of bigwigs. You can make the new associates you need easily. Think along very practical lines.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you follow your intuition, you know exactly what to do regarding some important issues facing you. Use good judgment, too. Return the affection which mate extends to you and have much greater rapport.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have the delightful quality of being a people-admirer and easily extends compliments. This leads to much goodwill, understanding and favors given to your clever youngster. Teach early to become a good student, and then this chart becomes very successful. Much charm here and willingness to cooperate with others. Spiritual training early.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Perfume In Your Foods

MAYWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Although the creative perfumer already has thousands of ingredients available for compounding new fragrances, there is always room for one more — and it may come from the snack tray at a cocktail party or even the drinks.

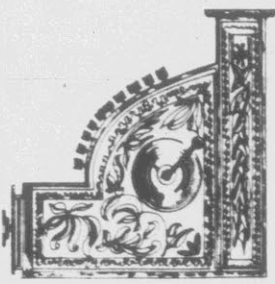

Perfume chemists at PPL, a fragrance-making concern here, are studying a novel class of odor compounds. Called pyrazines, they occur in such diverse materials as peanuts, pecans, potato chips, Scotch whiskey and Jamaican rum. Although pyrazines are used primarily in food flavors, the chemists are investigating their effects in perfume compositions.

The study of potential materials for fragrances is important in more than one way, the perfume chemists point out. In addition to evaluating fragrance quality and power, the chemist also gathers information on structure and composition. This is vital if the natural ingredient is extremely expensive and must be replaced by a synthetic alternative created in a laboratory.

INFLATION NOTE

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem religious leaders have bowed to inflationary pressures and raised their fees for the marriage ceremony by at least 50 per cent. Prices range from $4 to $40, depending on the couple's standard of living.

GAINING POPULARITY—The language is Portuguese and the sentences are short and easy to read in this combination of movies and comic books that is becoming a multimillion-dollar industry in Brazil.

Photonovel Is Big In Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Photonovels — a hybrid of comic books and movies — are rapidly becoming a multimillion-dollar industry in Brazil, Latin America's biggest country.

Fotonovelas, as the Brazilians call them, are photographed soap operas with comic book-style dialogue superimposed on each frame. They are published here in magazines with names such as Seventh Heaven, Caprice, Tenderheart and Girl Friend. Their stock theme is that True Love is immutable, eternal and capable of overcoming all obstacles.

Brazil got the idea of photonovels from Italy, where they became popular after World War II. Most Brazilian photonovels still use imported Italian photographs and stories. The names are Brazilianized, and the dialogue is translated into Portuguese, this country's national language.

Home-grown photonovels, written by Brazilians and starring Brazilian actors, are winning an increasing slice of the market, however.

Brazilian censorship laws require 96 words "Not Advisable for Minors under Sixteen" to be written on the covers of most photonovels. But publishers say at least 30 per cent their readers are girls between 12 and 16.

Editora Bloch, a major Brazilian publishing company, recently started putting photonovels in its TV and movie magazines. Bloch says it now sells a total of 1 million magazines containing photonovels a month.

An average-length photonovel of 150 pictures can be filmed in one day. In the battle to build an all-Brazilian photonovel industry, publishers here are going after top movie and TV stars, offering $350 a day.

Brazilian actors and actresses who appear in photonovels don't hesitate to admit that they like the pay. But they also say the magazine work provides a fun break from the grind of a TV serial or serious theatrical acting.

"It doesn't take any time or require preparation," said Dina Sfat, one of Brazil's most famous TV soap opera heroines and now also a star of photonovels.

Miss Sfat's husband, equally famous actor Paulo Jose, also does photonovels. But he doesn't think they're so great. "My eyes are glassy and the poses look wooden," he snorted, noting it's difficult and frustrating to have to freeze for the photonovel pictures.

A survey showed that girls in Brazil from all economic and social levels read photonovels in their teens. But only women from the working and lower-middle classes keep reading them as adults.

People with little education have no trouble understanding photonovels. The words and ideas are extremely simple.

The standard photonovel used to be a Cinderella tale. Those being printed in Brazil, however, have left the rags-to-riches theme in favor of morality tales of poor but honest, virtuous hard-working girls who are seduced by rich, older men. Another variation is girls who set out to marry for money but wind up discovering that True Happiness can be gained only through True Love.

Cliches and coincidences abound in photonovels. The stories thrive on melodramatic situations.

Henry Ford's Soybean Car Was Sidetracked By Second World War

THREE DECADES AGO the soybean almost became a prime ingredient in manufacturing automobiles. The soybean car developed by Henry Ford made its debut in 1941, and to demonstrate its strength Ford smashed a fire axe flat side into a soybean Ford coupe. (UPI Telephoto)

By EDWARD S. LECHTIZIN

UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Today's rising food prices make the common soybean a highly prized agricultural product. Three decades ago, it almost became a prime ingredient in manufacturing automobiles.

The soybean car developed by Henry Ford made its debut in 1941 at a luncheon where everything was soy—soybean steaks, soy soup, salted soybeans, apple pie with a crust made of soy flour, soy milk, soy coffee, soybean ice cream and even soybean dressing.

To demonstrate the strength of his soybean car, Ford smashed a fire axe flat side into an apparently normal Ford coupe. The axe rebounded and out came a widely circulated picture showing the strength of the reinforced phenolic (plastic) from soybean derivatives.

If the Second World War had not intervened, Ford's dream of a plastic car body and "growing cars out of the ground" might have been realized. As it is, the average U.S. automobile has about 250 parts made out of plastic.

In the most highly populated areas of the world, soybeans are extensively used as a source of food and oil. The Commerce Department recently began tight control on exports of soybeans, a vital component of livestock feed.

Soybean Plastics
Yet during the Great Depression, farmers had vast quantities of soybeans and few markets. Ford, the founder of the automobile company that bears his name, spent an estimated $4 million on soybean experiments which resulted in development of phenolformaldehyde for reinforced plastic.

In charge of that project was Robert A. Boyer, who says it took more than a decade before the experiments reached the stage where the actual car began to take shape.

Now 63 and a consultant to the Worthington Foods Division of Miles Laboratories, Boyer recently recalled some of his experiences in an interview with Forbes Magazine.

"Ford wanted to do something for farmers. They were among his best customers for the Model T and Model A," said Boyer. "So he built a laboratory for finding industrial uses for farm crops.

"We investigated all the common farm crops and it soon became clear the soybean had the most promise because of its high oil and protein content."

Boyer now holds patents on edible protein from soybeans which developed in the research for plastic material for autos. Plastics form into complex shapes much less expensively than metal.

Lighter Than Steel

To provide the needed soybeans for experiments, Ford purchased the property where much of the Ford Motor Co., headquarters in suburban Dearborn stands in order to be able to grow enough soybeans to produce a million cars a year with wood fiber-reinforced phenolic bodies.

"We decided to design a car from the ground up and to style it especially for plastics," said Boyer. "In appearance, it is not radically different from steel models, but some angles were eliminated."

The I-beam frame was discarded and a simple, but very strong, tubular frame weighing less than 250 pounds was used in its place. The reduced weight of the car permitted a smaller motor and lighter running gear to give the same performance.

The tubular frame, used on some racing cars in the '50's, permitted the car body to be made of only 14 surface panels. The completed car was 30 per cent lighter than its steel counterpart and Boyer claims that would have been reduced even further in production.

Besides the $4 million in research, Ford spent an additional $10 million on mills and facilities and the company was a pioneer in using phenolics for door knobs, distributor heads and horn buttons, but the soybean car was just another item to be put aside when the United States entered the war after Pearl Harbor.

Lost Dream

Ford died in 1946 before normal automobile production was resumed after the war, and the tubular frame-reinforced phenolic car never became a reality.

With today's greater need for soybeans as a source of protein, as well as new technology, which has developed more easily processed materials, the soybean car is just another half-forgotten historical item.

According to the Ford Motor Co., it was just one of many ideas "which got lost in the files."

Jungle Justice Hit By Nigerian Press

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) —

"Jungle justice" and "primitive savagery" are under sharp attack in Nigeria where angry mobs sometimes take the law into their own hands.

The most recent case in this West African nation was that of a passerby helping the dying victim of a hit-and-run car accident in Ughelli in the Mid-West State.

The "Good Samaritan" was beaten to death by a crowd that thought he was responsible for the crash although the driver really at fault later turned himself in to the police.

"It is high time we began effectively curbing the primitive instincts in the unruly elements among us," complained the influential Daily Times newspaper.

This "lapse into stone-age barbarity," as the Daily Times called it, however, was not an isolated incident.

"There are thousands of real or potential Ughelli mobs in our midst," the journal said.

Women believed to be witches or sorcerers have been stoned in Lagos, the capital, and other cities.

Mobs last year beat, stabbed or stoned to death over a dozen persons in various parts of the country suspected of being kidnappers.

The kidnapping hysteria was all the grimmer because it was widely believed the children were being abducted as sacrifices for ritual murder.

At one stage, Lagos television viewers were shown film of the arrest of a bleating goat that some superstitious Lagosians claimed was a kidnapper who transformed himself.

The "kidnapper" was later put to death to relieve public anxiety.

Belief in black magic and superstition, to the concern of many educated Nigerians, still pervades African society.

Bargain Living In Texas Cities

DALLAS (UPI) — The absence of a state tax on personal income and low housing costs have helped keep cities in Texas as the nation's least expensive in which to live, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

A study showed Austin, Tex., the cheapest of 40 cities surveyed. The bureau said a typical family in Austin could live for $1,563 a year less than the national average.

In fact, when I administered the standard Intelligence Tests to them, they averaged a higher score thereon than did my senior Liberal Arts students on our Evanston Campus of Northwestern University!

"Dr. Crane," officer Zee began recently, "you may recall that beginning with July 1, 1971, all coroners in Illinois must take blood samples from drivers who have died in traffic accidents. "Dr. Franco Fiorese and his chemists at the State Toxicology Lab then analyze the blood for alcoholic content.

"Of these auto fatalities, 57.4 percent had alcohol in their blood. "And 42.6 percent had an alcoholic content above 0.10 of one percent, which is the legal evidence of drunken drivers.

"In the following table you can see the percentage of fatal drunken (0.10 percent) drivers at various age levels:

Age	Percent Drunk
15-19 years	26.7 percent
40-44 years	59.3 percent
45-49 years	58.3 percent

"Even the pedestrians who were killed by auto collisions showed that 35.1 percent had at least 0.10 of one per cent alcohol in their blood, meaning they, too, were intoxicated."

Drivers Tests
Many taxpayers are now grumbling about the usual bureaucratic tendency to complicate their departments and thus expand the written drivers tests, ad infinitum.

This is one way they "pat themselves on the back" at the state headquarters.

For the greater the amount of paper work involved, the more employees are then placed on

Best Pay In High Profits

NEW YORK (AP) — If your son or daughter is graduating from high school or college and is joining the labor force, advise him or her to seek employment in an industry with high profits, says Earle B. Barnes, president of Dow Chemical, U.S.A.

Statistics show that the most profitable companies pay the highest wages, Barnes says. For example, in the years 1967-71, the petroleum refining industry earned about 10 cents on each dollar of sales and paid its employees an average hourly wage of $4.82. The chemical industry made an average of 6.5 cents on the dollar and paid an average wage of $3.94.

In contrast, industries that earned less paid less to employees. The furniture industry earned 3.2 cents for each dollar of sales and paid its workers an average of $2.90. The apparel industry had profits of 2.2 cents per dollar and paid only $2.49 per hour, Barnes said.

the backs of us overly taxed citizens.

Besides, these current figures from Illinois merely support the frequent statement by the National Safety Council that "over 50 percent of all fatal traffic accidents in the nation involve drinking."

And the above data refer only to those who were actually dead as a result of auto accidents.

They don't indicate how many of the survivors of the crashes may have staggered away from the scene with a high blood alcoholic content!

Here in Illinois, the written drivers tests no longer relate the simple road markers and maybe 10 basic questions about "horse sense" situations.

No; they now exceed our college Intelligence Tests in multiple choice questions that list 5 answers, 2 of which are supposed to be relevant.

Such complications of test forms are the rule when a bureau wishes to assert its importance and try to affect a grandiose "scientific" image!

If all drivers tests were eliminated but motorists were denied access to alcohol, we'd probably have much fewer accidents and traffic deaths than is true in this age of complicated written tests for former drivers.

New drivers might profitably be forced to take tests but experienced motorists with no previous serious accident records should need no written tests at all as long as their vision and muscular coordination are medically O.K.

Investigator Will Seek Tobacco Price-Fixing

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee has sent an investigator to Georgia to obtain first-hand information into alleged price-fixing by tobacco buyers in the state.

Mike McLeod, counsel for the agriculture committee, made unannounced visits at several markets to observe sales in progress, examine sales records and take depositions from local people.

Accompanying him were state Sens. Frank Sutton and Bobby Rowan. The three met Monday with Walter Jarrell of the U.S. Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Athens.

Sutton said the purpose of the meeting "was to discuss and investigate alleged collusion of the major tobacco buyers in the purchase of Type 14 (flue-cured) tobacco."

Sutton said enough circumstantial information had been collected before McLeod's trip to "warrant a request that the agriculture committee continue a season-long investigation of 'leads supplied by various people connected with the tobacco industry.'"

He added that an investigation would be made into charges that some tobacco companies were "bidding the same thing and not going to the top of the market."

Asked about the new record prices being paid for tobacco, Sutton said the cost to the farmers of producing the tobacco crop is soaring faster than the price they get in return for it from the buyers.

"The farmers won't realize as much as they did last year because of this rapid increase in production costs," said Sutton.

"We see the tobacco farmer as having a lower standard of living than last year," he added.

Tobacco companies, reports have alleged, "have people bidding on their number to increase their share rather than to raise the price to get a larger share," Sutton continued.

Some companies, Sutton said, allegedly hire different buyers

"to go in there and buy on their number. One tobacco company might have three people to bid on their number, and tobacco is bought on their account and charged to their account."

Sutton said that if such reports prove to be true, charges that the market is controlled will be borne out.

Rowan said that if there was no collusion, "that is well and good. But if there is, we expect the farmers of Georgia to be protected from this sort of practice."

Rowan said he was concerned about reports that the buying companies "are getting together to set their own price before the sale."

Plan Visit To Ignored Outposts

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II of Britain and her husband Prince Philip have revised their plans for next year's Pacific tour following objections that two imperial outposts were being ignored.

Sir Michael Gass, high commissioner for the Western Pacific, said today that the royal couple would visit the Solomon Islands and the New Hebrides during February while en route home from the Commonwealth games in New Zealand.

Suggests More Women Pilots

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — After a 40-minute flight in an Air Force jet fighter, the wife of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said she would like to see more women fliers.

"Since flying in the F4, I think that we should have more women pilots, and I hope it will not be long before we have a woman in the space program," Cornelia Wallace said Tuesday.

The Phantom jet was piloted by a member of the Air National Guard, which is in summer training at Maxwell Air Force Base here.
