

Commuter Service Soon

Wheeler Flying Service—based at the Raleigh-Durham Airport—will begin air commuter service between Raleigh, Greenville and Beaufort-Morehead City with an inaugural flight August 14.

The announcement of the inaugural flight next Tuesday was made by Gov. Jim Holshouser who said Wheeler Flying Service has received a $75,000 grant from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission to help fund operation of the third-level air commuter service for the next three years.

"This most needed program for the residents of Eastern North Carolina," Holshouser said, "was made possible by the joint efforts of these communities, the State, Wheeler Flying Service and the Coastal Plains Regional Commission."

Initially there will be three round-trip flights daily, Monday through Friday, between Raleigh and Greenville, according to Warren Wheeler, who heads the commuter airline. There will be two round-trip flights between Raleigh and Morehead-Beaufort.

Wheeler said an eight-passenger aircraft will be used initially, then if there is sufficient demand, the firm will add a 15-passenger plane.

The Coastal Plains Regional Commission approved the grant to the airline in connection with its program of helping communities in the region develop transportation facilities essential to industrial and community development.

Wheeler explained to newsmen at the airport here Tuesday that initially commuter flights will arrive in Greenville daily, at 8 a.m., 4 p.m. and again at 6:30 p.m. A Greenville-Raleigh or Greenville-Beaufort-Morehead City flight, as well as return trips, will cost $17 per person.

A veteran of seven and a half years with Piedmont Airlines, Wheeler said that he will "occasionally" pilot the Beechcraft Tradewind craft on commuter flights but normally other Wheeler Flying Service pilots will be at the controls. He noted that the company has a backup plane that can be pressed into service if needed.

James Shaw, program coordinator in the Federal-State Relations Division of the Department of Administration, said yesterday that a survey of the community indicated the demand for commuter air service. "I feel there will be quite a bit of local traffic," he asserted, involving industrial, university and general business personnel.

He cited the efforts of the local Chamber of Commerce and the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority as being instrumental in bringing commuter air service to this area. J. T. Little Jr., head of the Authority, said the local airport will render necessary ground support for the service.

Angry Resentment Comes To Fore In Watergate Inquiry

By BROOKS JACKSON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Angri-ly, his voice at times squeaking, Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen poured out his resentment at losing control of the Watergate case to a special prosecutor.

"Damn it, I think it is a reflection on me and the Department of Justice," said Petersen, who rose from messenger to major-domo in 26 years in the department.

Following Petersen's testimony, the Senate Watergate committee recessed Tuesday to an indefinite date after the congressional summer recess ends on Sept. 5. The committee has heard 33 witnesses since it began its televised hearings May 17, but still has not quite finished the first — the Watergate — phase of its three-pronged investigation of presidential campaign practices.

Meanwhile, the committee's chief counsel, Samuel Dash, said the panel was about ready to file its lawsuit asking a federal judge to order President Nixon to supply the committee with tapes and documents relating to Watergate. He said the suit will be filed by Thursday.

Nixon, through his attorneys, told a U.S. District Court judge Tuesday that the courts have no authority to force him to turn over the material in a similar suit, filed by special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

After Petersen erupted in anger over losing the investigation to Cox, he apologized to the committee.

"Excuse my emotions but I have been there too long and this has been a terrible year," he said.

Petersen took charge of the investigation hours after five men were arrested inside Democratic national headquarters at the Watergate complex June 17, 1972.

As head of the criminal division, he supervised the three young prosecutors who gained convictions of the five burglars and two former White House aides — G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt Jr.

Then, when new breaks in the case implicated higher-ups last April, Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst was forced out of the case, and later out of office, because some of the accusations were leveled against his friends. Petersen began reporting directly to the President.

But within weeks the new attorney general, Elliot L. Richardson, fulfilled a promise to the Senate and named Cox as an independent special prosecutor to take over the case.

"You will excuse me, I have to get something off my chest," Petersen told the Watergate committee.

"I resent the appointment of a special prosecutor. Damn it, I think it is a reflection on me and the Department of Justice."

"We would have broken that case wide open and we would have done it in the most difficult of circumstances. And do you know what happened? That case was snatched out from under us when we had it 90 per cent complete ..."

County School Bd. Sets Pupil Fees Despite Suit

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education yesterday, although faced with a suit in U. S. Eastern District Court seeking the suspension of student fees, set fees for the coming year and indicated their intention to continue the policy of collecting the fees—at least until the federal court case has been concluded.

The fee schedule set yesterday includes both fees charged all students and special and subject fees charged students participating in certain activities and classes.

Elementary student fees—to be charged to all students—include $1 for supplementary supplies, 75-cents for library, 50 cents for physical education, 25-cents for music and $3 for workbooks. An insurance fee of $3.25 was set as optional.

Fees charged all high school students include a $1 library fee, $1 supplementary fee, 50-cents instructional fee, a 50-cents audio-visual aids fee and a 50-cents physical education fee with a $3.25 optional insurance fee.

Included among high school special and subject fees is a $2 science fee, a $2.50 agriculture fee, a $3 home economics fee, a $7.50 typing fee, $1 club fees, $3 industrial arts fee, a $15 aviation science fee, a $2.50 shop fee, a fee of $1.50 for physical education locks and a $3 fee for workbooks which is optional to the schools.

Other high school fees include a fee at Farmville Central of $4.50 for distributive education classes, a $3 fee at Farmville and Ayden-Grifton for art and a $10 fee at Farmville for band instruments.

High School students also face fees to cover the cost of cap and gowns, diplomas and gym uniforms.

The board yesterday adopted a resolution of appreciation for service to the board by Sam E. Nelson of Grifton who served as a board member from October 1966 to June 1973.

The resolution, which said "previous to his service on the County Board he had served for nearly a quarter of a century as a member of the Grifton School Committee," cited Nelson for considering "the needs of the entire county rather than just the needs of his home area" and said "his close attention to little things enable him to make significant contributions as an individual member of the board."

The resolution also noted, "his philosophy, which embraced the statement, 'there is a difference between thinking and knowing,' has had a profound effect on the approach taken by the board as it performed its duties," and concluded "be it therefore resolved that Sam E. Nelson will be missed by his fellow board members and the students and employees whom he served."

Mid year and final examinations at the county's high schools were abolished by the School Board yesterday in favor of a new comprehensive examination (with no exemptions) to be given at the end of each six-weeks marking period and the board agreed that the regular time schedule be adhered to on each of the 180 school days with the exception of the last day of school when dismissal of students is to take place at 12 noon.

The board also voted to hold graduation exercises for high schools on Thursday or Friday evening at the discretion of individual high school principals and that graduation for ninth graders be held at 10 a.m. June 5 or on the evening of June 5.

Also approved at yesterday's session was the beginning of condemnation proceedings in order to acquire from five to ten acres of land adjacent to the Bethel Middle School to provide space for expansion at the facility.

Jimmy Stox and Mrs. Curtis Worthington were named to the Winterville Advisory Council yesterday by the school board and Superintendent Arthur S. Alford reported that the Elementary and Secondary Education Act Title I funds have been increased from $520,000 to $950,000 for the Pitt system.

SAM E. NELSON

The Board also approved payment of a $558.33 bill from School Board Attorney W. W. Speight for services rendered in fighting the rate increase requested by Virginia Electric and Power Co. Alford told the board's action in fighting the rate increase had substantially aided all VEPCO customers in the county.

VEPCO had requested increases which would have resulted in an additional $2.5 million in revenue. Increases totaling only $962,000 were granted.

Justice Dept. Tightens Lid In Investigation Of Alleged Agnew 'Payoffs'

By JIM LUTHER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

Tightening the lid on its investigation, the Justice Department has refused to comment on a report that Spiro T. Agnew received $50,000 from private contractors after he became vice president.

The report was carried today by the Knight newspaper chain, which quoted sources as saying federal prosecutors have been told that contractors paid Agnew $1,000 a week over a period of years, and the $50,000 sum after he was elected vice president.

In a story from its Washington bureau, the newspaper chain quoted the source as saying some of the contributions may have been put to Agnew's personal use.

The Justice Department has acknowledged only that Agnew is the subject of a criminal investigation, a fact disclosed Monday night by the vice president himself. He proclaimed his innocence and said he would not comment further.

No charges have been filed against the vice president, and the case, being investigated by U.S. Atty. George Beall of Baltimore, has not been referred to a grand jury.

The investigation involves allegations of bribery, extortion and tax evasion growing out of kickbacks allegedly paid by building contractors and engineers to Maryland and Baltimore County political figures. Republican fund-raising efforts also are involved, but Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson has decided against referring the case to Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

However, Samuel Dash, chief counsel for the Senate Watergate committee, says the panel may investigate the case if fund-raising for last year's presidential election is involved. The committee is empowered to investigate any wrongdoing in connection with the election.

The investigation was started last January, and originally was aimed at political corruption in Baltimore County, where Agnew got his political start.

As a result of the probe, William E. Fornoff, the Baltimore County administrative officer since 1957, pleaded guilty two months ago to a minor tax charge and was granted immunity from further prosecution.

He admitted in court that he funneled cash payments from contractors to an unidentified county official beginning in 1967. Agnew had been elected Baltimore County executive in 1962 and became Maryland governor in 1966.

Fornoff said Tuesday that in no way had he implicated Agnew.

said Jerome B. Wolff, a Baltimore County consultant, "has given federal prosecutors details of alleged payments to Agnew amounting to $1,000 a week."

The story said Beall and his task force, which includes Internal Revenue Service agents, are investigating allegations that: —About $1,000 a week was contributed to Agnew by contractors from 1962 until 1966, and after he was elected governor.

—A contractor gave Agnew $50,000 in 1970 or 1971 for past and possibly future favors. Agnew became vice president on Jan. 20, 1969.

—Agnew campaign fund-raisers solicited contributions from contractors in exchange for state and federal contracts.

Vote To Decide Which County ROANOKE RAPIDS, N. C. (AP)—Voters in the little community of Littleton will go to the polls in November to decide which county they would prefer their town to be in — Warren or Halifax.

They voted Tuesday, 170 to 82, in favor of a change that will put the town, now split by the county line, in one or the other, as authorized by the 1973 General Assembly.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee has recessed until after Labor Day. The hearings so far have:

- Lasted for 37 days of questioning.
—Involved appearances by 35 witnesses.
—Provided testimony totaling more than 7,500 typed doublespaced pages.

Petersen said the prosecutors suspected all along that some cover-up was underway among officials of the Nixon campaign committee.

"There were no records. Things were destroyed. They didn't act like innocent people. Innocent people come in and say, 'Fine, what do you want to know?' It was not like that."

He said he hadn't suspected ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III. And until Dean's accusations, Petersen said he had only one run-in about the case with Ehrlichman, when the then chief presidential domestic adviser tried to order him to quit bothering Nixon campaign finance chief Maurice H. Stans.

After that incident, Atty. Gen. Kleindienst told Ehrlichman he might be accused of trying to obstruct justice. Kleindienst told the committee Tuesday. Kleindienst said the told Ehrlichman to stop meddling in the investigation, and threatened to resign if the President authorized Ehrlichman to give direct orders to the Watergate investigators.

Petersen said he thought that was just a mistake in judgment by Ehrlichman, not part of a cover-up.

Wheels Start Turning On Blood Donor Index; Situation Said 'Grave'

Representatives of 19 organizations and nearby Pitt County communities gathered at the Greenville Moose lodge Tuesday night to make the proposed Blood Donor Pledge Bank Index a reality.

The project involves creation of a file of 5,000 names of prospective donors who could be called upon by bloodmobile sponsors to meet the annual county quotas.

Pathologist Dr. Lee West pictured the current shortage of blood as extremely critical. "During the past 48 hours," he said, Norfolk has been unable to ship us any. Yesterday (Monday) and today and tomorrow we have been asking donors to come to the hospital and give blood. We are literally living from hour to hour; there is no blood available for major emergency needs right now, and a weekend is coming up which could be disastrous for emergency blood needs."

Mrs. Rena Edwards, Blood

Prgram Field Representative for 18 eastern counties affiliated with the Tidewater Blood Bank, said if the Pitt County program could be inaugurated, she would recommend it in other counties of her district who were having trouble meeting their quotas.

Moose project chairman Leon Smith urged those present to take pledge cards and have them promptly returned to the Red Cross office, not only as a step toward the ultimate donor index, but to help provide a base-listing of donors for the forthcoming Bloodmobile visit to Greenville (August 28-29) sponsored by the Jaycees.

"We hope," he said, "that through you, your organizations will join in a massive campaign to sign all the pledges Pitt County needs."

Dr. West elaborated on the county's blood "crisis," by observing that only 3 to 4 per cent of the population gives blood for Pitt as a whole. The demand for blood has been growing, he said. "Seven years ago we needed to fill a quota of 1,000 units; today we require 2,650. Never before have we been as short of blood as we are right now; the situation is as desperate as I have ever seen it."

He reminded that the only source is people, "but today," he said "the trend seems to be that people are not giving all the blood we need, and we are running out of our last red blood cells."

Pitt County Blood Chairman for the Red Cross Billy Ross recalled the county did not meet its quota last year (a quota of 2,360 pints) and this year's quota is still higher with more bloodmobile visits scheduled. "It is essential," he observed, "that more people become involved."

To accomplish that, he said the bloodmobile has been scheduled to visit the four high schools in the county. "There is a good number of 18-year-olds in those schools," said Ross, "and with their participation and (Continued On Page 12)

Bride-To-Be, 59 Wants A Shower

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 By Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I'm actually writing a "Dear Abby" letter, but a friend has just put me on the spot, and I don't know how to handle it.

Sarah is a 59-year-old widow who "fell in love" with a 72-year-old widower she met on a cruise last winter. They are being married soon. She was just here and is as excited as a teen-ager. I think she's flipped her lid. She wants a bridal shower! Abby, Sarah has everything she needs, and she can afford to buy anything she wants, but she insists it's not the gifts, it's just the idea of having a shower.

She said when she was married the first time things were rough, and she never had a shower, and now she'd like one. Sarah is such a dear and generous person I hate to let her down, but Abby, how can I invite women to a bridal shower for a 59-year-old bride who has everything?

ON THE SPOT IN PASSAIC

DEAR ON: Easy. Make it a gag gift shower. Ask everyone to bring a cute little inexpensive present for the 59-year-old bride of a 72-year-old groom. The possibilities are endless. [Also hilarious.]

DEAR ABBY: There's this dude named Nicky I really dig. We are both nearly 16. The other night I called Nicky up because he was home just getting over [of all things] the chicken pox!

The time passed so fast I didn't realize we'd talked for four hours, but this is what I want to say. Nicky said: "Hey, wait a minute, I think somebody's at the front door." Then he came back and said: "My dad is out of town on business and he's been trying to call the house for four hours, and he got so ticked off he called our next door neighbor long distance and asked him to come over here and tell whoever was on the phone to get the h— off!" Naturally, we got off fast, but here's the problem.

Nicky's dad put Nicky on restriction for a whole month: That means we can't go anywhere. Do you think this is a fair punishment for a little thing like that?

FEELS AWFUL

DEAR FEELS: It's a bit stiff. But I'll bet in the future, Nicky either gets his own telephone, or limits his conversations to 10 minutes.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson has been engaged to a lovely girl for a year and they are now making wedding plans. He is 24, and she is 22.

I know that both my grandson and his fiancée would like more than anything else in the world to go on a nice honeymoon, but they can't afford it because they have been buying appliances and household furnishings together.

I told him to let his friends and relatives know that they would rather have a donation toward their honeymoon than a lot of wedding presents, but he says he just couldn't tell them that as it would sound cheap.

What do you think?

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: He's right. He can't ask for money instead of gifts, but as his grandmother, you could suggest it to the relatives.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old unmarried girl and am expecting my third illegitimate baby. I am living at home with my parents. They know about my condition and are disgusted with me. To tell you the truth, I am disgusted with myself.

My problem is I don't know who this baby is by. My mother keeps asking me, and I don't know what to tell her. What on earth shall I tell my doctor when he asks me who the baby's father is? He has to put some name on the baby's birth certificate, and I don't think it's fair to use a name I'm not sure of.

Please help me, Abby, as I am going crazy with worry.

IN DOUBT

DEAR IN: Simply tell your doctor you aren't sure, and let it go at that. He'll understand.

Having A Child After 35 Is Not The Risk It Once Was

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There is new hope for women over 35 who want to have a baby, according to a pioneer researcher in fetology.

Dr. Sheldon Cherry, assistant clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, is a specialist in a new science that focuses exclusively on the unborn. He has studied the womb from conception through labor, and says an unborn child can hear, feel pain, swallow, hiccup and cry.

Not only can Dr. Cherry tell the sex of an unborn child, he can determine in advance its health.

"Many books that are standards for pregnant women today are written by doctors out of touch with the times. The woman over 35 might have been frightened to have a baby 10 years ago. Today, she has a lot going for her, as does any woman having a baby.

"The risk to mothers is practically zero. The risk to the baby is reduced more than ever before. Today we can handle problems with genetic abnormality, primarily Downs syndrome; prolonged labor or other increased risks," Dr. Cherry says.

Dr. Cherry says he felt a need to put together a book for laymen, simple enough to understand, that included advances in his field of expertise — fetology — and information on the Lamaze method of natural childbirth. So he did. His book, "Understanding Pregnancy and Childbirth," is something he says anyone can read and understand.

The youthful looking doctor is assistant attending obstetrician and gynecologist at Mt. Sinai Hospital. He has written papers for medical journals and is a consultant to Zero Population Growth (ZPG).

"That's not as ironic as it may sound," he said. "Fetology, like ZPG, is concerned with quality, not quantity. It comes down to the importance of the patient. I am against wholesale expansion of the population. We don't have the luxury to bring unhealthy babies into the world when we have the means of producing healthy children."

Risk of genetic abnormality in children is associated only with the age of the child's mother, not the father. Down's Syndrome has been enough to frighten many older women away from pregnancy.

"We can now diagnose Down's syndrome early enough in pregnancy to do an abortion if symptoms are present. This is a great advance. I happen to feel that we'll see more and more women who postpone having children until they've had some success in life, in travel, in careers," he added. One of his patients, a 42-year-old ballerina, was recently in his office. Amniocentesis, the key tool of the fetologist, had been performed. The doctor draws out a few ounces of the amniotic fluid which surrounds the fetus and in three weeks the results are available.

Cherry told the patient the baby was a healthy girl. And the parents immediately picked out a name for the baby, whose birth was several months away.

"Now people will find the unborn child human, not amorphous. It can have a name and be more real to them," he added.

Minimizing the risk of genetically abnormal babies through the new procedures has brought the doctor to a more positive attitude about older mothers.

"They're among my favorite patients," he said.

Cherry says one reason he wanted to write a book was "I had nothing to give my own patients to read that had all the information they needed. For example, when my wife was pregnant with our first child (they have four daughters) someone told her that if she raised her hands above her head, she would strangle the baby.

"People still believe these old wives' tales. They need something to dispell the mythology that surrounds pregnancy."

Cherry says his contacts through ZPG and a medical directorship at a women's center abortion clinic helped form his ideas about women.

"My wife is an attorney, but I never thought much about women's liberation. Day to day dealings with some of the radical groups was an education for me. I hope the book reflects some of those changes in attitude," he said.

Advances in birth control, fertility pills, childbirth, hormones and fetology in the past 10 years are things the medical profession can be proud of, Cherry added.

"But if there is one area that needs strengthening, it is our training in psychiatry. I think residents should have six months of it. A lot of day to day office practice is emotional problems. It's the next big area, and I'd like to see us improve what we can offer to women."

There are indications some pace-setting designers on the scene may be trying to make the mid-calf hemline fashion point for fall and winter. Not a fashion statement or dictate. Just a point-meaning women who want the longer hemline for whatever reason will find it available among others in the stores.

The All-Year Summer Look Is In

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
The all-year summer look is replacing the all-year winter look in many homes, at least in one room — sunroom, family room, living room or bedroom. Many sun porches have been winterized for all-year use and some homemakers have turned rooms off the yard into garden rooms all the year using wicker and other casual furniture, light colored fabrics and bright paints. It is more fun in winter to read, keep the family books or play games in a light, airy, summery room.

Why, then, the hangover from Victorian days of dark winter rooms? Then they used heavy portieres and massive overstuffed furniture mainly to keep the house warm. In summer they threw light covers over furniture and used lighter-weight fabrics at windows. Some people still cling to this summer-winter kind of decoration.

Practicality was another reason cited for maintaining the conservative dreariness. But now just about anything used in the home is tubbable or can be made stain resistant for less frequent dry cleaning. And there are endless choices of colors in paints and fabrics.

In boutique settings, a recent collection of fabrics by John Quilter, stylist for Schumacher, illustrated the summer look all the year. There wasn't a dreary fabric in the lot.

For example, an all-year sunroom was decorated in a way that might find its way into any room.

Two fabrics with matching wall coverings and trim were used on ceiling, walls, upholstery, pillows and at windows. There was an old-fashioned look about the strippable, scrubbable quince pattern with its gazebo-like border that was used on the outer wall of the hall at the entrance to the room. Available in cotton, glazed chintz and blended linen and cotton weaves, the design was used also at windows and on pillows. Its bright floral companion was used on the ceilings and on the upholstery of the white wicker furniture.

She Enjoys Kids And Crafts While He's In Space

By CAROLYN CALLAHAN
Women's News Service

HOUSTON (WNS)—Helen Garriott is married to a happy man. When Dr. Owen K. Garriott lifted off the launch pad at Cape Kennedy on July 28 with his Skylab III crewmates, Capt. Alan Bean and Maj. Jack Lousma, he began a 59-day adventure which, in his wife's words, "is the culmination of his whole life's study and work."

Dr. Garriott's field is ionospheric physics which he taught at Stanford before joining the astronaut program in 1965. While he was at Stanford, he worked with NASA's satellite tracking program and helped develop experiments to carry on the satellites. This and his work on solar flares made it "the most logical thing in the world to put him up there where he can look at the ionosphere from a different angle," said Helen Garriott. "This is the perfect flight for him. He's so thrilled, he's like a little boy again. It's exciting to see him around the house because he's so utterly content with what he's doing. The kids tease him about going to 'play' instead of work," she added.

Dumbbell
"He's spent many a night thinking up experiments he can do up there as something extra. Like suspending a dumbbell-like thing in mid-air. As the space-craft goes around the Earth, one end is supposed to go down a little and then back up. . . this is some kind of physics experiment, and don't ask me anything about physics! He'd like to do a lot of these things and (video) tape them for physics classes to demonstrate principles you can't demonstrate down here."

"They going to take up some fish and see if they swim upside down. They think they'll swim in loops in weightlessness. They look like guppies, but they've got another name. . . mullglump, or something like that," she said with a peal of laughter.

(Dr. Garriott's fish are mummichog minnows, or Fundulus Heteroclitus, if you want to get formal. They are descended from a colony raised in a Johnson Space Center lab since early in the Apollo program. Their ancestors were exposed, along with shrimp, mice, and rabbits, to lunar dust returned on the Apollo 11 mission to see if moon rocks carried any contamination harmful to human life. Dr. Garriott is taking up two of the brackish water, fingerling minnows and 50 eggs in a compartmentalized, six-inch-square, polyurethane bag which contains synthetic seawater and oxygen. The eggs should hatch within the first two weeks of the mission.

Hectic
During the final days of training simulations for the mission, before the crew moved into quarantine quarters at JSC on July 8, the hours grew longer and longer. "It's been hectic," admits Helen. Some days he went to work at 7 a.m. and didn't come home until 3 a.m. the next day. And they seldom knew when he'd be home for a meal. With five other people in the family, each with his own busy schedule, she says, "We've been meeting ourselves coming and going."

But it hasn't always been like this. In fact, the life of an astronaut's family is not very different from that of a college professor's, Helen has concluded. And she doesn't feel it has deprived the children—Randy, 18; Robert, 16; Richard, 12 and six-year-old Linda—of their father's company.

"We enjoy doing things as a family and in the summers we take great trips. We all love outdoor activities. Owen and myself and the older boys are checked out for scuba, and we like to go camping."

Summer before last, they spent two weeks on a houseboat at Florida's Pennekamp underwater park scuba diving and snorkeling among the coral reefs. Last summer, they canoed in the wilds of Minnesota, camping by themselves on a tiny island they called "Blueberry Island," for the delicious berries they picked each morning for breakfast.

What will Helen be doing while her husband is orbiting the Earth in Skylab for nearly two months?

Busy
"Well, I'm certainly going to keep busy. I've got all these art things. . . I make ceramics. Randy is managing a little ceramics shop for me this summer, and I'm deeply involved in that. And I like to make jewelry and paint. . . I haven't painted for I don't know how long," said Helen, glancing wistfully at a partly finished canvas on an easel in front of the family room fireplace.

The walls of her comfortable, buff brick home are covered with warm, glowing oils and acrylics—a few abstracts, but most in the realistic style she prefers. Her paintings hang in galleries around the Galveston Bay area and the "Earth Rise" ceramic pot which she designed and has copyrighted is on sale in the local gift shops.

Grand Opening of our remodeled store.

Come in for special opening buys.

10 AM Thursday morning

It is probably no great surprise for our customers to hear that we have been undergoing our first remodeling. The hammering, the painting, the organized confusion have made this pretty obvious. Once in a while someone will ask us, "How long have you been open in Pitt Plaza now?" Would you believe seven years as of August 4? In this fleeting time we have all come a long, long way. The Greenville of today is "the Greenville of tomorrow" . . . seven years ago. We've learned a lot of things from our customers in this period of time, some of it the hard way. Many of the changes in our space allocations of various merchandise departments, the relocations of departments and the customer service modifications were direct results of the comments, suggestions and, yes, criticisms of our thoughtful and concerned customers. We couldn't put all of them into effect, but you can see that we sure are trying. To all of you we say thanks. . . millions!

And now we come to this thing called a "Grand Opening." We really wondered, at first, if we should have such a thing. After all, something opens in Greenville just about every week, and everyone knows by now that we are in Pitt Plaza. . . my goodness, we sure hope they do. But the more we thought about it, the more logical the "Grand Opening" idea seemed to be. Only this one is for a little different reason. What makes a store live and breathe and become a part of the community? Sure, it helps to have value, confidence, service and cooperation, but it really takes a lot more than these things. It takes people; it takes dedicated people who build a part of their lives around their store. In this regard, our store in Greenville is truly blessed. We want to dedicate this "Grand Opening" to all of our splendid associates, in general. However, we have one special person who is officially designated as our "Honoree." Many of you know Vida Crawford who is the head sales-person in our piece goods department. She served you in our other store when it was on Evans Street. It just so happens that Vida (from the stand-point of service) is the senior associate of the entire store. Being the lady that she is, we would not care to discuss age, but August marks another anniversary with Penneys for her. . . her 31st. year of service!

So this is what we are going to do in the morning at our front door at ten o'clock. Vida Crawford is going to cut the ribbon and officially open our remodeled store. Frankly, we don't know whether many folks will show up this early in the morning or not, but we'll all be there giving Vida a big hand. Why don't a lot of you fine folks show up and give her a big hand too? Naturally, there will be some unusually good values in merchandise too.

Must Skirt The Ultimate Test

There can be no doubt that the confrontation now shaping up between the president and the Senate Select Committee over the issue of the president turning over tapes and documents to the committee is serious business.

The Constitution provides for separation of powers of the executive and legislative branches and there is really no provision for Congress demanding presidential papers.

It has come down to the point now, however, where the Senate committee has learned that tape recordings exist of conversations between Nixon and John Dean. Since Dean had testified that the conversations showed Nixon knew of the Watergate coverup, the committee was in a position of having to go after the recordings. Nixon refused to give up the tapes because they were in the category of private presidential papers, and the great confrontation was on.

The matter will now likely go to the courts and it is likely to be considerable time before it is finally decided, ultimately by the U.S. Supreme Court. There is anger to a Constitutional government in the procedure, for if the Supreme Court ultimately rules against the president and orders him to turn over the tapes, who goes and gets them? If he still refuses to turn them over, who furnishes the force and power that is needed to obtain them. Certainly the executive branch of government would not bring the power to bear to demand its own material.

There is plenty of reason to hope that such an ultimate test may not come to pass. It may be years before a final court decision is reached in the impasse. Too, the president has indicated a willingness to turn over some documents and information "relevant to the work of the select committee." This offers hope that grounds for mediation between the executive and legislative branches of government exist in this matter.

If the drama is played out to a final conclusion, though, a real threat to Constitutional government exists. A full-scale power struggle between the branches of government could upset the balance that exists.

Land-Use Will See Big Change

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — You can look for a lot of timber to be cut in eastern North Carolina this late summer and fall as landowners get ready to take advantage of skyrocketing prices for crops—especially soybeans.

In fact, there are those close to the agriculture scene who are predicting tremendous changes in land uses in North Carolina in light of the shifting economic picture for farmers.

During the decade ending in 1967, built-up (urbanized) land in North Carolina doubled to some 1.5 million acres. Since then, experts agree, the same shift has accelerated causing nearly 3 million acres of the state's lands to be turned to urban uses, now.

Wildlife Threatened
More people to feed, less farmland available and spiraling income for farm goods combine, the experts believe, to make it no longer attractive to keep land in timber—or even to protect it for wildlife and fish.

Dick Folsche, assistant state conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is one of those predicting change.

"Nationally, we are losing a million acres every year to urban use, meaning that much less farmland available, since the same qualities which made land suitable for farming also make it suitable for urban development: cleared, relatively level and close to market," Folsche said.

"Down east in North Carolina is one tremendous area that is a real resource for land use which hasn't even been tapped.

"It could actually be one of the most useful resources in the nation in terms of potential development," Folsche said.

Two major steps will be required.

First, the timber will be cut, and soon, Folsche believes.

Secondly, widespread ditching to carry off excess ground water will be required. "It used to that a mule could slog through that stuff, but with today's dependence on mechanization—heavy equipment—for farming, they will have to have dry land," he noted.

Values Collide
"We have got to revamp our thoughts on land use in this state in light of the changing economic picture. But there's going to be a head-on collision between values," Folsche warned. Cutting the timber and putting the land into production is going to drastically alter—even eliminate in some cases—the wildlife in eastern North Carolina.

"There will be a continued battle here, and continued loss or change in the fish and wildlife habitats in the state... and people who back the preservation of fish and wildlife haven't come to grips with the realities of the problems."

"What is the value of the land? That is an economic assessment. What will people pay to go hunting or fishing? Until this state depletes its resources (available wildlife lands) to the degree that keeping land for wildlife will pay... then the shift is obvious," Folsche feels.

Those who seek to preserve wildlife lands by pressuring private landowners not to develop are engaging in wishful thinking. "Not that many people really want it, and we simply can't afford that luxury," Folsche feels.

Public Land
The only reasonable solution Folsche sees is a speedup in acquisition of public lands. "If preserving wildlife is a public good, then the wildlife should be housed on public lands."

"If North Carolina really wants these things, they will have to put money into it. If the public really wants areas for fish and wildlife they are going to have to buy it," he said.

Nationally, 40 per cent of the land is publicly owned—but that is outweighed by Alaska and some western states where the great majority of the land is owned by the federal government. In the east and Southeast where most of the population is, there is less public land.

In North Carolina only eight per cent of the acreage is publicly owned. Folsche hopes to see some shift in that direction.

"We could come out with better fish and wildlife resources if conservationists, farmers, landowners—everybody—would get together to work it out."

There is federal money available on a 50-50 split to help buy public lands for fish and wildlife preservation.

"We have this cost-share money available if local people want to preserve these land use values—money to help on land acquisition and development. So far, there is zero dollars being used in North Carolina," Folsche said.

White House Versus O'Brien

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Immediately after Lawrence F. O'Brien filed his Watergate suit as Democratic national chairman, President Nixon's senior aides developed an obsessive interest in causing tax troubles for him.

According to reliable sources from the White House, O'Brien became Enemy No. 1 there after the Watergate burglary. It was O'Brien who then led the political attack to connect the crime with President Nixon's high command. Fearful about what might be uncovered through O'Brien's law suit against the Committee to Reelect the President, Nixon aides responded by planning a counterattack against him.

The Senate Watergate hearings have revealed that the White House probed private sources of income for O'Brien, unpaid as national chairman. But the hearings did not develop that presidential aides conferred at length about intensifying Internal Revenue Service (IRS) pressure on O'Brien. This pressure was reflected in memoranda which may still be in White House files.

O'Brien's tax troubles began after his election on March 5, 1970, for a second hitch as Democratic national chairman. The IRS ordered an audit of his 1969 tax return. In 1971, the IRS audited his 1970 return. Neither audit produced significant additional revenue for the government. But after the Watergate return—again, without significant recapture of taxes.

O'Brien's accountant, an experienced tax practitioner, informed him the audits were conducted with unprecedented intensity. But non-biased tax experts believe it will be very difficult to positively link the IRS audits with the White House obsession to get O'Brien.

Waiting For Martin
The continued isolation of President Nixon from the outside world, perhaps more intense than ever since the Watergate scandal broke, unnecessarily prolonged a dangerous vacuum of U.S. leadership in Vietnam.

That vacuum began last March when Graham Martin, U.S. ambassador to Italy, was named to replace Ellsworth Bunker as ambassador to South Vietnam. Bunker, completing a long and distinguished tenure in Saigon, thus became a lame duck at critical moment in Vietnam. He left his post May 11, but a slow-moving Senate did not confirm Martin as his successor until June 14—extending the vacuum another full month.

Martin was prepared to leave for his new post immediately after conferring with Mr. Nixon. But Martin, like many officials before him with a similarly important need to see the President, simply could not obtain an appointment. After cooling his heels in Washington for a full month, Martin finally was granted an appointment with Mr. Nixon for Thursday, July 12.

But on July 12, the President was hospitalized with viral pneumonia. Martin left Washington July 15, without the benefit of having conferred with Mr. Nixon, arriving in Saigon July 17 to finally end the vacuum.

In the view of worried U.S. officials in Vietnam, the absence of a permanent ambassador in Saigon contributed to an absence of U.S. policy at a time when the Communists were skillfully using the ceasefire to improve their military position and develop a "Third Vietnam" within the borders of South Vietnam.

Connally Moves
Former Gov. John B. Connally of Texas has quietly embarked on a path many close friends predicted he would never take: the rubber chicken banquet circuit to establish his new credentials as a Republican—possibly a Republican presidential candidate.

Connally gave state Republican headquarters in Austin, Texas, the green light about a month ago to start scheduling appearances for him across the country. Out of hundreds of requests pouring into Austin (as many as 60 in one week), Connally has accepted two so far: the kickoff banquet of the Republican state convention in San Diego, Calif., Sept. 8, and the annual Trunk and Tusk Republican dinner in Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 16. There will be many more.

Such appearances are essential for ex-Democrat Connally to melt the reserve of Republican regulars if he is to have any chance for the COP presidential nomination in 1976. But many veteran Connally-watcher felt his distaste for grubby campaigning would preclude such a necessary course. The fact that he is going on the burdensome banquet circuit is clear evidence of presidential ambitions.

Strength For Today

LET THE MOTOR IDLE
Every time I see a person racing his motor while the car is standing still I think of the scores of people I encounter every week who seem to be tearing themselves to pieces with inconsequential. Sometimes they fly into rages about nothing; at other times they worry about imaginary ills and anticipate the coming of dreadful catastrophes.

Some people just can't let a motor idle. They have to rev it up to see how it sounds. By the same token, many people just can't let themselves alone. Their motors are always running about five times faster than necessary.

If you read the Gospels carefully, you will see that our Lord counseled people not so much against the sins of the flesh as against those attitudes of mind—anxiety, anger, discouragement, melancholy, etc.—which predispose people to many of the diseases which we ravish modern life, such as high blood pressure and heart trouble.

NERVE RACKING, TO SAY THE LEAST!

By ART BUCHWALD

The President Blew It

WASHINGTON — John Ehrlichman testified before the Senate Watergate committee two weeks ago that it was "well within both the constitutional duty and the obligation of the President" for the White House aides to break into the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's former psychiatrist.

Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. of North Carolina disputed this interpretation of the President's power and argued there was nothing in the law which gives the President the right to suspend the Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Since this is a great constitutional issue, I sought out my old law professor, Heinrich Applebaum, who holds the Chair of Jurisprudence at the Watergate Technical Institute of Perjury. "Professor, who is right in the constitutional dispute between Sen. Ervin and John Ehrlichman?" "They're both right, and they're both wrong." "What kind of answer is that?" "Well, Ehrlichman is right in saying the President of the United States has the duty and obligation to break into anybody's psychiatrist's office that he wants to. But he's wrong in saying that White House aides could do it for the President."

"Do you mean if the President wanted Ellsberg's psychiatric records, he had to break into the office himself?" "That is correct. He had to perform the burglary personally. Otherwise it would be considered illegal."

"But isn't that kind of hard for a President to do?"

"The writers of your Constitution didn't want to make it easy. They knew that every President of the United States at one time or another would have a desire to break into a psychiatrist's office. It's something that no man in power can resist. So they provided that the act itself had to be committed only by the President. The writers of the Constitution assumed that this would keep most Presidents from using the power unless it was absolutely necessary."

"Now, had President Nixon borrowed a wig and a camera and tools from the CIA and gone to Dr. Fielding's Beverly Hills office, broken into the files and retrieved the Ellsberg records, he would be acting within the law. But the fact that the President turned over the mission to two White House plumbers was his undoing. As a lawyer he should have known that."

"John Ehrlichman's lawyer, John Wilson, has argued that the President has a vast reservoir of power given to him by Congress which makes it possible for the President to commit what would otherwise be an unlawful act for national security," I said. "Do you agree with this?"

"I certainly do. When it comes to national security, the President can mug, steal and commit arson as long as he is protecting American citizens."

"How do you arrive at that?" "Because, as Ehrlichman's lawyer has so well pointed out, the courts have never ruled he couldn't do it. Now the President cannot commit

Other Editors Say The Buyers Explain

(Henderson Dispatch)

Some spokesmen for buying interests have offered an explanation of the lower tobacco prices on Eastern Carolina markets, creating dissatisfaction among growers. Only two markets in the Eastern Belt operated last week, while a few others began selling this Tuesday.

Buyer views reported are that quality is lower than at last year's opening. Mostly primings have appeared on the market, and much of that is said to have been sandy and off color as to quality. Devaluation of the American dollar has placed domestic buyers at a disadvantage, it is said, while valuation upward of the German mark and the Japanese yen have favored those two countries, which are among the largest foreign buyers of U. S. flue-cured leaf.

Buyers who have expressed an opinion say that when offerings get away from the bottom leaves and move upward on the stalk, quality will improve and prices will advance.

Senator Herman Talmadge of Georgia has said that an investigation by his Senate Agriculture Committee of alleged "collusion" between buyers on Georgia auction centers has turned up nothing of a definite character to substantiate the reports.

Prices have reached an all-time high in the Georgia Belt and have been satisfactory in the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt thus far in the season. Early reports before the marketings began were that the Georgia crop had been retarded in development by cold weather and excessive rain, but that did not affect prices appreciably.

This year's crop is expected to be larger than last year due to an increase in quotas. But fears have been expressed that the next government crop report will show prospects of smaller yields than anticipated a month ago. Should that develop it would be bullish as to prices. The forecast is due this Thursday from the U. S. Crop Reporting Service.

Growers, like every one else in other areas, have experienced higher costs in producing the 1973 drop, and unless they can receive favorable prices will suffer proportionately.

What They're Telling Citizens

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — There is hardly a group in this country that doesn't have a pet educational project, a sense of mission to communicate the word as revealed to it or to correct what it feels are assumptions of the ignorant.

The Chamber of Commerce and the Tax Foundation never cease their efforts to educate the public to the dangers of government spending and deficits and taxes. Automakers preach religiously the doctrine of greater productivity. And construction workers hammer away at what they feel is a myth about their high pay scales.

Here are a few recent examples of the genre:

1. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States. "As the 1974 fiscal year began July 1, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reset its Federal Spending Clock to run at an accelerated pace.

"The reason is that Federal spending this fiscal year is estimated to increase by approximately $19 billion, up to $269 billion.

"Rapidly changing digital figures across the top of the clock indicate how much the Federal government has spent since the beginning of the fiscal year. Each day the clock registers expenditures of approximately $736 million.

"Here's what the reset clock now shows: '$10,000, nearly the average annual income of a typical American family, spent every 1.17 seconds, displayed by a sweeping dial.

"$100,000, spent every 11.7 seconds, by a light flashing on.

"$1 million, spent every one minute and 57 seconds, by a beep sounding."

2. If the sweeping dial, flashing light and beep-beep of your dollars being spent hasn't bogged your mind, you might consider the following preachment of construction workers.

Called "The Perpetual Myth About Construction Costs," it was presented in the latest edition of "Viewpoint," a publication of the AFL-CIO, by Francis Burkhardt, research director for the International Brotherhood of Painters & Allied Trades.

"If someone makes $8 an hour, he must be making $16,000 per year—right? Wrong. If he's a fulltime construction worker, his work-year only averages 1,400 hours, and of the $9 union hourly rate, he never sees $1.10. This amount goes into funds to pay for health and welfare and pension benefits.

"So now we have a $7.90 wage rate, times 1,400 hours, or $9,940 per year," Burkhardt states, adding that this average is for only fulltime, year-round workers. Part-time summer workers are excluded.

Citing Bureau of Labor Statistics data, he concludes that union tradesmen can expect to earn on the average between $8,000 and $12,000 in 1973, depending on their craft.

Violence Accompanies Brazil's Beef Shortage

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer
RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Brazil is having a beef shortage, too, and butcher shops are being robbed, meat trucks hijacked and cattle rustled. Burglars walked off with 1,000 pounds of meat one night last week from Hortencio Figueiredo's shop in Sao Paulo, Brazil's biggest city. They did not touch the $83 in the cash register. "It must have been because of the meat shortage," Figueiredo told police. Theoretically, Brazil's 100 million people should have steak every day. Their huge country has 90 million cattle and vast grazing ranges. But due to a lack of modern ranching methods, Brazil suffers from periodic shortages of beef. In the southern state of Rio Grande do Sul, Jose dos Santos, who works for a meat packing company, screeched his truck to a halt to avoid hitting huge rocks which were put in the middle of the highway. Four men with guns jumped out of some bushes, took 800 pounds of beef from Santos' truck and sped away in a waiting car. Ranchers in the east-central state of Minas Gerais report a wave of cattle rustling. A number of butcher shops have been held up in Porto Alegre, in southern Brazil, with beef the principal loot. Police believe the robbers were butchers who couldn't get supplies from wholesalers. Brazilians love beef. Shoppers this week ignored specials in Rio and Sao Paulo supermarkets on chicken, turkey, rabbit, goat, duck, fish and alligator. Instead, they waited in long lines to buy frozen beef which was distributed to retailers under government orders to alleviate the shortage. The shortage caused the government to impose a $200-a-ton export tax on beef and it finally prohibited exports for the rest of 1973. A pound of filet now costs about $1.40 in Rio. This is cheap by U. S. standards but is expensive in Brazil where the per capita income is $500 a year—about one-eighth of the United States.

'Adjust' Price Of Natural Gas

By RANDY SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying they sought to balance consumer and investor interest, the Federal Power Commission has approved a new rate schedule more than doubling the production ceiling price for much of the natural gas shipped to southwestern and midwestern states. The rate schedule affects prices at the wellhead. The FPC specifically refused to speculate as to the affect of the change on gas rates to the consumer. The new ceiling concerns only natural gas produced from the Permian Basin in West Texas and parts of New Mexico. Gas produced from this field serves the Pacific Southwest, New Mexico, Texas and two midwestern pipelines—Natural Gas Pipeline and Northern Natural Gas. The rate approved calls for an increase from 16.5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to 35 cents on gas produced under contracts dated since Oct. 1, 1968. Gas produced under contracts drawn before that date had its ceiling price increased from 14.5 to 23 cents. "It is only in this manner that we can attempt to alleviate increasing pipeline curtailments and assure adequate and safe service to meet consumer demands," the commission wrote in its decision. Since the action by the FPC affects ceiling prices, it will not necessarily change prices under current sales contracts. However, as new contracts are signed or old ones renegotiated, the prices included could be expected to move toward the new ceilings.

Pie In Face Of Young Prophet

DETROIT (AP) — A 15-year-old self-styled prophet took it calmly when a young American radical threw a pie in his face. Pratap Singh Rawat was reported to have urged his bodyguards not to apprehend the pie-thrower, a 22-year-old reporter for a local underground paper. Pat Halley threw the pie after he approached the young guru, apparently to present him with flowers Tuesday at a Detroit Common Council testimonial meeting. Halley dropped the flowers, took aim and delivered his irreverent greeting. He escaped despite attempts to stop him. Halley, who described himself as a libertarian-socialist, called the guru "a slick businessman on an ego trip."

More Fish On American Table

WASHINGTON (AP) — In spite of all the talk about exhausted fisheries, Americans are eating more fish. The per capita consumption in 1972 was 12.2 pounds, says the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, against 11.4 pounds in 1971.

ECU Alumnus Gives $10,000

L.M. TAYLOR

East Carolina University Alumni Loyalty Fund today announced it has received a $10,000 gift from Luther M. "Luke" Taylor, a 1957 alumnus. The gift will be used to supplement state allocated funds in furthering development of the university, according to Donald Y. Leggett, ECU Alumni Association director.

Taylor is a partner in the law firm of Ryan, Taylor and Law in North Palm Beach, Fla. The son of Mrs. L.M. Taylor of North Palm Beach and the late Mr. Taylor, he received a degree in Physical Education and Social Studies at East Carolina and the degree of Juris Doctor from the College of Law at Stetson University. He is married to former Joan Brower and they have two sons, Daniel, 12 and Martin, 10.

"This gift is an outstanding expression of Luke's loyalty and dedication to his alma mater and to its academic progress," said Dr. Leo Jenkins, ECU Chancellor. "Luke's success in his chosen field is indicative of the spirit of achievement which causes us to be so proud of our alumni."

Dead Sea Adds Health Resort

By KENNETH L. LUCOFF
EIN BOKEK, Israel (UPI) — The shores of the Dead Sea are coming alive again, this time as a health resort area for sufferers of skin and muscle diseases.

Tourist and hotel workers now populate the grainy white shoreline where residents of Sodom and Gomorrah, the twin sin cities, once lived.

A multi-million dollar health spa is rising along the shore not far from where the Bible says Lot's wife was turned into a pillar of salt for looking back on the fire and brimstone destruction of the two cities.

Today, several thousand tourists use the mineral baths and mineral mud together with the year-round warm, sunny weather to cure what ails them.

Massive Development Effort
"We're making a massive effort to develop this as a world famous treatment center for people coming to cure skin and other problems," said Mandy Porat, head of the government company overseeing the area's development.

So far, two new hotels have been completed and, within a couple of years, six more will surround newly-built hot springs, mud baths and treatment centers opposite the shimmering glare of the sea.

Not all doctors agree that the chemical properties of the Dead Sea and the mud below it can cure illnesses, but enough of them support the belief to recommend the area to patients suffering from such ailments as psoriasis, acne, blemishes, arthritis, rheumatism and nervous system problems.

Danish health authorities have even approved the salt water and sunshine treatment for members of their national health insurance program—and pay for 30-day trips to the sea, the lowest exposed point on earth at 1,300 feet below sea level.

Denmark's only woman building and sewer inspector, Eve Henriksen, said the combination of sun and mineral baths cleared up her skin blemishes and peeling over much of her arms and back.

Cure Testimonial
"My government has sent me here twice for treatment," she said, "and for the first time in more than 20 years of this trouble—ointments, pills, shots and other cures—the sun and water here finally cured me."

According to the tourism ministry, one of the main promoters of the cure idea, the sea is made up of two-thirds water and one-third solid chemicals such as fluorides, chlorides, bromides, iodides, ammonium, sodium, potassium, calcium, magnesium, iron and other properties fed into it by underground springs.

Even if the mineral content of the sea doesn't cure you, 30 days of sun bathing and salt baths can't be all that bad. And, Porat said, if nothing else works, at least the 100-degree water of Ein Not Springs, with its natural laxative properties, should have some effect.

Eleventh High Official With Corrections Dept. Dismissed

RALEIGH (AP)—The firing of Shelby prison Supt. Ralph Scism Tuesday was the 11th ouster, through dismissals or retirement and resignations under pressure, since Jan. 1 of high-level correctional officials.

Scism's dismissal by R. K. Hays, area administrator for the Department of Corrections, was clouded by confusion over the reasons for his ouster.

Scism, a Democrat, contended he was fired because of allegations he had held political rallies at his home.

Prison officials said Scism was dismissed because of alleged misuse of state property. In Raleigh Ralph Edwards, the acting commissioner of corrections, said Scism was fired because he had falsified his personal work records.

"These charges are false," Scism said.

The list of departed prison officials is headed by V. Lee Bounds, who resigned last month as commissioner of corrections. Bounds, hired in 1965 and retained through two Democratic administrations, said his position was untenable in the current Republican administration of Gov. Jim Holshouser.

The Office of Corrections supplied the following list of other high level officials who have been replaced since Jan. 1:

—Elvin Thomas Aiken, a Raleigh accountant, dismissed for "incompetency."

—Everett L. McBryde of Wadesboro, a probation officer, dismissed for "improper assignment of duties to subordinates involving personal work during normal work hours."

—Hoyt B. Nichols, superintendent of the Nash County Advancement Center, dismissed for political activity.

—Elton Roy Peele, director of the computer center in Raleigh, dismissed for "inefficiency in performance of duties."

—Grady Williams, superintendent of the Lincoln County prison unit, dismissed for "personal misconduct."

—Robert L. Turner, a major in the corps of correctional officers at Odum Prison, retirement requested after the escape of a prisoner.

—James C. White Jr., director of new programs research, resignation requested. White was a former area administrator in Morganton.

—Sarah W. Whitley of Morganton, director of special education and training, resignation requested.

John Harrison, who was not on the state list, also resigned as western area administrator in June at the request of Bounds. At the time Bounds said he acted "for the good of the service."

Similar reasons were given for the action against White and Mrs. Whitley.

In Shelby Scism said his dismissal was ordered after an inspection Monday by Hays and inquiries twice before by prison officials. Hays denied that Scism's dismissal involved political activity, but declined to cite specific reasons.

Scism said he was accused of taking five days of unapproved vacation time last year, but that he was told he could do so by a supervisor to make up for time spent at a prison seminar in Raleigh.

Asked about the dismissal, Edwards said Scism had submitted reports showing he was "on duty for sometimes up to a week at a time when in fact he was not."

Scism said the charge of misusing state property apparently stemmed from his use of a prison radio and a power saw. Both were returned the day they were borrowed, he said.

"I feel like my rights have been violated, and I'm sure in my mind that this is politically motivated," Scism said.

Scism is a Democrat.

Scott Fears Public Awareness Missing

RALEIGH (AP)—Former Gov. Bob Scott says the General Assembly under its interim committee system is "drafting and acting on legislation" without the knowledge and needed input of the public, lobbyists and consumer groups.

"I'm concerned that the people don't know what's going on," Scott said in an interview. "A lot of legislation is being shaped by these committees even though the legislature isn't in town."

The 1973 General Assembly set up interim committees to prepare legislation for action when it returns to Raleigh next January. In addition, the Senate has adopted rules permitting senators to introduce legislation during the interim for consideration by one of the committees.

Backers of the system say it should speed up the legislative process next January, but Scott said he fears that important bills can pass critical legislative hurdles without the knowledge of the public, special interest groups or the press.

"The public gets the impression that the legislators have gone home," Scott said. "But they are actually doing a lot of work in the public interest. The public ought to be informed."

Scott said "a lot of folks who might have something to say on some of these measures may not know what's happening."

Stennis Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John C. Stennis has returned to his office for the first time since he was shot in a robbery in front of his home Jan. 30.

"This is my first venture toward returning to my duties in a slight way," the 72-year-old Mississippi Democrat said Tuesday at his second news conference since leaving the hospital last week.

Police Take To Aerial Patrols

By BOB JONES
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP) — "Beep!" ... "Beeeeeep!"
The double tone on the police band radio signals the two patrolling officers an important message is about to be relayed.
"All units in the central zone: A bank alarm has been tripped at 12th and Baltimore. Units in the area, please respond."
The officer on the left of unit N9522F swings the vehicle toward the address while the man on the right scans the ground, looking for unusual activity like a speeding car.
It is a routine police response to an alarm. Except that N9522F is a Hughes model 300 helicopter cruising at 50 miles an hour 500 feet above the city and the officers form the Sky ALERT patrol, whose territory is the entire seen-county metropolitan area.
ALERT is an acronym for Aerial Law Enforcement Response Team. Areas that it regularly patrols showed a 26 per cent drop in crimes last year and the patrol is credited with being a significant factor in the city's 11 per cent decrease in crime.
The city, which was the first to have a regular helicopter patrol, has six Model 300s in its fleet and one is available 24 hours a day.
Commander of the unit is Capt. Willia. H. Moulder, a department veteran at 39 who was one of the original members of the force chosen to become a helicopter pilot in early 1967. None of the original three had previous flight training.

There are areas with high crime rates that are patrolled regularly while other areas receive infrequent checks, Moulder said.
The unit has 11 pilots, including four supervisors and 11 observers. A pilot and an observer are teamed and, just as in patrol cars, work together all the time both are assigned to the unit.
A pilot-observer's eight-hour shift is broken up into four parts: two hours flying, two hours on the ground, two hours flying, two hours on the ground.
When on the ground the men fill out reports, study lists of stolen cars, read data and perform other duties related to work.
To get in the unit, a member of the regular police force must apply and be placed on a list to become an observer. To be eligible he has to have at least two years on the force and not more than 15.

A man must be an observer at least one year to become eligible to be a pilot. Upon appointment as a pilot a man is sent to California where the receives 40 hours of flight instruction and returns to Kansas City for the remainder of the 150 hours needed for a commercial license.
Observers also receive special training.
The salary range for a pilot is $13,250 to $13,908 annually; an observer is paid the same as patrolman, $8,988 to $12,612.
Last year the unit logged 5,974 hours in the air, 5,550 on patrol. Helicopters also are used in test flights, surveillance, photo flights and demonstrations. Crews aided ground units more than 7,000 times on car checks, robbery and burglar alarms, car chases and other things.
The helicopter is called on frequently at night because it is equipped with lights that generate 1.2 million candle power.
Veterans in the unit stress that the helicopter is just a tool in the police arsenal and they are there only to assist the officer on the ground.

Some Drink Kerosene

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Each year an estimated 28,000 children under five swallow kerosene and what troubles physicians is how much coal oil did the child swallow, because treatment may be different if he swallowed a large amount.
Radiologists at Duke University Medical Center here reviewed the x-ray studies of 52 young patients who had swallowed kerosene and noticed a double fluid level in 22 youngsters' stomachs which led them to a laboratory experiment that my provide an answer to the medical puzzler.
Drs. Richard H. Daffner and John P. Jimenez poured three-fifths of a pint of water into a plastic bag shaped like a stomach and then added kerosene in one-fourth teaspoon amounts (1 milliliter). They radiographed the bag in an upright position in front of a phantom abdomen after adding each amount and found that the x-ray study revealed a double fluid level (oil atop water) when one and a quarter teaspoons had been added.
They recommend giving patients who have swallowed kerosene a large glass of water prior to x-ray examination to help show the double fluid level on the developed film so that proper treatment can be given.

Most Of Crop In Frozen Juice

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — More than 90 per cent of the Florida orange crop is used in production of processed products, mainly frozen concentrated orange juice, according to the Florida Cannery Association. Processors also use more than 60 per cent of the grapefruit crop and more than 30 per cent of the tangerine production.

Study Help For The Retarded In Animal Behavior

By ALAN WILSON
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A research team at George Peabody College is setting its scientific sights on developing ways to help mentally retarded children—by surrounding itself with a controlled but unpredictable world of snakes, rodents and monkeys.

Working through a maze of laboratory hallways, cubicles and cages, the team cautiously tampers with animal behavior and uses federal money as part of a two-pronged study of animal emotions and environment.

One phase of the team's research involves severing the ear nerves of infant monkeys, thereby rendering their faces expressionless and preventing them from giving facial threats and fear grins.

The findings from this particular experiment, though inconclusive, have strongly hinted at a connection with retarded children.

In the second phase, a network of gadgetry is assembled with levers, buttons, slides and sounds—all manipulated by a monkey colony.

A few feet away, isolated by a tall cinder block wall, exists another small monkey colony. This colony gets the same stimuli but it can't produce it, as can the other because it has no levers to pull or buttons to push.

"The question is, 'Can they learn more quickly if they live with the controlled order as opposed to if they haven't?'" says Dr. Hardy Wilcoxon, the team's coordinator.

This second phase of Peabody's psychobiology lab study deals with the effects of an environment. The first, more developed, phase puts a microscope on the communication of emotions.

"Monkeys that can't signal with their faces tend to get into more fights and have less prosocial behavior," said Wilcoxon, whose team works out of the school's John F. Kennedy Center for Research and Human Development.

Noting that retarded children often are virtually expressionless, he said:

"It isn't too unusual to suppose that problems in families are related to differential treatment of retarded kids because of their appearance." But Wilcoxon emphasized that Peabody has yet to explore that end of it.

Options 'Open' For Rockefeller They'll Tell Automatically

BOSTON (AP) — Automated teller devices, standing alone or embedded in building walls, are gaining rapid favor among U.S. bankers, Arthur D. Little Inc. reports.

First introduced in Europe and Japan several years ago, the card-activated devices for 24-hour banking service first appeared in this country in 1968. Today there are more than 1,000 automated tellers in U.S. banks, and probably twice that many more are on order.

"That leap from animals to kids is enormous and we don't like to do it precipitously," said Wilcoxon, a scientist for 25 years.

About two years ago, Wilcoxon and his associates made a discovery in animal behavior

Options 'Open' For Rockefeller

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller says he's keeping his options open for a possible bid for the presidency in 1976.

"I devoted 27 years to government... and my basic interest is the future of the country and its role in the world," he said. He unsuccessfully sought the Republican nomination in 1964 and 1968.

Rockefeller told a news conference Tuesday that he also was keeping his options open on seeking a fifth term as governor.

which refuted a long-founded theory. It also helped trigger much of their present ideas and experimentation.

In laymen's terms the discovery deals with animal responses.

The team proved that an animal's responses to a given environment will effect his future responses—even if the original response is not an immediate one.

That is, if a bird eats something and moments later gets sick, it will eventually learn not to eat it. Wilcoxon and his associates uncovered the fact that the response does not have to be immediate in order for the animal to avoid eating something that makes it ill.

The relevancy of their discovery to retarded children is not difficult to see—for it deals with the process of learning, and how long and difficult it can be, or seems to be. In other words, Wilcoxon indicated, if a retarded person's responses aren't immediate, that doesn't necessarily mean the person isn't learning.

"If we get away from the notion that everything a child learns must be on the basis of immediate consequences, it seems to me there would be indirect application of our discovery," he said.

By creating certain habitats and environments for animals to cope with, the researchers can not only observe certain responses but understand them better. At Peabody, it's done with different species of rodents and snakes and with Rhesus monkeys, a belligerent animal which travels in packs in India.

From this, says Wilcoxon, scientists may learn how to "modify the behavior of kids who are behavior problems."

It boils down, he said, "to what kind of stimuli are you going to provide a retarded child with that would benefit him with learning."

"The basic principles of learning worked out in lab settings with animals can be applied in certain situations with some profit. But I want to insist that we don't know all of them yet."

Wilcoxon stressed that the team's research only deals partly with trying to find ways to understand human behavior. Making the connection between animals and humans, he said, is often elusive and inconclusive.

Thus comes the ancient problems faced by all scientists: "To what extent would a scientist endeavor to head right at the practical problem and to what extent should he seek to uncover basic principles," he said.

"Man is the most curious of all living organisms," he said, "and seems to delight in understanding nature."

"After you find out how it works, there's some practical application of it."

"But we're not really in the business of practical application."

The business of most researchers, once they get beyond discovery of principles, is striving to make indirect applications of the principles, he said.

"Almost anybody can make a case that there's very little direct payoff. It's not hard to persuade a congressman of that," he said, referring to another ancient problem faced by researchers—obtaining money.

"There's where you have to face up to the kinds of indirect affects of your findings. There are always lot of links in the chain."

EMPTY PENS—Cattle pens are virtually empty at the usually busy St. Joseph (Mo.) Stock Yards. The shortage of beef has caused one packing plant in St. Joseph to close, putting about 900 employees out of work. (AP Wirephoto)

Moeller To Assume Post

H.G. Moeller, coordinator of the East Carolina University correctional services program, will attend the annual meeting of the American Correctional Association in Seattle, Wash., later this month, where he will assume an executive position with the ACA.

Moeller is one of four newly elected directors representing institution of higher learning who were elected by a mail ballot of 7,000 members.

He will also deliver a paper to the gathering on "Managing Correctional Change, with Special Reference to Emerging Rights of the Offender" and chair a meeting of the ACA Research Council of which he is vice chairman.

The ACA, founded 103 years ago, is the professional organization whose membership includes representatives of agencies and institutions concerned with the organization of correctional programs for the prevention and control of delinquency and crime.

Before joining the staff of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions, Moeller was Deputy Director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.

Packer Closes Rather Than Buy Black Market

By ROBERT A. FASCE
Associated Press Writer
RUSHVILLE, Ill. (AP) — "The only way I could have hung on was to buy black market beef," says Ted Bartlow. "But I can't do it, I won't do it. I decided when this beef crisis started I'd rather close than resort to that."

Bartlow, with his brother Bill, is a partner in Bartlow Brothers, Inc., an independent meat packing firm that closed down this week.

They served small stores and supermarkets in towns with populations ranging from 100 to 3,000 and drew from a supply of beef and hogs produced by thousands of small farmers in a 100-mile area.

The closing of the plant and the loss of jobs for its 160 workers completed a chain of events that began at the end of May when Bartlow decided to halt his slaughtering operation. "We had lost about $130,000 at the end of March, the end of our fiscal year," he says. "And we lost more than that during the next few months that followed."

Bartlow says it had come to the point where he was operating at a loss just to bring a hog to slaughter, without even touching the animal. The prices he paid per hundredweight became oppressive under the former Phase 3 limits of the Nixon administration's Economic Stabilization Program.

Bartlow's prices for processed meat were frozen at their March 29 levels. But the cost to him for livestock on the hoof continued to spiral.

"When you can't cover your overhead, something has to give," he said. That something was about one-third of his employees.

Bartlow says Phase 4 was the fatal blow to his business. He had hoped to keep going until the ceiling price on red meat was lifted Sept. 12, but he saw no way to recover the losses he had already incurred.

He may have to sell if there is a buyer available "when it's all over."

Bartlow feels the three greatest paradoxes to emerge from the situation are:

"How come the farmer is getting the highest prices in history for his livestock yet he is losing money? How come the average consumer today has more money in his pocket but can't buy? How come corporations are showing the greatest profits ever yet the stock market is so often depressed?" He has no answer.

SENATOR INOUE — Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, with his glasses around his neck listens to testimony; and holds part of a document in his mouth before beginning his questioning. (AP Wirephoto)

Overcoming Obstacles Is An Inouye Tradition

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Born in a Chinese ghetto in Honolulu, severely wounded in combat in World War II and a self-starter in politics, Daniel Ken Inouye has spent his lifetime overcoming obstacles. But he claims that he never felt handicapped.

After 14 years in the Congress, the last 11 in the Senate, the 48-year-old Democrat from Hawaii has recently gained the attention of the nation as a member of the Senate Watergate committee.

It is not his first national public exposure. Inouye was the keynote speaker at the 1968 Democratic National Convention and briefly figured as a possible vice presidential candidate until, according to aides, he discouraged the idea.

And the incident last week, when an angry defense lawyer in the Watergate hearing caustically referred to Inouye as "that little Jap," wasn't the first time he has faced racial prejudice.

A first generation American whose laborer-father had emigrated to Hawaii from Japan at the age of four, Inouye was 17 at the time of Pearl Harbor and remembers that day—the Japanese planes overhead, the antiaircraft guns, and the hours he spent working in a first aid station taking care of the wounded.

Japanese Americans in Hawaii were not subjected to the same panic-nurtured prejudice that sent thousands in California to internment camps, but for several years they were not permitted to serve in the armed forces.

When that barrier finally was lifted, Inouye was among the first volunteers, and wound up as a member of the Army's 442nd Regimental Combat Team, the all-Nisei "Go For Broke" unit that won more decorations than any other in World War II.

Starting as a private and later earning a battlefield commission, Lt. Inouye was wounded in northern Italy a few weeks before V-E day. He came home without his right arm, but with the Distinguished Service Cross, the second highest medal for valor.

His ambition to become a surgeon shattered, Inouye turned to law and entered politics as a member of Hawaii's Territorial House of Representatives where he became majority leader.

After statehood in 1959 he became Hawaii's first congressman and the first Japanese American ever elected to Congress.

He tells the story of how House Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas described himself as "the best-known man in Washington" and told Inouye that he would become the second best-known because, as Rayburn explained it: "There are not too many one-armed Japanese congressmen."

With a popularity that has seen him win as much as 83 per cent of the vote in his home state, Inouye has served in the Senate since 1962. He serves on the regular committees on Appropriations, Commerce and the District of Columbia.

Maintaining a home in Hawaii where his wife, Maggie, and their son, Daniel Jr., spend most of their time, Inouye also has a home in Bethesda, Md., a Washington suburb.

He plays the piano—better than many people with two arms, he says—and also shoots an excellent game of pool.

Banks Continue Role In Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $56 billion worth of U.S. savings bonds are currently outstanding, and Treasury officials expect at least 125 million new bonds will be issued this year.

Most of that issuing will be done as a public service by the nation's 14,000 commercial banks.

According to Treasury statistics, commercial banks have issued more than 80 per cent of the 3,350,000,000 savings bonds that have been issued since 1941. In addition, commercial banks have also handled 98 per cent of all E-Bond redemptions.

In terms of land, the Soviet Union is the world's largest country, with 8,647,249 square miles.

Award Contracts On Farmville Work

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE—Contracts were awarded to low bidders on Farmville's water system improvement project, subject to the approval of the Economic Development Administration and the Farmers Home Administration through which they have investigated the Lum Wooten Service Station property at the corner of E. Wilson and Contentnea Streets and feel it is not worth the price for the 20 parking places that would be provided were it bought for use as a municipal parking lot. Commissioner Leroy Redden reported that he has investigated the Arthur C. Jones property on S. George Street and feels that the building inspector should go ahead with condemnation procedures. The Commissioners agreed to offer $10,000 for the old Boy Scout Hut adjacent to the J. Y. Monk Park for use as a town recreation building. The building has been appraised at $15,000, it was reported.

Approval was given a request that the town put $8,650 into several longtime members of the town's volunteer Fire Department under the State Fireman's Pension plan, as new regulations qualify these men. Moses Moyer, a Pitt Soil Conservation supervisor, appeared asking that the Commissioners forward a resolution to Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz. The resolution would recommend that an application for assistance in carrying out the Mid-East Resource Conservation and Development Project covering Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Martin, and Pitt Counties. The Commissioners agreed to have the Town Administrator forward the letter. The Sedimentation Law due to go into effect requiring that anyone wishing to develop an acre or more of land get a special permit from a State Sedimentation Commission was discussed. The town attorney was asked to see if a similar proposed law could be drawn up for the town, so permits could be acquired here rather than in Raleigh when the law goes into effect. Discussion of a landfill site was tabled. The Commissioners are considering the purchase of land off the Stantonsburg Road owned by Gordon Lee for this purpose.

$84.33 Day On Farmville Mart

FARMVILLE—The Farmville Tobacco Market opened its 69th season Tuesday and although the price average fell short of last year's opening-day figure, the market recorded a respectable $84.33 per hundred pounds.

Quality lugs and cutters sold as high as 90 and 91 cents a pound, the official said. He pointed out that 1,880 pounds of the overall market volume went to Stabilization on opening day. Yesterday's totals were 326,823 pounds for $275,611, Williams said. The average of $84.33 compared with the 1972 opening quote of $85.60.

The Farmville market will operate on a limited schedule for the first 12 days of the season with one set of buyers. Beginning on Aug. 28, the regular season will begin with two sets of buyers on hand.

Louis Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade, said this morning that "grade for grade, prices were about the same as last year. A slight decrease in average compared with the opening day of last year was due to the marketing of more non-descript and damaged grades," he said.

Judge Dismisses Publishers' Suit

TRENTON—U.S. Eastern District Court Judge John D. Larkins has, in effect, dismissed a case against The Daily Reflector, Inc. in which the Greenville Publishing Co. — publishers of a weekly shopper guide "The Advocate" — was seeking $198,000 in damages and an injunction to stop The Daily Reflector from publishing the "Reflector Shopper Guide," at below cost rates.

Judge Larkins signed an order Saturday allowing the defendant's motion for summary judgment in the case. The order was filed with the United States District Court yesterday. Greenville Publishers' action against the Daily Reflector, Inc. was filed March 13, 1972. The complaint charge that The Daily Reflector, Inc. had unlawfully conspired to restrain and monopolize trade and commerce in the shopper guide advertising market in the Greenville area.

In the order Judge Larkins noted, "that defendants' shopper does not advertise at reduced rates unless the customers have also advertised in the newspaper. Since such rates are set in conjunction with those of The Daily Reflector and are based on similar practices by other state newspapers, it is this Court's opinion that the rates are not anticompetitive per se, but under the total circumstances of the case, are legitimate, competitive rates."

The judge's judgment also found "no specific intent or purpose to destroy competition or build a monopoly," on the part of The Daily Reflector, noting "that due to the number of newspapers in the Greenville area, especially the presence of the Raleigh News and Observer, there is little chance that a monopoly would be possible."

The judgment allowing dismissal also noted, "Based on the totality of the record, this Court finds overwhelming evidence that the defendants had no specific intent or purpose to destroy competition or build a monopoly in advertising or printed advertising in the Greenville-Pitt County area."

"The evidence is so strong that the Defendants' motives were based purely on competitive business considerations that this Court finds as a matter of law that no specific intent exists. 'Competitive business is the backbone of our free enterprise system and must be upheld,' Judge Larkins ordered.

The federal complaint named The Daily Reflector Inc., John S. Whitchard, David J. Whitchard Jr., and David Julian Whitchard, as defendants in the suit. An affidavit accompanying the motion for injunction listed Carl Venters Jr. of Farmville as president of Greenville Publishing Co.

Pirates Rally To Down Wilmington, 8-4

IT MUST HAVE BEEN A CUTE STORY—Jack Nicklaus reacts as he listens to a story being told him by Gary Player at Canterbury Golf Club near Cleveland during practice rounds in preparation for

Thursday's start of the 55th national PGA Championship. Nicklaus has won the PGA title in 1963 and again in 1971. (AP Wirephoto)

More To New York Jets Than Joe Namath—Like A Stable Of Runners

By BRUCE LOWITT Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP) — There's more to the New York Jets than Joe Namath. But the individualistic quarterback is the man most mentioned when talk turns to this National Football League club.

The "more" includes a stable of runners, like John Riggins and Emerson Boozer, who did most of the work last season, plus 1972 back-up men Cliff McClain and Hank Bjorklund as well as Mike Adamele, acquired in an off-season trade with Kansas City, and Jim Nance, signed as a free agent. Riggins is currently a holdout.

But what kept the Jets out of the playoffs last year—besides Miami's perfect record which turned the American Conference East race into a runaway—was the Jets' lack of a defense. They were third worst in the AFC in overall defense and, with an almost nonexistent pass rush, dead last in stopping the enemy aerials.

But the collegiate draft and one very important pre-draft trade may have solved those woes.

The Jets' No. 1 selection was Burgess Owens of Miami. At the start of the exhibition season—a lacklustre 16-13 victory over the Houston Oilers—the 6-foot-2, 200-pounder was a backup cornerback and safety. But it's possible he could break into the starting lineup if an immediate improvement isn't apparent.

At cornerback, the Jets appear to have solved much of their problem with that pre-draft trade.

With the retirement of Larry Grantham and a switch in positions, Al Atkinson becomes the right linebacker with Ralph Baker on the left and John Ebersole in the middle.

But the thrust of the team still comes down to Namath, who led the AFC last year in passing yardage with 2,816 and in touchdowns with 19. With the departure of Davis, Al Woodall is once again the primary backup nan.

"I feel I'm still the No. 1 quarterback in football," Namath said recently. "My arm feels fine and there's no pain in my knees."

Weeb Ewbank, the only coach the Jets have ever known, is looking for one more championship before turning the club's reins over to Charley Winner next year.

Actually, the Jets' biggest problem is Miami. If the Dolphins falter at all, a highly unlikely possibility, the Jets appear to be the team to take over supremacy of the division. But as of now, the "wild card" playoff berth seems a more likely goal.

WILMINGTON — The East Carolina University Pirates closed out their 1973 North Carolina Summer Collegiate League season last night with an 8-4 victory over the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

The Bucs rallied from a 2-0 deficit against the Seahawks to take a 4-2 lead, then saw Wilmington come back to tie it up before the Pirates finally broke it open with four in the eighth inning.

Paul Fulton of Wilmington tossed five innings of no-hit ball against the Bucs before a double by Ron Staggs finally broke the ice. And when it did, the Bucs jumped on Fulton and his successor for nine more and a total of ten.

Bill Godwin got the victory for the Bucs, going all the way. He scattered nine hits, walked two and struck out seven.

Wilmington put the pressure on Godwin early, but they didn't score a run until the fourth. A line drive helped the Bucs in the first inning after the leadoff batter, Howie Edgerton had singled. Bob Ivey hit the liner to Ron Staggs, who easily doubled off Edgerton for an unassisted double play.

In the second, Bruce Cavanaugh doubled to open the inning, and Godwin hit Swain Smith with a pitch. But the next three went down in order to lead both runners stranded.

In the fourth, however, Wilmington struck for the lead. Greg Dalton led off with a double and Cavanaugh moved him up with a single. Smith grounded to short, and Cavanaugh was caught at second, as Dalton moved to third. Smith then stole second, and both runners came around on a hit by Bobby Schupp. That gave the Seahawks a 2-0 lead.

They threatened again in the fifth. Ivey and Cavanaugh both singled to put a runner in scoring position, but no damage was done.

The Bucs, who had nothing to show but two walks during the first five innings, finally got to Fulton in the sixth.

With two away, Jimmy Paige walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Staggs then doubled to drive in Paige and cut the lead to 2-1.

The Bucs then came up with three runs in the seventh and pushed into a 4-2 lead. Bobby Harrison led off with a single and Russ Smith sacrificed him to second. Jack Elkins singled, driving in Harrison with the tying run. Grey Fulghum followed with another single and Godwin sacrificed both runners up. Carl Summerell then doubled to drive in both Elkins and McMahon and give the Pirates the lead.

Wilmington bounced right back however, scoring two in the bottom of the inning to tie it again. Edgerton singled with one down and Ivey walked. Both moved up on a passed ball and Dalton cracked out a single, scoring both to make it 4-4.

It was the last threat for the Seahawks, who got only one more man on base the rest of the way.

East Carolina then came up with four in the eighth and put the game away. Staggs led off with his second straight double and with one down, he scored on Harrison single. Smith walked and Elkins cracked out a two-run double, scoring both Harrison and Smith. With two down, Godwin walked and Summerell singled to score Elkins with the final run.

In the ninth, a single by Staggs and walks to Smith and Elkins loaded the bases with two away, but the Bucs didn't score again.

The victory left the Pirates with a 15-20 record for the season, in fifth place in the six team league. Wilmington finished with a 19-16 mark, in second place. Pembroke finished first, while the University of North Carolina was fourth and Campbell, sixth.

The top four teams move into a playoff series, starting later this week.

Warriors Gain Win

The Warriors captured first place in the West Greenville Recreation Center's Summer Basketball championship game last night. They downed the Bucs, 69-55.

The Warriors held a slim 18-16 lead at the end of the first quarter, but the Bucs came back to take a 32-31 lead at intermission.

In the third period, however, the Warriors pulled away, outshooting the Bucs, 21-10 to up their lead to 52-42. They continued to pull away in the final period to sew up the victory.

Tyrone Taft led the Warriors with 25 points, while Donnie Shield had 20 and Linwood Brown had 16. The Bucs were paced by Carl Shirley with 24, while Julius Nobles had 16.

Brown was named the Most Valuable Player for the tournament.

Oakmont Takes Church Crown

Oakmont Baptist downed Immanuel Baptist in two straight games last night to capture the Church Softball League's playoff championship.

Oakmont, loser of only one game this year, won the American Division title during the regular season, then captured its playoff.

Immanuel was the regular season and playoff champ in the National Division. Oakmont captured the first game by a 4-3 score.

They pushed over two in the bottom of the third to gain the victory. Stan Eure reached on a fielder's choice, as did William Rogers. Danny Singleton then tripled, driving in both runners for a 4-2 lead.

Immanuel managed one more run in the fourth, but could not catch up again.

In the second game, it was again tight, as Oakmont took an 8-6 victory. Immanuel pushed over three in the first to take the lead, while Oakmont came up with one each in the second and third. Immanuel added another in the third to lead 4-2, and Oakmont came back to score two in the fourth to tie it up.

Oakmont took the lead with one in the top of the fifth, but Immanuel came back with two in the bottom of the frame to regain the lead, 6-5.

Oakmont then pushed over three in the sixth to win it. Ned Cheely singled and came around on a hit by Phil Martin. Ernest Carraway then homered to drive in two runs and give Oakmont the title.

Morgan Guesses Right; Wins One

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer
Joe Morgan "was just trying to get on base somehow and hoping we could score a run." He got on all right—on the scoreboard that is...and into the Cincinnati record books as well. Don Gullett of the Reds and Chicago's Rick Reuschel were locked in a scoreless duel Tuesday night when Morgan strode to the plate in the seventh inning. Morgan knew what Reuschel would be throwing. "It was a fastball...and when I went up there I just tried to concentrate on the fastball," he said. He got it and smashed it over the right field fence for his 17th homer of the season. That was all Gullett needed, making the run stand up with a two-hitter for a 1-0 victory over the Cubs. Morgan's blast tied him with Alex Kamouris of the 1937 Reds for the most homers by a Cincinnati second baseman. Elsewhere in the National League, Houston blanked Pittsburgh 2-0, the New York Mets downed St. Louis 6-5, Los Angeles pummeled San Diego 6-1 and Montreal edged San Francisco 2-1. starting the Mets on the way to their victory over St. Louis. The loss prevented the Cardinals from widening their five-game lead in the East Division. The hit gave New York a 5-4 lead and Staub drove in what proved to be the winner in the fourth with a single, countering Lou Brock's RBI single for the Cards in the sixth.

Dodgers 6, Padres 1
Los Angeles, retaining its four-game West Division lead over the resurgent Reds, did all its scoring in the first two innings against the Padres. San Diego finally broke a 26-inning scoreless drought in the ninth when Leron Lee hit a bases-loaded single, averting a third straight Padres shutout.

Expos 2, Giants 1
The Expos climbed into a virtual second-place tie with the Cubs in the East, closing to within five games of St. Louis and a scant one percentage point of runner-up Chicago. It was Bob Bailey's bat that brought them there. He lined a seventh-inning tie-breaking homer off Tom Bradley, snapping a 1-1 tie to give Montreal its fourth straight victory.

Astros 2, Pirates 0
Don Wilson hurled a four-hitter in the Astros' 2-0 triumph over the Pirates. Nelson Briles took the loss for Pittsburgh by giving up Roger Metzger's double and Cesar Cedeno's single in the fourth inning, the only run Wilson needed. Houston adeed an insurance run in the eighth.

In the American League, Kansas City beat Boston 7-6 in 11 innings, California defeated Milwaukee 6-5 in 10, the Chicago White Sox toppled Cleveland 6-5 in 12 and, in a trio of doubleheader splits, Texas beat New York 2-1 before losing to the Yankees 3-1. Oakland walloped Detroit 8-4 before the Tigers tamed the A's 2-0, and Minnesota beat Baltimore 4-2 before the Orioles stormed back for a 10-4 second-game victory.

Match Won't Be Different

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Billie Jean King, who easily won her opening round match Tuesday in the $35,000 Nashville Pro Tennis Tournament, says she will treat her match against Bobby Riggs like any other. "I'll play right up to Sept. 20," she said, referring to the date she and the 55-year-old Riggs will play in the Houston Astrodome. "Sometimes if you start thinking about a certain match, about how big it is, it throws you off," said Mrs. King, 29, the reigning Wimbledon champ. Mrs. King, who defeated Mary Christenson 6-3, 6-0 Tuesday, said her prestige won't be hurt if she does lose to Riggs, who defeated Margaret Court in straight sets on Mother's Day. "I know where I've been and where I'm at," she said. She added, though, that she believes she can beat Riggs. "I believe I'm versatile enough to handle various garbage shots. Also, I think I have good mobility." She declined to predict a score of the Riggs match. "You just don't have any idea until you get out there and start playing," she said. She was her usual emotional self during her match Tuesday. At one point she glared at a linesman after a delayed call. Another time, after a bad shot, she exclaimed: "Oh, I can't stand it!" In other results Tuesday involving seeded players, third-seeded Rosemary Casals of San Francisco beat Kristien Kemmer of Los Angeles, 7-6, 6-3, and fourth-seeded Janet Newberry of La Jolla, Calif., downed Marcie Louie of San Francisco, 6-4, 7-6. Also, sixth-seeded Julie Heldman of London whipped Jill Schwikert of Las Vegas, 6-2, 6-0, and eighth-seeded Betty Stove of Holland dumped Susan Maharaz of Sarasota, Fla., 6-3, 6-0. In today's matches, Mrs. Court plays unseeded Laurie Fleming of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Mrs. King is idle in singles play, though will team with Miss Casals against Cecilia Martinez of San Francisco and Wendy Paish of Australia in doubles action.

Jurgensen (Not Ready) To See Action Friday

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Sports Writer
CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Bill Kilmer sees himself as the No. 1 quarterback on the Washington Redskins and says that anyone who wants the job, primarily Sonny Jurgensen, will have to take it away from him. But Jurgensen, meanwhile, doesn't feel he's ready to play. "I don't really think I'm ready, but the injury to Sam Wyche forced the issue," said Jurgensen. "I thought I would have more time." He is slated to see his first action of the season in the second half of the Redskins-Denver Broncos National Football League exhibition game Friday night.

13-year pro Herb Adderly who was cut by the Los Angeles Rams. The veteran defensive back played for the Green Bay Packers and the Dallas Cowboys and was obtained by the Rams in a trade from New England. Both Minnesota Viking and Washington Redskins fans received good news. Spokesmen at Methodist Hospital in suburban St. Louis said Viking defensive back Karl Kassulke was more alert Tuesday than in previous days since suffering critical injuries in a car-motorcycle accident. The hospital listed Kassulke in serious condition from the July 24 crash.

available for the Giants next exhibition game against New England Sunday. New Orleans Saints' wide receiver Danny Abramowicz underwent surgery Tuesday to remove an inflamed cyst from his mouth and will not see action against the Miami Dolphins Saturday. The New England Patriots traded rookie kicker John Smith to Pittsburgh for a future draft choice.

The injury-plagued Jurgensen is recuperating from a torn Achilles tendon, for which he underwent surgery in the off-season. Kilmer played most of last Friday's exhibition game against Detroit because thirdstringer Wyche suffered a fractured cheekbone. He received boos from the fans when he trotted on the field after the Wyche injury because he had not been able to move the team in the first quarter. Kilmer, who quarterbacked the Redskins last season after an injury to Jurgensen, led the team to the Super Bowl which the Redskins lost to Miami 14-7. While rookies were especially vulnerable to cuts made Tuesday, veterans trimmed included

Washington Coach George Allen said halfback Duane Thomas will start Friday against Denver. Thomas acquired earlier this preseason from the San Diego Chargers will be making his first start since he played for the Dallas Cowboys in the 1971 Superbowl. The Kansas City Chiefs were forced to deactivate three veterans—Mo Moorman, Jim Marialis and Otis Taylor—because of injuries. The trio will miss the next two exhibition games. The New York Giants lost tackle Dave Tipton for an undetermined time when X-rays disclosed a bone chip at the base of his left thumb. The injury shrinks to six the number of defensive linemen

Way Back Tough For Gary Player

By GEORGE STRODE
Associated Press Sports Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Lee Trevino, who have won 22 major golf titles among them, are winless going into Thursday's PGA Championship, the last of the year's Big Four pro events. The three superstars have been shut out only twice—in 1965 and 1969—in the last 11 years in the game's greatest tournaments—the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens, and the PGA. A field of 150 of golf's best players will tee off in the first round of the $200,000 PGA Thursday over the par 71, 6,852-yard Canterbury Golf Club course. Player, the little South African who is the defending PGA champion, has found recovery rough from two major operations earlier this year. "I haven't played a reasonable tournament since I came back," said the winner of two PGAs, two British Opens, one U.S. Open and one Masters. Nicklaus, on the eve of another try at surpassing Bobby Jones' all-time major title record of 13, was nearly as grim. "It's been a disappointing year for me only as far as major championships are concerned," said the winner of four Masters, three U.S. Opens and two British Opens, PGAs and U.S. Amateurs. "I'm always disappointed if I don't win one of these," said Nicklaus, who played only 15 holes Tuesday. "But there is still one left. Trevino, who has won the U.S. Open twice and the British Open once, skipped last week's Westchester Classic and did not arrive here until Tuesday night. Despite the presence of Nicklaus, Player and Trevino, most of the field favors Tom Weiskopf to continue his hot streak that has produced more than $200,000 and five triumphs in his last nine tournaments. "Weiskopf wants to win all the majors. That's all he's thinking right now," said U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller of the British Open titleholder.

Williams Forgot; But It Made No Difference

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
Who's on first? For that matter, who's on second...or third? Those were some of the questions Detroit Manager Billy Martin asked himself as he scanned Oakland's line-up card for the second game of Tuesday's two-night doubleheader. Among the other problems confronting Martin were trying to figure out who was in left, center and right field; who was pitching, catching and playing shortstop, and who was the designated hitter. It wasn't a trick on the part of Tricky Dick Williams, the Oakland pilot, who has been known to play musical chairs with his line-ups. "I just forgot to put the positions down," said Williams, who has been putting positions down on major league line-up cards since 1967.

After one batter, Martin marched out to inform umpire Larry McCoy that he was playing the game under protest because there was no way he could tell the designated hitter. "I would have taken my chances on a protest," Williams said. "But Jim Perry pitched a 2-0 shutout against us, so it doesn't make any difference." Actually, Perry and John Hiller combined on the shutout. That earned the Tigers a split—the A's took the opener 8-4—and kept them atop the American League's East Division by one-half game over Baltimore, one game over New York and 1½ over Boston. The Orioles dropped their opener to the Minnesota Twins 4-2 but took the nightcap 10-4, the Yankees beat the Texas Rangers 3-1 after dropping the opener 2-1 and Kansas City nipped the Red Sox 7-6 in 11 innings. That put the Royals back into first place in the AL West, one-half game ahead of Oakland. Elsewhere, the California Angels edged the Milwaukee Brewers 6-5 in 10 innings and the Chicago White Sox shaded the Cleveland Indians 6-5 in 12. Martin didn't have a chance to protest the first game. He was ejected by McCoy for protesting a play at first base. The A's also managed a split in ejections. Sal Bando was thumbed by McCoy for protesting a called third strike...the last out of the game. Oakland's Reggie Jackson doubled home the tie-breaking run off Mickey Lolich in the eighth inning of the opener and scored on a sacrifice fly by Gene Tenace. Al Kaline and Bill Freehan homered for the Tigers.

Twins 4-4, Orioles 2-10
Merv Rettenmund slammed a two-run homer and started three other scoring thrusts which netted six runs as the Orioles rolled over the Twins for a split of their twin bill. The Twins took the opener with Jim Holt's double driving in two runs in a four-run sixth and Eddie Bane's 2-3 shutout innings of relief saving the victory. Rangers 2-1, Yankees 1-3
Matty Alou drilled three hits, including a home run, leading the Yankees to victory in their nightcap after they had dropped 10 of their previous 12 starts. The Rangers took the first game behind the five-hit pitching of Jim Bibby, who got out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the ninth inning after the Yanks had scored their one run. Alou had three hits in that game, too. Royals 7, Red Sox 6
Lou Piniella doubled home the winning run off rookie Craig Skok in the 11th inning after the Royals earlier erased a 6-1 deficit. A two-run single by Amos Otis cut Boston's lead to 6-4. Fred Patek's homer chipped away another run and Rick Reichardt, who scored the winning run, tied it with a sixth-inning triple. Angels 6, Brewers 5

Ken Berry daringly raced home from third on Bob Oliver's bases-loaded pop fly in the 10th inning, which Milwaukee shortstop Tim Johnson caught with his back to the plate. That gave the victory to fireballing Nolan Ryan, who tied his own American League mark of eight consecutive strikeouts. White Sox 6, Indians 5
Rookie Jerry Hairston's two-out single, in the bottom of the 12th following an intentional walk to Carlos May scored Bill Melton from second base with the winning run. The Indians kayoed 20-game winner Wilbur Wood by scoring four runs in the first two innings.

National League scores: Los Angeles 6, San Diego 1; Cincinnati 1, Chicago 0; New York 6, St. Louis 5; Montreal 2, San Francisco 1; Houston 2, Pittsburgh 0.

Since 1937, when the Belmont Stakes chart first showed the position of horses at the quarter-pole, only one winner has been as far back as fifth at that point. That was High Gun in 1954.

Buyers Being Priced Out Of The Housing Market

By RICHARD L. STERN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's housing boom is becoming a bust for many Americans. Costs are so high and mortgages have become so scarce within the last month that many prospective buyers with seemingly adequate incomes have found themselves priced out of the market.

An added burden is an increase in the cost of home maintenance, from painting a living room to repairing a furnace.

"When we added it all up, we just decided we better wait," said Rory Butler, a computer programmer who had been looking for a house in the New York suburbs.

The situation, which is especially troublesome to couples seeking to buy their first home, has caused concern in the industry.

While real estate agents in many parts of the country reported record sales in recent months, some housing experts have found signs the boom may be ending.

They point to recent figures showing housing costs running far ahead of increases in family incomes. And they note that federal measures to slow inflation by tightening the money supply generally have made mortgage money extremely scarce. When it is available, rates have come close to nine per cent in some cases. Banks also are demanding higher down payments and shorter repayment periods.

The finance problems and the soaring prices of land, labor and materials for new homes have so alarmed some builders that they have cut way back on their plans for new housing, the National Homebuilders Association (NHBA) reports.

"The housing industry's most disturbing problem in the last year and a half has been the increase in housing costs and prices," said Michael Sumichrast, the NHBA's chief economist.

Among those who can afford to buy the increased prices, demand for housing remains heavy, however, with many viewing it as a solid investment. "I'll sell every one I can find," said a Connecticut realtor of the demand for homes in the $75,000 range.

"I figure the price is going to keep going up; and if I don't buy now, then it's just going to cost a lot more later," said Bruce Lake, a Bethlehem Steel public relations representative who is looking for a new home, his second, in New Jersey.

In some sections of the country, especially New York and Washington, it is virtually impossible to find homes in the $30,000 to $40,000 range less than 90 minutes commuting distance from center city.

"If somebody comes to us and wants to buy a house for $35,000, we don't know what to do for him," said one Washington realtor.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the median price of new houses sold this May was $32,200, compared with $27,000 the previous May, a jump of 19 per cent. Census figures show that, over the same period, the average American family income was rising eight per cent.

Eight months ago, it was easy in many areas of the nation to finance a $30,000 home with as little down as five to 10 per cent down—$1,500 to $3,000. Thirty-year mortgages were readily available.

But a recent spot survey by The Associated Press indicated banks and mortgage companies were demanding $7,500 and more down on the same house.

Mortgages, if available at all, frequently were for a maximum of 20 years.

Ginny and Riley Gibson of Montgomery, Ala., are typical of couples with mortgage problems. Both are in their early 20s and have a combined income of $16,000. They say they have found it impossible to find a mortgage for an $18,000 home, although they have $4,000 to put down.

Prices also have forced some couples to buy less than they could have a few years ago.

A Houston realtor told of a couple who moved away five years ago and returned recently. They found that, although they had the income and savings for a substantially more expensive home, values had increased so drastically that they could not afford to move back into their old neighborhood.

The price spiral is evident in cities across the nation.

In Atlanta, real estate agent Pat Gillentine reported that a three-bedroom home that 11 years ago cost $21,500 now is selling for $51,600.

A Salt Lake City realtor said a home he sold two years ago for $21,000 now is worth between $31,000 and $32,000.

In Hawaii, demand has been so high and the availability of homes so low that prices have increased as much as 50 per cent in the last two years, according to George Morris, executive vice president of the Honolulu Board of Realtors.

Earlier this year, when the Grant Co., the largest producer of higher-priced homes in Hawaii, took $500 deposits for a waiting list, some persons camped out overnight in front of the sales office.

"The deposits guaranteed nothing," neither a home style nor location, but checks were returned if persons were not satisfied with what was available, said Kurt Franks, a company representative.

One of the most spectacular areas of sales has been in high-priced homes, realtors report.

In affluent Hillsborough, Calif., where Bing Crosby lives, a house worth $50,000 in 1963, $54,000 in 1968 and $70,000 in 1971, now is reported selling for $100,000.

Maintenance costs also are rising sharply.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Statistics, the cost of maintenance and repair of a home in June was 11.5 per cent higher than in June 1972. Fuel oil and coals costs for the same period were up 11.7 per cent; repainting a living room or dining room, up 7.1 per cent; repairing a furnace, 5.3 per cent; and reshingling a roof, 5.1 per cent. Property taxes were up 5.3 per cent.

Construction wages also are up, as are the prices of some materials. From April 1972 to April 1973, the cost of softwood lumber jumped 57.5 per cent; softwood plywood, 98.3 per cent; copper pipes, 18.8 per cent; and gypsum wallboard, 20 per cent, according to the NHBA.

In recognition of the mortgage problem, the Federal Home Loan Bank took measures last week that it said would make $2.2 billion available for mortgage loans immediately.

"Whether the mortgage situation and the inflationary costs will have a profound effect on the market remains to be seen, many experts say.

"We're sitting right on the fence and could fall either way," said Catherine Martini, director of economic research for the National Association of Realtors.

Joins Study Of Mental Health

State Rep. Sam D. Bundy, as a member of the Mental Health Committee of the House of Representatives, will be among those who will study the mental health programs and the mental health institutions of the state this summer and fall.

He also has been appointed to a special commission to study and evaluate the Teachers' and State Employees' Retirement System.

Both studies are to be completed and recommendations made to the 1974 session of the General Assembly, he said.

Evening College Schedule Ready

The University College of the Division of Continuing Education at East Carolina University has announced its schedule of evening courses for the fall term.

The University College is designed for individuals who are unable to enroll as regular students in the day program at the University. High School graduates need not take an entrance examination to be admitted to the University College.

Through evening classes on the main campus in Greenville, East Carolina University hopes to assist many citizens of the area with their plans for continuing and broadening their general education. Persons who enroll in the University College can complete approximately two years of resident credit toward the Baccalaureate Degree.

Educational offerings for the fall term include basic courses in art, biology, business, English, family relations, history, math, political science, Spanish, and speech. Courses for the fall term begin Sept. 5.

Interested individuals should write or call the University College Director, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, Greenville, North Carolina 27834; telephone 758-6324.

Grants For Area Schools

The Greene, Martin, and Pitt County, and the Greenville City Schools have received over $80,000 in grants under Part C of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, according to Craig Phillips, state school superintendent.

Greene County was allotted $16,823; Martin County was awarded $18,151; and Pitt County was granted $38,842 with Greenville City schools receiving $7,257.

According to Harold Webb, director of compensatory education for the state education agency, Part C is referred to as the Urban and Rural Program. To be eligible for the grant, a school district must have 20 per cent of its school-age population drawn from low-income families, or 5,000 such children who comprise five per cent or more of the total school-age population.

Webb noted that this is actually money appropriated for use during the 1973 fiscal year, but funds have arrived so late that they will be used during the 1973-74 school year.

For Fire Calls

Don A. Collier, local Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. manager, said that problems encountered recently by citizens of rural Pitt County who have tried to report a fire can be avoided if two phone numbers are conveniently posted.

Collier said that 752-5136 should be used to report a fire in rural Pitt County if the call is local. If the call is long distance, he explained, the caller should dial the operator (dial 0) and ask for "Zenith 151." No charge is made for the calls, he said.

The manager stressed that the numbers should be posted in a place convenient to the telephone or on the inside front cover of the telephone directory.

Savings To Volunteers

Volunteer non-profit fire departments and life saving rescue squads may now purchase gasoline, oil and tires under state contract, Rep. Sam D. Bundy, Democrat of Pitt said. Bundy said the recent session of the General Assembly enacted the measure, which means great savings to the two volunteer organizations.

There are six squads in Pitt County, the N.C. Association of Rescue Squads said. These are the Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Fountain, Greenville, and Grifton squads.

The legislator cited an example of the possible savings. "Under state contract, regular gas is around 27 cents a gallon. In our area, volunteer fire departments and life saving crews pay in the neighborhood of 40 cents a gallon. So you can see the savings for these two worthwhile organizations."

In addition to gas, oil and tires, the volunteer groups may now purchase surplus state property on the same basis as counties and municipalities do.

Ban Horses On Manila Streets

MANILA (UPI) — The municipal board of a Manila suburb has passed an ordinance banning "calesas" (horse-drawn rigs) from all streets starting Jan. 1, 1974. The board said the ban was designed to "rid the town of unsightly and unhealthy horse waste on the streets."

Bobby Fischer Will Defend Title—For $1 Million

CHESS CHAMP Bobby Fischer (right) has plans to defend his title in 1975, if the price is right; and his

By WILLIAM J. STANFIELD PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — World chess champion Bobby Fischer, contrary to rumor, is still actively studying and playing his game—and he has definite plans to defend his title by 1975.

In fact, associates say, if the terms are right, the 30-year-old Fischer is ready right now to defend the title he won last year from Russia's Boris Spassky.

The terms are simple: One million dollars. Other than one news conference he held last December and a few scattered guest appearances on television, Fischer has led a very private life since he won the title and he has consistently refused to talk to the news media.

But interviews with his associates and his attorney discounted rumors that the Spassky match at Reykjavik, Iceland, had so affected him that he was ready to retire from international chess competition.

Studies a Lot
"He works on it all the time" and does a lot of studying," said one chess associate. "That is his business and there's no truth to any rumors that he might retire."

Fischer's attorney, Stanley R. Rader, was equally firm.

"The rumors about him retiring are completely groundless and are being circulated by people who have not seen him or spoken to him and are in no position to judge him," Rader said.

Actually, Rader said, negotiations are under way for Fischer to defend his title against Spassky. "We're very close" to an agreement, he said.

But the terms of any rematch are stiff.

Wants $1 million

First of all, Rader said, Fischer wants $1 million plus an "equitable division" of such ancillary rights as television.

Other conditions are that Spassky wants to meet Fischer, that Russia would allow a Fischer-Spassky rematch and that the International Chess Federation would sanction a rematch.

Under federation rules, Spassky is not automatically entitled to a rematch and must qualify through a round of eight as Fischer did before last year's championship match.

"Notwithstanding the rules," Rader said, "we have been working toward giving Spassky a rematch. But there might be some resentment in chess circles if a rematch was held without qualifying."

"If we can work out the arrangements, then he'll defend," Rader said. "I know he will defend by 1975."

Must Defend Title

Under federation rules, Fischer has to defend his title within three years, or by 1975.

At his news conference in December, Fischer said in theory he thought he could keep the championship for the rest of his life and Rader confirmed that he still feels he can and so has not been in any hurry to capitalize on his title with commercial endorsements.

"He intends to be champion the rest of his life so any commercial endorsements would have to be long-term," Rader said.

Meanwhile, Fischer, whose entire life has centered around chess since his sister gave him a chess set when he was 6 years old, is resting and studying in his apartment, ready anytime to prove again that he is the best there is.

Their Capital Well-Qualified

CHICAGO (UPI) — When South Dakotans chose Pierre for their capital city in 1839, they couldn't have selected a more experienced site.

Pierre, according to Encyclopedia Britannica, had for 400 years prior to 1800 been the capital of the Arikara Indian Nation. Archaeological remains of it are still in evidence.

Giant Turtles Making Comeback In Malaysia

By BRIAN GOMEZ RANTAU ABANG, Malaysia (AP) — The giant leathery turtles, long threatened with extinction, are back again. The 1,500-pound reptiles slowly flap their way up select Malaysian beaches to lay their eggs from May to September.

Even before the poor animal, jelly-like tears dropping from its eyes, can bury its 80 to 140 eggs under the sandy beaches, the eggs are gouged out by specially assigned collectors.

Zoologists believe the turtles were wandering the high seas long before the appearance of man.

About 5,000 make the annual journey up an eight-mile stretch of beach facing the South China Sea and wildlife experts have long feared they were a doomed species.

But this year government wardens, who have eight years' experience at tagging the turtles' flippers, are out on the beaches with a tape in hand. Their task is to measure all incoming turtles to check on reports that smaller giants are coming ashore.

According to one official this can only mean that efforts initiated by the Malaysian government in 1965 to ensure that the giant turtle does not become extinct are proving a success.

Local conservationists are thrilled that a new generation of giant turtles may be coming ashore for the first time.

So far only a small trek of tourists have hit the sprawling beaches of the east coast of the Malaysian Peninsula to watch for the turtles, which come ashore at night. Three smaller varieties, including the green turtle which the Chinese and Japanese relish in their soup, come ashore in adjacent areas.

Sometimes a wait from dusk to dawn can prove fruitless. Other times a dozen mother turtles may come ashore within a short interval.

Tourists are admonished against shining their flashlights indiscriminately and are asked to wait in a nearby hut so the turtles will not be driven away.

The huge turtle crawls up the beach, stopping every few paces for a breather. Once it settles on a spot, its huge flippers immediately dig a hole about two and a half feet deep, then within two hours the creature lays some 100-odd eggs, tears dripping to protect its eyes against the unaccustomed atmosphere.

Then the Malay moves in to scoop up the eggs. Meantime, the turtle busily tries to hide the spot where the eggs are.

Government researchers have been able to collate very little information about the creature since tagging began. In the last eight years, 6,732 were tagged.

"We must tag as many as possible and hope that people are kind enough to tell us if they are spotted or caught," the official said, adding that the turtle's migration could be better charted if more funds were available.

The official said the government-run hatchery was set up with a three-fold purpose — conservation, tourism and revenue.

An area is being developed along a half-mile stretch near the hatchery where tourists can stay and not come into conflict with persons collecting the eggs as a livelihood.

"At the hatchery the tourists can even see newborn turtles crawling up from under the ground, a most fascinating sight," he said.

The eggs at the hatchery have a 60 per cent survival rate, probably somewhat better than the natural habitat, where dogs and man can assure speedy extinction.

The hatchery last year purchased 80,000 turtle eggs — it will go up this year to 100,000, about 12 per cent of the total laid. By farming out egg collection rights the Trengganu State Government earns about $40,000 annually. The total egg sales fetch four times as much.

The egg can never be hardened by boiling but that has not deterred it from being consid-

Rehabilitation In Sailing Ship

NEWPORT, R. I. (UPI) — Former drug addicts from the streets of New York are manning a black-hulled, two-masted coasting schooner in the waters off New England.

Crew members aboard the 64-foot Pioneer are young men from New York's South Street Seaport Museum drug rehabilitation program. The vessel makes six two-week trips to Cape Cod and the islands, the last voyage coming at the end of August. The youthful crews change with every trip.

ered a delicacy. "It is most fortunate the Malays will not kill turtles since they believe this will bring bad luck," the official says.

WERE "HOME DELIVERED"?

NOT TOO LONG ago many grocery stores, meat markets and drug stores offered Free Home Delivery. Not many still offer it today. Even the milkman and bread truck are less frequent in many communities today. The twice-a-day mailman now comes only once.

ONE OF THE FEW remaining home-delivery services is performed by your newspaper carrier. When you think about it, it is rare to have such personal daily service on such a low-priced item.

PERHAPS THE MOST discouraging part of a newspaper route is in collecting from the customers. Most people have the money ready for their newspaper carrier at the regular time. However, some readers require the carrier to make two, three or even more trips in order to get his money. We hate to see these young carriers discouraged. We also hate to see a good businessman give up his route because of the time and effort it takes to collect.

WON'T YOU HELP HIM, (and us) by having your money ready every time?

Treasure Is Elusive Lure

By ERIC SHARP
Associated Press Writer
ISLAMORADA, Fla. (AP) — If you ever dreamed up a vision of getting rich hunting treasure in the isles of the Caribbees, an expert in the field offers this advice free of charge:

"Take all the money you can get — $200,000 would be a nice round number — get in a boat, and run out in the ocean a ways. Then pile the money up on the deck and drink a beer while the wind blows it away."

"That way," says Carl Clausen, "you can waste your money without all the miserable, hard work involved in a treasure hunt, and the return to you should be about the same as if you'd actually gone treasure hunting — zilch."

Clausen, former marine archaeologist for the state of Florida and now Texas marine archaeologist, enjoys treasure hunts himself and has been on plenty of them in the blue waters off the Sunshine State's coast, especially in the treasure-happy Florida Keys.

But Clausen's idea of treasure is an ancient navigation instrument, or perhaps some old medical equipment. He has nothing good to say about treasure hunters who "will blow a wreck that's a time capsule to pieces with explosives for a few thousand in silver or gold."

Clausen says that he once figured out "that by the stories I heard in the Keys alone, the Spaniards lost more treasure galleons than they had ships in their navy."

Robert Marx, a famed treasure diver and marine archaeologist from Melbourne, Fla., says, "There's something about sunken treasure that literally can drive sane men crazy."

Marx, who spent more than two years excavating sunken, wicked old Port Royal for the Jamaican government, says that while a few lucky individuals have stumbled onto treasures, most big finds have been made by well-financed professionals who spent months or years searching old records in Europe and the Americas and additional weeks or months combing the ocean with sophisticated equipment.

But for each diver who found enough treasure to even pay his costs, dozens have lost their shirts for no more than a couple of silver coins and cannons that flake into rust in their back yards.

"What most people don't realize is the Spaniards weren't dumb," Marx says. "They conquered a continent, and their government was just as bureaucratic as ours. When a ship wrecked, it usually went aground on a reef or shoal in water less than 30 feet deep."

"The Spaniards had Indian divers who could dive to 100 feet for three minutes or more. When the Spaniards went out to salvage those wrecks, they didn't miss much," Marx says.

Divers today get the gleanings the Spaniards missed or hope to find one of the few wrecks they didn't salvage, he says.

Hollywood has presented an unreal picture of treasure hunting, a celluloid vision of vessels resting on the ocean floor with sails set and a skeleton at the helm.

In real life, it takes a trained eye just to recognize a site. All exposed wood has been eaten away by worms and sand and coral cover everything else within years. Novice treasure hunters have sat on a cannon without realizing it wasn't part of the natural reef.

One good thing about treasure hunting in the Keys is that the reefs that chewed the bellies out of galleons also house beautiful and bizarre marine creatures. Underwater visibility can exceed 100 feet, so even if you don't find anything, the scenery is great.

Many a person whose knowledge of treasure is limited to pirate movies has put out a bundle for hunts that gained him nothing more than a rising gorge for the rest of his life whenever he hears the words "gold" or "silver."

W.A. "Sonny" Cockrell, Florida's new marine archaeologist, says, "You can get any number of people to invest money in a wreck if you flash a few gold doubloons at them."

His interest in wrecks is in what they can tell about the past.

"I am intrigued by the more broad-reaching things they can tell us about the movements of people and their living patterns," says Cockrell, who recently spent months recovering Indian artifacts from a murky, disease-ridden sinkhole near Florida's west coast.

"It doesn't matter to me if they're 17th century Spaniards or 8,000-year-old Indians. The important thing is the knowledge we can gain through underwater archaeology, whether it be from a well or a shipwreck," Cockrell said.

Born-and-bred Keys residents long had an ability to dig treasure-hunt money out of tight-fisted investors.

But often it doesn't take that much coaxing.

A treasure hunt offers the excitement of a trip to Las Vegas, a voyage into history and a chance to probe the unknown all rolled into one wild and romantic adventure.

Ancient Vienna Is Young Again

VIENNA (AP) — Vienna's new Mayor, Leopold Gratz, at age 43, is the youngest chief executive of the Austrian capital since 1774. He is also only the third mayor in Vienna's more than 2,000-year history to have Leopold for a first name.

Among the first to congratulate Gratz were the chimney sweeps, who came from all over Austria in their working clothes.

In Vienna, seeing a chimney sweep means good luck.

Palestinian Is Prospering, But 'Dissatisfied'

By Robert Slater
HEBRON, Israeli-occupied Jordan (UPI) — Khaled Nasser Eldin, a 29-year-old attorney, dresses in black pin-striped suits these days. Last year he built a new home. His law office overlooking busy King Feisel Street is usually crowded with clients and friends.

As many Palestinians who have prospered since the Israeli occupation of the West Bank six years ago, the dark-haired Eldin appreciates the elevated standing his new wealth has given him within the community. But he harbors dislike for the conditions under which he must live.

Without any sign of bitterness toward the occupying power, Eldin said, "maybe the Israelis are treating us well now, but we hoped to see them leave our land."

There is little overt hostility toward the Israelis in the Jordanian West Bank, the most populous of the territories captured by Israel during the 1967 Middle East war against 600,000 Arabs. But there is nagging dissatisfaction with the transitional and uncertain character of life.

Time after time, in conversations with West Bank Arabs, a feeling of frustration at the political impasse between Israelis and Arabs emerges.

Badi Kalil Nammari, whose sunburned face gives him the appearance of being much younger than 54, turned away from the new tractor he acquired three months ago with the help of an Israeli loan of $3,500 and spoke longingly of the need for peace.

"For my business, being a farmer, it makes no difference whether I live under the Israelis or the Jordanians. If I work hard, I can make good money anywhere. But if they make peace, then things will really be good."

On the eve of the sixth anniversary of the six day war, Nammari points to his two new tractors, the extra food on the table and the addition he plans for his house on the outskirts of Jericho as examples of the improvements in his life in recent years.

He said his standard of living for his family of eight has gone up to five times as much as it was in 1967.

With this an election year, the question of what to do about the future of the occupied territories has taken on new-found importance, especially within the ruling Labor Party.

The "Great Debate," which has been aired in public on and off during the past year, focuses on the views of Defense Minister Moshe Dayan who, as the man responsible for day-to-day policy in the territories, often has been accused of preparing the way for outright annexation.

Fearful of what the addition of a million Arabs from the occupied lands might do to the concept of a Jewish state, Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir has led the opposition to Dayan, often aided by Prime Minister Golda Meir and Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

The West Bank is the most sticky piece of geography in terms of political settlement because of its large Arab population clusters. The government's attitude, reflected in the speeches of Mrs. Meir, appears to be that a good part of the 2,300 square-mile area could be returned to Jordan in exchange for an acceptable peace settlement.

The most clearly defined proposal for the West Bank's future—neither accepted nor rejected by the government—has come from Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon.

The "Allon Plan," talks of returning all Arab population centers on the West Bank to Jordan while keeping an Israeli military presence along the western side of the Jordan River.

The local political leadership on the West Bank is difficult to pinpoint. Just who speaks for the 600,000 Arabs there? Former Jordanian officials who happen to live there? The recently elected mayors of such towns as Hebron, Nablus, Bethlehem or Ramallah?

The 51-year-old mayor of Bethlehem, short, stocky Elias Friej, is one of a new breed of West Bank politicians who speak as if they have a following.

In his second floor office overlooking Manger Square in the town where Jesus Christ is said to have been born, Friej has no unkind words for the Israelis. He simply wants them to leave.

"We want our freedom back, our independence back, our liberty back," he said. "You know, we really thought that there would be peace after the six-day war. It was a very great disappointment to us."

"So long as there is a no peace-no war situation, the occupation will continue and time is working against us, the Palestinians."

Seated behind a desk on which a telephone rang constantly, Friej looked across the red-carpeted room and out the window at Bethlehem's residents. He dwelled for a moment on their economic condition.

"There is an acute shortage of housing," he said. "The youngsters want to get married, but they can't find homes to live in. What is more, the cost of living has gone up. There is inflation here and all over the West Bank. And with inflation the prices keep going up."

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make sure you handle financial matters skillfully today. Use your own ingenuity to gain your objectives instead of depending on others so much and gain the favor of higher-ups.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those dynamic young people with fine ideas who will accomplish a great deal early in life. Be sure to permit your progeny to get into life's work as early as possible so that much abundance can be realized. Later in life there could be a great number of delays and disappointments.

For some unknown reason, the law profession has turned out more international bridge players than any other. While this may sound somewhat biased because I practiced law before becoming a bridge writer, the impressive list bears me out.

Three members of the Italian Blue Team have legal training. Legal luminaries have often represented Great Britain. And in postwar years, several lawyers have represented the United States in world championship competition. They include Eric Murray of Toronto; Charles Solomon of Philadelphia; Marshall Miles of San Bernardino; and New Yorkers B. Jay Becker and Lee Hazen, the star of today's hand.

In a recent rubber bridge game, Hazen showed he had lost none of the skill that made him a feared competitor some years back.

Hazen, South, was a trifle weak for a free bid of one spade in response to a takeout double once East removed the obligation to bid. However, as he would bid one spade had East passed, he felt he should make his normal response.

North's hand suddenly began to look very good. He cue-bid three hearts to show his power and ask South for clarification of his holding. Despite the fact that South did nothing to encourage him further, North opted for a spade slam, hoping that his diamonds would provide enough discards for South's losers.

West led the king of hearts, and when dummy came down declarer's chances were not very bright. However, Hazen worked out that, if West held precisely three diamonds and the ten of spades with one other honor, he could make the slam.

Accordingly, he won the ace of hearts and played his three top diamonds. The third diamond cooked East's goose. If he ruffed low, declarer would overruff and lead a trump to the ace, felling the queen. A fourth diamond would be led, and declarer would discard his losing heart as West ruffed with the king of spades for the only trick for the defense.

Therefore, East ruffed with the queen of spades, declarer discarding his losing heart. West played a heart and declarer ruffed. As West was marked with the king of spades for his opening bid, it was now an easy matter to finesse against West's king-ten of spades to land the slam.
