Holshouser Choice For GOP Office

RALEIGH (AP)—If North Carolina Gov. Jim Holshouser had been able to invent a candidate for state Republican chairman, he probably would have come up with someone much like Thomas S. Bennett.

Bennett, 39, is an easterner from Morehead City. Holshouser, a westerner, could not afford to choose another westerner to take the place of incumbent Frank Rouse. Rouse, of Kinston, has been considered by many eastern Republicans as their voice in the party's higher councils.

Bennett was also a Jim Gardner supporter. Holshouser's primary margin over Gardner in 1972 was razor-thin. His difficulties with Rouse began when Rouse broke with party protocol and supported Gardner. Another Gardner supporter might be able to undercut Rouse's support from that faction in the party.

Holshouser announced at a news conference Wednesday that he was backing Bennett, a lawyer who is chairman of the Carteret County Board of Commissioners. The new chairman will be elected at the party convention in November. Rouse has not said whether he will run.

Bennett, despite his support for Gardner in the 1972 primary, is an old and trusted associate of Holshouser.

The two men's careers at the University of North Carolina Law School overlapped, and they both lived Ruffin Dormitory, Bennett recalls that he had the dry cleaning concession in the dorm and used to pick up Holshouser's laundry.

They met again in 1963, when both were freshman members of the North Carolina House. They were young, and they were members of a small minority. Both their wives were pregnant.

"We had a lot in common, and we became good friends," Bennett recalled.

In 1966, Bennett nominated Holshouser for state chairman and managed his successful campaign at the GOP convention in Charlotte.

The 1972 gubernatorial campaign was the first time they found each other on opposite sides of a political fence. But, Bennett said, his support for Gardner was prompted by old loyalties from the 1968 campaign and by sectional pride.

"I worked as hard as I could for Holshouser when the primary was over," he said, in a telephone interview.

Bennett said he was at a social gathering at the Governor's Mansion in July when Holshouser mentioned that he might make a good state chairman. Bennett says he was amenable.

Bennett is a man whose roots in the Republican party do not run deep. He was registered as a Democrat until shortly before he ran for the legislature in 1962 at the age of 28.

A political acquaintance of Bennett's says he became a Republican mostly because the Democratic powers in Carteret County at the time were in the habit of making aspiring politicians toil in the party vineyards for many years before running for office.

Bennett says that was not a major reason. He says he looked at both parties and felt "more comfortable" with the GOP. In addition, his law partner at the time, Claude Wheatley, was a Republican elder statesman.

His experience in the legislature made him a confirmed partisan. Carteret County Democrats, he says, aligned themselves with former Democratic State Sen. Thomas White of Kinston to make sure none of his legislation passed in 1965.

Then they pushed through a local bill extending their terms on the county commission from two to four years. That "riled" Bennett so much that he came home and ran for the commission himself in 1968. He and four other Republicans were elected, and reelected in 1972.

Bennett says he has a "lucrative" law practice in Morehead City and can afford to devote most of his time to the state party.

He is, he says, "ambitious" and he does not rule out the possibility of running for state-wide office in the future. But that, he says, will take care of itself. "I haven't got any master plan."

Three Doctors Speak Against New Med School

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina does not have a doctor shortage; it has "too many specialists and not enough generalists," a family practitioner has told a legislative committee.

Dr. Amos Johnson of Garland, president of the American Board of Family Practice, was one of three doctors who testified Wednesday before a joint committee on medical manpower. All opposed construction of a four-year medical school at East Carolina University in Greenville.

Dr. Johnson said the state should try to control the type of doctor produced in the existing medical schools. They are the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke University in Durham, and Bowman Gray in Winston-Salem.

He said the state now gives these schools money without stipulating how it is going to be spent.

"The whole thing has gotten grossly out of kilter," he said. "We have 75 per cent too many surgeons in this state, which means that a lot of people are getting unnecessarily cut."

Dr. Johnson also said the state should change its medical training and residency programs to insure that more family practitioners are trained.

The two other doctors testifying had different suggestions. Dr. George G. Gilbert, president of the state medical society, said more programs like UNC's Area Health Education Centers are needed. These centers, he said, get doctors out into rural areas for their postgraduate residency work. The location of a doctor's residency, he said, is much more likely to influence where he practices than the location of his medical school.

Dr. Gilbert said this would be a more effective and less expensive way to alleviate the shortage of doctors in rural areas than expanding the current one-year program at ECU.

Dr. Richard Janeway, dean of Bowman Gray, said there was no shortage of physicians. He said the number of North Carolina residents being trained in the three existing schools had increased in the last few years, and the increase would become apparent to the people in a few years.

Agnew Angrily Hits 'Malicious' Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following are the highlights of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's news conference Wednesday during which he answered questions concerning reports he is under investigation in Baltimore by a U.S. grand jury.

THE INVESTIGATION. Agnew said he received a letter Aug. 2 from U.S. attorney George Beall informing him he was involved in a grand jury investigation of possible bribery, tax fraud, extortion and conspiracy.

KICKBACK CHARGES. Asked about reports that he got $1,000 a week in kickbacks from Baltimore-area contractors while governor of Maryland, Agnew said they were "damned lies" and said the federal investigation of him was prompted by "false, scurrilous and malicious" rumors. "I have no expectation of being indicted," he said.

HIS FUTURE. Asked if he had given any thought to resigning, or at least stepping down for the duration of the investigation, Agnew replied, "I have not." He said the charges and the investigation have taken up a lot of his time since Aug. 2 but have not prevented him from carrying out his duties as vice president.

THE PRESIDENT. Agnew said when he first heard rumors he might be involved in an investigation, he discussed them with Gen. Alexander Haig, the White House chief of staff, who then went to President Nixon. He said he may have, since then, discussed the matter with Nixon briefly and then on Tuesday, the two met for an hour.

PRESIDENTIAL REACTION. Agnew said he was satisfied with Nixon's statement of support and added, "I think the vice president of the United States should stand on his own feet. It really isn't that important what a President says although I welcome the President's support...I'm not looking around for people to support me."

HIS ACCUSERS. Asked about the motives of those leaking stories to the news media, Agnew said he didn't know who they were. "One of the things the press does best is protect its sources," he said. "I could not comment on the motives of individuals because I don't know who they are." But he said if the accusations came from those under investigation, then they come from people "in deep trouble who are looking to extricate themselves."

THE GRAND JURY. Agnew said if he was asked to appear before the grand jury he would consult with his attorneys. As for material the grand jury might ask to see, Agnew said he would make available what was needed at the appropriate time, in the appropriate way to the appropriate people.

Fuel Allocation Program Aired; Not Implemented

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration today outlined an eight-point program for mandatory allocation of petroleum products but said it had no immediate plans to implement the proposal.

"We are not now planning to implement a mandatory program at any specific time in the foreseeable future," said President Nixon's top energy aide, former Colorado Gov. John A. Love.

"We are attempting to develop the best program; however, in recognition that circumstances in the future may require such a program," he said.

Love said the mandatory allocation program was being offered to give the public the opportunity to consider the problems involved and to make comments on how to help remedy the problem.

He welcomed debate over the proposed program, saying that "this or any other mandatory program runs the very great risk of reducing, not increasing, the available supplies of fuels."

Love said a voluntary allocation plan announced earlier by the administration would remain in effect for the time being.

Love said he has urged price controls "which fully recognize the need for increased supply."

He said that an announcement will be made Friday on final Phase 4 rules which he said he believed "will facilitate increased imports of both crude oil and products, as well as increased domestic production ..."

He said the Phase 4 regulations will give special attention to meeting the problems of heating oil for his winter.

Love emphasized his intention "to do all in my power to insure that fair play prevails" for independent petroleum dealers.

Substitute Cow

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)—The Sunshine Dairy has begun production of milk that doesn't come from a cow, and will cost 59 cents a half gallon when it comes to market next month. It's called Dairine and is made of soybean fats and protein, and an emulsifier.

It has been patented by a resident of Florida, and has been on sale in that state. It looks like milk, tastes something like the real thing, is said to contain no cholesterol, and can keep four to eight weeks with normal refrigeration.

Collision At Williamston Killed Three

WILLIAMSTON—An early morning collision today at the intersection of U.S. 13-U.S. 17 and Main Street here resulted in the deaths of three people and critically injured a fourth individual, the Police Department reported.

Police officials said Rodger E. Kelley, 18, of Clinton, Ind. and two passengers in the car he was driving were killed when the vehicle collided with a tractor-trailer about 6:30 a.m.

A passenger in the Kelley car, Arthur G. Sibert, 29, of Charleston, S.C. was reported in critical condition and was transferred to Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville after receiving emergency treatment at the hospital here.

Investigators reported the two passengers killed in the Kelley car had not been identified by late this morning. One was a white male and the other a white female.

Officers said the Kelley car—traveling along Main Street—failed to stop for a stop sign and collided with a tractor-trailer driven by Tyler White of Askewville.

The force of the impact ruptured the gas tanks on the truck and caused a fire to erupt, officers reported, but the blaze was extinguished by White using a fire extinguisher carried on the truck.

White, 45, was not injured, according to officers who set damage to his truck at $1,000. The car driven by Kelley was listed as a total loss.

Investigation of the incident is continuing.

Balloonist Is Down In Ocean

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — An American balloonist who left Maine for Europe Wednesday ditched in the choppy Atlantic today after running into thunderstorms along the coast of Newfoundland, the Canadian Coast Guard reported.

It said Bob Sparks was afloat in his aluminum gondola and that the Canadian Coast Guard ship Gilbert was en route from St. John's, Nfld., to pick him up.

Capt. Rod MacMillan said Canadian Air Force planes were circling overhead and keeping an eye on Sparks, who ditched about 6 a.m. EDT.

The coast guard reported earlier that Sparks began losing altitude east of Prince Edward Island but later signaled his balloon had stabilized.

It said Sparks, who had hoped to make the first trans-Atlantic balloon crossing, had broadcast a Mayday distress signal about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The Coast Guard said it believed Sparks was in no trouble. Seas were reported comparatively light, and visibility was fair.

Sparks was reported down about 50 miles east of St. John's. The Gilbert had a helicopter aboard to assist in his rescue.

City Council Faces 13 Business Items Tonight

Some 13 items of business are on the agenda for tonight's regular meeting of the City Council scheduled for 8 p.m. at city hall.

Items under old business include: appointments to the Board of Adjustments, Human Relations Council and Permanent Building Codes Review Board; a public hearing on a request for rezoning of the W.J. 14th Street Extended from R-9 to Office and Institutional and Pat Thomas property located east of Greenville Golf and Country Club and adjacent to Country Club Apartments from R-15 to R-6;

A resolution approving the 1973-1974 Positive Action Program; the sale of a parcel in Newtown; a request for renaming of Halifax Street from Raleigh Avenue to 14th Street to Farmville Boulevard; and bids for a lawn tractor and floor jack for the Public Works Department.

Poundage, Prices Rise On Greenville Market

An increase in both poundage and price average on the Greenville Tobacco Market over Tuesday was recorded on yesterday's sale.

Greenville warehouses sold 660,282 pounds Wednesday for $557,721, an average of $84.47 per hundred pounds. Tuesday's average here was $83.70 on 649,287 pounds.

The local market recorded the second highest average among the nine operating on the Eastern Belt yesterday. Smithfield, which opened Tuesday, posted an $85.04 average and was the only market to top $85 per hundred.

Leaf average on the Farmville tobacco Market fell off from Tuesday's opening figure, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade. He said that the market averaged $83.81 per hundred on sales of 326,392 pounds for $273,565. Tuesday's average was $84.33.

Offerings on the Farmville market Wednesday consisted of more low and poor grades than on opening day, the sales supervisor reported. He added that, in addition to poor grades, several piles of tobacco carried over from last year appeared on all warehouse floors.

Grade for grade, Williams said, prices remained steady with a few of the primings, slightly weaker. With other grades slightly stronger the increase off set the decline in quality, he noted.

"Quality grades of lugs and cutters are in strong demand by all buying companies," Williams reported. "According to the pattern of buying, all firms are seeking good grades of quality leaf free from sand, string, and other foreign matter."

Stabilization receipts in Farmville totaled 4,806 pounds Wednesday.

According to the Market News Service in Wilson, Stabilization receipts on the belt amounted to 51,340 pounds yesterday and represented some 1.2 per cent of the overall volume.

The following tabulation, compiled by the News Service, shows the results of belt activities on Wednesday.

Market	Pounds	Dollars	Average
Farmville	326,392	$273,565	$83.81
Goldboro	320,044	266,804	83.36

80,000 Creditors Can't Agree On Koscot Debts

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Attempts to organize a creditors' committee to negotiate the settlement of $26 million in debts against Koscot Interplanetary Inc. ended in a squabble Wednesday when attorneys for 80,000 creditors couldn't agree on who should be selected.

Federal Bankruptcy Referee Alexander Paskay scheduled a hearing for Aug. 29 into allegations that distributors, working in concert with Koscot founder Glenn W. Turner, obtained voting proxies for the establishment of a creditors committee by questionable means.

Paskay said he had hundreds of complaints about the proxy form, which he said was misleading. Because of the way it was worded, he said, people felt they had to vote for an ad hoc committee slate in order to file a claim.

That committee was picked during a large but select meeting of creditors in Orlando on July 13 — well before the first creditors meeting on the cosmetics firm's debts.

"The hearing will be to determine whether the proxies solicited should be nullified either because of the overwhelming misleading character of them or because the evidence satisfies me that they were solicited at the behest of Koscot," Paskay said at the end of a day-long meeting in Bankruptcy Court.

The proceeding's purpose was to pick a committee and set a date for Koscot to submit to the court a plan to pay its debts. Paskay told Koscot attorneys to file the plan by Oct. 5, whether or not there is a creditors committee.

Koscot, once the chief money-maker in Turner's once-vast empire, filed a petition July 3 under the Federal Bankruptcy Act to continue business in debtor status while a settlement is worked out.

The company listed liabilities of $26 million and assets of $11 million. Koscot President Donald Monroe testified Wednesday that net profit for the month of July was $5,000.

Notices of Wednesday's meeting went out to 66,000 persons. Helmed police guarded the federal courthouse while federal marshals screened entering lawyers, creditors and newsmen under the tight security imposed by Paskay, who said earlier that he expected a possible crowd of some 6,000 people.

However, about 40 lawyers — representing blocks of creditors, the government and Koscot — and fewer than 100 creditors and Koscot supporters turned out.

Paskay barred settlement of any civil claims against the embattled firm during the proceedings, including payment of a $3.3 million judgment recently awarded 75,000 creditors by a federal court in Pittsburgh.

Attorneys were at odds over which creditor factions should sit on the committee: distributors still actively selling; trade creditors, or lawyers representing dissatisfied distributors.

Political Bonus Is Discounted

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland city officials discount complaints that a new anti-litter campaign slogan involves a political bonus for Mayor Ralph J. Perk in a campaign year.

The new signs, attached to trash containers in downtown Cleveland, say: "Help Perk Up Cleveland."

City Waste Collection Commissioner Robert Beasley said other cities use their mayors' names without complaints.

He said Pittsburgh trash cans bear the notation "For Pete's Sake, Toss It Away." Pittsburgh's Mayor is named Pete Flaherty.

In Chicago "Mayor Daley's name is on every garbage truck," he said.

"What's wrong with using Perk?" Beasley said. "He is the mayor."

Deer Poaching Up In 2 States

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There is more poaching this year in Texas and Pennsylvania, the states with the largest deer harvest, and one game official says it must be due to the high meat prices.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission reported Wednesday that deer poaching had gone up 60 per cent this year, with reports of 435 illegal deer kills in the first half of 1973, compared with 269 in the same period of 1972.

"We expect even more this fall as meat prices increase," said James A. Brown, the commission's law enforcement chief.

Brown recommended special efforts to recruit sportsmen and rural residents to report violations of the anti-poaching law. Violators can be fined $100 and lose their hunting privileges for three years.

Grover Simpson, a game warden in Austin, Tex., called it the worst outbreak of illegal nighttime deer hunting he's ever seen. The state's game wardens have been told to mount a major crackdown on illegal hunters.

The meat situation was also being blamed for other illegal food forays.

Cattle rustling is on the increase in central and northern New York State. A state trooper in Malone said normal rustling claims two or three head of cattle each summer. Rustlers are now reported making off with at least that many by the week.

With meat still hard to get, many retail stores were filling their meat counters with other items and some outlets said shoppers seemed to be getting more interested in beef substitutes.

"Pork is number one here and is about the only meat that most people are buying," said Jim Payne, store manager of a Super Foods Store in Montgomery, Ala.

Police Will Escort Birds

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Migrating robins will get a police escort through the New Brunswick, Canada, blueberry fields this month.

The blueberry farmers have greeted the cheery robin chirping with gunfire in years past as the birds settled on fruiting berry patches.

The farmers blame the robins' recent interest in blueberries on a pesticide spraying campaign several years ago that wiped out the budworm, at one time the main dish on the robin's diet.

But the Canadian government—responding to a massive publicity campaign to save the birds—refused to issue the farmers robin-shooting permits this year.

The Mounties were ordered into the blueberry fields for the rest of the month to make certain the birds are not harmed.

The International Fund for Animal Welfare, which stirred the public outcry against shooting robins, will fly an airplane over the fields to doublecheck on some farmers' threats to shoot the birds even though the permits were not issued.

New Pastor For Church

The Rev. Alvis E. Harris assumed duties Sunday as the new pastor of the Maranatha Free Will Baptist Church, located at 1407 E. 14th St.

A native of Grifton, the Rev. Harris attended school there, graduating 1954. He was employed at the Dupont Plant near Kinston until 1960 and then entered Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tenn.

After graduation from college, he pastored churches in Cove City and Charleston Heights, S.C. He is married to the former Jean Manning of Ayden and they have three children.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said Wednesday that prices should level off by the end of the year but he told housewives that the days of inexpensive beef are over.

Butz said the Phase 4 economic program will lead into "Phase 5, which will be phase out" for controls.

A number of supermarket chains have been buying and slaughtering their own cattle, a practice known as custom slaughtering, and New York City is exploring the possibility of doing the same.

Purchase Commissioner Marvin Gersten said the New York City may buy meat on the hoof to serve at some of its 155,000 daily meals. The city will not be getting beef from its regular suppliers this month.

Three more slaughterhouses in Los Angeles County announced they were closing, raising to 21 the number of meat packing plants in the county that plan to close by the weekend.

Major resort hotels on the strip in Las Vegas say they have enough steak and prime rib on hand for the current week but they give a less optimistic outlook for next week. The hotels serve anywhere from 15,000 to 25,000 pounds of beef per week.

Two-Ton Lady's Teen Caught Between Religion And Horse Birthday To Be Observed

By OLE DUUS
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN (AP) — Elaborate celebrations are in preparation for the 50th birthday of a popular lady, who is the mother of 18, weighs about two tons and downs about 25 kilos of food for breakfast.

There will be torchlights for Maren, the world's oldest hippopotamus. But she will probably ignore it all and spend the day the way she has spent most of the non-eating hours of her long life: submerged in her pool at Copenhagen's zoo.

Zoologists say that no wild hippopotamus in Africa, which is where hippos live, is known to have lived to become more than 42 years old. And records show that, except for Maren, no hippo has lived that long in captivity.

Born in captivity at the Hagenbeck zoo of Hamburg, West Germany, in 1923 and moved here four years later, Maren has outlived one husband plus a succession of keepers and so far has never had a day of serious illness.

"In the wild she would probably have succumbed several years ago," said Jens Elm, the keeper who has been looking after Maren for the last 14 years.

At 50, Maren has all her teeth, but age is telling when she climbs out of the pool, increasingly slow and stiff-legged. Her appetite is undiminished, but she eats slowly now, needing several hours for breakfast or supper.

Her two daily meals come to a total of 50 kilos of hay, beet or alfalfa (lucerne) plus a heavy dose of vitamins.

Last year Maren moved into a new and larger house with two pools, one outdoors, which she shares with Rasmus II, her somali-born second husband who is 28 years her junior, but heavier by half a ton.

In her first, long and happy marriage with Rasmus I, who died soon after World War II, Maren had 13 hippo children. Her second marriage brought another five children, and Maren founded a dynasty now spread to zoos across the world.

"There is no count of Maren's grandchildren, but if he is still alive her oldest child would be 42 years old now," said keeper Elm.

Maren will have no more children. Her last was born in 1965, and Rasmus II, at 22 still a young man, is in fact in need of a new wife.

"But nobody knows how much longer Maren may live," said Elm. "As of now there is no plan to rob her of her spouse and leave her to live the rest of her days in solitude."

Maren treats her younger husband with firmness, does not permit him to eat before she has had first choice or to enter the pool before she is in it.

If Elm tries to push her around or make changes that upset her sleep-eat pattern she opens up her enormous mouth and makes ominous sounds that Elm, even after 14 years of friendship, would never dare to ignore.

But Maren graciously accepts a good rub-down on the back with a scrubbing-brush.

On Maren's birthday the Copenhagen Zoo will, for the first time, stay open in the evening. The management expects thousands of well-wishers to call on Maren, one of the zoo's most popular animals, and to join torchlit celebrations including music and open-air dance.

DEAR ABBY: I have always been a horse lover, and at age 13, I finally got my own horse. Now, two years later, we are sort of a team.

We [me and my horse] were selected to represent our county at a six-state horse exposition. I was thrilled, but here is my problem:

The horse show falls on the same dates as the High Holy Days, and I am Jewish!

What can I do? This means everything in the world to me, and I am really not all that Jewish, but my parents are. and they won't hear of my taking part in the horse show on the High Holy Days. I am so unhappy about this I am becoming deeply prejudiced against Judaism. What can I say, to my parents to convince them that horses mean as much to me as their religion means to them?

LOVES HORSES

DEAR LOVES: I can't think of anything you can say to convince them. Even tho it's a dead heat, they win, because they're the parents, and you're the minor. Sorry.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem which is ruining my life. I have been to doctors everywhere and none of them can help me. In fact, several of them have suggested I am "imagining" things, but I KNOW I'm not.

I can smell a strange unpleasant odor about myself all the time. I bathe every morning and put on fresh underwear, but I still smell bad. After I've done my housework, I bathe again and smell on fresh underwear. No improvement. It is not perspiration, either. I use plenty of soap, deodorant, and cologne, but I can't get rid of that terrible odor. Even tho no one has mentioned it to me, I know they can smell it, too, so I don't ever get close to anyone.

The doctors say I am a healthy woman. My scalp is always clean [I don't even have dandruff!], and I brush my teeth and gargle several times a day. And it's not my feet, either.

Couple Weds In Recent Ceremony

The marriage of Ella Mitchell Powers and Victor Mallenbaum was celebrated with a ceremony Sunday July 29, at 7:00 p.m. at the Candewick Inn near here.

The ceremony was conducted by Dr. Larry Means and was interspersed with Hebrew readings by the bridegroom. In accordance with Jewish tradition, the couple stood together under a canopy.

Dr. Rodney Schmidt and Mrs. Barbara Caspar played selections from Sonata III by Handel and Sonatas I and II by Vivaldi for piano and violin.

Steven Mitchell, brother of the bride, accompanied her to the canopy and Sidney A. Mallenbaum attended his father as best man.

The bride wore a floor-length country gown trimmed with old lace and ivory satin. In her hair she wore a chain of lace and pink rosebuds and carried a similar bouquet.

the ceremony. At the bridal table, the couple was joined by their children, Sidney, Scarlett, and Illana. After dinner, guests were invited for champagne. Wedding cake was served by Mrs. Mary Schmidt.

Mrs. Mallenbaum teaches art at Aycock Junior High School and Dr. Mallenbaum is in the Psychology Department at East Carolina University.

Dressed alike in gowns of pink dotted Swiss and carrying pink nosegays were bride's attendants, Miss Maria Mitchell, Miss Ilana Mallenbaum, and Miss Scarlett Powers. Miss Marcy Mitchell, sister of the bride, attended as maid of honor and wore a pink Elizabethan gown with puffed off-the-sleeves and a green sating sash.

A reception and dinner in the Blue Room of the Inn followed

Bridesmaids Luncheon Given Miss Morgan

Miss Vickie Lynn Morgan of Greenville, bride-elect of Del Burns of Goldsboro, was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Saturday given by Mrs. Frank Meacham of Greenville.

The honoree was presented a corsage of mums and a gift of silver by Miss Julie Meacham, junior bridesmaid.

The bridesmaids were remembered with engraved silver bowls by the bride.

Special guests were Mrs. Jack P. Morgan, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. D.B. Burns, mother of the bridegroom-elect.

When your gravy is lumpy you can whirr it in the electric blender for a smooth result.

SMELLS BAD JN-ROANOKE

DEAR SMELLS: Go to one more doctor. A psychiatrist. He may be able to sniff out the answer.

DEAR ABBY: My dad has been bald for 18 years or longer. I have seen pictures of him when he had hair, and they just don't look like Dad.

Mom got him to get a hairpiece—the kind they cut and style for the individual. When Dad came home with it he looked so strange to me. He is 39 years old, Abby, and he doesn't have to look like a kid of 20. Mom is crazy about it, and I'm not sure whether Dad wears it to please Mom or himself, but he wears it all the time.

I can't get used to it. Do you think he ought to wear it or not?

HIS DAUGHTER (Age 18)

DEAR DAUGHTER: If Dad likes it, he should wear it. Keep quiet. You'll get used to it.

No Time For Rash Judgments

It is a mournful time for the U.S. citizen as he comes through the shock of the Watergate investigation only to be confronted with the revelation that the vice president is the object of a criminal investigation.

The announcement was made by Vice President Agnew himself on Monday night and since then news stories have been appearing about investigation of alleged kick-backs dating back to the days when Agnew was elected Baltimore County executive.

It is getting tiresome to say so, but the vice president of the United States, as every other citizen, is entitled to the right to be presumed innocent until proven guilty.

Certainly at this point all of us should avoid making rash judgements in this matter. It is always possible that someone facing jail in a Maryland investigation, has unjustifiably implicated the vice president in hopes of gaining leniency from the courts. A smart operator, recognizing how Watergate has weakened the administration, might see this as a good gamble.

The public has little to make an assumption on, so far. Vice President Agnew has announced the investigation is underway and the Justice Department is saying nothing about what it has uncovered.

Certainly the investigation should be pursued with vigor and the Justice Department should get at the truth. In the meantime the American public should reserve judgment in this most serious matter until concrete information is available.

Perhaps The Best Of Blood Bank Answers

Representatives of 19 organizations and communities met at the Moose Lodge this week to plan for a proposed Blood Donor Pledge Index.

We hope this is indicative of a rising concern among our citizens about the crisis that our Red Cross Blood program faces.

Collections are consistently running short and blood is sometimes not available. One has only to spend a few hours in the emergency area of the hospital to realize how critical the blood shortage can be.

Hopefully the efforts underway now will bring us to a solution to the chronic problem of a blood shortage.

Frank Rouse's Hard Decision

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH—North Carolina Republican Party Chairman Frank Rouse is in a fight that seems politically impossible to win and he knows it—but it'll come as a great surprise if he backs away from it.

Rouse wants badly to serve another term as chairman of his party, but he and Gene Anderson—Gov. Jim Holshouser's Main Man—absolutely detest each other. One day not long ago Rouse took a yellow legal pad full of notes in to see Gov. Holshouser. He felt they were legitimate complaints about Anderson. He read them, while the Governor listened without commenting. When Rouse got through, Holshouser told him: "Frank, it's a closed issue. He's here and you've got to work with him."

Rouse is now trying to line support for a bid to reclaim the chairmanship. On Monday of this week, he talked the matter over with Sen. Jesse Helms. Rouse and Gov. Holshouser got together for a talk on Tuesday.

It's highly likely that Sen. Helms is going to be asked to join this inter-party feud. Helms likes Rouse and wants him to keep the chairmanship's job. Whether Helms is willing to come and fight openly for Rouse is a question that hasn't been answered at this point.

There are reports circulating in political circles that Sen. Helms and Gov. Holshouser have had their words. One source says Holshouser didn't like it a bit when Helms came out and said Republicans should take over the ECU med school issue and make hay with it.

There seems like doubt but what Rouse is going to listen closely to what Sen. Helms advises. But even if Helms advises Rouse to go after the chairmanship—and an educated guess says that's what Helms will advise—Rouse still has a tough decision.

Gov. Holshouser, it would appear, is going down the line with Anderson, a man he considers the best political mind in North Carolina. This would mean Rouse would not only have to fight Anderson, but also the Governor, and this is a step he doesn't want to take. The Republicans waited better than 70 years to get to the Governor's Mansion—and they certainly don't want their man cut by members of his own party.

There could be a compromise of sorts reached here. For instance, Gov. Holshouser could give Rouse another important job—maybe a National Committee—to get him out of the chairmanship's position. People close to Rouse, however, say he wouldn't be interested in such a move. He wants to be party chairman.

Rouse has been touring the state, trying to determine if he has the support to win the chairmanship if it all comes down to an old-fashioned political battle. His supporters claim the votes are there.

Said one Rouse backer: "Our support is silent. People don't want to say things in public, in view of the circumstances. But when it comes time to vote in private, Frank will have more than enough."

People opposed to Rouse will bring up the fact he left the chairmanship's post in last year's primary to work for Jim Gardner. Rouse's only defense will be that he read the polls and they Gardner would win and Holshouser couldn't.

The question then comes down to this: Is Rouse going to risk a fight and run?

He says he hasn't decided. But the feeling among politicians who know him is that Rouse is going to run. There would seem to be only two things that would keep him out of the race. One would be advice from Jesse Helms to get out and take another appointment. The other would be knowledge that he couldn't win. Rouse is like most other people. He hates to lose.

Politics is a changing business, but right now it's extremely doubtful that Sen. Helms will tell Rouse to hand 'em up. And if you can believe what people tell you, Rouse has better than a fighting chance of winning again.

Strength For Today

SUFFERING WITH SOMEONE

Compassion. Our Lord loved this word. It is derived from two Latin words which mean "suffering with." The modern German word for compassion, "Mitgefuehl," means literally to feel with or for. We are told that when Jesus looked on great crowds of miserable people, many of them lame, blind, or insane, he had compassion on them, and suffered with them. He never turned away with a sigh declaring that it was too bad that such conditions existed.

Almost anyone is capable of noting great wrongs in the world and protesting against them, but only a few people have the gift of compassion. The truly great reformers have always been people who, when they looked upon the pain and suffering of others, felt it keenly in their own flesh. Reformers who have looked upon people as abstractions or statistics have never been very effective. People who can feel compassion are fortunate because it gives them a sense of being needed and useful in a world which hopefully they can change for the better.

Saddest Reading Of '73

The mail brings from the FBI its annual report, bound in policeman blue and gray, dealing with crime in the United States. It is the saddest reading of the year.

This is true even though serious crime in 1972 showed its first drop in 17 years. The picture is by no means entirely dark. Except for shoplifting, most crimes against property showed significant declines in 1972. The number of law enforcement officers killed in action dropped perceptibly. Nearly a hundred cities reported decreases in major arrests, and some of these decreases were substantial:

Albany, New Bedford, Scranton, Stamford and Washington reported at least a 20 percent decline in their index of serious crime.

Yet when full account has been given to these encouraging aspects, and appalling situation remains. One thinks of these men in blue and gray, out on patrol across the nation. Over the past 10 years, 786 law enforcement officers have been slain by felons; last year alone saw 112 killed in 35 states. One-third of them died when they were alone and unassisted, answering some such routine calls as "domestic disturbance."

The nation's 268,000 law enforcement officers are struggling against crime trends that defy one's imagination. Think of these statistics, if you will, not in terms of numbers, but in terms of human passion, terror, and anguish; see these events in tears and bloodshed:

In 1962, police agencies reported 8,460 murders. Last year the figure was 18,520. There were 17,400 rapes in 1962. Last year saw 46,400. Robberies have more than tripled in this decade, from 110,300 to 374,600. Aggravated assaults have doubled, from 163,000 to 389,000.

The raw figures are sufficiently sobering, but they barely hint at underlying trends of profound concern. Police must cope daily with crime that is young, black, and increasingly female. Consider some figures that touch the heart:

Nearly 10 percent of all arrests last year were arrests of boys and girls under 15 years of age. More than 80,000 arrests were made of children under 10. Charges were placed in 150,000 cases against children of 11 or 12, in 435,000 cases against children of 13 or 14.

Most of these youthful offenses were crimes against property, chiefly vandalism, but the 1972 records showed—for those under 15 years of age—220 murders, 800 acts of rape, and 11,400 robberies. By the time they reach 18, thousands of these warped and violent youths have records of three or four convictions.

Blacks continue to be involved in crime in numbers far out of proportion to their 12 percent of the population. The records of 6,114 reporting agencies show that blacks were arrested in 60 percent of the murder cases, 67 percent of the robberies, and 40 percent of the rapes. The picture is especially serious among blacks under 18.

Perhaps the most shocking figures in the 1972 report have to do with the increasing involvement of young women

A Cub Scout's Burden

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that a Boy Scout cub gets tired of hearing: "If you want to do a good deed, Freddy, stay home and watch your little sister while mother goes shopping."

HAL BOYLE

"You were the smallest Cub Scout in your group, and now you're the smallest tenderfoot in the history of the Hawk Patrol."

"I think you look real cute in your summer uniform, Freddy. It shows up your knee dimples."

"Use a match, Freddy. I don't think it's a good idea to try to start the kitchen stove by rubbing two sticks together."

"If you want to do a good deed, Freddy, you can march over right now and apologize to that little girl for all the mean things you said to her yesterday."

"He saved up all winter to get enough money to buy himself a Boy Scout knife, and then what does he do? Fifteen minutes after he gets it, he cuts his finger with it."

"As your scoutmaster, Freddy, it is my duty to be sure you are prepared to deal with any emergency. Now just suppose a big hungry bear invades your tent on our first overnight hike. Just how would you handle him?"

"I hate to bother you at the office, dear, but can you leave for home a little early tonight? Freddy has been studying to win a merit badge in knots, and he's got himself so tied up in the rope I can't get him loose."

"If you want to do a good deed, Freddy, go help your mother with the dishes."

"Yes, Freddy, there is a chapter in the scouting Handbook that considers the subject of sex. But I think that in your case we can wait a year or two before we take it up."

"If you want to do a good deed, Freddy, go out to the backyard fence and bring in some firewood. You're not afraid of the dark at your age, are you?"

"You look a little bit guilty to me tonight, son. Are you sure that all day long you have been trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent?"

Public Forum

To the editor:

I'm a newcomer to Greenville and maybe I can see a few things that people who have lived here a time can't see. I think it's a great idea to redo downtown. A lot of downtowns are dead and dying. We need to start helping Greenville now.

This may sound like a small thing, but I think we ought to do away with the parking meters. Some may say we need the revenue, but I don't think that's so. When I first came to Greenville, I read that the city had a large surplus—we don't need the money. Start competing with the shopping centers now. It's just a lot nicer for shoppers not to have to worry about parking meters. Merchants can help themselves.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for publication must be limited to 300 words, and signed.

To the editor:

According to a recent Public Forum in this paper, the citizens of Greenville and Eastern North Carolina have struck out again. Why? The blame this time can be laid at the feet of our City Councilmen and other officials. Can Greenville still be living in the Dark Age?

According to this newspaper, employees of the Greenville Fire Department did not receive their holidays off last year. Also their pay has been put at a much lower level than the Police Department. This must be a severe blow to those men who protect our homes from fire, respond to the many auto accidents, heart attacks calls, strokes, shootings, and many other emergency situations that arise in our city.

Are there any members of the City Council with "guts" enough to admit you have made a mistake and to do something about it. If not there's an election coming up this fall and there are enough people in Greenville who have used the services of the Rescue Squad and the firemen to put some people in office who have a little common sense.

Don't give us the excuse of not enough money available. You city officials made sure there was an article in the paper about a tax reduction of property. Do you want a pat on the back? This tax reduction will make you look good at election time. Right? I'm a taxpayer. You have not made me happy with your actions.

Listen, people of Greenville, let's for once do something right. Write to the newspaper and demand to be heard. Call City Councilmen, Mayor, and other officials. Let's get ready for the coming election. Another thing, I know those men who average over 64 hours per week to protect our homes and lives would like to hear from us. Let's call them and let them know we're behind them all the way.

Nixon's Next Move Pondered

By GAYLORD SHAW
WASHINGTON (AP) — As the sun faded on a smoggy summer evening, President Nixon plied the Potomac searching for words to explain Watergate to his fellow Americans.

His dinner-time cruise Tuesday was a signal, to use a Nixonian sports cliché, that the ball was now in his court.

The Senate Watergate committee plopped it there on Tuesday when it recessed its hearings until after Labor Day.

Not long after the Senate Caucus Room emptied, Nixon gathered his top speechwriter, Raymond K. Price, and headed for the presidential yacht, Sequoia.

For two hours, they navigated the gentle chop of the river below Washington.

What they discussed wasn't disclosed, but it was clear that Nixon was accelerating preparation of his personal response to the swelling political scandal.

The White House insists that the President hasn't decided how or when he will make that response. But this scenario seems to be emerging:

Sometime soon, perhaps late this week but more likely next, Nixon will request a prime-time slot on the national television networks for an address from the White House.

This speech probably would last less than a half hour, but would give the President the forum to formally launch his effort to dispel the shadow

Watergate has cast on his second term.

The television appearance could coincide with the release of a presidential "white paper" giving a point-by-point rebuttal of charges leveled against him and his administration.

Next could come one or more news conferences, where Nixon would respond to direct questions on the controversy that has plunged his popularity in the polls to an all-time low.

Watergate Probe Staff Is Doing The Basic Work

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee's base of operations has shifted from the stately Caucus Room of the Old Senate Office Building, where the televised hearings were held, to the all-business auditorium in what Capitol Hill folk call the New S.O.B.

While the Senate's seven stars of daytime television enjoy a month-long recess, the 65 staff members of the committee are wrapping up what they've learned in the last three months and digging into the dirty tricks and tangled finances to be explored in the fall.

Several of the lawyers are concentrating for the moment on the committee's legal efforts to obtain what was, perhaps, the single greatest discovery of the committee to date: President Nixon's secret tapes.

That dramatic find and many other significant developments were the fruits of high-pressure, behind-the-scenes staff work as the committee struggled to keep up with its schedule of daily hearings. With the bright lights and television cameras at rest, the investigators hope to get a lot more sleep and take more time in preparing their next cases.

Seasoned trial lawyers and amateur Watergate watchers often complained that the senators failed to ask the right questions, let witnesses off the hook without subjecting them to stiff cross-examination.

The senators and staff lawyers countered they weren't conducting a trial and shouldn't be measured by the standards set for prosecutors. It was a trial of sorts, and millions of viewers sat in the jury box.

But the committee developed its case as it went along, springing surprises on itself possibly as often as it surprised unwitting witnesses. It would have been a prosecutor's nightmare.

Fortunately for the members, most surprises occurred in the New Senate Office Building, a block from the hearing room and omniscient cameras.

The seemingly endless days and nights of last-minute preparations centered in the auditorium, a windowless room down the hall and the upstairs offices of chief counsel Samuel Dash and minority counsel Fred D. Thompson.

In the auditorium, theater seats are piled on top of each other to make room for the carpeted false floor. A maze of temporary metal and glass office partitions divides the level lower half of the once sloping room. Overhead, a web of Erector-set-like metal bands stretches between the walls and ceilings, keeping the offices from falling on one another.

Some 15 lawyers, a half dozen investigators, 10 researchers and more than 30 clerks, secretaries and other office workers crowd into every available nook.

The office manager's office is in a projection booth overlooking the theater; a bank of stenographers sit at a long, curved committee desk on the stage; the documents cage is in a tiny alcove past the exit sign; key-punch operators and dictationists share stage left.

The lawyers and investigators occupy individual cubicles off the aisles and backstage. Each tiny office has a desk, file cabinet and a safe. A policeman at the lobby door keeps out the curious.

The auditorium, procured and converted by deputy chief counsel Rufus L. Edmisten, has been the nerve center of the Senate Watergate investigation. It has buzzed with activity at all hours with staff workers darting in and out on secretive, seemingly important missions. Visitors are rarely permitted inside.

The windowless room down the hall, a locked, unmarked, converted storage closet, is called "the sweat box" by some staffers. Most of the committee's staff interviews are conducted there, often at odd hours to keep from attracting the attention of the swarm of reporters who dash through the halls trying to keep up with the committee.

The closed-door interrogations often last for hours as investigators pick the minds of potential witnesses, searching for the many missing pieces of the Watergate puzzle. Senators occasionally sit in on key interviews, but they usually have been content to rely on the staff's written summaries. The information collected by the committee is more than any single person could get through in the time available.

All senators are given folders on each witness in advance, including interview summaries, a biographical sketch, office and telephone logs when available and copies of documents the staff expects to introduce at the hearings. It is then up to committee members and their aides to decide how to prepare their own questions.

Test Falcons To Clear Airports

By MIKE SHANAHAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The falcon, mascot of the Air Force Academy, is being flight-tested as a predator capable of clearing airport runways of birds that smash into planes.

The principal researcher reviving the ancient art of falconry for the Air Force is The Rev. Edwin Mattingly, a 55-year-old Roman Catholic priest who has been training the birds since his college days in Indiana.

In "Operation Prairie Chicken," Mattingly has been using falcons for two years to clear the rare birds from traditional breeding grounds amid the grass next to a runway at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo. Air Force researchers say they are consulting bird-lovers and environmentalists at every step of the experiment. Mattingly said his falcons' claws were dulled and none of the prairie chickens, an endangered species, was killed at Whiteman. But he conceded many probably died because they were flushed from their breeding grounds.

James Rod, an official of the National Audubon Society, said his organization has no objection to use of falcons for clearing out birds that are in plentiful supply. But he promised an investigation of Mattingly's experiment with prairie chickens.

Mattingly said falcons, used for centuries for hunting small game, are a last-resort solution to a problem that annually costs the Air Force $13.5 million in damage to planes.

Three other bases—Ellington in Texas, Vance in Oklahoma and Hill in Utah—are being considered as sites for more falcon experimentation.

Mattingly, who works at the special-weapons section of Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque, was awarded a $29,000 Pentagon research grant to conduct his experiment.

During two experiments in Missouri, Mattingly approached the breeding or "booming" ground of the prairie chicken with a falcon perched on his arm. At a signal, the bird flew 300 feet into the air before swooping in pursuit of the chickens, which Mattingly flushed out by firing a shotgun or sending in a hunting dog.

The idea was to persuade the approximately 100 prairie chickens that the falcon had established a "territorial prerogative" over the breeding ground the smaller birds had been occupying long before the runway was built.

in crime. In 1962, only 230 girls under 18 were arrested for narcotics violations. Last year the figure was 10,700. In this same period, the total number of arrests of young women has more than tripled, from 66,000 to 224,700.

The picture that emerges from all this is deeply disquieting. It is tempting to explain away some of the evidence in terms of the statistics themselves; the reporting of crime is considerably more comprehensive than it was even 10 to 15 years ago. It is reasonable to assume that in an affluent society, with more property to steal, more property will be stolen. A criminal's easy access to a handgun doubtless is a factor in soaring rates of robbery and murder.

None of this gets to the real causes. Somewhere along the line, the great teaching influences of our society—the home, the school, the church—have failed in their teaching of moral values. Adult institutions of government, politics, and industry evidently have failed to provide high examples of right conduct. The FBI's report is a diagnosis of terrible social sickness—a sickness that demands forms of medication it is not getting now.

For Some, House-Buying Can Be Very Profitable

WOULD-BE HOME BUYERS — Ginny and Riley Gibson have been looking all summer, but requirements may have killed their hopes. (AP Wirephoto)

Other Couples' Dream Seems To Drift Away

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Ginny and Riley Gibson have lost a lot of sleep in recent weeks. They're trying to buy their first home.

Like an increasing number of young couples, the Gibsons are seeing their dreams drift away. The reason is money—or lack of it. Money is extremely tight these days. That has made mortgages almost impossible to obtain in some parts of the country or has sent interest rates skyrocketing.

Riley, 26, an Alabama Health Department employee, and Ginny, 25, an Alabama Journal reporter, have been living in a rented brick house since their marriage four years ago. They pay $125 a month.

"It's very small, and it's getting smaller every day," Ginny said. "We've been renting for four years, and we have nothing to show for it."

"It's a basic thing when you get married. You want a home. You want permanence."

The Gibsons, who have a 3-year-old son, looked at homes the past two years, but the search didn't begin in earnest until this summer, after they'd saved more than $4,000 for a down payment. They thought that would be enough to buy the kind of home they wanted.

They soon found it wasn't.

"I have no sympathy for realtors," said Ginny, who did most of the house hunting. "I would tell them what we wanted, and they would inevitably show me something different ..."

"They showed me $35,000 and $40,000 homes that were crack-boxes, that just weren't soundly constructed. There was no way we could afford that. It got to the point where I would get to the front door and say 'no' before even going in."

One $35,000 house would have required an $18,000 down payment, Riley said, shaking his head.

"It's really impossible for a young couple to buy a home if you don't have thousands and thousands of dollars," added his wife.

But finally they found "exactly what we wanted," she said.

The house is set on more than an acre of land in lush, green country, seven miles from downtown. It has four bedrooms, two baths, a combination kitchen-dining room and a spacious living room with exposed beams and a stone fireplace.

Best of all, the 15-year-old house cost $18,000. The Gibsons thought that, with their $16,000 combined income, they would have no trouble getting a $14,000 loan, after a $4,000 down payment.

But they were wrong.

They weren't eligible for an FHA or VA loan because the house is in a flood-control zone—less than half a mile from a river. They could not qualify for another government program because their income was too high.

Banks and savings and loan associations were not loaning any money because they had none. "I called one savings and loan, and the man said they weren't even taking applications," Ginny said.

Then came a series of fruitless queries to mortgage companies.

"The interest rates were ridiculous. They ran eight per cent on the total amount of the loan—not on decreasing principle—for the entire period, plus discount points," said Ginny. Discount points are fees paid by both seller and buyer.

"We would be paying $250 a month for an $18,000 house," Riley added. "We may as well be interested in a $60,000 house. We just can't afford it."

He figures that, with the loan, the home eventually would cost $25,600.

"One year ago, we could have gotten this house with no problem," he said.

Finally, the Gibsons found a mortgage company that would give them a 15-year loan at eight per cent interest on a decreasing principal. The monthly payments would be $145. But the company requires a $5,400 down payment.

"We're having second thoughts about the house now," said Ginny. "We just don't know if we can swing it."

The Gibsons say the whole experience has been "educational."

"It's crazy," Ginny said. "A few months ago, I had never heard about Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Co.) or discount points. Now I could open an office to give advice on how to buy a home."

"You'd think that all the money in the world had been buried in a hole in Siberia. It's a hassle, a damn hassle."

"It's the personal things that hurt. We've started thinking how we want to decorate it, to make it ours... And now we may not get it. I just want to cry."

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 NT Pass ♣ Pass ♣ Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♣ South had good reason to complain about the unfortunate distribution of the club suit on this hand. However, North had an even more valid reason to complain about his partner's failure to take precautionary measures against the bad break.

With 19 points in prime controls, South's hand is too good for a one no trump opening bid. He opened one club and, after his partner showed at least 6 points with his raise, then decided to bid game at no trump.

West led the queen of hearts, and declarer saw no problem in the hand. He won the first trick in dummy and led the queen of clubs. East played low, as did declarer. West discarded the diamond seven, and declarer suddenly realized he was in trouble.

He continued with a low club, and East's ten forced the ace. Declarer tried the nine of clubs, but East was careful to let that win the trick. Declarer could score only three club tricks, and with five tricks in the other suits that brought his total to eight.

South bemoaned his fate. He pointed out that there was less than a 10 per cent chance of a 4-0 break, and felt that he had been handed a cruel blow by fate.

North agreed with his partner's mathematics while quarreling with his conclusion. He pointed out that South should have made his contract in spite of the unfortunate club division.

As South had five tricks in the other suits, he needed only four club tricks for his contract. Accordingly, he should have won the opening heart lead in his hand and led a low club toward dummy.

If West has all four missing clubs, he must play low and dummy's queen wins. Declarer plays a club to his ace and another club toward the jack, and must get four club tricks. If the clubs are 3-1, the defenders get only one club trick. And as the cards lie, East can capture the queen of clubs with the king. However, declarer can get to dummy with the king of hearts to finesse the nine of clubs, again making four tricks in the suit.

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer
WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — David and Barbara Matlow bought a home this summer, a three-bedroom split-level worth $77,000. It really was no big deal.

It was the Matlows' third purchase in five years; and each, because of his steadily rising salary and the spiraling value of housing, has been easier.

"Real estate is not an expense, it's an investment. There's no such thing as selling a house for less than what you paid for it," said Matlow, a 33-year-old marketing manager for a large pharmaceutical firm in New York.

The formula has worked well for Matlow. He paid $32,000 for his first home and sold it 18 months later at a profit of 12 per cent. Sale of the second house brought a 30 per cent profit.

Now, as was the case when the Matlows occupied their present home in mid-July, many home buyers are facing a tight market, especially those purchasing their first home. Mortgages are difficult to get in some areas. Interest rates are running as high as nine per cent, where available.

Matlow had no trouble getting a 7 1/4 per cent mortgage on his present home. He was able to make a 50 per cent down payment.

"We extended ourselves a bit with this house but figured it was worth it for several reasons," said Matlow. "Real estate is appreciating at a phenomenal rate. This house will not be worth less than what we paid for it when we decide to move. I don't think I'll be making less money than I make now. And we knew we would be happier than ever before in a house like this."

Matlow earns under $35,000 annually, and he and his wife have two children, aged 6 and 7.

Barbara Matlow, 32, still remembers their first house in New Haven. They found it after a month's search of more than 30 homes in the spring of 1968. "We were looking for something in the $20,000 range. A two-story, three-bedroom house with a nice size family room, a large back yard, in an area with good schools and nice people," she said.

They found a well-kept, 17-year-old home costing $32,000, more than they wanted to pay on an income of $15,000. But they decided the house was worth it, put down 30 per cent and took out a 25-year mortgage at 6 1/2 per cent.

Eighteen months later, Matlow was promoted to sales manager for southern New England, and they sold the house within two weeks for $36,000.

The Matlows moved to Framingham, Mass., and settled in a neighborhood filled with rising young executives like David who knew they'd be moving on. They paid $36,000—40 per cent down on a 6 1/4 per cent mortgage—for the 6-year-old house. They were its fourth owners.

"We lived in the house with the intention of upgrading it for resale," said Mrs. Matlow. She redecorated the master bedroom, adding paisley-patterned window shades and matching drapes, touched up various furniture.

"If the house shows well, it does something psychologically for the people who come to look at it," she said. "We figured we spent about $300 for redecorating, and that probably added about $2,000 to its asking price when time came to sell."

When Matlow was transferred to New York in May, they sold the house for $46,000 to a young couple looking for its first home. It took less than three weeks.

Westport is a residential community of about 28,000 about 75 minutes by train from New York. The average income is about $21,000, and the average selling price of a house last year was $71,222.

Some banks in the Westport area have set mortgage limits of $60,000 to $75,000 on any price house making it difficult for buyers of higher-priced homes. But realtors say demand for homes exceeds the supply.

Matlow said he has heard of young couples who "can't get mortgages. And as a successful home owner at 33, his advice to young people is:

"Project ahead into the future. Think of the money you'll be earning, the kind of life you'll be living. One should not make decisions on the circumstances of today. Things change so fast. One thing is sure, a house will be worth a lot more in the future."

Rapid Response By Agnew Stands Out In Contrast

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Their situations are different, but Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's rapid response to allegations of wrongdoing stands in stark contrast to President Nixon's silence on Watergate.

Nixon, who soon plans to take his case again to the public, never found himself directly confronted with the type of accusations leveled against Agnew—a fact that White House aides are quick to point out.

"There is no parallel, no parallel situation at all," said one presidential aide. "There's a world of difference."

Agnew himself made somewhat the same point in his news conference Wednesday. He observed that Nixon had not gotten a letter from the U.S. attorney advising him he was under investigation for possible violation of criminal statutes, as the vice president had.

Thus far, the allegations are just that. No charges have been filed against Agnew and no grand jury is considering the case.

The vice president called the news conference to confront allegations that he was involved in a kickback-bribery scheme in connection with government contractors. He denied the accusations as "damned lies."

In Nixon's case, the allegations have been less direct. Basically, investigators are checking whether the President allowed subordinates to cover up criminal activities involved in the Watergate bugging. As far as is known, no one has alleged to a federal prosecutor that Nixon committed a crime.

But in the public mind, the differences between Nixon's and Agnew's situations are blurred. The man in the street has found his nation's top two leaders cast under a cloud of suspicion—and is finding that their responses differ.

In the days following the Watergate break-in almost 14 months ago, Nixon spokesmen sought to dismiss the affair as a "third-rate burglary." At an Aug. 29, 1972, news conference, the President said investigation by White House Counsel John W. Dean III showed no one presently employed in the administration was involved—an assertion later questioned by the since-fired Dean.

During the 1972 presidential campaign, Nixon continued to stand aloof from the Watergate scandal. But, in the months after his second inauguration, continuing disclosures forced him onto television on April 30. At that time he announced he had personally taken charge of the investigation, had fired Dean and had accepted the resignations of close aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, and Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst.

Later, May 22, came another presidential denial of awareness or involvement in the Watergate case. Since then, there has been silence. Now, with the Senate committee investigation in recess, Nixon is at his Camp David retreat preparing a public response to the latest Watergate charges.

In contrast to Nixon's seemingly laggard defense of himself and his administration, Agnew struck quickly.

Even as newspapers Monday night were preparing to disclose that he was under investigation, Agnew distributed a brief statement acknowledging the probe and proclaiming his innocence.

His Monday night statement said he would have no further comment until the investigation was completed. But after Tuesday and Wednesday brought more headlines linking his name to kickback allegations, the vice president summoned the news conference to repeat his denials and field questions for 31 minutes.

Would he deny allegations that he received a $1,000-a-week kickback? "I am denying them outright." Did Baltimore County contractors ever provide him a political slush fund? "No." Had he considered stepping aside during the investigation? "I have not."

Even as Agnew faced the questions in a windowless conference room in the Executive Office Building, Nixon was continuing to work on his response to Watergate across the street in the White House.

After receiving reports on the vice president's news conference, Nixon boarded his helicopter on the White House lawn and headed for the woody seclusion of Camp David to complete the statement he will deliver.

Two Sisters Are Drowned

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Two teen-age Charlotte sisters drowned in a lake in northern Mecklenburg County while their younger sister was being rescued by a 15-year-old boy Wednesday.

The victims were Clara Lucille "Lucy" Green, 18, and Mary Juanita Green, 16.

Thirteen-year-old Donna Green was pulled to safety by Ray Carnes.

The accident happened this way, according to those present:

The girls arrived at Forty Acre Lake about 5 p.m. and went swimming. Carnes and some friends were already in the water.

In a few moments Carnes saw the girls "clawing and splashing and trying to get to shore."

"We were swimming when we saw the girls standing on the side near where there's kind of a drop-off. They went in and they got in trouble," he added.

The youth said he swam toward the girls and at least one grabbed him. "They about drowned me," he said. "I broke loose and pulled one toward shore." That was Donna.

The 13-year-old "was crying and telling me to go back in. I did, but it was too late. We couldn't find them," Carnes said.

He and two companions recovered the bodies from the muddy bottom.

Later, Donna, whose widowed mother has two other children, said, "We got in the water, we couldn't swim, but we wasn't going to go far. We were holding on to each other."

"Then one of us slipped and we was all over our heads."

Rampants Open Football Practice

GETTING IT IN THE NECK—A group of Rose High School football players go through a conditioning exercise designed to strengthen the neck as practice sessions opened yesterday for some 80 candidates. (Reflector Photo)

Some 80 candidates turned out yesterday for the opening of football practice at Rose High School, and Coach Dave Bumgarner expressed delight at the numbers.

"Some of the people were expecting, some of our veterans, didn't show up," Bumgarner said. "But we are looking for them to come out later. Some are still working or out of town, and we know they'll be along."

The coach said that he saw a lot of new faces during the first afternoon, and that enthusiasm seemed to be running high. "I think it's carried over from last year," he said. "We had a good season last year, and I think it's going to help us to solve a lot of problems this year."

Not everything was peaches and cream for the Rampants

however. "We timed everyone in the sprint yesterday, and we were very disappointed," Bumgarner said. "Nearly everyone was slower than we expected and we really don't understand it. Keith Joyner was about the only one who really turned in a good time."

The coach pointed out that several sophomores looked good and that there was a possibility of several making the traveling squad for the varsity.

"The kicking game looked excellent," he added. Bumgarner singled out Macon Moye and Paul Farmer for their punting, Jeff Hagans for his extra point kicking, and Scott Wolcott and Mike Brewington for kickoffs. "Everyone of them looked very good, especially so early."

There were three quarterbacks who were put through some drills yesterday, and Bumgarner expressed some pleasure there. "They looked fairly good, but there is still a lot of work that must be done on our passing game. In fact, later on, we play to hold a little extra session each day to work with our passing attack."

Another somewhat disappointing point was the lack of size on the Rampants. "We should still average about 200 pounds on the offensive line, but the defense will probably be a lot lighter," the coach said.

Despite the fact that the Rampants lost their entire backfield from last year, including two of the finest runners in the state, Bumgarner doesn't call this a rebuilding year.

"Our biggest job is going to be to mold the defense," he said. "We really have more vacancies here than on offense. We got a lot of people lettered on offense who know what to do last year, so our job is not quite as great here."

Bumgarner added that the combination of Al Hunter and Reggie Perkins, the running back duo of last year, was one that probably cannot be duplicated for years. "You just don't find many like them," he said. "So we're going to have to work a little harder to rebuild the momentum they left us."

"Confidence has a lot to do with success," the coach added, "and I think we have a lot more of this than we have had in the past."

Practice will continue through the 14th with light work designed mainly for conditioning. Beginning on the 15th, the Rampants will go to a two-day setup for drills, working at 9 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. with an additional 2 p.m. short session for the passing game. Starting on the 20th, workouts will shift to 7 a.m. and 4 p.m., and go to one-a-day on the 28th, when school starts.

Rose opens the season on the 31st against Washington.

"I think our first two games will have a lot to do with how we do this year," Bumgarner said. "If we have a good passing and running game and score well, and play defense, we'll do all right. But if we have trouble, it would be a long year. We have to be able to score—and we are definitely going to let people know we can throw the ball this year."

Charger Practice

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton High School will open fall football practice on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the school's field. The first week of drills will be for conditioning, and no contact will be held.

All candidates for varsity and junior varsity teams, in grades nine through twelve are asked to report at this time for practice.

No Squaws For Redskins Camp

By FRANK BROWN
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was an unusual day at four National Football League training sites:

—There were two fights at the Cincinnati Bengals' afternoon workout.

—There was a fight at the Atlanta Falcons' training camp.

—Coach George Allen politely turned down the request of a 15-year-old high school student when she asked if she could be a watergirl for the Washington Redskins.

—The Chicago Bears acquired their fifth quarterback because, as Coach Abe Giron explained, "I just need another guy out there for practice."

The 90-degree heat Wednesday at the Bengals' pre-season training camp, combined with the usual heat of competition, ignited the tempers of Jerry Ellison, Stan Walters, Bill Bergy and Neal Craig and twice stopped the afternoon's exercise.

Ellison and Walters, both tackles, interrupted the full team dummy practice with a rolling brawl, and not much later, during punting drills, line-backer Bergy and defensive back Neal exchanged punches.

Brown wasn't bothered at all. "It seems like we always do that—have fights—when it's hot out there," he said. "Temperatures are always short under heat."

Miller Wants To Play Smart

By GEORGE STRODE
Associated Press Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Johnny Miller, almost forgotten in Tom Weiskopf's hot streak, scoffs at the thought he can become the first golfer to win the U.S. Open and PGA in the same year since Ben Hogan 25 years ago.

"Records don't mean that much to me. I just want to play as smart as I did in the Open," said the 26-year-old Californian.

A record round of 63 was part of Miller's winning 279 total in the Open.

Despite the major title and more than $118,000 in 1973 earnings, Miller didn't rank as a favorite among the PGA field of 148 that attacked Canterbury Golf Club's immaculate 6,852-yard course today.

It must have been hot at the Atlanta Falcons' camp, then, as veteran defensive back Ray Brown and rookie wide receiver Tom Geredine traded blows during a passing drill.

Falcon head Coach Norm Van Brocklin's reaction was similar to Brown's. In fact, he praised the rookie's spirit.

"If a man won't fight for himself, he won't fight for his team," Van Brocklin said.

Allen, meanwhile, doesn't believe his Redskins are ready to be liberated, and refused Mimi Brodsky's application for a position with the team. He did send her two tickets to a Washington home game and an autographed picture, though.

Giron, saying "The defense right now doesn't have anybody to help them during the workouts," picked up Randy Mattingly from the Cleveland Browns in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice. Along with Mattingly, veteran Bobby Douglass, Gary Huff, John Huarte and Steve Livas also are calling signals for the Bears.

Meanwhile, the San Francisco 49ers cut seven men including fullback Bill Tucker, who was making a comeback attempt; and the Los Angeles Rams obtained place-kicker Bill McClard from the San Diego Chargers for an undisclosed draft choice.

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Three U.S. Walker Cup team members top the list of amateur golfers teeing off today in the 38th annual Southeastern Amateur Golf Tournament here.

Defending champion Danny Edwards of Oklahoma State will be joined by Gary Kolb of Florida and Bill Rodgers of Houston.

The 72-hole tournament ends Sunday on the 6,562-yard, par 71, Columbus Country Club golf course.

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — Just Could ($21.20) put on a stretch sprint and won the $3,700 Smithfield Purse race by a neck over Prime Bird at Narragansett Park Wednesday night, covering six furlongs in 1:12.15.

Dolphins Out To Defense Title

This is the third in a series of appraisal stories by Associated Press sports writers on teams in the National Football League Dolphins

By JOHN R. SKINNER
Associated Press Sports Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins won all 17 games last year by having the best offense and defense in the National Football League, but their greatest strength may be mental attitude as they attempt to repeat as Super Bowl champions.

When asked if the players had the maturity or were taught it, Coach Don Shula said, "I think it's a combination."

The $26,000 worth of playoff spoils enjoyed by each player after the 14-7 trouncing of Washington in the Super Bowl apparently changed nothing.

"The attitude has been great in camp," said Shula. "They reported in fine physical condition and with a great mental attitude. All of them are working."

There were no apparent flaws, even in bench strength, on the basically young team of last season. After hours of reviewing game films, Shula has found no reason to make any major lineup or roster changes.

He is trying to field the first team to win back-to-back Super Bowls since Green Bay won the first two. People called those teams part of a dynasty built by Vince Lombardi, but Shula grimaces when somebody suggests he might be on the verge of the same thing.

"We'll let others talk about our football team," he replies, gritting his teeth at the word "dynasty" the same as he does the word "loss." Neither word belongs in his vocabulary.

The facts speak for themselves.

Miami rushed for 2,960 yards, an NFL record, with fullback Larry Csonka getting 1,117 and Mercury Morris 1,000. No other NFL team in history has had two 1,000-yard runners in the same season. "Substitute" Jim Kiick gained another 521 yards. Quarterback Bob Griese, who suffered a broken leg in the fourth game of 1972, ranks fifth on the active American Conference passing list. Seemingly ageless Earl Morrall replaced him for 10 regular season games and led the AFC by completing 7.3 per cent of his tosses for touchdowns and by gaining an average of 9.07 yards per throw.

Paul Warfield is considered by many to be the best wide receiver in the game, and he is complemented by Ron Sellers, Howard Twilley and Marlin Briscoe—all proven veterans.

Larry Little has been named the outstanding lineman in the AFC three times by the NFL Players Association. His fellow linemen are all proven veterans—center Jim Langer, guard Bob Kuechenberg, tackles Norm Evans, Wayne Moore and Doug Crusan and tight ends Jim Mandich and Marv Fleming.

Safeties Jake Scott and Dick Anderson are both All-Pro. End Bill Stanfill was AP All-NFL, running mate Vern Den Herder All-AFC. Garo Yepremian made 17 of 18 field goal attempts inside the 40 yard line last year. Punter Larry Seiple averaged 39.9 yards per kick.

ONE-TWO-THREE-FOUR — Rose High School athletes go through a series of exercises as spectators and coaches watch yesterday afternoon as the Rampants opened practice for the 1973 football season. Rose has three weeks of drill ahead of it before the opening game in Washington on August 31. (Reflector Photo by Tom Foreman Jr.)

Just Smiles In Boxing Meeting

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Joe Louis and Max Schmeling met again Wednesday, but there were no mean looks or boxing gloves—just smiles and handshakes—as the former heavyweight boxing champions travelled back through time to their famous match in Yankee Stadium 35 years ago.

Overseeing the reunion at Kennedy Airport was Arthur Donovan, who refereed the fight on June 22, 1938, in which Louis scored a one-round knockout.

They'll return to the ring tonight—"only to shake hands," according to Louis—to promote the U.S.-West German amateur match at the Nassau Coliseum. Then the former champions will surrender the spotlight to young amateurs for a 10-bout card.

Howard Davis, Jr., a Golden Gloves, Amateur Athletic Union and North American Zone featherweight champion, will lead the Americans against a West German squad that features light heavyweight Guenther Peters. In 138 amateur fights, the 22-year-old Peters has scored 125 victories.

He will face D.C. Barker of Denver, a 1973 National Golden Gloves champion.

Cepeda Sets Records Hitting Four Doubles

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer
DH. Designated Hitter? Of course. And, as far as Orlando Cepeda, Boston's DH is concerned, it stands for Double Hitter, too.

The gimpy-kneed slugger hit four of them—doubles, that it—to drive in six runs, propelling the Red Sox to a 9-4 rout of the Kansas City Royals Wednesday night.

The four doubles tied a major league record held by dozens of other players.

In the rest of the American League, the New York Yankees edged Texas 3-2, Cleveland shellacked the Chicago White Sox 13-1, Detroit tamed Oakland 3-2, Milwaukee slugged California 8-2 and Baltimore belted Minnesota 6-1.

Yanks 3, Rangers 2

"It's not officially a complete game," reliever Fred Beene said after throwing all but one of the Yanks' pitches in their 3-2 victory over the Rangers. "But in my mind, it is. I'm not gonna pitch that many so I'll count that one."

Fritz Peterson was New York's starter. But on the first pitch, a bunt single by Dave Nelson, Peterson reinjured his thigh and Beene had to take over. Nelson eventually came around to score and, in the fifth inning, Bill Sudakis hit a lead-off homer.

The Yanks got that run back in the bottom of the fifth on Felipe Alou's sacrifice fly. In the ninth, the Rangers still led 2-1 and Peterson still stood to be the losing pitcher. "I felt bad about that," Beene said.

But Bobby Murcer opened the ninth with a double and Thurman Munson singled to tie the game. Then Alou beat out an infield single and Munson scampered home from second on Gene Michael's bloop single to right.

Indians 13, White Sox 1

Cleveland's entire lineup crossed the plate in a nine-run first inning, capped by Walt Williams' three-run homer, and Dick Tidrow, backed by a 22-hit assault, hurled a four-hitter in the Indians' 13-1 stampeding of the White Sox.

Tigers 3, A's 2

Bill Freehan drove in two runs against Oakland with a homer and a bunt in the 3-2 Detroit victory that enabled Woodie Fryman to chalk up only his second victory in the last three months.

Brewers 8, Angels 2

Jim Colburn scattered six California hits—one of them Frank Robinson's 19th homer of the year and 541st of his career—and Pedro Garcia clubbed a two-run double in a five-run third inning that carried the Brewers past the Angels.

Orioles 6, Twins 1

Jim Palmer also pitched a six-hitter for his 15th victory, getting all the backing he needed on a two-run homer from Ellie Hendricks and a solo shot from Rich Coggins in the 6-1 whipping of the Twins.

In the National League, the New York Mets zipped Los Angeles 1-0, San Diego flipped Philadelphia 3-0, Cincinnati tripped Chicago 4-3, San Francisco nipped Montreal 2-1, Pittsburgh clipped Houston 4-3 and Atlanta turned back St. Louis 4-1.

Chips and putts from area golf courses:

Greenville

Jean Creech recently had an eagle on the sixth hole at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. She reached the par five hole in two and one-putted.

Ben Harrison picked up an ace at the 15th hole, using a two-iron for the 214-yard shot. He was playing with Marvin Blount Jr., Simon Moye, Charles White and Bob Abbott at the time.

Grifton

The Dupont Company held a tournament at the Grifton Golf and Country Club on Monday. A total of 48 people participated, making up 12 teams. Allen Norris had the low individual total with a 75, while the team of Fibeash, Hart, Rouse and Ashworth won the team title with a net of 71.

Robersonville

A Captain's Choice tournament is being planned for the Robersonville Golf and Country Club on August 19. Deadline for signing up will be the 18th.

Plans are now underway for the annual Tobacco Invitational Tournament, to be played on September 15-16. Invitations are to be mailed out next week.

Brook Valley

John Moye Jr. shot a 37-39—76 for his best round at Brook Valley Golf and Country Club.

Dr. Jack Horne eagled the par-four seventh hole while playing with Dr. Jim Tucker.

The Brook Valley Member-Guest tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at the club. A total of 62 teams are entered into the 36-hole affair, which will be the best ball tourney.

The annual Father-Son Tournament, over 18 holes, will be played Sunday, August 19. Deadline for entries is the 17th.

Battle For Front Row Looms At Talladega

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — A battle for the front row pole position between super drivers David Pearson and Richard Petty loomed today as qualifying began at Alabama International Speedway for Sunday's $150,000 Talladega 500-mile stock car race.

Pearson, currently auto racing's hottest driver, and $1 million-plus winner Petty topped all contenders in a high-speed practice session Wednesday.

Pearson's Mercury was clocked at 181.582 miles per hour for one trip around the 2.66-mile tri-oval. Petty's Dodge registered a lap at 182.674 m.p.h.

Today's qualifying speeds were expected to be about 10 m.p.h. below those registered for a 500-miler here in May. That's because of new carburetor restrictor plates imposed on the heavy stock machines a month ago.

Buddy Baker captured the pole for the May race with a speed of 193.435 m.p.h. But Baker's chief mechanic, Harry Hyde, already has conceded the No. 1 front row starting spot in today's trials, contending the engines he uses in his Dodge are more severely handicapped by the new rules than are the other makes.

Thus, Baker's red Charger was not among these seeking one of the 20 berths in the line-up that were at stake in the initial trials.

Other contenders for up-front spots in the 50-car order were Cale Yarborough, brothers Bobby and Donnie Allison, and Clifton "Coo Coo" Marlin, in Chevrolets; and Bobby Isaac in a Ford.

Also hoping for a good start was Benny Parsons, the ex-Detroit cab driver who appears to have a good chance of winning the 1973 driving title of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing.

Parsons, who drives an independently financed Chevrolet, leads the Grand National championship point standings, 5,070 to 4,798, over Cecil Gordon, another Chevrolet pilot.

The 36-year-old Parsons, who won two driving titles in the Midwest-based Auto Racing Club of America before he came South to do battle with the Pettys and the Pearsons, has the most consistent driving record of any driver except Pearson this year.

Parsons has started all 19 of the Grand National events. He has won only one, but has finished in the top five on 10 occasions and 15 times in the top 10. He has collected $72,690 in prize money.

Pearson has won nine of his last 10 starts, including eight races on major speedways, and leads the money standing with $159,715.

Fans Riot After Loss

VERACRUZ, Mexico (AP)—An estimated 200 baseball fans spent the night in jail Wednesday after a riot in a stadium here when the local team lost.

Scores of persons were slightly injured in the free-for-all but none was hospitalized, authorities said.

Fans threw empty beer bottles, gallons filled with water and seat cushions when the umpire suspended the game shortly after hundred of spectators invaded the playing area, police said.

Policemen then moved in and started making arrests, authorities added.

The Veracruz Eagles were losing 2-1 to the Mexico City Red Devils in one of the final games of the Mexican baseball season. If the local team had won, it would have gained the final series.

When the fans invaded the field, the umpire stopped the game and forfeited the victory to the Red Devils.

Tolan Receives Wish; LA Loses

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
Bobby Tolan made a wish.

"If only the Dodgers will give us a break and lose," said Tolan after his Cincinnati Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-3 Wednesday night.

A few hours later, the New York Mets helped it come true with a 1-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

As a result of those games, the National League West race is more to Tolan's liking.

The outcome of the contests Wednesday night moved Cincinnati within three games of the West-leading Dodgers. That's a pretty good position for the second-place Reds, considering that they were 11 games behind on June 30.

The Dodger loss did some good for the San Francisco Giants as well. The third-place Giants nipped the Montreal Expos 2-1 and moved within eight games of Los Angeles.

In the other National League games, the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the Houston Astros 4-3; the Atlanta Braves stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 and the San Diego Padres turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0.

Mets 1, Dodgers 0

Jerry Grote singled home John Milner in the second inning and Jon Matlack made it stand up with a two-hitter, leading New York to a 1-0 triumph over Los Angeles.

Matlack allowed no Dodgers past first base as he earned his ninth victory against 14 defeats. The left-hander struck out nine and walked only two in recording his second shutout of the 1973 baseball season.

Willie Davis got a single in the first inning, Manny Mota singled in the fourth and losing pitcher Andy Messersmith walked to lead off the sixth for the only Los Angeles runners.

Giants 2, Expos 1

Willie McCovey's two-run homer, a 400-foot blast in the fourth inning, carried San Francisco over Montreal 2-1. McCovey's 20th homer of the year followed Bobby Bonds' leadoff single and provided Ron Bryant with his 16th victory of the year.

Pirates 4, Astros 3

Richie Zisk capped a three-run, sixth inning rally with a tie-breaking single to give Pittsburgh its 4-3 triumph over Houston.

Braves 4, Cardinals 1

Mike Lum and Dusty Baker hammered home runs to highlight a four-run fifth inning and give Atlanta a 4-1 victory over St. Louis.

Padres 3, Phillies 0

Bill Greif pitched a two-hitter and Fred Kendall hit a three-run homer, leading San Diego over Philadelphia 3-0. It was the third two-hitter of the year for Greif.

In the American League, it was New York 3, Texas 2; Detroit 3, Oakland 2; Boston 9, Kansas City 4; Milwaukee 8, California 2; Baltimore 6, Minnesota 1 and Cleveland 13, Chicago 1.

Oil-Eating Bug May Be Salvation Of Beaches

By GORDON ROBINSON
HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — The arthrobacter may become the main weapon in the battle to keep Bermuda's famed pink-and-white beaches free of globs of tar which wash ashore from Atlantic shipping lanes.

For several years now, the pollution has become an increasing nuisance to residents and tourists alike, as tankers persist in flushing out their bilges at sea despite growing worldwide concern over ocean pollution.

In the main, this mid-Atlantic British colony's waters are still clear and sparkling, but lumps of tar are soiling bathers' bodies and clothing.

The government has two beach-cleaning machines in constant use but they are barely able to keep abreast of the problem.

But now, the arthrobacter has been discovered by microbiologists at Tel Aviv University and Bermuda is interested in finding out more about the tiny oil-eating bug.

Discovery of the arthrobacter has intrigued a team of scientists at the Bermuda Biological Station who are probing the islands' pollution problem.

One of them, Byron Morris, says that the bug is inexpensive to cultivate. It can clean out half of a 125,000-ton oil tanker's ballast-loaded bilges in less than a week. When the oil is gone, the little bug dies of starvation and turns into instant high-quality fish food.

Use of the arthrobacter may prove to be profitable to tanker owners, and that could be the clincher in having it employed in the fight to end oil dumping at sea.

The bacteria, set loose in empty tanks, do their job so well that tanks would not have to be washed and scraped periodically, as is now the case.

If the bugs were generally accepted by tanker companies, most of Bermuda's beach tar problem would be solved at its source. It is estimated that only 30 per cent of the world's tankers flush their bilges at sea, but they produce 70 per cent of the pollution problem.

It is also estimated that between 100,000 and 200,000 tons of tar are today floating on the surface of the North Atlantic, increasing at an annual rate of 250,000 tons. Closure of the Suez Canal, which drastically changed tanker routes, is believed to be the chief reason for this.

The Biological Station research team has concluded that Bermuda has more of a tar pollution problem than the U.S. East Coast because it is closer to the Sargasso Sea, which sucks in water from the rest of the ocean.

The water cools, sinks and moves back out but the tar stays, stuck to the seaweed which grows in the Sargasso and later washes up on Bermuda beaches.

Meanwhile, the Bermuda government has gained parliamentary approval for a new act which strengthens its powers to deal with oil spills in local waters.

Offenders can be fined up to $50,000 on conviction in magistrates court and there is no limit on fines which may be imposed if a case is dealt with in Supreme Court.

The government can take control of a ship which is spilling oil into the ocean, and the Minister for Marine and Ports is empowered, in extreme cases, to order such a vessel destroyed.

The Biological station research has determined that detergents used to fight oil pollution kill algae — the first step in the food chain which begins in the sea and extends to man's dinner table — while oil does not.

Drug Abuse Is Now Defined

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Medical Association defines drug abuse as "the use of any drug by an individual to the extent that it adversely affects or limits his ability to function as a responsible person."

In order of harmful impact—including physical damage and psychological and socioeconomic disruption—the CMA lists these "drugs of abuse": alcohol, barbiturates, amphetamines, heroin, cocaine, hallucinogens, marijuana and hashish, solvents and tobacco.

Chain Saws For Women

NEW YORK (AP) — What's that lady doing with your chain saw?

Chances are she's like many other women who have discovered a new gardening tool. Many women today are using lightweight electric chain saws for small pruning jobs around the home — jobs that are more difficult for a woman to do with regular pruning tools, according to the Sears Co.

The Sears people say that the development of the electric chain saw has made the chain saw particularly attractive to the homeowner. As long as there is a power source available, the electric models can handle just about any job.

Chain saws are still widely used for cutting down trees, but the lightweight electric models are also being used around the house for cutting up firewood, building a kid's tree house and pruning shrubs, bushes and trees.

Biggest Hong Kong Investor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States continued to be the largest foreign investor in Hong Kong's industry through 1972, according to latest figures of the Hong Kong Trade Development Council.

As of November, 1972, the council reports, the United States accounted for 111 of the 282 either fully foreign-owned or joint venture undertakings in the Colony with a total estimated investment of $89.9 million. Of the total 282 foreign companies in Hong Kong, the majority are involved in electronics (60), clothing (41) and textiles (18).

Without a Free Press No One is Free

"Freedom of conscience, of education, of speech and of assembly are among the very foundations of democracy. All would be nullified, should freedom of the press ever be successfully challenged." It was Franklin D. Roosevelt who said this, stressing your Constitutional right to know what's going on. Your free speech depends on press freedom.

That freedom is being tested right now. News is suppressed and reporters harassed when they won't reveal their sources. This impedes your access to a free flow of information... a fundamental right guaranteed by the First Amendment. Free speech and a free press aren't negotiable... they're what our American heritage is really all about.

Nixon Believed Preparing Defense

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has secluded himself at his Camp David retreat to work on his Watergate response, while attorneys for the Senate Watergate committee continued preparation of a lawsuit against him.

The suit was expected to seek a judicial determination on whether Nixon must turn over to the committee tapes and documents it has subpoenaed relating to Watergate. A source said Samuel Dash, the committee's chief counsel, and other lawyers for the panel worked late Wednesday night putting finishing touches on the lawsuit so it could be filed today.

mountains of Maryland Wednesday for the third time since late Thursday and indications were he would stay there for the remainder of the week.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said it could be assumed Nixon would be working on his public response to the Watergate scandal while in seclusion.

Warren said the time and method of the response had not yet been determined and "I would not expect it to be this week."

Nixon took speechwriter Ray Price with him. Price also accompanied Nixon on a two-hour cruise on the Potomac River on Tuesday.

Nixon's wife, Pat, and daughter, Tricia Cox, were with Nixon at Camp David, having driven up on Tuesday.

The President also spent last weekend at Camp David, then returned there unexpectedly on Monday and stayed overnight. Nixon aides have said the President would comment on Watergate after the Senate panel concluded the first phase of its probe—presumably through a nationally televised address, if past practice is any indication. The panel recessed for a month-long break Tuesday, although it hasn't quite finished its first phase, which involves the Watergate break-in and cover-up.

Committee attorney Dash had said Tuesday the lawsuit against Nixon would be filed by today. The proposed suit has had somewhat of an off-again, on-again history since the committee voted to file it two weeks ago.

On Tuesday, the committee first decided in executive session to await the outcome of Cox's suit before filing its own. But later that day Dash announced that the new plan was to file it this week.

The committee's lawyers reportedly are navigating cautiously through uncharted legal waters since there are no precedents for a congressional committee to go to the courts to help it subpoena a president's records.

Stockpile Sale Policy Lagging

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has met only limited success in trying to depress prices of key materials by selling its strategic stockpiles.

In fact, some commodity prices have risen despite the government sales, frustrating the aim of the program announced in early spring by President Nixon.

Even though the General Services Administration has been selling tin and rubber heavily, the prices of both have gone up markedly. Other prices have not dropped as much as the administration would like.

The failure of material prices to respond is seen by some economists as more evidence that the economy is caught up in an inflationary spiral fueled by heavy foreign and domestic demand for commodities.

The government also is finding out that inflation has sharply boosted the market value of its stored commodities.

When the sales program began, the administration estimated that it had $1.9 billion in hoarded raw materials that could be sold without approval by Congress. Since then, more than $600 million has been sold, yet the value of materials left is estimated at $1.67 billion.

"A great deal of this is due to the change in the market value," said one GSA official, who noted that tin and rubber prices have almost doubled in value.

GSA has sold all the tin it can without congressional approval. It has been selling aluminum, zinc, lead, and cadmium at a fast clip.

But the administration claims it needs legislation soon that will permit the sale of all but $700 million of the total strategic stockpile of $6.5 billion stored in about 130 locations throughout the country. Nixon says the United States no longer needs such massive stockpiles for strategic purposes.

Specifically, GSA officials said, the administration would like to have authority to affect the prices of copper, zinc and other metals, including platinum and silver.

But the legislation still is tied up in the House and Senate armed services committees.

All-Night Decision-Making Custom Runs Into Foe

by JIM WARD
 BONN (UPI) — Decisions affecting the lives and pocket-books of 250 million European community residents are often taken at all night sessions and announced by exhausted ministers at dawn.

Those days will be gone forever, if Ivar Noergaard, the Dane who became president of the European community's Council of Ministers July 1, gets his way.

"Major policy decisions should not be taken by delegates merely trying to outlast each other," Noergaard told UPI during a recent visit. "I know that my own brain has never been particularly brilliant in the middle of the night."

So, for the six months Noergaard takes his turn in the chair, there are to be no all-night sessions with ministers and their expert advisers half asleep over lukewarm pots of coffee. No more sessions with uncertain agendas, and official papers under consideration are going to be not only in French, but in other community languages as well.

A close friend explained Noergaard's philosophy.

"As far as Ivar is concerned, daytime is for working, the evening for sipping beer or wine with friends, and nighttime for sleeping," the friend said.

Franco-German Dispute

Since joining the community on Jan. 1, along with Britain and Ireland, the Danes have fought to have all its papers translated into all member nation languages, but often met defeat through lack of staff.

Fifty-year-old Noergaard, nominally Denmark's minister for foreign trade, will be in the hot seat at a time when the council is fighting to meet a Dec. 31 deadline for decisions and action in virtually every field — the so-called second phase of the monetary and trade program for the period from Jan. 1, 1974 to the end of 1976.

He will be captain of the team when President Nixon arrives in Europe in the autumn, and one of his first problems is to solve the Franco-German dispute on how the community should meet with the President.

"The French want Nixon and Noergaard to meet over a cup of coffee to read a prepared statement," one of the Danish aides said. "The Germans would like a full meeting with all member countries represented for a discussion and exchange of views."

The French plan would make Nixon's contact with the Common Market a largely ceremonial meeting with Noergaard and leave member nations free to deal with the President separately on issues of substance. The Germans would like a summit-style group meeting: if not between Nixon and Common Market national leaders, then at least at the foreign minister level.

Noergaard inclines toward the German view.

Germans Are Gloomy

It sounds reasonable but I would make a very poor president if I failed to consult all countries on this issue," he said.

Most of all, Noergaard is determined not to let the Franco-German squabble upset the community's schedule.

"Mr. Nixon's visit is very important but we also have other things to do," he said. "We have to find as much of a common policy as possible before the world trade talks in Tokyo and the international monetary conference in Nairobi, both early in September."

Monetary problems, especially, could be the main obstacle for the new president.

"The Germans are very pessimistic and I cannot blame them," he said. "With their mark currency threatening to blow through the roof of the house, they have to pay for less fortunate member nations. They want peace and quiet on the monetary market but with the Washington Watergate affair promising to go on for another six months I cannot see we'll get much of that."

Plays Ping-pong

Noergaard is a veteran Social Democratic politician with a long experience in economic,

Nordic and European affairs.

He is also a skillful debater and not one to run when fighting gets tough.

In fact, those who played against him, say he kicked more legs than footballs during Thursday afternoon matches with old international stars in Copenhagen, while his party was in opposition.

The football games, however, stopped when the Social Democrats returned to power in 1971.

Patting what he describes as his slightly overweight stomach, Noergaard said:

"I thought it very bad taste told me they had all voted for my party at the election to make sure I had no time for sports."

During parliamentary session, Noergaard is a frequent visitor to the athletic center beneath Christiansborg, the House of Parliament, where he challenges other ministers to games of ping-pong.

'Music Country' Shows The Best

By JAY SHARBUTT
 AP Television Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Okay, gang, tonight's assignment is to check out "Dean Martin Presents Music Country" on NBC-TV. Particularly if you don't like country music. The show may change your mind.

I, pardon the personal reference, ain't a country music fan. It reminds me of too many gloomy Army days at Ft. Benning, Ga., too many nights of voices softly howling, "Ah Din't Know God Made Honkey-Tonk Angels."

There's little of that on NBC's country show, primarily because country music has lost much of its raw sound in the last five years and allowed such outside influences as jazz and string sections to sneak in.

But the best things about the program, a seven-week summer replacement, are (a) the way it captures the musical feel of Nashville, Memphis and lesser Tennessee locales, and (b) the audio engineering, which is far superior to that of most music shows on television.

Item A is hard to explain to anyone who never visited Nashville or Memphis. I guess the best way to put it is that anyone who doesn't play or appreciate guitar or fiddle is looked upon there as a bit odd and someone to be pitied. It's a great atmosphere for any kind of music.

Singer-guitarist Jerry Reed, who appears on several of the NBC country shows, is perhaps the best example of how good and varied the Nashville-Memphis music scene has become.

He can play a fine, driving jazz guitar, yet slip into the Chet Atkins style — and do it well — at the drop of a pick. He's equally good at singing either pop material or what some might call pure country.

He didn't do much of either on the show we caught last week, but it still was a fine way to spend an hour. It didn't go in for useless chatter. It simply let performers like Mac Davis, Loretta Lynn and even an ancient, obscure fiddler do their thing, one after another.

It nicely captured the beauty of the countryside — I'd forgotten there still are pastures without beer cans in them — as well as the wry amusement of local residents who showed up to watch the proceedings.

The sound reproduction, thanks to a four-man NBC team headed by Joe Ralston, was great. It even sounded good on the matchbox-sized speaker of my TV set, a feat akin to making the sun rise in the West.

Tonight's effort, headed by Mac Davis, features such stars as Rita Coolidge, Waylon Jennings and Tom T. Hall. If it's like last week's model, you'll also see a few young and old performers known only to their families or the patrons of certain Nashville and Memphis pubs. It's a nice blend.

FACTS ABOUT YOUR ELECTRIC RATES

NEED FOR A RATE INCREASE

An electric rate increase was necessary this year because of the increased cost of wholesale electric power we receive from our supplier, Virginia Electric Power Company, effective January 11, 1973. This was explained to the public in an advertisement in the Daily Reflector on February 18, 1973. It has been the policy since 1971 to have electric rates competitive with those of the power supplier operating in this area. VEPCO increased their retail rates, effective March 1, 1973, under bond, since the N. C. Utilities Commission had not approved their requested rate increase. A ruling by the N. C. Utilities Commission was expected in the spring of '73 and the Greenville Utilities Commission delayed adoption of Vepco's retail rates waiting for the N. C. Utilities Commission to make final determination. However, with an increased cost of power dating back to January 11, 1973, and a demand cost increase becoming effective June 1, 1973, the Commission adopted rates equal to those of VEPCO, effective June 1, 1973. These rates are currently in effect. Public notice of the new rates was published on Monday, June 4th, listing the new retail residential rate schedules. In summary, electric rates have been increased because our wholesale cost of electric energy has increased.

SEASONAL RATE STRUCTURE

Since 1971 the Commission has followed the VEPCO seasonal rate structure. The rates during the months of November through June are less than July through October. The reason for the lower rates in November through June is to encourage use of the electric facilities installed to handle the high peak summer loads. Customers with uniform loads throughout the year will have a lesser cost per kilowatt hour annually than the user who has a high consumption in the summer and relatively low consumption during the other eight months of the year.

A comparison of electric energy consumption and charges for 1972 and 1973 is as follows:

	1972		1973		% Inc.	% Inc.
	Nov-June	July-Oct	Nov-June	July-Oct
1000 kWh	$20.60	$23.00	$22.62	9.8	$26.30	14.3
2000 kWh	32.88	42.28	35.37	7.6	49.30	16.6
3000 kWh	44.16	61.56	47.07	6.6	72.30	17.4
4000 kWh	55.44	80.84	58.77	6.0	95.30	17.9
5000 kWh	66.72	100.12	70.47	5.6	118.30	18.2

A "typical" residential user consumption and billing may run as follows:

	kWh	DD Cooling	Electric Bill
May	1000	75	$22.62
June	1600	250	30.69
July	2500	375	60.80

The degree days of cooling is a measure of the average mean temperature during the period. Electric energy consumption has increased as the DD Cooling has increased, indicating higher use of electric energy for air conditioning. The May-July period this year was hotter than the same three-month period last year, resulting in increased consumption of electric energy. The high consumption in July coupled with the change from winter to summer rates, effective July 1st of each year, plus an increase in rates, resulted in considerably higher bills in July over June.

UNIFORM RATES TO ALL USERS

There is one set of rates for each class of user and these rates are on file and available to the public at any time. All residential customers; in large homes, small homes, apartments, trailers, all-electric, non-all-electric, rural, city, all pay for electric energy under the same electric rate schedule. There are discrepancies between consumption by residential users. Each customer controls his own use of electric energy, and it seldom parallels his neighbor's, even though it may appear that they have similar living conditions. Bills are rendered not by the size of the house, the neighborhood, or any other factor except the kilowatt hours of energy recorded by the electric meter serving each residence.

CUSTOMER SERVICE

A staff of capable, conscientious employees in the organization are ready to answer questions concerning utility services and billings. If the employees in our Customer Service Section are not able to answer questions satisfactorily, the Business Manager, or Director of Utilities, will be glad to discuss problems. It is not possible to always explain to a customer's complete satisfaction how electric energy was used. The electric consumption during the billing period can be verified and data made available that will possibly help customers understand how they could have used the electric energy recorded by the meter. The Commission's basic responsibility stops at the meter, and the customer must determine the manner in which he uses the electric energy the meter records.

CITY TURNOVER

There are no "hidden" items in the Commission's budget. The Budget is made available to the public prior to adoption. This year $436,061.71 is budgeted to be turned over to the City of Greenville. This is 4.2 percent of the total revenue we anticipate from utility charges. The City of Greenville pays for the electricity it uses at all of its public buildings and facilities on the same rate schedule charged by VEPCO to the cities it serves on a retail basis. The City also pays the full cost of providing street and traffic light service throughout the City.

Turnover to the City is based on a "fair return" to the stockholders of the system, the taxpayers of the City of Greenville. It is considered by some as payment in lieu of taxes. Every city in North Carolina that owns its electric system and other utility facilities makes some type of payment to the city's operations through the use of utility funds similar to those provided by the Greenville Utilities Commission to the City of Greenville. There is nothing "hidden" in this turnover and it has been well publicized over the years.

METER READING

Except in extreme weather conditions, all meters are read each month. Many utilities read every other month and send an estimated bill between actual readings. The Commission does not follow this practice. If meter readers inadvertently read a meter incorrectly and it is called to our attention, the meter will be reread and the account rebilled. If an account is overbilled one month, the billing the following month would indicate a lesser consumption and automatically correct the previous over-reading.

ENERGY CRISIS

Yes, there is a national energy crisis. Most electric energy consumers are partly responsible. The average residential electric customer on Greenville's system used 4,155 kilowatt hours of energy in 1960. In 1972-73 the average residential user consumed 8,270 kilowatt hours. This is doubling our electrical energy consumption in a 13-year period. Every user must recognize his responsibility in the energy crisis. It certainly is no secret that our natural energy resources are limited. Individual consumption of all forms of energy must be reduced, to not only conserve natural resources, but also to reduce electric utility bills.

The 'Worry Clinic'
Church Must
'Recruit', Too

Tad is a smart youth leader. Zooming churches are now usually denoted by having busses to bring kiddies (and oldsters) to Sunday School. Plus attendance of teen-agers at church summer camps. Churches need to recruit EVERY YEAR to avoid decay!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE X-566: Tad R., aged 36, is "Big Brother" to the Young People's Society of his church. "Dr. Crane," he mused, "when I was 16, a group of 10 to 15 teen-agers always attended our church summer camp."

"There we got a lot of inspiration from specially trained leaders who knew how to handle idealistic young folks."

"But in recent years our church as ignored this summer camp idea."

"Meanwhile, our Sunday School attendance has drooped 20 percent."

"And at the preaching service at 10:45, we now average almost 30 percent less."

"So wouldn't it be wise to revive an interest in the summer church camp? But how?"

Idealism's Zenith

Young people are naturally at the zenith of their idealism in the middle teens.

When Dr. L. W. Hess was Head of the Psychology Department in a prominent Michigan College, he kept using my textbook, "Psychology Applied."

"When I was up there for an address, he asked me:

"Dr. Crane, during the last of the course, I asked all the students in my various sections of Applied Psychology to pick out their favorite chapter in your textbook."

"Then they were to write an essay outlining why they preferred that specific chapter."

"Dr. Crane, which do you think won first place?"

Well, I didn't hesitate a minute to say it must have been Chapter VI.

For that chapter deals with how to win friends, be more attractive "date bait", carry on effortless conversation, etc.

Since these college students were 18 and 19 years old, I figured Chapter VI was of more immediate practical interest to them than such chapters as the psychology of Advertising, Selling, Sex Differences, Music, Writing, Marriage, Religion, Medicine, etc.

There are 21 chapters in this widely used college textbook, so I believed maybe 25 percent would have picked Chapter VI. Dr. Hess shook his head, and told me my guess was not correct.

"And 90 percent selected the same chapter!" he added.

Then he told me the winner was Chapter XVIII, entitled "Psychology Goes to Church."

Yet this was not a divinity school or college for nurses or special church workers.

It was a typical private liberal arts college!

Which should encourage all of you older readers for it shows the natural idealism of youth in the teens!

So by all means encourage attendance at church summer camps!

All 5 of our Crane children attended such for several years during their teens.

Mrs. Crane and I did likewise in our youth.

For the churches (like the Army and our political parties) MUST maintain a steady recruiting policy!

Mrs. Crane for several years, offered to pay half (50 percent) of the cost for any boy or girl wishing to attend from the little village church near our summer home in Indiana.

Artist Buying
2 Small Islands

PORT CLYDE, Maine (AP) — Artist Jamie Wyeth says he is purchasing two small Maine islands mainly to ensure their preservation.

The son of painter Andrew Wyeth said he had bought the uninhabited islands for less than $375,000 from Norman H. Read of New York and Texas. The islands are located between this coastal lobstering port and Monhegan Island, where young Wyeth has a residence.

Wyeth disclosed the purchase Monday.

Euthanasia Society Is Swelling

By DANIELLE J. FLOOD
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Euthanasia Society of America's membership has jumped from hundreds to tens of thousands in the last four years, and its director says interest continues to swell.

"The phones have been a steady tattoo," said Mrs. Elizabeth T. Halsey, 70, head of the organization that was established in 1938.

The most recent surge of interest in the legal and moral questions of euthanasia, or the act of painlessly killing someone for reasons assumed to be merciful, was sparked by the two widely publicized cases in New York and New Jersey this summer.

Dr. Vincent A. Montemarano of East Meadow, N.Y., has been accused of injecting a fatal dose of potassium chloride into a comatose patient. Lester Zygmanski of Englishtown, N.J., has been charged with fatally shooting his brother, who had been paralyzed by a motorcycle accident.

Mrs. Halsey has received about $100,000 in donations so far this year; as much as was received during all of 1972. Donations totaled about $33,000 in 1970. Membership has jumped from 600 in 1969 to 50,000 this year, she said.

Mrs. Halsey attributes the increase to more publicity and because "now there are so many ways of keeping people alive."

"People are becoming very afraid of this," she said. "A person doesn't die anymore in the bosom of his family. They attach tubes to him and stick him into intensive care, and it's far from dignified."

Mrs. Halsey, a widow who was directed the organization since 1969, said there is less interest in rural and low-income areas where there are fewer hospitals and advanced medical facilities.

The society advocates passive rather than active euthanasia. That is, it would favor halting prolonged medical attention to someone who might require it but not an injection of poison into a terminally ill patient.

"My sister had pneumonia a couple of years ago, and she was stuck full of tubes," Mrs. Halsey said. "Well, I told the doctor that if she has heart arrest, and her brain becomes injured, please don't work on her."

New York City's chief medical examiner, Dr. Milton Helpern, recently said he was against euthanasia because it's "done for the convenience of the doctor and the family.... It's the family that can't stand the suffering. A patient who's in a coma isn't in pain. It's the family who's in pain."

The Euthanasia Society has been filing about 500 requests a week for what it calls a "living will." The document says: "If there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental disability, I request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or heroic measures."

"Although this document is not legally binding, you who care for me will, I hope, feel morally bound to follow its mandate."

Said Mrs. Halsey, "The will embodies all we have to say about passive euthanasia."

Alumnus Sets Up Scholarship

A $300 annual scholarship has been established at East Carolina University by ECU alumnus Clyde P. Owens, president of Printed Paper Products, a Greenville firm.

The scholarship, to be named the Printed Paper Products Alumni Scholarship, will be awarded each year to an outstanding student who is pursuing a degree in health, physical education, recreation or safety.

Awards may be made to a current student or to a recently admitted student at the beginning of the freshman year. Recipients will be selected by the campus Scholarships, Fellowships and Financial Aid

Committee on the basis of recommendations by faculty members.

Donald Leggett, ECU's Director of Alumni Affairs, commented that the scholarship fund will be "of significant value" to the academic progress of ECU.

"We are deeply appreciative for this gift and for those of other loyal alumni who support the effort of the Alumni Association to enhance to development of the alma mater," he said.

At the discretion of the selection committee, the award may be divided between two or more recipients.

Visitor Shot Prison Guard

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP)—A North Carolina prison guard was shot and wounded by a visitor to the Caswell County prison on Wednesday night, the state Department of Corrections reported today.

The guard, Jack W. Burton of Yanceyville, was wounded in the arm. He was taken to a Danville, Va. hospital where he was treated and released.

Caswell County authorities arrested Milton Gaudin of Burlington and charged him with assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury not resulting in death.

Gaudin came to the prison to visit his inmate brother, Obbie Gaudin Wednesday night the spokesman said. Burton, normally a kitchen supervisor, was filling in for a sick guard at the guard tower.

Burton told correction officials that Gaudin arrived with a package and asked to be admitted. When Burton asked what was in the package, Gaudin allegedly began to climb the tower steps and threatened to "blow him off the tower."

When Burton attempted to get inside the tower, the spokesman said, Gaudin fired two rounds with a sawed-off shotgun concealed inside the package. Burton was hit with about ten pellets. He fired four shots and Gaudin with his revolver but did not hit him.

Other corrections officers, some coming from an off-duty baseball game at a nearby field, arrived. Gaudin dropped the gun and surrendered, the spokesman said.

Top Award For Honors Student

Barry P. Fulcher, graduating senior in the East Carolina University Department of History, has been awarded a $250 scholarship for excellence in research.

Fulcher's research, done while he was participating in the history department's honors program, was on the effects of Protestantism on social change in Latin America during the last two centuries.

His research advisor was Dr. Wilkins Winn of the ECU history faculty.

Rev. J.O. Jones Guest Speaker

The Rev. John O. Jones of Springfield, Mo. will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. worship service at Faith Assembly of God Sunday.

The speaker is the brother of the pastor, the Rev. Steve R. Jones, and is a student at Central Bible College in Springfield. The public is invited to the service at the church located one and one-fourth miles north of the Burroughs-Wellcome Company on Highway 11 toward Bethel.

The world's longest vehicular tunnel, seven-mile Mt. Blanc, cuts through the Alps between France and Italy.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Yes Today Is Our Second Birthday

we wish to thank all of our many friends and customers in this and surrounding areas for making our first two years in business an unbelievable success.

We attribute this outstanding success to two main factors:

- (1) We believe, that for the money, we have by far the best compact car sold in this country today.
- (2) We have strived at all times to treat our customers fairly and honestly, and as we would want to be treated ourselves.

We are looking forward to many, many more years of serving you with any of your automotive needs, new cars, and trucks, used cars, parts and service, before and after the sale.

Large selection of new Toyota cars and trucks now in stock to choose from

One of the largest selections of used cars and trucks in Eastern N.C.

Come out to TRADE Street and TRADE for an economy car.
