

Skylab 2 Crew Is Cleaning Up For Return To Earth

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Skylab 2 astronauts performed clean-up chores in their space station today to prepare for Tuesday's end of their record 59½-day orbital journey.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma planned to spend all of their last full day in space tidying up the house-size craft for the eight-week visit by the Skylab 3 crew starting Nov. 11.

"Watch us today—we'll get this thing all put to bed," commander Bean said on waking today. "We're coming home tomorrow."

Over the Pacific, Bean spotted Hurricane Ira churning west of the Mexican coast, described it as "a beautiful hurricane" and asked if it posed any threat to their splashdown Tuesday in the Pacific off the California coast.

Mission Control reported that on its predicted path, the storm would be 500 to 600 miles to the southeast at the time they land and would cause no problem.

Otherwise there was little conversation from the astronauts as they transferred film, tape and equipment from the space laboratory into the Apollo ferry ship and shut down systems not needed during the nearly seven weeks the station will be unmanned.

Bean spent some time checking systems in the Apollo craft.

At 3:50 p.m. EDT Tuesday, the astronauts will leave the lab and start maneuvering the Apollo back to earth. Splashdown is scheduled for 6:20 p.m. in the Pacific Ocean about 225 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif.

The astronauts are to be plucked from the sea by the recovery carrier USS New Orleans and taken immediately to an on-board medical facility. Doctors will try to determine whether they suffered any adverse effect from their long exposure to the space environment.

Bean, Garriott and Lousma gathered the final in-flight physical data on themselves Sunday, drawing blood and taking readings from various medical monitors.

Dr. Jerry Hordinsky, one of the flight surgeons at mission control, reported that the three are in excellent physical shape.

And the astronauts' chief physician, Dr. Royce Hawkins, said he expected them to experience no more difficulty readjusting to earth's gravity than did the Skylab 1 crew after 28 days aboard the space station.

Trade Mission To East Europe

RALEIGH (AP)—A team of North Carolinians will visit points in eastern Europe this week in their drive to promote trade. It has stops scheduled in Bucharest, Belgrade and Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

The mission, part of a joint trade and industry team which was headed for two weeks by Gov. Jim Holshouser, already has visited the Soviet Union and Poland.

Orders Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon told the Cost of Living Council today to act this week to increase the retail price of gasoline.

Acting as some service stations closed down to protest against Phase 4 pricing policies, the President got assurances from Cost of Living Council Director John Dunlop that the panel would try to speed up action on the issue.

White House Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the council already had concluded that an increase in retail gasoline prices was needed and had been following a timetable that would have put the increase into effect Oct. 2.

A Safer Cigarette Claimed Possible

RALEIGH (AP)—According to a U.S. Department of Agriculture publication to be released this week, preliminary research findings indicate a "safer" cigarette can be developed.

The USDA said investigations in a number of research areas show it is "not out of the question" to expect the development of a cigarette that is less hazardous to smokers.

The publication said scientists with the USDA Agricultural Research Service and other scientific groups are approaching the problem from a number of approaches, including genetics, physiology, and biochemistry.

"They are attempting to isolate and identify leaf characteristics which may be associated with undesirable smoke elements, and determine ways of altering them," it added. "Another technique is to learn ways of regulating the biochemical change in the tobacco leaf during curing."

The USDA publication is "Agricultural Situation," a periodical issued monthly by the Statistical Reporting Service.

The article stated that the goal of the research is development of a "safer" tobacco than available at present that will be economically worthwhile for farmers and manufacturers and give smokers the quality of cigarettes they want.

"It's apparent that 'safer' cigarette or not, people are going to smoke," the article stated

E. Howard Hunt Jr., convicted in the Watergate breakin, led the witness list for the new round of hearings.

A bill authorizing $20.4 billion in defense spending is

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — E. Howard Hunt Jr. testified today that Charles W. Colson was among those approving the "Gemstone" intelligence scheme that included the Watergate wiretapping.

Hunt, in a statement prepared for the Senate's resumed Watergate hearings, said he understood the Gemstone counter-intelligence plan was requested by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, former Nixon campaign deputy Jeb Stuart Magruder and ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III.

"Later I learned that Charles W. Colson, special counsel to the President, had approved it, too," Hunt said.

Colson has denied any advance knowledge of the Watergate wiretapping. In a private session with the Senate Watergate committee, Colson refused to answer questions on grounds he might incriminate himself.

Hunt, a 21-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency, said Colson recommended him for a job on the White House staff in 1971 because there was a need for his skills as a spy.

He said he and G. Gordon Liddy arranged a break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist in September of that year because "of the belief that Dr. Ellsberg or his associates were providing classified information to the Soviet Union."

He said former White House aide Egil Krogh approved that break-in.

Later, after Liddy moved from the White House staff to President Nixon's re-election campaign, Hunt said he and Liddy designed a budget for a large-scale counter-intelligence program requested by Mitchell, who became director of the re-election campaign.

Hunt said the Watergate burglary grew out of the Gemstone intelligence scheme.

Hunt, who pleaded guilty to wiretapping, burglary and conspiracy in the Watergate case, is seeking to have his guilty plea set aside and all charges against him dropped. Among other things, he says he thought the wiretapping was legal.

"I thought it was an unwise operation, but I viewed it as legal," Hunt said. He said Liddy told him there was reason to believe the Democrats were getting money from the Communist government of Cuba.

"I deeply regret that I had any part in this affair. I think it was an unfortunate use of executive power and I am sorry that I did not have the wisdom to withdraw," Hunt said.

Hunt said his part in the cover-up of the Watergate affair seemed natural to him because of his CIA experience. When CIA spies are caught, "it has been universally the practice for the operation to be disavowed and 'covered up,'" he said.

"Usually, this has been done by official intervention with law enforcement authorities. In addition, the employing governments have paid legal defense fees," he said.

But Hunt denied that he asked the White House for presidential clemency, or that he tried to blackmail the White House for money.

"I did not ask for clemency," he said. "I did seek ... funds, but I made no threats."

Former presidential counsel Dean and others have accused Hunt of trying to blackmail the White House for clemency and money by threatening to disclose the Ellsberg burglary and other "seamy things" he did while employed at the White House.

Hunt complained bitterly of his treatment at the hands of the government since being arrested.

He has based his bid for freedom on grounds that the government destroyed and hid evidence that he would otherwise have been able to use in his defense.

He said that while in prison he has suffered a stroke, been attacked and robbed, been chained hand and foot and for a time been placed in solitary confinement.

He said all the money paid to him during the Watergate cover-up has been exhausted, and he has no means to support his motherless children. Hunt's wife died in an airplane crash last December.

"Beyond all this, I am crushed by the failure of my government to protect me and my family, as in the past it has always done for its clandestine agents," Hunt said.

"At the time of the Watergate operation, I considered my participation as a duty to my country. ...I cannot escape feeling that the country I have served for my entire life and which directed me to carry out the Watergate entry is punishing me for doing the very things it trained and directed me to do," he added.

Hunt was the first witness as the Senate Watergate committee, after a seven-week recess, resumed its hearings. The panel hopes to wind up the final phase of its probe by Nov. 1

Implicates Colson, Dean, Magruder, Mitchell Bitter Testimony By Hunt

Better UN Peace Role Underlined

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today told the U.N. General Assembly there can be no further delay in strengthening the organization's peacekeeping operations.

In his first major appearance since becoming secretary of state, Kissinger stressed philosophy and downplayed specific proposals for dealing with the world's problems.

He made only scattered and general references to the Mideast conflict and no direct reference to fears of an impending oil shortage.

Kissinger gave credit to past U.N. efforts in discussing the need to go past current big-power efforts at relaxing tensions to a state of peace.

The organization, he said, "has shown its ability for effective fact-finding, mediation and peacekeeping missions."

"This central aspect of the United Nations' work must be strengthened."

As in most of the 35-minute speech, he made no specific proposals for reaching that goal. Instead he said "the United States is prepared to consider how the Security Council can play a more central role in the conduct of peacekeeping operations."

Kissinger had made it clear even before his speech that he would not break new ground or announce major policy departures. He felt to do so would be a phony gesture, U.S. delegation officials reported. They said the purpose of his appearance was rather to make a general statement and enlist the aid and inspiration of the United Nations in an effort to achieve a lasting peace.

Kissinger's speech appeared to be a move by the Nixon administration to impress the delegates that it views the United Nations as a useful tool in international diplomacy.

His draft mentioned the world organization's vital role in future efforts to solve the world's food and poverty problems and its importance in science and technology.

He also mentioned the need for the international community to deal with more general problems of economics.

As if to underline an attempt to make the smaller U.N. members feel more important, Kissinger's draft gave credit to nations other than the big powers for reducing conflicts.

This was aimed particularly at East and West Germany, the two Koreas and India and Pakistan.

American officials said Kissinger will deal more specifically with pressing problems in a series of meetings this week and next.

These started today with a luncheon Kissinger was giving for African delegates, meetings in the afternoon with the British foreign secretary, Sir Alex Douglas-Home, and Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira, and dinner tonight with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Rationing Will Be Held Back As Last Resort

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has gone almost three-quarters of the way toward rationing under its fuel-shortage contingency plan but is saving rationing as a last resort.

The contingency plan, never officially released, outlines four stages of increasing fuel conservation beginning with voluntary public restraint in consumption and ending with full-scale rationing.

The plan says rationing "would only be considered in an extreme situation if a serious or prolonged shortage threatened and if it appeared that other measures could not assure equitable distribution to meet essential needs."

Officials say the present fuel pinch is nowhere near that bad.

They also say the contingency plan is only a "working draft" that has not been adopted. But they have already put into action most of the measures in the plan's first three stages.

The White House Energy Policy Office refused to release the contingency plan late last week, but a newsman was allowed to inspect a copy in another office.

The plan suggests that official appeals for voluntary fuel conservation could make up for shortages up to five per cent.

To cope with a 10 per cent shortage, it says, fuel price increases could be applied to discourage consumption.

As shortages increase, the contingency plan says, the government could establish fuel-use priorities and could allocate available fuels through wholesale distribution systems to priority users.

As a last resort, in severe shortages, the plan would provide for direct rationing of gasoline to motorists, heating oil to homeowners and factories, and other petroleum products to their users.

The plan suggests that gasoline alone might be rationed in summer, the peak demand season, and all fuels might be rationed in winter.

The House faces a light schedule this week and plans no business on Thursday or Friday because of the Jewish religious holidays.

In his address, Albert said Nixon's economic policies have led to soaring prices that are hurting nearly every American family. The expected to be under Senate consideration most of the week, with the Trident submarine missile system the top target for budget-cutters. An amendment to cut $885 million from the $1.5 billion earmarked for the system is expected to come to a vote Wednesday.

Wallace Vetoes Pension Plan

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)

— Gov. George C. Wallace has vetoed a bill passed during the recent session of the Alabama Legislature which would have provided a pension for governors disabled in office.

Wallace, who is paralyzed in both legs as a result of bullet wounds from an assassination attempt, had expressed his opposition to the proposal during the legislative session. It would have provided a pension equal to three-fourths of the $25,000 annual salary paid Alabama governors.

Since the legislature is no longer in session, the veto can't be overridden.

Ranger Base Overrun By North Viet Troops

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops, advancing behind a curtain of artillery fire, apparently overran a government ranger base in the central highlands of South Vietnam during the weekend, the Saigon command announced today.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, the chief spokesman for the command, reported radio contact with the Le Minh ranger base 23 miles west of Pleiku was lost Saturday evening after five hours of heavy fighting.

He said the base nine miles from the Cambodian border was defended by a battalion of about 400 rangers, about half of them Montagnard tribesmen.

The opening North Vietnamese barrage knocked out a number of installations at the base including the radio antenna, Hien reported. He said waves of infantry rushed the wire perimeter in the wake of the shelling.

"We believe the base was overrun," said Hien. But he reported reconnaissance aircraft have spotted surviving rangers still operating in the area around the base.

It was the first time a government camp of such size has been overrun since the Jan. 28 cease-fire, and the government indicated its capture could touch off a sharp increase of fighting in the central highlands region.

"It is our principle to do the best we can to retake any territory which has been captured by the Communists since the cease-fire," said Hien.

"The base is located on an infiltration corridor and we believe they wanted to get rid of it to make their infiltration of war materials and troops into Pleiku and Kontum easier."

The North Vietnamese attack apparently took the garrison by surprise, and it did not call in air support before the camp's radio was knocked out.

"Before Saturday, resupply and liaison with the camp had been normal and there were no reports of it being surrounded by Communist troops," said Hien.

Hien said he did not believe the attack was the start of a general Communist offensive but rather that it was part of a continuing Communist campaign to grab territory and control population in the central highlands, particularly along key supply routes.

In Cambodia, fighting continued around Vihear Suor, 13 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, as Khmer Rouge insurgents opposed two government columns trying to reach the besieged provincial capital.

Peron Wins Argentine Presidency In Landslide

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Thousands of Argentines danced, sang and shouted in the streets of Buenos Aires early today, celebrating the election of 77-year-old Juan D. Peron to the presidency from which the military ousted him 18 years ago.

Official returns from Sunday's election gave Peron 7,286,034 votes, or 61.68 per cent in 54,777 of the nation's 55,475 election districts.

Richard Balbin of the Radical Civic Union ran second with 2,887,587, or 24.44 per cent; Francisco Manrique had 1,440,049, or 12.19 per cent, and Juan Carlos Coral of the Socialist Workers' party had 187,002, or 1.58 per cent.

The outcome had never been in doubt; the only question was how big the winning margin would be.

Running with Peron was his third wife, Isabel Martinez, who when she takes office with her husband on Oct. 12 will become the Western Hemisphere's first woman vice president. Because of Peron's age and uncertain health, she could become the hemisphere's first woman president.

"I cannot say anything because the people have done it all," said Peron in a brief statement to newsmen. "Now is not the time for me to speak but the time for me to act."

He added that he might soon make "realistic changes in Argentina's economy, but the first order of business is political. After the political situation is settled, the economy will arrange itself."

Peron's opponents conceded the election before midnight when it became obvious that he would pass the 50 per cent plus one vote required for election on the first ballot.

Underlining Peron's position as the biggest force in Argentine political life, his win of almost landslide proportions far outdistanced the 49.6 per cent of the vote that his standin Hector J. Campora got in the election last March.

Living Will Foe Takes Abby To Task

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was alarmed when I read an item in your column encouraging your readers to send for "A Living Will," instructing one's clergyman, physician, attorney, and some appointed family members [or friends] to let him die with dignity when all agreed that death was inevitable. I failed to write at the time to express my horror. But now that I hear that you were responsible for distributing hundreds of thousands of these Living Wills, I can no longer remain silent.

Mercy killing is an unspeakable evil, and our country must not permit such a crime. We should respect the gift of life and preserve and protect it. The plea that it would be "merciful" to end a life should signal a second look to be sure the desire did not stem from a weariness of the persons caring for [and paying for] the one who is ill.

Suffering is difficult to watch, but it oftentimes leads a person to a deeper awareness of his human destiny. It builds strength and character.

I am sorry to see you pushing this Living Will so hard. You have millions of readers and could be a force for good instead of this type of thing.

People should trust in God, and let HIM decide when life should end. Who would YOU trust to decide when ABBY shall die?

You have given the Living Will enough publicity. Please, be fair, and print this to show the other side.

AGE 64 IN ALBUQUERQUE

DEAR 64: The Living Will is simply a document instructing my OWN clergyman, physician, lawyer, and selected members of my family [or even a few trusted friends] to allow me to die when they all agree that there is no hope for my recovery [physical or mental]. I am not saying that YOU, or anyone else should express this wish. I am saying that this wish is MINE, and I would hope that those who love me would respect my wishes. This doesn't suggest that I be "killed." It simply means that I do not want my life to be prolonged by artificial means when my physicians agree that all hope for life is gone, or should I lose my sense of reason.

This letter from a Fort Myers reader illustrates my point more graphically:

DEAR ABBY: My husband was in and out of hospitals for 12 years. The last 10 months I was at his bedside every day from 10 a.m. until midnight.

I watched him being kept alive with blood transfusions, needles, tubes, and drugs, while he prayed for God to take him. He couldn't swallow. I gave him water with an eye dropper.

This handsome, husky 200-pound man became an 88-pound vegetable when God finally took him home.

May the day come soon when everyone will be able to die with dignity. Don't let people tell you that you have no right to interfere with God's decision by suggesting that they sign a Living Will. It's those folks who permit tubes and needles and machines to prolong life artificially when death is inevitable who are interfering with God's will.

I will take the word of my clergyman, doctors, lawyer and the selected members of my own family when they agree that my life has run its course.

I am not afraid to die, but I never want to put my loved ones thru what I went thru with my husband. Keep up the good work, Abby. And God bless you. MRS. W.J.A.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Former Musician Bridges Gap

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Wadsworth says she has a nose for talent.

She has to. The attractive brunette is in the business of discovering star musicians of tomorrow and helping them to bridge the gap between years of study and a professional career.

"I have always loved music," Mrs. Wadsworth said. "I started playing piano when I was 3 and violin when I was 7. I always knew I wanted someday to have a job related to music in a creative way.

"After college, where I majored in English literature and did a lot of applied music for myself, I studied at the Mannes College of Music. Then I decided that as a pianist, I wasn't a professional quality musician. I began to look for other jobs in music."

It took two years in publishing and a year working for the United Nations before Mrs. Wadsworth found the creative job she was looking for.

"One day I bumped into one of my really gifted classmates from Mannes — he's a violinist — and I was surprised to learn that he wasn't doing concerts. It costs an artist so much to be heard in New York. He has to pay everything.

"So, I thought we could get together some of those outstanding artists in a concert series for new faces. I raised the money, about two or three thousand dollars, myself. I rented a loft in the village and set up a stage and lighting," Mrs. Wadsworth remembered.

That was the beginning of Young Concert Artists, which introduced flutist Paula Robison, violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi and pianist Richard Goode, among many others, to the public.

Mrs. Wadsworth said the organization just sort of developed from that Greenwich Village loft, moved uptown and got more and more subscribers. Today concerts are held in an auditorium at Hunter College.

"It was exciting from the beginning, but the most important thing then and now was offering these newcomers a chance to be heard," she added. It also offered Susan Wadsworth a full-time job in a field she loved.

"In the beginning, we were successful because I was very cheap help. I enjoyed what I was doing so much that I stayed at my publishing salary for three years. Today, people who work with us have, fortunately, the same philanthropic turn of mind," she said.

For beginning performers there are many problems. First, Mrs. Wadsworth is often hairdresser and confidante.

"The art of performing is an elusive thing that almost anybody can acquire if they perform a lot. The gifted performer has to learn the skill. Sometimes, beginners are certain that whatever reaction they get from the audience is critical, that they are sitting waiting for a wrong note. The musician must see the output of energy and interest from the audience as an attempt to achieve rapport. New performers are often terrified.

"This doesn't mean young artists can't give sensitive concerts. It's just harder for them. But chances are it is more exciting for the audience than a concert by a well-known performer might be."

Most performers in the United States find piano a favorite instrument, she added. People usually start with piano, and switch to another instrument as they develop an affinity for it. In the East, Japan and Korea, there are more specialists in the stringed instruments because of the superb training. Musicians choose viola, cello or violin.

Mrs. Wadsworth spends a lot of her time screening auditions, hearing tapes and making selections for coming concerts. She says she can usually tell in the first three minutes whether or not a performer will make it.

"Now we have a series that goes to colleges across the country, and the performers spend an entire day in class, playing with the orchestra or just attending coffee hours. Artists make themselves available even for nonrelated classes in philosophy or art. Then they perform in the evening," Mrs. Wadsworth added.

Between making arrangements and keeping track of bookings for young artists, Mrs. Wadsworth spends her time with her daughter Rebecca and husband Charles, who is founder and artistic director of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. They met, ro-matically enough, at the Spoleto Festival in Italy. He was directing chamber music concerts. She was checking up on some of her artists he had hired.

"I still find time to practice piano," Mrs. Wadsworth said. "But it helps that Charles encourages me to play four hands very often."

Thrifty Applesauce Cake Keeps Well

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

With the price of eggs reaching a new high, it's time to revive the old-fashioned, one-egg cake. So here's a reliable recipe for One-egg Applesauce Cake — a favorite of families because it has excellent flavor and a moist crumb. When we tried the recipe we found the cake stayed moist for a whole week. Oats are used in the batter for good nutrition and interesting texture. The frosting that goes on the cake is about the most inexpensive kind you can make.

ONE-EGG APPLESAUCE CAKE

1 jar (15 ounces) sweetened applesauce (12-3rds cups)
1 cup quick-cooking oats 1½ cups unsifted flour, stir to aerate before measuring
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1 egg

Frosting, see below
Grease and flour a square cake pan (8 by 8 by 2 inches).

In a 1-or 1½-quart saucepan heat the applesauce until hot throughout; remove from heat; at once stir in oats; cover tightly and let stand 20 minutes.

On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and cloves.

In a medium mixing bowl cream butter and sugar; add egg and beat well. Gradually and gently beat in flour mixture. Add applesauce-oat mixture; stir well. Turn into prepared pan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 50 to 55 minutes. Cool in pan on wire rack. Cover top with Frosting and let set. Cut in squares and remove as needed. Tightly cover pan during storage of cake.

If you want to turn out the cake instead of leaving it in the pan, as soon as it comes from the oven let it stand in the pan on the wire rack for about 30 minutes; with a small metal spatula thoroughly loosen sides; turn out on rack; with another rack turn right side up; cool completely. Cover top (and sides if you like) with Frosting. Store in a tightly covered tin box.

FROSTING

Beat together 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar; gradually beat in enough more sifted confectioners' sugar (about 1 cup) to make a good spreading consistency, keeping smooth.

400 recipes are given in "Cecily Brownstone's Associated Press Cook Book" available by sending $4.95 (check or money order made payable to "The Associated Press") to this newspaper in care of AP COOKBOOK, Box G4, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

Controversy Over $3 Million Item

By ED ROGERS
WASHINGTON (UPI)—When a farm appropriations bill costing nearly $10 billion for the next four years reaches the House for debate next Wednesday a lot of controversy is likely to focus on one $3 million item.

Differing versions of the bill have already passed the House and Senate. The $3 million is a compromise figure, worked out by a House-Senate conference committee and earmarked for Cotton, Inc.

Cotton, Inc., a semi-public corporation, is financed jointly by Congress and contributions of cotton growers to conduct cotton research and promotion.

It also, recurrently, is a political football that gets kicked back and forth in parliamentary maneuvers between House farm bloc members and urban-minded legislators.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., got a proposed $10 million item earmarked for Cotton, Inc., kicked out of the House bill but the same item was in the Senate version.

Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., head of the House members on the conference committee, said he hoped the scaled down figure, plus other strings put on the Cotton, Inc., subsidy, would blunt the House opposition.

Some of the farm supporters in the House were believed to agree with Conte that strings were needed.

Cotton Inc. got about $10 million a year from a $1 per bale contribution of cotton growers in addition to the government subsidy, and, in Conte's view, has been spending the money lavishly.

In a House speech last June Conte said the agency budgeted $1,278,000 to renovate new headquarters in New York City and in Raleigh, N. C. The Agriculture Department blew the whistle, saying this was too much, and ordered the figure reduced to $800,000.

The agency "compiled" by using only $800,000 from current funds but then dipped into reserves it had stashed away for the rest, restoring the costs to the original $1,278,000, Conte said.

This figure, according to Conte included $160,000 for outright purchase of telephone equipment instead of leasing it, $95, 800 for cabinets and woodwork, $125,000 for floor, wall and window coverings, and $7,200 for a reception room embellished with granite.

Conte added that the salaries paid top officials "provide stark testimony to the fact that Cotton, Inc., is nothing more than a boondoggle." He said President J. Dukes Wothers receives $108,000 a year and six of his subordinates each receives at least $35,000.

The government subsidy for Cotton, Inc., was first inserted into farm legislation in 1970, the year congress first imposed limits on farm subsidies. The limit was $55,000 per farm.

Advocates of the limit agreed that savings it would bring could be used to subsidize Cotton, Inc., up to $10 million.

The savings were less than expected. For fiscal 1971 the subsidy limit for cotton saved only $2.2 million but Cotton, Inc., got its full $10 million anyway, as it did again for fiscal 1972.

Conte said Comptroller General Elmer Staats and former Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin decided the law required that the full $10 million subsidy be paid.

This, Conte said, was "one of the most tortured legal interpretations that I have ever confronted."

The compromise bill not only would limit the subsidy to $3 million but also require that all of its activities be first approved by the Agriculture Department.

Suspect Road Policy Change

RALEIGH (AP)—The News and Observer says the Holshouser administration is considering a major change in state road policy—a shift from paving additional miles of dirt roads to using available funds to widen and straighten the thousands of miles of secondary roads already paved.

Adoption of such a policy could arouse the ire of some legislators and anger rural North Carolinians who live on dirt roads.

The paper said Sunday consideration of the policy shift was prompted in part by a recent state study which said:

There probably is no single unpaved road in the entire state that, if paved, would be economically justified in terms of ever-increasing total maintenance requirements."

After conferring with Gov. Jim Holshouser recently, Secretary of Transportation Bruce

Lentz issued a statement which shed little light on what course the administration will follow.

"Our approach will be realistic," he said. We know we have to look to the needs of improving existing secondary roads in this state. We know that we can look at this on a county by county basis, but we also have the responsibility of working to improve total highway systems across the state."

Before meeting with the governor, Lentz told a reporter:

"My personal opinion is that we've got to shift gears. From a purely cost basis, from a purely professional basis, we would immediately stop paving all secondary roads and begin to upgrade, with some exceptions."

Statistics indicate only about 400,000 of North Carolina's five million people now live on unpaved roads.

Asks Extra Driver Care

Local motorists are being asked to drive with caution during the hours of 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. during week days when Pitt County kindergarten students are either being picked up for school or being delivered home after classes.

According to J. L. Keeter, assistant superintendent of Pitt County Schools, approximately 400 kindergarten students are being transported to and from school during those hours.

"This is an unusual time for school buses to be running," Keeter said. "Motorists are asked to use caution to driving during this time."

"By having midday transportation, the Pitt County schools are able to serve twice as many students in their kindergarten program," Keeter said. "One teacher is able to teach two classes each day, one morning sessions and one afternoon session."

Soviet Experiments In Explosive Clouds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russian scientists are pushing research on techniques for exploding clouds of liquid fuel over the battlefield, U.S. intelligence sources report.

The concept involves dispersing liquid fuel aloft to form an explosive cloud that could blast troops and cause heavy damage to equipment.

The Soviet research appears to parallel work conducted by the U.S. armed services, mostly in secret.

Intelligence analysts say they believe scientists at the Soviet Institute of Chemical Physics in Moscow are carrying on a significant effort in the field of "fuel air explosives."

These analysts seem uncertain how far the Russians have advanced in this.

While little has been said officially, it is known the U.S. Navy has progressed far enough to propose testing methods for air delivery of large quantities of fuel air explosives.

The Air Force and Army also are carrying on research in this field.

In a speech last week, Gen. George S. Brown, Air Force chief of staff, mentioned fuel air explosives among what he called "significant changes in weapons systems" that the Air Force can anticipate before the end of the 1970s.

Pentagon experts have indicated they are concentrating much of their research on using fuel air explosives to destroy hostile mine fields on land and in the ocean.

On The Line At Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. production employees return to assembly lines today after ratifying the United Auto Workers' new contract with the nation's third largest auto maker.

Also today, the UAW begins negotiations with Ford for a new contract, expected to be much the same as the Chrysler pact.

The return of the 127,000 Chrysler workers ends a nine-day national walkout. The strike reportedly cost Chrysler $31 million each day, and UAW members lost $5 million daily in wages.

The new pact calls for a three per cent hike in hourly wages in each of the three contract years plus 12 cents in the first year.

Chrysler said that provision would raise the average hourly wage from $5.10 to $5.37 effective today.

In January, another contract provision will replace the company's mandatory overtime policy

Cars Collided At Intersection

David Williams of 1008 Myrtle Ave. was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of an 11:30 p.m. Saturday collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets.

Police said the Williams car collided with a vehicle driven by Charles Ray Harris Jr., of 106 Vernon St. causing an estimated $700 damage to the Harris car and $250 damage to the Williams auto.

No injuries were reported.

Loan Completes The Financing

A No-Nonsense Man In Charge

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—Lt. Col. Edwin W. Jones has taken control of the State Highway Patrol with several early actions demonstrating his insistence on non-political command of the unit.

In his first weeks on the job, Jones has:

- Ordered a probe into charges that certain Fayetteville lawyers are paying off highway patrolmen with expensive favors for throwing clients their way;
- Sent a memorandum to all troopers discounting rumors of continued shake-ups among the troops and stating that he does not "at this time anticipate substantial changes of our personnel's status except as it may be warranted for violation of Patrol regulations";
- Written all members of the General Assembly to spell out his insistence on quality enforcement of highway laws, not quantity, and making it clear that he "was asked... did not seek... to be the Patrol Commander."

The Fayetteville investigation involves allegations over a long period of time that some law officers, including highway patrolmen, provide people arrested with the name of an attorney to represent them.

Speeders Nabbed

The situation was recently outlined in a story in the Fayetteville Observer. That story noted that particularly along U.S. 301 in the city, out-of-state travelers are often ticketed for speeding as they leave the 70 mile per hour limit of Interstate 95 and run onto the 55 mile per hour stretch through town.

Often a vacation-bound tourist on the major north-south route is told he must appear in court at a future date.

When the lawman is told that the driver can't come back, he suggests the driver get a lawyer, the newspaper reported, and in response to the fact that the tourist doesn't know any Fayetteville lawyers, suggests a name.

It is illegal in North Carolina for any law enforcement officer from radio dispatcher to district attorney to recommend a lawyer to someone charged in a crime.

The Fayetteville Observer story noted that attorneys there talk freely about the situation, saying that it "does happen... frequently. Lawyers to things for highway patrolmen and other law enforcement personnel. They take them to lunch every time they are in court. They make arrangements with local auto dealers to lend new cars to patrolmen for weekend jaunts. A lawyer may even supply a beach house for the patrolman's use." Often, the lawyers take law officers to sporting events.

"In return," the story reported, "a passing motorist stopped for speeding, driving under the influence, careless and reckless driving or involved in an automobile accident is given the name of a good lawyer."

Probe Ordered

Jones said he told the troop commander to "conduct a comprehensive investigation. This kind of thing needs a thorough investigation, and we expect to get to the bottom of it, and wherever any people involved have been in error, we expect to bring about a proper relationship."

Jones said the Patrol "does not condone this conduct and will investigate and take corrective action if it is warranted."

Indications are that patrol officers will open the investigation, and additional aid from an outside source will be called for in order to "get to the bottom of it."

Jones enclosed a copy of his troop memorandum with his letter to legislators "in order that you may learn something of my intentions in directing Patrol operations."

He said major effort will be toward "dangerous moving violation. We do not plan to single out one phase for emphasis while another phase goes lacking."

In a recent interview, Jones expanded on the point of quality enforcement versus quantity: "Quality to me in citations is a matter of the selection of those people who have substantially violated the law—not frivolous, border-line or technical violations."

Not Just Numbers

"I don't like to think that our people would find a spot where traffic might be moving just slightly in excess of the speed limit—two, three, or four miles an hour—and sit there hour after hour preferring charges... simply sitting there to produce numerical results."

Instead, Jones said, speed-trimming devices should be moved around frequently, concentrating on areas with high accident rates or where major violations are taking place.

"I feel like our main concern is to have a smooth, steady, safe flow of traffic rather than 100 per cent compliance with the state speed limit on a given highway where the accident rate may not be high," he explained.

"I don't condone speed, mind you, but by assigning our men to discourage all kinds of violations in an entire area rather than monitoring a smooth-flowing section of highway we can achieve the best results."

In his letter to members of the General Assembly, Jones used these words to describe his philosophy: "We have no desire for numbers for the sake of numbers but constructive action to reduce fatalities, injuries and property damage."

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare loan is one of the first for a county hospital. It had been hoped that an HEW grant could be obtained for the hospital and the loan was decided upon when the grants became unavailable.

Pitt County voters approved a $9 million bond issue three years ago. Some $685,891 in revenue sharing funds are to be provided by the county. In addition $1,143,000 in federal funds and $350,000 in state funds are assured for the rehabilitation center portion of the hospital.

The action was greeted with elation at the hospital and bids are expected to be received on Nov. 8. The hospital will include 301 private room beds, 14 psychiatric care beds and 55 rehabilitation beds.

The announcement of the loan is great news for the citizens and medical personnel in Pitt County. It means that bids for the modern new hospital will soon be received and hopefully construction can shortly get underway.

Does This Mean New Shortage In Generals?

The army has had its problems finding enough qualified enlisted personnel following the end of the draft.

Now the U.S. Senate has come along and voted to sharply limit the enlisted aide for top ranking officers.

This could mean that the high brass might have to shine their own shoes and do those other messy chores their aides have done in the past.

Wonder if we will have a shortage of generals?

Friend Led To Hunt Downfall

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — E. Howard Hunt's downfall began when his friend Charles W. Colson got him a job with the White House plumbers unit.

They met in the mid-1960s when Colson was president and Hunt was vice president of the Brown University alumni club. In June 1971 Colson arranged the job for Hunt with the plumbers who were supposed to plug news leaks to the press.

A year and a half later Hunt pleaded guilty to wiretapping, burglary and conspiracy charges arising from the Watergate break-in.

In the meantime, Hunt dabbled in forgery, bungled direction of a burglary at Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office, poked into the ITT and Chapquidick affairs and paid a college student to spy on Democratic Sens. Edmund S. Muskie and George S. McGovern.

The White House still won't disclose some of the things Hunt did, contending that to do so would damage national security.

Today Hunt was scheduled to testify before the Senate Watergate committee under immunity from further prosecution.

Colson, who failed to get immunity, has refused to testify on grounds he might tend to incriminate himself. But he says he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

Hunt, 55 on Oct. 9, was born in Hamburg, N.Y., graduated from Brown in 1940, attended the Naval Academy briefly and saw service in China in World War II.

After stints as a screenwriter and editorialist, he joined the Central Intelligence Agency in 1949. Former CIA Director Richard Helms says there sometimes were questions about the effectiveness of Hunt's work, but never any suggestion of wrongdoing.

"Mr. Hunt was a bit of a romantic. He used to write books in his spare time, and I think there was a tendency sometimes for him to get a little bit carried away with some of the things he was involved in," Helms told the Committee.

Seeking more money, Hunt retired from the CIA in 1970 and took a job at a public relations firm. He kept up his contact with Colson, who was by then President Nixon's special counsel, and who had a reputation as the administration's specialist in political dirty tricks.

In 1971, shortly after the Supreme Court refused to bar newspapers from further publication of the Pentagon Papers, Hunt and Colson spoke on the telephone about how to "mail" Daniel Ellsberg, the man who said he gave the top-secret documents to newsmen. Hunt told Colson he thought he could discredit Ellsberg publicly, given the proper resources.

A recording of the telephone call is now in the hands of Senate investigators. Soon after the call, Colson recommended that Hunt be hired. He was.

Within three months, according to Hunt's own grand jury testimony, he helped fellow plumber G. Gordon Liddy direct the burglary at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist. The burglars apparently failed to find Ellsberg's records.

By early 1972 Liddy had moved to the President's reelection committee, where he was trying to get approval for plans, among other things, to wiretap Democrats. Hunt took him to see Colson, who interceded.

Colson called campaign deputy Jeb Stuart Magruder and urged that Liddy's plans be considered. Hunt and Liddy stood by his side while he made the call. Magruder says the Colson call led him to believe the wiretapping plan had White House approval. Colson now says he didn't know Liddy's plans include wiretapping.

By all accounts the wiretapping was no more successful than Hunt's earlier efforts. On June 17, when the burglary crew went back into the Watergate building for another try, five were caught. Evidence in their possession soon led to Hunt and Liddy, who were indicted with the rest in September 1972, at the height of the presidential election campaign.

According to Senate testimony, both Hunt's wife and his lawyer acted as conduits for payoff money from White House sources, money said by some to have been Hunt's price for silence.

FACING A FRIGHTENING TRIUMVERATE!

By ART BUCHWALD

The Generation Of Heat

WASHINGTON — It is wrong to think that President Nixon's political future rests on what evidence is produced by the Watergate hearings or whether the Supreme Court decides he has to give up the White House tapes.

The President's rise or fall in the next six months will depend on whether the United States has a cold winter or not. With predictions for a heating oil shortage, the biggest political issue will be the weather.

Let us suppose that for some reason the elements have been unkind to us and the United States has a very cold winter. The Antrobus family is huddled in the living room, freezing to death. Mr. Antrobus has thrown all the furniture into the fireplace and is about to dump the television set in the flames when President Nixon, speaking from the winter White House in Key Biscayne, comes on the air.

"My fellow Americans, 'I wish to speak tonight on a subject that is close to many of your hearts. I am sure you are asking why is the United States, the greatest power in the world, without heat? Why are the American people, who have the highest standard of living in the history of mankind, cold?"

"If you recall, in my second

State of the Union Message I asked Congress for a mild winter.

"I asked them to pass legislation that would make it unlawful for the temperature to go below 40 degrees. I demanded that they give me the authority to move in on any cold front that could cause chaos in this country. 'It is typical of Congress that they ignored my request. Instead of passing a law to guarantee a mild winter, they passed a bill that would have cost the American taxpayer one billion dollars in fuel costs. When I vetoed this bill in October, I told you that I would never sign anything that would add to the inflationary spiral in this country. At that time I said, and I still believe a vast majority of Americans feel as I do, that it's better to shiver than pay higher taxes. Your response was overwhelming in my favor."

"Now I know you're asking, 'Why are we having a cold winter?' The responsibility lies not only with Congress but with a press and TV media that for the past four months have been devoting endless space and time to weather reports that show the United States is a cold nation. Well, I can tell you tonight, my fellow Americans, you have been given a distorted picture of this country. There are great parts of the United States that aren't cold. Florida isn't cold; Texas isn't cold; Southern California isn't cold. But does the press write about these places? Do the network news programs show the sun shining over Arizona and New Mexico? All we ever see or read about is New England and Minnesota."

"The truth is, since I took office in 1968 more people have been warm than at any time in our history. But at the same time I am aware that there are some people in this

Other Editors Say Safety Belts Vital

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Safety interlock systems requiring front-seat occupants to buckle up before starting the engine of 1974 model cars will obviously increase safety belt usage.

But how about those people who don't have new cars? They should also make use of their present safety belts voluntarily.

Either lap belts or the seat belt-shoulder harness combination is available on the great majority of cars on the road, but not nearly enough people make use of these devices.

If available safety belts were worn by those who get involved in traffic mishaps, about 14,000 lives could be saved each year.

What are some of the excuses used for not wearing safety belts?

"Safety belts are find for long trips, but they're a nuisance when just driving around town." (Fact: Half of all injury-producing accidents occur at speeds of under 40 miles an hour. If you hit an unpadding portion of a car's interior in a 30 mph crash, the impact is the same as falling face-down to the ground from the roof of a two-story house.)

"Some people are thrown clear in a crash and walk away with hardly a scratch." (Fact: Your chances of survival in a crash is five times as great if you stay inside the car.)

"If I'm wearing a safety belt and my car catches fire or skids into a river, I could be trapped in my car." (Fact: Fire and submersion occur in less than one per cent of traffic accidents. Even if your car does catch fire, or is submerged, your chance of escape is better if a safety belt keeps you from being thrown around the car's interior and possible being knocked unconscious.)

"I don't need to wear a safety belt just to drive down to the supermarket." (Fact: Half of all traffic deaths occur within 25 miles of home.)

"I'm a careful driver I've never caused an accident. I don't need to wear a safety belt." (Fact: Four out of five drivers involved in accidents have never had an accident before.)

Safety belt interlocks and the second-generation passive protection devices — air bags — will not be standard equipment on a majority of cars on the road until the 1980s.

Until then, current safety belts will remain the best available occupant protective system.

They deserve to be used.

TO CATCH A MONKEY
In Africa monkeys are caught in an ingenious manner and one which has a lot of relevance to the catching of human beings. A hollow gourd with a narrow neck which will admit nothing larger than a monkey's empty paw is filled half-full of rice and nuts and is attached to a tree. During the night the monkey finds the gourd, thrusts in his paw, and is unable to draw it out because the fistful of goodies will not go back out through the neck. Even facing capture the monkey cannot bring himself to drop the goodies in order to free his paw.

All of this reveals monkey mentality whether the monkey lives in the jungle or in a Fifth Avenue Apartment, whether he swings from tree to tree or rides about in a $10,000 car. Monkey mentality puts possession before everything else and insists that once you have grabbed something you must hold on to it regardless of the consequences.
For the human monkey this can mean being caught in the web of a meaningless materialistic life where nothing counts but things.

The Action In Money Exchanges

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The latest international currency exchange rates indicate why speculators in recent years often have found more action in money than in stocks.

The currency realignment has been vast—produced mainly by two U.S. dollar devaluations but also by different economic growth rates, for which national currency values are symbols.

Speculators depend upon change. Betting that one currency will become stronger than another, they move their funds from the weak to the strong.

And in so doing, these speculators—often vast multinational corporations and banks—tend to exaggerate the effect they foresee.

Here, measured as of Sept. 18 by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., are the effective rate changes of some major currencies, compared with their pre-June 1970 parties:

U.S. dollar, down 19.71 per cent; British pound, down 22.87 per cent; German mark, up 19.74 per cent; Dutch guilder, up 6.84 per cent; Italian lira, down 17.60 per cent; Japanese yen, up 21.58 per cent.

The dollar's value decline has given a twist to an old European phobia. During the 1960s they feared an American takeover of their industry. On a more limited scale, some Americans now fear foreign domination.

Because of the slump in U.S. stocks that makes the shares of some solid companies worth less than their book value and because of the relatively greater buying power of their money, foreigners now are buying U.S. industry.

The Conference Board, a business research and educational organization, calculates that direct foreign investment in U.S. corporations rose from $3.4 billion in 1950 to $6.9 billion in 1960 to $13.7 billion in 1971. And the trend has accelerated sharply since then.

Many shares that are selling for less than 10 times earnings represent companies that Europeans and others had thought just a few years ago soon would dominate their economies and their lives.

And while the Europeans and Japanese apparently recognize the futility of ever controlling some of the largest American companies, they are bidding with growing fervor for second tier corporations.

Banks, retailers, manufacturers, food distributors are on the list of those already purchased, actively sought or believed to be under consideration.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Crossbreeding was generally shunned by the beef industry a few years ago but now it's one of the hottest topics around. One of the reasons is market acceptance of the crossbred calf.

A. V. Allen, in charge of extension beef cattle work at North Carolina State University, believes crossbreeding is now well established on Tar Heel beef farms. "It probably is the fastest growing practice that we have in the state at the present time," Allen said.

The industry has seen a complete turn-around in attitudes toward crossbred cattle at practically every level. Allen pointed out, as an example, that crossbreeding was not recommended by N. C. State University specialists until about five years ago.

The reason for this, he explained, was that feeder calf buyers discounted crossbred calves in the organized feeder calf sales.

"The buying patterns have changed, and today some crosses will bring more money than any straight-bred cattle on the same sale," Allen said.

One of the most popular crosses is that between the state's most popular beef breeds, Angus and Hereford — a cross that gives a black calf with a white face. But other breeds, including dairy lines and the "exotic" or European imports are now widely used by Tar Heel cattlemen.

Allen cited some of the reasons for the acceptance of crossbreds and their current popularity.

"Although prices sometimes favor the crosses, there are other advantages in crossbreeding. In fact, the other advantages are greater than that of price," the N. C. State University livestock expert said.

He said the biggest advantage is in a higher percent calf crop weaned. "Crosses seem to be born with a little extra vigor and survive up to weaning time better than most straight bred calves. There is also some hybrid vigor connected with the growth of crossbreds, from birth right on through to slaughter."

Allen added that because of these factors, the feeder calf producer — the most popular specialty area among North Carolina beefmen — benefits by having more calves and more pounds to sell at weaning time.

But crossbreeding may not be for everyone, Allen cautioned. A producer who is happy with a single breed and is weaning a 90 percent calf crop that weighs close to a 500-pound average probably wouldn't have much reason to jump on the bandwagon.

On the other hand, a 65-75 percent calf crop and a light average weight could be tipoffs that crossbreeding is in order. Crossbreeding will not solve any problem unless it is accompanied by good management.

North Carolina beef producers are beginning to learn to get along without the benefits of the growth stimulant diethylstilbestrol following a total ban on its use by the government.

The product, which has the effect of producing more rapid growth in livestock thereby reducing feed costs, had been in use for over 30 years on poultry, and a slightly shorter time on beef cattle and sheep.

Now that the diethylstilbestrol ban is total, cattlemen must turn to other products to get the benefits of stimulated animal growth and to realize the cost reductions that are produced by this faster growth.

Allen said at least three substitute products are available.

These products produce roughly the same results as diethylstilbestrol implants, although the results haven't been as consistent in research at the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station and elsewhere.

Cattle receiving one of the growth stimulants as recommended can add 20 to 30 pounds of weight gain at a cost of less than one dollar a head.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Motorists who find service stations closed in protest of Phase Four price controls should put pressure on the petroleum industry by postponing payment of oil credit card bills, says a board member of a national consumer organization.

John Ripp of Birmingham, who serves on the board of the Washington-based Consumer Federation of America, an organization of some 150 auto-mous consumer groups, said he will recommend the proposal to the CFA today.

"The station operator efforts now are a sort of conspiracy against the consumer to inconvenience him so that pressure will be brought upon the government to allow the increases in gas prices," said Ripp, who is a college economics professor here.

He said the goal is wrong, that the operators and the consumers should turn their guns toward the petroleum industry whose greed is behind the whole thing. He said local station operators are being used by the giant oil concerns.

"Frankly, I think these are the most unfortunate group of people in this whole situation," he said about operators. "This poor guy has been really squeezed so badly by the oil industry that 90 per cent of his efforts go to generating greater profits for the oil industry and he gets barely an adequate return on his labor. He takes the risks, he puts in the long hours and he takes all the abuse.

"Although we feel sympathetic toward these individuals the only way to get them to respond is for the consumer to show he is venting his actions against the wrong people."

Ripp, who specializes in teaching about this nation's free enterprise system and who organized the Alabama Consumers Association, said one month's loss of operating revenue from credit card users should be enough to jog the oil interests. He said they will charge interest on the unpaid balance but consumers should refuse to pay it.

"Let them sue me for 80 cents," he said.

Report Break-In At Local Store

Greenville police are continuing their investigation today into an early-morning break-in at the 12th Street Grocery today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the break-in was reported at 3:10 a.m.

The thieves, he said, pryed a hasp off the front door to the store, located at the intersections of 12th and Pitt Streets, and allegedly took a half-dozen bottles of wine from the building.

See Southern Need For Industrial Expansion

DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — Unless Dixie industrial and business expansion keeps pace with population changes, Southern workers face job shortages of between 450,000 and two million by 1980, a pair of studies claim.

A study released by the Southern Growth Policies Board and compiled by the husband and wife team of Richard and Cynthia Taeuber indicated a 450,000-job deficit in the South based on 1970 census data.

Earlier, a Georgia Tech study compiled by Dr. Ross W. Hammond indicated as many as two million extra workers would be searching for jobs by the end of the decade.

Both studies were compiled for the Southern Growth Policies Board for Southern decision makers in need of information to formulate growth policies, according to Dr. William L. Bowden, SGPB executive director.

Richard Taeuber is chief of the urban research section of the Health Physics Division, Oak Ridge National Laboratory. His wife is executive secretary of the Southern Regional Demographic Group affiliated with Oak Ridge Associated Universities.

The 15 states that are included in the SGPB are Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

The Taeuber and Hammond reports both indicated that unless business and industrial expansion quickens, the number of persons entering the job market over the next seven years will create the unemployment figures.

"Obviously there are important growth policy implications in both reports," Bowden said. "The results of providing too few jobs by 1980 will be the out-migration of talented Southern young people and a mounting unemployment rate, especially among the young and the women of the South."

Bowden said the two studies were not identical in data and methodology. The SGPB attempts to coordinate Southern growth—rural and urban—and disseminate the information to business and government leaders.

The Taeuber study called for continued expansion of nearly all existing industry to keep pace with the South's population growth and the increase flow of people into the available work force.

Pesticide Training School

The Pesticide Training School for Pitt County dealers, applicators and consultants will begin Monday, October 8 at 3 p.m. The school will be held Mondays and Thursdays from 3 to 5 p.m., in Room 209 in the Humber Building at Pitt Technical Institute.

Anyone who plans to take the training offered should first make application to the North Carolina Department of Agriculture for a license. Without this application, you will not be eligible to take the examination at the conclusion of the training.

It is not mandatory that anyone take this training, but we feel it will be a helpful tool in preparation for the examination.

Pesticide training manuals and Agricultural Chemicals Manuals will be offered for sale at the first meeting.

Open House At North Carolina State University

Pitt County high school students, especially juniors and seniors, are invited to Open House at North Carolina State University, Saturday, September 29.

Four schools at NCSU will open their doors to visitors on that day. They are the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences, School of Forest Resources, School of Engineering and the School of Physical and Mathematical Sciences.

Open House is designed especially for career-minded high school students, parents, teachers, counselors, alumni and other adults interested in NCSU.

Exhibits, tours and discussions by students and faculty members will be featured at the Open House.

Bond Issue Is Endorsed

The North Carolina Student Legislature voted to support a resolution backing the $300 million school construction bond referendum to be voted on Nov. 6 during an interim meeting at North Carolina State University at Raleigh.

The NCSL is modeled after the North Carolina General Assembly and represents more than half of North Carolina college students. East Carolina University is a member of the organization.

According to the resolution adopted by the group, "Adequate educational facilities are necessary to provide students with an environment conducive to learning." The group pledged to exert every possible effort to promote the passage of the referendum.

Pitt Technical Institute was granted a temporary charter at the meeting.

More schools are needed for membership, according to NCSL Student Governor Walker Reagan, a student at Duke University.

Many-Fronted War Against Corruption In Govm't

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Watergate and the Maryland kickback probe involving Vice President Spiro T. Agnew have received the lion's share of headlines on corruption in government. But the war against illicit activities by public officials is being waged on many other legal battlegrounds as well.

An Associated Press survey showed federal and county grand juries in areas from Pennsylvania to Arizona are investigating allegations of wrongdoing involving officials at varying levels of government.

The Arizona case, which drew national attention, involves Sen. Paul Fannin, a Republican, who was arrested last November and charged with driving while intoxicated.

The charge was dropped after three physicians submitted sworn statements that a drug the senator was taking could have affected the results of a breathalyzer test.

Maricopa County Atty. Moise Berger refiled the charge in August, however, and Fannin pleaded guilty. The senator was sentenced to one day in the county jail and was fined $110.

A county grand jury probe is under way into the circumstances by which the original charge was dismissed. Fannin testified before the panel and reportedly told the grand jury he was unaware of alleged political pressure to stop the investigation.

Most of the probes into possible political corruption concern lesser-known figures. Though they have not drawn so much attention as Watergate or the Baltimore grand jury investigation of allegations that Agnew was involved in a kickback scandal while an elected official in Maryland, the issues have a familiar ring.

On July 17, for example, a county grand jury recommended criminal indictment against Mayor John R. Coder of Williamsport, Pa., alleging that he tapped the telephone of a now-retired police captain in an effort to get him off the force.

The grand jury recommended that Coder, a Republican, and John M. Samony, the city public safety director, be charged with criminal conspiracy, intercepting and recording telephone conversations and false swearing. The district attorney filed charges late in July.

In Michigan, a county probate judge, a state senator and a liquor salesman are under indictment on charges of conspiracy to bribe an official of the state liquor commission.

The charges against State Sen. Charles N. Youngblood, a Democrat from Detroit; Wayne County Probate Court Judge Frank S. Szymanski, and salesman Louis Pappas were handed down by a grand jury last February and the case is expected to come to trial shortly.

The three men are accused of conspiring to bribe an official of the state Liquor Control Commission to obtain liquor licenses for Borman's Inc., operator of Farmer Jack supermarkets.

A federal grand jury in Oklahoma City indicted the state treasurer, Leo Winters, a Democrat, last May 31 on charges of conspiracy to commit extortion, mail fraud and misuse of bank funds.

Winters, who is accused of conspiring to deposit state funds under his control in certain banks in return for loans and other considerations, claims the probe is a "Republican-sponsored witch hunt" led by U.S. Atty. William R. Burgett, a former state GOP chairman.

In Pittsburgh, the Allegheny County district attorney, Robert R. Duggan, is under investigation by a federal grand jury. The probe of the prosecutor and his law partner, Robert J. Geier II, involves a real estate title searching firm.

Duggan and Geier are listed as officers of the firm, Abstracts, Inc. State revenue authorities say the company failed to pay corporate taxes for about 15 years. Duggan says the firm was never a successful venture and was disbanded several years ago.

The same panel earlier indicted Duggan's former racket squad chief, Samuel Ferraro, on income tax evasion charges.

A federal grand jury in Illinois is probing racing stock linked to political figures. The investigation is a follow-up to the probe that resulted in the conviction last February of U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Otto Kerner, governor of Illinois from 1960 to 1968.

Kerner, who is now on leave from the court, and an associate were convicted of conspiracy, bribery, income tax evasion and stock fraud in connection with stock deals made when Kerner was governor. Kerner also was convicted of perjury and making a false statement to an Internal Revenue Service agent.

The case is under appeal. If the conviction is upheld, Kerner faces a maximum sentence of 83 years in prison and fines of $83,000.

In the Chicago area, meanwhile, federal and Cook County grand juries are continuing a two-year probe of police corruption. Sixty-one policemen have been indicted so far.

A Cook County grand jury also indicted Alderman Thomas Keane, an aide to Mayor Richard J. Daley. Keane was indicted on conflict of interest charges stemming from his alleged involvement in authorizing city funds to be placed in a bank in which he held stock.

Both the majority and minority floor leaders of the Washington senate are under investigation by a federal grand jury in Seattle.

The panel is looking at charges that State Sen. August Mardesich, a Democrat and the majority leader, accepted payoffs from garbage disposal interests and at an allegation that State Sen. Harry Lewis, a Republican and the minority leader, was improperly involved in securing a federal loan for an industrial development complex.

Graham Crusade Opens In Raleigh

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Like Adam in the Garden of Eden, "you are not going to succeed in hiding from God," Evangelist Billy Graham said Sunday night at the opening of his Central Carolina Crusade.

"When you try to run away from God you are running away from reality, adventure," Graham told an estimated crowd of 29,000 in Carter Stadium.

"How do you stand before God?" he asked.

Graham said he hoped the eight-night crusade in Raleigh would be "a spiritual awakening that will seep through the churches. We're here to study the Bible and how we can face life. We're not here to put on a show."

Graham, who lives at Montreat in western North Carolina, said, "I have never preached to this large a crowd in North Carolina before."

At the close of his sermon, he invited persons to come forward and offer or rededicate themselves to Christ. An estimated 1,050 poured onto the football field and got in front of the speaker's stand.

His sermon, "Man on the Run," was from the third chapter of Genesis. Graham noted that the first human couple had disobeyed God by eating the forbidden fruit, and God had called onto Adam, "Where art thou?"

"Adam was trying to hide from God," he said. "Every person from that day to this had attempted to do just what Adam tried to do — to hide or run from God."

The 4,400-member choir, led by Cliff Barrows, sang two opening hymns, "Blessed Assurance" and "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Later the choir joined George Beverly Shea in "How Great Thou Art."

Boy Charged With Stabbing

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A 16-year-old junior high school boy has been charged with attempted murder in the stabbing of another youth with a hunting knife.

Police said they had jailed John Lockhard under $4,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

In serious condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital was David Allen Whitlock, 16, who underwent surgery Sunday for knife wounds in the chest.

Officers said the stabbing followed an argument between the two.

A new name for an old tradition.

A long-established tradition at Pilot has a new name. A name that communicates the purpose of the Division. A name that says exactly what we do.

The Pilot Home Service Division. People serving people.

It all began in 1921 when the Pilot Industrial Division was established. In the 1950's, the Industrial Division was renamed the Combination Division. Now, in 1973, the Combination Division becomes the Home Service Division, carrying on and strengthening a 52 year old tradition of service.

A tradition of reaching people in their homes. Of planning with them, of showing them how insurance may be used to protect against risks, build economic security, and reach goals.

Through regular home visits, the Pilot Home Service representative becomes an insurance counselor and a friend of the family.

The new needs. Through the years, the Pilot concept of Home Service has changed and expanded as family life styles, protection needs, and attitudes toward insurance have changed.

Standards of living are higher. Insurance needs are more varied, more complex. Where once people saw insurance in only one role, as the great protector against disaster, today more and more people in all walks of life also recognize and accept the many other uses and benefits of insurance: to provide retirement income, for example, or income protection, or as a means to send the children to college.

New insurance products.

In response to these needs, today's Pilot Home Service representative carries a varied portfolio which includes life insurance, health and accident insurance, disability income insurance, mortgage insurance, business insurance.

Along with its new name, the Pilot Home Service Division also has new policies. A complete portfolio of plans, including new weekly and monthly premium products, has been developed to meet the new needs of the people Home Service serves.

A new role for the Home Service representative.

In one respect, the role of the Pilot Home Service representative remains as it always has been. He, or she, still has an assigned geographical area where families have the opportunity to benefit from the regular visits of a trained insurance counselor.

To meet the new and growing insurance needs of the families in their areas, Pilot Home Service representatives now offer more products and a greater variety of insurance programs. The Pilot Home Service Division offers representatives the advantages of a new, comprehensive training program. Representatives are better trained than ever before and are qualified to plan and prepare many types of insurance programs.

Helping people through life.

The Pilot Home Service representative has the privilege of knowing and appreciating the protection needs of people in all walks of life.

Each family served is special. The Home Service representative responds to their different needs, becoming absorbed in their different plans and problems, helping each family to work toward reaching goals and achieving a good life and a secure tomorrow.

Helping people through life. That's what Pilot Home Service is all about.

A REPORT FROM SHELL

How to stay warm this coming winter... on less heating oil.

Warm air escapes through the chimney. So remember to close the damper when you're not using the fireplace.

Good thermal insulation above your top floor ceiling is one of the most important improvements you can make.

Storm windows or insulated glass can reduce heat loss through the windows by 50%.

Warm air leakage or cold air drafts around windows and doors can add between 15% and 30% to your heating costs.

Get your heating system ready.

Will there be a heating oil shortage?

Frankly, we don't know, because many factors could contribute to a heating oil shortage. A severe winter is one of them, and no forecast can determine just how severe our winter will be. However, there are some things all of us can do to help reduce the pressures on demand . . . and at the same time, cut down on heating costs and increase personal comfort.

Act now—save fuel and money later.

Much can be done to reduce the heat requirements in your house. And thus, conserve heating oil. In fact, these are steps you'd be wise to take any year. Some of them take time. So we suggest you begin now.

Even if you have ceiling insulation, check it. Some insulation can pack down and lose its efficiency. Look around your attic. If you don't have the equivalent of at least six inches of good thermal insulation, you'd be wise to increase it. In most areas, good insulation will pay for itself by reducing winter heating bills.

Wall insulation is usually installed by the builder. If it wasn't installed when your home was built, get some expert advice on having it done.

Storm windows help, too.

If you haven't invested in storm windows or insulating glass, this is a good year to consider them. They'll cut in half the heat needlessly lost through the windows of your house. Storm doors will help, too.

Hunt for little leaks.

Every loose-fitting window, door, or frame in the house wastes warm air. On the next windy day, search for leaks. (A smoking piece of incense is often used to help detect leaks.) Mark the spots. Then install or replace weather stripping. And caulk window and door frames. These inexpensive improvements can result in substantial heat savings.

Be sure to close and seal tightly all openings from indoor living areas into the attic. This will prevent heat loss due to the natural upward flow of warm air. And check around all pipes and vents for cracks—and seal them. You'll also want to remove window air conditioning units. Or cover them well.

Get your heating system ready.

Have it inspected and serviced so it will run efficiently. When air filters show heavy dust or lint, clean or replace them. And periodically during the winter, it's a good idea to have your oil burner head checked and adjusted by a professional.

Everyday things to practice this winter.

Remember the little things.

During the day, draw the draperies or pull the shades at windows with no direct sunlight. And close all draperies at night for added insulation. When the fireplace isn't in use, close the damper. And if your heating system permits, close off or reduce the heat in any rooms not in use. Keeping the humidity up in the house helps, too. Use a humidifier or pans of water.

By lowering the thermostat setting from five to ten degrees, your fuel savings can be substantial. For example, by lowering the heat at night ten degrees, you can save about seven percent. It adds up!

And dress warmer during the day when you feel a little cool. Instead of raising the heat, wear a sweater. It could make you just as comfortable.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — North Carolina hogs are steady to $1.50 lower, mostly 50 cents lower. Prices ranged from tops of $42.00 $43.00 at Kinston, New Bern, Benson and Lumberton, to $42.00-$42.50 at Rocky Mount; $39.00-$41.00 Wilson and High Falls; $39.50-$40.00 at Tarboro and Bethel; and $41.50 Salisbury.

RALEIGH (AP) — NCDA — North Carolina f.o.b. dock broilers: Prices steady, supplies adequate and demand fair. Weights desirable. Hens: prices weaker on heavy type, supplies fully adequate and the demand thoroughly good. Heavy hens at farm 24 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices advanced in heavy trading on the stock market today despite profit taking following last week's spectacular rally, brokers said.

At 11:30 the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 3.17 to 931.07. Advancing issues led declines by 806 to 379 among 1,544 traded. Volume was heavy, with the New York Stock Exchange ticker running two minutes late at time.

American Motors led trading on the Big Board, up 3/4 to 8 1/2, followed by Fannie Mae, down 1/4 at 21 3/4; Fuqua Industries, down 1/4 at 12 1/2; and Matsushita Ele Industries, up 1/4 at 23 1/4. Metromedia was up 1/4 at 11 1/4, with Goldman Sachs completing a special offering for 68,700 shares at that price.

IBM, after losing 38 points last week because of the Telecase decision, in a U.S. District Court, was down 3 again today, at 257.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index at 11 a.m. was up .43 at 103.18. McCulloch Oil, up 1/2 at 5 1/4 led the trading.

The NYSE index of some 1,500 listed common stocks was up .05 at 57.78.

Senior Citizens Hear Program By Students

Two East Carolina University students presented the program at the meeting of the Elm Street Senior Citizens Club Thursday morning.

The students were Miss Mamie Cicerone on the violin and Greg Woolard at the piano.

Each club member was given a life membership ticket to the North Carolina State Fair, to be held this year from Oct. 15 through Oct. 21. This year's fair theme is "Fun Festival."

Mrs. Harriet Roseveare, president, presided during the business session. The Rev. Adrian Brown gave the devotion.

Hostesses were Mrs. Annie Robertson, Mrs. Reppie Buck, Mrs. Nina Worthington, Mrs. Lillian Hendrix and Mrs. Blanch Jarvis.

Holshouser At Annual Meet

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Jim Holshouser went to Point Clear, Ala., Sunday where he is attending the annual meeting of the Southern Governors' Conference.

After the conference breaks up Wednesday, Holshouser will return to Raleigh in time to hold a news conference Thursday morning on rural health clinics.

Optimists Hold Joint Installation Banquet

LT. GOVERNOR OF ZONE 20... Max Stephenson, left installed Gene Ward as Optimist Club president and Mrs. Rosalie Trotman, Opti-Mrs. Club president.

A joint installation banquet for 1973-74 officers of the Optimist and Opti-Mrs. Clubs of Greenville was held Saturday night.

Max Stephenson, lieutenant governor of Zone 20, N.C. District Optimist, was the installing officer.

Optimist officers are: Gene Ward, president; Carl Knott, internal vice president; Wade Trask, external vice president; Rick Wilkerson, secretary; and Billy Ross, treasurer; John Trotman, sergeant-at-arms;

Board of Directors, one year, C.T. Fleming; Roy Rumbley; and Jack Thornton; two years, Jim O'Brien; Marshall

Whitehurst; and Charles Ross. Mrs. Rosalie Trotman is the Opti-Mrs. president. Other officers are Mrs. Carolyn Medlin, vice president, and Mrs. Barbara Trask, secretary treasurer.

The evening was highlighted by the naming of C.P. Shaw as the "Optimist of the Year," by Billy Ross. Shaw, who is retiring president, will receive a plaque and a life membership in the club.

Thornton recognized members having perfect attendance and told of plaques to be received by Gene Piner, for his service as treasurer, Shaw, as president, and to the retiring secretary.

Mrs. Ellen Ross gave Mrs. Linda O'Brien, Opti-Mrs. immediate past president, a gift for her service to the club.

A president's pin was given to Ward by C.P. Shaw and Shaw received his past president's pin from Thornton. New President Ward gave his challenge for the new year and recognized his Yes, we have no movies.

On most flights, if we showed a film you'd never see the end of it.

And that's to your advantage.

For example, it's about 2 hours to New York on our afternoon jet.

Under an hour to Washington, 2 non-stop jets.

An afternoon non-stop to Dulles, an evening non-stop to National.

And it's just about 100 jet minutes to Atlanta any morning or evening. Only one stop.

Also service to Fayetteville, Myrtle Beach, Richmond, Roanoke and other cities.

So, you won't see "Gone With the Wind". But if you see your travel agent, or call Piedmont at 800-672-0191 you'll see where you're going in a hurry.

Oakland Wins Pennant For Third Year

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Associated Press Sports Writer
Winning the American League West pennant was as easy as one, two, three for the Oakland A's.The A's won the West title for the third straight year with a 10-5 romp over the Chicago White Sox Sunday.Sal Bando, whose single and double drove in three runs in the A's 16-hit offense, found this title-clincher "the most satisfying of the three."

"That's because we had to come from behind," said Bando. "Nobody was talking much about us at the start of the season. They had forgotten us and were talking about Kansas City or a Cub-White Sox World Series in Chicago. But here we are."The A's victory earned them a berth in the American League playoffs starting Oct. 6in Baltimore. The Orioles clinched the East championship with a victory Saturday.In the other American League games, the New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians 9-1 and 2-1; the Detroit Tigers blanked the Boston Red Sox 3-0;
Kansas City stopped the Texas
Rangers 7-4 and the California
Angels routed the Minnesota Twins 15-7.Oakland's high-powered attack made it easy for Vida Blue's 20th victory and sent 24-game winner Wilbur Wood down to his 20th defeat. Wood became the first pitcher to win 20 and lose 20 in the same season since Walter Johnson did it for the old Washington Senators in 1925.the opener of their doubleheader.In the second game, the Yankees cut down the Indians 2-1 behind the combined ten-hit pitching of George Medich and Lindy McDaniel.

Tigers 3, Red Sox 0

Joe Coleman fired a one-hitter and Jim Northrup hit two bases-empty home runs to lead
Detroit to a 3-0 decision over Boston. Coleman allowed only a fifth-inning single to Bob Montgomery as he won his 22nd game of the year.

Royals 7, Rangers 4

Rookie Tom Poquette drove in the tying and winning runs with a second-inning double andKansas City went on to a 7-4 triumph over Texas.

Angels 15, Twins 7

Nolan Ryan, supported by Frank Robinson's five RBI, became a 20-game winner for the first time and moved closer to the major league season strikeout record in California's 15-7 romp over Minnesota. Ryan fanned 12 to gain 367 strikeouts this season, 15 shy of Sandy

Koufax' record of 382 in 1965.

Cowboys try to give Coach Tom Landry a milestone 100th National Football League victory tonight in a nationally televised match with the lowly New Orleans Saints who limp into Texas Stadium after absorbing the worst defeat in their brief history.Landry has a 99-76-6 record in his 13 years as the only coach Dallas has ever had.
Landry and the Cowboys stumbled through a 0-11-1 season in 1960. However, since 1966, Dallas has 75 victories—more than any other NFL team during that period.Nine other coaches have posted 100 or more victories in the NFL. Landry has one distinction no other coach owns—he has taken Dallas to seven consecutive NFL playoffs. Dallas has won six division titles, two NFC conference crowns, and one NFL title in Super Bowl VI.New Orleans was bombed 62-7 last week by Atlanta and should be in a fighting mood after a roasting by the fans and new Coach John North, who said "When you play this bad the Little Sisters of the Poor could beat you."Saints' quarterback Archie Manning suffered five interceptions in his poorest performance as a professional.

North went on television in

New Orleans Monday to apologize for the humiliation.Landry said the Saints will provide a problem for the Cowboys, who opened the season with a 20-17 victory over Chicago."It's difficult to get a team up for another team coming off the kind of defeat the Saints suffered," Landry said.

'Thinking Man'By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C.
(AP) — "Auto racing is a thinking man's game," says Bobby Allison. "Not only does the driver have to keep his wits, but his crew also must stay on the ball."Allison's crew was thinking ahead during the late stages of Sunday's Wilkes 400 stock car race, and their bit of strategy paid off in victory for the 1972 national driver of the year.He beat arch-rival Richard Petty by 1.5 seconds in a brilliant late race duel, and he did it by making up a full lap deficit around the tough five-eighths-mile North Wilkesboro Speedway."The track was getting so oily and greasy after the halfway point that I couldn't drive anywhere without slipping," the 36-year-old Allison said. "I knew Petty was having the same problem."Petty made his final pit stop well ahead of Allison and the Alabama driver said he noted in passing that Petty took on right side tires only."When I made my final stop later, we decided to replace all four tires," Allison said. "We knew we would lose some time to Petty, but we figured we'd be able to make it up by having better traction on the asphaltsurface."
The strategy paid off. Allison was slightly more than a lap behind his rival when he got back on the course. It took him less than four times around to get back into the same lap, and the chase was on.As Petty's Dodge slipped and swayed each time around, Alli-son's Chevrolet appeared to be handling better than it had earlier in the race — and it was by far the fastest car on the track.Allison finally caught Petty as they roared down the back stretch with just half a lap to go. By that time, Petty's machine was missing badly and the long-time super star was hard put to hold it in the road.Allison's share of the purse was $5,925, small as race purse goes, but it was only the second victory of the season for a driver who won 10 events and $300,000 in purses last year.The winner's race speed was 95.198 miles per hour. The race drew a standing room only crowd of 16,500.Cale Yarborough came in third in a Chevrolet, the only other driver to complete the 400 laps. Fourth place went to Buddy Baker in a Dodge and fifth

Fumbles Didn't Help Keydets

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
"It was unbelievable."

The words were those of Virginia Military Coach Bob Thalmann after his Keydets lost seven fumbles, had two punts blocked and a pass intercepted in a 35-0 defeat Saturday at Richmond that boosted the Spiders into the Southern Conference football lead.

But almost any of the seven other league coaches could have said that.

In the VMI-Richmond scrap and the six games played against outside opposition, of which league teams won four, there were 29 lost fumbles, nine intercepted passes and at least three blocked punts.

"I think a lot of our hard tackling had something to do with it," said Richmond Coach Frank Jones after looking at films of the Spiders' romp over VMI.

There wasn't as ready an explanation from some of the other coaches who saw their teams put in a hole by mistakes. Three came from behind to overcome the errors, while East Carolina's defending champion Pirates were on the receiving end.

The Pirates built a 21-0 lead in the first period, two scores coming on back-to-back end zone recoveries of bad center snaps by Danny Kepley and Cary Godette, in a 42-25 victory at Southern Illinois.

William and Mary's Indians rallied from a 14-0 deficit to edge Wake Forest 15-14 on Steve Regan's 17-yard field goal with 2:04 left, Furman's Paladins overcame a 19-7 deficit to nip Wofford 21-19, and Davidson's Wildcats trailed 10-0 before beating Lenoir Rhyne 20-17.

The only teams that didn't come back were The Citadel's Bulldogs, beaten 24-6 at Illinois State, and Appalachian State's Mountaineers, who bowed to Western Carolina 23-14 for their third straight loss.

"I guess a football coach is never really totally pleased, but we haven't allowed the opposition to score and you can't be too unhappy about that," said Jones, whose Spiders turned four of VMI's fumbles into touchdowns.

Defensive back Bob Loprete recovered three fumbles and a blocked kick and intercepted a pass and linebacker Bob Mock recovered two fumbles. Bob Allen ran for 82 yards and Barty Smith for 50 while scoring twice, once on a run and once on a pass.

Spider quarterback Harry Knight hit seven of 12 passes for 147 yards and two touchdowns, while Richmond's defense limited VMI to 22 yards on the ground.

Quarterback Carl Summerell ran for three touchdowns for East Carolina, and Coach Sonny Randle said he "played his best game of the year. He called a good game and utilized his speed to score."

Pirate running back Carlester Crumpler, last season's league player and athlete of the year who has been hurt, ran eight times for 81 yards, but Randle said Ken Strayhorn and Don Schink "are still my starters because they simply have won their positions."

"A lot of folks wrote us off after the problems we had at North Carolina State (which routed the Pirates 57-8), but look now, we're coming home

2-1," said Randle, whose team a week earlier had upended Southern Mississippi 13-0.

"We're finally coming home and we are in much better shape than I expected," said Randle.

A fumble led to the touchdown that gave Lenoir Rhyne a 10-0 lead over Davidson before David Harper began to click. The Wildcat quarterback hit 14 of 19 passes for 202 yards and two touchdowns and ran for the winning score midway the third period.

"We needed to play well, and we needed to win," said Davidson Coach Dave Fagg, who added:

"When you're down 10-0 after losing two games, most kids and a lot of coaches would have quit. But the kids got after them."

"Harper looks like he's starting to come into his own. Defensively, we've played real good football. As far as the hitting game is concerned, we've flat stayed in there for three games."

An intercepted lateral and a blocked punt staked Wake Forest to its lead over William and Mary before the Indians, with Doug Gerhart getting 103 of their 249 yards on the ground and Bill Deery directing the attack, battled back on John Gerdeman's two touchdowns.

A pass interception by Mike Stewart at the Wake Forest 34 set up Regan's winning field goal.

"I think I can safely say it was the most unusual football game I've ever coached," said William and Mary's Jim Root. "There were times when we looked great, and other times when we couldn't do anything right. I'm proud as hell the way everyone came back."

Root had special praise for Dick Pawlewicz, who caught four passes for 91 yards, carried the ball four times for 12 yards and averaged better than 20 yards on kickoff returns.

Art Baker's "freshman a week" campaign continued at Furman, Andy Goss running 61 yards in the final period for the winning touchdown as the Paladins made it three straight victories.

Furman had fallen behind 197, giving up touchdown-producing fumbles to Wofford twice at the 33 and again at the 11. But Vince Perone returned the kickoff after Wofford's last score 101 yards to keep the Paladins in contention.

Charlie Haugabrook's seven-yard run in the first period pulled Appalachian State even with Western Carolina at 7-7, but the Mountaineers were down by 23-7 before they scored again with 41 seconds left.

Touchdown passes by Eric Scott and Larry Spinks led Illinois State to a 24-0 lead over The Citadel, but the Bulldogs averted a shutout on Harry Lynch's four-yard run in the final period.

Glum View By Coach Dooley

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"We were very poor offensively. We made too many mistakes in execution and we got beat at the line of scrimmage."

With that, North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley summed up the Tar Heels' 23-3 drubbing Saturday at the hands of Maryland.

And then he looked toward the rest of the season.

"Maybe we simply aren't good enough to be the type football team we have had at Carolina the past three years," said Dooley, whose teams have won two consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference football titles, and had a 15-game win streak in league games. "Or else we must be a little fat, complacent. I honestly don't know which of the two it is. We'll have to wait and find out. I hope it was a case of complacency, because that can be corrected."

The victory over the defending champions put Coach Jerry Claiborne's Terrapins into a first place tie with North Carolina State, which suffered a 31-14 defeat to second-ranked Nebraska. Both Maryland and State are 1-0 in conference play.

"This was a complete opposite of last week's game," when Maryland lost in the closing seconds to independent West Virginia, said Claiborne. "Our coaches gave me a great game plan and the players responded."

The Wolfpack, ranked No. 14 nationally, found some consolation in their setback.

Oakland Tarnishes Miami Image Of Invincibility

CARL SUMMERELL, quarterback for East Carolina University, is met by Ed Bell (27) of Southern Illinois University in Saturday evening's game action. Summerell ran for two first half scores before going to the bench with an injury. (AP Wirephoto)

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

"We wanted to play them last year and stop the streak but we didn't get the chance. But now we're the team that did it."

That was Oakland Coach John Madden, whose Raiders finally shattered Miami's slowly tarnishing image of invincibility Sunday.

They didn't exactly overpower the Super Bowl champion Dolphins. In fact, the only thing that got them on the scoreboard all day was a 46-year-old foot belonging to George Blanda. But it got them there four times.

And that got the Raiders a 12-7 victory over Miami, halting the Dolphins' regular-season and playoff winning streak at 18 games.

So, until some other "dynasty" comes along, the Dolphins and the Chicago Bears of 1933-4 and 1941-2 will share that National Football League record.

In Sunday's other games, the St. Louis Cardinals stunned Washington 34-27; the New York Jets blitzed Baltimore 34-

10 but suffered a greater loss when Joe Namath suffered a shoulder separation; the San Diego Chargers walloped Buffalo 34-7; the Pittsburgh Steelers bombed Cleveland 33-6; the Los Angeles Rams smothered Atlanta 31-0; the Cincinnati Bengals topped Houston 24-10; the Kansas City Chiefs nipped New England 10-7; the Minnesota Vikings turned back Chicago 22-13; the San Francisco 49ers outlasted Denver 36-34; the New York Giants and Philadelphia Eagles tied 23-23 and the Detroit Lions and Green Bay Packers played to a 13-13 draw. The Dallas Cowboys host the New Orleans Saints tonight.

Cards 34, Redskins 27
Donny Anderson's three touchdowns and Don Shy's 97 yard kickoff return sparked St. Louis. "He's a steady old pro, he comes through in clutch situations," Cards Coach Don Coryell said of Anderson.

Jets 34, Colts 10
Al Woodall thought he was merely a temporary substitution for Namath. Instead, he'll be the Jets' No. 1 quarterback for perhaps eight weeks—and maybe for the rest of the season if Joe needs surgery.

"The balls just came right at us," said cornerback Rich Sowells, who intercepted three passes as the Jets came within one of the league record. "We were just in the right place at the right time."

Chargers 34, Bills 7
So were the Chargers. "We kept him inside and let our pursuit do the rest," Deacon Jones after he and his San Diego teammates "limited" Buffalo's O.J. Simpson to 103 yards, far below his record 250 of a week ago.

While the Chargers were shutting down the brunt of the Bills' offense, Johnny Unitas was cranking up the Chargers' attack, passing for touchdowns of 26 yards to Gary Garrison and 12 yards to James Thaxton. Unitas finished needing just two more yards to reach 40,000. "It's just another number," he shrugged.

Steelers 33, Browns 6
The Steelers did what comes naturally. It was Cleveland's fourth loss in four games at Three Rivers Stadium, where they have yet to score a touchdown.

Rams 31, Falcons 0
"It was a perfect game," said Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox, whose Rams scored their first shutout at home since moving to Los Angeles 27 years ago. John Hadl tossed two touchdowns for them while the defense limited the Falcons—the team while had bombed New Orleans 62-7 a week ago—to a measly two first downs.

Bengals 25, Oilers 10
Cincinnati, recovering from the shock of 103-yard opening kickoff return by Bob Gresham, resorted to basic football to beat the Oilers. "We came out with straight football in the second half and found we could run on Houston," Bengals Coach Paul Brown said. Essex Johnson and Booby Clark ran for Cincinnati touchdowns.

Chiefs 10, Patriots 7
"It was a must game, one we had to win," Kansas City Coach Hank Stram said after the Chiefs' squeaker against the error-plagued, underdog Patriots.

Kansas City won because Willie Ellison plunged for a touchdown and Jan Stenerud kicked a 33-yard field goal. And New England lost because all they could get was a last-gasp Sam Cunningham touchdown dive.

Vikings 22, Bears 13
The Vikings beat the Bears because, as Minnesota Coach Bud Grant put it: "They made the errors and we didn't. We got the big runs against them."

49ers 36, Broncos 34
Bruce Gossett kicked five field goals, and the last one, a 39-yarder into the teeth of a strong wind with 26 seconds to play, carried the 49ers past the Broncos.

Giants 23, Eagles 23
"There was no pressure. After all, I wasn't that far back. But I got awfully scared when I looked at that clock," Pete Gogolak said after kicking a 14-yard field goal at the final gun that lifted the Giants to their tie with the Eagles, who had gone ahead with 1:54 to play on a 16-yard Roman Gabriel-to-Harold Carmichael touchdown pass.

Packers 13, Lions 13
Jim Del Gaizo, sidelined with cracked ribs since Sept. 1, replaced first-stringer Scott Hunter with 1:53 to play and starting from Green Bay's 27, led a march capped by Chester Marcol's 24-yard field goal with 19 seconds left that lifted the Packers into their tie with the Lions.

U.S. Wins Ryder Cup Through 'Sheer Power'

By RONALD THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Sheer unbelievable power.

Rival golf captains agreed this was the key to victory by the United States over Britain and Ireland in the 1973 Ryder Cup golf matches.

The American team, sporting such stars as Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, won 19-13 Saturday after three days of play over the fierce Muirfield layout, swept by cold winds from the Firth of Forth.

It was Jack Burke, non-playing captain of the U.S. team that has won of 20 Ryder Cup matches, who described the power of his players.

"If you face them for any length of time, their power is going to get you," he said. "Ours was a very experienced team, and experience also counts on a course like Muirfield where you have to make up the kind of shots that you don't meet every day on the softer American courses."

"Nicklaus, Palmer, Billy Casper, Lee Trevino, Gay Brewer and Tom Weiskopf have been coming here for years, and they were six men I could put in straight down the line," Burke said.

British captain Bernard Hunt said: "What struck me is how much stronger the Americans are physically. They keep going better. They come out at the end of playing six rounds just as strong as they went in."

"Until we get more strength, the British will always be struggling to get through the last day."

Four of Saturday's final 16 singles matches still were going on when J.C. Snead, husky nephew of veteran Sam Snead, registered the point that gave the Americans the winning margin. Snead beat Brian Barnes 3 and 1, repeating his feat in posting the decisive match in the 1971 Ryder Cup at St. Louis.

The U.S. players won nine of the final day's singles, tied four and lost only three—a demonstration of their superiority in head-to-head matches.

Weaker in team play, they had trailed 5½-2½ after the first day but drew even at 8-8 Friday.

Led Only Final Quarter To Win

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Billy Engelhart, of Madison, Wis., led only the final quarter lap but won the 100-mile Hut Hundred for U.S. Auto Club midgits at the Action Track here Sunday.

Engelhart overtook Tommy Astone, of Fresno, Calif., who had led the entire race to that point.

The race had been rescheduled from Sept. 9, when rain forced postponement.

Elon Remains Among Unbeaten

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Elon kept its record unblemished with a 33-7 trouncing of Guilford, and emerged from Saturday's games as the only undefeated team in the Carolinas Conference.

Mars Hill and Lenoir Rhyne each lost their first game. The Lions fell to former conference member Presbyterian 27-24, while Lenoir Rhyne bowed to Davidson, of the Southern Conference, 20-17.

Elon and Mars Hill remained tied for the league lead with 1-0 records.

Guilford's loss was its 28th straight, tying the record set by Virginia in 1958-60.

Catawba saw its record fall to 0-2 overall and 0-1 in conference play with a 14-7 loss to Newberry.

Southern Governors Focus On Mutual Problems

BILLY GRAHAM CRUSADE OPENS IN RALEIGH — An estimated 1,050 persons stand in front of Billy Graham after leaving their seats at Carter Stadium Sunday night accepting

Graham's invitation to rededicate themselves to Christ. The crowd in the foreground is mostly members of the choir and the far stands are filled with worshippers. (AP Wirephoto)

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
POINT CLEAR, Ala. (AP)—Southern governors, Democrats and Republicans alike, focused their attention today on mutual governmental problems of federal aid and economic growth, but they couldn't keep their political anxieties from showing through.

Even before their annual four-day meeting began Sunday, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama put his fellow Democrats—in and out of the South—on notice that the Democratic party must "represent the average middle American" if it hopes to win the presidential election in 1976.

Officially, however, the opening session of the annual Southern Governors Conference dealt primarily with revenue sharing and a suggested new unified program of Southern industrial and human development.

Through a recently organized Southern Growth Policies Board, they are trying to coordinate their future urban and rural development.

Wallace, the conference chairman, said the governors will soft peddle party politics because some are Democrats and some Republicans.

But at a news conference Sunday he admonished the Democratic party to mend its ways in the selection of national convention delegates in 1976 and give the people a greater voice in party affairs.

He endorsed the idea put forward earlier by Georgia's Gov. Jimmy Carter for regional presidential primaries in the South.

In too many states, he said, delegates to the 1972 presidential nominating convention were chosen by "a few activists" attending statewide caucuses.

Wallace, insisting as he has before that he is "not a candidate" for another presidential race but refusing to stay he won't be later, told newsmen that "the people who supported me in 1972 will have a big voice" in deciding who the next Democratic nominee will be.

The candidate who wins the election, he said, "will have to be someone in the middle." and the victorious party "will have to represent the average middle American."

If he runs for a third term as governor in 1974 as he is expected to, the still partially-paralyzed Wallace said he will campaign on his positive record and he doesn't believe Watergate will be an issue in that race.

He did tell reporters, with a chuckle, that campaign costs could be reduced if newspapers and radio and television stations were willing themselves to limit political advertising and turn down some of what he called "that tainted money."

"I reckon," he grinned, "that you folks have broke more politicians than anyone I know of."

Wallace said he does not believe a predicted fight between Govs. Reubin Askew of Florida and Dolph Briscoe of Texas for incoming vice chairman of the conference will have to be settled by a roll call vote.

He said such things are usually settled by the nominating committee and probably will be this time. There was speculation that Wallace would support Briscoe, who backed him as a presidential candidate, but the Alabama governor said he would not take part in the contest unless it comes to a show-down vote.

Officers will be elected at the close of the meeting Wednesday. Wallace will be succeeded as chairman by Gov. Melvin H. Evans of the Virgin Islands, the present vice chairman, who automatically moves up. Evans is the first black man ever elected chairman of a major governors conference.

Alabama is host to the Southern governors for the first time since 1955 and Wallace quipped Sunday that the governor then was "my uncle" James E. "Big Jim" Folsom. Wallace's wife, Cornelia, is Folsom niece.

Leaf Prices Stay High

RALEIGH (AP)—A continuation of flue-cured tobacco sales at near record price levels was expected on markets of the Carolinas and Virginia this week.

Grower optimism was bolstered by record prices received on tobacco belts in the area last week.

Average prices paid growers included $92.11—up $1.76—on the North Carolina Eastern Belt, $91.03—up $1.31 on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt; $89.67 on the North Carolina Middle Belt and $87.18 on the North Carolina-Virginia Old Belt.

Both grade averages and quality improved to bolster the general average on the Eastern Belt while on the Border Belt quality was down slightly, but strong grade averages enabled the general average to register a gain.

Extend Loans To Non-Farmers

"The availability of financing for homes in the country is most important for continuing development of our rural areas throughout North Carolina," according to Joe Griffin, President of the Federal Land Bank Association of Washington, N.C.

The Federal Land Bank Association has been making agricultural loans for more than 40 years including farm homes and recently expanded services to include non-farm rural home loans. "Rural home financing is becoming an even more important part of our lending operations as more people learn that financing for homes in rural areas is available through the association," Griffin said.

The association makes long-term loans and is currently serving more than 1,100 farmers, growers, ranchers, and rural homeowners with loans totaling $23,000,000 in Pitt, Dare, Martin, Washington, Hyde, Tyrrell, and Beaufort counties. The association's home office is located in Washington.

Director of the association are R.G. Coburn, Chairman; Douglas Davenport, Vice Chairman; Minton Beech, Jr.; Sam Winchester; and B.G. Carowan.

Medical Lectures Begin Thursday

The East Carolina School of Medicine begins its Public Lecture Series Thursday night with the noted parapsychologist Dr. J. B. Rhine of Durham.

Dr. Rhine is the founder of the Parapsychology Laboratory at Duke University and is currently executive director of the Foundation for Research on the Nature of Man.

His lecture, entitled "Parapsychology: A New Frontier of Medicine," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Allied Health Auditorium.

Dr. Rhine is the first speaker in the ECU Med School Lecture Series which begins this year as an effort to give the general public a better understanding of medicine as it relates to physical and mental health. The project is co-sponsored by the Department of Pathology at ECU. Additional speakers scheduled for later in the year are to discuss a wide range of common medical problems including: mental depression, headaches, high blood pressure and heart disease.

Dr. Abdullah Fatteh, professor of pathology at ECU, explained that the lectures are designed to bring information on medical topics to the general public.

"We believe that one of the important contributions a medical school can make is in the direction of public education," he said. "That's why we are bringing in experts

Golda Chosen To Head Candidates

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel's dominant Labor party has unanimously chosen Premier Golda Meir to head the party's list of candidates in next month's elections, virtually assuring her of another four years in office.

In her acceptance speech, Mrs. Meir apparently quelled speculation that she may step down in mid-term. She said she is looking forward to another "four long years" as Israel's leader.

Mrs. Meir, 75, has often stated she wanted to retire to a desert kibbutz and live with her children and grandchildren.

like Dr. Rhine who can speak on subjects of interest to the public."

Born September 29, 1895, in Juanita County, Pa., Rhine was educated at Ohio Northern University, the College of Wooster and the University of Chicago. He received the Ph.D. from the Department of Botany at Chicago in 1925.

After three years of research and teaching in the field of plant physiology, Dr. Rhine and his wife, Dr. Louisa E. Rhine, began their explorations in parapsychology and settled at Duke University in 1927. There he began studies that led to the development of parapsychology as a branch of science.

Mrs. Rhine is expected to accompany her husband to Greenville.

Methodists To England

RALEIGH (AP)—Upwards of 300 Tar Heel Methodists will journey in November to the scene of the denomination's founding in England.

Bishops Robert Blackburn of Raleigh and Earl Hunt of Charlotte will lead the Methodists who will depart Nov. 27 from Raleigh-Durham Airport and Charlotte Airport for Manchester, England.

Their first stop will be at Epworth, where John and Charles Wesley, the founders of Methodism, were born.

The group also will visit the home of Francis Asbury at West Bromwich. Asbury is considered the "father of American Methodism." He conducted the first Methodist annual conference in America at the home of Green Hill near Louisburg in April, 1785.

The group will visit Wesleyan shrines during a four-day visit to London. They will return to North Carolina Dec. 5.

Egyptian Meets Mao And Chou

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung has met with Egyptian Vice President Hussein El Shafei in Peking.

Hsinhua, the Chinese news agency, said the two had a cordial talk in which Premier Chou En-lai and Vice Chairman Wang Hung-wen took part.

Belk Gives $60,000 To ACC Fund

WILSON, N.C. — Belk-Tyler's, a leading department store organization in eastern North Carolina, has made a commitment of $60,000 for Atlantic Christian College's Fulfillment Fund Program. The announcement was made today by T. J. Hackney Jr., general chairman of the campaign.

In presenting the commitment, H. M. Jeffries Jr., the Wilson manager for Belk-Tyler's, said, "Our company is deeply committed to the education of young men and women who reside in the area we serve. Atlantic Christian has demonstrated an outstanding capacity for accomplishing a similar objective. We are pleased to support such an important educational and cultural resource for our community."

Upon receiving the gift, Hackney said, "This investment indicates that the business constituency of the college recognizes that our educational program is attuned to the pressing needs of society and is on a sound financial base."

Hackney reported further that commitments to the Fulfillment Fund now totaled $1,325,000 toward an objective of $2,730,000. So far $623,000 has come from the Wilson County Area toward a local goal of $1 million.

Projects being supported by the Fulfillment Fund Program include a learning resource center, a nursing education building, property acquisition, campus improvements, and amortization of long-term building debt.

Grant Disclaims Racist Charges

SYLVA, N.C. (AP)—Marse Grant, editor of the Biblical Recorder, says anyone accusing him of racism "forgets my long identification with organizations fighting discrimination."

Grant said this at a meeting of Christian Action League members Sunday night as he replied to a charge by Dr. Reginald Hawkins, Charlotte black dentist and civil rights leader.

Hawkins, who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination for governor last year, had accused Grant Saturday of "injecting racism" into his campaign against liquor by the drink.

In denying the charge, Grant pointed out that he and Hawkins were charter members of the North Carolina Good Neighbor Council and that he served on the North Carolina Advisory Committee on Public Education, a group "that helped ease desegregation in North Carolina public schools."

Grant also pointed to the strong and consistent stand the Biblical Recorder has taken on race relations during the 14 years I have been editor.

"As the third largest publication in North Carolina, it has been an influence for good in building a better state," Grant added. "That's why it opposed liquor by the drink. This is the issue, not racism as charged by Dr. Hawkins."

Meanwhile, Coy Privette, president of the Christian Action League, said at Asheboro Saturday night that those supporting liquor by the drink "have no respect for a church, public school, or childcare center."

Privette said "loopholes" in the liquor by the drink law "make it possible for a liquor outlet to be right on top of a church, or a school, or a childcare center."

SMALL INCOMES
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly three out of 10 families (28 per cent) headed by women had annual incomes of less than $3,000 in 1971, says the latest report on women workers from the U.S. Department of Labor.

The 'Worry Clinic' Old Lifespans Much Longer

Note the stimulating queries of Dr. Davis. My mother has been drinking a little ocean water daily ever since 1955 and last February she celebrated her 95th birthday—the oldest of anybody in her family as far back as we have record!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE Y-254: Dr. Maurice Davis is a popular Indianapolis pastor who attended a dinner party with me in Chicago.

Our discussion turned to the long life span of many Bible heroes prior to the Flood.

"Dr. Crane," he inquired, "do you suppose the soil was much richer in those water soluble trace chemical way back then?"

"Could that have explained why Methuselah reached the ripe old age of 969 years and Noah attained 950 years?"

"Or did those 969 years refer to a shorter time unit than our present year?"

Biblical Enigma

At first glance, it might appear that those ancient Bible characters used the 4 seasons and called them years. If so, then Methuselah's 969 lifespan would be 2424, in terms of our present annual year of 365 days.

In the Genealogy of the Patriarchs, reported in Chapter 5 of the Book of Genesis, "Enoch lived sixty and five years and begat Methuselah."

If we divide that 65 by 4, then Enoch would have been 16 1/4 years of age when his son was born.

But suppose the ancients employed "moons for years, with 13 full moons per 365-day years, then Enoch would have been only 5 years of age when he begat Methuselah!

To complicate our reckoning, the Bible also states that Methuselah lived 187 years and begat Lamech; then 782 more years during which he begat sons and daughters.

Noah died at the age of 950 but many generations later the father of Abraham lived only 205 years.

Abraham's lifespan was 175 years but about 500 years later Moses reached only 120 years.

Several Centuries later King David passed away at the ripe old age of only 70.

The Bible offers no suggestion about a change in the length of a year between Methuselah and David.

So we might assume that a gradual reduction in the human lifespan occurred during the thousands of years between Noah and David.

If so, what caused this shortening of human life?

Could it be due to radiational effects?

And or the reduced trace chemical content of the soil, caused by rains and melting snows that partially leached the land of the 44 water-soluble chemical elements that were originally therein when the continents first rose out of the oceans?

Since our blood is essentially water, it contains all the 44 water soluble trace chemicals in the sea, but in varying amounts, due to where we live.

Thus, iodine is almost totally gone from the Mid-American soil (and hence the vegetables, grain and meat of animals grazing on such deficient land).

Other areas of the U.S.A. are also reduced in many of the other trace chemicals that are still in the water.

The death rate from heart attacks in 9 north Georgia counties was double that of 9 counties in the south, apparently due to lack of 13 of the ocean's trace chemicals in that northern Georgia soil.

Leading scientists believe such chemical deficiencies may explain many human ailments that are not due to germs, such as gray hair and baldness, psoriasis, arthritis, eye cataracts and even cancer.

So send for my booklet "The Ocean's 44 Trace Chemicals," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Thousands of physicians, dentists, biochemists and laymen are using ocean water nowadays as possible insurance against such deficiency ailments, often with remarkable benefits. (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

On Jan. 1, 1863, Confederate forces under Gen. John B. Magruder captured Galveston, attacking by land and sea, and held the island city until the end of the Civil War.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1973

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Wonderful aspects to finish anything underway as well as to study new methods for starting some venture that appeals to you, but you need to think over carefully.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get an early start on completing duties at home or elsewhere. Later in the day, get your wardrobe in fine order for fall.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day to repay important social debts and retain favor of those you like. Make your personal life more ideal. Clear away any barnacles.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan how to get your home operating on a more honest level and have greater harmony there. Show more friendliness toward good relatives for future good.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Listen to what associates suggest. Complete plans already started. Make appointments important to your welfare. Read tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Deal with others financially in a very honest fashion. You can then begin an upturn in monetary matters. Think logically.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are a stickler for precision and order, and this is the right day to exercise such qualities. After work is completed, join good friends. Be more courteous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get things clean and in working order for more harmony. Fulfill any promises made and please others. Look into new ideas tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Join friends and work on hobbies for improvement. Pay important bills. Evening is excellent for studying and making your abode more attractive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Improve credit, career work to better your standing in community. Cooperate with higher-up. Investigate philanthropic activity. Handle correspondence in p.m.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you get out of that dull routine you can gain further knowledge and advance more quickly. Make new associates you want, but don't let anyone force self on you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Being conscientious in handling tasks is wise as bigwigs are watching you. Get mate to help with tasks that give others happiness. Be big-hearted.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't waste time but quickly take care of work with another person. Enjoy some favorite recreation later. Avoid spending too much money.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those delightful young people who will get into many and varied outlets throughout the lifetime and should be given the finest combined course of education possible to be properly equipped for success in them. There is much vitality here and an inclination to work long hours and conscientiously. Give good religious training and teach good manners early. Not very good at sports.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1—Neither vulnerable, you are third hand after two passes, and hold:

AK104 ♥J86 ♠963 ♣AJ5

What action do you take?

A.—One spade, trying for a part score. You intend passing any response by partner. It is not necessary to open with a convenient club in third position, since you need not prepare for a rebid with a minimum hand.

Q. 2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

Q82 ♠K98542 ♠AK92

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The hand is obviously a misfit, so you should discount some of the point count values. Make an exception to the general rule that an opening bid opposite an opening bid should produce game, and pass. You might miss a game, but on most holdings that North is likely to have game will be hopeless or the play for it negligible.

Q. 3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

QK94 ♠K10986 ♠QJ95

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
Pass 1 ♠ Dble. 2 ♠ ?

What action do you take?

A.—This hand has enormous offensive possibilities. With the addition of distributional values, it is worth 16 points—you treat your hand as responder's with a fit for partner, and add 5 points for your void. There should be no doubt in your mind about reaching game and slam is not out of the question. The best way to announce this is by a cue-bid of the opponents' suit. The recommended call, therefore, is three spades, asking partner to select the bid and announcing that you are prepared for any suit he chooses.

Q. 4—Both vulnerable with 60 part scores. As South, you hold:

AKJ865 ♥AK742 ♠1093

The bidding has proceeded:

East South

What do you bid?

Since you may anticipate a battle for the part score, you should endeavor to mention both suits if it is possible to do so. Therefore, an overall of one spade is preferred to a takeout double. Something is bound to happen around the table on the first round, and you should get a chance to show the heart suit at a reasonably low level.

Q. 5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

QAK743 ♠A1085 ♠KJ94

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South
3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—Pass. In this day and age, a three bid does not denote strength. Do not even consider three no trump, for partner has nothing but a long spade suit that could be worthless to you. Any action you may take will surely prod partner to four spades, where he would be exposed to a double. On the other hand, if you keep quiet, the opponents may think you are trying to steal the hand from them, and they may enter the bidding. Nothing would delight you more.

Q. 6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

QK9 ♠AKQ64 ♠AJ752

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

Our preference is for two clubs, tho we would not fault anyone who chooses three clubs. This is a powerful hand, and if our suits were spades and hearts we would surely make a jump shift. However, since it appears that we may have to play in a minor suit, where 11 tricks are needed for game, partner has to have enough for another bid if we are going anywhere. Thus, we prefer to take it slowly.

Q. 7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

AK9 ♥Q10952 ♠1043 ♠AKQ

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North
1 ♠ 1 ♥ Dble. 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ 5 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—It is true that partner's bid of three spades denotes a hand that is not robust in high cards, but merely contains a long suit of good texture. Nevertheless, it is also obvious from the bidding that partner is very short in both red suits, which makes your club holding doubly attractive. Surely, the penalty inflicted on the opponents cannot be very great. Bid five spades and, with a little bit of luck, you might make it.

Q. 8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

QKJ763 ♥A ♠Q1076 ♠K85

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—This hand has all the earmarks of a slam. You have virtually the equivalent of an opening bid and partner has opened and jumped. The proper call is a temporary bid of three diamonds, awaiting partner's next move. Common sense tells us this bid is forcing. If you were interested in bigger things, you would merely proceed to three no trump, while, if you had a bad hand, you would pass two no trump.

Tracking Cholera Sometimes Goes Coast-To-Coast

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — In an effort to track down the source of the single case of cholera in the United States in more than half a century, epidemiologists have pursued persons as far as the West Coast and on ships at sea.

"We've obtained blood specimens and other tests from several hundred persons who might have had some contact with the patient," said Dr. Jack Weissman, epidemiologist in charge of the search from the Center for Disease Control.

"Thus far, all tests have been negative," said Weissman. "We're looking for someone who might have introduced it from abroad since the patient had not been out of the vicinity of his hometown."

On Aug. 19, a 51-year-old shrimp from the coastal town of Port Lavaca, Tex., woke at 5 a.m. feeling ill. In the next four hours he had severe bouts of diarrhea and was admitted to the hospital in shock.

The next day, the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, where some of the world's most high-powered sleuthing is aimed at tracking down disease, was notified the man might have cholera.

That same night, a health official from Texas flew to Atlanta, hand carrying a specimen from the patient. Three laboratory technicians from CDC headquarters met the plane. They worked all night and diagnosed the case as cholera—the first known case in the United States since 1911.

"I was then dispatched to investigate," Weissman said in an interview. Three lab technicians with special equipment accompanied him.

Cooperating with local health officials, the disease detectives went into action to find the chain of transmissions in the communicable disease.

Meanwhile, the patient recovered fully.

"He lived in a mobile home next to a small motel," said Weissman. "We tested his wife, three children and other relatives. All tests were negative."

Since cholera is a disease directly related to sanitation, the epidemiologists checked the man's water supply and septic tanks.

Not surprisingly, they recovered cholera organisms from his septic tank and closed it down.

When they checked the motel's water supply, which the patient had used from his mobile home, they recovered a dye in places they should not have been able to recover it, said Weissman.

That indicated a leak somewhere and the health officials then closed the motel and began checking the guest list from the four to six weeks prior to the patient's illness.

The CDC pursued guests as far as California and in Missouri. Most were from Texas.

"Since the patient was a shrimp by vocation, we took samples of water from the Gulf of Mexico," said Weissman. "We checked the shipping lanes since ships carrying people from cholera infected areas of the world put sewage into the water."

All these tests proved negative. They also tested shrimp in the area and even some shrimp in the patient's kitchen.

Despite the negative results of all tests thus far, Weissman said the carrier who could have transmitted the disease might have had a slight case of cholera and now be fully recovered. Such a person's test could show up negative.

"The patient also worked as a custodian in a public school," the epidemiologist said. "Fortunately, school wasn't open yet, but we tested 20 or 30 teachers with whom he might have had contact."

"This man had eaten in several restaurants. Since Port Lavaca is a small town and everybody knows everybody, we were able to contact most persons who'd eaten at the same restaurants and test them," he said.

Still seeking the chain of transmission, the CDC team began checking ships in the Gulf who were at port or had been in the patient's hometown.

"We looked at the logs of ships, to see if they had visited any areas in the world where there might have been cholera," said Weissman.

"We checked the entire crew of 50 sailors on a ship from India—since there are cholera cases in India."

The medical team, or other CDC epidemiologists located elsewhere in the nation, have thus far checked more than 600 specimens, many from the same person.

And they are still searching.

In general, most of the persons contacted are cooperative, said Weissman. "One of the important things we could do was assure people they were not at risk."

Cholera, which struck Europe during the Middle Ages, is no longer dreaded as it was in the past because even severe cases respond to intravenous fluid and other forms of therapy. And most cases are mild.

"Panic struck in people's hearts by cholera, is in excess of the disease," Weissman said.

A Dozen Killed On N.C. Roads

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A dozen persons were killed in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend, bringing the 1973 toll to 1,340. That compares with 1,407 killed during the corresponding period a year ago, the North Carolina Highway Patrol said today.

A one-car wreck on U.S. 158 in Forsyth County 3.5 miles northwest of Winston-Salem claimed the life of 83-year-old Leon Blair Mock of Winston-Salem.

Officers said Mock was a passenger in the car, which ran off the road and struck a utility pole.

A 16-year-old Bolton boy, James Nathan Moore, died when a car in which he was a passenger overturned on N.C. 211 about 12 miles east of Clarkton.

Darvin W. Davidson, 21, of Colerain, was killed when his car ran off a rural road near his home and struck a utility pole.

Jesse Thomas Ross, 16, perished on a rural road near Albemarle when his car went out of control, was struck by another car, and burst into flames.

Arthur McDaniel Harrell, 51, of Ahoskie, died when the car in which he was a passenger ran off a rural road near his home and struck a tree.

A 72-year-old Louisburg man, Frank Williams, died when the car in which he was riding backed out of a driveway and was struck by another car on U.S. 410 near Louisburg.

Thirteen-year-old Connie Dee Outlaw of Aulander was struck and killed by a car on a rural road near Ahoskie.

Andrew Paul Brame, 15, and Allen McKenzie Furlow, 17, perished when their car struck a bridge column on I-85 eight miles west of Hillsborough.

A car went out of control on N.C. 212 seven miles south of Bolton in Columbus County and struck a tree, killing 41-year-old Fayrene Johnson of Winston-Salem, a passenger.

John T. Havill, 21, of Medford, Del., was killed when his car left a rural road near Greensboro and slammed into a tree.

Raymond Lee Melton, 21, of Thomasville, died in a two-car wreck on N.C. 8 about five miles south of Lexington.

Diploma Program Announced

Adults who have less than a high school education will have a chance to obtain one through a program co-sponsored by the University of North Carolina television network and the technical institute-community college system.

The television program, called Your Future Is Now, will begin October 2 and run until May 9 on ETV. The series will help prepare adults to pass the General Educational Development tests. When a person successfully completes the tests, he receives a high school certificate issued by the State Board of Education.

Guide books which accompany the course may be obtained at technical institutes and community colleges.

The lessons will include social studies, science, literature, mathematics and English.

Each lesson will be broadcast twice on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 2 and 7 p.m. On Sundays the lessons will be repeated at 3 and 3:30 p.m. WUNK (Channel 25) Greenville will broadcast the series.

Art Deadline On Friday

Artists have until 5:00 p.m. Friday to submit works for judging for the 36th Annual North Carolina Artists Competition and Exhibition at the North Carolina Museum of Art.

The exhibition, sponsored by the museum and the North Carolina Art Society, will open November 14.

A distinguished panel of judges will select the exhibition works sometime in October. The judges are: Bengt von Bonsdorff, director of the Amos Andersonin Taidemuseo of Helsinki; Jim Pilgrim, assistant curator-in-chief, Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York; and Ben Kamihiri of Philadelphia, an artist and teacher at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

A total of $4,625 in prizes will be given.

Art Classes Begin At Pitt Tech

Pitt Technical Institute will over a 30-hour beginners' art class starting Monday night in room 24 of the Administration Building at 7:00 p.m. The cost of this course is $2.00 and the student will be expected to furnish their own supplies.

The course content will cover freehand, black and white drawings in a study of shapes, shades and shadows with perceptive overlapping forms in charcoal.

Interested persons are urged to attend on Monday night. For additional information visit Pitt Tech room 113, or call the Extension Division at telephone 756-3130, extension 38.
