Floor Plans For A New Classroom Building Studied

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Cameron Dudley, representing the architectural firm of Dudley and Shoe, yesterday appeared before the Pitt County Board of Education and presented a floor plan for an additional classroom building to the Bethel Primary School.

As proposed in the plans submitted yesterday, the facility would contain approximately 28,000 square feet. The plan includes 12 classrooms (two each for kindergarten, first, second and third grades, and four which have not been designated), a library which contains 2,000 square feet, a cafeteria and kitchen and an administrative area which will serve the entire school. The new building will be connected to the present school by ramps, an asset to handicapped students.

Dudley was asked to modify the size of the classrooms from 960 square feet to 1,050 square feet. He was also asked to include folding partitions between four classrooms (two walls) so that they could be used for team teaching.

Dudley was instructed to include carpet for the two kindergarten rooms at least, if not for all the rooms.

The base bid will include the building and an alternate bid would include carpet and the two folding partitions.

Board members Dr. Doug Jones, Beverly Congleton and Dr. Jack Carson were named to work with principals in determining under what circumstances students sould be granted excused absences.

Supt. Ott Alford told the board that principals grant excused absences for students from time to time when they were going away with their parents for a day or week.

Alford said the principals should determine whether or not the trip is educational and the decision should be left up to the principal for the most part.

The committee will report their recommendations at the next board meeting.

Alford told the board that many of the principals have requested that their official work day be changed from 7:45 a.m.—5:00 p.m. to 7:45 a.m.-4:00 p.m.

Alford recommended that a study be made of the principals, on an individual basis, to determine whether or not the work day should be shortened.

Alford said his chief concerns were that the teachers would be less inclined to remain at school to work if the principals were not there; bus accidents need to be reported to the principal and many buses do not complete their route until after 4:00 p.m.; from 8:15 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. the principal should be giving his undivided attention to the supervision of instruction and other operational matters (assessment and planning must take place after 3:30 p.m. and should be done at school where the principal's materials, etc. are).

Dr. Jones said he felt professional people should be treated like professional. . .that they should not have to punch clocks.

"A person who is going to do his job will do the job regardless how long it takes, whether he ends his work day at 4 p.m. or whether he has to stay until 6 p.m.," Jones said. "I feel we should give the principals more freedom but let them know that we expect them to get the job done. Some days they will have to stay later but some days they would be able to leave at 4 p.m."

Board member Dr. Tom Patterson said he was also concerned about clock punching for principals and teachers. He said he wanted the job done well, regardless of the time it took.

Board members approved a self-study for state accreditation for the county schools for the year 1973-74 and for Southern Association accreditation for the school year 1974-75.

The utilization of county supervisors was also approved yesterday. The supervisors and the areas they will be in charge of include: Mrs. Janie Manning, kindergarten; Mrs. Ola Perry, grades one through three; Mrs. Patsy James, grades four and five and special education; Mrs. Lillian Bradley, grades six and eight; Mrs. Sue Branch, reading; Eugene Morris, high school teachers; and Carl Toot, vocational teachers.

Several appointments to local advisory councils were made yesterday. They include: Ayden—Dr. Keith Hudson and Mrs. Mary Nobles; Grifton—Joe Padget and Frank Davis; Belvoir—Ashley Jones; Farmville—Milton Barrett, Charles Carr and John Ruel Dilda; Falkland—Herbert Dail, Ronnie Corbett, and Victor Graham;

Critics Claim Allocation Of Heating Oil Too Late

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration's decision to control the distribution of home heating oil has prompted questions about whether the action has come early enough and goes far enough to prevent shortages this winter.

Three Democratic congressmen answer no to both questions, but an administration consumer spokeswoman says yes.

The White House announced Tuesday immediate mandatory allocations on propane gas and said it would impose the controls on distillate oils within a few weeks.

The distillate oils include diesel fuel, jet fuel, kerosene and the home heating oil especially needed in the cold winters of New England and the upper Midwest.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., quickly sent a letter to the President charging that the administration's delay in applying mandatory allocation to home heating oil "has precipitated a crisis for the Northeast."

"What that means is that my constituents are going to go cold this winter," Kennedy wrote.

But Virginia H. Knauer, the President's special assistant for consumer affairs, disputed Kennedy's claim.

"The President's action is designed to ensure that those with the greatest energy needs are served first. This will not be a winter where American families are left out in the cold," she said.

Another Massachusetts Democrat, Rep. Torbert Macdonald, said the administration plan "offers a bandaid where major surgery is required."

Macdonald, chairman of a House power subcommittee, urged passage of legislation, already approved by the Senate, which would require the President to impose mandatory allocations on a broad range of petroleum products including gasoline.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Interio committee, also urged a complete mandatory allocation program. He said the White House action was only "a piecemeal appraoch."

John A. Love, director of the President's Energy Policy Office, had held out against mandatory allocations throughout the summer, urging the oil industry to make a voluntary program work.

The Interior Department has estimated the nation may be short of at least 100,000 barrels per day of home heating oil this winter and bad weather or other adverse conditions could make the shortage worse.

ABOUT FUEL CONTROLS — John Love, director of the White House Energy Policy Office, tells a news briefing "mandatory allocation may not avert fuel shortages but would distribute available supplies fairly. (AP Wirephoto)

Candidates In Agreement

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Candidates for seats on the Greenville City Council and for mayor of the city—who will face voters in the municipal election October 9—seemed to agree on the issues but suggested little in the way of solutions as they spoke and faced questions at a public forum here last night.

The forum was sponsored by the League of Women Voters as part of the group's voter service work—an effort to provide the public with information on candidates and issues, according to League member Natalie Clark, mistress of ceremonies for the program.

Approximately 60 persons braved a heavy rainfall to attend the session which gave each candidate four minutes to state his views on the issues and another four minutes to answer questions posed by members of the audience.

All candidates seemed to agree last night that improved planning and zoning for orderly growth of the city, improved recreational facilities and programs, a more responsive Utilities Commission, the need for public transportation system, and improved public safety are all important issues which will face newly elected office holders. In addition, the candidates, for the most part voiced similar concern for establishing bicycle paths to promote safety and the ecology, and concern for the best method of selecting members of the city Board of Education.

Incumbent councilman Percy Cox, with 10 years experience on the council said "we do have a definate need for a public transportation system," but noted a survey several years ago indicated such a system would not be practical and the council at that time was "not able to see our way clear" to establish one.

"I think now the picture has changed...and hope we could interest a company to come in...and will work toward this end."

Cox also expressed concern that "zoning the new bypass (the eastern by-pass recently opened to traffic) and "planning around the new hospital area" are two items of prime importance.

Dr. Frank Fuller, with 6½ years on the council expressed much the same view as other candidates on the prime issues and voiced his support for an accelleration of urban renewal programs now in progress as well as development of street plans that would result in improved driving conditions within the city.

The candidate, voicing favor for bicycle paths and a public transportation program, said he too "would favor paving all the streets that need to be paved."

"I'd like to see that Greenville becomes that All-America city it has the potential to become, Clarence Gray, a two-year veteran councilman said.

"I'll continue to work for all of the people of Greenville, Gray noted.

Gray expressed concern for the need to "bring Meadowbrook (a recently annexed section of Greenville, North of the Tar River) up to par," indicating that many homes in that area have no inside water or sewer facilities.

And he voiced support for "better housing for low and middle income citizens" and "for more and better employment for low and mid-income families," as well as "higher salaries for city employees."

John L. Howard, a councilman for six years, suggested that something be done to put utility "rates on an equitable basis," noting that residents of Greenville are very much concerned about present utility rates.

He noted, too, that planning should be used to "eliminate waste of funds and duplication of efforts," and that an update of the city's recreation program is needed because Greenville "lags behind in the area of parks."

Howard noted too that "all of Greenville should be represented on the school board" and that local citizens "should all sit down together" in an effort to gain a better understanding of one another and improve race relations.

Mrs. Mildred McGrath, the first woman ever to serve on the Greenville City Council—with two years experience in the job—told those attending the forum "a woman's work is never done", and noted, "I'd like to continue on the council..." in an effort to finish some programs already under way.

"Better communications between citizens and the council," a reduction in racial tensions and "meeting environmental standards throughout the city," are concerns expressed by her.

Mrs. McGrath suggested the establishment of a "rumor control center," and "improved training of police" and "decreased duty time for both police and firemen with improved pay," are also essential.

"We've got to think of this," she said, ". . . settle for nothing less than well paid policemen and firemen," and "improved traffic safety. . .a new traffic control system and equipment," to make the city's streets safer.

Responding to a question about the Meadowbrook area mentioned earlier in the program, Mrs. McGrath said the city should "put the screws to absentee landlords" in an effort to improve the conditions in that area.

Political hopeful Linda Medlin—at 26 the youngest of the candidates—said her concern is that the average citizen does not seem concerned about their government.

She suggested the formation of a council composed of high school and university students to promote feedback to the City Council on the views and ideas of the city's younger population.

Miss Medlin also suggested local merchants "might help subsidize a transportation system" available to the public. But she noted that a public transportation system "is a necessity. . .the responsibility of the city to provide it, even at a loss of income."

The woman candidate, when asked how effective she would be as a member of the council indicated she would "bring up issues that don't get brought up" now.

Friends And Admirers Honor Miss Lucy Crisp

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

From Raleigh, Boone, Chapel Hill, Greenville, and Belhaven friends, admirers and former coworkers braved Tuesday night's storm and flooded streets in Greenville to pay homage to Falkland native Miss Lucy Cherry Crisp, who gave the best years of her life to help art become functional part of North Carolina life.

In a simple ceremony at the Greenville Art Center, void of the pomp and circumstance usually surrounding such events, a Philip Moose paining, Captive Bird, was accepted by Ben Williams, curator of the North Carolina Museum of Art, for the museum's permanent collection.

Moose, of Boone, was on hand to witness the acceptance of his painting which was approved for inclusion in the collection a couple of years ago. Plans at the time were to have Miss Crisp go to Raleigh for a presentation ceremony of the painting. Last night's presentation was the fulfilment of the postponed originally planned ceremony.

"I really can't imagine why all of you have gone to so much trouble to honor me," Miss Crisp said after the brief ceremony, "but I'm certainly glad you did."

She and Ben Williams exchanged reminiscences of the early days of the now nationally famous State of North Carolina Museum of Art. Miss Crisp was the first director and Ben Williams was her assistant. The two were for a time the only staff members of the then fledgeling state institute.

"I remember many times when you burned the midnight oil and made me do the same," Williams recalled.

"And I shall never forget how tired one's feet become after hours of walking back and forth across marble floors in hanging a show," Miss Crisp said. "I stongly recommend that no museum ever be allowed to have marble floors.

Chapel Hill's Mrs. Ola Maie Foushee introduced Miss Crisp. An artist, former newspaper columnist and author of a 1972 art book, Art in North Carolina, Mrs. Foushee said "sometimes we forget that the first seeds, the initiative for a state museum of art came from Greenville, in the dedicated efforts of Miss Crisp and the late Dr. Robert Lee Humber."

Dr. Francis Speight, artist and faculty member of the School of Art, East Carolina University, expressed his appreciation for the thoughtful guidance and help she provided artists.

"There are many instances I remember," Dr. Speight said. "One time in particular, Sara (Mrs. Speight) and I were to have a show in Elizabeth City and were wondering how we'd get our pictures from Raleigh to the place they were showing in Elizabeth City. Lucy Cherry

Opposes Change In Nat'l Guard's 30th Division

RALEIGH AP)—North Carolina Adjutant General William Buck says that the National Guard's 30th Mechanized Division may be reorganized into three brigades with one in North Carolina, one in South Carolina and one in Georgia.

Buck said the adjutant general of Georgia requested the change in a letter to Army Secretary Howard (Bo) Calloway, a former Georgia congressman.

Buck said he does not know why the change was requested and that he opposes it.

The adjutant general said the guard will know today one way or another when Gen. Francis Greenleaf, chief of the National Guard Bureau, arrives to discuss the proposal with Buck and Gen. John T. Tolson, state secretary of military and veterans affairs.

Farmville Bd. Votes Replace Englehardt

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—The courtroom where the Farmville Town Council meets was jam packed last night for a discussion of whether Lloyd Englehardt should be appointed to a five-year term as a member of the Farmville Housing Authority.

Englehardt was appointed during the summer to fill an unexpired term of Tom Anderson, who retired. The expiration date was Sept. 30.

Dr. Charles Fitzgerald, chairman of the Housing Authority, spoke in favor of Englehardt, telling what a good job he did as Farmville Economic Council director, getting the Housing Development here and seeing it through to completion, and of other accomplishments for Farmville.

Most of the audience seemed to be composed of residents of the Pine Grove Apartments housing project. Mrs. Ernestine Moore acted as their spokesman. Though she said nothing against Englehardt specifically, she protested "policies" of the Housing Authority saying her rent has gone up even though her income has been decreased recently.

Mrs. Lois Sutton, director of the Housing Project, answered that Housing and Urban Development policy determines the formulas for rents and the like. Mrs. Moore also protested "the way folks are talked to when they can't pay their rent or when something needs to be fixed." After considerable discussion, Mayor Will Joyner, whose prerogative it is to make such appointments, asked that the Council vote on the matter. Commissioner J. I. Morgan Jr. voted for Englehardt, based on the recommendation of Dr. Fitzgerald and the other members of the Housing Authority, he said. The other

Wants To Know Why People Smoke

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My wife said she saw a grown woman walking down the street with a pacifier in her mouth! I said she must have been trying to quit smoking, otherwise she'd feel too silly to go out in public that way.

My wife and I were both heavy smokers, but we recently gave it up because we wanted to experience the joy of breathing thru clean lungs again and rediscover our senses of taste and smell.

I said I could understand that woman's walking around with a pacifier in her mouth. She was replacing one bad habit with one that was less damaging.

Abby, why do you think people smoke? Is it a nervous habit? Is it an infantile compulsion to have something in their mouths to comfort them? Or is it simply an unconscious death wish? QUIT IN CLARKSBURG

DEAR QUIT: Most young people begin to smoke because they think it makes them look "grown up" or smart, or to emulate someone they admire. Some smoke to keep another smoker company. They continue to smoke because they "enjoy" the feeling of relaxation it gives them [at first] and many say it keeps their weight down. Then they become addicted. [Nicotine is habit-forming, and don't let anyone tell you it isn't.] The "unconscious-death-wish theory" is also valid. Anyone who persists in doing that which he knows could be his undoing is unconsciously hastening his end.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both retired. We've been married for three years. It's his second marriage, and mine, too. He is good to me in every way. We enjoy having company, but my friends are not used to swearing, and neither am I.

If someone says: "Isn't it a lovely day?" he says: "You're g–d— right it is!"

He greets people with, "Well, I'm a s. o. b., if it isn't George!"

Abby, I deplore that kind of language, and I've told him about it, but to no avail. I don't want to nag him because it wouldn't do any good, and would only make him irritable. I am so embarrassed before my friends.

He reads your column. Maybe you can say something to make him more careful. If it weren't for this one fault, he would be perfect. And I do adore him. ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: My advice to you is gently to tell this otherwise perfect man to watch his language. Nobody's perfect, and much as I dislike cursing, there are worse faults.

DEAR ABBY: After 23 years, my wife and I agreed to a friendly divorce.

I have long owned a choice corner lot which is convenient to my work. It happens to be right next door to a longtime friend of my ex-wife.

I am planning to build a home there, but I have run into a slight problem. Rumors are circulating thruout my soon-to-be new neighborhood about the "wild parties" I'll be having, etc., so I have made some minor changes in my house, eliminating ALL windows on the side of the house facing the neighbors.

Do you think I'm making a mistake? PERPLEXED IN OHIO

DEAR PERPLEXED: Possibly. Eliminating the windows might create the impression that you've something to hide. Also, on the practical side, consider what it might do to the resale value.

CONFIDENTIAL TO VIRGO IN S. F.: Go back to school and get as much as you can afford in the way of education. "Chance favors the prepared mind." [Louis Pasteur]

Silver Craftswoman Says New Directions In Style

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It may not push needlepoint off the handicraft circuit, but silver crafting is on the upswing.

Intriguing factors include new materials being combined with the metal, observed Karin Goodlive, 29. Born in East Prussia, now Poland, the talented, tall blonde has just earned her bachelor of fine arts degree in gold and silver at the State University College at New Paltz, New York, where classes in crafts have doubled.

"Silver can be combined with plastic, leather, wood, bone, ivory, gold and bronze for some beautiful effects," she remarked enthusiastically. She has done some pretty jewelry as well as holloware. Of the 30 pieces of silver she has made, a goblet earned her a citation from the Sterling Silversmith's Guild of America in their recent competiton. The competition was begun about 15 years ago to encourage interest of students.

In fact Karin's goblet has semi-precious stones in its base, a trend that has been interpreted by her Oxford-educated professor, Kurt Matzdorf, as indicating that "we are going away from stark modern and into the ornate jeweled area." Some students are using bone as handles for silver cups.

The jeweled idea in holloware is in line, too, with the popular fashion trend in silver body jewelry — belts, buckles, earrings, necklaces, pins — which Karin has also been doing.

"I've done a large pin with enamels and plexiglas, and a necklace using old Persian enamels with silver. Amber is being combined with silver. Opals, less costly than most precious stones, are used in many areas of design," she remarked.

For her husband, a professor of psychology at New Paltz, whom she met "very romantically" at the Louvre in Paris, she has made a necklace of cylindrical beads and a bracelet of scrimshaw, horsehair and silver links. She has also made gifts for her sisters.

At Christmas she is likely to make silver bird pins. One casting of a bird might take two days, she remarked, but then, "you can make many birds from one cast." She often makes casts in advance and then she is all set to make the pins when the time comes.

It is time-consuming work that requires patience, and it is possible to melt silver with too much heat. She has melted some pieces, she says, and the silver must then be used for casting rather than construction.

SILVER ARTISAN--Karin Goodlive chemically oxidizes the stem of a sterling goblet she created to win honorable mention in a design competition.

Her goblet began as a flat disk of silver. The base includes a textured area which was done with a heated tool. The entire center part of the piece from cup to foot was cast. It had to be annealed at least 20 times and she used a longer technique to foil cracking. It took two days to polish.

But it was worth it, she remarked. Raw materials for her goblet cost $45 — about the cost of a good needlepoint canvas — but it has been appraised at $400.

Students working with silver are not concerned that the cost of the metal may have escalated. The beauty and long lasting quality provide satisfaction, she observed. Karin taught metal crafts to beginners in Stuttgart, Germany, before coming to the United States. Her career could lead her in many directions.

Some graduates are going into jewelry stores, others do their own thing. Matzdorf estimates that it costs about $200 to set up a beginning work shop — he began his own smithing with $300 — but there are opportunities to make ceremonial and institutional pieces that should provide a good income.

A school can provide students with the opportunity to use tools for personal accomplishments. A silver-smithing student might not be able to make all the holloware she might take to her honeymoon cottage, but she might get a good start.

Peanut Butter Pop Art Festival Hit By Heat Wave

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The peanut butter school of pop art got off to a sticky start in Central Park during a heat wave here.

The school's future is uncertain. At least one collage of snacks, candy and raw vegetables imbedded in peanut butter was going to be eaten for lunch, said a young mother as she left the scene with her daughter.

The peanut butter pop art festival was co-sponsored by the city Department of Parks, Recreation and Cultural Affairs and the peanut growers of Alabama and Georgia for about 100 children from play camps. But by the time the 6 to 12-year-old campers began straggling in an hour late, passersby and two advance scouts for another community event had gotten into the act.

Judy Rivkin, 15, and Bruce Feniger, 11, weren't exactly undercover agents. Judy said they'd been sent by the American Museum of Natural History to check out the festival in advance of their own West Side Day program scheduled for later. Its program will include needlepoint, North American Indian weaving and Origami demonstrations and jewelry-making from uncooked macaroni products. Judy and Bruce were summer volunteer workers at the museum.

Among the kibitzers was a girl, 2, who dug so enthusiastically into a 5-gallon can of peanut butter that she had to have help getting her spoon out.

A miniature Superman in checked shirt, shorts and a scarlet cape had the same problem when he applied peanut butter to canvas.

Pretzel Palm Tree

Jack Brooks, a serious artist who lives and works in New York's Soho district, had set up a few representational examples for the kids. Brooks' tic-tac-toe board, desert scene and tethered lion were among the few recognizable subjects around. His desert collage consisted of a pretzel palm tree with celery leaf fronds and a dinosaur made of licorice whips, elbow macaroni and unshelled peanuts. The lion had a macaroni mane and licorice tether.

"It's a nice break from serious art," said Brooks, deadpan. "The whole idea is to create it and eat it. Peanut butter is not a lasting medium."

His own metier is what he calls "light sculptures," or the controlled use of timed lighting. He said his tic-tac-toe and lion collages were meant to introduce kids to art, by going from the simple to the more complex. A couple of preschoolers stared solemnly at Brooks' designs, but most of the children ignored them to work earnestly on their own.

Pucho Vargas, 13, shirtless in the 94-degree heat, created a television screen commercial. For peanuts, naturally. Alberto Rosa, 11, did a signed self-portrait with a pretzel bow-tie and green bean shirt. But most of the children's art was so abstract they couldn't explain what they had in mind.

Rectangles of half-baked pizza dough served as canvases. Painting media ranged from oyster crackers and breakfast cereal to jam, jelly, marmalade, uncooked macaroni products, two kinds of olives, raw carrots, radishes, marshmallows, peanut candy and gumdrops. Remarkably little of this or the peanut butter went into mouths instead of art works—although several children happily licked peanut butter from their fingers.

Getting The Lead Out Of Pewter Shakers

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (WNS) — If you think that plumbism has anything to do with plumbs you'd better get the led out and not take this story with a grain of salt.

Those pewter salt-and-pepper shakers given you by your great aunt Amelia may be damaging to your health by causing a disorder called plumbism. This is a chronic poisoning that causes weakness loss of appetite stomach pain and loss of weight—all due to the high lead content of pewter.

The American Academy of Toxicology was warned about the damaging effects of pewter tableware recently when it held its annual meeting here. One of the cases reported on was that of a Los Angeles woman mysteriously ill for a year suffering not only the symptoms mentioned above but anemia and other abnormalties of the blood and bone marrow too.

Finally the puzzled physicians investigated her home and noticed the graceful salt shakers. As it turned out every time she salted her food she was actually sprinkling it with toxic amounts of lead.

Model Health Agency Dream

The county has taken steps which may lead to the establishment of a model health department in Pitt County.

The Pitt County commissioners adopted a resolution which could lead to a contract with the state Division of Health Services for public health services in this county.

Pitt Health Director Dr. Robert May presented the plan to the commissioners, but pointed out that there is no guarantee that Pitt will be selected as a model county.

He expalined that the state now funds approximatley 12 percent of the Pitt health department budget. Under the model agency plan this would increase to about 50 percent.

The county is looking to July 1, 1974, if the plan is approved.

The model agency plan could be a unique opportunity for the county to improve its health department services and also provide the innovation for better health departments all over the state.

Dr. May has already announced his intention to step down as health director and he has recommended that he be replaced by an administrator who is not a physician. The medical service would be provided by practicing physicians.

If the county is selected as a model agency much could be done as this change to a non-physician administrator is made to deliver better health department services to our citizens.

Feasible Goal Adopted By Pitt United Fund

The Pitt United Fund drive is officially underway.

A kick off meeting was held Monday for the drive to raise $174,692.84 to meet this year's budget.

Certainly the goal is feasible for Pitt County and we hope that all businesses and citizens will pledge promptly so the goal can be met in record time.

Meat Shortage May Be 'Good'

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—The shortage of meat may be good for most Americans who eat too much protein anyway a nutritionist from Iowa University believes.

Dr. Lloyd J. Filer Jr., professor of pediatrics and a nutritionist in Iowa was in Raleigh to talk with meeting of the state Public Health Association.

He spoke at one session on the effects of "maternal nutrition on the Fetus and Newborn" at another on the "Residues of Maternal Malnutrition in the Growing Child" and addressed a general session of 1,000 representatives on growth.

But it's a lack of hamburger and other meat which bothers most mothers these days Dr. Filer admits and hastens to add that they ought not be too worried.

"We the American public don't suffer from limited protein intake. The average person will take in 100 grams of protein daily and the recommended allotment would be somewhere around 65 grams.

"So you see, we are generally taking in half again as much as we need anyway. And the residue is wasted.

Furthermore Dr. Filer said it is the expensive foods which a lot of people have stopped buying that added undesirable things to the diet.

Good For Us?

"The fact that we can't afford meat may be a good thing for us. . .it will redue our intake of cholesterol saturated fats and such" he said.

The shortages may actually be a good thing for people since it will force many to eat what Dr. Filer considers nutritionally sound substitutes rich in protein-things like beans and peanuts and soybean-base substitute meats.

"There's no reason we can't get a lot of our protein from these foods—except that for some reason or another they are associated in our minds with a poor man's food. But that shouldn't be the case."

Dr. Filer also thinks people could get more good nutritional mileage from such protein foods as fish milk and milk products cheese, etc. "All of these offer a good source of high quality protein—but there's an adult attitude about milk: that it's not manly to drink milk. I guess that goes back to our relationship of drinking milk to being a baby."

A growing concern for food shortages is much in Dr. Filer's mind however as more nations reach levels of affluence in which they want to achieve a diet like that in America. This will mean more exports and more shortages down the road for us he thinks.

The best long-range answer will be "meat analogs" which at present production contain meat—either beef, pork, chicken—and a quantity of soybean.

But meat substitutes made of 100 per cent soybean are coming and will probably win public acceptance.

Soybean Substitutes

"Of course they don't look like meat the way we know it. Ham for instance will come in little cubes and will be clearly labeled a substitute product. But the results on the table depend entirely on how it's prepared."

Not widely available in markets now, mainly because at the present limited levels of production the costs are still too high the substitutes should become more common soon. This will depend largely on a ready supply of soybeans and the costs Dr. Filer said.

How about taste?

"Well we have to accept these kinds of foods. Nutritionally they are sound. But of course there will be people who will argue that they don't taste right.

"This all goes back to the old argument over acceptance of margarine as opposed to butter. Today margarine is widely regarded as most adquate substitue."

School Nutrition

A major policy statement came from the convention of public health workers regarding schools.

The group called on the State Board of Education to crack down on vending machines in public schools. The public health people are upset over the effect on nutrition—and on dental health—of the permitting of vending machines in public schools which yield up snacks candy and soft drinks.

Basically the resolution calls for nothing to be sold during school hours except foods which conform in nutritional standards to a Class A meal.

Demolition Job By A Witness

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The humiliation visited upon the Senate Watergate committee by presidential speechwriter Patrick J. Buchanan's virtuoso performance as a witness has confirmed a judgment privately but widely held here: although the committee's early phase was more successful, it has turned in one of the poorest jobs in memory on a major investigation.

What's more, blame is universally put not on the committee chairman, Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina, but on his chief counsel, Prof. Samuel Dash of Georgetown University law school. Dash, enjoying much greater autonomy than the ordinary committee counsel without day-by-day supervision from Ervin, was treading into a highly political arena buttressed by not one iota of practical political experience.

Consequently, attitudes toward the Senate investigation have sharply changed. Whereas the original stop-the-hearings movement was launched by White House propagandists as a means of easing the heat of President Nixon, it is now influential Democrats who are sounding that theme. They fear the anti-climactic last phases can neither enlighten the public nor help the Democrats.

The Buchanan fiasco points up, in exaggerated terms, the flaws of the Senate investigation that have significantly limited its effectiveness from the start. The decision to call Buchanan as a witness, over mild protests from the Republican minority staff, was made by Dash and assistant counsel Terry Lenzner without closely consulting Ervin.

Lenzner, a leftish ideologue who was fired from the Nixon administration's Legal Services program for being too much an activist, is in charge of the committee's current "dirty tricks" phase. His eye, no more politically attuned than Dash's, perceived Buchanan's memos — subpoenaed from the Committee to Reelect the President (CREEP) — as dynamite. In line with the staff autonomy Senators had little or no chance to evaluate the material.

The summary of the staff's interview with Buchanan did not reach the Senators until the night before he appeared in open session. One Democrat, Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, did not receive his until that morning. Had he seen it earlier, the politically shrewd Inouye would have urged that Buchanan not be called.

The result was Buchanan's meticulous demolition of Prof. Dash. While Dash unsuccessfully attempted to impute evil to Buchanan's schemes against the Democratic party, chairman Ervin commented under his breath that he could see nothing wrong with much of it.

Buchanan is not the first witness to dominate the Watergate hearings. Dating back to John W. Dean III, witness after witness has determined the scope and direction of the inquiry in a format heavily stacked against the witness. but this lack of control scarcely flows from an excessive fervor for civil liberties, as witness the treatment of ex-White House political operative Charles W. Colson.

As Mr. Nixon's top political hatchetman in days past, Colson rates little if any sympathy and was so treated by the Ervin Committee. At first anxious to testify, Colson's appearance was postponed four times and fianlly put off until after the August recess. When his lawyer then confidentially informed the committee that Colson faced possible grand jury indictment, that information was promptly leaked to the press. The committee next refused to postpone Colson's appearance in closed session and then insisted he go through the humiliation of taking the Fifth Amendment.

The committee's Democratic members shed no tears over Colson's treatment but were mortified Buchanan's success. "It may have been Dash's decision, but Buchanan made damn fools out of all of us," one Democratic member commented to a colleague. Consequently, there are rumblings about a tighter rein over the staff. Sen. Joseph Montoya of New Mexico, for one, would like to pass on future witnesses.

Many Democrats not on the committee want more. One important liberal Senator feels the committee has adduced sufficient date for legislation and "ought to close up shop— now." More politically, a senior Democrat outside Congress feels any more repetitions of the Buchanan fiasco will "make everybody forget what really happened at Watergate." His solution: end the hearings.

But Lenzner (called by angry critics the Rasputin of the Watergate committee) has prepared his dirty tricks case, and the hearings will continue this week. However, Republican counsel Fred Thompson tells Dash that he had two or three weeks of

Strength For Today

TODAY'S FAILURE: TOMORROW'S SUCCESS

The first speech made in the House of Commons by the great nineteenth century British statesman, Benjamin Disraeli, was a miserable failure. Not only was the subject of the speech dull but is was presented with so much artificial rhetoric and awkward gestures that Disraeli's effort was received with groans and sarcastic remarks.

In mortification the young statesman stopped before finishing his speech. But before he took his seat he made a prophecy which within a few years was to be marvelously fulfilled. "I will sit down," he declared, "but the time will come when you will hear me." In the coming years the house certainly did hear him, and he emerged finally as one of England's finest prime ministers.

It is always the last battle which wins the war. We are liable, if we judge men solely by their beginnings, to make some serious errors. Sometimes the faltering Disraeli of today becomes the great leader of tomorrow.

Law Business Booming

ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—This has probably been the greatest year in history for criminal lawyers. Thanks to the Watergate fallout, every law firm in this city is now on a 24-hour, seven-day week schedule. Whereas most law offices were sedate, quiet places, they now resemble brokerage offices with everyone screaming into the phones.

I stopped in to see a friend of mine who works for one of the top criminal law firms in Washington. He had his coat off his shirt open at the collar, his tie askew and he was writing furiously on a yellow pad. He motioned for me to sit down. Then he yelled into the phone, "Right, I got you. Forty-three indictments in Jersey. We'll take them. Tell them to put the money in the bank." He hung up.

"Boy, what a day," he told me, "I just. . ." the phone rang.

"Yeah. . .yeah. . .we take perjury. How many cases you got?. . .15. . .grand jury or Senate?. . .both. . .okay. . .send them over. No, not today. . .We can't see them for two weeks. . .You can't wait that long?. . .So get yourself another lawyer." He hung up.

"You really must be doing well to turn away business."

"Every time someone gets indicted he wants to see his lawyer right away. They'll call back. Most law firms have a one-month waiting list for perjurers."

My friend's secretary came in. "Mr. McIntosh, we have a mayor outside who is being indicted for income tax evasion."

"Tell him we don't take mayors any more. You have to be either a president of a corporation of a high official of the Administration."

A law partner rushed in. "We've been offered 300 bribery cases in Baltimore County. Should we take them?"

"Take 200," my friend shouted. "We can't put all of our eggs in bribery."

"What price should I quote?"

"One hundred thousand a case in advance, $200,000 before we go to trial. Vote fraud is $50,000 extra."

"Wow," I said, "you people are really raking in the money."

"Watergate's been very good to us," my friend said.

Other Editors Say The Bonanza

(Henderson Dispatch)

Whatever else may have resulted from the Watergate hearings and investigations, it has boosted jobs and payrolls. Everything the Federal government does is expensive, and when something is undertaken costs are not spared, as operations carry on in a big way.

The Associated Press quoted a Watergate assistant as saying more than a million dollars has already been spent, and the figure may reach as high as $4 to $5 million before the case is finally closed. Nobody seems to be in a hurry to speed the process along.

Largest cost item so far was said to be for salaries to the "young and not-so-young lawyers and staff workers who swarmed to Washington for a piece of the action." The committee has already paid $383,000 in staff salaries for nearly 90 workers, plus $7,465 in fringe benefits. The committee's chief counsel, Samuel Dash, highest paid staff member, makes $35,904 a year, and salaries of more than 20 lawyers and professional investigators range from $11,000 to $34,000.

The Senate originally set aside $500,000 for the Watergate committee, and then another $500,000 when it became evident the first figure would not last out the proceedings. The affair seems to have turned into a Roman holiday or a bonanza for many individuals. In addition to the Senate committee, the Special Prosecution Force headed by Archiblad Cox has paid out $138,000 for a still expanding staff of about eighty. Cox has asked Congress for $2.8 million for the fiscal year, which would seem to indicate that the thing is to be an ongoing Federal project. The government appears to be in a fair position of being milked for all it is worth.

To most people, the Watergate scandal seems to have mushroomed out of all reason, and that the investigation may go on and on for months, even years. After all, the government is footing the bill and there seems to be no end of the number anxious to get a finger in the pie.

Warfare in which at least 44 were killed and 80 wounded left Havana, Cuba on trigger-edge today.

A day-long battle between several hundred officers barricaded in the National Hotel and the enlisted men's army yesterday did not end with the surrender of the officers.

The event was believed not to have ended the ABC opposition to President Ramon Grau San Martin and many professed to see a continuation of guerilla warfare such as that waged against former President Machado who fled before the revolution.

Many Cubans blamed the United States for not acting to prevent the bloodshed.

Plans for seeking a government loan for the improvement of the Pitt County schools were discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the school board here yesterday, but no definite action was taken.

The matter will be taken up with the County Commissioners at a later date.

Two men were arrested during the weekend in separate incidents involving hauling liquor near Greenville.

Holds Economists Responsible

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Based on his performance in dealing with inflation, said Prof. Kenneth Galbraith, a just reward for Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz would be a quick return to the University of Chicago as an assistant professor.

"Let him begin all over again," said Galbraith, the irreverent Harvard economist, of Shultz, the former Chicago economist and business school dean who now heads economic policy for the Nixon administration.

"Anyone who makes a mess of economic policy should be relieved and marked down as a failure," said Galbraith, a Democrat. He also nominated for retirement the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, Herbert Stein.

The professor, who more than coincidentally is promoting his 17th book, "Economics & the Public Purpose," branded present economic policy as "the most inept since Herbert Hoover," and Shultz's impact as "zero."

"I think economists should be held responsible for their actions," he said, reminding a small group at an author's reception that when prices rose in World War II the public held the Office of Price Administration responsible.

Galbraith said current economic policy, which leans heavily on interest rates as a means of suppressing inflationary spending, involves a fraud.

"We do have controls," he conceded, "but they're administered by people who don't believe in them. It's like putting a prostitute in charge of the vice squad."

Taxation was considered politically unpopular, he said, partly because "increased taxes have to hit the higher spending brackets." And fiscal restraint as a means of controlling inflation, he said, is usually compromised by other considerations, such as defense.

"So this means they're conducting economic policy only on interest rates, running the economy on no controls other than those available to Herbert Hoover and saying that we have controls. This is where the fraud comes in."

Higher interest rates, he said, are discriminatory because the poor are borrowers and the rich lenders, and are uncertain in their impact.

A fundamental defect in the Shultz and Stein approach, he said, is that they base policy on their own optimistic forecasts.

In directing policy, he maintained, you cannot act on the basis of what you hope or expect but instead you should deal with realities, changing policy when the realities change.

Although he never had the opportunity to administer economic policy, even though he has served in several government positions and was influential in the Kennedy administration, Galbraith said he knows precisely what he would do if he were in charge now.

His basic program would consist of a tax increase on upper incomes, a stiff monetary policy and controls, with some form of aid to the jobless in the weakest areas of the economy.

Poach A Fish In Your Dishwasher

By PHYLLIS AUSTIN
Associated Press Writer

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Know how to poach a fish in your dishwasher?

Dot the fish with butter and sprinkle with parsley; wrap in heavy aluminum foil. Place the fish in the dishwasher and let it run through the whole cycle. The fish should be perfectly poached at the end of that time.

At least that's what it says in the 157th edition of the Farmer's Almanac, which is just off the presses.

"You have to make sure the washer maintains heat of 160-to-180 degrees," said almanac editor Ray Geiger. "The process works beautifully. I've tried it." The 1974 edition of the almanac contains other unusual tidbits of information, such as how to tell time on Mars and how to avoid being struck by lightning.

The Farmer's Almanac is sold to commercial concerns, which pass it on free to customers as advertising material.

Geiger, in his 40th year as editor, describes his almanac as "an antidote to pornography," and says his greatest contribution has been to put "a good, wholesome magazine" in millions of homes.

The conservatism of the almanac "is probably a little too much for the way most people live now, but it definitely has its place," said the 63-year-old Geiger. He said in his four decades of editing the almanac's circulation has climbed from 86,000 to 5 million.

Weatherwise, the latest edition of the 48-page booklet predicts a snowier, colder winter than last year. Besides the weather, recipes, jokes, household hints and farming data line the almanac's pages.

Another feature is a brief comment on the origin of kissing. The almanac says it derived from a craving for salt and the cave man found that he could get salt by licking his neighbor's cheek.

"He quickly found it more interesting if the neighbor was female," Geiger said. "Then everybody forgot about salt."

"You know before Watergate all we got were a lot of priests and students being indicted by the government. Most of them didn't have a dime.

But now you're getting a much higher class of defendent. They come from the best families, they went to the best schools and they all have short hair. Most of the people being indicted these days are lawyers so you don't have to explain things to them twice. I tell you it's a pleasure doing business with them."

The phone rang. He picked it up. "Oh hi, Buzz. You offering us 43 kickback cases in New York? Sure, we'll take them if your firm doesn't want them. . .I see you have 63 judges coming up for trial. . .Look, while I have you on the phone, would you take 33 wiretapping trials in Los Angles? We just don't have the troops to send to L.A. . . .Thanks a lot. . ."

The secretary came back in. "There's a delegation of ex-White House aides to see you. They say it's very important."

"Send them to the White House department down on the second floor."

Another law partner came in. "You interested in a former attorny general and a former secretary of commerce?"

"Good God," my friend said in exasperation, "I've only got two hands."

The phone buzzed. He picked it up.

"Oh, yes sir, Mr. Vice President. Uh, uh. . .uh. . .uh. . .uh. .Yes I've been reading about it in the newspapers. . .I see. . .well we usually don't handle Vice Presidents, but we might make an exception in your case. . .now could you start at the beginning. . ."

Boyle Col. . . .

car, Jake, I'm sure it won't do. When I drove by a junkyard, it stopped automatically — as if it had been there before."

"If you bought this car from a little old lady, Jake, she must have been a little bit lit every time she got behind the wheel."

"Yeah, Jake has been known to return money to a dissatisfied customer, but only up to a point — gunpoint."

"I haven't seen a rumble seat in 30 years, even in a used car, Jake. Why don't you try to sell this model to a museum?"

"Jake says he stands behind every car he sells — but that's because he doesn't trust their brakes."

"I notice this car has wire wheels, Jake. Is that something new?"

"I'm 17 and just got my driver's license. My Dad says if I want a car, I'll have to buy it myself. Do you have anything I could get for $10 down and $2.50 a month the rest of my life?"

"I can't pay you $2,500 for that used limousine, but will you rent it to me for this afternoon? I want to drive it to a funeral and impress my wife's relatives."

"Yes, it's true that Jake got that car from a little old lady who only drove it to church But the little old lady is Jake's mother, and Jake's own son used to borrow it from her and go joyriding in it every night of the week."

"Jake buys a new car every year for his own use and trades the old one in to another dealer who pays him more for it than Jake would give himself."

"No, I never said you weren't a reliable dealer, Jake. All I said was that I never heard of anybody in the White House ever buying a used car from you by mail."

Thirteen Years On Death Row Changes A Man

By CY RYAN

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Jack Rainsberger spent 13 years in the shadow of the Nevada gas chamber but it was during that time he learned to live more fully.

Rainsberger, on death row here longer than any other inmate, now takes a matter-of-fact attitude to those years which ended with the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling on capital punishment.

"You had two choices," Rainsberger, 38, said in an interview. "You could look to be executed and live for that. Or you could go about your business as though the execution did not exist."

All except two inmates chose the latter course, according to Rainsberger, whose term has been reduced to life in prison without possibility of parole.

"I live as if I was going to continue to live ... I wrote ... I meditated ... I adopted the Vandanta School of Hinduism ... I studied," he said as he recalled his days in the five by eight foot cell.

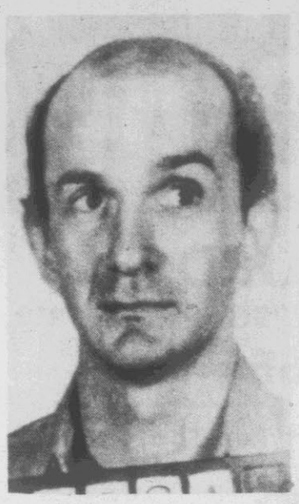
"Anxiety Reaction"

He admitted to an occasional "anxiety reaction" about going to the gas chamber but said everybody has those—similar to a temporary seizure of fear while in an airplane.

During those years, Rainsberger became one of the most widely known inmates in Nevada. He was called the "poet laureate of death row" for his book of verse. His views against the death penalty were circulated outside the prison walls. He became a symbol of hope for others facing the death penalty as his attorney, Samuel Lionel of Las Vegas, fought through the courts in appeal after appeal, always delaying Rainsberger's date with death.

During his first interview with a newsman since the Supreme Court decision, Rainsberger was tense, his brown eyes fixed straight ahead. His hair is thinning, but he appears to be in good shape—the result of a jogging-in-place program he followed on death row.

Rainsberger, who has been in and out of prison since he was 12 years old, was convicted of the stabbing of Erline Folker, 24, a Las Vegas secretary.



JACK RAINSBERGER

When asked, Rainsberger says he is "remorseful" about the slaying but then questions, "how do you show your feeling?" As a self-professed cynic, he suggested that any statement he made would be self-serving in the eyes of many of the public.

"Feeling of Relief"

He can't remember now how he first heard the news of the Supreme Court's decision but does recall there was no wild celebration on death row. "There were no acts of elation ... things had gone on for so long there was a feeling of relief."

Like all convicts, Rainsberger hopes for release some day. If it ever comes, he has vowed to live three years in a Hindu monastery.

Right now he works as a clerk, is continuing his writing and meditation and composes crossword puzzles which he sells for cash. There are occasional visitors but he thinks of himself as a "loner." His best friend is Thomas Bean, who lived next to Rainsberger on death row for nearly nine years.

No one is guessing if Rainsberger ever will be paroled and he himself says it is "not an obsession" to be released. In the meantime, he knows the joy of being alive.

"I don't function mechanically any more. I am aware of eveything I do, even though it may be performed in the same manner at the same time every day."

Spice And Herb Consumption Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Consumption of spices and herbs has grown by 40 per cent in the United States in the past decade, Progressive Grocer reports. Consumption now has reached 1.41 pounds per person. The largest increase, around 55 per cent, have been in sales of poppy, sesame and caraway seeds.

TURNOVER

THE HAGUE (UPI) — The Netherlands Chemical Industry Association says the chemical industry in Holland had a 1972 turnover of 10,300 million guilders ($4 billion) as compared to 9,500 million guilders ($3.8 billion) in 1971. About 86 per cent of the business involves exports.

Single Women A Better Risk

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite some possibly male chauvinist beliefs to the contrary BankAmericard says single women are better credit risks than single men.

The credit company, which operates through 4,500 member banks, struck a blow for women's liberation with a computer analysis of years of credit records.

The analysis showed also that single women, although better risks than their male counterparts, are not as good bill payers as widows and married women. As a result of the findings, BankAmericard has advised its members that many special requirements for women applying for credit cards no longer are necessary.

A Funny Man Also Serious

By RUDY CERNKOVIC

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Bob McCully writes special material for nationally-televised shows, supplies cartoonists with gags and impersonates a high government official at lectures, but he has serious moments.

A cartoon drawn by Bo Brown with a gag supplied by McCully was widely circulated. It depicts a woman showing off her expensive mink coat to her club members.

"We had to sacrifice much to get this coat—Henry's allowance, his car, his club membership, his cigarettes and his lunch money," she says.

This cartoon exposes the "keeping up with the Jones" attitude of many Americans.

Mischa Richter, a cartoonist whose work frequently appears in the New Yorker magazine, was inspired by a gag supplied by McCully. The cartoon shows a dignified man pulling a rickshaw hauling his equally dignified wife and her companion. The wife tells her friend "since Henry's been on a rice diet, he's been acting very strangely."

McCully believes cartoons are an art form which expose the foibles of people.

"The national attitude is reflected in the humor of the nation through cartoons," he said. "The problem now is that so many newspapers and magazines have gone out of business and this art form gets less exposure."

McCully regards Charley Schulz, creator of "Peanuts" as "unquestionably the greatest comic strip cartoonist in America."

No Gags

"He does not rely on gags, he uses no adults and expresses his ideas through children," McCully said. "He is extremely creative."

Kaye Ballard used McCully's material on a recent appearance on the Johnny Carson show. She talks about "Pimply", a hippie who complains in song that man has learned to fly to the moon "but can't do anything about acne."

"Bottoms Up," a revue running in Las Vegas for several years used McCully's material. He contributes to "Laugh In," and wrote material for the old "Hollywood Palace Show."

McCully delivers tongue-in-cheek lectures before various groups. He has posed as a high government official from Washington.

"The government really is not telling you the truth," he tells audiences. "But we're going to do it our way—whether you like it or not."

After his lecture is over his role is revealed as a bag but many in the audience refuse to be mollified.

McCully appears before groups of doctors and dentists and tells them "I'm for socialized medicine." As he goes on, resentment grows in the audience. A dentist once threw a shoe at him and he was denounced variously as a Communist or right winger.

McCully has made return appearances before the same group but disguised with tinted glasses, a moustache and a beard.

Child Expert

At times, posing as a child expert, McCully will address an audience of women, many of them mothers.

"Most women don't know how to care for a child properly," is a remark that arouses the fury of mothers.

"How can you know about babies when you're a bachelor," the women will protest.

"I see about 300 kids a day in my clinic and I know more about them then their mothers," he replies.

Often, McCully has a plant in the audience who stands up and challenges him to step outside and fight. This melts the resentment of his audience.

McCully averages 12 hours a day at his work. He is the public relations officer of a Pittsburgh industrial firm which does an annual business of $36 million.

He appears on television commercials and stages industrial shows throughout the country.

"I divide my work in three phases," he said. "Shows and entertainment, doing radio and television commercials and at my regular occupation as advertising and public relations -official."

Opines Vikings In Asia Minor

ISTANBUL (AP) — The Vikings may have been related to the Turks, according to an Icelandic scholar here.

Jokull Jakobsson, 40, is in Istanbul for three months researching for information to support his theory that the Viking hero Tyrkir was actually a Turk, and that the Vikings reached as far as Asia Minor in their wanderings.

Bridge Getting Its Own Police

ISTANBUL (AP) — A special independent police is to be formed to maintain security on the multimillion dollar Bosporus Bridge, linking Europe and Asia, which is scheduled to be opened this fall, according to a police announcement.

The new squad will wear a special uniform featuring boots and a uniform in pea green, the announcement said.

Mexican Food Restaurant Is Formally Opened Yesterday

Tippy's Taco House of Greenville, Inc. is observing its grand opening this week. The Greenville restaurant is the second of a number of Mexican food outlets proposed for North Carolina by Tippy's, Inc., a nationwide, franchised Mexican food outlet.

Carl Kinlaw, a former resident of Greenville, is Tippy's regional representative for North Carolina. Kinlaw, who has been associated with Tippy's for the past five years, said, "Since leaving Greenville, I have been engaged in operating Tippy's Taco House of Raleigh. I have been pleased with the enthusiastic reception which Tippy's zesty, flavor-rich food has received in Raleigh, and for sometime I have wanted to offer this food to the people in the Greenville area.

"Tippy's Taco House is famous from coast to coast for delicious Texas-Style, Mexican food with the emphasis on complete dinner concept. Tippy's Taco House is unique in that all dishes are cooked fresh daily to assure quality and freshn ess. The dinners are served piping hot in our restaurants and when ordered for take-out are packaged in containers designed to retain the steaming temperatures.

Greenville offers to its citizens and visitors a large variety of restaurants, and I am especially pleased to be able to add delicious Mexican food to this variety.

The local manager is Dick Petree, a recent graduate of East Carolina University. Petree has several years experience with one of Greenville's outstanding restaurants.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John McLaren turned 1,017 acres of windswept sand dunes into Golden Gate Park, the largest man made park in the world. McLaren, the park's superintendent, died in 1943.

Wrong Identity In Wreck Story

In a story carried in the Daily Reflector yesterday it was reported that Marvin Earl Blackwell of 902 West Fifth Street was charged in connection with an 8:20 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard Monday.

Blackwell was not charged in connection with the mishap.

Mrs. Martha Kandy Laughinghouse of 1204 Greenville Blvd., driver of the second vehicle involved in the mishap was charged by police with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, instead.

Farmville Mart Had $90.06 Day

FARMVILLE MART

FARMVILLE—The Farmville Tobacco market yesterday averaged $92.54 per hundred pounds after selling 570,338 pounds of tobacco for $527,805.

To date the market has sold 12,524,640 pounds of leaf for an average of $90.06 per hundred pounds.

According to Louis Williams, supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade, leaf grades accounted for 80 percent of the volume with primings, lugs and nondescript grades decreasing in volume.

Cutters, lugs and primings were in less demand but prices for these types of tobacco remained steady.

Stabilization receipts totaled 1,336 pounds of gross sales.

Singapore Adds A New Shoreline

By KON HAN THUAN

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Along with a skyline of skyscrapers reaching 30 to 50 stories in the next two years, land short Singapore is acquiring a new shoreline on its southeastern coast.

With a population of 2.13 million, expected to reach 3 million by the end of the 1980s, Singapore needs more room for public housing.

One way of getting it is to reclaim land from the sea. The southeastern coast reclamation scheme began in 1966 with the help of Japanese engineers.

Today, the final phase of the multimillion-dollar project involving the reclamation of a 14-mile strip along the densely populated coast is nearing completion.

The task involves the use of miles-long conveyor belts and trucks to transport earth from hillocks near the coast to be used as fill for the project.

When completed by next year, the project will yield a total of nearly 3,000 acres of valuable land extending nearly to the mouth of the Singapore River in the center of the city.

Hundreds Protest

The new shoreline brought protests from hundreds of owners of prestige bungalows along the coast whose back stairs once touched the sandy beaches.

The government pushed through the project nevertheless, telling critics that it was a national project for the good of the people.

Already a cluster of 20 or more high-rise blocks of public housing apartments is rising on a part of the reclaimed land a few miles from the city. When completed next year, it will be one of many public housing estates to be built on reclaimed land.

The thousands of housing units in the blocks, some more than 20 stories high, will be sold or rented at low cost, many times cheaper than if offered by the private sector, and at terms of payment stretching to 15 years or more.

In the 1971-75 program, a building rate target of one unit completed every 26 minutes has been set.

"This could easily be the highest rate of construction of public housing in the world," Minister of Education Dr. Lee Chiaw Meng said.

At the end of last year, 800,000 or 40 per cent of the population were living in government-built flats. A total of 45,000 units or nearly one-fifth of the total built are now owned by citizens under an easy payment, ownership scheme.

Although the rate of construction of public housing has been acclaimed as "unprecedented" in building history in any part of the world, there still are more than 60,000 applicants on the waiting list.

Three Factors Cited

The large number of applicants is the result of three factors:

First is the easy terms of payment to own a flat and the long 99-year lease granted.

Second, the government's call for families to limit children to two, reversing the priority given previously to larger families in their applications for public housing. A married couple, even without children, can now apply for a flat.

Third is the increasing trend among Singapore's young people to live apart from their families.

To cope with the increasing demand, the board planned to build 100,000 units in the five years between 1971-75 to accommodate half a million people. With construction now in full swing in the reclaimed land and in several new towns, the plan seems to be on target.

In line with the government's aim to give people a more gracious way of living, large tracts of reclaimed land near the new shoreline have been planted with thousands of trees.

This follows a policy of making Singapore a city of greenery.

Other areas eventually will be used to provide new sporting and recreational facilities and for tourist attractions.

Once Cheaper For A Mexican

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — The penny slots allowing 12 minutes of parking have been removed from the parking meters at this town on the Mexican border. A Mexican five-centavo piece, worth only a third as much, fitted nicely.

Many Gasoline Dealers Defiant

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some service station operators are resorting to court action while others say they will defy federal ceiling prices for gasoline in their protest against Phase 4 price controls.

Organized shutdowns were planned for today and later this week in Nevada and southern California.

Spokesmen for gasoline dealer groups elsewhere indicated they are not eager to try mass station closings as a protest tactic.

The dealers are upset about Phase 4 controls that bar them from automatically passing on to customers recent increases in wholesale gasoline prices.

Service station associations in Oregon, Washington State and Pennsylvania have begun urging their member dealers to pass along increased costs even if that means exceeding the federal ceilings.

"We're going to do it just like the oil companies — raise it up and then justify it later," said William Victory, president of the Washington Evergreen Service Station Association.

He said member stations would file forms with the Internal Revenue Service requesting exemption from the Phase 4 controls but would raise prices without waiting for a ruling.

A similar price policy was urged by the Pennsylvania Service Station Dealers Association.

"What we're arguing about here is that we have the God-given and constitutional right to earn a living and any regulation or law that countermands that right is to be ignored," said Thomas Anderson, president of the Pennsylvania group.

The Tennessee Gasoline Dealers Association said Tuesday it would file suit against the Cost of Living Council charging controls discriminate against retailers.

The Tennessee association's executive director, Sydney Staggs, said the suit would seek complete removal of the controls or a corresponding lid on wholesale prices or permission for automatic pass through of wholesale price hikes.

An indefinite shutdown of stations was to begin today in Nevada, said Herb Nye, head of the state Service Station Association.

Nye said the Nevada action was part of a planned nationwide shutdown. But dealer association spokesmen in several other states said they had no definite plans to participate.

Organizers of two southern California dealer groups said some 3,000 station operators had agreed in principle to shut down for at least a week. They comprise about a quarter of the region's dealers.

A spokesman for Indianapolis area dealers, who staged a shutdown last week, said they would not take part in a new closing.

"That route has been tried, tested and exhausted at this point as far as this area is concerned," said Richard Messer, head of the Indianapolis Gasoline Dealers Association.

Two Injured In 3-Car Mishap

Two persons were reported injured in a 1:37 p.m. collision here yesterday at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Wade Street that caused an estimated $750 property damage.

Police, who made no charges identified drivers of the three cars involved in the mishap as Albert Thomas Perrin of 2720 Memorial Dr., Catherin Smith Joyner of 1724 Circle Dr. and Harry Finn Kelly III of Azalea Gardens.

Damage was set at $200 to the Perrin car, $500 to the Joyner vehicle and $50 to the Kelly car.

Mrs. Joyner and a passenger in her auto were reported injured.

Cigarettes On 'Hazard' List?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study is under way to determine if cigarettes should be added to the list of hazardous substances regulated by the government, says the chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Richard O. Simpson said his staff is moving ahead on the project, despite heavy criticism from the tobacco industry and tobacco-state congressmen.

Simpson said Tuesday in a speech before the National Press Club that he does not advocate a total ban on cigarettes.

But, he said, "I see little discussion of a safer cigarette and what that could mean to the smoker. And, surprisingly, we see little discussion of the individual rights of the nonsmoker."

He noted that his views were his own and not necessarily shared by the other four commissioners.

The Consumer Product Safety Act, which established the commission, exempts cigarettes from regulation. But Simpson argued that the Hazardous Substances Act, which the commission also administers, does not specifically exempt cigarettes.

"I believe we have an obligation to explore the problem," Simpson said.

Alioto Trying To Hire Former Campaign Foe

By BILL STALL
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — On a sweltering evening in Miami Beach last year, Frank Mankiewiecz helped mastermind a political coup that dumped Joseph Alioto from the Democratic National Convention.

This year, the tough-minded mayor of San Francisco is trying to hire Mankiewiecz to guide his campaign for governor of California.

Alioto, 57, wants the former George McGovern strategist to help heal the wounds of the bitter 1972 California presidential primary and fashion a new coalition of Democrats.

Alioto, long allied with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, announced his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination on Tuesday.

"I think it's a time for a Democrat who can mount a coalition of moderates and liberals and some conservatives," Alioto said, adding that he thinks he is the man for that job.

He said he has asked Mankiewiecz to join his campaign, but has received no firm answer yet.

In 1972, McGovern claimed all of California's 271 delegates to the national convention by virtue of his victory in the presidential primary. But a 106-member Humphrey delegation led by Alioto was seated by the convention credentials committee.

After an evening of political maneuvering, McGovern forces won back the lost seats, and Alioto and his 105 fellow Humphrey supporters left the convention floor.

Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan has said he will not seek a third term in 1974.

Alioto's stiffest opposition for the Democratic nomination in the June 1974 primary is expected to come from Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., 35, son of the former governor. He is the front-runner in opinion polls and is expected to announce in December or January.

Beware of Greeks bearing gifts, or of bridge experts who tell you more about a distribution than they need to. When this hand came up in the Spingold Team Championship of the American Contract Bridge League's Summer National Championships in Washington, D. C., South turned the tables on his adversary.

After South had jumped to three hearts over the no trump opening bid, North made an advance cue-bid of four diamonds. This confirmed hearts as the trump suit by implication, showed strength in diamonds and suggested a slam—despite the minimum count of 16, the fact that all of North's points were in aces and kings made his holding suitable for slam in a suit. With his diamond weakness plugged, South checked on aces and settled in six hearts.

East won the first trick with the ace of clubs and returned the suit, declarer's queen winning. The slam hinged on guessing which defender held the queen of spades, so before committing himself, South, Tom Smith of Greenwich, Conn., set out to learn all he could about the distribution.

He drew three rounds of trumps, West discarding a diamond. Next came the queen of clubs, on which West again discarded a diamond. Finally, the ace-king of diamonds were cashed and a diamond was ruffed, bringing down all the outstanding diamonds.

The West hand was now marked for four spades, as he was known to have started with five diamonds, two hearts and two clubs. Thus, there was a slightly greater chance that he held the queen of spades, for East had started with but three spades.

However, West was a fine young player, and he had gone out of his way to give declarer a count of the hand—he could have discarded one spade and a diamond, or even two spades, and left declarer in the dark as to his exact holding. Declarer reasoned, therefore, that West wanted him to finesse the hand that was marked with the longer spade length for the queen. If that was what the defenders wanted, it could not be right for declarer. Accordingly, Smith led a spade to the ace and finessed the ten on the way back to make his slam.

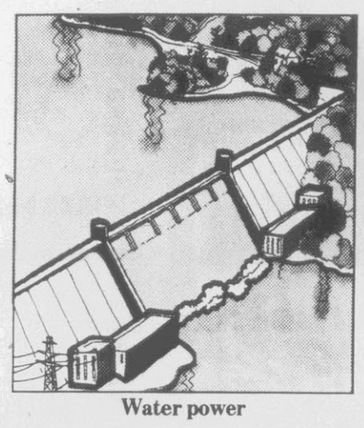
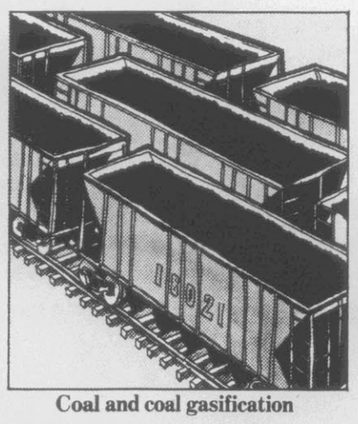
The Energy Crunch:

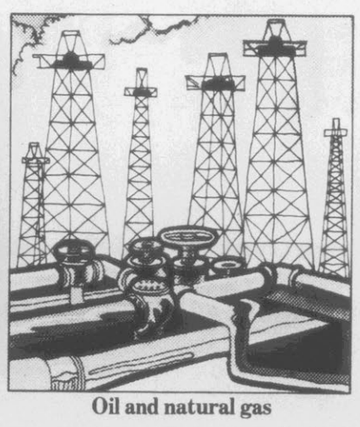
Supporting the search for new sources of electricity is just one provision of Vepco's Energy Insurance policy.



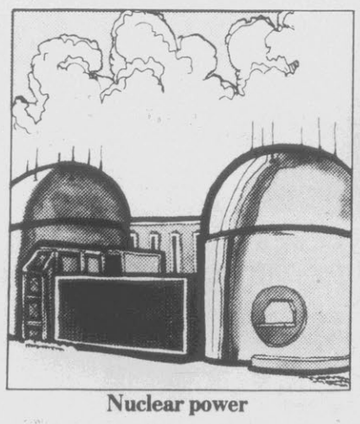
Water power



Coal and coal gasification

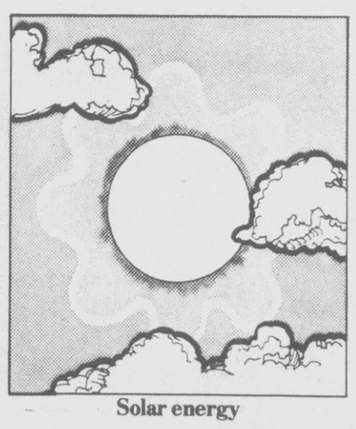


Oil and natural gas



Nuclear power

Pumped storage power



Solar energy

Geothermal energy

Wind power

And power to be discovered

Vepco's answer to today's energy crunch and tomorrow's growing demands for electricity is safe, clean nuclear energy. By 1976 half the power we supply will come from nuclear sources.

But we are also supporting the search for still newer sources of electricity. Sources that—like nuclear power—won't be dependent on the expensive and hard-to-get fossil fuels like coal and oil that lie at the heart of the nation's energy problems, or dependent on politically unstable foreign supplies.

What are the possibilities?

Solar power is already providing electricity for Skylab. But Skylab's entire electrical output couldn't run an electric range. And here on earth, so much of the sun's light is scattered and filtered by the atmosphere that it would take 100 square miles of solar cells just to supply Richmond with electricity—and the costs would probably be huge.

What about geothermal energy? The same heat from deep in the earth's core that makes "Old Faithful" spurt could, theoretically, be used to convert water to steam to run an electric power plant. But first we'll have to learn how to drill wells that are four times larger than an oil well and 50% deeper than man has ever gone before. Even so, there is already a VPI study to look into it.

While the practical application of power from these and other known sources—including the tides and the winds—is probably decades away, Vepco is already putting some new sources of electricity into actual operation.

In 1979, water running downhill from a high mountain reservoir in Bath County to a lower one will generate electricity during the day and be pumped uphill again with surplus power at night, when customer needs are low.

In the meantime, whether it's catching the sun or harnessing a mountain stream, if there's a chance it can help meet your needs with power to spare, the utility industry is going to be looking into it. Commitment to new discoveries is a powerful part of Vepco's Energy Insurance policy.

Miss Crisp . . .

solved the problem by packing up her car with the pictures stacked in the front and back seats and all in-between."

The Dean of the School of Art at ECU, Dr. Wellington Gray, told Miss Crisp, "People hear a lot about the work being done today by the School of Art here and at other schools in the state. I want you to remember it has been people like you who have created the need for the fine art schools we have today."

"We're glad this is the painting given in appreciation of Miss Crisp's work for the state," Williams said. "When this idea was first mentioned to her, Miss Crisp said she would like for it to be a Phil Moose painting. Phil is her favorite artist."

Williams explained that Moose's painting received full approval of the acquisition committee and noted this painting was a rare instance of approval for an acquisition being made in this manner. "As you know, most of our acquisitions of work by North Carolina artists are made through selections from the annual artists exhibition." He added that the annual exhibitions, started by Miss Crisp as a statewide project to give North Carolina artists a place to show and compete, is the oldest such state supported exhibition in the nation. It is now in its 36th year.

The idea of presenting a painting for the museum's permanent collection in appreciation of Miss Crisp's work originated with several long-time friends of Miss Crisp.

"This was one time little or no prodding was needed to raise funds for a project," Mrs. Foushee commented.

AVID READERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Men are quite avid readers of the women's pages of daily newspapers, the Bureau of Advertising reports. A series of 2,800 interviews disclosed that 80 per cent of males read women's pages—as opposed to only 73 per cent who read the business and financial pages.

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said here last night that when the new Reinsurance Plan "replaces the horrible assigned risk mess on Oct. 9, North Carolina will be first in fairness, first to abolish cancellations and terminations."

Speaking to the Pitt Insurance Exchange, Ingram said that legislation enacted by the 1973 General Assembly is "landmark legislation because it is the first reinsurance plan ever enacted into law in the United States."

"But the bill that passed the General Assembly," he stated, "was a complete rewrite of the bill which was introduced. The inherent difficulty with the bill as it was introduced was the fact that it provided for a system that allowed the insurance companies to run it."

The commissioner contended that "the bill, as it was introduced, would have let the insurance companies perpetuate the present assigned risk under a syndicate operation of approximately 12 to 20 companies."

Under the bill that was passed by the Legislature, North Carolina will e the first ste to end cancellations, Ingram noted. He added, "We fell a little short of our goal because we had hoped to end cancellations in all fields of automobile insurance, not only liability but collision insurance as well."

He told the gathering that, "Collison insurance was stripped from the bill in the Senate, and while North Carolina is the first...to abolish cancellations of liability, I am extremely disappointed we did not take the final step and include collision insurance."

Ingram asserted that it is hoped that when the 1974 General Assembly convenes, "what was taken out of the reinsurance bill will be put back in."

The commissioner said that his staff is working on a "Motorist's Bill of Rights," a set of rules and regulations which will spell out what a motorist can expect when he is involved in a wreck. The primary aspect of the bill, he reported, is the "adjuster or appraiser must allow the owner of the vehicle involved to use the repair shop of his choice, and not dictate the repairs will be made in any specified repair shop."

Ingram told the Pitt Board, "As far as the citizens of North Carolina are concerned, it makes no difference what kind of insurance system we have—no-fault, your fault, their fault. People will not be satisfied if the companies can cancel their policies when a person has a valid driver's license and pays his premium."

"I had pledged to abolish these cancellations and the assigned risk," he said. "The reinsurance concept, in my judgement, had priority over any other automobile insurance reform. Obviously the General Assembly agreed that the first priority was to abolish cancellations and the assigned risk."

School Bd. . . .

Chicod—Roy Clemons; Stokes—Willie Battle, Raymond Fuchs and John L. Corey; Bethel—Vincent Clark, Hilton Tetterton and Elton Coltrain.

Maternity leave was granted to two teachers, another teacher was given a leave of absence due to health reasons, and a number of personnel changes were approved.

Local teachers will be paid prior to the Christmas holidays. The State Board of Education has approved earlier payment for school employees because they would ordinarily be paid on Dec. 31.

It was announced that the annual convention of the North Carolina School Boards Association will be held in Wilmington on Nov. 1-3. Delegates from the local board will be named prior to the meeting.

The audit report covering local school funds was accepted as presented by J.C. Proctor and Co.

The annual dinner meeting for members of the various school advisory councils will be held at Ayden-Grifton High School Oct. 23 at 6:30 p.m.

The board will have a special session on Tuesday, Oct. 16 to complete the board's policy manual.

Candidates . . .

The seventh candidate to speak—Joe M. Taft—said he was seeking office because "I'd like to contribute my services to a better Greenville."

He emphaized that "land use planning is a necessity for. . .orderly growth," and suggested a public transportation system is needed.

He said a feisibility study is needed on the transportation issue, but suggested a "dial-a-bus" system, currently in operation in several cities across the nation, might be the answer to Greenville's problem.

He indicated that such a system is a cross between a taxi and bus operation and in the municipalities currently using the program, costs "one-fourth to one-half the price of a taxi."

Taft also suggested strengthing the city's building codes.

Incumbent John Taylor, with two years service on the board, indicated his service "has been a tremendous challenge."

Taylor suggested a need for a "more effective. . .human relations council," open housing, and "a mass transit system subsidized by the city council."

Candidate Pat Thomas said the city should "stop talking and start action" toward establishing a public transportation system and plan for the future growth of Greenville to "insure against a poorer quality of life," for it's citizens.

He noted that in his opinion, the school board should be "elected by precincts" and made "more responsible to the citizens."

Thomas also said he favors changing the structure of the Greenville Utilities Commission "so it will answer to the people". He said local utility rates are about 30 per cent higher that those of surrounding towns such as Kinston, Washington and Rocky Mount.

He said the state legislature should be asked to amend the charter for the utilities commission so commission actions would be reviewed by and approved the by they city council before being put into effect.

W.E. "Bill" Dansey, a candidate for mayor in next week's election said Greenville is "way behind" in recreation and indicated that planning and zoning "is not far sighted enough. . ." suggesting that improvements must be made.

He, too, suggested that the city should make more use of available services and facilities at East Carolina University in helping solve local problems.

With two years experience as a member of the city council, Dansey said in his view, the mayor "should be a leader. . .find problems, seek them out," and attempt to find solutions for them.

He suggested, too, that cooperation between the city and county governments should be increased.

The Greenville Utilities Commission Dansey noted, "is not all bad," but suggested the commission "needs to inform people" in the community of their actions to a greater degree.

Incumbent Mayor S. Eugene West, the last of the candidates to speak at the forum said he was first elected as mayor in 1957. "We have done a lot," he said "but we've got to keep moving."

He suggested citizens come to the council meetings to "let us know what you want."

West said "I think it would be fine" to have a mass transportation system for the city, "but I'm against a large subsidy," being paid by the taxpayers."

Commenting on the schools, West said a merger of the city and county school systems may come someday. "I'm not advocating it now, but it's something we should look to. I want to see children get fair and equal treatment."

four Commissioners voted against Englehardt, giving no reason for their action.

At the end of the meeting whether to go ahead and appoint someone else was discussed, but it was decided to wait and have a call meeting later on, hoping for some suggestions from the citizenry. Englehardt will continue as a member until a successor is appointed, according to the N.C. General Statutes.

Farmville Economic Council director Tom Thompson asked the Commissioners for a clear indication of how much the Town of Farmville would participate in water and sewer line extension for incoming industries. He explained that he needs this information when he is soliciting industry. An intensive effort is underway now to find an industry to take over the site being vacated by International Paper Company.

ANITA BRYANT SAYS:
"Thank Goodness-pure orange juice from Florida hasn't gone up in price."

The average price of all brands and forms of 100% Orange Juice from Florida is the same as in September, 1971...the beginning of Phase I...while the average for other food prices has increased 21%.

*Frozen Concentrate and Ready-to-Serve Bottles and Cartons.

Why have we been able to hold our price? Favorable crop conditions and improved methods of growing, processing and shipping.

Here are some other reasons Orange Juice from Florida is one of America's best food values.

- It's 100% juice. No chemical or synthetic additives.
- It has a lot more nutrition than just Vitamin C. It's a natural blend of B Vitamins and minerals.
- It's a natural "pick-me-up" because its natural sugars make it a natural energizer.

Jaguars Visit Panthers In Pitt Battle

The top spot in the Eastern Carolina Conference is still a deadlock, but after last week, it's down from three to two teams.

Ayden-Grifton's Chargers knocked Farmville Central out of a share of the top with a 34-6 romp. But North Lenoir's unbeaten Hawks kept pace with the Chargers with a 14-7 win over Eastern Wayne.

Elsewhere in the league, Greene Central got back on track after bowing for the first time, downing Charles B. Aycock, 29-0; and Southern Nash won its first conference game, downing North Pitt, 28-6.

Both Conley and Southern Wayne went outside the league for play, with Conley finishing in a surprising 12-12 tie with West Craven on the last play of the game, and Southern Wayne bowing to Goldsboro, 14-0.

In the Northeastern Conference, league play opened, with Bertie upsetting Ahoskie, 14-2; Edenton downing Plymouth, 22-16; Washington nipping Tarboro, 7-6, and Roanoke Rapids handing Willaimston its first loss, 22-6.

Robersonville opened its Eastern Plains competition with a fat 57-0 romp over West Edgecombe; Elm City surprised Rock Ridge, 23-18; South Edgecombe beat Lee Woodard, 18-8; North Johnston downed Saratoga, 26-7.

And in the Coastal Conference, East Cartaret beat Swansboro, 14-0. Havelock tripped East Bladen, 13-7; while Jones Senior fell to White Oak, 40-12; West Cartaret was nipped by New Hanover, 15-13, and West Craven tied Conley, as mentioned.

This week, in the Eastern Carolina loop, league play continues on all fronts, with Ayden-Grifton and North Lenoir out to preserve their streaks. The Chargers visit Eastern Wayne, while North Lenoir is host to defending champ Southern Nash. Southern Wayne visits Aycock; Greene Central is at Conley; and Farmville Central takes on North Pitt on the Panther field.

Northeastern play finds Ahoskie at Roanoke Rapids, Bertie at Plymouth, Edenton at Tarboro, and Williamston at Washington.

In the Eastern Plains, Elm City is at South Edgecombe; Lee Woodard hosts Robersonville, North Johnston is at West Edgecombe; and Saratoga is at Rock Ridge.

The Coastal schedule has East Cartaret at Camp Lejeune, Jones Senior hosting Jacksonville, and Kinston at West Cartaret in non-league games. Havelock is at West Craven for those two teams' first conference clash.

In the area, the most attention is focused on the Farmville Central-North Pitt meeting, the only cross-county action in Pitt.

Farmville Central's Gene Brewer wasn't too happy with his team's performance against the Chargers. "They (A-G) did exactly what we expected them to do, they just did it better," Brewer said. "They have a very good football team, and they took advantage of our mistakes. And we didn't do a lot of things I was pleased with."

No one came under Brewer's praise for the game. "When you get beat that bad," he said, "no one plays well."

This week, against the Panthers, Brewer is unsure what to expect. "We know they have an outstanding runner in Clarence Mooring. They have had a problem holding onto the ball, just as we have, but they have picked up a lot of ground running, something we haven't done. It could go either way, it all depends on how we snap back."

Danny Wilmer of North Pitt feels this too might be the key to the game. "I don't know whether they'll be up or down," he said of the Jaguars. "They are coming off one of their big games, so it's really hard to tell."

Fumbles plagued North Pitt against Southern Nash. "They picked up three and carried them back for touchdowns," he said. "It got to be a hectic game anyway. No refereees were assigned and they had to pick up a crew, and the game got started late, too, and that didn't help us. Everything went wrong."

Johnny Vines turned up with a slight injury in the game, but Wilmer feels he'll be ready for the Farmville contest.

"I thought our defense played real well. We contained them pretty well, and they only scored once off our defense."

This week, Wilmer is planning to do some changing in the lineup. "We've got some people who are playing selfishly. If they want to play this way, they'll have to do it on the bench."

Of Farmville Central, he warned to the running ability of Lee Johnson, and said that the Jaguar end, Barry Johnson, also looked good receiving the ball. "I look for a pretty wide open game," he said.

Conley Coach Chuck Dunn is still trying to figure out what happended at the end of his game. The Vikings were leading 12-6, had the ball and just seconds remained. But a punt was blocked and West Craven recovered at the Viking 45, then got 15 more yards on a penalty, leaving only time enough for one play, and they clicked on that to tie it up.

"It was a very strange ending," Dunn said. "I guess it was just one of those things. We should have won, no question about that. We had 280 yards in offense and they had about 120. The only time they threatened was the time they scored."

Dunn acknowledged that the Eagles had good defense, and that the Viks were missing three starters, Stancil Hines, Dallas Wade and Jimmy Warren—and only Warren is to be back for this week's game.

Dunn singled out Calvin and Willie Hawkins for praise, both rushing for over 100 yards. "Barry Purser did a good job blocking, and Keith Gould and Lionel Streeter were outstanding on defense," Dunn said.

"I know Greene Central (this week's opponent) has a good team," the coach said. "But I feel like we're putting things together at last, I know they are outstanding, and I know it'll be a tough game. They are a good defensive team, and they have a good passing attack and good runners."

Mike Overton of Ayden Grifton was quite please with his team's effort against Farmville Central last week. "I think it was a fine team effort, one of our best, against a good Farmville club," Overton said. "I didn't expect the score to be as wide as it was."

Overton didn't single out any individual, instead, praised the entire team. "I can't do anything else. They all performed well."

This week, the Chargers take on Eastern Wayne. "They gave Farmville Central a real good game," Overton pointed out. "They are a young team, but they hit you and come at you."

Eastern runs out of the win-T formation, and likes to run. They can pass however, and have a good quarterback.

"We're not looking ahead to any one else," Overton said. "We can't think about Greene Central or North Lenoir — right now we playing Eastern Wayne."

Harbaugh Hasn't Football Look

Greg Harbaugh is not impressive by mere physical presence. He is not mamouth, does not have bulging neck, arm and leg muscles. He is quiet, often pensive, and he talks very little.

But then Harbaugh (pronounced Har-Bow) isn't supposed to impress anyone. He is an offensive center and his job is to "put somebody on their back", then trot back to the huddle quietly.

Harbaugh is a case study in individualism on the East Carolina football team. On the road trips, he sin't overly talkative, he doesn't venture too far from his assigned motel room, and he is always in the lobby early for planned meetings.

Off the field, he is Greg Harbaugh, student and he wants to make that clear. "I was recruited by North Carolina State, Maryland, South Carolina and a couple of other schools, but I came to East Carolina because it's not as big," Harbaugh reasons. "I'm a history major and I'd probably like to go into teaching. I came here on a football scholarship and I think it's my job to do what my scholarship says, but I think that's as far as it goes. All these guys are my friends, but I like to be an individual, sort of. Being a history major is part of it. I guess I could have majored in physical education or something, but I don't want the label of "jock". There's nothing wrong with that, but I just like being an individual. I don't even wear my football jacket around, because when practice or the game is over, I like to be Greg Harbaugh, student, not Greg Harbaugh, offensive center for the Pirates or Greg Harbaugh, jock. I'm not big and dumb, which surprises alot of people. But, I'll tell you, neither are the other guys. This jock thing is just an image we've earned without really trying and I don't want to be a part of it. Football? Fine, I love it.

"I think the simplist way to expalin myself is this: "I really like being a student and playing football, too, but I want to be liked just because I'm Greg Harbaugh, not because I'm a football player.

"And the bit with the girls, there are always some that like you because you're a football player. That's great for a while, but it wears off real quick."

Harbaugh's career at East Carolina has been one of transition. He was recruited as a linebacker, then moved to offensive guard because speed curtailed his linebacking play. In the spring he was moved to center to fill the void left by the graduation of All Conference Jimmy Creech.

"Converting to center was okay with me," Harbaugh says, "because it gave me an immediate chance to start. I just sort of moved into the first team job."

"Now, I think I'm doing pretty good. The coaches have been real patient with me. I really played bad against State in the opener, but I'm beginning to understand my job much better. It takes time. Everyone needs a dry run when he starts something new. I'd been playing against my own team mates, then all of a sudden, I was up against opposing players who I had to figure out in a short time for just one game.

"My size might be a handicap. I'm only 6'1, 210. When I faced that guy at State, I couldn't believe it. He seemed so much quicker and still heavier."

"The same thing happened at southern Mississippi, but I figured out how to handle that guy."

I'm getting better, and I think the coaches know it. For a while, there was a real struggle for my job. Now, I think I've won it because of the last couple of games."

'So What' Says McKay After Trojans Tumble

By RON ROACH
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Southern California Trojans have tumbled from first to fourth in The Associated Press college football poll, leaving their coach with this response: So what?

John McKay believes the polls are good for college football because they create interest, but he said Tuesday:

"I've said 500,000 times that I don't care about the national rankings until the end of the season. They've yet to give an award to a guy ranked first after the fifth game."

After three games, the Trojans are 2-0-1, including the 7-7 tie with Oklahoma Saturday night. They prepare to open the Pacific-8 Conference campaign—the race to the Rose Bowl—Saturday at Oregon State.

McKay took issue with several items at his weekly brunch with reporters, including reports that Oklahoma dominated the Trojans and Oregon State's Dee Andros' remark that Southern Cal would try to embarrass the Beavers to regain lost ground in the polls.

The Trojans, unlike the 1972 national champions who played with a relaxed, jovial attitude, were "uptight" for Oklahoma and coaches' efforts to loosen them up failed.

"I said, 'Win or lose, we're going after the Rose Bowl so let's go out and knock hell out of 'em and have fun.' We knocked hell out of 'em, and anybody who doesn't believe that is crazy," McKay said.

"I believe had we not been penalized we would have won the game by three touchdowns to one," said McKay, referring to six offsides or illegal motion penalties. "I guess it was good defensive play but when the other team jumps offside we feel we don't have anything to do with it."

Statistically, the Sooners held a big edge in yardage gained, but McKay said, "I didn't see the game as everyone else here saw it. Who said Oklahoma dominated us? We didn't think they were going to score.

McKay said this team could be overconscious of extending the winning tradition of last year's 12-0 national champions.

Orioles Glad To Be Playing

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles, after an agonizing year on the sidelines, are looking forward to what used to be their annual post-season baseball caper.

"Playing in October is a lot better than sitting in the closet—hiding and painting," outfielder Merv Rettenmund said. "That's what I did last year after we finished third."

"I got lost for awhile, too," said third baseman Brooks Robinson. "But I watched the playoffs and the World Series on television."

The Orioles, who played in the World Series in 1969-70-71, bounced back this season to win the American League's Eastern Division, and on Saturday they open the best-of-five playoffs against Oakland's Western Division titlists.

"It has to be satisfying to win when we weren't picked to win," said outfielder Paul Blair. "But we haven't done anything yet. If we don't get into the World Series, everyone will ask again, 'What happened?' "

Jim Palmer, a 22-game winner due to pitch Saturday's opener against the A's, said the postseason play means "it will take me longer this year to get my golf game in shape."

Despite Claim, Hayes Means To See Buckeyes Hold To Top Spot

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though Woody Hayes says Ohio State's new No. 1 ranking "doesn't mean a damn thing" at this stage of the season, you can bet he intends to see to it that the Buckeyes remain on top.

The first target for the new leader in The Associated Press college football rankings is Washington State, a team which Coach Jim Sweeney rated in the same class as Southern California talent-wise before the season.

A couple of funny things have happened to the Cougars, though. They lost to Kansas and Arizona State before beating Idaho. And things figure to get worse. After Ohio State in Columbus comes Southern Cal in Los Angeles.

Even the luck of the Irish won't help Sweeney. Ohio State 42, Washington State 0.

Last week's count was 43 right, 19 wrong and four ties for a .694 percentage. The Upset Special—Oklahoma over then-No. 1 Southern Cal—produced a near-miss 7-7 tie. The score for the season is 152-526—.745.

Nebraska at Minnesota: Would you believe Minnesota holds a 29-14-2 lead in the series? But Coach Cal Stoll says he finds "absolutely no weaknesses in the Nebraska team. Well...maybe in the pregame warm-ups their cadence is off a count or two." Nebraska has won the last eight meetings. Make it nine. Nebraska 35-7.

Georgia at Alabama: After tying Pitt in its opener, Georgia is becoming the team Coach Vince Dooley thought it would be. The Bulldogs trounced North Carolina State last Saturday but this looks a little too steep. Alabama 28-14.

Southern California at Oregon State: USC, believe it or not, was pushed all over the field in that 7-7 tie with Oklahoma. Now, the Trojans get a chance to do the same to winless Oregon State. Southern Cal 35-0.

Oregon at Michigan: Bad week for the State of Oregon. Michigan 38-7.

Miami, Fla. at Oklahoma: Next week, Oklahoma plays Texas. Two weeks ago, Miami beat Texas. Ergo, Oklahoma won't look past Miami, Oklahoma 34-6.

Penn State at Air Force: Penn State may be the government's biggest problem since Watergate. Two weeks ago they crushed Navy, this week it's Air Force, next week Army. Penn State 28-3.

Michigan State at Notre Dame: Those 10-10 ties are a thing of the past. Notre Dame 37-7.

Kansas at Tennessee: This one's in Memphis, home of the blues. Kansas takes some home. Tennessee 28-17.

Florida at Louisiana State: Florida's SEC hopes were jolted by Mississippi State last Saturday. Now comes LSU, followed by Alabama. See you later, Gators. LSU 24-6.

Rains Spoiled Deacon Drills

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clemson Coach Red Parker says his team had a "real good defensive workout" Tuesday as it began preparations for Saturday's contest at Texas A&M.

"In fact," said Parker, "I would have to say that it was the best defensive session I have ever witnessed. Offensively, we really haven't had to make a lot of adjustments or changes, and this has aided our workouts."

Meanwhile, at Winston-Salem, rain washed out Tuesday's practice for Wake Forest, which also travels to the state of Texas to take on a slightly tougher opponent, the 13th ranked Texas Longhorns.

The Deacons need all the practice they can get, after a 41-0 loss to Richmond last Saturday, and a day of missed drills won't help.

Heavy rain interrupted practice for the Virginia Cavaliers, who went indoors to finish their workouts. Virginia, in its homecoming, faces Vanderbilt on Saturday.

North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley says sophomore quarterback Bill Paschall, who received his first test under fire last Saturday in the loss to Missouri, will start Saturday against North Carolina State.

Paschall came on in the second quarter after second string signal caller Chris Kupec broke his collar bone, with first team quarterback Nick Vidnovic already sidelined with a bruised spine.

At N.C. State, linebackers Dan Meier and Kirby Shimp were promoted to the first team as the Wolfpack went through a 2½-hour workout. Coach Lou Holtz stressed passing, punt returns and goal line defense during the practice.

Duke and Maryland continued to get ready for Purdue and Syracuse.

Yogi Has Flag, Key To City; Just Needs A New Met Contract

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that he has a key to the city, the only thing Yogi Berra needs is a contract to manage a baseball team for next season.

The logical team would seem to be the New York Mets, the club Yogi has piloted to the National League East Division title. But they haven't asked him back yet.

That, of course, could be meaningless. The Mets traditionally make their managerial decisions after the season. On the other hand, it could be ominous. The last time Yogi managed a club that finished first, it was the New York Yankees in 1964. Instead of getting a new contract, he got fired. Will history repeat itself?

"I don't know yet," said Berra, allowing himself a mischievious grin. "I don't think so."

In mid-summer, when the Mets were in last place 12 games back and five teams away from the top, there was considerable sniping at the manager. Donald Grant, the club's chairman of the board, described Berra's position as secure at that time, but added a cryptic afterthought, saying that it depended on fan opinion. At that time, Yogi's rating with the customers wasn't very high.

There were times during the season that even Berra doubted the team's ability to win the title.

Injuries piled up, and for awhile, it seemed that Berra never would have a totally healthy club. When he finally did, it thundered through September at a sizzling 21-8 pace to win the title.

Ironically, the Mets' won-lost record of 82-79 is the worst they have posted in any year since they won the division, playoff and World Series in 1969.

There is one more irony. If the Mets don't invite Berra back, he could still wind up in Shea Stadium anyway. After all, the Yankees will be spending the next two seasons there and they're looking for a manager.

Sports Bill Is Before Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate considers legislation today designed to reform U.S. amateur sports and eliminate the rivalry between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Amateur Athletic Union in international competition.

The measure is expected to pass even though there has been a concentrated lobbying effort against it by officials of established sports groups. Many athletes, including some who have participated in the Olympics, favor the proposal.

After a vote by the full Senate, the measure would go to the House Education and Labor Committee, where a similar bill is pending.

The Senate Commerce Committee approved an omnibus bill on July 25 that would establish an independent board to charter and oversee all governing bodies for U.S. amateur sports, restructure existing bodies, develop community facilities and promote health and safety in athletics.

Entitled the Amateur Athletic Act of 1973, the Senate bill would:

—Put an end to the on-going power feud between the NCAA and the AAU by eliminating their authority to prevent athletes from participating in individual events.

—Provide minimum federal involvement in amateur sports to the extent needed to protect individual athletes from overbearing sports organizations.

—Commission a study for the purpose of revitalizing the U.S. Olympic Committee and its method of operation.

—Create a sports development program designed to enable more people to become actively involved in amateur sports.

Ali-Frazier To Meet Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Speculation that a second "Fight of the Century" between heavyweights Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali would be announced soon was heightened Tuesday when Madison Square Garden called a press conference for noon, EDT, Thursday.

The Garden, site of the March 8, 1971 match when Frazier knocked Ali down on the way to a 15-round decision and the title, has been in intensive negotiation to acquire the bout. All that appeared lacking last week was adequate confirmation that the fighters would not receive as severe a tax bite as they had suffered in 1971.

When the two battled in 1971, they were taxed not only on income made in New York State but also on money from closed circuit broadcasts of the event and other finances. The tax bite made both fighters hesitant about returning to New York for the bout.

But Tuesday's announcement, along with a report that the date of the bout would be Feb. 4, 1974, added to conjecture that the fight would be held in the Garden.

Both have lost since the historic match, which reportedly grossed $20 million and paid each boxer a $2.5 million purse. Frazier lost his championship to George Foreman in Jamaica on Jan. 22 of this year. Ali had his jaw broken while dropping a 12-round decision to Ken Norton on March 31.

Cosmic Dustbin Given Up As Lost Experiment

OTTAWA (AP) — Somewhere over the southern hemisphere Canada's dustbin in the sky is lost.

The Canadian-built dustbin was contained in a giant U.S.-designed funnel towed about 16 miles into the sky by a U.S. atmospheric balloon.

A National Research Council official here says the balloon is probably down — its battery-operated tracking controls dead — and that no hope remains for the cosmic dust it was to collect.

The dust — the only type of its kind ever collected — might have provided clues to how the sun and planets were formed.

The Canadian-U.S. venture began Jan. 29 when the funnel and dustbin were launched behind a 65-foot balloon near Brisbane, Australia.

The balloon was to have been blown by prevailing winds eastward over the southern tips of South America and South Africa and back to Australia, where the dustbin was to have been parachuted to earth.

The balloon returned over Australia too soon. And ground control in Australia did not release the dustbin because it was throught the balloon should go around a second time, explained Romeo Wlochowicz, an astrophysics engineer at the Research Council.

Wlochowicz, who built the dustbin, said the balloon returned after only 19 days. The 20,000-mile journey was expected to take twice that long.

The balloon was becalmed on its second journey and didn't return over Australia until June 18. But it did not respond to ground control signals to sever the 500-foot tow cable between the balloon and the funnel.

Wlochowicz said the batteries must have been too weak. They were designed to last 50 days. A weak signal was heard from the baloon Aug. 27, and nothing since.

Wlochowicz said another balloon probably will be launched to collect the valuable dust, though no date has been set.

The cosmic dust from outer atmosphere is made up of micrometeorites so small hundreds would fit on the head of a pin.

Such particles are scarce and can be collected only over a long period at an altitude of about 80,000 feet.

From the chemical composition of these tiny particles, scientists believe they can learn about comets, asteriods and gas clouds and, possibly, about how the sun and planets were formed.

Radiation Belts Could Ruin Fly-By Of Jupiter

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading space scientist has reported that a nail-biting, scientific cliff-hanger is in the offing for next month—involving the possible destruction of an American spacecraft now gunning towards Jupiter.

The word came from Dr. James Van Allen, University of Iowa physicist and the chief discoverer of the radiation belts that surround the earth.

Van Allen told a Navy-sponsored scientific conference Tuesday that America's Pioneer-10 unmanned spacecraft, heading for a "fly-by" of Jupiter on Dec. 4, could be destroyed by radiation belts presumed to surround the faraway planet—if the belts are as fearsome as he and some other scientists believe they might be.

On the other hand, he said, some other scientists hold this belief:

The presumed Jovian radiation belts—believed formed by the entrapment of electrified particles from the sun by Jupiter's magnetic field—might be, in effect, softened up by the influence of some of Jupiter's multiple moons as they orbit the planet.

And, according to this theory, Pioneer-10 would safely ride through the belts.

Declaring that the spacecraft, launched 18 months ago, should begin to strike the belts late in November, Van Allen said:

"Potentially, it (the belt area) is an enormously damaging region, and there's no assurance that the spacecraft will survive it.

"Thus, there will be a very high period of excitement ... beginning in late November."

Van Allen addressed a symposium marking the 50th anniversary of the Naval Research Laboratory.

Lou Rawls And Wife Divorced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Lou Rawls has been divorced from his wife of 11 years.

Superior Court Judge Lester E. Olson granted the divorce Tuesday to Lana Jean Rawls, 31. Custody of the couple's two children, Lou Jr., 5, and Luanna, 9, will be shared by the Rawls.

Face Runoff In Atlanta Voting

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Vice Mayor Maynard Jackson outpolled white incumbent Mayor Sam Massell Tuesday night to force a runoff in Jackson's race to become Atlanta's first black chief executive.

Jackson, a 35-year-old attorney and father of three, grabbed more than 47,000 votes—47 per cent—compared to Massell's 19,760 in the field of 11 candidates. The two will meet Oct. 16.

Meanwhile in the race for the city's No. 2 spot, black civil rights activist Hosea Williams was second in a field of five. He will face incumbent Alderman Wyche Fowler in an Oct. 16 runoff for the president of the newly created city council.

Former two-term Democratic Congressman Charles Weltner, 46, finished a close third with 18,946 votes behind Jackson and Massell. State Sen. Leroy Johnson, the only other black in the mayor's race, was a distant fifth with less than 3,900 votes. Former State official Harold Dye received 8,704 votes for fourth place.

The rest of the field trailed far behind.

Fewer than half of the 207,000 registered voters in the city of half a million cast their ballots. Slightly more than half of the population is black but whites account for about 52 per cent of the registered voters.

Jackson, a Ford Foundation teen-age scholar at 14 and a college graduate at 18, was the city's first black vice mayor when he took office in 1970 as a running mate to Massell—the city's first Jewish mayor.

"I'm kind of disappointed we did not go over the top tonight. We came so close (to receiving a majority of votes). My feelings are we have got to concentrate on the 16th of October," said Jackson, after conceding his runoff position early today. The new mayor takes office in January.

The city revised its century-old charter earlier this year and opted for a strong-mayor setup while replacing the old aldermanic board with an 18-member council presided over by a council president. the new slate was voted on Tuesday in addition to school board seats.

Under the new alignment, the mayor will have authority to appoint and remove department heads, create new agencies or departments, set the city budget, and approve or veto ordinances and resolutions.

Atlanta's congressional representative is Democrat Andrew Young, the first black ever to hold the office in modern times.

Unofficial final returns for other candidates in the mayor's race were former policeman John Chambers, 636; Socialist Party Worker Debbie Bustin, 337; businesswoman Betty Morrison, 178; lawyer John Genins, 173; William Ogle, known in the Hare Krishna movement as Balavanta Das, 148, and former aircraft plant employe Ernest Moschella, 58.

Has A Dream Of Stuffing An Elephant

By RAY WILKINSON

NAIROBI (UPI) — "The lion is no problem. The rhino is a bit tricky because his skin is so tough and wrinkled.

"But the elephant...Ah, now that's a job for a real artist. One day...."

Wolfgang Schenk sighs, thinking about that time when his special talents will be put to the ultimate test.

Schenk, from Kassel, West Germany, is no big game hunter but a taxidermist, head of the biggest such factory on the African continent, situated in pleasant rolling countryside on the outskirts of Nairobi.

With Swede Staffan Strand from Upsala, Uwe Goepel of Zurich, Switzerland, Kenyan Mburu Muturi and a local staff, Schenk mounts many of the wild game trophies which ultimately end up in the homes of rich European and American clients.

"It's an Art"

"Big game taxidermy is comparable to sculpture. It is an art," Schenk tells a visitor, guiding him carefully between a rhino head, a water buffalo and a leopard. "Pff. With training anyone can mount a bird. But big game...You must spend time in the bush.

"Observe the animals, how they behave, stand, run and jump and then translate this to the model back on the factory floor."

As he talks his colleagues are sculpting the skeleton of plains animals and a crocodile, fleshing out the bones and rib cage with a putty substance.

When the pilot model is finished a mold will be made and eventually the finished model, ready for the animal skin. The factory keeps body molds for the most popular animals such as lions and leopards.

An elephant would be a special challenge, Schenk says. "For instance, we would even have to build a new shed. This one just isn't big enough.

Cost High

"Then I would have to go out and shoot another one, to get very exact measurements of his rib cage, you know. I would perhaps also bring the legs back and begin work on the model."

Working fulltime, building, shaping, stitching on the skin (which has been salted in the field, tanned and then softened ready for stitching), it would take about three months to mount a tusker.

The cost? A cool $14,000, plus perhaps the same again in freight. By comparison, a fully mounted lion or leopard would be about $800. and a deer head a mere $90.

New laws in the United States and Europe on the importation of such skins as leopard have bitten into the trade but Schenk is hardly worried about his job and thinks conservationists have their priorities wrong anyway.

"What is all the fuss about the leopard disappearing?" he asks. "It's the lion which will go first but nobody worries about him."

Neither Crazy Nor A Sultan

KIRIKHAN, Southern Turkey (AP) — Judges in a courtroom in this provincial Turkish town looked at each other with some amazement when a man they had just convicted of assault leapt from the dock shouting, "I'm the Sultan, you have no right to convict me."

The last Sultan of Turkey was deposed 50 years ago.

The judges added a new conviction for contempt, saying Sevket Koldas had "tried to create the impression he was insane, thereby attempting to deceive the court."

Pancakes Given Persian Flavor

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The nation's first pancake house is being started here by a young Iranian who studied hotel and food management in England.

The restaurant serves 28 kinds of pancakes, some with distinctly Persian touches, like a dessert pancake with crushed watermelon sauce and an entree pancake topped with rice and meat.

For the first time in several years, U.S. cotton production has exceeded use. The carryover next summer will be about five million bales.

Unafraid Of Computers On Privacy

By ERIC WAHA

VIENNA (AP) — Can a future "Big Brother" government get all the information on your private life by merely pushing a button and releasing the data which had been collected by statisticians?

A leading American statistician conceded there was concern about such a possibility, but he added he felt this was unfounded.

For one thing, the statisticians would not go along with it.

William H. Kruskal, who is on the faculty of the department of statistics of the University of Chicago, attended the recent 10-day session of the International Statistical Institute (ISI) here.

Though the problem of an invasion of privacy for statistical reasons was not a main topic of the session, Kruskal reported there was a lot of interest in it and he discussed it with colleagues from a number of countries.

"I think that many people have fears about the future, especially with increasing computerization," Kruskal said. He termed the fears "science-fiction, '1984-kind of fantasies," referring to the book "1984" by George Orwell which described a future "Big Brother" government that spies on its people through technological devices.

Kruskal conceded that the concern was not completely unrealistic. He said:

"In the old-fashioned statistics, where information was kept in file folders in various offices, it would have been a very difficult and expensive job to accumulate a dossier on a single person.

"Now in principle, if you have computerization, you could do what we call 'matching' or 'linkage' and put together various pieces of information about the same person."

Kruskal stressed that despite all that, he thought it impossible that any future "Big Brother" government could use statistics to invade the privacy of individuals.

"Statisticians working with that kind of data would refuse to cooperate, they understand the civil liberty aspects of the problem," he said.

Furthermore, in virtually every Western country of the world, there are studies and recommendation to protect the privacy of the people and confidentiality of the information of statistical surveys.

In the United States, for instance, Kruskal said, there was the recommendation that if someone is asked a question as part of a survey and is promised confidentiality, the data he provides should not be used for any other purpose than he agreed to.

Another recommendation was that a citizen should be entitled to see what is on the record on himself, and correct it, or at least be able to object to it, if he disagrees.

Kruskal said the understandable concern over an invasion of privacy should not obscure the benefits that can be derived from statistical surveys.

Surveys are very valuable because they provide a better understanding of society, might predict the effects for instance of tax laws, of medical programs, etc., he said.

Richard Bach Is Flying Again

COOK, Neb. (AP) — Production has begun in Nebraska on "Nothing by Chance," a feature-length documentary film, based on a book by Richard Bach. Bach is also the author of "Jonathan Livingston Seagull."

According to Hugh Downs, whose Raylin Productions is coproducing with Bach's Creature Enterprises, "Bach is creating the script as it happens each day" and appearing as a central character in the film. Downs is narrating.

The story is about barnstorming with antique airplanes, including a look at the men who fly them.

A HOT JOB

EREGLI, Central Turkey (AP) — Three thieves who raided the safe of a high school here on a hot night were arrested as they dipped into ice cream from the school's canteen refrigerator, police said.

The Whirlwind Will Be Reaped

Lorna's college sexual affairs show the erosion of morality that has occurred in recent years. Abetted by Dr. Spoof's permissive doctrines and many unmoral (if not immoral) psychiatrists youth have been stupidly advised! Women's Lib shows the "recoil" effect!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE Y-533: Lorna K., aged 18, entered the state university from a small town high school.

"Dr. Crane," the Women's Dean informed me "Lorna is like thousands of such coeds.

"Coming from a high school of 850 enrollment, she suddenly found herself overwhelmed by 10,000 college youth on our campus.

"And it was a shock to her to be housed in a coeducational dormitory.

"During her first year, she followed the rigid church teachings her parents had instilled in her.

"But by her sophomore year, she succumbed to the highpr-pressure of some of her coed friends, who began to tell her that sexual affairs before marriage were quite normal and even desirable.

"By her junior year, Lorna had slept with 7 different college men and had developed the cynical outlook that in this Women's Lib generation, that was her privilege.

"Moreover, she still denies that she has suffered any emotional trauma from shifting from one sexual affair to another, for she now claims that sex and love are not synonymous.

"Yet she has moved out of our coeducational dormitories and rooms with two other girls, all three of whom seem somewhat soured on men and are vigorous advocated of Women's Lob.

"Dr. Crane, I view with alarm the erosion of our former moral principles during this past decade of so-called sexual liberation of womem.

"Don't you psychiatrists find permanent traumatic emotional damage to such formerly idealistic, virtuous girls as Loran?"

Check Your Physchiatrist

Most of us psychiatrists believe in the wisdom of the ancients who have passed along the Ten Commandments as a high code of moral conduct.

And we certainly find lifelong traumatic scars from such modern behavior as Lorna represents.

Alas, however there are many other psychiatrists who actually and openly recommend promiscuity among high school girls, telling them such casual sexual orgies prepare them better for happy marriage later on.

So be sure you check on your psychiatrists before you send wives or teen-age girls to them as patients!

Down in Indiana, a school principal wished to conduct a 3-day seminar for senior high schoolers, separated into an all-male and then an all-female audience.

"Dr. Crane," he said, "about one-third of our senior girls are already pregnant so our faculty feels something should be done to warn youth against this pernicious modern 'free love' doctrine.

"Therefore, I asked an Indianapolis psychiatrist to join a divorce court Judge and a Clergyman as our seminar speakers.

"But this psychiatrist wrote back, saying he'd be gald to come but thought maybe we'd not like his viewpoint.

"For he said he advises teenage promiscuity among high schoolers, since he feels such wide sexual experience is good insurance for their success in marriage."

The Bible states that if we sow the wind, we'll reap the whirlwind!

Such rationalization as this psychiatrist demonstrates, is obviously medical "hot air" which, however, has helped produce the current furore for indiscriminate abortion laws.

Girls, the wisdom of brilliant men throughout the ages far exceeds any modern propaganda about "free love," so don't pay attention to Women's Libbers.

"It's the woman who pays" runs an ancient axiom, which is true today and will be so in generations to come, so be smart!

Leading All In Sewage Plants

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas has more sewage treatment plants than any other state in the nation, according to the state Health Department.

Texas officials say the state also ranks at the top in comparisons with other states in the total number of public drinking water supplies. In Texas every community with a population of 10,000 or more—as well as many smaller communities—has an approved public water supply system.

In addition, authorities say the 450 public water supply systems that service 90 per cent of the state's population meet "blue ribbon" standards for environmental health protection.

OLD MISS

WOODVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — The oldest business institution in Mississippi is located in Woodville. The Woodville Republican, a weekly newspaper, was founded in 1824, before the birth of the Republican party.

WOMAN POWER

NEW YORK (UPI) — A shortage of labor in the Canadian woods promises to bring more woman power into newsprint production. A mill in British Columbia already has hired two women as part of a pilot program to identify logging jobs suitable for the fair sex. A union official suggested hiring crews on a 50-50 basis for remote camps.

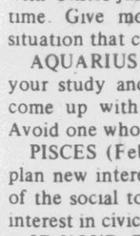
FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1973



CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very difficult day which requires much care to prevent disorganization and lack of poise. Refrain from making any comments that could upset others with whom you must have dealing. Avoid taking any unnecessary risks.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care you don't spoil your reputation by unwise actions today or it could cost you a great deal. Make sure all bills are paid. Evening is ideal for the romantic side of life.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be certain to get your facts and figures straight before you get into a new deal. Steer clear of a flashy newcomer who could get you into trouble. Strive more harmony at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Show that you are conscientious in the handling of your obligations. Smile if mate tries to get you upset. Talk with business experts if you are in doubt about anything. Be calm.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) An associate may be displeased with the progress being made, so try to be more cooperative instead of criticizing so much. Keep alert or an opponent gets the best of you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have to use care in motion at all times today if you wish to attain your immediate goals. Take better care of your health. Listen to a good friend's advice. Relax at home tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It's all right to have a good time but be careful it isn't too costly. Exercise patience with the one you love. Take steps to improve your appearance. Dress in good taste.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have to use kindness at home or you are apt to stir up a hornet's nest. Quietly rid yourself of whatever is causing unrest. Sidestep one who is looking for trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you do anything foolish now, you could upset harmony that now exists at home. Travel with utmost care. Do something very nice for mate tonight and come to a better understanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you don't commit yourself too heavily or you could regret it. Don't follow a hunch you have at this time since it apt to be erroneous. Get yourself in good physical condition.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't sever connections with others just because you are not feeling up to par at this time. Give more encouragement to good friends. Avoid a situation that could lead to trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Sit down in the quiet of your study and think over any problems you may have and come up with the right answers. Try to help others more. Avoid one who gossips too much. Be cheerful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Meet with good friends and plan new interests that will be mutually beneficial. Steer clear of the social tonight where arguments could occur. Take more interest in civic matters.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those young people who wants to bully others if given an opportunity. Teach to use energy constructively. Direct the education along governmental lines. Give the proper kind of discipline early in life. Sports here can be very fine. Musical education should also be given.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!
