

Russians Already In Mideast: Brezhnev

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has "already sent representatives" to the Mideast war zone at the request of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev announced today.

He did not reveal if the Russians dispatched to the battle front were military forces.

The Soviet move followed an Egyptian request Wednesday that Russian and American troops be sent to the Middle East to help enforce the troubled U.N. cease-fire call.

Only Thursday the Soviet Union had voted for a U.N. resolution calling for a peacekeeping force in the Middle East without any U.S. or Soviet troops participating.

Earlier Thursday, the United States had placed some of its key military bases in the United States and abroad on precautionary alert amid concern in Washington that Moscow was planning to send military units unilaterally into the Middle East.

Speaking on the second day of the World Congress of Peace forces here, Brezhnev said when the Soviet Union received Sadat's call, "we expressed our readiness to satisfy Egypt's request and have already sent such representatives."

The Kremlin chief said that he hoped the United States would follow suit, but added that the Soviet Union would entertain "other possible measures in connection with the continued violations of the ceasefire." The United States rejected Sadat's call.

Speaking of the U.N. resolution to send a mixed peacekeeping force to the Middle East, Brezhnev said, "We consider this a helpful decision and hope it will play its part."

Brezhnev had been scheduled to address the congress Thursday but he postponed the speech at the height of the tension over the U.S. military alert.

In today's address, Brezhnev did not reveal how many Soviets had been sent to the Middle East nor did he say precisely what their function was or where they had been dispatched.

In his appeal to Washington and Moscow, Sadat requested that Soviet and American troops intervene militarily along the Suez Canal and secure a cease-fire.

Brezhnev's statement that Moscow has sent "such representatives" appeared to mean that Soviet military units had been moved into the Middle East.

Setting the tone for his announcement, the Kremlin leader accused Israel of repeated violations of the Mideast ceasefire and said it was pursuing an "adventurist" course.

Brezhnev added that "it is difficult to understand what the Israeli leaders are counting on by carrying out such an adventurist course ..."

He charged that Israel has "totally ignored" the U.N. calls for a cease-fire.

Therefore, he declared, "urgent and necessary measures were required to implement the cease-fire."

Encircled Egyptian Army Fails Break-Out Try, Reports Israel

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel reported it had beaten back an attempt by the Egyptian 3rd Army to break through encircling Israeli forces today as U.N. officials began putting together an international force to patrol the Middle East cease-fire.

In Moscow, Communist party chief Leonid I.

Brezhnev announced the Soviet Union has "sent representatives" to the war zone at the request of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. He did not describe the persons sent and did not say whether they were military forces.

Sadat on Wednesday had asked for both Soviet and U.S. troops to enforce the U.N.

cease-fire. The United States rejected the request and said neither big power should send forces into the troubled area.

The Soviet Union appeared to agree with this when it supported a U.N. resolution specifying that Security Council members, including both the United States and the Soviet Union, should be barred from the U.N.

peacekeeping force.

Before passage of the resolution, U.S. military installations were placed on alert, and administration sources said they believed at one point that about 1,000 Russian troops were en route to Egypt.

Brezhnev accused Israel of violating United Nations calls for a truce and declared "urgent and necessary measures were required to implement the cease-fire."

The Israeli military command in turn accused the Egyptians of cease-fire violations and said the trapped 3rd Army had mounted a tank and artillery attack in an attempt to put a bridge across the Suez canal. It said they sought to transfer troops from the east bank where they were stranded.

The Israeli state radio reported the estimated 20,000 troops, surrounded by Israelis in the Sinai Desert, are in desperate straits and are running out of food and water.

While the command reported repeated Egyptian cease-fire violations in efforts to escape the trap, the state radio said other encircled troops have surrendered to the Israelis.

The Israelis reported that an oil tanker, first said to have been disabled by Egyptian artillery, had struck an Egyptian mine at the southern entrance to the Gulf of Suez. Two crewmen were injured and taken off the ship, identified as the Israeli-owned 29,592-ton Siris, a communique said.

The vessel, it said, was still afloat but "it is feared that it cannot be saved from sinking."

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia told an interviewer that the first Arab objective in the wake of the cease-fire was to have Israel withdraw from territory occupied in the latest war and in 1967.

He warned Arabs to prepare for more war in case Israel refuses to give up the occupied land.

Faisal also told the Beirut magazine Al-Diyar that his oil embargo against the United States will be maintained until the Israelis withdraw completely.

While an Egyptian military spokesman in Cairo denied that Egyptian tanks continued to fight Israelis at the Suez canal, Israeli war analyst Gen. Haim Herzog said continued fighting was apparently the result of a break in communication with the 3rd Army.

"The general picture we have had throughout the fighting inside Egypt has all the time been one of a lack of knowledge of conditions," Herzog said.

Despite this, he said he believed the cease-fire would hold.

UN Mobilizing A Cease-Fire Force

By FORD BURKHART
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.
(AP) — Troops of three nations under the United Nations banner were preparing today to fly from Cyprus to the Middle East as the vanguard of a U.N. military force to police the Israeli-Arab cease-fire.

The Security Council on Thursday approved a resolution calling for formation of a new U.N. Emergency Force and specifying that, like other such peacekeeping forces, it would not include men from the United States, the Soviet Union or the other three permanent members of the council.

The U.N. action came only hours after the United States had placed its military bases around the world under a precautionary alert.

Nixon administration sources had said they feared Moscow planned to exploit the fragile Mideast truce by sending in its own peacekeeping force.

As Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim canvassed other U.N. members for men for the new force, the council authorized him to get things moving by sending to Cairo 897 men from the 3,000-man U.N. peacekeeping force stationed on Cyprus since 1964. They are from Finland, Austria and Sweden.

The council's resolution did not specify the size of the Middle East force. The similar force that maintained a picket line between Israel and Egypt from 1956 to 1967 had a peak strength of 5,977 men.

The council's resolution also authorized an increase in the force of 221 U.N. military observers that has been manning the cease-fire lines along the Golan Heights and the Suez Canal since the 1967 war.

Panama's ambassador to the United Nations said his government was ready to contribute 200 men to the new force, and the Canadian defense minister offered 900. Sweden said it was considering a U.N. request for troops.

U.S. Ambassador John A. Scali offered his government's help in transporting the force to the Middle East.

Waldheim was to report to the Security Council today on his troop-raising plans and how his effort was progressing.

The resolution passed the council 14-0, with China refusing to participate as it has on all the cease-fire votes.

The resolution renewed the council's demand for an "immediate and complete cease-fire" by the Middle East combatants and also its demand that they return to the positions they occupied at the time of the first cease-fire Monday.

Shopping Center Planned

FARMVILLE—Monk Associates of Wilson has announced plans for a shopping center at the intersection of Fields Street and Highway 264 here.

The same developers earlier had announced they would build a shopping center on 264-A near Farmville Central High School, but said later that the project had been dropped.

Goodman, Segar, Hogan Inc. of Norfolk, Va. will assist the Monk firm in developing the center on a 17-acre tract near the new A. C. Monk Tobacco Processing Plant. It will have frontage on Highway 264 and on Fields Street. According to Harry T. Lester of the Goodman, Segar, Hogan Co., several nationally known stores have expressed interest in locating here.

Also underway is the development of a shopping center, also on Highway 264, by Marvin Horton of Tarboro.

Courage Award To Judge Sirica

BOSTON (AP) — Watergate Judge John J. Sirica has been given the American Judges Association's award of merit for "judicial courage."

Sirica accepted the award Thursday night at the association's convention here. He did not mention the Watergate case in his brief speech.

"What can I say? What could anyone say that would be appropriate in these circumstances except to observe that the primary concern of our times and our time-honored adversary system is the orderly and diligent pursuit of the truth," Sirica said.

On Tuesday, President Nixon agreed to turn over tapes of White House conversations to Sirica.

Local law enforcement officers are continuing their efforts today to identify a man found burned to death in a 9:23 p.m. fire on Albemarle Ave. here yesterday.

Greenville firemen were called to the Mark IV Club on Albemarle Avenue by a telephone caller who said an explosion had just occurred in the building.

Responding fire units found the brick building totally engulfed in flames when they arrived. Officers reported all windows in the building had been blown out.

Firefighters quickly brought the flames under control and when they entered the building found the charred body of a man. Fire officers said the body was burned beyond recognition.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said members of his department and Pitt County coroner and Medical Examiner E.W. Harvey are attempting to identify the body, and determine the cause of the explosion and fire.

Cannon quoted the owner of the club as saying no one supposed to be in the building at the time.

Agents of the State Bureau of Investigation are cooperating in the investigation of the fire and death.

Duke Doctors Use Unique Surgery To Correct Defect

By YVONNE BASKIN
DURHAM — One day when he was 15 years old, Larry Beard noticed after basketball practice that his heart was beating extremely fast.

He went home and stretched out, but his heart wouldn't stop racing. The lanky, sandy-haired teenager from Big Lake, Tex., was taken to a hospital where his heart was clocked at 240 beats per minute, more than three times the normal speed. It took seven hours to slow his heart down to its normal rhythm.

That was the first time, Beard, who is now 18, learned that he had a rare congenital heart defect called Wolff-Parkinson-White Syndrome (WPW). WPW is caused by an extra piece of muscle in the heart which conducts heartbeats along the wrong pathway.

Joseph Barham of Oak Ridge, La., is 55 years old and only found out last spring that he suffered from the same defect. On Aug. 1, 1972 his heart had begun racing wildly, beating up to 280 times a minute. Doctors thought he had suffered a myocardial infarction, a type of heart attack.

Barham was given medication to control infarctions, but the attacks continued.

Beard's attacks also continued, even though his condition had been correctly diagnosed and he was taking drugs that ordinarily will control WPW symptoms.

Recently both Barham and Beard checked out of Duke University Medical Center with all traces of WPW gone. They had become the 14th and 15th patients to undergo surgery at Duke to correct such heart defects.

The surgical technique was developed at Duke, and the first WPW operation ever performed was done here in 1967. Only four other successful operations for WPW have been reported throughout the world.

Persons with WPW have an extra piece of heart muscle connecting the atrium or upper chamber of the heart to the ventricle, the lower chamber which does the pumping. The extra connection permits the heart's electrical impulses to move too quickly. This disrupts the regular rhythm of the heart and causes a characteristic pattern of heartbeats that can be identified by an electrocardiogram (EKG).

Dr. Andrew G. Wallace, chief of cardiology at Duke, estimates that about one of every 2,000 persons has this EKG pattern characteristic of WPW. The great majority of these persons with WPW never have any symptoms, although the tendency increases with age. Even if these persons begin to experience minor episodes of heart palpitations as they grow older, most can control the episodes with drugs.

But in a small minority of cases, WPW, victims like Beard and Barham experience severe episodes. In some patients the disease leaves them completely incapacitated—like a woman operated on this summer at Duke who had begun to experience up to 50 episodes a day of extremely rapid heartbeat which left her weak and faint.

When the heart is beating too fast, it can't pump blood adequately. A severe WPW episode can lead to ventricular fibrillation, a rapid, chaotic squirming of the heart muscle which disrupts the rhythm so much that little blood is pumped to the body. A person with this condition can die in a matter of minutes.

The operation for WPW involves finding the extra connection between the heart chambers and dividing it so that the electrical signals can travel the right pathway.

The key to the procedure is a system of mapping the path of electrical impulses in the heart to determine exactly where the maverick area is that's short-circuiting the normal heart pattern. This mapping is done during open-heart surgery after preliminary studies tell physicians the general area of the muscle that's causing the problem.

Wallace and his team mapped the electrical impulses in Barham and Beard's hearts, and Dr. Will C. Sealy, professor of thoracic surgery, performed the operation.

In Beard's case, the extra muscle was in an easily accessible site on the right side of the heart, and he was only on the heart-lung machine for 14 minutes while Sealy severed the troublesome connection.

But in Barham's case the extra connection was located on the back left side of the heart, the most difficult site for the surgeon to reach. The operation lasted more than seven hours.

Barham also developed a clotting problem and required so many transfusions during the operation that the hospital's supply of Type A-positive blood ran out and donors had to be called in.

Of the 15 WPW operations performed here in the past six years, nine have been

Have Relative Spread The Word

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I know you have stated a dozen times that it is improper to write "no gifts, please" on invitations, but something must be done about showering expensive gifts on older people who neither want nor need them.

I am soon to celebrate my 50th wedding anniversary, and I do not want a truckload of "things" for which I have no use.

There are so many lovely friends and relatives who go overboard, spending their hard-earned money for these useless gifts.

We want to entertain our friends, but we absolutely do not want them to bring or send us any presents. Isn't there some way we can let our wishes be known without being ill-mannered?

NO GIFTS, PLEASE

DEAR NO GIFTS: Requesting "no gifts" on an invitation is suggesting that gifts are expected. A close friend or relative can spread the word that a contribution to some worthy cause in honor of your "50th" would be your preference.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for nearly 20 years. We have three well-adjusted children, a lovely home, and an excellent income. We love and respect each other, have a good social life, and just about everything one could ask for. What's our problem? Our sex lives. We have none.

My wife was a virgin when I married her, and I had very little experience for a 22-year-old college graduate. I know I never really satisfied her, but she never complained. I felt like a failure, so I just quit trying. I've never cheated on my wife and I never will. Occasionally one of us will initiate some foreplay because we are both very affectionate, but it always ends in humiliation for me. She says it's not important to her and I shouldn't worry about it, but I do. I know I'm cheating her. And I'm cheating myself, too, because I hear that some couples in their 60s enjoy sex. Don't suggest psychiatry. I've had two years of that and got nowhere. What do you say? MISSING SOMETHING

DEAR MISSING: If you love each other and are properly motivated, there is hope. If you can afford to spend $2,500, and 10 days to two weeks in St. Louis at the Masters and Johnson Clinic, I recommend it. They are specialists in sexual dysfunction, and have done a remarkable job of rehabilitating couples after everything else (including psychiatry) has failed. Your visit there will be strictly confidential.

Viets Fighting In Central Highlands

By DENNIS NEEDLE
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government today reported more fighting in the central highlands.

The government said 11 North Vietnamese and six government soldiers were killed and 30 government troops wounded Thursday in attacks and counterattacks in the general area of the Plei Blang base, which the North Vietnamese captured Tuesday.

Thirty South Vietnamese were reported killed and 65 missing at Plei Blang, which is 12 miles west of Pleiku, one of the chief towns in the highlands.

In other fighting in the highlands Thursday, the South Vietnamese command said 12 North Vietnamese were killed in an attack on an infantry position 11 miles southwest of Kontum. No government losses were reported.

Reliable sources said the commander of the military region around Saigon is being replaced in the first major military shakeup since the North Vietnamese offensive last year.

The sources said no official reason has been given for the ouster of Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Minh, commander of the 3rd Military Region since 1971. But military observers have noted growing criticism of the general since heavy fighting in the first days of the January ceasefire.

In Cambodia, the Phnom Penh command said Khmer Rouge insurgents had slipped through several government units and again closed Highway 4, Phnom Penh's supply route from the coast. The command said the road was cut about 35 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

Col. Am Rong, the military spokesman, said the highway was cut by a "fairly small enemy force" and that a brigade of troops and a squadron of armored personnel carriers had been sent to reopen it.

More than 30 Cambodian T28 fighter-bombers flew 54 sorties Thursday against insurgent positions along Phnom Penh's southwest defense perimeter, Am Rong said. The strikes were ordered to break up Khmer Rouge concentrations and prevent infiltration into the southern approaches to Phnom Penh, and Am Rong said they would continue today and Saturday.

Says Sense Of Decency 'Lost'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Republican National Chairman George Bush says the nation is losing its sense of decency in overreacting to the turmoil surrounding the White House.

In a speech to Indiana Republicans at a $100-a-couple fund-raising dinner here Thursday night, Bush said publicly voiced questions by AFL-CIO president George Meany and others about President Nixon's emotional stability are "irresponsibility at its worst."

Bush said irresponsibility was "trumped" Thursday when Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was asked at a news conference if the worldwide alert of U.S. forces in the Middle East crisis might have been ordered to divert attention from Watergate.

Such a suggestion "demeans the presidency," Bush said. "Where are the fundamental standards of decency?"

He said the question reflected a lack of perspective about Watergate problems besetting the Nixon administration.

"There is an emotion in this country that needs to be calmed down, needs a little more maturity," the former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said. "This isn't a time for irrational shouting . . . This isn't a time for piling on."

Bush called Meany a "cranky, aged . . . long-time Nixon biter" and added, "It's irrational to suggest that there's something wrong with the stability of the President."

He said Nixon is "stable and strong."

"I admit things have gone wrong," he added, "but to carry it to that extreme, it just seems to me we must stand up and speak out against that kind of thing."

Believes Father Likes Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is a man who "rolls with the punches," and will neither resign or be impeached, says one of his two daughters, Julie Nixon Eisenhower.

"I think sometimes he really likes a challenge. It's kind of a gauntlet thrown down you have got to pick up," she said on a local television show Thursday.

She said she didn't think impeachment would even go to a vote in Congress because, "I just believe that the majority of congressmen and senators want what's best for the country . . . The majority really do want to work with the President."

totally successful. Three patients still show some traces of WPW in their EKG patterns, but have had no further episodes of rapid heart beat. One patient died. The other two cases were unsuccessful because the extra connections apparently were not completely severed.

This summer the Duke team began using a new surgical approach which makes the extra connection more accessible. The five WPW operations performed since the technique was modified have all been successful.

"We now have perfected the operation to the point that it is applicable to all WPW patients with disabling or life threatening symptoms, and it should be uniformly successful," Sealy said.

For both Beard and Barham, whose EKG patterns now show no traces of WPW, the operation has meant a return to normal life.

Barham, who manages a large farm in Louisiana and Mississippi, was never incapacitated by his condition. But he had to live on a precise round-the-clock schedule of medication. And when the medication failed to prevent an attack, his wife would often have to drive 40 miles to a hospital.

For Beard, who had played football for three years in junior high school, the heart defect meant giving up sports and many other activities throughout high school.

"I was not even supposed to get excited," he said. Even though he was on constant medication, the attacks continued sometimes once a week, sometimes once a month.

Now Beard, who entertained the ward during his month-long stay at Duke with his guitar playing and singing, will be fit to travel with his family on weekends again at they play and sing in towns throughout West Texas.

In January Beard will enter Angelo State University in San Angelo, Tex., to study accounting.

'Budget Provides Growth Basis

Hardly has the fiscal year begun than the University of North Carolina Board of Governors has approved a budget recommendation to go to the General Assembly next year.

The proposed budget will provide funds for the 1974-75 fiscal year. It is light on capital improvements because the major capital improvements were funded in 1973-74, the first year of what had been the biennium.

It is interesting to note, though that the budget provides for a continuation budget of $14,738,900 for East Carolina University. With estimated receipts of $6,022,038 the continuation budget would be $20,760,938. The budget is based on an estimated 9,048 full time equivalent students for the coming fiscal year compared with an estimated 9,031 this year and 9,211 in 1972-73.

In addition to the continuation budget which would continue present programs as they are, ECU could be expected to share in the funds requested equal to eight percent of the overall faculty payroll to provide merit pay increases during the year. There is also a request for $24,489,075 in change budget funds which would be used for improving programs at the various institutions.

Among the things stipulated in the change budget is $35,000 for improving the nursing program and $112,829 for expansion of clinical field education resources in the School of Allied Health and Social Professions and the Nursing School.

Not touched on in this budget proposal is the budget for improving or expanding the ECU Medical School. This is to come in a later recommendation from the UNC administration.

Although the capital improvements are small, there are some important items in for ECU. There is $82,000 for planning a $1,600,000 renovation and addition to the old Wahl-Coates School, now speech and drama. There is also $44,000 for planning a planetarium which will cost $880,000 for which grants and gifts already amount to $315,000.

If these two items make it through the budget making processes it could mean there is a strong chance that these projects will be funded in the 1975-76 budget.

There is nothing spectacular in the 1974-75 budget, but for East Carolina University it could provide a basis for building and improvement.

Forgotten By Rest Of World

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Women in prison in North Carolina are a forgotten minority.

Don't let the tree-shaded campus, the scattered dormitories with private rooms and unlocked doors, the bright curtains in the cafeteria windows fool you.

Psychologically, women's prison in Raleigh is perhaps the dulllest and most brutal form of punishment dished out anywhere in the state's prison system.

While social rehabilitation and job training and education have been the watchwords of prison reform in this state and across the nation, the cry for reform has been largely directed at men.

"We are so small in numbers, they just forget we are here," says Mrs. Juanita Baker, superintendent of the prison for women where all female convicts from across the state are imprisoned.

There are usually more than 400 prisoners on the campus—serving time for anything from passing a bad check or possessing marijuana right on up to murder. All women, from 16 years old on up to white-haired grandmothers, are housed at the one facility.

tested and studied and assigned to schools or job training, the women work their eight-hour days. School is available—one hour a day, four days a week. At night after the work is finished.

What is the incentive for the women to keep grinding on those machines?

"There isn't any. No reward, except the privilege of taking part in recreational activities at the end of the day," Mrs. Baker said.

The sewing machines whirled strongly on, and an observer had to wonder why so many of the women kept moving briskly, efficiently about the monotonous chore, day after day. "I'd probably by my own hardest case if I had to do this," Mrs. Baker admitted.

Sooner or later, the superintendent feels, some attention must be given to the absence of rehabilitation programs for women prisoners.

"We need some way to determine what these women really want to do with their lives. We need to find what their interests and abilities are and offer them something they can learn and profit from while here," Mrs. Baker said.

"We simply don't know what they really want to do with their lives. . . or anything to offer them to prepare for that if we did know."

So the women go on sewing or cutting uniforms, washing, drying and pressing sheets; hoping to "graduate" to a job in the cafeteria or somewhere else in the prison complex—but not to a training course in something they can do after getting out.

The problem is particularly keen among the 16 to 21 age group. There are between 40 and 60 in this group at various times. One dormitory is set aside for them, which houses most of the younger women. The rest must live in the ancient cell block buildings.

"The young girls are our worst problem," Mrs. Baker said. "They can see absolutely no benefit from working hard in prison, and there is a new attitude among younger people today."

"They are most defiant of authority—any authority. They say they have never been told what to do before—whether at home or at school—and they're not gonna start now," Mrs. Baker said.

"Somehow, we've got to gain the programs to reach these girls and help them prepare for their lives."

Richard Nixon Miscalculated

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—Contributing to the aura of crisis here is the widespread belief, both in Congress and within the Nixon administration itself, that President Nixon fired Archibald Cox as special prosecutor because he was getting too close to unpleasant truths.

That encourages bipartisan support in Congress, including backing from some Republican leaders, for legislation requiring a new independent prosecutor of the Watergate affair.

Simultaneously, Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry Petersen, now in charge of the case, is under intense pressure to follow investigative trails begun by Cox. To block the legislation or harness Petersen would subject Mr. Nixon to new charges of cover-up.

Thus, the President has miscalculated in his lightning thrusts last weekend. Well aware of congressional reluctance to impeach a President (which remains basically unchanged), he felt he could get rid of Cox and the White House tapes controversy in one move with impunity. But instead of putting Watergate behind him, the scandal is spotlighted more than ever.

Last weekend's stunning developments actually originated in Mr. Nixon's deep regret, encouraged by aides who share his hard-line political style, that he had agreed to Prof. Cox's selection under duress last spring. Those aides considered Cox a liberal Kennedy Democrat with a dagger at Mr. Nixon's throat. Even presidential counselor Melvin R. Laird, a voice of moderation at the White House, regarded Cox's appointment as incredibly bad politics.

This revulsion with Cox began boiling over about ten days ago when Mr. Nixon instructed Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson to offer a compromise on the surreptitious White House tape recordings that Cox could never accept. In the upper reaches of the Justice Department, this was immediately recognized as a ploy to conclude the tapes question while purging Cox and his whole operation. That it would also drive such independent voices as Richardson and Deputy Atty. Gen. William Ruckelshaus out of government was viewed as an added bonus by White House hard-liners.

High-ranking Justice Department officials believe that the special prosecutor's office, though run by Kennedy Democrats, was in no way embarked on a vendetta against the President. Rather, one high-ranking Justice Department official suspects the White House feared "Cox was doing too good a job." Indeed, some lawyers in Cox's office had hinted they were close to startling breakthroughs.

Cox's departure provides grim satisfaction in itself at the White House. "That arrogant s.o.b. Cox had this whole little Kennedy fiefdom, and now he doesn't have it anymore," one presidential aide told us.

But expectations that much more than Cox would be eliminated were dying before the weekend ended. Mr. Nixon clearly expected Cox's dismissal would be followed by resignations of his top staff. Instead, White House aides were stunned Sunday afternoon when Cox's press spokesman, James Doyle, announced the Cox operation was staying intact to bring Watergate's wrongdoers to justice.

That intensifies pressure on Petersen in resuming prosecution of Watergate. Inheriting Cox's army, he faces instant public protests if he changes direction. In fact, Justice Department colleagues feel Petersen may be even tougher than Cox in trying to redeem his reputation as a career civil servant, somewhat tarnished by the early Watergate investigation.

Moreover, the White House strategy of aligning Congress against Cox has failed. After Cox predictably turned down summaries of the tapes, the White House last Friday unilaterally offered the same deal to Sens. Sam Ervin and Howard Baker of the Watergate investigating committee without mentioning negotiations with the special prosecutor. Once the Senators accepted, the White House immediately, and incorrectly, described this as a congressional-presidential compromise with Archie Cox as the only dissenter.

This misshaping of reality has been widely rejected in Congress. There is bipartisan

THE SLOW TORTURE SPEEDS UP!

'Slanting' The Weather

By ART BUCHWALD
WASHINGTON — Our TV commentators have indicated that we can survive the oil shortage this winter if everyone will conserve on their heat by two or three degrees.

If this is not too much to ask, it is my personal opinion that television could play a major role in what could be the worst fuel crisis in our history.

We have all become such victims of the power of TV suggestion that, in my opinion, we easily could be brainwashed into believing that this was the mildest winter in our history.

It would require a certain amount of news slanting on the part of the networks and local stations, but it would be worth it if we can save the fuel.

Other Editors Say No Public Money

(Henderson Dispatch)
Presumably potential candidates, including some already in office, are discussing in Washington plans for the Federal government to finance political campaigns. This is an asinine method of spending additional taxpayer money, and if Congress should approve and put it into effect, the public should know the identity of those responsible and hold them accountable when they seek reelection.

Committees of the North Carolina Legislature are cooking up a scheme for control of elections in this State, though it is declared there is no thought of public financing. Constituents of the lawmakers will do well to keep an eye on this procedure and be prepared to block it should there be any likelihood of this type of spending.

Public financing would assure a free ride on the election ballot, either national, State or local, for any one and every one who might have the political bee in his bonnet. Limiting of the plan to major party candidates would be favoritism and unfair to those farther down the line. Suggestion has been heard that such a scheme would prove unworkable and possibly even unconstitutional.

Public financing of candidates smells of selfish interest on the part of those in office who wish to stay there.

It would be well if some method could be devised to limit campaign spending on the part of those seeking office. But no one thus far has come up with an effective proposal. At least in North Carolina, there is an existing law which requires reporting of campaign contributions. But it does not reach the area where friends of the candidate may spend as they will without an accounting.

The country will be better off to keep what it has than to undertake to shell out taxpayer money to those eager for power. It could spawn corruption in public office. Moreover, the individual who does not favor a particular candidate should not be compelled to help finance his bid for office.

I propose that the people in charge of giving us reports on television lie about the weather. If it's cold out, they must report it's mild; if it's going to snow, they must refrain from mentioning it. The words "blizzard," "ice storms" and "frost" must be banned from the air.

For the next six months, any temperatures below 40 degrees may not be reported for national security reasons.

The keys to this plan are the Today and CBS Morning News shows. All over America people wake up, turn on the television and listen to what Frank Blair and Hughes Rudd have to say about the weather.

They are, in effect, our national weathermen. Whatever they report affects every home in the United States. If their maps indicate freezing weather, the housewife automatically turns up her thermostat three degrees. If they say their area can expect sunny skies, the wives turn their thermostats down. It doesn't make any difference what is going on outside the house; everyone knows that

Bored Can Be Cured

NEW YORK (AP) — Sidewalk musings of a Pavement Plato:

So you are one among the half of the world's population who suffer from chronic boredom.

And you want to do something about it? Well, it isn't an easy problem to solve, but perhaps we can offer a few suggestions.

First, it is necessary to find out what is causing your boredom and, second, to consider means of getting rid of it.

Perhaps the culprit is your hobby. Oddly enough, the hobbies that people take up to add another interest to their lives often become a curse in time. I know of a fellow who took up stamp collecting for a hobby on the advice of his psychiatrist. Soon he hated stamps so much that he became bilious at the sight of a stamped envelope, and he had to retire from business.

Then he went to a chiropractor, who advised him to take up girl watching as a hobby, as it would provide good exercise for his arthritic neck. My friend did this and says he hasn't had a moment of boredom since.

The Roosevelt administration sought to give impetus to its price boosting program today by increasing the price it will pay for newly mined gold by 18 cents an ounce over yesterday, the figure being $31.54.

The property and assets of the Flurene Chemical Company, manufacturers and distributors of drug products bearing that name, will be sold at public auction Thursday, Nov. 2, it was announced today by W. A. Darden.

The notice of sale followed action of the Superior Court Judge this week, who signed an order placing the concern in the hands of a receiver. A temporary receiver was named by the jurist.

The sale will be conducted at the Flurene plant on Grand Ave. and all property and assets will be offered to the highest bidder.

The ladies of the Presbyterian Church will serve a chicken salad dinner for 35 cents and an oyster supper for 35 cents in the church at 6 p.m. tomorrow.

Strength For Today

PREACHING BY EXAMPLE
St. Francis of Assisi once asked one of his brothers in the faith to accompany him on a preaching tour. They went through the streets and crowded market place of the city and came back to their miserable hut.

"But I thought we were going to preach," said the brother, with considerable astonishment. "We were preaching," replied St. Francis. "When the children teased us, and we met them only with smiles; when people jostled us in the market place and we were not rough in return; when some spoke rudely to us, and we answered gently; when we helped an inform, old woman carry a heavy burden—all this time we were preaching. There is no good in going out to preach unless we preach as we go."

All of us preach as we go—as we move among our fellows, as we sell goods or render some type of service, as we go through the routine duties of the home. There is witnessing here which pleases or displeases God, depending upon the spirit in which we do it.

Some Giants Unable To 'Cope'

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — A growing number of the nation's industrial and financial giants are finding the demands and temptations of the 1970s too much to handle. Their weaknesses are producing red ink, failure and scandals.

The problems seem of late to be concentrated among some of the second tier financial institutions, but it isn't difficult to find examples in transportation, aerospace, food retailing and other industries.

The Penn Central railroad, the nation's largest, is involved in bankruptcy proceedings. Lockheed Aircraft avoided bankruptcy by obtaining a government guarantee for $250 million in loans, and other companies, suffering losses, have sought additional payments from government.

To a far less degree, many other companies have failed in some areas to adequately respond to the changing '70s despite sometimes desperate efforts to do so, and have been forced to absorb huge losses.

RCA Corp. in 1971 was forced to write off $250 million as "extraordinary charges related to withdrawal from the general purpose computer business," after declaring shortly before that it would be an industry leader.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. is fighting desperately with Safeway Stores to maintain its decades-old position as the nation's largest food retailer. In the red for many months, it lost more than $50 million in its most recent complete fiscal year.

Pan American World Air Ways has been in the red since 1969, and some other airlines, despite a facade of glamor and almost constant promotion of cut-rate trips, haven't established themselves as consistent money makers.

These problems may exist as notable exceptions to the trend, which finds corporations in general experiencing record-high profits. In the past year these profits have risen 34 per cent, compared with an 11 per cent rise in national output.

While some of the troubles result from industrywide problems, as in food retailing, securities and air transportation — most of them are confined to individual companies within the industries.

Nevertheless, some critics feel the instances are more than symbolic, and that if studied more closely might reveal a common weakness in management, and in some instances irresponsibility and even fraud.

This seems especially true in regard to some of the securities and financial institution failures. In the biggest among securities firms, the failure of Weis Securities, Inc., the New York Stock Exchange accused the company of filing false and misleading reports.

The Securities Investor Protection Corp., which is charged by government and industry with protecting investors from losses in such failures, recently had 87 liquidations on its books. Reasons for failure in 65 cases involved:

Poor books and records, recorded 44 times; misconduct 26 times; high operating costs — poor controls 21; mismanagement 28; lack of knowledge of securities business 18; adverse market conditions 10; speculation 29.

Not just a few but many, many critics of Wall Street maintain that the very factors cited by the Protection Corp. are more widespread than the public realizes.

The chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Ray D. Garrett Jr., told brokers in a speech this week: "We have been experiencing a truly frightening degree of fraud and callous disregard for fiduciary duty in our securities markets and in our corporate life."

Besides Wall Street, Garrett apparently referred to the Equity Funding scandal, in which scores of millions of dollars in assets were fraudulent — mere bookkeeping entries that made the company look highly successful up to this year.

And more recently, bank investors are still trying to determine what happened at the U.S. National Bank of San Diego, which collapsed last week in the biggest bank insolvency in American history. It had $940 million in deposits.

One thing that especially interests the investigators is close to $300 million in loans to interests involving its chief stockholder, C. Arnholt Smith.

Homecoming Firm Planning To Consolidate Staffs Set Sunday

Pactolus Baptist Church will observe Homecoming this Sunday with Dr. Ralph Scales, president of Wake Forest University, scheduled to speak at the 11 a.m. services.

DR. RALPH SCALES

Scales assumed duties as president of Wake Forest on July 1 of 1967, succeeding Dr. Harold Tribble. He is the 11th president to serve the university.

He was educated in his native Oklahoma, and at the University of Chicago and the University of London. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa by the University of Oklahoma chapter.

He is the former president of the Oklahoma Baptist University and former dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Oklahoma State University.

Following the 11 a.m. services, dinner will be served on the church grounds.

Firm Planning To Consolidate Staffs

Smart-Woodall-Isley & Herring Inc., architectural and planning firm, announced the consolidation of the Greenville and Raleigh staffs on Nov. 1 in Raleigh.

Charles Woodall said that the consolidated staff will have offices at 113 N. Boylan Avenue, Raleigh.

He explained that the staff action is part of the company's plan to eventually consolidate all of its personnel into a central office. Currently, the firm has offices in Greenville, Raleigh and Durham with an employee force that ranges from 20 to 22 persons.

At a later date, he pointed out, the staff consolidation, to include personnel in the Durham office, will be completed with central offices located in the Research Triangle area.

Woodall said that he will remain in Greenville through the late part of next summer and will be conducting the firm's business in the eastern sector of the state.

He added that a telephone answering service will be utilized in Greenville for local business following the staff consolidation. In addition, an office conference room for conducting area business will be maintained at the present 100 Reade Street location.

Mrs. Kay Taylor, librarian at East Branch, announces the first party will be at 10:30 a.m. for pre-school age children. The second party will take place at 4:00 p.m. and will be for pre-school age children and for elementary school children.

At both the Monday and Tuesday events, refreshments will be served and children will be given an opportunity to play games.

except during a few weekend blizzards when he wasn't able to leave the house.

Another common but unrecognized cause of boredom, particularly in America, is pseudo culture. We are bombarded to mental numbness by too many pompous after-dinner speakers, lecturers, and literary lions, confused by esoteric book critics, religious cultists, gurus, famous television personalities and professional athletic freaks.

Perhaps those feelings would go away if we spent more time sitting on park benches debating with the squirrels or pigeons or hanging around an old-fashioned pool hall listening to the snappy chatter of the dudes gathered there.

Marriage is blamed by some cowardly husbands for their boredom. I believe wives are the most interesting of all conversationalists. If a man is bored by a wife's conversation, I feel, he should get up and leave her and go home and listen to his own wife for a change. He might find her conversation far less boring. Anyway, he's always safer in his own home.

Finally, we come to the crux of the whole problem of boredom. This is that fact that most people are bored, not by other people or other things, but with themselves.

Yes, it is likely that you — bright, warm-hearted, intelligent, highly talented little old you — are the architect and chief source of your own boredom.

And if you are boring yourself, the chances are that you are boring most of those around you. Think that over.

Then do something. Anything that's a change. Have your face lifted, have your heart lifted, have your soul lifted. Change in bright ways. Be new to yourself, and you'll be new to others.

But, above all, get rid of self-pity. For it is the people who feel sorry for themselves who sit on the loneliest thrones in the kingdom of boredom.

Call For Open GOP Meeting

RALEIGH (AP)—State Republican Chairman Frank Rouse was urged Thursday to take steps to "insure a fair and open state convention."

The urging came in the form of a petition signed by 13 of the 25 members of the Republican State Central Committee.

Among the signers of the petition were National Committeeman J.E. Broyhill of Lenoir, state Vice-Chairman Mrs. Grace Rohrer of Winston-Salem, and seven of the 11 congressional district Republican chairmen.

The petition was part of the bitter battle being waged for the GOP state chairmanship. In that race Rouse is being opposed for reelection by Thomas Bennett of Morehead City who has the strong backing of Gov. Jim Holshouser. Bennett supporters have wondered whether they will get a fair break from Rouse in the party convention here Nov. 23 since it will be organized under Rouse's direction.

The petition stated that under the Republican plan of organization the central committee is "responsible for appointment of state convention committees."

The petition urged Rouse to announce publicly the chairmen and members of the convention rules and credentials committees "so that we can determine how to proceed in discharging our responsibilities."

It also called on Rouse to prove Central Committee members and county chairmen "copies of any rules, other than as provided in the state plan or organization, that you believe to govern any portion of the convention."

Rouse was also asked to announce the convention schedule with definite times set for committee meetings and it asked that the election of officers be set for the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 3.

State's NAACP Is In Session

RALEIGH (AP)—General sessions of the state convention of the NAACP will get under way today after the convention opened Thursday with a church emphasis day program.

At the session, Rev. Emmett C. Burns, field representative of the Mississippi State NAACP, told the group that the Nixon administration is one of the most oppressive of blacks in American history.

feeling in the Senate that the summary dismissal of Cox insulted a Senate which had forced creation of the special prosecutor's office. Consequently, the Senate must legislate a new special prosecutor to retain any self-respect.

Finally, Republican Congressmen returning from the long weekend gave glum reports to presidential aides checking constituent reaction. Many told the White House that voters who previously thought Congress was harassing the President now felt Mr. Nixon had unnecessarily provoked a new crisis—exactly opposite to what the President anticipated.

But these miscalculations have not chastened the White House. There is now a satisfaction there that Richard M. Nixon is playing the hard-nosed politics he knows and likes best even if it has magnified rather than diminished preoccupation with Watergate and further divided the country, Congress and even his own party against him.

television doesn't lie.

The local stations, which all have their own weather shows, must also join in the conspiracy. If the Billings, Mont., station would give a favorable forecast for a subzero day, they could save enough fuel to light all the neon signs in Las Vegas. If the Portland, Me., TV station would advise everyone in January to go to the beach, we would have enough fuel to bus 3,000 fans to the Super Bowl.

It is a known fact that weather is all in people's imaginations. If someone in authority tells them it isn't going to snow, they'll happily plow through drifts without giving it a second thought.

If the weather announcer promises a balmy weekend in February, perfect for golf and tennis, people won't even know they're playing on ice.

I know there may be some resistance by network and local news departments to lying about the weather. But it's being done in the Soviet Union and many of the Iron Curtain countries with great success. If it weren't for Soviet television telling the Russian people how nice it was outside in December, I doubt if any of them would live there for more than one winter.

Be brave, Ronnie! It will hurt a little, but it's worth it. No matter how old we are, life requires courage. And we show our greatest courage when we are terribly afraid but fight on through the fear.

Moral courage is sometimes much harder than the physical kind, but whenever we stand up for what our God-given conscience tells us is right, regardless of sneering opposition, we win a shining victory. . . and we keep our self-respect.

It is never too late to start living courageously. If you are facing a life situation that is draining your courage, why not pray about it in church tomorrow? The Christian Gospels assure us, without a shadow of a doubt, that strength will be given us whenever we need it and as much as we need. Remember that life is not a lonely battle. God is always with you.

New Memorial Baptist Church Dedication Services Set Sunday

NEW CHURCH. . .Dedication services will be held Sunday at the new Memorial Baptist Church. The new structure, of American Colonial design, is situated on a ten-acre tract at 1510 Greenville Boulevard, S.E. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

The Memorial Baptist Church of Greenville will hold services of dedication of its new facilities on Sunday.

Special events of the day include a dedication worship at 11 a.m., followed by a picnic on the grounds at 12:15. At 2:30 p.m., a cornerstone will be placed in the building in a ceremony highlighted by remarks by Dr. W. Perry Crouch, executive secretary of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina.

The Rev. C. Norman Bennett, Jr., minister of the church, will deliver the dedicatory sermon at the 11 a.m. service.

The new church is American Colonial in design and is situated on a ten-acre lot at 1510 Greenville Boulevard, S.E. It has a seating capacity of 516 persons in the sanctuary and facilities to accommodate 583 people in the educational building.

A Casavant pipe organ has been installed and has already received acclaim as one of the finest musical instruments of its kind in North Carolina. It is a two-manual and pedal organ of 22 stops and 31 ranks and is designed to lead in congregational singing, to accompany choral work and to play the organ literature of the church with equal versatility. The organ was designed and built by Casavant Feres Limitee of Saint Hyacinthe, Quebec, Canada.

Other features of the church include a fellowship hall, parlor, library, prayer room, choir room, brides room, and church offices in addition to classrooms.

A prominent feature of the new structure is its 92-foot tower that reflects a classical design using pilasters and pediments of the Tuscan order similar to those of the Corinthian columns on the main portico. The spire is covered with lock-joint lead coated copper to form a contrast with the painted woodwork and the copper cross at the top.

In February, Memorial's 400 pound bronze bell was removed from the old church on Greene Street and installed in the new tower. The bell was cast in 1880 by Henry McShane Co. of Baltimore, Md.

Memorial Baptist was organized in 1827 as Greenville Baptist Church. In 1830, the church was host to a group of Baptist leaders from across the state who met here and founded the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina.

In 1890, following seven years of construction, a new building was completed at Fourth and Greene Streets, replacing another structure at the same location. This building was constructed as a memorial to the state convention and the name of the church was changed to The Memorial Baptist Church.

The building on Greene Street was remodeled on several occasions during the years and was in constant use until Oct. 7, when the final services were held there.

A large three-panel stained glass window from the rear of the old building has been moved to the new church and now serves as a front-piece for the baptistry. During baptismal services, these panels can be folded back to reveal the baptismal area behind them. The window was originally placed in the old church to commemorate the founding of the state convention.

Three other pairs of stained glass windows have also been removed from the old building and will be a permanent part of the new church. The windows will be remounted in special display cases located in the church parlor, library and infant's department.

Bennett has issued an invitation to the public to visit the new church and participate in the services of dedication.

Libraries Will Close 3 Days

Two branch libraries in Greenville—Carver and East Branch—will be closed next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, November 1, 2, and 3.

The closing is because personnel of the city library system are planning to attend the annual meeting of the N. C. Library Association being held on those dates in Winston-Salem. Miss Elizabeth Copeland, librarian for the Greenville City Library system, is outgoing president of the association.

Steam Engine 722 Still Occasionally Has Outing

By CYRIL GUERRERA
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Planned obsolescence was unheard of in 1904, the year Southern Railway's steam engine 722 rolled out of the shop and Southern engineer-to-be Walter Dove was born.

Both Dove and the 69-year-old engine remain active today in semi-retirement. They get together now and then because, as Dove says, "Whenever a steam engine runs I have to be on it."

Southern, which was the first railroad to convert totally to diesel power in 1953, has taken a renewed interest in the nostalgic coal burning steam locomotives. The railroad operates four of them on excursion trips in its 13-state area.

They inspire a good public image, said W. Graham Clayton Jr., Southern president.

Wide-eyed children flock to train depots and vantage points all along the tracks. Their parents and grandparents often stand nearby, recalling honeymoons, vacations and other special trips taken decades ago when trains were integral aspects of passenger transportation.

Engine 722 teamed recently with engine 4501 to pull a 16-car train on a day-long trip from Meridian, Miss., to New Orleans as part of the National Railway Historical Society convention.

The passengers included two railroad presidents, the president of the society, a U.S. district judge and several hundred train enthusiasts.

Even Dog

Even Christopher the dog went along, riding in a private car with his master, Prime F. Osborn III, president of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

Up front on the cab of 4501 were Walter Dove, an engineer for 48 years, and W.J. Purdie Jr., the railroad's master mechanic for its steam engines.

"Steam engines are like old soldiers, they never die," Purdie said as the two green and silver locomotives chugged along at 40 miles.

"I'll bet on this engine we have the original frame and original cylinders. Certain other parts you replace, like the wheels and such. The fire box has to be replaced every five or six years.

"When these engines were running you didn't trade them each time you bought a new one. Now, of course, the diesel manufacturers sort of encourage Purdie leaned out of the fireman's window occasionally to check 4501's revolving wheels. The rope to a big silver bell in front of the smokestack hung from the cab roof above his shoulder.

Above Walter Dove on the engineer's side was the stick to blow that distinctive shrill whistle belonging to a steam locomotive.

Rides for Run

Dove now works on a streetcar at an amusement park in Chattanooga, Tenn., and rides the steam engine when he gets a break just because it's fun.

Between them a crewman kept shoveling coal on the fire, opening the steel doors of the firebox by depressing a foot pedal.

Old 4501 burned 13 tons of coal and boiled away some 24,000 gallons of water on the 200-mile trip.

Clayton and Osborn had their private cars on the train. So did Jim Herron and Chester Holley of Tampa, Fla., partners in an 85-foot, four-section L&N car they bought last year.

Holley, owner of a model railroad shop, and Herron, a 31-year-old chemical salesman, were elated that their car was being pulled by steam power—probably for the first time ever.

"I grew up in the era when steam engines were being phased out," Herron said, "but there's something that rekindles the memory of them."

Holley gave the best steam engines higher marks than even the most modern diesels.

"I don't know of any diesel in the United States that will outrun the steam engines we used to have," he said.

Old Hudson Hornet Passes 1973 Air Pollution Tests

By ROBERT LAMBERT
WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — When Richard McLean's 20-year-old Hudson Hornet passed 1973 air pollution standards, he figured Detroit's hot shot engineers could use a few lessons in engine design.

McLean, a 43-year-old electronics engineer and car buff, bought his 1954 Hudson Hornet with 100,000 miles on it for $20 and is putting it back into top condition.

He ran the car through an emission test sponsored by the Southern New England Telephone Co. though the engine had had little more than a tune-up, needed a valve job and had seen its share of neglect.

The Hornet, one of the last of its breed before production of Hudsons stopped in the mid 1950s, features a 308-cubic inch long stroke six-cylinder engine, the largest stock six ever built in the United States.

The Hornet was such a consistent winner of stock car events even years after it went out of production that NASCAR banned it from competition by outlawing orphan cars taken off the market for more than 15 years, he said.

"It was embarrassing to have Hudsons, which were no longer being built, winning races," he said.

The trouble with the modern V8 engine, he said, is it was designed for efficiency. When pollution controls are added, he said, the efficiency is lost.

When short stroke and high compression engines were introduced in the 1950s, major strides were made in getting the last bit of power out of an ounce of gasoline, he said.

But when you add to the so-called "garage"—the term used to deride Detroit's current emission control equipment—the advantage is lost, he said.

Though the long stroke engine is less efficient than its immediate successors, he said, it burns cleaner without the crippling emission controls which are bolted on the new cars.

"My argument is that with the reduced efficiency of the V8, you might as well go back to the long stroke design, which is obsolete, and get better gas mileage and less pollution," he said.

In its day, the Hudson was considered a big, comfortable, fast, economical car. It still gets 20 miles to the gallon, he said.

"You could drive all day at 90 in that car—if you could get away with it," he said.

"In the 30 to 80 mile-per-hour range, it will keep up with and pass most V8s even today."

Despite a modest 170 horsepower rating, the long stroke engine produces tremendous torque, accounting for its success on the stock car circuit, he said.

McLean, who handles sales and marketing for Andersen Laboratories of Bloomfield, said the V8s of the late 1950s had compression ratios of 10 or 11 to 1. The Hudson had a ratio of about 7 to 1, about the same as today's detuned, emission-controlled engines.

"There is no question about it, the controls they're putting on cars certainly reduce the efficiency built into the short stroke V8," he said.

The Hudson automobile pioneered many developments in design, he said, such as the unit body method of construction and the step-down entry which made for lower and more stable cars on the road.

McLean spotted the Hornet in Granby and bought it to replace a 1934 Terraplane, which he got in 1959 and kept through 1969.

The Hornet's previous owner didn't believe in oil changes, McLean said, and merely replaced the filter every 5,000 miles and added oil when necessary.

A member of the Hudson-Essex-Terraplane Club, McLean also owns a 1932 Hudson which he bought in England. The car was built for export and has right-hand drive for British roads.

After a friend of his, also a Hudson buff, ran his car through the telephone company emission test center and it passed, McLean took his Hornet over—somewhat skeptically because of the car's age and mechanical condition. It passed.

Tax Foe Argues Can't Prosecute

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A Fresno man who feels all income taxes are illegal contends the government can't prosecute him for failing to file returns because the money he made wasn't legal tender.

A U. S. District Court judge refused to dismiss charges this week that James W. Scott failed to file returns in 1969 and 1970 on income exceeding $23,000.

Scott, head of a self-styled Tax Rebellion Committee, argued he didn't earn anything on which taxes could be owed because federal reserve notes aren't backed by silver or gold and thus aren't legal tender.

Pampered Bull Shares Backyard

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — It was a case of love at first sight when cattle rancher Bill Solitro met Pete, a gangling Brahma bull.

Solitro was tending his 100-head herd in Lake City five months ago when Pete was born.

"He was so beautiful I just said, 'I gotta have him' and that was it."

Solitro took the bull to his Seminole County home to share a 10-acre backyard with honking geese Larry and Lucy, a dog and a cat.

Pete fits right in.

When Solitro relaxes at pool-side in his lawnchair, the pampered bull ambles along behind and curls up at his feet. "He goes right to sleep at the foot of my chair," Solitro said.

Price Controls Lifted On Fertilizer Industry

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move aimed at increasing food production the government Thursday lifted price controls from the fertilizer industry.

And, at the same time, the Agriculture Department reported that the cost of food declined markedly last month.

Despite the action freeing fertilizer prices, however, John T. Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council, said he opposes lifting controls from all industries because consumers need the protection.

If controls were lifted this year, as big labor and big business have demanded in recent weeks, Dunlop said there would be a "magnitude of price increases that would be unsatisfactory."

It was the first time a top administration spokesman had said he favored keeping the controls program beyond the end of the year. Congressional authority for wage-price controls expires next April unless the administration seeks a renewal. Consumers received some encouraging price news Thursday when the Agriculture Department announced that its market-basket index of food costs declined $24 in September, the biggest monthly drop in 17 years.

The cost of an entire year's food supply for a hypothetical household of 3.2 persons was $1,629 in September, down from the record high $1,653 in August.

Put another way, the hypothetical household had to pay 46 cents less per week in September to buy the same amount of farm-produced groceries it bought in August. The weekly September food bill came to $31.33.

The fertilizer industry became the first major industry to be released from the Phase 4 price control program since it was imposed in August. Wages for workers in the industry also were freed.

But in exchange for lifting of controls, Dunlop said he won commitments from major fertilizer companies to increase domestic supply by about 5 per cent during the next nine months by diverting fertilizer they had planned to export.

Lifting of the price controls means there will be a substantial increase in fertilizer costs, but Dunlop said in the long run it should hold down or even decrease food prices because of increased production if all works as planned.

In addition to lifting controls from fertilizer, the council also exempted nutrient materials which are used in production of both fertilizer and explosives; also, ammonia, nitrogen, urea, phosphate and potash used in the manufacture of plastics, synthetic fibers, animal feeds and other products.

Dunlop explained it was necessary to take the other actions because of the interrelationship among various industries using the same materials.

Farmville Mart Has $87.95 Day

FARMVILLE—Top grades of leaf brought from $1 to $1.22 per pound on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday.

Prices paid for most grades remained steady. Offerings consisted of mostly leaf and cutter grades.

The volume of nondescript grades showed a sharp increase as compared with previous sales days this season.

All firms had full sales yesterday.

The market sold 552,071 pounds of leaf for $485,540 for an average of $87.95 per hundred pounds. Yesterday's average was $9.53 higher than the average on the same sale day last year.

To date, the market has sold 18,982,347 for $17,097,291, for an average of $90.07 per hundred pounds.

Utility Bills Down But No Rate Change

The Utilities Commission has not reduced its electrical rates although October bills for many home customers are down some 20 to 30 per cent from September, according to business manager Curtis Howell.

Howell said that the reason for the drop involves two factors. The average temperature recently has been ten to 15 degrees cooler and the demand for electricity for air conditioning has decreased. Also, October bills cover an average of only 27 days and due to the Labor Day weekend meter reading was delayed three days or more. Those three days showed up as extra days on the September bills, making that billing period cover an average of three to five days more than normal.

He explained that the October readings began on Oct. 30, so the October bills averaged only 27 days.

Howell noted that in the event that meter readings are delayed due to rainy weather, weekends and holidays, those days lost are balanced off in the next month's bill. This will account for occasional billing period fluctuations, he said.

Customers having questions concerning their bills should call the utilities business office at 752-7166.

REMEMBER WHEN MOST THINGS

WERE "HOME DELIVERED"?

NOT TOO LONG ago many grocery stores, meat markets and drug stores offered Free Home Delivery. Not many still offer it today. Even the milkman and bread truck are less frequent in many communities today. The twice-a-day mailman now comes only once.

ONE OF THE FEW remaining home-delivery services is performed by your newspaper carrier. When you think about it, it is rare to have such personal daily service on such a low-priced item.

PERHAPS THE MOST discouraging part of a newspaper route is in collecting from the customers. Most people have the money ready for their newspaper carrier at the regular time. However, some readers require the carrier to make two, three or even more trips in order to get his money. We hate to see these young carriers discouraged. We also hate to see a good businessman give up his route because of the time and effort it takes to collect.

WON'T YOU HELP HIM, (and us) by having your money ready every time?

Vansant Seeks Ways To Snap Loss String

Greensboro, N.C. (AP) — "I wasn't quite as realistic as I should have been, I guess," noted Henry Vansant as he prepared to send his Guilford College football team into practice Thursday, still seeking a way out of the web of consecutive losses that has reached a record 32.

The first-year coach of the Quakers was referring to his optimism last July 10 when he first came to the campus of the Quaker school whose football team at that time was bogged down in a 25-game losing streak. This year's record is 0-7 with three games left.

He continued, "As a coach, you probably are too proud of yourself and what you can do as a coach. Coaches are inclined to think they are magicians. I know there are a couple of games we lost that I figured we were going to win."

He pointed out, "We're basically a freshman and sophomore club with only five juniors and seniors. Mistakes and breakdowns have hurt us. The kids have a difficult time dealing with adversity. They go along pretty well until something bad happens."

He added, "We don't lack aggressiveness. It's confidence we lack."

Injuries and dropouts have forced Vansant to start three quarterbacks. Steve Watson is lost with a broken collarbone, which wasn't discovered until after last week's game with Presbyterian, although he suffered it the week before against Mars Hill. In that game, the Quakers held the heavily favored Mars Hill team scoreless for three periods, then began making mistakes and lost 27-0.

Vansant had praise for the job of his offensive line and the play of his youngsters. He said they have demonstrated "as much spirit as teams I've had that have won nine games."

"Right now, we're about seven or eight good football players away from having a representative team. We have to have a good recruiting year, something I couldn't have when I took the job in March."

A 1961 graduate of East Carolina University, he was an assistant coach there for eight years, then left in 1970 to become head coach at Scotland High in Laurinburg, N.C. "I always wanted to be head coach somewhere so I took the job," he said. He led the team to the state playoffs for the first time in 23 years, then went to graduate school at the University of Alabama for two years before coming to Guilford.

The football record is even more painful to Guilford supporters when it stacks up against the school's basketball achievements. Last season's cagers won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship for the school with an enrollment of about 1,000.

Vansant concluded, "We have some quality kids, but it takes time and work. It's difficult to walk down the street and hold your head up these days, but we do it."

Cubs Take Victory

Rose High School's Rampant Cubs snapped a two-game losing streak yesterday, gaining a 10-6 victory over Northern Nash.

The game was a defensive struggle until third period, when Rose finally pushed in a touchdown and got on the board. Jay Chenier did the job, scoring from two yards out. Chenier then passed to Jeff Barber for the two-point conversion, giving Rose an 8-0 lead, all they would need.

In the fourth period, Rose picked up two more points on a safety. After holding the Knights deep in their own territory, Rose forced a punt. Joey Cherry broke through to block the kick, and it rolled out the back of the end zone for the two-pointer before anyone could recover it. That made it 10-0.

Northern Nash finally came up with a score late in the game. Kenny Moore scored on a 10-yard run, giving the Knights six points.

Rose is now 4-2 for the year, while Northern is 5-3.

Rose will face Wilson here next Thursday.

Northern Nash 0 0 0 6-6
Rose 0 0 8 2-10

Earlier this week, Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins voiced his hopes that East Carolina University would someday soon join the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Well, Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. in Chapel Hill's Kenan Stadium, they do—in a way, as they meet the University of North Carolina, the defending ACC champion.

The Bucs go into the game with a 6-1 record on the season, and six straight victories. North Carolina comes in with only a 2-4 mark, but are decided favorites to whip the Bucs.

"East Carolina has not played anyone of stature since losing to State," detractors say, pointing out that first game's 57-8 result.

However, teams of the same caliber that have fallen to East Carolina, have fallen to another Southern Conference team, Richmond, and propelled them into the number 20 spot on the Associated Press Poll.

For the Tar Heels, meeting East Carolina will be the second time this year they have played a Southern Conference team. In their opener this year, they faced William & Mary, and barely got away with a 34-27 victory over the fired-up Indians. East Carolina Coach Sonny Randle, however, doesn't believe that Carolina was truly ready to play then, just as he doesn't believe his Pirates were ready for N. C. State in their opener.

Starter for starter, Randle doesn't believe there is a great deal of difference in the Pirates and Tar Heels.

But right there, however, any similarity ends. And a fellow by the name of Bill Paschall is an excellent example of it.

Paschall started the year in the number three quarterback spot for the Tar Heels. But before the first game was over, injuries to Nick Vidnovic and Chris Kupec had propelled Paschall into the starting job, and he's held it ever since.

Paschall has since hit on 37 of 60 pass attempts, with five interceptions, for 471 yards and three touchdowns. He's also scored three touchdowns and a two-point PAT himself. He's run for 70 yards in addition.

Imagine, if you would, East Carolina's position if they had to go to the third string man at any position.

"We just don't have it," Randle said. "At Carolina, they have stiff competition for all 22 spots in their team. At East Carolina, we have competition at maybe three positions. Our first string is far ahead of our second, while their third is just as good as their fourth."

For this reason, Carolina can run a fresh man onto the field time after time, while the Bucs must go with the same personnel. This eventually will wear down that man who must go all the way.

This week, the Tar Heels will be missing another member of their starting backfield, halfback Billy Hits, who was their number two rusher so far, with 211 yards. But his replacement will be just as good, Randle warns, so the Pirates can take no heart from the injury.

Carolina's leading rusher going into the game is halfback Sammy Johnson, who in 94 carries has racked up 471 yards. James Betterton is the number three man with 168, followed by Dick Oliver with 108 yards.

While the Tar Heels have been a running ball club to a certain extent, they still like to put the ball into the air, about one of every three plays. And when they do Paschall has an array of receivers to throw to. Jimmy Jerome leads the receivers with 13 catches for 135 yards and two touchdowns. Ted Leverenz had 11 for 138, while Charles Waddell had 11 for 109. Earl Bethea had caught nine for 145 yards.

Jerome and Leverenz are also dangerous kickoff return men, Jerome averaging 21 yards a return, while Leverenz is averaging 18.2 yards a run.

Carolina's kicking game is also dangerous. Punter Dale Lycecker ranks among the nation's best with a 42.4 yard per kick average. And placekicker Ellis Alexander is the team's leading scorer with 21 points.

East Carolina's offense of course is led by quarterback Carl Summerell, who has passed for 745 yards and run for 171, a total of 916 yards. Kenny Strayhorn leads the rushing with 676 yards, while Carlester Crumpler has 471 and Don Schink has 315.

The statistics seem to point to the Pirates, but the schedule points to the Tar Heels. They've played some of the top teams in the country. "We're going to play the best 2-4 team in America" is how Randle puts it.

"They have 80 great athletes, we have about 18. You get what you pay for. They have had an outstanding grant program for years, and they've spent a lot of money," he added.

The pressure, however, will be definitely on the Tar Heels, Randle feels. "We have nothing to lose in the game—everyone expects us to lose it, so we can't be hurt by the scoreboard. We've been under pressure for five weeks now, but his week we can relax."

North Carolina, meanwhile, can't afford to relax. "They must feel they have to beat us," Randle said. "It's a must game for them. (UNC coach Bill) Dooley told them how good we were last year, and they kicked the hell out of us. This year, they might find it a little hard to believe when he tries to tell them again. The only thing some people are thinking of is how bad they are going to beat us."

To pull off the upset victory, the Pirates must cut out the mistakes that have plagued them for the past few weeks. Last time out, against The Citadel, they fumbled away the ball six times. Against North Carolina, that would be a disaster. "We have to be able to move the ball against them on the ground. We can't just bomb them. And we can't make silly mistakes like we have against some of the other teams we've played," Randle said.

He cited the fumbles against State that led to their first score. "We did a good job until then, and they took full advantage of every mistake we made. So will Carolina."

The Pirates are making the trip with one purpose—to win the game, but they have another underneath—to come back healthy. Last year, when Carolina rolled to a 42-19 win, both Summerell and Crumpler suffered injuries that would have kept them out of action for some time had it not been the final game of the year for the Bucs.

This year, however, the Bucs must come back home to battle to keep their Southern Conference title. They face their two most important rivals, William & Mary and Richmond in Ficklen Stadium in two straight games. And playing without key performers would quickly end any hopes the Pirates have.

Green Gets 14-6 Win

The Green team continued unbeaten yesterday in the 7th and 8th grade tackle football league sponsored by the Greenville Recreation Department. They downed the Gold, 14-6.

Green moved into the lead in the first period, scoring when Danny Carmon dashed 23 yards for the score, making it 6-0.

In the second period, Robert Robbins of the Gold was tackled in the end zone by Michael Shank for a safety, upping the lead to 8-0. Green then added another touchdown when Ronnie Chapman went in from three yards out.

It stayed 14-0 until the final period, when David Telfair scored for the Gold on a 33-yard run.

The Green leads the league with a 4-0 record, while the Blue is now 3-1 and the Gold 0-4. The Orange team, which forfeited last Tuesday, has been disbanded because of a lack of players, and its remaining players have been divided between the blue and Gold teams.

The Green meets the blue next Tuesday in the next league game.

Woody Stephens led Hialeah trainers last winter with 12 winners. He sent 39 thoroughbreds to the post at the Florida track.

Shakeup At Top Of The Standings

We have a new leader this week — or rather leaders.

Tom Baines suffered through an 8-4 week last time out, and that dropped him off the top spot, as both Sandra Spivey and John Trotman picked up 10-2 weeks and moved past Tom into the lead together.

George Holland also had a 8-4 week, while Jack Whichard and that last place guy had 9-3 weeks.

That ran the standings out to 62-20 for Spivey and Trotman, while Baines and Whichard are both 61-20. Holland is now 59-23, while we still bring up the rear (but closing fast) with a 58-24 record.

This week's poll offers a number of tough picks, and there probably will be some more shakeups by the time this has all come to an end.

First, however, we'll take our usual look at the high school action around the area. Just for the heck of it we checked our record among the high schools — 36-2, a nice 95 per cent.

Southern Nash visits Ayden-Grifton in a key Eastern Carolina Conference game. The Chargers can sew up a berth in the playoffs with a victory, while this is Southern's last chance to have a shot at defending their title.

The Firebirds might be fighting a little harder in this one, but it will take more than that. Ayden-Grifton to win it.

Greene Central is at Farmville Central in another top game. The Rams are coming off a loss to Ayden-Grifton, while Farmville Central is coming in another a big win. The two are tied for third place in the league standings, and still have an outside chance at a playoff slot. It should be a real nail-biter, but Greene Central is favored.

North Pitt goes to Conley in another ECC game. The Panthers won their first game last week and should be fired up for this one, but Conley has things going now behind the running of Willie Hawkins. The Vikings must be the choice here.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

Robersonville goes to South Edgecombe to meet another Eastern Plains Conference foe. The Golden Eagles are in their element in this league and have marched through like Sherman through Georgia. There seems little chance that they'll do any different tonight.

Williamston goes to Edenton to try and stop the steam-roller that Edenton has built up. The Tigers are now just about out of the Northeastern Conference race, but could have a lot to say about who does win. Still, we have to go with Edenton.

Rose High School goes to Northern Nash in its first game in two weeks, after an open date. The Rampants lost their first Division I game to Rocky Mount, and must win this one to have any chance at all for a playoff berth. Northern Nash's season has been so-so, but then so has been Rose's. It might be a toss-up, with mistakes making the difference.

Our poll sees it this way, Rose is a slim favorite, 4-2.

Then, we turn to the Eastern Carolina-North Carolina meeting in Chapel Hill. East Carolina, 6-1, on the season, comes in as the underdog Tar Heels, who have won only two outings this year, but have been up against some tough customers. The Bucs will have to play at their best in the game to win, but should be loose, since there is no pressure on them at all. Carolina, meanwhile, feels all the pressure, since they must beat little "ECTC," that down-east upstart.

Nearly unanimous here, we've got five votes for Carolina, and one for "ECTC."

Jenkins, McCovey Suffer Same Fate: Go To Last Place Teams

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ferguson Jenkins, who wasn't sure if he wanted to play anymore, and Willie McCovey, who was sure he wasn't playing enough, both suffered the same fate.

They were traded to last place clubs.

Jenkins, a 20-game winner for six straight seasons with the Chicago Cubs before falling to 14-16 this year, was dealt Thursday to the Texas Rangers, the last-place team in the American League West, for Bill Madlock and Vic Harris.

McCovey, who has blasted 413 career homers for the San Francisco Giants, but was critical of Manager Charlie Fox for benching him in 1973, was traded to the San Diego Padres, the last place club in the National League West, for pitcher Mike Caldwell.

In addition, the Padres will receive minor league outfielder Bernie Williams.

In other baseball developments, American League President Joe Cronin asked Detroit for details on the signing of Manager Ralph Houk from the New York Yankees and slugger Frank Howard was given his release by the Tigers.

Jenkins, 29, the National League's Cy Young Award winner in 1971, said in mid-season that he just didn't feel like playing baseball.

New Ranger manager, Billy Martin said of the trade:

"Jenkins gives us the stopper we needed desperately. He's a workhorse and he's a winner. Getting Jenkins is the first big step toward establishing our pitching staff and turning things around for the Rangers."

Jenkins, who lives in Canada, was not available for comment.

Cub Manager Whitey Lockman viewed the trade as part of Chicago's "youth and speed" movement. Of infielder-outfielder Madlock, 22, he said:

"Our scouts are extremely high on him as being one of the best hitting prospects they have seen in some time."

Harris, 23, played centerfield and second base for the Rangers.

On the other hand, McCovey was displeased because he wasn't playing enough baseball.

The 15-year veteran said last July that he shouldn't "have to prove anything to anybody and added: "If you don't think I can still do the job, ask the opposition and see what they say."

In a part-time role, the left-handed hitting McCovey managed 29 homers.

"I decided I would rather play in San Diego than anywhere else," the 35-year-old McCovey said by phone from his San Francisco home. "I know I can help the Padres. I just hope they don't leave San Diego."

McCovey, plagued by knee and foot injuries throughout much of his career, led the National League in homers in 1968 and 1969, and tied Hank Aaron for the homer title in 1963.

Caldwell, 24, was used mostly in relief last season and had a 5-14 record with a 3.74 earned run average.

Howard, 37, whose 382 career homers gave him the 17th spot on the all-time list, was given his release.

Cougars Whip Utah By 115-104

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — If Carolina Coach Larry Brown had his way, he'd have his American Basketball Association team play on the road most of the season.

"It looks like we're a good road team all over this year," Brown said Thursday night after his Cougars walloped the Utah Stars, 115-104 in the night's only ABA contest.

"We've yet to lose in five games away from home."

Brown hesitated, then added: "Yet, we've won only one out of two at home."

No games were scheduled in the National Basketball Association.

For the losing Stars—their third straight defeat—all wasn't lost. Zelmo Beaty, a holdout during the preseason and for several of the Stars' earlier ABA games, was welcomed back with rousing applause in making his home debut.

The veteran 6-foot-9 center sunk 15 points, picked off nine rebounds and blocked two Cougar shots.

Billy Cunningham led the balanced Carolina scoring attack, teaming with Mack Calvin and Ted McClain to spark the Cougar offense in the first half. Cunningham had 25 points to tie Willie Wise of the Stars for game-scoring honors.

Calvin hit 16 in the first half.

Utah came to life in the third period, as Wise, James Jones and Beaty found the range from the field. The Stars took the lead, 78-77, on a Jones jumper with a minute to go and led, 80-79, as the quarter ended.

The Stars' lead was short lived, however, as McClain hit two quick ones in the first minute of the final period and the Cougars were back in front.

Mauch Claims Manager Honor

By RON ROACH
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nine years later, at the ripe old age of 47, Gene Mauch has won another National League Manager-of-the-Year award.

"That's a long period of time," Mauch, manager of the Montreal Expos, said at his suburban Hacienda Heights home, and he added with a chuckle:

"It's just like my career as a player when I had a life-long slump as a hitter."

Mauch, who was the youngest manager in the big leagues when he took over at Philadelphia in 1960, was The Associated Press choice as outstanding National League manager in 1962 and 1964 while piloting the Phillies.

His third award was for guiding the Expos to a 79-83 record, only 3½ games behind the New York Mets in the wacky Eastern Division race.

Mauch, who has managed the Expos since they were born in expansion in 1969, had the team in contention until a seven-game losing streak in the stretch drive.

He received 121 votes in the poll of sports writers and broadcasters that was based on regular season play, 27 more than Yogi Berra of the Mets. Sparky Anderson of Cincinnati was third, with 77, and Walt Alston of Los Angeles fourth, 16.

"I don't think a guy should be blowing his own horn," said Mauch. "I feel good about it but I'll feel better when the Expos are the team of the year."

Before the season, Mauch said he was excited over the improvement of his club. The fourth-place finish was the best ever for the Expos.

"I thought we could win probably half of our games, I really did," he said, "but I had no idea it would make our team a challenger right up to the next-to-last day."

"It was just rough division play that made it possible. There were obvious holes in all the rest of the ball clubs, holes that didn't make 'em bad but kept any team from being outstanding enough to be overpowering."

"We know we have areas in which to improve," said Mauch, already thinking ahead. "With the exceptions of first base and shortstop, we were not outstanding defensively ..."

Jackson Named Series' MVP

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "There's money to be made in the game of baseball," said Oakland A's superstar Reggie Jackson, "but I want the big salary for the smaller titles that go with it—leader, professional, winner, man."

Jackson, Oakland's colorful, outspoken outfielder who Thursday received an automobile for being named most valuable player in the A's seven-game World Series victory over the New York Mets, does not need the six-figure contract he'll almost certainly receive from A's owner Charles O. Finley next year.

"Because of baseball, and the fortunate things that have happened to me in business, I could walk away from the game today and still be well off financially," said the 27-year-old Jackson.

His real estate ventures have lifted his financial status to millionaire heights. "But I love the game of baseball—there's nothing like it for me," he said.

Jackson said his World Series ring and MVP car mean more to him than his hefty income.

"This car, to me, is like a trophy—you can't buy it," Jackson said. "It's just like this ring. You've got to go out and win it, in front of 80 million people. You've got to prove you can handle the pressure involved. It's something special."

Jackson proved in 1973 that he was indeed something special. In his seventh year of major league ball, he batted a career-high .293 and topped the American League with 32 home runs and 117 runs batted in. He was the acknowledged leader of the Oakland A's, baseball's two-time world champions.

What are his goals for 1974?

"I could hit .300," he mused, "maybe hit a few more home runs or drive in a few more runs. I could have a better World Series ... what's wrong with another championship?"

Any number of Oakland players could have received MVP honors, Jackson said.

"Bert Campaneris had a great chance to win it, he played well throughout the entire series," Jackson noted. "Or Rolfe Fingers could have won it, or Darold Knowles, or Joe Rudi. This team has many outstanding players."

William & Mary Out To Get Into Race

By MARSHALL JONHSON
Associated Press Writer

While East Carolina's defending champion Pirates and Richmond's unbeaten Spiders go hunting national prestige, William and Mary's Indians will stay home Saturday afternoon and try to make the Southern Conference football race a three-way affair.

East Carolina, 4-0 in the league, seeks its seventh straight over-all victory since an opening game setback when it goes to North Carolina, one of two teams to beat the Pirates in 11 games last year.

The Spiders, 3-0 in the conference and ranked No. 20 in the nation after last week's 38-17 triumph over West Virginia, also will be gunning for their seventh in a row in a Saturday night game at Northeast Louisiana.

William and Mary, 5-2 overall, can climb into a tie with Richmond at 3-0 in the conference race with a victory in one of two afternoon league encounters. The Indians play host to Virginia Military's Keydets, 1-3 in the conference and 1-6 overall.

The other conference scrap has Appalachian State's Mountaineers, 1-1 in the league and 2-4 overall, at home against The Citadel's Bulldogs, 2-6.

Davidson's Wildcats, 1-6, are given little chance in a non-league afternoon game at Air Force Academy, but Furman's Paladins, 5-2, can assure Art Baker a winning season in his first year as coach with a victory at home Saturday night against East Tennessee.

Coach Jim Root of William and Mary, whose team is averaging 285.9 yards per game rushing, can throw four of the league's top 10 runners at VMI—Bill Deery, Doug Gerhart, Frankie Prochilo and John Gerdelman.

The Indians gave up a conference record 37 pass completions to David Harper last week before subduing Davidson 51-35, but Root doesn't look for VMI to throw that much even though Tom Schultze of the Keydets is No. 2 in the conference in passing.

"VMI has changed from a pass-pass-pass type team," says Root. "They changed their style beginning against us last year. I'm sure they'll try their inside rushing game against us."

Root also says VMI "has had a murderous schedule, but they beat the daylight out of The Citadel team we struggled to defeat." At the same time, Root defends his pass defense and apparently weak passing attack.

"We're not going to put the ball in the air just to prove we can pass; we're going to do what we think we can do best."

he says.

East Carolina has a balanced offense with the passing of Carl Summerell, second in the league in total offense, and the running of Kenny Strayhorn, the conference's top rusher, and Carlester Crumpler, 1972 player of the year who now ranks fifth in rushing.

"It's a prestige game for us, although we can't improve ourselves in the Southern Conference race by beating the Tar Heels," says East Carolina Coach Sonny Randle.

The former National Football League star says "I've been watching North Carolina very, very closely throughout the season. I can say without any reservation that they are the best 2-4 football team in America."

"Just look at who they have played—nationally ranked Missouri, Tulane, Maryland and North Carolina State."

It was State that handed the Pirates a 57-8 shellacking in their first game, and they haven't lost since.

Richmond goes at Northeast Louisiana behind the throwing of Harry Knight, the running of Bobby Allen and Barty Smith and an aggressive and opportunistic defense led by linebacker Pat Kelly, National Lineman of the Week of The Associated Press last weekend.

"We realize that Northeast doesn't have the reputation of West Virginia, but they are capable of playing good football," says Spider Coach Frank Jones. "After all, they did tie Mississippi State 21-21 at Starkville and that is some accomplishment."

Neither The Citadel nor Appalachian has any of the league's top individual performers to throw against each other, but both have had impressive come-from-behind victories in recent weeks.

The Citadel overcame a 20-0 deficit to whip Tennessee-Chattanooga 28-20 two weeks ago, and Appalachian came from behind a 21-7 deficit last week to nip Wofford 28-21.

"We finished with a superb team effort to win what I feel was a very important football game for us," says Coach Jim Brakefield of Appalachian, whose Greg Clark has set a National Collegiate Athletic Association College Division record with 56 straight conversions.

The Citadel Coach Bobby Ross looks at Appalachian as a team similar to his own.

"Initially, I believe that the Appalachian State team thought they would field a relatively experienced team. They have had their misfortunes, but they also have strong points."

Davidson's hopes rest entirely on Harper, who has hit 115 of 213 passes for 1,152 yards and who leads the league in total offense and passing. The Wildcats also have the top two receivers in Walt Walker with 41 catches and Gary Pomeroy with 31.

A pair of freshmen, quarterback David Whitehurst and running back Larry Robinson, have been major factors in Furman's surprising season.

Baker says East Tennessee defense is almost exactly like "is very similar to us. They ours, and their personnel ap- run the veer and use a lot of pears to be very similar to receivers just as we do. Their ours."

Randle Calls Heels Best 2-4 Grid Team

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sonny Randle, East Carolina coach, says, "I've been watching North Carolina very, very closely throughout the season, and they are the best 2-4 football team in America."

"Just look at whom they have played—Missouri, Tulane, Maryland and North Carolina State."

All these teams beat the Tar Heels—N.C. State only by two points—while North Carolina has won over William and Mary and Kentucky.

Randle says the Tar Heels, who will be home to his team on Saturday, "are big and strong and as awesome as ever."

Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina, said recently that he envisions a time when the school will move out of the Southern Conference, and into North Carolina's league, the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The teams began their series last year, and North Carolina, which had an 11-1 season then, won 42-19.

East Carolina is 6-1 this season. Its head scout, Tedd Schock, says, "We won't be able to get fancy. We'll have to stick close to what we can do best—run the ball, establish a ground game and then maybe go from there. Ronnie Robinson is the best defensive tackle we will face all year, and there are two linebackers who could play anywhere. The entire team is just so big, but still so quick."

It will be the only nonconference game Saturday for ACC teams. North Carolina State will be at Clemson in a battle for first place. Duke will meet Maryland in the Oyster Bowl in Norfolk, Va., and Wake Forest will be at Virginia.

Trio Tied For Sahara's Lead

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Old pro Dow Finsterwald, a wiry, 44-year-old relic from another golfing era, refusing to get excited.

"It was fun," he admitted after a six-under-par 65 Thursday left him with a share of the lead in the first round of the $135,000 Sahara-Invitational Golf Tournament.

"But it's nothing to rave about. It's really nothing to get excited about."

"I just had an exceptional putting round. I really didn't play that good. I had it all over the golf course. I put it in some really strange places out there," said Finsterwald, who plays only about a dozen tour events a year.

And his sudden success—he tied for 21st last week in the Kaiser International, his best finish in a six years—has no chance of luring him back on the tour on a full-time basis.

"You've got to keep it in the ball park a whole lot better than I did to think about that," said Finsterwald, the 1958 PGA National champion who scored the last of his 12 tour triumphs 10 years ago when co-leader Allen Miller was 15 years old.

Miller and Homero Blancas matched Finsterwald's 65 and were tied for the top spot in the chase for a $27,000 first prize.

The three leaders held a two-stroke advantage over Lou Graham and former national amateur champion Bruce Fleisher, tied at 68.

Defending Sahara title holder Lanny Wadkins was far back after an erratic 75. Arnold Palmer made an eagle three on one hole, but had to struggle to match par 71.

Jack Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf and Lee Trevino are not competing.

Finsterwald had only 26 putts in what he called "a fabulous putting round. The number of putts kind of indicates how well a guy is putting," he said, "but you've also got to consider the footage."

And he was high in that category. He dropped five of them from 15-20 feet for birdies, got three more birds after Iron shots left him putts of about four feet and once saved par from eight feet.

L. League Officers

New officers for the coming year were elected recently by the Greenville Little Leagues.

W. K. Gardiner was elected to serve as president of the North State Little League this year, while Phillip E. Carroll was elected to the same post in the Tar Heel Little League.

Other North State League officers include Leon Hardee, vice-president; Lyman Daughtrey, secretary-treasurer; Charles Wilson, safety officer, and Mrs. Donald C. McGlohon, women's auxiliary president.

Also named as Tar Heel officers were Mrs. Millie McGrath, vice-president; Seth Jones Jr., secretary-treasurer; Fred Lemmond, safety officer; and Mrs. Barry M. Shank, women's auxiliary president.

Dan H. Gordon was reappointed by the leagues as league supervisor and player agent.

It is said to be the largest religious building in the world—the Sho-Hondo, also known as the Palace of World Peace. A huge shrine, nestling on the slopes of Mt. Fuji, near the city of Fuji-nomiya, Japan, it was built to be the Grand Main Temple of two Buddhist sects, the Nichiren Shu-shu and Soka Gakkai.

It was completed and dedicated in October 1972, had been four years in the building, and cost $138 million. The chief architect, Kimio Yokoyama, had worked on the design for seven years, and by the time the temple was finished over one million people had participated in its construction in one way or another.

The Sho-Hondo, as a monument, is intended to represent the harmonious unity of humanity, nature and space. And it is not meant to be thought of as belonging to one particular race or nation but, as its name suggests, to be a place where people from all over the world can gather together to pray for peace.

Stress Birth Defect Treatment At Center

By BOB COOPER
Associated Press Writer
LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) —

The young boy could open his mouth only half an inch or so and his hands were doubled almost into fists. The girl was continuing to lose fat from her body.

They are but two of the thousands of patients who have visited the birth defects center at the University of Kentucky Medical Center in its 10 years of operation.

Birth defects occur in about three per cent of all births and perhaps there are minor defects in 7-10 per cent, Dr. C. Charlton Mabry, director of the center, said.

"I'll bet that 50 per cent of the babies that die in the first months of life have birth defects," Dr. Mabry said in an interview.

But not all such defects show up immediately. The girl who was losing her body fat appeared normal until she was 18 months old, then her troubles began.

From the waist down, at first, all fat began to disappear from her body and in the next three years the condition spread upwards. She had generalized lipodystrophy, a disease known for half a century.

Dr. Mabry explained that the ailment is caused by a part of the brain releasing an oversupply of a glandular fluid and said that, for years, there was no known way to stop it.

"One of my associates determined that we might use a drug that is used for schizophrenia and after getting the usual clearance for experimentation, we started giving it to this girl," he said.

While the girl has yet to begin regaining any of the fat she lost, apparently the drug stopped the loss.

"Maybe I'm being a little pessimistic. It took her four years to lose it and it might take a while for her to start gaining it back," Dr. Mabry said.

The progress has been even less with the boy with the mouth and hand problems, but doctors at the center have traced its source back through nine generations.

"We call it the short muscle syndrome," Dr. Mabry said, explaining that the same gene determines the condition of the muscles in the jaw and the forearm.

Before the affected boy, his father had the same defect as

Former POW Is Taking A Bride

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Lt. Cmdr. Everett Alvarez Jr., a prisoner of war in Vietnam longer than any other American, will be married here Saturday to a former airline passenger service representative.

Alvarez said he will marry Thomasine Ilyas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. S.T. Ilyas of near-by Munhall, in a formal military ceremony.

Some of his former POW buddies will make the arch of swords for the couple to walk under after the ceremony.

Alvarez spent 8½ years as a prisoner of war. He was shot down in the Gulf of Tonkin Aug. 5, 1964. He was freed last Feb. 16.

did at least one parent in each generation back to a mail order bride from Germany who came to South Carolina during the American Revolution.

"We want the boy to undergo surgery, but so far he has refused. He said his father got along with the defect and he will, too," Dr. Mabry said.

Most of the children who visit the birth defect center are sent there by their physicians or county health departments from throughout the state.

"Many of them do not prove to be major defects, but are things they can live with," Dr. Mabry said. "Many do prove to be serious and, frankly, many we can't do anything about."

Most of those who can be helped are transferred to other departments of the university hospital. Others are given counseling by staff members of the center.

"Our greatest hope is in genetic counseling, prenatal detection and family planning," Dr. Mabry said. "And by family planning I'm not talking about just limiting the number in the family."

Genetics, he explained, has become an exact enough science to predict the possibilities of having a child with defects.

All of us, he said, carry in our reproductive systems half a dozen or more possible defects that could be passed on to our children. "It all depends on who our mate will be," he said.

All Testifying For The Defense

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The witnesses are all for the defense. The subject is death — one here and thousands in Vietnam.

Judicial experts say there never has been a court hearing like it.

For the past two weeks, witnesses have testified in the defense of admitted bomber Karleton Armstrong and against U.S. conduct of the Indochina war. Armstrong, 27, has pleaded guilty to arson and second-degree murder in the 1970 bombing of the Army Mathematics Research Center.

The bombing, the last major act of violence in this once protest-prone community of 170,000, killed Robert Fassnacht, 33, a researcher. He was in the center when the predawn explosion rocked the campus.

Armstrong originally was charged with first-degree murder. But when he agreed to plead guilty to the lesser charge the court agreed to permit a "mitigation" hearing under which the defense could present witnesses and arguments that might shorten his sentence.

The sentencing is expected to come at the end of the hearing, or shortly thereafter.

Witnesses, including antiwar spokesmen Philip Berrigan, Pentagon papers defendants Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony J. Russo, and former U. S. Sen. Ernest Gruening of Alaska, have testified that Armstrong's act — while wrong — pales in comparison with the calculated deaths of thousands in the Vietnam war.

"One must understand the desperation of a Karleton Armstrong," Ellsberg testified via a tape-recording which was admitted in evidence.

"Irrelevant and immaterial," Assistant State Atty. Gen. Michael Zaleski contended, as he has repeatedly during defense attempts to compare the Armstrong act and the conduct of the war.

Armstrong has said that Fassnacht's death was an accidental and that he saw the explosion as a means of putting a crimp in the war effort.

The bomb was to have gone off five minutes after a telephoned warning to police about the impending explosion, Armstrong told an interviewer. Instead, the bomb went off in three minutes.

"When I heard that Fas-snacht was killed it was really a crushing moment," Armstrong recalled. "I think I was more shocked than anyone else."

The state is demanding the maximum 25-year sentence.

"If the state recommends 25 years and Karl gets it, then we lose," said one of the defense attorneys, Melvin Greenberg. "If Karl gets a low term, we win."

William Kunstler, who was a defense attorney for the Chicago 7 and is a cocounsel with Greenberg, said, "I'm very sorry about the death, but so be it. It was an accidental death compared to all the intentional deaths committed by the United States in Southeast Asia."

Armstrong and three others still sought in the case vanished after the explosion on the morning of Aug. 24, 1970.

Corruption In Laos Is Described By Observer

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military equipment was bartered in Laos to build a swimming pool for the ambassador and to refurbish his residence, a former embassy official charges.

"I was personally present when large quantities of excess property were traded to private contractors for services and improvements to the ambassador's residence," Howard F. Mushett, former security chief at the embassy, told a House subcommittee Thursday.

G. McMurtrie Godley, ambassador from 1970 to 1973, called the allegations "gross exaggerations."

"My personal strong conviction is that my associates

... made no personal gain and I certainly didn't," Godley said. Mushett also accused Godley's administrative counselor, Reed P. Robinson, with disposing of some of the equipment and pocketing the profits.

Mushett said staff meetings held by Robinson dealt mainly with how to divert military equipment to Laos and improvement of facilities for Godley.

The embassy requisitioned from Vietnam and Thailand nearly $8 million worth of surplus American military equipment ostensibly for the Lao Armed Services, Mushett said.

Much of the equipment was stolen or deteriorated in the weather after it reached Laos, he told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on foreign operations. As a result of bartering of other pieces of equipment, $70,000 worth of improvements were made to Godley's residence, Mushett said.

The $40,000 swimming pool and tennis courts for Godley also were financed in this manner, Mushett testified.

"I repeatedly reported these things personally to the ambassador, finally in writing," he said. "Then ... nothing was done ..."

Godley, who is scheduled to testify next Thursday, said the swimming pool was built for less than $15,000. He contended the improvements were needed on the residence.

Also scheduled to testify next week are investigators for the General Accounting Office and the Agency for International Development, who are looking into the requisitioning by the embassy.

"The travelling public is just unwilling to slow down," a spokesman said. "It is unwilling to accept the fact that speed wastes gasoline which is in short supply."

The Department of Transportation this summer asked motorists to conserve fuel by cutting 10 miles an hour off their usual speeds.

The August sampling covered 4,284 vehicles, whose average speed was 61.2 miles an hour. This was 2.9 miles an hour faster than a year earlier.

Many Women Head Household

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Of the nation's 53.3 million families, 6.2 million are headed by women, says the Women's Bureau, the U.S. Department of Labor.

The figures, for March, 1972, showed that about 53 per cent of these heads of families were holding outside jobs. More than three-fifths of them were the only earners in their families.

Soldiers Played While Waiting

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP)—Some soldiers played football in the dark and others crowded into pot snack shops Thursday night as paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division took a break from their quiet preparations to be airlifted to the Mideast if necessary.

Trucks loaded with supplies were gathered at loading ramps at nearby Pope Air Force Base. More than two dozen huge C130 and seven C141 transport planes stood ready.

But although a worldwide alert for United States military forces went into a second day today, the crisis appeared over. The United Nations Security Council voted to send a peacekeeping force to the Mideast, with the United States, the Soviet Union and other major powers excluded.

Guards armed with automatic rifles were stationed near the aircraft.

Duffle bags and field packs were stacked in neat lines in front of some of the multi-colored cinderblock barracks at Ft. Bragg.

Vehicles and weapons were parked in streets and on the grounds near company buildings in the 82nd Airborne's area.

A few dependents drove through the division area Thursday, watching the soldiers moving out of their barracks with duffle bags and equipment.

At the division's Signal Battalion, a young woman parked as close as possible to soldiers who were rolling wire before loading it on trucks.

Tears rolled down her face as she watched.

The 'Worry Clinic' Timely Thesis Topics Abound

Charles wants some practical "thesis topics" for gaining an advanced degree. Note the 15 which are outlined below. They'd also serve as superb themes for English compositions and Ph.D. topics for Liberal Arts colleges, too.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE Y-553: Charles T., aged 24, attends a Seminary.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "I am working on a Master's Degree.

"What thesis topics would you suggest as combining some of your stress on Applied Psychology with the functions of the church?"

"For I'm fed up with a lot of the sociology and Jane Fonda stuff often stressed by our professors."

Religious Fringe Benefits

Several interesting thesis topics can be derived from the field of religion.

They'd make excellent Master's or Ph.D. topics, too, for both Liberal Arts Colleges as well as Divinity Schools.

Under the general title of "Fringe Benefits of Religion," Charles might thus analyze the following:

(1) Do active church members have a lesser divorce rate and why?

(2) Do they enjoy a longer lifespan here in America?

Under this heading might fall the cancer death rate, plus the 1,000,000 fatalities annually due to heart attacks and strokes.

Do the church people thus show a lower incidence of cigarette smoking, which our A.M.A. cites as a major cause of cancer's 350,000 yearly deaths, plus the 1,000,000 fatalities from heart and vascular damage?

(3) Do active church folks suffer from as much tension and insomnia, both of which lead to more medical bills via psychiatric consultations, plus tranquilizers?

(4) Do such church members, whether teen-agers or older married couples have as many abortions?

(5) What is the relative crime rate of active church members vs. the non-members?

But be sure to qualify that phrase "active church members."

For many Americans are what is called C-E Christians, meaning, they never show up at a church except maybe at Christmas and Easter!

(6) How about the relative addiction to drugs, alcohol, etc.?

(7) Is the zooming venereal disease epidemic as great among those active church members?

(8) Do employers have a preference for the active church members?

(9) Do active church folks show as much absenteeism from the job, especially on Monday, due to being "lick" from the hangovers of Sunday liquor parties?

(10) Are church reared kiddies better readers? And do more of them continue through high school and go on to college?

(11) Which group is relied upon to offer major support to the United Fund Drives and finance the YMCA, YHA, CYO, Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Red Cross et al?

Remember, after church folks pay their coerced taxes to finance a lot of welfare boondoggling; then they also finance their local church, but are also commandeered to undergird the United Fund and other local philanthropies!

(12) Which group furnishes the chief patronage to the taverns and has far more cirrhosis of the liver (from the long use of alcohol)?

(13) Which causes the most auto accidents?

(14) Which group is more provident for their families, as by carrying adequate life insurance?

(15) Which group has also founded most of America's colleges, hospitals and has sent unselfish workers to foreign nations to teach them better medicine, agriculture, education and morality?

Remember, too, that active church members are a minority in America, numbering only about 40 percent of our people, through 65 percent claim nominal church membership! (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Declarer failed to realize that his 9-8 of hearts offered him the chance of two finesses instead of one. Instead of putting all his eggs in the one basket—finding the queen of hearts with West—South would have done better to play West for either the queen or the ten!

At trick two, declarer should have led the nine of hearts and, if West played low, he should have run it. As the cards lie, this would have brought the queen from East, and the jack of hearts would have become the game fulfilling trick. But even if East wins the ten, declarer has lost nothing. He can win the spade return and now finesse the jack of hearts, hoping West has the queen.

Nines and eights might not be given any value in the point count, but they can be tremendously important in the play of the cards. On this deal, South's heart holding should have been the key to winning the contract.

Sees Threat To Leaf Auctions

MOULTREE, Ga. (AP)—The president of the Georgia-Florida Warehouse Association says the federal government's flue-cured tobacco market regulations are a threat to the current auction system.

Frank Pidcock said dramatic changes in the regulations currently only involve type 13 tobacco grown mostly in the Carolinas but the move is a precedent that could occur in the grade 14 belt of Georgia and Florida.

The government, in effect, has opened its own markets in North and South Carolina, thus allowing a farmer to place his tobacco in the government loan program without going through a regular market.

Previously, growers first had to offer their leaf on the open market. If the market price quoted there was lower than the federal price support the grower could elect to put his crops in the government loan program and receive the federal price support for his price.

The new regulations allow a grower to go directly into the government loan program.

Generally, the average auction price exceeds the support price by as much as 5 or 10 cents.

Pidcock said the danger in Georgia could come when a bumper crop occurs at a time when buyers don't need large amounts of tobacco. He said that rather than paying a warehouse charges before accepting the government price support, the farmers would probably go directly to the government receiving point.

For the average citizen who sees spots before his eyes, a visit to his optometrist would be advisable. For the average bridge player, however, the spots tell a tale of their own and should be kept constantly before him. South would have done well to follow this principle in today's hand.

After opening one club and receiving a one heart response, South had two methods of treating his hand. One was to reverse into two diamonds, showing a good hand with at least four diamonds and five clubs. The other was to treat his hand as balanced and rebid two no trump. Since a nine-trick contract might prove easier than a minor suit game, South opted for the latter method, and North raised to game.

After the spade attack, declarer could count eight tricks. He rejected any thought of looking for his ninth trick in the club suit—even if a finesse for the jack of clubs was successful, the defenders would have the spade suit established before declarer could win a club trick, and they rated to make three spades and the ace-king of clubs. Hearts seemed to offer better prospects, so after winning the king of spades declarer led a heart to the jack. East won the queen and returned the queen of spades, and declarer could make no more than eight tricks.

Nines and eights might not be given any value in the point count, but they can be tremendously important in the play of the cards. On this deal, South's heart holding should have been the key to winning the contract.

Hunt Launches Firings Inquiry

RALEIGH (AP)—Saying he felt people were being fired "to make jobs for Republicans," Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt has named a Senate committee to study firings by the Holshouser administration.

Hunt's action Thursday followed by one day a statement by Transportation Secretary Bruce Lantz that about 100 of the state's highway division employees had been fired and an unspecified number of others demoted or transferred.

In naming the committee, Hunt said he did not want "to pre-judge" the situation, "but many citizens are wandering if these, and similar actions in other departments, are really being done in the interest of efficiency, or simply for political reasons."

Hunt's action was followed shortly by a statement from Gov. Jim Holshouser indicating he believed the committee would find the firings in the highway division justified.

"It doesn't take a genius to know how much improper political activity has gone on in the Highway Division in the past and we are simply trying to put an end to that," he said.

Holshouser said he feels the "people of the state want politics taken out of their road program."

Hunt named Sen. Bobby L. Barker, D-Wake, to head the committee. Other members are Sens. Wesley D. Webster, D-Rockingham, vice chairman; Dallas L. Alford, D-Nash; Willard J. Blanchard, R-Sampson; Malcolm W. Butner, R-Rowan; Lamar Gudger, D-Buncombe; and Lynwood Smith, D-Guilford.

Hunt said he wanted the committee to "look closely at the activities of the so-called 'personnel' officials that the administration has placed in the 14 highway divisions and the Republican patronage men who are serving on the state payroll for each of the 11 congressional districts.

The committee also will look into the current personnel policies of state government to determine if additional legislation is needed in that area," Hunt said. Hunt said, "I believe strongly in efficiency and we should not have one single employee on the state payroll...who is not doing his or her job effectively. But hard-working state employees who are doing a good job should not be fired simply to make a job for Republicans."

The governor said he agreed with Hunt "that hard-working state employees who are doing a good job should not be fired."

"As to an investigation of the Transportation Department personnel policy, I think the lieutenant governor will find that for the first time, there is a cohesive team working as part of an organized system, rather than on the catch-as-catch-can basis we had in the past."

Auxiliary Will Give Boating Safety Lesson

The Greenville Flotilla of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary will give a special lesson on boating safety Monday at 7 p.m. in Room 103 of the ECU Biology Building.

The lesson, entitled "The Skipper's Outboard Special" will last two and a half to three hours. The program is designed for small boat operators who are not able to enroll in the Auxiliary's more comprehensive course on boating safety and seamanship to be taught around the first of 1974.

The U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary is a volunteer, non-military organization which cooperates with the U.S. Coast Guard in promoting boating safety. The entire family is welcome to all public education classes conducted by the Auxiliary, according to Graham J. Davis of the Auxiliary.

WORSE THAN FIERCE DOG

PORTALES, N.M. (AP) — Mailman Aubrey (Slick) Imoe of Portales was attacked by a snake as he made his rounds in the University Heights area.

The letter carrier said he spotted a snake in the grass. Imoe grabbed a rake and pinned down the snake until it was killed by the householder in whose lawn the snake was found.

GRAND CHAMPION STEER — ARA Food Services, which serves East Carolina University, purchased the Grand Champion Steer at the North Carolina State Fair for a total of $2,902.32 on the hoof, averaging $2.61 per pound. Pictured with the Black Angus steer are ARA representatives along with Princess Soya, Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham, T. Jerry Williams of the North Carolina Restaurant Association. The steer is shown by Bill Hayes of Wilson. John Hitzel of ARA Food Services said the steer was purchased as a gesture of supporting the high school 4-H program and cattle industry.

Africans Act To Erase British Colonial Names

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

NAIROBI (UPI) — The name game is still a popular pastime among African leaders.

Sixteen years after Ghana became the first African nation to win independence from Britain, the continent is still studded with such imperial names as Lake Victoria.

Such place names—reminders of an era most leaders would like to forget—gradually are being erased.

Presidents Idi Amin of Uganda and Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire recently renamed two of Africa's largest lakes. Lake Edward, named by British explorers after Queen Victoria's son, became Lake Idi Amin Dada and Lake Albert, named after Victoria's consort, Prince Albert, became Lake Mobutu Sese Seko.

The move was, Mobutu said, "yet another step in the decolonization of the minds of the people and the restoration of dignity to our countries. The people of Zaire believe it is legitimate to rename national historic places with indigenous names."

Most Africans would not argue with those sentiments, but the new names have raised some eyebrows.

"It's quite possible some future leader of Uganda will take exception with General Amin and decide to change the name of his lake," said Walter Absaloms, Kenya's superintendent of mapping. "We could have this happening every few years. It is not an ideal situation."

Active Name-Changer

President Amin has been perhaps the most active African leader in trying to wipe out remaining colonial names. A Kampala spokesman described his activities as "only a beginning of the end of imperialist names which apart from being of no meaning to the people of Uganda were also long and difficult to remember."

Outdoor Home For Gunmen

RATON, N.M. (AP) — National Rifle Assn. directors recently approved a north-eastern New Mexico site for a proposed multimillion dollar "outdoor home for the American shooter."

The 30,000 acres of land is near the ghost town of Van Houten, which is near Raton.

NRA Executive Vice President Maxwell E. Rich said the organization plans to spend $15 million to $20 million by 1983 in developing the center.

The site is to include a complex of shooting ranges, recreational facilities, hotel-motel and a center for wildlife and conservation research.

Rich said the national center eventually would be able to accommodate 2,500 overnight guests, including those in campers and trailers.

Male Bastions Are Tumbling

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (UPI) — Another male tradition has fallen. A woman is president of the army's Command and General Staff College class.

She is Lt. Col. Connie Slewitzke, an Army nurse. Though one of only five women in the class, she is head of a body of 1,000 students.

"So far, the men have been very friendly, although they seemed a little surprised at first," said Col. Slewitzke, a native of Mosinee, Wis.

The world's first atomic bomb test was conducted in New Mexico on July 16, 1945. The atomic weapon was detonated at "Trinity Site," in an isolated area of south central New Mexico.
