Israel Agrees To Sign Truce With Egypt Today

By United Press International

Israel agreed Saturday to sign a truce greement with Egypt Sunday, formally marking the end of the 1973 Middle East war. It will be the first agreement between the two enemies since the armistice that ended the Israeli war of independence a quarter century ago.

American diplomts said the signing would be followed, probably in a few weeks, by a Middle East peace conference, where Israel, Egypt and probably Syria would sit down for the first time to settle their differences peacefully instead of by war as they have done four times since 1948.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Weldheim said the signing ceremony, held under the auspices of the U.N. Emergency Force (UNEF) overseeing the cease-fire, was scheduled for 3 p.m. (8 a.m. EST) Sunday at the 101-marker on the road from Cairo to Suez, where Israeli and Egyptian officers have sat together before to work out details of the current U.N. cease-fire.

Despite the agreement, the Israeli military command accused the Egyptians of five truce violations during the day, none of them considered major. The command also said the Syrians in the north committed two, one involving an artillery barrage that was answered with small arms fire.

The agreement, drafted by U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during a week of intense personal diplomacy in five Arab capitals, provides for the exchange of all prisoners of war as soon as United Nations peace observers replace Israelis at supply checkpoints on the road to Suez City and to the encircled Egyptian 3rd Army on the east bank of the Suez.

It also provides that the two sides will scrupulously observe the Middle East cease-fire and Israel agreed to let supplies through to Suez City and the Egyptian 3rd Army.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir announced that Israel would sign the agreement just before she left for London to attend a Socialist convention. The signing was delayed by 24 hours until Israel received clarifications from the United States on several issues in the six-point document.

Israeli government sources said the two points were:

—The omission of any mention of the Egyptian naval blockade at the southern end of the Red Sea.

—A reference to negotiations to return to the Oct. 22 cease-fire lines which Israel says are impossible to determine.

Standing in the glare of television lights beneath the wing of her jet, the gray-haired 75-year-old grandmother made the historic announcement:

"The government has authorized Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, who has already met several times with the Egyptians; at a meeting tomorrow, he is authorized to sign the cease-fire agreement.

The architect of the plan, Kissinger, was hailed in Peking Saturday as a "Middle East cyclone" for his success in bringing the two sides together where generation of statesmen have failed.

Apparently anticipating the next step in negotiations, Arab diplomats and politicians were on the move throughout the Arab world Saturday, consulting each other

Letters, Telegrams Favor Impeachment of Nixon

By HOWARD FIELDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Letters are pouring into the offices of the House Judiciary Committee at the rate of 5,000 to 6,000 a day and running better than 35 to 1 in favor of the impeachment of President Nixon.

By Friday, the committee staff had tabulated all the letters, telegrams and petitions received through Nov. 5. The tally showed 76,834 persons favoring impeachment and 2,168 against impeachment and backing Nixon.

An aide to the committee, which has been investigating possible grounds for impeachment, said he was impressed that most of the communications appeared spontaneous and unsolicited, unlike the orchestrated letter campaigns which deluged the committee in the past on the busing issue and civil rights.

Most of the appeals were simple and direct like one from a Chicago woman who wrote: "Put impeachment as your first order of business."

Some persons sent newspaper clippings, full-page ads calling for impeachment and impeachment coupons clipped from underground newspapers. But very few of the letters read as if they were copied from a form suggested by some groups which have been organized to advocate or fight impeachment.

One aide who has been opening the letters said that less than one in 20 could be interpreted as part of an orchestrated campaign. He said the daily flow of letters into the office has remained fairly constant, ranging from a low of 5,000 to as many as 17,000, according to latest developments in the Watergate case.

Another committee aide who made the letters and telegrams available to UPI did so with the understanding names would not be used in order to protect writers from reprisals. All letters quoted, however, were signed.

"Our family is in favor of impeaching Mr. Nixon," said a couple from Anaheim, Calif., writing in longhand on lined notebook paper. "He must not be allowed to continue in office. No one person is above the law, no one person can set himself up as supreme ruler."

A woman from upper New York State said bluntly: "Richard Nixon must resign or be impeached. The disclosure of the missing tapes, following so closely upon the dismissal of special prosecutor Archibald Cox, is the last straw. There is nothing Mr. Nixon or his staff can say that will dispel the aura of untruths that have been forthcoming from the White House during his administration."

Those opposing impeachment were equally emphatic.

From Riverside, Ill., a man wrote: "I am against impeachment or resignation or anything curtailing his normal functions as President. I am fed up with Watergates and other hysterias worked up by the news media."

Most of the letters were addressed to Peter W. Rodino Jr. D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee

Indications Are Nixon May Make Tapes Public

By GENE CARLSON

CAMP DAVID, MD. (UPI) — While President Nixon relaxed for the weekend at this mountain retreat, there were signals Saturday that he may be preparing to make public the content of the controversial White House tapes and other memoranda.

Shortly before leaving Washington Friday with his family, Nixon conferred with Republican congressional leaders for two hours on the Watergate situation.

"We were assured the President is prepared to meet all charges that have been made and prepared to refute them," Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott told newsmen.

The next major development was expected Monday when Judge John J. Sirica resumes hearings on the White House claim that two key conversations Nixon held with former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III were never recorded.

They were among nine purported taped conversations which Nixon agreed to turn over to Sirica for possible submission to the Watergate grand jury.

The White House has suggested Nixon is willing to turn over to Sirica personal memoranda he dictated after a meeting with Dean on April 15 —one of the two purported intaped conversations. It was not known whether the President dictated such a memoranda after the other conversation, a telephone call with Mitchell on June 20, 1972.

The first step in the White House strategy to try to rebuild the President's shaken prestige apparently will be to provide Sirica with whatever Watergate material is available.

There was strong speculation that once that is done and the grand jury has studied the tapes and other evidence, Nixon may move to make much of the material public. He has insisted throughout that he had no prior knowledge of the bugging break-in of Democratic headquarters on June 17, 1972, nor any awareness of cover-up attempts that followed.

Scott said after the leadership meeting with Nixon that the President "came very close" to stating that if Sirica permits, the tapes will be made public.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said Saturday he thought it would be "a good idea" for Nixon to make public portions of the Watergate tapes.

Democratic Commission Work on Party Draft

By GEORGE STEIN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Democratic party Charter Commission began a three-day session Saturday with hopes of forging a rough draft of the party's first national charter by Monday afternoon.

The commission established six major areas of study, including guidelines for delegate selection, but steered clear of recommending specific procedures for the controversial delegate process.

"We are certainly not going to write eternal rules for delegate selection," said Lesley Israel of Bethesda, Md., moderator of the nondiscrimination and delegate selection policy panel.

But she said the charter document would include broad anti-discrimination language for all levels of the Democratic party.

The 160-member commission was created by the 1972 national convention and instructed to write a charter proposal that could be considered by a special national party conference in mid-1974. About 120 commission members were scheduled to participate in the Atlanta meeting.

N.C. Young Demos Seek Impeachment

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A resolution accusing President Nixon and his aides of conducting a "deliberate assault on civil liberties by authorizing massive invasions of the First Amendment rights of citizens of the United States," was adopted Saturday by North Carolina Young Democrats.

The resolution, passed by a resounding voice vote at the Young Democrats' annual statewide convention, called on Congress to impeach the President.

The resolution also accused Nixon of spying on citizens, using governmental powers to harass political enemies and interfering with a free press through the use of wiretaps and threats of criminal prosecution.

New officers elected were Tom Eamon of Greenville, president; Barbara Wall of Burke County, first vice chairman; M.C. Teague of Morganton, secretary; Sid Little of Elon College, treasurer; and Aubrey Keen of Charlotte, national committeeman.

U.S. Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, who spoke at a banquet Saturday night, told an afternoon news conference he thinks impeachment of Nixon is necessary because impeachment is the only constitutional safeguard against abuse of presidential powers.

"To say the country can't stand impeachment is like saying the constitution cannot work in the 20th Century," he said.

Greeks Restrict Fuel Usage

ATHENS (AP) — The Greek government has announced restrictive measures on fuel and electricity consumption, including a partial ban on Sunday road traffic, in order to cope with the international fuel crisis.

The Energy Ministry decree Friday ruled that private cars, divided into odd and even number plates, would circulate on alternate Sundays. It said this restriction is to be imposed between Nov. 18 and Dec. 31.

Pope Opens Holy Year

By PETER J. SHAW

ROME (UPI) — Pope Paul VI opened the Roman Catholic Holy Year within the Diocese of Rome, a year ahead of the rest of the world, Saturday night and prayed for its success in promoting spiritual renewal and reconciliation.

The pontiff celebrated mass in the Basilica of St. John in Lateran, the parish church of popes, who also are the Bishops of Rome in Holy Year opening ceremony. The world-wide Holy Year begins on Christmas Eve 1974 and continues until Christmas, 1975.

"Omnipotent God, in this Holy Year which we have opened, allow us to walk your path without tiredness, to pursue with fervor your laws," the Pope prayed before the gold-canopied papal altar.

"Let us always be fond of your precepts so that we can fulfill the desire for conversion and reconciliation with which you today inspire us."

Solemn and unsmiling, the Pope walked into the basilica to loud applause. Nuns climbed on their chairs to get a better look, but the cries of "Viva il Papa" (Long live the Pope) that punctuate Vatican general audiences were not uttered until the pontiff was leaving.

Holy Years, traditionally held every 25 years, are a time of pilgrimage for Roman Catholics to the Eternal City—Rome. Although millions of jet-age pilgrims are expected to come to Rome, the Pope has for the first time designated churches in individual countries as places of pilgrimage during Holy Year.

Livestock Yard License Suspended

The owners and operators of Greenville Stock Yards, Inc., a buying station at Greenville, N.C., have been temporarily suspended as a registered livestock dealer for violating weighing and recordkeeping requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) said today.

The operators of the stock yard are J.A. Speight, Mabel Sumrell, Alex J. Speight, J.N. Williams Jr., and Marylie W Montgomery. The complaint against John W. Williams, now deceased, has been dismissed without prejudice, the USDA said.

In a decision which, unless appealed, becomes final, Administrative Law Judge William J. Weber suspended the respondents' registration for a 30-day period, starting Dec. 13, 1973. They may not operate their livestock business during that period.

The respondents were also ordered to cease and desist from:

—Weighing livestock at other than true and correct weights;

—Issuing scale tickets and accounts of purchase on the basis of false and incorrect weights;

—Paying livestock sellers on the basis of weights other than true and correct weights;

—Failing to operate livestock scales in accordance with regulations; and —Issusing scale tickets and accounts of purchase which fail to contain all required information.

The cease and desist order—like a permanent injunction—was issued to insure future compliance with the Packers and Stockyards Act.

Livestock dealers and market agencies are prohibited—under the Packers and Stockyards Act—from engaging in any unfair or deceptive practices in the marketing of livestock.

The P&S Act is a fair trade practices law. It promotes and maintains fair and open competition in the marketing of livestock, poultry, and meat. The Act is administered on a nondiscriminatory basis.

Hearings On Auto Price Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cost of Living Council will hold public hearings Nov. 20 and 21 on requests by America's four major auto makers for auto price increases ranging from $63 to $208 per car.

The council said Friday the hearings will be held in Washington on increases sought by General Motors, Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp.

Unless the council blocks the requests, they will start taking effect later this month, 30 days after they were filed with the council.

The council granted increases to the four auto manufacturers in September, but the firms say these only covered the cost of installing federally mandated safety and antipollution equipment.

American Motors is seeking an average increase of $114 per car; Chrysler, two increases of $73 per car and $63 per car, totaling $136 per car; Ford, $188 per car; and General Motors, $208 per car.

Grimesland Man Killed Saturday

GRIMESLAND—A 44 year old Grimesland man, Richard Cotton Lewis, of Rt. 1, Box 204, Grimesland, was killed Saturday morning when he was shot in the face with a 16 ga. shotgun. The Pitt County Sheriff's Department has arrested and charged Earl Wade Scherer, aged 29, with murder. Scherer's residence could not be confirmed.

According to Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson, Lewis was killed at approximately 2:25 a.m. Saturday while at the residence of Annie Ree Jones, of Rt. 1, Box 285, Grimesland.

Scherer was arrested by Sheriff's Deputys Jackie Moye and Eugene Whitley Saturday morning at 1305 Forbes St., Greenville and placed in the Pitt County Jail. Bond has not been set.

According to Sheriff Tyson, the incident was witnessed by a juvenile who was standing beside Lewis outside the Jones residence when Lewis was shot. No motive for the shooting was given.

Leaf Collection Schedule Set

Mayo E. Allen, Greenville Public Works director, announced the schedule of the city's fall leaf collection operation.

Allen said that the Sanitation Division of the city Public Works Department placed the leaf collection machines in operation on Nov. 5 and will continue to operate the equipment until all leaves have been removed.

The director said that one of the two city leaf collection machines will be assigned to the east side of Greenville and the other to the west side. All residential streets in each section of the city will be covered, he noted, and the operation will be repeated until all leaves have been removed.

Allen emphasized the city's request that all leaves be placed on the grass or park strip immidiately behind the curb and not in the street.

The cooperation of residents in removing bricks, stones, and other types of foreign material from the leaves was also requested. He explained that residents who wish quick pick-up on leaves may place them in a plastic bag next to the curb and have them removed on a weekly basis by regularly scheduled refuse collection trucks.

Citizens needing further information concerning the city's leaf collection service should call the Public Works Department at 758-4109.

Parachute Disappears

Parachutists opened the game with a jump into Ficklen Stadium with the game ball.

Due to a strong wind two of the chutists were blown off course, but landed safely in a tree. Because of the complicated process of removing chutes from the trees, they left them there. Later they returned to find one of the chutes missing.

According to a spokesman for the group, Lonnie Willer, the chute was valued at approximately $700.

Anyone with information about the chute, call Lonnie Willer, 756-1153. A $25 reward is being offered.

Maryland Bar Might File Agnew Disbarment

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Baltimore News American reported Saturday that the Maryland State Bar Association may file disbarment proceedings next week gainst former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Quoting source within the bar association, the newspaper said "the matter is now in the hands of counsel and proceedings will be filed very promptly." The action reportedly would be filed in state circuit court in Montgomery County, Md.

But Robert L. Kay, president of the Montgomery County Bar, told the newspaper he was "not aware" of the plans and said if such an action were being contemplated, he probably would know.

The source reportedly said Montgomery County was chosen for the proceedings because that is where Agnew now resides. Kay said, however, that Agnew's legal address is still Baltimore County, where he was county executive before he was elected governor of Maryland.

Agnew resigned the vice presidency last month after pleading no contest to a negotiated federal income tax evasion charge stemming from a probe of political corruption in Maryland. A statement of evidence introduced in U.S. District Court said Agnew accepted payoffs from contractors and consultants in return for public contracts throughout his political career, including his years as vice president.

Agnew paid a $10,000 fine and was placed on probation for the federal tax evasion charge, but he is still liable for back state and federal taxes and could face state charges in the Maryland political probe.

Right of Reply Poses Questions

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A court decision that Florida newspapers must grant a right of reply to candidates criticized in editorials has wide implications for press freedom, the chairman of the National News Council says.

Roger J. Traynor, a former chief justice of the California Supreme Court, said Friday that the decision by the Florida Supreme Court against the Miami Herald might spell a new direction for the question of public access to the media.

Traynor spoke at the 19th annual convention of the New England Society of Newspaper Editors.

He said the decision has good and bad points but no "open and shut simplicity.

"It is, in fact, a classic hard case, and no one can predict whether it will finally lead to bad law or good. Journalists as well as lawyers must confront squarely all the arguments that must be mustered for both sides of this vanguard case."

Newspaper publishers in Florida are appealing the decision and have indicated they will go to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Charged In Slaying Of 9 In Rural Town

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Investigators say they are checking whether two men charged in the execution-style slayings of nine Californians might be connected with five murders in Arizona.

Nine counts of first-degree murder were filed here Friday against Willie L. Steelman, 28, of nearby Lodi, Calif., and Douglas Gretzler, 22, of New York City, in the slayings of five adults, two teen-agers and two small children in the rural hamlet of Victor.

A murder warrant previously had been issued accusing them of the execution-style murder of a young Mesa, Ariz., couple.

Investigators said Friday they also are checking whether the two might be involved in the disappearance of two Phoenix, Ariz., men; similar slayings in other places, including Denver and New York; and a kidnap and rape case in Mountain View, Calif.

Tucson, Ariz., police said they had information linking the men to the deaths of a Tucson couple and a 19-year-old Tucson boy.

The bound bodies of the couple were found Friday afternoon at a northside Tucson apartment.

San Joaquin County authorities here said Steelman and Gretzler were found with credit cards and a vehicle belonging to the murdered Tucson couple.

The names of those victims were not made public immediately.

N.C. News Briefs

Conference On Energy

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Jim Holshouser will hold a news conference on the energy crisis Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the State Capitol, his office said Saturday.

The news conference is one of the few activities scheduled for the governor in Raleigh this week.

Monday is Veterans' Day, and Holshouser is taking the day off from official activities.

Tuesday afternoon, he leaves for Boston for the National Governors' Conference which will end Thursday.

Friday, Holshouser is scheduled to meet all day in an executive session with the members of the Advisory Budget Commission.

Committee To Probe Firings

RALEIGH (AP)—A special state Senate Committee on Personnel Practices will begin inquiring into the firing of Department of Transportation employes on Wednesday.

Sen. Robert L. Barker, D-Wake, said the first hearing would take testimony from 17 of the department's personnel officers. Hearing could be continued into Thursday.

Barker is the chairman of the committee, which was appointed by Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt after the Holshouser administration fired or demoted 101 people in the department last month.

Change To Excise Tax Proposed

RALEIGH (AP)—A North Carolina legislative subcommittee approved Friday legislation that would swap the property tax on automobiles for an excise tax.

Backers of the legislation said it is aimed at persons who fail to list their automobiles for taxes along with their other property.

Under the proposal, taxpayers would no longer list automobiles with their property taxes. Instead they would have to pay an excise tax when they buy their auto license tags. The state would collect the tax and turn it over to local governments.

The bill now will go to the House Finance Committee. It is expected to come up during the 1974 session. Even if it passes then, it would not go into effect until 1976.

Rep. James E. Long, D-Alamance, chairman of the subcommittee, estimated between 5 and 15 per cent of the people "regularly avoid taxes" by not listing their automobiles. Rep. Robert A. Jones, D-Rutherford, sponsor of the measure, said it will bring in $13 million in new revenues for local governments.

Gas Curtailment Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Appeals Court granted a stay Friday of a Federal Power Commission order which would have curtailed natural gas to major North Carolina suppliers. The court acted on a motion by the state's congressional delegation which said that plant shutdowns and layoffs could cost 500,000 jobs if the FPC plan goes right through.

The motion and a friend-of-the court brief has been filed in support of a petition by the state and the North Carolina Utilities Commission. The case seeks to win a one-year extension of the existing allocation of natural gas in North Carolina by the Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line. It challenges an FPC plan that would allow Transcontinental to curtail supplies to distributors in North Carolina.

The appeals court stayed the FPC order until the court has a chance to consider the matter fully.

The congressional delegation said as many as 216 industries, universities, and public facilities might have to go without natural gas this winter if the FPC plan went into effect. It asked the court to consider the impact of the plan on North Carolina's economy.

Mandatory Immersion Is Issue

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—A proposal to make baptism by immersion mandatory is to come before the meeting of the Baptist State Convention in Greensboro Monday through Wednesday. The pastor of the Wake Forest Baptist Church in Winston-Salem, the Reverend Warren Carr, interprets this as threatening the continued operation of Wake Forest University, Baptist Hospital and Baptist homes for the aging and for children.

The proposal, introduced by the Rev. M.O. Owens of Gastonia, is aimed at the ll churches which accept members who have been baptized but not immersed. If the amendment is passed a two-thirds majority would be required, none of the members of the 11 churches could serve on any convention board, committee, commission or agency. Carr, whose church is one of the ll, with a membership of many officials of the college, and hospital, interprets "agency" to mean all colleges, such as Wake Forest, which are affiliated with the convention.

Owens said last month that the word "agency" should not be interpreted as meaning college. But the parliamentarian of the convention, Dr. James M. Bulman of Oak Ridge, says he agrees with Carr.

Three Killed At RR Crossing

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP)—A railroad crossing at Pembroke claimed its fifth victim in less than a week Friday as three youths died when a Seaboard Coastline train hit their compact car. Two other men were killed in a similar accident last weekend.

Police identified the victims of the latest wreck as David B. Haney, the driver, Steven Thorndike and Charles F. Edens, all 19. Haney and Thorndike were from Lumberton and Edens from Rt. 3, Lumberton.

Lash Larue Johnson and Clinton Jacobs, both in their 20s and from the Lumberton area were killed in a wreck at the same crossing last week.

Heavy Fighting Near Cambodian Capital

By TRACY WOOD

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Highway 4, Phnom Penh's road link with the port of Kompong Som, was cut by Communist rebels for nearly six hours Saturday eight miles from the capital in a move that touched off heavy fighting, field reports said.

A 165-truck convoy was delayed while government and Communist troops fought a see-saw battle for control of a strip of the road linking Phnom Penh with the country's only deepwater port 134 miles to the southwest.

Fighting has swirled almost constantly round the road, built by the United States before the war and named "Freedom Highway."

Field reports said government troops and rebels first clashed before dawn but the fighting broke off and the rebels appeared to have withdrawn.

At 6:30 a.m., lead vehicles in a convoy of 165 trucks returning to Kompong Som after unloading in Phnom Penh were ambushed in the same spot.

Government reinforcements were rushed in, field reports said, and fighting went on until noon. The road was opened and the convoy went on to Kompong Som.

The Phnom Penh command said four government soldiers and 50 rebels were killed, 18 government soldiers wounded and two rebels captured in the fighting.

Highway 4 last was cut Nov. 4. It was blocked for more than three days late last month.

Command spokesman Col. Am Rong reported four rebels and two government soldiers were killed during a government attack on a rebel position near Vihear Suor, 11 miles east of Phnom Penh.

Am Rong said government troops were still advancing on the Gulf of Siam city of Kep, 110 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, in a bid to recapture the rebel-held resort town.

None For Nun?

CHICAGO (AP) — An insurance man has filed a petition in Circuit Court seeking an end to his alimony payments because his former wife has entered a convent.

James A. Lane, 47, contended Friday that the living expenses of his ex-wife, Mary, are provided by the Roman Catholic Church and that there is no reason for him to continue $250 monthly payments.

She is a novice in the convent of the Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary in Milwaukee.

The suit said she "is no longer in need of support for herself and, quite to the contrary, she transfers and gives all payment to her religious order. For all practical purposes, as well as vows, she is remarried."

U. S. Ship Denied Fuel

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Two U.S. destroyer escorts, the Francis Hammond and the Cook, were refused Friday the fuel oil they need for the 5,000-mile voyage to Long Beach, Calif., oil company officials said.

Although one company, Mobil Oil, said its refusal was not politically motivated, some sources suggested that firms were reluctant to refuel American warships for fear of involving New Zealand in the Arab oil embargo.

A spokesman for another company, Shell Oil, said the company would "rather not" meet American requests.

The two ships, on their way home from a Far East tour of duty, each needed about 150 tons of light diesel oil to top out their tanks.

Ship officials were considering other possible solutions to their problem, including a change of route to allow another stop for fuel.

Hanoi Charges US Spy Flights

By BARNEY SEIBERT

SAIGON (UPI) — Hanoi charged Saturday that American aircraft—including the supersonic SR71—made at least 10 "spy" flights over North Vietnam in the past four months in violation of the peace agreement. The United States denied the charge.

The Communists said some of the reconnaissance missions were made by the SR71—successor to the U2 spy planes—as late as last Thursday over the North's two major cities of Hanoi and Haiphong.

The Communist charges were first made by the state-controlled Hanoi newspapers and later backed up with some specific details in a statement by North Vietnam's Foreign Ministry distributed by Viet Cong headquarters in Saigon.

The Hanoi newspaper charged the United States made more than 10 "spy flights" over North Vietnam since June in violation of the peace accord signed Jan. 27 and "which stipulates that the United States shall cease immediately, completely and indefinitely aerial reconnaissance over the territory of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam."

A U.S. government spokesman in Saigon said: "We do not conduct reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam."

Quan Doi Nhan Dan (People's Army Daily), Hanoi Radio, and North Vietnam's other national newspaper, the Lao Dong (Workers) party journal, Nhan Dan (People's Daily), all charged that American SR71 supersonic strategic reconnaissance planes flew over various provinces of North Vietnam Thursday, including the capital of Hanoi and port of Haiphong.

The foreign ministry said one flight was at 11:40 a.m. and a second at 12:48 p.m. Hanoi time.

The SR71 usually operates at an altitude of 14 miles but can climb as high as 17 miles. It is the successor to the U2 spy plane in which Gary Powers was shot down over the Soviet Union in a 1960 incident that caused cancellation of a scheduled Soviet-U.S. summit meeting.

Search Being Conducted For Kidnapped Woman

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — A manhunt was launched Saturday for two men who allegedly abducted a 38-year-old Lincoln County mother at her rural store, forced her into their car and sped away.

Officers said the abductors, described as white and in their early to mid-20s, may be heavily armed with guns and ammunition and should be considered very dangerous.

Deputy C.R. Moore of the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department said officers from surrounding counties, highway patrolmen and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation were working on the case.

A Highway Patrol helicopter from Raleigh searched Saturday for any trace of the the dark-colored, compact car reportedly used by the kidnappers of Mrs. Laura Blackburn.

Mrs. Blackburn was abducted, a witness said, shortly after 9 a.m. Friday in front of her small grocery store and textile mill outlet at the crossroads community of Laboratory. The community, located just west of U.S. 321, was the site of a Confederate drug laboratory during the Civil War.

Deputy Moore said men in a car fitting the description of that used by the abductors had purchased "a large quantity of ammunition" shortly before the abduction. Some of the ammunition was for handguns and some for "a high-powered rifle."

He said the abductors' car was believed to have Illinois license plates, but that at least one of the possible suspects may be from the Lincoln County area.

Robert Blackburn, the missing woman's husband, said his wife left their home about 7:30 a.m. to travel the five miles to her store. He said she was carrying between $800 and $1,000 in cash to open up the store. The Blackburn's daughter, Celeste, left for school about the same time.

Deputies called the incident a "kidnapping-robbery," but they said there still was no clear motive for the alleged crime.

The only evidence of the abduction was a gold-colored sandal, which Blackburn said his wife had worn to work Friday. It was found in front of the store after Mrs. Blackburn's disappearance.

"If she is still alive — gets out of this, she will never open it up (the store) again," Blackburn said. "I will sell it or just close it. She will never open it again."

Moore said that that Earl Summey, an elderly man living near the store, told officers he was coming down the road about 9 a.m. and saw a car in front of the store. Summey said he heard a woman scream, but that he couldn't see very well.

Meanwhile, local pilots flew search missions during the day Saturday but found no clues to the indcident.

Voter Reaction Was Decisive

North Carolina voters Tuesday approved the issuance of $300 million in school construction bonds, approved a measure to release $30 million in clean water bonds and turned down liquor-by-the-drink.

There were no great surprises in the way the three issues turned out except in the decisive way the voters reacted. There had been concern that school bonds might be influenced by the vote no campaign of those opposing liquor-by-the drink. Such was not the case, however, as the school bonds passed by two to one.

Clean water bonds were approved by an ever greater margin, which shows us that the voters recognized that they were only clearing up a technicaity releasing the bond funds already approved.

The liquor by the drink no vote was surprising in that around 70 per cent of Tar Heel voters cast their ballots against the local option proposal. Such an overwhelming vote was unexpected. It may be argued for years just precisely what the huge vote meant. Some say it means the voters want tighter controls over liquor, while others say it means the voters just want things left as they are. Regardless, it should mean that liquor-by-the-drink will not be an issue in the State Legislature for the next few years.

We feel that North Carolina voters showed they understood the issues of the day. They continued a long tradition of supporting the public schools and they indicated they understood the nature of the Clean water voter. As we said prior to the election voters should have cast their ballots according to their conscience on the liquor-by-the-drink question, and we suspect that is just what they did.

No Henry II In Washington

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHKNGTON—Dooming the melancholy private dialogue between President Nixon's lieutenants and congressional Republicans is total White House rejection of Capitol Hill's deeply felt need for public penance by the President.

Current negotiations ostensibly concern how much Mr. Nixon shall open his files to save his presidency. But these talks founder over unstated congressional demands that Mr. Nixon somehow confront Congress, perhaps as a committee witness, with a show of expiation and contrition. One influential (and pro-Nixon) Republican Senator feels Mr. Nixon cannot survive unless like Henry II, the 12th centruy King of England who atoned for the murder of St. Thomas a Becket by being publicly scourged, he makes public penance.

That is anathema to the President and all his advisers. Indeed, he is ignoring advice from his own staff to make considerably less humiliating gestures. Thus, whatever agreements are reached between Republican leaders and the White House over disclosure of tape recordings and documents, the basic gap will remain unbridged and Republican sentiment for Mr. Nixon's resignation will rise.

The White House's understanding of sentiment on Capitol Hill is even murkier today than in calmer times. Mr. Nixon's aides interpreted conservative Sen. Peter Dominick's criticism of the President Monday as reflecting fear about his 1974 reelection campaign in Colorado. In truth, Dominick was saying in public what almost all his colleagues say privately in the Republican cloakroom.

Republican Senators who still have not uttered a single word critical of Mr. Nixon say privately he must resign once Rep. Gerald Ford is confirmed as Vice President. The barrage of recommendations from Capitol Hill are eleventh-hour efforts to avoid the President's resignation.

Sen. William Brock of Tennessee, a conservative and a Nixon loyalist, recently wrote the President a remarkable letter outlining the steps necessary to save himself—stressing public disclosure not only of tape recording but of all presidential documents bearing on Watergate. Less sweeping requests are now being negotiated with the White House by Senate Republican leaders.

But tapes and documents will not truly satisfy Congress. Many Republicans feel the President should face interrogation from his legislative peers—perhaps by the Senate Watergate committee. One Republican leader in Congress, in public a total supporter of Mr. Nixon, is privately telling the White House the President must testify because he is "at the end of the road" and no other course remains.

The avowed purpose of calling Mr. Nixon to testify: to probe inconsistencies in Mr. Nixon's confusing explanations of Watergate. Beyond the avowed purpose, however, is the Henry II syndrome: the feeling Mr. Nixon can survive only by humbling himself. It is here where all hopes sink of agreement between the President and congressional Republicans.

"If the President has to go up to the Hill, groveling, on his hands and knees, I'd rather see him impeached," one senior Nixon aide told us. A middle-level assistant put it this way: "Are we going to go out crawling on our bellies or are we going to go out swinging?"

Those two presidential assistants are soft-liners in the White House context. Naturally, then, the hard-liners—headed by Richard M. Nixon—are unalterably opposed to any act of penance. Indeed, the President ignores considerably more moderate gestures recommended by his own staff.

Staff proposals for a frank, private discussion of Watergate with Senate and House Republicans have been gathering dust in the Oval Office for weeks. One adviser, usually a hard-liner, is getting nowhere in urging one final try by Mr. Nixon to publicly present his side of the Watergate story. Earnest suggestions from Capitol Hill, such as Sen. Brock's, naturally go unanswered.

Rather, the old White House refrain that Mr. Nixon can save himself by forgetting Watergate and turning to other matters is sounding again. That may explain cancellation of Mr. Nixon's meeting with his Watergate lawyers in order to deal with the energy crisis. It does explain press secretary Ron Ziegler's reference to the Watergate "foolishness," fully reflecting Mr. Nixon's own view.

In the Senate Republican cloakroom, Ziegler's "foolishness" was considered a repudiation of Sen. Barry Goldwater's plea last Sunday that everybody "cool it." It also shows that while Mr. Nixon's congressional sup-

The Defender System Appeals

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — State court officials have resisted a statewide public defender system, figuring it would be cheaper to simply hire lawyers to defend people who can't afford them.

But the situation is changing. "The defender system is looking more and more attractive," says Bert Montague, administrator of the court system.

The state held back when early estimates showed it would cost between $3 and $3.5 million for such a system in every county. Only three counties now have public defenders.

But those figures didn't reckon on several things, including Supreme Court rulings providing defense for more people, and rising costs.

Montague said it looks like the cost of assigning counsel will be as high as the estimates on the public defender system.

An additional, and major factor, Montague said, is that the state spends a lot more money in providing a good defense lawyer on a case than it does in providing procesutors.

"We have to hire the best. The federal courts will overturn in a minute a decision of the courts on the basis that the defendant's rights were not adequately protected. But you never hear of them overturning a case on the basis that the state's rights were not fully protected," Montague said.

Students Here Lag

A sample of 11,283 sixth graders were tested last year to provide a benchmark against which to compare progress in public schools.

The results generally were not so surprising. North Carolina kids ranked behind both national and Southeastern levels in achievement.

Basically, the study shows our sixth graders about seven months behind in reading, nine months behind in vocabulary, and about the same in math.

Inside North Carolina, the study shows, sixth-graders in Mountain counties ranked highest, trailed only slightly by Piedmont residents But Coastal Plains kids were farther behind.

Also shown by the test results: girls averaged higher than boys; white students surpassed non-whites.

The kids scored well on a portion of the test rating attitudes toward home and school life. Most gave strong signs of being happy.

Helping to reach that conclusion were such questions on the test as, "Do your teachers like kids and care about what happens to them? Do your principal and teacher run this school in a way that is fair? My teacher wants me to think for myself? and Problems at home keep me from doing well at school."

Incidentally, things haven't changed as much in the schools as you might think.

More sixth graders agreed than disagreed with the proposition that teacher has a pet whom she treats with special attention.

Fear A Bleak Future

By IRENE SEGE

BETHESDA, Md. (UPI) — Three Nobel prize-winning scientists fear that the quality as well as the quantity of government support for basic research could spell a bleak future for medical breakthroughs in the United States.

All three are connected with the National Institutes of Health, where they were interviewed by UPI.

The administration's stress on applied research, targeting areas such as cancer research at the expense of basic research, shows a lack of understanding of the nature of scientific advance, says Dr. Christian Anfinson, winner of the 1972 Nobel Prize in chemistry.

"The OMB (Office of Management and Budget) doesn't know...that applied research is a slow war of the trenches rather than a lightning blitzkrieg," Anfinson said. "Crystal balling is for those who don't know much about the nitty gritty of research."

Basic research is "the type of research that will get new ideas," said Dr. Julius Axelrod, winner of the 1970 Nobel Prize in medicine and physiology. By channeling funds to "politically visible" programs such as cancer research—at the expense of basic research—the government is reducing chances that money-saving medical discoveries will be made, he said.

Sunday Morning Notes

The Greenville Chamber of Commerce-Merchants Association has 5,000 balloons on hand. They are imprinted: "Welcome to Greenville's Annual July 4th Celebration."

Seems they were ordered for last year's celebration, but came in the day after the event.

Don't go by asking for one of the balloons, however. Chamber Manager Harold Creech says they will be held to be used at next year's celebration.

Our classified department tells me that two men came in to place ads. One was selling a car and when the second man found out he had a vehicle for sale, he went out with the first man to take a look at it.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Presumably they struck a deal. The man who placed the car sales ad soon came back in, withdrew it and got his money back.

Well, that sort of thing is hard on the profits, but classifieds do get quick results.

Last week we wrote about the dart board in the back office of Interstate Securities. Lawton Nesbitt says it is a research aid and there is really nothing secret about it.

Customers can use the darts to pick out their favorite stocks on their own.

And, according to our receiving department we may receive a huge shipment of negative filing envelopes one day before long.

An order was placed for 1,000 of the envelopes. Pretty soon an invoice came. It called for an order of 1,000 all right — one thousand boxes at $10 a box. The computer set the total cost at $10,000.

Our front office staff is now frantically trying to stop any possible shipment of $10,000 worth of envelopes.

40 Years Ago Today

By SUSAN PRICE

November 11, 1933

Plans were completed last night for the annual observance of Armistice Day here today, and indications pointed to one of the outstanding events of the kind here today, and indications pointed to one of the outstanding events of the kind here since the ending of the World War fifteen years ago and millions of men who had been in mortal combat marched back to their homes to resume normal occupations.

The observance here today was sponsored by the Pitt County Post of the American Legion. J.H. Rose, commander of the organization, announced last night that preparations had been completed and everything was in readiness for opening exercises at 10 a.m. when a parade is scheduled to get underway.

Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, judge of the Fifth Judicial District, will deliver the address to the several hundred persons expected to be on hand to help the Legion celebrate the occasion.

Following the ceremonies, veterans and members of the Auxiliary will be guests at a barbecue dinner in the basement of the campus building.

This afternoon, East Carolina Teachers College and Campbell College will bring the celebration to a climax with a football game at the Third Street School grounds.

Fed By Silence

(Jacksonville Daily News)

One question lingering in the aftermath of the Agnew affair is why nobody blew the whistle sooner, why nobody in the Maryland construction industry squawked about having a make regular "contributions" to politics until the Justice Department began to get hot on the trail of the scandal.

The shakedowns—there is no other name for them—were, as Agnew lamely offered in his defense, "part of a long-established pattern of political fund-raising in the state."

But why was it permitted to become such a long-established pattern?

Nor is the "pattern" peculiar to Maryland or the city of Baltimore alone. The potential for it exists everywhere that huge sums of public money are awarded in construction contracts.

"It's a universal evil, a blinding scar on my profession," says New Orleans architect Charles Colbert, former dean of the Columbia School of Architecture, as quoted in the Wall Street Journal.

The architect dealing in public works is looked on by aspiring politicians as a "cow to be milked," says William Slayton, executive director of the American Institute of Architecture.

They cannot blink at the fact, however, that in Baltimore at least, the cows were content to go along with the milking. Surely somewhere along the line, some engineering firm that had lost out on a contrzct would have raised a stick—unless, of course, it was afraid if it did it would forever be locked out of the cozy system.

In other words, architects and engineers, like the rest of us when we silently tolerate political abuse, get the kind of government they deserve.

But it is not simply a case of timid businessmen and venal politicians conspiring to milk the biggest cow of all the public.

Too often the public, by refusing to pay its officials salaries commensurate with what they could receive in private industry, creates situations of great temptation that even basically decent men cannot resist.

The temptation is all the greater when "everybody does it," and nobody complains.

To The Editor,

An article in the November 2nd edition cited Employment Security Commission figures as showing September unemployment at 2.1 percent in Pitt County. But somehow the article leaves me feeling a bunch more than 2.1 percent are unemployed here.

Now, let's see—in July 39,030 persons were employed and the unemployment rate was 3.9 percent. In September 33,340 were employed with a jobless rate of 2.1 percent. Gosh, 15 percent of those employed in July must therefore be unemployed in September. Not only that, but since 3.9 percent were already out of work in July, it looks like about 18 percent unemployment in September. How about that! And by December, 7,000 people will have dropped out of the picture. Will that still equal 2-3 percent?

Let's get a little reason into our labor picture. Any casual observer can see that more than 2 percent of our county is unemployed. Why the official rose-color glasses? How about some figures that reflect the real human side of the employment-income picture!

Sincerely yours,
Lawrence Behr

Strength For Today

AN ARRESTING REALITY

A New Testament scholar said recently that the reason why there is so much spiritual indifference in the world is that most people do not believe that a man can be spirtually lost. They feel that the worst that can happen to him is that he may become unhappy.

Happiness is a thing of great importance provided that we do not have to pay too high a price for it. But there are millions of people for whom happiness is the chief end of life. If they suddenly find themselves overwhelmed with trouble they feel that they have been unjustly dealt with and become bitter toward God.

As a matter of fact, God has never promised anyone happiness, nor is He under obligation to make or keep anyone happy. But He has promised salvation, and He has bound Himslef by a solemn promise to accord this salvation to anyone who asks for it and meets the spiritual requirments. Happiness is important, but surely salvation is the greater gift.

No Time 'Lost' By Housewife

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — True or false: If housewives are forced by the energy shortage to curtail their use of "work saving" devices they won't have time enough to complete all their daily chores.

Imagine, for instance, how time consuming it might be to walk rather than drive the kids to school, how burdensome to whip the batter by hand, how irritating to wash the dishes instead of delivering them to the machine.

Now, in apparent contradiction to the popular notion, a study conducted in 12 countries with widely different cultures and levels of industrialization suggests that no greater time will be needed.

The study shows that regardless of time and labor saving devices, women seem self-compelled to put in time on household chores.

To illustrate, the researchers point out that in Kragujavac, Yugoslavia, where most homes lack running water, the women spend just one minute more on chores than in Osnabruck, West Germany, where conveniences are taken for granted.

The study, called the Multinational Comparative Time-Budget Research Project, was conducted in Belgium, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, France, Hungary, Peru, Poland, the United States, Soviet Union, West Germany and Yugoslavia.

Analyzing the U.S. data, John Robinson and Philip Converse of the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan suggest that the time saved by convenience devices and products is quickly absorbed in other chores.

Joann Vanke, a sociology lecturer who compared the U.S. data with earlier studies, agreed.

"While the routine maintenance aspects of household work such as cooking and cleaning have become simpler, today's housekeeper has turned the extra time not to leisure but to the managerial aspects of household work...."

Even outside jobs that help pay for those labor-saving devices seem unable to free women from their "devotion" to household work. On weekends, the study found, the employed woman nearly doubles her time on household chores.

In contrast, employed men utilize weekends to "indulge themselves in relatively large amounts of leisure activity." So also do women who have no outside job.

"All told, the time-budget data form a rather compelling social document suggesting that problems faced by the working woman have not been adequately solved in any of the countries surveyed," Converse and Robinson conclude.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Knuj Mail

Mail advertisers' trade associations are becoming more and more peevish about their mail advertisements being called junk mail. And their contention is that the disparaging term is used to identify all mailed advertising, the ones that simply are addressed to "Occupant" or those selectively designating particular addresses.

Perhaps by mail is no small business. It amounts to $40 billion a year. And as large mail advertisers insist, the third class mail they use principally pays its own way.

Purchase by mail is no small business. It amounts to $40 billion a year. And as large mail advertisers insist, the third class mail they use principally pays its own way.

There's little doubt that much mail advertising is unfairly branded with the "junk" title. And we'd guess that whether the recipients looks upon a particular piece of mail as "junk" or something quite acceptable probably is weighed, like beauty, in the eyes of the beholder.- Birmingham (Ala.) News

Man Bites Train

Taking things in your own hands can sometimes make you feel better. Like the man in Fort Worth, Texas, who was held up 15 minutes on his way to work by a passing train.

The motorist got his revenge by parking his pickup truck on the track and walking off to work with the doors left locked. Before the police could locate him and ask him to move his truck a freight train was delayed 20 minutes.

Probably a lot of people secretly feel the same way about such things. The police, at least, showed understanding. They declined to hand the driver a ticket.

No Visitors, Please

Flying saucer and other UFO reports are upon us, and we hope it all isn't so.

Our cities are overcrowded, traffic congested, farmland filling up with suburbs; season tickets to all the ballgames are sold out, gasoline shortages are threatening the country; fuel shortages may mean cold homes this winter; we are just keeping fairly good relations with Italy, France and Britain and hardly talking to everybody else in the world.

In short, what we DON'T need right now is more company on this troubled globe. Not even for a weekend. - Anniston (Ala.) Star.

Ethical Patterns

State Senator Dewey Wise, D-Charleston, says his ethics bill is patterned after a law recently passed in Alabama. That's fine, except for one thing. The Alabama law requires newsmen as well as public officials to reveal sources of their income. If we had our druthers we'd prefer to see the South Carolina law kept in line with the constitution and limit its disclosure requirements to those in the employ of the state. - Columbia (S.C.) Uncaught Cheaters

The man who helped his nephew rig his racing car to win this year's Soap Box Derby has been fined $2,000 and told to apologize to the nation's youth for helping his nephew cheat to win.

After ruling, the district attorney handling the case said his investigation of derby finishers uncovered evidence that at least 34 cars, including six of the top finishers, had been rigged against the rules.

Now take Spiro Agnew. Both Mr. Agnew and the soapbox racer's uncle committed actions which Americans find distasteful. Both were fined and suffer public disgrace. We know that 34 other racers apparently are guilty, but they escaped penalties. We wonder how many in politics have escaped detection for misdeeds which caught up with Spiro Agnew. Charles (S.C.) Heavens!

St. Peters College, up in Jersey, has called one of the longest time-outs in history. After five games in which St. Peters scored six points and its opponents 200, the director of athletics announced he was canceling the remaining five games but will be back next year. The interim respite, he said, was necessary, "for the safey of the players."-Miami (Fla.) Herald

A Conservative View
Image Of The Republican Party Also At Stake

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

In urging that the House get on with the impeachment of Richard Nixon, I have in mind chiefly what seems to be the good of the country. The nation deserves a formal resolution, which resignation could not provide, of the poisonous stream of charges brought against the President over the past 20 months.

Cruel as it may seem, the impeachment process might also prove to be for the good of Nixon himself. He now struggles in a dark swamp of ill-defined accusations and formless innuendos. To reduce these to writing, and to proceed to trial by the Senate, could bring the only formal vindication that Nixon possibly could receive. If two-thirds of the Senate fail to vote for his conviction and removal, he would have survived the crisis and regained a position on leadership not likely to be challenged again.

There is yet a third consideration: The good of the Republican party.

It is a consideration, to be sure, not likely to lend itself to the support of professional Democrats, but it is a concern that Republicans of every philosophical persuasion should take to heart. A recent Harris poll turned up a shocking statistic: If Congressional elections were being held right now, and the choice were simply between Democrats and Republicans, the Republicans would lag 22 points behind. That is the Watergate measure.

One may respond to the Harris poll, of course, by observing that such hypothetical questions bear little relationship to real world politics. Parties do not compete; candidates compete; and the experience, personality, and political philosophy of a candidate count for far more than his party label. There is abundant reason, indeed, to believe that mere party affiliation is among the least of the factors in our elections today.

All the same, in a close race between evenly matched candidates, the Watergate measure plainly could prove decisive. If the taint of "Republican corruption" affects even three or four percent of the voters, and causes them to vote Democratic, the GOP loss in the House and Senate next year could spell disaster for the party.

Some of the prospective damage could be minimized, it seems to me, if House Republicans themselves would now join in a movement to get this misery settled, once and for all, by the formal procedures laid down by the Constitution. Gerald Ford, the prospective vice presidential replacement, understandably could be excused from taking a position, but other Republicans should not be deterred. A vote to impeach is not a vote to remove; it is a vote to compel the Senate to hear the evidence and to return a verdict.

The impeachment process, once set in motion, would bring order out of disorder. It would restore this wild and formless struggle to a context of ground rules acceptable to the people. No tradition is more deeply ingrained in our national psyche than the tradition of obedience to established law: A batter is out, or a goal counts, or a defendant is guilty. The decisions of an umpire, a referee, or a judge may not be popular, but their authority and finality are respected.

This would be true, I submit, of the President's trial by the Senate. Nixon would be defended by counsel; he would have the right to cross-examine witnesses who have yet to be cross-examined by anyone; he would be protected by all the familiar safeguards of due process. The final vote of the Senate jury could not be wholly freed from political considerations—the evidence against Nixon would have to be overwhelming before two-thirds of the Senate would vote, in effect, to put Ford in the White House—but one way or another, the verdict would be accepted as an authoritative disposition of the case.

For Republicans, as a party, to resist such a disposition is to enhance the image of a party unwilling to have the charges of Presidential corruption proved or disproved. If party leaders are concerned about that image, they had better stop mumbling about resignation, which resolves nothing, and get behind impeachment instead.

Criticism, Yes; But No Real Majority Yet For Unseating Pres. Nixon

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Is the majority of the nation really done with President Nixon—ready, now, to have him either impeached or forced to resign?

Frankly, we doubt it. And we also doubt that the articulate anti-Nixon activists in and out of Congress, will be able to swing a majority to their "get Nixon" crusade on the basis of existing evidence against the President.

This judgement is based on no scientific sampling of sentiment. Instead, it results from impressions gained by talking to a lot of people, all kinds of people, on a rather long swing through sections of North Carolina. Virginia and Maryland.

At motels, gas stations, stores, public gatherings and a few social affairs, we found plenty of criticism of Nixon—the Watergate mess and all that it implies. There is great disapproval of the Nixon White House.

But, at this stage, there is little stomach for "getting rid" of Nixon. Answers usually got around to "well, he's still better than anyone who might take over."

When we mentioned Representative Ford, named by Nixon to be the new Vice President, but not yet ratified by Congress, the typical response was that "I don't know anything about him."

Representative Ford, of course isn't the only replacement for Nixon available. If the President should be forced out before Ford is approved by the House and Senate, then the sucessor would be a Democrat, Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma. If Albert has no yen for the spot, as he says, there are "deals" which the Democratic leadership could make.

For example, Albert could step down as speaker. The House would then select his replacement and there is nothing in the constitution that says the speaker must be a member of the House. Another way, if Albert took over, would be for him to name a Vice President, then resign in favor of him.

Any such maneuver would throw the field wide open. The lightning could be directed at the field—McGovern, Kennedy, Humphrey (a former Vice President) Muskie or — you name him.

These possibilities were all tried out at various stops. Some folks simply shook their heads and allowed that things are in a real mess. Others were quick to say they couldn't take any of those named. To most, Nixon seemed the best bet for the future, unless he can actually be nailed with wrong-doing.

And on this point, the Watergate hearings are not considered persuasive — do not convict the President as a knowing participant.

This random "sampling" finds some support in the polls. Gallup, for example, has reported only 27 percent of those questioned approved of the way Nixon is handling his job. Another poll, though, finds some 55 percent of those questioned opposed to forcing Nixon from office.

Then why all the clamor of resignation or impeachment? It should be remembered that last November about 40 percent of the voters preferred McGovern to Nixon. And the core of the McGovern support — the Democratic left, plus a miscellany of so-called intelectual liberals— — is spearheading today's assault on Nixon.

History tells of several President's who suffered great abuse in office. In every case, power struggles were involved. Andrew Johnson and Herbert Hoover had rough going, for example. And history has been kinder to them than to their attackers.

"Lynch" mobs have never stood he test of time in this country, no matter how they rationalized actions.

YOU KNOW WHAT TOO MANY COOKS CAN DO!

Axelrod cited the discovery of a polio vaccine in the 1950s.

"Do you support research into viruses, or do you make better iron lungs?" he said. "This administration would say iron lungs."

It is not true that the technology to cure cancer is available, he said. "It's like trying to get to the moon without knowing Newton's laws of motion."

The basic researcher does not know beforehand what the ramifications of his work will be, said Dr. Marshall Nirenberg, winner of the 1968 Nobel Prize in medicine and physiology.

"You need this background of basic information in order to solve applied problems," he said. "And you need to chip away at them piece by piece before you have enough knowledge to get at applied problems.

Cutback effects

Basic biomedical research includes investigation of fundamental biological and chemical phenomena, such as proteins, metabolic processes, viruses and the nervous system. Without such research into the understanding of these bases of life, continued medical discoveries cannot be assured, the scientists said.

The effects of fund cutbacks for research and the government's approach to scientific problems are just beginning to be felt, according to the three scientists. But they say the real impact of current policies will be felt later.

"My own personal view is that present policies are devastating," Nirenberg said, "But effects will be delayed."

The cutback in training funds means that young researchers will have difficulty getting money and will turn to other fields, he said.

In addition to worrying that a curtailed fellowship program dries up success of future researchers, Axelrod is apprehensive about the effects of uncertainty on scientific progress. Research needs sustained support rather than ups and downs—a "Feast" of financial support during the 1950s and the "famine" now, he said.

Nipped in bud

Present administration policies "put a damper on budding fields," Nirenberg said. The scarcity of training funds coupled with the stress on application of current knowledge means that areas of research on the frontiers of science are being slighted before they have a chance to bloom, Nirenberg said.

The long-term effect of current policies on research mainly will be felt in personnel, Anfinson said, but the shortage of funds also could make it difficult to replace obsolescent equipment as new techniques are developed.

The three scientists all have been active in the lobbying efforts of the Federation of American Scientists. FAS was founded in 1946 at the dawn of the atomic age and primarily consisted of physicists concerned about the arms race.

The first effort by FAS in the area of health was a petition signed in June by 2,000 scientists — including Anfinson, Axelrod and Nirenberg—protesting the administration's research funding policies. Anfinson is vice chairman of the organization, and all three serve as sponsors.

Margin Of Victory By Drys Was The Shocker

By JOHN KILGO

Liquor-by-the-drink, nurtured through the General Assembly for six years before it got out for a statewide vote, is dead and buried, certain not to rise again for many years.

The fact that the drys won Tuesday's vote is no shocker. The margin of victory—better than 2 to 1—and the fact that 97 counties voted dry, is a huge surprise.

You can rest assured that this issue is dead for five years or more, because of the way the vote went on a county-by-county basis. The wets felt sure they'd win all the urban centers such as Guilford, Forsyth, New Hanover and Buncombe. They won only Orange and Wake by narrow margins, and Mecklenburg by a landslide.

This means any plans to introduce a so-called "classification" bill in the next General Assembly is no longer even a possibility. The wets felt they might, in case of defeat, get the General Assembly to pass a bill allowing counties with certan populations to vote on liquor-by-the drink. But that was assuming the urban counties would vote wet. They didn't. They didn't.

What happened?

First, we reported in a column last August that the wets were totally disorganized and the drys were clicking. The wets never got it together. They couldn't raise money, and the decision to name a Charlotte man to head the liquor drive was a mistake of gigantic proportions.

John J. Ryan of Charlotte, a former head of Southern Bell in North Carolina, was chosen to head the wets' drive. He knew very little about raw, gut-wrenching politics. He was chosen because it was felt he could raise the needed money.

Said Ryan after the defeat: "We couldn't do things we wanted to do because we didn't have the dollars to carry on an effective campaign."

The wets waited too long to get started and once underway, they spent most of their time running place.

Second, there is evidence that the drys—with gifted speakers such as Allen Bailey, Marse Grant and Coy Privette—confused the voters. They had people afraid that a Yes vote would mean bars with topless waitresses right next door to First Baptist Church. Rather than take a gamble on something like that, the people decided to keep things the way they are.

I asked Bailey about confusing the voters. He laughed and said: "Maybe the wets had their side confused, but our people heard us loud and clean."

The vote agains mixed drinks, so overwhelming was it, is being carefully studied by people like Luther Hodges Jr. and State Sen. Eddie Knox, both of whom openly endorsed the question and both of whom are considering running for Governor in 1976.

It could hurt them in a statewide campaign.

The Rev. Privette, head of the Christian Action League, says the vote was a clear message that North Carolinians don't want more liberalized liquor laws. "They want more stringent laws on liquor;" he says.

Will the drys, pumped up over the victory, push for even tougher liquor laws in the state" Dry leader Bailey replies: "Who knows what tomorrow may bring?"

We do know that it won't bring liquor-by-the-drink or any serious legislative discussion of the subject.

Today In History

Today is Sunday, Nov. 11, the 315th day of 1973. There are 50 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

porters are down to a precious few, not much has changed at the White House. For the short run, that promises Mr. Nixon's continued refusal to display any weakness, much less resigning as President, even as Republican support grows thinner by the day.

Production Of More Physicians Remains Primary Need Of State

By ANDREW A. BEST, M.D.

The Public Forum for November 1, 1973 carried a letter by Dr. Joseph W. Hooper, Jr. of Wilmington. He has every right to his opinions, but I respectfully question some of his apparent conclusions.

Without a doubt, Dr. Bennett and his group represent men of great character and capability. Their opinions deserve careful consideration and genuine respect. Yet, there is a vast body of differing opinions which command equal consideration and respect.

The argument of the need for more clinical facilities is lost when one simply points to Kinston, Williamston, and Plymouth as prime examples of beautiful facilities incompletely used because of inadequate doctors and paramedical personnel. How can the call for more expansion of clinical facilities be justified in the face of this fact? Likewise, the sixth odd internships and one-hundred residency slots that are unfilled would seem to dictate against most post graduate training programs until the presently available ones are taken. In short, to expand facilities and programs without producing the doctors to fill them is like putting the "cart before the horse." The suggestion that adequate doctors could be attracted from "elsewhere" belongs to the "false hopes" category when one considers the fact that "elsewhere" has the same physician shortage as "here."

I wonder if the writer gave any thought to the more than eight thousand applicants for medical school who could not be accommodated, (8,350 applicants for 335 first year places). Should they be denied opportunity for entry into the profession of their choice? Furthermore, doesn't this denial adversely affect the welfare of our people?

To set the record straight, may I say that I, too, am a native of Eastern North Carolina, and a practicing physician. Beyond this, I served on the sub-committee for the Board of Governors which studied this question for six months; I was a part of the action which created Dr. Bennett and his panel; and I have followed the evidence very closely on both sides of the issue. Therefore, I am sure that my own conclusions deserve to be heard. There are many people who share my views as expressed in the comments and-or questions that follow:

1. Those of us supporting the establishment of another four year medical school are far more interested in the production of doctors than we are in where they locate. Our thesis is that if we produce the doctors, we have a chance at influencing their location. No production means none to locate anywhere.

2. East Carolina University desires to make a contribution to the entire state— not just the eastern region.

3. Instead of "appealing only to the emotions of people in Eastern North Carolina", as charged, we are responding to the anguished cries of people who deserve more than the deaf ear they have been getting from many quarters.

4. We are equally as guilty of "misleading our citizens with "false hopes" as the supporters of the two (2) year school, and later the four (4) year school at Chapel Hill. They, too, had stubborn opposition!

5. We are first and foremost to regret that negligence and indifference by the professionals (The Old North State Medical Society excepted) have forced this issue into the political arena. Where else could the people turn?

6. The writer summed up by stating "that is one were in the paper business, one would not put a pulo mill in the desert". Is he saying that Eastern North Carolina is a cultural and scientific desert; does he recognize that even a desert can be made productive by irrigation and other associated effort; or must this summary statement be viewed as symptomatic of the "indifference — deaf ear" syndrome which is so endemic in certain segments of our population???

County Cutting Use Of Energy

Pitt County officials took action Thursday designed to reduce the consumption of energy by county employees.

The memorandum, sent to all county departments and signed by B. Alton Gardner, chairman of the Board of Commissioners and county manager H. R. Gray, said all departments "are hereby directed to cooperate in the conserving of fuel and energy" and to take steps necessary to implement the directive.

Steps in the directive included lowering thermostats in all buildings; cutting off all lights in rooms not in use and when employees are not in their respective offices; having employees plan the most effective use of county vehicles and to cut speed to economize on gas; and use vehicles that get the most miles per gallon as much as possible.

The memorandum directed employees to keep county vehicles properly tuned for maximum efficiency of engine and encouraged employees to use car pools to the maximum in all of their endeavors "including travel to and from work, in their work and whenever possible."

"Your cooperation at this time is of the utmost importance," the directive concluded.

The memorandum was spurred by Pres. Nixon's Wednesday night message on the energy crisis, at which time he suggested cutting back thermostats, reducing speed limits and other measures designed to curb the increasing energy demands.

Final Week Of Flushing

The fourth and final phase of the city's water main flushing program will be conducted today through Friday in the outlying subdivisions, according to Wadie Lewis, superintendent of Greenville Utilities Water and Sewer Department.

Lewis said that areas to be flushed this week include Brentwood, Lydale, Belvedere, Lakewood Pines, and Red Oak as well as sections of Meadowbrook.

He pointed out that the operation will start tonight at 10 p.m. in the vicinity of Evans and 12 Street since that area was left out of previous flushing operations and then progress to the subdivisions.

The flushing will be done between the hour 10 p.m. and 6 a.m this week.

A Bicentennial Opera In Works

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Russell Peck, Indianapolis composer, is working on a Ford Foundation grant opera focusing on 19th Century communes in Indiana and Tennessee to be presented as part of the nation's 200th anniversary celebration.

The work is to be called "The New Harmony Opera" after the name of the town that was the site of Robert Owen's commune.

Cites Benefits In Foreign Aid

U. S. foreign aid to developing nations is beneficial both to government and to private enterprise, an East Carolina University economist told a Texas gathering Thursday.

Dr. Umesh C. Gulati, associate professor of economics in the ECU School of Business, addressed the 43rd annual conference of the Southern Economic Association in Houston on "Foreign Economic Assistance and Pattern of Economic Development."

Based on his research, Dr. Gulati dismissed the charges that foreign economic assistance to poor countries is wasteful and promotes despotic governments.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

WHAT IS THE PROCEDURE?
Money is loaned to the church by members and friends. In return, the church issues Church Bonds, payable to the bearer, maturing at 6-month intervals over a period of 14½ years.

WHAT SECURITY IS PLEDGED FOR THESE BONDS?
The church binds and obligates itself that it will not sell nor incumber the church's equity in the property to render it impossible to meet its obligation to the bond holders. If, for any reason, the church should fail to meet its obligation as to the bonds, the property could be sold for the benefit of the bond-holder and the other creditors, if any.

WHAT PROVISION IS MADE FOR THE PAYMENT OF THE BONDS AND INTEREST?
The church agrees to deposit into a special account in its bank a sum of money each week, which is calculated mathmetically to be sufficient to pay the bonds and interest thereon when due.

WHAT ASSURANCE IS THERE THAT THESE DEPOSITS WILL BE MADE AS CALLED FOR?
The church by resolution has ordered it. The treasurer has a signed agreement that he will deposit it in the special account. A number of the members of the church agree to see that the treasurer performs this agreement.

WHAT INTEREST DO THESE BONDS BEAR?

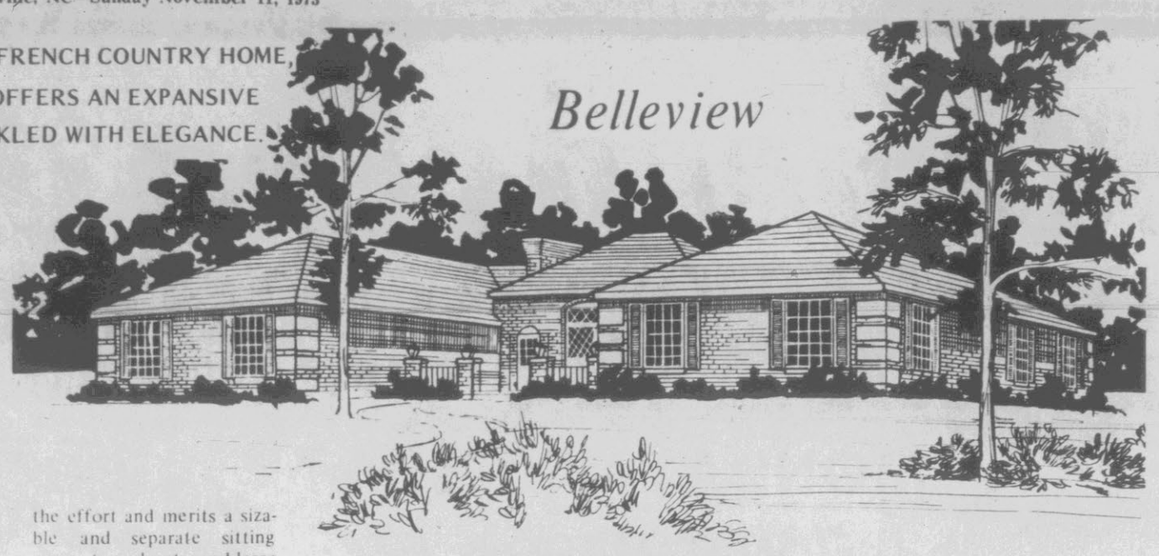
REMINISCENT OF A FRENCH COUNTRY HOME, THE "BELLEVIEW" OFFERS AN EXPANSIVE FLOOR PLAN SPRINKLED WITH ELEGANCE.



FRENCH PROVINCIAL PLAN AUTHENTIC, ELEGANT

By Gerry Bishop

Size: 2,814 sq. ft. first floor; 1,358 sq. ft. basement; 686 sq. ft. garage.
Over-all dimensions: 74 ft. by 68 ft.

True to its French Provincial heritage, the "Belleview" exhibits a meticulously detailed exterior and updates the interior with contemporary luxury. Leaded glass doors, brick arches and quoins, carriage lights and a steep hipped roof contribute to the distinctive facade that encases the plan's 2814 bountiful square feet of living area.

Fronted by a veranda, the double door entrance opens to a gracious foyer which routes traffic left to informal living areas, ahead to formal living room, or right to the expansive sleeping wing. Relaxed and inviting, the family room is framed by a glowing fireplace on one side and sliding glass doors to a deck on the other. Combination laundry room and half bath is conveniently located between the family room and kitchen and opposite a stairway to the basement. Edging the kitchen, the formal dining room meets a firelit living room to share expanses of glass that overlook and open to the roomy terrace.

Four bedrooms and three full baths, one of which opens to pool and terrace area, comprise the substantial sleeping wing of the "Belleview." Complete privacy is afforded the area, which is liberally lavished with closet space and compartmented baths. The master bedroom suite crowns the effort and merits a sizable and separate sitting room, two closets, and large dressing area edging the full bath. The main bath also offers both tub and shower stall.

Doors are placed to the side of the double garage to preserve the traditional dignity, and the full basement offers abundant storage space.

The Garden Clinic

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Can you grow lilacs in the Chapel Hill area? If so, how is the best way to go about it. (J.F., Chapel Hill)

A. Lilacs do fairly well in your area. They need full sun, an alkaline soil, and better than average soil fertility. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. I have just built a new house and would like to use fruit plants in the landscape. Could you offer some suggestions? (T.J., Fayetteville)

A. Why not consider a blueberry hedge, a grapevine screen, a strawberry border or ground cover? Blueberries also make excellent foundation plantings either alone or grouped with evergreens. Even raspberries and blackberries can be used as a background planting or hedge. Be sure the soil is prepared properly or you will be disappointed in these plants. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. Is it practical to plant seeds of annuals over spring-flowering bulbs? (C.E., Charlotte)

A. You will not damage the bulbs if they are planted at the proper depth and soil is enriched annually. Any kind of annuals may be used — from alyssum to zinnia. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A home workshop is usually a Topsy-like creation. It just grows.

You acquire a few tools and keep them in a convenient location, such as a garage, attic, basement or utility room. You place them on shelves or store tham in some kind of cabinet that formerly saw duty somewhere else in the house. You begin to make a few simple things and need a power tool or two.

Before long, as your project horizon grows, you have a cluttered area where you work. And then, one day, you decide it's time to put things in order and you actually set out to make a workshop.

There's something to be said for the haphazard system of building a workshop. There's a certain amount of fun in buying things as you need them rather than setting out ahead of time to equip your work area with everything the books tell you a home handyman should have.

Having said that, I also realize that this trial-and-error method can cost you extra money, because you discover after a time that you could have made wiser purchases or saved a lot of time and trouble if you had done things a bit differently. Here, then, are a few off-the-top-of-the-head observations that may be of help:

No matter how many power tools you buy or intend to buy, you are going to need certain hand tools. Assuming that you already have such basic tools as a hammer, screwdriver, saw, pliers and wrench, be on the lookout for the small tools that make jobs easier. They are the kind the professionals use — a nailset, a center punch, a pipe wrench, tin snips, clamps, a sandpaper holder, an oil can, a wood chisel, a cold chisel and so on.

You've heard countless times about how dangerous power tools can be if you aren't careful, but workshop safety depends on many other seemingly small things. If you spill anything on the floor, stop whatever you are doing and wipe it up. If you drop a pencil or anything else, retrieve it immediately. Falls on spilled liquids, pencils, even a piece of paper, are common.

Inadequate lighting makes your job tougher and causes accidents. When examining an electric tool or changing a bit or accessory, be certain the plug is out of the wall.

If someone talks to you while you're working, stop for a second and reply. If you don't, you may take your eyes away from the work and damage it or yourself.

And, from the standpoint of good quality results, fight a continual battle against the enemy of the handyman — impatience. More jobs are ruined because the do-it-yourselfer couldn't wait to see the result than by almost anything else.

Fishermen Saw A 'Sasquatch'

VANCOUVER (AP) — Whatever it was, it wasn't your average beachcomber.

Three Vancouver fishermen all saw what may be the latest sighting of the legendary Sasquatch, the fabled, man-like ape which roams the mountains. Nick Pisac, one of the fishermen, said he spotted the thing walking slowly along the beach. "It stood about 10 feet tall and was sort of lightish gray," he said.

Spend $60,000 For Less Noise

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto's works department is spending $60,000 for 10 quieter air compressors used by the city to power jackhammers and other construction equipment. The new compressors are 50 per cent more costly than less noisy ones.

D. J. Batty, the department's senior environmental engineer, said: "We can't put a ban on other people's noise without cleaning our own house first."

Bra Production Continues Sag

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Australian brassiere production has fallen for the fourth successive year in 1973 with nearly a quarter of a million fewer bras made than in 1972. Industry figures indicated that production of panties, girdles and corsets is on the increase.

Poet Dickey in Lecture, Two Day ECU Workshop

James Dickey, native of Georgia and poet well known to poetry readers long before he gained national prominence for his novel, Deliverance will lecture on campus Monday.

As a cap off for ECU's Homecoming weekend, the East Carolina University Student Union Lecture Committee will present Dickey in a lecture at 8:00 p.m. Monday, November 14.

Admission to the general public is $2.00 per person.

Now poet in residence at the University of South Carolina, Dickey has been called the Hemingway of poetry. An active outdoorsmen, he hunts deer with bow and arrow and likes the challenge of paddling a canoe in rapid river waters.

These activities formed the setting for his novel, later made into a movie, for which Dickey was nominated for an Academy Award for the best screenplay for the year.

In 1966 Dickey received the National Book Award in Poetry for Buckdancer's Choice, one of several published volumes of poetry he has written.

Persons interested in Dickey's viewpoints on poetry and the novel will find helpful an interview appearing in the current (November) issue of Playboy.

Dickey will be on campus two days, Monday and Tuesday. In addition to his Monday night lecture, he will conduct a workshop in poetry at 10 a.m. Monday and again at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Vernon Ward, chairman of the ECU Poetry Forum, says that student and Greenville area poets are invited to attend the workshop, for which there is no registration charge. Poets who wish to bring their manuscripts for Dickey's criticism should do so on Monday. These will be returned on Tuesday, with appropriate comments.

Participants in the workshop will be given an opportunity to meet Dickey personally and to ask him questions.

POET JAMES DICKEY . . . who is also the author of a novel and screenplay, "Deliverance", will be on campus Monday and Tuesday. (Photo courtesy Christopher Dickey)

Festival '74 Features Harth

Another of East Carolina University's events of Festival '74 will take place when Sidney Harth, violinist, appears in concert at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, November 14 in the Recital Hall of the Fletcher Music Center.

Paul Tardif, pianist and faculty member of the School of Music, ECU, will accompany Harth in the program of five violin compositions.

Works to be performed are: Handel's Sonata No. 3; Ysaye's Sonata No. 3, (Ballade), for violin alone; Sonata No. 2, Grieg; Debussy's Sonata for Violin and Piano; and Ravel's Tzigane (Rapsodie du Concert).

Now a member of the faculty of the Aspen Festival of Music in Colorado and Head of the Music Department of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Harth is also this season Concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra.

As a soloist he has performed under many notable conductors—Ormandy, Reiner, Leinsdorf, Steinberg, Martinon, and Schippers, among others.

Concertmaster positions he has held in past years have been with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, the Louisville Orchestra, and the Casals Festival Orchestra in Puerto Rico.

Harth, who has toured widely as a soloist—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and overseas in a number of European nations including Poland, Russia and Belgium has been called "one of the top violinists of our time" by The New York Times. A London critic wrote of his "fantastic range of tone color," and a Paris critic noted he is a violinist of "brilliant virtuosity."

The Harth concert is open to the public on a first-come first-seated basis (only about 200 seats available). There is no admission charge.

'Sierra Madre' Looking Good As Ever

A sardonic tale of desperate men unfolds in Treasure of the Sierra Madre opening this week at the Park Theatre as the first feature of the Humphrey Bogart Film Festival. The years since original release have not lessened the suspense of its story of gold-hunting and greed in Mexico, based on the classic novel by B. Traven.

Bogart's performance as the bitter and suspicious Dobbs shines brighter than ever today—one feels he should have had an Academy Award to go along with John Huston's Oscars for writing and directing the picture, and Walter Huston's Oscar for the supporting role of old Howard.

In the fast-moving plot, Bogart and his young pal Tim Holt out-face crooked bosses, Mexican bandits, raiding federal troops, and capture by a primitive Indian tribe to find the way to the gold with aged prospector Huston. But at the moment of success, fate steps in with a cruel joke. The picture's end leaves one wondering who were the losers and who the real winners in the brutal game just played out.

Bogart's star appeal was never more apparent than in this role. Though Dobbs as a character has some unsympathetic sides, Bogart's qualities of independence, shrewdness, toughness and persistence shine through and make him a memorable figure.

The "Bogey" trademarks of taut upper lip, rasping voice and penetrating stare are as apparent and effective here, too, as in his more romantic portrayals in Key Largo and Casablanca, next to come to the Park.

Altogether one sees clearly in these three classic films why Humphrey Bogart has been unique in film history, as the epitomizing figure of certain character traits the American public admires and loves.

It is a pleasure to welcome this film-festival venture by the management of the Park and Plaza Theatres. Movies from Hollywood's great era remain top entertainment, providing now as formerly an emphasis on action and character and realism without an excess of senseless violence and profanity.

Usually, though, such festivals are found only in large metropolitan areas or cultural havens such as Kennedy Center in Washington DC.

Local audiences have to take their chances to see classic movies on television now and then. That's better than nothing, but in most cases can't compare with seeing the uncut version on a large screen, with no interruptions every few minutes for you-know-what.

Particularly appropriate is the choice of the Park Theatre as site of the festival. As the old State Theatre, before recent top-to-bottom modernization, it was the original home of many of the great old films when they played Greenville. The posters used for the Bogart movies in the Park lobby are reported to be "classic" originals brought in especially for the occasion.

Hopefully audience support for these three films will encourage the theatre management to go ahead with plans for future festivals of stars such as James Stewart, Gary Cooper and Spencer Tracy. In an era of national doubt and discouragement their famous pictures remain a timeless statement of American ideals.

In the meantime, Treasure of the Sierra Madre, it's great to see you again! You're looking good as ever. William Stephenson a little of Lawrence, By Lawrence S. Blate, Selected by Judith Blate. Mt. View, Calif., 1966, 40 pps, paper, $1.00

What will happen to the word
when we are old?
Will the wrinkled pages masking the face
be a mark of change, or redder dreams, or richer life?
Or does the skull grow weary as we pass unnoticed out of ourselves in dark conduits to the sea?

asks Lawrence Blate in the first poem of his slim volume a little of Lawrence.

Poignantly, Lawrence never knew the answer, for, while preparing to publish these poems in the winter of 1964, he was killed in an automobile accident.

And so, unexpectedly, a promising young poet, born March 14, 1935, never learned whether "the skull grow(s) weary as we pass unnoticed - out of ourselves in dark conduits to the sea."

But he did leave his wife Judith to publish a little of Lawrence for his three children, Rona, Geoffrey, and Stephen, and "a few friends," and to add "a few who find a little of themselves" in these poems too. And here, at least, he does not pass unnoticed.

These are the poems of a sensitive, highly-refined man, a teacher of creative writing, with a Master's degree from Brown University and a Doctorate from Ohio State. These poems are highly allusive and sometimes even abstruse, certainly to be appreciated only by a select few. But these few will deeply appreciate them.

They are certainly as far removed from jingles as poems can be. There is some alliteration, some assonance, occasional rhyme, in the free verse used by Lawrence, but little real effort to evoke sound.

One characteristic device in the syntax is tricolon—groups of three: "change, or redder dreams, or richer life"; "with broken faces - that appear, disappear, reappear"; "What mind could stop, freeze, redeem - what is no longer there"; "Old men, young men, dead men - sleeping in a shroud"; "in what shimmers, echoes, burns"; "he is - architect, potter, saint"—there are many examples.

But the poems do not need to be read for sound; they read well silently. They are not songs, but meditations.

Really untypical is "The Apple Tree":

Buried in the crotch
Of a white apple tree
Some miser's hoard
Lured us,
Children on a holiday,
Whose fingers
Tore into sweetness
And offered taste
Flesh of the honeycomb—
Until the shrill pine
Whistle stung our ears
And the horned oak
Bore us home,

Now old and misers too
We can barely remember that holiday
Oh how the honey honed
Our tongue with sweet lyric
And made windows of our eyes.

More typical is the concluding untitled poem:

And if at the hour of turning,
I should find myself indexed on the tip of a cataleptic tongue,
I shall have to grip myself
so hard, so hard, to prove to no one else but myself,
neither star nor stone, that I am I,
before glass breaks,
canting spires crash,
and all eyes lie unbeaded
caught in beadling night.

Now that Lawrence is "cut out in little stars" it is good that we can share a little of Lawrence's light.

Beaufort County Native Potter at The Art Center

A Feast of Glazes in Glover Show

— A Review —

In Beaufort County, a few miles beyond the Pitt County village of Pactolus, potter Irene Glover works in her studio, a place she describes as "surrounded by fields, woods and country quiet, which is a long way from silence, I might add."

Outside her studio window, guineas, ducks, chickens, geese, peacocks cats and latest count, 17 puppies, parade by, friendly and inquisitive.

Today, from three to five in the afternoon, a reception in Miss Glover's honor is being held at the Greenville Art Center, with the artist to be present to meet visitors. The reception opens her exhibition of pottery.

"Search for form has been the most rewarding pursuit of my life," Miss Glover says. And she excels in creating forms — forms that at first sight and after repeated viewing are deeply satisfying.

But it's the rich beauty of her glazes that sets this potter in a class by herself. "I like color," she admits, "and at the moment I'm exploring brilliant reds, blues and stark whites, among other colors."

The colors she mentioned are in a wide range of variations of basic colors — pomegranate, raspberry and plum reds; Persian, twilight, and cobalt blues, milk whites, and blue blacks. On some pieces, an outside glaze of gray, brown, or beige is contrasted with an inside glaze of shimmering ripe fruit colors.

The glazes transcend their purpose as decorative color. They are lustrous, abstracted designs suggestive of landscapes flowing across the surface of the fired form, intuitively conceived and brilliantly executed.

Among her recent pieces there are a few superb examples of the potter's craft worthy of comparison with the work of established master potters. In these, form, texture, design and glaze unite clay and poetry.

Supplementary to her pottery, Miss Glover is showing a collection of short poems, hand printed in old English script by a friend.

She also is showing some drawings. These are no match for her pottery — or the poems, for that matter.

A 1966 graduate of East Carolina University with a M.A. in ceramics and painting, Miss Glover after graduation taught in a Maryland public school and later was supervisor of an adult crafts program at the Arts and Crafts Association in Winston-Salem.

Giving up teaching, she returned to the farm of her birth in 1971 to build a studio and has worked from there since.

A regular exhibitor in professional craft groups in North Carolina, her work is stocked by shops and galleries in North Carolina, Virginia, and Tennessee. In these states she has also had shows in a large number of exhibitions.

A POT AND A JUG . . . both useful, both works of the potter's skill, are among over 100 items in Irene Glover's exhibit opening at the Greenville Art Center today.

Tar River Poets — the eugene robert platt issue. Poetry Forum Series, No. 13, Fall 1973. Greenville, N.C. East Carolina University, 40 pps, $1.25

When eugene robert platt (like e.e. cummings, platt does not capitalize words) visited East Carolina University several months ago, his pre-arrival credentials heralded him as a young poet of great promise.

platt' seven poems in No. 13 of the Poetry Forum Series justify that claim. As platt is a young man of still relatively slight output, his work needs to be judged on the basis of what his current poems indicate may lie ahead. From that viewpoint, much can be expected of him in coming years.

Any attempt to give expression to the unique quality of a poet is a difficult undertaking — a good poet speaks a message that is universal and yet subject to provoking differing individual responses.

Without any intention of labeling Platt, it can be noted his Southern heritage (Platt is a native of Charleston, S.C.) comes through strongly in three of the seven poems in Tar Heel Poets.

From quartet for an unholy southern city, these lines clearly reflect a social attitude prevalent in the city of his birth:

"then i had the audacity to advance the view — not new, but too bold for the old town—that perhaps dermal pigmentation wasn't a valid criterion upon which to judge a person's worth or even the legitimacy of his birth."

In my lai meditation (for Richard Ryan), which I feel is the finest of the Platt poems in this publication, he makes it impossible for the reader to turn aside, to attempt to excuse himself by saying "My Lai is no business of mine."

"my apathy has appalled my apathy and can no longer ignore deaths of strangers suddenly ceasing to live in strange sounding places, their strange featured faces falling apart.
my apathy has appalled my apathy."

And later in the same poem:

"if god has not turned away,
i shall pray for peace
then send a dollar to CARE to help the injured replace their heads, hearts and underwear
if god has not turned away."

Platt is assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs at Clarion State College in Pennsylvania and holds a diploma in Anglo-Irish literature from Trinity College, Dublin. coffee and solace, his first volume of poetry, published in 1970, has gone through several printings.

This is the fourth of the Poetry Forum Series to feature the poems of an individual poet. Rounding out the Platt poems in Number 13 are poems by Michael Mills, Chuck Perkinson, Horace R. Whitfield, Anita Brehm, Susan Quinn, Mark Sheldon, Karen Dawes, Joseph Daugman, and Douglas McReynolds, Space does not permit mentioning several worthwhile poems from this group of poets.

The Tar River Poets series is a valuable contribution to the contemporary poetry scene. Poets represented include local poets, rising young poets and established poets. Copies of Number 13 and earlier numbers are available from The Mushroom in Greenville or from Vernon Ward, Chairman of the ECU Poetry Forum.

Francis Speight in TV Feature

Francis Speight never realized his ambition. He wanted to be a writer.

Instead, he became a revered painter, an award-winning realist whose works hang in permanent collections of the Metropolitan Museum, the Pennsylvania Academy and the Art Gallery of Toronto, to name a few.

The artist in residence at East Carolina University will be featured on North Carolina: The Arts Sunday, Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. on channel 25. The program will premiere Nov. 14 in Raleigh during Culture Week.

Born in 1896 in Bertie County, Francis Speight became the first North Carolina artist to be honored with a one-man exhibit at the North Carolina Museum of Art.

"In Francis Speight we see a thing that is unique," says the museum's curator Ben F. Williams. His uniqueness is his interest in realism—with certain impressionist tendencies here and there."

While his contemporaries followed more fashionable trends in art, Francis Speight, in his quiet and gently way, pursued his interest in landscapes as a teacher and student for 40 years at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, the oldest art school in the country and one of the best known.

Filmed on location in Bertie County, Greenville and Pennsylvania, the University Television program on Francis Speight lets the artist tell the story of his art and himself.

"I find that besides painting. . .my thoughts run much more to matters having to do with sociology, I guess, theology or something of that sort," he says. "There are so many things I want to find out about.

"I suppose I'm something of a preacher, but I'd really rather be a painter."

Francis Speight always paints from life, filling the canvas with shadow and light and what Dorothy Grafly called "wisps of poetic contemplation" in the Magazine of Art.

"His is the vision of the poet, not that of a reformer, and in the maturity of his career he is expressing in terms of paint what as a boy he thought to say in words."

Sexauer Reception

A reception for East Carolina University faculty member and printmaker Donald Sexauer is being held at McDonald Art Gallery in Charlotte from two to five this afternoon.

More than 40 prints are being shown, and the show will be on view through November 30.

Film Critic-Teacher Writes About Movies

William (Bill) Stephenson, whose review of The Treasure of the Sierra Madre appears in today's paper, is a man with a life-long commitment to movies.

An associate professor in the English Department, East Carolina University, Stephenson teaches a course in film history. He is also a writer who writes informatively and entertainingly about films — whether about an individual movie or on trends and contrasts within the movie industry.

A brief look at two recent articles by Stephenson gives an insight into his ability to add a new dimension of understanding and enjoyment to movies.

The Two Versions of Gaslight, published in Film Heritage, is a fascinating account of Stephenson's detective work in shattering a generally accepted myth. His opening lines immediately capture the reader's imagination....."It was bound to happen. First there was a British film called Gaslight (1940) directed by Thorold Dickinson. Next M-G-M bought all rights to it and destroyed the negative, so that there could be a Hollywood film called Gaslight (1944) directed by George Cukor. The myth was bound to arise that the British version was a lost masterpiece, infinitely superior to the crass American product." Stephenson adds: "The myth flourishes today, enshrined in standard references like the Filmgoer's Companion...."

Having raised the myth issue, Stephenson effectively refutes it, pointing out that the British version of Gaslight does indeed exist, and is "still shown — for instance, at London's National Film Theater."

With this established, Stephenson moves to the heart of his article, his analysis of both versions, each based on the story, Angel Street.

In comparing the two versions, he says "objective comparison reveals that neither version deserve the title of 'masterpiece any more or less than the other. The significant and interesting contrast between the two is not in quality but in kind."

Stephenson's observations, his sketching of attitudes influencing British and American approaches to telling the Gaslight story in film, combines excellent writing and perceptive criticism.

In another recent article, 'Kes' and The Press, Stephenson's penchant for meticulous research is evident.

In this case, the subject is a British film, Kes, the story of a 15 year old boy and his pet hawk. A newspaper story in the Evening Standard in September 1969, about distribution problems encountered by the film's director and producer with the Rank Organization, sparked a wave of interest that eventually mushroomed into a national public issue in Britain.

Stephenson's documentation of the success story of this modest film, of which he states "No one who had viewed the film denied its artistic merits," takes the reader inside the machinations of big time film industry, revealing the hesitations, fears, and blunders of those in power when it comes to money making versus artistic worth.

The real issue in this Stephenson article, however, as the title 'Kes' and the Press implies, is the question of whether "newspaper reviews or notices have any decisive effect on a film's chances." Stephenson's study of this classic example is an intriguing one, as an answer to the press question; the complexity of movie distribution; and the merits of "Kes' as a movie.

A Full-Time 'God Squad'

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — Ten men in blue patrolling in police cars are carrying Bibles instead of guns. They're unofficially known as the "God Squad."

"We think it's the only group like it in the country," says Dale Pope, police public information officer for this Seattle suburb of 53,000 persons.

Most departments have chaplains on call "but we haven't heard of any others who have a group of clergymen like this on a seven-day, 24-hour-a-day, on-call set-up."

Their duties include the regular chaplain chores of helping deal with family disturbances and notifying relatives after deaths. But they also ride in a patrol car at least once a month for eight hours.

The Rev. Les Carney's first patrol duties in the two-month-old program included helping some young people start their car. After the car started, "the young man came over to the open window and said, 'I'll bet I know what you did — you said a prayer, didn't you?'" Carney said.

$277,137 In ECU Grants

A total of $277,137 in granted funds was awarded to East Carolina University during October.

The two largest grants were given the School of Allied Health and Social Professions for projects in social work and corrections.

Dr. John R. Ball, chairman of the Department of Social Work, received $95,747 from the N. C. Department of Social Services, and Herman G. Moeller, director of ECU's correctional services program, received $79,833 from the Mid-East Economic Development Commission for the ECU Center for Correctional Sciences and Police Administration.

Other federal and state government grants were awarded for projects in continuing education, hearing loss research, public health education, Head Start Supplementary training, special education, driver education, and the Regional Drug Program.

Doll Show Is Set Dec. 4

Dolls displayed at Pitt Plaza will be given to children of families in the organization's Christmas Aid Program.

Approximately 20 groups in Greenville are participating in the dressing of around 300 dolls used in the show. All dolls are ordered by the Salvation Army for the annual event.

East Carolina Blasts Spiders, 44-14

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The University of Richmond's Frank Jones watched East Carolina University's Pirates demolish William & Mary one week ago Saturday.

Afterwards, he said, "I wasn't too surprised by the outcome of East Carolina's game with William & Mary. They (W&M) were kind of beat up. You can't lose the people they have lost and still be as effective as you once were." Saturday afternoon, just one week later, along with 21,251 fans, Frank Jones watched East Carolina University's Pirates demolish the University of Richmond, 44-14.

And he didn't have a whole lot to say afterwards.

For the Pirates, it was a near perfect day. Only twice did the Buc defense slip, on two long passes by Harry Knight that went for touchdowns. One covered 35 yards, to Mike Mahoney, while the other was a 46-yard bomb to George Crossman.

Aside from that, the Spiders, with their fearsome offense, were held to only 89 yards rushing and just 91 yards passing, not counting the two scoring tosses.

And the Pirate offense, led by Carl Summerell's brilliant passing and the running of Carlester Crumpler, racked up 427 yards in total yards on the way to the victory that left no doubts as to who was the 1973 Southern Conference champion.

For East Carolina it was their eighth win in 10 starts this year, and their sixth in the Southern against no losses—a streak of 14 straight in the league overall, and it left them with their second straight league title, regardless of what happens in next week's contest with Appalachian.

Summerell's passing was almost letter perfect. He hit on 11 of 15 throws for 167 yards and three touchdowns. He went to Vic Wilford for 68 yards just three plays into the game, then found Stan Eure on a 13-yarder, and Mike Shea from the two.

Carlester Crumpler galloped in from the 41, and Kenny Strayhorn hit from the one.

Then, the fabulous foot of Jim Woody put 14 points on the board. He kicked all five extra points and a conference-record tieing three field goals, of 46, 44 and 31 yards. The 46-yarder broke the old school record of 43, set by him against North Carolina.

Crumpler, carrying 27 times, picked up 141 yards, leaving him within reach of 1,000 yards despite missing much of the year with injuries.

Richmond's talented Barty Smith, who left the game with a pinched nerve early in the second period, picked up only 24 yards in seven carries.

Knight, under a lot of pressure from the Wild Dogs, got good protection, but hit on only 11 of 29.

On the first play of the game, Summerell showed that he was in command of things. He took the ball on a keeper around the left side, picking up 16 yards to set the tone for the day. That put the ball on the 29. Strayhorn banged over the left side for three more to the 32 and from there Summerell struck.

He went over the middle to Mike Shea, but the ball was just a little too high, and Shea only tipped it with his fingers. It came down instead in the arms of Wilfore who was all alone and race 68 yards for the first score after only a minute and 16 seconds. Woody's kick made it 7-0.

The Spiders came roaring back however, moving to tie it up. From their own 30, they drove in seven plays. Edvins Kreilis broke away for 20 to the Pirate 47 after a three yard gain on the first play and the Bucs were hit by a flag two plays later putting the ball on the 40. They pushed down to the 35 in three plays, and from there, Knight found Mahoney open across the middle for the 35-yard scoring pass. Terry Carter kicked the PAT, tieing it a 7-7 with 9:47 to go in the period.

East Carolina drove after the kickoff with Strayhorn breaking away for a 47-yard TD run, only to have it called back by a clip. From the Richmond 48 Jonathan Deming kicked into the teeth of a strong wind. The ball traveled only three yards, to the 45, but there, Richmond's Don Kizzar touched the ball, then walked away. Don Schink alertly fell on it and the Bucs were moving again.

After a yard, Summerell hit Eure for 14, and Crumpler gained five. Carl hit Eure again for 13 more, and Crumpler got three in two carries. Summerell scrambled from the 10 down to the two, and Strayhorn hit twice into the line before going over from the one to put the Bucs back up, 14-7 after Woody's kick with 1:22 left.

In the second period, Woody came up with his three field goals, on consecutives drives. Each time, the Bucs got good field position on short punts by Richmond into the wind. The first, however, was partially blocked by Ernest Madison, and the Bucs got it at the 17, setting up the third touchdown.

Crumpler hit up the middle for four, then Summerell hit Eure from the 13 for the score. Woody's boot upped it to 21-7 with 14:07 left.

After a punt to the 35 of the Spiders, the Bucs got their first field goal, the record setter. The Bucs were held on fourth down at the 28 and Woody's 46-yard kick just settled over the crossbars with 9:42 left to make it 24-7.

After another kick, this time to the 36, the Bucs appeared to be driving, with Crumpler going 25 yards for the score only to have it called back for a clip. The penalty killed the drive and once more Woody kicked, this time for 44 yards with 4:36 left driving the score to 27-7.

One last time, Woody provided the points, as the Bucs started from the 40 after Jonathan Deming picked off a fumble in midair. The Bucs drove to the 13 with time running out, and Woody kicked a 31-yarder with just seven seconds showing, running it to 30-7 at halftime.

Richmond got the kick in the second half, but the Wild Dogs held and the Bucs got it at their own 45 after the punt. Schink went up the middle for four and Crumpler added 10 on two plays, down to the Spider 41. The next play, he went up the middle, broke away from a potential tackler and outraced the rest of the Spider defense for the touchdown. Woody's kick made it 37-7 with 12:03 left, and the Bucs had slammed the door.

Richmond did come back to drive down to the Buc 23 on the next series, but on fourth and one, a collision in the backfield aided the Pirate defense to turn the ball over. East Carolina later moved to the Richmond 22 before a pass interception turned the ball back over at the 36.

Knight hit Rickey Brown for eight from there and John Palazeti went up the middle for five. Knight again went to Brown, this time at the Buc 46,

ASU Takes Bucs, 3-2

Immanuel Udogu scored two goals Saturday to lead defending champion Appalachian State to another Southern Conference soccer title with a 3-2 victory over East Carolina.

Udogu scored twice for Appalachian in the first half, one with an assist by John Gimenez for a 1-0 lead and again, unassisted, for a 2-0 lead. ECU's Tom O'Shea scored unassisted to make it 2-1 at the half.

In the final half, Frank Keno scored unassisted to give Appalachian a 3-1 lead. O'Shea scored again with just under four minutes left in the game, but Appalachian held on for the final 3-2 victory.

Appalachian earlier had beaten ECU, 9-0, at Boone, N.C. Appalachian finishes 9-4-1 and 5-0-1 in the conference. East Carolina had won its last three games to take the Northern Division title and get a place in the finals against Appalachian, the Southern Division winner.

Penn State Holds Off Pack For 35-29 Victory

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Tailback John Cappelletti's third touchdown of the game, a 27-yard run in the fourth period, fired sixth-ranked Penn State to a 35-29 victory over North Carolina State Saturday and probably saved an Orange Bowl bid for the unbeaten Nittany Lions.

Cappelletti gained 220 yards on 41 carries as Penn State rallied from a 14-9 halftime deficit and twice snapped ties in the second half to earn its ninth consecutive victory. The loss was the third in 10 games for the tenacious Wolfpack.

Cappelletti got a lot of help from split end Gary Hayman, who returned a punt 83 yards for a touchdown and set up three other scores with key pass receptions and a 27-yard punt return.

North Carolina State took a 7-0 lead in the second quarter on a one yard run by Stan Fritts. After Penn State's Chris Bahr kicked a 23-yard field goal, quarterback Bruce Shaw ran five yards for a second North Carolina State touchdown which gave the Wolfpack a 14-3 lead.

Before the half ended, however, Cappelletti ran 34 yards for a Penn State score to make it 14-9.

In the third period Penn State took the lead for the first time on an eight-yard run by Cappelletti and Hayman's 83-yard punt return. But Fritts smashed one yard for his second score and Charley Young ran for a two-point conversion to tie the score at 22-22.

Bob Nagle raced 10 yards for a Penn State TD 3:47 into the fourth period and Bahr kicked the extra point to give Penn State the lead again at 29-22, but North Carolina State came right back, with Young racing 69 yards for a touchdown and Ron Sewell kicking the point to tie it again.

Penn State drove 60 yards on six plays for the winning touchdown with 6:22 gone in the final quarter. A 14-yard pass from quarterback Tom Shuman to Hayman gave the Lions a first down at the Wolfpack 36. On third down, Cappelletti broke off the left side, shook off several tacklers and raced 27 yards into the end zone.

A pair of Orange Bowl officials attended the game and indicated that a Penn State-Louisiana State match-up in Miami New Year's night was a virtual certainty.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

Was it just 10 weeks ago that everyone was saying that it was going to be a long season for the East Carolina Pirates?

They had come off the field at Carter Stadium with a 57-8 drubbing at the hands of N. C. State, and the prophets said that any hopes of the Pirates repeating as Southern Conference champs were dim.

Was it just 10 weeks ago? Sure doesn't seem like it. Seems like it's really been a short season.

Why just yesterday people were saying Carlester Crumpler couldn't run. That the Bucs had been overrated at the start of the season.

But not today. No sir, there's not one person around—not one who would call the Pirates overrated now. Especially no one in the Southern Conference.

For like the legendary Phoenix, from the ashes of that defeat in Raleigh, the Pirates have risen more glorious than ever.

Crumpler can run. He's proved that by drawing close to 1,000 yards despite sitting out much of the year. And he's scored nine touchdowns, all in the last few games.

And Carl Summerell, if there was ever anyone who doubted that he can throw, can. He hit 11 of 15 for 167 yards and three touchdowns.

And—it was all against the defense labeled the toughest of the Southern Conference.

You'll find a little argument there, too. From a bunch called the Wild Dogs. Only three times in conference games has any one scored touchdowns on them, along with two field goals. They've allowed very little yardage within the league, and Richmond's Spiders won't argue with that.

Someone asked Sonny Randle if he'd like to meet State again, and the volatile Pirate mentor didn't hesitate at all Saturday after the game. "I'd love to meet them again. It would be an entirely different game," he said.

But he also questioned whether he could stand it. "The pressure on me has been tremendous these last three weeks. I didn't think we had a chance of dominating this game, or the one last week. I respect our offense, but I never thought they could do it like this. Obviously they haven't felt the pressure."

The Bucs haven't been approached about a bowl bid as yet, but Randle would "consider it criminal if these kids don't get a chance."

And he promoted Summerell as this year's Southern Conference Player of the Year. "If he's not the best player in the conference, I'm a Japanese astronaut."

He didn't believe that Barty Smith's injury had an affect on the game. "We had it under control by the time it happened. He's a fine runner, and most deserving of his praises."

Now, unless someone does decide the Bucs have potential in a bowl, the season will end Saturday when Appalachian visits Ficklen Stadium. "That game is for our seniors and our pride," Randle said.

And when it's over, the two Pirates seniors, Crumpler and Summerell, will look forward to the pro drafts. "They both should to high," the coach said.

Has it really been just 10 weeks?

Colgate Nips Indians, 49-42

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—Quarterback Tom Parr accumulated 320 yards in total offense and running back Mark van Eeghen broke Colgate's career rushing record Saturday as the Red Raiders turned three William and Mary fumbles into touchdowns and struggled to a 49-42 football victory over the defenseless Indians.

Parr ran 18 times for 142 yards and completed nine of 12 passes for 178 and one touchdown.

Van Eeghen ran 23 times for 107 yards and two more scores. The 206-pound senior now has 2,214 career yards running.

Colgate, now 4-4, failed to gain the first time it had the ball, then scored on its next five possessions for a 35-14 halftime lead. The Indians, behind the passing of second string quarterback Rip Scherer, three times cut their deficit to one touchdown, but an interception by the Red Raiders' Todd Palmatier cut short their final threat with two minutes left.

Scherer, who came in when Indian starter Bill Deery was injured early in the second quarter, hit 15 of 22 passes for 165 yards and two touchdowns.

Jon Anderson, a 171-pound junior, also played a big role in the Colgate victory, running 18 times for 91 yards and two touchdowns and scoring a third time on a 63-yard pass play from Parr.

William and Mary tailback Doug Gerhart ran 11 times for 89 yards and one score as the Indians, now 6-4, missed apparently their best chance for seven victories in a season for the first time since 1951.

Maryland Rips Virginia, 33-0

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Quarterback Dan Kinard came off the bench to score two touchdowns and lead Maryland to a 33-0 thumping of Atlantic Coast Conference foe Virginia Saturday, insuring the Terps' first winning football season in 11 years.

Maryland, ranked No. 1 in the ACC in total defense and eighth in that category nationally, recovered a Cavalier fumble and intercepted three Scott Gardner passes to improve their record to 6-4.

Kinard, a 6-foot-1 junior, replaced starter Al Neville early in the second period after the Terps had been unable to move against the Cavalier defense.

On the third play after entering the game, Kinard took the snap, turned his right end and sprinted 52 yards for the first score of the game.

In the final period Kinard directed a 33-yard Maryland drive, following an interception by the Terps' Ken Schroy. Kinard plunged the final yard for the touchdown on an end run after a fake into the line had frozen the Virginia defense.

The Maryland defense set up two quick scores in the third period. Jim Brechbiel rushed in to block a Billy Maxwell punt inside the Maryland five. The ball then squirted through the end zone for a safety.

The Terps took the ensuing free kick at their own 41 and, behind the passing of Kinard, drove for a touchdown in seven plays with tailback Richard Jennings scoring from four yards out.

Maryland, which rolled up 512 yards total offense and 392 yards on the ground, drove 95 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown highlighted by the running of Jennings and junior tailback Allan Bloomingdale.

Clemson Upsets Heels By 37-29

CHAPEL HILL, N.C (AP) — Quarterback Ken Pengitore scored one touchdown and passed for another as he led Clemson to a 37-29 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over North Carolina Saturday before a shivering crowd of 37,500.

Clemson, 5-4 for the season, piled up 329 yards the first half in rolling up a 30-21 lead.

Quarterback Nic Vidnovic led the Tar Heels, completing three touchdown passes. It was the sixth loss for North Carolina against three victories.

North Carolina scored quickly in the first period after Pengitore fumbled and Terry Cantrell recovered on Clemson's 15. Sammy Johnson scored from the one.

But, Clemson took the ensuing kickoff and swept 76 yards with Pengitore hitting Smiley Sanders on a 23-yard touchdown pass. The Tigers went ahead 14-7 early in the second quarter on a nine-yard run by Pengitore to climax a 100-yard drive after the Tar Heels had been stopped inches from the Clemson goal.

The Tar Heels came back to tie it at 14-14 on an eight-yard from Vidnovic to Dick Oliver.

Clemson swept 77 yards in five plays for another second quarter touchdown with Toni Mathews scoring from the three. A 66-yard pass from Pengitore to Sanders set it up on the four.

Mathews scored again minutes later on a five-yard run after Tim Stough recovered Johnson's fumble on the UNC 40.

Runners Do Well

GREENVILLE, S. C.—Three East Carolina cross-country runners performed well in the Regionals held in Greenville yesterday.

Ed Rigsby finished 33 in the meet which included some 300 runners, with a time of 30:22, good enough to qualify for the nationals. His time was a full minute ahead of his time here last week in the Southern Conference meet.

Gerald Klas finished 34th in 30:42, also a minute ahead of his time last week. Scott Miller was 78th in 31:38, but was among the top 25 freshmen in the meet.

LITTLEFIELD—Ayden-Grifton's Chargers had little difficulty in rolling to a 49-6 victory over North Lenoir Friday night as they closed out their regular season with a 9-1 record.

The victory gave the Chargers a half-interest in the Eastern Carolina Conference championship, which they share with Southern Wayne. Both teams finished the season with 8-1 league records, and reign as co-champs. Both also will advance into the 3-A State Playoffs next week, with Ayden-Grifton, by virtue of its win over Southern giving it the top seeded berth.

The Chargers will meet the winner of the Edenton-Ahoskie game in the Northeastern Conference, while Southern takes on Havelock, the Coastal champion.

Charger quarterback Greg Nelson passed for two touchdowns and ran for another as he paced the Ayden-Grifton victory. His run of three yards was the fourth touchdown of the game, while he hit Milton Brown on scoring passes of 21 and 27 yards. Nelson also ran over two two-point conversions.

Tom Craft also scored twice, on runs of five and 38 yards. William West scored once, from the two and kicked three of five PATs. The other touchdown was a 28-yard run with a blocked punt by Ronnie Dixon.

The lone North Lenoir score came in the final half-minute of play, when Mike Jones took a 40-yard pass from Craig Walton.

The Chargers completely dominated the game, although they allowed their second unit to play much of the second half. The Chargers worked up a total of 342 yards in total offense, while giving up 157, mostly in second half aerials.

The Chargers scored on their first possession of the night. They got the ball in good field position, forcing North Lenoir to punt into the teeth of a brisk wind, and the nine yard kick put it on the Charger 42.

A five-yard penalty started things off, as the Hawks were off-sides, and Craft hit over left tackle for six and a first down. West carried twice for nine yards and Nelson sneaked for the first down at the Hawk 36. West went wide to gain eight, then Craft hit through the line for 11 to the 17. After a short gain, Craft again burst through for 10 to the five. On the next play from there, Craft took it over center for the score with 6:14 left. West added the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

The Chargers got it back quickly, as Hawk quarterback Johnny Turner funbled on the first play and Ernest Dixon recovered on the North Lenoir 31. West cracked through for 12 to the 19, and Craft added nine. Ronnie Salmon picked up six to the four, and Craft hit down to the two. West took it over left tackle for the final two yards and made it Ayden-Grifton, 13-0 with 3:44 still to go in the quarter.

Again, Dixon was Johnny-on-the-spot as Turner fumbled again two plays into the Hawks' series, turning it over this time at the 21.

And on the first play, Nelson hit Brown wide-open in the end zone for the score. West again kicked and with 2:39 still left in the opening period, the Chargers held a 20-0 lead.

As the quarter changed, North Lenoir finally held Ayden-Grifton, and took advantage of the win to get good field position at their own 43. They pushed it over midfield, but Brown picked off an interception to halt the threat, turning it over at the 38

West and Craft moved the ball steadily down the field, with Craft hitting over the center stripe to the 42. West added six yards, and the Hawks were slapped with a 15-yarder for face-masking. That put it on the 21. After a yard loss, West took a pitchout around right end for 19 to the three, and Nelson kept to the right on the next play for the score. He then bootlegged the ball into the end zone on the conversion to run it to 28-0 with six mintues left in the half.

Ayden-Grifton got it back on another fumble recovery in Hawk territory but promptly turned it back on an interception.

Then, in the fading minutes of the period, they forced a Hawk punt and took it at the 50. West went around right end for 12 to the 38, and Craft broke away from there to go the rest of the way. West again added the PAT with 55 seconds left to make it 35-0.

The Chargers took the opening kickoff of the second half and moved again. They started on the 33 and in three carries got a first down at the 46. Nelson then hit Brown for 15 to the Hawk 39. Craft added six and on third down, Tony Koonce took it on a pitchout for 21 yards to the 12. The Chargers were penalized 15 yards on the next play for offensive pass interference, but Nelson hit Brown again from the 27, and the score on the next play. Nelson, holding for West, got a bad snap, so he picked it up and ran with it for the two-pointer and the Chargers led, 43-0.

The Chargers quickly held North Lenoir once more, and the defense finally got a score. With Richard McCarter back in punting position, Ronnie Dixon broke through the line, blocked the kick and picked the ball up to dance untouched into the end zone for a 49-0 lead with 6:51 left in the third period.

After that, the Chargers went strictly with their second unit and still managed to get a couple of drives going. North Lenoir also moved from time to time into Ayden-Grifton territory, but not until the final 30 seconds did they manage to score.

That occurred when, with 38 seconds left, Bobby Bennett got the snap and tried to run off more time by dodging tacklers in the backfield, but lost the handle on the ball. Jeff Rouse pulled it in at the 40 of the Chargers.

That gave the Hawks the opportunity they had waited for. Walton hit Jones coming across the middle and he broke away to go the distance for the score, allowing the Hawks to escape a shutout.

Craft led the Charger rushing with 121 yards in 14 carries, while West had 87 in 13 carries, all in the first half.

Nelson, with his two touchdown passes, brought his total aerial bombs to 19 for the season.

Eagles Romp Past Johnston

MICRO—Robersonville got the engine fired up Friday night for the state 2-A playoffs with a 42-12 blasting of North Johnston as the Eagles got six touchdowns from six different rushers.

The Eagles totaled 404 yards in total offense getting 17 first downs and 352 yards rushing. They held North Johnston in check until the last quarter when NJ scored both of its two scores.

The first Robersonville score came after a punt which the Eagles took at their 41. A 21 yard run by Robin Fowler set up the touchdown pass of 25 yards from Matt Wilson to Ricky Purvis. The kick failed.

A short kickoff was recovered by the Eagles at the NJ 35 when the North Johnston players decided not to cover the ball. Frankie Spruill set up his own touchdown run of seven yards with a run of 15 yards. Spruill also ran in the conversion.

The next touchdown drive began on the Robersonville 21. Sammy Gray had a dash of 13 yards, Spruill one of 28 and Fowler ran for 15 yards to move the ball along. The march was finished off when Gray ran 10 yards for the score and Fowler kicked the point after for a 21-0 lead.

In the third quarter, Donnie Matthewson recovered a North Johnston fumble on the Eagle 35 and Robersonville drove for another score as Kim Knox sent four yards and Fowler kicked the PAT. Robersonville scored again in the period after Larry Jackson blocked a punt on the NJ 19 and recovered it himself. On the next play, Fowler danced his way for 19 yards and the TD. He also added the PAT.

Jimmy Stalls put the finishing touches on a drive that started after a punt which the Eagles took on their 37. Runs by Matthewson of 18 yards and 16 by Ricky Spruill sustained the drive and a 27 yard pass from Jimmy Stalls to Marshall Lawrence set up the three yard run by Stalls for the score. Fowler again added the extra point.

NJ turned a blocked punt into its first score as they went 18 yards with Chris Pate taking a five yard pass from Randy Pope for the TD.

NJ went 90 yards for its second score and that came on a six yard run by Gerald Barnes. On both scores, the conversion attempts failed.

Fowler led the Robersonville rushers with 113 yards in 11 carries. Gray ground out 105 in 10 tries.

Next week, Robersonville will begin play in the first round of the state playoffs hosting Fuquay-Varina which beat Apex, Friday night, 16-8. The site for the game has not been decided yet, either Robersonville or Williamston, but Robersonville will be the home team.

The Eastern Plains champs finished the regular season with a record of 8-2.

The Citadel Surprises Furman In 26-21 Win

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Sophomores Andrew Johnson and Gene Dotson each scored twice to lead The Citadel's football team to a 26-21 upset Southern Conference victory over Furman Saturday.

Johnson, who ran 54 yards to score on The Citadel's first play from scrimmage, scored the clincher on an eight-yard run with 8:25 to play in the final period, 54 seconds after Furman had gone ahead for the first time.

Freshman Larry Robinson scored Furman's three touchdowns on short runs as he netted 128 yards in 26 carries. Johnson was the top rusher, netting 172 yards in 18 carries, 141 in the first half.

The loss broke a four-game Furman victory string and left the Paladins 7-3 for the year and 3-3 in the conference. The Citadel snapped a three-game losing streak to bring its league record to 1-5 and its overall mark to 3-7.

Citadel runners romped for 397 yards in 54 rushes, Dotson contributing 131 in 20 carries. It was his 58-yard burst on first down to the Furman 10 right after the Paladins had taken the lead that set up Johnson's winning run two plays later.

Furman came back after that to drive to a third down and nine situation on the Bulldog 30, but Citadel tackle Greg Erickson charged through to spill quarterback Charles Elvington for a five-yard loss back on the 35 and remove the threat of a field goal attempt. Robinson's fourth down run netted only four yards and The Citadel took over with 2:05 to play and held the ball the rest of the way.

The Citadel scored a touchdown in each quarter and Furman tallied once in each of the last three periods.

Johnson's early 54-yard scoring run marked the third game in a row that a Furman opponent had scored on its first scrimmage play.

After Robinson's one-yard run tied the score for Furman in the second period, Dotson gave The Citadel a 14-7 halftime lead with a one-yard run and in the third period he made it 20-7 with a two-yard touchdown sprint. But Ralph Tice's conversion kick missed and Furman went ahead by a point on two Robinson scores, one in the third quarter and another with 9:19 to play in the last period.

Chowan Stops Bear Grass

EDENTON—Chowan High School handed Bear Grass a pair of losses Friday night as the two teams opened the 1973-74 basketball season.

Chowan took the girls' contest, 39-18, then rolled to a 64-38 win in the boys' game.

In the girls' event, Chowan rushed out to a 9-4 lead in the first period of play, but couldn't make any headway in the second. Both teams pushed through six points to leave Chowan ahead, 15-10 at halftime.

The third period, however, saw the Chowan five pull away, outscoring Bear Greass, 9-4, for the second time. That ran the lead out to 24-14 as the final frame began. Chowan continued to dominate the final frame, 15-4, to win going away.

Rosa Coefield led the Chowan scoring with 24 points. High for the Bears was Vicki Beach, who had six.

In the boys' game, it wasn't much different. Chowan eased into a 12-10 lead at the end of the first quarter, then steadily pulled away. They outshot the Bears, 14-8, in the second frame extending the lead to 26-18 at halftime.

The Braves continued to pull away in the second half, building up a 19-6 advantage in the third period. That boosted the score to 45-24. They finished off the Bears with a 19-14 final period edge.

Melvin Leary led the Chowan scoring with 15 points, while Charles Wilson had 14 and Miles Roundtree had 12. For the Bears, Dave Biggs had 14 and Hilton Armstrong had 10.

Duke, Wake In 7-7 Deadlock

WINSTON-SALEM,N.C. (AP)—Duke freshman Dave Malechek's 39-yard field goal attempt with 11 seconds left was wide and the Blue Devils had to settle for a 7-7 Atlantic Coast Conference football tie with Wake Forest Saturday.

The deadlock broke two losing streaks and left each team with a 1-7-1 overall record and 0-3-1 in the ACC. Wake Forest entered the game with a seven-game losing streak and Duke had dropped six straight, losing a week earlier at Georgia Tech when Malechek's last-minute field goal attempt was ruled wide.

Tony Benjamin, Duke's late blooming freshman running star, ran 41 times for 186 yards. He set up his own one-yard touchdown run for the game's first score in the third period with a 52-yard dash to the Wake Forest 12.

Wake Forest's touchdown was set up in the fourth period when John Hardin recovered a Benjamin fumble on Duke's five. A 15-yard penalty slowed the short drive, but in four plays Wake Forest got its touchdown, Andy Carlton passing eight yards to Tom Fehring. Chuck Ramsey's conversion tied the score with 7:45 to play.

The Duke late field goal try, Malechek's fourth of the game, was set up when John Hill blocked a Ramsey punt and it went out of bounds on the Wake 21.

Ramsey, entering the game as the nation's top punter with a 46.5-yard average, battled a cold wind as he averaged 38.3 on 10 boots, ranging from 62 yards to 11.

Duke had a wide statistical edge, 302 yards running and passing to 119 for Wake Forest, which wound up with minus one yard passing, although a pass produced the Deacons' only touchdown.

Malechek missed field goal attempts of 52 and 24 yards in the first quarter and a 32-yarder in the second period.

Ramsey was short with a 54-yarder late in the second period.

and on the next play, connected with Crossman who broke away to go all the way for the only other Richmond score. Carter's PAT was good, making it 37-14.

The Bucs drove after the kickoff, but finally had to kick away near midfield. Billy Hibbs turned it back to the Bucs when he picked off a Knight fumble at the Richmond 42. That set up the final score of the game.

Crumpler got 16 in two lugs, then after a gain of five in two plays, Jimmy Howe broke away for 13 to the eight. Crumpler got four, then two to put it at the two. And as Richmond looked for the big back to take it over, Summerell calmly tossed to the all-alone Shea for the score. Woody kicked his fifth PAT and it was 44-14 with 8:11 left.

East Carolina drove into Richmond territory once more after that, and the Spiders also crossed midfield once more, but no further damage occured.

Woody, in addition to tieing the league and school single game field goal record, upped his PAT total to 32, snapping Peter Kriz' single season record of 30. Summerell's 11 completions tied the career mark of 194 set by John Casazza, while Crumpler's touchdown tied two school and league marks, Dave Alexander's 34 touchdowns and 204 points.

Bolding's pickoff of the intercepted fumble gives him seven interceptions for the year, tieing Bobby Ellis' mark.

East Carolina will close out the season next Saturday, playing host to Appalachian in one last conference game.

Southern Nash Outscores Conley, 18-6

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD—Southern Nash, still up after its upset win over Ayden-Grifton, stopped the D.H. Conley Vikings but not Willie Hawkins, managing to pull out an 18-6 win to end the season for both teams.

Hawkins recovered from being stifled last week at Farmville Central to runs for 126 yards and score one touchdown to finish his year with 1577 total rushing yards and 106 points.

The Vikings were beaten more by their own mistakes than any other thing. The Vikes fumbled seven times losing three. The other four either seriously impaired a drive or killed one when the Conley team was getting close to a score.

The Vikes had the opportunity to score only once in the game and they got that TD on fourth down after three unsuccessful tries. They did not get off a sustained drive until the third quarter scoring march and after that they were stymied again.

On the other hand, the Firebirds did not play that good a game either. They were able to overcome the cold breezes and chilled hands to turn a 12 yard punt, a fumble, and a 17 yard punt into the points that they needed to win.

The first score came after a 12 yard boot from the Conley 20 to the 32. Seven plays later, Ervin Marshman went in for the first six points of the game. Conley came back to tie it 6-6 in the third half on a four-yard fourth down drive by Willie Hawkins but Southern Nash got it right back on its next possession with Melvin Crawley scoring again on a 23 yard screen pass. That TD was set up by a fumble at the Conley 25.

Marshman score again, in the fourth quarter on a three yard run to finish it off.

The Vikings got the kick to start the game but in three plays they moved only six yards. They got it right back as Marshman fumbled on the second Firebird play. From his 29, Willie Hawkins blew through the line for 14 and carried twice more for nine. A pickup of eight by the Hawk got a first down but a loss of two and a blocked pass cooled the drive.

The Birds drove from their 11 to the 48 before they were forced to cough up the ball. They managed to back Conley up to the wall as Southern's punt was downed on the two. The Vikings moved it out on a gain of eight by Hawkins and two gains of five and one of six advanced the ball up to the 26 but a big loss on a sweep by Wayne Manesss cost the Vikings eight. The drive fizzled and Conley kicked it away but the ball went out of bounds at the 32.

Crawley carried for a short two and Marshman got three. Marshman got the first down with a gain of eight to cross the 20. A pickup of two and one of seven by Marshman got the ball on the ten. Crawley moved it to the two for Marshman who took it in on the next play. The kick failed but with 9:22 left in the half, Southern Nash led 6-0.

Hawkins fumbled on the second play after the Vikes got the ball back but a fumble by the Firebirds gave it back to Conley. Tehy did not want to do anything so right back it went to the Birds. They moved to the Conley 44 before giving it up on downs.

The Firebirds decided to kick off again to open the second half anf from the 15, Hawkins carried six times moving to the 47. Joey Baggett passed to Keith Gould for 20 yards but Gould fumbled the ball away. The Firebirds tried a third won pass only to see Kyle Edwards leap up and pick it off for Conley. Hawkins carried for 6, 7, and 13 yards for two first downs and putting the ball at the Sourthern 19. Calvin Hawkins went up the middle for six and got three more to move the ball closer to the goal and down to the 13.

A sweep lost a yard but Calvin Hawkins got two and five yards and four plays later the Vikings had a fourth and goal at the four. Willie slanted over left tackle and broke three tackles at the line of scrimmage to go in for the score. With 2:23 left in the third period.

Conley had the Firebirds stopped but when they kicked the ball, Manness attempted to make a reaching catch and instead fumbled giving the Firebirds new life at the Viking 25, Marshman lost a yard on the first play but Crawley got it down to the 21. Douglas Cooper bootlegged for two and then passed to Crawley for 23 yards, and the TD to put Southern Nash in front by 12-6 with 10:38 left to play.

The ball changed hands three times with the Firebirds getting it back with just under 5:00 left. Starting from the 50, Crawley carried twice for 27 yards and Marshman got it inside the 20 to the 15 with a run of eight off right tackle. Marshman swept the right side for 12 down to the three and on an identical play took the ball in for the score.

Twice, Conley tried to come back on passes but the cold kept hands from catching the ball and Conley could not get another point on the board.

Conley closes out the year, 4-5 in the loop and 4-5-1 overall.

Farmville Central Downs Aycock By 21-0 To Claim Third Place

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central closed out its football season Friday night with a 21-0 blanking of C.B. Aycock. The Jaguars finish the season in third place in the Eastern Carolina Conference with a record of 7-2 while the Falcons ended up 1-8.

Gregory Joyner led the Jags in getting the win as he threw three touchdown passes, two to Lee Johnson and one to Barry Johnson. Joyner hit on a total of nine of 11 for 79 yards and no interceptions. The Jaguars ground out 184 yards rushing.

After a scoreless first period, the Jaguars opened it up with a pair of scores in the second quarter. The first came with 10:44 left in the half as Joyner passed to Barry Johnson for eight yards and six points. The pass on the conversion failed.

A few minutes later, Joyner connected with Lee Johnson for another TD this one good from the 22 of the Falcons. Barry Johnson's kick was not good but Farmville carried a 12-0 lead into the dressing room at the half.

No one scored in the third quarter as the ball kept changing hands. Then in the fourth quarter, Farmville Central backed Aycock up to the Falcon goal line and Finch, the Aycock quarterback, was dropped behind the line for a safety.

With 1:14 left in ghe game, the Jags finished off another drive with a 10 yard pass from Joyner to Lee Johnson and Barry Johnson's kick made the final 21-0 score.

Ronnie Wilkes led the rushing for the Jaguars with 122 yards. Defensive standouts in the game were Walter Gorham, who made nine unassisted tackles, Jeff Cobb, who made seven and Wardell Blow with six.

Bertie Stuns Williamston

WINDSOR—Bertie Senior High School surprised Williamston's Tigers Friday night, gained a 15-6 victory over the Tigers. It was the fourth straight loss for Williamston, which finished the year with a 5-5 record. The Tigers were 2-5 in the Northeastern Conference.

Bertie ended up with a 3-7 mark, and a 3-4 conference record.

Bertie got the ball in good field position when it pushed over its first score late in the second period. A short Williamston punt put the ball only on the Tiger 32. On the first play from scrimmage, quarterback Kent Williford broke away to go the distance and put Bertie ahead, 6-0.

Then, even later in the period, Williford capped a 63-yard drive by hitting end Jesse Owens with a 21-yard scoring aerial with 40 seconds left in the half. That upped the Bertie lead to 12-0 at intermission.

Neither team was able to score in the third period, but Williamston did get its scoring drive of 75 yards going. On the first play of the final period, Joe Roberson cracked over the three to get the score. Roberson had picked up 60 of the 75 yards to lead the way. That cut it to 12-6, but the Tigers couldn't get going again.

With 6:21 left, Williford put the iceing on the cake with a 24-yard field goal, upping the lead to the final 15-6 margin.

The game ended the season for both teams.

Elsewhere in the league, Ahoskie, loser only in an upset to Bertie, stunned previously unbeaten Edenton, 23-0, to share the conference title with the Aces. Ahoskie, however, gets the 3-A State Playoff bid, and will meet Ayden-Grifton Friday on the Charger field.

North Pitt In Loss To Saints

BETHEL — Southern Wayne High School rolled to a 46-6 victory over North Pitt High School Friday night to maintain its share of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Both Southern and Ayden-Grifton finished the regular season with 8-1 league records, sharing the championship. North Pitt's Panthers finished 1-8 in the league.

Southern will now face Havelock, the Coastal Conference champion, in the first round of the 3-A State Playoffs next Friday.

Southern jumped into the lead with a pair of scores in the first period. Mike Ely got the score, pulling in a 15-yard pass from Tim Brill for the score. Valla Olliver picked up the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead.

Olliver then came back to score the first of his three touchdowns of the night. It came on a 10-yard run, and he also added the conversion to make it 16-0.

In the second period, Olliver scored again, this time from four yards out. He again picked up the conversion to run the score to 24-0.

The Panthers avoided a shutout by coming up with a 21-yard scoring pass from Craig McLawhorn to Clarence Mooring. That made it 24-6 at halftime.

Southern Wayne was held scoreless by the Panthers in the third period, but they came up with three in the final frame. Craig Clark picked up the first, from three yards away, and Olliver again got the the PAT. Olliver then scored his third touchdown, a 36-yard romp, but the PAT try failed.

Deep Thoughts Help Sullivan

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Sullivan bangs heads with National Football League defenders on Sundays, and thinks deep thoughts the other six days of the week.

Sullivan is a running back for the Philadelphia Eagles. Last year he spent most of the season on the bench, carrying the ball only 13 times for 13 yards. Now he's a starter and the seventh best rusher in the NFL's National Conference.

The 6-foot, 200-pounder will start at running back Sunday against the tough Atlanta Falcons. He says he's ready to express himself.

Express himself ? Is he planning to talk the Falcons' defenders into giving up yardage?

"Running with the ball," explains Sullivan, "you express yourself with motion. The moves are creative. Yes, there is a set place to go, but everything in between comes from impressions you create. Some people say it's poetic."

Fly Rods On N. C. Coast

By JOEL ARRINGTON

Some of the veteran surf fishermen at Cape Point could not believe their eyes, but what they saw was real. It was a sight never before seen at Cape Hatteras, nor rarely anywhere in the world.

Twenty fishermen, thereabouts, stood knee-deep to neck-deep in the surf and cast—so help me—with fly rods for bluefish and bonito. What's more, they caught fish. Not just a few, but scores of Bluefish weighing up to three pounds.

The occasion was the Salt Water Fly Rodders of America, International annual conference. Meeting at Nags Head, they foraged into the sounds and inlets, along the beach and out into the ocean ofter fish on their fly rods. Two out of four days brought good weather for fly fishing, and the little blues cooperated along the strand south of Cape Point, which is the tip of Cape Hatteras.

Silversides and mullet were thick in the surf and when the bluefish cut through them, schools of bait rose out of the water like someone shaking a sheet. Beyond the blues were bonito (also called albacore) slashing savagely through the same bait, sirens for enthusiastic anglers like Tom Earnhardt of Raleigh who waded to his arm pits after them. No fly fisherman hung a nonito, however, and I saw only one spin fisherman get a strike and that fish broke off.

"When albacore are not schooled up, they are tough," said Ken Lauer of Outer Banks Safaris. "You have to cast not where they were, but where they're gonna be. And are they fast."

Lauer's surf guiding service is the only one on Hatteras Island. He was kind enough to host several vehicles full of fly fishermen, and was amused, as I was, at the sight of them in the surf. Frankly, it looked a little silly. But wait a minute.

What we observed, admittedly, was much to do about very little. I mean they were pan-sized bluefish. But what if one of the fishermen had hooked a bonito? It would be a great thrill for anyone to be hooked up to one of those speedsters. And the equipment was at least as practical as spinning in the conditions that prevailed. But more importantly, what if those snapper blues had been the big ones that for the last several autumns have invaded the North Carolina Coast.

Many of us who have fished the surf recently have seen bluefish weighing from 12 to 20 pounds plenty close to reach with a fly. I've even had them behind me as I stood in the surf.

Anyone who doubts the ability of a fly rod to beat a large fish is simply ignorant of proven fact. It doesn't even take a particularly skilled fly fisherman to subdue a 20-pound fish with a fly rod. Neither does the surf offer special difficulties in playing a fish. There are no hangs to be cut off on, and the water is too shallow for a fish to sound.

So, to my way of thinking, a fly rod is a perfectly reasonable piece of equipment for surf fishing—when conditions are right.

It was too early for big blues when the fly rodders waded the surf at Hatteras. A few had been caught at the point the day before, there was one caught offshore on bait and another from a pier while the group was there, but the big schools had not arrived. I suspect many of the anglers were indulging in a little free-wheeling fantasy as they cast to miniature reproductions of giant bluefish.

"Here I am in the surf with nothing but my Scientific Anglers System 10, and the 20-pounders are close enough to touch with my rod tip and my fingers are shaking as I tie an a 3-0 mylar streamer, then. . .

Wildlife Afield: Squirrel Hunt Brings Out Finesse In Woodsman

By JIM DEAN

It had not rained in weeks, and the woods in the Pisgah Game Land below Grandfather Mountain were extremely dry. To make matters worse, it was windy. Every step in the crackling leaves sounded like somebody crumpling newsprint.

I was looking for a good place to get a mess of squirrels for supper, but it was soon apparent that I wasn't going to sneak up on any shy bushytails. A bulldozer couldn't have made any more noise.

Earlier in the afternoon, three of us had spread out through the bottom to find a place to hunt. If I could find a grove of hickories and dogwoods, I figured I might get a shot if I sat quietly and waited for them to come to me.

Finally, I located a draw that went up the ridge away, and in the draw were several big hickory trees. I cleared a spot, sat down and leaned back against a tree trunk to wait.

I sat for perhaps 20 minutes, but saw nothing. I had left my pipe and tobacco back at the cabin. It was too dry to risk smoking in the woods, so I fished out a wad of Beechnut and stuffed it in my jaw.

I had just gotten a good mouthful of dark juice when a squirrel came highballing it down the trunk of the tree I was sitting under the spun around like a top a few feet over my head when he saw me.

As I jerked my rifle up to get a shot, I involuntarily swallowed what seemed at the time to be about a quart of tobacco squeezings. Coughing and choking, I fired three shots through tear-glazed eyes at the rapidly disappearing squirrel.

For the record, I didn't eat squirrels for supper that night, but it's primarily because I made several mistakes (quite apart from swallowing my plug).

The successful squirrel hunters I know usually follow several general practices. First like deer hunters, they scout areas to see which ones have the most promise, and they usually do this before the season opens.

They look basically for three things. The try to find an area where there is plenty of food. They look for hickory trees, oak and other nut-bearing rees. They also look for squirrel nests. Usually, but not always, when you find an area where there are lots of nut trees and squirrel nests, there will also be lots of squirrels. Finally, they look for recent signs that squirrels have been feeding in that area—gnawed nuts, and so forth.

When the season opens, they try to pick a day when the woods are wet, and the wind is calm. is easier to walk quietly in wet leaves than in dry ones, and it is also easier to spot squirrels when the leaves in trees are not blowing all over the place.

Also, most experience squirrel hunters will tell you that they usually have their best luck early in the morning until about 10 o'clock. Most forest creatures, squirrels included, are more active in the morning than at any other time. Furthermore, if it has been dry, dew from the night before will often dampen the leaves and make it possible to move through the woods more quietly.

Finally, most expert squirrel hunters prefer to still hunt. That is, instead of stalking their quarry, they find a comfortable seat in a likely area and sit quietly—waiting for the squirrels to appear. It usually takes about 30 minutes after the woods are quiet again for the squirrels to reappear. I had violated several of these rules, and I strongly suspect that's why I had such poor success.

Squirrel hunting with a .22 rifle is never easy, and that's one of the things I like about it. I also strongly suspect that this is why the squirrel is the most popular hunting species in North Carolina. When you know how to hunt squirrels—and more important, when your knowledge leads to success—few sports can top it.

The victory left the Rams with a 6-3 Eastern Carolina Conference record and a 7-3 overall mark. Eastern Wayne closed with 1-8 and 1-9 marks.

Solar Battery Charger Next

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — From the ditty bag:

—A Maryland company plans to put on the market early next yer solar battery charger for boats or automobiles. The device, which will cost about $50, consists of energy absorbing panels about four inches square. The actual efficiency of the recharger will be rather low. It is not intended to recharge a dead battery fast but to "trickle charge" th bttery while the boat or car is unattended and keep it from going down. The company says the device could be adapted to provide power for marine buoys, lighthouses and microwave relay stations.

—The Oregon State Marine Board, in a report on pleasure boating in the state, gives the following description of the "typical" Oregon boater: He is 50 years old, has a family income of about $10,300 and lives in one of the Portland metropolitan area counties. He owns one boat which is about 16 feet long and is powered by a 35 or 40 horsepower outboard motor. He hauls his boat on a trailer. He uses his boat about 28 days a year and spends more time fishing than in all other boating activities combined.

—A significant change in regulations covering use of electronic equipment in the 1974 Bermuda Race has been announced by the sponsors, the Cruising Club of America and the Royal Bermuda Yacht Club. Radar will now be allowed without restriction, and there will be no restriction on electronic aids to navigation at the start and finish. Previously, such equipment as radar, loran and omni had been prohibited.

—A new president for the U.S. Finn Association. He is Phil Cook, general chairman of the 1974 Finn Gold Cup, who succeeds Ed Bennett, the 1972 Olympic representative. Cook says he plans to create greater interest in the Finn dinghy in the United States by having greater involvement of local associations in national affairs, creation of new local associations, development of regatta programs and a program to attract helsmen under 18.

—Among the new books: "Windjammer Parade" (Viking Press, New York), a collection of outstanding photographs taken in September, 1972, when 65 of the largest windjammers still under sail took part in a parade into the harbor of Kiel, West Germany, in connection with the Olympic sailing events then taking place there. Also included are pictures taken during two races which preceded the parade. The 96 pages include 36 pages in color.

—There' new race on the 1973-74 clendar for offshore powerboat competitors. It's the Jockey Club-Sea Talk National Ocean Power Boat Race to be stged Jan. 19 over a 200-mile triangular course from Baker's Haulover, a few miles north of Mimi, to Alligtor Reef, then to Great Isaac Light in the Bahamas and returning to Baker's Haulover.

—The southern Sailboat Show opens Dec. 7 in Miami for a four-day stand. Located at the Marine Stadium on Virginia Key, it will display in the water and on land fleet of bots ranging from 6-foot dinghies to ocean racer-cruisers over 605-feet in length.

Cougars Romp Past Colonels

By NORM CLARKE
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Pro basketball returned to Cincinnati Friday night the same way it departed—with a thud.

"We didn't want to fall on our faces in Cincinnati," moaned Kentucky Colonels scoring star Dan Issel. "But that's what we did. I hope the fans give up a second chance, but I'm not sure we earned it."

The Carolina Cougars turned opening night into a nightmare. An enthusiastic crowd of 6,194 had little to cheer about after five minutes as the hot-shooting Cougars overwhelmed Kentucky 139-110.

"We let them realize we're still there," said Carolina's Billy Cunningham after the second-place Cougars snapped a seven-game Kentucky winning streak. It was the Colonels' worst loss in three years.

And it bore resemblance to the last pro basketball outing in Cincinnati. The Royals of the National Basketball Association packed up and left for Kansas City in 1972—citing lack of interest, but not before the San Francisco Warriors handed the Royals a 110-92 loss before a sendoff crowd of 5,064.

Cincinnati officials were elated with Friday's turnout.

"We'd have been happy with anything over 4,000," said Bill DeWitt Jr., executive vice president of the group which purchased 40 per cent of the Colonels' franchise last summer.

"I think it proves Cincinnati has a lot of interest in basketball. The Royals didn't do well here because they couldn't come up with a winning team. Cincinnati has good fans—but you can't lose year after year," DeWitt said.

"We think we will have a winner," he said.

Steelers Meet Raiders Again

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

The last time the Oakland Raiders saw the Pittsburgh Steelers, funny things happened to them. Funny things like deflected passes with five seconds to go. And the next thing they knew, the Raiders' National Football League season was over.

That was in the 1972 playoffs when Franco Harris grabbed the errant pass on the final play of the game to score Pittsburgh's winning touchdown and send the Steelers into the American Football Conference championship game.

In other Sunday action, Minnesota tries to wrap up the NFC Central Division title against Detroit, Washington is home against San Francisco, New Orleans plays at Los Angeles, Baltimore is at Miami, Atlanta visits Philadelphia, Dallas faces the New York Giants at New Haven, Denver entertains San Diego, Cincinnati is at Buffalo, Houston hosts Cleveland, St. Louis visits Green Bay, and New England plays the Jets at New York.

Monday night's game has Chicago playing at Kansas City.

Minnesota whipped Detroit 23-9 in their first meeting this season—making 11 straight times since 1968.

San Francisco and Washington are both coming off losses, the 49ers to Detroit and the Redskins to Pittsburgh.

Baltimore's Marty Domres is listed as questionable for the Colts' game in Miami. He suffered a chipped thumb bone in practice this week.

Joe Namath, who's been out since the second game of the season with a shoulder separation, won't return to action against New England. The New York Jets said Friday that Al Woodall would go at quarterback.

Dallas takes a tie with Washington for first place in the NFC East to visit the New York Giants.

The suddenly hot New Orleans Saints, winners of four of their last five games, take their NFC West hopes into Los Angeles for a confrontation with the first-place Rams, losers of two straight.

The Atlanta-Philadelphia game matches two teams on the upswing. The Falcons are only one game behind LA with four consecutive victories, their longest winning streak ever. And the Eagles have ridden Roman Gabriel's passing to three victories in their last four games.

New Coach Ron Waller will try to turn San Diego around against Denver. He may have wide receiver Gary Garrison, who's listed as a probable after missing five games with a separated shoulder.

Cincinnati's defense will be a little patched up against Buffalo and O.J. Simpson. Safety Tom Casanova is out with an injured hamstring and tackle Mike Reid is nursing a bad back.

Houston ended a two-season 18-game losing streak last Sunday and hopes to continue the prosperity against Cleveland.

Green Bay, sees the one that got away when it meets St. Louis and Donny Anderson. The ex-Packer running back is leading the NFL with 10 touchdowns while the entire Green Bay team has managed only eight all year.

Kansas City will go without quarterback Len Dawson again, using Mike Livingston against Chicago. Dawson is nursing an injured heel.

When Army opened fall football drills in late August, a total of 102 players turned out at West Point, N.Y.

Army held a two and a half-mile run for offensive linemen the first morning of 1973 drills. Bob Caslen, sophomore center from Jay, Vt., finished first.

The Air Force water polo team captain is Kelly Kemp from Long Beach, Calif.

Ben Martin made his debut as a football coach at the Air Force Academy in 1958. His Falcons won nine games and tied one and went to the Cotton Bowl.

James Quinn of McDonald, Pa., will captain Navy's 1974 baseball team.

Christopher Lambert of Naples, Fla., will captain the Navy crew next spring.

Steve Coggins of Greenville announced the grand opening Thursday, Friday and Saturday of Coggins' Car Care City, 320 W. Greenville Boulevard.

Coggins, owner and manager of the new independent B. F. Goodrich franchise, said that the firm handles the full line of Goodrich tires, tubes, parts and accessories. He added that the service department offers all types of maintenance work including tune-ups and specializes in front-end alignment and tire balancing.

Goodrich regional officials will be on hand during the grand opening to meet the public and offer hints on car care and maintenance.

Coggins, who has some ten years sales experience, is married to the former Jacquelyn Yelverton of Fremont and they have a son and a daughter.

Pat Tripp serves the new firm as front-end specialist with several years experience working with various types of front-end and alignment problems. Sylvia Coward is the bookkeeper.

PUBLIC NOTICES

GREENVILLE UTILITIES NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC DOCKET NO. G-100, SUB 18 BEFORE THE NORTH CAROLINA UTILITIES COMMISSION

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held at 10:00 a.m., Tuesday, November 20, 1973, in the Hearing Room of the North Carolina Utilities Commission, Ruffin Building, One West Morgan Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. The Commission will consider the effects of the "end use" guidelines recently approved by the Federal Power Commission (FPC) for Transcontinental Gas Pipeline corporation (Transco), North Carolina's only natural gas pipeline supplier. Such guidelines will greatly reduce the amount of natural gas otherwise available to North Carolina distributors—Piedmont Natural gas otherwise available to North Carolina distributors—Piedmont Natural Gas Company, Inc., Public Service Company of North Carolina, Inc., North Carolina Natural Gas Corporation, North Carolina Gas Service (Division of Pennsylvania and Southern;) and United Cities Gas Company — and, therefore, to customers of these distributors. The Commission is of the opinion that, for the purposes of this hearing, it will consider adopting the Transco-FPC plan. The Commission solicits comments, suggestions, and criticism of this plan. Such comments should be filed by written affidavit with the Commission no later than 12:00 o'clock noon, November 15, 1973. Subject to time limitations, opportunity to speak at the hearing will be afforded to those not filing written comments in advance. Formal interventions and protests will not be allowed because of time limitations. For further information concerning the hearing and the Transco-FPC "end use" plan, contact the North Carolina Utilities Commission, P.O. Box 991, Raleigh, North Carolina, prior to the date of the hearing.

ISSUED BY ORDER OF THE COMMISSION.

Pacific Northwest Parched By Continuing Drought

By ELDON BARRETT

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The great Pacific Northwest, land of rain forests and ice cream cone mountain peaks, has been parched for more than a year by a drought that won't quit.

Wheat fields have withered, evergreen forests have turned tindery and rivers and streams, including the mighty Columbia River, have dwindled so drastically that a brownout is imminent if strict conservation practices are not observed.

The lack of moisture is evident throughout Oregon, Washington, Northern Idaho and in parts of British Columbia and northern California. A.L. Zimmerman, meteorologist in charge of the Seattle National Weather Service office, described the drought as "severe to extreme" east of the Cascade Mountains and "moderate to severe" on the west side.

How long will it last? Zimmerman says that can't be predicted with any degree of accuracy.

"But we do know this," he said, "after an extended very dry period such as we have experienced, it will take more than just a few wet storms to really break the drought."

Drought defined

Just what constitutes a drought? Zimmerman says there are many ways to define the phenomenon, but nearly all include a requirement for an adverse effect on the economy of a large area. Another major ingredient in any definition is the deficiency of precipitation received over a period of time —several months or several years.

Explaining the latter, Zimmerman pointed out that if 10 inches of rain fell on Las Vegas over a 12-month period, it would be classified as a wet year for the Nevada city. But 10 inches of rain in Spokane, Wash., represents extreme drought conditions there.

During the 12 months ending last Aug. 31, Spokane measured only 9.67 inches of precipitation —less than 60 per cent of the annual average. The area is just about as dry as the ranchers on the high plateau south of Spokane have ever seen it. Consequently, wheat crops are taking a beating.

The spring wheat harvest this year averaged only 19 bushels per acre. Normally the yield would be 34 bushels.

"Some growers just decided it wasn't worth the effort and they disced their plantings back in," said James M. Kitterman, crop reporting specialist in Seattle. "But with wheat selling at $5 a bushel, most of the ranchers found it pretty hard not to get what they could."

Winter crop

It is the winter crop in the ground right now that is at the mercy of the weather, he said.

"If we get some decent rains and sufficient snowpack this winter, we could come out pretty good next fall," Kitterman said.

He said the lack of moisture had reduced the lentil and pea pack by 10 to 15 per cent. More peas are grown in Washington than in any other state in the union. A reduction here would drastically affect the supply and price of peas throughout the nation.

Rains the last week of September and during October brought at least temporary relief to the extremely dry soil conditions in most agricultural areas and in the mountains. The forest fire hazard also was reduced somewhat. But the lack of snow in the mountains last winter and a dearth of normal rains left the rivers in a critical state. The Columbia at one point reached its lowest level since man began taking measurements of that stream 95 years ago.

The water supplies of most large cities were not endangered, but little settlements, especially those in the high desert country, were experiencing difficulties. Ranchers around Union, Ore., for example, temporarily gave up their water rights so the town would not dry up. And in these parts, ranchers hold water rights more dearly even than their branding irons.

The Silvies River at Burns, Ore., shrank to three cubic feet per second, which, as one old buckaroo put it, was "hardly enough to keep a rattlesnake cool." The John Day and Pudding Rivers in Oregon were "barely alive," according to watermaster reports in September.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS — The U.S. Postal Service has released these designs for the 1973 Christmas postage stamps in Washington. One is a Madonna and Child by Raphael and the other a Yule tree in needlepoint. The needlepoint stamp, the first U.S. stamp designed in that technique, was done by Dollie Tingle of Wesport, Conn. Miss Angie Rose Buck Weds Jerry Wayne Cox

The marriage of Miss Angie Rose Buck and Jerry Wayne Cox was solemnized Saturday evening at seven o'clock at the Rose Hill Free Will Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Buck of Rt. 3, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cox of Winterville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Alma Buck, organist, and Jimmy Page, soloist, who sang, "One Hand, One Heart," "More," and "The Wedding Prayer."

The church was centered with a fifteen branch brass crescent candelabra holding white chase candles. An arrangement of gladioli, chrysanthemums and pom pons in autumn shades with garlands of fruit attached was centered in front. On either side was a twenty branched brass candelabra holding matching autumn floral arrangements. Palms of emerald greenery were used throughout the wedding scene. A single brass candelabra with a fruit swag was used on each side at the front. A three branch brass candelabra was used by the bridal couple for the candle ceremony. The couple knelt on a brass profile prie-dieu for the benediction. Family pews were marked with fall ribbons and fruit swags.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal Victorian style gown of white chiffon over taffeta. It featured a natural waistline belted with a wide grosgrain and satin ribbon with a lace mandarin collar. Cluny lace formed a yoke and apron down the skirt and alencon lace motifs and appliques accented the bodice and sleeves. A lace ruffle bordered the hemline and chapel train.

Her three-tiered veil fell from a tiara headpiece of re-embroidered alencon lace encrusted with pearls. She carried a Colonial cascade nosegay of white butterfly roses centered with a white hybrid orchid and interspersed with baby's breath, accented with bridal satin streamers and greenery.

Miss Polly Fornes of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of cinnamon polyester crepe fashioned with a high Colonial neckline, pinafore ruffles edged in lace, and long sleeves ending in ruffled cuffs. She wore a matching picture hat with fabric streamers. She carried a Colonial nosegay of gold and bronze pom pons tied with matching ribbon streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Wanda Buck, sister of the bride, Miss Kathy Wilson of Ayden, Miss Lexie Barwick of Deep Run, Mrs. Ellen Buck, aunt of the bride, of Vanceboro, and Mrs. Avis Tetterton, cousin of the bride of Greenville. They were dressed like the honor attendant and carried similar nosegays.

Roy Cox served his son as best man. Ushers were Charles Meeks of Winterville, Troy Kitrell, Lindsey Godley, Arthur Wainwright, all of Greenville, and Stevie Tripp, cousin of the bride, of Ayden.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Stanley presided at the bridal registry.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Buck chose a gold formal gown of polyester and matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother selected a formal gown of rose polyester with matching accessories. Both mothers wore cymbidium orchid corsages.

The grandmothers, Mrs. Lela McLawhorn, Mrs. Reber Buck, and Mrs. Lizzie Cox, wore white chrysanthemum corsages.

For traveling, the bride changed into a navy and white pantsuit with matching accessories. She wore the orchid corsage lifted from her bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School and attended Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy and Mount Olive College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Winterville High School and is presently attending East Carolina University. He is employed by Roy H. Park Broadcasting Station.

After a wedding trip to Charlotte, the couple will reside in Winterville.

Following the rehearsal Friday night, the parents of the bridal couple entertained the wedding party and guests at a party at the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Educational Building.

Miss Angie Buck and her attendants were honored Saturday with a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Norman Stanley.

Fabric Designed By African Women Proves Popular

By ANDREW TORCHIA

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Women welfare clients working in an old slum brewery are turning out some of the smartest fabrics in East Africa.

Knowledgeable Nairobi women flock to buy prints, tourists take them home, and export markets beckon. But British missionary managers are resisting pressures to transform Maridadi Fabrics from a community self-help industry into a big-business house of fashion.

That would destroy the purpose of the charity project, they say.

Maridadi Fabrics — the word means fashionable — was established six years ago by a handful of American wives at St. John's Anglican community center in Pumwani. The urban district is people largely by poor Moslem descendants of Africans who migrated from coastal regions when British colonizers built a railroad to Nairobi 75 years ago.

With American know-how and a British foundation grant, the idea was to train and employ prostitutes, widows and deserted mothers. It was a quick success.

When Maridadi grew out of its original classroom quarters, Nairobi City Council offered an abandoned brewery near a mosque. American volunteers gradually departed and the production line was Africanized, but St. John's British and Kenyan administrators retained over-all control.

Some 60 Pumwani women chosen from social workers' needy lists work at Maridadi today, with the help of a single Finnish volunteer, Immi Tiivola. They produce fabrics, a new line of ready-made dresses, table mats, cushions, neckties and sisal baskets, and earn up to 400 shillings — $56 — a month.

Maridadi products are sold in two chic Nairobi shops — up to 200 shillings for a dress — and have been exported in limited quantities to Scandinavia, the United States and Britain. They are boldly patterned and vividly colored, based on traditional African and Arab motifs reworked by freelance Kenyan designers.

With women taking time out to drink tea or warble an African song, there's little urgency about production. Cotton fabric is pinned on tables 10 yards long and printed with a hand screen, photographic stencil process. A design is transferred to a plastic stencil by means of a light-sensitive emulsion. The stencil is placed at regular intervals on the cloth. Dye is brushed across the stencil.

The dye sets for two weeks. Then the fabric is boiled in tubs over charcoal fires to get rid of excess dye. The finished product is hung outdoors with clothespins to dry.

St. John's community projects are supported by the profit Maridadi earns on a yearly budget of about $42,000.

$120 Dinner Prize Was Surprise For Donor

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I gave a party for my husband. I planned the entertainment, which included games with prizes for the winners. One of the prizes was dinner for two at our finest restaurant.

I did not set a limit on the amount to be spent on the dinners because I didn't think it would be proper.

Well, I just received a bill for two dinners, and it was $120. Thinking there must have been a mistake, I called the restaurant and was told there was no mistake.

That man and his wife had ordered four appetizers, and THREE lobsters for the two of them, plus $50 worth of drinks which included 15 bottles of imported beer! [They even charged the "tip" on the bill.]

I feel that we were taken advantage of, but I am at a loss as to what I should say to this greedy, gluttonous couple.

Any suggestions? TAKEN IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR TAKEN: I would say "Goodby," after telling them that they had eaten themselves out of your good graces.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of an 81-year-old man and a 79-year-old woman who met in an old folks home four months ago, and decided to get married to save expenses? It's true, one double is cheaper than two singles, but isn't that a silly reason to get married? LIVES HERE

DEAR LIVES: It's as good a reason as any to get married. And better than some.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going with a guy for nine months. We have been together every night since we met. He is 24 and I am 18. He talks about long-range plans, such as the two of us going to Europe together next summer. Our relationship is a good one, but it would be perfect if we were married. He has not mentioned marriage at all, except to knock it. He was married for two years and is now divorced.

Should I just wait until he brings it up? I would hate to go on like this for a couple of years and then find out he doesn't want to marry me.

How can I find out what his intentions are without being pushy? WANTS TO WED

DEAR WANTS: If he doesn't mention marriage, the chances are he isn't considering it. If you want to know for sure [and I can't blame you], ASK him. But be prepared for a let down. If your relationship is, as you say, a "good one" now, it's probably good enough for him—indefinitely.

DEAR ABBY: I notice the word "promiscuous" is used only to describe women.

A man who does the same thing is called [with the wink of an eye], "a ladies' man." And it sounds like a compliment! Why? WONDERING IN YAKIMA

DEAR WONDERING: Because men have always enjoyed sexual freedom, while women have not. But Womens' Lib is out to change all that.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Toy Factories Have Safety Standards

NEW YORK (UPI) — Many days toys tumbled down stirs. The tumbling happens at toy factories. It is done by toy makers anxious to meet safety standards set by the Toy Manufacturers of America (TMA).

"Wheel toys weighing more than three pounds are to be tumbled repeatedly down a flight of six steps, and examined after the test for possible hazards," according to the standards.

Other test suggestions:

—Drop. Toys are to be dropped repeatedly onto a vinyl tile surface cemented to concrete, with the height and number of drops depending on the type of toy and the age for which it is intended, and with the toy to be examined at the conclusion of the test for possible hazards.

—Wheel pull. Wheels are subjected to pull loads of between 10 and 20 pounds, depending on the size of the wheels and the method by which they are attached to the axles.

Here are a few of the many other aspects of toys which are the subject of TMA's toy safety standards:

—Sharp edges. The standards specify how edges must be treated to prevent accidental cutting.

—Sharp points, projections. Provisions are included for capping or eliminating sharp points or projections or rendering them inaccessible.

—Small parts. Parts small enough to be swallowed or to cause suffocation, are prohibited unless fastened securely to the toy.

—Paint. Coatings must comply with all government limitations as to the presence of arsenic, lead and other metals.

—Flammable materials. All materials used in toys must meet flame-resisting requirements of federal authorities.

—Toxic substances. No substances are permitted in toys unless they meet the standards on toxcicity of the Federal Hazardous Substances Act. Other stability and chemical requirements for raw materials are also specified.

—Noise levels. Sudden noises of greater thn 158 decibels are prohibited, and continuous noise levels are not permitted to exceed those specified under the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

—Stability of children's vehicles. Standards are established to assure the stability of children's vehicles when carrying a child's weight.

Certain playthings are exempt from the requirements in the standards because they have their own special characteristics and therefore their own particular standards.

Examples: bicycles, chemistry sets, playground equipment and model kits in which the finished item is primarily for display, rather than play purposes.

Other exemptions include playthings in which the function necessitates sharp edges, as in toy tool sets for example, or sharp points, as in children's sewing or knitting outfits.

In such cases there are requirements for cautionary labeling, including age recommendations.

Norris-Corbett Vows Exchanged On Saturday

FLORENCE, S. C.—Miss Sharon Anne Corbett and Laurence Edmondston Norris were united in marriage Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Greenwood Baptist Church here.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Marion Corbett and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Venson Norris, all of Florence, S. C.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of bridal white satin and chantilly lace designed with a Victorian neckline, long Juliet sleeves and an empire bodice. The sheer sleeves of silk organza were appliqued with lace. The full skirt swept back into an aisle wide chapel length train and the hemline of the gown and the train featured a ruffle of scalloped lace.

Her tiered elbow length veil of illusion cascaded from a Camelot cap of lace and seed pearls. She carried her mother's lace covered prayer book centered with white bridal roses, white miniature carnations, white tulle and bridal ribbon with streamers tied with love knots.

The church was decorated with two floral basket arrangements of white gladioli, mums, pom poms and gypsophilia. The satin kneeling bench was decorated with ivy and ribbon and an arch candelabra entwined with ivy was used behind the kneeling bench.

The Rev. Edwin Campbell of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., former pastor of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Blaney H. Howle III of Florence, S. C., organist. Mrs. Bill Roberts of Bel Air, Md., cousin of the bride, sang "The Greatest of These Is Love" and "Wedding Prayer."

Miss Deborah Speight of Farmville, N. C., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She word a floor length gown of printed silk organza in a floral motif of apricot roses over apricot peau do soie. The gown was fashioned with a portrait neckline and empire bodice. Her headpiece was a bow of apricot velvet ribbon and she carried a nosegay of apricot carnations, abby roses, tulle and apricot ribbon on a white lace background with apricot streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Sally Norris, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Christa English, Miss Dale Anderson, Miss Nancy Elvis and Miss Jill Jeffers, all of Florence, S. C. Miss Barbara Owens of Farmville, N. C., cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. Their attire and flowers were identical to that of the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Bobby Norris, Michael Norris, Venson Norris, all brothers of the bridegroom, Bobby Tugwell of Farmville, N. C., uncle of the bride, and Jeff Hall of Florence, S. C. Johnny Corbett of Florence, S. C., brother of the bride, was junior usher.

Miss Cathy Herring of Kinston, N. C., cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a long white dress bordered with a ruffle fashioned with an apricot velvet ribbon at the waist. She carried a miniature bride's bouquet.

Randy Tugwell of Rocky Mount, N. C., cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride chose a floor length gown of embroidered silk organza in azalea and pink tones. The mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown of gold and blue imported brocade. Both wore white orchid corsages.

The grandmothers of the bride, Mrs. R. L. Corbett and Mrs. John Tugwell Sr. of Farmville, and bridegroom's grandmother wore green and white cymbidium orchids.

For a wedding trip to the mountains of Tennessee and Virginia, the bride changed into a sleeveless knit grey and red plaid suit with a matching jacket.

The bride is a graduate of James F. Byrnes Academy, Florence, and attended Florence-Darlington Tech. She is presently employed as a secretary. The bridegroom graduated from McClenaghan High School, Florence, and attended Francis Marion College. He is now employed as assistant manager of the Piggly Wiggly Food Store, Florence.

A reception followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

New Program Offers Degree For Midwives

By MARIA BRADEN
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky College of Nursing is offering a new program to train nurse midwives.

"There's a nationwide interest in Midwifery," said Elizabeth M. Bear, program co-ordinator. "We already have a stack of inquiries and we get more every day."

The new program, to begin next semester, will lead to a bachelor's and a master's degree in nurse midwifery. The master's degree program is the only one in the state.

Miss Bear said the courses are being offered in response to a growing demand, but that it's hard to pinpoint the reasons for the renewed interest in midwifery.

"It may be the result of the women's movement," she said. "Women want to know more about their bodies and they want to participate in the delivery."

"The nurse midwife has a one-to-one relationship with the mother," Miss Bear said. "She stays with her throughout the delivery, provides followup care for the next few days, and helps establish the family unit."

Women want that kind of relationship, and often have too little time with their physician during pregnancy, she said.

"They have a million questions they want to ask, but when they get to see the doctor he may be rushed," she said. "They feel they're taking his time and all the questions they wanted to ask fly out the window."

Another factor is the relative cost of a nurse midwife, which is a lot less expensive than an obstetrician, Miss Bear said.

Nurse midwives do not practice independently after certification, but within the framework of a health service of some kind, whether urban or rural, she said.

The nurse midwife sees the pregnant woman with a physician present on the first visit. But unless complications occur a woman may not have to see the physician again.

The midwife is trained to do a complete physical and mental assessment of the woman. As long as progress is normal, she cares for the woman throughout pregnancy and stays with her throughout labor.

She also learns to spot deviations from the normal, to apply emergency measures if required — and then calls in a physician.

"There are times when we're awfully grateful for such medical backup," Miss Bear said, adding that from 90 to 95 per cent of deliveries are normal.

Misconceptions persist about midwifery, with some states still prohibiting nurse midwives from practicing.

"Although most babies in the world are delivered by midwives, the nurse midwife is not yet totally accepted in the United States," Miss Bear said.

A handful of institutions across the country now offer training in nurse midwifery, but the number of programs is increasing rapidly.

Even in California, where the practice of midwifery is illegal, programs are being established to help fill the market for midwives in other states.

"A phenomenal number of jobs are open for nurse midwives that are going begging," Miss Bear said.

Miss Bear, who spent several years working with the Frontier Nursing Service, said the graduate program at the University of Kentucky has been approved and four students will be admitted next spring. The program leading to a bachelor degree in midwifery is still before the Committee on Higher Education, but Miss Bear expects it to be approved.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Mrs. Barbara Smith Richardson, teacher of exceptional children, has been named North Carolina's Outstanding Young Woman of the Year for 1973.

Along with the winner in each of the 49 other states, Barbara is now being considered for one of the 1973's Ten Outstanding Young Women of America Awards. The 10 national winners will be announced Nov. 28 at an awards ceremony in Washington, D. C.

Nominated for this honor by the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club, Barbara's complete biography will appear in the 1973 awards column of "Outstanding Young Women of America."

She is an accomplished educator with a specialization in techniques of teaching retarded students. Having received an advanced degree in education from the University of North Carolina, Barbara has established herself in several eastern N. C. cities as an advisor and organizer in the structuring of special education programs in elementary and high schools.

This work led to publishing a textbook for retarded and slow learners entitled "North Carolina, Yesterday and Today." Most recently she has designed an in-service course of instruction for in-service teachers entitled "Introduction to Exceptional Children."

Other young women from Greenville and Pitt County named to this year's publication include: Angelene Haddock Venters, Ayden, Gaynor Boyd Mills, Rt. 2, Greenville, Betty Borden Fuqua, Nancy Lee Gustafson, Judith Tripp Garrison, Nancy Baker Hathaway, Arlene Murphy Hoot and your columnist, all of Greenville.

Others named, who formerly lived here are, Joy Bruner, Jeannette Worthington Davis, Karen Lox Jorgensen, and Rebecca Ann Stasavich.

Mrs. Bright Gives Program

Mrs. Hazel Bright presented the program at the meeting of the Home Life Department of the Greenville Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon held at the home of Mrs. George Clapp.

The speaker told of her work as a teacher instructor in the field of arts and crafts at the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center. Her topic was "Something From Nothing."

Mrs. Bright related the use of throw-away items such as cigar boxes, bleach bottles, tin cans, egg shells and golf balls and also displayed items which her group had made at the center.

Mrs. J. E. Ricks, chairman, conducted the meeting. Miss Eunice McGee gave the devotional. Members will send cards to members at the Greenville Nursing and Convalescent Home and a gift of money to a shut-in at Cherry Hospital.

Mrs. W. E. Roseveare, chairman of the nominating committee, announced the new officers for the coming year:

Chairman, Mrs. Kelley Wallace; Vice Chairman, Miss Alya Ray Taylor; Secretary, Mrs. Jessie Little; and Treasurer, Mrs. Preston Cannon.

The meeting was closed with a poem "Thanksgiving Day" by Mrs. C. M. Respess.

We're Big Spenders For Diets

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty million American families spend over $1 billion annually on low-calorie foods and beverages, despite current headlines decrying the high cost of food.

The prime item purchased is low-calorie soda pop.

Some 50 million overweight or cholesterol-conscious Americans will go on diets this year, and over 20 million are dieting for health reasons under a doctor's care, according to a study by the Ogden Corp.

Despite the large volume of sales and the nation's overwhelming preoccupation with weight control, the study disclosed wide ignorance and confusion among consumers about specific diet foods. There was also a general absence of accepted authoritative sources on the subject.

Consumers find it harder to shop for diet foods than for regular foods. They say they encounter a lack of interest in their problems in stores, the study disclosed.

Sufferers from heart condition form the largest group of dieters for health reasons. There are 27 million American cardiovascular patients, according to the National Heart Association. Five million diabetics — and 45 million carriers of the disease — form the second largest group, according to the National Diabetes Foundation.

Current statistics of the U.S. Public Health Service indicate that over half of adult men and 40 per cent of adult women are at least 10 per cent overweight.

Although this figure counts some people twice — people with heart conditions, for example, may also be overweight — it omits millions of Americans who restrict their diets for other reasons.

Marketing programs for diet foods achieved nearly equal success in states as different as New York and Missouri, the study saw, regardless of whether the organization involved was a chain store or a wholesale outlet.

Diet foods' popularity has increased steadily in the last few years, although the increase varies by product classification.

The 200 million Americans spend on dietetic items other than soda last year included money for diet fruit, sweeteners, dressings, spreads and syrups and $114 million for other low-calorie items.

Fashion Hints Given

Pin-by-number may be the craft to follow if you want homemade ornaments on the tree this Christmas. Pin-by-number crafts are something like paint-by-number. You pin on colorful beads and sequins. The pins go into pre-printed numbers on pre-shaped white foam ornament forms. About $4 per kit (Walco Products) at notion, sewing and variety stores and-or departments.

You'll know you're getting old if you don't own at least one pair of blue jeans.

You'll know you're either getting old or way out of step with fashion if you don't have at least one long-skirt (or long dress) in your wardrobe. For wearing to dinner parties, weddings, supper in a restaurant that's a cut above a drive-in, the movies, just about any and everywhere.

Keep hubby or beau from looking dated. Make sure he's got at least one wide-lapel suit in his wardrobe. Those three-button, narrow lapel suits, especially the dark ones with shiny seats, just won't do for Sunday or any other best.

Covering A Royal Event

CBS News, combining its own resources with the massive efforts of the BBC, will provide America's most comprehensive coverage of the royal wedding of Princess Anne of the United Kingdom to Capt. Mark Phillips.

Live satellite coverage of the ceremonies on Wednesday, Nov. 14, from 5 to 9 AM, and taped highlights from 11:30 PM to 12 Midnight, will be anchored in London by Correspondent Charles Collingwood and Sally Quinn, and will be coordinated in special CBS News control room facilities at Television International, London.

Not only will CBS News be the lone American network news organization to have its correspondents anchor coverage of this event from the scene, but it will be the only one with unilateral cameras and its own satellite transmission to the United States.

Correspondents Collingwood and Quinn, assisted by Ernestine Carter, former fashion editor of The Times of London, will co-anchor coverage of the ceremonies from a vantage point directly opposite Westminister Abbey. On a sixth-floor terrace at Central Hall, over-looking the entrance to the Abbey, their position will include three unilateral cameras, electric heaters and a transparent weather roof.

"It certainly will be an advantage to have our people where they can see and feel what is going on around them," says Russ Bensley, executive producer in London of "A Royal Wedding." "No amount of reporting expertise can convey a mood better than being there."

In addition to its own coverage, CBS News will have access to BBC television facilities. This will be the first British royal wedding ever televised in color, and the BBC has made massive preparations, including the use of 50 cameras and 14 mobile control rooms. There will be nine cameras in Westminister Abbey, others outside the Abbey, along the processional route, outside Buckingham Palace, and at other remote locations, including Captain Phillips' home, Great Somerford, and the Warfield stables, where Princess Anne learned to ride.

The BBC will also provide CBS News with two audio lines — the BBC commentary on the ceremonies, and natural sound — to supplement coverage by Collingwood and Quinn.

NUPTIALS — Charles Collingwood (center) will co-anchor coverage of the royal wedding of Great Britain's Princess Anne to Captain Mark Phillips.

CHARLEY PRIDE AND LORETTA LYNN will be featured as special guest star and hostess of "The Orange Blossom Special" Nov. 15.

Charley Pride Is Special Guest

Charley Pride, one of the world's best-selling country-music artists, will be the special guest star on "The Orange Blossom Special," to be broadcast Thursday, Nov. 15 (10-11 P.M.) on Channel 3N,9,11.

The colorful, tune-filled variety hours stars George Lindsey and Loretta Lynn as co-hosts, with guest stars Barbara Fairchild, Charlie McCoy, Jody Miller and The Oak Ridge Boys.

Others in the cast are Tom T. Hall, Jerry Clower, Kenny Price, Alfie Scopp, the Cates Sisters, Gailard Sartain, Bobby Thompson, Judy Mallett, Marlene Tracy and the comedy team of Lecile Harris and Jimmy Moore.

Pride has been recording for seven years and in that time has had 19 albums released, nine of which have been top sellers. In addition, he has a gold single-record award for his disk of "Kiss an Angel Good Morning." His popularity has long since spilled over into the mainstream of popular music.

He became a country-music star after sampling the world of big-league baseball and is now internationally recognized both for his recordings and as a top-drawing performer on stages in this country and throughout Western Europe. He has appeared on television in shows ranging from "The Lawrence Welk Show" and "Kraft Music Hall" to "Hee Haw" and "The Johnny Cash Show."

His awards include artist of the year and best male country vocalist (Country Music Association); entertainer of the year (Music Operators of America); top country artist on albums, top male vocalist on singles, top male vocalist on albums (The Billboard), and top male country vocalist (Cashbox).

'Look Up' Offers Two-Part Series

A two-part series on the progressive theories of Latin American educator Paulo Freire and their potential applications within the educational systems of the United States will be the subject of "Look Up and Live" on consecutive Sunday, Nov. 11 and Nov. 18.

Part I on November 11 examines Freire's philosophy and how it evolved in the midst of Latin American political and social turmoil. At first a teacher in the slums of Brazil and Chile, Freire is now a consultant to the education department of the World Council of Churches.

Freire discovered, the broadcast reveals, that "the major educational task is to help poor people change their perceptions about their lot in life rather than filling them with new information equipping them with new skills. This is education for freedom and means that people will become masters of their own thinking and actions."

As a result, Freire came to believe that "no education can be liberating if the educators remain distant from the oppressed, treat them as unfortunate or present models for them to follow from among the oppressors, the affluent and the powerful."

Three American educators discuss Freire's theories and how they might be implemented in this country in Part II on November 18. They are Jim Lamb of the Center for the Study of Development and Social Change; Dick Shaull, an educator from Reston, Va., and Joyce Ware Thomas, formerly associated with the South Norwalk (Conn.) Community School.

Shaull believes the country is "in the midst of a very long process of creating conditions for change in our society. And that is why, for me, this sort of education which Paulo has helped us to discover is so terribly important to me today. I think that lays the foundation for future political action but of a quite new kind."

According to Lamb, "Education in America is really a way of socializing people, and in effect it is a kind of social control." Instead, he feels education should become "the process which emerges from a very alive and real situation."

TIME FOR TALK—Burt Reynolds (center) listens to the conversation of two of his guests, Michael Caine (left) and Roger Moore as they sit in front of posters of motion picture luminaries during "Burt Reynolds in London," on "The Burt Reynolds Late Show," to be colorcast on Saturday, Nov. 10 (11:30 p.m.—1 a.m.) on Channel 6-7. In some cities it will be presented Sunday, Nov. 11 at the same time.

Burt Reynolds Can Listen

Burt Reynolds, usually on the receiving end of interviews, has the opportunity to turn interviewer during "Burt Reynolds in London" on "The Burt Reynolds Late Show," to be colorcast on Saturday, Nov. 10 (11:30 p.m.-1 a.m.). In some cities it will be presented Sunday, Nov. 11, at the same time), on Channel 6-7.

His guests include Michael Caine, Edward Fox, Roger Moore and Ryan O'Neal. They talk about love, women's lib, publicity, critics and bad movies they have made. Commenting on the art of interviewing, Reynolds said: "A good interviewer has to have the ability to disappear so that you see only the person who is talking. Whenever I get into an area where my guest is really going strong, I do my Lamont Cranston act. You have to be able to fade away."

Following are some of the comments Reynolds elicited from his guests.

Q. What critic do you respect most?

A. Michael Caine: "My mother."

Q. What kind of girls do you like?

A. Edward Fox: "I like unattractive women."

Q. What are some of the bad films you made?

A. Ryan O'Neal: "One was 'The Big Bounce.' It hurled me into oblivion."

Q. What do you think about critics?

A. Roger Moore, after discussing actors and critics, recalled a particular review.

NEW CHANGES

Variation stimulates interest as surely as repetition dulls it. True in life. True in your home. Some new changes in your house will lift the spirits of the family, but most of all it can add comfort and convenience during this indoor weather. When making major changes, particularly in the living room, dining room or family room, carefully consider the present needs of those living there. You want to enjoy your home with those very close to you. It should also be a relaxing place for entertaining your friends.

This time of year calls for special attention to your living and dining room. We have a fine collection of attractive carpeting to suit your needs. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

Billie Jean And Bobby In Show

As far as method of acting goes, Bobby Riggs, doesn't know Strasberg from Stanislavsky. He doesn't have to. In his dramatic acting debut (off the tennis court, that is), the self-proclaimed husler plays a character requiring no indoctrination. He plays himself.

It happens in "The Pig Who Came to Dinner" episode of "The Odd Couple," starring Tony Randall and Jack Klugman, to be seen on Friday, Nov. 16 (8:30-9 p.m.) on Channel 3-12.

As a male chauvinist who hustles and harries both Oscar and Felix, Bobby gives as good an account of himself as he ever did on the center at Wimbledon.

The story, built around Bobby and giving him the best of it at every plot point, is pure and funny fiction. And the, just before the end of ACT II, there is a return to reality. Billie Jean King enters the scene.

She comes on wearing a pink lace tennis outfit, a matching sweater, gold earrings, a gold wrist watch, the familiar glasses and a brilliant smile.

Her meeting with Bobby, at rehearsal, was an uncharacteristic one for 55-year-old former court great — the first time he had seen his conqueror since their historic tennis match at the Houston Astrodome in September. Bobby spoke first:

"Hello, Billie," he said, almost shyly.

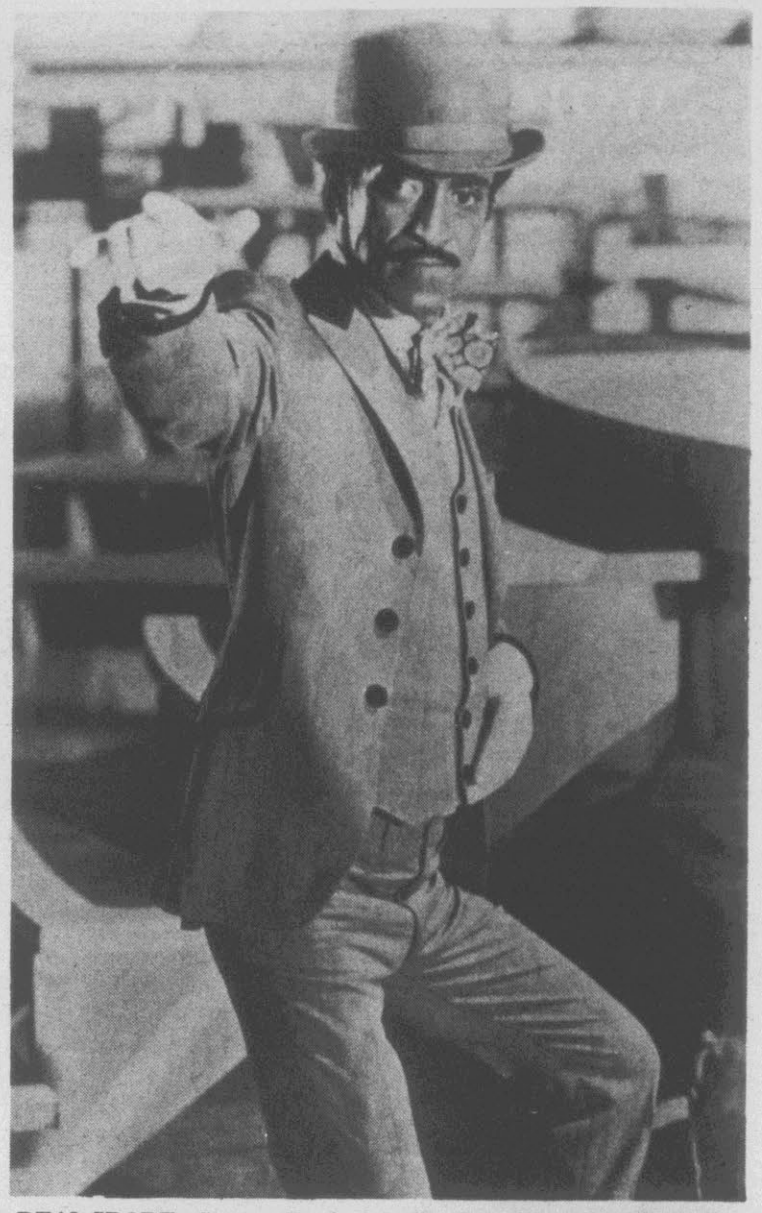
"Hello, Bobby," she responded. "How are you?"

They shook hands.

During the next 45 minutes, Billie Jean read her lines cold (there hadn't been time to send her a script), kidded Bobby with dialogue like, "You're smart now. You're only playing men," and then engaged him in a brief and fast game of table tennis.

"You're even better at this than at tennis," Bobby said as she slashed the ball beyond his reach, at one point.

"You're kidding," she joshed. "I'm terrible."



REAL SPORT—Sammy Davis Jr., who played Sportin' Life in the film version of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," re-creates the role in a segment of "General Electric Presents Sammy," a musical special presenting highlights of Davis's 45-year career as an entertainer, to be colorcast Friday, Nov. 16 (8:30-9:30 PM) on Channel 6-7.

David Bowie Talks Music

In a recent interview, rock star David Bowie explained himself and his attitude toward his music.

"What the music says may be serious but as a medium it should not be questioned, analyzed or taken so seriously. It should be the clown, the Pierrot medium. The music is the mask the message wears—music is the Pierrot and I, the performer, am the message."

Bowie will be featured on "The Midnight Special" (1-2:30 a.m.), following the Friday, Nov. 16 presentation of "The Tonight Show Starrring Johnnny Carson." The show will be the first of three filmed in London, this one originating at the city's historic Marquee Club.

After the release of Bowie's album, "The Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust and the Spiders from Mars," Bowie received such accolades as:

"A stunning work of genius"; "a strong, moving, powerful piece of rock and roll"; "The Elvis of the 70s"; and "the day will come when David Bowie is a star and the crushed remains of his melodies are broadcast from Muzak boxes in every elevator and hotel lobby in town."

Appearing with Bowie and Mick Ronson, Marianne Faithfull, Amanda Lear, Carmen, The Troggs, dancers and other surprise guests and bands from the British rock invasion of the mid-1960's'

Monte Hall Makes A Deal

Monty Hall, star and host of "Let's Make a Deal," has been signed to star in "Love and Man of the Year," an upcoming segment of "Lover American Style," The segment, written by Monty's wife, Marilyn is somewhat biographical in nature and deals with a celebrity who can't say no to charitable and fun raising causes—to such a degree that his home life suffers.

In the story, Monty's wife, played by Marlyn Mason, hires a hall and invites him to be "Man of the Year" for the United Family Society, Monty shows up to find that his wife, alone, is the audience. He gets the message.

Holden 'Mini' 4 Nights

Academy Award-winning actor William Holden (Best Actor, 1953, "Stalag 17") makes his television dramatic debut as Bumper Morgan, 20-year veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department, who decides to "pull the pin" and retire, in "The Blue Knight," a four-part adaptation of Joseph Wambaugh's best-selling novel. The mini-series will be colorcast on four consecutive evenings: Tuesday, Nov. 13, through Friday, Nov. 17 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Lee Remick co-stars as Cassie Walters, Bumper Morgan's fiancee. They plan to marry in San Francisco immediately following Bumper's retirement.

Also featured in "The Blue Knight" are Joe Santos as Sgt. Cruz Segovia, Sam Elliott as Charlie Bronski, Vic Tayback as Neil Grogan, Eileen Brennan as Glenda, Katherine Bard as Judge Martha Redford and Anne Archer as Laila.

The story begins with Bumper finding the body of a murdered prostitute in the Los Angeles River Basin. Bumper hopes to find the murderer before he retires: ". . . All these years I've packed in every kind of scum you can name —rapists, robbers, rotten kid violators, but I've never torn off a killer like this one. . . ."

As he approaches his last day on the force, Bumper must deal with his emotions about leaving the only world he has known, his beat, and establishing a new life with Cassie.

The mini-series was filmed on location in Los Angeles. The 33-day shooting schedule took the crew to depressed areas of downtown Los Angeles, the University of Southern California, an Arabian restaurant and other locations described in Wambaugh's novel.

Holden was discovered by a Paramount talent scout at the Pasadena Playhouse, where he was playing Madame Curie's grandfather in "Manya."

It was his sensitive performance as a young boxer-violinist in "Golden Boy" that established Holden as a top star.

Holden's stage name (his real name is William Franklin Beedle) came about accidentally. While in the Paramount publicity office, the publicist to whom he was talking received a call from a William Holden, then an assistant managing editor of the Los Angeles Times. Holden and the publicity man liked the name and adopted it with the permission of the real Holden.

For the next ten years, Holden's roles were that of "the boy next door." Billy Wilder broke the mold by casting him as the gigolo in "Sunset Boulevard."

OLD FRIENDS—Patrick Macnee is reunited, for the first time since "The Avengers," with the former Mrs. Peel—the lovely Diana Rigg in her NBC—TV comedy series "Diana," for the "You Can't Go Back" episode colorcast on Monday, Nov. 12 (8:30-9 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Gena To Be In Medical Center

Gena Rowlands has been set for one of her rare television appeaances in the "Child of Violence" segment of "Medical Center."

Miss Rowlands portrays the role of Karen Coberly, an American journalist who brings a young victim of the Irish civil war to the medical center for treatment.

Miss Rowlands' career began its upward spiral when she was cast in live television shows. Josh Logan saw her and asked her to read for the feminine lead opposite Edward G. Robinson in Paddy Chayevsky's "The Middle of the Night." She was launched as a new dramatic star on Broadway.

INCREASES TENSION — A secret love affair between jet pilot Dean Martin and stewardess Jacqueline Bisset only increases the tension in "Airport," the box-office smash that becomes an ABC Special Motion Picture Presentation on Sunday, Nov. 11 (7:30 - 10:30 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

'The Cowboys' Slated Tuesday

John Wayne stars in "The Cowboys," a Warner Brothers western involving the rites of passage from schoolboy to manhood, in the first theatrical feature to be presented as a special two-hour "Tuesday Movie of the Week" on Nov. 13 (8:30-10:30 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

Especially edited for television's at-home family audience, "The Cowboys' tells the classically human story of innocent youth in transition to maturity. At the time of the movie's theatrical release, critic Judith Crist called it "a completely satisfying entertainment."

In the story, set in the 1870s, Wil Andersen (John Wayne), an aging rancher, loses all his cowhands to a gold rush just before he has to drive 1,200 head of cattle across 400 of the meanest miles in the West. Against his judgment, and after fiercely demanding tests, he agrees to take 11 schoolboys (ages 9-15), and an adult black philosopher (Roscoe Lee Browne) on the drive. He refuses a hostile young half-breed (A Martinez) and a lying ex-convict called Long Hair (Bruce Dern).

On the trail the boys grow up fast, and when the half-breed - following closely behind - rescues one of the youngsters, he is accepted as a member of the crew. The boys get drunk and learn how pleasure can lead to pain. They observe (without joining) the meaningless ways of rootless men with rootless women; and they see one of their number trampled while helping a friend.

They learn the truths of life that were not in their school books.

$6 Million Man Saturday

Lee Majors stars as Steve Austin, a special government agent. Also starring are Richard Anderson as Oscar Goldman and Alan Oppenheimer as Dr. Rudy Wells.

Elizabeth Ashley guest stars as Dr. Erica Bergner, and Terry Carter as Mel Bristol. John Vernon is special guest star along with Luciana Paluzzi, Maurice Evans and Leif Erickson as William Henry Cameron. Co-starring are Craig Heubing, David White and Marcel Hillaire.

Maude's Cast In A Musical

Switching from straight comedy to musical comedy is not the easiest thing to do. It's quite a feat, for example, for the entire cast of a television situation comedy show to shift gears, with less than a week's rehearsal, into a polished musical company, performing songs, dances and broad comedy sketches.

But it can be done, if the cast happens to have a musical background to begin with. A case in point is "The Maude Musical," an unusual episode of the "Maude" series to be broadcast Tuesday, Nov. 13 (8-8:30 p.m.) on Channel 9.

The occasion arises when Beatrice Arthur, as Maude, stages a charity musical in the high-school auditorium and everyone gets into the act.

Miss Arthur, as well as her co-star, Bill Macy, and their supporting cast, will be singing and - or dancing on television for the first time. But none is a novice at musical comedy. (Perhaps executive producer Norman Lear, with his on-target vision, deliberately cast "Maude" in the first place with performers capable of playing as many roles as a typical repertory company.)

In any case, it will be a special treat for viewers who haven't known that Miss Arthur is an accomplished singer (she won a Tony Award for her Broadway role as Vera Charles in the musical "Mame") or a sketch performer (she has worked with some of the best, including Sid Caesar, Art Carney and Steve Allen).

Then there's Adrienne Barbeau, whose role of Carol gives no indication that she was nominated for a Tony for her singing and dancing role

Snoopy Directs Ice Follies

Snoopy, the famous "Peanuts" comic strip character, takes over as a director of the third music and comedy - on - ice special, featuring highlights of the Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies, in "Snoopy Directs the Ice Follies," to be colorcast on Tuesday, Nov. 13 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Charles Schulz, creator of the internationally famous "Peanuts" characters, hosts this special, produced at the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum Arena, Oakland, Calif., with winter scenes filmed at the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Featured skating stars include Karen Kresge, Richard Dwyer, Susan Berens, Atoy Wilson, Mr. Frick, Tim Wood, Kathy Miller, Nancy and Leandre, and Laurie Braude as the stage manager.

The show opens with Snoopy readying Dwyer and Ms. Berens for their opening number, "For All We Know," and "Yakety Axe."

Snoopy and his staff next look at a piece of film in the screening room starring Ms. Kresge in her interpretation of "Ain't No Mountain High Enough," followed by Nancy and Leandre's "Love Story" on ice.

Hope Spoofs Private Eyes

Although Bob Hope has announced he has quit his annual custom of doing overseas Christmas shows, he will be seen again next year on television entertaining at U.S. military bases abroad.

The comedian said that sometime in 1974 he plans to do a compilation of all the Christmas shows he has done since 1954 and compress them into a two-hour two-and-a-half hour special.

Acting Is Work, But Fun To Boy

"Why do I want to act?" Ruben Figueroa, star of "Santiago's Ark," the "ABC Afterschool Special," Wednesday, November 14 (4:30-5:30 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12, stops for a moment to think about his answer. "It's fun. Really fun, you know. I like it better than work!"

Ruben, a 14-year-old Puerto Rican boy, was born in New York. Playing the part of Santiago means a lot to him. "Santiago is a Puerto Rican boy who wants to build a boat on the roof of his tenement building. He wants it so much that nothing will stop him. Not the tough street gangs, not the lack of material, not the disapproval of his mother. He wants more than to build a boat. He wants to be somebody important, something special. He doesn't want to spend the rest of his life fighting the ghetto. 'Santiago's Ark' is a beautiful movie and it presents a very positive image for the Puerto Rican people."

The intensity abruptly disappears and in its place a grin appears on Ruben's face. "I didn't really mean that acting isn't work. But it's the kind of work you can do, learn from, and still have fun... and earn money!"

Ruben, a freshman at the High School of Performing Arts in New York, says he's not a serious student. "But I like school. Especially the drama classes. Through acting I learn how to really feel a part and all about sensitivity. This is very important in learning about other people. We really have to understand different kinds of people in order to be good actors and play them.

Ruben began acting when he was seven. "My sister, Laura, is an actress. A friend of hers said that an off-Broadway production, "Ox-Cart," was looking for child actors. I auditioned and got the part. I had so much fun, I guess that's when I decided I wanted to act.

ShowEducation Theory Series

A two-part series on the progressive theories of Latin American educator Paulo Freire and their potential applications within the educational systems of the United States will be the subject of "Look Up and Live" on consecutive Sundays, Nov. 11 and Nov. 18.

Part I on November 11 examines Freire's philosophy and how it evolved in the midst of Latin American political and social turmoil. At first a teacher in the slums of Brazil and Chile, Freire is now a consultant to the education department of the World Council of Churches.

Freire discovered, the broadcast reveals, that "the major educational task is to help poor people change their perceptions about their lot in life rather than filing them with new information equipping them with new skills.

Another Apes Film

Fear of the unkown and the inevitable drives man into hatred and war against an intelligent trio of apes who have fled backwards in time to the present for safety, in "Escape From the Planet of the Apes," which has it world television premiere on "The CBS Friday Night Movies" Friday Nov. 16 (9-11 p.m.) in color on Channel 3N,9,11. Roddy McDowall and Kim Hunter star, along with Bradford Dillman and with Sal Mineo and Ricardo Montalban.

In an attempt to escape the nuclear destruction of earth in the 22nd century, chimpanzee scientists Zira, Cornelius and Milo launch a spacecraft through a bend in time and arrive in Southern California years earlier in 1973. Bewildered human scientists are at first intrigued by their intelligent visitors and treat them as honored guests. But Zira's pregnancy raises fears and speculations, and her knowledge of the future of the planet earth—that it is destined to be ruled by apes—makes the apes victims of their own knowledge.

Hank Aaron In Variety Debut

Henry Aaron, now only one home run away from tying Babe Ruth's career record, will make his TV variety debut on "The Flip Wilson Show" Thursday, Nov. 15 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

With a bat as a prop representing various objects, Flip, Aaron, Miss Grant, Gladys Knight and the Pips and Johnson do a series of comedy sketches. Glady's Knight and the Pips sing "Midnight Train to Georgia" and "I've Got to Use My Imagination." Miss Grant sings "Days of the Waltz" and joins Flip in a take-off on TV commercials. In the show's finale, Aaron is "roasted" by Flip and the cast in a spoof of the Friar's Club banquets.

The Atlanta slugger will also talk about sports with Flip. Aaron hit the 713th home run of his career Sept. 29, and played the last game of the season the following day.

GETS SICK

During the filming of "Airport", director George Seaton came down with penumonia and his old friend Henry Hathaway stepped in to direct the blizzard scenes in Minnesota. The Minneapolis St. Paul International Airport is the site of much of the action in the film.

PSYCHIC — Ross Martin guest stars as Damien, a nightclub psychic who tells his audience more about a fatal fire than appears in the newspapers, in "Mind for Murder" on "Ironside" Thursday, Nov. 15 (9-10 p.m.) in color on Channel 6-7.

'Go' Will Be On Location Near Natchez

"Go" goes on location near Natchez, Miss., with the cast and crew of the film, "Huckleberry Finn," on the program of Saturday, Nov. 17 12:30-1 p.m. on Channel 6-7. Jeff East, who stars in the title role of the film, is narrator.

The enormous amount of equipment and the large technical crew needed to make a feature film on location is shown by the "Go" cameras as young Jeff describes the arduous tasks in making just a few short scenes. Jeff also talks about the adventure and fun of making the film. He tells how the director, J. Lee Thompson, chose him for the role after he had played Huck in the film, "Tom Sawyer."

Actor Paul Winfield appears with Jeff and director Thompson as they work in a Mississippi swamp making a scene that runs about a minute in the movie, but which takes a day to film.

Podolak Runs And Catches

The fall of the Kansas City Chiefs from atop the AFC Western Division last season, marked a year of injury and frustration. This season the Chiefs are staying away from doctors and, as a result, are making their bid to reign as champions again.

Ed Podolak, one of the few bright spots in last year's offense, was the leading yard gainer for the third straight year. Ed rushed for 615 yards in 171 attempts during the 1972 campaign and was the teams second leading receiver with 46 catches good for 345 yards.

This season, the pass receiving abilities of Ed Podolak are playing a vital role in the Chiefs' early season successes. Podolak is currently engaged in a fierce battle with Denver's Bobby Anderson for the leadership in the AFC's pass receiving department.

"Zone Defenses are the simple reason," said Podolak, whose 12 catches against Denver inked him in the Kansas City Chiefs' record book for the most receptions in a game.

"To establish a good passing offense against the zone, you have to keep the linebacker from getting 12-15 yards back into the hook area. If he does you go underneath the zone and throw to the running backs."

Due to the double coverage (the linebackers helping out the defensive backs) are Otis Taylor and Elmo Wright, Dawson has been passing to Podolak under the zone. Naturally if the linebacker picks up Podolak coming out of the backfield and leaves Taylor or Wright one on one — watch out!, there could be a quick six points on the scoreboard.

In this the season of the closer hash marks and resulting zone defenses, Ed's versatility and dedication are becoming more valuable to the Chiefs' in their efforts to become Champions again.

Steelers Reverse Feelings

At the start of the 1972 season, the Pittsburgh Steelers, long regarded as sure losers, had sold only 23,000 season tickets.

Today, this young exciting team is being touted as a Super Bowl contender. The speculation for the 1973 Steelers was so great that all their games this season were sold out before the 1972 campaign had ended.

A new mania has taken over the city of Pittsburgh as the fortunes of the hometown team have been dramatically reversed. One of the prime ingredients for this rapid turn in events was a fleet-foot, 230-pound rookie fullback named Franco Harris.

Harris. the son of a Negro military man and an Italian mother, was a first round draft choice from Penn State.

Harris started the '72 season as a third string running back behind John Fuqua and Preston Pearson and as a return specialist. Midway through the season, Harris got his opportunity to play when Fuqua and Pearson were lost due to injury.

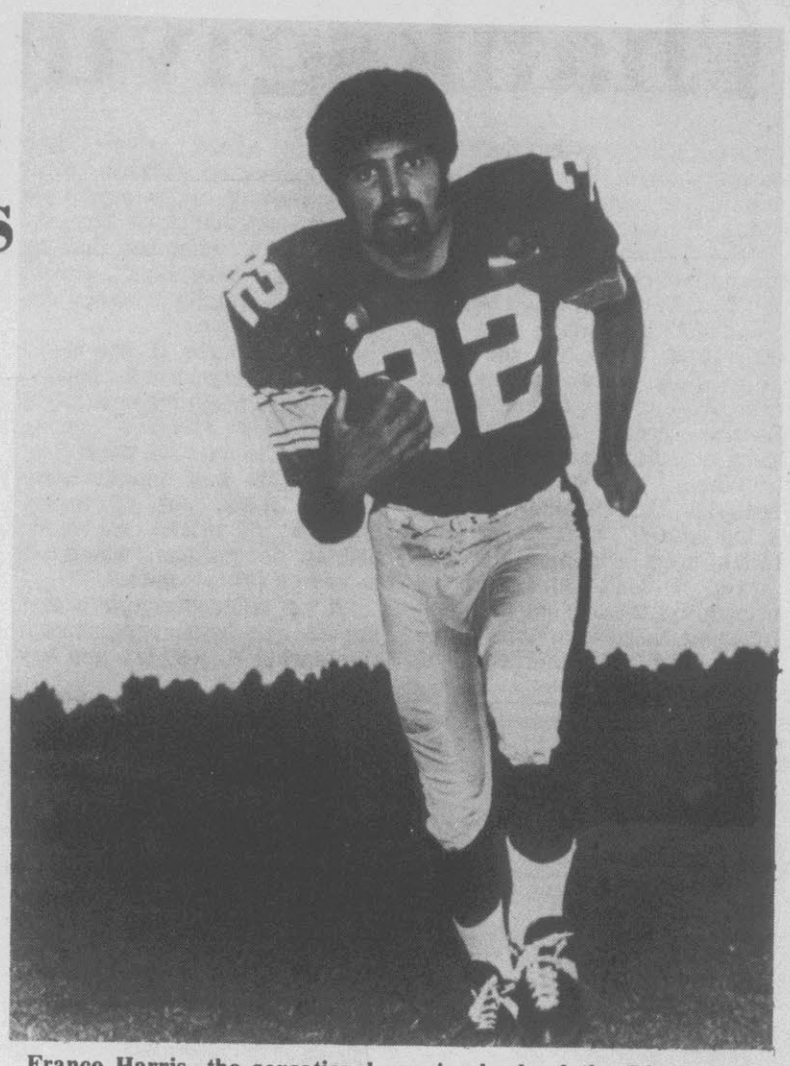
Franco quickly became one of the most popular players in the AFC by surpassing the 100 yard mark in six consecutive games to tie Jim Brown's NFL record. He also broke the 1,000 yard barrier for the season, despite his slow start, by gaining 1,055 yards just short of John Brockington's rookie record.

Franco Harris is probably best remembered by his miracle catch in the last five seconds of the playoff game between Pittsburgh and Oakland.

Down to their last play and trailing 7 to 6 the Steelers were 60 yards away from the Raider goal when Terry Bradshaw threw a pass which was tipped by Jack Tatum, Oakland's defensive back, into Harris's path.

Franco made an incredible shoe-top catch and raced 42 yards for the score which gave Pittsburgh a 13 to 7 victory.

As the '72 season ended, the Steelers had emerged as a new power in the NFL with a spectacular new hero in Franco Harris. Harris was named the American Conference offensive Rookie of the Year on 38 of the 39 ballots cast.



Franco Harris, the sensational running back of the Pittsburgh Steelers, in his second year of Pro football, will be in action against the Oakland Raiders, Sunday, Nov. 11 at 4:00 PM on Channel 6-7.

Thanksgiving For 'The Waltons'

It's not quite true that the more things change, the more they remain the same. Take Thanksgiving, for instance.

"The Thanksgiving Story," a special two-hour holiday episode of "The Waltons" which will be broadcast Thursday, Nov. 15 (8:00-10:00 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network, evoked reminiscences from Earl Hamner, creator and executive story consultant on the series.

"When I was growing up in Schuyler, Va., Thanksgiving was a big affair," he recalls. "My father went out and shot the turkey. I don't remember his ever failing to bring one back, but if he had, there were home-cured hams ready. My mother made cranberry sauce, relishes like watermelon-rind pickles, corn-bread stuffing, and pumpkin pie from our own pumpkins. The only things I can remember that we had to buy were sugar, coffee, flour and vanilla extract for flavoring the pie.

"And, of course, it was dress-up time — everyone in his Sunday best, even though his best might be his 'dress over-alls,' as opposed to the ones he worked in.

"We kids had Indian headdresses made out of turkey feathers. At school we made holiday decorations, which we pasted on the windows.

"A big difference now is that my wife gets frozen vegetables at the market — just try and buy unshelled peas in most stores. In fact, we don't make or grow anything ourselves.

"Back in Virginia, in November, it was usually very cold. Here in California, we buy our turkey and take it to our weekend place at Laguna, and celebrate Thanksgiving dinner on the beach."

On "The Thanksgiving Story," John-Boy, played by series star Richard Thomas, seems to have much to be thankful for as the holiday approaches. His high-school grades have earned him the right to try and qualify for a scholarship to Boatwright University, and his girl friend Jenny, played by Sian Barbara Allen, is coming home after a year's absence.

John Walton, played by series co-star Ralph Waite, has noted a loose pulley belt in the mill and has promised himself to fix it. He has forgotten about it, however, when John-Boy comes to help him with the work. John-Boy is struck in the head when the belt gives way and is knocked against a beam. Although his vision is blurred, he pretends he is not injured. He tries to take the college exams the next day but is unable to read the questions. Taken to a hospital, he learns that his sight — and possibly his life — may be threatened.

Deeply sensitive to the basic give-and-take of family life, the Waltons, whose day-to-day activities in the Depression days of the 1930s in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains have provided audiences with a host of touching stories, find their regular Thanksgiving Day celebration sadly altered by the absence of John-Boy.

'Science Fiction' Is Today

"We live in a science fiction society," says Leonard Nimoy, who provides the voice of Mr. Spock for the animated series, "Star Trek" (Saturdays, 10:30-11 a.m.).

"A lot of people aren't really aware of it. But we really do. We are terribly affected by science fiction in communication, food, transportation, health, medicine, every aspect of our lives," says Nimoy, who played the role of the half-human, half-Vulcan Mr. Spock in "Star Trek" during its three-year run on NBC-TV as a live-action show.

"The trips to the moon brought a lot of science fiction into focus suddenly. Extra-terestrial travel and the possibility of extra-terrestrial life (which I am convinced must exist) are simply the next steps. Whatever discoveries are made on other planets will finally put everything into focus and it won't be science fiction anymore.

"'Star Trek' deals with the very near future, really. At the same time, it raises very serious and worthwhile questions about things that we are dealing with now. It is not always possible for an audience to immediately relate to things that we talk about on 'Star Trek' and perhaps that is good, because if they were able to, some of the things that we do on the show would terrify them."

Nimoy believes that science fiction enables an author to present things pertinent to contemporary society in an altered form. "You can remove it one step and say, 'This is in the future on another planet, look at what happened to these people, they are all living underground because they destroyed the surface of their planet.' If you can say it's on another planet and they can feel for these poor people, it becomes a good way to raise questions which you can't raise in a contemporary drama, at least not in those specific terms."

Nimoy says he is a fan of the social aspects of science fictions. "There are some kinds of science fiction that don't intrigue me at all. They are the nuts and bolts mechanics of science fiction that have to do with certain kind of ships battling it out. It's just another way of playing World War II. The rocketry and stuff like that intrigues me to the extent that they're useful as a vehicle to establish another time, another dimension, another planet."

FOR SID CAESAR

Who was the most unusual person you ever met?—P. F., Montclair, N.J.

● I think it was someone I never met. In 1955 I was giving a series of lectures on humor at Columbia University. One day I was stopped by J. Robert Oppenheimer. "Albert would like to talk to you," he said. I said, "Albert who?" "Albert Einstein," he said. "He solved the physical equation of MC^2 but now he wants your opinion of the human equation." I was so flabbergasted I didn't know how to answer! Unfortunately, before we had a chance to get together, Mr. Einstein died.

FOR BARBARA EDEN

I read that you were a naïve "small town" girl when you came to Hollywood. How did you ever become a successful actress?—P. Pearson, Gainesville, Fla.

● The beginning was hard, not because I was so naïve, but because I couldn't get people to listen to me. The hardest part was learning to face the fact that I was a product. Before I came to Hollywood I'd studied and trained myself creatively. But when I hit Hollywood I discovered I was just something to be marketed.

FOR GARY PLAYER

The PGA has been talking about making golfers play 12 of 15 required tournaments. This is to help tournament sponsors who sometimes get stuck without you, Nicklaus, Palmer or Trevino. How do you feel about this?—David Lane, Colorado Springs, Colo.

● I'd have to give up the American tour. I couldn't spend all that time away from my family in South Africa.

FOR SUSAN DEY, Laurie on "The Partridge Family"

As a 21-year-old, do you think college is necessary today?—Kay Darby, Bridgeport, Conn.

● That depends on the person. But today, craftsmen are much more in demand and they get good pay. I haven't gone to college, and I may never go. If I wasn't on TV, I'd probably be in college and be frustrated and unhappy. Instead I am here, I am learning, and I am happy.

FOR GEORGE HAMILTON

Is it difficult for anyone as good looking as you are to be taken seriously as an actor?—M. E., Kingston, N.Y.

● I've been an actor for 15 years, and I'm not sure that anyone has taken me seriously yet! My image as a playboy didn't help. That sort of thing was fine when I was 18, but at 34 it's kind of insipid.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON of the Buffalo Bills

You were the leading ground gainer last season while playing for one of the worst teams in the NFL. Did you ever consider switching teams?—J. M., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● Yes, after the 1971 season. I had known little but frustration with a team that was always playing catch-up football and having to pass. Then, Coach Lou Saban took me aside and said he'd get me blockers and give me the ball a lot. I believed him and signed a new contract. He's kept his word.

FOR AMANDA JONES, Miss U.S.A.

In the bathing-suit competition of beauty pageants, why don't the girls wear bikinis?—S. P., Austin, Texas

● In some beauty pageants, bikinis are used for the bathing-suit competition, but not in the Miss U.S.A. or the Miss Universe pageants. The reason, with which I happen to agree, is that if all girls wear the same style of bathing suit, figures can be judged from an equal starting point. Furthermore, I feel that one-piece suits are in better taste. It can get very cold in those dressing rooms, you know!

FOR JULIA CHILD, the French Chef

Does a wine's alcohol content evaporate during the cooking process?—D. H., Canton, Ohio

● Yes, the alcohol in wine evaporates almost immediately, leaving just the flavor. That's why you should always use good wine. Cheap stuff just tastes worse than ever when heated.

FOR ROCK HUDSON of "McMillan & Wife"

How did you ever get the name "Rock"?—Phyllis Babbitt, Durham, N.Y.

● Rock Hudson is the name my agent, who launched my acting career, picked for me. My real name is Roy Fitzgerald.

FOR SEN. JOHN O. PASTORE (D-R.I.), chairman of the Senate communications subcommittee and sponsor of the law to lift TV blackouts of home games in pro sports

The NFL griped so much about televising home games that you'd think all their money came from ticket sales. How much did they make from TV during the blackout years?—E. B. S., Albany, N.Y.

● When we gave them an exemption from the antitrust laws in 1961, the revenue for each NFL team went from $332,000 in 1961 to $1.5 million in 1972. Recent figures show that the three networks have paid the NFL a total of $47 million for the 1973 rights.

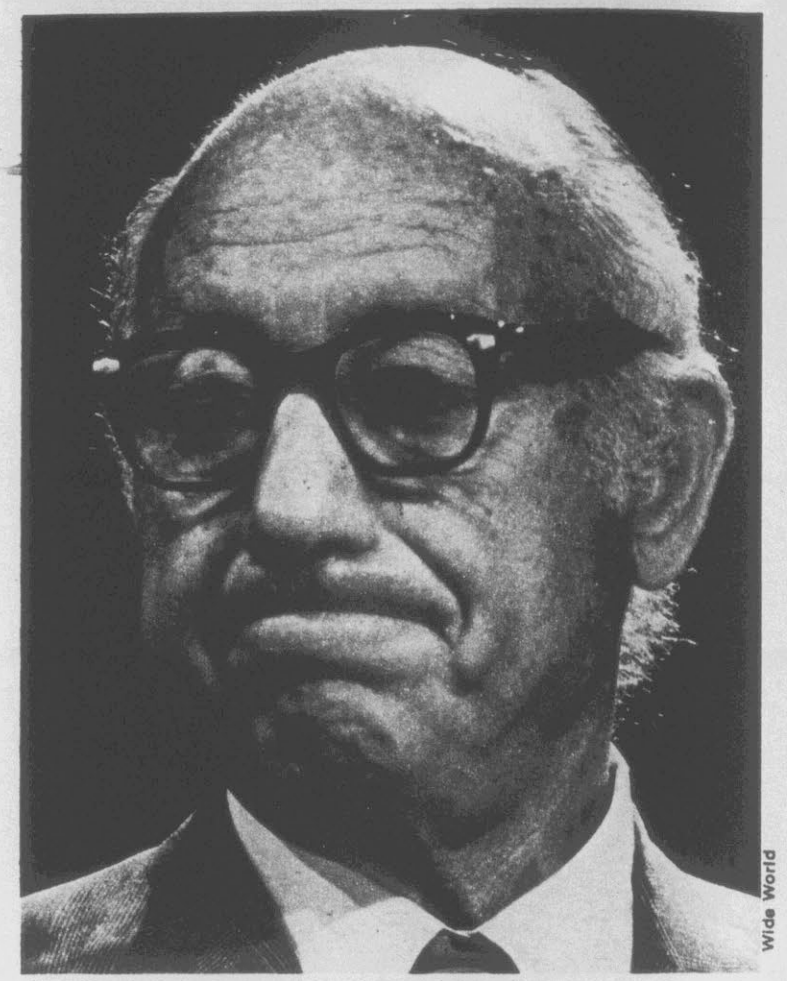
The Scandal of Our Pension Plans:

What's Wrong, What We Can Do About It

It is estimated that between one-third and one-half of the 35 million workers covered by pension plans will never collect a cent. Are you one of them?



Wide World

Sen. Jacob Javits is the ranking minority member of the Senate Labor Subcommittee. A senator since 1957, he is also author of "A Proposal to Amend Anti-Trust Laws" and "Discrimination USA."

● Charles N. Evelyn worked 41 years for a New Jersey chemical factory. As part of his compensation, he was promised a pension of $100 a month when he retired at 65. At 63, he was laid off when the factory was bought by a bigger company. The result: He was ineligible for the pension he had counted on for 41 years.

● Mrs. Iris Kwek was laid off by the Anaconda American Brass Company for economy reasons after 30 years of service in Detroit. Result: She lost all rights to her pension benefits. She had started at the company in 1941 after she finished high school. Then she went on to earn a college degree at night. But even with her degree she stayed on at her old job because of the pension rights she thought she had already earned.

● Robert E. Pratt of Hudson, N.Y., found out after working for the Gifford Wood Company for 47 years that he would receive no pension. Why? Because the company had been sold and the pension plan was terminated three months before Mr. Pratt reached age 65. The new company, Greer Industries of Wilmington, Mass., claimed there were only funds available to pay those who had retired three months before Mr. Pratt's birthday.

These three people and thousands like them have complained bitterly over the fact that their long-expected pensions have evaporated into thin air. And these complaints continue to pour in despite the fact that private pension plans now cover an estimated 35 million American workers and have assets in excess of $150 billion—growing at the rate of $10 to $12 billion annually.

It seems clear that there are major flaws in this country's system of private pension plans —flaws that are the basis for the estimate that between one-third and one-half of the 35 million workers covered will never collect a cent from the plans on which they rely, and to which they probably have contributed.

The Senate Labor Subcommittee, of which I am a member, made an analysis in 1971 of 51 plans that failed to provide for any kind of vesting (entitlement to pension benefits) before retirement age, or that provided for vesting only after the employee had worked 11 years or more, had attained a specified age, or both. Since 1950, these plans had covered seven million employees and had accumulated some $10 billion in assets.

The analysis showed that since 1950 only four percent of those seven million participants received any kind of vested retirement benefit. It also showed that 5.2 million participants had left the coverage of the 51 plans since 1950 before reaching retirement age, and of that number 92 percent had forfeited any right to receive pension benefits. Substantial numbers of those who lost out had put in long years of service—but it wasn't enough to keep their pension benefits.

And then there were 36 plans that were the subject of yet another study. These plans covered about three million participants since 1950 and had accumulated assets of $6 billion. Vesting was provided after ten years of service or less. The analysis showed that since 1950, 242,510 employees had received normal, early or deferred vested retirement benefits, or eight percent of the total three million employees who participated in these plans. Approximately 1.5 million employees—half the total—had left these plans before they reached retirement age. And 73 percent of that 1.5 million forfeited their right to obtain any kind of pension benefit.

These figures tell the story in overwhelming terms. The enormous mobility of our working population plays havoc with the assumptions on which most private pension plans are built.

WHAT THE SENATE'S PENSION-REFORM BILL WOULD DO

1. Require minimum vesting standards, to make sure that no pension plan would deny rights to most employees.

2. Require minimum funding standards to assure that pensions will deliver the benefits promised.

3. Establish a federal insurance program to guarantee pension benefits, even if the employer goes out of business.

4. Establish a fund that can operate on a central-clearinghouse basis for people who transfer from one employer to another.

5. Require that employees be told all about their pension plans.

6. Establish rules to prevent mishandling of funds and other unethical practices.

7. Establish a new section of the Department of Labor to look after employee pension rights.

8. Provide effective judicial enforcement of all these requirements.

Now! With the simple method of Foot Reflexology!

'You Can Get Almost Immediate Relief from Aches and Pains All Over the Body!'

"I have brought relief to countless suffering people with this method—and have watched their joy of regained health and vitality—when all hope had seemingly been lost!"

"Let me show you how it can bring about the normal function of a specific location or organ..."

Says MILDRED CARTER, Professional Reflexologist

Dear Friend:

My name is Mildred Carter. I am not a doctor, but for over 14 years, I have been helping people receive remarkable relief from seemingly hopeless aches and pains all over the body, with a method—which you can use, too—called Foot Reflexology.

Foot Reflexology is a method for healing the whole body. If you've ever suffered from foot trouble, you know that it's the feet that make the whole body ache. By rubbing and pressing gently on certain areas of your feet, I can show you how you may get almost immediate relief IN OTHER PARTS OF THE BODY!

Why? Because the feet contain Reflexes, which lead like telephone lines to all parts of the body. By pressing them, you help restore normal circulation and health to congested areas. No one can guarantee a cure, nor is it a medical substitute, but:

- I have seen it relieve crippled hands and feet, caused by painful arthritis, straighten whole bodies and bring them back to normal!
- It can stop the pain of hemorrhoids almost immediately!
- Most headaches vanish immediately with this method!
- I have seen it relieve liver and gall bladder trouble!
- I have seen it clear up stuffed sinuses almost immediately!
- I have seen it relieve back troubles, in a matter of seconds!
- I have seen it bring fast relief to stomach troubles!
- I have brought lasting relief to sufferers of varicose veins with this method. This is also true with cramps or pains in the legs!
- I have seen it relieve bladder trouble quickly, with great relief after the very first treatment—all sensation of burning or itching seems to disappear completely!
- This simple method can bring women blessed relief from many disorders which may have been troubling them for years!
- I have brought relief to men, in every case of prostate trouble I have ever treated with this method!

...And still that's just the beginning! You'll find the full details of this amazing method of healing in a new book which I have written, called HELPING YOURSELF WITH FOOT REFLEXOLOGY. I'll tell you how to get it in just a moment, but first I want to tell you more about it!

Many Healings Reported!

Foot Reflexology is a safe, natural, and inexpensive way to help restore healthful circulation to every area of your body.

Did you ever notice how quickly water freshens when good water is poured into muddy water? Foot Reflexology does the same for circulation in your body. Blood flow slows over the years. Naturally, glands and organs become sluggish. Stimulating a new flow of blood to these "tired" places brings new life, clears glands and organs of years of accumulated waste.

Healings and relief from discomforts of all sorts are reported, by the dozen, in the pages of my book. All were obtained with the help of Foot Reflexology.

Here's What I Say In This Book:

Gall Bladder Healing "There are many cases where Reflex Massage of the liver and gall bladder has saved people from having an operation, with the stones seeming to vanish after a few treatments."—Quoted from Chapter 12

Anemic Conditions "Anyone who is anemic will find . . . improvement can be so rapid it is amazing. With pernicious anemia, results will be slower, but Nature will be there, changing new blood cells for old." —Quoted from Chapter 11

Helping the Heart "No matter what the nature of the trouble is, the heart can be aided with this method. . . . I can give you many case histories of wonderful results from this scientific massage of the reflexes on heart patients." —Quoted from Chapter 13

Relief for Leg Pain "I believe I have treated more cases of leg aches than any other malady, and most were caused by the sciatic nerve. Many people suffer for years without any relief. Yet it is so amazingly simple to banish all inflammation from this nerve in an unbelievably short time. In many cases this method has brought relief in one treatment." —Quoted from Chapter 22

Varicose Veins "I have brought lasting relief to sufferers of varicose veins by starting the proper circulation with Reflex Massage, thus causing congestion to disappear. This is also true with cramps or pains of any kind in the legs." —Quoted from Chapter 16

Relief for Hemorrhoids "Hemorrhoids are nothing more than a congested vein (known as piles). This is actually a varicose vein in the rectum. These can become so large as to protrude, causing inconvenience, much suffering, and in many cases bleeding. Though painful, they are usually suffered in silence by those who have them. Yet with Reflex Massage they are one of the quickest to respond to treatment. Here we will learn how to use the Reflexology method to bring you prompt relief!" —Quoted from Chapter 21

How to Make Reflexology Your Rejuvenator "Would you like to be young again? Would you like to walk expectantly into the future, to enjoy new experiences, with a revitalized body? We do not have to be old... Reflexology rejuvenates the entire body, giving new life to glands and cells. Blood flow slows over the years. Naturally, glands and cells become sluggish. Reflexology stimulates a new flow of blood to these tired places, clears glands and cells of accumulated waste, brings them new life!" —Quoted from Chapters 3 and 24

You'll Discover...

- How Reflexology relieved a man's stuffed sinuses. "After the first treatment, he could suddenly breathe through both sides of his nose" and he felt well again.
- How a woman who had hurt her spine, and was in so much pain that she called a bone specialist to take x-rays, received so much relief with Reflexology—after a single treatment—that she was able to get up and do her work. She felt so much better, in fact, that she cancelled her appointment for x-rays, and claims she is fully recovered.
- How a man with a hunchback—a huge, ugly bulge—received a complete healing with Reflexology. He was freed of pain, and "he was able to stand straight." The hump disappeared. "He was not deformed at all," I reported!
- How a man who suffered from ulcers, kidney trouble, hay fever, and constipation, received complete relief with Reflexology. "The symptoms of each illness disappeared one by one," and today he sleeps like a baby every night!
- How a man with a heart condition was healed with Reflexology. Doctors had always warned him he couldn't do the things other men did. With this method, "his heart returned to normal enough to allow him to do anything he wanted, without any trouble. Today, after more than 10 years, he is a strong and well man."

My name is Mildred Carter. I am not a doctor, but I have been helping people receive remarkable relief from seemingly hopeless aches and pains!

What A Physiotherapist Says:

"During my forty-eight years as a Physiotherapist in my own Treatment Centers . . . I have had every opportunity to observe the amazing benefits of manual massage. As a means of rehabilitation where physical trauma is involved, it ranks high in the annals of Medicine.

"The techniques described in Mrs. Carter's book have been developed by experts in the field of reflex massage, and we have no hesitation in recommending them. . . . For the relief of pain, we know of no other means short of opiates to achieve this objective."

– CLARENCE R. MUNROE
Registered Technician, Physiotherapy

AMAZING TRUE Experiences!

"Reflexology will free you from sickness and suffering, and fear of pain, when used correctly."

"There are so many personal experiences which I could recount, stories of illnesses which were relieved by reflex massage, that I find myself wanting to tell all of them at once. I have seen it do marvelous things that surprised me many times when doctors said it couldn't be done.

"If it can do this for others, it can do this for you! I have proven that this method of healing works, in my own experience. Try it on yourself and FEEL the results!"

Safe To Use!

What's more, Foot Reflexology is absolutely safe. It is the "drugless" way to better health, and requires no exercise, no expensive equipment of any kind. It is so simple, and natural, that it is safe to use on anyone, from the youngest baby to the oldest person. In fact, it is a Rejuvenator that can actually win you many years of new youth!

The Scandal of Our Pension Plans

Moving, and the resultant loss of pension benefits, is the rule rather than the exception. Very few employees work for one employer as long as 30 years—or even 20 years. But despite this undeniable evidence, private pension plans are structured in a way that results in an abnormally high loss of benefits.

Would better pension plans make a difference in people's lives? Yes – undeniably, pensions can make a significant contribution to the economic security of large numbers of old people who need a much more realistic level of living in retirement. Even a substantially liberalized Social Security could not do the job pensions can do. It's been nearly 40 years since Social Security was enacted.

Right now—even with recent substantial increases in its benefits—Social Security is just barely enough to support people, even at poverty levels. Nor do people save or invest enough money over a lifetime. The result is they can't really cope with soaring food costs or any other forms of inflation. We've even had the spectacle of seeing some retired people turn into shoplifters, just to obtain a decent diet. And that's only one example of what the lack of adequate old-age income can do to people.

And what if people begin to live longer? The medical-research community is concentrating as never before on reaching major breakthroughs against the great killers—cancer and heart disease. If their efforts succeeded, life expectancy could soar to 70 or 90 or more. That would revolutionize the economics of aging and make an improved private pension system even more essential.

Pensions also have a great deal to do with morale—and the erosion of worker morale has become a matter of grave national concern. We need to find ways to give workers a "shot in the arm," to improve their incentives. Judging from their complaints about their pension plans, pension security certainly isn't doing much to help morale at present.

My advice to employees who are covered by pension plans is this: Find out all you can about your coverage. What are the benefits? What does it take to make you eligible for the benefits? Who's contributing how much to the plan? How many years will you have to work to be eligible for normal retirement? For early retirement? For disability retirement? How many years does it take to vest? Who manages the money in your pension fund, and how is the money invested? Keep asking until you get answers.

Many companies have excellent pension plans, and the whole pension system has improved dramatically in the last ten years. From 1960 to 1970, for example, the number of people receiving private pensions more than doubled—from 1.8 million to 4.2 million—and benefit payments tripled, from $1.8 billion to $5.9 billion. But many company (and union) plans are still woefully deficient.

In 1966, I introduced the first comprehensive bill to deal with the defects in the private pension system. Then in 1972, Sen. Harrison Williams (D-N.J.) and I introduced the bipartisan Williams-Javits bill based on my 1966 bill.

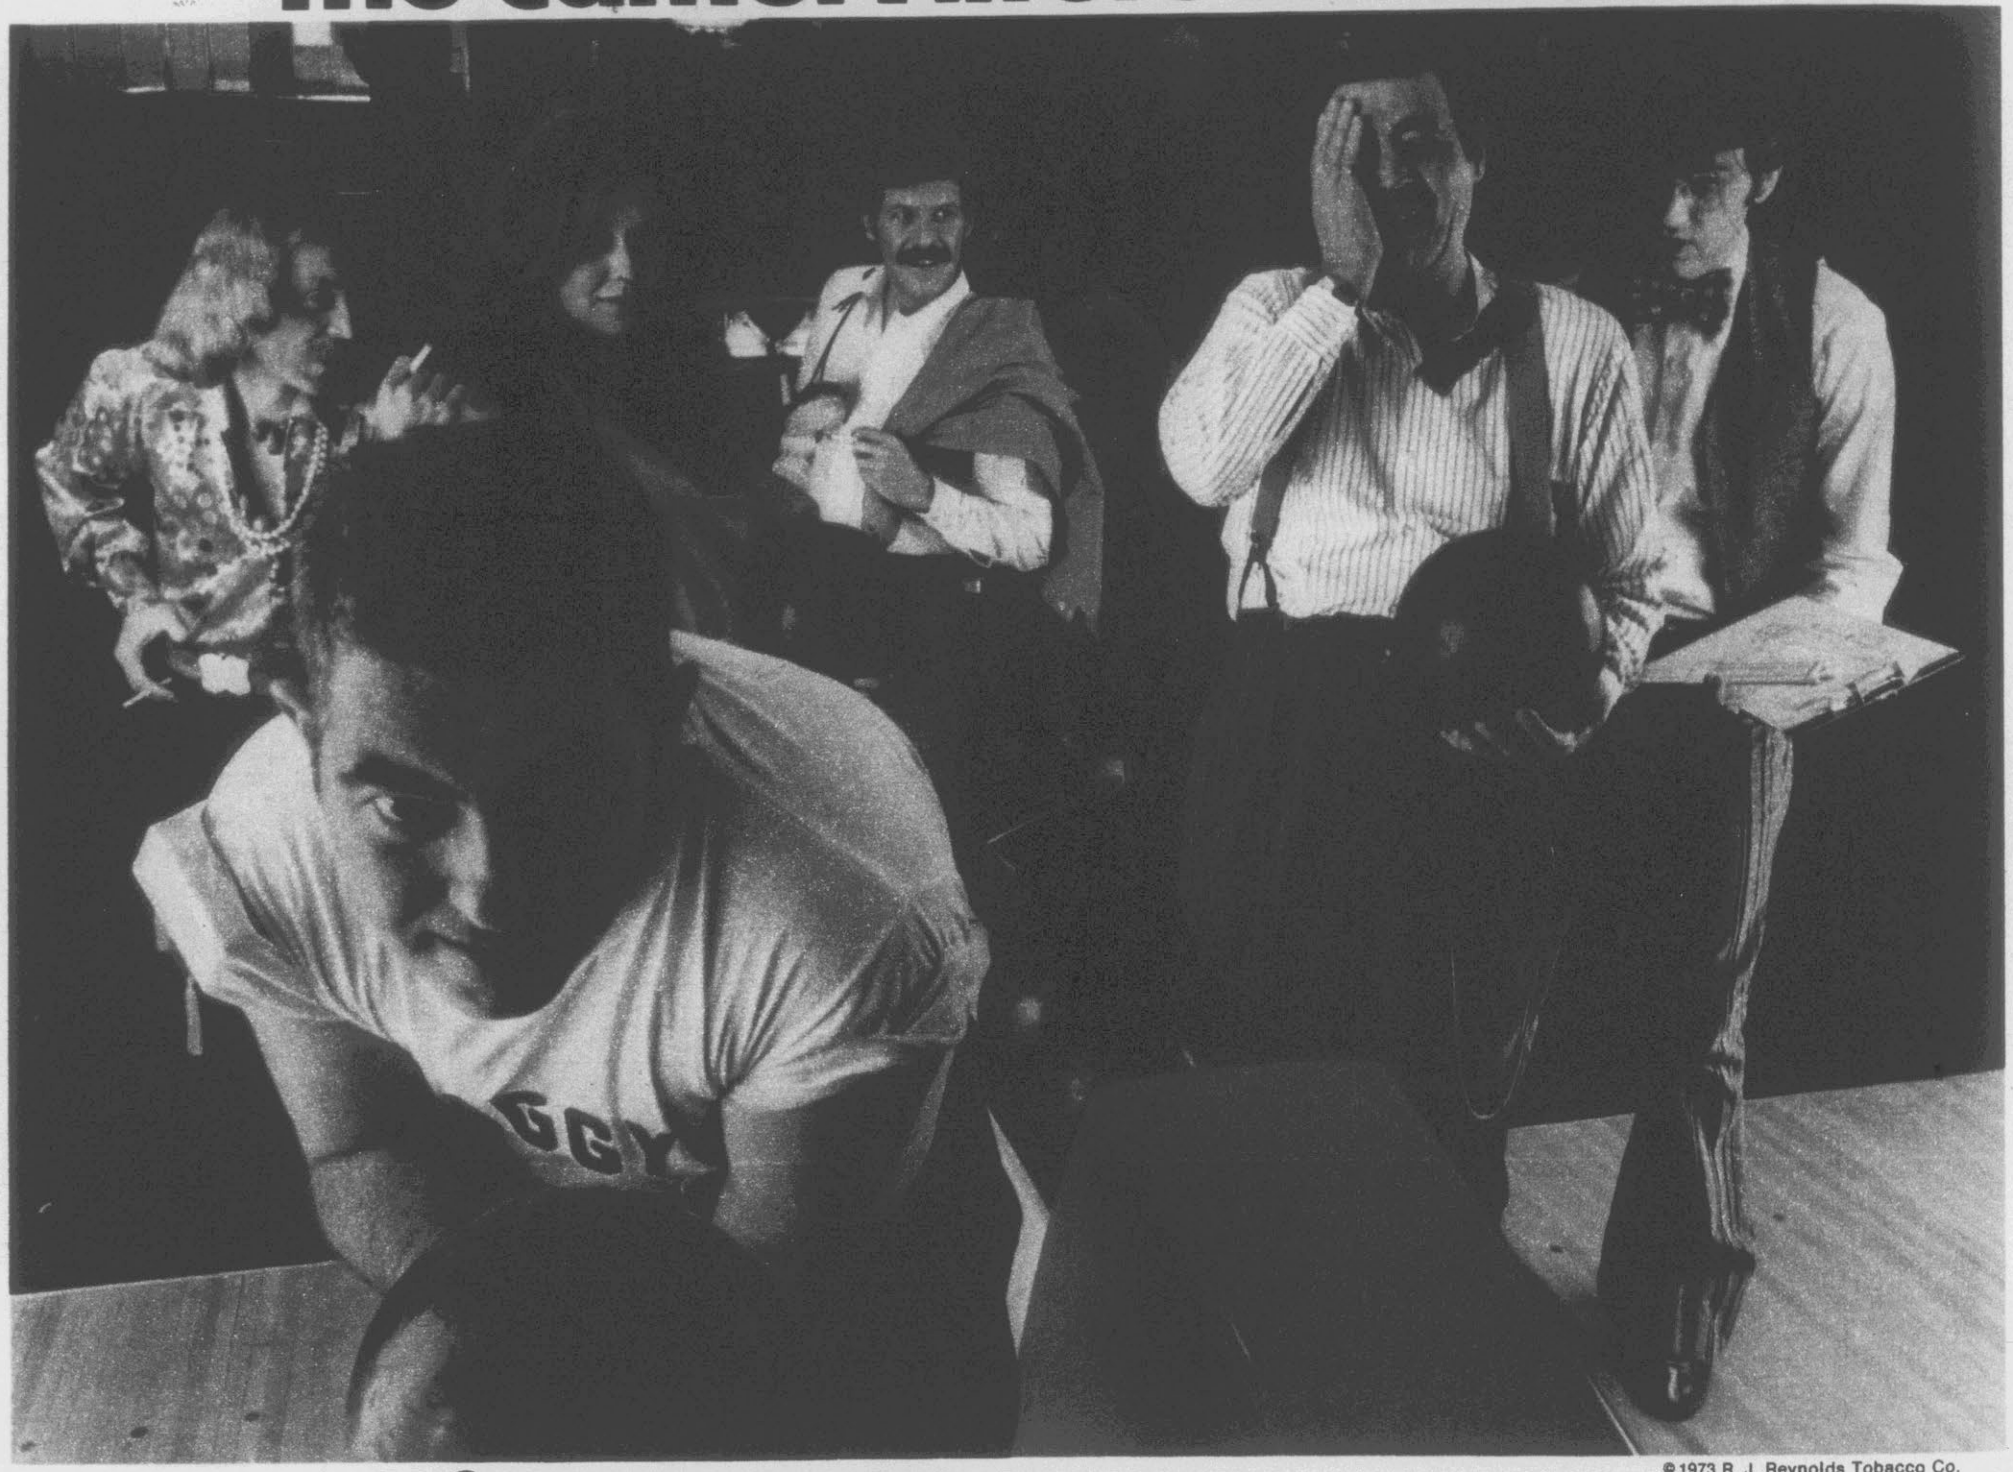
You can read what the Senate's bill is all about elsewhere on these pages.

On September 19, the Senate – by a 93-0 vote – passed a meaningful private-pension-reform bill that successfully merged the best provisions of the Williams-Javits bill with a similar bill from the Senate Finance Committee.

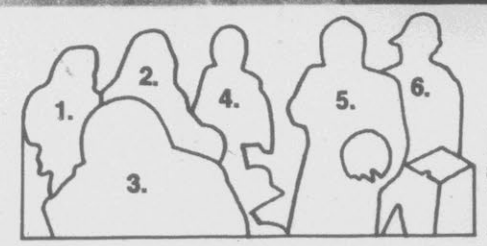
The Senate bill will also provide, as proposed by the Nixon Administration, that individual employees – those not covered by private pension plans – can deduct up to $1,500 annually for contribution to an individual pension plan.

I strongly urge every working man and woman to help us put the pension reforms of the Williams-Javits bill (as it cleared the Senate) on the U.S. statute books. I hope you will write and ask your congressman to support our bill.

Can you spot the Camel Filters smoker?



© 1973 R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.



In this picture, everybody has a gimmick . . . almost everybody. Try picking the one who doesn't go along. 1. No way. He's Gerry Atric, over-the-hill hippie. Irons his hair twice daily. Cigarettes taste just as flat. Gimmick: Watching bowling pins "do their own thing, man." 2. Naomi Glowsoul. Gimmick: Uses so much body english that police have raided the place four times. 3. Nope. It's Angie "The Arm" Kugelman. Throws so hard three automatic pinsetting machines have quit. Smokes cigarettes so heavily filtered, he's like a man giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a rock. 4. Right. He just likes bowling, not gimmicks. Likes his cigarette honest and no-nonsense, too. Camel Filters. Easy and good tasting. 5. Zooty Smith. Gimmick: Has worn same good luck clothes since he broke 125 in 1942. Smokes war surplus cigarettes and saves the tinfoil. 6. Whiz Kid Pringle. Developed math formula to bowl a perfect strike. Unfortunately releases ball on backswing.

Camel Filters. They're not for everybody (but they could be for you).

Cornmeal Spoon Bread To Complement The Holiday Feast

Walter Storck

Clams and oysters practically cook themselves on the grill. Later, popcorn and maple syrup will tempt the children, and warm Indian Pudding and cream will close the meal.

2. Sprinkle inside of turkey with salt, pepper and thyme leaves.
3. Using heavy cord, truss the turkey in four places: (1) tie the legs and tail together; (2) tie the legs and thighs tightly to the body of the turkey; (3) and (4) tie the wings to the body in 2 places.
4. Thread one spit prong or fork onto spit so that points are away from handle. Insert spit in turkey just below the breastbone and bring out above the tail. Center turkey on spit.
5. Thread second prong onto spit. Push prongs into breast and thigh sections of turkey; fasten securely.
6. Tie another cord lengthwise around the turkey, wrapping the lengthwise cord around each of the crosswise cords.
7. When preparing coals for lighting, arrange them in back half of barbecue. Place a drip pan about 4 inches longer than the turkey in front half of barbecue. If desired, shape a drip pan from heavy-duty foil.
8. When coals have reached a medium temperature, attach spit to motor. Grill, brushing occasionally with butter, until turkey reaches 185°F. internal temperature. (Either insert a meat thermometer in the thickest part of the thigh before starting to grill or use a thermometer that can be inserted periodically for a reading.)
9. The following chart can be used as a guide for barbecuing time:

APPROXIMATE TIMETABLE FOR BARBECUING WHOLE TURKEY

Ready-to-Cook Weight	Approximate Cooking Time
6-8 pounds	3-3½ hours
8-10 pounds	3½-4 hours
10-12 pounds	4-5 hours

10. About 1 hour before turkey is done, wrap stuffing in heavy-duty-foil packet and place on coals. Turn occasionally and cook until heated throughout.
11. Remove turkey from spit and allow to rest 15 minutes before carving.

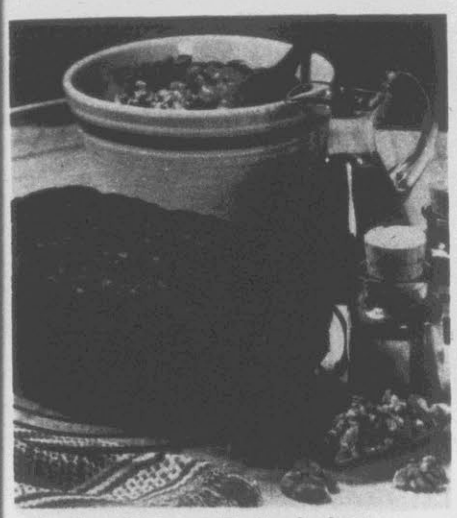
This Way, Step by Step, to a Great Fruitcake

By Marilyn Hansen



Old-Time Molasses Fruitcake is a delicious, mellow cake, laden with fruits and nuts and with just the right seasoning of spices.

Right about now our thoughts turn to Christmas and gift planning. As one of your pre-holiday projects this year, why not make some fruitcakes to decorate and present to special friends?

OLD-TIME MOLASSES FRUITCAKE

- 3 cups (one 15-oz. pkg.) dark raisins or 3 cups chopped dates or pitted prunes
- 3 cups (one 15-oz. pkg.) golden raisins or 3 cups dried apricots, chopped
- 2 pkgs. (16-oz. size) mixed candied fruit
- ¾ cup brandy or rum or apple juice
- 3 cups butter, margarine or shortening
- 2½ cups sugar
- 12 eggs
- 1 tablespoon pure vanilla extract
- 1 bottle (12 ozs.) dark molasses
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
- 1 pkg. (2 lbs.) all-purpose flour or 7 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons ground cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons ground nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon ground cloves
- 2 cans (8-oz. size) or 4 cups walnuts, coarsely chopped
- ½-1 cup brandy or apple juice
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 2 tablespoons water
- Candied cherry halves, citron and walnut halves for garnish

1. In large bowl combine dark raisins, golden raisins and mixed candied fruit. Toss with brandy. Cover with plastic film and allow to soak overnight at room temperature.

2. Next day, preheat oven to 300°F. Tear off four 13x18-inch sheets of heavy-duty foil and line four 9x5x3-inch loaf pans. Carefully press foil into corners and smooth out folds; allow some of foil to hang over edges of the pans. Do not grease.

3. In large bowl with electric mixer at medium-high speed, beat butter until light and fluffy. Gradually beat in sugar. Clean side of bowl and beaters.

4. Beat in eggs one at a time; add vanilla extract. Gradually beat in molasses until well-blended. Stir in orange and lemon rinds. Turn into large pot.

5. Sift together flour, baking soda, salt and spices. Add to creamed mixture and beat until well-blended and smooth.

6. Stir in brandy-soaked fruits and walnuts. Spoon batter into foil-lined pans and spread evenly into corners.

7. Bake for 2 hours, or until cake tester poked in center of cakes comes out clean.

8. Remove from oven and cool 10 minutes. Using foil overhang, lift loaves from pans; place on wire racks, cool completely. Remove foil.

9. Cut 4 lengths of cheesecloth to wrap around each cake. Soak cheesecloths in ½ cup brandy and wrap each cake. Overwrap completely and securely with foil or plastic wrap. Store in tightly covered container in cool, approximately 50°F., atmosphere.

10. If stored more than 2 weeks, unwrap and resoak cheesecloth and wrap again. Repeat every 2 weeks. Store fruitcakes up to 4-6 weeks. The fruitcakes may be served immediately after making, but the soaking and storing process gives a mellow, rich flavor to the cakes.

11. After storing time is up, make glaze: Combine corn syrup and water in small saucepan. Bring to roiling boil, cool slightly.

12. Unwrap fruitcakes, brush off surface crumbs, brush with glaze. Decorate with candied cherry halves, bits of citron and walnut halves. Brush with glaze again, allow glaze to set 15 minutes. Cut in thin slices to serve.

13. To present fruitcakes as gifts: Wrap each decorated, glazed fruitcake in plastic wrap. Tie with ribbon, label and decorate with holiday stickers. Place in appropriate tissue-lined box (a decorated shoe box is good). Wrap entire box with gift paper and tie with ribbon, finishing off with a sprig of holly or Christmas evergreens.

And Then There's

Bea Arthur as she appears in Warner Bros. soon-to-be-released film, "Auntie Mame"...

By Beatrice Arthur

In conversation with Helen Dorsey

It's true, I have been called a gourmet cook—but let's just say I enjoy cooking. I can cook almost anything and everything because I've always been interested in cooking.

I love to explore new cookbooks. I adore Julia Child, and I've just been investigating the "Galloping Gourmet Cookbook," by Graham Kerr. If you ask me about my favorite recipes, I would have to mention leg of lamb with a mustard coating. And my lamb stew is probably one of the best things ever made. I have a thing about fresh dill, and I love to use it as often as I can!

I don't think people want to eat elaborate dinners anymore, so I seldom entertain formally. I hate big parties. The most I do nowadays is have a couple of close friends over for dinner (and I haven't done that since I started working in California). Then we sit down informally, sometimes eating off the coffee table in the living room. Our menus are always simple. We never go through a first or second course, and I never bother with elaborate desserts. I just serve fresh fruit and cheese.

Our Thanksgiving dinners are family ones, with an occasional friend from out of town who is alone. We always have turkey. I make the dressing by starting out with a good packaged stuffing and add apples, chopped nuts, lots of sage, extra celery, onion and sometimes I throw in a can of mushrooms. But my stuffing is generally made with anything that happens to be lying around the house. Then I use a bottle of port wine to baste and flavor the bird!

My husband [director Gene Saks] thinks I'm a very good cook! And, like most women, I've had my share of disasters in the kitchen. I remember cooking duck one time on a charcoal broiler. The bird was miserably charred on the outside and blood-red on the inside. Yuk!

MAUDE'S LAMB STEW

- 1 bunch fresh parsley
- ½ cup olive oil
- 1 bunch scallions or 1 large Bermuda onion, chopped
- 1 tablespoon fresh dill or 1 teaspoon dillweed
- 3 lbs. lean boneless lamb (preferably cut from leg or shoulder)
- 1¼ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground

A Celebrity Cooks

"Maude"..."Believe It or Not–I'm a Very Good Cook!"

"Like most women, I've had my share of disasters in the kitchen. I remember cooking duck one time on a charcoal broiler. The bird was miserably charred on the outside and blood-red on the inside. Yuk!"

pepper
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
2 large carrots, scraped, cut in rounds
1 large stalk celery, chopped
Boiling water or chicken stock
2 cans (1-lb. size) red kidney beans or 1 can kidney beans and 1 can garbanzo beans

1. Wash parsley, dry on paper towel. Remove stems, discard. Chop parsley coarsely; put into skillet with half the olive oil. Add chopped scallions and dill. Sauté herb-scallion mixture gently over low heat, stirring.
2. In large pan or Dutch oven brown lamb in remaining oil; add to sautéed mixture. Stir in salt, pepper, lemon juice, carrots and celery. Add water to cover lamb and vegetables.
3. Bring to simmer. Cover and cook slowly about 1½ hours, or until lamb begins to get tender.
4. Add red kidney beans and additional liquid as needed. Cook slowly, uncovered, about ½ hour longer.
5. Taste to correct seasonings, adding lemon juice, salt and pepper if needed. Serve at once.

HERBED LEG OF LAMB WITH MUSTARD COATING

6-8 lbs. boneless leg of lamb, rolled and tied

1. Preheat oven to 325°F. Place lamb on rack in roasting pan.
2. Prepare mustard coating by blending mustard, soy sauce, garlic, rosemary and ginger in a mixing bowl. Add olive oil a few drops at a time, beating well after each addition, until sauce is the consistency of a mayonnaise-like cream.
3. With basting brush or spoon paint outside of lamb evenly with mustard coating.
4. Roast uncovered in preheated oven, allowing 35-40 minutes to the pound, or until meat thermometer registers 175° to 180° F. Baste meat several times while it is roasting to give it a beautiful golden color. Allow meat to stand several minutes before carving. Remove string to facilitate carving.

1973 Limited Edition Christmas Plates

Every limited edition plate on this page is for the collector with an eye for beauty and an instinct for value. Some are hand made, some hand painted, and some serially numbered – all are superbly crafted. Christmas Plates traditionally have been the most desired and become the most valuable plates of all. And each is truly an exquisite masterpiece from a world famous art plate maker such as Bing and Grondahl, Royal Copenhagen, Haviland, and Goebel Hummel.

WHAT ARE LIMITED EDITIONS?

Each year quality companies like those represented here, produce a limited number of a specifically chosen plate before destroying the mold. Because the demand for these beautiful plates usually exceeds the supply, many "sell out" and become hard to find. As a result, prices rise. We've sold many in recent years that have increased in price by over 500%. We sold the 1969 Bing and Grondahl Plate for $9.00 and today it sells for up to $275.00 We sold the 1970 Haviland Christmas Plate at $25.00, it now sells for $150.00 and we sold the Goebel Hummel 1971 Plate for $25.00, and it now brings up to $175.00.

MARVELOUS DECORATIONS AND EXCELLENT INVESTMENTS AS WELL

More and more Americans are starting to collect limited edition plates not only because they're beautiful to own but because they are good invesmtents too. Why not start your collection today with one or more of these outstanding Christmas Plates. (And don't forget, they are Christmas Gifts that will be remembered). Since quantities are strictly limited – please order early.

If you use a laxative more than once a week...

Here's real relief from constipation

If you've been taking magnesia, salts, oils or harsh chemical laxatives once a week or more and you're still not satisfied—here's a better way to end constipation worries. Take gentle, effective Serutan. It's different!

Unlike other laxatives that may cause irritation or griping, Serutan, taken daily, forms a soft gel which moistens food wastes and shapes them into a well-formed stool. Serutan produces the proper amount of bulk needed to help bring peristaltic stimulation to your sluggish colon. This is utterly different than forcing your system with harsh chemical laxatives which may dry you out. You can take gentle Serutan every day because it is a pure vegetable hydrogel and contains no harsh roughage, no chemical laxatives. Take Serutan every day to get regular—and keep regular.

Delicious Fruit Flavor

Serutan is available in delicious fruit flavor. Get Serutan fruit flavor or unflavored powder, or toasted granules. When you read Serutan backwards, it spells "natures." And nature's way is best.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

What's Really Behind It All When People Blow Their Tops?

True or False: When older people are angered, they tend to stay mad longer and are the champion grudge-holders. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The more self-confident a person is, the less likely he is to give vent to his anger.

2. Most of the time it's the "little things" that cause a person to blow his top.

3. In an angry confrontation with another person, the best way to keep him from exploding is to avoid looking him steadily in the eye.

4. When older people are angered, they tend to stay mad longer and to hold grudges.

5. When a person gets mad and fights back, it's easy to tell whether his aggression is normal or the neurotic variety.

ANSWERS

1. False. Psychological studies show that the reverse is true—that it is the people who are lacking in self-confidence who tend to swallow their anger instead of giving expression to it. Reason: Their lack of self-assurance makes them dependent on the approval of others to maintain their self-esteem. The self-confident person has no such fears. If someone steps on his toes, he's likely to let him know about it.

2. True. Studies show that it's the little things that provoke hostility and resentment. A University of Calgary study classifies as top-ranking anger-producing annoyances: locking your keys in the car; having things spilled on your best clothes; getting halfway to your destination and finding you've forgotten something; running out of gas; getting stuck in traffic.

3. False—as evidenced by psychological experiments at Stanford University, where students were subjected to situations that produced aggressive confrontations. Purpose: To discover whether looking a person steadily in the eye or averting one's glance would be most effective in avoiding an angry confrontation. Findings: Looking the other person squarely in the eye was found to be by far the most effective means of inhibiting his agression.

4. False—according to a psychoanalytic study of grudges, conducted by a University of California specialist, which shows "a tendency for grudges to arise in early adolescence as an almost normal occurrence." It's described as part and parcel of the normal turmoil experienced at that particular time in life.

5. True. An exhaustive study of normal aggression and the neurotic type has shown that the normal aggressive person uses his anger only in self-defense. There are no feelings of guilt. The amount of aggression discharged corresponds to provocation. There is the ability to wait until the adversary is vulnerable. Success is expected. Neurotic aggression, on the other hand, is used indiscriminately and against various persons, ranging from an innocent bystander to an imagined or suspected enemy, or to avenge some slight or fancied grievance. There is no ability to wait for an auspicious time. And defeat is unconsciously expected.

A WORLD TOUR . . . THE HARD WAY
Jack and Paul, and Jack's wife and baby

Long haul on horseback: When Father Time rings out 1973 and most people are still recovering from the night before, Jack Bailey, 28, plans to saddle his horse Jason, kiss his wife and daughter Kim good-bye, and start riding around the world. Accompanied by his friend Paul Grace, 24 (shown here on his horse Herin), Jack plans to leave from his home in Buckinghamshire, England. If the two men complete the trip, they will have traveled 15,000 miles through France, Belgium, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, the U.S.S.R., Canada and the U.S. They also will have broken the current world's record of 10,000 miles. For his wife Nancy and Kim, now 2½, the trip will mean at least a 3½-year wait. Naturally, Jack and Paul plan to write a book about their travels when they return.

SALLY STRUTHERS
Lost the boy, but got the part

Sally Struthers of "All in the Family" fame had a real-life crush on Rob Reiner before she married him on the show: "I was dating a boy who happened to be Rob's roommate. That's how I met Rob. He was doing 'Evening of Dirty Plays' at the Oxford Theatre and I'd go over to watch him night after night. Even sent him flowers. I guess he felt sorry for me because he finally asked me out. Once. Never again. Ironically, Rob's wife Penny tried out for the part of Gloria, too. That's one of the reasons I got the part. I played it cool. I was so sure she'd get the part, I wasn't the least bit nervous."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

COMPANY, ATTENTION

We've company coming for dinner,
Some people we've hopes of impressing.
My wife has her cookbooks all open—
She's trying a new salad dressing.

She's splurged on the finest of sirloin.
She seems to have lost all her reason.
The fancy dessert is a dilly,
With fruits that are long out of season.

She's working all day in the kitchen
And trying to get things just right. . . .
How I wish we could eat by our lonesome
The way we are eating tonight.

The lady of the house instructed her new maid to stick a knife into the cake that was baking in the oven, to see if it was done. She explained that if it was, the knife would come out clean.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: ARN BRUSHES HIS HAIR, DUSTS HIS GARMENTS AND STEPS FROM HIS ROOM..... AND THERE ARE THE FOUR DAUGHTERS AWAITING HIM. THEIR UNCONCEALED ADMIRATION IS FLATTERING.....

..... BUT AFTER A FEW HOURS OF CONSTANT ATTENTION AND THEIR VAPID PRATTLE, HE IS BORED TO DISTRACTION. HE MUST ESCAPE.

HE SEEKS HIS HOST TO TERMINATE HIS VISIT, BUT SIEUR DE VOLNAY PROTESTS: "WE INVITED YOU TO STAY THE WEEK. PREPARATIONS ARE MADE FOR YOUR ENTERTAINMENT. 'TWOULD BE DISCOURTEOUS FOR YOU TO LEAVE SOONER."

THAT NIGHT THERE IS A THUNDERING AT THE GATE. TORCHES FLARE, THE PORTALS OPEN AND A TROOP OF HORSEMEN CROWD IN, SHOUTING MERRILY. ARN DRESSES AND GOES DOWN TO SEE WHAT THE NOISE IS ALL ABOUT.

"A SUCCESSFUL RAID, MY LORD, WE DROVE THE LATOURS BACK INTO THEIR CASTLE AND KILLED FIVE OF THEIR MEN, WE LOST ONLY TWO. WE RAN OFF THEIR CATTLE AND HAVE THEM NOW IN OUR PASTURES!"

DE VOLNAY TURNS TO ARN: "THE LATOURS WILL RETURN OUR RAID, BUT WE WILL BE READY FOR THEM. YOU'LL SEE SOME FINE FIGHTING AND BE GLAD YOU STAYED."

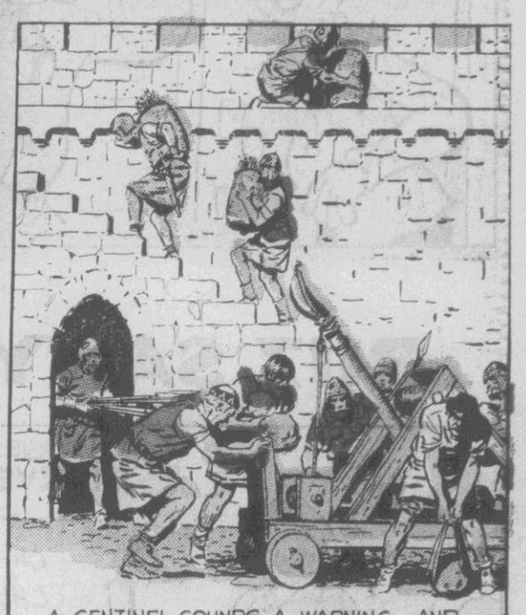
"I HAVE TALKED WITH THE SERVANTS, SIR ARN, AND LEARNED THAT THESE PEOPLE ARE NO BETTER THAN BANDITS. THEY RAID EACH OTHER CONSTANTLY, DESTROYING AND STEALING. BETTER WE LEAVE."



A SENTINEL SOUNDS A WARNING, AND ALL SPRING TO WORK. BASKETS OF ARROWS ARE CARRIED TO THE WALLS; BUNDLES OF SPEARS PLACED ABOUT, AND ALL IS MADE READY FOR THE EXPECTED ATTACK.
