Fuel Refiners Being Audited

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Chief William E. Simon said today investigators from his Federal Energy Office and the Internal Revenue Service are auditing the price, profit and supply records of every petroleum refiner in the nation.

A statement issued by Simon said the audit is aimed at making sure the price increases on petroleum products reflect only cost increases and not jacked-up profits.

It also will help "to verify the accuracy of refiner reports on crude oil and product supplies and is a major step toward establishing an independent reporting and information system on refinery inventories at FEO," Simon said.

The federal government traditionally has relied on information provided by the oil companies, mainly through their trade organization, the American Petroleum Institute, or indirectly through reporting to other organizations and state governments.

The federal government, now deep in the direct management of the nation's supply and distribution, has no complete system for collecting its own energy data.

Simon said a joint task force from the FEO and the IRS would include some 35 agents at first.

He said the agents would be divided into teams conducting audits in corporate offices.

The teams, including FEO cost analysts and IRS agents trained in petroleum regulations and refinery accounting, will visit individual firms as often as four times a year, he said.

Simon said the program will cover all 140 refiners in the United States with continual field reviews of major refiners who control some 90 per cent of the nation's refinery capacity.

Smaller refiners will be subject to "desk audits in Washington" which would be expanded into field reviews as needed.

The FEO recently took over petroleum price controls from the Cost of Living Council.

'Complaints' Led To List

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina governor's office initiated the investigations into 52 Highway Division employees who were fired last October, gubernatorial aide Gene Anderson said Wednesday.

Anderson, sweating under television lights and chain-smoking, said a list of 175 names was compiled from complaints sent to the governor's office about various highway employees.

He said he had written in suggestions that about 15 of the people on the list be fired or retired and that all were to be investigated by the Highway Division's personnel officers.

That investigation culminated in October with the firing of 52 employees and the demotion, retirement and transfer of 49 more.

Anderson's testimony was given to the State Senate's Select Committee on Personnel Practices, which was appointed after the firings.

Anderson said he did not participate in the ultimate decisions on hiring, firing and retiring.

He said the Republican Administration had shown "great restraint" in dismissing less than one per cent of the Highway Division employees since taking office.

Anderson, who managed the 1972 campaign of Gov. Jim Holshouser and has been his top political strategist since then, was testifying voluntarily, although he had indicated his displeasure at being asked to do so.

At one point, he said he doubted any committee would have been formed to investigate hiring and firing in a Democratic administration.

The committee also question several other Holshouser cabinet appointees, including Secretary of Transportation Bruce Lentz and Secretary of Social Rehabilitation and Control David Jones.

Hospital Profits 'Exception' Asked

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt Memorial Hospital sent off to Washington this morning a profit margin exception request to the Cost of Living Council.

The letter enclosed with extensive audit reports said, "Our corrected S-52 shows that our revenue increased $26,043 because of price increases and that we exceeded our profit margin by at least this amount."

"Although we completed our year with a profit, it was the result of more efficient operations and collections. Since one of the major objectives of this control program is to reduce costs by better efficiency, we do not feel that you would penalize our hospital because it has achieved a small success toward this goal. Since justified cost increases offset the additional revenue we contend that we have not had any profits because of the price increase. We ask that you allow the hospital to retain this small profit accumulated because of price increases."

Jack Richardson, the administrator, said he and the hospital's auditor, Cecil Mizell, and W.W. Speight, the county attorney, hope to go to Washington the last of this month or the first of next to personally explain the increases. It is hoped that the $26,000 profit may be applied to paying of the $2 million loan assumed in order to build the new hospital.

An exception was turned down last summer, with the Council saying that money could not be set aside for this repayment until the loan actually had been assumed. It's now been signed.

Richardson further explained that the allowable profit margin for the hospital is set low because its base period was one in which the hospital was operating at a loss.

Profits and expenses expected in a $6 million budget must be filed a year in advance, he said. Obviously, it's difficult to know what the future will bring. The cost per patient day at Pitt Memorial has stayed well within the cost of Living Guidelines—four per cent when six per cent is allowed. However, there has been greatly increased activity—2,000 more patient days than the year before, 2,000 more emergency room procedures, and more than 400 uses of the Ambulatory Medical-Surgical Unit opened this year.

"Hospitals all over the nation are struggling to figure how to deal with these Cost of Living Guidelines. Many of our suppliers—oil, food, and others—have been excepted, while we're still strictly controlled."

"The American Hospital Association says that more than 60 per cent of the hospitals in the nation are in violation right now. We're not by ourselves, but we're still anxious to get the matter straightened out," he said.

Nixons In Palm Springs
By RICHARD SALTUS
Associated Press Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon spent a secluded night in this desert resort community after celebrating his 61st birthday with a cake, a hamburger and his first milkshake in 13 years.

Escaping the gray, wet weather at the Western White House in San Clemente, Nixon traveled Wednesday to the heavily guarded estate of publishing millionaire Walter H. Annenberg, U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Nixon was accompanied on the 85-mile limousine ride by his wife, Pat; daughter, Tricia Cox; and his Florida neighbor, C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

On arriving, the Nixons found warm, sunny weather and made a short shopping trip to downtown Palm Springs.

Western White House staff members held a surprise party for the President Wednesday morning. They presented him with a large cake and 61 red roses.

Then he left on the unannounced trip, which was confirmed to newsmen after they heard it through the grapevine. The outing was another in a recent series of motor trips Nixon has taken without informing newsmen.

The Nixon party, accompanied by security agents and support personnel, drove past the President's birthplace in Yorba Linda and later stopped for lunch at a MacDonald's drive-in in Banning.

Construction Bids For Public Swimming Pool Are Expected In March

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Construction bids for a public swimming pool to be located at Guy Smith Stadium have been called for and bids are expected back by early March, according to Greenville Recreation Director Boyd Lee.

At the January meeting of the Greenville Recreation Commission Wednesday night, Lee revealed this information to members of the commission. He added that under terms of the contract, successful bidders would be required to begin construction within 30 days after acceptance of bids.

"This means construction on the pool should begin about the first to the middle of April," Lee said. "Construction should take about three months, but no more than six months to complete, depending on the weather."

Lee also revealed that the Stafecon Corporation of Greensboro was successful bidder at $29,200 for construction of four tennis courts at Evans Park, to include a four inch rock base.

Dr. Eric L. Fearington, representing both Little Leagues in Greenville, gave a report on information gathered relative to plans for several approaches to extending the scope of Little League activities. The recommendation made by Dr. Fearington to have both Little League fields located at Elm Street and to install lights that would serve both fields was the one favored by members of the commission. This would involve moving the back stop and dug-out from Guy Smith Stadium and relocating them at Elm Street.

Recreation Commissioners passed a motion to endorse this recommendation, which will now be taken to the City Council by Dr. Fearington for the council's consideration.

The commissioners' endorsement carries the stipulation that funds required not be taken from the department's current budget. Dr. Fearington said the cost of his proposal would "be around $14,000 to $15,000." He noted that part of the work could be accomplished by volunteer labor from parents of Little Leaguers.

In keeping with city efforts to reduce energy usage, Lee explained that the Recreation Department has moved into

Chaos For Britain As Railway System Snarled By Strike

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Angered by disciplinary action against some members of their union, railway engineers quit their trains at many depots today and plunged the British railway system into worse chaos than ever.

Huge traffic jams built up around London as commuters took to their cars. "It's sheer chaos," reported the automobile association.

Passengers who found a train into London were warned they could not be guaranteed one home.

"Everything is subject to cancellation or delay," said a spokesman for British Rail.

The railwaymen were angry because the railway board started sending home union men who refused to take out trains in violation of the slow-down the union is waging in support of wage demands. The railmen have already knocked out much of the nation's commuter services by strict adherence to the numerous time-consuming rules — many of them outmoded — with which tradition has saddled the railroads.

Protest March Against Death Penalty Planned

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Protesters against the death penalty in North Carolina say they will march from Tarboro to Raleigh this weekend.

A coalition of black and white activists told a press conference Wednesday that they intended to try to pressure the 1974 legislature to abolish the death sentence, which has been meted out more frequently in North Carolina than any other state this year.

The Rev. Leon White, director of the North Carolina-Virginia Commission for Racial Justice said the protest march would culminate in a Sunday rally at Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium.

White said he hoped to have 1,000 participants at the rally, "but I expect some competition from the Super Bowl," which will be played at the same time.

Tarboro was chosen as the starting point for the march because it was there that three young blacks were sentenced to death last month for allegedly raping a white woman.

White said that among the groups participating in the march will be the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the state Civil Liberties Union, and the General Baptist State Convention.

He and other ministers present agreed that the death penalty is used only against the poor, black and uneducated.

A continuing tally by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund shows that of 44 people sentenced to death in the U.S. this year, 21 are in North Carolina.

This came about after the U.S. Supreme Court decided that the death penalty, where it could be applied at the discretion of a jury, was unconstitutional. That decision voided all death sentences handed down before November, 1972.

The North Carolina Supreme Court interpreted it to mean, however, that only jury discretion, and not execution, was unconstitutional. Thus, death became the only possible penalty for capital crimes in the state.

The death sentences handed down since that time are currently being appealed. No one has been executed in North Carolina since 1962.

Recreation Commissioners passed a motion to endorse this recommendation, which will now be taken to the City Council by Dr. Fearington for the council's consideration.

The commissioners' endorsement carries the stipulation that funds required not be taken from the department's current budget. Dr. Fearington said the cost of his proposal would "be around $14,000 to $15,000." He noted that part of the work could be accomplished by volunteer labor from parents of Little Leaguers.

'Share Blame' For Fuel Shortages In Public's Estimation

By GEORGE GALLUP
(Copyright 1974, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Republication in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.)

PRINCETON, N.J., Jan. 9—Oil companies, the federal government, President Nixon's administration, and the U.S. consumer receive about an equal share of the blame for the current energy crisis, as found by the latest nationwide Gallup survey.

Interestingly, only 7 per cent place the blame on the Arab nations who last fall imposed the oil embargo on Western nations. The Israelis are blamed by less than 1 per cent of all persons interviewed.

Following is the question asked in the survey: "Who or what do you think is responsible for the energy crisis?"

Following are the national results. As the table indicates, few people volunteered the opinion that an energy crisis or fuel shortage does not exist.

Who Or What Is Responsible For the Energy Crisis?	Percentage
Oil companies	25%
Federal government (includes 3 who say Congress)	23
Nixon administration-Nixon	19
U.S. consumers	16
Arab nations	7
Big business	6
Leaders "playing politics"	4
U.S. exporting too much oil	3
Ecologists	2
Israelis	x
"There is no shortage"	6
No opinion	17
TOTAL:	128 xx

x Less than 1 per cent

xx Total adds to more than 100 per cent due to multiple responses

Analysis of the survey findings by population groups reveals few significant differences. However, Democrats and those who disapprove of Nixon's overall performance in office are considerably more inclined to blame the Nixon administration for the energy crisis than are Republicans and those who approve of the way Nixon is discharging his duties as President.

A young purchasing agent from Brook Park, Ohio, had this to say: "The major oil companies are creating the crisis and as soon as they get the price high enough there will be plenty of fuel."

A machinist, also from Brook Park, commented: "The big businessmen are responsible—they donated to Nixon's campaign and in return Nixon is helping them by creating a crisis and making it possible to raise prices."

A 31-year-old plant manager said: "They must be asleep down there in Washington—we should have been doing something a year ago."

A 52-year-old housewife from California had this to say: "The lobbyists of the oil companies are in cahoots with the politicians. Frankly, I doubt if there is really an energy crisis."

A 25-year-old public accountant from Tampa, Fla., remarked: "The consumers are chiefly to blame—the people of this country have become too used to a high standard of living and they've become wasteful."

A 30-year-old housewife said: "I think everyone's guilty to a certain extent, including myself, as I have made many unnecessary trips in my car."

A young traffic supervisor for an air cargo company blames three groups primarily for the energy crisis: "The American people are the main culprit, but blame should also be given the Nixon administration for letting things get so bad before doing anything, and also the ecologists for opposing the developing of energy resources."

Helping To Identify Little Cereal Pest

DEAR ABBY: The University of Minnesota's Entomology Department agreed to help your readers identify the insects they found in their cereals. We thought you would be interested in the summary of the kinds of insects found as submitted.

Samples came from 33 states:
Saw-toothed grain beetle	80
Merchant grain beetle	39
Cigaret beetle	30
Red flour beetle	25
Miscellaneous cereal pests	10
Drugstore beetle	9
Indian meal moth	2
Insects other than cereal pests	15

Cereal products often become infested right in the home. Only glass and tin containers are insect proof, so any package of cake mix, flour, etc., can be penetrated by insects if left standing long enough. DAVID M. NOETZEL

DEAR DR. NOETZEL: Thank you for providing my readers with the service. Now, if others are bugged by unidentifiable insects in their cereals, please send the little creatures to your own university.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote in your column that a woman is pregnant for 266 days. Who said so? I carried my baby for 10 months and five days, and there is no doubt about it because I know the exact date my baby was conceived. My husband is in the Navy and it couldn't have possibly been conceived any other time because I saw him only once for an hour, and I didn't see him again until the day before the baby was born.

I don't drink or run around, and there is no way this baby isn't his, so please print a retraction about that 266-day carrying time because otherwise I am in a lot of trouble. SAN DIEGO READER

DEAR READER: The average gestation period is 266 days. Some babies come early. Others come late. Yours was late.

DEAR ABBY: I have a kind of strange problem. My parents are divorced, and I live alone with my father. His name is Charles, and my name is Katherine, so I sent out Christmas cards signed "Kathy and Charles Smith."

My mom was very upset because some of her friends thought that my dad had gotten remarried. So please tell me how to sign our cards next time so my mom won't be upset. Thank you. KATHY SMITH

DEAR KATHY: Sign the cards, "Charles Smith, and daughter, Kathy."

DEAR ABBY: With all the "hippies, hoppers, homos, and harlots" you've got writing to you, you could start a new "4-H" club! ED IN DURHAM, N. C.

New Booklet Gives Eating Tips

By United Press International

Here's something new, for everyone and—the best part: F-R-E-E! It can add years to your life, sparkle to your eyes, a spring to your feet and result in all kinds of improvements in your body.

This miracle, free item is not something you eat, drink or meditate upon. Rather it is something you read, digest in your mind and use to modify your behavior on the eating front. It is a booklet that tells all about health and nutrition. It is called "Food is More than Just Something to Eat."

It is not just any old booklet on eating and nutrition. Rather, it has been prepared by nutritionists and health experts in the high places in Uncle Sam's Departments of Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare in the nation's capital. In cooperation with the Grocery Manufacturers of America, and the Advertising Council.

The book has pretty, colorful drawings of tomatoes, lemons, beans, roosters, fish, corn on the cob, bundles of wheat, carrots, Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater, Old Mother Hubbard, and a bigger than real hamburger. It also has picture of a stork that does not seem quite right. The stork has red, green and white wings, and blue and yellow tail feathers. It also has a shocking pink breast and a green body. And it is doing something enlightened parents have been told not to tell their kids what storks do: bringing a baby. That perhaps is one thing to argue about in the otherwise nifty free book.

The free—repeat, free—book tells all about the major nutrients and where to find them, nutrients and energy, how it all works together, food for all ages, nutritional labeling, daily food guide, the value of processed foods, the many ways of eating.

Uncle Sam's watchers of the people's health say the booklet is out because millions of Americans aren't eating wisely. Eating too many wrong things or too little of the right.

If you aren't eating foods to meet your body needs, you may be suffering from poor nutrition. Some damage caused by poor nutrition may be irreversible. Before you decide the free booklet isn't for you, here are some facts that may change your mind:

—What a young girl eats today may have an effect on the kind of pregnancy she will have years from now.

—What a pregnant mother eats may have an effect on her child's growth and development.

—What a child eats affects the way he grows and develops.

—What a person eats—as an infant, a child or an adult—can affect the length and quality of his life.

Now if you want one of these absolutely F-R-E-E booklets write to: "Nutrition, Pueblo, Colorado 81009." Just say:

"I want that free book—Food is More than Just Something to Eat."

Grandmother Decides Politics Is Like Love

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Question: Can a mother of nine who is a grandmother, held offices in civic organizations, been den mother three times (too often), bakes for PTA, school and church (with store bought mixes), works outside the home run for office?

Alida Borsuk, such a woman in her early forties, pretty enough to be mistaken for a teen-ager—across a crowded, smoke-free room, asked herself that question last fall.

"Why not," she answered. The job she sought was city councilman—or councilperson, in this era of women's lib.

She ran. When the dust settled, she came in third but "first of the independents." She's come to the conclusion that politics is something like love—"It's better to have run and lost than never to have run at all."

The exercise in office-seeking was good preparation for later competitions, which would certainly seem to be in the cards for a person who plunged into the maiden campaign with such gusto she wore out four pairs of shoes.

The political venture took place in Parma, Ohio, a town about as Main Street, U.S.A., as you can get. For that reason, her experiences may be suitable for filing away by any female on any Main Street who has political ambitions. Even if she doesn't have nine children, grandchildren and a job as a top real estate agent. Or political heritage. Mrs. Borsuk's dad, the late Fred Denk, was in politics in Parma. Helping him in campaigns taught her at an early age to shake hands and smile.

Endorses Smiling
"Well," she said, "in this campaign, I smiled through insults; smiled when all my signs were torn down, smiled going door to door; smiled at card parties; smiled when dogs chased me down the road.

"I started to look like a smile button, even in my sleep. For any neophyte politician I endorse the smile. It makes people wonder what you've been up to."

"The other candidates (all men) figured me for the dumb blonde (except I'm brunette), the stupid housefrau, or the little girl who might get hurt but will never win."

When it looked as though she was gaining, Mrs. Borsuk said the nine children became a liability—at least her competitors were saying she could "never handle the job with all those kids."

"Picture in the paper from family reunion didn't help me," Mrs. Borsuk said. "All family members were there, including grandchildren. Count 'em. It looked as though I had '20 kids!"

Knocking door to door, Mrs. Borsuk learned about some things about her children.

"Almost every pretty girl in Parma knew my boys and my girls were pretty well known too," she said.

During the door-to-door she wore out four pair of shoes, three pant suits, one raincoat, 20 pairs of pantyhose, plus a couple of wigs and "two good feet."

"Quite often I was taken for a saleswoman and people would yell—"nobody's home." At one house after I stated I was a candidate for council I was asked "what kind of candy?"

Highwater Mark
A highwater mark came the day Mrs. Borsuk was interviewed on the local radio station. Besides the normal run of the mill questions, there were those relating to NOACA, CMHA, LERTA, Regional Planning, Transit Authority and so on.

LERTA is the Lake Erie

Regional Transit Authority.

"The radio interview came off so well that I decided maybe I ought to be in radio instead of politics," Mrs. Borsuk said.

Her stock went up at home. "Hey, Mom, I didn't know you knew all that," a nine-year old said.

Her campaign chairman thought it went well, too, saying: "You really sounded like you knew what you were talking about."

"Insults," Mrs. Borsuk said, "you have to learn to put up with insults when you run for office. But from your campaign manager?"

Election day was cold, cold and with icy winds. The candidates and their helpers stood outside each voting place and couldn't help being friendly. The campaigning was over. Besides they had to huddle together to keep warm.

"We patted ourselves on the back for running a clean campaign."

"That wasn't entirely true. There was something that wasn't clean during the campaign."

"My house."

P.S.—Mrs. Borsuk says going to Lourdes Academy is at the root of her political ambition. The woman running for mayor in Cleveland nearby was also a Lourdes grad. A woman who ran for and won council position in Cleveland was also a Lourdes grad. The woman who reports politics for the Parma radio station is a Lourdes grad. The wives of three elected councilmen were Lourdes grads. "There was something about the nuns we had that taught us kind of women's liberation way ahead of time," said the one-campaign veteran from Parma. Nunpower?

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My daughter has nothing to wear.

You may have seen her at the bus stop. She's the thin, short, blue child wearing nothing but a pair of wedgies and a migraine.

Her father spends an average of $517.40 a year on her nudity. She averages 1,460 hours a year shuffling through a closet of empty coat hangers.

And I waste an average of 2,005 hours a year picking up, laundering and mending big stacks of nothing.

The other morning after she had come down to the kitchen in four changes of outfits, I said, "What are you doing? Having breakfast or auditioning for a door on 'Let's Make A Deal?'" "What do you think of this outfit?" she asked, turning slowly.

"I think it looks fine," I said. "I knew you'd say that," she sighed.

"Then why did you ask me?" "Just to see if you'd say it. This outfit is gross."

"You picked it out," I charged.

"Only because you made me do it."

"What did I say?" "You said you hated it." "Why would I say that?" "Just to make me buy it," she reasoned.

"What's wrong with it?" "What's right with it?" "I asked your first."

"It doesn't hang right," she said irritably. "You're right. I can see that now. Besides it's much too short."

"Really?" she asked. "Yes, and now that you're in a good light I can see that it's faded. You look like a Goodwill bag with feet."

"You think so?" "Besides, I've seen a million girls in that same dress." "Oh?"

"I absolutely forbid you to wear that thing out of the house."

She grabbed her books and coat off the counter and blasted out of the door.

"She bought your old psychology reversal again?" asked my husband.

"She had to," I said. "She was at the bottom of the clothes hamper."

Public Needs Oil Information

It seems that the Federal Energy Office is having trouble getting reliable information from the oil companies and other sources.

The office is checking rumors that fuel hoarding is going on. In the past it has received its data for an oil industry trade organization, but now the office is asking major and independent companies to report data on production and storage of oil products.

There has been a reported reluctance on the part of some oil companies to give out such figures for competitive reasons.

That should not be accepted by the government agency, however. In view of the current shortage, which we are told is real, there can be little competition. The oil companies can sell all the fuel they can get.

Now it becomes a matter of using our energy resources in the best interest of the nation's economy and in order to do this the Federal Energy Office is going to have to know where the fuel is and how much is on hand.

It should be mandatory for the oil companies to give accurate and current reports to the Federal Energy Office on their production and storage as long as they say there is a shortage. The government should waste no time in seeing that accurate information is available.

Blind Live In Seeing World

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—William B. Waters is a cheerful, outgoing fellow whose linebacker physique hints at his childhood ambition—that of being a high school football coach.

His nature is summed up by a framed picture on the wall. The slogan: "People are lonely because they build walls instead of bridges."

But instead of coaching high school athletes, he is the director of the Division of Services for the Blind in North Carolina and holds a doctorate in psychology, counseling and exceptionalism.

Dr. Waters is also blind.

And that gives him a distinct edge in his new job. He is the first director of the state agency for the blind who was also a previous client of that agency.

Family Support

"Fortunately, I had a good family who believed in me as a person, and good friends who helped me, and we stuck together," Waters recalls.

"I had lots of support, but problems too. I knew I was losing vision, and I was just coasting along through school making C's."

In his junior year in high school, a state social worker with the blind happened to locate him. He talked with some representatives of the state agency. "They told me I could be anything I wanted to be, despite my problems, and they got me believing that. My grades shot up to all 'a's."

"I said I wanted to be a coach, to coach high school football and basketball. I love sports," the 41-year-old director said.

Despite the arguments, Waters insisted he would be a coach. "I stuck to that. I wouldn't admit I was blind. I tried to cover it up." But the social workers were able to convince him that while he might could get by as a coach for a few years, his progressive blindness eventually would put an end to that career.

Waters went to the state's rehabilitation center for the blind at Butner where he was able to put things together emotionally and mentally, graduated from East Carolina University, got his masters at N.C. State University and a later doctorate there, and set out on the career which has put him in the director's chair.

No Great Surprise In A Loss Of Confidence

We suppose it is no surprise that a Sindlinger & Co. survey shows that consumer confidence in the nation has dropped to a 25-year low.

The company says a telephone poll shows consumer confidence dropped from 66 to 42 percent, a 24 point drop.

If the blame can be pinpointed, it must be placed on the soaring inflation rate which is so rapidly eating into the buying power of the average American family.

U.S. Defenses Now Precarious

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The Nixon administration will press Congress to let defense spending soar to a staggering $8 billion over a year ago, but even that increase will fail to match Soviet military gains.

The defense budget for fiscal year 1975, beginning July 1, was decided on last week amid typical confusion at the Nixon White House. It calls for spending at least $87 billion—far more than expected.

Yet, that astronomical figure is almost wholly the result of inflation, military pay increases voted by Congress and special aid to Israel during the Yom Kippur war. It does not even pretend to solve U. S. problems in the race with Moscow for technological supremacy.

Nothing could more dimly underline the dangerous predicament of U. S. defense today. Thanks to the crushing burden of the all-volunteer armed services, military pay makes up an ever-larger percentage of the budget. Thus, the grim prospect: rising defense spending that fails to prevent dangerous Soviet superiority in weaponry—in other words, running as fast as possible but still not keeping up.

What further complicates this are vagaries of federal budgeting. While the anti-defense bloc in Congress boasts of a $2 billion-plus cut in the Pentagon budget, that cut affects authorizations for future years only. In truth, the $79 billion listed for defense in fiscal year 1974, ending June 30, actually climbed to $80 billion.

This confused none other than Roy Ash, President Nixon's imperious budget chief. Desperately trying to control ballooning spending, Ash took $77 billion (the $79 billion estimate for fiscal 1974 minus the $2 billion cut) as his starting defense figure, aiming to keep the fiscal 1975 projection around $80 billion.

Screams of outrage came from the Pentagon, aided no little by domestic counselor Melvin R. Laird. The former Secretary of Defense, leaving the Nixon administration for good Feb. 1, as a parting gesture convinced the budget-makers that $87 billion is really a bare-bones minimum.

The arithmetic is grim but simple. Taking the real fiscal 1974 spending figure—$80 billion—as the starting point, more than $5 billion must be added for inflation and the inexorable salary demands of the all-volunteer army, plus $1.5 billion for the Yom Kippur war. The grand total of around $87 billion has now been accepted at the White House.

But that total, the Joint Chiefs of Staff believe, will not prevent the Soviet Union from overtaking the U. S. in conventional arms in the late 1970s. It would limit research and development spending to one-half the Kremlin's and provides ship construction funds far less than Russia's. Laird would be the first to admit that the budget battle he won in the White House last week still leaves the U. S. short.

But the needed increases for research and development seem unattainable on Capitol Hill, partly because the overall federal budget, including a variety of new, high-cost welfare programs, has become so gargantuan. Moreover, the anti-defense bloc in Congress remains formidable.

Pentagon officials had hoped that Israel's reliance on sophisticated new U. S. weaponry in rolling back the Arab armies last fall would stiffen liberal Democrats passionately devoted to Israel, but so far there is no such conversion.

Nor is there a sign that a divided Pentagon is preparing any national propaganda campaign for defense spending. The rupture between Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger and Deputy Secretary William Clements is so severe that two rival secretaries of defense seem to be in office today, say Pentagon experts.

Finally, there is President Nixon. Fighting against the energy crisis and for his political survival, he shows neither desire nor ability to lead any crusade for national defense. That's why the $87 billion defense budget—carrying deadly-dangerous portents for the future—is the most that can be expected.

The arithmetic is grim but simple. Taking the real fiscal 1974 spending figure—$80 billion—as the starting point, more than $5 billion must be added for inflation and the inexorable salary demands of

Burger And Barristers

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger not long ago threw the weight of his experience and his office behind an idea whose time has clearly come. The idea is to create a system for training and certifying a new school of trial lawyers who would become, in effect, the barristers of the American bar.

The idea, of course, is not new. England historically has divided her legal practitioners into solicitors and barristers. The former undertake an immense variety of legal tasks, but their work is done back in the office; the latter specialize in one task only: They go to court for the actual trial of cases.

Here in the United States, leading members of the bar for many years have urged some adaptation of the British system to our own law. The American Bar Association has a Special Committee on Specialization working on the problems. Several states, notably California and Texas, have launched experimental programs toward this end. In November, California awarded nearly 1,200 certificates of specialization in taxation, criminal law, and workmen's compensation.

Burger's idea is to concentrate first of all upon trial lawyers as such. In his address of November 26 at the Fordham Law School, he made a number of cogent observations, and he developed a couple of pointed analogies. Every person who is graduated from a flying school is by definition a pilot; every student who emerges from medical schools is by definition a doctor. But society prudently has decreed that not every pilot is qualified to fly a four-engine jet, and not every doctor is qualified to transplant a kidney. By the same token, Burger insists, it is folly to suppose that every law school graduate automatically is qualified to go into court and try a civil or criminal case.

Newspaper reporters who cover the trial courts surely would concur in Burger's opinion on "the low state of American trial advocacy." Every experienced reporter, sitting mute at the press table, has groaned inwardly at the ineptitude of courtroom amateurs who make a hundred immaterial objections and fail to ask the two or three key questions. In the criminal courts, it is by no means unusual for both the government and the defense to launch into trial with only the most foggy notion of what the case is all about.

The British do it better. Of their 30,000 lawyers, about 3,000 are barristers. They are specially trained, first in law school and then in a period of pupillage, for the difficult and demanding business of actual trial. An American who visits the Inns of Court, and sees the barristers in action, comes away with an envious impression of trial practice at its best. These advocates go at their work with deference and civility, but one ought not to be deceived by the respectful yes, m'lord, and no, m'lord; beneath the ribboned perukes are keen minds, honed for skilled shaping of the case at hand.

Public Forum

To The Editor:

As an interested observer in the process of City Government the recent action of Mayor Eugene West and his supporters on the Greenville City Council at the January meeting are cause for alarm.

First, including so important a policy decision as abolishing the position of administrative assistant to the City Manager as a comment by the Mayor before the beginning of new business and after the majority of spectators had left the room is inappropriate for an issue of this import. A better method would have been to place discussion of this issue on the agenda for all to see and think about before acting on it. That is the correct procedure in an open democratic society.

Second, the shouting down of Council woman McGrath when she raised a legitimate question about the legality of the Council's action on hiring and firing employees when the North Carolina State Statutes reserve that function for the City Manager is deplorable. A better way to have handled this would have been to realize the importance and impact of firing Mr. Carstarphan's aide on his ability to manage the city and have postponed discussion of this issue until the February meeting of the Council where it would have received the open hearing it deserved.

Thirdly, the action of Mayor West, who voted with the Council on the question as the initial vote was taken, rather than waiting to see whether a tiebreaking vote was needed is inconsistent with correct parliamentary procedure in an open democratic society. Prompting a response from a hesitant member of the Council by initiating the voting is, as I understand parliamentary procedure, not correct. Is this action of Mayor West establishing a new tradition or is it to be used when a pet proposal is before the Council?

The above questions and observations are relevant in that no one noticed or commented at the time and resulted in a "railroad job" of legislation which brought about the elimination of an important position in the Greenville City Government. One reason this happened is that no citizen of Greenville remained at the Council meeting after their issue came up.

I am not sure what the citizens of Greenville can do about this now, but in the future meetings of the City Council should be attended by concerned citizens to prevent this sort of thing from reoccurring. That is what is meant by responsible citizenship in an open democratic society.

Learn While Asleep

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's easy enough to stop smoking when you're asleep. But can you learn while you're sleeping to quit when you're awake?

Four California radio stations are giving their listeners a chance to find out. Tune in before you go to sleep and expose your subconscious to an anti-smoking message every 15 minutes, they say. In between you'll be soothed with soft, relaxing music.

The messages have been approved by the California Heart Association and are designed to reinforce an individual's decision to quit with brief reminders about the benefits he or she will reap. A sampling:

"Save yourself some money. A pack a day costs 40 cents. That's $150 a year: a pretty high ticket for burnt offerings."

"Did you know that you can often get reduced life and automobile insurance premium rates when you do not smoke? It's true, because nonsmokers are better insurance risks. What a great idea!"

Or: "Kissing a smoker is a little like making love to an ash tray."

"It's no panacea and we don't offer it as such," says Jim Holston, director of operations for PSA Broadcasting Inc., which owns the four FM stations. "If someone just doesn't want to stop, there's nothing we can do. We're talking mainly to listeners who had already made the decision to stop smoking."

The messages began running this week between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. on stations KEZM in Los Angeles, KEZL in San Diego, KEZS in Sacramento and KEZR in San Jose. There are no commercials during that period.

To the editor:

The Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters salutes the Daily Reflector for its editorial relative to the City Council action regarding the position of Administrative Assistant to the City Manager.

The League of Women Voters, which has long dedicated itself to the promotion of an active and informed citizenry, is equally committed to orderly governmental processes and promoting citizen confidence in public officials and the institutions they are responsible for. The recent vote by the Greenville City Council to eliminate this position in the middle of the fiscal year, while within the prerogative of our elected officials, does not, in our opinion, fall within the context of orderly governmental processes. Additionally, we are concerned that the manner in which the position was eliminated, without prior public notice or discussion, did not afford the people of Greenville an opportunity to air their views and provide citizen input.

We, too, have asked the members of the City Council to reconsider this decision.

Nearer To The Seats Of Power

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The National Association of Manufacturers has moved its headquarters to Washington, joining a procession of business groups that have departed New York over the past decade to be nearer the power center.

Known by various names — societies, associations, institutes, among the more popular — these groups seem to be saying that the shots are being called by government now more so than by private enterprise.

To an extent, of course, they are correct. Increasingly they have found themselves on the Metroliner or the air shuttle to Washington to testify, defend, promote, plead, threaten, demand their way. It has become a way of life.

The watershed has long been taking shape. The consumer movement speeded the process, but it is still debatable whether more power flows to Washington than here. But in moving, the associations suggest a trend.

Prominent among the movers in the past few years are the American Gas Association, which represents manufacturers, transporters and distributors, and the American Petroleum Institute, which represents refiners and others.

Ecological considerations gave a tremendous thrust to the trend when business conceded that without federal standards it could hardly justify the big expenditures needed to clean water, air and other elements of environment.

Few planning decisions are possible in many large corporations now without taking in the federal government as a partner. And sometimes the partner exerts more power than the company's own officers.

The onset of chronic inflation during the latter half of the 1960s led eventually to further government intervention in the market place when the Nixon administration decided that controls were necessary.

While these controls repeatedly have been called temporary, and plans for their demise have constantly been talked about, many businessmen really don't expect complete government withdrawal ever.

In fact, a new pricing ethic may be developing to prolong inflation and the government's presence in the pricing mechanism, an ethic that encourages a company to raise prices as high as the government will permit.

Shortages have added to the inflation problem and to Washington's involvement. The allocation of resources in an economy of shortages simply cannot be left to chance. Government, it is widely agreed, must be the referee.

And finally, industry inadequacies in the face of changing conditions, clearly illustrated by the experience of the securities industry, has made government intervention almost a necessity for the public's sake.

Strength For Today

AIM HIGH

We never achieve anything worthwhile unless we try to accomplish much more than we really can. We must have ideals which appear quite impossible to others and even to ourselves if our achievements are to be anything more than moderately successful.

Rudyard Kipling, the English man of letters, speaks in one of his poems of a mason, who, when a structure was in the making, inscribed on the foundation, "After men cometh a builder. Tell him that I too have known." Cecil Rhodes, the great English empire builder, died before he was fifty, murmuring, "So much to do, and so little time in which to do it." The fact that the mason could not complete the building nor Rhodes complete his projects did not in the long run matter a great deal. So make no little plans. They have no thrill for you or anyone who observes you. Make a great diagram which you cannot possibly achieve in your lifetime, and they who follow will catch the spell and finish where you leave off.

'Stoic' British Yielding To A Mass Frustration

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
LONDON (AP) — "And some calls this the most civilized city in the world," sneered George, the barman at Waterloo Station.

He was looking out at a mob of commuters storming the gates of the 5:42 to Guildford, already an hour late.

They stampeded across the great vaulted terminal like a nightmare backfield in motion at some super Super Bowl Game, then reversed their field when the train caller rasped out an alternate choice: "The train now standing on platform 13 is the 1705 to Exeter . . . four coaches only."

Two helmeted bobbies cut off the surging crowd by clanging the gates shut. A rejected banker-type came to a boil under his bowler and uttered a rare obscenity at a passing trainman, reflecting the growing hostility of the passengers against the month-old go-slow of the Locomotive Engineers' Union.

Wednesday only 45 of the 375 commuter trains scheduled by Southern Region, which serves the stockbroker belt, ran because of the wage dispute.

"We're only working three days a week because of the power cuts and it takes me nearly that long to get up and back from Chertsey," Bowler Hat told the barman. "By the time I get home, the telly's gone off."

George indulged in London's latest conversational fad by matching him woe for woe: "Took me three hours last night and I work for the bleedin' railroad. There wasn't a coathanger in the cab or some such nonsense, so the driver wouldn't take the train out." Behind the city's — and the nation's — woes are labor disputes. The most important is the refusal of miners' to work overtime until they get pay hikes. This has cut down on Britain's supply of coal on which it depends for most of its energy.

The cut in coal production is compounded by the locomotive men's go-slow, which has hit delivery of coal. All this led to the government putting the nation on a three-day work week to conserve energy.

But all over London, people were coping as much as they were complaining, daring to go to the theater in spite of the threat of bombs by Irish terrorists, shopping by gaslight in the great post-Christmas sales and running out in the street to see what they had bought.

In the winter gloom of the new gaslight era, camp suppliers were enjoying a bonanza selling butane lamps and stoves by the gross to shops and banks. Factories were resurrecting old steam generators, and a Battersea candlestick maker was turning out a million candles a day instead of his normal 250,000. His most popular item was a wax effigy of Prime Minister Edward Heath that burns for a week.

With steel production down by half because of the energy crisis, Britain's big automotive industry faced massive layoffs, but pickpockets on the crowded railroad platforms and shoplifters in the darkened stores never had it so good.

"They're stealing us blind here," confided Katy Loughran from the depths of a King's Road boutique. "It's so dark, the closed circuit TV can't see a thing." Britain has not rationed gasoline, but each day's court proceedings brought news of some gasoline hoarder being apprehended, like the chap who toured gasoline stations in his Rolls Royce accumulating 350 gallons a week for his illegal backyard tank.

However, there was always the example of the Royal Family taking a mini-bus instead of the palace Rolls for the half-mile trip to church at Sandringham.

But as the dark days continued amid the bomb scares and the rising prices, there were signs that the traditional stiff British upper lip was curling into a snarl of frustration.

The bowler and umbrella set on the station platform was breaking ranks in the long-suffering queue and resorting to violence at times. Fearing a punch or worse, trainmen were seen skulking to their locomotives in civilian garb, seeking the anonymity of Special Branch detectives in a Belfast pub.

"We cornered a couple of drivers last night," bragged a burly warehouseman from Datchet, "and filled them in proper" — which is British for splitting a few upper lips. "It didn't get the trains moving, but it made us feel a lot better."

Now the trainmen were threatening to shut down Waterloo completely if their pay was stopped or passenger violence continued.

As poet Percy Bysshe Shelley, a commuter from Eton, observed long ago in lines that might have been written of a dark evening in Waterloo Station: "Hell is a city, much like London."

Preliminary Agreement On Panama Canal Treaty

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A preliminary agreement to return the Panama Canal and Canal Zone to Panama has been reached by negotiators for the two countries, U.S. sources say.

The accord is said to cover such issues as Panamanian sovereignty over the area, defense of the canal and the construction of a new canal large enough to handle super tankers. U.S. government sources stressed the agreement is not binding on this country but merely a preliminary step to be used as the basis of further negotiations leading to the drafting of a new Panama Canal treaty. Such a treaty would have to be approved by Congress.

The sources said the accord was reached by roving U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Panamanian Foreign Minister Juan Antonio Tack. Bunker held talks with Tack in Panama Nov. 28 through Dec. 3, and Jan. 6 through Jan. 8.

The preliminary accord does not set a date by which the United States would relinquish jurisdiction over the canal and sources say this one area could be the most difficult for negotiators to overcome.

One source said that while Panama would like to have the canal within 10 years, the United States would like to relinquish its control gradually, over a period of 40 to 50 years.

And, still to be gauged before the broad set of principles can be used for further negotiations towards a draft treaty is the reaction of Congress and other U.S. agencies with an interest in the canal. These include the Defense, Commerce and Inter-departments. A government source said an adverse reaction by a number of key congressmen could create difficulties for the tentative accord. In any event, the source said,

Food Poison On Flight

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — At least 19 persons aboard a chartered flight from Pueblo, Colo., were taken from the Columbus airport Wednesday night to area hospitals for treatment of food poisoning, officials said.

The source of the food poisoning was not immediately known. A passenger on the flight, C.W. Claire of Columbus, said the ride from Pueblo had been rough and he said passengers affected appeared to be air sick. But hospital officials said persons they treated were suffering from food poisoning.

Officials in Colorado said 61 persons from the Columbus and Cleveland areas had flown to Pueblo Tuesday to meet with representatives of companies which are developing a resort-type community called Pueblo West.

Of the 19 persons taken to hospitals for treatment of food poisoning, 16 were released after being treated. The others were expected to be released before morning.

Columbus officials had earlier reported that 32 persons had been taken to three area hospitals for treatment of food poisoning.

months of additional negotiations lie ahead before a new draft treaty could be ready for presentation to Congress.

The 53-mile-long Panama Canal has been under U.S. control since 1903 when the two countries signed a treaty giving the United States jurisdiction over the Canal Zone and canal "in perpetuity."

Negotiations to rewrite the treaty were started in 1964, shortly after anti-U.S. riots in Panama that stemmed largely from U.S. control of the canal area.

Eligible For A Subsidized Flood Insurance

Congressman Walter B. Jones announced today that beginning Jan. 15, Greenville will be eligible for subsidized flood insurance.

Jones said all structures used for residential, business, religious or agricultural purposes and structures occupied by non-profit organizations or owned by the state or local agencies are eligible for coverage.

Greenville became qualified under the Department of Housing and Urban Development program when it agreed to adopt land use and control measures that will minimize flood damage to future construction.

The congressman explained that local insurance agents may obtain policies and other information from the National Flood Insurers Association service office, which is Kemper Insurance, 1229 Greenwood Cliff, Charlotte.

California Roads Closed By Big Snow

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County officials have closed snow-clogged highways to San Bernardino mountain communities to keep away thousands of sightseers and weekend skiers.

Snow plows were attempting to clear away 12 feet of snow that fell during one of the worst storms on record in Southern California.

Sheriff's deputies were still at work Wednesday night bringing out some of the 20,000 area residents marooned in their homes.

The supervisors said that the closing was also prompted by the dismal prospect of a new snowstorm this weekend and a fear of an influx of hordes of visitors.

County officials estimated about 1,000 persons were rescued since the storm began last Thursday.

The storm dumped 7.69 inches of rain on downtown Los Angeles, the heaviest continuous rainfall since 1969, when 13.15 inches fell during a nine-day period beginning Jan. 8.

The National Weather Service said fair and warmer weather can be expected throughout California through Friday, but more precipitation was possible Sunday and Monday.

Ice And Snow Plaguing Wide Area Across U. S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ice and snow plagued a wide area from the Plains to the Great Lakes and New England today, bringing hazardous driving conditions and school closures in numerous communities.

Snow swept across the mid-continent in a 300-mile-wide swath from Kansas to Michigan and in a narrower band eastward through southern New England.

Some typical snowfall measurements were 8 inches at Warrensburg, Mo., 3 inches at Topeka, Kan., and Springfield, Ill. and 2 inches at Columbia, Mo., and Fort Wayne, Ind.

South of the snow, ice glazed trees, utility poles and roads. Some roads in Oklahoma were covered by 4 inches of ice as sleet hardened.

The ice storm skidded across the Mississippi Valley from Arkansas and Missouri into southern Ohio. Freezing rain and drizzle mixed with snow chilled parts of Kansas.

The ice also crept south into southeastern and west-central Texas as temperatures dipped into the 20s at some places.

A massive traffic jam developed on U.S. 69 south of Muskogee, Okla., when heavy trucks could not make it up a hill.

The dangers of walking on ice resulted in the death of one elderly Southern Illinois man who slipped and hit his head while trying to enter a car.

Showers and thundershowers were reported over parts of eastern Texas and Louisiana, southern Arkansas and Tennessee. Dense fog shrouded the Gulf Coast, eastern Tennessee and the Carolinas.

Heavy snow and ice warnings and watches were issued from the Plains to the Great Lakes for today.

The East was not included, but from 6 to 10 inches of snow blanketed New England through Wednesday. The hardest-hit areas were the Catskills and portions of the lower Hudson Valley of New York, with eight to 10 inches of snow.

Other snowstorms dusted the central and northern Rockies and parts of Washington state. Low clouds and fog clung to central California.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from -28 degrees at Bismarck, N.D., to 76 at Key West, Fla.

Expelled By Red China

NEW YORK (AP)—A member of the United States diplomatic staff in Peking is being forced to leave China because he killed a Chinese girl in an automobile accident, the American Broadcasting Corp. reported today.

Steve Bell, ABC's correspondent in Hong Kong, said the diplomat is Nicholas Platt, 37, political officer of the U.S. liaison mission in the Chinese capital.

The report said Platt's car hit a young Chinese girl Nov. 25 as he was driving his visiting parents to the Great Wall. The American commandeered a truck to take the girl to a hospital, but she died.

There was no determination that Platt was at fault, the report continued, but the Chinese government informed the U.S. mission that any diplomat involved in a fatality while driving was expected to leave the country.

Bell said he spoke with Platt by telephone, and the diplomat said he was leaving soon. He said his insurance company had paid an indemnity to dead girl's family.

Pesticide Guidelines Overruled

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—There is "no substantial evidence" to support Labor Secretary Peter Brennan's emergency safety standard on the use of insecticides, the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled in invalidating the federal guidelines.

The court ruled Wednesday on a petition filed by the Florida Peach Growers Assn., and other groups who asked that guidelines on the use of pesticides imposed by Brennan be voided.

The court battle has waged for months and even the court noted that the administrative record "is comprised of some 238 documents occupying approximately two and one-half feet of shelf space."

"There is an abundance of evidence that emergency standards are not necessary," said the appeals court ruling.

Brennan issued the guidelines last May after one of his assistants said insecticides caused 800 deaths and 800,000 injuries among farm workers each year.

Atty. Marian Guido of Washington, D.C., asked the appeals court in October to institute even more stringent safety standards than those which irritated farmers' groups. The Florida peach growers asked that Brennan's emergency guidelines be eliminated.

Farm groups filed suits in nine federal courts and all were consolidated in the Fifth Circuit which had earlier blocked enforcement of the guidelines until it could decide the case.

Ms. Guido—who said she prefers that type of address—asked at the October arguments that the original guidelines be imposed with the contention that farm workers were being exposed daily to "terrifically hazardous" pesticides.

The emergency standard affected the cultivation of seven crops including peaches, apples, oranges, grapefruit, lemons, grapes and tobacco. The standard did not prohibit the use of insecticides and pesticides but fixed the period during which workers could not enter a sprayed area and required other controls.

The opinion ruling against the Labor Department said that "the investigative groups convened by the government to study the problem of occupational exposure to pesticides...all firmly concluded that no emergency existed and that there was no justification for use of an emergency temporary standard."

"Although these findings by his own investigators do not preclude the secretary from issuing an emergency standard, they indicate the strength of the evidence contrary to his determination," the opinion said.

The court said Congressional legislation in the area of pesticides "requires determination of anger from exposure to harmful substances, not just danger of exposure; and, not exposure to just a danger, but to a grave danger; and, not the necessity of just a temporary standard, but that an emergency standard is necessary."

The opinion repeatedly emphasized that "the reasons published by the secretary with the standards do not themselves evidence a factual need for emergency standards" and the court declared Brennan's order invalid and vacated.

Bread Price Fear Allayed

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bakery industry prediction that the price of bread could soar to $1 a loaf by spring has been discounted by a top Agriculture Department official.

The official, Asst. Agriculture Secretary Carroll G. Brunthaver, called the prediction "an irrational statement" and said wheat would have to cost $60 a bushel for a one-pound loaf to cost $1 at the retail level.

The bakers based their claim on a forecast that the price of wheat, now at about $5.80 a bushel, would rise to $12 a bushel, primarily as a result of wheat exports to foreign nations that they said would create domestic shortages.

During a Wednesday news conference, officials of the American Bakers' Association predicted the increase in bread prices if the wheat shipments are not curtailed. The organization called for export controls.

Later in the day, Brunthaver said, "We are very much opposed to any discussions of export controls at this time."

Charlotte's Police Dept. Under Orders

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—A suit against the city of Charlotte and its police department, charging discrimination, has been dismissed in U. S. District Court.

Judge James B. McMillan ordered the dismissal Wednesday on condition that the police department hire and promote a greater number of blacks. The department was ordered to take immediate steps to bring the ratio of black patrolmen up to at least 20 per cent of the total force.

Thereafter, the judge directed, vacancies should be filled by at least 40 per cent blacks until the patrolmen ratio is 20 per cent black.

McMillan also ordered that beginning immediately, at least six of the next 15 promotions to the rank of sergeant should go to blacks.

The judge directed that the department must report to him at semiannual intervals for the next three years on its progress in fulfilling the goals he laid down.

The Charlotte police force currently numbers 531 persons, with 35 blacks, or seven per cent.

The suit was filed more than two years ago by the North State Law Enforcement Officers' Association, charging the department with discrimination against blacks in its hiring and advancement programs.

McMillan ordered that beginning immediately, at least 50 per cent of vacancies filled for patrolmen should consist of blacks.

LIBERTY, S. C. (AP)—Another tragedy has befallen Lester Haynes, whose 12-year-old daughter disappeared three weeks ago, believed kidnapped.

His wife, Patricia Haynes, 34, a textile worker, died in her sleep Wednesday, apparently of natural causes.

Outland gave this account:

OK Hike In Tire Prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government has approved price increases for the tire industry averaging about 3.3 per cent and has scheduled hearings on proposed additional increases.

The price hikes authorized by the Cost of Living Council on Wednesday, effective Jan. 15, would increase the price of a steel-belted tire now costing $40 to $41.32.

If the additional price requests are approved, the same tire could sell for $42.80.

However, tire manufacturers could conceivably add another 10 per cent to the price under a council guideline allowing such additional boosts for individual items so long as the average increase does not exceed that authorized.

The 3.3 per cent increases, applicable to tires and tubes, were authorized for Armstrong Rubber Co.; Cooper; Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp.; Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.; General Tire & Rubber; Goodrich; Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.; and Uniroyal Inc.

Grocer And Bandit Slain In Gun Duel

GASTON, N. C. (AP)—A grocer and a robber who waited for him to return home with the receipts were slain in a gun duel Wednesday night, Sheriff Frank Outland reported.

The sheriff of Northampton County in northeastern North Carolina said a second robber got away with an undisclosed amount, and the grocer's wife was wounded superficially by a stray bullet.

Sheriff Frank Outland identified the dead as Wilbur Garner, 54, who operated a small grocery near Gaston, and 22-year-old Dempsey Weaver of Gaston.

Shots were fired as Garner walked into the kitchen of his home in a rural section north of Gaston, near the Virginia line.

Mrs. Garner, 46, who had arrived with her husband and was in the living room, suffered a flesh wound from a bullet which came through a door. She fled out the front door and hid under the house.

The second bandit fled out the back door and was being hunted by police and bloodhounds.

When Mrs. Garner considered it safe to do so, she ran across the road to the home of her brother, from where her sister-in-law summoned authorities.

Missing Child Is Found Hiding

CHARLOTTE (AP)—An 8-year-old boy missing for six hours was found early today hiding under a mobile home 500 feet from his parents' mobile home.

Neighbors, policemen and volunteer firemen, aided by a bloodhound, had joined the search in fog-shrouded woods surrounding the mobile home park for Timmy Lewis.

His father, Robert Lewis, an industrial electrician, said he had recently moved his family from Charlotte to the park near the Catawba River in southwest Mecklenburg County.

Electric Heater Safety Rules

RIVERHEAD, N. Y. (AP)—Thinking of buying an electric heater? Here are some tips from the Suffolk County Fire Safety Department:

Your new heater should bear an Underwriter Laboratory Seal of approval. It should have a switch to shut it off automatically if it overheats. Also a switch to shut it off if it is overturned. It should be free of all flammable material.

You should never place flammables near a heater. You should keep heaters out of the traffic pattern in your house.

Use no fuse heavier than the one for which the heater is designed. Hold down use of lights and other appliances on the same circuit to avoid an overload. Keep children away from the heater.

Nixon 'White Papers' Raise Questions

Instruments Of Skylab Searching For Energy

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Observations of the earth and sun by the Skylab 3 astronauts might discover untapped sources of energy for a power-hungry globe.

They are searching for petroleum deposits and sources of geothermal energy in many countries. From the sun they seek secrets of thermonuclear fusion, which could lead to an endless, pollution-free power.

Although today was scheduled as a day off in space, astronauts Gerald P. Carr, William R. Pogue and Edward G. Gibson scheduled time to view the sun through Skylab's powerful telescope cameras. They were in the 56th day of the planned 84-day mission.

With solar physicist Gibson handling most of the sun studies, the astronauts have snapped thousands of solar photos, capturing both quiet periods and active periods when sunspots and small flares have burst on the surface.

The sun produces energy through thermonuclear fusion, a technique scientists on earth are working to perfect.

The goal is to harness the hydrogen bomb reaction to generate power by fusion, eliminating the present process which requires the triggering of an atomic fission bomb to detonate the fusion bomb. It is the fission bomb which produces radiation.

Fission produces energy by splitting molecules while fusion produces it by compressing them.

Thermonuclear fusion, believed to be at least 30 to 40 years from development in the United States, would use lithium and deuterium which are in such abundance on earth that they would last millions of years.

"The basic problem in research to develop controlled nuclear fusion is that of keeping the extremely hot plasma in one place long enough to produce the reaction," Gibson explained before the flight. "This is done successfully in only one place I know of, and that's on the sun."

"If we can learn the basic high energy physics of how the sun not only creates energy but also how it transfers it, we might start getting the answer," he said. "We might be able to cut 10 years off the development time of fusion reaction."

As part of their earth resources surveys, the Skylab astronauts have aimed cameras and sensors at potential petroleum-bearing areas in the United States, South America, Africa and the Far East. Radar imagery may reveal broad gentle geologic fields that commonly serve as reservoirs for petroleum. Some U.S. oil companies are using data obtained by the first two Skylab crews to aid in oil exploration.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's "white papers" on the milk fund and ITT affairs, while supporting his own position, leave questions about the actions and statements of some former aides.

In issuing the papers Tuesday, the White House denied anew that promises of political contributions were behind Nixon's decision to raise dairy price supports, or administration settlement of an anti-trust case against International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

The statements apparently leave the former aides to do their own explaining. For instance, Nixon's ITT statement left standing some apparent conflicts between what Nixon now says and what former attorney general John N. Mitchell and Richard G. Kleindienst once said under oath concerning their roles.

The white paper said Nixon ordered a temporary halt in anti-trust proceedings against the huge conglomerate prior to ITT's offer to help finance the Republican National Convention.

The White House said Kleindienst, then a deputy attorney general, received the presidential order to stop the ITT case, which was then headed for the Supreme Court. But the White House said Colson recommended that Nixon acknowledge this pledge of support from the Associated Milk Producers Inc., in a Sept. 9, 1970 meeting with two of its leaders. But it went on to say that Nixon didn't take Colson's advice and kept silent about the $2 million promise in his meeting with the two AMPI leaders.

Meanwhile, at the Western White House, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren indicated no further white papers would be issued by the White House on Watergate and other allegations of scandal.

Warren said any additional information would be provided "within the proper forum," adding that the White House believes the proper forum is the special Watergate prosecutor's office.

Mushrooms Withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has ordered withdrawal from the market several brands of 16-ounce size canned mushrooms it says could be tainted with lethal botulinum toxin.

The toxin can cause deadly botulism poisoning if victims are not treated promptly.

The recall, announced Wednesday, includes mushrooms packed before May 10, 1972, under the Colonial Farms or Star Chef brands, both produced by the Oxford Corp. of Oxford, Pa.

The FDA said also being recalled are mushrooms processed by Oxford for 18 private labels. However, it said most of the suspect cans were marketed under the Colonial Farms and Star Chef brands.

It is the second recall of canned mushrooms announced within a week.

The 16-ounce cans are generally sold to institutions and restaurants but some have been purchased by individual consumers for home use, the FDA said.

Recalled cans bear a one-line identification code on the can lid or a two-line code with the top line ending in "2" and preceded by numbers from 1 through 129, said the FDA.

Claims Blank Checks Given

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's re-election campaign was given a number of signed blank checks by an agent for billionaire Howard Hughes and told to fill in the amounts, according to a secretary's sworn testimony.

The checks were delivered several days before the April 7, 1972, reporting deadline, said Sally Harmony, formerly a secretary to G. Gordon Liddy, in a deposition made public in a civil suit Wednesday.

Liddy, later convicted in the Watergate break-in conspiracy, was general counsel to the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President at the time.

Miss Harmony gave the deposition in a multimillion dollar lawsuit filed by the Democratic National Committee as the result of the break-in at its offices in the Watergate.

In the deposition, Miss Harmony testified that the checks came from Robert Bennett, a Washington public relations man who handled Hughes interests.

She said Liddy told her what amounts to put on the checks and she then filled them out, but could not later recall the amounts.

Bennett told a reporter Wednesday night that she made 16 checks for $3,000 apiece to various subsidiary campaign committees on April 7, 1972, and that he himself had written a 17th check for $2,000 to make the total donation an even $50,000.

An earlier Hughes contribution of $100,000 given to Nixon intimate Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo has been the object of investigation. The money was returned.

Weekend Of Rain, Fog

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
North Carolina motorists are advised to drive carefully these mornings.

Rain and fog will continue to the weekend. And morning darkness is lingering with year-round daylight saving time.

Along the coast the winds are fairly light, and small-craft advisories have been discontinued.

Most of the lakes range about 2 feet below full pool. The streams will have some minor rises from the rains, but no flooding is expected.

Temperatures will continue mild. Highs today and Friday will range from the upper 50s and low 60s in the mountains to the low 70s on the south coast.

Cloudy skies with occasional light rain prevailed Wednesday and last night. Temperatures were mostly in the 50s, with some 40s in the northern Piedmont. The exception was in the southeast. Warm air and some sunshine sneaked into the Wilmington area, pumping the mercury to a record high of 78. This was 3 degrees higher than the previous record for January 9th.

All reporting points received some rain Wednesday. The largest 24-hour rainfall was at Henderson with three-quarters of an inch.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—North Carolina egg markets were steady Wednesday. Supplies were barely adequate and demand was good.

Weighted average prices for small lot sales of consumer grade eggs delivered in cartons to nearby outlets: Grade A large whites 79.73; medium whites 77.72; small whites 71.43.

RALEIGH (AP)—Market today was mostly steady with instances of .75 higher. Tops of 42.25-43.25 at Kinston, Benson and Lumberton; 40.25-42.25 at Wilson and High Falls; 41.00-41.50 at Rocky Mount; 39.50-40.00 at Tarboro and Bethel; 42.50 at Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Elizabeth Town, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden and Laurinburg; 40.00 at Salisbury

RALEIGH (AP)—FOB Dock broilers: Market weaker, supplies fully adequate, demand fairly good at current levels, weights heavy at some points. FOB dock-weighted average price for less than truck lot sales of size plant grade broilers to be picked up at docks next week is 33.65 cents per pound. Estimated slaughter to today 1,158,000.

Hens: Market conditions unsettled on heavy type. Supplies ample and demand dull. Prices said per pound for hens over seven pounds, 32.80 head at farm 12.50-13.00. Mostly 13.00. Few previous commitments at 5.00.

NEW YORK (AP)—After opening lower, stock prices moved to the plus side today, following Tuesday's and Wednesday's steep declines.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.85 to 836.64 at 11:30 a.m. as advancing New York Stock issues took a narrow lead over losers.

Brokers said the market began its turnaround after a statement by the Saudi Arabian oil minister that his country was willing to cooperate with everyone to produce Mideast peace. He also said his country was concerned about the effects of the higher oil prices on the economies of other countries.

The Dow blue-chip indicator lost 26.99 Wednesday, its third-biggest single-session loss since 1962. Brokers said the steep declines Tuesday and Wednesday, when the Dow lost more than 15 points, were caused by concern about the effects of the escalation oil prices on foreign economies.

"The stock market perhaps was ready for a turnaround," said Larry Wachtel of Bache & Co. "When an innocuous statement like that can push the market back up again, you've got to figure that perhaps it was ready for another rise after the recent steep declines."

PPG Industries, down 1/8 to 21 3/8 was the Big Board volume leader. Other leaders included First National City Bank, up 1/2 to 38, after losing more than 3 points Wednesday; Ford, up 1/4 to 39 1/2; and General Motors, up 1/2 to 46 1/4.

Use Napalm Against Foe
PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—Cambodian air force fighters dropped napalm today on Khmer Rouge insurgents threatening Phnom Penh's airport.

Front-line field commanders called in the prop-driven T28s to drop the flaming chemical on a series of villages five to seven miles northwest of the city and less than two miles north of the airport.

Fifty armored personnel carriers tried to drive into the heavily foliaged villages Wednesday but ran into heavy barrages of mortar fire and anti-tank rockets. Government officials reported the Khmer Rouge were entrenched in strong bunkers.

Several thousand government troops with more than 75 armored vehicles have been trying for four days to trap an estimated 2,000 to 3,000 insurgents that moved into the area last weekend. American sources say the Khmer Rouge thrust northwest of the capital is the most ambitious attack to date in a month-old dry season offensive. But they add that the insurgents have not made any significant gains so far and have suffered substantial casualties.

Information Minister Trinh Hoang told a news conference some personal, unofficial overtures for peace talks with the Khmer Rouge had been made via both "national and international" channels. But he played them down, and U.S. officials predicted that the insurgents would continue trying for a military victory until the dry season ends in May.

In Saigon, the South Vietnamese military command said its forces killed 55 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops in clashes Wednesday in the Mekong Delta. Two government troops were reported killed and 20 wounded.

No progress was reported today in discussions between the Saigon government and the Viet Cong over an exchange of prisoners before the Tet celebration of the lunar new year Jan. 23.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.
Rain likely over the weekend, clearing on Monday. Mild Saturday, turning cooler Sunday and Monday.

Recreation...
"Operation Squeeze," a plan in three phases to cut back on energy consumption.

Phase one, now in operation, calls for cutting heat to 60 degrees in gyms, and to 66 in offices. Tennis and ball field lights have been cut off for the winter months, and maintenance personnel are asked to make only one trip to a job site for one job. In addition, the fuel line for the boiler at West Greenville was changed from a one half inch to a quarter inch line. This phase is designed to save 10 to 15 per cent from prior energy usage levels.

If necessary, the department will later move into Phase II or Phase III, each of increasing austerity in application of energy usage. "We hope we'll not have to go into either of these," Lee said, "but we're going to be prepared if this becomes necessary."

The Recreation Department has published and is distributing to interested persons a small booklet, "Gifts of Land." In this booklet, explanation is given of various arrangements by which land can be donated by citizens to the city and tax considerations applicable.

Crash Claimed Forty Lives
BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—Forty persons were killed Wednesday night when a two-engine turboprop plane of a national military airline crashed amid flames on an Andean foothill in southern Colombia.

Police said there are no survivors. The British-made "Avro" plane of the Satena airline crashed Wednesday afternoon, after fire reportedly broke out in the passenger compartment soon after the plane took off from the Florencia airport for Bogota.

Satena said 27 passengers and a five-man crew were aboard, but police said eight children were also aboard and should be added to the list, making a total of 40 persons aboard, all Colombians.

Survive 55 Days Adrift

HONOLULU (AP)— "When we saw the light of the other boat, we began flashing our flashlight and making noise," said Don Van Cleave, one of five men who survived 55 days adrift at sea.

"We used sticks to beat on fuel drums, but I think it was the light and not the noise that got them to come our way," said Van Cleave, of Voorheesville, N.Y.

Van Cleave and the others were rescued after dark on New Year's Day by a Japanese fishing boat, Hokusen Maru No. 8, after they had drifted nearly 1,000 miles in a disabled fishing vessel.

"It was rougher at the beginning than at the end" said Frederick Monroe, of Altamon, N.Y. "We spent most of the time fishing and getting water when it rained."

"We played a lot of cribbage," said the skipper, Lambert Kanakaole of Honolulu, who displayed a cribbage board he had fashioned from a piece of driftwood.

Monroe and Van Cleave, although not met by their families, got a warm welcome a Hickam Air Force Base Wednesday night from the families and friends of their three fellow crewmen.

Stewart's Shot Nips Pirates

RICHMOND, Va.—The last two times he met East Carolina's Pirates, Aron Stewart found himself held to low scores, and his Richmond Spiders were handed a defeat.

Last night, he got quite a bit of revenge, hitting a three-point play with four seconds left in the game to give the Spiders a 79-78 win over East Carolina.

The three-pointer climaxed a frantic finish to the game, which had seen East Carolina hold a six-point lead with 3:50 left in the contest. Richmond tied it up at 72-72, however, and although East Carolina twice went back ahead, and had the ball for most of the final minutes of play with the score tied at 76-76, it did no good.

The Pirates, going for one last shot at the basket, worked the ball around until with 12 seconds left, Tom Marsh got it, wide open in the lane. As he moved to the basket, however, he was tied up by Stewart, forcing a jump ball. Stewart controlled it, raced downcourt, took a pass, got off a shot, missed, picked off the rebound and put it in. He was fouled by Roger Atkinson, and completed the three-point play for a 79-76 lead with just four seconds left. Nicky White hit on a last second shot, to no avail.

The loss, a heartbreaker for the Pirates, was their second in three Southern Conference starts, while Richmond is now 3-2 in the league. Both teams are 4-6 overall.

Stewart got his highest total in the last three games with the Bucs, finishing with 26 as he led the Spider win.

Although that was not the high point total for the night, it did overshadow a fine 29-point effort by East Carolina's Nicky White, who had one of his best nights. White hit on 14 of 22 shots from the floor, and swept the boards for 15 rebounds, also a game high.

East Carolina hit on 50.7 per cent of its shots, as compared to 45.6 per cent for the Spiders. Both teams hit fine percentages from the foul line, 80.0 for the Pirates and 83.3 for Richmond.

The Pirates controlled the boards, pulling down 47 rebounds as compared to 37 for Richmond. Turnovers, however, hurt the Bucs as they lost it 23 times as compared to 15 for the Spiders.

Richmond got the first two baskets as Stewart and Bob McCurdy hit. The Spiders got out by as much as six points, 14-8, on a McCurdy jumper early in the half.

East Carolina, behind a 19-point effort by White in the first half, fought back and finally tied it up as Nicky hit near the midpoint to make it 16-16. They tied it again at 18-18 on a jumper by Donnie Owens with 10:36 left, and then White tossed in an errant shot to give the Pirates their first lead, 20-18.

Richmond tied it up, but Gregg Ashorn put the Bucs back ahead, 22-20, and Marsh added two free throws for a four-point edge.

Richmond came back to move back ahead as Stewart got a free throw and a basket, and McCurdy hit on a drive, 27-26, but the Bucs got another basket from White for the lead, 28-27.

Once more, Richmond moved ahead, 31-30, but White hit again with about 2:30 left for a 32-31 lead. Buzzy Braman added two free throws, and after Eric Gray scored for the Spiders, Kenny Edmonds got a basket and White made a free throw for a 37-33 halftime lead for the Bucs.

White started the second half with a basket, and after a Richmond score, Ashorn and Reggie Lee both hit for a 43-35 edge, the biggest Pirate lead of the night.

Richmond fought back, however, but could pull only to within two, and the Bucs pulled away again. It continued at that pace until with about 11 minutes left, Mike Sanford hit to tie it at 55-55.

East Carolina inched back out, but Richmond tied it again at 57-57 and 59-59 before Marsh scored a three-point play to give the Bucs a 62-59 lead. He got another basket to raise it to 64-59, then hit once more with 7:50 showing for a seven-point bulge before Spider coach Lou Mills called a time out to talk it over.

Richmond slowly came back after that, but still trailed by six, 72-66 with 3:50 left in the game. Sanford hit a jumper from the corner, however, and McCurdy scored to cut the lead to two. Gray then hit from underneath to tie it up, 72-72 with 2:20 left.

Atkinson hit two free throws with two minutes showing to give the Pirates a 74-72 lead, but Stewart made a shot to tie it again. White again put the Bucs ahead, 76-74, but Sanford hit to tie it one last time.

The Pirates dribbled the ball around for the next minute, waiting for the last shot, then came the fatal jump ball that resulted in Stewart's winning play.

McCurdy added 21 points for Richmond, while Gray hit 14.

For the Bucs, Marsh finished with 11 and Lee had 10. East Carolina completes a long swing of road games Saturday night, traveling to Lexington, Va., to meet Virginia Military Institute. They return home on Monday for the first time in a month, playing host to Appalachian State.

Clemson Shows Can't Be Taken As Pushover

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The North Carolina State basketball coach, Norm Sloan, says his fourth-ranked team can't afford the mistake of overlooking Clemson while preparing for third-ranked Maryland.

And he said that even before the Clemson Tigers lent weight to his words by giving North Carolina, No. 5, a battle before losing 102-90 at home Wednesday night.

The State Wolfpack will be home to Clemson at noon Saturday, and 24 hours later will be home to Maryland. The Maryland game will be nationally televised before the Super Bowl pro football championship game between Miami and Minnesota.

In last year's meeting between Maryland and N.C. State on Super Bowl Sunday, David Thompson dropped in a follow shot in the final seconds to give State an 87-85 victory.

Sloan says the Wolfpack will have a new face on its starting five. Sophomore Phil Spence, who has made rapid strides in recent games, will join David Thompson and Tommy Burleson on the front line, replacing Tim Stoddard. Spence, 6-foot-8 native of Raleigh, home of the Wolfpack, is a transfer from Vincennes, Ind., Jr. College. In the North Carolina Big Four Tournament last Friday and Saturday he scored 14 points, hauled down 15 rebounds and handed out five assists in two games.

Atlantic Coast Conference teams are idle tonight. Maryland, 8-1, will play Friday night at Wake Forest, 7-3. On Saturday, in addition to Clemson at N.C. State, North Carolina will be at Virginia in a 3 p.m. game which will be televised regionally, and Duke will play a night game at Pitt.

North Carolina, now 9-1, broke to a 12-0 lead against Clemson, but the Tigers pulled to a 23-all tie on a 15-foot jumper by Tim Capeheart with 8:44 to play in the first half. But the North Carolina Tar Heels, behind the inside play of Bobby Jones, forged to a 49-33 lead at halftime. They extended the lead to 81-63, biggest margin of the game, with 6:58 remaining. Clemson, now 7-4, cut the 18-point disadvantage to 12 points at the end.

For North Carolina, freshman Walter Davis had 27 points, including 11 for all at the free throw line, and Jones had 25 points, including 11 of 13 free throws.

The best Clemson scorers were Van Gregg with 24 and Wayne Croft with 19.

Buc Matmen To Host W. Chester

Coach John Welborn's East Carolina University wrestlers, already established as one of the South's top wrestling powers by virtue of a very successful tour of the tournament circuit, have a chance to enhance their prestige tonight when they host West Chester State (Pa.) at Minges Coliseum at 8 p.m.

It will be the Pirates' first of six dual meets this season and one of only three matches at home.

Welborn expects his charges to be severely tested by the Rams who are coached by an East Carolina alumnus, Milt Collier.

"West Chester has been one of the top teams on the East Coast for the past several years," Welborn said. "Just as in the past years, it will be one of our toughest matches of the season if not the toughest."

"We've had some fine matches with them in recent years. Two years ago for instance, we tied them 18-18. And last year, they came down here nationally ranked and we beat them 35-7."

In seven tournaments to date, the Pirates won titles in the Colgate Open, Thanksgiving Open, the North Carolina Collegiate Championships, Georgia Tech Invitational and Maryland Federation Tournament. In addition, the Pirates finished second in the East Stroudsburg Open and third in the Wilkes Open two weeks ago, their last competition workout prior to tonight's clash with the Rams.

Baby Pirates Nipped, 80-78

RICHMOND, Va.—A last second shot by the Richmond Baby Spiders nipped the East Carolina junior varsity, 80-78, here last night. The game was a preliminary to the Varsity game between the two schools.

The first half was a nip-and-tuck affair with Richmond finally inching out into a 40-38 lead at the end of the period.

During the second half, Richmond began to pull away, with the Pirates trailing throughout most of the period. In the latter stages of the half, however, East Carolina rallied and finally tied it up. From there to the end, it was close, with the Pirates missing out on a chance to take the lead just before the end.

But when they lost their chance, David Welsh canned a long jumper at the horn, giving Richmond the two-point victory.

Nate Sherman led the Richmond scoring with 23 points, while Welsh had 18 and Charlie Buhman had 13.

East Carolina's Harry Miller had a game high of 33 points, hitting 14 of 20 shots from the floor. Charlie Durham added 10 to the Pirate total.

Miller also led the Bucs on the boards, pulling down 18 rebounds.

Attempt To Gag Viking Coach Is Making People Wonder About NFL

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
HOUSTON (AP) — A cold shiver must have swept through most of us when we learned that Commissioner Pete Rozelle had threatened to fine Coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings because he complained about having sparrows in the team dressing room.

There was a dictatorial ring to it.

"Nyet" can be a big word behind the Iron Curtain, but it has little place in freedom-loving America, the land of apple pie and football.

In football, there's nothing bigger than Super Bowl VIII. It's the sport's piece de resistance. It's the battle of champions — helmeted, padded gladiators going at it with all the pomp and ceremony, the brutal viciousness and spectacular fanfare of another age.

But there is no reason to hold it sacrosanct.

It's really just a football game with grown men in tight-fitting short pants and silk jerseys butting heads, huffing and puffing and trying to push an odd-shaped piece of inflated pigskin across a chalk line.

There is no reason to deny a man one of his inalienable rights — that of free speech.

It would be different if Bud Grant were an agitator, a bombastic blowhard. He is just the opposite. He is a nice, soft-mannered family man who rarely raises his voice.

His players revere him, his fellow coaches hold him in the highest respect. To newsmen who must deal with him, he is strictly class.

When Grant brought his National Conference champion Vikings to Houston for Sunday's Super Bowl, he was shocked when he found his team assigned to a district high school stadium where there were no lockers or tables. Sparrows flitted around in the shower room.

Grant called the facilities "shabby" and "not fit for a junior high school team." He compared them with the more luxurious quarters of the Miami Dolphins, who were assigned the facilities of the Houston Oilers.

Grant, nor any official of the Dolphins, got to select the training site. It was done by the National Football League.

Photographs of the Vikings' quarters substantiated his protest. They presented a bleak, dismal scene.

When Grant's caustic comments reached print, word came down from Rozelle's New York headquarters that Grant had violated a section of the NFL by-laws.

The section states that a player or official is forbidden to say anything detrimental about the NFL. It is a sweeping law. It imposes a gag on every player, coach and administrator in the circuit.

In Grant's case, it exposed him to league discipline for little more than the expression of an opinion. Grant had a legitimate gripe — even rival Coach Don Shula acknowledged that — but he wasn't permitted to voice it.

This seems to be suppression of the most reprehensible sort.

Rozelle is an excellent commissioner, one of the best. Bright, public relations minded, firm, no pawn of his directors, he has presided over the phenomenal growth of his sport. He has been largely responsible for making pro football — by most polls — the top spectator sport in America.

The game, in season, saturates the networks. The TV companies vie with millions of dollars for the chance to expose it.

It's big time. It operates on a big time scale. At the Super Bowl, the NFL throws a party supposedly for the press but actually for its friends, advertisers and patrons which must cost $100,000.

You'd think anybody who could do this also could get a dressing room for Bud Grant with lockers and without sparrows.

The danger of the NFL with its growth, money and mushrooming success, is that it can grow arrogant and pompous. It can get the idea that it is beyond reproach.

The treatment of Grant in this case hints of such peril.

Simpson NFL's Most Valuable

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson today credited his coach and offensive line for his 1973 successes which brought him the Associated Press award as the National Football League Most Valuable Player.

"I don't think I did anything different than I did before, but we had that good offensive line," said a smiling O.J. who rushed for a league record of 2,063 yards for his Buffalo club this past season.

He shattered the record held by Jim Brown for a decade.

"Lou Saban came back as coach in 1972 and he gave me the football that year. Despite all the problems we had with our offensive line, I still led the league with 1,250 yards.

"This year, with Reggie McKenzie healthy all season, Donnie Green healthy and rookies playing well, we did better.

"The Bills picked up Paul Seymour and Joe DeLamielleure in the draft first round. We made a few great trades including picking up Mike Mon-ter from the Jets and you know you put those guys on the offensive line and it's very formidable.

Simpson added: "I think next year we'll take up right where we left off. We had two rookies on the offensive line and we had a rookie quarterback in Joe Ferguson. I expect them to improve and with their improvement I expect myself to improve."

The 26-year-old Simpson, in his fifth season with the Bills and a former Heisman Trophy winner at the University of Southern California, was an overwhelming choice for the MVP honors. A panel of three sports writers and sportscasters from each NFL city vote. Only John Hadl and Harold Jackson of the Los Angeles Rams were named in addition to Simpson and each of them received only two votes.

Buffalo, with a strong finish, posted a 9-5-0 record and finished behind Super Bowl-bound Miami, 12-2. Behind in the division were the New York Jets, New England Patriots and Baltimore Colts.

Padre Situation Still Up In Air

By JERRY LISKA
AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — At a costly risk, the National League still is playing the hidden ball trick with the San Diego Padre franchise.

With spring training just around the corner, the NL's ownership rejected Wednesday proposed purchase of the Padres by a nine-member Los Angeles group headed by horse race executive Majorie Everett.

It marked the fourth time in five months the NL bosses failed to do anything about helping financially strapped owner C. Arnholt-Smith unload his five-year-old Padre franchise.

League President Chub Feeney made a hurried and almost furtive short announcement after Wednesday's 3½-hour meeting drew another blank.

"The National League declined approval of the proposed sale of the San Diego franchise to a group represented by attorney Neil Papiano," Feeney announced. That meant thumbs down on the Everett faction.

Feeney wound up his brief statement with: "The league plans to explore and consider other possibilities in the near future."

It was reported the dissenting vote was 9-3, with only Phil Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs; Horace Stoneham of the San Francisco Giants, and Buzze Bavasi of the Padres casting for the Everett group.

The action Wednesday left the door ajar for a long-wooled Washington group headed by Joe Danzansky, but more likely left the Padres in San Diego for at least one more season under a possible new local purchasing group, or even under league operation.

One league official said the next meeting would be held within two weeks and that a bid might be considered from a revised lineup of the original Los Angeles group.

The action Wednesday appeared a rebuff of Mrs. Everett, majority stockholder in the Hollywood (Calif.) Park race track, who was a government witness in a Chicago race track stock scandal.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn appeared before the Wednesday meeting, but did not attend the session. Kuhn disclosed his office had investigated the Los Angeles group and submitted a report to NL owners at baseball's winter meetings in Houston in December.

NCAA Erases Bowl Limitation; Votes To Uphold Grant Limits

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association made major changes at its 68th annual convention and admitted some measures could create future problems.

At Wednesday's final business session, the NCAA delegates voted to eliminate the mid-November date that major football bowls games were supposed to await before issuing invitations. Now the bowls, except those involving conference champions, could make their matchups early in the season.

"This new rule appears on the surface to be permissive but, in fact, it's what's prevailing now," said Bob James, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference and chairman of the NCAA Extra Events Committee.

Earlier in the convention, a proposal narrowly passed which will allow athletes to play professionally in one sport and on the college level in any others.

"It's modernization," said NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers, "an accommodation to the individual athlete. It does raise many problems, however."

Southern California football star Anthony Davis, one of several athletes who could take advantage of the change, said Wednesday, "It sounds like fun."

But Davis, the football halfback who also excels in baseball, added, "If I played pro baseball, would pro football draft me?"

Other versatile NCAA athletes who could become dual-status athletes include Quinn Buckner of Indiana and Steve Bartkowski of California. The rule change came too late for the likes of Arizona State quarterback Danny White, chosen in baseball's secondary phase draft Wednesday.

Sceptics have begun to behind the scenes here already, however, about how the rule might be abused. Couldn't wealthy alumni or others pay a college football player big money legitimately in the summer by employing him as anything from a tennis pro to a baseball player?

At the wrapup convention session, the delegates also voted Wednesday against raising current scholarship limitations in football and basketball. They also turned down a proposal that would have prohibited any recruiting contact with high school prospects before their senior year.

The Vikings took 10 of the 13 individual events, and drew in another. Seven of the wins came on pins, while one was a forfeit, and another was a lopsided decision. North Pitt took one of its two wins by a pin.

Summary:

Highwaymen In Division Lead

State Highway gained a 47-40 victory over Vermont American last night in the Industrial Basketball League's Division I to take the lead in the loop all alone. The win left State Highway as the lone unbeaten in the division, a game into first place.

In the opener, Grady White took a 68-52 romp over Preps shirt. The Boatmen couldn't pull away from their foe in the first half, which ended in a 34-34 deadlock. But in the second half, Grady White outscored Preps shirt, 34-18, gaining the victory.

Marvin Hardy led Grady White with 20 points, while Marvin Davis had 14, Larry Dixon and Frank Brown each had 12 and James McIntyre had 10. For Preps shirt, Billy Clemons had 12, William Johnson had 11 and Clifton Gray had 10.

The second game saw State Highway take its win. They were unable to get an advantage in the first half, which, like the opener, ended in a tie, 20-20. But in the second half, the Highwaymen pulled away, outshooting V-A, 27-20, to take the win.

The Worry Clinic Who Needs A Sleeping Pill?

Dr. Zee quit his addiction to sleeping pills by use of the "Horse Sense" medical prescription below. Beware of taking unnecessary medicine! For such foreign chemicals overwork your liver, kidneys and your heart.

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D. M.D.
CASE Z-522: Dr. Zee is a dental surgeon, aged 62.
"Dr. Crane," he told me at a recent convention which I adressed, "I heard you talk a year ago in Texas.

"And I have certainly profited from your medical suggestion about curing the usual insomnia of men past 50.
"For you said it was basically due to the fact older men often awaken about 2 A.M. to void urine.
"Then they begin to think about income tax problems or other worries that arouse their emotions, so they can't fall back asleep.
"Thus millions of older folks rely on sleeping pills, yet could eliminate such drug addiction by stopping their urinary wakening.
"Well, Dr. Crane, I followed your suggestions and ever since then I have slept soundly till morning.
"And I have quit all my former sleeping pills!"

Urinary insomnia
"Urinary insomnia" is how I have often described this type of sleeplessness.
So try the prescription I outlined for that dental convention.
Remember, too, that every time you ingest foreign chemicals, either as medicine, liquor, tobacco, etc., you simply place a greater load on your liver, kidneys and heart.
For the liver destroys 'detoxifies' foreign chemicals; the kidneys then excrete them, and the heart usually speeds up to aid in the process.
If you are a victim at present of insomnia, then keep in mind that you don't die of insomnia, so never fret about it unduly.
If, like Dr. Zee, you are afflicted with urinary insomnia

(which troubles women as well as men) then follow "this prescription:
Reduce your fluid intake after 6 or 7 P.M. so your kidneys will not produce as much urine during the night.
(2) Also, go slow on coffee, tea or caffeine drinks at your evening meal, for caffeine increases kidney output.
(3) Since acid urine burns and thus makes you void more often, and on much less volume of urine, then "sweeten" your urine with antacid tablets or even baking soda.
(4) Re-train your bladder so it will comfortably hold at least 8 ounces, instead of the 4 ounces that many people now succumb to.
For the bladder can easily hold even 32 ounces or more, so don't fear it will burst!

Many people become so bladder-conscious that they develop the habit of excessively frequent urination.
Thus, their urinary bladder becomes habituated to demanding that it be emptied when it reaches that 4-ounce level.
Then a battle ensues between your brain and your bladder, for organs try to dominate and are very reluctant to surrender to your will.
During the daytime, however, drink plenty of fluids and grit your teeth till you force the urinary bladder to let out a notch.
It will try to coerce you into surrendering first, but once you win out, it will then give up and you may feel no more urgency till it reaches the 8-ounce capacity.

(5) Dieting, if you are obese, also helps reduce the urinary output, so send for my booklet "How to Lose 10 Pounds in 10 Days," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.
(6) To detour your mind from income tax or other irritations, read a few chapters in the Bible or educational literature such as Reader's Digest.
(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Tests Find No Cancer

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP)—Doctors say they have tested tissue from Bing Crosby's afflicted lung and found no indication of cancer.
The 69-year-old singer entered Peninsula Hospital here on New Year's Eve for what was then diagnosed as pleurisy. Crosby's family physician, Dr. Stanley M. Hanfling, said Wednesday that the crooner had a lesion about two inches long and 1½ inches wide on the upper part of his left lung. He said the lung also had an abscess.

Hanfling said a team of chest and lung specialists had been called in to help determine how best to treat Crosby's condition.
"Mr. Crosby is confident, has a good appetite and is optimistic," said Hanfling.
The entertainer has a fever of about 100 degrees, a cough and mild-to-moderate chest pains, Hanfling said. Crosby's failure to respond to antibiotics has been a major concern, the doctor added.
Hanfling said he hoped Crosby could be released from the hospital within two weeks to return to his home in nearby Hillsborough.

er wanted to take both the heart and the diamond finesses, but it appeared that he was on the table for the first and last time. He was tempted to lead the jack of diamonds, for if that was covered, he could get back to dummy with the eight of diamonds. However, that would almost certainly expose him to a diamond ruff. Instead, he cunningly led the seven of diamonds from dummy at trick two. Who could blame East for failing to cover? He followed with the three, and thereby presented declarer with the contract.

Declarer played his six of diamonds under the seven, and when the finesse won he was still in dummy. Next came the ten of hearts. Whether or not East covered, the defenders could get no more than one trump trick and one club.

Be honest—had you been in the East seat, would you have played the king of diamonds on the seven?

East and West were using artificial methods. East's two spade opening showed a minimum opening bid with a secondary club suit in addition to the spade suit. When West competed to five clubs, North boldly raised his partner. West's double was more out of disappointment than any firm belief that he could defeat the contract.

West got the defense off to an excellent start by leading the king of clubs, attacking dummy's only entry. Declar-

People Are Still Maimed, Killed In South Vietnam

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Jan. 28 signing of the peace pact means little to the staff and the patients at the Quaker Service Rehabilitation Center in Quang Ngai. People are still dying and legs and arms are still being blown off on the teeming mine fields of post-war Vietnam.

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
QUANG NGAI, South Vietnam (AP) — A lovely young girl lies at the edge of a bench, lifting up a heavy weight attached to her leg stump, a gentle-faced man struggles through push-up exercises to strengthen his torso because there isn't much left below his waist.

"Nothing has changed here since the cease fire," Claudia Krich says. "People are dying just as fast, legs and arms are being blown off just as often."

As if to prove her thesis, she peers through her thick-lensed glasses and down the long, dimly-lit room.

At first glance it reminds you of a gymnasium: a row of nine exercise benches, a wallfull of pulleys, crude bar bells and the faint smell of sweat. But the progressions of oddly truncated bodies, scarred stumps performing repetitious movements tells a different story.

This is the physical therapy ward of the Quaker Service Rehabilitation Center in Quang Ngai. The staff; five young Americans from the American Friends Service Committee and 50 highly skilled Vietnamese. The patients: newly-born infants to stooped, aging peasants who had the "bad luck" to lose limbs through South Vietnamese guns, Viet Cong rockets or the teeming mine fields of post-war Vietnam.

For the staff the Jan. 28 paper ending hostilities in the country has no meaning.

It also has none for Lien. She is 14 but looks 9 or 10. Her face and arms are an interplay of beautiful darting eyes, a whirl of hands and arms and seemingly everlasting smiles. Her legs have shrunk to spindly, dangling appendages.

Lien is a paraplegic, but sweating hard to compensate.

She heaves a bar bell, fashioned out of empty soft drink cans and cement hish above her head, then eases it down slowly. From time to time she puts the weights aside to adjust the rubber tube which runs into a plastic bag half-filled with her urine. She says she was riddled by shrapnel during a South Vietnamese artillery barrage on her village just after the cease fire.

Duong, 30, is also paralyzed from the waist down. It happened one night during government "harassment and interdiction" shelling just before the cease-fire. The artillery also killed her two children. Her husband, a soldier, left home for war five years ago and never came back.

Even with the braces and artificial devices available at the center, she will at best have limited mobility. Worse yet, Duong has no family to go back to.

"She will either stay with us at the center for years, or she will leave here and die," Ms. Krich said.

The stories of the victims are starkly simple and often similar on the surface—"legs blown off by a Viet Cong booby trap," "shot for fun by a South Vietnamese soldier," "stepped on a mine while looking after my family's cows in the fields."

Mines are the principal weapons which bring patients to the center. Quang Ngai is seething with them: mines planted around government outposts; in Viet Cong-held territory; mines left behind by U.S. forces, buried explosives which maim civilians in such unlikely places as rice paddies in well-populated areas.

It is difficult to determine whether the warring forces are continuing extensive mine warfare, but it is certain neither side has made any effort to remove or mark the explosives as required by the peace accord.

"Even if the fighting were to cease, unexploded ordnance in the countryside would continue for years to come to maim and kill persons returning to the land," the Quakers said.

No province in postwar Vietnam is of course stranger to civilians dying violently, but Quang Ngai — the province of the My Lai massacre, Americal Division sweeps and a decade of vicious fighting — may now be among the most dangerous for noncombatants.

The peace settlement found Quang Ngai a patchwork of government and Viet Cong-North Vietnamese controlled real estate, with neither side satisfied with its share.

Civilians suffer as each side attempts to expand the leopard spots into solid blotches of color on the map of the mountainous, northern province.

"Our work was by no means over when peace broke out," said Keith Brinton, Ms. Krich's husband and co-director of the program.

Some 60 resident patients are now treated at the center, with the number of new casualties admitted each month very similar to pre-peace figures. In fact, the Quakers say during February and March this year the number of victims admitted was 28 per cent higher than the same period of wartime 1972.

In the center's prosthetics shop, work has by no means slackened: between 80 and 100 artificial limbs are produced free-of-charge every month. The staff is all Vietnamese, six of them amputees trained at the center.

The resident genius and head of prosthetics, Nguyen Quy Anh, has come up with unique variations to suit local conditions and keep costs down. There is his "paddy leg," a kind of half-foot which enables a wearer to work in paddy mud without getting stuck; and his rubber hand, complete with fingernails. It permits the handicapped person to shift gears on a motor scooter without problems.

The center is experimenting with knee-joint bolts made from artillery shells and flare casings. Most of the braces are forged from downed aircraft at one-tenth the U.S. cost.

Brinton, 3, Philadelphia, and Ms. Krich, 25, of Los Angeles, say the aim of the center since its foundation in 1967 has been to find "the local way to solve the problem," and to "work ourselves out of a job" by letting the Vietnamese staff assume all functions.

It has almost come to that. The Americans now handle just the long-range planning, the "hiring and firing" and financial support—an amazingly low $150,000 a year.

The Americans are paid expenses only and live a simple communal style, in an old house near the center.

The Quakers will probably remain in South Vietnam for some time to come. They realize the dangers of leaving the center altogether. Almost inevitably corruption would creep in, government influence over the center might become too strong and perhaps the fragile concept of rehabilitation might wither away in the area if they all departed, they say.

Rehabilitation extends beyond the doors of the center, and this fact frustrates the Americans. "South Vietnamese society still doesn't accept cripples. They are looked upon as useless. It's so sad after spending so much time with the patients," Ms. Krich says.

Couple Find Coal A Cheap Heating Fuel

NEWFIELD, N.Y. (UPI) — A man in Maine uses windmill-powered generator to heat his home. A New Mexico couple collects the heat of the sun in water-filled barrels to warm their house. Others have come up with even more esoteric ways of beating the fuel shortage.

But not Will and Marie Provine. Instead of banking on technology to ease them through the cold Newfield winter, they're looking to the past for the solution to the energy pinch.

Two tons of anthracite coal sit in their basement. The first ton cost $35; the second, a discounted $33. The dealer at Painted Post, near Elmira, delivered it all for free.

A coal-burning kitchen stove and a pot-bellied stove in the dining room heat what Marie Provine calls an insulated package of rooms in the middle of her house. The Provines have closed off unused rooms, fully weather-stripped and insulated the house, and they shut the heat off completely at night.

The result: They may get by on less than $20 a month for heat.

Last winter, the Provines—both teachers at Cornell University in nearby Ithaca—heated their two-story house with a lot of wood and a space heater. Now, they've switched to coal because, Marie says, "You can burn coal for a lot longer than an equivalent amount of wood."

With no thermostats to control their coal-burning stoves, the Provines had to learn by trial and error how to regulate the heat inside their home.

But now they can keep the temperature constant at any desired level up to 80 degrees by damping down the stoves and choosing between coal and the hotter burning wood they bought for $14.

Having no thermostats creates another problem: It's a cold house by the time morning rolls around. That doesn't seem to bother the Provines, though. According to Marie, it takes only half an hour for the kitchen stove to warm up part of the house.

An oil-fired space heater serves as a back-up system, but, "We try not to use it any more than we have to."

"In the really cold weather," however, Marie admits "there will be no way to keep the pipes unfrozen without using the space heater overnight."

Is the coal dirty? "Not at all," says Marie. "It's beautiful when it gets hot."

CANNED FRUIT
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Canning Peach Association reports that canned fruit sales in the nation's supermarkets last year totaled $828.9 million.

Penguins, White-Outs Among Polar Flying Perils

By ROBERT C. MILLER
THE SOUTH POLE, Antarctica (UPI) — The coffee and rolls are free on S.P.C.A.—South Pole Commuter Airlines—but your seat companion could be anything from a penguin to a diesel generator.

The Navy's antarctic airline shuttles daily—weather permitting—across 803 miles of the most beautiful and deadly terrain in the world, linking the main American base at McMurdo Sound with the pole. Its heavily-laden Hercules traverse the ice-timbed Queen Maud and assorted other 10,000 foot ranges following the same general route of the early Antarctic explorers who struggled southward afoot seeking the poles, but finding, many times, only death in the frozen wastelands.

From November until mid-February the ski-equipped C130s are the only supply link between the outside world and the 175 Americans living at the pole. These two camps—the old Ross Amundsen and the new station now being built with Seabee and civilian labor—contain just about every possible amenity of the civilized world, except women, all of it either flown in or parachuted to the sites adjoining the pole.

A broken-backed Hercules lying at the end of the ice runway tells better than words the perils of polar flying. The loaded transport hit a "white out" while attempting to land, and the sudden blending of snow, sky and atmosphere into a blind world of whiteness caused the pilot to pancake into the ice. Although the plane was severely damaged, there were no injuries.

"You'll notice," explained flight engineer David Brown (Camarillo, Calif., and Brewick, Pa.) "that we never stop the props while we're on the ground. In this intense cold where it's anywhere from 25 to 50 below zero (Fahrenheit) you might never get the engines going again if you had starting troubles."

White-Out Record
 The record holder for white-out landings is Lt. Cmdr. Floyd W. Eldredge of Denison, Tex., who has made five, three of them in one day.

"Co-pilot Ernie Carman, Newport, R.I., was getting a little damp under the armpits that day," Eldredge said, "as we had him looking out the floor of the cockpit looking out the window to yell 'contact' when the skis were about to hit the ice."

During the November to mid-February "summer" period, SPCA flies two and three shuttles daily to the pole and pilots such as Joel Hans Jensen (Vancouver, Wash.) log more than 600 hours in the air, all of it daylight flying with built-in problems rarely experienced in other locales.

Earn Honors At Martin Tech
 Two Greenville residents were named to President's List and the Honor Roll at Martin Technical Institute for the fall quarter.

Clark Bainbridge, enrolled in forest management, was included on the President's List, while James E. Godwin, studying fish and wildlife management, was listed on the honor roll.

To be included on the President's List, a student must maintain an overall average of 90 or above. To be eligible for the Honor Roll, a student must maintain an average of 85 or above.

Navigator Craig Jacobsen (Austin, Tex.) never looks at the plane's compass.

"If you were to trust your compass down here, you'd end up flying over there," he explained, pointing off towards the forbidding Royal Society Mountains looming off to the right 130 degrees divergent from our course.

Penguin Payload
 The loadmasters never know whether they're going to get a penguin, congressman or a tractor as the payload. Randall Pack (Sparta, Tenn) shook his head and chuckled about the time a crate of emperor penguins was brought aboard.

"They were all in a crate and the guys felt sorry for them after they were airborne and decided to let them out to waddle around," Pack said. "Trying to catch the penguins afterwards was a bad enough job, but it was nothing compared to the clean-up job of penguin manure spread all over the plane's compass.

Reception Will Be Held Friday For Art Show
 A reception is being held Friday evening beginning at 7:00 p.m. for the annual Faculty Art Show of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

The reception will be open to the public and is being held at Kate Lewis Gallery, Whichard Building, on campus at Wright Circle.

Works of art by faculty members of the School of Art are being featured, to include paintings, drawings, prints, sculpture and other media.

The annual show will be on view during January and can be seen during normal business hours for Whichard Building. There is no admission charge.

the place."

The first flight into the pole each year makes the crew the most popular people in all Antarctica, Pack said.

"We're the first people they've seen in about 10 months and we're bringing them the first mail they've had since the previous February. Do they ever love us!"

Lighthouses From Nature
 CHICAGO (UPI) — The first "lighthouses" were provided by nature.

Smoke and fire from volcanoes, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, served to guide sailors from the earliest times. The first lighthouse ever constructed was a massive 400-foot tower in Egypt, built about 280 B.C.

Loadmaster Willard Click (Taylor, Tex.) said the weirdest cargo to the pole was 13 lemons, each one carried by an arriving passenger on the first flight for radioman Donald Lusaur of Woonsocket, R.I.

"Lusaur had been broadcasting for weeks about his cravings for a lemon," Click said. "Each disembarking passenger ceremoniously presented him with a lemon, and Lusaur cut them in half and ate the whole 13 before even opening his mail."

South Pole Attempts To Move North

By ROBERT C. MILLER
SOUTH POLE STATION, Antarctic (UPI) — Things about the South Pole you might have forgotten or never known: The darn thing moves, about a foot a week. In a northerly direction.

The altitude at the pole is 9,000 feet, but the land mass upon which it rests is below sea level. That's because there is an estimated two miles of ice beneath the pole. But National Science Foundation geologists say that if the ice were to melt, the removal of all that billions of tonnage would cause the pressurized land mass to rise, and the pole would end up above sea level.

On a real hot, summer day—around mid-January—the mercury bubbles up to nearly zero. But it's not the coldest spot on earth. The Russian station at Vosok, near the South Magnetic Pole, holds that Chamber of Commerce achievement with an official low reading of 126.9 degrees below zero. The lowest temperatures at the American South Pole station run close to minus 100 degrees.

Nearly 200 Americans live and work at the pole during the 10 weeks of "summer" and a couple dozen will spend the winter here without seeing, touching or smelling another human from Valentine Day to about Thanksgiving. And at times they won't hear any other voices except their own when the frequent blackouts cut off all communication with the outside world, often for days at a time.

The American flag is raised and lowered only once a year here at South Pole station. It comes down when the sun sets and the long antarctic night begins, and is raised when the sun reappears again for the first time.

The South Pole was discovered on December 14, 1911, by Roald Amundsen who won the race because he used dogs for both locomotion and food for survival. The Englishman Robert Scott and his disappointed party reached the Pole a month later, Jan. 17, 1912, only to find the Norwegian flag and Amundsen's vacated tent still standing. Scott and his party perished in their vain attempt to return to their McMurdo Sound base.

The pole is one of the healthiest places in the world; there are practically no germs in the frozen, dry air. But when pole residents return to civilization they are highly susceptible to disease, particularly colds and pneumonia as their systems have temporarily lost their immunity to bacteria.

There are three South Pole markers. The one planted by Amundsen lies buried in the glacial ice more than half a mile north of the spot where the pole is today. The striped barber pole with the mirrored glass ball on top has also been moved by the slow-moving glacial ice field from where it was planted during the 1957-58 Geophysical year. Only a red flag on the end of a willowy bamboo pole now marks the exact location of the pole.

By ROBERT C. MILLER
SOUTH POLE STATION, Antarctic (UPI) — Things about the South Pole you might have forgotten or never known: The darn thing moves, about a foot a week. In a northerly direction.

The altitude at the pole is 9,000 feet, but the land mass upon which it rests is below sea level. That's because there is an estimated two miles of ice beneath the pole. But National Science Foundation geologists say that if the ice were to melt, the removal of all that billions of tonnage would cause the pressurized land mass to rise, and the pole would end up above sea level.

On a real hot, summer day—around mid-January—the mercury bubbles up to nearly zero. But it's not the coldest spot on earth. The Russian station at Vosok, near the South Magnetic Pole, holds that Chamber of Commerce achievement with an official low reading of 126.9 degrees below zero. The lowest temperatures at the American South Pole station run close to minus 100 degrees.

Nearly 200 Americans live and work at the pole during the 10 weeks of "summer" and a couple dozen will spend the winter here without seeing, touching or smelling another human from Valentine Day to about Thanksgiving. And at times they won't hear any other voices except their own when the frequent blackouts cut off all communication with the outside world, often for days at a time.

The American flag is raised and lowered only once a year here at South Pole station. It comes down when the sun sets and the long antarctic night begins, and is raised when the sun reappears again for the first time.

The South Pole was discovered on December 14, 1911, by Roald Amundsen who won the race because he used dogs for both locomotion and food for survival. The Englishman Robert Scott and his disappointed party reached the Pole a month later, Jan. 17, 1912, only to find the Norwegian flag and Amundsen's vacated tent still standing. Scott and his party perished in their vain attempt to return to their McMurdo Sound base.

World Is Watching Black Mayor Of Los Angeles

By JACK V. FOX
 LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The question put to Mayor Thomas Bradley was whether there had been any big surprises during his first six months in office as the black chief executive of the nation's third largest city.

"The only major surprise has been the interest all cross the country and all around the world in what has happened in Los Angeles," Bradley said.

"It has produced an overwhelming amount of requests for appearances on my part. At one time, I was getting 100 invitations a day. Now it's down to about 85 a day."

"I've had to resist the temptation to accept appearances outside the city and for the first six months I've just said no to all of them."

Relaxed, Confident
 Tom Bradley, on the half-year anniversary of taking office last July 6, appears a relaxed and confident man although his city has been hit harder than most by the energy crisis and has many other problems which have been only dented.

"I'm very happy about the way things have been going," he said.

"I felt that as I started my administration there would be an extraordinary amount of attention focused on how well I performed. There were people in this city who said, 'Well, he's been elected now but can he really govern?'

"And I wanted to make a good start so that we could put that question behind us. I'm pleased to say that the cooperation, the help which has come from every element in the community, clearly indicates that we have overcome that particular obstacle."

"People now look on Tom Bradley as the mayor, not the black mayor."

back to work, promised to give them greater police protection on their routes and then laid it on the line to the black community that it was they themselves who were going to suffer from lack of public transportation if the attacks were not halted.

Obligation to People

"Yes, I think that is one of the most important things I have done," Bradley said.

"It was one of those actions which demonstrated my own belief that even though I didn't have legal authority over the RID or their drivers that I felt an obligation on behalf of the people of Los Angeles to try to resolve that particular problem.

"So I did get involved. And it established in the minds of people that here's a guy who does what he says."

Bradley was asked about difficulties that other blacks have had as mayors of big cities, among them Carl Stokes in Cleveland, and whether race over the long run could be an obstacle in governing.

Irrelevant Factors
 "Whether that is so in other parts of the country, I am really in no position to say. I think as I achieve success here that question will not be relevant in other parts of the country. I think it's going to be beneficial because when that's finally done I think we'll be able to get over our hangups about these irrelevant factors that become a part of political factors."

What about Watergate? Does the mayor think it helped him oust incumbent Sam Yorty who had served 12 years?

"I think Watergate added to the climate that had been developing about distrust of public officials so it did help in my case," he said.

"I think that all who serve in public office have in some ways been affected by the loss of confidence in and faith in publicly elected officials at every level of government. And I think we all have a responsibility in our own areas to try to restore that confidence."

Inevitably the question came up: Will Tom Bradley be a candidate for national office, perhaps as early as 1976?

Black Veep
 "It is flattering to hear people say that or suggest it," the mayor said. "I have not given any thought to it whatsoever.

"I believe my responsibilities to all the cities of this country as president of the National League of Cities and the job of mayor of Los Angeles will keep me so busy that I'll really not have time to think of aspirations for any other office."

"I've always taken the position that if you do a good job in whatever it is you are engaged in at the moment that the future will take care of itself."

"I haven't thought about higher office so far as my own plans and aspirations are concerned but I do believe that in my lifetime we have a chance of seeing a black elected as vice president."

What about president?
 Bradley laughed.

"I'd like to stop at that rung in the ladder," he said. "I think that would be a major step up."

MAYOR THOMAS BRADLEY chats with Mrs. Ann McClanahan, 94, in his office where once a month he meets with the people of Los Angeles for five-minute sessions. (UPI Telephoto)

Best Time For Listing Taxes

"Now is the time to list your taxes," Phillip Michaels, Pitt County Tax Supervisor declares. "Tax listers are not rushed at this time and listing now will save people standing in long lines the last few days of January."

Michaels said listing hours in the tax office at the Pitt County Courthouse are from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 8:30 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

These hours also apply to the other listing places in the county.

People listing taxes are reminded that they will need to have social security number and automobile registration with them at the time of listing.

In addition, Michaels reminds persons over 65 with a 1973 income of less than $5,000 that they are eligible for a special lower property tax rate in certain instances. To qualify, eligible persons must fill in a declaration each calendar year.

Although the date for making such a declaration is later than the January 31 date for regular listing, Michaels urges people in this category to make this declaration at the same time they make their regular listing.

For this, he said, the person claiming this lower rate should bring with them information on their 1973 income.

Telethon Is Planned By Heart Ass'n

Heart Association leaders from Pitt and 11 other Eastern North Carolina counties have laid plans for an 18-hour telethon to be conducted on WCTI-TV Feb. 23-24.

According to Dean Evelyn Perry, president of the Pitt County Heart Association, the telethon will support the Heart Sunday residential solicitation Feb. 24. It will present television viewers with a comprehensive picture of the Association's activities.

Featured will be entertainment by ABC network television personalities as well as outstanding local performers. All the performers will contribute their time and talents, at no cost to the Heart Fund, and air time and production will be donated by WCTI-TV and its staff.

Auditions for the Telethon will be held at the WCTI-TV studios in New Bern each Monday and Tuesday evening beginning Jan. 14. Any person or group wishing to audition should contact Ray Horn at the station for an appointment.

During the telethon, beginning at 11:15 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 23, viewers will be asked to welcome Heart Sunday workers and to pledge contributions to the Heart Fund, either in person at the tv station or by telephone. A pickup service for contributions also will be operated by volunteers in a 12-county area around New Bern.

N. C. Heart Association representatives attributed a $50,000 increase in Heart Sunday contributions last year to the telethon.
