If Incriminating, Jaworski Will Not Wait On Ruling

Will Present Nixon Evidence

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Saturday he will present any incriminting evidence about President Nixon to the grand jury without waiting for a final ruling on whether it is possible to indict an incumbent President.

Taking a much more aggressive public stance than his predecessor Archibald Cox—whom Nixon fired in October—Jaworski told reporters at his first formal news briefing:

"If I came across something involving the President, I would feel an obligation to present it to the grand jury."

Jaworski was asked if he would permit an indictment to be handed down against the President and then let the courts decide whether there was legal grounds for doing so.

"Yes, it's conceivable," he said, adding that the same applied to the possibility of naming Nixon as an unindicted coconspirator.

"I'm under no personal restraints of any kind," he said. "I can arrive at my own judgment."

The White House declined to comment on Jaworski's statement. An aide said the White House already had explained in court briefs its position that the President cannot be indicted until he is impeached and convicted by the Senate.

Jaworski also said:

—Although the White House so far has turned over every tape and document it has found that Jaworski requested, "nothing was handed me on a silver platter ... they haven't volunteered anything."

—He will not give to the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment investigation White House material that he receives, and cautioned the Senate Watergate committee against release of any report that might jeopardize the prosecution.

—Although he did not offer a "deal" to John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former No. 2 aide, last Thursday, there was some preliminary plea bargaining with Ehrlichman's attorney.

—He has made no changes in the staff of 78, including 37 lawyers, he inherited from Cox, and he is sticking by his Dec. 31 statement that indictments may be forthcoming in January or February.

"Any report that I am being held hostage by the staff is absolute poppycock," Jaworski said. "At my age and place in life, it is somewhat foolish to suggest that I would even permit myself to be put in that position."

Jaworski, 68, of Houston, past president of the American College of Trial Lawyers and the American Bar Association, sat at a conference table for separate half-hour briefings with several groups of reporters. He talked calmly, occasionally glancing at notes.

Telephone Tap Story Denied

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — White House officials Saturday branded as "inaccurate" a published report that Henry A. Kissinger ordered a telephone tapped in 1971 in the office of then Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported that Kissinger, in his capacity as President Nixon's national security affairs adviser, ordered the tap after a microphone was discovered in the office of one of his aides, Wayne Smith.

Smith's office was the site of all technical planning for Kissinger's negotiations on Vietnam and the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the newspaper said.

President Nixon's aides denied the Sun-Times story as "incorrect" in all its aspects.

One of Laird's closest aides said Laird "had no indication his phones were tapped" while he was in the Pentagon. Laird will be leaving his present post as presidential counselor on Feb. 1.

The wiretapping report was one in a series of news accounts suggesting an atmosphere of suspicion between Kissinger's National Security Council staff and the military hierarchy.

Tribune Claims Nixon Wanted To Fire Moorer

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Tribune reported in its Sunday edition that President Nixon wanted to fire Adm. Thomas Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in 1971 because of military spying on Henry Kissinger.

At that time Kissinger, now secretary of state, was Nixon's national security adviser. The Tribune said that White House spies made the report to Nixon.

It said accounts received by the newspaper, "obtained independently from two separate sources, appears to substantiate reports from other sources that the White House plumbers had produced evidence indicating unauthorized information was passed to Moorer and other military officials."

"An angry President Nixon wanted to fire Adm. Thomas Moorer...after White House spies told him that military spies were spying on Henry Kissinger," the Tribune said.

"It is not known what changed President Nixon's mind, but the answer appears to lie in facts surrounding the investigation still being kept secret by the White House as a national security matter."

The Tribune earlier reported that there was a military spying operation within the National Security Council. The White House suggested Friday that a Navy enlisted man was solely responsible for deliberate leaks of classified information.

According to accounts of the spying operation given to the newspaper, it said, some of the information the spies got later leaked to the press. It was to find the sources of these leaks that the "plumbers" unit was established in 1971.

Bloodmobile To Visit Ayden

Pitt Blood Chairman Billy Ross reported that the Bloodmobile will be in Ayden on Monday for an 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. visit.

Ross said that area residents are urged to visit the Bloodmobile, which will be set up in the Ayden Community Building.

The chairman noted that the national headquarters of the American Red Cross has announced that prospective blood donors who have a history of treatment for an illness diagnosed as malaria may now be accepted for donation for whole blood use after continuous residence in the United States for three years without a relapse.

Ross said that prospective donors who have been in a malarious area and have had suppressive treatment for malaria with anti malaria drugs must still wait three years after leaving the malarious area and after stopping the anti malaria drugs before they may be accepted for whole blood donation.

Under the old regulation, persons who had contacted malaria were classed as permanently disqualified but extensive research has indicated that malarial infection is generally burned out after three years, it was explained.

Capital Punishment Protest

RALEIGH (AP)—A coalition of citizens groups planned to hold a rally here today to culminate a three-day protest against capital punishment in North Carolina.

The rally organizer, the Rev. Leon White of the North Carolina Virginia Commission for Racial Justice, said a band of about 60 marchers who left Tarboro Friday were spending last night in Wilson.

White said the marchers would drive to Raleigh today and march to Memorial Auditorium from the city limits.

The march began in Tarboro because it was there that three young blacks were recently sentenced to death for raping a white female.

Among the speakers scheduled for the rally are state Reps. J.J. Johnson, D-Robeson and H.M. Michaux, D-Durham.

Tunisian And Libyan Merger Possibility

TUNIS (UPI) — Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba and Libyan leader Col. Moammer Khadafy announced plans Saturday for a merger of their nations under a single head of state. The merged nation would be called the Islamic Arab Republic.

The merger declaration, read over Tunis radio by Tunisian Foreign Minister Mohammed Masmoudi, set popular referendum in the neighboring countries for Jan. 18 to sanction the union.

It said the new nation "will have single constitution, a single flag, a single president, a single army, the same legislative, executive and judicial powers."

Tunisians took the news calmly. There were no public celebrations reported. But Tripoli radio said Libyans demonstrated in the streets of their capital in jubilation over the announcement.

Khadafy, considered one of the most militant Arab leaders, was frustrated last year in efforts to merge with Egypt, which borders Libya on the east. Tunisia, a small nation and one of the more moderate Arab states in the confrontation with Israel, is on Libya's western border.

Libya was originally scheduled to unite with Egypt last Sept. 1, but Cairo, apparently fearing the influence of Khadafy's "popular revolution," agreed only on a merger by stages.

Bourguiba and Khadafy signed the declaration at a resort hotel on the Tunisian island of Djerba. It set no fixed timetable for union or procedure for selecting the president.

British Crisis Deepens

By NAT GIBSON

LONDON (UPI) — British Rail sought Saturday to avert a new nationwide train strike in Britain's worst economic crisis since World War II, but company officials said tthey saw little chance of a solution being found in time.

A similar stalemate hardened in Britain's coal mines where a two-month-old ban on overtime has caused the government to impose a nationwide three-day work week.

Government officials said the reduced hours have already thrown a million factory workers out of their jobs and predicted the figure could rise to three million.

The nation's 29.000 train engineers, who ended a 24-hour mass walkout Friday, have threatened a new one-day strike unless British Rail resumes negotiations on their wage demands.

Railroad officials said this could not be done without the approval of two associated unions in the rail industry and that contacts with those unions have proved unfruitful so far.

Opposition Labor party leader Harold Wilson accused a cabinet minister Saturday of undermining a trade union proposal to end the coal mine dispute before it could be discussed.

His complaint came in response to a statement by Consumer Affairs Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe that the offer made by the giant Trades Union Congress (TUC) contained no substance.

"His (Howe's) contribution was a determined attempt to discredit the TUC response," Wilson told a party meeting.

Wilson urged Prime Minister Edward Heath to repudiate Howe's statement before meeting with TUC leaders to discuss the initiative Monday.

In its proposals, the TUC said if the government agreed to the wage demands of the 260,000 miners the settlement would not be used as a lever to press for bigger pay boosts in other industries.

Med. School Among Issues Facing Gen. Assembly

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Expansion of the East Carolina University Medical School, improved care for mental patients, proposed "no-fault" automobile insurance, and the question of tax relief for North Carolina tax payers loom as some of the big issues to come before the General Assembly when the legislative body begins its 1974 session in Raleigh Wednesday, according to local House and Senate members.

"We all know that the East Carolina University Medical School issue will be one of the major issues," Sen. Julian Allsbrook of Roanoke Rapids emphasized.

"I'm hoping that there is enough support to adopt a four-year medical school, but unquestionably we will take the next step. . .add a second year" to the one-year program at ECU," Allsbrook said. "I can't see refusing to go on and provide for the health needs of our people.

"I con't conceive of anything having greater priority over the health needs of our people. And I don't see any conflict between Chapel Hill and East Carolina (medical schools). . .improve both of them to the point that we are producing more doctors to go into the rural areas."

"I think we will be successful in establishing a two-year medical school at East Carolina University with the idea of establishing a degree-granting school at ECU in the future," said Sen. Vernon White of Winterville.

"With local cooperation, I see no problem in getting an AHEC (Area Health Education Center—expansion of that program has been recommended by the UNC Board of Governors as opposed to expansion of the ECU School of Medicine at this time) program for Greenville. . .along with the proposal for expanding AHEC programs throughout the state."

If the legislature does expand the ECU to a two-year program as Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville forsees, and if an AHEC center is established in Greenville as proposed, "We will have the basis of a four-year medical school in Greenville," Bundy said. "I think we have a good chance for the two-year school now, with the possibility of a four-year school down the road."

According to Bundy, one of the biggest issues will be the medical situation, tied in with the ECU medical school."

According to House member Horton Rountree of Greenville, "It's a matter of divorcing this school (the ECU medical program) from the UNC school in the future. . .increasing enrollment (at ECU) from 20 to 40 students. . .appropriating monies for this. . .build a new basic science building in the neighborhood of $14 million. . .and expand the school from one-year to two-years for the year 1975-1976."

"I think we will do it," he said.

Some of the most important legislation to come from the 1974 General Assembly, according to White, "will be in the area of mental health. . .in terms of programs for the mentally retarded, alcoholism and drugs."

He said recommendations will be made "as to long range programs pertaining to mental health that I'm sure will improve our mental health systems.

"This is an area of State Government that has needed study and additional funding in the past. We have neglected to carry out our responsibilities in the past and this will be one of the number one problems to come before the General Assembly in 1974."

Bundy and the other legislators agree.

According to Bundy, "There will certainly be a change in direction from that mental health has taken over the past years." He said changes might involve establishing more mental health treatment centers so patients could be closer to home.

"I'm sure no fault insurance will be another big issue in the 1974 session," White said, "but I don't have an idea as to what the outcome will be." And Allsbrook mirrored Bundy's sentiments. "I know that public liability and property damage insurance will be a substantial issue, but I don't know what the majority sentiment would be at this time. I don't know how far it will go."

"That's got to come up," Bundy said of the no-fault question.

"Rep. Gerald Arnold (heading a subcommittee studying the issue) seems to think they have adopted something acceptable to both the House and Senate. And it appears to me that with the thinking of the people, some type of no fault insurance will come out of this General Assembly."

Rountree, too, thinks a no-fault bill will be passed.

"I think there will be a modified no-fault bill," he said. "The real problem," Rountree noted, "is the threshold. . .whether $750 or $1,500 or $5,000 on any one injury. . .and to be able to sue over and beyond that. That's basically what the hold up is."

And the question of a possible reduction in taxes for North Carolinians will confront legislators in Raleigh in 1974.

"If I was going to forecast," White said, "I would say that there will be no tax reduction during this session of the General Assembly. . .due to the economy being in such an unstable condition at the present time."

Likewise, Allsbrook, with a view to the present economic picture, said "No, I don't think there will be or should be. . ." a tax reduction in light of present conditions.

Bundy, too, tied a possible tax reduction to the economy, bur failed to rule out the possibility of reduced taxes.

"In view of the fact that apparently. . .and I say apparently, the state may have a surplus, the Finance Committee of the House has been giving some thought to the possibility of some tax reduction."

Bundy said the House committee may recommend to the General Assembly that the current inventory tax be "reduced 20 per cent per year over a five year period—to do away with it." But the legislator emphasized, "any tax cut will depend on how the situation looks," later on.

The energy crisis could affect revenues, he explained, noting that "if a lot of people are thrown out of work and the income and sales tax revenues are reduced, that might call for a second look at tax reductions. We'll have to see what the revenue picture appears to be when the budget is adopted."

Rountree explained the House tax package

Hunt In Favor Of ECU Med School 2 Yr. Expansion

RALEIGH (AP)—Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt lists expansion of the East Carolina University medical school among his legislative goals for 1974.

Hunt, in a speech to a Raleigh civic club Friday, said he favored expansion of the ECU curriculum to two years.

He said the eventual degree-granting ECU school should concentrate on training family care physicians who take their third and fourth year of medical training in clinics around the state.

Shortly before Hunt spoke, the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, meeting in Chapel Hill, resolved to press on with their opposition to the ECU expansion despite rising legislative sentiment in favor of it.

Hunt said he did not feel legislative passage of the ECU proposal would undermine the position of the board. He said the issue of health care and delivery was one that transcended the university system and demanded legislative attention.

Hunt also called for passage of land use planning bills and campaign financing reform during the 1974 session, which begins next Wednesday.

Seeks Disengagement Of Mid East Forces

By United Press International

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, seeking disengagement of Egyptian and Israeli forces from the tense Suez Canal front, arrived in Israel Saturday evening after "extremely good" talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

As Kissinger sought to bring about an accord, U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim warned in New York that the situation at the canal was "potentially explosive" and called for "a substantial measure of disengagement."

Following Kissinger's meeting with Sadat, a highly placed Egyptian official told UPI, "I think I can see an opening in the disengagement situation. I cannot imagine Dr. Kissinger coming here empty-handed or that he would gamble on a losing proposition."

A high American official accompanying Kissinger said the secretary was seeking an agreement in principle that Egyptian and Israeli military negotiators at the Geneva conference could turn into a concrete accord.

Making his third trip to the Middle East since the October Arab-Israeli war, Kissinger conferred with Sadat at the upper Nile resort of Aswan for three hours Saturday after a 90-minute session Friday night.

"The talks were extremely good," Kissinger told newsmen, but he did not elaborate.

Tahsin Bashir, assistant press adviser to President Sadat, said, "The president explained the Egyptian and Arab stands clearly to the American Secretary of State."

On arriving at Israel's Ben Gurion International Airport, Kisssinger told newsmen, "I look forward to full, frank, and I know, useful talks with my friend the foreign minister (Abba Eban) and all my other friends in the Israeli cabinet."

A Syrian military communique said Israel suffered "some casualties" in a brief artillery duel on the northern sector of the cease-fire lines Saturday afternoon.

A U.N. spokesman in Cairo said Saturday that Israeli forces Friday stopped a convoy of non-military supplies to encircled Suez City and Egyptian 3rd Army troops on the Suez Canal's east bank.

The spokesman, Rudolf Stajduhar of Yugoslvia, said the convoy was stopped at noon after Egyptian troops in the Ismailia area, 50 miles north of Suez City, fired at Israeli positions.

VC Claims SVN Bombing Raids

By ALAN DAWSON

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong charged Saturday that South Vietnamese warplanes bombed a field station of the international peace-keeping force and a planned site for the release of prisoners of war.

A Viet Cong spokesman, Senior Col. Vo Dong Giang, said government warplanes bombed Duc Co, 215 miles north of Saigon, for 4½ hours Friday although "Saigon knows very well there is an ICCS team there."

In reality, only two Viet Cong assigned to the four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) live at Duc Co. ICCS members from Iran, Indonesia, Poland, Hungary and representatives from South Vietnam have yet to move to the Central Highlands village.

He also charged that South Vietnam Friday bombed Duc Nghiep, one of 11 sites agreed upon in principle for the release of more than 4,000 prisoners still held by South Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Giang told a news conference the prisoner reception point, not far from Duc Co, had been destroyed in the bombing raid. He said no prisoners were there at the time.

South Vietnamese spokesmen were not available for comment. But the Saigon command announced last week it had ordered stepped-up bombing raids behind Communist lines to prevent a nationwide offensive this spring.

In Phnom Penh, a former prime minister of Cambodia under exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk called on President Lon Nol Saturday to leave the country so peace could be reestablished.

Son Sann, 62, a respected leader who is considered neutral in the war between the government and Communist-led Khmer Rouge guerrillas, said he sent Lon Nol a letter three days ago asking him to go to the United States for "medical treatment" so the deadlock between the government and insurgents could be broken. Lon Nol suffered a stroke early in 1971.

CONSERVING FUEL?—This may look like a new idea for conserving fuel, but these men are actually using the only method of transportation available following this week's heavy rains. The men, believe it or not, are traveling on U. S. Route 250 north of here. Water with depths of four to five feet covered the highway and badly damaged many houses in the area. (AP Wirephoto)

World Energy Conference Forseen During 1974

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The way things are shaping up, a world conference on energy problems may be an urgent necessity before the year is out.

Such a conference might be limited to the non-Communist world, but it wouldn't be at all surprising if the Soviet Union would be interested in sitting in. It, too, has considerable stakes in what happens to the world's reserves of oil.

But there's much more to the picture than oil. There is a broad spectrum of problems dealing with the interplay of the energy situation with the over-all supply of vital raw materials around the world. The two are going to be closely linked.

The United States needs 13 essential metals for its industry. In the case of half of these, it must import. In another dozen years, it may be, on balance, import-dependent for 12 of the 13.

If those materials should be unavailable, the resulting dislocations could make today's U.S. oil crisis look like kid stuff, and the rest of the advanced industrial world is in a similar situation.

Where are those metals? Much of them are in what is called the Third World. Thus, if interlocking problems of energy and raw materials are going to be examined, how can the nations owning much of the raw materials be left out of the picture?

President Nixon's recent initiative sought a Feb. 11 meeting of the United States, Canada, Japan, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway and West Germany to consider cooperative approaches to the enormous problems posed by the energy crisis.

Thereafter, the United States hopes that the big oil-gobbling nations can meet with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, to whom Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has directed a warning: It is not in their interests "to bring about a worldwide depression."

Initial reaction to the consumer-nation meeting has been generally positive, though it generated some grumbling about the fact that three Common Market oil consumers were left out.

The second phase of the initiative, the consumer-OPEC meeting, has inspired less enthusiasm.

Could Wind Up Investigation If Had Tapes

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—Sen. Sam Ervin said Saturday if the White House would give the Senate Watergate committee five taped conversations with John W. Dean III, the committee would bring its investigation "to a speedy end."

The North Carolina Democrat said the committee has been trying to get the tapes since last July, when the former White House counsel appeared before the investigating group.

Ervin's remarks came in an interview with Ken Koontz of Charlotte television station WBTV in the little community of Troutman, where the senator appeared for the dedication of a furniture plant.

Ervin said he would have to be certain the tapes had not been altered and that there were no gaps in them.

He declined comment about impeachment proceedings against President Nixon that now are being considered in the House.

Ervin said the administration has held up his committee's investigation by refusing to cooperate. He added that he still wants President Nixon to appear before the committee to answer some questions.

Last week, Vice President Gerald Ford said he might support some kind of compromise between the President and the Watergate committee, but the White house quickly repudiated Ford's comment.

Ervin returns to Washington Sunday.

Mine Workers Believe Safety Compromised

By DENNIS MORABITO

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — American coal miners believe their safety is being compromised by the federal government, and the issue is so sensitive it could result in a power lag this year along the lines of Great Britain's.

A U.S. Supreme Court decision Jan. 8 forbidding the right to strike over safety issues has deepened that mistrust.

The ruling said the United Mine Workers' (UMW) current contract with the coal industry contains what amounts to a "no-strike" clause requiring arbitration local disputes including safety.

The decision reversed a U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals ruling upholding the union's contention that safety was outside the realm of arbitration.

Union sources say the Supreme Court ruling offers them some latitude and that miners will always walk out of unsafe shafts anyway.

"There's no way you can arbitrate safety," said a union source who asked to remain unidentified. "If we obey the Supreme Court we're guilty of violating a higher law regarding human life."

"If the industry thinks it can use this decision to nullify a miners walkout," said another, "then their just not going to have miners."

The issue could result in a showdown with the industry when bargaining begins next month on a new contract.

Bing May Need Surgery

BURLINGAME, Calif. (UPI) — Bing Crosby may undergo surgery to remove from his lung a golf ball-sized abscess but the crooner's doctor said a five-man medical team still is baffled at the cause of the illness.

"From the beginning this has not been a cut and dried case," Dr. Stanley Hanfling said. "Medically, it is an unusual problem."

Crosby, 69, underwent a bronchoscopy Saturday. Wires with a light bulb and other devices were inserted through the throat and into the lung where for the second time tissue and fluid were obtained for analysis.

Material from a biopsy Wednesday was being cultured in a laboratory. The results had been expected in two days, but Hanfling said the cells were growing very slowly, and the bacteria or virus causing the entertainer's problem has not been identified.

Crosby, admitted to Peninsula Hospital New Year's Eve, developed pneumonia, and then an abscess. He failed to respond to a broad range of antibiotics.

Not having identified the infection cause, Hanfling said doctors must choose between a "wait and see policy" and "a direct surgical approach."

But he said there was "not enough unanimity among the experts at this time" to decide whether to operate. He said Crosby was resting comfortably and medically was in good condition for surgery.

Katherine Graham Gets Press Award

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Katherine Graham, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, said today that the press would become "the nursemaid of a weak and immature society" if it suppressed bad and unsettling news.

Accepting the John Peter Zenger Award, Mrs. Graham said that "the founding fathers gave the press a very different job: to inform the people and promote the free flow of facts and ideas, however untimely or challenging or disagreeable those facts may be."

The award is made each year by the University of Arizona in recognition of service in the cause of freedom of information. Mrs. Graham received it for The Post's reporting of the Watergate scandal.

In an address prepared for the Arizona Newspapers Association convention, Mrs. Graham disputed those who say that "somehow the press created the agony of Watergate in the sense of having caused the nation's turmoil.

"The President is so weakened, he can hardly govern — the argument goes — and this the doing of the press.

"We disagree — profoundly. For the most important fact, and the only really relevant fact about the array of offenses known as Watergate, is that they happened."

N. C. Committee Drops Corporate Contributions

RALEIGH (AP)—After a barrage of criticism, a North Carolina legislative committee has voted against allowing corporations to contribute to political campaigns.

The action came Friday as the legislature's joint elections laws committee worked on the final drafting of a bill to reform the state's campaign financing and reporting laws.

The committee also added language to the bill which would make it more difficult for business and professional associations and labor organizations to influence candidates with their contributions.

It rejected efforts to inser language in the bill which would require candidates to list the occupations of their contributors and the cumulative total of their donations.

The bill, according to Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, is almost ready for introduction. It will require at least one public hearing during the upcoming legislative session before it could be adopted, Messer said.

Messer had told the committee members that the members of the General Assembly had been nearly unanimous in their condemnation of the corporate contributions proposal, which drew heated criticism when the committee approved it last fall.

Messer said later that he felt corporations would simply channel their contributions through individuals and that it would be harder for voters to tell where the money was coming from than it would be under a system where corporations could give their money openly. "But that's the way people wanted it," he said.

The changes in the bill to regulate fund-raising by associations would affect groups like the Political Action Committee of Educators, the fund-raising and political arm of the state's school teachers.

The revised bill would require PACE to tell its members whose campaign would get their contributions before they solicited donations.

In the past, organizations like PACE have been able to fill their campaign chests, then go to the various candidates and see which ones were willing to adopt positions favorable to teachers in return for the donations.

The changes the committee rejected would have brought the bill into line with federal law, which already requires candidates to report the occupations of their contributors and the cumulative totals.

The employee's of the Greenville Post Office selected Mrs. Linda Mills as the employee for the month of December. Linda will receive a $25.00 cash award for this honor.

Linda joined the Postal Service as a Clerk-Steno in August 1970. Linda has been a loyal and faithful employee, and has the respect of all of the employees of the post office. Always wearing a smile and knowledgeable of the job she has to do Linda greets the public with a warm willingness to answer every question or complaint that they might have.

Linda is a graduate of Chicod High School and is married to Harry Mills of Black Jack where they make their home. Linda and Harry have a daughter, Amy.

The Post Office is very proud of Linda and is very fortunate to have someone of her caliber in the position that she holds.

Paid Tribute To Hunter

For the tribute banquet held Thurdsday night to honor Greenville's Al Hunter, one of the initial planners in organizing the event was George Garrett. Garrett, a candidate for the City Council some years ago, was one of the speakers at the banquet.

Another speaker was Miss Esther Porteur who spoke about Hunter's interest in church work.

Mrs. Eve Rogers, a local television personality, also joined in the salute on Thursday night to Hunter.

. . . . Issues Face General Assembly

The package, he said, recommended by the Finance Committee, deals basically with inventory tax relief, and thus affects "mainly manufacturers and wholesalers. . .over a period of several years." He said such a gradual reduction in inventory tax is designed "to give counties and municipalities a chance to adjust."

Roundtree noted too that, "in the package also is provisions for increasing the exemption for elderly people 65 and over and for a tax release for everybody."

He explained, "Your state tax schedule provides for a charge of 3 per cent on the first $2,000." The committee recommendations call for a reduction to "two per cent. . .so everybody will get a break," the legislator explained.

Rountree noted that "public education people and the governor are against it (any tax reductions) of course. They say we don't know what the future holds for the economy and might need the money."

Others things too, will come before the law-makers in Raleigh.

"The coastal area management bill and the mountain area bill, along with a state-wide land management proposal," will be an issue, White explained. He predicted both the coastal and mountain bills "will become law in this session."

"Up to the present time," White noted, "I haven't seen any major opposition. Local people in the counties are concerned," but White explained, "local control is built within the bill itself."

The land use bill will be an issue, Rountree agrees. It affects "subdividers and land developers throughout North Carolina," he said, adding that "several capital improvements, particularly in higher education and also two new correctional buildings at $7.5 million each. . ." will be issues.

"We still have $7.5 million that was appropriated last spring. . .for a new medical school, and a recommendation for $7.5 million from the Advisory Budget Commission in the new budget for a total of $15 million. . ." for a basic science building for the ECU medical program.

Bundy also predicts a possible movement to speed up the state-wide kindergarden program, "if revenues will justify it."

According to White, the lawmakers will also be wrestling with the problem of "capital punishment, and "what to do with animal waste pollution," and a number of bills "attempting to regulate campaign contributions."

Along with other bills that would give additional powers to regional government organizations, White forsees a bill, that if enacted "would require the State of North Carolina to provide sufficient transportation to and from school in order to provide every student with a seat on a school bus."

"One of the major things," in Allsbrook's view, "is this question of violence on the streets. We've got to make our streets and homes safe and free from violence.

"We should spend whatever might be needed to do it. People can't work and children can't learn in an atmosphere of fear. Fear is one of the greatest and most destructive forces.

"We should put our real efforts behind doing what is necessary to protect against fear. . .eliminate violence and loss of life. . ."

But, Allsbrook emphasized, "there is nothing more necessary or worthshile than the health of our people.

"That's the reason," he said, "I'm so strong on a physical education program for grades K through six. Interest them in physical education. . .develop a sense of pride in themselves physically. . ." and it will help them strengthen their "physical and mental capacities," Allsbrook suggested.

Board Governors Direct Dees To Defend Its Stand

CHAPEL HILL (AP)—The state university system board of governors has directed its chairman to defend vigorously the board's medical education program which does not call for immediate expansion of the East Carolina University Medical School.

By a voice vote, the board approved a resolution directing Chairman William Dees Jr. of Goldsboro to take to the legislature, the people and the news media "those facts found by the board upon which the board of governors based its decisions in developing a program to meet the medical needs of the people of North Carolina."

"You can bend over backwards until can can become a jellyfish. This board has bent over backwards until it has become unfair to the people of North Carolina," former state Sen. Tom White of Kinston told his fellow board members.

The resolution came as the board made its first display of public irritation in the long debate over health care needs which has been highlighted by the drive of East Carolina University supporters to get a four-year, degree granting medical school for the Greenville campus.

The governors who have repeatedly voted down efforts to expand the ECU one-year medical training facility voted Nov. 16 for a system of area health education centers to broaden the training base for existing medical schools.

The issue is expected to be a major bone of contention during the legislative session which begins next Wednesday.

A joint legislative committee which has recommended expansion of the ECU facility to a two-year medical school met Thursday to draft legislation to do this.

David J. Whichard of Greenville, a member of the board of governors and a strong ECU supporter, objected Friday to the "speakup" resolution which was sponsored by William Johnson of Lillington. Whichard called the resolution unnecessary because Dees, as chairman, already had authority to speak for the board.

Whichard also contended the resolution would place the board in the position of saying "that all wisdom on medical education in North Carolina stems from the board."

But White rejected Whichard's argument. He said, "This resolution is made necessary by the intellectually dishonest interpretations of the action of this board. It's time for this board to stand up and assert itself."

Encouraging Progress Reports

Encouraging developments are taking place in the long fight to put the ECU medical school on a firm basis for growth into a full degree-granting school.

Two committees of the General Assembly have endorsed the expansion of the school. The committee actions will result in preparation of a bill for the 1974 General Assembly's consideration for expansion of the school and appropriation of the funds for a building.

The action of these committees is a boost for the ECU medical school efforts and it reflects the mood of the Legislature on this important issue.

Then Dr. William Cromartie, director of medical education for ECU at the Chapel Hill medical school, gave an encouraging progress report.

He said a report to the national accrediting committee should meet its requirements concerning accreditation standards for the ECU school.

Dr. Cromartie said about 40 Chapel Hill faculty members have been shifted to part-time teaching at ECU and new faculty will be recruited for the ECU school.

Dr. Cromartie also found the work of the first year group of students from ECU now at Chapel Hill "perfectly satisfactory" and the students now in school at ECU "are having a sound experience."

"The program is going along very well, as far as I'm concerned," Dr. Cromartie said.

Then last week former Gov. Bob Scott said he feels most legislators favor an expansion of the ECU medical school.

"It is my hope that the non-legislative experts who have been studying the matter will take the leadership and see to it that the ECU program is brought along, rather than allowed to wither and die on the vine," Scott said.

We, too, would like to see the UNC administration develop a positive program for development of the ECU medical school. We must face the fact, however, that ample funds were made available to the administration to study the matter during the past year. A study was made and still we have no plans from Chapel Hill to do anything more than continue the one-year program at ECU.

There are no plans for a building—something which must come soon since the medical school facilities are located in space needed for undergraduate and graduate science programs. No funds have been requested for increasing the students or adding a second year. In short, there is nothing on record anywhere, that we know of, which says that the UNC administration plans to do anything other than continue the present one year program with 20 students.

We wish it were otherwise, but given the situation the North Carolina Leigslature has no choice but to take forthright action so that the ECU medical school can be expanded to a degree granting school.

An Emergency Chief's Story

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Jim Page is a lanky, 37-year-old native of Los Angeles who became a fireman at 21, went to night school for 11 years to get a law degree and admittance to the California State Bar, became a battalion fire chief and wrote a book about fire department command procedures, was named operations chief of the paramedic rescue program in the sprawling 2,100 square-mile Los Angeles area, and wound up serving as technical advisor to Jack Webb's popular "Emergency" television series and writing scripts for shows.

He's planning a novel, now.

"I don't usually tell people all this. They look at me like I have horns growing out of my head," Page said.

Transplanted to North Carolina soil—his first foray outside the West Coast—as chief of the state's budding emergency medical care service, Page finds that his work in television now serves only one good purpose.

"It does give me a talking point with new people I'm meeting," he said.

Why Leave TV?

Why did he back off from what would look to most outsiders like a glamorous and lucrative television career?

Because that appearance of glamour and money is a thin veneer, Page explained.

"Hollywood, beneath the top-money producer level, is a land of limited influence.

"When you're needed, they hold you in high esteem. Then, when they get what they need out of you, they dump you in a hurry.

"It's a ruthless business, and it doesn't suit my independent nature at all. It's really a tedious business beneath that rather thin veneer of glamour," Page said.

"In fact, I enhanced by reputation by leaving. People looked at me in awe and hold me in high regard because it is such a rarity for somebody to just turn their backs and walk away from it."

Now traveling about the state meeting firemen, ambulance attendants, and volunteer rescue squadmen, Page feels he's dealing with real people for a change.

To what does he attribute the success of the "Emergency" series?

"It came at a time when people were looking for ordinary people to devote their inbred hero worship to. Americans have an innate characteristic to want to help their fellow man, and are eager and willing to help in times of distress.

"People can envision themselves in those television roles on "Emergency." Every Monday after a show was shown on Friday night my telephone would ring off, as many as 15 calls, from people wanting to know how they could get into a rescue job."

Budget Message Set

Agreement has finally been reached for Gov. Jim Holshouser to give his budget message to the General Assembly on Jan. 17—the day after the session begins.

The governor and leadership of both houses wanted to do that Jan. 7 and give the Appropriations Committee several days to get into gear before the session began.

But there were too many conflicts with scheduleing, so the Appropriations Committee voted to set the budget meeting on Jan. 14, two days before the session starts, but that conflicted with the governor's schedule.

Some lawmakers wondered loudly if the governor couldn't just sent a copy in the mail, and one even bothered to check the state Constitution and determined that no budget message is required in an off-year meeting of the General Assembly such as this—only at the regular session every two years.

Some legislators questioned whether the meeting to hear the governor would be a joint session of both houses or whether it should be held in the regular assembly room or the informal auditorium.

The original intent was to get a running start on the work ahead so the Legislature could adjourn early. If the result is an indication, it will be a long session indeed.

Don't Want To Move

Former Gov. Bob Scott listened recently to a lengthy report on a statewide survey of what Tar Heels like and dislike, including the fact that a large majority like the communities in which they live and have no desire to move.

At least that shows one thing, Scott quipped. "I didn't do anything during my administration which would make people want to leave."

The Long Arm Of The KGB

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—When news of the arrest of Lee Harvey Oswald for the assassination of President Kennedy reached Soviet leaders and the boss of the dread KGB, the vast Soviet secret police apparatus, a bomber was immediately dispatched from Moscow to Minsk by the frightened Kremlin.

The purpose: to retrieve Oswald's secret dossier in the KGB's office in Minsk (where Oswald had lived before returning to the U. Sl in June 1962) and fly it to Moscow for inspection. Terrified Kremlin leaders feared the dossier might conceivably disclose "some relationship" between the assassin and the KGB.

As it turned out, to the Kremlin's vast relief—according to KGB defector Yuri Nosenko's version in a new, soon to be published book on Soviet secret intelligence—the file showed no link. Nevertheless, this association between KGB and Oswals was another near-miss when the independent operations of the mighty Soviet secret police threatened disruption of world peace against the Kremlin's announced policy—a danger more prevalent in today's era of detente.

Writes author John Barron: "Nosenko states that two panels of psychiatrists independently examined Oswald at KGB behest and each concluded that, though not insane, he was abnormal. Accordingly, the KGB ordered that Oswald be watched but not recruited."

Oswald returned to the U. S. in June 1962, then sought reentry to the Soviet Union via the Soviet embassy in Cuba in September 1963. When the KGB blocked his return, he went to Dallas to prepare for his terrible deed.

That episode is brought to light in Barron's authoritative expose of the pervasive, international spy network. "KGB: The Secret Work of Soviet Secret Agents" (Readers Digest Press) is the first definitive study of this foreign espionage and internal state police apparatus written with assistance of western governments, including the U. S., West Germans, the Dutch and the British.

The reason for this unaccustomed help is in itself significant. After years of shrouding the public form scrutiny of Soviet spying, Western governments have come to realize little if any national security of the Western powers is involved. Obviously, KGB has all the threads of its own operations and would learn nothing from disclosure.

There is, moreover, a second, more ominous reason for the new desire by Western security agencies to have more information made public on vast KGB operations. This is the fact that KGB, confronting internal resistance to the Communist system arising from the Kremlin's policy of detente and expanding contacts with the West, is growing larger, more oppressive and more dangerous.

Consider these facts: the London-based Institute for the Study of Conflicts reported in 1973 that Soviet agents in Western European countries increased from 1,485 ten years ago to 2,146 last year. Three out of every four accredited Soviet "diplomats" in NATO countries are engaged in some form of spying.

To protect the rapidly growing Soviet trade bureaucracy from ideological taint, the Kremlin has installed as head of the Soviet chamber of commerce a top KGB official named Yevgenni Petrovich Pitrovranov.

"The contradiction between the public politics of detente and the secret machinations of the KGB," writes Barron, "can be seen in the realm of trade. While the Soviet Union solicits broader commercial ties with

PREJUDICE

Prejudice is one of the more devastating of the world's vices. The word means prejudging, or judging before one knows all the circumstances. It is bad enough to judge one's fellows with the complete dossier at hand, but to judge before one has reviewed all the facts is a mistake of tragic proportions.

Someone has said that prejudice is being down on what you are not up on. The more we know about an issue, the more judicious will our attitude probably be. The more we know about a person, the less likely we are to hate that person. The people against whom we nurse the deepest animosities are usually public characters whom we have never spoken to.

remarkable lack of prejudice in controversial issues, but often this liberality arises merely from an indifference to these issues. Under the circumstances such an attitude is scarcely a virtue. The test is when we are committed, but still avoid the temptation to prejudge.

Makes Pipe Dreams

By RICH KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press Writer

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — A U.S. senator, a Maine poet, and generals from the nearby War College journey to Dick Johnson's shop here to eye hundreds of pipes and inhale the sweet aroma of tobacco.

They may spend anywhere from $15 to hundreds of dollars each for pipes, hand-made to their specifications.

Dick Johnson is a long way from his pipe making days in Jersey City during the Great Depression.

The then teen-aged lad who lied about his age to get a job in a tobacco pipe factory is now fashioning pipes for customers around the world in his folksy, general store-like shop in the rolling countryside of central Pennsylvania.

His clients, including U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott, have only about five such shops in the country to choose from, Johnson says.

Poet Theodore Enslin regularly ventures out of his Maine woods to Johnson's shop to buy, and even barter a few of his books at Johnson's urging.

"I traded a few hand-made pipes for a few of his books — personally signed," Johnson says.

The 50-year-old artisan, who looks like a jolly English pub owner, took up his trade more by circumstances than choice.

The ninth of 10 children, Johnson was forced to quit school in Jersey City and find work when his father was killed.

Since the C. B. Weber Pipe Co. was nearby and he knew an employe, he applied for a job.

Sunday Morning Notes

A few days before Daylight Savings Time went back in effect, Chamber Manager Harold Creech caught your columnist in the post office at 9 a.m.

"Well," he commented, "practicing up for the time change, I see."

A fellow couldn't just adjust to losing an hour overnight.

A supermarket cashier noticed an unusual name on a check she was cashing.

"Is that Italian?" she asked the customer.

"No," he answered. "It's Hawaiian."

Well, it was only half a world away.

Ken Watkins, manager of Blount-Harvey, says his wife gave him a list of things to pick up from the drug store one day recently. He put the list, in his hat so he wouldn't lose or forget it.

But at the end of the day's work at Blount-Harveys he couldn't find his hat or the list. So he went home without either his hat or the items he was supposed to pick up.

Utilities Director Charles Horne presented a financial analysis of gas sales to the Utilities Commission the other night.

ALVIN TAYLOR

"It is partly an accountant's way of doing things and partly an engineers way of doing it," he informed the commission.

Now if they would have just gotten a lawyer in on it, nobody would understand it.

Horne pointed out that electric consumption figures show that "somebody is cutting back on electricity."

"It's me," quipped Gene Prescott, a member of the commission.

Other Editors Say Voluntarism Is Best

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Lurking in the background, as we all know by now, is a proposed gasoline rationing program in case the energy situation worsens.

But it is encouraging to know that Americans have been told that if they continue to conserve fuel as they have been doing, rationing won't be necessary.

It may well be that Americans will meet this challenge as they have previous ones in times of crisis, even though this is a different kind of crisis.

It isn't like a war or depression or some natural disaster that automatically brings out a spirit of self-sacrifice in people.

It is something less visible, less defined; and there have been some doubts about whether Americans, who make no bones about being wasteful, could or would voluntarily curb their habits to ward off something that hasn't really hit them yet—as we were hit at Pearl Harbor.

But they have apparently been doing it, and with what looks like a certain satisfaction in fighting the battle.

Of course not everything is beautiful. Some people still choose to ignore the energy situation, and Energy Chief William Simon says the only emergency legislation he really needs is to bring them into line.

On the other hand, some people have been really hurt by the shortage. But already things have eased enough through voluntary compliance that the airlines can be allowed more fuel.

If gas rationing is enevitable, as it seemed to be, it would be preferable to a whopping gasoline tax to discourage usage. But it is still true that whatever is voluntary is best, and if the fuel shortage can be licked that way, as Energy Chief Simon seems to think, we are all for it.

It is a distinct possibility because the American people have been willing this far to make the sacrifice and, for the most part, have done it with good grace and some humor.

The nation worked itself into this hole because of lack of foresight. It's going to take some doing to work itself out. It can be done by the people if they decide it has to be done.

40 Years Ago Today

By SUSAN PRICE
January 13, 1934

Star Rudy Vallee was happy today after finally receiving a divorce from his wife, the former Fay Webb.

The Daily Reflector today published a Rotogravure Pictoral section. Between 30 and 40 leading Pitt County businesses and individuals helped with the publication of the special issue.

The special issue presents pictorially the many businesses, churches and city officials and business leaders who make up Greenville and the surrounding Pitt County towns.

Preparations for the Roosevelt Birthday Ball to be given in the Campus building at the East Carolina Teacher's College on January 30 were being pushed forward rapidly here today and the occasion promises to be one of the most brilliant in the city's history.

The annual oyster roast of the Water and Light Commission was held at the plant of Tar River last night and city officials from this and surrounding towns enjoyed the hospitality of the men who are charged with the responsibility of directing the operation of Greenville's $2,000,000 municipal owned industry.

Visitors were given an opportunity to look over the plant, classed as one of the best in this part of the state and they were loud in their praise of the evidence of thrift wherever possible.

Energy Crisis Tempts Kremlin

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

For Western leaders curious about whether, or how much, the Kremlin meant what it said about the virtues of peace, the burgeoning energy crisis may provide a sort of yardstick.

Evidently Moscow and its Communist allies find the West's oil troubles just about irresistible, too good to let pass without at least an old school try at gaining significant global political advantage from it.

Moscow has a growing interest in Middle East oil itself, since it will have to import a great deal more of it in the next half-dozen years.

Logic might even suggest Soviet interest in a condominium of industrial nations to assure stability in the oil-rich desert areas.

But Communist ambitions often clash with logic.

The way the picture was presented to a meeting of highranking representatives of 67 Communist parties in Prague this week would seem to justify sharp questioning of the sincerity of Leonid I. Brezhnev's detente offensive. One could detect a background note reminiscent of P. T. Barnum's "Never give a sucker an even break."

As Kremlin veteran Boris Ponomarev laid it down, things look good for the world Communist movement because a "general crisis" of capitalism, the dream of Bolshevik dogmatists for generations, is already in progress. He said the energy crisis underscores "social-economic contradictions" in the world capitalist camp. With evident satisfaction, he spoke of a widespread "crisis of bourgeois society" being considerably deepened by "oil hunger."

Ponomarev quoted Brezhnev as warning that the "paths to peace" are not simple. That was an admonition to Communist parties around the world to be patient while he works out the detente policies.

Ponomarev suggested that the big thing the international movement has to guard against now will be a Western attempt to "drive a wedge" between the Kremlin-led world "socialist" camp and the world "working class." He noted, "present circumstances demand of Communists a special concern for observance of the principle of proletarian internationalism."

Translated from Communist double-talk, that means Communists around the world should let Moscow call the shots and trust Moscow to keep their bests interests at heart.

It seems to say somethng about the prospective life expectancy of the detente.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Press Freedom

Some people are saying that the press, the "news media," looked very good this year because it exposed Watergate. Others say the press is getting too powerful and is out to ruin reputations and innocent people by wallowing in Watergate. No matter form what angle you look at it, the press during the past year was not merely a mirror reflecting public issues but was itself a public issue. Even with Spiro Agnew absent from the scene, a heated debate about the role of the press continued.

One thing seems certain: the press in this country remains, despite continuous efforts to curtail or disparage its role, vigorously free. The variety of opinion to be found in the press itself, ranging from the extreme right to the extreme left with every stop in between, proves it. And yet there is a certain nervousness in the press itself and among those who beleive that freedom of the press is essential in a democratic society. The reason, we think, is not that the press is hypersensitive to criticism. Rather, it is the realization that freedom of the press, like other democratic institutions, must be constantly guarded if they are not to be eroded and eventually destroyed. The price of freedom is eternal vigilence.

But while a free press is still strong in our country and in other democracies, there is danger. The International Press Institute, an organization of some 1,800 editors and publishers from the non-Communist world, fears that press freedom and the people's right to know are in trouble everywhere. Ernest Meyer, director of the institute in Zurich, Switzerland, warns that the fragility of democratic institutions and the practices of totalitarian regimes pose constant threats. Many of the developing countries spurn a free press on the grounds that it is a "luxury" they can't afford, Meyer says. Occasional hints of looser restrictions in Russia and other totalitarian countries are superficial and quickly obliterated, he adds. There are some hopeful signs, however. China has opened doors to journalists - not all doors, but some. And where the press is free and vigorous, it is regaining respect from people who may have been swayed by the attacks on the press by politicians and others in recent years. - Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution

Protecting News Gathering

Most newsmen we know would not mind baring their finances. But a state law that forces them to do that as a condition for being permitted to cover and report what's going on in government is nothing but harassment.

The recently enacted Alabama law that called for newsmen to disclose their finances and win accreditation in order to report on state government is patently nothing more than an artificial obstacle to news gathering. And not surprisingly a federal court last week declared the new law unconstitutional. Reasonable access to the news is just as much a part of freedom-of-the-press rights under the First Amendment as is distribution of the news, the court held.

There seems to be a developing trend by people in government to attempt to inhibit the digging of newsmen into public business. It is not healthy, and this ruling by a three-judge federal court at Montgomery, Ala., is a hopeful sign that the trend can be reversed. - Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

Letting The Bad News In

A Federal judge in Brooklyn, N.Y., has ordered Suffolk County jail authorities to provide prisoners with the same newspapers normally available to people residing in the county.

Prison officials had claimed that giving inmates free access to newspapers would have "disruptive effects."

It might be the other way around. When they read about what's going on in the outside world, they may be just as glad they are where they are. - Gastonia (N. C.) Gazette.

No Easy Way Out

Ten years ago, New Hampshire, scrounging for funds to aid local school districts and relieve a spiraling tax rate authorize a state lottery. Since then the idea has been proposed in other states as a panacea for tax ills.

But the Education Commission of the States pointed out recently that in 1964 New Hampshire ranked last among the states in aid to education. Despite the "cure" of the lottery, New Hampshire still clings to the 50th spot in state ratings today - and the tax rate inches upward.

There are no miraculous alternatives apparently to sane spending and responsible budgets. - San Diego (Calif.) Union.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I, for one, would like to challenge the Daily Reflectors and several other citizens letters of criticism of Mayor West, Mr. Cox, Mr. Howard and Mr. Tafts' recent decision to eliminate the position of assistant city manager.

These men have long been able, proven leaders of our city and I do not believe that their decision was made in haste or without full investigation and evaluation of the situation. They have always shown themselves to be fair and to listen to every viewpoint before voting on any issue. I do not believe that they did any differently in this matter.

Mr. Katsikis stated in his letter that no citizens remained at the council meeting after their issues were discussed. No one asked them to leave! You may stay and hear the entire preceedings if you so desire and you have the right to ask for a public hearing on any matter if you feel there is a need for one!

I voted for these gentlemen and I have complete confidence in their judgements and decisions.

I say carry on, gentlemen, you are doing an admirable job!

OKAY, OKAY, WE CAN TAKE A HINT!

A Conservative View

William Buckley, Taxwise, Becomes Egalitarian

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON—William F. Buckley Jr., colleague and friend, is perhaps the most articulate aristocrat to hit the public scene since John Randolph of Roanoke enlivened the Congress 150 years ago. He is not known to have had but one egalitarian bone in his body, and that one calcified following a tumble at polo some years ago. But Mr. Buckley now has delivered himself of a book in which he shamelessly advocates, of all things, equality. Zounds, you will say, what can the man be thinking of?

He is thinking of needed reforms in four areas of public affairs. That is what his book is called: "Four Reforms—A Program For The '70s," published by Putnam. The book deserves wide reading, not only for its style and grace, but more importantly for its substance. My Brother Buckley is a great tease, a lover of the quip and merry jest, but here he is at once serious and constructive.

He is concerned with reforms in welfare, education, taxation, and the criminal law. As to welfare, he proposes to halt the enequity by which poor states are taxed in order to subsidize rich states. In education, he proposes a constitutional amendment that would permit private education to survive against the public school monopoly. In criminal law, he urges a rollback of some of the more extreme opinions of the Warren Court; he seeks to restore a balance between the rights of society and the rights of the accused.

Mr. Buckley tends to oversimplify—he thinks elliptically all of the time and parabolically some of the time—and the foregoing paragraph is an oversimplification of his oversimplifications. His arguments merit a careful reading.

My colleague's most novel proposals deal with federal tax reform. He urges a kind of negative income tax for the poor, by which they would be reimbursed for regressive federal taxes that weigh most heavily upon them. Lower income groups also would benefit from the lower prices on consumer goods that would follow a second reform: outright repeal of the income tax on corporations.

It is in the field of individual income taxes that Mr. Buckley is at his most audacious. He would abolish all exemptions and eliminate all deductions except those that relate directly to the cost of acquiring income. Then—hold your breath—he would eliminate the progressive feature of the income tax and levy a uniform tax of 15 percent on all income.

Well! The very idea of a uniform income tax is likely to produce incredulity—or hopefully apoplexy—in his liveral critics. Yet the idea of progressive rates of taxation is not American; it is Marxian. The scheme by which the government takes 20 percent of one man's income and 60 percent of another man's income has no support in the Constitution or in the whole tradition of equal protection of the laws.

As Mr. Buckley observes, the vice of progressivism does not appear in other realms of taxation. In real property, for example, the identical tax rate—not the tax, but the tax rate—applies to the $10,000 house that applies to the $100,000 mansion. The poor man and the rich man pay the same tax on cigarettes and booze. At the gasoline pump, we do not tax Cadillacs at one rate and Volkswagens at another.

It is only as to the taxation of income that we have slid into the pernicious evil of progressive rates. The system cannot validly be defended in terms of equity or fairness; it can be defended only in terms of expediency and a latter-day Jacobinism—a false and coercive leveling achieved by compulsion.

Mr. Buckley is confident that his reforms would generate sufficient revenue to meet all the legitimate needs of the federal government. Necessarily, he has to postulate the economic growth that would follow the formation of new capital, but his conjectures make sense. When the needs of the poor are met, and all taxpayers are treated equally, we will have gone a long ways toward achieving a better society—a society governed not by the artifices of aristocracy or by the concepts of communism, but by the precepts of freedom instead.

Extraordinarily Wide Range Involved In The '74 Economic Forecast

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Economic forecasts for 1974 fall into an unusually wide range—from near normal growth, on the bright side, to a year of actual recession, at the other extreme.

The concensus, the average expectation, seems to be that whatever slowdown takes place will be of relatively short duration. This assumes that all that's needed to set the economy back on the upgrade is for the Arabs to open the valves and permit oil to flow freely into the hungry world market.

But this assumption may well be flawed. Economists and the computerized econometric models are in the habit of basing their forward calculations on rising and falling demand for goods and services. It has been taken for granted that the goods and services would be there to meet the demand.

But even before the Arabs cut down on oil, hastening the fuel shortage, the production capacity of the nation was bumping against the ceilings. There were signs already that a huge expansion in capacity would be necessary for normal growth. And there was worry that this would bring a slowdown.

So, it doesn't necessarily follow that an easing in oil will turn the whole sky bright again. It would be a big help, of course. The years-long transition to fuel self-sufficiency would be made easier.

Just about everything that has to be done to change the energy picture will make a demand on basic materials, especially the metals. Present domestic capacity is not adequate to meet that capital demand along with the normal consumer demand. The gap can't be filled by imports.

Increasing petroleum refining capacity, and this is needed, takes a lot of metal. Increasing the production of coal means the production of more heavy equipment—metal. The same goes for improving mass transportation.

In other words, the energy crisis may bery well be the tip of a very large iceberg. And dealing with it may involve the government deeper and deeper in the business of deciding who gets what and when.

Steel is a case in point. Basic capacity has expanded little in recent years, although capital investment by the industry has been at a relatively high level. The capital outlay has gone more to improving efficiency and for environmental protection than into actual expansion.

With the need to expand overall production capacity, steel is going to be in great demand. There is some speculation that a system of government determined prioritites may become necessary before this year is out.

The way petroleum is being "rationed" probably offers some guidance as to the general pattern of any steel allocation system. First call would go to the production side of the economy, with what is left spread over the consuming side.

The aim, as in petroleum, will be to get the maximum production and employment. The heavy luxury autos, for example, would have to give way to, say, mining machinery. Big earth moving equipment would be diverted from interstate highways to other uses.

On the price side, it's bound to be a rough year. We are running now at an annual rate of over 8 percent inflation. And an even higher rate probably will be recorded before there is any slowing in inflation.

To help assure his being hired, the then 16-year-old inflated his age by two years.

Later Johnson, also a carpenter, helped build his wife's uncle's farm near Carlisle and eventually moved into the area. He eventually bought his own farm but kept at his trade by working on pipes shipped by the company the 200 miles from the factory to his home and back.

Sampling the experience of proprietorship in Jersey City, he opened a shop here some six years ago and bought his present shop two years later.

In the rear of the converted butcher shop, hunks of briar wood from Greece and other areas along the Mediterranean are fashioned into pipes of infinite variety.

The hard, durable wood is shaped on a power sander with coarse emery paper. The bowl is hollowed on a drill. Walnut stain is applied to the incipient pipes. Then London-made stems of Lucite or pressed rubber are attached, and the finished product is buffed to the desired sheen.

Although most people choose a standard bowl style, Johnson says he has filled some unusual orders — a pipe shaped like a bulldog, the symbol of a truck company for the company's president, and one resembling a coffin for an undertaker.

His shop also contains other pipes, such as the figurines made from meerschaum, a white, lightweight clay material produced by Turkey.

Johnson, who estimates his annual business at between $70,000 and $80,000, believes that pipe smoking is on the rise.

He cites the medical scare connected with cigarette smoking and the lower cost of pipe puffing.

In addition, according to his thinking, pipe smoking has an essence missing from other forms of tobacco burning.

"Pipe smokers smoke for joy; it's not a habit," he contends, puffing on one of his pipes from a large collection that includes about 50 antiques. "It's a very personal thing...in such impersonal times. It's like an old friend."

the West, the KGB prepares to prevent these ties for its own familiar purposes by installing Pitovranov and other officers as overseers of the chamber of commerce."

Every Kremlinologist knows of the KGB's keep penetration into Soviet life. But disturbing questions about is Kremlin influence are raised by Barron's study, commended by Ray S. Cline, former U. S. Central Intelligence Agency official and State Department intelligence boss, as "the most authentic account of the KGB I have ever seen."

Thus, on Sept. 6, 1964, Barron writes, KGB agents fired a poison-pistol at a West German technician, sent from Bonn to "cleanse" the Moscow embassy of KGB microphones. The technicial almost died from the invisible injection of nitrogen mustard gas.

As a result of that attack, the Bonn government angrily cancelled an invitation to then party secretary Nikita Khurshchev to visit West Germany, a visit expected to result in a Soviet bid for detente. Within five weeks, Khrushchev was fired and detnete was delayed for nearly six years.

The connection between the event in Moscow and Khrushchev's downfall is conjectural, but KGB's power to thwart Khrushchev's step toward detente was indisputably clear. That is one of Barron's chilling conclusions: KGB, pushing the hardest of hard lines, has an impact all its own on Kremlin actions abroad.

Yet, argues Barron, it carries total immunity. "Dismantlement of the KGB would remove the very foundations of Soviet society," he writes, "foundations laid by Lenin more than half a century ago."

NO WAY TO REGAIN ONE'S ERODED POWERS!

Flock Of Lawyers Eye Robert Morgan's Post

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH—When Attorney General Robert Morgan announces for the U.S. Senate on January 21, you'll see a flock of lawyers going after his job.

Morgan has turned the position of attorney general into one that ambitious politicians covet. The Lillington attorney has been in and out of the headlines at an incredible rate since he became attorney general in 1969.

Wade Bullock, who held the office prior to Morgan, was a hard man to find. If there was ever any news to be made out of the office, Bullock preferred to let an assistant make it.

City officials used to complain that it was hard to get Bullock to answer legal questions. Morgan became a very active attorney general. He began a series of programs aimed at protecting the consumer. He took on the utility companies and made the front page. He put Charlie Dunn in as head of the SBI and cracked down on cigarette smuggling, and made an effort to reduce drug abuse.

Morgan, in other words, was ranking alongside the Governor as the state's top newsmaker. His name became familiar to thousands of Tar Heels. Before his stint as attorney general, he wasn't that widely known outside of the East. Morgan's identification factor (important politically) is extremely high across the state. Every poll taken in the past three years shows this to be a fact.

It was generally assumed that Morgan was going to run for some higher office. He almost let his friends talk him into running for Governor in 1972, but he pulled out at the last minute, preferring to wait on the U.S. Senate, an office he has long wanted to hold.

Sen. Sam Ervin's departure from public office made it certain that Morgan would seek the Senate seat. But those who know Morgan best insist he would have run against Ervin if the Senator had not announced his plans not to run.

Any way you cut it, the position of attorney general was a weak one when Morgan took it. Now it's considered a valuable place to be for politicians wanting to advance at a later date. When Morgan does leave the office, there will be a long line of hopefuls wanting to replace him

Sen. W. D. Mills of Swansboro tells me he will not seek re-election to the General Assembly.

"The interim committees that have been in effect since the Legislature adjourned have kept me away from my business for most of the time," Mills said.

Henry Hall Wilson made a smart political move last summer when Morganton folks gave a special day in honor of Sen. Sam Ervin. Wilson made sure he was at the Ervin rally—and he made certain he was seen.

"I think the Senator appreciated my being there," Wilson said at the time.

Today In History

Today is Sunday, January 13th, the 13th day of 1974. There are 352 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1733, James Oglethorpe and some 130 English colonists arrived at Charlestown, South Carolina, to settle in what is now the state of Georgia.

On this date:

In 1419, the English captured the French city of Rouen.

In 1813, in the War of 1812, the British blockaded Chesapeak and Delaware bays.

In 1848, Vancouver Island in Canada was acquired by the Hudson's Bay Company.

In 1915, an earthquake in central Italy killed 30,000 persons.

In 1935, the Saar voted to return to Germany after being administered by France under League of Nations supervision.

Campaign Reform Issue Will Be Faced Twice

By WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Campaign reform is an issue Congress will be facing twice this year: first at the Capitol, then at the polls.

Legislation to control political fund raising and limit campaign spending is on House and Senate agendas. New reform proposals are likely by spring, all in response to the Watergate scandals.

At the same time, political ethics and financing loom as significant issues in the coming congressional election campaign. Public opinion surveys show declining confidence in government. One poll, commissioned by a Senate committee, said that situation has reached crisis proportions.

This comes in a year that will see most House members, and some senators, run for re-election. So in acting on campaign finance bills, they will be dealing with measures likely to affect immediately their own political activities.

So far, the pace of reform has been slow, despite the pressures created by Watergate. The Senate passed a stringent campaign finance bill six months ago and sent it to the House, where it has been in committee ever since. No House action is due before mid-March.

Another measure, to switch from the traditional system of collecting political contributions to one of government-financed federal election campaigns passed the Senate but was rebuffed in the House.

The Nixon administration opposed that plan and a scaled-down version which would have covered presidential campaigns beginning in 1976 was scuttled by a late-session filibuster.

The Senate Rules Committee has promised to come up with a new public finance bill by Feb. 21, but prospects for enactment are uncertain.

The key bill in 1974 is likely to be the final version of the one the Senate passed in July of 1973. It would limit campaign spending to the equivalent of 10 cents for each eligible voter in primaries and 15 cents in general elections. Those ceilings would cover congressional as well as presidential campaigns.

In addition, the Senate bill would limit contributions so that an individual could give no more than $3,000 to the campaign of a candidate for federal office. An additional $3,000 could be given to the candidate's primary campaign.

Nobody could give more than $25,000 in any year to all candidates for federal office.

And the measure would ban cash contributions of over $50.

The bill would create a bipartisan commission for enforcement of its terms and of financial reporting requirements that took effect in 1972.

Until Watergate, the major emphasis on campaign reform had been on disclosure of the sources of political money. The 1972 law required the reporting of all contributions over $100.

Advance In Plastic Furnishings

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Plastics, long indispensible in the kitchen, and widely used for house siding and trim, are making rapid strides now in furnishings.

In 1972, slightly more than 1 billion pounds of plastics went into furniture production. In 1973 the figure is expected to be 1.1 billion pounds, and by 1980 more furniture will be made of plastic than of wood, according to B. F. Goodrich.

Home furnishings experts at the company say the byword in plastics today is quality. Design ranges from pure, understated lines of modern to precise copies of the intricate and costly wood handcarvings of Mediterranean styles.

Plastics, they say, are cler, colorful nd lightweight. They duplicate the finished surfaces and colors of natural woods, are easy to clean and are durable.

Plastics for the home range from the functional to the esthetic. Molded furniture such as Parson's tables, stackable chairs, multi-functional wall units, chests and television and stereo units are helping achieve the interior look welcomed particularly by young homemakers.

In addition, plastics are being used in the structure of upholstered pieces. First used a few years ago when furniture manufacturers, faced with lumber shortages, began experimenting, polyester and polyurethane materials are appearing in medium priced furniture lines, with polystyrene being used in some lower price lines, goodrich said.

A Primer

The company offers a primer on plastics as used in furniture:

Vinyl —polyvinyl chloride or PVC —makes durable upholstery and wallcovering fabrics; available in wide range of colors, patterns and textures; not affected by water, oils, food acids and most household liquids; can take much scuffing and hard use; PVC in rigid form is available for use in buildings and construction, in flooring, pipe, fittings and conduit, siding, windows and other profiles; used for drawer frames, cupboard units and decorative sheeting.

Polyurethane —or urethane —is available in coated fabrics and as foam material; tough and durable, even in thin sheets that are soft and pliable; exhibits many characteristics of leather, and is growing as upholstery material; can pick up color and texture characteristics of fabric backing.

ABS — Acrylonitrile-butadiene-styrene —is a strong durable plastic used for a variety of tables, chairs and wall systems and for the framework of upholstered furniture; withstands impact abuse, temperature extremes, resists chemicals and stress; has a tough, rigid, glossy surface; and resists household liquids, water, food acids, alkalis and salts.

Acrylic — polymethylmethacrylate —is known as acrylic, "Lucite" and "Plexiglas;" is lightweight and quite strong, and is found in see-through furniture, accessories and wall systems; substitutes for glass in doors and windows; in opaque form, 8 used for bathroom items.

Polyethylene is strong and resistant to breakage; resistant to acids and most household liquids; weatherproof, although certain colors such as red may fade if exposed to intense sunlight for a long period; found in a wide range of molded furniture, especially children's; it can be flexible or rigid, has a waxlike surface and may be translucent or opaque in a wide range of colors.

Polypropylene forms hard surface that is resistant to scratching and common household liquids; is found in chairs, tables, wine racks, wastebaskets, appliances and housewares; may be rigid or flexible, semitransparent and sometimes opaque; comes in a wise range of colors.

Polystyrene —or styrene —is hard and rigid and sometimes brittle; stands up well under ordinary use, but should not be exposed for prolonged periods outdoors; used in chairs, tables, headboards, panels for record-playing equipment, bathroom and kitchen wall tiles; is now important for frames of chairs and sofas; widely used in simulated wood moldings.

Polyurethane in molded rigid foam is almost indestructible; can be molded and colored to relroduce almost exact wood pattern in TV cabinets, stereo consoles; gaining in furniture, furniture parts and carved effects.

Glass fiber fiber reinforced plastic is a very tough material that can withstand constant exposure to the weather, but whose colors may fade from prolonged exposure to the sun; used in indoor and outdoor furniture, bathtubs and shower stalls, ceiling panels, awnings and roofs for terraces.

Laminated plastics such as Formica, Micarta, Panelyte and Textolite, are hard and durable and not affected by moisture; resist food acids, most household liquids and scratching; used in bathroom vanities, kitchen counter tops, cabinets, tables, shelving and wallcoverings; available in fashion colors and wood tones.

As the supply of lumber diminishes and the quality of plastics is recognized, we may get to the point where "knock on wood" becomes "pound on plastic," one BFG expert suggests.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — One of your readers recently recommended cleaning the grout between bathroom floor tiles with a mixture of ammonia water, bleach and lemon juice. The bottle of bleach I have in my home says it should not be mixed with ammonia. What goes?

A. — A checkup shows that most types of bleach should not be mixed with ammonia. Even though the reader said he had used the solution for years with good results, disregard his recommendation. The mixture can cause toxic fumes.

Q. — The attic in our house has never been finished. Now we want to make it into two rooms and possibly a bathroom. Can you tell me how to bring the heat up to the attic?

A. — Even if you had given all the details necessary to advise you properly, it would take a book to discuss how this should be handled. You will need professional help. It will be a minor job if the builder brought heating lines up to the attic, as many do; a major job if he did not.

Q. — I have to use some wood glue in an area where there is quite a bit of moisture. My son has some vegetable glue on hand that he used for model work. Can this be used?

A. — Vegetable glue has little moisture resistance. You will need a glue that is waterproof. Be sure it uses the word waterproof on the container.

A. — What's the best way to take up an old wooden threshold? It's the kind that seems to run under the doorframe.

A. — Take off the door stop — the vertical moulding along the door jamb. With most types of thresholds, this will enable you to pry them up. If this doesn't work with your threshold, you will have to split it with a chisel and then remove it in pieces.

Q. — We moved into a new house six months ago. Quite a few cracks have developed in the plaster wall over two doors. I know how to patch plaster, but I think the builder is responsible and that he should do it. Am I right?

A. — Cracks of this kind nearly always are due to settlement of the house framework and are not the fault of the builder. However, whether it is his responsibility to fix it depends on the kind of agreement you have with him and the local laws. Regardless of the agreement and the laws, some builders will undertake to fix the cracks if you have lived in the house less than a year. Have you checked with him?

Q. — We plan to have central air conditioning installed in our house before the start of the summer. Will we need additional insulation?

A. — Probably. It requires more insulation to keep cool air inside a house than it does to keep hot air there. Your air conditioning dealer will make an inspection and then a recommendation.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

It is sometimes said that painting a room can be fun. Maybe it is to some persons, but to most of us it is a chore that is undertaken only because (1) the room needs painting and (2) money can be saved by making it a do-it-yourself project.

Perhaps the most vexsome part of the task is painting the ceiling. Not only must it be done before the walls, it is something that seldom can be skipped. If you ever decided that the ceiling seemed to be in pretty good condition and that you could "let it go" while you did only the walls, you soon discovered how wrong you were. Once the walls had been painted, the ceiling suddenly took on a seedy appearance and practically called for attention.

Most ceilings can be painted after the surface dust has been removed, but those in kitchens and bathrooms usually require a thorough washing. Any breaks in the plaster or gypsum board must be patched with spackling compound or similar product. It's a good idea to dab the patch with a little paint before going ahead with the painting of the entire ceiling, especially if you are putting on one coat. This has the effect of giving the patched areas two coats and preventing them from showing through.

Whether you use a brush or a roller, paint across the width of the room. If you paint down the length of a room, one section will begin to dry before you get to the next. These days most persons use rollers. If you decide to use one, consider the possibility of using the type that can be attached to a long-handled extension that permits you to work from the floor during most of the job. I have heard some criticism of this method on the theory that it is awkward and likely to cause a stiff neck, but I have found it excellent if you remember to keep the roller ahead of you at an angle rather than attempt to paint directly overhead.

Always work from a dry area into a wet one. Do not start the ceiling until you have the time to finish it immediately. Even though most modern paints, especially the latex type, minimize the possibility of lap marks, halting the work for a period of time — for lunch, for example — may result in distinguishable areas of difference.

Don't overload the roller and don't spin the roller at the end of a stroke. But no matter how careful you are, some dripping or splattering may occur, so be certain all furniture and other objects in the room are completely covered.

(Squeaky floors and stairs, stubborn doors and windows, and sweating windows and walls are among the 35 subjects discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

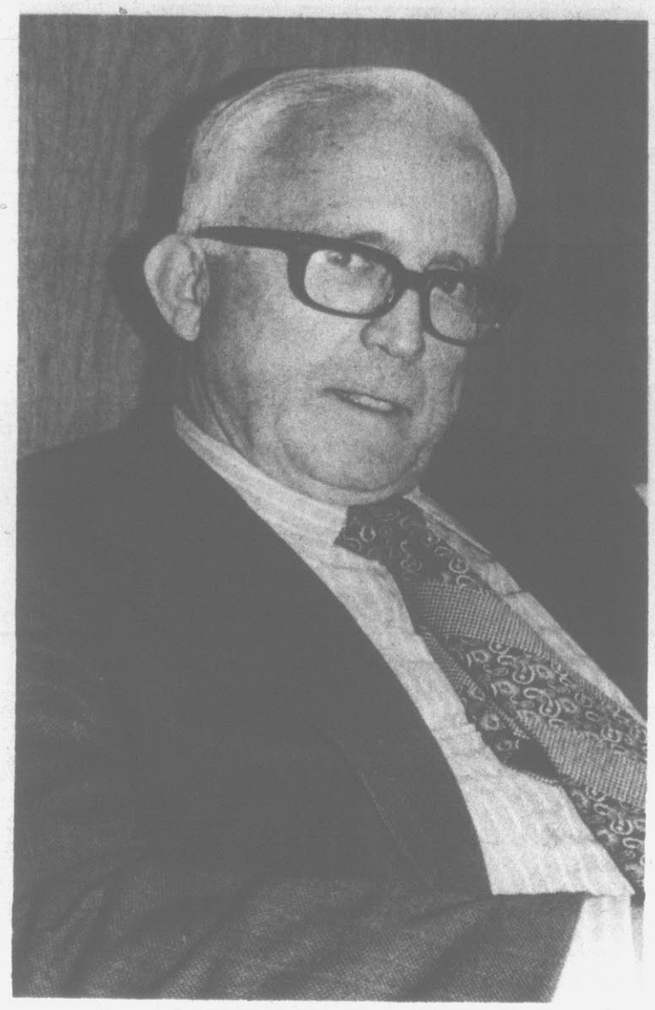
Plans The Future Of ECU Med School's Program

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. William Cromartie, Director of the East Carolina University Medical Education Program, sees his job as that of planning for the future development of the ECU School of Medicine.



DR. WILLIAM CROMARTIE

Planning is the new dimension of the director's job, which was given to him last June, he said. He explained that UNC Medical School Dean C. C. Fordham appointed him to work with the planning of the one-year program at ECU. The former professor of medicine and bacteriology began then visiting ECU two or three days out of every week to work with ECU Dean of Medicine Wallace Wooles and the faculty here. "My job then," he said, "was to see that the students here had a good education experience—that the program was similar enough to that of UNC first-year medical student to permit easy transfer. Since the curriculum had been planned that way from the start, this was not too difficult."

But on Nov. 16 the Board of Governors of the University assigned to the University of North Carolina School of Medicine the responsibility of "Planning for the future development of medical education in North Carolina."

Shortly after, In December, Dr. Cromartie was given his wider responsibilities. "I can't tell you much about the future yet," he said. "I'm just getting started. I hope within a few months to be able to report to the Board of Governors in terms of whether to add a second year to the program here.

Asked when this report might be, he said, "I can assure you it will be as soon as possible, in terms with good planning."

According to Cromartie, last year's ECU med students appear to be doing well at Carolina. "There's no reason why they shouldn't," he said. "Med students are so carefully picked, that it's rare for one to have academic problems."

He said this year there are joint committees for the UNC and ECU classes dealing with admissions, curriculum, examinations, and promotions.

In other words, all the factors which determine the quality of the students and their educations have been combined to make for equal opportunity.

Qualifications will have to be as good for one as the others. The subjects and time alloted to each will be the same. Every exam question asked a Carolina student will be asked his ECU counterpart at the same day and hour. Ultimately, the second-year student at UNC should have the same background, regardless of which school he attended.

Cromartie said a system of bringing UNC School of Medicine faculty members to Greenville to teach for a day or from one to three days sometimes has been worked out. He emphasized however, that the major portion of the ECU curriculum is still taught by the ECU faculty. Also, he emphasized and re-emphasized that the need to bring in teachers at times is in no way a reflection on the quality of the regular ECU faculty.

"This is a small faculty," he said, "but it is a good one. The problem is one of numbers. It is just impossible for a small number of people to cover a curriculum the way modern medical education demands.

"Any good medical school is always seeking more faculty as the complexity of medical science increases. We'll be adding on more faculty as we can get the money appropriated. We'll be recruiting from the national and international pool of medical educators."

In addition to his ECU Medical Education Director's title, Dr. Cromartie is Associate Dean for Clinical Science at UNC. He has just recently given up his position as Chief of Staff of N. C. Memorial Hospital.

A Bladen County native, he earned his M. D. degree at Emory University, interned at Grady Hospital in Atlanta, and was a resident at both Vanderbilt Hospital and Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

He was simultaneously assistant cheif of the medical service and director of research at Ashburn Veterans' Hospital in McKinney, Tex. and an instructor in medicine and bacteriology at Southwestern Medical College, and later rose to associate professor at the University of Minnesota Medical School before going to UNC in 1951.

He and his wife, Josephine, have five children.

H. David Glover of the firm's Wilson office said that the program, which will be held from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m., will involve a panel discussion featuring Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, Stabilization general manager Fred Bond, N.C. State Economist Charles Pugh, and Bill Glenn, president of Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co. here. Slim Short will serve as moderator.

Glover said that area farmers are invited to call the television station to ask questions and voice their opinions during the telecast. Panel members will discuss and answer questions on tobacco topics called in, he added.

MIRROR REFLECTIONS. . .of the daily barre exercises of Mrs. Christina Williams' beginning ballet class for girls ages five through seven.

Christina Chose A World Of Dance

Accent On Living

A-8—The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Sunday, January 13, 1974

Text by Rosalie Trotman

Photographs by Tommy Forrest

The world of ballet has encircled Christina Williams since she was a little girl growing up in Savannah, Ga.

"My family was very steeped in the southern family tradition of training in the arts and culture—their idea was exposure. My mother and sister were also trained in the art of ballet.

"When I was between six and eight, I knew that I wanted to become a ballerina, like most little girls do, but unlike most little girls, I never changed my mind. My entire life was ballet and I was thoroughly enchanted. When not in ballet class, I watched other classes, when not in school, I was at the ballet studio—I ate and slept ballet. I was never inclined to be still and for instance, read. I was always on the move," remarked Mrs. Williams.

Her first serious exposure was under the direction of Ebba Olson, who was brought to this country by Henry Ford.

"The next momentous thing in my life happened when I was 13—I was thrown from a horse and paralyzed from the waist down. Nine months and three specialists later, I walked with a brace.

"The learning to walk period of about three months included many hours of therapy and hard work. During this waiting period is when I became fascinated with the idea of teaching and training of the body," said Mrs. Williams.

Intense Training

Continuing she added, "When my intense ballet training resumed—I was close to fanatical because I had a lot of catching up to do.

"I truly don't think I have ever lost my enthusiasm or drive to teach—that ballet is an art but can be enjoyed. There is a very thin line between too much work and the joy, it must be balanced or students will not know what it's all about."

Mrs. Williams' career has been "totally combined with performing and teaching." Her early performing was integrated with schooling which was a concession to her family.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Williams grew up in Savannah and attended college together at Armstrong College, where she graduated and he went on to the University of Georgia. He received his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

She has spent her entire career traveling in this country and in Europe not only to perform but to study and observe methods of teaching. Although she says that she has done nothing but dance and teach for more years than she likes to tell and is presently at it until nine o'clock every night, she has found time to do a little homemaking on the side.

The Williams lived in Davidson for 10 years, where he was on the faculty at Davidson College. During one season, Mrs. Williams enjoyed the experience of putting the Davidson Wildcats basketball team through many strenous ballet exercises. During the season, the Wildcats were in the nation's top 10 and made "Sports Illustrated."

Southern France

The Williams moved to Greenville two and a half years ago from Southern France, where they lived for a period of two years. She went to dance and her husband spent his time writing a book on a French poet.

While in France, Mrs. Williams danced with Jean-Claude Gil of Theatres Nationaux and L'Opera et Opera-Comique, which she thoroughly enjoyed and looks forward to returning at some date.

"In my opinion, Europe may have hundreds of years of culture that this country does not have, but American students dance because they want to and not because they are forced to," she added.

"Teaching in Greenville is more than rewarding as students are receptive, enthusiastic and hardworking. My family thinks Greenville is a delight as everything is a lot like home.

"It has been and still is a great pleasure to take the students to various cities to expose them to professional performances of classical ballet," she commented.

Of all the "now funny" mishaps during Mrs. Williams' performances was the evening she did a grande jete into the orchestra pit and landed on the violinist. "The man didn't show up the next night although I was forced to along with my wounded ego," she replied.

Dr. Thomas Williams is a professor of French at East Carolina University and his field is poetry and literature.

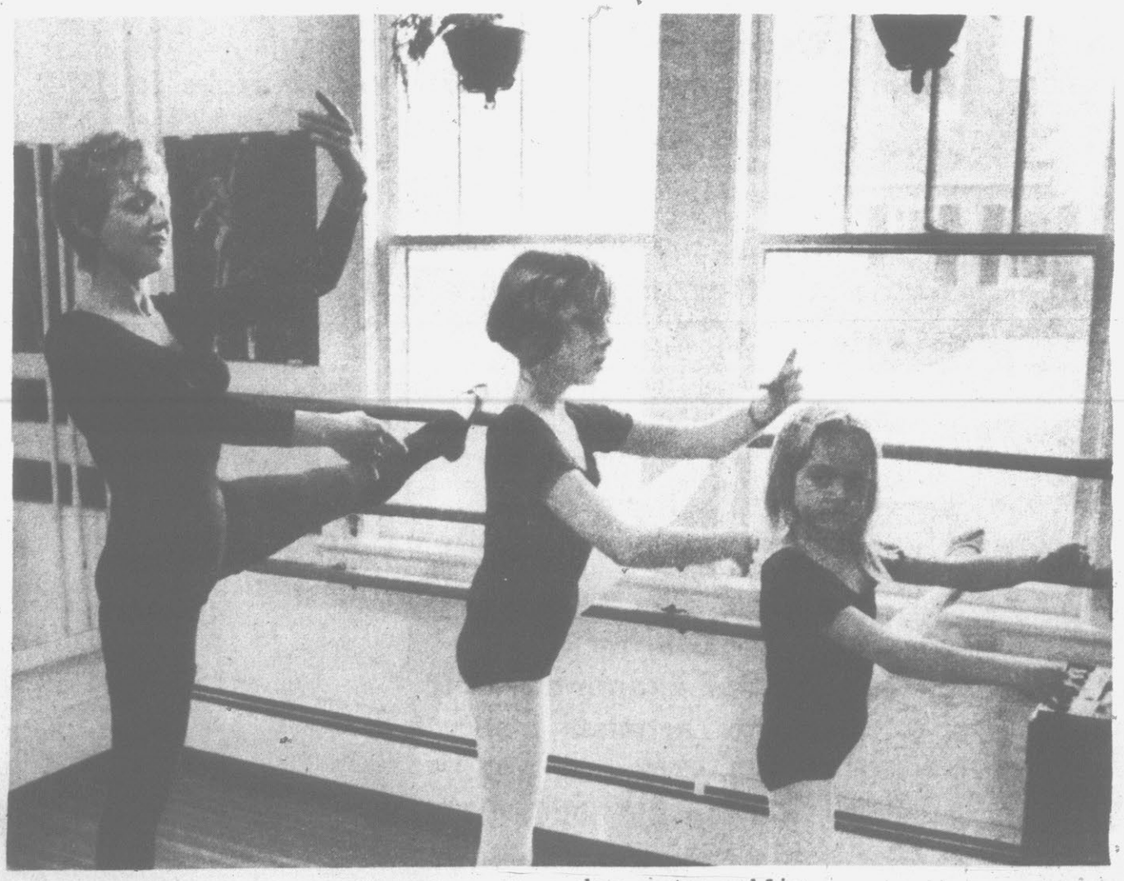
The Williams' daughters, Andrea, 10, and Lisa, eight, are enrolled at St. Raphael's School.

As her mother before her, Mrs. Williams is encouraging her daughters in the arts—including ballet, guitar and violin.

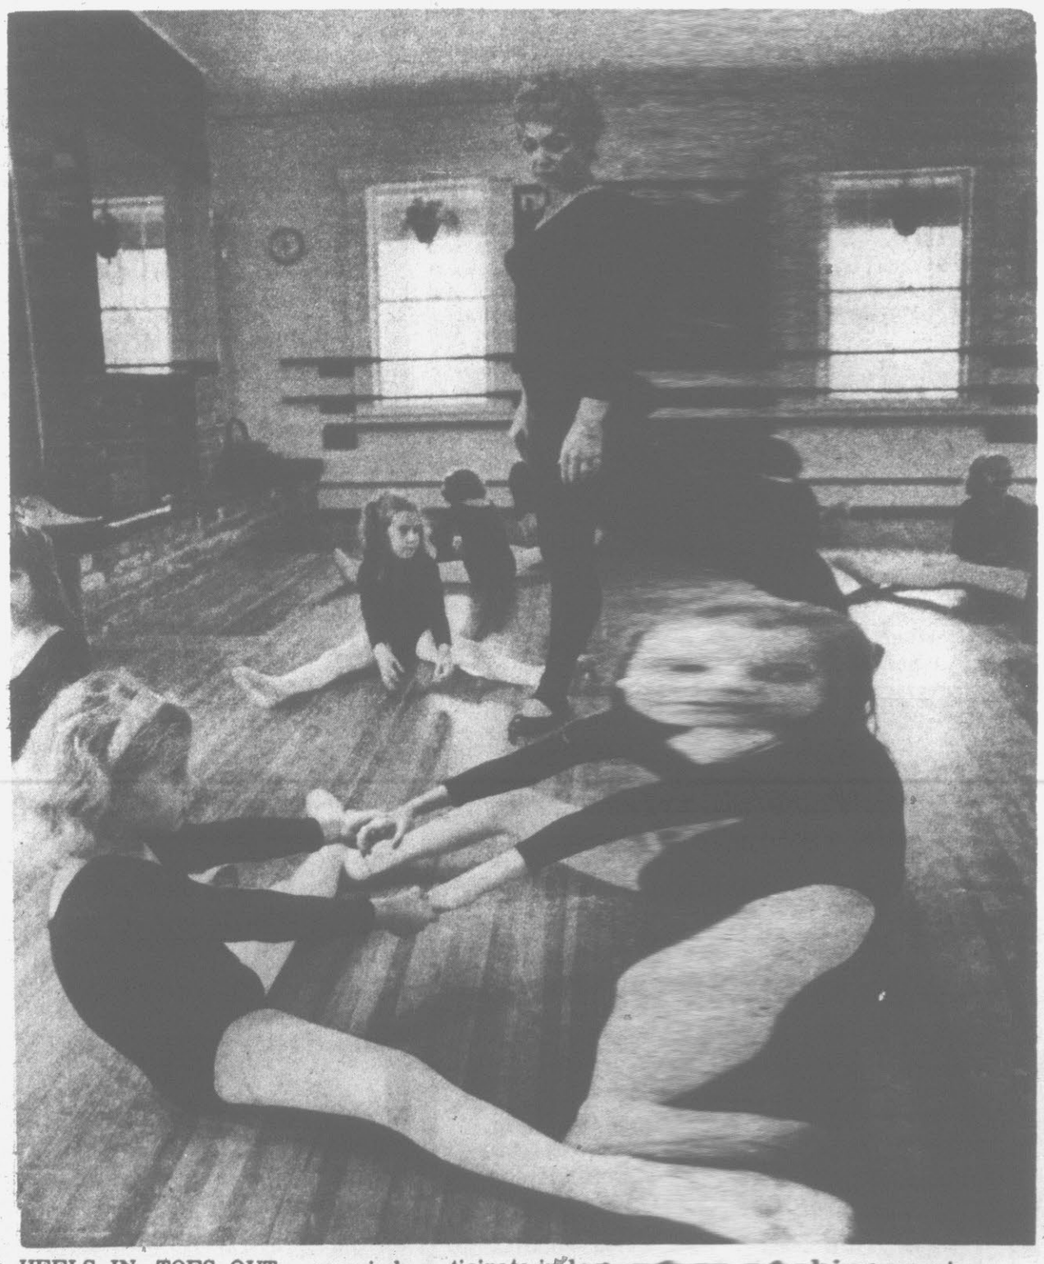
Although classical ballet is her field, Mrs. Williams offers classes in musical comedy, tap and jazz. When not involved in teaching, she spends time with green plants, sewing and enjoying the river.

Dr. and Mrs. Williams have enjoyed remodeling several old homes and they do the work themselves.

For the future, Mrs. Williams would like to see the vast amount of professional talent here directed to the grade and secondary school level chaneled into an instructional center for the performing arts for children.



LIKE MOTHER, LIKE DAUGHTERS. . .Mrs. Williams teaches at the barre with daughters, Andrea, center, and Lisa.



HEELS IN, TOES OUT. . .reminds Mrs. Williams as her students participate in leg stretching exercises.

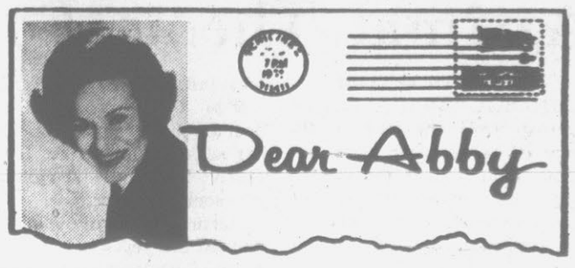
Neigh's The Answer To This Equestrienne



By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have heard that a horse will not throw a pregnant woman. Is that true? Please answer right away as I have to know. WISCONSIN QUESTION

DEAR QUESTION: This one throws me! Since you can't expect to get the answer straight from the horse's mouth, ask a doctor. I think he'll give you a neigh.

DEAR ABBY: A lady asked if she should have cards printed announcing her recent divorce, and stating that she was available for dating.

You told her not to—that the word would get around in other ways. I agree. But my experience along that line goes back to 1898. We lived in Albia, Ia., a block from the railroad. [My father worked in the yards.]

It didn't take us kids long to know when an oncoming train carried a lady. The news that there was a hatbox aboard got to us before the train pulled in.

"83 IN SALEM, O."

DEAR "83": Times haven't changed much. Now they travel by jet, and carry wig boxes!

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a letter which appeared in your column on Oct. 26, 1959. I cut it out of the Minneapolis Star and carried it in my wallet, and now as you can see, it is yellow with age and falling to pieces. Your answer did so much for me. Will you please print it again? I feel certain it will mean a great deal to many others.

MINNESOTAN

DEAR MINNESOTAN: Yes. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Why will a married man pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady? Then he will turn around and treat his wife like a tramp. LYDIA

DEAR LYDIA: A man picks up a tramp because he wants a female companion who is no better than he is. In her company, he doesn't feel inferior. He rewards her by treating her like a "lady."

He treats his wife [who is a lady] like a "tramp" because he feels that by degrading her, he will bring her down to his level. This makes him feel guilty, so in order to "get even" with his wife for making him feel guilty, he keeps right on punishing her.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "K" IN LANCASTER: For some valuable advice on how to live, ask someone who knows he is dying.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who really gets my goat. Sometimes when I've been on the phone for a long time she will call and shout in a very angry tone: "I have been trying to get you for an hour—who in the devil have you been yakking with for so long?" And like a fool, I apologetically tell her.

Or if I come home after having been gone all day, she'll phone and bark: "I've been trying to reach you all day—where the heck were you?" Not knowing what else to say, I tell her.

I don't think I have to account to her about where I've been or to whom I've been talking. Other than coming right out and telling her it's none of her business, can you suggest a more subtle way of telling her off?

ANNOYED IN DENVER

DEAR ANNOYED: Say: "If anybody asks you . . . just tell 'em you don't know." She'll get the message.

Design Student Selects Animal Theme For Showing

By SUSAN TAYLOR

CHICAGO (UPI) — Imagine floating into the ball on the wings of a monarch butterfly.

You don't need Cinderella's fairy, as Rusty Olsen has demonstrated. Just imagination, patience and considerable talent.

Miss Olsen, a fashion design student at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, showed her hand-painted butterfly gown at the school's annual student fashion show.

Over a floor-length black gown, she draped a hand-painted silk stole, gathered and sewn to the gown at the waist. The light weight silk "wings" floated with the model's every movement.

Miss Olsen, 22, said she decided on an animal theme for her senior collection but really doesn't know why she picked the monarch butterfly.

Starting with white silk, she painted the yellow, orange and black of the wings herself and, like all the other students, draped and sewed the garment to fit the model for whom she designed it.

Each student had a free hand in design, but each also personally constructed his or her collection from first sketch to finished garment.

Considerable skills in sewing and construction, as well as refreshing ideas, were evident, including some that could be incorporated by the home seamstress.

His and Hers

For the boudoir, there were his and hers costumes by Warsha Patel, who said her inspiration came from historic Egypt. His was a long black cotton knit robe with piping detail. Hers was a floor-length, hip-hugging loin cloth of rust and black ultrasuede and a flared top that tied at the shoulders. The primitive theme was carried out in all-over appliqued designs.

For daytime, Nahid Rassi designed a two-piece orange and white dress with a flared skirt and an oversize cape-collar that whirled out to reveal a bare back.

A pants costume in black and white by Liat Anne featured a two-piece matte jersey top, half black and half white, and black pants. The knee-length coat was black ultrasuede, hand quilted with white thread.

There was pair of hand painted canvas rain costumes by Fumiko Saito and pale blue silk organza evening gown with a hand painted over layer by Brenda Waites.

An off-white pants and tunic outfit by Miss Patel had multicolored appliqued stripes going up and down one sleeve and leg and around the wide cuff of the opposite sleeve and leg.

If the show had a theme it was individuality. But there were some recurring styles: Sleeves with lots and lots of fabric. Backless halter tops and plunging necklines. Long skirts with long slit seams. Pleats that released from sewn down tucks.

If there was a dominant color, it was grey. Pale blues and greens and dusty pinks were frequent and bright colors stood out by their scarcity.

These are "designer trends," Leah Bowman, chairman of the department said. "That's the mark of a successful fashion designer, knowing when to do what."

On The Young Side

By MARY CHARLES STEVENS

Rose High students observed Al Hunter Day Thursday with an assembly in the gym. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. C. Gray and Coach Dave Bumgarner spoke on Al's achievements. A re-enactment of the New Years Eve Notre Dame-Alabama game was presented as a skit. Mike Williams was the sportscaster.

Stan Highsmith, Ronald Randolph, Tim Toats, Harold Randolph, and Dave Mattheis composed the Albama team while Notre Dame players, Ronnie Raspberry, Ron Hunt, Keith Joyner, and Mike Brewington blocked as Donna Adams (Al Hunter) made the 93 yard touch-down.

Al was received by his former class mates with a thunderous applause. Coach Bumgarner presented Al with his old Rose High helmet, as his proud parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter, looked on.

Students Nominated

Sophomores Sherry Ledbetter and Joe Godette were nominated by Rose teachers this week as candidates for the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation Seminar. If selected as representatives from the state, they will travel to Washington, D.C. March 9-16 for a government study and will meet the senators as well as tour the White House.

Students welcomed seniors Jose Baro and Ronnie Garris back to school this week after their stays in the hospital. Both having leg operations returned with casts.

Juniors received scores from their PSAT's taken in October. They were also given their class ranks at this time.

Rose High adopted a new time schedule this week because of the switch to Daylight Savings Time. Now instead of going to school at 8:45 and getting out at 3:30, students begin classes at 9:15 but still get out at 3:30.

Teachers, however, are still required to arrive at 8 A.M. To adapt to this new schedule, all class periods were shortened by five minutes. Students seem to like the new situation while many teachers dislike getting up and coming to school while it is still dark.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Maybe I'm old-fashioned, but to me there is nothing immoral about taking an unwed cold to bed.

I do not subscribe to the current martyrdom trend to line the nasal passages with antihistamine, coat your glass stomach with antibiotics, rub your aching body with menthol, belt down a jigger of cough syrup, and run your cold over to the public marketplace to infect whoever is there.

At a concert the other night I was surrounded by so many sickies the conductor lost 40 per cent of his audience. . .literally.

Obviously, I am not the only one concerned with this problem. In a letter to the editor the other day a person who identified himself only as "Disgusted Concert Goer" said, "Now that cold weather has arrived, I wish to vigorously protest the attendance of those obnoxious people who are in the final stages of pneumonia.

"Last night, some consumptive oaf, who had just left his deathbed in order to cough his way through Beethoven's Ninth, sat behind me.

"Why don't these inconsiderate invalids remain at home muffled under oxygen tents instead of invading the symphony with their diseased decivels?"

Why indeed! Because the cold has been underrated and labelled "common." People refuse to take it seriously. I've never had a "common" cold in my life. I'm not even sure what they are. My colds are as rare as they are rotten.

I never get the attractive cold. ..you know the one I mean.. .where you get a sniffle that you dab at with a floral nose tissue and your cheeks are flushed and your eyes look a little brighter than usual and your voice is sorta throaty and sexy like Suzanne Pleshette.

No, I get the cold sore right under the nostril that has perfect strangers gaping and observing, "My God, Mildred, you thought you had problems." The lips dry and split and the eyes blouse and bag. The hair won't hold curl, the hearing goes, and the voice has all the sexiness of a seal when he is mating. I respect my cold and put it to bed where it belongs.

For those of you who woke up this morning with a cold, I beg you. . .don't take it to the office to be Xeroxed. Don't take it to lunch and leave it as a tip. Don't take to the car pool and punish eight mothers. Do not pick up your deathbed and walk. It's been cone. . .but only once!

Ex-Army Nurse Creates Perfume, Heads Large Company

Martie

Deborah

By PAUL ZACH

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — Sergeant Judith Muller made up her mind during a night watch at an army base in Jerusalem — to create biblical perfume.

"The outline of David's Tower looming above the walls of the Old City on the horizon inspired me," she says. It made her wonder what had become of the exotic fragrances that women like Bath-sheba used to seduce their men in Old Testament times.

Today the ebullient Mrs. Muller is the brains — and beauty — behind Israel's largest perfume company. The successful scent she concocted is appropriately called "Bat-sheba."

The blond businesswoman has exchanged her army fatigues for the latest Paris fashions and the barracks for a stylish office on Mt. Carmel overlooking Haifa and the Mediterranean Sea. The little complex produces approximately $300,000 worth of smell annually — $250,000 of it for export.

Born a "spoiled little girl" to a wealthy family in Hungary, Mrs. Muller says, "I got my beauty training from an ever-young grandmother who taught me to shade my eyebrows with the help of a burnt-out match stick at the age of 6." Her ballet-teaching mother encouraged her cosmetic study as a teenager. Then the holiday ended as it did for most European Jews.

"In came Stalin and Hitler and we left for Israel. Away went the Rolls Royce. My mother had to go to work as a maid and I was selling soda on a street corner. I'm a born survivor," she said in an interview.

Next came a stint in the army. "I came out a spoiled little girl with a lot of drive and discipline."

Her renewed interest in cosmetics prompted her to set up her first beauty institute, catering to her army comrades, in the backyard of her apartment.

"I found out I knew more than nothing but less than something about beautician's work." So she set off for Paris to learn.

When she returned to Israel Mrs. Muller began a beauty institute that specializes in Bible-inspired beauty methods — the application of myrrh oils used by Shulamite the shepherdess and royal lover of the Song of Songs: vapo-skin with olibaunum, a frankincense tapped from resinous African trees supposedly brought to Israel by the Queen of Sheba, and a fill-iform special shower formula which was used by Sarah, who according to legend, could still seduce men when she was 90.

"After the institute proved successful I had the impudence to start a perfume industry," Mrs. Muller says with a Cheshire cat grin.

She began in the early 1960s by researching Biblical plants, flowers, and legends about fragrance, while Israel was drafting women and fighting off guerrillas.

She created the "Bat-sheba" fragrance in 1966 and because a packaging industry was absent in Israel, she also created the antique-style bottle.

"I started with nothing. But I had a lot going for me — the Bible which had sex and the love story of David and Bath-sheba. It had everything — love, sin, marriage, and motherhood," Mrs. Muller notes.

A unique production technique helped boost sales. Each bottle of perfume — from the fragrance inside to the gold ribbon on the individually-painted bottles to the cellophane on the box — is produced by hand.

With a thriving beauty institute, a perfume company and a family — she has a 3-year-old daughter — Mrs. Muller finds herself one of Israel's busiest businesswomen. But she doesn't consider her work solely business. "Perfumery is an art as well as industry," she says.

Mrs. Romita Gives Garden Club Program

"With blossoms as big as plates and color as gay as balloons, the reward is well worth the effort," said Mrs. J. W. Romita, member of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club, as she spoke to members Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Romita was speaking of hybrid hibiscus which she has been growing for nine years. According to the speaker, hibiscus are easy to grow and their wants are few. Roots should be planted in the springtime in a protected sunny location in good moist soil.

President Mrs. Reuben Lowe opened the meeting with a reading of thoughts for the New Year. Mrs. H. G. Moeller and Mrs. N. C. Pierce were welcomed as new members.

A report on the December silent auction was given. Articles not receiving a written bid were auctioned by the head auctioneer, Mrs. Lowe. Proceeds from the auction went to help Christmas for the foster children in Greenville.

Mrs. W. A. Wright and Mrs. W. C. Woolard were hostesses for the meeting.

Disappointed over ruined negatives, Al gets older brother's silent sympathy with Mother's approving eye.

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

Note to readers: The encounters depicted in this column are designed to serve as a practical guide to improved communication. They are not to be taken literally. They should be adapted to individual situations and individual ways of speaking.

WHEN TREATED WITH RESPECT, children absorb and assimilate our values as well as our specific ways of communicating:

Earl, 13 an avid photographer, instructed his 10-year-old brother, Al, on how long to leave negatives in the developer. But Al left them too long and ruined them. Earl caught Mother's look. He said nothing and left the room. Later, Mother complimented him:

Mother: I heard you not saying something very clearly.

Earl: Yeah. I wanted to say, "I told you so," but I didn't.

Mother: You deliberately avoided saying, "I told you so," to someone in trouble. That's self-control and real kindness.

Earl looked startled and pleased. Later, Mother overheard Earl say, "Gee, Al, too bad about the negatives. I bet you feel real sorry about what happened." Mother said to herself, "That's instant comfort."

OFTEN, THE BEST HELP a parent can offer a child is a lesson in communication. Children need to learn skills of conversation.

Rhonda, 12, felt she had been treated unfairly by her drama teacher. She told her mother she planned to tell him off then turn and walk away.

Mother: What is your goal? What do you hope to accomplish?

Rhonda: Nothing. He has already made up his mind not to give me a part in the play.

Mother: Do you have any aspirations for future parts in programs?

Rhonda: Yes. I would like a solo.

Mother: Then I'd suggest another approach: Tell him exactly how you feel about what happened and give him a chance to answer you.

Rhonda: Let's rehearse.

Mother: Okay. You be the teacher.

Mother and daughter tried out the conversation. Ronda expressed her feelings of disappointment and felt better. She was ready to face her teacher.

In this brief dialogue Mother was helpful because she did not preach, moralize and teach lessons: ("Not everyone can be in the school play. The teacher knows what he is doing.") Instead, she administered emotional first aid, and taught her daughter helpful communication skills.

GRANTING TEENAGERS AUTONOMY prevents family battles. When a child has options, he learns to become independent and to avoid preoccupation with resistance to parents. For example:

Ben, 13, likes to read before going to sleep. One evening Mother found him working on an oscillator after 11 P.M. They talked a while and after noting the time, he was ready to turn off the light.

Ben: I didn't read yet. Can I read?

Mother: It's up to you.

Ben: It's no fun if you say that.

Mother: How is that?

Ben: Well, if you said no then I would read. When you say it's up to me then it's no fun to do it.

Mother: Oh. So that's how you feel.

Ben (Switching off the light): That's right. Good night, Mom.

SAYS MRS. WHITE: "I'm working hard to keep my mouth shut — and not remind the children about homework — the area of contention between us. And I'm making progress. For example: The other day, as she left for school, Rose, 14, said, "You're going to be furious. I didn't finish all my homework." I replied calmly, "Rose, that's between you and your teacher." She was literally taken aback. When she came home, she said, "The homework that I didn't do isn't due 'til next week." I said, only "Uh humm." Interestingly, that night Rose said, "Mommy, I can give up my TV programs on my own when I have work to do. She walded out of the den, saying, "I'm going to review my homework.

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Our azaleas look sickly, and we think it is due to a lack of water last fall. Can we fertilize them now? (T. E., Elliott)

A. Don't fertilize azaleas now. Fertilizer could force growth that could crowd the flower buds, causing them to drop. When new growth develops later, you may notice that the flower buds are drying up and falling off. This is especially evident when the plants grow quickly. The best treatment for this condition is to pinch out some of the new growth which appears at the side of the flower buds. Pinching prevents excessive flower drop. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. What kinds of garden seed can be safely saved from one season to the next, and how is the best way to handle them? (C. C., Roseboro)

A. Most unused vegetable seed can be carried over for one year with the exception of onion, leek and corn. The best way to assure least loss in germination is to get the seed completely dry, put in a sealed container, and place in the home freezer. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. We have many flowering shrubs in the yard of an old home that we recently purchased. Should any of these shrubs be pruned now? (R. J., Ashley Heights)

A. Among the flowering shrubs that can be pruned in January and early February are crepe myrtle, vitex, althea, eleagnus and buddleia (butterfly bush). Buddeleia can be cut back within a few inches of the ground if the plant is badly overgrown. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Can cherry tomatoes be grown inside the house in pots in winter? (Mrs. H. B., Raleigh)

A. Yes, if you have a sunny window. I'd use one of the dwarf varieties like Patio. To insure pollination shake or thump the flowers daily when plants begin to bloom. Pollination is most successful if the plants are shaken around noon on sunny days. Pollination in tomatoes is very poor on cloudy days. If pollination does not occur the blooms will fall off, and you'll get no fruit. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

A Tiger Lives In The Leroyer House

——By ALISON LERRICK

MONTJAVOULT, France (AP) — At last Paul Leroyer can relax in his armchair by the fire. The tiger outgrew it.

"The tiger doesn't live with us. We live with him. He sleeps at the foot of the bed and he eats in the kitchen," says his wife Michele, who nursed her pet to health after he was injured by a dog in his youth.

"Personally, I prefer each thing in its place. My wife in the bed and the tiger in a corner of the room," adds Leroyer.

They aren't the average couple living in the wilds of Normandy. Their old mill is swarming with dozens of animals — monkeys on the staircase, a llama in the pasture, a bear playing with his toes and a peacock eyeing a group of eagles.

"This is a training farm. If it were a zoo, we would need a giraffe. I can train anything from a flea to an elephant. I don't drink or smoke so I have to amuse myself somehow," says Leroyer, a gaunt 70-year-old in blue jeans and rubber boots, the better to tend to his flock of ducklings.

For films, photography, television, private whims and "other idiocies," he has trained a panther to swim across a pool or to pose on a jewelry counter and an elephant to browse around a supermarket. A bull in a china shop? Not yet.

"I don't train them. I live with them. Since I'm energetic, they function. I married Michele when she was 25 years old and look at her now," remarks Leroyer.

Ever since he was a tot, he "had ducks and goats and a chicken that ate out of my hand. Then I went on to more serious things," he says.

These meant the circus, of course, several years with Walt Disney and a career of leading panthers and leopards into the Moulin Rouge on a string. He also spent seven years in Monaco creating a zoo for Prince Rainier.

"It was wonderful. He was always with the animals until he married that beautiful American. Then she said to him, 'Why waste your time with monkeys?' Once I made him a steak with shallots, which was very funny considering he had 14 chefs of his own," shrugs Leroyer.

Ten years ago, he decided to escape from "nightclubs, the bourgeois life, stiff collars and caviar" and settle down in the country. "I would be happy to spend the rest of my life with animals, except for chimpanzees, which I hate," he says.

All his animals live outdoors in private paddocks and come when called. At night, Leroyer says, "Darlings, it's time for bed," and they retire to their stalls in the old stable. "I call my tiger 'Tiger,' but I could also call him 'Autobus,'" he says.

His house pets, more often than not, live in the kitchen, including his parrots. "They were a present from a woman who loved them more than her life. Finally she was forced to choose between them and her husband and she chose her husband," says Leroyer with a certain lack of comprehension.

"To win an animal's confidence, you just have to be friendly. It doesn't help to get them young. If I had gotten my wife at age 5, she might have turned out even more disagreeable than she is. You also need to detect their characters, just as certain pianos prefer certain people," says Leroyer, who addresses his animals in a mixture of French, English and German, the last for commands.

What if they bite him? "I hit them. Training animals is less dangerous than driving a car," he says cheerfully.

Rita, his puma, purrs and gambols at the sight of her leash. But Rita's true favorite — and she pursues her gleefully — is Mrs. Leroyer. "Rita loves women because she used to belong to a woman who ran a bar in Deauville," they explain.

A former antique dealer, Mrs. Leroyer takes her menagerie calmly. "My family always had lots of dogs. But before I met Paul, I had no idea of what a gorilla was and no desire to see one. Now, I'm not interested in training animals but in my relationships with them, like putting a tiger on my shoulder," says Mrs. Leroyer, staggering under the weight of her cuddly tiger.

"Give me back my finger," she admonishes him.

The only animal confined to quarters is the lioness. "I try to keep a semblance of ferocity in her. She roars occasionally. Otherwise, people would think all my animals were raised in my bed," says Leroyer.

Discovery of silver in 1884 t Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, caused a stampede, and Idaho still leads the nation in production of that metal.

Abuses End Sending Police Advisers Abroad

By KIM WILLENSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has quietly passed a death sentence on a controversial program that put hundreds of U.S. police advisers—and CIA men—into Asia, Africa and Latin America over the last 20 years.

The execution warrant for the Public Safety Program of the Agency for International Development (AID) was part of the 1974 Foreign Assistance Act recently signed by President Nixon.

Congressmen who backed the repeal measure contend the Safety Program led to a multitude of sins in support of military dictatorships. Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., said, "They are using our money to suppress their own people."

He said the program was responsible for political repression, imprisonment and torture of dissidents by U.S.-advised police in Vietnam, Thailand, Greece, Brazil, Uruguay and elsewhere. Other critics say the program may have involved political assassinations.

True or not, Public Safety did serve as a cover for several operations. One was the CIA-financed "Phoenix" program in South Vietnam. Public Safety funds also financed the Vietnamese prison system, possibly including the infamous "tiger cages" on Con Son island.

Dan Mitrione, the U.S. adviser whose kidnaping and execution by Uruguayan Tupamaro terrorists in 1970 was the subject of the recent film, "State of Siege," was one of its men.

Began in 1955

AID began advising foreign police in a small way in 1955. The Kennedy administration, frightened by Communist threats of all-out guerrilla war, pulled several programs together into Public Safety in 1962.

It grew into a major project. At its peak in the late 1960s, it had 458 advisers in 34 countries and spent more than $30 million a year.

It has since been reduced considerably. Currently, 214 advisers operate in 18 nations on an annual budget of $7.4 million. All will be withdrawn except a small team in Saudi Arabia, which pays for its own program.

At one time, there were 233 Public Safety advisers in Vietnam, 50 in Thailand and 10 in Laos. Public Safety supplied not only stndard police equipment—pistols, shotguns and tear gas—but heavy mortars, machineguns, helicopters and armored cars.

It also opened an "international police academy," known as "The Car Barn" for its location in an abandoned streetcar terminal in the Georgetown district of Washington. People who have seen it likened "The Car Barn" to a James Bond movie, with its firing ranges, intelligence and communications rooms and other facilities. It trained 4,758 foreign policemen over an 11-year period.

CIA Connections

Public Safety also runs more than a dozen training courses for foreign policemen in the United States under contract with the CIA, U.S. Border Patrol, FBI, the Army and other agencies.

Much of the controversy surrounding Public Safety centers on its connections with the CIA, its involvement in Indochin and its alleged predilection for teaching the tactics of political repression.

The CIA connection is no longer as secret as it once was. There was a time in Indochina when many an isolated province capital featured a team of beefy Americans wearing tinted Air Force glasses and dressed in conspicuously non-military sports clothes.

They lived in walled villas whose roofs sprouted odd-shaped antennas—and they usually went into hiding when a journalist showed up in town. AID officials tried to pass them off as "some of our police advisers." A spokesman once told this correspondent that they didn't want to be seen because they were "shy."

No more. The current public safety director, Lauren J. Goin, acknowledged in an interview that CIA operatives were hidden in the Special Branch and Border Patrol advisory teams in Vietnam and Thailand. Ind.

New Openness

One reason for the new openness is that AID itself has grown uneasy about CIA penetration in the face of a steady barrage of congressional criticism.

Goin acknowledges this, although he partly defends the connection.

"We are all Americans, and whether or not it is a comfortable relationship (with the CIA) is not really germane," he said. "But the fact that it existed at all created a misunderstanding about the purposes of the Public Safety Program in the minds of members of Congress."

Goin said every country uses the law as "a mechanism for behavioral control." But he said many underdeveloped countries use fear to enforce compliance with the law.

"Our doctrine is to turn that around 180 degrees—to get the police to operate in a way that makes their role acceptable to the people," he said.

Three Principles

This doctrine of "humane" law enforcement, Goin said, was one of the three basic principles laid down by President John F. Kennedy in 1962. The others were minimum use of force and concentration on countersubversion efforts.

The first two principles do not appear to have meshed very well with the third, at least in South Vietnam which contributed most to Public Safety's unpopularity in Congress.

Viet Cong terrorism in that country forced Public Safety to move South Vietnam in the same direction. Vietnam's police force swelled from 30,000 to 100,000 men between 1963 and 1972, many organized as paramilitary units.

About 33,000 operated at the village and hamlet level, which had never before been heavily policed. Their assignment was to help protect the peasants. Instead, they became a political arm of Saigon, stamping out non-Communist dissent as well as Communist terrorism.

Public Safety also master-minded programs under which every South Vietnamese had to carry an identity card and highway movement was controlled with an extensive series of checkpoints. Both programs led police to extract graft for minor infractions.

Central Police File

The identity program led to a vast computerized central police file used to keep track of political activity and control dissidents.

Ultimately, when the Americans decided to fight fire with fire as far as terrorism was concerned, Public Safety provided the cover for the CIA-funded "Phoenix" program designed "neutralize" the Viet Cong infrastructure.

Many of these "neutralizations" —which ran to 30,000 a year in the early 1970s—were nothing more or less than assassinations by "The Prues" — provisional reconnaissance units.

Critics contended—and some American advisers conceded—that arrests and assassinations often were made on the basis of faulty, second and third hand informtion.

But the Vietnamese practice that seems to have caused the most outrage in Congress was the jailing of tens of thousands of non-Communist dissidents for political offenses.

Tiger Cages

The outrage began when freelance journalist Don Luce took some visiting congressmen to Con Son island in 1970 to see the "Tiger Cages" —cement-lined pits roofed with bars and too shallow for a man to stand.

The prisoners, some students barely into their teens, were taken out only to be tortured. Unable to exercise, some lost the use of their legs through muscular atrophy.

Luce, who ultimtely was expelled from South Vietnam, has carried on a campaign against President Nguyen Van Thieu's government ever since. He and others charge that up to 200,000 non-Communist dissidents are imprisoned, many subject to daily beatings and torture.

The figure is disputed. Goin maintains that the maximum capacity of the jails is 60,000 "even if you stacked them in there shoulder to shoulder and butt to butt." A Senate subcommittee concluded there were 40,000 to 60,000 prisoners.

Sen. Abourezk recently gave his colleagues an alleged first-person account by the 14-year-old daughter of a Vietnamese journalist who belonged to the Saigon Student Union.

Torture Story

She said she was "beaten on the chest until I vomited blood. I was pinched on the thighs and buttocks until the blood came. They put sandbags on my body and beat me with a hammer, and then walked on me with boots."

True or not, the story helped strengthen a widespread feeling on Capitol Hill that the United States should stop advising South Vietnamese police. As a result, special prohibitions were written into the AID bill.

Goin acknowledged it may have been a mistake for Public Safety to get so deeply involved in Vietnam. But he adds that "you have to judge it in the context of the foreign policy decisions that were made at the time."

Nevertheless, there is lingering suspicion on the part of its opponents that the administration may yet try to keep the program alive, possible under an amendment that permits continued U.S. advisory activities in the fields of narcotics and antiskyjacking.

Intent of Congress

But an accompanying report says it is the intent of Congress that the advisers be withdrawn. And a congressional staffer familiar with the agreement says "they will be in lot of trouble over there" if the program does continue.

Abourezk said: "If you combine the money that keeps the economies of these banana dictatorships viable with the police training and the military aid we give them, you begin to see that we are using what is supposed to be a humanitarian program in a very inhumane way."

On that basis, Abourezk believes the 1974 election may give him the votes to kill AID itself.

"I'll go farther than that," he said. "I'll make a flat prediction. Next time around, we will beat it (the AID bill)."

Owens' Shot Gives Bucs 59-58 Victory

LEXINGTON, Va. — East Carolina University basketball coach Tom Quinn said Thursday that "our time will come" following two heartbreaking losses suffered by the Pirates, one in an overtime to American University, and the other a one-point defeat by Richmond with just four seconds left.

Last night, he may have been wondering just when that time would roll around, as the Virginia Military Institute Keydets rallied from 13 points down in the early minutes to take a 58-57 lead with just over a minute to play.

The Bucs, however, used fine ballhandling to control the ball down to the wire, and when they couldn't get the ball into big Nicky White, Donnie Owens canned a 20-foot jumper from the top of the key to give the Pirates a 59-58 victory.

The win evened the Southern Conference record off at 2-2 for the Pirates, and upped their overall mark to 5-6 for the year. VMI fell off to a 1-2 in the league and 4-7 overall.

The game was a cliffhanger for the final 15 minutes of play as the Keydets overcame some cold shooting in the first five minutes of the first half to come back strong from there on in.

East Carolina had broken out to a 16-3 lead in the first 12 minutes of the game, but the Keydets chipped away at the lead the rest of the way, finally taking the lead for the first time, 48-47. After that, the lead changed hands seven times before Owens shot hit the bottom of the nets with just two seconds left to go in the game.

Turnovers, rebounds and good outside shooting brought the Keydets back into the game and gave them the threat against the Pirates. VMI made 24 of 59 shots from the floor, but their outside men hit on 15 of 31 attempts, showing their strength. East Carolina made good on 25 of 50 shots.

The Keydets surprisingly outrebounded the Pirates, 29-24, with Will Bynum leading them with eight. Nicky White had eight for East Carolina.

Turnovers were also important, as the Bucs had 20 and VMI had 16.

The Keydets were ice cold at the start, going four and a half minutes without a point, and over five minutes without a basket from the floor.

East Carolina jumped out to an 8-0 lead on two shots by White and one each by Roger Atkinson and Owens. Steve Chapin broke the ice for the Keydets with a free throw and Curt Reppart followed with their first basket with 14:22 left.

Robert Geter, and White each hit buckets and Owens canned two in a row to run the Bucs out to a 16-3 lead, and it appeared then that they would rout the Keydets.

But VMI had a different idea. Slowly but surely they chopped away at the Pirates, slowly bringing them to their knees as the margin dipped lower and lower.

Reppart got a goal-tending call against White, and Bynum hit. John Krovic and Gordie Rawlyk both hit cutting the lead to 16-11. It stayed right around that level much of the rest of the first half.

East Carolina went back out by nine, 26-17, but VMI promptly cut it back to five again. They trimmed it to four at 27-23 on a tap-in by George Borojevich, but the Bucs eased back in front on two free throws by Marsh and a shot by Larry Hunt to hold a 35-28 halftime lead.

Early in the second half, Chapin and Krovic hit jumpers to cut it back to three again, 37-32, but East Carolina matched shots with them until Rawlyk got a goal tending call against White again to trim it to 41-40.

But the Bucs continued to hold them off until with 8:43 left, Chapin hit from underneath for a 48-47 VMI lead, their first of the night.

Marsh tossed in a missed shot to put the Bucs back up, but Chapin also hit off a rebound to put VMI back up on top. Marsh got two from the charity stripe, but Bynum countered with two free throws of his own, and VMI led for the third time.

White hit from underneath, then made good on two free throws and another basket to run the Pirates back into a 57-52 lead with about three minutes to go.

But VMI didn't give up and fought back on two baskets by Reppart and Bynum to cut it to one again. Reppart hit once more with 1:29 left to put VMI on top again, 58-57.

East Carolina used the next 1:27 to move the ball around the court. Four times, at 1:15, 50 seconds, 27 seconds and nine seconds, they called time out to make plans.

The Bucs wanted the ball to get in to White for a high percentage shot, but when the time came, VMI quickly doubleteamed him, and Owens lofted the ball up from the top of the circle. It stripped the nets with two seconds left, and the Bucs had finally pulled one out.

White led the Buc scoring with 16 points, while Marsh added 12. For VMI, Reppart had 16, Krovic had 12 and Chapin had 11.

The Pirates, after a month-long road trip, finally pay their first 1974 visit to Minges Coliseum on Monday night when they entertain Appalachian State University at 8 p.m. The Baby Bucs will host Lenoir in a 5:45 preliminary.

Towe Sparks State Victory

RALEIGH (AP)—With 5-7 guard Monte Towe leading in applying a sticky man-to-man full court press all the way, fourth-ranked N.C. State chalked up a 96-68 Atlantic Coast Conference triumph over Clemson Saturday.

"The press hurt us worse than anything," said Clemson Coach Tates Locke after the game.

The lead changed hands several times in the early going, but the Wolfpack went out front to stay late in the first period and scored the last 15 points of the first half to register a 46-30 half time lead.

The game was very physical during the first half with 19 fouls called. One of these fouls resulted in Clemson's Jeff Reifsinger being ousted from the game. Reifsinger and State's David Thompson had a scuffle, and Reifsinger was ousted shortly later when he fouled State's Tommy Burleson.

Towe led the scoring with 19 points while Thompson had 16 and Burleson 11. Van Gregg led Clemson with 15 points.

State's Coach Norm Sloan said he was "very pleased with the game and the way we played. Our defense is getting better all along."

Miller Moves Into Golf Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Johnny Miller, who won in cold and rain last week, fashioned a five-under-par 66 in bright, warm sunshine Saturday and moved into a share of the third-round lead in the $150,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Miller, the current U.S. Open champion, had a 54-hole total of 204 and was tied at that figure—nine under par on the 6,709-yard Phoenix Country Club Course—with balding veteran Miller Barber.

The 42-year-old Barber managed a 67 despite a double-bogey five when his tee shot found one of the new lakes on the 15th hole.

John Mahaffey lurked only one stroke off the leaders' pace after a 66 gave him a 205 total.

Veteran Gene Littler and six others were tied for third at 207, just three strokes back going into the last 18 holes of the chase for a $30,000 first prize.

Littler, who capped his comeback from cancer with a victory at St. Louis last year, took advantage of the near-perfect playing conditions to forge a 65.

He was tied with Lanny Wadkins, Hale Irwin, Jim Colbert, Phil Rodgers and Canadian Bern Kern. Kern and Irwin had 67s while Wadkins, Rodgers and Colbert posted 69s in the generally low scoring.

Bob Wynn, the second-round leader slipped to a 73 and was in a group at 208.

Defending champion Bruce Crampton of Australia and flamboyant Lee Trevino were out of it. They were tied at 217, 13 strokes behind. Each had a 72. Tom Weiskopf failed to qualify for the final two rounds. Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer are not competing.

"I didn't hit my irons as good as I did the first two days," Miller said, "But I finally got that good putting round I was looking for."

The lanky blond needed only 27 strokes on the greens. He had three birdies in a row at one stretch, holed a pair of 15-footers for birdies and got still another from 20 feet.

Miller missed only one green, the fourth, where he got his only bogey. He had to birdie the 18th from six feet to stay in a tie with the scrambling Barber.

Barber, winner of $100,000 in the rich World Open last fall, held the lead most of the day but dropped back when he made the watery double-bogey on the 15th.

He threw a short iron close for a birdie on the next hole, faltered again with a three-putt on the 17th, but dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on the last hole to stay in a tie for the top spot.

North Wins, 16-13, On Late Jaynes TD Aerial

By ED SHEARER

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — David Jaynes of Kansas fired a 17-yard touchdown strike to Southern California's Lynn Swann with 26 seconds remaining Saturday as the North All-Stars rallied for a 16-13 victory over the South in the Silver Anniversary Senior Bowl football game.

Jaynes completed four passes in the 80-yard drive to victory and the North was also helped by a 19-yard pass interference call against the South as the Yankees trimmed the Rebel lead to 14-9-2 in the series that launches professional careers for the players.

The North surged to an early 9-0 lead on a 31-yard field goal by Nebraska's Rich Sanger and a one-yard plunge by Bo Matthews of Colorado.

However, the South, turning to some daring fourth-down gambling, rallied on a 35-yard field goal by Greg Gantt of Alabama and a two-yard scoring run by Arizona State's Woody Green to take a 13-9 lead early in the fourth quarter.

Green's touchdown was set up by Wilbur Jackson's 53-yard run to the North two where the Alabama star was nailed from behind by speedster Jeris White of Hawaii.

Green's touchdown came on a fourth down play and Gantt's 35-yard field goal followed a fake fourth-down punt when Jackson took the center snap and raced seven yards for a first down at the North 29.

Gantt also accounted for the South's other score, a 27-yard field goal early in the second period.

The victory was worth $1,500 for each of the 31 North stars while the losing Southern players each collected $1,250.

The nationally televised battle, played in windy, 45-degree weather, saw a defensive lineman acclaimed the most valuable player—Bill Kollar, an Associated Press Little All-American from Montana State. Kollar was a standout throughout the game, repeatedly knocking down Southern runners for losses and recovering a fumble. The prize was a 1974 automobile for Kollar.

John Cappelletti of Penn State, the Heisman Trophy winner, was chosen the North's outstanding offensive player after rushing for 48 yards in 12 carries and grabbing eight passes for 153 yards.

Cappelletti caught passes of 18 and 15 yards from Stanford's Mike Boryla in the North's first touchdown drive and also slashed 12 yards to the one to set up Matthews' touchdown plunge.

Other game awards, each worth $2,500, went to John Dutton of Nebraska, quarterback Danny White of Arizona State and defensive back Roscoe Word, Jackson State.

The South appeared to have registered an upset when it took the lead early in the fourth quarter and then choked off the North attack the rest of the way until the closing 80-yard drive to victory.

Jaynes and Swann, a pair of All-Americans, combined on a 15-yard pass play at the start before the interference call put the North in business at the South 45.

Jaynes then connected with Penn State's Gary Hayman for 12 yards and two plays later four Cappelletti on the left sideline for 16 more to the South 17.

Following an incompletion, Jaynes avoided a heavy South rush and rifled his touchdown shot to Swann cutting in front of the goal post.

ASU Upsets The Citadel

BOONE, N. C. (AP)—Stan Davis scored 23 points and paced Appalachian State to an easy victory over The Citadel, 90-72, in a Southern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The Mountaineers scored 10 straight points early in the first period, with Davis connecting for most on jumpers, and pulled ahead by 10 points on their way to a 42-33 halftime lead.

The Citadel never got closer than 13 points after about five minutes of the second period. Grag Weber led the Bulldogs with 17 points.

It was Appalachian State's first conference victory and only its second in nine starts this season. The Citadel now is 2-1 in the conference and 7-3 overall.

Appalachian State's scoring included 40 of 53 free throws in a game marked by frequent calls by the officials. The Mountaineers were charged with 34 infractions and The Citadel with 37.

Cats Stun Paladins

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Davidson's 62 per cent shooting average was too much for Furman Saturday night, and the North Carolina visitors won the Southern Conference basketball contest, 91-76.

Larry Horowitz and Mike Sorrentino, each with 20 points, spurred Davidson to the victory.

The loss dropped Furman to 3-1 in the conference, in which it had been in a first place tie with The Citadel.

Furman outrebounded Davidson by a wide margin, as Fessor Leonard and Clyde Mayes each snared 13 of their team's 46. Davidson managed to get only 29 rebounds to second place.

But a 36.6 per cent shooting percentage was Furman's undoing, although it stayed close on the scoreboard until the final six minutes

Davidson then surged ahead by getting numerous one-and-one chances at the free throw line and making most of them.

Free Throws Bring Win

COLUMBIA (AP)—South Carolina capitalized on one-and-one free throws in the late stages to take a 75-61 intersectional basketball victory against Manhattan.

The 15th ranked South Carolina team was led by Brian Winters, senior guard, who hit 13 of 14 from the foul line in getting a total of 23 points. Most of his charity points came in the closing minutes.

South Carolina, an independent, is now 9-2 for the season, while Manhattan dropped to 7-4.

When Manhattan, shooting well, tied up the game just before the half, Coach Frank McGuire switched the South Carolina zone defense to a man-to-man. That enabled his team to go to the locker room with a 42-31 halftime advantage.

The team stayed in the zone for the rest of the game.

Bill Campion led Manhattan's rebounding effoirt with 16, whle Mike Young was top scorer for the visitors with 16. South Carolina hit 42 per cent of its floor shots to Manhattan's 38 per cent, and got 42 rebounds to 35 for the visitors.

Carolina Gains 87-75 Decision

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Bobby Jones and Mitch Kupchak keyed a North Carolina surge early in the first half Saturday and the fifth-ranked Tar Heels beat back a last minute Virginia rally for an 87-75 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory.

Darrell Elston, who finished with 26 points, started the 18-6 run with a field goal that gave the Tar Heels the lead for good at 8:06, and the Tar Heels held a 47-34 lead at halftime after Virginia once had cut the gap to eight points.

But North Carolina, which tied Maryland for the ACC lead at 2-0, almost let things get out of hand after building its advantage to 63-46 with 10:26 left in the game.

The Cavaliers, led by Gus Gerard and Wally Walker, narrowed the deficit to 69-65 with 5:21 left and got to within three points at 72-69 on a Gerard field goal with 1:45 remaining.

Then North Carolina put it away on two free throws by freshman Walter Davis, a basket by Elston and a three-point play by Kupchak in less than a minute.

Jones finished with 21 points, Kupchak with 18 and Davis with 12 for the Tar Heels, now 10-1 over-all.

Gerard scored 30 points and Walker had 20 for Virginia, now 2-1 in the ACC and 5-5 over-all.

Tar Heels Dunk Buc Swimmers

The University of North Carolina took an early lead and gained a 68-45 victory over the East Carolina University swimming team here yesterday.

James Southard won two events for the Tar Heels, the 200-yard freestyle and the 200 yard backstroke. John Kolesaire was also a double winner for the Heels, gaining the 200 individual medley and the 500 freestyle.

Jack Morrow won both the one and three-meter diving events to spark the Pirate scoring.

"Carolina is a very, very strong team," Coach Ray Scharf said afterwards. "We had a tremendous team effort. Sixty-five percent of our swimmers had ther best times of the season and it was a much closer meet than the score indicates because so many of the races were very close right down to the wire.

Overall, Carolina won eight of the 13 events during the meet as it boosted its record to 4-0 overall. The Pirates fell off to 1-1 in dual competition.

The Pirates travel to West Point, N.Y. on Saturday to meet Army and St. John's, then return home on Tuesday, January 22, to host tough N.C. State, one of the South's top teams.

Vikes, Dolphins Set For Battle

By WICK TEMPLE
AP Sports Editor

HOUSTON (AP) — Miami's mechanical Dolphins, hoping for strong legs for receiver Paul Warfield, are six-point favorites to defeat the Minnesota Vikings in the eighth Super Bowl game Sunday.

Kickoff time is 3:30 p.m. EDT at Rice Stadium, where the Astroturf surface may be damp from week-long rain. The U.S. Weather Service, which hasn't been right one day this week, predicted a cloudy afternoon with temperatures in the 50s but no rain.

The Dolphins, who depend on Warfield's long-range catching ability to open the opposing defense for runners Larry Csonka and Mercury Morris, expected to see their flashy receiver in action despite what was called a hamstring pull suffered in practice Wednesday.

The injury was kept secret for a day before Coach Don Shula revealed it. The Dolphins' stock dived until team trainer Larry Gardner noted there was no swelling and said Warfield would be ready for action Sunday.

The Vikings, more of a passing team, sailed into the Super Bowl on the throwing of Fran Tarkenton. They must stop the violent running game of the Dolphins and shake receivers free to get Tarkenton a target.

Their chore borders on the impossible—Miami has won 21 of 23 games in the last two seasons with a professional, cool, calculating approach to Shula's demands.

"We expected to win," Csonka said after the Dolphins' 27-10 playoff victory over Oakland in which quarterback Bob Griese threw only six passes.

It could be a dull game as most Super Bowls have been because no one likes to take a chance in the big one.

The defenses could make it a virtual draw were it not for the unstoppable Csonka who has run for more than 1,000 yards for three straight seasons. He ground out 117 steps against Oakland in the American Football Conference championship game and scored three touchdowns on 29 carries.

Miami defensive tackle Manny Fernandez, one of the stars of the Dolphins' 14-7 Super Bowl victory over Washington last year, had what was termed a high fever Friday and did not practice.

But flu bugs have flirted with several players this week, including Csonka, and there was little doubt in the Dolphin camp that Fernandez would perform.

The game will be telecast over CBS-TV to an audience of possibly 75 million in the United States, Mexico, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Puero Rico, Germany, Australia, England and American servicemen around the world via the Armed Forces TV Network.

For the broadcast rights, CBS paid $2.75 million. The network is charging up to $210,000 a minute for commercials. Some 1,500 writers and radio and television reporters are covering the game. NFL statisticians figure that the newspaper writers alone would send more than 3.5 million words about it this week.

Super Bowl week in Houston has turned out to be Mardi Gras and New Year's Eve rolled into one. The total dollar flow was expected to exceed the $16 million Los Angeles realized in Super Bowl VII.

The game is being held in somewhat antiquated Rice Stadium instead of the Astrodome because it seats 20,000 more people.

The stadium was a sellout at 72,000 seats. There were reports of scalpers asking $150 for a $15 ticket.

Writers conducted a straw poll and the tally was running was 2-to-1 for the Dolphins.

Oddsmaker Jimmy The Greek Snyder favored the Dolphins by six points.

The Pirates had bowed to Mt. Olive by one point in the opening round of the tournament, while Louisburg was beaten by UNC-Charlotte.

East Carolina led briefly at the start of the game, but Louisburg quickly took command as they forced the Bucs into a number of turnovers.

From there, Louisburg pulled out into a 43-30 lead by the end of the first half of play.

In the second half, things got no better for the Baby Bucs as Louisburg tossed in 54 points, while East Carolina got 46, never able to close the gap.

Rose Rally Falls Short, Cougars Win

Rose High School's Rampants rallied from 11 points down in the second half and finally tied up the Goldsboro Cougars with 3:48 left in the game, but their rally ran out of steam there. Goldsboro canned its next four field goal attempts, plus four of four from the free throw line to run away with a 70-59 victory Friday night.

Rose had trailed most of the night, after briefly leading 2-0 at the start.

Chief reason for the Rampant loss was the tough field goal percentage by the Cougars, who hit on 31 of 54 shots for a fiery 57.4 percent. The Rampants, meanwhile, made good on only 24 of 62 for a much poorer 38.7 percent.

The Rampants held their own against the tall Cougars on the backboards, but their ball handling also left a little to be desired. Then, toward the end, the Cougars went into a semi-stall situation after they had had built their lead back up again.

It was one of the better Rampant efforts, however, as they fought back but just were unable to sustain their drive against the Goldsboro five.

Rose took the opening lead after 11 seconds with Linwood Brown connected from the corner on a jumper. But 14 seconds later, Ron Broadhurt tied it up for Goldsboro, and with 6:44 left in the period, Stewart Melvin tapped in a ball for a 4-2 lead. Although it was tied several times after that, Goldsboro never trailed again.

Rose tied it up at 4-4, 6-6, 8-8, 10-10, 12-12, and 14-14, as the two teams raced up and down the court trading baskets, and looking as if they were never going to miss.

But finally, however, Rose did, and Broadhurst took advantage of it to put Goldsboro ahead, 16-14 with 2:11 left. He hit from underneath a minute later, then Ben Uzzell hit with 51 seconds to go for a 20-14 lead that held to the buzzer.

Uzzell opened the gap to eight points with a goal 30 seconds into the second period. Rose cut it back by four, but couldn't come any closer as Goldsboro matched them for several shots, then saw their lead cut to 26-24 on a jumper by Herb Bynum. Rose couldn't tie it up, however, as Goldsboro came back with two buckets, one each by Michael Edwards and Broadhurst for a 30-24 lead.

Then, with a minute left, Melvin tapped in another bucket to up the lead to nine, 38-29, and that margin held, 40-31, at the half.

Less than two minutes into the second half, Goldsboro gained its biggest lead of the night, prior to their final pull away, when Melvin's follow-up shot hit for a 46-35 lead. Rose matched Goldsboro most of the rest of the period, and then cut it to eight at the end of the frame, 56-48.

The Cougars went cold at the start of the period, missing their first three shots of the frame, and making only one of their first eight. Rose used that time to rally.

Robert Brinkley opened the period with a jumper and Brown hit on another, then got two free throws to cut the lead to 56-54. Edwards hit from underneath for the Cougars, but Brown contered that with a jumper.

Then, with 3:48 left, Ronnie Barrett hit from the corner to tie it at 58-58, and it looked like the momentum had swung to the Rampants.

But it was only a brief glimpse of what might have been, as the Cougars spurted away. Edwards hit a jumper just four seconds later to return Goldsboro to a 60-68 lead.

Broadhurst hit with 2:48 showing to up it to four and Melvin canned two free throws. Uzzell added two more from the line and Broadhurst drove in for another basket. Edwards finished it up with a basket with only 12 seconds left.

Bynum was fouled as the horn went off, and he hit one of his two fee throws for the final 70-59 score, as the Rampants were outhit 12-1 in those final three-plus minutes.

Broadhurst led the Goldsboro scoring with 18 points, while Edwards finished with 16. Uzzell had 14 and Melvin had 12.

For the Rampants, Bynum had 17, Barrett had 15 and Brown hit 12.

The Rampant Cubs won their second game of the year, taking a 45-40 victory over the Cougar Cubs in the preliminary.

Rose rushed out to a big lead in the first period as Goldsboro got only one field goal, and that in the final minute of play. Rose held a 13-5 lead as the period ended. They were unable to extend that in the second frame, however, as Goldsboro rallied, 9-6, and cut the lead to 19-14 at halftime.

They closed the gap to as little as three in the third period, but Rose spurted away again in the final minute of play to outscore them 12-9, and lead, 31-23. A five-point play, that came on a one-and-one, a technical foul, and a basket after the inbounds, sparked the Cubs throught the final period. Goldsboro out hit them, 17-14, but it wasn't enough.

Gerald Holloway led Rose with 20 points. Morrisey had 17 and Sykes had 10 for Goldsboro.

The Rampants, still looking for win number two, travel to Bertie on Friday. Their Tuesday game with Rocky Mount has been postponed until January 26.

UNC—Charlotte's junior varsity gained an 81-72 triumph over Louisburg in the first game of the eveing, and was to meet the Trojans for the title Saturday night. East Carolina and Louisburg met in the consolation game.

The first half of the game was a nip-and-tuck affair for the first 10 minutes with Mt. Olive gaining a 23-22 lead at that point and leading the rest of the period. They hit 12 in a row and went out into a 43-32 lead with two minutes left and held that margin for a 49-38 halftime lead.

East Carolina stole the ball before the Trojans got it back across midcourt, and ran the clock down to six seconds when Modlin was fouled again. Conley Drops First To Ayden-Grifton

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD—Earlier in the season, when the Ayden-Grifton Chargers were having trouble getting their feet on the ground, their coach, Bob Murphrey said that, "No one in the conference would go unbeaten this year." His statement came true Friday afternoon.

D. H. Conley, the only remaining undefeated team in the Eastern Conference, traveled to A-G 9-0 but returned home, 9-1. A-G, definitely "up" for the game beat the Vikings on the free throw line 11-5 and that six point difference proved to be the resulting margin of the Charger victory. 63-57.

In the earlier girls' game, the Ayden-Grifton Lady Chargers also came away with a win, 46-16.

The two schools met in a J. V. game on Thursday night and A-G took that contest also, 66-63 in a close battle.

The Charger girls rolled up a 14-4 lead in the first quarter of their game and eased their way to the win. A-G added 13 to the Valkyries' seven in the second period to lead 27-11 at halftime.

In the second half, Conley was bested 19-5 netting the final score.

Kelly Reeves and Debra Barfield led the Lady Chargers with 10 each while Rosa Adams had six for the Valkyries.

But the boy's game proved to be the matchup it was expected to be. Although the Vikings never held the lead in the game and at one point trailed by as much as 14, they hung in the game and gave the Chargers a tough time of it. Only in the first quarter were the Vikings out of the contest. If that period had been different, the Vikes may have been the winner instead.

The first points came on a bucket by Melvin Stewart which gave the Chargers a 2-0 lead after 1:20 had elapsed. It was matched by a jumper from the lane by Conley's Larry Daniels tieing the game, 2-2, but the Chargers went right back on top, 4-2 as Travis Woods hit from the free throw stripe.

Buddy Phillips pulled the Vikings into a tie again scoring on a lay-up but on almost a repeat of the same play, Jessie Brown scored for A-G giving them the lead back.

Daniels tapped din a rebound to tie the game for the last time and the two free shots by Woods that followed at 4:25 put the Chargers in front for the rest of the game.

Danny Garris scored the first of his four field goals soon after giving A-G a 10-6 lead and two more free shots by Woods made the gap 12-6 with 2:56 left in the frame. Rick Mobley cut it to four for Conley blasting a shot in from outside, 12-8, but six straignt points, a field goal by Milton Brown, one by Woods and a pair of charity shots by Woods spread it out to ten, 18-8 as the quarter ended.

The rest of the game was nip-and-tuck despite the score. The Vikings fought back and pulled within six twice but never could they close the gap any more.

Stewart ran the lead to 20-8 as the second period opened with two free shots but Gerry and Rick Mobley sank jumpers from 20 feet to move within eight, 20-12. The two buckets were matched by Garris and Woods as they hit from the A-G corners to make the 24-12 with 5:56 left in the half. Gerry Mobley scored on a pair of swishes, 24-16 only to have one of the baskets erased by Jessie Brown's lay-up.

After trading baskets, the Vikes narrowed the margin to six points, 28-22 with 2:10 left in the half on two free throws by Milton Ticker and field goal by Daniels. The six point lead stood as the second period closed, 30-24.

The third quarter was pretty ever, pointwise. A-G added 15 as the Vikings got 14. Most of the scoring was swapping baskets. The Chargers never held more than an eight point lead at best as Conley kept the pressure on the A-G defense. Conley cut the margin to four on an outside bucket by Gerry Mobley, 36-32, with 4:36 left in the period but the Chargers moved back out three minutes later to eight, 42-34. A-G added three more points in the last minute of the quarter to make the score 45-38.

The teams remained the same distance apart well into the last period until Woods and Milton Brown scored for the Chargers to get back the ten-point lead, 53-43. Clennel Streeter brought it back to eight with free shots only to see Garris score matching Streeter's effort. Daniels slipped in a field goal but Milton Brown scored twice and Woods did it from outside lifting A-G out to 61-47.

In the last minute-and-a-half, the Vikings scored ten points to just two for the Chargers but time ran out on them before they could get any closer than 63-57.

Woods had one of his best games getting 23 points to lead the scoring. Stewart had 14 and Milton Brown 12 for A-G. Daniels' 17 paced the Vikings and Streeter had 10.

The win gave the Chargers a measure of revenge in that the Vikings beat Ayden-Grifton in last year's conference tournament in the championship game taking the crown.

North Lenoir Nips Panthers By 56-55

BETHEL — North Lenior held its ground in the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday night, slipping to a 56-55 victory over North Pitt in the last seconds of play.

The Big Orange Machine recored its 12th straight win of the year, rolling to a 60-33 win in the girls' game. The North Lenior junior varsity won its contest, 42-32.

The North Pitt boys suffered a heartbreaking loss, having a one-point lead and the ball with less than 30 seconds to go. They took a shot, however, missed it, and the Hawks got the rebound, converting it into a victory with just five seconds in the game.

The game was tight most of the way. Neither team could gain much of an advantage in the first period of play, which ended in a 12-12 tie. It stayed close throughout the rest of the half, but North Lenior inched ahead, 26-23 at the horn, on the basis of a 14-11 scoring margin.

North Pitt put it all together in the third period, shooting into the lead. They dumped in 22 points, while holding the Hawks to 13, gaining a 45-39 lead. But the Hawks rallied in the final frame, tieing the score on three occasions.

The last time it was tied was at 54-54, and with 1:21 left in the game, a technical foul was charged against North Lenior. Vincent Barnill canned the shot, giving the Panthers a 55-54 lead. They stalled the ball most of the rest of the way, but finally lost it when an attempted shot was missed. North Lenior swept the boards, got the ball down, and Gary Battle hit for the win with just five seconds on the clock.

Battle led the Hawk scoring with 23 points, while Mike Miller had 14. Barnhill was high for North Pitt with 20, while Donnie Perkins added 12.

In the girls' game, North Pitt had little trouble in disposing of the Lady Hawks. The Big Orange rushed out into a 20-5 lead by the end of the first period and coasted after that. They outhit North Lenior, 13-6, in the second frame, to build up a 33-11 halftime lead.

North Pitt again outshot their foe, 13-6, in the third period, running their lead out to 46-17. North Lenior outhit them in the final quarter, 16-14, but for naught.

Debbie Pollard led North Pitt with 14 points, while no one had double figures for the Hawks.

North Pitt will play host to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday.

Eagles Capture Win In Overtime

TARBORO —. Robersonville High School swept a three-game set from North Edgecombe Friday night, but it took an overtime for the boys to squeek out a 76-75 victory.

The girls took a 39-33 win, while the junior varsity won, 53-38.

In the boys' contest, North Edgecombe slipped out into a 20-18 lead after one period of play. It stayed close through the second period also, as the Warriors outhit Robersonville again, 20-19. That made it 40-37 as the half ended.

Robersonville came back with a 14-13 edge in the third quarter, and trailed only 53-51 going into the final frame. They moved out into the lead in the last period, but Kelvin Barnes hit in the final minute of play to tie it up, 69-69. Robersonville had a shot at the end, but missed, forcing the overtime.

Percy Mooring stole the ball early in the overtime, putting the Eagles into the lead. He then got it again, tossing to Tryone Little for another bucket. But Barnes and Kevin Roberts each hit for the Warriors to tie it at 73-73 again. Ernest Crandall then got two free throws, and Mooring added what proved to be the winning point from the line for a 76-73 lead. Two free throws cut the lead to 76-75, but North Edgecombe didn't get the ball again as the Eagles ran out the clock for the win.

Crandall and Little led the Robersonville scoring with 22 points, while Jeffrey Spruill had 18. For the warriors, Barnes had 30, Donald Thorne had 15 and Roberts had 14.

In the girls' game, Robersonville pushed into a 13-8 lead after one period of play. They outhit North Edgecombe, 11-7, in the second quarter to boost the lead to 24-15.

North Edgecombe cut a point off the margin in the third quarter 8-7, but still was down, 31-23. They cut another two off off in the final frame, 10-8, but it was too little.

Elaine Forrest led Robersonville with 17 points, while Beatrice Forrest had 11. Barbara Davis led North Edgecombe with 13.

Robersonville will play host to North Johnston on Tuesday.

Late Quail Hunt Can Be Success

By JIM DEAN

Quail hunting at the beginning of the season is quite different from quail hunting towards the end of the season.

The season usually opens with coveys sitting tight and dogs ranging wide. By the time January arrives, the dogs have settled down, but the quail are often flushing wild, well ahead of the dogs. Also during the later part of the season, the quail seem to spend less time in the fields, preferring instead the comfort of thick cover in the bottomlands.

Yet, lots of hunters fail to change their tactics as the season progresses, and I suspect it costs them a few birds in the final wrapup.

The importance of changing your hunting tactics as the season advances was something that never occurred to me until a couple of years ago. I usually hunt the same few farms year after year, and I always seem to take the same route. It's nothing but habit.

On one of my favorite farms, the dogs are so familiar with the terrain that they have fallen into the same bad habit. They go to the same fields and hunt them the same way on nearly every trip.

A few years ago, I became interested in hunting woodcocks, and knowing that woodcocks are found in the swampy bottomlands along creeks, I began to take the dogs on new routes. I expected to find timberdoodles, and I did.

What I didn't expect was to find more quail. But that was one of the more pleasant results.

If you're an experienced quail hunter, you have probably already figured out why. Since I was re-routing the dogs into new territory, they no longer had the tendency to hunt only those places where they had found quail before. Instead, they had to depend more strongly on their noses, and they hunted more thoroughly.

Also, since we were spending more time in thick cover along the bottomlands—and since it was late in the season—we were actually hunting areas where there were more quail.

That year, I killed more quail than in any previous season, and I had the bonus of getting more numerous shots at woodcocks. The dogs, by the way, pointed the timberdoodles as quickly as they did the quail, though they did not seem to want to retrieve them. That was no big problem, however, since I didn't hit many anyway.

My guess is that most quail hunters are—like me—creatures of habit. They hunt the same farms year after year and they follow familiar grooves. The result, I think, is poorer hunting.

There are about two months left in the 73-74 quail season (it ends February 28). If you'd like to see whether this theory proves true for you, try it on your next hunt. Even if you're hunting a familiar farm, instead of touring the fields in the same direction, try switching your route. Start out in the opposite direction and run your route backwards. Also, spend more time in the thick bottoms and woods.

My guess is that your dogs will find more birds for you.

Tar Heel Outdoors: New Book Is Natural

By JOEL ARRINGTON

Nelson Bryant has been a gravedigger, deckhand, fish and game commissioner, newspaper editor, and, for several years, has been writing the "Woods, Field and Stream" column which appears regularly in the New York Times.

Hanson Caroll is a photographer whose work has appeared in American Sportsman, Field & Stream, Outdoor Life, Sports Afield, Sports Illustrated and Vermont Life, among other periodicals.

That they should collaborate on a book is, at the same time, as natural as sunrise and as unlikely as a total eclipse. It is a natural because their work in word and photograph has in common the rare qualities, at least in outdoor publications, of drama, art and truth. It is unlikely because there are no two more different people on the face of this once-green earth.

Bryant is a well read country boy who can be, and often is, as sophisticated and urbane as any situation demands. Carroll is a middle-aged boy whose cameras, like his canoes, motorcycles, guns and rods are more toys to him than tools of his profession. That he should be one of the most successful outdoor photographers in the land is as incongruous as Nelson Bryant succeeding as a ballet dancer.

But collaborate they did in what in the publishing business is called a Christmas book. The Wildfowler's World (Winchester Press, 127 pp., $12.95) is a marriage of words and pictures that promises to be a classic that fathers will give sons, waterfowl widows will give frost-bitten husbands on special occasions, and other writers and photographers of the outdoor fraternity will envy for years.

If there has ever been a better collection of waterfowl photographs or a more successful attempt to write what waterfowl gunning is all about, I have yet to see it.

There are photographs of ducks against an icy Currituck sunrise, of rare decoys and old shotguns, of black retrievers flecked with snow and of Canada geese above the surf at Cape Hatteras. With them are evocative and often poetic captions that reflect a life in and a love of rich-smelling marsh mud, wind-blown icewater, gray days and bright ones, goose blinds and duck boats.

The quality of photographs is not uniform, but the number of cliche shots is minimal and dynamite photos go off on every other page. Bryant only occasionally is sentimental, but for the most part, his captions are sincerely moving and consistently to the the point.

In fortunate combination, the on-target prose and incomparable photographs bring back to waterfowl gunners their miserable and glorious days afloat and afield. It gives nonhunters a measure of understanding of the sport's fascination to those who pursue its tradition-filled drama and revel in its discomforts and pleasures.

Perhaps the most difficult photograph to make successfully is one of a dead duck. Carroll does it perfectly in a tightly cropped shot of blue and brown wing feathers over a brightly scaled foot beside a decoy.

Exquisite detail, mood, action and tradition are parts of the waterfowl gunner's sport. Carroll and Bryant put them together in The Wildfowler's World.

Plans Underway For Sail Event

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — Plans already are under way for staging the second interntional Operation Sail, to be held in 1976, with more than a dozen nations so far indicating they will participate.

The event will be patterned after the first Operation Sail, in 1964, when square-riggers and smaller craft representing 13 nations sailed to these shores from Europe, South America, Canada and the Far East.

Operation Sail '64 began with a race from Plymouth, England, to Lisbon, Portugal, then 3,000 miles across the Atlantic to a Bermuda rendezvous, followed by a 630-mile northwest run to New York harbor.

Plans for Operation Sail '76 call for a race from Spain to Bermuda, scheduled for June, 1976. From Bermuda, the sailing craft will proceed in company to Newport, R.I. for five days of regatt activities, then sail to New York for a rendezvous in Sandy Hook Bay.

On Sunday morning, July 4, 1976, the flotilla will parade under full sail up into New York harbor to launch a gala week of festivities. These will include a parade by an expected 4,000 crew members from Battery Park to City Hall, a Grand Ball, sporting events and sightseeing tours.

In 1964, a host of dignitaries viewed the sail-by of the flotilla from a U.S. Navy aircraft carrier, the Randolph, as it moved up the Hudson River. Robert F. Wagner, then New York City mayor, extended the official welcome to "those bold and courageous young men from many lands."

Operation Sail '76 is scheduled to coincide with the bicentennial of the United States. While it is not a government project, it will be part of the official activities.

Charlie Harris led the Happy Store with 43 points, while Lonnie Payton had 25. For the Exchange no one hit double figures.

Kentucky Fried Chicken picked up a 76-40 romp over Carolina Dairy. By the end of the half, KFC had run up a 34-18 lead. They finished it off with a 42-22 margin in the second half over the Dairymen.

Kris Dominick led the KFC scoring with 25 points, while Gene Rackley and Al Faber each had 13 and Bruck Tucker had 10. Lester Wells led Carolina Dairy with 16, while Mike Ward had 10.

Wildlife Afield: Don't Pass Up Winter Fishing

By JIM DEAN

In recent years, some impressive strings of chain pickerel, largemouth bass and crappies have convinced me that one of the best times to fish is in the dead of winter.

I was a long time coming to this conclusion because, like most sportsmen, I have always hunted during the cold months.

My introduction to winter fishing was largely an accident.

One unseasonably warm January day a couple of years ago, I was restlessly poking around the house trying to decide whether to go try to shoot a quail or two.

"I don't know why you want to go hunting today," said my wife. "It feels more like fishing weather."

It did, indeed. I grabbed my casting rod, a box of plugs, a paddle and a cushion and headed for a lake not far from home. The lake has a good population of chain pickerel and I figured that I'd at least have a chance at catching one or two. After all, everybody knows jacks hit plugs avidly in cold water.

That afternoon stands out as one of the most enjoyable fishing experiences I've ever had. On three of the first four casts, I caught chain pickerel. The biggest was 24 inches long. Although, the action slowed after that, I wound up catching and releasing a bunch of jacks and two or three nice bass.

Through the rest of that winter and the following one, I tried to fish at least once every week or so, and my fishing diary shows that I caught fish on all but a few trips. Once the lake I was fishing was frozen solid, and on several other occasions, I failed to get a strike. But on most of the trips, I averaged catching at least three chain pickerel—and sometimes more.

Best of all, I had surprising luck on largemouth bass, some of them real busters. I even caught bass on a flyrod and streamer, the best fish being a three and a half pounder that jumped on a large white bucktail streamer one frigid February day.

I am convinced that you can duplicate this fishing. First, decide on a nearby lake that you know has a good fish population. Try to pick a lake that has chain pickerel in it because even if the bass don't cooperate, you can usually figure on getting some action with jacks.

I have had good luck in all kinds of weather, but I prefer to fish on clear days with the temperature climbs into the high 40s or 50s simply because it's more comfortable.

Both of my favorite winter lakes are old millponds and they have plenty of stumps and brush along the banks. I fish these banks by casting plugs as close to the cover and banks as possible. Both jacks and bass will be caught in the same types of cover. I also use lures that imitate minnows, and my favorites are those that float at rest and dive under the surface when I retrieve them.

Traditionally, winter fishing means fishing deep water, often with bait such as live minnows, but I have found that casting plugs to shallow, stumpy banks is often better. Certainly, it's more fun and that's where I've found the fish.

During the coldest months, January and February, you'll probably catch more chain pickerel than bass, but towards the end of February, you should begin to pick up more and more bass. One thing is apparent, though cold water may slow down the metabolism and thus the feeding activity of freshwater fish, it doesn't stop it.

Not only have I caught chain pickerel, bass and crappie during the winter months, I've also had startling luck at times fishing for bluegills and shellcrackers using a flyrod and sinking flies.

Officers Are Named

RALEIGH—W. K. Anderson, a member of the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission from Newland, has been elected chairman of the nine-man board of commissioners for 1974. The annual election was held at the Wildlife Commission's regular monthly meeting here Monday, January 7, 1974.

Anderson replaces D. Jack Hooks of Whiteville as chairman, though Hooks retains his seat on the board. Roscoe D. Sandlin of Jacksonville was elected vice chairman, replacing Anderson who held this post during 1973.

Wallace E. Case of Henderson—newly appointed to the Commission by Governor James E. Holshouser—was named secretary, replacing Jay Waggoner of Graham. Waggoner, like Hooks, remains a member of the board.

In other business, the Commission spent most of the day reviewing legislative bills pertaining to wildlife which have been proposed or which will be proposed during the upcoming session of the General Assembly.

The next Commission meeting was set for February 22 in Raleigh to coincide with the annual convention of the N. C. Wildlife Federation.

Ten years earlier than George Orwell predicted in his novel "1984," the energy crisis has triggered the necessity to face up to the prospect of a different --- and in many ways, frightening new way of life. Continuing shortages, higher prices, traumatic social adjustments are part of the total picture presented by AP Newsfeature writer John T. Wheeler .

1974 — Watershed Year Of Dark Tomorrows?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Happy New Year. It is now 1974. In 10 years it will be 1984. Remember that? That's the year George Orwell picked for his book that forecast an ugly new world. The book was fiction. But some real-life theoreticians and planners are predicting a world of tomorrow grim and tortured beyond Orwell's wildest dreams — or nightmares.

By JOHN T. WHEELER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

As troublesome and dangerous as it is, today's energy crunch may be only a comparatively mild introduction to crises only a handful of years ahead.

Growing numbers of economists, sociologists, scientists, and others among professional futurists are warning of unpleasant, perhaps shattering change ahead for the world.

"What we are seeing now with energy is not a bad winter cold, it is the forerunner of pneumonia," one specialist said after a luncheon brain-storming session at Brookings Institute in Washington, D.C.

The warnings, some direr than others, are pouring into government, industry and other clients of think tanks such as Stanford Research Institute, Rand Corporation, Brookings, Institute for the Future and the like.

Since similar warnings more than a decade ago of the energy crisis came from some of these same institutions and individual experts, their latest misgivings cannot be rejected out of hand as alarmist, an executive at Stanford Research Institute said.

Over the past dozen years the major argument among the futurists has not been so much what would happen in our world, but when and what specific weak point in our highly — some say overly — complex industrial society would give way first.

As it turned out, the energy crisis was what one called, "the trigger of change," a change some futurists believe ultimately will be so thoroughgoing and profound that it will be looked back upon as one of history's greatest watersheds.

When George Orwell wrote "1984," a sort of political science-fiction novel that appeared after World War II, it was accepted widely as frighteningly plausible but avoidable. In just 10 years what the futurists and ecologists like to call Spaceship Earth reaches that milestone.

A majority of present predictions are that while Orwell may have missed the mark on some points and his worst fears may not be realized, the industrial nations in 1984 will be vastly different places to live. Change and crises will leapfrog each other in the next decade, these men believe, in nerve wracking, wrenching, too-fast-to-be-contemplated order, leaving us emotionally exhausted and confused. Many of today's certainties seem doomed to the same fate as the truism turned anachronism "Sound as a dollar."

When queried, expert after expert said society may owe a debt of gratitude to the Arabs for their oil production slashbacks that seriously threatened the economies of Europe and Japan. Although energy shortages were with us before the latest Middle East War, today's crisis may help prepare public opinion and governments for the shocks to come during the decade, these men say. Their argument is we can study our failures and perhaps cushion ourselves when future crises appear.

Many talk of a post industrial society, so certain are they that our mass production, mass consumption system will find itself increasingly strangled on its own garbage, strapped by shortages and unable to design its way around the mess by means of technology, the god of the '50s and '60s.

While still Secretary of Commerce, Maurice H. Stans, who is not generally considered an alarmist, told a White House conference: "...the American society has been woefully weak in anticipating its troubles, and sorrowfully lacking in common sense in coping with them."

John Markley of the Stanford Research Institute, says: "Preventing future crises by forecasting them? It is almost impossible today to even follow events, let alone get ahead of them. There is so much now we can't handle. It's a decision overload, crisis shock, the inability of managers to manage, leaders to lead."

Specifically, futurists forecast one or more economic recessions and possibly a hard depression in the decade ahead. These will be related to the energy crisis but due to other trends as well. Many economists are already forecasting a recession this year in America and worse abroad, with U.S. unemployment running 6 per cent or more and inflation roaring ahead unabated.

By 1984, real disposable income may fall significantly because of higher taxes and higher prices for food — especially convenience foods — housing, anything using energy, and consumer products in general. Unemployment is expected to remain high by present standards and be coupled with high underemployment both in terms of hours and training background. Many of those with college degrees may find themselves clerks and secretaries.

Many who fled to the suburbs may be driven by economic factors back into central cities where no solutions for high crime, urban blight and other problems seem at hand.

Second and third cars, as well as second homes to drive them to, may be out for all but the well-to-do. Economy and compact cars of today may be the standard models of 1984 and a luxury for lower income families. Air conditioning may be outlawed to conserve energy.

Government will be bigger, more powerful and probably more unwieldy. Personal freedoms may be curbed to ward off continuing crises in a near wartime atmosphere. The talk among many futurists is of the possibility of "friendly fascism," a term coined by Bertram M. Gross.

Even the optimists foresee a decline in the quality of life as we think of it now. New attitudes and priorities will govern not only individuals but a good many of the major institutions of society, these men say. Business, industry, labor, education and others already are under intense pressure to change and these pressures are forecast to mount almost geometrically.

Free enterprise appears to be in for heavier assaults. Most futurists interviewed believe today's energy czar will give way to tomorrow's federal economic czar, a man with vast powers to expand or to curtail whole segments of the economy and allocate increasingly scarce raw materials.

Discussing the need for a czar, one energy expert said oil companies today are hampered in exploring for new fields by a lack of steel drilling pipe. That quality steel is locked up by the auto industry producing cars that will not have the gasoline they need because of oil scarcities.

Shortages also could be worsened if the underdeveloped countries take a lesson from the Arabs and withhold their raw materials for political gain or vastly increased prices.

The possibility of internal strife in the United States is foreseen from polarization along racial and economic lines. Some foresee welfare rolls doubling to 35 million creating vast pressures in a society where relatively more persons are expected to be clustered around the bottom rungs of the economic ladder under serious strain just to hang on financially.

Food prices are expected by many forecasters to continue upward since agriculture is one of the top energy consumers. Agriculture exports — at the expense of higher prices at home — will probably continue to be stressed.

No immediate solution to the energy crisis is expected in the United States even if the Arab states reverse themselves and offer all the oil we want. There wasn't enough refinery capacity to handle demand even at the 1972 level, and demand is far past that now.

Refineries take three or more years to build after final plans are approved. It is expected to take 10 years or more to get major coal production under way as an oil substitute and an indeterminate time to convert power and industrial complexes to use coal with even minimum environmental safeguards. Solar energy projects are yet further in the future unless the industrial nations are willing and financially capable of a joint effort probably as massive as that of the Apollo moon program.

"The truth is, we're pretty much locking ourselves into the '80s right now," says Joel Darmstedter of Resources for the Future, Inc., in Washington, D.C. It was a common reply to the question: "If the future is so plain, why can't we get around it by starting now?"

Take mass transit as an example. A Stanford Research Institute expert said: "Mass transit is an idea whose time arrived years ago. Looking at pollution, wasted energy, the destruction of the cities and countryside by highways, everything pointed to it. But government didn't move, and still really isn't getting into gear. Yet this could have saved us great economic pain in our present circumstances. It's a clear case of obvious need getting swept under the rug by political considerations."

By 1984 the United States and other industrial countries may be involved in such doomsday choices of deciding whether to get more energy by lowering pollution standards and consigning those with the weakest systems to possible death, or to fight for air and water quality at the expense of jobs and hunger. One pre-energy crisis estimate held that just to stay even with the filth in our air and waters we should double our expenditures on environmental quality by 1984. Since that estimate, several moves are afoot to reduce or waive "temporarily" some key standards because of the high cost in energy of insuring clean air and waters.

Alan Toffler in his best-selling book "Future Shock" warned we are all "grotesquely unprepared" psychologically, technologically and socially for the changes ahead. What's worse, says a report from the Institute for the Future, we have been "backing into the future" with piecemeal and patchwork attempts at solutions for our problems.

Like experts in many fields, there are both optimists and pessimists among futurists. The latter, and their numbers seem to be growing, argue Space Ship Earth is headed for a crash, although there are still some avenues open to cushion the shock. The survivors, they argue, will be forced by brute circumstances to build a new, and to us alien, society. Many of the optimists, too, believe there will be monumental change ahead. The most optimistic believe the United States, at least, will be able to muddle through with patchwork solutions such as smaller cars and higher energy prices (as a means of rationing) and perhaps with a lessening of personal freedom as we define it now.

Roy Amara of the Institute for the Future said, hopefully, the futurists may be somewhat self-defeating in that their fears and projections will alert and alarm enough people that at least some of the drastic measures he believes are needed will be taken in time.

To buttress their arguments that society is moving too fast for government, business or other institutions, futurists point to the energy crisis. It is, many say, only a first hint of the future shocks in store down the line. John McCloud of Simulation Councils, Inc., says computer models show "everything going to hell in a handbasket if we make the same sort of decisions as we did in the past."

As long ago as President John F. Kennedy's administration, worried reports went to the White House that galloping consumption would outrace production.

By 1973 there was no doubt that serious shortages were imminent unless the oil industry's refinery capacity were sharply increased (it wasn't) and unless the administration immediately loosened quotas on imported oil (it didn't until much later when the energy crisis was full blown.)

With 30 per cent or more of our oil expected to be imported by 1984 — if we can find it — the international trade payments problem for the United States may possibly be ruinous, economists say. All of this in a country which could have been self-sufficient in energy long ago and remained that way in the future if coal deposits and natural gas fields and exploration had only been pushed when the first signs of crisis appeared. Cost was the argument then, including, in coal's case, the cost of keeping the air pure and restoring the land. These seem small now compared to current oil prices and what they are likely to be in the future.

There also simply would be no energy crisis in the United States if we could just get along with what we used three and one-half years ago.

But this assumes no increase in the number of autos on the road, production of only enough washers, driers, toasters and such to replace those that are worn out and no increase in industrial capacity.

And economists say they are frankly frightened of the pent up demand for housing. If the homes and apartments are provided, the explosion of appliances, furnaces, air conditioners and the like may even kick today's projected increase in energy consumption into oblivion.

Previous estimates foresaw the United States, with 6 per cent of the world population using 33 per cent of its energy, doubling consumption every 20 years.

L.B. Henry, an energy expert for the Stanford Research Institute, says, "If we decide today to implement an energy overhaul, it would take 10 years just to provide mass transit and get enough cars off the road." Needed coal production is the same distance away, industry sources have indicated.

"If we go after this the way we did the moon program? I don't know if even that would do it. It may be too late now," Henry says.

Nuclear power, much heralded for the past quarter century, provides a classic case history of technology that just didn't make it on time. Experts now say it may be 2,000 or later before the massive amounts of nuclear power are available to make the energy crisis a problem only for historians.

And so worried is Allen V. Kneese of Resources for the Future, Inc., about our present nuclear production and the dangers of deadly accidents, that he urges we phase out present nuclear power generation as soon as possible.

For these and other reasons futurists predict energy costs will continue to spiral, in part to provide a form of rationing but also to give the government and the oil and natural gas industries money for vast energy expansion programs within the United States. Special taxes may also be levied on energy users from popup toasters to automobiles and jet planes.

Increasingly, calls are heard for the government to take over the energy field, particularly oil. One federal expert said that this probably would provide no long term answer since, "we have no better track record on such things than private industry." However, sharply increased government regulation may be in store.

Central to even a patchwork solution for the energy crisis is the automobile.

Forty per cent of the oil refined for America goes into gasoline. Futurists say conversion to more small cars — already under way in Detroit — is considertd a must. Lightweight, no nonsense vehicles are forecast, but if you're thinking they will be cheaper, you may be wrong. Demand will be for autos that will hold together for up to 10 years or more, and fluffy styling changes which once helped spark rapid turnover in cars will be out. The implications of this on employment are harsh. Transportation amounts to a tenth of the American gross national product.

But smaller cars could be a tremendous boon to the ecology. John Meyer, president of the National Bureau of Economic Research, says the cost of air pollution control could fall 35 to 40 per cent if we all either chose or were forced into small cars.

Since the poor and near poor, especially in such areas as sprawling Los Angeles where a viable mass transit system would be difficult to set up, will suffer proportionately far more under road toll and gasoline price hikes, some futurists favor giving them energy stamps, just as food stamps are passed out now. These could be used not only for gasoline, but to pay utility bills.

The overall expected spurt in taxes and the cost of living is expected by futurists to force significantly more families toward the poverty levels.

Futurist after futurist said to maintain social peace there will have to be a major redistribution of income to pull from those at the top and put it in the pockets of those at the bottom.

Just how all the needed new housing is to be financed is a major question mark. Construction has lagged far behind demand for several years now and the backlog is huge. The federal government is a ready target for funds, but economists and architects have long noted that because of red tape, delays and the like, public housing can cost from 20 to 30 per cent more than that erected by private industry.

The continued shift to urban areas — some 95 per cent of Americans are now crowded into about 5 per cent of the land area — is expected to be complicated by the energy problem. Taxes, transport snarls, home costs and other pressures may help create a population implosion back into central cities, for all their ills. Workers who now commute 50 miles or more a day by car may be forced to turn to mass transit, if it is available, or simply sell thier homes and move closer to their jobs.

Rents are expected to soar not only because of increased building costs but because of an expected even fiercer competition for available space. And, in a little noted milestone, the U.S. became predominantly a nation of renters in 1969.

Blacks and other minorities already frustrated in their efforts to escape the ghetto and catch up with whites economically may explode in new outbursts.

The concern is that blacks still will find themselves as the last hired and first fired in an economy where unemployment will remain high even in what may be look upon in years to come as periods of relative prospertiy. A 4 per cent unemployement rate is considered politically viable by many in Washington today. Futurists say a 50 to 70 per cent higher jobless rate may be nearly a norm in the future.

Another problem for the future may be food. Not only is agriculture the largest user of energy among the industries, the competition for land to grow on will increase in coming years. Higher costs to farmers will be a factor as will expected continued government efforts to export as much food stuffs as possible to keep our balance of payments in hand.

Some futurists even fear real scarcities and the development of black markets.

Will the flow of men and women demanding massive and radical change continue into business, industry and labor? Probably so, say many futurists, especially if present institutions prove themselves incapable of handling the myriad problems expected.

Aaron S. Yohalem noted in a White House conference on the responsibilities of business that "labor leadership should prepare itself for the possibility that consumerists will one day ask unions what unions can do to encourage improved workmanship and retard inflation." As an enforced mood of sacrifice spreads, some believe, unions will lose much public backing for higher wages based on inflation unless unionists can prove increased productivity and quality of workmanship.

Government will probably be under the heaviest pressure to change. What worries some is that governmental failures, or seeming failures, may put our style of democracy on the skids. Public disillusionment with and distrust of government already are high and new crises may call for ever stronger hands at the helm.

"It isn't far from that concept to the man on a white horse," one futurist said, referring to dictatorship. Some futurists believe Orwell may have been "right on," as one put it, in his prediction of a mammoth, impersonal and oppressive government.

Buddy Hudson, Keeper of Rainfall and Tar River Records

Text and Photographs By Carl Tyer

Buddy Hudson watches the Tar River. An employee of the Greenville Utilities Commission, Hudson does not spend his entire day eyeing the flow of the river; part of his job, along with being Chief Water Plant Operator, is to record the level of the river and other weather information.

Weather information published by The Daily Reflector is obtained from Hudson. Temperatures, measurable precipitation an the river level, periodically published by this newspaper are taken from the readings made by Hudson, who keeps the information for the National Climatic Center in Asheville.

Once a month, Hudson submits a report to the center giving daily readings for high and low temperatures, measurable precipitation, precipitation fall rate and the river level for the Greenville station.

The Utilities Commission began keeping weather information in 1956 although river level readings began in 1919.

The Commission is interested in the river level because approximately two-thirds of the Commission's customers receive their water from the river. Maintaining an adequate supply for customers is part of Hudson's job at the water plant.

Historical river levels show the river's highest peak occurred on July 28, 1919 when it reached a point 22.1 feet above mean seal level.

On October 6, 1924, the muddy Tar reached a height of 21.5 feet above mean sea level after two weeks of continuous rain, its second highest mark.

The Daily Reflector published on that date reported the river peaked at 10:00 a.m. after having continued to rise one inch per hour on the previous day.

Further flooding was reported of the Neuse, Cape Fear and Roanoke rivers in relation to the heavy rains of this time.

The third highest mark recorded since records have been maintained occurred on August 3, 1940 when it reached 19.4 feet above mean sea level.

Then high water caused the closing of N.C. 11 north to Bethel when it covered the highway on the Meadowbrook side of the Greene Street bridge. None of the bridges were damaged by the high water, and the Falkland bridge remained open during the flooding, according to reports.

All of the high marks reached at the Greenville recording station have been caused by flooding in waterways above Greenville.

According to newspaper accounts, none of the high water conditions have interferred with the Greenville water supply.

Utilities Commission records show the largest amount of rainfall recorded for a year was in 1964 when the station received 61.56 inches of rain, and the lowest in 1958 when it received 39.58 inches.

August, 1966 was a wet month for the area when the Commission's station received precipitation 16 days out of the month, and November 1965 was a dry month, when it rained only one day.

According to a study made by the Army Corps of Engineers, the Tar River is predicted to reach a level of 22.2 feet above mean sea level once every 100 years, a level of 21.6 feet once every 50 years, 20 feet once every 20 years, 18.4 feet once every 10 years and 14.6 feet once every two years.

If the river did reach these levels at this rate, it would mean the water would go above the top of the brick wall along the Shore Drive Town Common once every ten years. The top of the wall along the river at Shore Drive is 18 feet above mean sea level.

The Corps of Engineers is considering the construction of flood restraint structures at several points on the river, but where and if they will be built will depend on the cost-to-benefit ratio and congressional appropriations.

The amount of damage caused by the river if it were to reach a point 22.2 feet above mean sea level once every 100 years is undertermidable because of new construction along the river's banks and new construction in the future.

It is estimated by engineers, that the greatest damage caused by the river if it were to reach the estimated peaks would not be caused by the Tar, but by tributaries such as Green Mill Run.

Met Opera Auditions Coming Up

Young singers in the eastern Carolinas and southeastern Virginia will gather at East Carolina University February 2 for the district's Metropolitan Opera National Council auditions.

The ECU auditions are part of five such programs in the southeastern U. S. which are scheduled before the Metropolitan Opera National Council Southeastern Regional Auditions in Atlanta March 1.

District winners will participate in the Regional Auditions.

Each applicant must have a voice with operatic possibilities, some voice training, musical background and artistic aptitude. No professional experience or finished training is required.

Candidates must be sponsored by a school, college, music club or voice teacher and must be in the following age brackets:

Sopranos, 18-30, mezzos-contraltos, 20-30, tenors, 20-30, baritones, 20-32, and bases, 20-33.

The winners of the Atlanta Regional Auditions will be eligible for the National Semi-Finals and Finals at the Metropolitan Opera House in late March. A number of grants for further study will be awarded to those singers who place high in the auditions.

The purpose of the Metropolitan Opera National Council auditions is to help discover new operatice talent and to aid new singers in their careers.

Singers who wish to enter the district auditions at ECU should apply to Dr. Clyde Hiss, District Director of the program, at the ECU School of Music. Application deadline is January 28.

Film On New Zealand Jan. 22

The Student Union Lecture Series Committee of East Carolina Union will present Ken Richter who will personally narrate his film "Discovering New Zealand," on January 22, at 8:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

The film ranges through the length of both the North and South Islands of New Zealand, from smoking volcanos and streaming thermal valleys to waterfall-laced Milford Sound, probably the most beautiful fjord in the world. In the New Zealand Alps, among five times as many high peaks as there are in Switzerland. Ricter will take his audience on a light-plane flight to land on a 9,000 foot high glacier and a moment later by jet-powered boat down a swift moving rocky river.

Roses fill the gardens and lupines. Grown wild from gardens they make the American flower-grower green with envy. Wells of natural stream provide half the electric power used on the North Island. Grasslands are fertilized by planes operating from airstrips that look like ski-jumpers.

A highlight of the film is a visit to a high country sheep station, as the New Zealanders call their sheep ranches. Double Hill is 40 miles form a paved road on a dirt track that washes out from time to time and leaves the owners stranded in their mountains for as much as six months at a stretch. The film climaxes with a flight over Sutherland Falls, second highest in the world, the only waterfall to leap from a half-frozen lake to land among sub-tropical ferns far below.

"Discovering New Zealand" has won several film awards.

Tickets for this attraction go on sale on January 9, and may be purchased from the Central Ticket Office. Public tickets are priced at $1.00. Mail order request for tickets may be sent to the East Carolina University Central Ticket Office, Box 2731, Greenville, N. C. 27834. Mail orders should include 38 cents to cover certified return mail charges.

A SCENE...from Kenneth Richter's film "Discovering New Zealand," to be shown in Wright Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on Tuesday, January 22.

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARY NORMAN HESS

In FRESH CIDER AND PIE by Franz Brandenberg, the fly surprisingly outsmarts the spider for a change. After being caught by the spider, the fly requests cider and pie as his last wish. The spider presses the apples and bakes the pie, eats and drinks it all by himself, then politely offers the fly seconds. Together the two of them make pie and cider all afternoon, but the spider alone consumes them. At last he says "I don,t think there is any room in me for a fly full of pie and apple cider", and with that, the fly departs assuring his host that "it was a lovely day".

A book full of wild imagination is MY MAMA SAYS THERE AREN'T ANY ZOMBIES, GHOSTS, VAMPIRES, CREATURES, DEMONS, MONSTERS, FIENDS, GOBLINS, OR THINGS by Judith Viorst. Maybe there isn't any "mean-eyed moster with long slimy hair and pointy claws going scritchy-scritchy-scratch outside his window", and maybe there isn't a zombie clonking up the stairs or a goblin in the drawer. The little boy's Mama says there positively aren't creatures like that. But even Mamas sometimes make mistakes. Yes, once she said there wasn't any cream cheese for his sandwich, and then he found it underneath the lettuce. Once she said his tooth would fall out Thursday, and then it stayed till Sunday after lunch. Yes, sometimes even Mamas make mistakes. However, when "Mama says that a creature isn't reaching out his hand to pinch or squinch or push or squish me", she's right, for the "creature" turns out to be Mama in a blanket. When it comes to demons and fiends and other bedtime terrors, sometimes Mamas can be trusted.

THE COOL RIDE IN THE SKY as told by Diane Wolkstein is a lively black American folktale. A sly buzzard tricks both the rabbit and the squirrel into taking rides on his back to escape the desert heat, and then eats them for his lunch and his dinner. Then the monkey, wanting to protect his friends, devises a plan to force the buzzard "to straighten up and fly right". He gets himself invited aloft, then wraps his tail around the buzzard's neck. When the monkey succeeds, "all the animals crowed around the monkey laughing and cheering while the buzzard flew off in shame".

Faculty Show At Kate Lewis Gallery

One of the most looked-forward-to events of the year in the Greenville area is the annual East Carolina University School of Art Faculty Show.

It's here again. The 1974 show is located in the high hall of Whichard Building that temporarily, until the new arts building is completed, serves as the Kate Lewis Gallery.

Given the number of faculty artists plus teaching fellows (about 39) eligible to exhibit, the person (or persons) responsible for installation have made the best of a tight situation. (Perhaps by the time next year's annual Faculty Show is due, the new art building will be ready and the show can be the real knock-out it should be with that much working talent concentrated in one show).

These are minor considerations. There's much new and stimulating in this year's faculty show. An exhibit of this scope too has the advantage of providing, like a box of Whitman chocolates, a little bit of everything. . .paintings, sculpture, weaving, photographs, drawings, constructions, ceramics, etc.

Faculty members of the School of Art are: Lloyd Benjamin, Joe Buske, Charles Chamberlain, Wes Crawley, Frances Daugherty, Sara Edmiston, Bob Edmiston, Ray Elmore, Tom Evans, Emily Farnham, Janet Fisher, Marilyn Gordley, Tran Gordley, Wellington Gray, Art Haney, Bill Holley, Gerald Johnson, Norman Keller, Frances Neel, Betty Petteway, Robert Rausch, Priscilla Roetzel, Betsy Ross, Dorothy Satterfield, John Satterfield, Donald Sexauer, Francis Speight, Melvin Stanforth and Henry Stindt.

Not all the faculty members are represented in this show, and there's one or two instances where the artist would have fared better not showing at all rather than being represented for the nth time with the same all-too familiar piece.

Teaching fellows and assistants on the faculty are: Fred Brooks, Jim Davis, Wayne Harris, Douglas Helms, Laveta Hinson, Mary Alive Langston, Glenn Lewis, Gail Rabold, Cliff Stuckey and Nancy White.

The ECU School of Art Faculty show will be on view through January 30. Viewing hours are those maintained by offices located in Whichard Building—about 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily.

For an introductory view of art among the ECU teachers, this show is well worth allocating an hour's time to take it in.

Reception Today

A reception for the public to meet the artists is being held today at the Greenville Art Center for a trio of artists — Gerald Johnson and Melvin Stanforth, faculty members of the School of Art, East Carolina University; and Paul Hartley, an ECU graduate and former ECU art instructor now living in Winston-Salem.

As part of the opening day of the show, a short antimated film made by Hartley and Stanforth will be shown at 3:45 and again at 4:30 p.m. Electronic music by Jill Fraser will also be featured on opening day.

More details on this show will appear in next Sunday's paper on this show.

Author of "Love Story"

Erich Segal To Lecture Jan. 28

Erich Segal, best-selling author, film writer, classical scholar, athlete, and professor will lecture at East Carolina University on Monday, Jan. 28, on the subject, "The Future of Literature." Segal is the third of six lecturers scheduled to appear at ECU for the 1973-74 Lecture Series.

Segal, born in Brooklyn, was educated at Midwood High School and Harvard University where he received both the AB and PhD Degrees. At Harvard Commencement he was chosen both Class Poet and Latin Salutatorian, the only time that one man received both honors.

In 1964, Segal was appointed to the Yale University Faculty, where from 1968-1972 he was Associate Professor of Classics and Comparative Literature. During this time, he also lectured at Universities throughout the United States, Europe and Japan, and continued his writing career. He collaborated with Richard Rodgers on a musical comedy which, though it never reached the stage, did in fact reach the office of the Beatles. They hired Segal to write the shooting script for Yellow Submarine.

Since 1968 when Yellow Submarine was released to enthusiastic reviews, Segal has written the scripts for six films, including Love Story for which he received an Academy Award nomination, a Writer's Guild nomination and the Golden Globe Award for the Best Screenplay of 1970. His novel, Love Story, published in February, 1970, has since appeared in 29 languages.

Segal's appearance is under the sponsorship of the Student Union Lecture Series Committee. Admission is by season ticket or by individual ticket to this lecture at $2.00, available in advance or at the door.

Winter Cold, Summer Storms and Woman Kills Her Man In Teen-age Novel

A Negro Girl In Eastern Carolina

Ginger Hill by Sarah S. Allen. Winston-Salem, N.C. John F. Blair, Publisher, 243 pages, $6.95.

In her novel Ginger Hill, Sarah Allen deftly unfolds an ingenuous tale revolving around a Negro family - a mother and her 13-year old daughter, Ophelia, who, with three other tenant families, live and work on a large 10-horse tobacco farm in North Carolina during the early depression years.

Though the story is well supplied with humor and suspense through the use of superb descriptive passages within short but stimulating narration, Mrs. Allen employs mostly dialogue between her characters to give them more realism and to ensure that the story moves at an even pace. The young Ophelia narrates the story.

Born of her Negro mother, Cassie, and a light-skinned West Indian father whom she has never seen, Ophelia is very proud of her light creamy skin, "a nose that isn't flat or a mouth too big, and hair that is wavy - not kinky."

Ophelia likes to make up poems "about the world," and through her eyes we are introduced to many humorous and sorrowful aspects of life. She speaks philosophically of the misery of cold, icy winters and coping with cracked windowpanes, and of stifling hot summers with flies and mosquitoes a constant torment.

Although Ophelia gives us a firsthand view of poverty and suffering among the tenant families, she reminds us that there can be moments of joy, comfort or just plain fun amid the struggles of living. She tells of the backbreaking toil in the tobacco fields, at times under a sweltering summer sun; other times when there is the constant threat of heavy Spring storms. At one point, she relates:

"The sun came in and out of the clouds all afternoon and the mud got a glossy look. After we cleaned up, I boiled the bones of the chicken neck and we used them to play jacks on the porch. In those days everything was worth something and everything seemed like fun."

Walking home from the fields one day, she observes: "After working so hard all day, how wonderful to eat, all of us together, like a picnic. Appetizing odors made you forget your aching feet and blistered fingers." And she makes up a poem on the way:

Tobacco, you are green, then gold.

Will I turn too when I am old?

Tobacco, some say you're a sin.

But we're living off you, friend.

There are several exciting highlights in this book. On one particular night, a devestating storm hits the farm and there are some tense moments when one wonders if Ophelia or anyone else will survive. The reader feels an increasing suspense while Ophelia describes the storm as it grows to a furious peak.

"We could see black angry clouds through the sheets of rain; the world was dark and strange and moaning in the wind, which was cracking trees like splinters under its force. Everything anchored to the earth was straining to get free and join the racing wind."

Joe Batts, a colored tenant farmer and his wife Carrie - who already has "seven head" of children - gives birth to another baby, a boy, shortly after the storm. The Negro families believe that the storm was certainly a hurricane, and they notably name the baby "Herry-Kane," and Cassie remarks: "Well, this boy sure came in like a lion on the wildest night I ever saw. He's got to be something special."

Another highlight comes when Carrie Batts murders her husband, Joe. She sneaks up behind him and splits his head open with an ax in a moment of rage when she thinks he has spent the night with a widow.

Carrie goes to jail, of course, to await trail. Mr. Lockwood, who owns Ginger Hill, brings Carrie's children and the other Negro families to visit her on occasions. The children are quite impressed with her neat cell, meals brought to her on a tray, and a real flushing toilet.

Finally, there is Carrie's trial, in which there is an even degree of humorous and serious moments. Everyone attend the trial; Carrie is convicted of manslaughter and is sentenced to only four months in jail, much to the relief of family and friends.

Ginger Hill is a type of book that best attracts teen-agers, but readers of any age should find this book sheer entertainment through the colorful writing of Sarah Allen.

Dr. Bier Completes Third Volume

After more than 40 years of research and frustration, a North Carolina writer finally has seen his book published.

The writer is Dr. Justus Bier, director emeritus and curator of research of the North Carolina Museum of Art.

The book is volume three The Late Stone Works, of his monumental four-volume study of the 15th century South German sculptor Tilmann Riemenschneider.

The book is in German and was published in Vienna. The first two volumes also were published abroad in 1925 and 1930, respectively. A fourth volume dealing with the late works in wood of the sculptor is planned.

Bier is a native of Nuremberg, Germany, whose writing and research was interrupted first by the Nazis. He came to this country in 1937 to become professor of art history at the University of Louisville.

World War II was a further hindrance to his research both during the war years and after because of difficulties his publishers encountered in getting back in operation.

Bier's duties in Louisville and later as director from 1960-70 of the North Carolina Museum of Art also delayed completion of the book.

Bier's interest in Riemenschneider began in his student days at the University of Bonn.

"Senta (his wife) and I used to take tours down the Main and Rhine rivers, looking up places where art could be seen," he said. "When we came to Wuerzburg, I fell under the spell of Riemenschneider's work.

"I went to buy a book and the only one I found was published in 1911 and was of no value as art history. There was an older book, published in 1900, that was a good book but there had been nothing since and it was very evident Riemenschneider needed some new attention."

Bier resolved to provide that attention, thinking the process would "take two or three years at the most."

In pursuing his research Bier apparently has identified closely with the sculptor, for one reviewer has noted that "one is led to believe in a natural affinity between the artist's and the author's temperament."

The same reviewer also speaks of Bier's "excellent" style, describing it as "clear, expressive and always to the point."

Bier, who was honored last summer with the Commander's Cross of the Order of Merit from the German government, received financial support for the book from the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation and the Samuel H. Kress Foundation.

Endowed Chairs Support Orchestra

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Four principal chairs of the St. Louis Symphony have been endowed. They are the first endowed chairs in the history of the orchestra.

The four chairs are the Eloise and Oscar Johnson Jr. Concertmaster Chair, the Louis D. Beaumont Associate Concertmaster Chair, the Dr. Frederick Eno Woodruff Principal Second Violin Chair and the Frank Y. and Katherine G. Gladney Principal Cello Chair.

The orchestra will seek endowment of all the principal chairs of the orchestra, to create an endowment fund which will provide income. Endowing chairs or professorships is established at universities but only recently has begun for orchestras.

The endowed chairs pay tribute to Eloise and Oscar Johnson Jr., who donated funds for the purchase of Powell Symphony Hall; Louis D. Beaumont, one of the founding partners of the May Department Stores; Dr. Frederick Eno Woodruff, a long-time supporter of the symphony, as was his daughter Mrs. Louise Woodruff Johnston; and Frank Y. and Katherine G. Gladney, parents of the wife of Ben H. Wells, president of the Symphony Society.

Missions Continue Over Laos

By DAVID JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

UDORN AIR FORCE BASE, Thailand (AP) — The United States Air Force has acknowledged flying regular reconnaissance missions over Laos, which diplomatic sources in Vientiane say violates the country's Feb. 21 cease-fire agreement.

The unarmed flights, said to be the best way to gather intelligence about North Vietnamese troop and supply movements in Laos, have been bitterly denounced by the Communist Pathet Lao.

Brig. Gen. James R. Hildreth, commander of the Air Force's 13th Advance Echelon at Udorn Air Base in northeastern Thailand, said this week that unarmed RF4E Phantom jets from his base carry out regular photo reconnaissance missions over Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Ouday Souvannavong, the Royal Lao government's spokesman, said ending the flights is completely up to the Americans. "We ignore completely what the United States Air Force is doing over Laos or over anywhere else," he said.

An Air Force spokesman described the RF4E as "the newest and most improved Phantom in the inventory," able to fly at speeds up to 1,300 miles per hour and equipped with sensitive optical and infrared cameras. He said the plane can carry out reconnaissance in all weather at high or low altitudes.

"These flights are permitted under the Vietnam cease-fire agreement," said Col. Robert W. Clement, the commander of the 432nd Tactical Reconnaissance Wing. The agreement on ending the war in Vietnam says there shall be no reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam but is vague about South Vietnam. There is no cease-fire agreement in Cambodia.

But as for Laos, diplomatic sources in Vientiane say there are no provisions for reconnaissance flights over Laos under the terms of the separate Laotian protocols.

Article 14 of the protocols says: "Movements by air forces, including reconnaissance and supply flights by one side which violate the air space of the other side's zone, are forbidden until the determination of the route has been made officially...."

The protocols were signed by the two Laotian factions Sept. 14 and diplomats in Vientiane claim that the American flights should have ended more than three months ago.

Radio Samneua, the clandestine station that broadcasts from a transmitter near the mountainous North Vietnamese border, has said the bulk of the Vientiane government's alleged cease-fire violations concerned overflights by the American reconnaissance aircraft.

The U.S. Embassy on Friday refused comment on the reconnaissance flights. But the embassy in Vientiane is known to have pushed hard for a continuation of aerial reconnaissance over Laos following the cease-fire and was concerned when the Royal Lao government gave way to the Pathet Lao on this point in writing the protocols.

Newspaper Dollar Bill Brings Secret Service

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The U.S. Secret Service says it plans no further action after confiscating Salt Lake City Tribune negatives and printing plates of a syndicated cartoon drawing of three $1 bills.

The cartoon, by Los Angeles Times artist Paul Conrad, was printed in The Tribune Friday morning with the caption: "Administration's gasoline ration stamps."

Anthony Sherman, agent in charge of the Salt Lake City office, said the confiscation was routine and that no other action was planned because "very obviously ... there's no intent to defraud, there's no intent to counterfeit."

A Secret Service spokesman said the material was turned over to the U.S. attorney.

Sherman said the cartoon was in violation of U.S. Code forbidding reproduction of U.S. currency. He said the government's concern is that, if the plates "were stolen, lost or got into the wrong hands, they might be used elsewhere for the wrong purposes."

Each bill in the cartoon was doctored and carried the line: "One Dollar Per Gallon."

Except for the altered words, the bills in the cartoon appear to be nearly exact replicas of $1 bills, reduced by about one-quarter inch.

"Who's going to try to spend our editorial page?" a Tribune spokesman said.

In Los Angeles, cartoonist Conrad said: "You're kidding," when informed of the Secret Service action. "I've used one dollar bills before and there was never any problem. I had the engravers copy one dollar, and then I redid it so it would read one dollar per gallon at the bottom."

Conrad later said he had received a call from the Secret Service in Washington and was told the agency is investigating but couldn't say for sure whether the cartoon was in violation of any laws.

White Jury For Indians

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Eleven prospective jurors have been selected this week for the trial of two American Indian Movement (AIM) leaders of the takeover at Wounded Knee, S.D., last year.

A sprightly 81-year-old outspoken widow was accepted Friday. Five of eleven are women. All are white.

The jury will hear the government's case against Dennis Banks, 41, a Minneapolis Chippewa, and Dennis Means, 34, a Sioux from Porcupine, S.D. A federal indictment returned at Sioux Falls, S.D., charged the two with 10 counts including burglary, theft and assault of a federal officers. The charges stem from the AIM-led 71-day occupation last winter of Wounded Knee, a Pine Ridge Reservation hamlet in southwestern South Dakota. The trial was moved from Sioux Falls to St. Paul on the defense's change of venue motion.

Means said late Friday only three of the 11 tentatively accepted were satisfactory to him and likely to survive the defense's peremptory challenges. He didn't identify the three. Mark Lane, New York author and one of the defense lawyers, said he felt "a little better" about the juror situation than he had the day before, when he said it was outrageous that no Indians were on the first list of verniremen. Means said Thursday, "I throw up my hands in utter dispair that we can't get a fair trial in a white man's court."

Marijuana Smuggled In

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)— John M. Dolan, special agent in charge of the Wilmington office of the U.S. Customs Service, says he has evidence that about seven tons of marijuana was smuggled in from South America.

But he has refused to say whether it has been seized.

He made the announcement after the arrest on a boat at Wilmington Wednesday night of a man identified as William Worthington Russell IV of Stockbridge, Mass. Russell was charged with smuggling.

Dolan says there is evidence that other persons were involved, and more arrests are expected, although Russell was the only one found aboard the vessel.

Russell, who is held in $10,000 bond, is scheduled for a preliminary hearing before a U.S. magistrate next Wednesday.

Doland said the marijuana was loaded on the 82-foot ketch Inger off the coast of Colombia on Dec. 7. He said it was transferred to another vesel around Dec. 28 off Wilmington, and brought to shore.

I AM REAL ESTATE

I am the basis of all wealth, the heritage of the wise, thrifty and prudent.

I am the poor man's joy and comfort, the rich man's prize and the right hand of capital.

I am the solace of the widow, the comfort of old age, the cornerstone of security against misfortune and want. I am handed down to children through generations, as a thing of greatest worth.

I am growing in value. Though I seem dormant, my worth increases, never failing, never ceasing. Time is my aid and population increases my gain.

I am increasing in strength. The centuries find me younger and my possessors learn to believe in me. While all things wither and decay, I survive.

I am trustworthy and sound. Unfailingly I triumph and detractors are disproved.

Malacca Strait Issue Strains Indonesia Relations

By ROBERT KAYLOR

JAKARTA (UPI) — Mention the subject of U.S. warships sailing through the Strait of Malacca to either Indonesian or American officials here these days, and you are most likely to get a pained silence in return.

The silence has become more noticeable in recent weeks because of increased U.S. naval interest in the Indian Ocean since October's Mideast war. It means that the Indonesians aren't happy about the situation but don't see much they can do about it right now.

On their side, U.S. officials don't want to rock the boat with Idnonesian-American relations now on the best basis they have been in years.

Disagreement over the use of the strait is one of the few international issues on which the United States and Indonesia do not see eye to eye. Diplomatic observers see it as an embarrassment and potential irritant, but some other students of Southeast Asian affairs go as far as to suggest it contains the seeds of crisis.

The Strait—recognized as the strategic gateway to the Indian Ocean—narrows to roughly 20 miles of shallow water between Malaysia and the Indonesian island of Sumatra. The two countries hve claimed 12-mile territorial limits and demanded prior notice from countries wishing to use the Strait, saying they will respect the right of "innocent" passage.

Twelve-Mile Limit

The United States has acknowledged the 12-mile limit, but said that the Strait has in effect been recognized international waterway since the days of Marco Polo. It has declined to give any advance notice of naval movements.

In the past U.S. warships have only rarely used the strait, but on Oct. 29 the Pentagon ordered the carrier USS Hancock and a four-destroyer escort through to counter the possible threat of Russian naval intervention in the Mideast.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik and other Indonesian officials, who had earlier said one reason for their policy was to prevent naval confrontations in Asian waters, commented that they had not been informed and that they regretted the incident.

Just over a month later a second U.S. carrier, the Oriskany, and a guided missile destroyer passed through into the Indian Ocean. Ten days after that the Hancock passed through again on the way back to her regular post. Well-informed sources say that Indonesians were not informed in advance in either case.

The Indonesians have remained silent and ducked inquiries about the movements, declining to discuss political aspects of their position.

Awaiting U.N. Conference

Both the United States and Indonesia appear to be waiting for a major United Nations conference on sea laws scheduled for next June in Caracas, Venezuela, to discuss the issue. There have already been predictions of lengthy wrangling and no clear decisions.

Part of the embarrassment for the United States is that it finds itself in the same boat on the issue with the Russians. Soviet relations with Indonesia are far from cordial, while Indonesia is a major exploration and development spot for U.S. oil companies.

The Russians regularly move ships through the Strait and keep a permanent fleet in the Indian Ocean which they increased from 20 to 31 vessels during and after the Mideast war.

Point of Embarrassment

Another point of embarrassment for the United States is that a shrinking number of ports in and near the Indian Ocean now welcome its ships. Most recently, the Malagasy Republic off the coast of Africa turned away four American destroyers that wanted fuel and a chance to swap operating information in port.

Before that, Singapore, which shares the entrance to the Malacca strait with Indonesia but had refused to support the Indonesian position, also declined to provide fuel for U.S. navy ships that had previously been welcome, citing Arab oil restrictions.

There are more than political issues at stake in the strait controversy, however. Japan moves more than 90 per cent of her oil supplies through Malacca and has sent huge 200,000-ton supertankers through the waterway.

Fresh water fish never drink water because it contually seeps through their gill membrane. Ocean fish drink sea water, their gills desalting it amd making it drinkable.

Jakarta Has A Garden Of Fantasies

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Few promoters in their wildest dreams could have come up with anything like the multimillion-dollar Garden of Fantasies that is now rising on the shores of Jakarta harbor.

In size, scope and cost, it will be the biggest, brassiest and bawdiest fun palace in the East.

Built on 338 acres along the shores of Tanjong Priok, about four miles from downtown Jakarta, Jaya Ancol, as it is known in Indonesian, will have everything from hamburgers to jai alai.

Planned, built or under construction are: a 4,000-seat jai alai stadium; a 40-lane bowling center; an 850-seat drive-in movie theater; a motor racing circuit; an 18-hole golf course; a swimming pool with man-made waves for surf riding; a huge 26-pool aquarium and a 3,-000-seat oceanarium; a yacht club; assorted massage parlors, steam baths, bars, casinos and all-night restaurants; trade fair and children's amusement park.

The exact cost is a secret between Lt. Gen. Ali Sadikin, governor of Jakarta and one of the main movers, and the money men. The land, once a mangrove swamp filled with monkeys, belongs to the Jakarta administration.

The aquarium alone will cost $6 million. Its huge 10 saltwater and 16 fresh water pools will contain a complete collection of Indonesian marine flora and fauna.

Modern apartment blocks, supermarkets and a 320-room hotel are planned. At the western end, adjoining the Jakarta docks, a 140-acre industrial estate and a housing project are under construction.

A wartime graveyard of Dutch and Indonesian soldiers killed by Japanese will be moved to make room for the amusement center.

Indonesia is after the tourist dollar and the Garden of Fantasies is expected to be a reality by June 1974 when some 2,-000 travel agents invade Jakarta for the Pacific Area Travel Association conference.

Likes Life By Freeway

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Freeways make good neighbors, according to a Brigham Young University researcher.

Evan T. Peterson, a sociology professor, says a study he did for the Arizona Highway Department found about two-thirds of those living within six blocks of a freeway liked where they lived. But people living farther away disliked the express roads.

"It appears many people who live within urban centers have fewer direct advantages from the freeways, therefore they are not as favorable to them," Peterson concluded.

He was surprised to find that the satisfied included a good share of those living close enough to freeways to hear the noise and clatter of high-speed travel.

"More than half of them said they liked it where they lived," Peterson said.

"The people who live next to elevated-fill freeways said they had the most dissatisfaction, but their records show they have been remarkably stable in where they live."

He said only 10 per cent of residents questioned in the survey were completely negative about freeways.

They cited problems in attending church, fears of adverse effects on property values and the difficulty in visiting friends.

Launch 6 New Series

Six new series, including two hour-long dramatic programs, three half-hour dramatic programs and a unique nostalgic comedy, plus a number of outstanding motion pictures, will be added to the new prime-time schedule of ABC-TV, effective Jan. 14 it was announced today by Martin Starger, President of ABC Entertainment.

"These new, high quality programs from a wide variety of production sources will add to the momentum ABC has already achieved, which has become especially apparent in the past few weeks of the season," Starger said. "These are aggressive changes in our schedule, building on the strength already evidenced in audience acceptance of our continuing series."

Prominent among the new weekly shows in the schedule are "Doc Elliott," a contemporary medical drama, and "The Six Million Dollar Man," a high adventure drama, both currently presented periodically and both of which have been favorably received by audiences and critics. Presenting these two programs on a weekly basis in mid-season is an example of ABC's successful on-air program development, which also worked so well in the past with "Kung Fu."

The three half-hour dramas to be introduced are: "The Cowboys," based on the exciting motion picture that recently achieved an outstanding rating; "Firehouse," which follows a crew of firefighters daily risking their lives, as part of their jobs, and "Chopper One," a highly visual and unusual series about two young policemen who fight crime by means of a specially equipped helicopter.

("The Cowboys" will have its premiere date on Wednesday, Feb. 6.)

The new comedy, "Happy Days," is a real funny, warm and nostalgic look at a teenage bov and his family coping with the now long-ago problems of the 1950s and 1960s.

In further outlining the new schedule, Barry Diller, Vice President in Charge of Prime-Time TV, announced that along with these programs, three current series will move to new time periods in January. "The Odd Couple" will move to 9:30 p.m. Fridays. "Toma" will follow at 10 p.m. and "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" will move to 10 p.m. on Saturdays.

Diller also said the ABC package of theatrical motion pictures to be shown on Sunday and Monday evenings includes such outstanding entertainment as "From Russia with Love," "What's New Pussycat?," "Thoroughly Modern Millie," "True Grit," and "The Ten Commandments."

Diller additionally pointed out that "The Patridge Family," commencing in January, would feature the Williams Twins, two bright 14-year-old young singers, who will bring a bounce to the antics of the Partridge Family next year.

'Super Bowl' Is All Yours At 3:00 p.m.

After more than 24 weeks of guessing, the climax to NFL football is finally here as Super Bowl VIII comes your way on CBS Channels 3N-9-11 at 3 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 13.

The World Champion Miami Dolphins will defend their Super Bowl crown against a very Championship starved Viking team. Minnesota has had only a taste of Super Bowl glory when they were soundly humiliated by the Kansas City Chiefs 23-7 in Super Bowl IV. It has taken the Vikings three long years to return to the Super Bowl and chance to finally gain a World Championship.

Minnesota will not find the Dolphins very amiable at the thought of parting with their coveted World Title. Although the Dolphins have established themselves as one of football's winningest teams and the only team to ever compete in three Super Bowls, they are not the type of team to become complacent.

The Dolphins are a well synchronized group of professionals who play with a degree of polish that only a well coached professional unit could possibly attain.

Every team that has lost a Super Bowl, Kansas City, Baltimore, Dallas and Miami and has returned for a second try has been successful the second time around. Minnesota is returning for their second try and would appear to have an unexplainable advantage as a one time loser. However, it should be remembered that Miami is also a one time loser in Super Bowl Competition.

Miami may have an added incentive considering only one team, the Green Bay Packers, ever returned to defend their title and they were successful. This could mean that after a team has tasted Super Bowl glory they don't part with it easily, if they return to defend it.

Super Bowl VIII will be more than a battle of trying to establish trends, it is a contest between two great football teams. The primary difference between the two squads is one is a proven Champion and the other has aspirations of being a Champion.

Miami and Minnesota have exceptionally powerful defensive units and two of the best secondaries in football.

These secondaries will be tested by outstanding receivers and two of the best quarterbacks in the game. Miami appears to have an edge in their offensive backfield where their ground attack is extremely strong with three outstanding ball carriers in Larry Csonka, Mercury Morris and Jim Kiick. Miami also has a little stronger kicking game both in field goals and punting.

When this battle unfolds on January 13, fans can be assured of an excitement packed afternoon with the two finest teams in pro football competing for the coveted Super Bowl VIII trophy.

Thinks Humor Can Be Learned

"Some comedians treat humor as though it was sacred and one shouldn't inquire into it," says Bob Newhart. "Of course, a comedian should have some idea of what it's all about, but you can read all there is on the subject and still not necessarily be much of a comedian."

Newhart cites Sigmund Freud and other scholars who have written extensively on the subject of jokes and why people laugh at them. He feels, however, that one can become too analytical about humor and lose it.

The popular comedian, who stars on "The Bob Newhart Show" (Saturdays, 9:30-10 p.m.) on Channel 9-11, believes that humor can be learned, and that certain aspects of it are teachable. "But," he adds, "the creativity of comedy is beyond the region open to learning."

Jack Webb To Produce Series

Jack Webb will start production early next year on "Emergency: Fire!", a motion picture based on the popular "Emergency!" series. The full-length film will include the cast from the TV series: Robert Fuller as Dr. Kelly Brackett; Julie London as Dixie McCall, R.N.; Bobby Troup as Dr. Joe Early; and Randolph Mantooth and Kevin Tighe as paramedics John Gage and Roy DeSoto.

PREMIERE EPISODE — Ronnie Howard as Richie Cunningham, a shy high school youth, has been egged on to ask pretty classmate, Mary Lou, played by Kathy O'Dare, for a date, and he finds her quite approachable, in "Reluctantly Aggressive," premiere episode of "The Happy Days," airing on Tuesday, Jan. 15 (8-8:30 PM) on ABC Channel 3-5-12. The nostalgic series depicts the relatively carefree life and life style of teenagers growing up in the 1950s.

Newsmen Look At 1973 And '74

Nineteen News Correspondents whose assignments cover the world will assemble to review and evaluate the significant events of 1973 and to look ahead to what may be expected in 1974. They will appear on a two-hour special, "A Year Apart," to be colorcast Sunday, Jan. 13 (3-5 PM) on Channel 6-7.

Anchorman John Chancellor will be one of four principal reporters who will act as moderators on the program. Mr. Chancellor, chief reporter and writer for "NBC Nightly News," along with David Brinkley of "David Brinkley's Journal," Frank McGee, host of "Today," and NBC News' Edwin Newman will head a team of 15 correspondents reviewing 1973 and previewing 1974.

There have been many new and continuing crises in 1973. Each NBC News correspondents will evaluate the one which took place in his or her area, and will project directions in which the United States appears to be headed.

Among the stories to be covered are the crisis that presently confronts the people of the United States concerning the Presidency — the Watergate affair, the White House tapes, the resignation of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, the confirmation of Gerald Ford as the new Vice President, and the possible impeachment of President Nixon.

Also, war and peace in the world — focusing on events in the Middle East; the cease-fire in Vietnam and what happened since; the energy crisis, including the fuel shortage and the Middle East oil embargo.

To Interview Dr. Hoffman

"A Conversation With Dr. Oswald Hoffman" will be presented on "Lamp Unto My Feet", Sunday, January 13 (10-10:30 AM).

Dr. Hoffman is the speaker of the International Lutheran Hour, a syndicated radio program that is broadcast by many stations nationally as well as by others in English-speaking countries around the world.

Dr. Hoffman will be interviewed by Dr. George Crothers. They will talk about a broad range of issues, including contemporary morality, the changing role of the family, church renewal and other current problems of religion.

THINK YOUNG

Children aren't little grownups—they're children, and that's something quite different. Rooms for the small fry must be flexible to be effective, and serve every demand put upon them. Children grow and their tastes change. They should have a background for toys and for the many things they make and collect. If two children share a room, they should have a bit of privacy so that each has his own storage and play space. When designing a room for your little ones, think young.

In addition to thinking young, you should consider the practical aspects so that the room will grow with the youngster and be easily cared for by you. Let us carpet it for you. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

Four All-Disney Evenings Planned

The NBC Television Network and Walt Disney Productions will join forces to present four all-Disney "Saturday Night at the Movies" programs, encompassing NBC-TV's entire prime-time schedule on four nights during the next two calendar years.

Announcement of the venture was made jointly today by Herbert S. Schlosser, President, NBC, and E. Cardon Walker, President, Walt Disney Productions.

The all-Disney programs will showcase some of Walt Disney Productions' most successful and widely acclaimed feature motion pictures, such as the double Academy Award-winning "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and the comedy hit "The Parent Trap," both of which will be making their television debuts.

Each of the features will be accompanied by a selection of Disney's classic animated or truelife short subjects.

"These all-Disney evenings," Mr. Schlosser said, "will mark a revival of movie-going in the traditional sense — a complete program consisting of a full length feature and short subjects. In each case, we will devote our entire primetime schedule to material selected from the world-renowned Disney library of all-family entertainment in a specially expanded 'NBC Saturday Night at the Movies' from 8-11 p.m.

CLASS CONSCIOUS

Carolee Campbell, who plays Nurse Simpson on the daytime series "The Doctors," teaches classes in acting and play production.

GLUT OF COMEDIES. . .

A glut of comedies will consume much of the network primetime judging from the pilot orders for next season. Now that the cops are turning in their badges, another saturation is in the cards.

Crux of the decision by the programmers: people will be huddled around the tube more than ever due to the dire state of the fuel shortage. Accent will be on family comedy.

Original Play On Wednesday

"Pssst! Hammerman's After You!," the third original presentation in this season's award-winning "ABC Afterschool Specials" series, tells how a curious, imaginatige 11-year-old boy learns to cope with the threat of violence as a part of life on Wednesday, Jan. 16 (4:30-5:30 plm.) on Channel 3-5-12, it was announced today by Brandon Stoddard, Vice President, Daytime Programs.

In his announcement, Stoddard said, "In an era of public concern about violence in general, this story shows in humorous terms that some violence is a reality in life and that often it must be dealt with in a straight confrontation. However, we use humor to provide the persepctive that when we face reality or a problem, it may not be an awesome or as frightening as it first appears."

The teleplay, based on the Betsy Byars book, "The 18th Emergency," introduces the world of Mouse Fawley, who must contend with a bully, Marv Hammerman. Mouse wrote Hammerman's name under a picture of the Neanderthal Man at school and Marv caught him. Mouse realizes he has antagonized the biggest boy in school and that neither his mother nor his best friend, Ezzie, can help him escape from his predicament. Mouse finally recognizes that he must have a showdown.

"The smaller boy," Stoddard added, "gains the insight that he has hurt Marv and that a bully has feelings like everyone else. Mouse further discovers that the biggest boy in school also has a need to preserve his self-respect."

The Bank Street College of Education serves as consultant for the "ABC Afterschool Specials."

ASSISTS NEIGHBOR — Christian Juttner (left) in the role of Mouse Fawley assists a neighbor partially crippled by a stroke, Mrs. Casino, played by Tito Vandis, in the "ABC Afterschool Specials" presentation, "Psst! Hammerman's After You!" airing Wednesday, Jan. 16 (4:30-5:30 PM) on Channel 3-5-12. The story tells how Mouse, an 11-year-old boy, learns to deal with the threat of violence from a bully, Marv Hammerman.

Co-Star Joins Hall Of Fame

Former U. S. Diving Champion, Strother Martin, co-star of the "Hawkins" series, has been elected by the Swimming Hall of Fame as a member of the Honorary 1944 U. S. Olympic Team.

According to Buck Dawson, executive director of the Swimming Hall of Fame headquartered in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, "As the 1944 U. S. National Diving Champion, Strother was a definite candidate for that year's Olympic Games which, unfortunately, were cancelled because of the war. This is our way of honoring a champion who never got to compete in the contest that he dedicated his early life to."

'The Magician' Will Change Residence

Hollywood's famed Magic Castle, headquarters for some of the world's foremost magicians, becomes the new residence and focal point for the activities of magician Anthony Blake in "The Magician" when the series moves to a new day and time Mondays, 8-9 p.m. starting Jan. 14.

Another major change will be the addition of veteran actor Joseph Sirola to the regular cast. He will play Dominick, close friend and confidant of Blake who is also owner of the Castle. Dominick is a man with many connections which enable him to ferret out information when it is needed.

This will mark the first time in the history of the Magic Castle that permission has been granted for filming of a television series at the exclusive club. Blake will have an apartment inside the Castle and many outstanding magicians will appear in upcoming episodes of the series. The changes are designed to integrate more magic into the show.

Jim Watkins will continue in his co-starring role as Jerry in the series.

A two-part story, "Rip-off" (to be colorcast Jan. 14 and 21), will be the first episode to incorporate these changes. Guest stars include Lloyd Nolan, as reformed criminal Charles Keegan; Carol Lynley, as Keegan's daughter, Janet; and John Colicos, as shady prison official Paul Gunther.

In his plan to pull off a robbery, Gunther seeks to hold Janet Keegan hostage, hoping to force her father to cooperate in the heist.

Tony Blake (Bill Bixby) armed only with his magic, attempts to keep Janet out of Gunther's trap.

James Bond's TV Bow Monday

James Bond is back when Sean Connery stars as the intrepid secret agent in the television premiere of "From Russia with Love," the second in the series of phenomenally successful adventure movies based on Ian Fleming's novels, airing as the season premiere of the "ABC Monday Night Movie," Jan. 14 (9-11:30 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

Pedro Armendariz, Lotte Lenya, Robert Shaw, and Bernard Lee as "M," are also starred as Bond's friends and enemies. Daniela Bianchi is introduced to the screen as a defecting Russian.

This adventure concerns the efforts of secret agent James Bond (Connery) to aid Russian Tatiana Romanova (Daniela Bianchi) to defect to the West. What neither of them know is that she is actually the pawn in a sinister plot to eliminate Bond permanently.

The sort of high adventures for which the Bond films are famous carry them through the Balkans and into Italy, with Bond making several hair-breadth escapes from death, the last as he comes face to face with the sinster master planner of the violent scheme, Rosa Klebb (Lotte Lenya).

Starring In New Western Video Series

Diana Douglas and Jim Davis will star with previously announced Moses Gunn in "The Cowboys," western-adventure series to premiere on Wednesday, Feb. 6 (8-8:30 p.m.)

Miss Douglas, with a record of distinguished portrayals in motion pictures and television, is cast as Mrs. Annie Anderson, widowed ranch owner. Davis, who has appeared in more than 100 movies and starred in two series — the Emmy Award-winning "Stories of the Century," and "Rescue 8," — stars as Marshall Bill Winter.

PAST THE BUCK

Geoff Edwards, host of the new daytime game series, "Jackpot!" premiering Jan. 7, says he got his first job when he was a seventh grader in Westfield, N.J.

He worked for a milkman for a dollar a day.

Five Dare Wilderness

"This is the wilderness. . .the dangerous animals out there are the rhinos, the lions, the hyenas, the buffalo. All of you kids are from the city and this is an area you don't understand. It's an area that can be dangerous—dangerous as walking across one of your city streets blindfolded."

That is how five young adults (all of them students) from this country and England introduced to their expedition across the wilderness of South Africa's Zululand region in "Trial By Wilderness," the adventure special to be colorcast on Thursday, Jan. 17 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Former astronaut Neil Armstrong is the off-camera narrator for the program, filmed entirely on location in South Africa.

The words of warning to the students were spoken by Barry Clements, director of The Wilderness Leadership School of Natal, South Africa (a non-profit organization dedicated to the conservation of tthe environment and of wildlife). Clements was guide and instructor for the five volunteers during the march.

The members of the group, ranging in age from 17 to 22, are: David Betts, 17, Ispwich, England; Richard Hyer, 22, Chicago; Mary Unwin, 18, Norwich, England; Elizabeth Higashi, 21. Los Angeles; James Allen, 19, New York City.

Clements was assisted during the march by Maqubu Nthombeli, 73, Zulu historian famous in South Africa for his knowledge of the wilderness.

The five were presented with a number of challenges by Clements during the trip. At one point, he left them at a spot away from camp and told them to return to their own. Later, the group was led on a 15-mile march with empty canteens. Also, they were asked to take a "solitary walk," with each student assigned a separate route into unknown country. Toward the end of the journey the five were left completely on their own to plan and execute a march along a stretch of beach they had never seen before.

During the trip, they were exposed to the killing and cooking of a wild animal (a nyala). For some, it was the first time they had tasted wild game.

A Double Feature Of Films

The highest-rated made-for-television movie ever broadcast, "The Night Stalker," will air again as the first film in a special double feature night on the "Wednesday Movie of the Week," Jan. 16 (8-9:30 PM) on Channel 3W-5-12.

The second feature, also produced and directed by terror master Dan Curtis and written by Richard Matheson, will be "Scream of the Wolf" (9:30-11 PM).

In "The Night Stalker," a down-on-his-luck newsman, believing that Las Vegas is being terrorized by a vampire, tries to overcome censorship by his boss and the police. Darren McGavin, Carol Lynley, Simon Oakland, Ralph Meeker and Claude Akins are starred, with Charles McGraw, Kent Smith, Barry Atwater, Larry Linville and Jordan Rhodes co-starred.

Las Vegas is a town where the unusual is considered normal, but when former top reporter Carl Kolchak (McGavin), reduced to covering the murder of a showgirl, meets with police reluctance to reveal the cause of her death, his curiosity is aroused.

Suddenly there is a series of murders, apparently committed by the same person. When the police again refuse to reveal any facts, Kolchak gets details from a city official, Bernie Jenks (Meeker).

Putting the pieces together, Kolchak realizes he is uncovering a frightening story. But the police and even his own editor, Vincenzo (Oakland), make every effort to suppress what Kolchak has learned...the killer is a crazed maniac who could be a vampire.

"Scream of the Wolf" a once-famous hunter comes out of retirement to help track down what appears to be a mad killer wolf and discovers that it is no mere animal he is hunting, but an animal thay may take human form.

Job For Gary Crosby

Gary Crosby, who long ago came into his own as an actor, is happy in his new co-starring role as Officer Ed Rice, joining stars Mitchell Ryan and Wayne Maunder, in "Chase" (The series moves from Tuesdays to Wednesdays Jan. 16 8-9 PM, when Crosby makes his first appearance on the show.)

Crosby gained quite a following as the sarcastic Officer Wells in the network's "Adam-12" series.

Gary once described himself as the 'quiet man' when it comes to arguments or when acting as arbiter in an argument. "There's too much trying to settle things with fists in the world and I'm not going to add to it. Communication is the key — sit down and talk, and do some listening — it works, believe me," he said.

Gary is settled, confident, and very much the family man. He lives with his wife, Barbara, and her son, Steven 17 (who Gary adopted as his own when he married Barbara 13 years ago), in a modest home where a Belgian shepherd dog named Thor, a terrier called Silky, and a poodle, Venus, share the billing.

Gary spends much of his spare time in active sports (he once played football at Stanford University) and watching contact sports on television.

"Of course I'm happy," joked Gary, "now that I'm working steady."

O'Connor Signs For A Movie

Carroll O'Connor, Archie Bunker of "All in the Family", has been signed for a movie.

Although untitled yet, O'Connor described the film as a "drama with comedic moments about two old pals in New York.

"The World is changing too fast for them. It's funny, but sad too."

REAL LIFE COUPLE

Jack Weston and Marge Redmond, who are married, will star in an NBC-TV pilot called "For Better, For Worse", as fictional husband and wife in a discordant marriage.

DRAMATIC DEBUT

Country western singer Merle Haggard makes his dramatic acting debut as Dean Henderson, a stubborn, independent miner; on the "Doc Elliot" series.

"Chopper One", a new half-hour series about two young policemen who combat crime from a helicopter, premieres Thursday, January 17 (8-8:30 PM) on Channel 3-5-12.

Starring as officers Don Burdick and Gil Foley are Jim McMullan and Dirk Benedict, respectively. Foley is the pilot and Burdick is observer. Also starring is Ted Hartley as Capt. Ted McKeegan and Lou Frizzell as Mitch, a mechanic.

Foley and Burdick are a new breed of law enforcement officer. They work out of the same precinct house as their fellow policemen, but some get into black and white cars, others climb onto motorcycles — this pair gets into a helicopter.

In the premiere episode, titled "Chopper One", Gil and Don respond to a call to check a robbery in progress at a downtown hotel. Gil brings the chopper over the 14-story building, hovers as Don climbs out and drops to the roof. Over his handy-talkie Don gets work to check out a gunshot victim and races downstairs to the victim who tells him two gunmen shot him and took his wife as hostage.

Tarkenton Efficient

Quarterback Francis Tarkenton passes fewer times in 1973 than in any other time in his 13-year pro football career. His passes gained fewer yards (2,113) than since his rookie season of 1961.

Yest Francis Tarkenton's passing in 1973 was the best of his career — fewest interceptions (seven), lowest interception percentage (2.5), highest percentage of completions (61.7).

Efficient... that is the key word here, for both Tarkenton and the Minnesota Vikings as they head into their Super Bowl VIII showdown with the Miami Dolphins in Houston.

"It was the same way with John Hadl at Los Angeles," explained coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings. "With San Diego he was with a losing team and threw a lot; with Los Angeles he is with a winner and throwing less.

"You'll find through the league that, generally, the passers with the most yardage are with the losing teams."

And Tarkenton, of course, is with a winner — his first championship team in a brilliant career.

When asked if that had special meaning, Tarkenton responded, "sure it's a championship game. But the same things go into winning games in the playoffs as go into winning games during the regular season. They put a different title on it, but the game is still the same."

PREMIERE QUARTERBACK — Bob Griese is one of the premiere quarterbacks in the NFL with the proven poise, confidence, intelligence, and ability necessary to direct an offense to Super Bowl VIII paydirt. After sitting out the middle of 1972 with an ankly injury, Griese came back to lead the Dolphins to the AFC Championship and victory in Super Bowl VII. On January 13, the Dolphins will again be pursuing Super Bowl glory with Griese at the helm.

Canadian Open To Be Shown

ABC Sports has acquired the exclusive telecast rights for the 1974 Canadian Open golf championship at the Mississaugua Golf Club in Mississuagua, Ontario, Saturday, July 27 and Sunday, July 28, it was announced in December by Roone Arledge, President of ABC Sports, and Bruce Forbes, Executive Director of the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

Arledge said upon making the announcement, "ABC Sports is delighted to telecast this prestigious event. With the addition of the Canadian Open, ABC's coverage of golf specials in 1974 includes four of the top five championships in the world — U. S., British and Canadian Opens and the PGA Championship."

Commissioner Joseph C. Day, Jr., of the Tournament Players Division of PGA, who worked closely with the Royal Canadian Golf Association and ABC in negotiating the rights agreement, said, "Because the Canadian Open always produces a top-notch field of golfers from America as well as Canada, we felt that the event should also be telecast throughout the United States."

Sign Exclusive Tennis Rights

The CBS Television Network has signed a new multi-year agreement with the United States Lawn Tennis Association for the exclusive television rights to the United States Open Tennis Championships.

The announcement was made by William C. MacPhail, Vice President, CBS-TV Sports, and Walter Elcock, President of the ULSTA.

Miami Has A Habit

The Miami Dolphins are returning to the Super Bowl for an unprecedented third consecutive time. The winningest team in modern day professional football, the Dolphins have established themselves a football dynasty.

Winning is a habit, and Don Shula is a winner. He is the only coach in pro football history to ever win 100 or more games in his first 10 years of coaching. Last year he led the powerful Miami club to 17-0 season (a feat many believed highly improbable under current NFL guidelines) and a World Championship. Having been named Coach of the Year six times, Shula has amassed a phenomenal 46 wins, 9 loses, and 1 tie in regular season play and a 7-2 record in past season competition.

The Miami team is filled with talent. Many teams can field 22 players of approximately equal talent, but there is more to football than talent. To be a champion, a player must play with injuries and still maintain his peak performance level. For a team to succeed, it must have not 22 starters but 40. Miami is such a team, and for that reason they have been successful and true Champions.

Jake Scott's desire is typical on the Dolphin squad. He played in Super Bowl VII with a separated shoulder and broken wrist only to become the games Most Valuable Player by intercepting two passes and returning them 63 yards.

Lloyd Mumphord, Earl Morrall and Mercury Morris represent examples of Miami depth as they filled in with performances equal to if not superior to the starters

QUALITY COUNTS—Scramblin' Francis Tarkenton has proved it's not quantity but quality that wins an NFC Championship and a chance at the world title. Although Tarkenton passed fewer times in 1973 than in any other season, his passes were the best of his 13 year career. Tarkenton is long overdue for his Sunday date with the Miami Dolphins.

Two Weekends For Golf Fans

When it's cold outside, or raining, or for most golf fans across the country a better day for watching the sport on television than being outdoors playing the game, almost nothing could be better than coverage of a celebrity-hosted tournament or two.

NBC has a pair to fill the bill. The Dean Martin Tucson Open will be colorcast Saturday, January 19 (5:30 to 7 p.m.) and Sunday, January 20 (5-6:30 p.m.). Less than a month later, the Bob Hope Desert Classic, a competition from Palm Springs, Calif., which annually abounds in top golfers and glittering celebrities, will be covered Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 9 and 10 (5-6:30 p.m., both days).

The Dean Martin Tucson Open carries a total prize bundle of $150,000, with Bruce Crampton, last year's winner, expected to be back in the field to defend his title.

The final four holes of the 72-hole Tucson Open will be covered by the NBC Cameras at the Tucson National Golf Club in Tucson, Ariz.

P.G. Wodehouse Interview Monday

P. G. Wodehouse, 92-year-old prolific master of involved plot and comic invention, will be interviewed at his country home in Remsenberg, New York by Robert Cromie, on "Book Beat", Monday, January 14 at 9:30 p.m. on UNC—TV, Channel 25.

Pelham Greenville Wodehouse is famous for his humorous stories and novels about the whimsy and idleness of the upperclasses of England and America. He has created such unforgettable characters as Bertie Wooster, Psmith, Mr. Mulliner, and Jeeves, the valet. Farcical situations and intricate story lines, ingenious word play, pompous verbiage and unexpected slang, have produced an elaborate style in the approximately 100 Wodehouse books presently in print.

Born in England in 1881, he visited the United States in 1909 and liked it so much that he stayed on. His first break as a writer in America came when the Saturday Evening Post bought his novel, "Something New", as a serial. Besides novels and short stories, Wodehouse has collaborated in numerous successful plays and musical comedies. At 92 he is still working. He has just published a book in England entitled "Golf Omnibus", and has just finished writing one entitled "Bachelors Anonymous".

Wodehouse believes that humorous writing has all but disappeared today. According to him, its heyday was in the 20s and 30s with writers like Robert Benchley, James Thurber, Dorothy Parker and Frank Sullivan.

As far as Wodehouse is concerned, however, his outlook and writing style have not altered dramatically. Though he enjoys writing as much as he used to and cannot picture himself in any other profession, says Wodehouse, "I don't seem to get ideas so much these days. I don't think many people do when they get into their 90s."

Hollywood Wolves Not As They Seem

Hollywood wolves aren't what they used to be. In fact, they never were.

Now, before upsetting anyone, it should be pointed out that this refers to the four-footed kind, not the biped variety, whose reputation shall remain unsullied.

Producer-director Dan Curtis, in looking for a large wolf to play in "Scream of the Wolf", the "Wednesday Movie of the Week", January 16 (9:30-11 p.m.), couldn't find one. Property Master Ted Berkeley scoured the animal rental spots around Hollywood and came up with one wolf. However, the lobo blew his chance to be a howling success when Curtis judged him too small for the menacing role.

"I was looking for a large timber wolf type," said Curtis, whose company (with Metromedia) produced the movie which stars Peter Graves, Clint Walker, Jo Ann Pflug and Philip Carey. "The wolf that came into the office was the size of an average dog. I needed an animal who could fill the bill as a killer whose size and strength boggles everyone in the story."

Berkeley finally had veteran animal trainer Cindy James bring in a giant German Shepherd named Concho. Berkeley had Cindy spray Concho a wolfish gray-brown first, and then introduced the dog to Curtis. Concho was hired on the spot with a paw shake.

HIGH UP DOWN UNDER

Crash Craddock, who will guest-star on an upcoming program in the new musical series, "Music Country, U.S.A.," says that he believes he is the only artist to have had three records simultaneously in the top ten in Australia. They were "Boom Boom Baby," "Don't Destroy Me" and "I Want That."

NEAR MISS—Faye Dunaway, as Gwen Hunt, is nearly hit by a car as she attempts to run away from her problems in "The Arrangement," to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Dec. 22 (9-11:30 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

FOR DR. ALLEN HYNEK,
astronomer at Northwestern University

When you were in charge of the Air Force's UFO inquiry, you rejected the existence of UFO's. Now you verify the experience of two men in Mississippi who say three creatures spirited them aboard a flying saucer. What gives?—Jan L. Ruehling, Biloxi, Miss.

● I did examine these men under hypnosis, and have stated their experience was very real. I have not changed my mind about space visitors. But I have changed my mind about UFO's being simple misperceptions of common things. I am now quite convinced that we do have a very real and as yet unexplained phenomenon going on. I believe people who report UFO's are sincere, and I, for one, cannot explain many of the things they describe. We must, however, remember that the "U" in UFO simply means "unidentified"—not necessarily visitors from outer space.

FOR CAROL CHANNING

Your hit song, "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend," turned diamonds into your trademark. How do you feel about them in private life?—A. Woolitt, East St. Louis, Ill.

● I don't really like them! I'm too big for them. I'm six feet in heels. Diamonds are just too small. Well, maybe the Hope Diamond would be all right. . . . Besides, diamonds are too much like business to me now.

FOR SUZANNE PLESHETTE of "The Bob Newhart Show"

Your name sounds French. Did your ancestors come from France?—F. S., Washington, D.C.

● I am second-generation American-born on both sides of my family. I spoke French quite well until I was six, but only with my grandparents. I haven't spoken it since. So my French accent is excellent, but my vocabulary is that of a six-year-old!

FOR TONY BENNETT

What was the turning point in your life?—A. Newkley, Urbana, Ill.

● When Bob Hope saw me performing in Greenwich Village in 1950. Pearl Bailey was the star of the show. Hope asked me to go on tour with him. That kind of changed things for me. It was my first taste of big time. And I liked it!

FOR RICHARD BACH,
author of "Jonathan Livingston Seagull"

I read that you tried to stop release of the movie "Jonathan Livingston Seagull." Why?—C. Gabrovic, Mascoutah, Ill.

● The film is an incredible sticky mess that has almost nothing to do with the ideas or characters in my book. The producer told me that he'd make no changes without my approval. When I saw the movie he made, I didn't approve, but I couldn't stop the film or even remove my "credit." It sounds like the old Hollywood story—and it is—but it's not over yet.

FOR SEN. SAM J. ERVIN (D-N.C.)

Do you think it's right for the FCC to be able to use its "fairness doctrine" to shut down radio stations for being too one-sided?—G. A. Lasko, Minneapolis, Minn.

● I fear the practical result of this doctrine is that very few radio stations say anything about anything from any point of view. I would hazard to say that the doctrine has served to stifle the presentation of controversy and variety more than to promote it.

FOR TERRY ANNE MEEUWSEN, 1973 Miss America

I read about the Miss America contest being picketed by Women's Lib. What's your reaction?—P. T., Marion, Ind.

● I certainly don't think the Miss America Pageant downgrades womanhood. It's a scholarship contest. I see nothing wrong in wearing a one-piece bathing suit. Certainly the ones worn in the pageant are far more modest than what most girls wear on the beaches. Besides, I find it hard to believe that it is particularly thrilling for men to look at a row of contestants.

FOR VERA MILES, actress

As a mother of four—are you friends with your children?—K. T. Z., Waco, Texas

● I think so. There's a certain age where a mother has two choices: She can be bitter enemies with her children or good friends. I believe in letting them learn by their own mistakes. I'll be there to pick up the pieces when they need me, and they know that.

FOR WILLIAM D. RUCKELSHAUS, former Deputy Attorney General

Did public reaction to the Cox-Richardson-Ruckelshaus affair prove anything?—John Miller, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● Yes. One, the people reinforced the primacy of law. Two, they don't like the investigator of the President being fired by the President. And three, the people showed they still have tremendous power to control events in this country.

FOR DAVE POWERS, former aide to John F. Kennedy

So many men claim they were aboard President Kennedy's PT-109, it would have had to be as big as a battleship. Do you agree?—Vincent Gallagher, Green Bay, Wis.

● Do I ever! One day after I hung up from talking to a caller, Senator Kennedy said, "Who was that?" I said it was the elevator operator of the PT-109. He said, "What in the world are you talking about"? I answered that with all the men who were supposedly on the craft, I figured it must have had five decks and at least one elevator!

Humanizing America: John D. Rockefeller Proposes a 13-Year Bicentennial

"It took 13 years—from 1776 to 1789—to move from independence to union. I propose that the Bicentennial cover a similar period of time, that it be conceived as an era lasting from 1976 to 1989."

Elizabeth Gee

John D. Rockefeller and his wife Blanchette. He believes in a Bicentennial that will "move beyond celebration for its own sake to a Bicentennial that serves America's best purposes in this time of ferment and change."

At first glance, America's Bicentennial may not seem a very important subject. It is, after all, merely an anniversary—a 200th to be sure, but still just an anniversary. In the light of the Bicentennial's inauspicious beginning, is there reason to think it will become more than that, more than "just another anniversary"? My response is an unequivocal yes—provided we Americans see the full potential of the opportunity it offers and are prepared to commit ourselves to realizing that opportunity.

Today, just as 200 years ago, we are at a crucial turning point in our history. Our society is in ferment. We face difficult unresolved problems, a crisis of confidence, an uncertain future. There is as much divisiveness and fear and alienation today as there was then. The profound currents of social change in our society now are concerned with the same humanistic ideals and values that motivated the men and women of Colonial America—freedom and justice and truth; "quality of life" is the modern translation of Jefferson's immortal phrase, "the pursuit of happiness."

One of the most daring acts of our Founding Fathers was the explicit statement, in writing, of the rights of men and the values and ideals upon which the society was to be based. The Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights together presented a new and breathtaking vision of a just and humane society, one based on the dignity of the individual, on his inalienable rights.

It is true, of course, that some of those rights and values and ideals were violated right from the beginning. Throughout our rich and tumultuous history, we have at times lived up to our ideals gloriously—and at other times ignored them shamefully. We subordinated them in the great materialistic surge of the Industrial Revolution and in our ethic of perpetual expansion and growth. Never have the rights of Americans been truly available to all Americans.

Yet the remarkable fact is that although we have been far from perfect, we persist. Our founding values have been preserved, even if most of us take them for granted, while some of us have access to them only with great difficulty. In many ways we have matured rapidly as a society in recent decades. We have outlived some of our myths—the myth of our invincibility, for example, or the idea that a "melting pot" will mold everyone into some standard and comfortable notion of what an American should be. We are questioning the soundness of perpetual growth. We are increasingly able to look at our past more honestly than was possible a decade ago.

And, more importantly, we are a society on the move. We are in the early stages of the Second American Revolution. What began in part as the black revolution and youth revolution has spread to some extent throughout virtually all elements of our society. We have Women's Liberation, the consumer movement, the concern for our environment, a new interest in corporate responsibility, a new consciousness on the part of native Americans, a growing concern over the nature of work, increasing involvement in political life, a new directness and ease in human relations.

The common thread running through all of these and similar phenomena is a reconsideration of the values by which we order our lives and our society. This is the core of the Second American Revolution, whose purposes are to improve life for all our citizens. It is a revolution of fulfillment rather than overthrow, a humanistic movement toward a higher level of human existence.

This growing concern for what life is all about, so characteristic of our time, is made possible in large measure by the advanced state of the American economy. We are moving into what economists refer to as a post-industrial society. Industrialization is not an end in itself, but preparation for the next higher stage of human development.

True, the Second American Revolution could become distorted. It could degenerate into violence. But I am optimistic because I believe that understanding and involvement are increasing—particularly among the "moderates," the vast American center that includes so many millions of people of goodwill, who wish only the best for their country and their fellow citizens.

Here lies the challenge: How do we move beyond celebration for its own sake to a Bicentennial that serves our best purposes in this time of ferment and change? It seems to me that there are three major requirements.

FIRST: The time span of the Bicentennial: My proposal is that we reject the notion of the Bicentennial as only a national birthday party on July 4, 1776, or even as a one-year anniversary during 1976. Rather, we should see it as covering a substantial period of time, as a Bicentennial Era.

The founding of our nation did not begin and end with the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776. The war was formally ended in 1783. The Constitution was not drafted until 1787. And it was not until 1789 that the Union truly began—with the first Congress, the first Supreme Court, and the first President.

Humanizing America

It took 13 years—from 1776 to 1789—to move from independence to union. I propose that the Bicentennial cover a similar period of time, that it be conceived as an era lasting from 1976 to 1989.

SECOND: What of the inspirational quality of the Bicentennial? I believe most of us would agree that today we are not an inspired people. Despite the indications of vitality in our society, weariness, uncertainty and complacency seem increasingly to inhibit our efforts.

Have we lost our way? Is this great nation really on the decline? Or can we come together in renewed dedication to live out the promise that was articulated so well 200 years ago? We will find out the answer to that question during the Bicentennial Era. It offers us common ground, a chance to unite in common purpose if we will but take it and make the most of it.

Considering the history of blacks in our society, it would not be surprising if they were totally uninterested in the Bicentennial. Yet the significant fact is that a number of black leaders have taken a different position. It was perhaps best expressed in an address given a year and a half ago by Vincent De Forest. He said that the interest of blacks in the Bicentennial was not inspired by "the idea of organizing malcontents into a chorus of troublemakers. To the contrary," he said, "we wish to be positive, to affirm America and its people and their continuing revolution."

THIRD: We must concentrate on achievement. We may be lifted and stirred by the Bicentennial. But will we also be motivated to achieve?

There is a tremendous range of opportunities for achievement. How can we make our cities more livable? How can we better draw on rural America? How can we best protect and enhance our environment? How can we establish and assure the rights of all our citizens? What should be the nature of our economic system? What should be the role of government in the years ahead? We need to assemble our best talent to consider these and other difficult questions.

A number of cities have begun efforts to capitalize on the Bicentennial for purposes of urban renewal—cities such as Baton Rouge, La.; Lansing, Mich.; Pensacola, Fla.; Niagara Falls, N.Y. We will need to make a national commitment to provide the leadership, organization and resources to create realistic opportunities for goal-setting.

The opportunities for every organization and individual to be involved are virtually unlimited. But I underscore my strong belief that our ability to set goals for the future, and work to achieve them, to address our most serious social problems effectively, will be the true test of our society. If we dedicate the Bicentennial Era to these ends, we will have earned the right to celebrate as never before.

If the Bicentennial is to become the positive force that it can be, I believe there is still another requirement. It is that the Bicentennial will be meaningful and productive only to the extent that it becomes an era during which the power of individual initiative is rediscovered. This is the key to progress, to a successful Second American Revolution.

I believe there is a great potential interest among individual Americans in the Bicentennial. But much of it will remain latent unless we begin to take initiative—both as individuals and within the organizations and groups of which we are a part—to find ways to energize people in order to provide the needed leadership and framework and resources.

The fact is that we have heard virtually nothing about the Bicentennial from our great corporations, from the labor unions, from the foundations, from many of our largest nonprofit organizations, indeed even from our universities.

Clearly, unless we greatly reinvigorate our tradition of private initiative our 200th anniversary is going to be a charade, and the opportunity it offers for moving our society forward will be lost. Hanging back and waiting for government approval before doing anything is sheer nonsense. If we had done that 200 years ago, we would still be a British colony.

Now is the time for all of us to be patriots in the best sense of the word, not content simply to enjoy the blessings of the system we have inherited, but to try to make our nation better, to hand on to the next generation a better America, truer to its promise, its potential and its own ideals. I submit to you that this vision of a better America in the future can be fulfilled, but only if we—you and I—become involved and committed now.

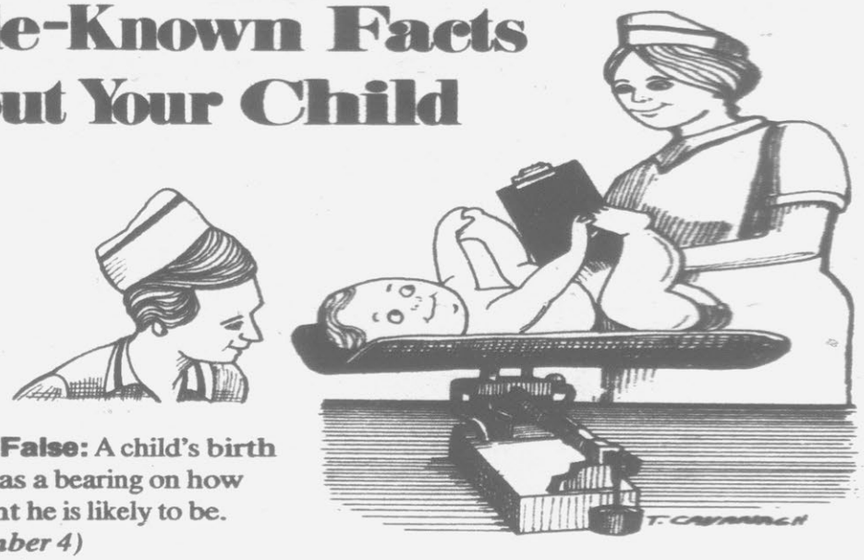
People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

Little-Known Facts About Your Child



True or False: A child's birth weight has a bearing on how intelligent he is likely to be. (See number 4)

Childhood is something that happens to everybody, and children are creatures that most people have at least two of. And that's what this True-or-False quiz is all about.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If your child is a good listener, he's likely to have a good IQ.

2. When parents have difficulty relating to their children, it's likely to be a case of history repeating itself.

3. Boys' fears tend to be focused on the future, while girls' fears are more apt to be related to the present.

4. A child's birth weight has a bearing on how intelligent he is likely to be.

5. Gifted children have the happiest childhoods and the best relationship with their parents.

6. When an adopted child grows old enough to wonder about his identity, you should satisfy his curiosity by answering his questions as best you can.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to studies at Southern Illinois University, where children's IQ scores were compared with their ability to listen attentively. It was found that children who made good scores on listening tests evidenced high ability on intelligence tests.

2. True. A psychiatric study of parent-child relationships has shown that individuals who experience a difficult relationship with their children "will usually be found to have had difficulty in handling their own hostility in childhood against parents, brothers and sisters—or both."

3. True. Florida State University studies show that girls' fears tend to focus on the immediate present—the here and now. And in that area their fears are more numerous and more intense than is the case with boys. The investigation showed, however, that boys had "significantly more intense fears of the future."

4. True. Consensus of studies on the relationship of birth weight to intelligence—the ability to think, reason and absorb new knowledge—shows that people whose birth weight is not appreciably higher or lower than the normal range average the highest IQ's. This doesn't mean that higher IQ's do not occur in other birth-weight ranges—but that they occur less frequently.

5. False. Findings of researchers show that creative children often have extremely unhappy childhoods, lack of rapport with their parents, and are forced to fight an uphill battle to "find themselves" and realize their own potential. Their self-confidence is often undermined by parents and others "who suppress new ideas and espouse negative attitudes." When you add to this the attitudes of playmates who are jealous of the gifted child's superior endowments, it becomes clear that his lot is not wholly to be envied.

6. True—according to the findings of a University of Michigan study of the pros and cons of this question. It's concluded that "there is far too little communication between parents and their adopted children on this sensitive issue." It's pointed out that inevitably the child must cope with the reality of the situation. It's also observed that withholding information from the parents about their child's background may both intensify their worries about his heredity and deprive the child of his right to accurate and complete identification of himself.

Ranked in Order: 14 Complaints Secretaries Have About Bosses

By S. R. Redford

"In any job, personality differences can induce a feeling of chronic fatigue when endured five days a week, eight hours a day."

Sometimes when there's a problem, people forget to ask the real experts. As demand for competent secretaries has risen during the last few years, everyone from personnel manager to corporation president has issued lists of "do's" and "don'ts" for creating goodwill between boss and secretary. But it's difficult to find any in-depth study of what secretaries themselves want and don't want in a job and in a boss.

Since 1960, "P.S. for Private Secretaries," a biweekly newsletter of information for secretaries published by the Bureau of Business Practice Inc., has featured a lively section called "Secretarial Clinic." From all over the U.S. and Canada, secretaries write to air their job problems and to request advice from other secretaries. We asked Mrs. Irene Stone, editor of "P.S. for Private Secretaries," to review her files of letters and find the most important problems and complaints as the secretaries saw them.

As you read the list, which is numbered in the order of the items' importance, remember no secretary may ever tell you any of these things directly, not even if she quits. Long ago, industrial psychologists proved that most people don't tell the complete truth when they leave. Typical explanations such as, "I need a job closer to home," "My husband doesn't want me to work," "My children's school lets out earlier than it used to," lull a boss into believing it wasn't the job and it certainly wasn't him. But an alert supervisor has to realize that in many cases a secretary would keep the job, almost no matter what—if she enjoyed it sufficiently.

Many people do not understand that being a boss in the year 1974 in a democratic society is a complicated skill. Far more is involved than just giving sensible orders. The first two kinds of secretarial complaints make this fact clear.

1. His* method of dealing with people is difficult to understand, and he's aroused a great deal of resentment.

2. He doesn't know much about office procedures and sharing ideas with others. He's inconsiderate and immature, and won't accept new ideas or other people's ideas readily.

In our modern, classless world, the power of the boss's position can take a boss just so far. Tact and human relations skill are business necessities. Says an expert quoted recently in "Personnel Journal": "The difference between the man who has a topnotch secretary and one who does not, may be the man. Personnel departments can do just so much for a boss in finding candidates... but the rest is up to the executive—the interviewing, training, and willingness to share responsibility with his new assistant."

Other important complaints indicate that some bosses may be so busy pushing through their day's output that they become insensitive to the fact that secretaries are people.

3. My boss expects too much of one person.

4. He doesn't believe in vacations for secretaries. But he doesn't mind asking me to work overtime without extra pay or giving me extra duties. And he rarely expresses his appreciation.

5. I work for more than one person and get conflicting assignments.

When any of these situations occurs regularly, it tells a secretary her boss doesn't think enough of her to develop a reasonable overall workload for her; nor does he consider how many work hours are needed for her to carry out individual tasks he assigns. The problem runs far deeper than inconvenience—though that in itself is serious. As one secretary put it, "When he acts like that, I feel like an extension of the office furniture. Sure, he's routinely polite, but I can't help feeling he values me as just a cog that's useful to him." A recent job-turnover survey of office workers revealed that when a secretary believes her boss has stopped seeing her as a person, her mind often turns to job hunting.

The next complaint is a fine example of chronic personality conflict between boss and secretary:

6. He's too stiff to work for. There's never any variation from the norm.

Problems like this are no one's fault. Yet in any job, personality differences can induce a feeling of chronic fatigue when endured five days a week, eight hours a day. Other personality-conflict examples:

7. My boss and I are both "drivers" — and sometimes our drives conflict.

8. We're both sticklers for detail and sometimes our ideas of detail differ.

It all depends on how serious the personality conflict seems to the secretary involved. Suggesting that a person "adjust"—especially the secretary—is one usual solution. Frankly, though, for a competent secretary there are plenty of good jobs in the world. If problems like Nos. 6, 7, 8 become really important to her, probably the healthiest solution is a change of position to a boss whose temperament is more congenial.

And then there's the famous problem: the Go-fer, or Personal Chores, problem:

9. He asks me to handle personal chores like buying gifts for his wife, typing his son's term paper, etc. etc.

Though "P.S. for Private Secretaries" found that this is one of the 14 most common complaints secretaries make against their bosses, there is a wide range of secretarial reaction. Some secretaries were informed when they accepted the position that they'd be expected to do such chores. Others object not to the work itself but to how they're asked. They prefer, "Do you have time?", or "Would

*Though we use "he" for boss and "she" for secretary, we do realize that approximately five percent of secretaries in the United States today are men and an ever-rising percentage of bosses are women.

Secretaries

you mind?" This provides the opportunity to refuse gracefully. It also indicates the boss realizes personal services are a favor.

Still other secretaries say they don't mind personal chores "as long as I have my lunch hour and after-work hours free and do his personal typing, bookkeeping, and shopping on his time." And yet another group of secretaries is adamant in finding all these tasks demeaning!

If No. 9 is an old problem, No. 10 is rather new. More so than in the past, many secretaries today are ambitious for responsibility and promotion.

10. He's unwilling to turn loose some detail work that only clutters his desk and day.

In a "Be Nicer to Secretaries" memo issued by the State Department, the government plowed into the boss who won't recognize a secretary's intelligence, expand her authority, and ultimately, if she wants it, offer her a promotion. "Do not assume secretaries to have disabling intellectual limitations" was the government's way of putting it.

The last four complaints may not seem very important to a busy supervisor. Yet year in and year out secretaries write emotion-charged appeals about these situations to the "Secretarial Clinic." Nothing that produces so much emotion can be dismissed as trivial.

11. He doesn't tell me the things I should know ahead of time.

12. He doesn't tell me where he's going around the building.

13. He neglects to tell me when he'll be out of town on a business trip, or just where he is when he's out of the building.

14. Sometimes both my bosses go out and forget to come back when I have an appointment for lunch.

As one desperate secretary put it in an emotion-filled letter to the "Clinic": "The worst part is that my boss frequently disappears just as I receive a long-distance call for him or before someone from another department drops in to see him. How do I correct this, short of hanging a bell around his neck?"

Little things attended to, we've all often been told, create contentment. Problems 11-14 make it obvious that little things, regularly ignored, can roil emotions and even create deep resentment.

Overall, being aware of the other person's reactions is probably the best way for a boss and secretary to solve the 14 commonest conflict situations. FW

KIRK DOUGLAS:

"My Wife's Coat—And the Terrible Price It Cost"

"I only went hunting once in my life. It was on an African safari to shoot wild game. I killed a tiger and a leopard. I thought it would be nice to get my wife a leopard for a coat. What I didn't know was that it would take four or five leopards to make that coat. . . . At first I thought it would be difficult for me to kill an animal, but once I started shooting, it came easily. It was only later that I began thinking about what I had actually done. I started having pangs of guilt, and I have never hunted since. I won't go so far as to say that all hunting should be cut out. I'm not that nice a guy. But if you look at all of those species that are now being threatened with extinction, it's obvious that something must be done. Tighter restrictions on hunting—that's the only solution I can think of." Mr. Douglas recently directed his first film, "Scalawag," in which he also stars.—Interviewed by William Wolf

AT LAST! A DOCTOR WHO SAYS:

Take Food, Not Medicine, If You Suffer from Any One of These Ills!

"Why do I avoid prescribing drugs?", says this brilliant and controversial physician, who has cured literally thousands of patients with nothing more than ordinary food alone!
"For these four vital reasons"—

1. Because drugs do not produce health. They merely mask the symptoms of a disease . . . cover up the condition, while the body struggles on valiantly to cure itself.

2. This is the reason why so many men and women, of all ages, no sooner fight their way out of one ailment, than they fall right into another. Why they are always "half-sick". Why they never really know what it means to be completely free of pain, in glowing health. Because they, and their doctors, do nothing more than merely fight off each new attack, and never drain out the poison that is left from that attack, or rebuild the vital weakened tissue before it can fall prey to a new disease!

It Is "Tissue Weakness" That Opens The Door To One New Disease After Another! And NO Drug—Only Food—Can Build REAL TISSUE STRENGTH Again!

3. The lasting way to fight disease, then, is not just to counter-attack each new symptom in its turn . . . but to build such sheer physical strength into each threatened cell of your body that the organism that causes that disease is either destroyed, or rendered harmless, the very instant it enters your body!

4. This is done in two ways: First, to use a medical-diet to drain out the poisons that make your body weak today. And, finally, to use a second, even more powerful medical-diet to pour Super-Nutrients—Nature's own medicines—into every crippled organ of that body . . . not only to force out that specific disease, as fast as humanly possible, but also to leave that organ perhaps even healthier than before it was first attacked!

For example—

See How This NATURAL Method Has Worked— In Thousands Of Case Histories, From Every Walk Of Life, And With Almost Every Ailment You Can Imagine!

We shall let Dr. Nittler's patients speak for themselves:

"When I came to you I suffered from swelling and tingling of extremities, almost constant hunger, periodic weakness, great sensitivity to glare and loud noise . . . Since becoming your patient I find myself energetic and alert until nearly midnight, awake fully by 7:30 or 8 each morning, in good spirits, not sluggish, and continuing throughout the day glad to be alive, performing challenging tasks!"

"Before I became your patient, I had visited several skin specialists hoping to find help in the removal of what appeared to be growths on my face. Biopsies were taken; result negative. I asked how to get rid of these growths; how to prevent their growing back. I received a shrug of the specialist's shoulder (later, his bill!); he didn't know! Dr. Nittler took one look at the area involved and prescribed (natural) medication for external application which within one week's time cleared up the difficulty. It has not returned."

And Still More Thrilling Results! All Told In The Patient's Own Documented Words!

"However, on Easter Sunday, March 29, 1970, I suffered not only another occlusion, but an acute cardiac arrest. This was preceded by three days of intense weariness, fatigue and restlessness . . . Only extreme good luck made it possible for me to write these words . . . They (his regular physicians) believed open heart surgery to be the only hope for giving me a normal life span . . . It was at this point that I was referred to Dr. Nittler . . . after his initial examination and after reviewing my medical history . . . he started me on his "basic heart program". . . Within weeks, I noticed great improvement . . . an increased surge of well-being with each passing week. My family doctor continues to monitor my case. He cannot, at this point, rule out the open heart surgery recommended by his peers, but he is honest enough to admit I've shown great improvement. He says my heart is beating more slowly and stronger and that everything sounds good. My laboratory tests are all normal . . . I'm looking forward to returning to work and a normal productive life."

"I've been subject to asthma all my life. It would come with a cold or when I laughed or exercised too hard. The situation became dramatically worse when we moved to Santa Cruz in 1966. For some reason I'd catch a cold every four to six weeks . . . Only when I got it, it would go to my chest, develop into asthma, and I could hardly breathe. I was fed up with being sick and tired all the time . . . So I went through Dr. Nittler's whole program . . . Now (1971) the few colds I catch are very mild. I can't even remember the last time I had asthma with or without a cold!"

"In the latter part of November past, I broke out in an allergic dermatitis—severe hives . . . in addition to the hives, I would get a severe pain in an area above the right kidney . . . It was an acute shattering pain that immobilized me. I was next given cortisone. After 24 hours this would lessen the severity of both hives and pain. As long as I continued with cortisone . . . I was fine, but when I stopped, severe hives and pain recurred. Then back to cortisone for four or five days, followed by hives and pain. I seesawed back and forth in this manner for several weeks . . . A friend of mine gave me Dr. Nittler's phone number and begged me to call him. . . . Then on the tenth day under Dr. Nittler's care, something wonderful (to me, a miracle) happened—I was free of my ailments! A staggering weight had been lifted from both my shoulders and my wife's . . . Now I am in the thirteenth month after the doctor's care, enjoying the best of health and feeling great."

And Literally Thousands Upon Thousands Of Case Histories More! ALL STEMMING FROM NATURAL "SUPER-FOOD" TECHNIQUES LIKE THESE, THAT YOU CAN USE TOMORROW IN YOUR OWN HOME!

Again, to list only a few examples of the specific, step-by-step "Super-Food" Treatments given you in this great book:

Home treatment for constipation that works through your skin, and removes internal poisons, painlessly and automatically, at the same time it restores normal functions.

How to increase the blood flow (and therefore the life-giving oxygen) not only to your heart tissues, but your entire circulatory system. (As just one side-benefit of this new, natural therapy, cold feet simply feel warm and good again!) This process automatically lowers the work load of your heart, and your lungs, and so, as another marvelous side-benefit, almost immediately diminishes the ever-increasing shortness of breath that plagues most people!

How to get rapid relief from gallbladder pain. A treatment that also may enable you to actually, painlessly pass a stone or two (and get rid of them for good). And, at the same time, stimulate the flow of bile from your liver, and begin simultaneously stomach-healing food-therapy.

Why hemorrhoids do not have to be endured any longer! A simple capsule that may yield apparent benefits in a day or two, with restoration of normal function and comfort in a few weeks, just as it has in case after case in Dr. Nittler's own files!

How to keep from being poisoned by commercial food sprays. This method simply removes the spray from fruits and vegetables—in minutes!

A new way to brush your teeth that costs nothing. And that greatly increases your powers of digestion!

How, if you suffer from an acute illness, you can actually feed your body healing food-ingredients through the skin. That go to work to help you, in seconds!

How to cut down overproduction of stomach acid almost immediately, without taking a thing!

Liver Detoxification! Follow These Simple Rules, AND PAIN-CAUSING POISONS LITERALLY POUR OUT OF YOUR BODY!

The best and most ancient method of healing wounds. (Animals do this instinctively. But we've forgotten it.)

A do-it-yourself prostate massage that involves only a simple motion with the legs and soles of your feet . . . plus a little-known and delicious food that greatly aids in the normal function of this important gland.

What to do for repeated violent pains in the chest (called Intercostal Neuralgia, and often mistaken for heart trouble or even attack). How to tell the difference at once. And then use a simple natural spray that relieves this torturous pain in minutes, for hours!

The inexpensive food that has fantastic results with cold, and even flu! As Dr. Nittler says: "This remedy alone cures many cases of flu."

Why Dr. Nittler dares to say: "I have known very severe long-standing cases (of Athlete's Foot) respond dramatically after one application"!

And why he also says: "I have seen a deep nasty boil on a cheek drain through the skin in one night with the use of this (natural food product). The infection was on the pad, there was no infection left in the boil and no wound visible."

PLUS: emergency treatments for burns that prevent scarring . . . a simple remedy for poison ivy that works . . . how to melt away warts (and even some brown spots) . . . a non-prescription product (as are all the other remedies given here) that has a wonderful healing effect of the mucous membranes of the intestinal tract . . . home remedies for internal parasites . . . what you must do, at once, for diarrhea . . . how Dr. Nittler treats ulcers . . . how to rebuild weak stomachs, without aggravating them . . . how to break fever in emergencies, especially in children . . . the tested routine to follow for any virus infection . . . strength-foods for every part of the body . . . how your body can build up its own reserve supply of nutrients to fortify its natural resistance in terms of stress or epidemic . . . weight-reducing without tears . . . the most effective treatment ever invented for hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) . . . and much, much more!

IMPROVEMENT BOOKS CO., Dept. 5237, 13490 N.W. 45th Ave., Opa Locka, Fla. 33059

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares several recipes from "The Calculating Cook," a gourmet cookbook by Jeanne Jones for people on special diets. Marilyn says: "So often I get letters from diabetics and other dieters. Isn't there some way, they ask, to make dietetic meals appetizing? Of course there is! I've taste-tested these recipes—and they're delicious by any standard!"

Rapid Roast That's Great for Dieters

SEMITROPICAL FRUIT CUP

1 cup (½-pint container) plain yogurt
1 ripe banana, sliced
1 orange, peeled, seeded and diced
1 cup diced fresh pineapple (or canned unsweetened pineapple chucks, halved)
Cinnamon, mint leaf (optional)

1. Put yogurt and sliced banana into blender container, cover. Blend until smooth.

2. Pour banana and yogurt sauce over the diced orange and pineapple. Mix well, then spoon into sherbet glasses. Serve immediately. Garnish each with a sprinkle of cinnamon and a mint leaf (if available). Makes 6 servings, 40 calories per serving

Jeanne Jones, a gourmet cook, also happens to be diabetic.

RAPID ROAST

1-6 lb. beef roast, such as prime rib or boneless top sirloin
1 clove garlic
Salt

1. Preheat oven to 500°F. Rub roast with garlic and sprinkle with salt.

2. Place roast in preheated oven. Roast for 30 minutes and then turn the heat off. Do not open the oven door for exactly 2 hours, then open it and remove the roast.

3. Allow the roast to stand 15 minutes before carving for easier slicing.

4. Thirty minutes roasting time will make a rare roast. If you wish more well-done meat, roast for 33 or 34 minutes at 500°F. before turning the heat off. The general rule is: 5 minutes to the pound for rare and 5½-6 minutes to the pound for more well-done meat. Each slice (3x2x⅛ inches) contains 73 calories

SPINACH SALAD

1½ lbs. tender, fresh, washed, torn spinach leaves, chilled
¼ cup Bacon Dressing, recipe below
2 hard-cooked eggs, shredded

1. In salad bowl, toss spinach with bacon dressing until leaves are well-coated.

2. Divide salad onto 8 salad plates. Top each serving with shredded egg. Makes 8 servings, 63 calories per serving

BACON DRESSING

1 slice bacon, very crisp, cooled and blotted
1½ teaspoons red-wine vinegar
½ teaspoon hickory-smoked salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon water
5 tablespoons vegetable oil

1. Crumble the crisp bacon and add it to the vinegar in a jar with a tightly fitted lid.

2. Add the hickory-smoked salt, dry mustard and pepper. Mix until the salt is dissolved. Add water and oil. Cover jar tightly and shake vigorously for 30 seconds. Store covered in refrigerator. Makes about ½ cup, 1½ teaspoons contain 45 calories

"'The Calculating Cook,'" says Marilyn, "is a fine cookbook that has been approved by the Diabetes Association of Southern California. It is available in bookstores, or else by writing the publishers, 101 Productions, 79 Liberty Street, San Francisco, Calif. 94110."

"Fool the eye" still works when you sew this silhouette in vertical stripes that give the illusion of height and slimmer proportions. Add to that the smart detailing of a contrast collar and flaps, long gathered sleeves and button trim—and you have a neat number for the casual life.

Fabric suggestions: cotton, linen, lightweight wool. Size 12 takes approximately 3 yards of 44-inch fabric. Standard body measurements for size 12 are: Bust 34, Waist 25½, Hips 36.

I believe that my MINK OIL will make your WRINKLES VANISH!

By Billie Ann Bender

You can find out for yourself without risking one penny! Here's what I did about my wrinkles . . . I always pampered my skin . . . Special creams, lotions, exotic balms . . . I used them faithfully. Yet nothing helped. I was ready to give up. You see unsightly premature wrinkles are caused by changes in climate, temperature, humidity, dryness, pollution even soaps and detergents.

Then something struck me—something I never would have known if my husband hadn't owned and managed a mink farm where we lived.

One day I was serving coffee to three of the men who handle the mink pelts. These men had worked for my husband for years. As I gave them their coffee, I couldn't help but notice their hands. How smooth and soft they were! I thought about them all that day. In my opinion it had to be something in the body or skin of the mink that made their hands so smooth and soft. And if it was good for hands, then it must be good for the face and throat. Could this be the answer to the signs that alarm every woman?

I told my husband what was on my mind and asked if he could possibly extract some of the oil from the mink pelts. At first he laughed at me, but then agreed I might have a point. He consulted a chemist friend and together they compounded the mink oil with a pure balm base. It was a costly process, but what it produced I believed was priceless.

After I'd used the mink oil my complexion looked fresher, clearer, smoother. There was no doubt about it. My formerly dull, dry skin now had a glowing, dewy look. I was really thrilled! The little lines had been eased away. Even my throat seemed petal-smooth and more firm looking. I could hardly believe it. My friends and relatives were astonished at the change in my appearance.

So I gave my precious mink oil a name and put it on the market. It's called Emlin®Mink Oil Essential Creme. It contains no hormones, estrogens or steroids—only the pure oil and balm. Already I've received hundreds of letters from delighted users. Many said the effects were beyond anything they had hoped for. These reports make me say "I believe that my mink oil will make your wrinkles vanish."

And mind you, there's nothing complicated about the application. (Who has time for elaborate beauty rituals? I'll bet you don't). Just apply Emlin®Mink Oil Essential Creme at bedtime and leave it on while you sleep. That's when it works its wonders, helping to penetrate below the surface of your skin replacing lost natural oils, restoring moisture balance, leaving a beautifully lovely skin you never dreamed possible.

I'm so confident my Mink Oil cream can do marvelous things for your skin. I offer it to you with an unconditional guarantee. Just try it. See for yourself, in your own mirror, how it helps ease away unwanted dreadful lines. Many women wrote of gratifying results after only two weeks. Some take longer. But I want you to understand this. If, for any reason, you are not pleased with Emlin®Mink Oil Essential Creme just return the unused portion to me, and I'll mail you a full refund, plus postage with no questions asked.

Now it's up to you. Here is your chance to have beautiful, attractive skin —at no risk. Fill out the coupon and mail today.

After losing 101 pounds, I weigh less than when I was 22 years old.

By Mary Falt Smith — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Here I am at age 22 and 148 pounds. This was taken during my honeymoon, so I was in pretty good shape . . . for me.

Nobody I'm sure will believe I'm only 51 years old here. But that's what 235 pounds and a head of gray hair did for me.

How's this for a change? At 52, I'm down to 134 pounds, have touched up my hair and feel spry as a spring chicken.

For someone like me who's gone through life being called Piano Legs, the Beef Trust and a Sherman Tank, it's almost unbelievable to lose 101 pounds and find you weigh less now than when you were married — at the age of 22.

Fortunately, my husband Smitty was never interested in a real skinny bride. He married a girl who liked to cook and loved to eat. In fact, he could outdo me in both departments. Why, it was nothing for us to have a lavish meal with homemade bread or muffins and hot baked pies, then go into the evening snacking on pretzels, potato chips, pizzas and beer. There was one difference between Smitty and me, though. Since he was over six feet tall, it took a lot more eating to fill him out than it did me.

Oh, I was intelligent enough to realize that I was over-eating. But somehow, my fat never seemed to bother me much. Maybe because I knew I was loved and I felt secure and comfortable. Then, one day a simple thing happened that changed my outlook and my life. Smitty and I decided to go to Maine on vacation and I wanted a pants suit for traveling. Well, I shopped and shopped, saying each time I left the house: "I'm off to Tent City." But at size 24½, I found nothing. And for the first time in my life, I admitted that being fat was no joke.

After the vacation, when we got back home to Pearl River, New York, I decided to try to lose some weight. A couple of my friends suggested that reducing-plan candy, Ayds®, since one of the "girls" had lost 20 pounds on the plan and couldn't say enough good things about it. Like Ayds contain vitamins and minerals; that they have no drugs; and that the plan leaves you really satisfied.

Frankly, with the tremendous amount of weight I had to lose, I was certain that the Ayds plan wouldn't work for me. Nevertheless, I bought a box of the vanilla caramel Ayds at the drugstore and began following the plan on the QT. The only person I told was my neighbor. She had a scale and weighed me secretly every week. She also gave me no end of encouragement and even volunteered to take in my clothes as I took off the weight.

It was not until I'd taken off 25 pounds, however, that my other neighbors began to notice. My family, too. I'll tell you, those Ayds candies really helped curb my appetite.

I want to mention here, though, that I did one thing differently on the Ayds plan and it worked perfectly for me. At breakfast, instead of chewing my Ayds, I'd put one into a cup of hot tea and it looked just as if I'd added milk and sugar. Tasted delicious, too, and all I had was 26 calories. At lunch, I'd go back to chewing two Ayds with tea. Then I'd have a lettuce and tomato salad and cold roast beef or chicken. And at dinner, I'd have Ayds and tea again with meat, a green vegetable and salad. Why, with the help of Ayds, I was even able to cut out all the starches I used to have and, honestly, I didn't even miss them.

One thing I'd like to say is this: putting too much pressure on a person, whether to reduce or to stop smoking or to give up gambling just makes him or her rebel. Each person has to decide for himself what he's going to do.

In my case, I had to get my own "nettle" up first about losing. But once I did, it took me only a year to go from 235 pounds to 134, thanks to the Ayds plan. It was when I hit that low figure that I couldn't resist getting out an old snapshot and comparing what I looked like when I was in my twenties with what I look like today. That's when I decided to color my hair, buy a new pants suit and be what I am — a "liberated" woman who still loves to cook for her man.

Is Your Dog Expecting?

If your dog is going to have a litter of healthy pups, it is important that she be well cared for during her pregnancy (from 60-66 days). Take every precaution to insure that she does not become infected with internal or external parasites—the No. 1 enemy of your future pups. Have her examined for worms before the third week (if she was not wormed before mating). As her appetite increases, give her larger quantities of food divided into additional feedings. Avoid gigantic single meals. No roughhousing; it can endanger both mother and pups. Though her regular schedule should be maintained, extra trips out decrease the chance of accidents in the house. Children should be encouraged to give their "dam" (mother-to-be) gentle affection during this time. In sharing this experience, they learn to understand and appreciate the birth cycle in a natural way.—By Felicia Ames

Sports Mini-Profile

WALT FRAZIER:
They Call Him "The Black Joe Namath"

Walt Frazier, All-Star guard for the New York Knicks, is known as "Clyde Cool." The nickname "Clyde" was hung on him because he steals basketballs the way "Clyde" of the celebrated "Bonnie and Clyde" movie stole from banks. The "Cool" identifies Frazier's style, for he never shows emotion or excitement as he exhibits his dazzling footwork, shooting and passing skills. . . . Off-court, Frazier is the No. 1 exponent of the New York life-style. Some people call him "The Black Joe Namath." He wears expensive suits and wide-brimmed hats, drives a burgundy Rolls-Royce with the license plate "W.C.F.," and lives in one of Manhattan's most expensive penthouse apartments. The rooms are a symphony in red and black, with the nickname "Clyde" etched in huge letters near the top of one mirrored wall. . . . Frazier can afford to live in high style. Salaried at close to $200,000 a year, he has all kinds of sideline pursuits via his "Walt Frazier Enterprises." . . . A Georgian by birth, he's come a long way from his Southern origins, where he was born into a poor family of nine and was regarded as shy and tongue-tied. Yet he led Southern Illinois to the championship of the National Invitation Tournament in New York and gained a new sense of confidence when the big-city fans went wild over his flashy plays and wide moustache. . . . In 1967, he became the Knicks' No. 1 draft choice and was a key factor in leading the New Yorkers to two national championships.—By Barry Abramson

Lucille Ball:

"If You Can't Take Care of Yourself, How Can You Take Care of Anyone Else?"

I met Lucille Ball on location about an hour's drive north of Los Angeles, where the exterior of a Georgian mansion had been built for "Mame," Lucy's big new film.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Mame brought up her nephew in quite a freewheeling manner. Do you believe this is the proper way to raise a youngster?

LUCY: Maybe Mame goes a bit farther than I would in that respect, but she does one thing that I firmly believe in: She puts curiosity into the kids—makes them unafraid to tackle anything, mix with adults of any age, go anywhere. I don't believe in talking down to kids. As you know, I've always included my kids in everything I've ever done. The TV series, vacations—everything.

FW: But don't you feel that in some ways Mame is much more liberal than you? You have a reputation for being conservative.

LUCY: Not politically. I don't know what it means to be conservative politically. But in my own private life, yes, I guess I am.

FW: How do you interpret being conservative?

LUCY: To me it means doing things in moderation and not in excess. I've seen the folly of that too often. I've seen people so involved with their careers, for instance, that they don't take care of their children. To me, conservatism means taking care of yourself and your family. If you can take care of yourself, everything else will fall into place somehow. If you can't take care of yourself, how can you take care of anyone else?

FW: Is there anyone in particular who led you to this kind of thinking?

LUCY: Yes, Norman Vincent Peale. I have him to thank for it.

FW: Beatrice Arthur plays Vera in "Mame," and the rumor is that you two had quite a feud. Is that true?

LUCY: No, not at all.

FW: Then how do you think the rumor got started?

LUCY: I honestly don't know. I asked for Bea before we even had a director and the rest of the cast. I knew it would be difficult to get her. She had just started "Maude," and we had to wrap our schedule around hers.

FW: Why did you want Beatrice Arthur so badly?

LUCY: I'd seen her play the part with Angela Lansbury on the stage, and I loved Bea's strength and authority. I needed it.

FW: Did you ever have a feud with any of your co-stars?

LUCY: Not with any of my co-stars, but I once had a great—let's call it a misunderstanding—with director Henry Hathaway. That was years ago.

"I think the family has to be the censor for their own children."

And because of him I had great difficulties with the rest of the cast of the movie I was working on. We didn't speak to one another for five years.

FW: Did you ever make up?

LUCY: Yes, with the help of Ann Sothern. Now we're friends again.

FW: What was the film you did together?

LUCY (hesitating): I . . . can't remember. . . . I must have blocked it out of my mind. . . .

FW: How do you feel about R- and X-rated pictures?

LUCY: I think it puts a terrible load on young people who see these films. How can they equate it with the way their parents try to bring them up? I think it will lead to a society that is much too permissive.

FW: Then you do believe in censorship?

LUCY: I honestly don't know how to answer that, because I know what censorship can lead to. Once it starts, it's hard to stop. I think the family has to be the censor for their own children. But then I realize that this isn't always easy, particularly when kids grow older. It's difficult to find enough films they can see.

Lucy believes in "conservatism"—at least in her family life.

FW: Do you think you were too permissive with your own children?

LUCY: Certainly not. But I must say, I did spoil them. Maybe I gave them too much. And maybe I allowed other people to give them too much as well.

FW: What about you as a child—were you spoiled?

LUCY: We never had very much. At the same time, we never were in want of anything either. So in a way I was spoiled, but on a different economic level. That's why I can't disapprove too much of my own actions.

FW: How were you spoiled?

LUCY: My mother went deeply into debt to get me the things I wanted.

FW: Such as?

LUCY: Such as piano lessons at $2.50 an hour, which was very expensive in those days. And at the time, she really couldn't afford it. Or saxophone lessons. Or banjo. Anything I showed an interest in. The same held true for my brother. All the things we wanted to do, she helped us do.

FW: Did she punish you as well?

LUCY: Did she! Many a day I had to cut a switch off the lilac bush for my own switching! And when I got older, I was deprived of things like going out on Saturday night.

FW: If you could live your life over again, would you raise your own children—Lucie and Desi—differently?

LUCY: I don't think so. Three years ago I wouldn't have anticipated the things that happened. For instance, little Lucie never cooked in her life, never did any shopping, hardly put her clothes away—and now she's become a marvelous housekeeper.

FW: Were you disappointed when her marriage broke up?

LUCY: Yes. Very much. But she's adjusting to it, and she spends a lot of time with her dad in Baja California. She's become a very well-adjusted young lady. Do you know that she works for five different charities?

FW: Desi Jr., was going with Liza Minnelli for some time. Do you think he should have married her?

LUCY: I think he's too young to get married. He wants responsibility awfully badly, but frankly, he's got enough responsibilities already—only he doesn't recognize them.

FW: What will you do now?

LUCY: Another 24 TV shows.

FW: Do you ever get tired of the series?

LUCY: I wouldn't do it if I did. We consider each episode as if it were a brand new idea. That's the reason the show's so successful. We believe in unbelievable situations, then make them come true.

When your child can't sit still, is it nervousness or is it Pin-Worms?

Fidgeting, distraction, fitful scratching of rectal itch—many people don't know these "nervous habits" can be caused by Pin-Worms. These almost invisible parasites are so common, medical authorities have said 1 out of 3 children examined, and many parents, may have Pin-Worms.

They can infect anyone—young or old, rich or poor. Worst of all, Pin-Worms are highly contagious, so they can spread from person to person, until the whole family is infected.

Fortunately, there is an easy-to-take medication called Jayne's® P-W® tablets that gets rid of Pin-Worms. Your pharmacist will tell you that Jayne's P-W tablets are specially formulated with an effective medical ingredient that drives Pin-Worms out of your system. Ask for Jayne's P-W tablets at your drug store.

MARISA BERENSON
A touch of class

"There's nothing wrong with nudity if it's done with class," said Marisa Berenson when she first began her modeling career. Subsequently she was photographed in her birthday suit by the famous photographer Irving Penn for "Vogue" magazine. After appearing on "Vogue's" cover five times, she was photographed by England's David Bailey for "Playboy" magazine. This latest picture of Marisa—fully clothed, we hasten to say—was taken in Paris by movie star Peter Sellers. "I started at the top and went on from there," says the 26-year-old beauty who starred in "Cabaret" and has just completed a film in Italy called "A Way to Be a Woman." The fact that she switched from modeling to acting must be the reason Peter Sellers has been taking her picture recently . . . or could there be another reason?

QUOTE: Michael York, a low-key personality with a lot of star quality, says the following about the acting profession, a career he has pursued since he was a boy: "It's a worthwhile job, entertaining people and showing people what they are and why they are and how they behave. It's Shakespeare's mirror held up to nature. Sometimes it's shocking. Sometimes it's funny. But there it is. There is no explaining how one achieves stardom. There is no specific reason why it happens or how it happens. It's a sort of charisma." UNQUOTE.

MINISTER'S ISLAND
Getting there is half the fun

One solution to keeping unwelcome guests away from your country retreat might be to own a plot on Minister's Island. This 500-acre island can only be reached by car at low tide when the waters of the Bay of Fundy recede enough to uncover the Bar Road leading from the mainland of New Brunswick. There are legends of island visitors who miscalculated ebbs and floods and drowned when the tide came in. Once owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway tycoon, Sir Wilfred Van Horne, the island was bought several years ago by a land developer from Maine who is subdividing the area—for those who know the tides, or else have amphibious cars.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

MIRROR, MIRROR, MIRROR

When shopping for clothes, I confess
I'm a fearer
Of that fiendish reflector, the three-sided mirror.
My front, though not pleased with,
at least I am used to,
Yes, rather relaxed with and sometimes amused, too.
However, the sight of the rear and the side of me,
The oddly constructed and somewhat too wide of me,
The view seen so seldom, less lovely than hately,
Is why I've not been to a clothing store lately.

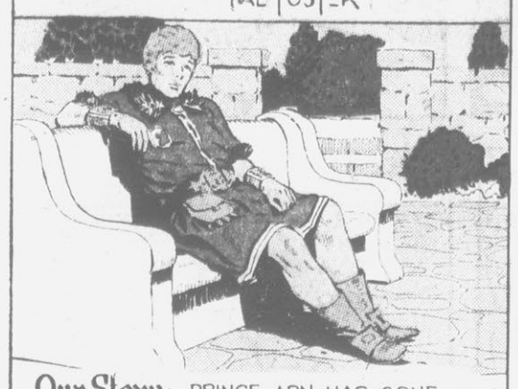
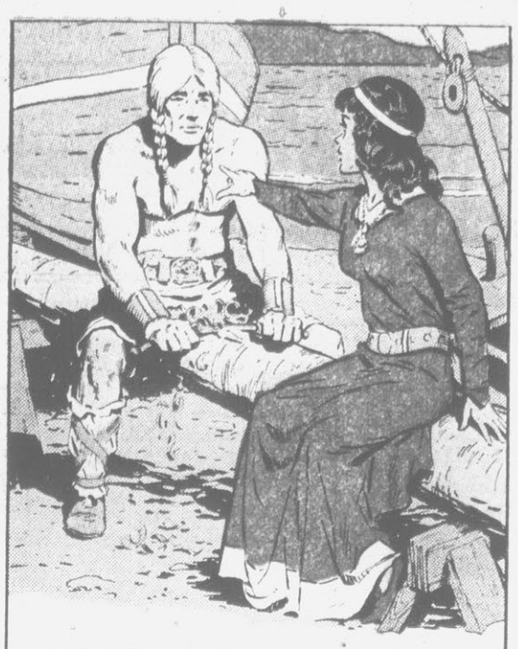
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER



Our Story: PRINCE ARN HAS GONE ADVENTURING THAT HE MIGHT FORGET HIS UNFORTUNATE LOVE AFFAIR. BUT TO NO AVAIL. ONLY THE VERY YOUNG CAN FEEL SO GRIEVOUS A HURT.

SPRING COMES TO THULE, BUDS OPEN AND THE MEADOWS ARE BRIGHT WITH FLOWERS....AND LYDIA GOES INTO ACTION! ARN MUST BE FOUND, SO SHE RIDES TO TOSENFJORD TO ENLIST HER BROTHER'S HELP.



THORVOLD IS PREPARING HIS DRAGONSHIP FOR A VOYAGE. "IN A WORLD FULL OF PEOPLE, YOU ASK ME TO FIND A BOY WHOM I HAVE NEVER SEEN?"

"IT WILL BE EASY," SHE CAROLS, "FOR EVERYONE WILL MARK THE PASSING OF THE WONDERFUL YOUTH WITH THE FLAMING RED HAIR." THEN SHE TAKES THE JEWELLED SCARAB FROM HER NECK. "AND HE WILL RECOGNIZE THIS, FOR I HAVE ALWAYS WORN IT."

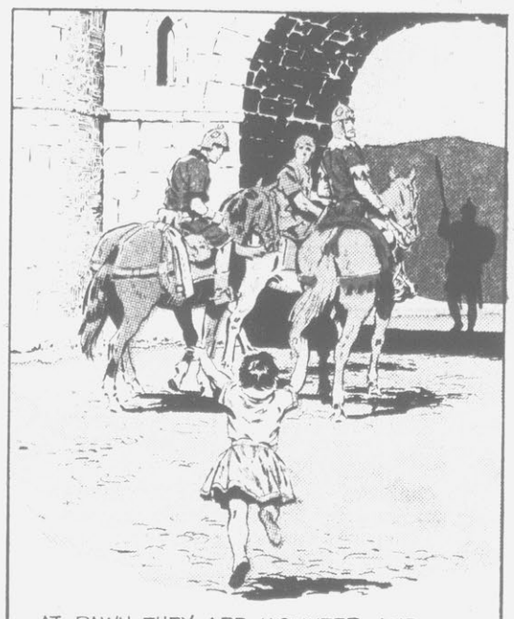
THE TOURNAMENT IS OVER AND IT IS TIME TO LEAVE. SIR GAWAIN, IN SEARCH OF AMUSEMENT, IS TRAVELING FROM ONE TOURNAMENT TO ANOTHER; FIGHTING, WINNING PURSES, GAMING AND MAKING LOVE. HE PERSUADES ARN TO JOIN HIM



AT DAWN THEY ARE MOUNTED AND READY TO DEPART WHEN A TEARFUL VOICE CRIES: "PAUL! PAUL, DON'T LEAVE ME!" AND LITTLE SQUIRREL RACES TOWARD THEM, SOBBING WILDLY.

PAUL SETS SPURS TO HIS MOUNT AND GALLOPS AWAY, FREE AT LAST OF HIS RESPONSIBILITIES AND THE POWER OF A CHILD'S LOVE.

WATCHING, DAME ELENOIR EXCLAIMS: "OH, YOU POOR, STUPID, BLUNDERING CLOWN!" THEN PICKING UP THE WEEPING CHILD, SAYS: "DON'T CRY. HE WILL RETURN, FOR HE LOVES YOU."
