

City's Gasoline Supply Dwindling

By CARL L. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Gasoline is in short supply in Greenville. A telephone survey taken this morning of several gasoline stations and five distributors revealed the January supply is dwindling and may not last until February's allocation can get here.

Statements received from each of the contacted stations and distributors could just about be summed up in the same words, there isn't much gas left.

One service station, Rigg's Gulf, is already out, having pumped its last gallon on Jan. 22. A spokesman for the station expressed hope of receiving more by February 1.

Two service stations contacted expressed certainty that their supplies would not last until February. Jack Harris, operator of College Exxon stated he expected his supply to end by noon tomorrow and had no idea what his supply for February would be. "I'm just hoping to get what I did last month," he stated.

Doug Edmondson, operator of Doug's Spdr Station expressed hope of making his supply last until the beginning of February. Edmondson is limiting his sales to 2,300 gallons per day then closing his station. "Right now I've got about 5,000 gallons in the ground," he stated.

As far as next month's supply goes, "I'm sweating that out right now," Edmondson added.

Just about every station contacted was limiting sales except for one, Plaza Gulf, where they are "filling them up as long as we've got any," a spokesman stated.

Five distributors were contacted representing American, Phillips 66, Texaco, Shell and ARCO products.

Each distributor stated the same thing in reply to the question of what the out-look for February's supply would be: "no idea."

How much will be received for next month will not be known until the first few days of the month. Each distributor expressed hope of receiving at least what they received this month.

A spokesman for Sutton's Service Center, the American distributor stated "we're at the bottom of the barrel," and afraid they won't make it until the end of the month.

A spokesman for Quality Oil Co., the Shell distributor stated they were delivering the last January shipment today and whether or not each station could keep any gasoline until the first of the new month would be up to the individual owner.

Leon L. Moore, owner of the ARCO distributorship stated "we're kind of short" and expressed hope in making their supply last until February.

Moore stated he felt rationing was definitely coming and felt it would be a fair way of getting gasoline to everyone. Moore also expressed a desire for the price of fuel oil and kerosene to be rolled back.

The present system of the consumer hunting for gasoline is "hurting the man that has to use his car," stated Moore.

Moore added that his January supply was cut 20 per cent from December's.

Raymond Grady, manager of the Texaco distributorship, also expressed a desire for rationing if it would be better for the consumer.

Making their supply last until February will "depend on the individual dealer," said Grady. The distributor stated he expected to get a percentage of his 1972 supply for February.

Suez City Siege Lifted; Encircled Army Is Freed

By DAVID LANCASHIRE
Associated Press Writer
SUEZ, Egypt (AP) — Israel's invasion forces lifted the 97-day siege of Suez City today, surrounded 300 square miles of Egyptian territory to the United Nations and freed Egypt's encircled 3rd Army.

Scores of Israeli half-tracks rolled out of Suez City toward canal bridges to the eastern bank. The vehicles were filled with singing, clapping soldiers.

"We are going home," the Israelis sang in Hebrew — to the tune of "This land is your land, this land is my land."

They raised their fingers in V-for-victory signals and waved captured Egyptian flags. Some armored cars were painted with "Good-bye Africa."

In a midday ceremony, the Israelis formally handed control of the city at the southern gateway to the Suez Canal to the U.N. Emergency Force.

U.N. troops immediately began taking control of Suez — with the 15,000 civilian inhabitants — and the southern invasion zone, holding it for at least six hours.

"We are to prevent any unauthorized Egyptian movements until the Israelis are clear," said Col. Reino Raitasaari, commander of the Finnish U.N. contingent. "So far, everything is going smoothly. I do not think I will have to shoot anyone. When I went to inform the Egyptian commander of the handover, he was still asleep. That is the best possible omen."

Israeli officers said that by nightfall Egypt would regain all the occupied land from Adabiya, 12 miles south of Suez, to a line in the desert about three miles north of the canal-side city.

That is about a third of the enclave carved out of Egyptian territory west of the canal during the Israeli invasion at the close of the October war. It leaves Egyptian lines open to the 20,000 3rd Army soldiers encircled since October.

The full-scale pullout called for in the disengagement accord engineered by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger began officially Friday. But even before then, soldiers had started pulling apart positions and bunkers, reeling in hundreds of miles of communications wires and digging up or marking nearly a million mines, Israeli officers said.

The disengagement is to be completed within 40 days from Friday. Although the final positions remain secret, it is understood that Israeli forces will pull back to a lightly armed line about 12 miles east of the canal, with the main Israeli defenses at a line near the strategic Giddi and Mitla passes about 20 miles back.

U.N. peacekeeping forces will take up positions between the Israeli lines and Egyptian forces east of the canal. The Egyptians also are understood to have pledged to thin out their forces east of the canal.

Nixon Proposes Increase In Veterans' Benefits

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today proposed cost-of-living increases in veterans' pensions and an eight per cent boost in GI benefits as part of a $13.6 billion legislative package for veterans.

Nixon also urged that Congress restore Nov. 11 as Veterans Day, repealing part of a 1968 law which switched the holiday to the fourth Monday in October.

The proposals were contained in a special message to Congress, one of a series Nixon is sending to Capitol Hill before his State of the Union address Wednesday night.

The President said his administration is preparing legislation to grant the 2.4 million pensions receiving veterans pensions the same type of automatic cost-of-living increases available to Social Security recipients.

He also said the veterans pension program should be restructured to assure that the neediest pensions will receive at least as much as adult welfare recipients.

Nixon said the eight per cent increase in education benefits he is seeking will supply an extra $200 million in aid for the more than two million taking advantage of the GI bill education and training allowances.

The increase is needed, he said, "to keep pace with inflation."

Legislation is pending in both House and Senate to provide for a 13.6 per cent increase.

The President reported that the Veterans Administration is embarking on the greatest program of hospital construction in its history.

He said a record $276 million is being sought in fiscal 1975 which begins next July 1 for hospital construction, and that his budget will provide funds to hire an additional 7,600 medical personnel.

In addition to the medical, education and pension benefits, Nixon said America should "repay her debts to the men and and women who have served her well," by setting aside certain days to commemorate their service.

One such day was Sunday, the first anniversary of the Vietnam cease-fire, which Nixon proclaimed as National MIA Awareness Day. Another is March 29, the first anniversary of the return of prisoners of war, which is being designated Vietnam Veterans Day.

He said there also is Veterans Day, which for decades was observed on Nov. 11, the anniversary of the World War I armistice day.

The 1968 legislation switching Veterans Day to the Fourth Monday of each October — part of the so-called "Monday holiday" law — "has stirred up considerable confusion and not a small amount of resentment," he said.

Thirty-one state legislatures have enacted resolutions declaring that Nov. 11 will be the official Veterans Day in their jurisdictions, Nixon said, and all major veterans organizations are seeking to return to the Nov. 11 date.

He urged Congress to repeal the 1968 change in the Veterans Day observance "in view of the confusion which has arisen and in view especially of the position taken by the veterans themselves."

Gasoline Rationing By Spring 'Possible' Says Senator Henry Jackson

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline rationing may be necessary by spring unless the Arab nations resume oil shipments to the United States, says Sen. Henry M. Jackson, who headed three days of energy crisis hearings last week.

Meanwhile, the Federal Energy Office urged utilities to cut power use by five per cent below normal next month.

The request came Sunday in the announcement of residual fuel allocations for utilities, which the FEO said will permit them to meet about 95 per cent of their normal power needs in February.

Jackson indicated Sunday that gasoline rationing may be necessary by the second quarter of the year.

"I don't think there's much doubt about it unless there are some developments overseas which indicate that we will get extra crude material," the Washington Democrat said on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

Federal energy chief William E. Simon said the February allocations to utilities will affect 148 utilities in 39 states, primarily on the east and west coasts.

Actual fuel deliveries are expected to be about five per cent less than in February 1973, FEO spokesmen said, because some utilities have switched to coal or other methods of generating power.

The allocations, FEO said, are designed to provide for 95 per cent of February needs plus to provide at least a 12-day inventory of oil by March 1.

On the NBC program "Meet the Press," Frank N. Icard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said he would oppose gasoline rationing except as a last resort.

Icard also said he does not expect gasoline prices to reach the $1-a-gallon level some have predicted.

House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona, appearing on the ABC program "Issues and Answers" said he "would certainly favor some action to keep gasoline from going any higher."

In another development Sunday, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said a new Treasury Department report shows that American oil companies used the foreign-tax credit to cut their 1971 U.S. taxes by 75 per cent.

Simply by taking advantage of the credits system, he said, oil companies cut their taxes due to the United States from $3.2 billion to $788 million, he said.

Under Internal Revenue Service rules firms operating abroad can deduct most of the taxes they pay to foreign governments from U.S. taxes due.

In other energy related developments:

—Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said on the WABC-TV "Eyewitness News Conference" in New York that the oil companies should be regulated in the same manner as public utilities, if not actually transformed into utilities.

—The Saudi Arabian oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said King Faisal is considering cutting Saudi oil prices because of concern over international trade.

Lean To Keeping 55 MPH

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Initial legislative reaction to a proposal that North Carolina's maximum speed limit be pegged permanently at 55 miles per hour appears favorable.

The suggestion was advanced by Rep. C. Kitchin Josey, D-Halifax, at a recent meeting of the House Highway Safety Committee after the committee received figures indicating lives are being saved as a result of lowering the speed limit because of the energy crisis. Deaths were down 57 in December and are running about 21 lower this month.

"It's an obvious fact that the reduction of speed limits has reduced the number of accidents," Josey said as he talked with Lt. Col. E. W. Jones, commander of the state Highway Patrol.

Jones said he felt a 55 limit would have lasting results.

"I think it is something we should look at very carefully," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, chairman of the committee. He said he had asked the Department of Transportation to furnish detailed figures but preliminary figures "would tend to indicate a decrease of 25 per cent in high-way fatalities."

"If we come to the conclusion that this reduction can save

Transfer Of Precinct Voting Records Made

The Pitt County Board of Elections has notified the voters affected by the recent division of Greenville Precinct Nine that their voting records have been transferred to the new precinct Ten.

Board Chairman J. B. Spilman notified some 1,100 Greenville voters who were transferred from Precinct Nine to the newly created Precinct Ten.

The voters who were transferred to the new precinct will cast their ballots at E. B. Aycock Junior High School. The board requested the use of Aycock as the Precinct Ten polling site and received approval from the city school board.

Spilman pointed out in the letter that persons who move from their present locations should notify the Elections Board so that voting records can be transferred.

The board, meeting on Nov. 8, agreed that Precinct Nine should be divided and the tenth precinct created. The boundaries of the new precinct were described as being south of Greenville Boulevard, east of Highway 43, southwest of the Norfolk-Southern Railroad and bounded on the South by the township line.

Spilman pointed out that if a voter who is supposed to be in Precinct Ten has not received a letter from the board, he should notify Election Board officials.

Buried By Snow

HYAK, Wash. (AP) — An avalanche of heavy, wet snow up to 25 feet deep has buried two young girls, King County Police said.

And, authorities said, a second avalanche Sunday almost trapped a rescue party of 200, forcing them to halt their search for Jean D. Kisman, 10, of Seattle, and Linda D. Angell, 13, of Renton, Wash.

No injuries were reported in the second slide, and rescuers hoped to return to the search this morning after an avalanche-control team arrives.

Authorities said the two girls and seven other persons in a snowshoeing party were building an igloo at Source Lake when the avalanche came down 6,200-foot Chair Peak. The lake is about 50 miles east of Seattle and about three miles from the Cascade Mountain Alpental ski resort.

A police spokesman said the slide was 500 feet wide and 300 feet long.

Earl Warren Is Hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Chief Justice Earl Warren, hospitalized Saturday in Inglewood, is in good condition, a family spokesman says.

Stuart Brien, Warren's son-in-law, said Sunday the 82-year-old jurist complained of not feeling well while visiting him in Beverly Hills and was admitted to Daniel Freeman Hospital.

Brien said the illness wasn't serious and that he expected Warren to be discharged in a few days.

Warren, governor of California from 1943 to 1953 and Chief Justice of the United States from 1953 to 1969, canceled a speech he was scheduled to deliver Sunday night at the California State University at Long Beach.

Says Nixon Did 'Sign' In Time

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon complied fully with the law in claiming large tax deductions for the gift of his vice presidential papers, his tax lawyer contends.

Frank DeMarco, a Los Angeles attorney, said the original deed transferring the papers to the National Archives was signed in Los Angeles on April 21, 1969, by Edward L. Morgan, then deputy counsel to the President.

That was well before the July 25, 1969, cutoff for that type of tax deduction.

The deed now on file is a substitute that was not signed until April 1970, DeMarco acknowledged. But he said the signing of the deed was a formality that had no bearing on Nixon's eligibility for $482,000 in tax deductions for the gift.

DeMarco said the critical fact is the actual delivery of the papers to the archives, on March 27, 1969, four months before the deduction cutoff.

"The gift stands or falls on the delivery. Tax law does not require a deed. This deed had nothing to do with the tax return," DeMarco said in a telephone interview from his home Saturday.

Asked if he was convinced the entire procedure met all legal deadlines and requirements, DeMarco said: "Yes, sir, absolutely."

The timing of the gift and the paperwork involved are under investigation by the Internal Revenue Service and Congress' Joint Committee on Internal Revenue.

Warn Japan Against Attending Oil Conference

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Saudi Arabia's oil minister warned Japan today against President Nixon's conference of oil-consuming nations and urged the Japanese instead to make a direct deal exchanging their technology and industrial equipment for Saudi oil.

"The price of our oil won't be in terms of dollars but in technology and industrialization," Ahmed Zaki Yamani told a news conference.

Since Japan is in a strong position to supply both, he continued, it can make a bilateral arrangement that will guarantee the steady flow of oil it needs.

Yamani said he thinks one of the purposes of the conference Feb. 12 to which Nixon has invited Japan and other major oil consumers is to block such bilateral deals.

If the conference envisions a confrontation with the Arab oil producers, he added, it is in for "serious trouble." But he said the producer nations would have no objection to a meeting with the consumers if the purpose of the meeting was cooperation.

Yamani is winding up a global tour to explain Arab oil policies.

On Sunday, he told Finance Minister Takeo Fukuda he opposes the proposal to put surpluses of Arab oil money into the International Monetary Fund in exchange for the reserve assets known as special drawing rights, or SDRs. The IMF would lend the dollars to industrialized countries having a hard time raising cash for oil imports because of the big increases the producer nations have made in the price of oil.

Yamani on Sunday told another news conference that King Faisal of Saudi Arabia might reduce the price of Saudi oil because of the effect of the big increases on both developed and underdeveloped countries. But he indicated that any reductions would be only temporary. He said present oil prices are much below oil's true value so far as supply and demand is concerned.

Add Rail Strike To Troubles

LONDON (AP) — A 24-hour wildcat rail strike cut services for British commuters between 50 and 80 per cent today and caused huge traffic jams.

British Rail said commuter services from the south into London's Waterloo Station were cut by 80 per cent. Services from the east and the north to London terminals were down 50 per cent.

Hundreds of trains were delayed or canceled. Traffic into London was moving at three miles an hour on congested roads from the south.

Hospital Patients May Feel Cost-Saving Action

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Is patient care being reduced along with cuts in hours for some 150 Pitt Memorial Hospital employees?
"It's a cost-saving measure," the administration says, but several doctors, nurses, and affected employees indicated yesterday that the patients will suffer along with the employees because of an administration directed end to aides, technicians, ward clerks, and attendants being included in the reports which one shift of workers has provided another at each shift change. The two and a half hour per week cut in hours reduces each employee's pay proportionately. "Good management is achieving your objectives through people," Dr. John Baker, chief analyst for the George S. May International Management Consultants Company, told Pitt Memorial Hospital Trustees last June.

A preliminary management study at the hospital showed that morale was low and that turnover of employees was excessive, he reported. The study, which the May representative claimed would save the hospital $75,000 to $100,000 a year, was turned down "to save the taxpayers' money."

This past Saturday, when the first full two-week pay period of 1974 began, a memo went out to hospital employees giving notice that all nurses' aide, patient care technicians, male attendants, and ward clerk would have their hours cut to 37½ per week, with a proportionate cut in pay.

For minimum wage earners—and this is more than half of the approximately 150 persons affected—base pay was lowered from $72 a week to $67.50.

A ward clerk, with no dependents, says she was 21 per cent of her salary taken out for Social Security and taxes. Several aides said their take-home pay will be less than $50 a week.

"And I drive 15 miles to work each day on 50-cents-a-gallon gas," one added.

Unnecessary Overlap?
In the memo, the aides, technicians, attendants, and clerks were asked to adjust their working hours to arrive on the hour instead of 15 minutes before and to leave on the hour instead of 15 minutes after. In the past they had been at work eight and a half hours for eight hours' pay, since no hospital employees receive pay for the 30-minute meal breaks. Now it's eight hours for seven and a half hours' pay.

"The overlapping in shifts will be discontinued," the memo read. "This new schedule was decided upon in an effort to better utilize personnel time. A poll of the head nurses indicated an unnecessary overlap of working hours." The overlap time has always been for personnel from one shift to report to the next the status of each patient. Administrator Jack Richardson said the poll taken last year indicated this time was needed only by nurses, not by aides and technicians, and other personnel.

"How can they say we don't need the reporting?" an aide protested. "I'm the one who works directly with the patient. I need to know how that person has done through the night. I need to know what kind of emotional state he is in. I never dreamed in all the years I've worked here that it was not important for me to know about the patient the same as the nurses do. I like my job and feel I'm doing something really worthwhile, but this new policy is keeping me from doing my best. I hope the patients' families who see the difference in care are going to protest to the Hospital Board members from their townships."

A staff surgeon backed up her comment: "I think the aides and technicians certainly should be included in reporting," he said. "Time and time again, these people have proved competent in noting changes in patients' conditions before anyone else. I feel very strongly that patient care is being sacrificed by not allowing these aides and technicians to hear and contribute to reporting from one shift to the next."

Saving Money?
The memo went on: "This adjustment will reduce operating costs in the coming year by approximately $30,000. This change has been utilized in many other hospitals as a means of reducing costs of care in recent years."

Administrator Richardson said the measure was thoroughly discussed before it was put into effect. It was not a Board of Trustees action, but an administrative one, though Board Chairman Ed Warren confirmed that the Board was aware of the move. However, it was not discussed or voted on in any public meeting of the Hospital Board, both Richardson and Warren admit.

Richardson said the idea was one suggested by the Carolina Hospital Improvement Program, of which Pitt Memorial is a member. It has been used in several other hospitals. He mentioned specifically a Catholic hospital in Greenville, S. C.

"We knew the measure wouldn't be popular, but we have to do what we can to keep costs down," he said. "We'll save $30,000 this year, but as wages go up in the future, it may be $40,000 next year, and $50,000 the year after."

An LPN at the hospital said she and many other nurses are in sympathy with the aides and clerks and technicians and attendants. "We know how many jobs they are given that nurses should be doing, just because the hospital can get away with paying them less per hour. Another hospital I've been in just recently kept aides in reports for an hour. Their patient care puts ours to shame, too. Pitt Memorial can be a great hospital, but not if the people who run it aren't given the incentive to do their jobs well."

A technician commented, "I've always taken my job seriously, not minding a bit if I had to stay beyond my usual going-home time to finish something I'd started. And I think this is the way most of the employees here have felt. I hope some still do. For myself, though, I'm going to go home on the hour from now on, and I'm not going to work on my days off to fill in for some who's out of work. If they don't appreciate my services any more than they've shown this week, I guess my work didn't mean as much as I thought it did."

Lawmen Hunt Bandit In Slaying Of A Hostage

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP)—A young woman taken hostage in a bank robbery Friday was found dead Saturday near the city limits here.

Police said the body of 23-year-old Tasca Virginia Rader was found about 2 p.m. by Onslow County sheriff's deputies in a ditch behind an oil storage building. She had been shot twice in the head, they reported. Officers said no arrests had been made by late Sunday.

According to authorities, Miss Rader, a secretary for the Eastern Seal Society, was apparently abducted Friday afternoon in a supermarket parking lot and forced to participate in the robbery at a branch of the Bank of North Carolina.

Witnesses said she and her captor fled in her automobile, which was found abandoned later that day on a Jacksonville street.

In nearby Carteret County, authorities said Sunday night they believe Miss Rader may have been slain in the western section of their county and her body taken back to Jacksonville.

Deputy Sheriff Mather Slaughter confirmed that blood believed to be of the same type as Miss Rader's was found Saturday near a spent cartridge and two cancelled checks, which have been traced to the Jacksonville bank.

At first witnesses were unsure whether she was a hostage or a participant in the robbery. They described her abductor as of medium height and build. He was wearing a ski mask, they said.

Witnesses reported that Miss Rader seemed nervous and made no attempt to disguise her identity. The robber kept customers and employees at bay with a pistol, they said.

Miss Rader lived here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Rader. Her family said she was a former student at Atlantic Christian College and was graduated from Huron (S.D.) College last year.

Funeral services will be Tuesday in Charlottesville, Va.

Her family said she was born in Jacksonville while her father was stationed at nearby Camp LeJeune as a First Sergeant in the Marine Corps.

Bing Crosby Is Going Fishing After Surgery

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Singer Bing Crosby is planning a fishing trip to relax from a month-long bout with a rare lung ailment.

Crosby, 69, dressed in a sports coat, slacks and hat, was driven from Peninsula Hospital on Sunday by his wife, Kathryn, to the family estate in nearby Hillsborough.

The entertainer underwent a 3½-hour operation on Jan. 13 in which surgeons removed two-fifths of his badly abscessed left lung. Doctors, who had feared the lung might be cancerous, later said the disease was caused by a rare African fungus that Crosby probably contracted on a safari last summer.

Dr. Stanley Hanfling, Crosby's family physician, said the singer planned to go on a fishing trip and then would join his family at their winter home in Baja California, Mexico.

Miss Deborah Spain Is Bride Of Stephen Tyson

SHELMERDINE—The Shelmerdine Pentecostal Holiness Church here was the scene of the wedding of Deborah Marie Spain and Stephen Craig Tyson Sunday at 4:00 p.m.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Roy O. Williams. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Shirley Harrington, pianist. Miss Angela Faulkner sang "The Twelfth of Never" and "More."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Spain of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal length gown of white organza designed with a high neckline encircled with clipped chantilly lace beaded with iridescent sequins. Matching trim extended over the sheer yoke and accentuated the empire bodice. The cuffs of the full bishop sleeves were trimmed in chantilly lace. Panels of the jeweled lace were featured on the modified A-line skirt and edged the detachable chapel length train. She wore a white illusion veil featuring a formal length mantilla edged in lace to match the gown with bouffant layers at elbow length.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Tyson of Greenville.

The church was decorated in the traditional green and white. In the center was a fifteen branch semi-circle candelabra decorated with greenery. Two palm trees and a seven branch candelabra were on each side.

The bride and bridegroom lighted separate candles before the ceremony. After the ceremony, they lighted the center candle together symbolizing their unity. At the altar was a prie-dieu where the couple knelt for the wedding prayer.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Teresa Dixon of Selma, was attired in a formal length gown of blue polyester with a shirred bodice and a self-tie accentuating the gown back. She wore a blue velvet bow headpiece with a matching illusion veil. She carried a white mum with baby blue streamers.

The bridesmaid was Miss Kathryn Tyson, sister of the bridegroom. Her dress and headpiece were identical to that of the matron of honor. She also carried a white mum with blue streamers.

Residing at the register was Miss Pamela Buck of Greenville. Miss Kathryn Smith of Greenville directed the wedding.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Terry Williams of Greenville and David Hatch of Raleigh.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Spain chose a formal length dress of blue polyester knit. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal length gown of samaron rose knit. Both wore white mum corsages.

Grandmothers of the bride Mrs. Maybelle Dixon of Grimesland and Mrs. Lonnie Hathaway of Winterville, wore white pom pom corsages to complement their outfits. For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride wore a pants suit and wore the carnations lifted from her bouquet. The couple will reside in Burlington.

An after rehearsal party was held at the home of the bridegroom, with guests including the members of the wedding party. The bride wore a formal blue velvet gown with a corsage of white pom poms.

Abby Advises To Grin and Bear Your 'No' Cousin

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Something happened again last night which practically ruined my evening, and I'd like to know how to handle it if it should happen again, which I'm sure it will.

There is an extremely overbearing, obnoxious woman in town who insists that she is related to me, and every time she sees me, she greets me loudly with, HELLO, COUSIN!

In the first place, she is NOT my cousin. Is there some way I can get this loud-mouthed woman to quit calling me "Cousin" without coming right out and insulting her?

My first cousin, once removed, was briefly married to this woman's second cousin, twice removed.

NO COUSIN

DEAR COUSIN: People who insist on claiming you as a relative will do so, no matter how many times you "remove" them. There is nothing you can do about it, so grin and bear it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 years old. My mother has a health problem so she and my Dad go south from November until April. That means I have to change schools, leave all my friends, and go to Arizona with them. I went last year and hated it! I told them I wouldn't go again, but here I am in Arizona and I despise it. I have a boy friend up north and we are extra close.

I told my parents if they don't send me home to stay with a friend [relatives are out, they are like prison guards!] I will kill myself, but they don't believe me.

Abby, if I run away, will they lock me up? I would rather be in an orphanage than live like this. Can't somebody help me? When I see my boy friend I am going to get pregnant right away so they'll have to let me get married. Please don't tell me to listen to my parents. They hate me. And I hate them. I wish I was dead. Tell me what to do. I trust you.

TORN APART

DEAR TORN: You have a lot of bitterness and resentment to unload. Tell your parents you want to get your head together and would like to express your feelings to an objective, qualified third party. A psychiatrist or psychologist can help you and your parents develop a better relationship. Running away or getting pregnant will only make a bad situation worse. Talk to your parents today and make a deal! Good luck. And let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I can usually handle my own problems, but this requires advice that only you can give.

I am a single fellow and find myself very much attracted to Jane, and I think Jane is also attracted to me.

About a week ago Jane and her husband separated. I don't want to hurt my chances with this very special lady so here's where you come in. When would it be proper for me to ask Jane out? WAITING WITH BAITED BREATH

DEAR WAITING: Wait a little longer. Couples usually separate in order to think things over. If your hunch is right and Jane is interested in starting up with you she'll get the message to you somehow.

Expert Teaches Nutrition

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Adeline Garner Shell enjoys making consumers fighting mad.

She said consumers don't get enough information to make intelligent buying decisions because "We have a lot of facts, but not a lot of information."

Information is what she provides in her classes for buying clubs, and now in a new book, "Supermarket Counter Power." From four basic food groups — meat, fruits and vegetables, dairy products, breads and cereals — she tells how to pick and choose to save money and nutrition, naming names and citing brands.

"I took this bag of potato chips to my class," she said in an interview here. "I told them it had recently risen in price from 29 cents to 33 cents. They didn't think that was so terrible. But it also went from three and a half ounces down to only three ounces, and for more money. Now that makes people angry," she added.

She also told about crackers that appear to be half the size of a one-pound box, but because the box is shorter, are only seven ounces in weight. She explains to consumers about deceitful packaging.

Mrs. Shell has worked in almost every area of the food consumer industry, and most recently worked with Bess Meyerson here in the department of consumer affairs as director of consumer services. She has done product promotion, research, marketing, education; been a magazine food editor, worked as a public health nutritionist and a home agent.

"Cereal packaging is another area we need more information about. Unit pricing helps. You know you pay 88 cents a pound for a large box of cereal and $1.57 a pound for the small boxes packaged together. But the cost per serving is still different. Small boxes are often not one-ounce servings, but five-eighths of an ounce. Instead of costing you 5.5 cents per ounce serving, those deceitful packages are costing you 9.9 cents.

Milk and chocolate scorch easily so they should be heated in a double boiler.

"The question is not which cereal to buy, but whether you should buy it at all," Mrs. Shell said.

She wrote the book about these things out of her frustration with the lack of consumer information available.

"I think cereals in some cases should be labeled 'Fortified Sugar with Cereal Added.' They're not real food. The reason I despise them along with colas, instant sugar drinks and chips, is that they force out of a child's diet things he really needs for growth and development.

"Television advertising for such products is immoral. Directed at children, it is the same thing as a lecherous person tempting a child in a dark hallway. It is corrupting his intelligence," she said.

Mrs. Shell said some companies have started in the right direction. Consumers must, she added, take a stronger stand against large companies so that they can get more shopping information and better nutrition.

"I think we should appeal to the Protestant ethics of companies — to make them more responsible to society," she added. "The food crisis is far more crucial than the energy crisis. It has come about because of our greed for excessive profits, because production of junk food returns higher profits.

"It is the consumer's responsibility to take a more active role, using the only real power he has: voting his spending dollar for the best possible product."

uct," Mrs. Shell said. The affluent society is sold on convenience foods, which sacrifice taste, nutrition and money for ease of preparation. Mrs. Shell said they sometimes take longer to prepare than "real food."

In her classes, Mrs. Shell teaches methods of baking and preparing foods as well as nutrition and how to buy. She said more and more young men are attending the classes and are "most enthusiastic."

"I want to popularize comparison shopping," she said, "but you cannot comparison shop if you don't have on hand information, such as drained weight of canned foods. You can follow all the unit pricing suggestions and even prepare your shopping list by what's on special, and still bust the budget."

Consumers, Mrs. Shell added, must take charge. They must take their place in the free enterprise system and modify or change what isn't good.

"A lot of consumerism is just good sense," she said. "Food should be more than something you stuff your face with. It should be wrapped with fellowship; it should nourish your family and your lifestyle as well as provide basic good health."

Speaks Well Of Pitt Govm't

Pitt County has had its general obligation bond rating upgraded by Moody's Investment Service from A to A-L.

In making the assessment Moody's said, "The county has established a record of sound financial management, evidenced by growing cash surpluses in its operations...debt remains low; including the present offering, over-all net debt is only 3.3 percent of the full value of taxable property."

"Pitt County's administration has followed an excellent developmental program of providing government services and capital facilities on planned-lead basis to accompany industrial development. Management of the county finances and debt had resulted in a very favorable position, and, in view of the steady economic growth and high level of state effort to support local services, Moody's is revising its rating on Pitt County's general obligations from A to A-1."

Moody's said there had been heavy investment in manufacturing industries during the 1960s and...growth in income in the 1960-70 decade was 141 percent and indications are that the rate of income growth in Pitt County, as in other North Carolina Coastal Plain Counties, is above the state average."

The rating and comments speak well of the county government's management and of efforts to bring in diversified industries. Because of the revised rating the county will be in a more favorable position to sell its $9 million in general obligation bonds for hospital construction.

Valuable Coastal Land Needs The Protection

A Coastal land use management bill has cleared the House Committee in the State Legislature and floor action is possible this week.

It would establish a coastal Resources commission which would designate areas of environmental concern. Development in these areas could only proceed by permit from the commission.

North Carolina must protect its valuable coastal areas and passage of this bill seems to us an excellent way to begin.

Gerald Ford's Worst Enemy

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Within hours after Vice President Gerald Ford's self-destructive speech in Atlantic City last week, one of his key staffers was vainly trying to justify to his own family and neighbors Ford's attack on "a few, extreme partisans."

The staffer, back against the wall, found a rational defense impossible; he agreed with much of the criticism against his boss. Unlike Ford, he agreed that President Nixon had rightly lost the confidence of vast numbers of Americans, Democrats and Republicans alike.

Yet Ford himself, who stood on the pinnacle of popular political acceptability as of Jan. 15, to this day has not been convinced by his closest political friends, aides and well-wishers that the Atlantic City speech was all that destructive.

To the contrary, Ford is risking even further slicing away of his unique, national support by continuing to play a rose that critics see as public defender No. 1 of a man who may rapidly be slipping beyond rational defense.

For politics-wise Jerry Ford, long the leader of his party in the House, to pursue such a role is incomprehensible to old cronies in Congress. It is raising disturbing questions about how politics-wise Ford really is.

Just before the Christmas recess, a small group of Republican conservatives quietly discussed Ford's problem in the cloakroom. They unanimously agreed that Ford must not get sucked into "the White House game," as predecessor Spiro T. Agnew was, or he would end up a political wreck. Ford, they agreed, must be preserved as the party's major asset if Richard Nixon goes down.

When they read Ford's ridiculous charge that "a political grudge fight" is sparking the anti-Nixon movement, they were dismayed. Was Ford already ensnared in the White House, toils?

In fact, however, the original speech idea was Ford's own, picked up by his personal reading of anti-Nixon handouts from labor and liberal organizations. Struck by the common anti-Nixon impeachment theme, he asked the "special" speechwriting office in the White House (operating under chief of staff Alexander Haig) to prepare a fitting draft.

Ford has been seeking two speechwriters for weeks but in the interim uses the White House team, headed by David Gergen. The draft that went to Ford fitted both his own request and, naturally, the currently hardening Nixon line.

Ford and top aides say they deleted several provocative phrases, including a slurring reference to congressional left-wingers playing dirty pool against the President. But that original draft, intentionally hard-line to ease the new crisis over the 18-minute tape gap and the experts' finding announced the same day as the speech, was by no means torn up by Ford.

To the contrary, the Vice President still defends the self-destructive theme of the heart of the speech. More disheartening to Ford allies, he questions press treatment of the speech, asking why so much time and space were expended on a single speech.

Perhaps part of the torrent of abuse that fell on Ford after Atlantic City can be blamed on this unbelievably confused way of preparing a speech. The text shuttled back and forth between the White House speechwriters and Ford's office so many times that, finally, one of Ford's closest and canniest aides had no opportunity to give the text more than a rapid once-over before Ford boarded his plane for Atlantic City.

That, again, is a fault which must be laid to Ford, not the White House. Ford needs his own wordsmiths, not those who first loyalty is to Richard Nixon.

Speechwriters, however, can never compensate for Ford's own political judgment and instincts. Starting from glorious prospects during his first few weeks in office, he was badly served by those instincts in the Atlantic City fiasco.

Instead of viewing himself as conciliator of dangerous political passions in a historically unique situation, Ford has been acting as a conventional politician in conventional times.

Even his closest aides concede the mail was not good after Atlantic City, but that is beside the real point: (Continued on page 5)

Candor Flop Is Still Mystery

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—In mid-December, President Nixon flew to Memphis to meet with Republican governors and assure them that his Operation Candor was clearing his name and that there were "no more bombshells."

Gov. Jim Holshouser was among the group, and was among those who returned home to report that things were, indeed looking up for the beleaguered President.

The next day, another bombshell exploded. Nixon's attorneys told the federal court about an 18-minute gap in the critical taped conversation between the President and his aide, H. R. Haldeman, involving the Watergate scandal.

To Gov. Holshouser, that side drama to the whole Watergate episode is "the mystery of the year," and he discussed it in a recent interview.

"The President told us he did not expect any more bombshells. And yet the very next day his attorneys took the issue of the 18-minute gap to Judge Sirica.

Not Stupid

"Now, I know he is not a stupid man. If he had known exactly what was going to happen and what was involved, I can't believe he would have said what he did to us in Memphis. He would not deliberately mislead us, knowing that something like this was going to come out. What would he have to gain," Gov. Holshouser wondered. "I can't help but believe that he didn't understand the significance of that gap in the tape. Perhaps his lawyers had not explained to him just what was at stake. There's no other way for me to explain," the governor said.

Theat episode marked the end of short-lived Operation Candor which had been built up as an all-out informational program by Nixon to "clear up the situation," and a few days afterward, Gov. Holshouser remarked offhandedly at a news conference on the shortness of the effort.

In a recent interview he admitted to still being puzzled over the Memphis episode, and to his concern that the Watergate scandals are causing further deterioration of public confidence in government.

But, he doesn't feel that Republican chances in upcoming elections will hinge on Watergate.

U.S. Senate

He will take a particular interest in the election of a U. S. Senator to replace retiring Democrat Sam J. Ervin Jr.

"I've been involved in every campaign in North Carolina for the last decade, and I will be active in this one," Holshouser said. He served six years as chairman of the GOP in North Carolina and a term in the House before winning election as governor. Republican primary this spring in the Senate race. So far, a name prominently mentioned is that of Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell of Winston-Salem, a former baseball player and now member of the U. S. House of Representatives.

Asked if Mizell appeared to be the party's pick the governor was prompt to throw in the name of Charlotte attorney Charles R. Jonas Jr., son of former U. S. Rep. Charles Jonas of Lincolnton.

Does his mentioning Jonas have any significance? No the governor replied, it just means that if he didn't mention someone else it might be interpreted as a tacit endorsement. At this point, he feels the door is still open.

The key thing, he believes, is to recognize that "who we have representing this state in the U.S. Senate is important, and it is important that those of us involved in roles of political leadership practice what we preach—urge people to get involved.

Capital Punishment
On another topic in the wide-ranging interview, Gov. Holshouser said he "generally favors repeal of capital punishment," and recalled that while a member of the State House of Representatives had voted three times on the question—and differently each time which, he said laughing, represents "some evolution in thinking during the process."

The question is a knotty one, he said, and added that he feels the death sentence can be a deterrent to crime, that crime is rising rapidly and "many people feel it is because the courts have gotten more lenient," and that extra protection is needed for law enforcement and correction officers.

Within all the complexity, Gov. Holshouser feels, there is an answer providing swift and sure justice yet tackling the question of cruel and unusual punishment as represented by the gas chamber.

"Honestly now, senator... our figures aren't all that good, now are they?"

Would You Go To Jail?

WASHINGTON—The Rose Mary Woods tape incident has raised a great moral issue in this country—how far should a secretary go to protect her boss?

I posed this question to my secretary, Ellie Cobey, the other day. "Ellie," I asked her, "would you lie for me to keep me out of jail?" "I do it all the time," she replied.

"I don't mean that kind of lying," I said. "I mean if I committed a high crime or a misdemeanor."

"That's the only kind of lying I do for you," she said. "Like when you're taking a nap and I tell people you're in conference, or when you've taken some beautiful girl to lunch and I tell your wife that you're at the Watergate Hearings. Or when someone calls and asks you to address a Lions Club and I tell them you're going to be in Tucson. I can't remember a time when I haven't lied for you."

"All secretaries do that," I said. "I mean really lie. Suppose I tape recorded a conversation I had with Frank Sinatra in which he told me his personal thoughts about Maxine Cheshire, and these tapes were subpoenaed. Would you erase those tapes for me?" "You mean by pressing the play button and the record button at the same time?" she asked. "If you couldn't erase it with your foot, yes."

There are congressional hearings that can inform the public and show the need for new legislation. There also are hearings that do little more than give congressmen a chance to preen their feathers, perk their combs and strut before the network news cameras looking like "presidential timber."

If we had to make a choice, the Senate hearings on the oil industry would fall into the latter category. The senators' performance this week may make one wonder if aspiring politicians are not wringing more miles per gallon out of the energy crisis than the oil barons are alleged to be getting for themselves.

What gives this show away is the remarkable naivete affected by prominent senators like Ribicoff of Connecticut, Percy of Illinois and Jackson of Washington, the committee's chairman: "Do you really mean to tell this committee, Mr. Derrick-binder, that your company raised the price heating oil on the same day (voice rising) that my constituent, Mrs. Granny Weatherstrip, was shivering at 62 degrees? And how much income tax (pounds the table once) did your company pay last year? Only two per cent? Why, how heartless of you!"

In the last year, as everyone knows, the oil industry's profits have grown embarrassingly large. Meanwhile prices have risen and many service stations have gone bankrupt. Truckers and homeowners are angry. The situation, clearly, is ripe for theatrics about the evils of the oil industry and its "windfall profits" its peculiar structure, and why it pay no greater a per cent in federal income taxes than all but the lowliest paupers among us.

But who, now that the senators raise the issue, ever wrote the laws that the oil industry quite legitimately uses as income tax time? Was it a sheik in Kuwait who devised the 22 per cent depletion allowance and the tax writer-off for "intangible" drilling expenses? Who allows the oil men to deduct, dollar for dollar, the royalties paid to foreign lands? Could it be the U.S. Senate?

And who was the senator who ran to the Washington office of Gulf Oil for a quick $10,000 to help out his presidential primary campaign in the spring of 1972?

Don't look now, Mrs. Weatherstrip, but he's the chairman of that committee you see on the evening news, holding hearings on the oil industry and its windfall profits.

When The Great Man Lingers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The corporate executive who succeeds the "great man," the person who built the company, will often find himself walking in a shadow so deep and dark that he has a 50-50 chance of tripping on his face.

So hazardous is the assignment, suggests Prof. Eugene Jennings, that the executive so chosen might seriously consider bidding his time and letting someone else take the job until the great man's presence fades.

When the first successor fails to fill the great man's void, the patient executive then can step forward. The second successor, says Jennings, stands a 70 per cent chance of keeping the job for at least five years.

Jennings, a Michigan State professor of business administration, psychologist, author, and executive and corporate consultant, cites the airline industry as an ideal illustration. C.R. Smith, American Airlines chief during its period of greatest growth, was succeeded by George Spater, who soon lost the job.

George Keck followed William Patterson at United, and he too failed to keep the spot. Same with Najeeb Halaby, who succeeded Juan Trippe at Pan American. And the list doesn't end there.

Of those who fail, said Jennings, who has studied such happenings since 1948, about 40 per cent are fired outright, 30 per cent leave voluntarily, and 30 per cent are shelved, or moved out of the line of command.

One of the reasons for the dismal record of first successors is that the great man tends to hang around in the wings, despite his promises not to do so. Even if he isn't physically present, his shadow is.

Here are some of the explanations Jennings has found:

1. The job is impossible to fill. Not even the great man can fill his own shoes, because the system he has built is really bigger than any man. The great man doesn't know it, but even he hasn't been filling his shoes for a long time.

2. The great man doesn't delegate authority when he is building the company. As a result, the successor has never been properly trained. There is no way for him to get the total weight of the office on his back.

3. The system the great man built is responsive to him, not to the successor. The new man has different strengths and weaknesses and the system doesn't know how to react to them.

An employee's entire security system may be built around the way he responded to the old man, said Jennings. He cannot change easily. Typically, the successor at some time or other has to cry out:

"I'm not the old man. That's not the way we do it now. There's a new landlord around here."

4. The great man stays long after he should have gone, and as a consequence leaves a faulty chain of command.

They'll Grind You Up

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON

Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Friends tell me increasing red tape is making life more complicated in the United States. But after four years in Latin America, I am convinced I am living in the bureaucrat's paradise.

Everything is complicated. I used to live and work in one country where just going to the post office was a trial. Each window, manned by a snarling woman in a blue smock, sold different kinds of stamps.

After shuttling about long lines several days a week, I was forced by necessity to bribe an office boy to mail my letters for me.

I used to pay local taxes in another country. Since nobody there pays taxes unless absolutely necessary, the tax authorities have hit upon an ingenious solution.

Nobody leaves the country without a document from the authorities saying all taxes have paid up to date.

I had to pay my taxes monthly with a visit to the Treasury Ministry. My first trip there went smoothly until I was asked for the tax stamps.

"What tax stamps?" "Why the stamps to prove that you've paid the tax on paying your taxes," said the ill-tempered lady behind the desk. I should have known. She was wearing one of those blue smocks.

"OK, sell me some stamps," I muttered.

"We don't sell them," she said. "Go to the post office."

The next month, I was prepared. I invested $5 in tax stamps and dutifully pasted them on the back of my tax declaration and my check.

"Oh, you shouldn't have done that," said the woman in the blue smock inspecting my stamp collection.

"But you told me the last time I needed tax stamps to prove that I've paid the taxes on paying my taxes?"

"That was last month. The regulations were changed. You don't have to use stamps anymore. But you will have to give me a new check and make out another declaration. We can't accept any documents with stamps on them."

I've decided to write a book for foreigners on how to cope with Latin-American red tape. For more information, just write me. The letters must be in triplicate, typewritten, one-inch margins and signed in ink, not ball-point.

One more thing, don't forget the tax stamps.

Strength For Today

CRAZY LOVE

The "Parable of the Laborers in the Vineyard," contained in the twentieth chapter of Matthew, has confused many readers. In it men go to work for a farmer in his vineyard at different times during the day, and yet at the end of the day all received the same wages. The men who worked all day under the hot sun are of course resentful that the farmer gave them no more than he gave to idlers who did not come to work until the day was half over. Many readers undoubtedly sympathize with the complaining workers.

The point of the parable is well expressed by Father Andrew M. Greeley, writing in a recent number of The New York Times Magazine. The farmer's generosity to the idlers was "crazy." "No human businessman or farmer could behave that way and remain in business for very long. God's love for us is so passionate that if humans behave toward one another the way He behaves towards us, they would be written off as lunatics."

Saxbe Expects Congress Would Not Impeach Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — An impeachment action against President Nixon, especially a bitter, partisan one, would tear the country apart, according to Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe.

But, Saxbe said, he expects Congress will not impeach Nixon, but rather will keep the action going.

"They'd rather have a crippled Nixon than a healthy, sitting Jerry Ford," Saxbe said in an interview in U.S. News & World Report.

"An impeachment action — especially a bitter, partisan impeachment, which it would have to be if no further crimes of a great nature are developed — would tear this country apart."

In other Watergate-related developments:

—House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona said Sunday the Senate Watergate committee hearings should be ended unless a good reason can be found for continuing them.

—The former boss of the White House plumbers unit, Egil "Bud" Krogh, said he is convinced from talks with former White House counsel John W. Dean III that President Nixon did not know about the Watergate cover-up as early as Dean claims he did.

—Three U.S. senators urged Nixon to resign rather than subject the country to a possible impeachment.

Saxbe, asked for his prediction on the outcome of impeachment in the House, said: "My hunch is that they'll hassle it around and will not impeach on the basis of any evidence that's available to me today. They'll keep it alive."

"The nature of the evil deeds that are alleged to the President are not of an impeachable nature," Saxbe said.

"They're serious as to the moral turpitude of the people involved, and do reflect on the President. The question is one of great indiscretions in areas which, even then, have not been connected to the President, however," Saxbe said.

Krogh made his comments on the CBS program "60 Minutes" Sunday. He is scheduled to begin a six-month prison term next week for his role in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

White House policy toward its opponents was often made out of bitterness, said Krogh. He said Ellsberg was regarded as an enemy of the United States rather than a political opponent.

Concerning Nixon's Watergate knowledge, Krogh said he met with Dean March 20, 1973, and he quoted Dean as saying, "Bud, the President is being badly served. He just doesn't know what's going on."

Dean and Nixon met the following day and the White House has maintained that it was only then that Nixon learned the full scope of the Watergate break-in and cover-up.

However, during Senate hearings Dean testified that Nixon knew of the facts in the matter well before that meeting.

Urging Nixon to resign to spare the nation the trauma of impeachment were Sens. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., on various New York news shows.

The Watergate hearings were postponed Saturday in order not to prejudice the trial of former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans in connection with campaign contributions.

Rebel Chief In Cyprus Is Dead At 75

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Guerrillas fighting for the union of Cyprus and Greece say they will battle on despite the death of their leader, Gen. George Grivas.

Grivas, a hero of the struggle for independence from Britain who refused to abandon his dream of enosis, or union, died Sunday. Officials of EOKA B, his guerrilla underground, said death was caused by a heart attack at a hideout in Limassol on the south coast.

The announcement said that before his death Grivas had named his successor and EOKA's struggle against President Makarios would continue. But opinion was divided over whether the small band of guerrillas — estimated at only a few hundred men — could survive without the 75-year-old general's dedicated leadership and mystique.

Some observers predicted the movement would soon collapse. Others expressed belief that younger, more extreme elements held in check by Grivas would embark on a far bloodier attack than the old general would allow.

Until recently EOKA's bombs resulted in few deaths or serious injuries. But the murders of two pro-Makarios villagers last week prompted local press comment that Grivas, long reported ailing, was losing his grip on the wilder men of his organization.

hum?" she wanted to know.
"Possibly," I said. "But we could explain away the hum by pointing out that you had your electric typewriter and a lamp on at the same time."
"It sounds rather far-fetched to me," she said.
"That's not the point. The point is would you, as my personal secretary, be willing to get on a stand and swear under oath that to the best of your knowledge the erasure of that particular tape was an accident?"

"Are you asking if I'd commit perjury for you?"
"Well, if you want to be technical about it, yes."
"Couldn't I refuse to testify on the grounds that it would incriminate me?" she asked.
"You could," I said, "but that would not be showing much candor. I think because of my position it's important that all the truth come out. If you're going to take it upon yourself to erase tapes to protect me, I think you should be willing to pay the price for it."

"That wasn't the question," she protested.
"Ellie, even if you are my secretary, I can't condone a crime that you have committed."

"Are you trying to tell me that if I perjured myself to help you, you wouldn't protect me?" she said.

"Ellie, this is a land of laws, not of people. No matter what your motives were, the position of trust I hold would demand that I see that justice is done."

"Does that mean I would have to go to jail?"

"Ellie, jail isn't that bad. Some of our best people are going to jail for perjury."

She started to cry. "I don't know how I got into this."

"It's all right, Ellie," I said, trying to console her. "We all make mistakes. The important thing is to be big enough to admit them and take your punishment. I'll forget we had this conversation, unless of course I'm impeached."

Extra care in engineering...it makes a big difference in small cars.

What do you look for in a small car?

Low sticker price?

Dodge Dart Swinger Special and Plymouth Duster are priced lower than Volkswagen's most popular model.*

Good fuel economy?

Dodge Dart and Plymouth Duster with their slant six engines can go farther on a gallon of gas than Nova, Comet, Maverick, Apollo, Ventura and Omega.

Adequate trunk space?

Dodge Dart and Plymouth Duster have more trunk room than Nova, Maverick or Comet; up to twice as much as Vega and up to three times as much as Pinto.

Plenty of passenger room?

Plymouth Duster and Dodge Dart can seat 5 or 6 passengers compared to Pinto and Vega's four. And they each have more hiproom than Nova, Mustang II and Comet and up to 20" more total hiproom than Maverick.

Electronic Ignition?

Every Dodge Dart and Plymouth Duster made in this country has it standard. Not true of other small cars.

Low upkeep?

Dodge Dart and Plymouth Duster can save you up to $62 in ignition maintenance alone every 24,000 miles over competitive 6-cylinder engines like Nova's.†

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market drifted somewhat lower today, amid what brokers described as investor uneasiness over what the next Mideast move might be.

Advances and declines were about even on the New York Stock Exchange.

The move by several banks to reduce their prime lending rate apparently did not override investor pessimism, brokers noted.

lives, our Highway Safety Committee will prepare legislation," Miller added.

"I'd be inclined to go along with that," said Rep. Gerald Arnold, D-Harnett, in answer to an Associated Press survey of legislative sentiment.

"I would favor it even though it would take more time to go places," said Rep. Margaret Keesee, R-Guilford.

Rep. James C. Green, D-Bladen, said the lower speed limit would slow down businessmen in their work.

"I have no doubt but that it's a sensible move," added Green. "I expect if it is presented to me to vote, I'd vote for it."

"If the information that they provide us shows conclusively this is a factor in saving lives, I would be very much in favor of it," said Rep. Art Thomas, D-Cabarrus, an auto dealer.

Thomas said he was inclined to believe that part of the fatality reduction had resulted from less driving and particularly from less night driving.

"This seems a reasonable approach to me because it saves lives and energy," said Rep. Norwood Bryan, D-Cumberland, also an auto dealer.

"If it can be shown we are actually saving lives... I'd be inclined to go along with it," said Rep. C. Dempsey McDaniel, R-Forsyth.

"I think we ought to leave the law as it is," Rep. H. M. Michaux Jr., D-Durham said. "On expressways and super-highways I think people ought to be able to go a little faster."

"I think it would be unwise for the legislature to take action right now," said Rep. Robert Odell Payne, R-Guilford. "I think we need to study it between now and 1975."

"As long as we face an uncertainty about energy, I'd say yes," said Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland.

Rep. George Long, D-Alamance, said what North Carolina does should depend partly on what other states do. He said a 55 limit "might be too much out of line if other states return to a 70 mile per hour limit on their interstate highways."

"I'm generally in favor of it," said Rep. Howard Twigg, D-Wake. "I have frankly found it more enjoyable to drive at 55 than at 70."

Farrell is the owner of Chelsey Records.

Sinatra opened at the club Friday night after a three-year retirement from night club entertaining.

Took Swipe At Morgan

GREENSBORO (AP)—Gov. Jim Holshouser, taking a swipe at state Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan, says public officials running for higher office should resign before the campaign.

Morgan has announced for the U.S. Senate seat held by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., but plans to hold onto his state post until after the Democratic primary.

Holshouser, a Republican, said Saturday that officials should resign under such circumstances so their successors could be chosen in a primary and "not in a smoke-filled room."

Later in New Bern, Morgan asked why Holshouser did not resign as governor when he became campaign manager for Thomas Bennett in his successful bid for the chairmanship of the state GOP.

Holshouser made his remarks before a news conference of 150 high school journalists. It was part of the annual Piedmont Journalism Workshop sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalism fraternity, and other groups.

During the conference, the governor also predicted defeat for a bill to outlaw corporal punishment in the schools. He said passage of the measure, which is before the General Assembly, could lead to a breakdown of discipline.

He also spoke out against tax cut proposals, labelling them "premature" and warning that the state budget is "already pretty tight."

Film Of 'The Exorcist' Captures Golden Globe

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"The Exorcist," a screen portrayal of Satan's deeds which is luring widespread attention from U.S. moviegoers, has critical acclaim from foreign critics.

"I suppose that the selection of 'The Exorcist' will inspire a new devil theory to account for it," said William Peter Blatty, author of the book on which the movie is based.

Blatty spoke from the stage after "The Exorcist," which is about a teen-age girl's fight with Satan, took Golden Globe Awards for best movie, best screenplay, best director and best supporting actress for 1973.

Saturday's judging, which precedes the annual Academy Awards and includes television as well as movies, was conducted by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, whose members are correspondents for newspapers in 50 foreign nations.

The young star, Linda Blair, hid her face and sobbed uncontrollably as she accepted the award as best supporting actress for her role as the bewitched child.

Al Pacino, who played the honest cop "Serpico" in a movie based on a former New York City policeman, won the award for best dramatic actor.

Marsha Mason, the poolshooting prostitute in the "Cinderella Liberty," won the award for best dramatic actress.

George Segal and Glenda Jackson were named best actor and actress in the musical and comedy movie category. They appeared in "A Touch of Class."

"American Graffiti," a night on the town with a high school class of 1962 with background disc jockey commentary by Wolfman Jack, took the award for best comedy or musical movie.

James Stewart was named best television dramatic actor for his series "Hawkins."

"The Waltons" was chosen best overall television series.

The award for best television comedy series went to "All in the Family," and its co-star Jean Stapleton shared best comedy actress billing with Cher Bonno of the "Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour."

Jack Klugman of "The Odd Couple" was selected best television comedy actor.

ECU Cagers Host Front-Running Furman Tonight

Furman University's Paladins, with their leading scorer missing, will invade Minges Coliseum tonight, seeking to strengthen their hold on first place in the Southern Conference standings.

Tipoff is set for 8 p.m. tonight, with a preliminary at 5:45 p.m. between the junior varsity and the ECU Football All-Stars.

Furman Coach Joe Williams announced Saturday that Fessor Leonard, averaging 16.9 points per game, had been left in Greenville, S. C., along with Michael Hall, the number one substitute on the team. They had been suspended for "disciplinary reasons."

But even without them, the Paladins easily handled William & Mary, gaining a 97-80 victory over the Indians Saturday night. The win boosted their record to 5-1 in the league and 11-5 overall.

East Carolina's Pirates will be out to upset them in Minges Coliseum for the second year in a row. By doing it, the Bucs could move past the Paladins into first. Going into the game, the Bucs have a 5-2 record, and are 8-6 overall.

Saturday night, however, it was all the Bucs could do to take a 57-56 win over Virginia Military Institute.

"It was a lot like a lot of our other games," Coach Tom Quinn laughed Sunday, reflecting on the fact that the Bucs have played so many down-to-the-wire games this year. "We had to work like crazy on defense most of the night," he added.

"VMI was as disciplined with the ball as anyone we've played so far. But I was pleased with our play anyway. It might have prepared us better for tonight's game. They came in here with the best team they've come in with. They have more depth and better shooters. They'll beat some teams before it's over."

Bobby Nichols Takes An Unexpected Victory

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — "As you get older," Bobby Nichols said, "The wins feel even better than before. But they come harder; a lot, lot harder."

The big guy, 37-year-old former national PGA champion and now the club pro at Akron's Firestone Country Club, escaped with a victory he didn't expect Sunday when gritty little Rod Curl missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole of the $170,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

Nichols' victory, of course, was the first of the year by anyone other than Johnny Miller and interrupted — at least briefly — the domination of the tour by the young players.

It was the first time this season that anyone older than 26 had finished either first or second. Miller, who made an unprecedented sweep of the first three titles of the year, did not play in this one.

Nichols, however, put together a three-under-par 69 for a 275 total and the 11th victory of his career. He collected $34,000 from the total purse of $170,000 and admitted the victory may prompt him to play a slightly heavier schedule.

Curl, a 5-foot-5 Indian, who was seeking his first victory in six years on the tour, had a 70 in the bright warm sunshine and tied for second with veteran Gene Littler at 276, 12 under par on the 7,047 yard south course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club. Littler blazed into contention with a final round 66.

Tom Watson and Miller Barber were next at 278, Watson with a closing 70, Barber with a 69. Rookie sensation Ben Crenshaw had a 71 and was alone at 279.

"I'm surprised to win," Nichols said. "I really didn't expect to. I figured he'd make that putt. I was never really confident about it."

Shatters Indoor Mile 'Barrier'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — The four-minute indoor mile barrier was shattered Saturday for the first time in Indiana.

Former University of Notre Dame runner Rick Wohluter, just back from a victory in the Melrose Games 800 at New York, was timed at 3:59.1 on the Indiana University 220-yard composition track. His victory led his Chicago Track Club teammates to a 68-62 victory over Indiana's defending Big Ten champions.

Wohluter has had faster times outdoors, but not indoors. IU's Steve Heidenreich finished second at 4:01.5.

It'll Be No Contest, Says Ali

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — "It'll be no contest. I'm going to do what I shoulda done last time," a cocky, bombastic Muhammad Ali, the 8-5 favorite, predicted as he prepared for tonight's do-or-die 12-round rematch with Joe Frazier.

A sullen and introspective Frazier, declining any preflight interviews, couldn't hold back a growl as he left the ring after Sunday's formal weigh-in.

"I'll shut his trap for good," he whispered huskily into the ear of a friend.

The fight at 10:30 p.m. EDT at Madison Square Garden is a sequel to the celebrated Fight of the Century on March 8, 1971, matching then two chamions who had never lost a bout, and it will be almost as rich.

The Garden is a $1 million sellout, with its 20,400 seats priced at between $20 and $100. The soul people, resplendent in minks and glistening jewelry, have moved in for the occasion.

Bob Arum, Ali's lawyer and head of Top Rank, Inc., predicts that a billion people throughout the world will see the fight on closed television, live and delayed.

Arum said the fight could gross $18 million, with $9 million to be distributed among the two principals and Top Rank. Ali and Frazier, fighting under an $850,000 guarantee, thus could collect $3 million each.

They received $2.5 million for the first fight, won by Frazier on a decision. Ali, who had been idle for more than three years was overweight at 215 pounds, slow and out of shape.

Nevertheless, he put up a strong fight, punishing the then recognized heavyweight champion so badly that Frazier required hospitalization. Ali had a blood vessel ruptured in his jaw.

and waving, he weighed and then began his non-stop spiel.

"Frazier didn't want to face me at the weigh-in because he is nervous," Ali shouted. "He is frightened."

Ali, 32, and Frazier, 30, probably will be fighting for their ring lives. The loser is almost certain to bow out. The winner may go on to get a multimillion-dollar shot at the winner of the George Foreman-Ken Norton title fight in Caracas, Venezuela on March 26.

Terps Await Chance To Try Their Home Court

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Maryland basketball Coach Lefty Driesell, whose team has been twice blistered on trips to North Carolina, will get the chance Wednesday to see what his fifth-ranked Terps can do on their home court.

The Terps host third-ranked North Carolina State, which derailed them earlier this month in Raleigh, N.C., in the first of two games this week between Maryland and other Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

freer rotation of players than Maryland, proved too much for the Terps. Three of them played the entire game.

Maryland stayed close to the Tar Heels until midway of the second half, when jumpers by Ray Harrison and Walter Davis gave North Carolina an eight-point lead.

"I haven't got anything to say," Driesell commented after the game. "They have a very fine club. They out-hustled us, they out-toughed us."

For fourth-ranked North Carolina, the victory was a morale-booster after Tuesday's loss to N.C. State. The Tar Heels received 20 points from Darrell Elston, and John Lucas hit 20 for Maryland.

Meanwhile, third-ranked N.C. State overcame a 15-point Purdue lead Saturday to whip the Boilermakers 86-81. Despite an generally lackluster performance, David Thompson fired in the go-ahead basket in the final minutes. Monte Towe kept the Wolfpack in the game during the first half with 12 points, most from long range.

Clemson's Wayne Rollins pulled down 18 rebounds and sank 11 points to lead the last-place Tigers to a 61-51 win over Virginia. Jeff Reisinger led Clemson's scoring with 14 points.

The Tigers grabbed a three-point lead just before the half, but charged ahead so strongly after intermission that Virginia could come no closer than seven points.

Wake Forest, now 2-3 in the conference, fell to Davidson of the Southern Conference 78-76 in a contest that was close all the way. The Deacons had a chance to tie the score in the final 12 seconds, but two clutch free throws by Mike Sorrentino put the game away for Davidson.

Skip Brown led Wake Forest with 20 points.

Duke rallied behind the shooting of Bob Fleischer for a 73-65 decision over Princeton. Fleischer put the Blue Devils ahead for good at the 12:27 mark of the second half. That began an eight-point burst for Duke, now 1-3 in the league.

Defeating Notre Dame Not Just Another Game

By RON ROACH
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Keith Wilkes told everyone "it was just another game," but the UCLA senior admitted later that the Bruins' 94-75 victory over Notre Dame meant quite a bit more.

"This wasn't another game because they were the team that beat us," Wilkes said, and the Bruins played that way Saturday night against the Fighting Irish.

Whipped on by a boisterous crowd of 12,874 at Pauley Pavilion, where the Bruins now have won 60 straight games, Wilkes, Bill Walton and freshman Marques Johnson, making his first start, led the assault as UCLA avenged their only defeat in their last 91 games, the 71-70 victory by Notre Dame a week earlier at South Bend, Ind.

The Irish, 12-1, lost a 12-game winning streak after breaking UCLA's all-time skein of 88, and the No. 1 national ranking undoubtedly will return to the 15-1 team of Coach John Wooden, whose club seeks an eighth consecutive national championship.

far as our game last week is you can never take it away from us. We earned it. History is history."

Phelps said the shooting of Walton and Wilkes could be expected but "starting Johnson was the key for them."

Wooden's team has a new streak, three games old, and a new star — 17-year-old Johnson, who was a surprise starter as Wooden had said he would stick to his usual lineup, even after Marques scored 20 points in relief against Santa Clara Friday night.

No freshman had started for Wooden in 22 years.

Wilkes scored 18 of his 20 in the first half, when UCLA built a 16-point lead at one point, and Johnson came out shooting to hit 14 of his 16 points after intermission.

John Shumate, Notre Dame's 6-9 center, had 25 points but only five rebounds. He said the key to defeat was the third foul whistled against forward Adrian Dantley in the first half, which made Shumate work the boards with little help.

The Terrapins suffered their second conference defeat 82-73 Saturday in Chapel Hill, N.C., from North Carolina, now 5-1 in the league. The Tar Heels' deadly outside shooting and superior bench, which allowed

The Worry Clinic Shock Briefly Brings Rapport

Beth's case is a superb illustration of how shock treatment brings a psychotic patient back into brief contact with reality. But it also shows that verbal diagnosis is then needed during her lucid intervals. Note what triggers her delusional state.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE Z-535: Beth X., aged 22, was a brilliant student at an Eastern Women's College.

But she began to lose contact with reality till she ignored her friends, her surroundings and even her personal toilet habits.

Sent to a mental sanitarium, she would strip off all her clothes and sit, nude, on a stool in the corner. She would not answer questions or communicate with the doctors and nurses, so they couldn't even try to probe to the core of her problem.

That's where shock treatment is most valuable, for it will temporarily bring the victim back into rapport with her environment.

After Beth responded to shock therapy, she was sent home to her parents, apparently well adjusted and normal.

She would drive the car for her father as he made house calls in her practice.

But one cold winter day, at breakfast, Beth suddenly cried out:

"Mother, brush that fly off of me."

Well there were no flies around for it was midwinter!

But when the girl repeated this abrupt and illogical cry on following days, they grew worried.

Soon, Beth lapsed into a vegetable state where she wouldn't speak.

One of her father's medical colleagues was a talented psychiatrist with an excellent sanitarium, so Beth was sent there.

"Dr. Crane," this psychiatrist told me, "we found that by series of shock treatments, we could return her to her home, apparently fully recovered."

"But within 6 to 9 months, almost with clocklike regularity, she would suddenly exclaim: 'Mother brush that fly off of me.'"

"So her parents would bring her to the sanitarium, where we'd give her shock therapy 3 times per week and within a month or so, she could go back home to serve as chauffeur for her father."

"But our shock treatment is obviously not curative, for she relapses and has been back to our sanitarium for 4 visits already."

Psychosis vs. Neurosis
Beth's case represents a psychosis.

For when she begins to withdraw from reality too far, she alerts her parents with this chronic refrain:

"Mother, brush that fly off of me."

The shock treatment temporarily brings her back to normalcy, but obviously doesn't go to the root of her original trouble.

For shock treatment, much like aspirin for an astigmatic headache, merely masks the basic situation temporarily but doesn't eradicate the cause!

What do you readers think drove Beth into this abnormal state?

How do you think the fly might have triggered her original psychotic state?

When Beth has been restored for 6 months to apparent normalcy by the electrical shock therapy, she might then be cured by hypnosis or lengthy psychoanalysis.

Dr. Sigmund Freud believed that sexual maladjustment is usually the basic cause of mental abnormality.

If so, where does that recurring worry about a "fly" fit into your diagnosis?

ECU To Co-Sponsor March Symposium

Aspects of colonial American gardening and needlework will be featured at the sixth annual Tryon Palace Symposium in New Bern March 25-27. Noted experts from Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Washington, D.C. and North Carolina will direct symposium sessions on these and other topics at the three-day event.

The Symposium is presented by the Tryon Palace Commission and the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education in cooperation with the Tryon Palace Restoration and the N.C. Division of Archives and History.

Designed to increase knowledge and understanding of life in North Carolina during the 18th and early 19th centuries, the Symposium annually brings recognized authorities to New Bern to lecture on the decorative arts of the period. Tours of the Tryon Palace complex and slide presentations are also included. This year's Symposium activities will feature an afternoon of special workshop sessions on five topics: "Tea Drinking in Early America," "Techniques and Tools Used in Sewing,"

"Garden Tour and Discussions," "Eighteenth Century Flower Arrangements," and "Collecting Antiques Today."

Most Symposium events will be held in the Tryon Palace Auditorium, at the corner of Pollock and George Streets, New Bern.

Further information and registration materials are available from the ECU Division of Continuing Education, P. O. Box 2727, Greenville.

Boycott Lady Meets Wallace

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—In the 1950's, Mrs. Rosa Parks triggered the bus boycott here because she refused to give up her seat on a bus to whites. Her prosecution sparked years of civil rights demonstrations.

Just before Christmas, Mrs. Parks stopped here and paid a surprise visit on Gov. George C. Wallace. He thanked her for stopping by his office.

She now works in the office of Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich.

VISTA Survey Indicates Bus Service Wanted

A Pitt County VISTA survey done in the fall indicates that many Greenville people are "very much in favor of getting public transportation in Greenville"

Statistics gathered showed the people would be willing to pay bus fare and it gave some idea to where people from various areas of the city would desire transportation.

The surveyors VISTA Rick Cagan and Jim Speer thanked the more than 20 community volunteers who did the interviewing in various low-income neighborhoods of Greenville.

For more information on the results of the survey one should call the VISTA office, 758-5703

BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A93 ♥J2 ♦K762 ♣Q954

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble. Pass 1 NT
Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You are near maximum for your first bid and, in view of partner's strong bidding, your hand should produce game. The suggested course is a bid of two no trump. This leaves partner free to introduce a second suit or to raise to three no trump with a suitable hand.

Q. 2 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K6 ♦K9543 ♠AK654

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Dble. 2 ♣ 2 ♣

What do you bid now?
A.—Five clubs. Partner's failure to redouble has denied possession of a good hand, and there is no guarantee that this contract will make. However, his bid has considerably depleted your defensive potential, and it looks as if the opponents can make at least game in a major suit. Your bid is an advance sacrifice, and the barrage will put pressure on West, forcing him to guess at a high level.

Q. 3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠52 ♥109653 ♦43 ♣982

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ 1 NT Dble. ?

What action do you take?
A.—None. It would be presumptuous of you to rescue partner at the two-level on your balanced yorobough. Furthermore, partner might wish to rescue himself to two of a minor suit, and a bid of two hearts by you would prevent this action.

Q. 4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠1092 ♥A107 ♦K965 ♠J54

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 NT Dble. Pass ?

What do you bid?
A.—Don't give a thought to bidding. Christmas has arrived very early this year. Partner has shown a hand of 16-18 points, and so

Q. 5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K92 ♥Q9762 ♦Q854 ♠6

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Two spades. If you don't bid now, you probably won't get another chance. Partner should not play you for substantial values, since you failed to double one no trump. The only other bid to consider is a pass.

Q. 6 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10 ♥Q1043 ♦KJ7642 ♠62

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Pass. Partner's jump rebid in his own suit is not forcing, and you have about the least law will tolerate for your original response. Any further action by you involves a death-wish.

Q. 7 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ7 ♥732 ♦KJ4 ♠J1096

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a substantial one no trump response, and we would favor a second bid. Partner's rebid has shown an unbalanced hand with, probably, a six-card heart suit, so we would prefer a raise partner's suit to the three-level to a no trump rebid.

Q. 8 — Both vulnerable, as dealer you hold:
♠9854 ♥QJ107 ♦A4 ♠AQ7

What is your opening bid?
A.—One club. With 14 points, you have a mandatory opening bid. The four heart suit is bidable, you would find yourself poorly placed for a rebid should partner respond two diamonds. The principle of preparedness dictates a "convenient" one club opening.

What This Country Needs Is More Good Mechanics

By EDWARD LECHTZN
UPI Auto Writer
DETROIT (UPI) — How much is a good auto mechanic worth? A Florida Porsche dealer was willing to pay $22,000 a year and had to go north to find a qualified man. "A good mechanic—and we screen them pretty close—is worth a lot of money," said Bob Williams, shop foreman at Chapp Porsche-Audi in St. Petersburg. "There aren't too many good ones around. That's the problem." It's going to become an even bigger problem. Many Americans are holding on to their older models because they're afraid to get caught with the new gas-hungry emission-controlled cars coming out of Detroit.

That, and the gasoline shortage scare, will push more Americans into service stations and auto dealer shops that don't have the room or enough qualified mechanics to handle the job. There are more than 100 million cars on the road now with fewer than 800,000 mechanics to keep them going.

All too often, say consumer advocates, the car owner is ripped off when he gets his vehicle serviced—paying for work that either isn't done or is done improperly.

Push for Licensing
Consumerists are pushing hard for state and national legislation to license mechanics. The people who run the $30 billion-a-year car maintenance business — from the auto companies down to the men in the small service stations — are pushing even harder against any legislation. "Anyone in Michigan can put on overalls and call himself a mechanic," said Lowell Dodge, director of the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety.

"You may be given an oral estimate of $50 for a repair, but there is nothing to prevent them from presenting you with a bill for $500," said Dodge, whose group handles more than 1,000 complaints a month about shoddy and deceptive car repair.

Michigan is now considering legislation that provides stiff penalties for mechanics who knowingly misrepresent the method or price of repair of a motor vehicle. Nationally, Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., last year introduced a measure he called the Motor Vehicle Repair Industry Licensing Act that would encourage states to adopt systems for licensing auto repair shops and damage appraisers. But Detroit's automakers have already had experience with government officials telling them what safety and emission equipment should go on cars. Their dealers handle the bulk of car servicing and would rather keep Uncle Sam out of the back shop.

No Panacea
"Legislation is not the answer to the mechanic shortage," said W.E. Grimm, director of the Chrysler Institute. "If and when we do have licensing laws for mechanics, it is not going to be the panacea that some might expect."

"Licensing is not by itself going to suddenly transform unqualified, poorly trained men into competent service technicians," Grimm said. "It must be realized that such legislative controls can only work if they are backed up by quality training programs, capable of producing desired results."

Early last year, the first group of mechanics to take tests to qualify as all-around experts at their jobs got the results.

The industry-backed National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence said it could find only 1,369 mechanics—13 percent of the 7,899 men who took the tests—who got high enough scores to win the general certification.

The Institute changed its direction and, rather than qualifying a man as a "General Automobile Mechanic," decided instead to grant certification in specific areas, claiming that mechanics are being used increasingly for specialty work.

Back Shop Talk
That's also how Philip E. Benton Jr., general manager of Ford's Customer Service Division, sees the future back shop—a system of diagnosticians, repair specialists and quality control specialists.

"Too many of the industry's critics, I believe, are looking in the wrong direction to solve the problems in auto service," Benton said. "They're looking for crooks, for fraud and for total incompetence."

"However, we don't see things like fraud and dishonesty mentioned in our customer complaint letters. What we see are letters from people complaining about a car problem that wasn't fixed right, or a succession of problems that shouldn't happen to a new car under normal driving conditions."

Rather than licensing mechanics, Benton says young men and women with the ability to fix cars should be steered into the industry and receive better training.

The automakers provide continual updating information for their mechanics on the new models. But, of the 236,000 car repair outlets in this country—not counting 200,000 gas stations—only 30,000 are new car dealerships, leaving thousands of mechanics with no formal training.

Car College
Chrysler recently opened a unique car college called the MoTech Automotive Education Center in suburban Detroit which offers a year-long course to thoroughly train technicians. Students move through the school at their own rate and spend half of each day on the job in private auto service centers.

"The only way the mechanic is going to be able to meet the challenge is to become thoroughly trained, not only in handling tools but also in theory," said Grimm of the Chrysler Institute. The problem in recent years, he said, is that too many young people who would have made good mechanics have been pushed into college where they become only mediocre engineers.

"The same father who steers his son away from auto mechanics into mechanical engineering is also the car owner who demands top quality work from a resourceful, well-trained mechanic when he drives into a dealership or independent garage," Grimm said.

"What the father doesn't realize is that there are mechanical engineers driving taxicabs and service departments are searching desperately for competent mechanics to service those taxicabs."

To find a qualified mechanic, the Florida Porsche dealer ran his ad in several northern newspapers, figuring it might be easier to get a man who wanted to get out of the cold northern winter. How many men thought they were qualified for the $22,000-a-year job? Just eight.

EGIL KROGH, above, boss of the White House plumbers unit, says he is convinced from conversations with John Dean that President Nixon did not know about the Watergate cover-up as early as Dean claims he did. Krogh, who is scheduled to begin a six-month prison term for his role in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, made the statement during an interview with Mike Wallace on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" Sunday. Hospitals Joining New Group-Purchasing Plan

CHARLOTTE.—Eighty nine hospitals in the two Carolinas including Pitt Memorial Hospital here, in a new group purchasing program aimed at trimming health care costs.

The program, planned and researched during the past year, begins at a time when hospitals are feeling the particular economic pinch of improving patient care and containing costs in the face of rising supply prices, shortages, delivery delays and continuing governmental controls.

The hospital managers feel that buying supplies in volume will cut or stabilize costs and encourage suppliers to offer top quality and service.

Targeted for the new program, once fully operational, is a cost savings of 10 to 12 percent a year on items purchased through the plan, or more than $50 per bed per year.

The shared purchasing program will operate as a division of Carolinas Hospital and Health Services Inc., a non-profit corporation formed through the efforts of the North and South Carolina Hospital Associations in 1969 to share services, research, and education cooperatively among subscribing hospitals. The Corporation's general purpose is to provide participating hospitals with the kind of professional services, programs, and information few community hospitals can undertake or acquire alone.

CHHS has two other divisions, both staffed with specialists in hospital management and engineering who are available to subscribers. One division is the Carolinas Hospital Improvement Program (CHIP), now in its fifth year, and the other is Carolinas Hospital Engineering Support Services (CHESS), begun last year. CHIP offers participating hospitals technical services in management engineering and educational programs for management and supervisory personnel development. CHESS offers subscribers shared services in sophisticated biomedical equipment selection and maintenance, and plant maintenance engineering.

The parent CHHS organization is headquartered in Charlotte. CHIP has a regional center in Raleigh, and CHESS has regional centers in Spartanburg, S. C., and Lumberton.

The new purchasing division will employ a division director in February or March.

Welfare Checkup Plan Has Become Headache

By CHRISTOPHER CABOT
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —

A plan to verify welfare eligibility by having recipients personally pick up next month's checks has become a headache for officials and a rallying point for welfare rightists.

Early this month, State Welfare Commissioner Fred Friend announced plans for eligibility checks of Tennessee's 191,390 recipients of Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC).

Since then, the Nashville Welfare Mothers has filed a class action suit in federal court seeking to block the plan, and a black state lawmaker filed a resolution in the legislature directing Friend to halt his "policy change." The suit is pending. The resolution failed to pass the House last week.

The Nashville chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has called for Friend's resignation, and civic groups across the state have called the plan humiliating and unproductive.

Friend has defended his plan by saying the state must reduce AFDC overpayments in the next six months or risk the loss of $738,000 in matching federal funds. The plan is the only conceivable way to quickly weed out welfare roles, he said.

Under the plan, AFDC recipients would have to report in person to county welfare offices to validate their claims. State welfare officials say three types of proof must be presented — proof of residence, proof of identity and proof of the number of persons for whom claims are filed.

Black political leaders in Memphis, where some 20,000 AFDC recipients are to gather for the verification, first loudly opposed the idea, then saw it as a "golden political opportunity."

Jesse Epps, president of Memphis' National Tenants Union chapter, said black leaders have arranged with the election commission to have voter registration booths set up during the welfare check.

Dilda Is Re-Elected Soybean Ass'n Prexy

Stancel L. Dilda, of Route 1, Fountain, has been re-elected President of the North Carolina Soybean Producers Association. Dilda was elected to this post during the business phase of the soybean organization's annual membership meeting recently in Raleigh.

Dilda, who was an original member of the soybean organization, has a 240-acre farming operation which includes tobacco, peanuts, corn, small grain, cattle, and 80 acres of soybeans.

In addition to being a charter member of the soybean organization, Dilda has been a member of the Board of Directors, Secretary, Vice President, and served as Executive Vice President on an interim basis during most of 1971. He also was employed in the early years of the AAA (now ASCS) and has been Eastern regional sales manager of a major irrigation systems company.

Dilda is married to the former Aileen Hurst. A member of the Fountain Baptist Church, he attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and served in the United States Marine Corps prior to World War II.

The North Carolina Soybean Producers Association is a farmer-approved organization that gains its support from the 1/2-cent per bushel assessment levied against all soybeans grown in North Carolina. Some of the Association's activities include working in promotion, legislation, market development and research to make the soybean crop more profitable to the State's producers.

Juveniles Held For Kidnaping

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP)—Officials plan a court hearing later this week for four juveniles wanted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on kidnaping charges.

The four were being held in the Tidewater Corrections Center at Great Bridge Sunday night after Portsmouth police ended a three-day escape that began in Florida.

Two of the youngsters were also charged with grand larceny for stealing a car in which to escape, police said.

The four teen-agers held Robert L. Smith, 29, of Chocowinity, N. C., captive at gunpoint for four hours Saturday after he picked them up as they hitchhiked near Washington, N. C., according to James J. O'Connor, special agent in charge of the Norfolk, Va., FBI office.

Identification of the four juveniles, ranging in age from 13 to 17 and including a 13-year-old girl, was withheld because of their ages, police said. Officials said the four took one of their parents' cars and left Homestead, Fla., Thursday, possibly en route to Fredericksburg, Va., where one of them lived.

The four began hitchhiking after the car overheated near Washington, N. C., O'Connor said.

One of them brandished a .38 caliber pistol after Smith picked them up at about 9 a.m. Saturday, O'Connor said, and forced Smith to drive into Virginia.

Smith escaped from the group after he bought some beer for them in Virginia Beach, police said.

Dr. Brinson is a member of the Chowan River Eutrophication Study Technical Advisory Committee.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

COVERED PORCH frames the living room and foyer; the foyer has a large, walk-in closet for guests and family coats. The living room is at the front, with a dramatic bow window. Two steps down takes one into the recreation room, which is 20 feet long, plus having a view of the terrace through the dinette's bow window. A two-way fireplace serves the living and recreation rooms. Serving food from the well laid-out kitchen is easy, to the dining room, dinette or snacks in the recreation room. Laundry and sewing rooms also are close by. The bedrooms are in an unusual arrangement, the two smaller ones using a bath also convenient to daytime areas. Plan HA807Y was designed by Herman H. York, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica, N.Y. 11432, with 2,110 square feet. Anyone wanting to know the price of the blueprint can write to York, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Three Died In Head-On Crash

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The North Carolina Highway Patrol says three persons died when two cars collided head-on on a curve in a rural Burke County road Sunday, pushing the number of traffic fatalities last weekend to 14. The toll for the year now stands at 98 compared to 110 for the same period last year.

The Patrol said Irene Norton Metcalf, 35, and Stephanie Irene Metcalf, two months, both of Rt. 10, Morganton, were passengers in one car. Bennett Powell of Morganton, 35, was a passenger in the other car. Four other persons were injured in the crash on rural unpaved road 1426, about eight miles north of Morganton.

Eighteen-year-old Carolyn Elizabeth Cook of Lincolnton died in a two-car collision on U.S. 321, three miles south of Lincolnton Sunday afternoon.

Another head-on crash near Huntersville in Mecklenburg County claimed the lives of Durward Belmont Early, 41, and his wife, Martha Lewis Early, 30. The Patrol said a second vehicle ran off the road and veered back across the highway, colliding with the Early car.

Rescue workers pulled the body of 25-year-old Jeanette Silvers King of Rt. 4, Burnsville, from the Cane River near her hometown Sunday morning about 14 hours after a car carrying four persons plunged into six feet of water off U.S. 19-W. The others made it to safety.

Other traffic accident victims include:

—Donald Ray Bullard of Rt. 2, Pembroke, 25, who was killed when his car went out of control and overturned on N.C. 71, seven miles south of Red Springs.

—Jesse Mae Banks of Kenly, 58, who died when a car ran into the back of a truck on U.S. 301, five miles south of Lucama in Wilson County.

—Mark Steven Young of Cedaburg, Wisc., 19, and Ella Mae Stallings of Raleigh, 19. They were fatally injured in a head-on smash-up on U.S. 64, four miles east of Raleigh.

—Willie Lee Knight of Rt. 1, Corapeake, 35, the victim of a head-on crash at Corapeake.

—Clifford Ray Nelson of Ft. Bragg, 23, who died when a car in which he was riding ran off a rural road seven miles west of Fayetteville and struck a tree.

—Kelly Ray Strickland of Rt. 1, Tabor City, 19, who was killed when his car ran off a rural road 12 miles north of Tabor City and overturned.

Non-Smokers Seek Rights

BAD NEUENAUH, Germany (UPI) — Non-smoking sections have been marked off in the lobbies of most hotels in this West German gambling and health resort.

Wolfgang Keunster, director of the town's tourist office, said the experiment is being watched closely by other resorts and by the Association of Hotels and Restaurants.

"In practice, in most establishments, instead of separate room or rooms being declared non-smoking areas, only several tables will be so marked," Kuenster said. "But it is progress even if you can assure a guest that no one sitting at his table will start smoking before he has finished his meal."

Otto Kahler, member of the Bavarian State Parliament, has proposed smoking be banned in all restaurants, but a spokesman for the Association of Hotels and Restaurants said members think that would be going too far.

Nevertheless, an Association spokesman said, all reports coming in to headquarters indicate a growing number of hotel and restaurant guests complain about smoking in public rooms.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Cold weather is likely to cut down on your horse's activity this winter but it will increase the animal's need for attention, according to North Carolina State University extension horse specialist Jim Heird.

More attention should be paid to feeding, since grazing is sharply reduced or non-existent and the horse's energy needs are greater during cold weather.

Heird suggests feeding a horse that is ridden once a week or less a daily diet of one pound of grain and one and one-quarter pounds of hay per 100 pounds of weight.

If the horse is worked harder, increase the grain also to one and one-quarter pounds per 100 pounds of weight.

"The point is, either grain or hay must be substituted for the grazing that the horse doesn't get during the winter," Heird said. "Hay is the best substitute for pasture, if the quality is good."

Heird cautioned that horses have sensitive digestive and respiratory systems compared to those of other domestic animals. The hay they receive should be clean and free of dust and mold. Dusty or moldy hay can lead to both digestive and respiratory problems.

Here are some additional winter horse care suggestions:

— Don't let the horse go thirsty by allowing drinking water to freeze. Also, the horse won't drink as much as he should if the water is too cold.

— Horses need shelter in winter. They can't tolerate cold weather as well as cattle. It isn't necessary to put them in a barn, but they do need to have access to a shed or shelter that offers protection from rain and wind. Keeping dry is most important.

— Enclosed stables should be ventilated and kept clean. The ventilation removes moisture that accumulates quickly in a tightly closed area. Keeping the stable clean will require more work in the winter, since the horse will spend more time inside.

— Be sure the horse gets sufficient exercise to keep him from getting overly fat.

— The horse should be wormed for bots after the first killing frost in the fall. The frost will destroy bot eggs and prevent re-infestation. A veterinarian should be consulted for worming recommendations.

School Prepares A Conservation Plan

The Falkland Elementary School has prepared a soil and water conservation plan, according to Charles Whitaker, local soil conservationist.

Whitaker said that school principal W. B. Moore reported the school grounds, including play and parking areas have remained wet and muddy for long periods of time and recreation time for children has been curtailed because of the wet conditions.

The conservation plan calls for a grassed waterway to adequately dispose of surface water; land grading in order to fill in low, water holding areas; and subsurface drainage to lower the seasonal high water table. The plan was completed Thursday, it was explained.

Whitaker noted that the school grounds, which consist of Exum and Lynchburg soil types, respond very well to subsurface drainage.

The Pitt County School Board is a cooperater with the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District. Whitaker said that the District Conservation Service furnished technical assistance in preparing the plan.

Gasless Week Looms In N.C.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
With gasless weekends developing into a cliché, North Carolinians may now be facing a new twist: the gasless week.

An Associated Press survey last week found that many stations had already run out of their January fuel allocations and some were selling next month's supply.

"It is at this time the worst that I have seen in the past 12 months," said Avery Upchurch, executive director of the North Carolina Service Station Association.

"Between now and next Friday we are going to have a gasless week."

A spokesman for the Governor's Energy Power office said the shortage was brought on largely by confusion over federal allocation guidelines, which go into effect next month.

"I think you're in a period of adjustment brought on by the new federal regulations," he said.

Some stations in Winston-Salem were limiting customers to $2 Saturday. For those who were still selling, business was brisk.

"It's been busy all day (Saturday)," said Dennis King, owner of a Winston-Salem station. "If this keeps up, I won't have enough to make it through the end of the week."

Stations surveyed in Charlotte Saturday reported that they had enough gasoline to finish out the month. However in Asheville, M. Jerry VeHaun, Buncombe County energy coordinator, said at least 73 of the 170 stations in the area had stopped selling gasoline by Friday.

About half the stations in Fayetteville and Wilmington were reportedly closed over the weekend. In Hendersonville, only three stations were open Saturday. They did not expect resupply until the middle of the week.

Raleigh motorists besieged stations there Friday, fearful of a dry weekend. One station operator said she sold out before the weekend and "I really don't know what to expect after that."

Field crops are planted, harvested and normally sold within certain months of the year. This system is due to weather, length of growing season and best markets available.

"A cattle operation should run the same way. Here in North Carolina, an easily adapted program should follow along these lines:

December, January, February. Calving season.

Newborn calves require only mother's milk, and if born during these months will be old enough by spring to utilize grass. January, February, March: Castrate, vaccinate and dehorn.

Young animals undergo less stress and less labor and equipment are required. March, April, May: Breeding season.

Cows return to heat about 45 days after calving. Energy levels should be about 16 lbs. per head per day after calving to repair reproductive tract in time for breeding season. April, through October: Grazing season.

Fly and lice control are very important during these months. Creep feeding of calves is generally a beneficial management factor.

May: Worm calves. This is a very important practice. If you doubt it, try weighing all calves and worming half of them and comparing weights at sale time. September, October: Market calves.

Enough emphasis on when and how calves are marketed often can mean 2-6 cents per pound or $9 to $27 per head. October, November: Managing the dry cow.

Feeding field gleanings and low quality feed can be well utilized during this time. Adequate amounts of feed is important. Often it is easy to underfeed.

Every operation differs but it should be apparent to everyone that a well planned program is important. Here in North Carolina it has proven very advantageous to calve in the winter, with calves coming during a short period of time.

WHEN YOU'RE FACED WITH A FERTILIZER SHORTAGE, IT'S TIME TO GET BACK DOWN TO EARTH.

Right now, the world demand for farm products is higher than ever. And this year more acres will be planted than any year since 1956.

But the results you get in yields and profits depend on how carefully you manage your farm. Particularly your fertilizer supply.

So it's more important now than ever to get back to the basics of sound farm management. And to consider some new techniques and alternatives if you can't get all the fertilizer you want. In quantity or grades.

We'll try every way we know to meet your requirements. Our plants are producing to capacity. But it's also our responsibility to help you get the most out of the money you spend on fertilizer. As a starting point, consider these suggestions.

Soil test every field. It will determine your actual plant nutrient needs. Soil testing is the way to make sure you apply only what's needed. Our complete soil test gives you requirements for calcium and magnesium as well as phosphate, potash and lime. The amounts you apply can be adjusted to the levels in your soil. This assures the right balance of plant nutrients.

Be sure you lime according to your needs. It increases the efficiency of available fertilizer.

Carefully plan every field you have. Think about past performance and which crops yield best in which fields. Use your best fields for your highest value crops.

In case you can't get all the fertilizer you want, you're better off to fertilize your best fields to optimum. Cut back on your less productive soils and consider banding rather than broadcasting.

If it's practical, plant crops that require less of the plant foods that are short. This usage chart gives you a general rating, with the highest use crops at the top and the lowest use crops at the bottom.

PLANT NUTRIENT UPTAKE
Nitrogen	Phosphate	Potash
Coastal Bermuda	Coastal Bermuda	Coastal Bermuda
Corn	Tobacco	Alfalfa
Tobacco	Cotton	Tobacco
Cotton	Corn	Cotton
Wheat	Wheat	Corn
Peanuts	Peanuts	Peanuts
Soybeans	Soybeans	Soybeans
Alfalfa	Alfalfa	Wheat

If you are double-cropping, lime and fertilizer for the major crop. For instance, if you are growing soybeans and wheat, lime and fertilize with the soybeans in mind. Be sure to inoculate the soybeans.

Frequently, a crop following a high value crop that has been fertilized heavily will not require additional fertilization. You can get by on less fertilizer this year if your soil tests are high. But remember that the drain on your soil reserves will decrease future yield potential.

Be sure your crops get the micronutrients needed for proper growth and maturity. This table lists major crops and their response to micronutrients.

Crop	Micronutrient Response
	Boron	Copper	Iron	Manganese	Zinc
Alfalfa	High	Low	Low	Medium	Medium
Corn	High	Medium	Low	Medium	High
Cotton	High	Low	Low	Medium	Medium
Peanuts	High	Low	Low	Medium	Medium
Soybeans	Medium	Low	Low	High	Medium
Tobacco	High	Medium	Medium	Medium	Medium
Wheat	Low	Medium	Medium	Medium	Medium

Maybe there is a chance you'll have less fertilizer to work with this year. But it's our job to make sure you get all the help you want in using your fertilizer efficiently. The suggestions here are simply some principles of sound farm management. When you use them, your chances for optimum yields and profits in 1974 can only get better.

If the fertilizer shortage is telling us to get back down to earth, we've all got to listen.
