

Varied Forces To Join Hands For Med School Bill

RALEIGH—Organized labor, farm groups and the influential Christian Action League are expected to join forces by testifying in behalf of an expanded medical school at East Carolina University at legislative hearings scheduled for today, Wednesday and Thursday.

Wilbur Hobby, head of the AFL-CIO in North Carolina was expected to voice organized labor's support for an expanded program of medical education at East Carolina at a 12 noon new conference and later today at a Joint Appropriations Committee public hearing on the question.

John Sledge, assistant state director of the North Carolina Farm Bureau and officials of the North Carolina State Grange are expected to voice the support of those farm organizations for expanding the ECU medical school later this week.

Coy Privett, head of the Christian Action League is also expected to appear at the hearings to voice CAL support for the ECU program.

Jack Brock of Lillington, president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners is to testify.

Brock will voice the support of his association, which passed a resolution in support of increased medical services at the group's meeting in Raleigh last month. The resolution approved by his organization, whose members include county officials from all 100 North Carolina counties, said in part that "the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners recognizes that North Carolina suffers from a lack of adequate numbers of providers of primary medical care and an inequity in distribution of such providers between urban and rural areas."

The resolution continued, "The Association supports the increase in the numbers of physicians engaged in primary medical care, whether such increase occurs by expansion of existing medical education facilities and class size therein and/or the further development of the East Carolina University Medical School."

Others slated to speak in favor of expanding the ECU program include Dr. William Hedrick of Raleigh and Dr. James Jones of Jacksonville, both past presidents of the North Carolina Academy of Family Practice; Dr. Lenox Baker, a professor of orthopedic surgery at Duke University Medical School and former secretary of the State Department of Human Resources; former Rocky Mount mayor John Minges; and Dr. Ed Beddingfield of Wilson.

Dr. Andrew Best, a former member of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and currently a member of the Board of Trustees of ECU, as well as other Greenville physicians, are scheduled to appear at the hearings, as is Dr. Edwin Monroe, vice-chancellor for Health Affairs at ECU.

Others that possibly will testify in behalf of the ECU expansion include Howard Lee, mayor of Chapel Hill, and delegations from Dare County and from Snow Hill.

The joint Appropriations Committee public hearings were set earlier this month but were postponed when a group of legislators and representatives of the UNC Board of Governors met in an effort to come to some agreement over the expansion question.

The hearings were rescheduled for today, Wednesday and Thursday when the legislators and UNC board of representatives failed to reach a compromise.

Sen. Ralph Scott, co-chairman of the Joint appropriations group said the full committee will meet Friday to vote on the ECU proposal. Favorable action by the appropriations group will send legislation regarding the ECU question to the House and Senate floors for debate and action.

The U. S. Congress has taken action that slashes Title I funds for the Greenville City School by $98,517 while at the same time adding $129,779 to the Pitt County School Title I funds.

At the Greenville City School Board meeting Monday night, Superintendent Glenn Cox explained how the unexpected situation developed. Congress, in recent action passing a continuing resolution for funding of Title I Federal educational projects, changed basic guidelines in the middle of the school year.

Originally, 1973-74 Title I allocations were figured on distribution percentages to school systems based on 1970 census figures. In the new continuing resolution, Congress has acted to negate use of the current census figures and has gone back 14 years to 1960 census figures. This results in allocations based on 90 percent of funds received for the 1972-73 school year, which in turn were based on 1960 census figures.

When asked why Congress based the recent resolution on obsolete data, Cox said the only reason he had been able to gather was that Congress had been faced with lawsuits from some school systems and changed direction accordingly. The new congressional ruling results in the allocation of $1,139,895 for 1973-74 in Title I funds to the Pitt County School System for 11,500 students, an average of $99.10 for each student.

By contrast, the city school system, with 5,660 students and a Title I allocation of $212,997, receives $37.63 per student. Figure-wise, that means each county student is allocated $61.47 more annually than each student in the city school system.

However, as Greenville City School Title I Director Charles Dickens points out, the federal project is designed for economically deprived children so that factors other than student population alone enter into the distribution of funds. It is the consensus of members of the City School Board that if the situation could be accurately pinpointed, the result would show that the recent congressional action has created a disproportionate situation in the current allocation of funds.

Cox, in response to a question about the possibility of the county school board recognizing this fact and acting voluntarily to turn over funds to the city school system, said "I don't believe the County School Board could do this even if they wanted to, because of the mechanics of federal laws."

Cox added that because of revenue sharing programs and other federal programs, Congress had pulled back on Title I and other federal aid programs to schools. In efforts to complete Title I programs already scheduled and underway during the current school year, Cox explained that a combination of Title I funds due and authorization to use $15,871 in ESAA (non-Title I funds)—when combined, resulted in a deficit of $27,304 in funds to complete Title I projects between February 1 and June 30.

To make up this deficit, Cox presented a proposal to use $27,000 from local budget money ($12,000 from salary funds and $15,000 from non-salary funds).

This action the school board approved, stipulating "approval with reluctance" as the only choice available in not abandoning parts of the program in the middle of the school year.

School Costs Mount

The high cost of living—especially utilities, continues to plague the Greenville City Schools. At the February school board meeting Monday night, after being informed the Title I program had lost nearly $100,000, Supt. Glenn Cox informed board members that a heavy deficit was building up in utilities costs.

When the 1973-74 budget was approved, $31,000 was the figure allocated for local funding of utilities, based on an actual $30,761 paid last year.

With the rising cost of utilities, however, the utilities bill for the schools paid through January already amounts to $38,607.65, or $7,607.65 above the amount budgeted for the entire school year.

Cox told school board members that a request for an additional $35,000 in utilities budget had been submitted to the County Commissioners. To date, Cox said, commissioners have not made a decision, but have informed Cox they have the request under advisement.

One of the problems, Cox pointed out, is the new utilities system of billing on peak demand. "For example," Cox said, "at Aycock the surge of power might all come at one time. This is the peak demand, or what your system might call for a brief time, and is not necessarily what you use, but its what you pay for."

In other school board agenda items:

—Mrs. Ann Harrison presented a PVAC Slide-Sound presentation and explained work underway in the Optional Program. The Optional Program now has 15 students enrolled in morning classes and 15 in afternoon classes. These are students between 16 and 18 who have been out of school for one or another reason. Under the Optional Program they are being given an opportunity to attend school on a half-day basis for credit. Also, approval was given to hiring Peter D. Greenspan to work in the program.

—Set February 25, March 4 and March 11 as dates for the school board to meet to consider the 1974-75 curricula outline;

—Heard a presentation by Fire Inspector Jerry McGlohan and Fire Department Public Relations member Mrs. Jane Murray. As outlined, Mrs. Murray will conduct, during the 1974-75 school year, a fire safety program for kindergarten, first, second and fifth grade students, and a special program for Home Economics students. The school board approved the tentative plan, with details for instruction (Continued on page 10)

Plan Or No Plan; Small Gas Supply Is Main Issue

By CAROL B. TYER

"I think the Governor's plan would really work well—if we had the gas," George Pugh of Pugh's Tire and Service Center said. "Maybe we can put it into effect next month."

Pugh explained that he oversold last month and has practically no gas to sell for the rest of this month. "I don't know what I'll do from now to the end of February, but I'll follow the statewide plan next month if I can," he said.

"I'd go along with the Governor if I could," Douglas Edmondson of Doug's Spur Station on Dickinson Avenue here said, "but I don't have but about 400 gallons a day to pump.

I just hate to serve 10 gallons to each car and not serve but 40 people in a day. So I feel like I have to keep on limiting my sales to $2 for the rest of this month. If I can next month, I'll go along. He said he will continue to turn on his pumps in the middle of the day "to maybe relieve some of the before- and after-work congestion at other stations."

Phillip Martin, manager of the Etna Station at the corner of the 264 Bypass and E. 14th Street, said he is "enforcing" the Governor's plan as nearly as possible. He added that he thinks most people are cooperating very well and that lines were shorter today and yesterday than they have been before.

"We've been checking license plates, and whether each car is down to half-full as closely as possible," he said. "We've gone to six days a week to accommodate the even-odd plan and that's cut us back to 1,700 gallons a day. We're keeping the $4 limit we've had for some time in order to serve more people. If we can, next month we'll start giving people 10 gallons."

Penney's Service Station will be open from 4 to 8 p.m. as in the past. Its supply is so limited that it will be open only four days a week, selling to odd numbers Mondays and Fridays and even numbers Tuesday and Thursdays. These were the hours given out by the store switchboard operator to customers.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy of John's Colonial on E. Tenth St. said they worked yesterday on large signs posting their hours and their new 10-gallon limit. They will follow the Governor's Plan to the letter, they said. Their hours will be from 7 to 9 a.m. and from 4 to 6 p.m. This afternoon was the first time this week they've had gas, however. "We're not going to police our lot to find if people are even or odd, but we're really hoping they'll abide by the plan to make it easier on everyone. We're also happy that Pitt County went along with the statewide plan in order to make it easier on traveling salesmen and other outsiders who buy from us," Mrs. McCarthy said.

"I fell like by the end of this week people will have really gotten into the Governor's Plan well enough that a lot of the panic will be over and things will be easier for all of us," Phillip Martin said. "Of course, there's still a lot less gas available than any of us can ever remember and all of us are going to have to cut back on use of it in every way we can."

Coordinator

Harold Creech, director of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce-Merchants Association said his office is acting as coordinator for persons wishing to travel to Raleigh Wednesday for the 4 p.m. to 6 o'clock Appropriations Committee Hearings on the East Carolina University medical school expansion bills.

Twelve persons have indicated their intentions to go, so far, according to Creech.

"The room (hearing room) seats 350. . .250 can attend, with seating on a first come, first served basis," Creech noted. "We're just going to support the ECU medical school effort. We're going to lend our moral support."

Indicating that the group of local citizens is leaving about 1 p.m. or 1:30 "and returning immediately after the hearing", Creech urged persons "wishing to drive or wanting a ride," to call the Chamber office at 752-4101.

He said the Chamber office will coordinate riders with drivers in an effort to conserve fuel for the trip.

Will Auction Earp Revolver

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. (AP) — Businessman James Guthrie says he plans to auction a .22-caliber revolver that was given to Wyatt Earp by his friend Doc Holliday.

Guthrie said Monday that the pistol, which he acquired recently, had been authenticated by John Gilchriese of Tucson, a historian who once owned and displayed the pistol in his recently closed Wyatt Earp Museum here.

Gilchriese said the gun was given to Earp by Holliday in Denver in 1884.

Rountree To Seek Fifth Term In N.C. Assembly

H. Horton Rountree incumbent member of the N. C. House of Representatives for Pitt and Greene Counties announced today that he will seek reelection to the seat he has held for four terms.

The Democrat, a Farmville native, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and received his law degree from UNC in 1950. The World War II Navy veteran has served as town commissioner of Farmville, as Pitt County solicitor for three years and as an assistant Attorney General of North Carolina.

"As a native of Pitt County, with strong family ties in Greene County," Rountree said, "I feel that I know the problems of our two counties. Also, as an attorney, farmer, and having business associations across county lines, I am in a position of realizing the needs of the majority of our citizens."

According to Rountree, "Our greatest asset is our people. If re-elected, I shall set as my highest priority initiating and supporting 'people' programs that will improve the quality of life in our area, better medical care, improved educational and job opportunities—especially technical programs, and upgrading our environment."

During the 1973 General Assembly session, Rountree served as chairman of the important Base Budget Appropriations Committee—the watchdog of the budget—and as vice-chairman of the Higher Education Committee.

His legislative career has been closely associated with the health and educational needs of the state, especially eastern North Carolina, and the equitable administration of justice.

Rountree introduced legislation creating the medical school at ECU, the Eastern Regional Vocational Rehabilitation Center to be located in Pitt County as part of the new Pitt Memorial Hospital, and is now involved in expanding the one-year medical education program at ECU to a full degree-granting medical school.

The legislator has served on interim committees studying rural health needs, ABC laws, and the Governor's Task Force on Law and Order. He has also been a member of the State Courts Commission since 1967 and been a member of the Legislative Services Commission—which oversees the operation of the state legislature—since 1971.

Rountree said his four terms in the House have moved him up into a position where he can be heard and his influence felt in programs for improvement of the area.

The Greenville lawyer is a Mason, past Exalted Ruler of the Elks, past Governor of the Moose, past commander of the American Legion and a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Rountree is now serving on the Pitt County Salvation Army Advisory Board and is the recipient of the 1971 Citizens Award for the City of Greenville. He is married and the father of four children.

Horton Seeks Republican Senate Nomination

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—State Sen. Hamilton C. Horton of Winston-Salem announced his candidacy today for the Republican nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Horton, a three-term state legislator, told a news conference:

"I'm one of those who believe in the North Carolina way and that's one reason I want to go to Washington, to add another voice to that of Jesse Helms' in his fight for local solutions to local problems, and for efficiency and economy and common sense in government."

Horton's announcement had been expected. Republican party leaders had been encouraging him and other Republicans to seek the nomination after U.S. Rep. Wilmer Mizell withdrew his name last week.

Mizell's action had left the party without a strong candidate.

Horton came to Raleigh after canceling his press conference Monday and reportedly conferred with Gov. Jim Holshouser and his political aide, Gene Anderson.

Horton, 42, is the leader of the Republican joint caucus in the General Assembly, to which he was first elected in 1969.

He has carved a moderate record in the legislature in the past session, generally supporting the positions taken by Holshouser. He has been a strong supporter of environmental legislation.

In other political developments Monday, the North Carolina Consumers Council called on Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan to resign his post.

Morgan, an announced Democratic candidate for the Senate, has refused to resign prior to the May 7 primaries.

Mrs. Lillian Woo, chairman of the council, praised Morgan for his work establishing the Consumer Protection Division of the Department of Justice.

But she said the non-partisan council felt that by not resigning, Morgan was subverting the democratic process by not resigning and thereby denying the opportunity for a primary election of candidates to replace him.

Morgan's comment on the statement was that the other members of the council he had contacted had not known of Mrs. Woo's action. He said it represented only her opinion.

In other developments, two candidates filed for the fourth district Congressional seat. One was Democrat Ike Andrews, the incumbent. The other was Republican State Rep. Ward Furrington of Wake County.

Appeals Court Judge Frank Hedrick filed for the seat on the state Supreme Court being vacated by Assoc. Justice J. Carlisle Higgins.

Emergency Energy Legislation Heads To Uncertain Fate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emergency energy legislation is heading toward an uncertain fate as Senate opponents are seeking to recommit it once again to a conference with the House.

Senate Interior Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., floor manager of the bill, said Monday the recommitment vote expected to occur late this afternoon would be decided by a "razor thin" margin but declined to predict which way it would go.

If the vote to recommit fails, the bill is expected to gain speedy passage and be sent to the House for final action. Jackson said last week that sending the bill back to conference almost certainly would kill it.

The measure that would give President Nixon power to order gasoline rationing and other mandatory fuel-saving steps has failed in two previous attempts to gain Senate passage. Opposition centers on a provision that would roll back the price of uncontrolled domestic crude oil from an average price of around $10 per barrel to $5.25.

Jackson claims the rollback would save consumers $20 million a day while opponents claim it would force the oil companies to cut back on production, making current shortages worse. A few senators argue that the rollback is not enough.

In a press conference Monday, Jackson said the fight against the bill was being led from behind the scenes by the oil companies and the White House. Administration lobbyists acknowledge their opposition to the price rollback, along with certain other provisions.

The White House has worked to block the bill's passage on two previous occasions — once before Christmas when it backed a filibuster by Republicans and oil state senators and again last month when the President personally urged the Senate to send the bill back to conference to remove a provision designed to limit oil company profits.

The conferees substituted the equally controversial price rollback provision for the excess profits section. Federal Energy chief William E. Simon has labeled the rollback formula "unworkable."

Red Tape Cost Has Risen, Too

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even the cost of red tape is up.

The cost of this year's presidential budget document is up 40 per cent to $15.05.

This basic, 1,000-page paperback presidential opinion of how much Congress should appropriate for federal operations was $10.70 last year.

And the Government Printing Office says prices are generally up for agency and congressional reports, forms, studies, and the publishing of new laws and regulations.

The prices of many of the 24,000 pamphlets and publications the office offers for public sale generally has risen by a nickel to several dollars.

Higher production costs is the reason for the increases, says the office, the sole, nonprofit federal publisher.

Alabamans Cheer Pres. Nixon

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer
HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—In 143 minutes in Huntsville, President Nixon met with state Republican leaders, shared a platform with Gov. George C. Wallace and told a primarily friendly crowd that "the problems of today are problems of peace, not of war."

"Honor America Day" celebration and was heard by an estimated 30,000-40,000 people in Big Spring Park. "We live in one of those periods in American history," he said, where there is a trend toward pessimism and division. "That often occurs at the end of a war," Nixon said. "For the first time in 12 years, this country is at peace with the world and our prisoners of war at home where they belong."

One of these, Lt. Comm. Mike Christian, was an honored guest of the Sertoma Club that sponsored the celebration. Wallace arrived at the Redstone Arsenal airstrip 30 minutes before Nixon and waited in his airplane until just before the Presidential plane, the Spirit of '76, landed. Wallace, in his wheelchair, greeted Nixon with a gift-wrapped memento. Trailing the President down the ramp were his daughter and her husband, Tricia and Ed Cox, followed by Gen. Alexander Haig. In addition to Gov. and Mrs. Wallace, Senators John Sparkman and Jim Allen and Representatives Bob Jones and Jack Edwards greeted the President. After their motorcade to the downtown park, Wallace said in introducing Nixon: "We here in Alabama have always honored the office of the Presidency. We in Alabama are flag-wavers and we don't mind admitting it."

The governor told Nixon: "I say God bless you, and I submit to you that you are among friends here." Nixon in turn praised Wallace's "will to live" after he was hit by bullets while campaigning in 1972. Nixon noted that "22 years ago, Sen. Sparkman and myself were opponents for vice-president. In 1968, Gov. Wallace and I opposed each other for the Presidency. "But we are here today not as Northerners, or Easterners, or Westerners, or Southerners, nor as Democrats or Republicans; but we meet here today as Americans first."

Med School Supported By W.R. Roberson, Jr.

WASHINGTON, N.C.—W.R. Roberson Jr., president of WITN-TV here and a member of the North Carolina House of Representatives, voiced support for a degree-granting medical school at East Carolina University in an editorial commentary aired by his station yesterday.

According to Roberson, "Back in 1946, when concern for the medical care needs of North Carolina prompted a drive to expand the fledgling medical school at the University of North Carolina, it too, was opposed by existing medical schools and by nearly two-thirds of the State Medical Society membership."

Roberson said, "Today, there exists in North Carolina, and clearly, here in Eastern Carolina, a medical crisis, which can only become more acute." Noting that North Carolina contributed only 1.6 per cent of the nation's first year medical students in 1973 "not because North Carolinians did not want to enter medical school, but because the opportunities for admission are so limited."

Children Vulnerable To Disease After Poisoning

CHICKASHA, Okla. (AP)—The slightest sniffle brings worry to the J. W. Henderson household since a crop-dusting plane soaked three of the four Henderson children with insecticide five years ago. Doctors think the chemical is responsible for leaving two of the children with virtually no natural body defense against common childhood illnesses. Mark, 13, has been in and out of hospitals for almost five years while the youngest child, Jay, 4, has had several serious bouts with ordinarily simple illnesses. The trouble began on a spring day in 1969 as Mark, Tina, 15, and Brett, 11, were going home from school. The children waved at the crop-dusting plane as it made three or four passes overhead. "Their clothing was still damp from the spray when they got home and then Tina picked up Jay, about 2 months old," Henderson recalled.

cessfully replaced with a graft, and more recently for chicken pox which developed into pneumonia. Now, Mark has been in a Chickasha hospital for over two weeks and Henderson said the doctors told him he will have to remain there awhile to try to find the right drug to solve his problem. Henderson said he was telling the family's story in hopes that "others might realize the dangers involved with insecticides."

"We're at a point where expense means nothing compared with getting him well," Henderson said of Mark. Henderson said responsibility for the incident was never pinpointed. "It's been too long and it's too late to do anything now," he said. "I don't know what the cost of medical and doctors' bills have been," he said. "No one has been pressing us and as long as my hay-hauling business and the trucks hold out, we'll find a way to pay even if it takes five years."

Farmer Should Tell Fuel Requirements

"The essential thing a farmer must do to help assure himself adequate fuel for agricultural production is tell his distributor how much he needs. Unless a local distributor or dealer knows what his farm customer requires," said Stacy Evans, executive director of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization Service, "that distributor can not take the necessary steps to get enough fuel for them."

Evans said, "Agricultural producers who are all to receive priority allocations will be required to certify to an ongoing fuel conservation program on their operations. USDA, in cooperation with the Federal Energy Office and the Environmental Protection Agency, has developed a conservation leaflet. This leaflet, scheduled to be available in early March, includes an energy management certification that there is an ongoing conservation program and that priority fuel will be used for 'agricultural production.'"

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Donald Winston Minges of Greenville, N.C., has been named to participate in the Presidential Classroom for Young Americans program in Washington March 23-30.

He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ray Minges of Greenville and will attend class No. 5. Over 1,600 high school students from every state will gather in Washington over a six-week period during February and March for an in-depth exploration of the American governmental system. In addition to the intensive study of the three branches of government, the 1974 curriculum has been implemented with a Seminar on the Energy Crisis.

Child Care Center Open

The opening of a new Child Development Center, providing day care services for mentally retarded preschoolers, has been announced by Miss Debbie Conklin, the Center's director. The facility, serving the Winterville, Ayden and Grifton communities, will be located at 523 Sunset Drive in Ayden.

DEBBIE CONKLIN

The center, under the auspices of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, is funded through the Division of Mental Health Services of the Department of Human Resources. The thrust of the program will center around increasing the child's self-help, socialization, and communication skills, thereby increasing the probability that he will be able to function at a later time in a special education setting in the public schools. Miss Conklin, the center's director, received her Bachelor's Degree in psychology and her Master's degree in Child Development and Family Relations from East Carolina University. She will be assisted by one head teacher and two aides.

Mitchell And Stans In Court

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The curtain was set to rise today on a courtroom drama unparalleled in the last half century of American history, the federal criminal trial of two former members of the President's cabinet. They are accused of obstructing justice.

John N. Mitchell, 60, attorney general during President Nixon's first term, and Maurice H. Stans, 65, former commerce secretary, were summoned to appear before Federal Judge Lee Gagliardi in downtown Foley Square. Eight hundred prospective jurors were to be on call.

Mitchell and Stans are charged with accepting a $200,000 under-the-table contribution to Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign from fugitive financier Robert Vesco, 37. In return, the government claimed, they pledged to "exert their influence" in sidetracking a Securities and Exchange Commission probe of Vesco's multimillion dollar corporate empire.

The government charged that eventually a sum of $200,000 was agreed upon and that this amount was secretly turned over to Stans in Washington on April 10, 1972. A new law requiring public disclosure of campaign contributions had taken effect three days earlier.

Not since the Teapot Dome scandal of 1923 have two cabinet members been indicted on charges relative to their official or political duties. In that case, Republican President Warren G. Harding's interior secretary, Albert Fall, went to prison, but his attorney general, Harry Daugherty, escaped punishment. Mitchell was in charge of Nixon's re-election campaign, and Stans was his chief fund raiser on March 8, 1972, when the indictment charges that Vesco offered a $500,000 contribution in return for intercession with the SEC.

The indictment claims that Mitchell and Stans subsequently brought pressure on the SEC in Vesco's behalf. The case was said to have been brought up in a discussion between Nixon and his former White House counsel John W. Dean III. However, there has been no public indication that Nixon was aware of the purported conspiracy between Mitchell, Stans and Vesco.

Cancer Expert Lectures Here

Dr. Michael Potter of the National Cancer Institute's Laboratory of Biology is on the East Carolina University campus this week, as visiting lecturer at the ECU School of Medicine. He will speak to several microbiology classes while on the campus.

Dr. Potter, one of the nation's leading immunologists, has published numerous research reports in scientific journals. His appearance at ECU is one of a series of visits by prominent physicians, researchers and medical professors at the ECU medical school.

Paris Goes Wild Over Styles Of The 1930s

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — Paris has put on marcel-waved hair and tango records and gone 1930.

Almost out of sight are the puffed shoulders and platform soles of the World War II styles that seized girls in the fashion capital for two years.

The mood in Paris now is very 1930ish, from ivory cigarette holders to furniture, paintings, ashtrays and clothes of 40 years ago.

The latest trip to the 1930s is the new restaurant Regine, opened by that husky-voiced singer and night club impressario who is one of France's most popular show business fixtures.

Regine's new restaurant-discotheque off the Champs Elysees transports diners and dancers back to the '30s—lacquered walls, mirrors gleaming on the ceilings, palm trees, wine-colored velvet chairs, ashtrays and paintings of the "art deco" geometric designs, an orchestra wailing foxtrots and tangos.

Wigs and Monocles
For the opening night the "tout Paris" (all Paris, or everybody who is anybody) crowd turned up in the '30s styles right up to marcelled waves and platinum blonde Jean Harlow wigs on the women and oil-plastered hair and monocles on the men.

Princesse Caroline of Monaco, daughter of Princess Grace (Kelly) and Prince Rainier, making her debut in Paris cafe society, looked like Deanne Durbin with her curled hair parted in the middle and a gold lame bow bobbing on one side.

Mrs. Bernard Lanvin, wife of the director of the Lanvin high fashion salon, showed up in 1931 pink Lanvin dress dripping with roses. Regine wore a gown by Poiret, the first Paris designer of the modern era.

Regine said she collected furnishings for the restaurant from the antique shops that have sprouted around Paris specializing in angular armchairs, lamps, Lalique crystal and other decor of the '30s.

Harlow and Art-Deco
The 1974 spirit in Paris wallows in nostalgia for the epoch of Jean Harlow, rumble seats and saddle shoes. Boutique windows sparkle with lame wrap-round blouses, velet bias-cut midskirts and, T-strap sandals.

Some girls wear bagades imprinted with photographs of 1935 film stars. Also "in" are ivory, crystal or amber necklaces.

Elle fashion magazine in December urged readers to go to New Year's Eve parties with long, printed silk scarves tied around their heads, scarf ends flowing in the breeze. Also recommended by Elle are ivory or amber cigarette holders and ostrich fans. Carita, Alexandre and the other hair stylists of Paris have decreed "marcel" waved hair for celebrating high-style occasions.

Fashion designer Yves Saint Laurent pushed the 1930 mood along with an October spring fashion show that had an air of that era. Ready-to-wear fashions in the shops already are full of dresses printed with "art deco" themes of 40 years back.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I am really concerned about my son. He's never been a "talker" but he's beginning to sound like the people on television commercials who talk in bulletins.

You know, the one where a husband says to his wife, "Cold gone?" She nods and replies, "Fever's down. Cough disappeared. Feel great!"

Last week, my son set a record. He spoke a total of 12 words... three of them to me. (After I nearly severed my finger, with a serrated bread knife he mumbled, "Right on, Mom.")

When he comes home from school, I feel like Ironside interrogating a suspect.

"What kind of a day did you have at school?"

"Bummer."

"There are some doughnuts in the bread box if you want them."

"Dig it."

"Your brother took a bite out of one, but..."

"Gross."

"Who was that boy I saw you walking with?"

"Hard man."

"You like him?"

"No."

"You don't like him? Why not?"

"Comes on strong."

We were having one of our exciting exchanges the other night when his father came in. "Will you listen to him?" I shouted. "If this boy doesn't start communicating, we're going to have to give him injections to keep this throat from drying up."

"He's no Buckley," shrugged his father.

"Are you kidding? I tried lying in the middle of the floor when he came home from school one afternoon just to see if the sight of my lying there unconscious would generate conversation. Know what he said? He leaned over my still body and asked, 'Did Sports Illustrated come?'"

"We don't know anything about this boy," I continued.

"We don't know who his friends

Women, Too, Published News In Colonial Days

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Despite childbearing and heavy household chores, women became newspaper publishers in Colonial America, according to a Vassar College Library exhibit.

By 1820, at least 32 women had published American newspapers. Mrs. Clementina Rind published the Virginia Gazette in Williamsburg in 1773-74. With its slogan "open to all parties but influenced by none," it is still published by the Williamsburg Restoration.

Soon after founding the Maryland Journal and the Baltimore Advertiser, William Goddard turned the publication over to his sister, Mary, an expert compositor. She printed the Declaration of Independence as a broadside and edited the paper through the Revolutionary War.

Benjamin Franklin's sister-in-law and her son, James, published the Newport Mercury and Weekly Advertiser in 1762-63.

While John Peter Zenger, a freedom-of-the-press pioneer, was imprisoned in 1733 for criticizing an unpopular governor, his wife got out the paper. She later succeeded her husband as publisher of the New York Journal.

American Runs British Home

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A trans-Atlantic courtship fulfilled a fortune teller's prophecy for Elizabeth Dent-Brocklehurst.

The Lexington, Ky., native recalls that a New Orleans fortune teller predicted the young woman would marry a foreigner and live across the sea. When Elizabeth Chipps met Mark Dent-Brocklehurst through mutual friends in New York and married him six months later, she moved to London.

Today Mrs. Dent-Brocklehurst, 32, is the only American and only woman in what the English call the "stately home business." Her home, Sudeley Castle, begins its fourth tourist season this summer. She directs the business alone, since her husband died in 1972.

The young mother of two children presides over an 87-room castle which dates partly from the 12th century and is not only home but historical monument.

"When we were first married, my husband was a stockbroker in London and his mother lived at Sudeley. She opened the house to guests, but in a very casual manner. She decided five years ago to turn it over to us, and we thought we'd make a go of operating a stately home."

Last season costumes from the television production, "Elizabeth R," were exhibited at Sudeley. This season a new series was filmed at the castle, headed for American television next year.

"I find working with a stately home really interesting. It involves so many different sorts of things, meeting people who work with the arts, in theater. I preside at all the functions, open exhibitions and entertain a lot of people due to business. I even judge dog shows," she added.

Mrs. Dent-Brocklehurst studied art and fashion in college, as well as interior design.

"When I first lived in London, I had a fashion business so it came in very useful. Fashion remains a big interest of mine and when I'm in London I still work with a designer," she said.

For the future, she hopes to build a separate exhibition building at Sudeley for theatrical productions and concerts. Then, says Mrs. Dent-Brocklehurst, "We'll be able to do larger exhibits than we are now able to do."

BPW Observes Anniversary At Banquet

The Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club celebrated its 36th anniversary Thursday evening at the Ramada Inn with a Valentine banquet.

Mrs. Doris Marlowe introduced Miss Ellen Heidenreich, who sang several songs accompanying herself on the guitar. For the final number she invited Mrs. Marlowe to sing while she did the accompaniment.

Miss Nancy Smith, president of the Greenville Club, welcomed guests, who were Janet Blair, state president of BPW Clubs, Bettye Powell, state first vice-president, Carolyn Williams, president-elect of North Carolina Federation of BPW Clubs, Mrs. Helen Mahlon, state membership chairman, and other visiting club members of Kinston, New Bern, and Carteret County.

Following the welcome, Miss Smith announced that one of the local members, Mrs. Naomi Edwards, has been elected to the board of directors of District IX.

Mary Daugherty introduced the speaker, Mrs. Williams, who spoke on facts and objectives of National Federation of BPW Clubs. She stated that the BPW Federation is the largest organization of working women in the United States and has a membership of 155,000, adding that there are 80 clubs in North Carolina.

Mrs. Williams brought out that the National Federation is working for the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, which amendment coincides with one of the Federation's main objectives, to elevate the standards of working women.

Minor Surgical Procedure Can Solve Problem

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow woman planning a tour with a friend. I'll be sharing a room with her which will create a problem because I snore. I know I snore loudly because those who have heard me say it is most annoying.

I'm told I sleep with my mouth open, so that must be the reason. My friend doesn't know about my snoring, and I hesitate to tell her before attempting to remedy it. Any suggestions?

SNORING PROBLEM
DEAR PROBLEM: First see a nose and throat doctor. Often a minor surgical correction will solve the snoring problem. Some have solved the open-mouth problem by applying adhesive tape over the mouth, or using a chin strap. If all else fails, buy your roommate some ear plugs.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16, and my problem is my over-sexed brother in law. I babysit for their 2-year-old child. My sister would wring his neck if she knew how fresh he gets with me and every other female who comes within 2 feet of him. [He's even propositioned my mother—and she's 60!]

My sister and this lecher are building a new home now and he tells everybody that he and my sister and their little daughter bathe together! My sis is seven months pregnant now, and this over-sexed dude says he is looking for a king-sized bathtub so that they ALL bathe together after the new baby comes. He says there is nothing wrong with nudity or sex, and anyone who says there is evil-minded.

Tell me, Abby, is he nuts, or am I evil-minded?

SISSIE
DEAR SISSIE: There is nothing wrong with nudity or sex under the proper circumstances, but any man who'd proposition his mother in law IS nuts.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your item concerning the women who are interested in obtaining false fannies: I would like to make a contribution.

Cooking Is Fun!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Biscuit mix was first introduced in 1931 and cooks have been using it merrily ever since. An innovative way to use the mix came to our attention recently and when we served the result at a Sunday brunch our tasters applauded it. Crunchy walnuts give delicious flavor and texture to the raisin-honey filling around which the tender biscuit dough is wrapped.

CREAM OF ARTICHOKE SOUP
Our quick and easy interpretation of an epicurean dish. 9-ounce package frozen artichoke hearts
10 1/4-ounce can condensed chicken broth, undiluted
1/2 cup light or heavy cream
Salt to taste
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley

EASY WALNUT-RAISIN BUNS
2 cups buttermilk biscuit mix
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts
1/2 cup coarsely chopped raisins
3 tablespoons honey
1-3rd cup butter or margarine, melted
3 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Cook the artichoke hearts according to package directions but do not use salt; drain if necessary. Turn into an electric blender with the chicken broth and puree; force through a very fine mesh sieve so there are only a few fibers to discard. Add the cream and heat, stirring occasionally especially around sides of pan. Stir in salt. Sprinkle each serving with parsley. Makes 4 servings. (The color of the soup will be a dull olive but the parsley will brighten the servings.)

With a fork stir together the biscuit mix and water until a dough forms — it should be moderately stiff. Turn out on a floured pastry cloth; with a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out to a 12 by 9 inch rectangle. Cut in 3-inch squares. Stir together the walnuts, raisins and honey; place 1 tablespoon (about) of the mixture over center of each square of dough; fold points together to enclose filling and with your palms, shape each into a ball. Brush with melted butter (there will be some leftover) and place about an inch apart on a cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until lightly browned — 12 to 14 minutes. Meanwhile, stir together the sugar and cinnamon. At once brush each bun with the remaining melted butter and roll in the sugar-cinnamon mixture. Serve hot. Makes 12.

Same Birthdays Same Marriage

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (WNS)—Sigrid Karlsson, 69, who just celebrated her 50th wedding anniversary with hubby Sven, reported that they met at a large dinner party and decided that they were meant for each other because they have the same birthdays. "Last year I learned the odds are even money that two people in any gathering of thirty guests will share the same birthday," declared Mrs. Karlsson. "I'm glad we didn't know it 50 years ago, or there might have been no romance and marriage."

Tuberculosis Is Here And Now

We are often prone to think of tuberculosis as a disease of the past. A recent news story and map in The Daily Reflector tells us otherwise, however. Tuberculosis is still a problem for Eastern North Carolina and there were 128 cases diagnosed in the 22-county Eastern Lung Association area. The county with the worst record was Pitt, which had 22 cases during the year. Lorey White, Jr., executive director of the Eastern Lung Association said, "Much work is still needed so that in the future we will have controlled TV just as polio was controlled in the 1950s." On the hopeful side was the fact that cases diagnosed for the area during 1973 took a drop from 1972 when there were 153 cases reported. Still the figures tell us that tuberculosis is a threat and people right in our area are still regularly contracting it. We can't look on TB as a scourge which is no longer with us; rather we must continue to be alert to this disease.

Barry Blasts Jackson 'Myth'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK WASHINGTON—A blistering attack on Sen. Henry M. Jackson by his old friend Sen. Barry M. Goldwater stunned a blue-ribbon audience of top U.S. industrialists here last week who had invited the 1964 Republican presidential nominee to give them a closed-door political talk. The Goldwater assault was not personal, but in strictly political terms it sought to lay bare what Goldwater called "the myth" of Jackson as a conservative Democrat close to big business.

despite Latta's membership on the coveted House Rules Committee. The decision not to give the seat to Bauman brought Rhodes face to face with his first intraparty battle since taking over from Vice President Gerald Ford. Thus, Bauman had some support in the executive committee, which recommends assignments to the much larger Committee on Committees. There he polled some 40-plus votes, a good minority showing. Both groups, chaired by Rhodes, usually operate unanimously. Rhodes, whose leadership popularity stems partly from his overt independence of White House pressure, has now disenchanted many freshman Republicans. To them the issue was not Bauman's conservative ideology but their right to get a fair share of party power at a time of ballyhooed congressional reform.

Not at all, said the usually mild-mannered Goldwater: "Scoop" Jackson was parading in conservative-Democratic sheepskin, concealing the wolf of economic populism. Playing on his virtual ostracism by the left wing of the Democratic party, Jackson has concealed the economic liberalism that makes other Liberal Democrats anathema to U.S. business, Goldwater said.

Simon vs. Ash (cont.) Energy czar William Simon instructed an aide to make certain that Irving R. Levine, NBC's interviewer when Simon appeared on the "Today" show last Wednesday, was fully aware of Simon's anger at Roy Ash, head of the Office of Management and Budget, for forecasting a quick end of the energy crisis.

Simon's intent: make certain that Levine (a seasoned reporter who needed no such hints) would bring up Ash's prediction the next morning and ask Simon's reaction. Simon's reply (a verbatim replay of the reply Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz gave to former White House aide Melvin R. Laird last fall when Laird called for a temporary tax hike was): "Keep your cotton-pickin' hands off" the energy crisis.

Simon's reply (a verbatim replay of the reply Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz gave to former White House aide Melvin R. Laird last fall when Laird called for a temporary tax hike was): "Keep your cotton-pickin' hands off" the energy crisis.

The next target, Goldwater said, will be steel. As prime architect of federalizing major American industries, Goldwater claimed, Jackson must be perceived as a skillful and dangerous antagonist. Moreover, with full political backing of the powerful American-Jewish community, said Goldwater, and his "100 per cent" pro-labor voting record, Jackson looms today as the most potent presidential threat against the Republicans in 1976.

Simon's intent: make certain that Levine (a seasoned reporter who needed no such hints) would bring up Ash's prediction the next morning and ask Simon's reaction. Simon's reply (a verbatim replay of the reply Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz gave to former White House aide Melvin R. Laird last fall when Laird called for a temporary tax hike was): "Keep your cotton-pickin' hands off" the energy crisis.

A Rhodes Misstep? Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona, the new House Republican leader, may have caught his toe in a crack by blocking an ambitious freshman conservative, Rep. Robert Bauman of Maryland, from the Republican vacancy on the impeachment-potent House Judiciary Committee. Bauman not only strongly bid for the job but had support from the powerful California delegation in the Republican Committee on Committees, as well as many Republican freshmen.

Simon's intent: make certain that Levine (a seasoned reporter who needed no such hints) would bring up Ash's prediction the next morning and ask Simon's reaction. Simon's reply (a verbatim replay of the reply Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz gave to former White House aide Melvin R. Laird last fall when Laird called for a temporary tax hike was): "Keep your cotton-pickin' hands off" the energy crisis.

A hard-line conservative, Bauman lost when Rhodes, supported by the Republican leadership, recruited Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, an experienced 16-year veteran of the House and persuaded him to take the hot seat

Lt. Gov. Hunt Makes Point On Allocations

We are with Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt all the way in his contention that gas companies which have pulled out of North Carolina should not take their gas allocation with them. He contends that five or six percent of North Carolina's supplies were lost because of this. The companies can pull out if they want but the allocation should be made on the basis of the total usage for the state in previous years. The Federal Energy Office should see to this.

The Salary Of School Chiefs

Over $30,000 The 10 local school systems which pay salaries of $30,000 or up are Durham County ($30,000); Durham City ($30,700); High Point ($31,500); Winston-Salem, Forsyth ($33,696); Gaston ($30,136); Greensboro ($32,837); Guilford County ($31,837); Charlotte-Mecklenburg ($39,000); Wake County ($32,072); and Raleigh ($30,580). Almost making the elite list are Shelby ($29,952); Cumberland County ($29,408); Lee-Sanford ($28,000); Rocky Mount ($29,712); Chapel Hill ($28,632); Lumberton ($28,392); Union County ($28,064); and Burlington ($29,064). The 10 lowest-paying school systems are, listed from the bottom up: Clay County ($16,308); Yancey County ($16,824); Mitchell County ($16,824); Tyrrell ($16,992); Polk ($17,856); Hyde ($18,162); Graham ($18,192); Cherokee ($18,192); Gates ($18,354); and Hertford ($18,552). By comparison, principals' salaries in North Carolina schools range from a low of $13,368 to a maximum of $19,224 depending on the number of teachers in the school. State salaries for teachers range from a low of $7,560 for a beginner with a bachelor's degree to a high of $10,170 for a bachelors. A masters degree can push that up to $11,680, and a doctorate in the field of instruction can raise the salary to $12,680. Those figures do not include local supplements, and teachers are paid for a 10-month work year while principals and superintendents work 12 months.

Still Higher But even with a salary higher than the governor, Jones is not the highest paid public official in the state. A number of employees of the University of North Carolina make more. Dr. William Friday, for example, head of the statewide system is paid $42,000 annually. And some of his employees make more than that, with the salary scale for teaching physicians at Memorial Hospital connected with the medical school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill receiving up to $43,800 per year. Chancellors at the university campuses are right around the $40,000 range, and also are provided housing, maid service, and a car. A study of the list of superintendents' salaries in local school systems shows 10 who are paid more than $30,000 per year. The highest salaries result from hefty local supplements paid by local school boards over and above the state salary level. Nine local superintendents are paid no local supplements. Those are primarily in the less populated counties of Cherokee, Clay, Hertford, Mitchell, Polk, Robeson (town of Maxton), Tyrrell, Wayne, and Yancey.

The highest local supplement paid in the state is in Charlotte-Mecklenburg, where Jones receives $12,636 in local money. Four local units pay a supplement over $10,000 annually, including Shelby ($11,400); Durham, City ($10,420); High Point ($10,140); and Charlotte.

State salaries for teachers range from a low of $7,560 for a beginner with a bachelor's degree to a high of $10,170 for a bachelors. A masters degree can push that up to $11,680, and a doctorate in the field of instruction can raise the salary to $12,680. Those figures do not include local supplements, and teachers are paid for a 10-month work year while principals and superintendents work 12 months.

Public Forum

To the editor: I'm writing in regards to the gas situation. I heard on tv last night that they were letting the race cars have 30 gallons of gas. To me, this is a waste. When people are sick and you have to take them to the doctor, you have to sit in line for an hour to get $2 worth of gas. I don't think this is fair, and I do think something should be done about it. Mrs. E. H. Everton Rt. 1, Winterville

Strength For Today

THE SOURCE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS It is of course a matter of great importance that a Christian live a righteous life, but it is a matter of equal importance that his righteousness have a proper source. The righteousness of some men has its source in expediency. It pays to be honest. Dissolute living, they reason, impairs their powers and should therefore be avoided. Fear keeps some people from doing things they know to be wrong. Still other people are good because they have never had an opportunity to be anything else. Of course, it is better to live a good life under these circumstances than to lead an evil one, but true righteousness begins with Jesus Christ. Paul said that after his conversion he secured a righteousness that was not his own, but was the righteousness of God through Jesus Christ. A righteousness which begins in self will end in self. A righteousness which begins in Christ will travel on to eternity. By Elisha Douglass

A DANGEROUS GAME!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Seven For Solzhenitsyn

The first stories last week of the arrest of Alexander Solzhenitsyn said that the Russian police sent seven men to pick him up. Seven men! If laughter can be found in this affair, let us find laughter here. Seven men! The masters of the Kremlin might as well have sent a battalion, or two divisions, or a thousand armored cars. In making this arrest, the many would have been as helpless as the few. How do you arrest an idea? How do you put truth in irons? They came too late for Solzhenitsyn. They should have seized him 50 years ago.

before the boy learned to write. The story speaks at two levels of time and truth. The first has to do with the Soviet Union of this century. The second has to do with man past and man future. Nothing could more clearly reveal the fundamental weakness of communism—the rotten core at the heart of the ideology—than the story of Solzhenitsyn. A vast deal of nonsense has been written in recent years to the effect that the Communist revolution has "matured," or "come of age." Specialists in Kremlinology have found "cracks in the Iron Curtain." The cheery watchword is "detente." Yet nothing has changed, nothing at all. Communism is as fearful, as suspicious, as paranoid as it was in the bloody days of Stalin. The party cannot rule by reason; it can rule by force alone. In Hungary, in Czechoslovakia, in Poland, on Gorky Street last week, it is always the same: Dissent is equated with heresy, and public criticism with darkest treason. The Soviet Union has the mightiest army on earth, the greatest navy and the deadliest missiles. And the Soviet Union is afraid—afraid of a novelist, afraid of a man's ideas. But the encouraging thing—the part of the story that lifts us up—is that man endures. For 50 years the Communist masters have labored to put out the fires of human freedom. They have made the press an instrument of propaganda. They have herded their children into state nurseries. They have purged their libraries and monopolized the book stalls. They have jammed the air waves and stopped up the people's ears. They have banned travel in the free world. They have corrupted law and perverted education. Solzhenitsyn is fifty-five. He was reared in this darkness, punished by imprisonment, denied access to every tool that might sharpen his intellect. But the fires cannot be wholly extinguished. The spark never quite goes out. It is a lesson that tyrants learn in time: Something in the soul of stubborn man goes on. They could pave Red Square with granite blocks and cover the blocks with thick concrete. # Other Editors Say Self-Supporting?

(Henderson Dispatch) Beginning March 2, which is only two weeks hence, it will cost ten cents instead of eight cents to mail a letter. It's the highest rate in the nearly 200-year history of the nation's mail service. Not only letters, but all other classes of mail will be handled at higher rates. The U. S. Postal Service, successor to the traditional Post Office Department, claims it needs an additional $1.5 billion to put the service in the black in its operations. But the question we would like for some one to explain, and which goes unanswered, is why the postal body should be made self-supporting when no other department, agency, commission, or what not, has to pay its way. They are provided for in the colossal Federal budget. Why not the post office? The department claims the extra money is needed to finance pay increases granted to personnel. We find no fault with salary schedules, but people in the post office should come under the same program as others, and should be compensated accordingly from the same source. Originally, the Post Office Department was established as a service to the American people. Instead, it has become a business organization which lacks sufficient business acumen to live within its income. In effect, increases soon to become operative might be termed a tax to produce revenue toward offsetting the red ink. But the question goes unanswered as to why the postal service should be expected to pay its own way when no other department of government does. There have been hints that business may be lost as a result of the upcoming increases. It would not be surprising, and might produce a more realistic approach by those in authority. We can remember when a letter could be mailed for two cents and a postal care cost only one cent. But those days are gone forever. Other commodities and services also have increased through the years, but as to the mails the jump is about 500 percent from the so-called good old days.

South Of The Border

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON Associated Press Writer MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — While United States motorists wait in lines for gasoline, their Mexican neighbors get all they want for the asking. Mexico City officials issued dire warnings several months ago about possible gasoline rationing, but nothing has happened. And officials of PEMEX, the state-operated fuel monopoly, don't expect to see it happen. After 15 years of frozen prices, PEMEX recently raised prices for gasoline sold at its filling stations, the only stations allowed to operate in Mexico. Low-grade octane gasoline went from about the equivalent of 26 cents a gallon to 45 cents. PEMEX said the price increase would finance a 10-year exploration program within Mexican territory for new fuel deposits to cope with the current worldwide energy shortage. About $3 billion is earmarked for such activities for 1974-1976. PEMEX was given little chance of success when it was formed in 1938 after left-leaning President Lazardo Cardenas nationalized 14 U.S. and British petroleum companies. The Mexican government paid more than $130 billion in compensation to the expropriated companies, making the last payment in 1962. PEMEX is interested only in supplying Mexican consumers and exports little of its production. It carries out every task from exploring for oil, refining it and shipping it in its own tankers. It has 78,000 employees, assets of over $3 billion and supplies more than 90 per cent of domestic oil consumption. It makes a slim profit every year. In 1971, for example, profits totalled about $1.4 million.

40 Years Ago Today

By SUSAN PRICE February 19, 1934 The local post office will observe Washington's birthday, February 22, it was made known today by Postmaster H. R. Mumford. The general delivery window will be open from 11:30 to 12:30. City carriers will make their usual morning deliveries but rural carriers will not go out. The money order and registry division will also be closed. J. C. Galloway of Grimesland has been named Secretary Treasurer of the Greenville Crop Production Loan Association, it was made known today. Offices of the association located in the Pitt County farm department near the court house and those desiring to obtain information relative to loans are urged to visit Galloway there. Galloway, a farmer, is fully acquainted with the farm situation and has been working with the government crop production loan office in Elizabeth City for the past year.

Many Families Had No Cushion

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — The sharp rise in loan delinquency rates that began in November and December comes as a disappointment to no surprise to those who have been analyzing the condition of household finances. They knew that families had built up an unusual amount of debt in the past two or three years and that many of them had no cushion at all to protect them from a nasty financial comedown. In the latter part of 1973 many families rapidly began reducing their debt load, but figures released by the American Bankers Association — ABA — show clearly that a good many of them were overtaken by the economic slump. The ABA said delinquencies rose to 2.53 per cent of the number of outstanding instalment loans on December 31, the highest in the 10 years the statistical series has been kept. Last October the rate was 2.12 per cent. Similar findings are revealed by other sources. Home mortgage delinquencies, for example, have begun to rise slightly even though the rate remains in the vicinity of 1 per cent. The tipoff that problems might be developing came during 1972 when lenders saw a sharp increase in the amount of instalment credit outstanding in relation to disposable personal income. Historically, the percentage of debt to disposable income has been less than 1.5 per cent. In the 1960s that ratio was exceeded only in 1965, when it reached 1.82 per cent. But the percentage rose to more than 2 per cent in 1972, and when 1973 figures are complete they probably will show a rate of about 2.25 per cent. At least one well known economic consultant, Lionel D. Edie & Co., terms the increase alarming and maintains that the condition is even worse when instalment credit and mortgage debt are added in. New mortgage debt for the household sector of the economy has been rising at an annual rate of $40 billion during the past two years, Edie notes, compared to only $24 billion in 1971. While the over-all downturn in the economy, including layoffs, is blamed for the situation, it has been worsened by particular factors. The gasoline shortage is clearly producing household crises. William Ford, chief economist for the bankers association, commented: "The gasoline shortage has been particularly troublesome because it has triggered sharp declines in the resale value of cars, particularly large ones, and recreational vehicles, which further compound the delinquency problem." Automobile repossession rose during November and December, a time when the ABA claims they usually decline. It noted the biggest delinquency rate of any category was the 3.54 per cent for mobile homes. To some extent the situation might correct itself. Individuals react almost instinctively to economic conditions, reducing their spending — if they can — when they feel threatened by adverse conditions. At the same time, lenders become more selective. But for those already committed to spending projects there is no recourse but to get the money up. And the statistics show that a good many Americans are having trouble doing that.

Licensing Boards Come Under Assembly Scrutiny

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—After 24 years of virtually unregulated freedom, North Carolina's occupational licensing boards are coming under scrutiny by the General Assembly.

A House subcommittee headed by Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, is finding that the 32 licensing boards have developed some questionable practices.

The licensing boards control who can practice "professions" ranging from hairdressing to medicine. They have the authority from the legislature to grant licenses for the trades they control, and those without licenses are legally unable to work.

The subcommittee investigation, and an Associated Press inquiry, turned up some anomalies in the ways the boards practice.

The three women who make up the State Board of Cosmetic Art Examiners (hairdressers) are paid salaries of $8,277 for members and $8,913 for the chairman per year; in addition, their travel expenses are paid by the state.

According to their board's executive secretary, Catherine Munn, they meet every month for about three days. Their function is to administer the examinations for beauticians' licenses and set board policy on the required schooling, etc.

The physicians and surgeons on the Board of Medical Examiners meet almost as often, according to their executive secretary, Bryant Paris. But they get paid $10 per day, or about $240 per year, for their time. The board's chairman, Dr. Bryant L. Galusha of Charlotte, gets an additional $1,000 per year. Travel expenses are paid by the state.

Some of the boards have virtually no staff; others pay their full-time executive directors salaries ranging from $8,300 per year to more than $20,000 per year.

Exact figures on the boards are difficult to come by because there is no uniform auditing requirement. State Auditor Henry Bridges has a brown cardboard box with a hodgepodge of reports in his office. They tell varying amounts about salaries paid and to whom.

The boards also vary widely in the case with which they permit newcomers to enter their profession.

Some, like accountants and engineers, fail more than half of the people who take their exams. Others, like barbers, pass nearly everyone who applies.

Other boards have different ways of limiting entry. The Board of Architects, for example, requires that young people with college degrees in architecture serve apprenticeships of three to four years before they are even permitted to take the examination.

The stiff requirements, however, generally apply only to those who would like to enter the profession. For those already in it, the path is easier.

All of the laws which have established the licensing boards have "grandfather clauses." These enable anyone who was practicing the profession at the time the law was passed to get a license without examination. Afterwards, the boards merely require that a license holder pay a renewal fee to retain it. None require re-examination.

With all the power they possess, it is not surprising that appointments to the various boards are often coveted, particularly when they carry a salary.

Some professions, like physicians, elect all their board members. Others nominate members for selection by the governor. Still others have their members picked by the governor.

Gov. Jim Holshouser's appointments secretary, Laney Funderburk, recalls that about 150 barbers lobbied for appointment to the Barber Examiners' board when a vacancy came up several months ago.

"Why should they? It pays about $14,000 per year, their expenses are paid, (for traveling around the state to inspect barber shops) and they set their own schedules," Funderburk said.

Higher has prepared and introduced a series of bills he says will eliminate some of the most abnormal practices.

One would prohibit board members from being full-time paid employees of the board, except that one may be hired as executive secretary.

Another would limit apprenticeship terms to one year. Yet another would completely eliminate the Board of Hearing Aid Dealers and Fitters.

Hightower has also inroduced a bill requiring boards to establish the passing grade on an exam before it is given. This would prevent a board from adjusting the passing grade after the exam to insure that only a limited number of people could get licenses in any one year.

"I don't know for sure that this has happened, but the possibility existed and this will take care of that," Hightower said.

Another bill would require that the state auditor's office audit the books of each board every year. Another would eliminate the grants made by two engineering boards to the N.C. Engineering Foundation at N.C. State University.

Those grants, permitted in the law establishing the boards, amounted to $65,000 last year. Hightower's bill would require the boards to lower their licensing fees by that amount.

Middle Class Moved In, And There Went The Neighborhood

VENICE, Calif. (AP) — Most towns would welcome them: the well-showered, well-paid middle class with their sports cars and their behaved children.

But in Venice — discovered by the Beatniks in the '50s, flower children in the '60s and inhabited by enclaves of blacks and Mexican-Americans — old-time residents resent the coming of the middle class and the high cost of living that accompanies them.

Venice is Los Angeles' bohemian "slum by the sea." First built in 1904, it became part of the City of Los Angeles in 1925 and was patterned after the Italian city of palazzos and gondoliers.

But its fortunes declined in the 1930s and the poor moved into its ramshackle cottages, and its canals and bridges fell apart.

In the last several years modern apartment houses have been built along the entire beachfront, attracting well-heeled residents with sleek sports cars.

One black man says: "When I first came to Venice, I lived in a place over by the canals that rented for $90 a month. Now it rents for $200. The cat who rented it could pay $350 if he wanted to. He just wants to live in Venice because he thinks it's funky. Cats like him move in here and pay so much, they've priced the poor people right out a sight."

One property owner complained at a Town Council meeting recently: "Our community is in imminent peril of being wiped out by an anonymous band of speculators who see a bonanza on this strip of land."

It's a simple matter of supply and demand, says developer J. Allen Radford, whose 10-story apartment building looms over the 50-year-old cottages.

"There's only so much land near the water — anything near it is going to keep increasing in value," he says. "There are some poor people down there now, but they won't get to remain by the water. The property is too valuable. They'll have to go."

Average property assessments went up 50 per cent last year, the city says. Tax bills went up as much as $1,000.

One newer resident, a young man living with an older woman, says: "Venice is the only place where it costs a lot to live poor. We're paying $385 here by the beach. It's worth it. For example, we can live out of wedlock if we want to, and no one says a thing about it."

Another new resident is a woman who first saw Venice as she rode her bicycle south from her expensive home in Pacific Palisades.

"I wanted to move here...and my husband said absolutely not. So I came without him," she says.

"I'll never go back to a sterile, boring, hostile, lonely suburb again. My husband and I are getting a divorce. He's a stockbroker. He comes by my house in his Citroen-Maserati and honks the horn for the kids to come out.

"He can't stand Venice."

GOP Watergate Fears See Basis In Michigan

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic victory in the Michigan congressional district formerly represented by Vice President Gerald R. Ford has given striking substance to the fears of many Republicans that Watergate and President Nixon mean electoral disaster in November.

It deals a sharp, and perhaps fatal, blow to the persistent contention by GOP National Chairman George Bush that Watergate won't hurt Republicans who had nothing to do with it.

Victorious Democrat Richard VanderVeen had based his campaign against Republican Robert VanderLaan on the theme that Nixon should resign so that Ford could assume the presidency.

But few observers thought this would be sufficient to turn the solidly Republican district, which has elected only GOP congressmen since 1910, into the second straight Democratic victory of the six special congressional elections scheduled between now and June.

With the impeachment investigation of President Nixon gaining steam in the House Judiciary Committee, congressmen of both parties have been watching these special elections to see if President Nixon's Watergate, economic and energy troubles will rub off on GOP candidates.

The first special election, in Pennsylvania's 12th district Feb. 5, produced a narrow Democratic victory in a marginally Democratic district formerly represented by a Republican. The margin was so close that both parties saw encouragement in the result.

However, the Democratic victory in Michigan is as clear-cut as it was unexpected.

Ford had won 61 per cent in his two most recent elections and President Nixon amassed a similar margin in 1972. But in a turnout significantly smaller than those elections, Democrat VanderVeen polled more than 53 per cent of Monday's vote.

Unlike the Pennsylvania race, where organized labor, outside speakers and outside organizers were extremely active, the Michigan contest was fought largely by the candidates and their local supporters.

The only big name to take part was Ford himself. The vice president spoke in Grand Rapids 10 days ago and was the guest of honor at a welcome home celebration in mid-January.

Meanwhile, more bad news may be looming for the Republicans in two weeks when a solidly GOP district in Cincinnati, Ohio, holds its special congressional contest in a race where Democrats felt their chances were better than in Michigan.

$31,695 In Grants Cited

A total of $31,695 in grants from government agencies and private corporations was received by East Carolina University during January.

The largest grant, given by the Eastern North Carolina Association for the N. C. Regional Medical Program, was a Health Manpower Development grant to the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions.

The grant amounted to $23,470. The ECU Department of Chemistry and the ECU School of Business each received $2,500 from the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co. under the du Pont company's 1974 support program for university level business, science and engineering education.

Other grants to ECU included an award of $2,500 to Dr. Lynis Dohm of the ECU School of Medicine for his heart research and Dr. D. D. Gross of the ECU Department of Philosophy for an African-Asian Institute.

Two Vietnams Appear Avoiding Major War

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Developments in North and South Vietnam indicate a thrust away from major warfare for the time being while the rival Vietnamese regimes try to heal their economies and restore public confidence in government.

In the South, President Nguyen Van Thieu has reorganized his cabinet in the wake of a gambling scandal in Saigon and amid a desperate economic situation.

South Vietnam is virtually broke, surviving only by massive doses of aid from the United States government. Foreign exchange reserves have dropped to less than $125 million; $200 million is considered the critical point. Inflation is up more than 60 per cent; the piaster has been devalued 19 per cent, and some items have increased in price 300 per cent.

"The president was not happy about the performance of the cabinet," said one associate, "and one main reason was the serious and dangerous situation of the Vietnamese economy at a time the people were losing faith and confidence in the cabinet. He had to try to salvage prestige."

"He wants to convince the people in the street that he is at least listening to public opinion. That's why he gave orders to clean up the gambling in Saigon."

Nearly 600 gamblers were arrested, high-ranking police commanders were fired and so was the minister of veterans affairs, who owned a house that was being used as a casino. The next day he called for the resignation of the cabinet.

Thieu is retaining about 75 per cent of his ministers, but he is eliminating some ministries and putting the rest into "blobs" to be headed by vice premiers. The new cabinet also reportedly includes some economic experts who studied in the United States.

In North Vietnam, the leaders of the Communist government have outlined a two-year economic plan for reconstruction and development which U.S. analysts see as a shift away from any major venture in South Vietnam in the near future.

An address by Vice Premier Le Thanh Nghi to the National Assembly earlier this month underscored the economic struggle facing the North and the problem of corruption and waste, something not generally publicized in Hanoi.

Angered By Flunking Out

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A young soldier has indicated his anger at flunking out of flight school may have prompted his erratic two-hour helicopter flight around the nation's capital ending in a hail of gunfire on the White House lawn.

Army Pfc. Robert Kenneth Preston is undergoing psychiatric examination at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in the wake of the chase early Sunday morning.

Preston, 20, was taken to the hospital Monday after civilian charges of unlawfully entering the White House grounds were dropped and he was turned over to military custody.

Asked at his court appearance what prompted the wild chase, Preston did not comment. But when reporters asked if it was because of anger at having flunked out of flight school he responded "could be."

Military officials said they were studying whether any charges would be placed against Preston for violations of military regulations.

The chase began shortly after midnight on Sunday when an Army UH1B "Huey" helicopter was stolen from Ft. Meade, Md., about 25 miles from Washington.

It ended two hours later when the chopper landed on the south lawn, about 100 yards from the White House, under shotgun fire from officers of the Executive Protective Service and pursued by a helicopter manned by Maryland State Police.

Preston was treated for superficial wounds.

President Nixon was in Key Biscayne, Fla., at the time and no members of his family were at home.

Pirates Seek Revenge Over Richmond

Citadel Wins To Ice Sixth Place Seeding

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
For The Citadel's Bulldogs, the magic number was six.
The Bulldogs not only snapped a six-game losing streak but nailed down the No. 6 spot in the Southern Conference basketball championship tournament with a 65-47 romp Monday night over Virginia Military's Keydets.
But the Bulldogs will have to wait until later this week to see whether their third-seeded opponent will be Richmond's Spiders, Davidson's Wildcats or East Carolina's Pirates.
By winning, The Citadel upped its league record to 4-8 with one game remaining and dropped the Keydets to 3-9 in their final conference encounter.

Even a triumph in their final game can't pull the Bulldogs any higher, for William and Mary's fifth-place Indians are 5-5 with just one league game left.

William and Mary went outside the league Monday night and took a 72-62 licking from Virginia's Cavaliers of the Atlantic Coast Conference, but Richmond's Spiders evened the nonleague record with an 84-83 squeak past West Virginia's Mountaineers.

All conference teams are idle tonight.

A pair of freshmen were the standouts, Rodney McKeever scoring 22 points for The Citadel and John Krovic getting 22 for VMI, but The Citadel was in command most of the way.

The Bulldogs, upping their over-all record to 10-11 and dropping the Keydets to 6-16, built a 57-31 margin with 5:18 left, but Krovic got 10 of his points in the last four minutes as the Keydets closed the gap a little.

VMI shot only 31.7 per cent from the floor to 48.8 per cent for The Citadel and committed 30 turnovers to 17 for the Bulldogs.

Carlton Mack's layup with 34 seconds left snapped an 81-81 tie for Richmond, and Eric Gray's free throw a few seconds later offset a West Virginia field goal at the buzzer.

The Spiders built a nine-point lead with 12:08 left, but West Virginia rallied for a final 77-75 lead before Aron Stewart, Bob McCurdy and Mack scored six straight points for the Spiders, now 12-11 over-all.

Stewart had 31 points and 14 rebounds and McCurdy 25 points for the Spiders. Eartha Furst scored 31 points and sophomore Warren Baker 21 for West Virginia, which fell to 9-12.

Freshman Billy Langloh scored 15 of his 19 points in the second half as Virginia, 8-13, rallied from a 31-30 deficit at intermission to send William and Mary to its 14th defeat in 22 starts.

Bob McKeag's layup gave Virginia the lead for good early in the second half, and the Cavaliers made it stand up even though they played without Wally Walker, who has an ankle injury. Gus Gerard had 13 points for Virginia, Mike Arizin 18 for the Indians.

"I hope this doesn't take any of the luster off the great team feeling we have right now," said William and Mary's George Balanis, who suffered his first defeat in three starts since taking over last week from Ed Ashnault.

North Pitt In 1st Round Win

DUDLEY—North Pitt High School's Big Orange Machine, smarting from their first Eastern Carolina Conference loss during last week's league tournament, vowed no such thing would happen again, and powered to a 50-28 victory over Union High School in the first round of the District Two Girls Tournament at Southern Wayne High School last night.

The Pant-HERS had little trouble with their foe, moving easily into the semi-finals of the tournament. They will meet the winner of the East Duplin-Princeton game on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

In the other game, Eastern Wayne advanced with a win over Clement. They'll meet the survivor of the Charles B. Aycock-South Lenoir game on Wednesday at 7 p.m. The finals will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. with the winner moving on to the state tournament in High Point next week.

North Pitt jumped out early, streaking to an 11-4 lead after one period. The Pant-HERS increased their scoring by two points in the second frame, and held Union to the same score, four. That made it 24-8 at the half.

Union got on track in the third period, pushing through 12 points, but they still couldn't halt the Big Orange Machine, which ground out 14 points for a 38-20 lead. North Pitt then finished their effort with a 12-8 final period to win handily.

Joy James led North Pitt with 14 points, while Wanda Whichard had 13. Union was led by S. Cooper with 10 points.

Sloan: Nice To Be Number One

By BOB CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After many weeks of trying harder, North Carolina State basketball Coach Norm Sloan finds it nice to be the No. 1 team of college basketball.

Sloan's team was top-ranked in the Associated Press poll this week, ending a long run as number two behind perennial champion UCLA. The Bruins dropped two games over the weekend and fell to third.

N.C. State, with a 20-1 record, edged Notre Dame by a slim margin for the top spot.

Despite its new status, Sloan said his team will still try harder.

"I think it will help us. It comes at a good time to give a boost to our morale. The teams we'll be playing from now on are all Atlantic Coast Conference teams, and they couldn't be gunning for us any more than they are already. We'll have a little more pride."

Sloan was informed of the poll results at practice Monday afternoon. "Is that right?" he asked. Told it was, he said, "We're proud and pleased."

Sloan stopped practice briefly to inform his players. Their reaction was restrained.

"It's not that we're not enthused," said 7-foot-4 center Tom Burlison. "It's just that we've got a lot of things on our minds," including a home game with Duke Wednesday night.

Sloan said the sports writers who picked the Wolfpack "had a good case."

"We're a vastly improved ball club from December (when UCLA beat N.C. State by 18 points in St. Louis). Our two new starters of this season have come a long way."

"Morris Rivers (a junior college transfer at guard) is playing beautifully now and Tim Stoddard at the big forward position is getting over a slow start."

"Defensively, we're coming together much better, particularly with our press. We've beaten two of the top five teams (Maryland and North Carolina) on their home courts; we beat Purdue on its home court when it was leading the Big Ten."

Though the poll recognition is nice, Sloan said, it's not the goal the team is seeking. Pursuit of the real goal starts next month with the ACC tournament, which N.C. State must win to enter the NCAA tournament.

"We want to be No. 1 in March," Sloan said.

Girls To Start Play

WILLIAMSTON—Williamston High School's girls open play tonight in the District One Girls Tournament at Williamston High School.

Williamston will be playing Beaufort-Hyde-Martin champ Bath in the 7 p.m. game, while Manteo meets Northampton at 8:30 p.m.

Last night, Camden beat Chowan, 43-34, while Belhaven downed Edenton, 46-35. They will meet Wednesday at 7 p.m., while the winners in tonight's game play at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. The finals will be Thursday at 8 p.m.

The East Carolina Pirates enter the final week of the regular season in the Southern Conference with two key games on tap—the first Wednesday night in Minges Coliseum.
The Bucs, who are currently fourth in the league, will be shooting to move into a tie for third place in the standings, and hopefully to clinch the third place spot on Saturday night.

The Pirates will be playing host to the University of Richmond in Wednesday night's 8 p.m. game. Richmond currently is 8-4 in the league and tied with Davidson for second place. Richmond has one other game left, with William & Mary on Saturday.
East Carolina could take third only by beating the Spiders and then winning on Saturday when they host sixth-place Citadel.

Even then, the outcome would hinge on the outcome of the Spiker-Indian game.

East Carolina lost its chance to have a shot at second place Saturday night when it lost to Davidson College. The Wildcats, with only a date with Appalachian State left, seem assured of second unless Richmond sweeps both of its final games.

"Our defense, both individually and as a team, was not as effective as it has been lately," Coach Tom Quinn said of the game. "But our offense did pretty good. We scored nearly 15 points over Davidson's defensive average, and 10 better than our offensive average. And our field goal percentage was over our average too. I can't fault the offense."

Quinn said that the defense, along with the offensive rebounding, which he called "nil" was the difference in the game. "Tom Marsh, Reggie Lee and Larry Hunt all had outstanding games," he added.

"The real difference could have been the fact that they were at home, they were having their last home game of the year, they were honoring their seniors, and they wanted revenge for the licking we gave them here. And perhaps, too, they have quality, experienced depth where we have quality, inexperienced depth."

Quinn noted that Nicky White, with only one rebound, Roger Atkinson and Donnie Owens didn't have their usual nights against Davidson. "I'm sure they are going to snap back right away. Everyone has had bad nights," he said.

Quinn feels that the Pirates really should be given part of the credit for the comeback Davidson has had. "They were riding high at the start of the season. They had played 20 games already in Australia, and had a great advantage over the rest of us. And I think maybe they were overconfident. We knocked the wind out of their sails, and got them thinking. They lost two more in the conference, and that really got them going good."

But Quinn looks forward to the conference tournament, where the Bucs have a good chance to meet them again. "But I can't see where they can improve any between now and then. I do see some areas where we can improve."

Richmond, which beat the Pirates by one point with four seconds left in their meeting earlier in the season, will be out to do it again Wednesday night.

"We played well against them, and we are better now. Of course, they've improved too," Quinn said. "They have three quality players in the front line in Aron Stewart, Steve McCurdy and Eric Gray. It's as fine a front line as there is in the conference."

"But we played well enough to win there, and only some great breaks and an unbelievable freak kind of finish let them win it," the coach said.

Quinn feels that the loss to Davidson will make the Pirates a better team. "We learned a lot from that game," he said. "These next two games are very important to us, especially since both of these teams beat us on the road."

Stewart is the leading scorer for the Spiders, as well as being tops in the league. He's hitting at a 26.3 average. Gray is hitting 17.3, while McCurdy has a 15.8 average.

Nicky White continues to lead the Pirates with a 13.8 average, while Lee is scoring 11.5 per game. Atkinson is 9.1, Robert Geter, 8.8, and Owens, 7.6.

A junior varsity preliminary will be held between the two schools, starting at 5:45 p.m.

Paladins Win; Gain Finals

WINTERVILLE—Pitt Technical Institute downed Martin Tech, 60-54, last night to gain the finals of their conference tournament.

Pitt, which finished second in the league will now meet regular season champion James Sprunt. Pitt will host the game, to be played Wednesday at Winterville's A. G. Cox Gym.

The Paladins opened up an 8-4 lead in the early minutes of the game and extended that to six, 14-8, before Martin Tech put on a rally and finally tied it up at 20-20. Martin then took a 22-20 lead with about four minutes left. The two then exchanged baskets until the horn, with the half ending in a 27-27 deadlock.

Pitt inched back into the lead, taking a three-point edge, but Martin came back again to tie it up. They moved out by three, 44-41, with about 12 minutes left, but Pitt regained the lead for good at 51-48. For the final six minutes of the game, the Paladins played control ball, working to burn off the clock and get the good shots. They extended their lead out to six and held that margin at the end.

Robert Hardy led Pitt Tech with 17 points, while Danny Thomas had 15 and Charles Jenkins had 13. K. Wallace led Martin with 13, while E. Briley had 12 and D. Moore had 10.

The Worry Clinic Producers, Not Braintrusters

Prof. Smiley's students include a barber who commutes from a village of 900 people. Note this debt use of Applied Psychology. We need far more people who are resourceful producers, instead of braintrusters. That's doubly true of Congress and state legislatures!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.
CASE Z-556: Robert Smiley teaches Marketing at Purdue University.

Recently, he stopped for a visit when I was down in Indiana at the newspaper syndicate office.

"Dr. Crane," he said, "one of my students is a barber from a little town of 900 population."

"He is a good Applied Psychologist, too, for he has set up a goal of $350 per week for his village barber shop."

"And last week he hit $370. For he is unusually alert and ambitious. He thus stresses hair styling for the older men of the community."

"Since the custom of long hair for the male sex has been in vogue, he offers a free hair styling job to key men just so that he can publicize his tonsorial artistry."

"Then, as they are asked where they got the attractive hairdo, they mention this barber's name."

"Dr. Crane, don't you think he typifies the type of man who would be a success in almost any field?"

Think Ahead
Yes, I certainly appreciate this barber's ambition and practical psychology. "You must first think ahead," runs a superb adage, "if you wish to get ahead."

That is similar to another business maxim which states: "Plan your work; then work your plan!"

And I also salute Robert Smiley for his own demonstration of those axioms for success.

For he has had a versatile experience in our American "Free Enterprise" system, having worked in advertising and also been a radio announcer.

With his keen mind and business insights derived from his university teaching in the field of Marketing, he might very profitably end in the U.S. Congress.

For we certainly need versatile men as candidates of both the major political parties.

And by "versatile," I refer to men who not only know how to motivate voters so they can win elections.

But also candidates with "Horse Sense," who realize that government is really the major business of America and should be conducted efficiently, without boon-doggling and waste of our taxes.

Perhaps we have far too many lawyers in our state and national legislatures.

Instead, we need more farmers, barbers, retail merchants, doctors and others who really are out creating new products and trying to merchandise them at a profit.

Our Watergate bunglers were chiefly lawyers!

And those who have complicated American business by braintruster laws about pollution of water, air and foodstuffs, have produced most of our economic chaos the past few years.

"Dad," my Congressman son, Philip, told me on the phone not long ago, "America would be much better off if Congress had taken a prolonged vacation the past couple of years!"

For legislators constantly want to concoct new laws and boost taxes, most of which merely complicate and retard the sound progress of American business.

Send for my booklet "Common Fallacies in Logic and Political Tricks," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

The FBI's Uniform Crime Reports indicated that one-half the assaults on law enforcement officers occur between 8:00 p.m. and 2:00 p.m.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1974

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Unexpected developments could occur today. It would be wise to adopt a conservative attitude and try not to force any issues. Make sure you have everything in perfect operative condition. Use special care with electricity.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't expect friends to be concerned about your affairs, since they are too busy with their own right now. Work at favorite hobby.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) It is wise to keep at regular routines today since it's not a good day for seeking success in the outside world. Relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good day to engage in new outlets so don't be tempted. Showing more devotion to kin at this time can bring fine results. Be wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you meet your obligations instead of running away from them. Do your utmost to improve relationship with loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Although tempted to make changes, it is best to carry through with arrangements you have already made with others. Show you have poise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure you study all facets of a new plan you have in mind before putting it in operation. You've been under a strain lately, so relax.

Today's declarer had no side suit of his own to develop, so he embarrassed the opposition by establishing theirs. In the pass-out position, South's jump bid of two hearts is not forcing. His hand was too good offensively to balance with one heart, for that might sound to his partner as if he were simply competing for the part score and did not have much of a hand. North gave full weight to his prime controls when he raised to game.

West led the king of diamonds and shifted to the queen of clubs. Tho this defense was the best available at trick two, West's choice

Ask Financing Of Fuel Search

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Petroleum specialists led by geologist-astronaut Harrison H. Schmitt say the federal government should support a $2 billion, five-year search for new oil and gas reserves.

The specialists — representing universities, industry and government — asserted at a meeting at the California Institute of Technology Sunday that no more than half the nation's petroleum producing potential has been explored or developed. They said as much as 300 billion barrels of oil are still to be found on and offshore.

Schmitt, who explored the moon on the Apollo 17 lunar mission, is a Sherman Fairchild Distinguished Scholar at Caltech.

Alaskans Await Oil Pipeline Wealth

CLASSIFIED

By ROBERT C. MILLER
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — The trans-Alaska pipeline permit, finally signed in Washington, has brightened every Alaskan's eye with prospects of instant wealth, fantastic growth and happiness ever after.

The Interior Department permit that erased the last major obstacle to the building of the 789-mile oil line is believed by many Alaskans to be a more important document than attainment of statehood. But then statehood never offered Alaska such goodies as indefinite budget surpluses in the state treasury, more than 18,000 new jobs, 40,000 more people and the right to tap a 670 square mile oil field with a market value of at least $64 billion.

Economists say it could be worth three times that amount over its 20-year life expectancy. One economist, Robert Richards, estimates that by 1981 Alaska will have doubled its employment and increased its 330,000 population by 60 per cent, thanks to the North Slope field.

Few in Alaska believe Interior Secretary Rogers Morton's optimistic forecast that the first oil will reach the pipeline terminus at Valdez, Alaska, by 1977. Those familiar with the magnitude of the task, the intangibles head and the terrain to be crossed, add another year or even 18 months to Morton's prediction.

Final Cost
Nor will anyone make anything but a rough guess as to the final cost of what was estimated as a $900 million project when conceived five years ago. The round figure of $5 billion is being quoted by oil officials as the minimum cost. Even the state's profits from its royalties and taxes is staggering.

Gov. William Egan figures $1.07 billion will pour into the state's bank accounts by 1983 if the crude sells at the present $8.18 a barrel price.

The same survey estimates the oil companies' yearly profits at $2.86 billion, based on the flow of 2 million barrels of oil through the pipeline each day. It wasn't too long ago that the gross national product of the entire United States was less than that.

The North Slope will eventually become the biggest bargain on the books of British Petroleum, Exxon, Atlantic Richfield and Sohio (Standard of Ohio). They paid a mere $12 million for their North Slope leases which have turned out to hold about 90 per cent of its oil. The remaining 10 per cent were sold by the state for $900 million on Sept. 19, 1969, to an assortment of bidders and have so far proven worthless.

This $900 million and the interest from its investment has made Alaska one of the few states with a bank account instead of a mortgage. The state found it profitable to fly the money immediately to New York on the sale day to bank it so as not to lose the interest that would accrue during the weekend.

Navy Dusters
Gov. Egan estimates there will be $367 million left from this inheritance a year from July, the end of the next fiscal year—a figure doubted by his Republican opposition.

A PIPELINE WORKER guides a section of 48" pipe to its position in a supply yard in Valdez, Alaska. Here, and at two other locations, enough pipe is stored for construction of the 789-mile trans-Alaska pipeline. (UPI Telephoto)

Geologists had surmised that there was oil on the North Slope for years, and a huge area was set aside as a Navy reserve, but the few shallow wells drilled for the Navy were dusters.

Atlantic Richfield brought in the first well in February, 1968 and then proved they were onto something big when their second well drilled seven miles away came in. Stamping your brand on the largest oil field ever discovered in North America looks good in the annual stockholder's reports; getting the estimated 24 billion barrels out of the frozen Arctic and into cracking plants is another story.

The oil companies spent $50 million converting the 115,000-ton tanker Manhattan into the world's biggest icebreaking tanker and tried taking the oil out the Northwest Passage. The failure of this experiment left only one alternative—a pipeline.

What's $2½ Billion?
Alaska oil men estimate the consortium has already spent $2.5 billion and not even welded the first two lengths of pipe.

"But what's two and a half billion in this game?" one engineer asked. "Two million barrels of oil a day will be flowing through that line when we get it into full production. The first year's profits should be more than that."

Alyeska, the company formed to build the pipeline, expects to spend this year building roads and clearing sites for the pumping stations and the Valdez terminus. With luck, Alyeska engineers hope to get some pipe laid in Keystone Canyon near Valdez.

Men Only Camps
The road linking Valdez to Prudhoe Bay is to be completed next year, then pipe laying will start south of the Yukon River while construction starts on the pumping stations and Valdez facilities. In 1976 Alyeska hopes to complete the pipeline north of the Yukon. About 5-6,000 workers will be working on the project this year and 10,000 to 13,000 the next two years. It will be a "men only" task force as Alyeska says there will be no facilities for families near the construction camps. The work will proceed 10 hours a day, seven days a week "weather permitting."

To prepare for the event, Egan has asked the legislature for an additional $49.3 million "pipeline impact" appropriation. This would be used to build additional schools, grant loans to pipeline route communities and beef up local police forces. Alaskans, historically familiar with the behavior of their gold-seeking ancestors, are expecting the worst.

"For every one desirable job seeker attracted by the pipeline," State Rep. Alfred Ose said, "there will be five deadbeats."

Julie Is Moved Into White House Suite

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With her entire family escorting her, Julie Nixon Eisenhower has been moved from Indiana University Hospital to a suite at the White House.

President Nixon flew from a public appearance in Huntsville, Ala., to give his ailing daughter a lift from Indianapolis to the capital by presidential motorcade, plane and helicopter on Monday.

Mrs. Eisenhower, who underwent surgery for a bleeding ovarian cyst at Indianapolis last Thursday, went right to bed in a second-floor suite, with doctors and a nurse from the White House medical dispensary on call if needed.

During the hour's flight to Washington, Mrs. Eisenhower rested in a bedroom of the presidential jet plane, visiting with members of her family.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said assistant White House physician William Lukash found his 25-year-old patient "very weak" on the way home.

Indiana University Medical School specialists permitted Mrs. Eisenhower to go home three days earlier than usual after such an operation. They said she would need at least three more weeks of recuperation before resuming normal activities.

As she departed the hospital with her husband, David, pushing her wheelchair and followed by the President, Mrs. Nixon and Julie's sister, Tricia Cox, Mrs. Eisenhower bade farewell to the 30 nurses, doctors and staff who cared for her.

She hugged several nurses and introduced Mrs. Donna Lautner to the President as the one who "took care of me one of those nights when I felt so sick."

Offers Reagan Role In Movie

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, a former movie and television actor, has been offered a role as a reporter in a movie being filmed in this Northern California town.

Producers William Alexander and Bill Shiffrin said they didn't expect Reagan to accept but said Monday that Reagan could have the job if he wanted it.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor and her husband, Richard Burton, have flown to the United States from Switzerland so Burton can work in the film, titled "The Klansman."

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—F.O.B. dock broilers market tone unsettled. Supplies adequate but generally good demand. Weights desirable. Estimate slaughter 1,142,000.

North Carolina hen market steady on heavy type. Supplies about adequate, demand good. Heavies at farm 16 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market racked up a strong gain today as investors looked for favorable Middle East developments to emerge from a meeting of two Arab foreign ministers with President Nixon.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 13.07 at 833.39, and gainers overwhelmed losers by 4-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The advance came on top of a 10.20 rise in the Dow industrials Friday. Brokers said the surge was traceable primarily to apparently rising hopes that Arab oil-producing countries soon would relax their embargo on shipments to the United States and possibly roll back prices somewhat.

Gains were widespread in travel and leisure-industry stocks and other companies whose business is linked to availability of oil. Ramada Inns was up 1/4 at 6 1/4 in active trading; Walt Disney Productions climbed 1 1/2 to 42 1/2, and Marriott, a motel chain operator, rose 1 1/2 to 16 1/2.

Oil issues also gained. On the active list, Gulf rose 1/2 to 22 1/2, Continental Oil was up 7/8 to 43 1/4, and Phillips Petroleum climbed 1 1/2 to 49 1/2.

Redman Industries was the Big Board's most-active stock, up 1/2 at 4. The NYSE's 11 a.m. index of all its listed common stocks was ahead .74 at 50.07.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index rose .84 to 95.11. The Amex volume leader was Total Petroleum of North America, up 9-16 at 8 11-16.

Second Sentence For Drug Dealer

CHARLOTTE (AP)—William Logan, described by police as one of Charlotte's biggest drug dealers, was sentenced Monday to a second term of five years on conviction of possessing marijuana and heroin.

Police had testified that they found 71 packets of heroin and two pounds of marijuana when they broke into a motel room he occupied last spring.

He had been sentenced to five years last Dec. 7 on conviction of selling heroin and marijuana to a police undercover agent.

The second sentence is to start after the completion of the first.

Logan has appealed both convictions.

Mindszenty Will Visit The U.S.

VIENNA (AP) — Jozsef Cardinal Mindszenty plans to visit the United States later this year.

The 82-year-old cardinal was relieved two weeks ago by Pope Paul VI as archbishop of Estergom and primate of Hungary.

The cardinal's visit was planned "a long time ago" and prior to the Pope's decision, an aide to the cardinal said Monday.

Monsignor Tibor Mesaros said the visit was "to give courage and confidence" to the many Americans of Hungarian origin.

Balloonist Sees Initial Setback

Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Thomas Gatch Jr.'s bid to make the first balloon flight across the Atlantic has suffered a slight setback, but he is still cruising along at 35,500 feet above the sea.

After crossing the coastline north of Atlantic City, N.J., Monday night, Gatch reported by radio that one of his 10 super-pressure balloons had ruptured and was draped over a porthole on his pressurized gondola, Light Heart.

Gatch said he heard a loud noise when the balloon apparently burst, just over an hour after take-off.

The 48-year-old bachelor from Alexandria, Va., lifted off from Harrisburg International Airport at 7:29 p.m. EDT Monday on a flight he hopes will take him to southern France or northern Spain in approximately 52 hours. At 10 p.m. EDT, Aeronautical Instrument & Radio Co. in New York reported Gatch at about 200 miles southeast of New York City.

Aides said the timetable would change because the ruptured balloon would force Gatch to fly lower than the 39,000 feet originally planned. They said the craft could lose two more balloons without placing the flier in danger.

The radio monitoring station in New York reported the Light Heart was traveling about 150 miles per hour in an eastbound jet stream when it crossed the coastline.

The Army Reserve colonel spent $60,000 and two years planning the flight with the transparent polyester balloons, which measure 26 feet in diameter when fully inflated. The helium expands as the balloon ascends, and the balloons would have been fully inflated at 39,000 feet, aides said.

Gatch's fiberglass and plastic gondola is equipped with two radios, provisions for 10 days and styrofoam flotation devices.

Scholarship To Turn To Energy

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford has urged American engineers to use their ingenuity to solve the energy shortage.

Ford told a meeting of Chattanooga-area engineers that there is no shortage of American engineering talent, only a shortage of time.

"Fortunately, in this crisis as in similar situations in the past, ingenuity can be a substitute for time," Ford said Monday night.

Among the challenges Ford assigned to the engineers were finding ways to stop waste of energy, increase production in the shortest possible time, preserve air and water quality and keep costs at a minimum.

President of the organization is Angeline H. Venters.

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 7 through Feb. 13. The House was in recess from Feb. 8 through Feb. 12. The Senate recessed Feb. 9 through Feb. 18. The Senate conducted no roll call votes before recessing.

HOUSE
LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY RECESS Passed, 209 for and 175 against, a resolution to recess the House for five days and the Senate for nine days in commemoration of Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

The House had planned a ten-day recess, but shortened it because of a heavy legislative agenda.

Those voting against the measure said that even five days are too many, and that vacations early in a session lead to legislative logjams at the session's end.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), Richard Preyer (D-6) and James Martin (R-9) voted "yea."

Reps. L. H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Wilmer Mizell (R-5), Charles Rose (D-7), Earl Ruth (R-8), James Broyles (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

Passed, 374 for an six against, and emergency resolution to permit settlement of the independent trucker's strike.

The measure, which the Senate already had passed, provides that shippers will reimburse truckers for any increases in the price of truck fuel since May 30, 1973.

The trucking industry is regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, whose rules normally take thirty days to become effective. The resolution suspended the thirty-day delay and permitted the ICC to issue a regulation, effective immediately, to authorize the "pass through" of diesel fuel cost hikes.

Federal mediators who settled the trucker's strike thus were given the authority to back up their promises.

Supporters of the resolution argued that truckers deserve economic relief.

Some opponents argued that it was unfair to force shippers to absorb the rising cost of fuel. Other opponents argued against suspending the thirty-day rule without first conducting committee hearings.

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Mizell, Preyer, Rose, Ruth, Martin, Broyles and Taylor voted "yea."

SOLAR ENERGY Passed, 253 for and two against, a bill to authorize $50 million through fiscal 1979 for research into harnessing sunlight to heat and cool buildings. The measure now goes to the Senate.

If the bill becomes law, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the National Science Foundation will jointly administer a solar energy program.

Many buildings around the country are heated with solar energy, but they require conventional furnaces to provide heat when the sun does not shine.

Supporters estimated that if five per cent of the nation's homes used solar energy, the nation would cut its heating bills by $2 billion, and free vast supplies of conventional fuels for other uses.

Houses heated with solar energy use a grid of small pipes on their southern roof face. Water passes through the pipes, is heated by the sun, then is pumped to a basement reservoir. Once the reservoir is heated, it becomes a source of heat for the whole house.

Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Mizell, Preyer, Rose, Ruth, Martin, Broyles and Taylor voted "yea." Henderson did not vote.
