Oil Profits $100 Billion

NEW YORK (AP) — The world's 11 major oil-exporting nations are expected to quadruple their 1973 profits to $100 billion this year, according to oil experts surveyed here and overseas by Business International magazine.

Revenues will be "staggering" even if oil prices decline or if some Middle East countries reduce production rather than cut prices, the weekly said.

By 1980, the 11 nations will be earning $150 billion annually, according to the magazine.

The 11 nations are Abu Dhabi, Algeria, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. No expected earnings breakdown by country was available, according to a spokesman for the magazine, which is aimed at managers of international businesses.

Money Back, Women Far Away

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — When Terry E. Fry signed up with a computer dating service in Sacramento, Calif., he expected to meet compatible women from Fresno.

Instead, Fry told Municipal Court Judge James V. Paige Friday, the names he received were of Sacramento women.

In awarding Fry $295 in a small-claims suit, the judge said it would be unreasonable to expect Fry to travel 172 miles for a date.

Mujib-Bhutto Reconciliation

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheik Mujibur Rahman, once under death sentence for treason against Pakistan, was warmly embraced today by his longtime political foe, Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

The two men hugged after Mujib arrived here to attend the Islamic summit conference. He stepped out of the private Boeing 707 jet of Algerian President Houari Boumedienne to a 19-gun salute by Pakistani soldiers.

The same man had led a secessionist movement against Pakistan in 1971 that resulted in the India-Pakistan war and the emergence of Bangladesh in what once was East Pakistan.

Herbicide Tolls In Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scores of Vietnamese villagers may have died as a direct result of American use of chemical herbicides in Indochina, an extensive study by the National Academy of Sciences says.

Montagnard tribesmen in central South Vietnam interviewed by academy researchers reported over and over how small children died, though many adults who became sick recovered.

The report also concludes it may be a century before some rich woodlands destroyed by herbicides and vital to the economy of South Vietnam are restored.

Foot Riots In India

BOMBAY, India (UPI) — Police fired on mobs rampaging across Bombay in food riots late Friday night, killing seven persons and wounding 25 others, officials said Saturday.

Thousands of persons thronged the streets and marched in processions in several parts of the city to protest price rises and shortages of essential goods.

Marchers burned shops and public buses, set fire to police vehicles, roughed up police officials and hurled rocks at police.

Greeks Killed By Bomb

ATHENS (UPI) — Terrorists planted bombs at a Dow Chemical Corp. plant near Athens, causing the death of two explosives experts, the Greek government said Saturday.

A government announcement said "unknown terrorists placed five bombs at the plant of Dow Chemicals in Lavrion," a mining town 40 miles south of Athens.

Four of the devices exploded at 3 a.m. The fifth exploded when Army Lt. Triantafyllos Antoniou, a bomb disposal expert, tried to defuse it.

Over 150 Korean Men Missing

SEOUL (UPI) — Rescue workers recovered five more bodies Saturday off the southern of South Korea where a navy tugboat carrying 316 men capsized in rough seas Friday and sank.

It brought to seven the number of confirmed dead, navy officials said. They said 157 men have been rescued and 152 are still missing.

The officials said rescue operations were continuing and they hoped to raise the sunken 120-ton boat late sometime Sunday.

South Korean navy headquarters said about a third of the tug's passengers were trainees from the coast guard. The rest were navy recruits and crewmen.

What Gas Tempers Wrought

CULVER CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Beet juice was poured over one car, another was battered by a wrench, nd one motorist poked another with a sabre as tempers flared Saturday in fuel-short Southern California.

Council To Safeguard Citizens Privacy

By EUGENE V. RISHER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon announced appointment Saturday of a cabinet-level White House council headed by Vice President Gerald R. Ford to propose ways to safeguard the privacy of citizens against misuse of personal information stored in computerized data banks.

In a 15-minute radio speech from his White House office, the President said the council would have four months to recommend "direct, enforceable measures" through legislation or executive action to make sure that "man remains the master and never becomes the victim of the computer."

Nixon made no reference to the Watergate break-in and bugging, or allegations of White House wiretapping and burglary operations which his administration has defended on national security grounds.

Instead, his address focused primarily on the need to protect the confidentiality of credit, tax, police and other personal information about citizens that are contained in government and private computers.

"Careers have been ruined, marriages have been wrecked and reputations built up over a lifetime have been destroyed by the misuse or abuse of data technology in both private and public hands," Nixon said.

The increasing sophistication of computer technology has "created the possibility for new abuses of the individual American citizen," Nixon said, and "a system that fails to respect its citizens' right to privacy fails to respect the citizens themselves."

He said Ford's council would concentrate on:

—Examining how the federal government collects and protects information on citizens.

—Recommending procedures to permit citizens to inspect and correct information about themselves contained in public or private computers.

—Proposing regulations on use of mailing lists and ways to prevent improper alteration or disclosure of personal information.

Rules Out Early Cuban Relations

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, concluding three-day meeting with hemisphere foreign ministers, Saturday again ruled out any early resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and Cuba.

"I have stated the United States position on many previous occasions and we believe that this issue can only be addressed in a wider context," he told a news conference shortly before the hemisphere parley concluded.

Without elaborating on what a "wider context" might be, Kissinger stated emphatically that "we do not believe this (conference) is the appropriate forum to discuss Cuba."

There is no Cuban delegation at this meeting since Havana was not invited.

Heavy Fighting In Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Heavy fighting erupted Saturday at a village six miles south of Phnom Penh and military sources said rebel forces had moved up reinforcements on several fronts around the embattled capital.

The fighting broke out at Prek Thleng when a government force tried to move south. Government artillery fired in support, but the fighting continued late Saturday, field reports said.

At least five government soldiers were wounded and seven missing in the battle. Rebel casualties were not known, the reports said.

Another government drive moved about a mile and a half west of Prek Roteang, six miles south of the capital, without meeting resistance, field reports said.

North of Phnom Penh, military sources said rebel commanders ordered troops from the east to the west bank of the Tonle Sap river, where the rebels were believed preparing for an attack on Prek Phneou, six miles from the capital.

Field reports said Cambodian Air Force planes were called for air stikes when at least six boats loaded with insurgents moved across the river Friday night. They said some of the boats were hit by the aircraft.

The Way Of City Councils

TIGARD, Ore. (UPI) — The city council has decided it's time to consider replacing the Ash Avenue Bridge and placed the matter on its Monday agenda.

Old Shell Kills 7

Carabinieri (National Police) said the shell dug a crater 68 feet in diameter, shattred windows in the nerby town of Coda and hurled debris against houses withing nearly a third of a mile.

Two Cents Gas Increase

By JAMES A. KIDNEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Heading off a threatened shutdown by angry service station owners caught in a price squeeze, federal energy chief William E. Simon Saturday allowed a two cent per gallon increase in the price of gasoline sold by independent retail dealers, effective March 1.

Simon ended a day-long round of emergency meetings between gas station owners and federal officials by announcing the increase—which a spokesman said would affect 80 to 85 per cent of dealers in the United States.

Every one penny increase amounts to "something under" $1 billion a year for motorists, Simon said.

The Federal Energy Office (FEO), which Simon heads, also expressed "reaffirmation" of support for state laws requiring motorists to purchase a minimum amount of gasoline.

Apparently toning down earlier orders that the service station owners could not give favored treatment to regular customers, the FEO also called upon states to develop "community plans for priority customer treatment at the gasoline pumps."

At least six representatives of gasoline dealers, who appeared at a news conference with Simon, said the announcement would end any threat of shutdowns or "pumpouts" by stations owners whose profits were cut by diminishing allocations of gasoline.

"I'm sure dealers now will push aside any thoughts of pumping out and will continue the job they've been doing," said Lewis Haskell, president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers. "And I congratulate the FEO for the action that it has taken."

The FEO said the two cent price increase "replaces" the one cent a gallon hike which was granted last week to station owners who have been allocated less than 85 per cent of what they got in 1972—meaning they will reap only a one-cent advantage on each gallon.

Hearst To Continue Needy Food Program

By ART MCGINN

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The head of Randolph Hearst's "People in Need" free food program said Saturday it will continue regardless of the response from the Symbionese Liberation Army, which holds Hearst's daughter Patricia.

Twenty-four hours after the Hearst Corp. made a take-it-or-leave-it offer of an additional $4 million in free food to the needy for 20-year-old Patty Hearst's safe return, there still was no answer from the terrorist group which kidnaped her 19 days ago.

A weary A. Ludlow Kramer, secretary of state of Washington State who is running the food program at Hearst's request, apologized Saturday for Friday's mass confusion and violence when the free food distribution centers opened for the first time. He said the program would be better organized by the next scheduled opening Tuesday.

"Program Will Continue"

Asked if the food program would continue no matter what happens to Miss Hearst, Kramer said: "Yes. This is a guarantee of the Hearst family and a guarantee of us that the food program will continue."

The Hearst fmily, Hearst Corp. and the William Randolph Hearst Foundation have now guaranteed a total of $6 million, the largest ransom in U.S. history, for the return of the University of California coed who was taken from her Berkeley apartment Feb. 4.

At least 21 persons were injured in Oakland, and police there arrested 35 persons. One food store near the Oakland center was looted.

Kramer said he expected the program, which he said could feed 100,000 people a month, "month after month after month," eventually to expand statewide in California.

Local Employment Office Places 1,373 In Jobs During 1973

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A bright picture among gloomier local news items is the job placement record achieved by the North Carolina State Employment Security Commission during the calendar year 1973.

According to figures released by James (Jim) Hannan, manager of the office located at 1002 South Evans Street, a total of 1,373 persons were placed in jobs during 1973; a substantial increase over the 972 total for 1972.

"There's no doubt about it," Hannan replied when asked about reasons to which the increase could be attributed, "the big difference has been with employers, their voluntary cooperation in the program. Employer participation is definitely on the upswing. There's many employers coming to us, letting us know what they need."

Hannan added this is primarily true of employers in Greenville, and said he hopes to see Pitt County employers take a more active role in working with the Employment Security Commission in the future.

Figures alone, however, do not tell the full story of the step-up in placing people in jobs. "We're getting a wider spectrum of job possibilities for professional, managerial, and skilled positions as well as a greater variety in unskilled job offers. The positions we filled last year ranged in pay from the $1.80 minimum scale to a job at $14,000 per year."

Assistance comes from several quarters in the continuing effort to improve services which Hannan said are essential to keeping the commission abreast to the needs of the local people.

"As an example," he said, "we have an excellent interplay between the commission and Pitt Technical Institute in programs to open up or discover new fields of gainful employment. Pitt Tech has been a tremendous help to us and we expect to coordinate with them more closely in the future."

Veterans Placement

Another part of the overall increase—an important one, has been the expanded services the office has been able to offer to returning military veterans.

"In 1973," Hannan revealed, "426 veterans were placed on a job. This is a big jump from the 1972 total of 263 veterans placed in jobs."

Hannan said that although he does not at this time have comparative figures, "I feel I am safe in stating that Greenville is well above the national average in hiring veterans."

In still another phase of local employment, that of placing handicapped persons in gainful employment, the record is impressive.

During 1972 the number of handicapped persons placed in jobs with Employment Security Commission assistance was 53. The figure more than doubled in 1973, with 108 placed in some degree of useful employment. "Again, credit is due to employers who are willing to give disadvantaged persons a chance to prove themselves," Hannan added.

Claims Decrease

Corresponding to the increase in job placement is a noticeable decrease in the number of unemployment claims made through the Employment Security Commission.

Figures compiled show that for 1973 the number of unemployment claims weeks declined by 7,304 to reach the lowest level for Pitt County since 1967.

"The term unemployment claim weeks could confuse people," Hannan explained. "A claim week can best be described as the claim of one individual for one week of unemployment insurance."

The only leap in unemployment claims was reflected in the fact that 28 persons filed claims related to Federal employment. "This is up from seven persons filing in that category in 1972," Hannan said.

Any attempt to analyze patterns in the local employment market situation, Hannan said, "is in truth an exercise in unpredictables. All sorts of factors have effects on the employment picture. There is simply no way to chart or pinpoint with any real accuracy what the picture may be six months or a year from now. We have to plan ahead, of course, and work with the fluctuations as they occur. One field may go up, another down. The only efficient way to deal with this is to work with the situation as it develops."

Job Bank System

A new innovation in job placement techniques, the Job Bank System, is praised by Hannan as an effective force in improving the capability of placing job seekers.

"This system was started here in March 1972," Hannan remarked, "and through the job bank we can now serve the other 99 counties of North Carolina and the other 49 states.

"Eventually, the job clearance concept is going to become a nationwide system."

"As it now works, the job bank is an outstanding service. This is especially true for people in small communities. This service gives them full access to job openings in larger towns and to job opportunities they could not possible know about except by personally traveling from place to place. That's time consuming, expensive and with the current gas shortage, just about out of the picture."

A recent example of this service cited by Hannan is a search made by a new Greenville industry, Eaton Industries for a Quality Control Engineer. "We could not find a person available locally," Hannan said, "so we contacted Raleigh and New Bern. They should have an applicant on file who can come to Greenville to be interviewed by Eaton."

No Cost

Reference to this example led Hannan to mention another facet of services provided by the N. C. Employment Security Commission.

"None of this costs the employer or employee a single cent," Hannan said. "Our role in job placement is to get an employer and an employee together. We take information on job openings from employers, test and interview prospective employees, and put employer and employee in touch with each other. From there its strictly a matter of decisions on their part."

Police Raid Yields 19 Marijuana Bricks

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Two persons were charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of distribution following a raid by Greenville police Friday afternoon that netted officers 19 two-pound "bricks" of marijuana, plus a quantity of loose "grass".

Chief Glenn Cannon said Charles Macon Barker III, 24 of Oxford, and Dorothy Jacobs, 22 of Kinston, were taken into custody after officers searched Barker's Ramada Inn motel room about 4:15 p.m.

According to the chief, 18 two-pound "bricks" of marijuana as well as some loose marijuana were found in a duffle bag in the room. He said one "brick" and some other loose marijuana were found in Barker's car.

In addition to the marijuana, officer s found several grams of a white powdery substance and two Placidyl capsules in the car, as well as a .357 Magnum revolver and a set of scales.

Chief Cannon, who said the white powder will be taken to the State Bureau of Investigation laboratory in Raleigh to be identified, noted that the drugs, pistol and scales, as well as Barker's 1974 Lincoln Mark IV Continental car have been confiscated and will be held pending hearing of the case in court.

Bond for Barker was set at $12,500 while bond for Miss Jacobs was placed at $10,000.

Chief Cannon said the street value of the "bricks" would be about $350 each, making the value of the marijuana confiscated yesterday total about $7,000.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Thomas Evans Jr., 18, of 204 King Street, Ayden, and Ernest Lee Roberson, 39, of 101 Main Street, Grifton, reported that they were robbed of $128, beaten with broom handles, and their truck stolen.

The sheriff said that the victims told deputies they were riding in the Roberson truck and had stopped to switch drivers when two men robbed and beat them. Both men were treated and released at Pitt Memorial Hospital for injuries they suffered in the beatings.

Two Killed, 27 Injured In 60 Car Pile-Up

ST. JANVIER, QUE. (UPI) — Two young women were killed and 27 other persons injured Saturday in a 60-car pileup on the snowswept northbound lane of the Laurentian Autoroute.

The massive tangle closed the highway into some of Quebec's most popular ski areas for almost seven hours.

A spokesman for the Autoroute Police said the road was icy and "visibility awful with lots of wind and snow" when the women, driving Volkswagen, became caught between two trailer trucks about 19 miles north of Montreal.

"It seems the Volkswagen hit the first truck, which was carrying gasoline, at the same time it was hit from behind by the other truck loaded with salt for roads," the spokesman said.

The car was crushed like an accordion.

WCU Sets Naked Dash Record

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Students at Western Carolina University claimed a new record as 140 of them "streaked" naked Thursday night across a few hundred feet of campus.

To break the Maryland record of 135 participants, a group of men ran from one wing to another of Leatherwood men's dormitory. A smaller group of women ran from door to door at Helder women's dorm.

"They didn't run together," said Dr. Glenn Stillion, vice chancellor for student development. "They didn't even run at the same time, but the dorms are next to each other.

He said such unclothed running is "just the thing to do now" at some universities, "just as at one time stuffing people into phone booths was the craze."

Plans Center At Gold Mine

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Cultural Resources has unveiled plans for a visitor center museum that will be built at the Reed Gold Mine in Cabarrus County.

The mine, which was the site of the first documented discovery of gold in the United States, currently is under restoration by the state.

The mine's tentative opening date is Oct. 31, 1975, a department spokesman said Friday.

Can Have Sunday On Saturday

CHARLOTTE (A)—Federal Judge James McMillan has resolved the case of Gaither C. Drum, who was dismissed from his job at the Mount Holly Post Office because his religious convictions forbade him to work on Saturdays.

Drum, a member of the World Wide Church of God, will get a job at the Charlotte Post Office, It has more than 1,000 employes, compared with only six in Mount Holly, and will be able to arrange his schedule so he will be off on his Sabbath.

First Woman Candidate

Dr. Keene, a native of Florida, served on the staff at Broughton Hospital following completion of her psychiatry training in 1963.

She served as director of mental health for Fulton County, Ga., until last June, when she returned to North Carolina and began a practice in Charlotte.

Dr. Keene said she was appalled at the high costs of waging a campaign, but decided to seek the nomination anyhow.

She faces a field of four male candidates in the primary.

No Plans To Resign

JACKSONVILLE, N. C. (UPI) — Robert Morgan has served notice to Republicans he does not intend to resign his office while campaigning for the U.S. Senate.

"The voters of North Carolina elected me to serve as the attorney general and when I'm replaced, the votes will replace me," he told a Friday night gathering of Democrats at a heart fund benefit dinner.

Morgan said he had no intention of letting state GOP chairman Tom Bennett turn his office into a "Republican headquarters."

Seek Slayers of Deputy

CAMDEN, S.C. (AP)—Teams of police picked through a thick pine forest Saturday in search of three men wanted in the slaying of a young deputy sheriff.

Sheriff Hector DeBruhl of Kershaw County said murder warrants have been issued against Theodore Byrd, 25, and Roger Kirkpatrick, charging them with Potter's death.

Officers believe a third man is with Byrd and Kirkpatrick, but they do not know his name.

DeBruhl said Byrd has also been charged with the murder of Richey O. Finch, a policeman slain Wednesday in a suburb of Columbia, about 30 miles away.

Lawmen had hoped cold weather and hunger might force out the three, sought in the Thursday shooting death of Deputy Chris Potter, 23.

13.5 million gallons to relieve February shortage

Additional Gasoline Slated For North Carolina

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina will receive an additional gasoline allocation of approximately 13.5 million gallons for the remaining six days of this month. Officials say the extra gasoline should provide some relief to the state's critial end-of-the-month shortage.

A spokesman for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., gave the 13.5 million gallon figure Friday night after the Federal Energy Office ordered increased gasoline supplies totaling 326 million gallons for February for 26 states and the District of Columbia.

The Helms spokesman, reached in Washington, said the FEO ordered petroleum companies to deliver the additional supplies to relieve North Carolina's growing gasoline shortage.

In Raleigh, Gov. Jim Holshouser said the White House would notify petroleum companies today and that the 13.5 million gallons of gasoline should begin arriving in pipelines on Monday.

The governor said the additional allocation will go into the "state set-aside" program. The state Energy Office will decide which areas receive the gasoline and how much they get, he said.

"We're extremely pleased," Holshouser said. "I think it's going to mean that areas of the state which are extremely hard hit will be able to get some degree of relief between now and the first of the month when things will continue to improve."

The 13.5 million gallons would represent an increase of about 9 per cent in the state's allocation for this month, according to figures released Friday in Washington by Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C.

Andrews said that according to an FEO spokesman in Atlanta, oil companies were distributing a total of 144.3 million gallons of gasoline to North Carolina during February. This represented 89 per cent of the state's allocation requirements based on February, 1972 deliveries, he said.

The additional 13.5 million gallons, or 9 per cent, means the state shoud now receive approximately 98 per cent of the amount of gasoline it received in February, 1972.

Meanwhile, a two-man inspection team from the FEO Atlanta office was scheduled to visit North Carolina today to discuss the gasoline situation with state officials, according to Rep. Wilmer Mizell, R-N.C.

The additional gasoline allocation for this month came on the heels of a federal court ruling earlier Friday that FEO allotments to the state of Maryland were discriminatory.

On Thursday, 10 of North Carolina's 11 congressmen joined in urging the FEO to allocate additional gasoline supplies to North Carolina.

In another development Friday, Congressman Andrews said FEO's Atlanta office advised him that ARCO failed to respond to the FEO's 24-hour notice to resume operations in North Carolina, South Carolina and parts of Florida.

ARCO (Atlantic Richfield) joined British Petroleum in phasing out its North Carolina operations in 1972, the year which is being used as the base period for gasoline allocations.

According to Andrews, the FEO on Wednesday ordered ARCO to resume deliveries of petroleum to North Carolina, through either its own outlets or through other distributors.

ARCO was given 24 hours to respond and its failure, said Andrews, may subject it to court action.

British Petroleum was similarly directed and American Petrofina is to begin servicing the old BP accounts in North Carolina next month. That will mean about six million additional gallons in March.

Holshouser Reluctant To Consider Rationing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Despite the critical gasoline shortage, Gov. Jim Holshouser says he does not favor coupon rationing until other systems of controlling sales have been given a chance to work.

However, after one week under North Carolina's new voluntary rationing system, lines at Tar Heel service stations appeared longer and more widespread than ever.

"People's nerves are really shattered," said one Charlotte motorist after waiting in line 2½ hours only to see the station close before he got to the pumps.

"Another week of this and people will be wild."

Lines as long as a mile coiled around filling stations, parking lots and city blocks in a number of North Carolina cities, clogging traffic and fraying nerves.

In Charlotte as many as 50 cars were lined up before dawn Saturday at stations rumored to have gasoline. In High Point, one motorist spent the night at a station to make sure he was first in line Friday.

Meanwhile, federal and state officials conferred in Raleigh Saturday over the 13.78 million gallons which will be sent to relieve North Carolina's shortage.

After the meeting, Charles Feltus of the Federal Energy Office's regional office in Atlanta said the extra fuel would help the state through the end of the month, only four days away.

But Gen. John Tolson III, chairman of the Governor's Energy Crisis Study Commission, said "it's going to take a while for it to get here."

State officials said they expected to receive telegrams from oil companies Monday explaining how the fuel will be delivered. The extra gasoline will be sent to the hardest hit areas, they said, although they did not specify which communities would be affected.

On Saturday the Federal Energy Office admitted that it has no idea what percentage of the February 1972 gasoline supply was actually allocated to North Carolina.

An FEO spokesman said the original figure of 78 percent failed to consider six companies serving the state. No explanation was given for the error.

In some communities, municipal services were being affected by the shortage. Ben Chewing, assistant city manager of Wadesboro, said the town had "cut back tremendously" on most services. He feared a slowdown in mail deliveries since the Post Office relies on service stations for its fuel.

Although the shortage has plagued some areas longer than others, it now appears that most Tar Heel communities are affected. For example, 147 of the 171 stations in Cabarrus County were out of fuel by Friday afternoon, according to the county energy coordinator.

Fowler Martin, executive director of the state Energy Office, confirmed that the shortage was now statewide, but he thought the eastern and western counties were the hardest-hit.

In Raleigh, where fuel supplies were tight last month, Police Chief Robert Goodwin said dealers told him there was enough fuel to last the month.

Goodwin added that policeman would be stationed at many service stations in the city to reduce traffic congestion.

The worsening shortage is apparently bringing the predicted changes in life styles too. "Well here's an example of how bad it is," said N. Carlton Tilley Jr., an attorney from Winston-Salem. "We have season tickets for the Wake Forest basketball games and I'm staying home tonight getting the house fixed up."

Balloonist Believed Near African Coast

EL AAIUN, Spanish Sahara (UPI) — Spanish armed forces helicopters and lightplanes flew search missions Saturday for American adventurer Thomas L. Gatch, who may have landed in West Africa after what would be the world's first successful trans-Atlantic balloon flight.

Military sources said 12 helicopters and light aircraft were patroling a large part of northern Spanish Sahara in an area just below the Moroccan border.

The sources said the search operation had very little to go on other than reports that balloon had passed into southern Morocco on Friday. Weather experts in Washington, D.C., had calculated that Gatch's craft might reach the area about that time, but government officials here had first dismissed the reports from Morocco as "rumors."

It was not known how long the search would continue or whether Moroccan authorities were searching their side of the border. In the nearby Canary Islands, civil and military aviation authorities have reported no radio or visual contact with Gatch's balloon.

In Madrid, Spanish and U.S. Air Force officials said there has been no radio or visual contact with Gatch's craft since Thursday when it was spotted by a Liberian vessel. Gatch left Harrisburg, Pa., Monday with provisions for 10 days.

Local Employment.....

As Greenville continues to develop industrially and to become a center for diversified economic activities, the labor market is becoming increasingly sophisticated.

Using the national standard of nine categories of employment, Hannan said the local job placement structure for 1973 breaks down as follows in percentages:

Structural services (carpentry, masons, etc.)	23
Clerical (stenos, typists, receptionists, etc.)	17
Packaging and material handling	15
Service occupations (hotel maids, personnel svcs, etc.)	14
Sales Occupations (cashiers, sales clerks, etc.)	12
Machine trades (machinists, machine operators, etc.)	8
Mofor and freight occupations (truck drivers, etc.)	5
Professional (teachers, dental assistants, etc.)	3
Benchwork (sewing machine operators, etc.)	3

"We are proud of what has been accomplished in 1973," Hannan concluded. "We feel our usefulness to the community will continue to grow and we hope to be able to meet any changing situation in the labor market to give both those wanting work and those with jobs to offer the best chance to get together."

Reg Murphy Identifies Man Who Kidnapped Him

By WALT SMITH

ATLANTA (UPI)—Atlanta Constitution Editor Reg Murphy Saturday identified a burly building contractor as the "American Revolutionary Army" colonel who kidnaped him and collected a $700,000 ransom.

The contractor, William A. H. Williams, 33, and his 26-year-old wife, Betty, were arrested in the pre-dawn hours Saturday just five hours after Murphy was set free. The ransom money was recovered from their home in suburban Lilburn, about 20 miles northeast of Atlanta.

Williams, a Navy veteran who received a medical discharge, was listed on the police blotter as having "suicidal tendencies." He was detained under a $1-million bond on federal charges of extorting $700,000 from the Constitution.

Mrs. Williams was held under $500,000 bond on charge of having knowledge of a kidnaping and concealing it.

The government did not press federal kidnaping charges because it has not been established that Murphy was transported across state lines. State kidnaping charges are expected to be filed, however.

Murphy, appearing at a news conference at the Constitution Saturday afternoon, was asked if Williams was the man who came to the door last Wednesday night and tricked him into leaving home, claiming his help was needed in arranging the distribution of 300,000 gallons of heating oil to Atlanta's needy.

"There's no doubt about that," Murphy replied.

Murphy said, however, he had not been called upon by authorities to officially identify Williams.

Murphy said he didn't know exactly how the FBI picked up the trail of the Williamses so fast. But he said when he was interviewed by FBI agents following his release at 9 p.m. Friday, "They told me what I told them clicked into place with what they already had."

FBI agent John Maurer said Saturday it was "possible" that Williams and his wife made up the entire American Revolutionary Army.

Asked why he thought he was chosen as the kidnap victim, Murphy replied: "At one point, he (the colonel) said that they had debated various and sundry people." He said the names of Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, State Sen. Leroy Johnson and Don Elliott Heald, WSB-TV vice president, were mentioned.

"You go back and tell the mayor the reason we didn't select him was that he wouldn't fit in the trunk of a car," the kidnaper said, referring to Jackson's stoutness.

Murphy said he immediately tried to make friends with the colonel: "If you are ever in a situation like this, try to make friends with your kidnaper. I spent a lot of time trying to make him feel better."

Murphy said the colonel loved hearing broadcasts about the negotiating. He fancied himself as a man of great daring."

New Library Policy Set

A new lending policy to be effective March 1 has been established for the Greenville Library System. Under the new policy, there is no renewal, no notices sent and no telephone calls made. Instead a bill will be sent when books or materials are a month overdue.

Lending time of various items will be: Books, three weeks; reserve books, magazines, 8 mm films, one week; pictures and posters, six weeks.

Applicable overdue fines remain unchanged at five cents a day for books and recordings; 25 cents a day for reserve books and pictures; and a maximum fine of $2.00 per item. Lost or damaged materials must be paid for in full before other materials can be borrowed.

Tar Heels Must Insist On Coastal Protection

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A national environmental spokesman says that if North Carolina is to have protection for its coastal zones, its people must insist that the state legislature act.

Russell W. Peterson, chairman of the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality, told a Raleigh news conference Friday that even if federal land use regulations are adopted, "the real battle for our landscape is in the state legislatures."

He said elected officials "too often are not leaders, but followers who like to find out where the parade is going, then get out in front."

As governor of Delaware, Peterson was successful in getting the state's legislature to enact a coastal zoning act that has become a model for other states.

A similar measure is currently pending in the North Carolina General Assembly.

Russell also said the worldwide population explosion is the underlying reason for the energy crisis. But, he added, "zero population growth" is only part of the solution to the crisis.

"We must find new sources of energy without destroying the environment and quality of life," he said.

Things Looking Up For Farmer

By most any standards, things are looking up for Pitt County farmers, according to the 1973 income figures.

Ed Yancey, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Service, reported that gross income for agricultural crops for the year was $85,471,279. This was an increase of $27 million over the $58,071,022 of 1972.

We would be the first to agree that all of this increase does not represent profit to the farmer. Costs soared enormously last year for labor, fertilizer and everything else the farm producer used. In addition much of the farmers' profits will have to be earmarked for huge cost increases which can already be foreseen for this year, including the soaring prices of fuels.

Nevertheless, if there had not been a dramatic improvement in the amount of money the farmers received from their products in 1973, their plight would have been sad, indeed.

It was interesting that, while there was a big increase in farm income for the country, the increase was not all that much for tobacco, Pitt's major money crop. The 17,420 acres sold in 1972 brought $32,919,150 and in 1973, 20,114 acres brought $40,147,891. Thus for the acreage sold there was very little increase.

Corn sold in 1973 brought $14,690,000 while in 1972 it brought $5,898,750. Soybeans brought in $4,955,800 compared to $3,136,425 in 1972.

It is also interesting that tobacco, which had brought in more than half of the 1972 farm income, dropped to less than 50 percent of the total income in 1973.

Looking ahead we can only see farm income continuing to jump in 1974. Farmers will be paying more for labor to plant and harvest this year's crop. Fertilizer will be much higher and we all know what has happened to the prices of gasoline and fuel oil. Gas is needed to run farm equipment and fuel oil is used for curing tobacco.

From the standpoint of Pitt County's economy we can be thankful that gross farm income took a jump in 1973 and, even though it will affect retail food prices, we should expect another jump this year. With farming costs soaring the farmer will have to run just to keep up.

Prisoners Head Back To Roads

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Inmates across the state appear headed back to work on the roads—but without guards and prison stripes.

The General Assembly had called off use of road gangs in the state, pointing to bad public images and bad prisoner reactions.

Citizens, local , and state oficials across the state noted the absence mostly in terms of unpatched surfaces, potholes unfixed, litter piling up on the shoulder, weeds not cut.

And David Jones, secretary of the State Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control, noted a lot of prisoners languishing in their cells with nothing to do.

A new plan came from all that. Jones and Bruce Lentz, secretary of the Department of Transportation, have announced prisoners will go back on the roads, but under work-release terms. They can be paid—either in money or accumulated good time off their sentences. Many will also have a shot at a permanent job when their sentences are finished.

Meanwhile, Sen. Lamar Gudger, D-Buncombe, sponsored a bill to let prisoners go to work not only on the roads, but in other state agencies under the same terms, and to allow them to work for hire by private individuals or groups engaged in environmental or conservation projects.

Right Turn On Red

A little noted bill is working its way through the General Assembly—to permit motrists to make a right turn at a red light after coming to a stop and checking traffic.

The new law would apply statewide, but has written into it a provision for local communities to exempt themselves if they wish, but they will have to post signs at each traffic signal saying no right turns on red are permitted.

Involuntary Commitments

A rewrite of involuntary commitment laws for mental patients which have been the subject of complaints for the past six months by law and court officials is now finished.

The senate has approved it, and the house is now working on it.

Three main changes are contained in the rewrite:

Court hearings and rehearings to guarantee patients' rights may be held in the county where the hospital is located, even in the hospitals, rather than the patient (some 25 daily) being transported back to the county where he was committed.

Initial papers for commitment may be signed by others than law enforcement officers. Present law requires a sheriff's signature, and officers complain they simply aren't qualified to judge.

Attorneys may be named for patients, and represent the patient in closed court hearings to eliminate the confusion of bringing a mentally ill person into court.

Basic safeguards written into the law last year, however, remain; including the series of examinations by medical and court officials to make certain the patient needs commitment, and the definition of the person's condition which must be either unable to care for himself, or imminently dangerous to himself or others.

Complicated Procedure

An item with a time deadline on it faced the state senate at a recent session, needed action then immediate delivery to the house for concurrence.

Sen. Philip P. Godwin, D-Gates, had been named Parliamentarian for the day—the man to monitor everything and make sure all the rules are followed, and to help iron out any kinks.

He was asked what complicated rules governed transmittal of the just-passed measure to the house, who should carry it, in what form, etc., etc.

Rising to the occassion without counsulting his rule book, Godwin said, pointing to the chairman: "just tell him to get it on over there, and let him do it."

Mondale Poses Demo 'Option'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

LOS ANGELES—A week-long expedition to California by Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota as a potential presidential candidate, unexciting and largely unnoticed, was most remarkable in his decision not to seek out the 1972 McGovernites now frantic over the rise of Sen. Henry M. Jackson.

Such a quest would not have won much anyway. Fatcats who bankrolled Sen. George McGovern in 1972 have recently committed themselves privately to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for 1976. But even if they were available, Mondale would not have been camping on their Beverly Hills doorsteps. At this early date he is consciously seeking a base broader than just McGovernite ideologues.

That is what makes Mondale an important option for the Democratic party despite his deficiencies in money, organization and charisma. With his Senate voting record more liberal than either Kennedy's or McGovern's, Mondale is acceptable to the left if Kennedy does not run. Yet, he is seeking to avoid the ideological sectarianism that destroyed McGovern.

Mondale's visit here coincided with rising concern over Jackson's progress by well-heeled activists in the old California peace movement who can never forgive Jackson for the Vietnam war. Most influential and most generous of these is retired computer tycoon Max Palevsky, who contributed heavily to McGovern and is prepared to do the same for Kennedy.

But during seven days in California, Mondale did not make a pilgrimage to Palevsky's hilltop house in Bel Air. Nor did he visit other McGovernite millionaires. The one Beverly Hills contributor Mondale sought out, Lawrence Weinberg, is considered a Jackson man.

Moreover, Mondale made no contact with any segment of the old McGovern apparatus. He concentrated on seeing labor leaders and other Democrats who backed his Minnesota colleague, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, against McGovern in the 1972 California primary.

What Mondale wants to avoid above all is any identification as the heir of McGovernism. At a reception in Palo Alto, Mondale winced when an admiring liberal compared his present lowly position to McGovern's in 1970. A few minutes later at the same reception, Mondale (onced considered Mr. Busing in the Senate) was less than overjoyed when a Stanford law professor commended his unvarying support of school intergration.

In his speeches here, Mondale avoided party-splitting issues such as school busing and concentrated on party-unifying economic issues and attacks on President Nixon's refusal to cooperate with the special Watergate prosecutor.

One such speech, before a Democratic state central committee luncheon, helped diminish Mondale's unwanted reputation for total boredom achieved during past visits to California. One Democratic activist, claiming she had not managed to stay awake through previous Mondale speeches, contended Mondale is too much the Midwestern hayseed for California Democratic tastes. "A guy who wears Thom McAn shoes can never make it here," she told us.

But she stayed awake this time, explaining after the speech: "I've changed my mind about him a little." Working hard to spice up his oratory, Mondale has added a routine of self-deprecating humor (revealing the rule that Minnesota must always have a presidential candidate) and an eloquent demand that Mr. Nixon be subject to the law ("He is not a king!" Mondale concludes).

That night, however, Mondale lapsed into mind-numbing banalities at a fund-raising dinner for Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin attended by major corporate and bipartisan figures. "If that young fellow talked as good as he looks, he'd be something," one corporation executive grumbled. "He doesn't seem to be presidential timber to me."

Indeed, Mondale's week here stirred little interest among Democratic politicians, preoccupied with the hot race for governor. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, another presidential hopeful arriving here just before Mondale, seemed to win considerably more praise. In particular, one prominent Democratic leader was raving about Bentsen as a rare Senator with genuine managerial talents.

But while Bentsen cannot remotely hope for much California support, Fritz Mondale—Thom McAn shoes or not—certainly can. Mondale boasts two unspectacular assets: acceptance by all shades of Democrats and an understanding that the key to California is in the working men's homes of the San Fernando Valley and west Los Angeles rather than the mansions of Beverly Hills. Modest though that may seem, it cannot be said of any other Democrat seeking the presidency, either in 1976 or in 1976.

Strength For Today

A THREE-WAY VOTE

A wise old country preacher was once asked to explain the doctrine of election. Pondering the question a moment, he replied, "It's something like this. The Lord's always casting His vote for you, and the devil's always casting his against you. It depends on the way you vote which way the ektion goes."

A theologian would scarcely accept this as an acceptable explanation of the doctrine of election, but it is nevertheless a valid remark for other reasons. The way we vote in that three-cornered casting of ballots is the decisive element in every moral situation. We can be sure what the devil and the Lord are going to do with reference to us. The doubtful voter is ourself.

And it is well to remember that in such an election it is disastrous to split the ticket. Here, of all times, we should vote straight. The Lord's candidates and the devil's never work will together in a coalition government. We should cast a straight vote for righteousness and stick by it.

A Car Pool's Risks

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The energy crisis is driving an increasing number of Americans into car pools. If you're one of them, now might be a good time to check your insurance policy.

Both riders and drivers of car pools can face tricky legal situations. In some cases the car pool organizer's liability or injury insurance might even be invalid in the event of an accident.

The laws vary from state to state and the practices differ among companies. The only sure way to know where you stand is to find out from your insurance company. If you're a car pool rider make sure the driver has done the same thing, and you know where he stands.

—If the car pool is operated for a profit (taking in more than it costs for gasoline, oil, maintenance and depreciation) the insurance may not be any good.

—If as a rider you want to reimburse the driver for more than his out-of-pocket costs, the Insurance Information Institute suggests a gift on the side might solve the problem.

—If you've abandoned your own car completely to join a car pool you may be eligible for the lower insurance rates offered to drivers of cars used for "pleasure only."

Sunday Morning Notes

Life can be interesting in the gas lines if you make it that way.

One man driving a pickup truck pulled it up as the line inched forward last Monday afternoon. Then he jumped out of the truck and into a car behind.

By that time another vehicle had pulled in vetween, so he pulled the car on up behind that one. As he walked back to his truck he explained sheepishly, "Lady asked me to move her car up while she went to the store."

That's chivalry.

And a pretty young lady pulled up in a station wagon—one of those that might get eight miles to the gallon.

"It's a hassle," was her comment about the long line. But, she explained the car belonged to her teacher. It had been driven on a field trip and the young lady got the job of refilling the tank.

She made it just before the line was cut off.

Gas lines might become the new center of social life for Greenville, as well as every other city. There's plenty of time between moving vehicles up for meeting your neighbors. You can even roam up and down the line if you like.

Once it gets light a good book comes in handy. Some students study and some bring along knitting or sewing.

Haven't seen any poker games yet.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Someone failed to move in behind the second line for an instant and a man who couldn't get his vehicle out of line jumped out to frantically motion others to fill the void.

It seems that if the gas lines are the new social gathering place, the worst breach of ettiquette is to break in ahead of waiting vehicles. In fact, it could be dangerous.

And, of course, the rumors fly—about fights, drawn guns and sharp words.

There are, though, known cases where long lines of motorists waited for hours at stations which never opened.

And we have to believe those stories about teen agers who pull up to closed pumps, sit and wait until lines form behind them and then drive off.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It is my understanding that Boise Cascades will construct a paper mill in Grimesland. The mill will be located on the Grimes farm which is presently the property of Senator Vernon White. An option has been taken on the land by a nominee who I understand is a Greenville attorney. Mr. James Horne of the Pitt County Development Commission is aware of it as is Mr. Milan Muzinich of the Regional Office of Commerce and Industry and Mr. Bruce Strickland Jr. of the state office. You may inquire of the gentlemen who will either deny it or give assurances that there will be no pollution from the paper mill but you will not receive facts.

Land use legislation is currently before the legislature and in difficulty. The state division of Commerce and Industry already has a land use board, but its membership is restricted to those who will profit from it. Senator White undoubtedly has a right to sell his land, but he does not have a right to sell the Tar River, its water, the ground water and air of the county. This should be a matter for the citizens, but the state shows more concern for private industry than for the citizens.

In some respects the industry may help the county by taking advantage of our wage scale, but a price will have to be paid—more schools, more services, wells deepened, and a sharing of electricity and gasoline. The state proudly advertises that the county has no zoning, and can be had quite inexpensively. The Tar is to be dredged at taxpayers expense for the company although I am told it is for flood control which just happens to coincide with the plans of the company. I believe the Tar is tidal and Greenville draws its drinking water from it.

It seems to me that the citizens should be aware of the plans and the effects it will have on the area. Perhaps you will bring this to the attention of the citizens.

February 24, 1934

A community sing will be held next Sunday at the Campus Building at East Carolina Teachers College, with a special presentation of paintings by Joe Johnson of Benson.

The community sing is sponsored by the Daily Reflector, the Junior Woman's Club, the Woman's Club, the Greenville Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, and ECTC.

The program will begin at 3:30 p.m.

Preliminary steps were taken yesterday to set up a highway safety committee in the county. Business and professional men from the area were present at a Woman's Club session yesterday to discuss the matter.

Committees are being set up throughout the state by the Carolina Motor Club to cut down on the highway death rate.

Steps to prevent the State Highway and Public Works Commission and the Kinston aldermen from moving the monument of Richard Caswell from Queen Street to the Courthouse lawn had been planned today. The street is the city's busiest thoroughfare and all state roads are routed through it. The commission says that the monument to Caswell, a revolutionary hero and post-revolutionary governor, is a menace to traffic.

The move is being fought by "patriotic citizens" and plan to apply for injunction today.

Turning To The Free Market

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Harried by currency instabilities, investors the world over have been bidding up the price of cultural objects to what once would have been considered dismaying levels.

Call these purchasers Philistines because their interest might be in financial security rather than the beauty of their purchases and they are likely to reply that they are also wise men.

And it is difficult to disagree with the proposition that an object that combines infinite beauty and enough demand to command a market price of $4,923 a square inch, rising all the time, isn't a worthy investment.

That was the price paid last year for a small Rembrandt etching, "The Agony in the Garden." It measures 4⅜ inches by 3¼ inches, and was purchased for $70,000.

But lesser objects, such as stamps, fine clocks and watches, porcelain, rare books and manuscripts, artistic weather vanes, paperweights, gold and silver, diamonds, coins, tapestries and snuffboxes also are commanding steadily rising prices.

Franz Pick, who long has kept records of such things in "this 33rd year of worldwide inflation," explains the phenomenon in these words:

"The debacles in the stock markets and the tragedies of bond holders and owners of savings bank accounts along with the oil problems and the unbalanced political conditions throughout the year brought into focus once more the objects of arts and culture as vehicles for the protection of money."

Pick, a monetary consultant who unsuccessfully seeks to damp a smoldering fury against the "currency debasers" and the government officials who permit "the ravages of monetary cancer," is among those who considers the Philistines wise.

The market in cultural equities, he observes, is largely free from securities analysts and government meddling. He comments in his latest "World Currency Report" that:

"No calculations of earning capacity or of dividends for such items as a 34-centuries-old sphinx exist, and no security analyst can predict the trend of 18th century Cremona violins ..."

The market therefore "is relatively free of major mismanagement and not yet burdened by confiscatory government controls." Need it be explained that Pick feels that free, unstructured markets are a bit more wholesome than administered ones?

Observations From Editorial Columns

No Shield Law

The American Bar Association made the right decision in refusing to endorse a "shield law" for newsmen.

Proponents of a resolution supporting special legislation for newsmen argued persuasively in favor of such a law, reasoning that the public's right to know is being jeopardized by subpoenas and contempt citations that interfere withthe flow of news.

But, as one judge pointed out, such legislation for would "Cover anyone who chose to be classified" as a reporter. The danger here is far greater than the risk of a handicap to legitimate newsmen who, like everyone else, are protected by the First Amendment.

If a shield law is passed, any ax-grinder who can afford a down payment on a typewriter and a copying machine can claim to be a reporter, and in the name of a free press he can do more damage to journalism than the most despotic judge.

Newsmen labor in a field that is at once a craft, an art form, a business and a public service. It is not, however, a profession. Internally imposed ethical standards require that a newsman protect his sources. But those standards don't embrace the legally recognized privilege of physician-patient, lawyer-client, priest-penitent relationships.

The newsman has no more rights than any other citizen. At the same time he has no less protection. The First Amendment protects both him and his trade. A shield law would protect him from the risks he now runs. But it would place his livelihood in extreme jeopardy.—Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune

Goal: 'Lifelong' Learning

Much of the current discussion about education deals with its expansion. Mostly ignored is the question of what education is for. If the question is answered at all, it is related to the need for more scientists and engineers and physicians.

Education must have a broader purpose. No education is completed in college. The man who does not systematically and painfully continue to learn all his life never becomes educated. Training can only prepare people to do what must be done today. Education prepares them for tomorrow.

Acollege defeats its purpose if it fails to make of its students independent scholars who will remain scholars throughout their lives.

The concept of education as a lifelong process will require inspired advocates, able to arouse the enthusiasm and obtain the cooperation of the student. But the goal is worth striving for. It will enrich the lives of those who pursue it and raise the capacity of the American people for accomplishment beyond their dreams.—Monroe (La.) Morning World.

Bayh Bye

The Congressional Record, being a daily journal of the proceedings and debates of the U.S. Congress, is filled with oddities and quiddities.

Among the most mysterious must rank a singular notation for Tuesday, January 29. Upon that date, under the heading "Attendance of a Senator," is entered this tidbit of history: "Hon. Birch Bayh, a Senator from the State of Indiana, attended the session of the Senate today."

Ah-hah! Hail and farewell, Hon. Birch Bayh. Come back again, some time, will you?-Columbia (S.C.) Record

Uncertain Hands

It would be nice if the feds didn't so often undo with one hand what they're trying to do with the other. Washington would like people to use buses and other mass transit instead of automobiles for local travel. Meantime, the Federal Energy Office says if gasoling rationing comes, it will allot more fuel to motorists in areas where mass transit is lacking—a disincentive for communities to promote bus travel. And where do most of the federal taxes on that fuel to? To build roads for automobiles, of course.—Ronaoke (Va.) Times.

Flip Side

If you're one of those fretting over the famous wheat deal (steal, if you prefer) with the Soviet Union, you may be comforted somewhat by the reaction of Vladimir Alkimov, the USSR's vice minister of trade.

Said he: "We bought at the market price. Maybe it was a little cheap, but remember we sold you Alaska for $7 million, which was very cheap, and we're not complaining."

Deaf children should be in the "North Carolina School for the Deaf"—in Morganton, Greensboro, and Wilson.

The deaf schools have a fine educational program and deaf children are very lucky to be able to stay in deaf schools rather than the "hearing" public schools.

Both Senator Lamor Gudger and Representative Clyde Auman have no experience teaching deaf children in the deaf schools. How can they sponsor the bill?

Ten Years Later, Barry Goldwater Is Still Right

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The text of a speech delivered in Washington on February 6 has just come to hand. It was a honey of a speech, and it prompts me to wonder aloud if its author, Sen. Barry Goldwater, could be talked into running for president once more.

A prudent columnist knows better than to ask the senator himself about this, for the senator would only say "no," or maybe "hell, no." And there's no point in drowning a nice warm idea in cold water. The proposition ought not to be brushed aside.

When the seantor ran as the Republican nominee in 1964, every conceivable political factor counted against him. He himself was little-known; he came from a small state with no political clout; from the very night of his acceptance speech, partly though his own fault, he was unable to shake an image of right-wing extremism. John Kennedy had been killed in November, 1963; Lyndon Johnson still commanded enormous support; the country was not about to vote for a third president in barely a year. Goldwater polled a respectable 27 million votes, but he got swamped in the electoral college.

The situation is vastly different now. Goldwater is "Mr. Republican." He has grown in the country's respect and affection. He is untouched by Watergate. He was born in 1909, which would make him 68 at inaugural time in 1977. It would be pretty old for an incoming president—but we hear much talk of Nelson Rockefeller (1908), Ronald Reagan (1911), and Henry Jackson (1912). It would be interesting to see Dr. Gallup test Goldwater's name in an iffiness poll: If the election were being held tomorrow, how would Goldwater do against Ted Kennedy? He might do remarkably well.

Goldwater began by criticizing the typical performance of an ill-prepared businessman before a congressional committee. He warned the industrialsists that they must expect tough questions prepared by "Brilliant young staff members who mistrust or totally disbelieve the attributes of the enterprise system."

Turning to broader themes, Goldwater took note (by implication) of recent ligislative trends affecting railroads, health care, communications, and petroleum: "I believe that competitive enterprise is now face to face with one of the greatest threats in this country's 200-year history."

Determined forces are working toward nationalization, Goldwater said, though they call it something else. "You can butter up the term, sweeten it, pour syrup on it, do anything you want with it—but it is nothing but socialism, and that is the system that has never done anything for any people."

Goldwater urged the industrial leaders to promote the profit system in their own communities, to compete in the intellectual marketplace of ideas, and to employ all the legitimate means at their disposal in support of candidates who believe in private enterprise. He wound up with a ringing defense of econimic freedom, which he termed "the essential freedom." What good is the right to life, Goldwater asked, "if a man does not control the means of life?"

It was a real bell-ringer of a speech, clear and clean. It recalled Goldwater's fine little book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," written 15 years ago, and it echoed the best of his campaign speeches of 1964. The Republican slogan in that election was, "You know in your heart that he's right." Ten years later, Barry Goldwater is still right, and a great many concerned Americans still know it in their hearts.

Public Is Beginning To Catch On To Congress; They Are Accountable

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

One of the more encouraging signs in these troublesome times is that the public is beginning to catch on to Congress.

Historically, the public has never held Congress, the House and Senate, accountable for whatever problems happen to beset the times. The Presidents have been the whipping boys.

The explanation, reasonable or not, is not hard to find. The President is easy to identify. As Chief Executive, he is conspicuous. He is responsible for carrying out the laws of the land, although he does not make them. He is also the head of a political faction. He's easy to zero-in on.

This is not greatly different from business. When the corporation falls upon hard times, the president usually is the one who takes it on the chin. Boards of directors, supposedly far-seeing and responsible for policy, seldom are held to account.

So, it is refreshing to see, at this point in time, that the public is not overlooking Congress. A Harris poll shows only 21 per cent of the public approving of the way Congress does its job. This comes at a time when Gallup finds Nixon approval up two percentage points to 28 per cent. At least, Congress keeps Nixon from being at the bottom of the ratings.

The significant thing, though, is that the general public has a much better idea of what goes on in government than the Washington crowd supposes. Watergate has provided Congress with no hiding place, it would seem. A lot of feet will be held to the fire in this year's Congressional elections.

The political hope of the sitting Democrats, of course, is that they can focus discontent on Nixon and thus hang on to their seats in the House and Senate. But if the Harris poll means anything, it is going to be hard to duck responsibility for many of today's ills.

The electorate no longer can be dismissed as an economic illiterate. Deficit spending, the Congressional answer for all ills, now is clearly linked to inflation. Its damage to the ecology, under the heading of "progress," is also understood. And the same can be said for the energy crisis. Congress has been on notice for years that the nation was heading for trouble. It has held hearing after hearing on national resources, the trend of the economy and the inflation danger, but is has failed to act.

For years, the term "low profile" has had a special meaning in the halls of Congress. For members, whose prime concern is not the national interest but keeping their seats, it has meant staying clear of controversy which might involve political risk. They count on getting money and favors for the folks back home to get reelected. And by keeping low, they make a harder target for the opposition.

For the past decade, there has been little direction to Congress. Its leadership has been weak, in both House and Senate. No one has come up to take the place of Speaker Rayburn. Not only did he keep the House on the track, but he helped run the Seante. He guided Lyndon Johnson, later to be President, when he gained fame as—Senate leader—the big wheeler-dealer.

The way Congress has handled, or failed to handle the pending energy bill tells a lot. The measure has been delayed since last fall by politics—how to make it appear Congress is doing something for the consumer by limiting oil prices and profits. What it's apt to end up doing is make petroleum products ever more difficult to get.

Disclosure of labor's role in helping finance election of Democrats to the House and Senate does nothing to improve the party's attempt to impeach President Nixon. All but one of the Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee, now considering impeachment, took money from the AFL-CIO, now on record for impeachment. This raises a question: Will the same union members accept more money this election year? This union combine has no liking for pig-in-the-poke deals.

Some Washington commentators are beginning to pay more attention to what some now are calling an irrestponsivle Congress. As a result of what they see, more copy leans against impeachment—only a dragging out of the issue.

To the Editor:

I would like to take the opportunity offered by your Public Forum to address a consumer problem which I witnessed today, but could be seen in any store or involve any product.

I overheard a woman say that she had recently bought a bird in a local store that died soon after. I told her that I was a member of the Humane Society, and that we would help her if she would give me her name and address. She refused to do so and bought another bird instead, from a different store. Hopefully, the new one will be healthy and the problem will be solved—for her.

But what of her fellow consumers? Does she not have a responsibility toward them? Until each of us accepts the responsibility for reporting the seller of faulty goods or services to the appropriate authorities we will all be at the mercy of the ethic of certain disreputable businessmen, namely, "Let the Buyer Beware." And we will deserve to be! Benjamin Franklin's admonition that "We must all hang together, else we shall all hang separately" applies to consumerism as well as to politics. The privileges of democracy are conditional upon each individual's willingness to fight for them.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Whalen

Futile Liquor-By-Drink Gesture From Charlotte

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH—An award for tomfoolery ought to be given to the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce, which voted to ask the Mecklenburg delegation to resurrect liquor-by-the drink in this session of the Legislature.

"I understand why the Chamber thinks this is important for Charlotte," said State Sen. Eddie Knox of Mecklenburg, "but their timing is ridiculous,"

Another member of the Mecklenburg delegation asked in amazement: "Where was the Chamber when the vote was counted last November?"

Not even the Rev. Coy Privette, head of the Christian Action League, got excited about the Chamber's pitch.

"I don't believe," Privette said calmly, "that it would have much chance of passing, do you?"

The Mecklenburg delegation obviously thought not, because they said they would not discuss liquor-by-the-drink in this session. They didn't want to get hooted out of the building.

They can protest until Halloween, but Bob Morgan has no intentions of resigning as attorney general. If he's nominated for the Senate, look for him ro resign as attorney general about next Oct. 1.

The threat of annual legislative session was one major reason Sen. Eddie Knox of Charlotte announced that he would not seek reelection. Knox, in his second term, has emerged as one of the Senate's most influential members.

Sen. W. D. Mills of Swansboro said: "You hate to lose good ones like Knox. I could support him in the East for a lot of things."

Knox definitely has higher political ambitions. He's looking closely at 1976, when he could be in the race for Governor or lieutenant governor. But as for now, he plans to spend more time with his family and his lucrative law practice.

Republican Congressman Jim Martin of the 9th District has serious competition for the November election. Charlotte City Councilman Milton Short is running as a Democrat and came out swinging.

"Jim Martin says a vote for him is two votes for President Nixon," Short said. "I'm not attuned to this administration's way of doing things."

And State Sen. Jack Rhyne is giving serious consideration to running against Republican Congressman Jim Broyhill in the 10th District. Rhyne is a political maverick, but is considered powerful at the polling place.

If Elections Held Today, Democrats Would Get A Record Vote

By GEORGE GALLUP

(Copyright 1974, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Republication in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.)

PRINCETON, N.J.—If the national congressional elections were being held at this time instead of in November, the GOP would be in deep trouble. The latest nationwide survey shows Republican congressional strength remaining at the lowest point in 38 years of Gallup Poll measurements, with the GOP unable to close the gap on the Democrats since October.

The Democrats currently hold a 2-to-1 lead, 58 to 29 per cent with 13 per cent undecided among registered voters. These results almost exactly match those recorded in October surveys, when 58 per cent of registered voters nationwide said they would rather see the Democratic party win in their congressional district compared to 30 per cent who chose the GOP and 12 per cent undecided.

As a matter of fact, not all registered voters actually do vote. Typically, in congressional elections of non-presidential election years such as this one, less than 50 per cent of those of voting age vote and only 60 per cent of those registered do so. Since Gallup surveys have shown that as turnout declines the Republican share of the vote increases, one could expect that in an off-year election, held today, the Democratic lead among voters would prove to be slightly smaller than it is among those registered to vote.

Despite this qualification, the current standings indicate that, if the elections were being held at this time, the Republican loss of House seats would go far beyond the normal loss an administration suffers in off-year elections. If the indicated seat losses are reflected in this year's congressional elections, President Nixon could be deprived of the veto power which he successfully exercised on several occasions during 1973.

Percentages of the popular vote cannot be translated directly into seats, but the distribution of the popular vote in the present survey indicates a House division even exceeding that of the Lyndon Johnson sweep in 1964 when Democrats carried 295 seats to the GOP's 140.

It must be pointed out, however, that the party occupying the White House normally loses seats in an off-year election, and this loss, during the last two decades, has averaged 29 seats. Only once in this century, in 1934, has the administration in office gained seats in the off-year races for the House.

What Is The Impact Of Watergate?

The big question is, of course: what is the impact of Watergate on Republican fortunes at the congressional level?

Some measure is furnished by a comparison of current congressional standings with those recorded in surveys taken last April and May, prior to the widely viewed Watergate hearings. The Democratic lead at that time was smaller, 55 to 35 per cent, with 10 per cent undecided.

It should be borne in mind that the congressional standings reported today apply to the national scene as a whole and cannot be directly applied to specific regions or districts where local issues, the personality of the candidates and many other factors are involved.

Many political observers, however, feel that Watergate was a major factor in the loss last week of Vice President Ford's former congressional seat to Democrat Richard F. VanderVeen. The victor was the first Democrat since 1910 to be elected to Congress from Michigan's 5th District, and district that for 25 years gave Gerald R. Ford 60 per cent or more of the vote until he vacated the House seat last year to become Vice President.

At the same time, political analysts maintain that Watergate was a "nonissue" in the election two weeks earlier in Pennsylvania's 12th District, where Democratic State Rep. John P. Murtha won a still-disputed victory over Harry M. Fox, a former assistant to John P. Saylor, the Republican who represented the district for 24 years before his death in October. Both Murtha and Fox avoided the subject of Watergate in their campaign.

Watergate Named Among Top Problems Facing Nation

Watergate and corruption in government are among the top problems facing the nation in the minds of voters in all regions of the country. The energy crisis is currently No. 1, named by 46 per cent. Next is inflation, cited by 25 per cent, followed by dissatisfaction with government (15 per cent) and Watergate (7 per cent).

The Democratic party is currently credited with being better able to handle what voters regard as the most important problems facing the nation. In fact, the Democratic party holds the widest lead it has held since October 1964, with 39 per cent crediting the Democrats as better able to deal with the top problems, compared to only 15 per cent who say the Republican party. Many, however, are uncommitted (46 per cent).

Thus the GOP appears to be in the unfortunate position at the present time of having no key national issue on which to hang their fortunes.

In sharp contrast, the two parties at the beginning of the last congressional election year, 1970, were neck and neck in terms of the party American voters thought could better deal with the nation's most pressing problems. Topping the public's list of problems at the time were the Vietnam war, inflation, race relations and crime.

Further insight into the role Watergate is playing in the congressional races is provided by an analysis of the congressional choices of registered voters on the basis of their views on the President's involvement in Watergate and on the basis of their views on impeachment and resignation.

The findings indicate that only about 7 per cent of registered voters who prefer the Democratic party believe Nixon played no role whatsoever in Watergate. A majority of this group also favor removal of Nixon from office by impeachment or favor his resigning.

Those who favor the GOP in their districts, however, hold sharply contrasting views and oppose impeachment or resignation.

Of particular interest are the views of registered voters who are currently undecided in their preferences and who will therefore be a prime target group for candidates of both parties in the months ahead.

A majority (two out of three) of the undecided group currently believe Nixon to be involved in Watergate. At the same time, however, the weight of opinion of this group is in opposition to Nixon's leaving office by either impeachment or resignation.

The 'Walking Tall' Sheriff Is Still Paying His Medical Bills

By DOUG STONE
Associated Press Writer

ADAMSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Buford Pusser vividly recalls what happened to him on a quiet McNairy County road at dawn on Aug. 12, 1967, although he thought at the time he would not live to tell about it.

Then a young sheriff building a reputation for busting bootleggers, Pusser had just received an anonymous telephone call telling him to "come out and I'd find something big." He thought he was on the trail of whisky runners as he sped along New Hope Road, his wife beside him in his squad car.

He knows now that he was baited into a trap.

As he rounded a curve, a car pulled out. Pusser saw the driver. Then he saw two other men firing weapons, apparently automatics, spitting out the almost 30 shells later found by investigators.

Both Pusser and his wife were hit. Pauline Pusser, 29, who was his deputy, was mortally wounded.

"At the moment it happened, there wasn't any doubt in my mind that I was going to die," Pusser said. "My wife is lying there with half her head shot off. My chin is hanging down, this side completely off, bone gone, teeth all gone.

"I knew that it was just a matter of time that I was going to die."

But he lived, painfully, to become a modern folk hero whose story is told in the motion picture "Walking Tall," a low-budget sleeper turned box-office hit starring Joe Don Baker as Pusser.

"Of course, I really wasn't prepared to die," Pusser said in an interview as he sat in his brick, ranch-style home in Adamsville. "The funny thing about it, at this time even, I didn't have any malice. I just don't know what it was. It was a strange feeling. I just felt sick inside. I just felt it's hopeless — it's over."

His assailants were never identified, but Pusser says without elaboration that two of them are dead, another is serving life.

"I know there were some people out walking the streets who were indirectly involved in it, but you can't prove it," he said.

Pusser, now 35, has been out of office since 1970. He has spent $30,000 for medical care and the reconstruction of his face since the ambush. His jaw is made of mesh wire.

An imposing figure at 6 feet 5, 245 pounds, Pusser is portrayed in the motion picture as a fearless crusader cleaning up a crime-ridden county.

By his count, he was shot seven times and stabbed five other times during his six years in office. He says he killed two persons in gun battles. A car ran him down. There were numerous tavern fights.

"He was the type of sheriff that if he went after you, he always brought you in," said County Judge Howard Moore, chief administrator of this rolling county of small towns and communities about 100 miles east of Memphis.

But Moore says of the movie: "It's like any other movie. Some of it's true and some of it's fiction."

Pusser has detractors who don't think the movie is an accurate portrayal of the county, claiming that it's an exaggeration that has harmed McNairy's image.

One of the critics is the current sheriff, Clifford Coleman, who served prior to Pusser and resumed the office when Pusser became ineligible in 1970 under a law limiting sheriffs to six consecutive years.

"He was a man wanting publicity and he got it," Coleman said.

He said the county had been set back years because "the things he expressed in the movie just didn't happen."

"I've never had to seriously hurt anybody yet," Coleman said. "And, I think I've enforced the law as well as Pusser ever did. He never raided any more whisky stills, he never raided more joints than we always do. More beer joints moved in while he was sheriff than at any other time."

Clyde Treece, the county General Sessions Court judge since 1960, has processed cases of both Pusser and Coleman and says he notices little difference in the caseload.

"I don't think there's ever been much organized crime in the county," he said.

Because of his fame Pusser travels extensively, earning $1,000 per appearance on a busy schedule. But he said he also tries to spend at least two days a week making charity appearances, speaking to youth organizations throughout the country.

He stays on the road almost constantly while his mother, Helen, 65, runs the household with his three stepchildren and also works in a clothing factory.

Pusser says that almost all his income comes from what he has made off the movie and the personal appearances. It has gone toward paying off his medical bills — he faces more surgery — and caring for his stepchildren, he said. Neither the county nor the state has paid a cent of his bills, he said.

A sequel to "Walking Tall" is in the works.

"It will pick up where 'Walking Tall' left off and will show what happened to people who were involved in the ambush," Pusser said. "It will show some down-to-earth stuff about working with youths, about moonshine stills and some of the humorous side of it, too."

UNDERWATER PHOTOGRAPHY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Underwater photography got its start in 1892 when Frenchman Louis Boutan photographed a Mediterranean spider crab. Unlike today's hand-held cameras, Boutan's camera was in a copper and iron box weighing several hundred pounds, buoyed by an empty wine cask, the National Geographic says.

Start Lines At Closed Stations

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — The gasoline shortage has spawned a new diversion among the teen-agers of this southern Oregon town.

Jackson County sheriff's deputies say two or three youngsters drive their cars to the pumps of a closed station and start a short line. Very quickly, other cars line up behind them.

When the line reaches two or three blocks, the teen-agers drive off, leaving a string of cars waiting for gasoline at pumps that aren't open.

PLAN YOUR HOME

SWISS CHALET INSPIRED, THIS DESIGN MIGHT BE USED AS A VACATION HOME NOW AND COMPLETED FOR A PERMANENT HOME LATER.

By Gerry Bishop

With the explosive rise in the cost of homes, it is more important than ever to choose the home that suits your needs and expresses your personality - - and will continue to do so for years to come.

Such a home is the "Chateau," a Swiss chalet - inspired plan. This rich, rustic chalet can be partially finished and used as a vacation home, then completed later for a permanent home. A new design accented with diamond light windows and an ornamental porch railing, the chalet will be easy on the finances, since only the center floor need be completed to make it warm and comfortable.

Encircled by a large wooden sun deck, the center floor of the "Chateau" features a sizable living room brightened by a fireplace and housing a dining area. The U-shaped, kitchen is compact and functional, and a full bath is placed to serve both the bedroom and living area. The bedroom on this level is large and enjoys generous closet space, and the convenient laundry room with linen closet is a further advantage.

Two more bedrooms, one of which enjoys a balcony, are planned for the third floor. A compartmented bath and ample closet space is also outlined. The envisioned lower level can be finished to provide even more sleeping space, should it be needed. It includes a den or bedroom, a utility room, and a large family room with fireplace. Two dressing rooms with showers, and the large outdoor boatport suggest the adaptability of this home to a vacation setting, yet the design would be an excellent choice as a permanent home that the entire family would enjoy.

Over-all dimensions: 38 ft. by 28 ft.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Painting the windows inside a room is probably the most unpopular part of interior painting. It takes time and careful attention with a brush to prevent the kind of sloppy result that is displeasing to the eye as well as a harbinger of stuck sashes.

A sash brush should be used. Its angled bristles make it easier to handle along narrow strips and in confined areas. The brush should be dipped only about one-third its length, with the excess rubbed off on the inside of the can. Press down lightly on the handle so that the bristles spread out in fan-like fashion, permitting just the edges of them to touch the glass as you move the brush along.

It takes a little practice to get the knack of painting so as not to smear paint on the glass. But even if you are good at it, have a rag handy so that, if you should make a mistake, the paint on the glass can be wiped off immediately.

If you are not adept at this, you can use a thin piece of cardboard to slide along the glass with the movement of the brush to prevent paint from getting on the pane. Those throwaway pieces of cardboard that come inside new shirts and those that have been professionally laundered are excellent for this purpose. Some persons use masking tape, but this can be an annoyance because, if it isn't done perfectly, paint imperfections will be seen when the tape is removed. Should a little paint get on the glass despite all your efforts to prevent it, and should you fail to wipe it off instantly, wait until it is completely dry, then scrape it off with a single-edge razor blade.

With the standard double-hung windows, it is especially important that the parts of the windows be painted in a certain sequence. Before touching a brush to a window, unscrew any hardware attached to it. This may be a slight annoyance, but trying to paint close to the metal without getting paint on it can be even more vexsome.

The first step is to raise the lower sash and lower the upper sash. Paint the inside edge of the upper meeting rail, then the top of that rail, then a couple of inches up the muntins, the wooden strips dividing the glass, assuming there are muntins. Next, lower the bottom sash and raise the upper sash, the opposite of what you did previously, only this time leave a fraction of an inch leeway so that each sash has a little clearance. Paint all exposed surfaces. The window sill, frame and surrounding trim are done last.

After the paint has dried overnight, carefully move the sashes up and down a couple of times. This will prevent future sticking.

(For either of Andy Lang's helpful booklets, "Paint Your House Inside and Out" OR "Wood Finishing in the Home," send 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Be sure to specify which booklet you want.)

No Cure For Hawaii's Housing?

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD

HONOLULU (UPI) — Hawaii's housing shortage, like the common cold, seems to have no cure.

Neither government housing agencies nor private industry has solved the problem which grows worse every year. The population is soaring and the need for housing is enormous, but Hawaii has the lowest home ownership ratio of any state.

The newly arrived resident from the United States mainland who lived in spacious $50,000 home goes into shock when he finds that the same amount in the Aloha State will buy a tiny dwelling on a small piece of land in rural Oahu.

Mayor Frank Fasi put the problem in perspective by saying, "When developers on Oahu call $48,000 units 'low-cost housing,' we are in real trouble."

Situation Gloomy

"Crisis" is the word many lawmakers and residents use in describing the shortage and astronomical costs.

William Sewell, the past president of the Home Builders Association of Hawaii and a contractor, told just how gloomy the situation is and predicted it won't be getting any better in the near future.

"Hawaii has the lowest home ownership ratio of any state," he said. "Sixty-two per cent of the residents rent and only 38 per cent own condominiums or houses," Sewell said. "On the mainland it's the other way around.

"The lowest priced home on the market is $48,000. The average resale price in 1973 was $85,000. For that the buyer got an older home with four bedrooms, two bathrooms, outdated fixtures on a 7,000 square-foot lot."

Land costs are sky high and keep climbing.

A lot that cost $30,000 three years ago goes for $60,000 today. Much of the land is leasehold and the homeowner pays a fee knowing that eventually he will have to renegotiate when the lease expires and the cost will go up.

Sewell explained that because there is so little flat land left, the cost of constructing homes is heightened by building on hilly, rugged terrain. Dynamite is needed, Sewell said, and the cost is increased by sewage considerations and modifications warding off Hawaii's flash floods, such as unusually large storm drains and overhangings.

Although single walled construction was the pattern for many years, builders are now turning toward double walled construction in a California ranch style. Homes are usually wood and sometimes stucco on a concrete foundation.

Hawaii's warm climate makes heating units and cellars unnecessary and louvered windows take advantge of the trade winds and eliminate the need for air-conditioning.

Skyline Changes

Families desperate for housing are turning to condominiums, and Hawaii's once unblemished skyline is now a panorama of highrises. A small two-bedroom condominium can be bought in the $40,000 range while below the studios are available.

The shortage for low and middle-income groups runs from 30,000 to 60,000 units. Although Hawaii has what is considered one of the best state housing acts in the country, the crunch doesn't ease up.

The $100 million omnibus housing act passed by the 1970 legislature and administered by the Hawaii Housing Authority aims at giving the state agency money and muscle. The agency can offer interim loans to house builders, go into joint ventures with them, arrange for short or long term financing and even act as a developer of housing project on its own.

But the HHA's efforts haven't even started to fill the need. The chief reasons are the cost of land, the lack of staff to process applications and the agency's inability to get more private companies to go into joint ventures with it.

Groups Formed

Construction firms make more money with less trouble by building private housing. The HHA has held a construction firm's profit down to an average 7 or 7½ per cent, and a company often can make 10 to 20 per cent on $60,000 and $70,000 homes.

Frustrated citizens have formed several groups which offer solutions, but there's little action.

The People's Housing Coalition, a lobby for low-cost housing, suggests that any new development be compelled to allocate a percentage of homes for low and moderate income families and that the tax system should be geared to deter short term speculation.

The federal government has been generous to Hawaii in housing allocations. In Hawaii, the FHA loan mortgage limitation for single family dwellings is $49,500. Although that is 50 per cent higher than the FHA loan mortgage limitation on the mainland, it does not help much.

Atlas Details The Head-Count

NEW YORK (AP) — Population figures in the Rand McNally Road Atlas for 1974 are even more detailed than those in U.S. census statistics. Head counts for the more than 20,000 places listed in the Road Atlas index are drawn from research on more than 120,000 locations, including those with a population of only two or three people.

OVER OR UNDER-SPENDING

Some people spend more than they can afford when buying a house. Equally painful is the mistake of buying the cheapest possible house and then suffering through its shortcomings.

I have no intention of stating how much anyone can afford for a house. This is a very personal decision. There are guidelines of monthly averages that lending institutions use for housing expenses. But - like the "height-weight" charts printed on scales - these are only averages.

Don't hold back if you feel you can exceed the guidelines. When you are willing and sufficiently disciplined to economize on other expenses, you can get a better house than the average calls for. A good house may seem costly, but the rewards are well worth it. Investing in a house that's a little more expensive gives you an excellent inflation hedge, while your whole family enjoys a better place to live. And often, the resale opportunity is brighter.

how INSULATION can save you MONEY

You save three ways with good insulation

You use less heat in winter. • You can operate your air conditioner more economically in the summer. • You can heat or cool with smaller, less expensive equipment, thus reducing your installation costs.

If your ceiling is uninsulated, costs for 6 inches of ceiling insulation will be paid back quickly in heating savings, and soon return a substantial annual dividend. Since the same insulation will also greatly reduce heat loss in summer, the combined savings for air conditioning and heating may return your investment in a year or two.

If your ceiling now has 3 or 4 inches of insulation, it is to your advantage to increase the thickness to the equivalent of 6 inches of good thermal insulation, since the additional investment may be returned in 3 or 4 years by the combined summer-winter savings.

In many central heating systems warmed air is circulated to rooms through ducts which pass through the attic or through other cool spaces. These ducts should be insulated with an installed thickness of at least 1-1/2 inches of good fibrous insulation or its thermal equivalent.

The walls of your house should be insulated with the equivalent of 3 or 4 inches of good thermal insulation.

Before you build or remodel, specify good insulation. In your present home, locate and close all cracks and install weather-stripping around doors and windows.

Winterville Bond Vote Tuesday

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE—Winterville citizens will have an opportunity to go to the polls Tuesday to cast their vote either for or against the issuance of $220,000 in bonds to be used to expand the town's water services.

If approved, the money will be used for the construction of a 500,000 gallon water storage tank and 1,000 gallon per-minute deep well.

The election, conducted by the Pitt County Board of Elections, will be held in the Winterville Community Building from 6:30 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Mayor Walter Dail said the half-million gallon water storage tank and deep well "an urgent need."

"I hope the people will vote for the new water facilities," Dail said. "They are a must for the town."

The present town population is about 1,600 people. Based on the North Carolina State Board of Health recommendations of 200 gallons of water per person for above ground storage, it would require 320,000 gallons for the population alone.

"The present above ground storage here is a 75,000 gallon elevated storage tank," the mayor explained. "This fall far short of the population needs not to mention the industrial needs."

The town presently has two 250-gallon per minute wells. Only one of the wells is in use while the other one is now on standby for fire protection because the quality of water is not desirable for domestic use.

The two wells, plus a 100-gallon well that is not in use now, are located on the same lot and are within 50 feet of each other. In case of failure of the well now in use, the town would have to be served by the standby well.

"The need for more water facilities here was emphasized by the total loss of one of the town's most important industries due to fire in November. The fire loss could have been held to a minimum if adjacent water supply and storage had been available," Dail said.

"Also, the town has had several recent opportunities to locate industries here. However, each time inadequate water supply and storage has prevented their much needed location in the Winterville area."

Dail said that Eastern Lumber Company is anxious to rebuild its business in Winterville but that assurance of adequate water supply and storage facilities will be available is needed before the building will begin.

The project has received endorsement from the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, Pitt Technical Institute, the Winterville Ruritan Club and the Kiwanis Club of Winterville.

Ex-Burglars Provide Tips

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Homeowners in Oakland County are getting some free advice on avoiding burglaries from some residents of the county jail.

In a small pamphlet entitled "Tips from Your Friendly Ex-Burglar," homeowners receive such hints as "Leave your dog at home," "Close window shades," and even, "Call your own phone number."

The pamphlet is a project of several trusties in a rehabilitation program at the jail of this county which includes northeastern Detroit suburbs. It was written in the language of "the street" and produced by the inmates.

The ex-burglars note that burglars case homes by knocking on doors and windows, peering through unshaded windows to see if anything worth taking is inside and checking for alarms.

"You could have stopped me from wanting to get into your house but you were were very careless," the pamphlet says. "I'm scared of dogs, but you took yours with you."

The writers also suggest neighbors watch out for each others' homes and for homeowners to be leery of salesmen who want to enter the home.

The ex-burglars also say a call home while away might result in catching burglars at work.

"Sometimes a neighbor sees someone in the house and thinks you are home," the pamphlet says. "I have to answer the phone and reassure them that it's all right for me to be there."

ELLA GETS AWARDED, THEN STUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Ella Fitzgerald, who has sung during three seasons of "Great Performers at Lincoln Center," was awarded the Lincoln Center Medallion after her January concert there, by Managing Director John Mazzola. He mentioned the start of her career in 1935 at the Apollo Theater.

Miss Fitzgerald replied, "Without the Apollo and the fans throughout the years, this couldn't have happened. And the musicians who stood by me and understood me."

Then she sang an encore with the Tommy Flanagan Quartet plus Eddie Lockjaw Davis on sax and Roy Eldridge on trumpet, singing scat to echo their instruments in turn. As she caught her sleeve on her hand mike, she sang "I got stuck" into the scatted lyrics of "C Jam Blues."

The Lincoln Center Medallion previously has been awarded only to composer Dmitri Shostakovich, dancer Fred Astaire, guitarist Andres Segovia and benefactor Avery Risher.

Solution For Birds, Get Rid Of Humans

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — "If we can get rid of humans, the birds would be in fine shape."

So says biologist Ralph Schreiber of Florida's pelican population, an endangered species for which this state has become a last haven.

Schreiber, a University of South Florida graduate student, said Friday that large flocks of the web-footed birds have disappeared from California in the last decade, many killed off by DDT contamination.

Louisiana, which calls itself the Pelican State, has so few left it has imported some from Florida, said Schreiber, who has studied the birds for five years.

In Florida, pelicans have maintained a stable population of at least 30,000, the biologist said.

However, the state's projected growth from 7.8 million to 10 million persons by 1980 could drastically reduce that number through pollution and habitat destruction, Schreiber warned.

"Pelicans are entirely fish-eating, and any water pollution which affects fish will affect them," he explained. "We also have a very severe problem of human disturbance in nesting colonies and roosting areas."

He said nesting colonies already show signficant decreases in egg-hatchings and fledglings.

Robin Lee Graham's Story In A Young Readers Version

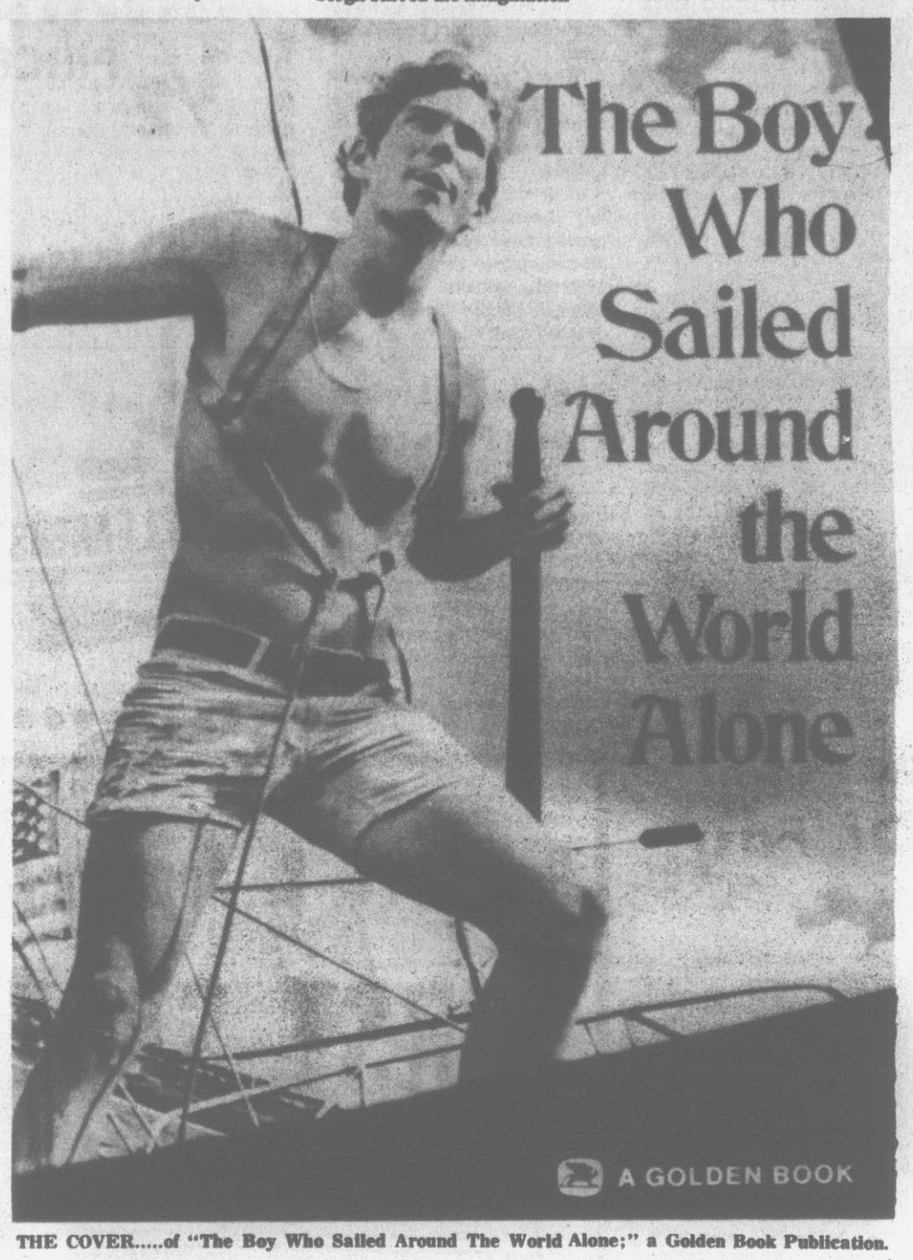
The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone. By Robin Lee Graham, with Derek L. T. Gill. 1973, New York, Golden Press (western Publishing Co), 140 pps, illustrated, $5.95

The word "boy" in the title of this truly handsome book is significant. Now a young man of 25, on July 27, 1965, Robin Lee Graham was a sixteen year old boy when he sailed from the San Pedro, Calif. Harbor headed west, to discover the world.

Nearly five years later, on April 30, 1970, Robin, grown into manhood at 21 and an expectant father, docked his second boat "Dove" in the same harbor from which he had departed.

The Boy Who Sailed Around the World Alone is a young readers version of the account of his epic solo voyage, told originally in Dove, published by Harper and Row in 1972. (The National Geographic Magazine also carried articles on Robin's voyage in October 1968 and again in October 1970).

Robin's 30,600 mile sail around the world alone is a resounding affirmation that the golden days of human adventure are not beyond the reach of today's youth. Just as Magellan, nearly five centuries ago and early in this century Charles Lindbergh stirred the imagination of people, Robin Lee Graham in the latter part of this century has touched a secret place in the romantic recesses of our hearts.



THE COVER.....of "The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone;" a Golden Book Publication.

In Robin's case, there's a special freshness attached to his achievement. His was a dream fulfilled at an age when most boys can only dream about adventure—a search not only for excitement of new places and faces, nor alone the manly feat of pitting human endurance against unpredictable oceans.

As The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone clearly illustrates, Robin discovered many things about the world in which he lives—the laughter and friendship of people everywhere; the ultimate loneliness of being so long alone with only sky and sea around him; and a deep respect for the beauty of nature.

At 18, in the Fiji Islands of the South Pacific, Robin met a young California girl, like himself a wanderer, and learned what it was to lose his heart to a pretty lass. (A few months later, Robin and Patti Ratterree were married in South Africa).

Since this retelling of a classic voyage is designed for younger readers, Robin and his collaborator Derek Gill have condensed the original text appearing in Dove and have added additional new text of special interest to young readers. This incorporates information related to sailing—the use of various instruments, skills needed by a sailor, such as learning to read nature's warnings in clouds, winds and currents.

The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone also goes back to the early years of Robin's boyhood to give fascinating glimpses into Robin's earlier life, his first sailing efforts and the comradeship he shared with his parents and an older brother in South Pacific voyages predating his own famous voyage.

Color photographs are used extensively in this version of Robin's adventure. These are excellent, both from the viewpoint of helping tell the tale and making the book a visual joy. Here are people of romantic islands and their festivals, flowers, animals, fish, harbors, and photographs of Robin, of Patti, and the kittens that were his companions in the long days at sea.

Every boy or girl who has ever drawn a secret map or dreamed about voyages or treasures on an island will linger over the numerous charts and sketches reproduced from Robin's log book.

The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone is a rare treasure of a book for young people. More exciting than any fictional tale, it combines adventure, travel, romance and touching insights of a boy maturing into manhood. And only a youth who lived and experienced this memorable voyage could have written this book.

I agree wholeheartedly with Derek Gill, when he told this reviewer shortly before the book's publication. "I have a feeling that Robin's story will in time become a classic, a 20th century Tom Sawyer or Huck Finn." People of all ages who found pleasure in reading Dove and young readers who will be thrilled by The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone, will soon have an opportunity to see Robin's voyage come to life in a movie production currently being filmed.

It is inevitable. The Boy Who Sailed Around The World Alone, like Treasure Island, Typee and the Mark Twain classics will take its place on the bookshelf of beloved favorites. It rightly deserves its place in such company.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By JUDITH M. THOMPSON

In his first book, 20 Years in the Secret Service: My Life with Five Presidents, Rufus Youngblood has written an exciting, candid story of the five Presidents he served. Mr. Youngblood's most publicized action—that of shielding Lyndon B. Johnson with his own body when President Kennedy was assassinated—is only one incident in a career filled with hazards, threats and risks. In his book he tells of this career, taking the reader behind the scenes of government life to the dangers, constant tension, and often hilarious moments in the day-to-day workings of the most sensitive of government agencies—including, of course, the foibles and idiosynerasies of the Chief Executives themselves. The reader will find here the unusual, often humorous, sometimes exasperating sides of the Trumans, the Eisenhowers, the Kennedys, the Johnsons and the Nixons.

Never before have so many women told the truth about themselves or had their revelations recorded with such compassion and fidelity as in Joan Howard's new book, A Different Woman. Ms. Howard, a former Life staff writer spent the last two years crisscrossing the United States talking to many different women "to try and find out more about the texture of their lives, whom and what they loved, what was on their minds, and in what ways they were like and unlike each other and the rest of us." Hundreds of women from varied backgrounds told the truth about themselves and Ms. Howard's conclusion is that women won't ever be the same. Few were found, of any age or station, who had not been affected in some degree by the new wave of feminism. Even those who loathe it, and many were found, could hardly deny it and neither could men.

For those readers who were spellbound by Chariots of the Gods, Erich von Daniken has a dramatic new book, The Gold of the Gods. For this book the author traveled 76,000 miles and three continents developing new evidence to bolster his theory of a prehistoric earthly "era of the gods." By exploring the inexplicable artifacts of bygone ages, some of which take us back in time to the Great Flood, he ultimately suggests an intergalactic "battle of the gods" whose leaders retreated to, and settled, our earth.

Hailed as "the greatest archaeological sensation since the discovery of Troy," The Gold of the Gods presents a provocative theory that will fascinate readers of all ages.

Tour participants will receive nine hours' credit in art history. The tour begins June 4 in New York with a flight to Frankfurt and ends July 3 in London with a return flight to New York.

The itinerary includes museums, noted buildings of several architectural styles, and birthplaces and residences of famous artists in Frankfurt, Wurzburg, Rothenburg, Munich, Vienna, Salzburg, Ulm, Heidelberg, Worms, Mainz, Cologne, Aachen, Antwerp, Ghent, Bruges, Haarlem, Amsterdam, Delft, the Hague and London.

Change In Annual Shows

Mint Museum News

A change in the annual Piedmont Crafts Exhibition which has been sponsored for 13 years by the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte has been announced.

Following this years' 11th Annual Piedmont Crafts Exhibition for artists living in 11 southeastern states, the crafts exhibition will become a biennial show and will be shown in alternate years with the biennial exhibition of piedmont painting and sculpture.

Other news from the Mint reveals that the museum has acquired an American primitive art, an oil painting on canvas. Entitled "Little Girl" the painting is by an unknown primitive artist. The painting is a gift from Dr. and Mrs. Tibor Ham of Richmond, Virginia. This is the fourth American painting given by the Hams to the Mint. Earlier they gave two American primitive paintings and a genre landscape by C.J. Dickman. Another acquisition is a collection of three drawings and four lithographs by Chaim Gross, a gift from the artist.

In the museum's Gallery 501, an exhibition of paintings and drawings by Joe Cox is opening today and will be showing through early March. Cox is a professor at State University in Raleigh and has shown extensively throughout the state.

Two exhibits remain on view in the Dwelle Gallery—sculpture and ceramics by Tom Mason and the North Carolina photographic exhibition—"North Carolina—Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow."

Rousing Wake for Literary Landmark

By RONALD G. BURNS

NEW YORK (UPI) — It took three hours, a dozen "last calls" and 20 quarts of booze to do it.

But Costello' , a newspaper saloon and literary landmark where James Thurber drew his cartoons on the wall and Ernest Hemingway proved his head was tougher than a shillelagh, has finally been forced off 3rd Avenue.

A Rousing Wake

A victim of New York's enveloping wall of glass nd steel skyscrapers, the dingy, smoky tavern that hosted the artists, the hacks and the hangers-on of the writing world since Prohibition days got a rousing wake into the early hours Saturday morning.

But if the customers grew misty-eyed at their loss as they finally straggled into the street, young Tim Costello Jr., son of the man who started the tavern as a speakeasy in 1923, showed only the steely-eyed glint of a man still very much in business:

Costello's, he said, will be back in business Tuesday just around the corner.

"Come and see us then," smiled Costello as he moved among the crowds. "I hope it'll be just the same.

The huge Thurber cartoons depicting man's constant warfare with woman were gone—to be remounted in the new spot. But over the bar still hung the broken shillelagh tht Hemingway, after a drinking partner claimed it was unbreakable, neatly cracked it in two over his own head.

"Had Some Characters"

The dark oaked bar had been polished by elbows belonging to F. Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald, John O'Hara, A.J. Leibling and Brendan Behan—whose free-wheeling drinking style got him thrown out more than once.

"Mainly, we've wanted people to enjoy themselves," Costello said above the roar. "And we've had some characters, let me tell you."

In the past few years Costello's has attracted English and Australian journalists. And it was a bit of jolt early Saturday to hear their voices so clearly dominating the song and chatter of an Irish bar in New York.

At midnight Costello ordered the bar officially "closed," but that just meant the drinks were free those final hours, and the crowd caught a second wind (or maybe a third) and plunged ahead with round upon round of extra drinks.

About one o'clock, jovial boos and hisses greeted the first of the "last calls."

Finally, around 3 a.m., the crowd began thinning out, and then near 4 a.m the last of them left and there was nothing but the bare, Thurberless walls, the glass, beer nd napkin-littered floor, and the unkillable memories of 50 years of drinking—literary style.

Tereza To Be Filmed

By JANET HUSEBY
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The latest best-seller of Brazilian novelist Jorge Amado, considered this South American country's greatest living writer, will soon be introduced to a wider public through a film now in the planning.

Veteran U.S. director Michael Sarne and Peruvian producer Guillermo Ortega met with Amado recently and hope to start filming "Tereza Batista Cansada de Guerra"—"Tereza Batista, Tired of War"—sometime this spring.

Amado's preceding novel, "Dona Flor and her Two Husbands," is currently being worked into a Broadway musical by composer-director Mitch Leigh of "Man of La Mancha" fame. Before that Amado scored an international literary success with "Gabriela, Clove and Cinnamon."

A best-seller in Brazil even before it was published last December, "Tereza" is the story of a young girl who grows up in the drought-ridden backlands and ends up a prostitute in the coastal city of Salvador. Tereza makes her name not only for her beauty but also her cowing of the city government by leading her colleagues on a strike — shortly before the arrival of a fleet of visiting U.S. warships.

Amado, 61, has perhaps more than any other Brazilian writer captured the harsh contrasts that make up Brazil's impoverished Northeast — the arid backlands that are periodically devastated by flood and the lush coastal plane with its cocoa and sugar and feudal landlords.

"Tereza" is from a mellower, more recent phase of Amado's writings. But his social criticism has not softened — only grown subtler. "Tereza" is humorous, a story full of twists and "jeitinho," the tricky Brazilian knack, in which the small man comes through on top.

Any way you look at it...

False Teeth Could Be Thing Of Past

NEW YORK (UPI) — False teeth may be about to go the way of the five cent beer.

Probably not within the immediate future, but some day artificial roots routinely may be implanted. That would eliminate the need for false teeth.

When it will happen for everyone without teeth is a matter of conjecture at this time. But undoubtedly, the development will be a reality for all who want it some day.

Tht prognostication is from Dr. Carlos M. Giro who spoke at the annual meeting of the Greater New York Dental Society, the world's largest dental educational seminar.

Giro told his fellow dentists that the endodontic implant — or stabilizer —has been employed successfully for more than 20 years in South America, and slightly less in Europe.

"It has been used with ever increasing satisfaction by a small group of dentists in the United States for the past 11 years," he said.

Some of the disciples of oral implantology remain controversial. But Giro described procedures for the endodontic implant, rigid inert non-electrolytic rod. He considers the implant methodology simple and practical.

Here's how it is done: a rod is inserted through the root canal of a periodontally weakened tooth into the adjacent bone. The tooth is wobbly in a way due to the breaking down of support provided by failing gums.

The purpose of the rod is to fixate or stabilize the tooth by artificially increasing the length of its root.

Giro paid tribute to pioneers of this discipline of implantation, saying he believed the dental profession at large should be aware of its possibilities.

"Indeed," he said, "the prescription for removal of teeth can and should be changed to that of the insertion of endodontic stabilizers in many of the following situations: advanced cases of root resorbtion; accidental horizontal fracture of roots; cases where certain orthodox treatments would result in inadequate bone support for affected teeth.

"There are many pertinent oral, systemic nd emotional conditions that would preclude the safe use of the procedure," he said.

However, in cases where it has been practical it has proved most rewarding to the discriminating dentist and his grateful patients who were relieved of the threat of the dreaded "full dentures."

Makes A Living From Nature

LAFAYETTE, Tenn. (UPI) — Willard Walton makes his living "gathering things of old Mother Nature."

Since 1960, Walton has been gathering sassafras roots, chipping and bagging them and selling the finished product as Red Boiling Brand Sassafras.

Even The Lone Ranger 'Illegal'

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A Portland attorney was arrested on a downtown street recently as he left a party wearing a face mask bearing the likeness of President Nixon.

The attorney, Phillip Lowthian, had worn the mask to a party in a local hotel and carried the prank into the street. But police arrested him on a city ordinance prohibiting masks that dates back to 1941.

Said a city official: "Not even the Lone Ranger or Santa Claus is legal here."

Pirates' Free Throws Defeat Citadel

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Pirates closed out the regular season with a 78-66 victory over The Citadel last night. It was one of the most physical games played in Minges Coliseum this year, as a total of six players, five of them Bulldogs fouled out. A sixth member of The Citadel team finished the game with four fouls.

East Carolina barrelled out to an 18-point lead in the first half, but The Citadel scrapped back in the second to pull within six points on two occasions. The Bucs, who had found the going easy in the first period, ran into turnover problems in the second, as The Citadel caused 15 of them.

As a result of the turnovers and fouls, the Bucs made just seven of 15 shots in the second half of the game. And it was at the foul line that they eventually won it.

The Citadel outhit the Bucs from the floor, 56-48, but East Carolina hit on 30 of 44 shots from the line and that won the game for them. The Citadel made only 10 of 19 charity shots.

Thirty-four fouls were called against the Bulldogs, while 26 were called on the Bucs.

East Carolina's shooting wasn't that bad, a respectable 47.1 per cent for the game. The Citadel hit 43.8 per cent.

The Bucs easily dominated the boards, pulling down 49 to 37 for the Bulldogs.

The win finished the Bucs at 8-6 in the league and 13-11 overall for the year. The Bulldogs closed out the year with a 4-9 conference record.

The Bucs travel to Richmond, Va., on Thursday to open play in the Southern Conference tournament, which actually starts on Wednesday.

East Carolina, with a fourth place finish in the league, will meet William & Mary in the opening round. The Citadel, the sixth place finisher will meet Davidson, the third place team, also on Thursday. In Wednesday's games, regular season winner Furman meets Appalachian, while second place Richmond takes on VMI.

East Carolina broke on top first, but couldn't pull away from the Bulldogs, who hung on and pushed ahead at 6-5 on a jumper by Rick Barger. The Pirates took the lead again at 7-6, but The Citadel moved back ahead as Ricky Day hit.

East Carolina resumed the lead on a jumper by Donnie Owens, 9-8, and never trailed again, although The Citadel came back and tied it twice more.

The last time was at 14-14, and after that, the Pirates seemed to grab control and steadily pull away. Roger Atkinson put the Bucs back up, 16-14 with 11:58 to go. He followed with another basket and Tom Marsh hit two free throws for a 20-14 margin.

After a swap of baskets, Reggie Lee canned a shot to up it to eight, 24-16.

The Bulldogs cut it back to five after that but Gregg Ashorn and Kenny Edmonds hit baskets and Marsh got a free throw to run it out to 10. Marsh's second shot missed, but Larry Hunt tapped it in to make it 31-19. Marsh got another free throw, then hit a baseline jumper for a 15-point spread before the Bulldogs finally hit again.

The Bucs finally stretched their lead to 18, 39-21 on a fast break basket by Hunt, but The Citadel rallied to cut it back to 14 on jumpers by Don Server and Larry Bell. East Carolina pulled away again, however, and took a 45-27 halftime lead on four final points by Lee.

In the second half, The Citadel got scrappier, and it cut into the Pirate lead. Slowly the Bulldogs chopped away at the lead, coming closer and closer as the Pirates failed to hit or turned the ball over.

The lead dropped below 10 when Rodney McKeever hit a three-point play with 10:01 to cut the lead to 54-45. East Carolina went back out by 11 on a baseline jumper by Ashorn with 9:24 left in the game.

During that 9:50 drought, however, the Bucs were connecting at the foul line, making 19 of 29 chances during the second half.

Edmonds pushed the lead back to 13 at 59-46 before the 'Dogs came back again. With McKeever leading the way, they cut away at the Pirate lead, finally getting it to 65-59 with 5:36 to go on another three-pointer by McKeever. Braman hit one free throw, then Marsh added another to up the lead to eight again before McKeever got a pair at the line.

Marsh hit two more free throws with 1:45 left to up the lead to eight, and Owens added four in a row around a drive by McKeever to up the lead to 10, 73-63. Ashorn hit another foul shot and Marsh got two more for a 13-point edge, and Braman's basket made it 15 points. McKeever got one last three point play with one second left ot cut the margin back to the final 12-point edge.

Marsh was the only Pirate to hit in double figures, getting 19, 11 of them at the line. White led the rebounding with 10.

Bucs Gain 3rd Mat Title

BOONE, N.C. (AP)—Defending champion East Carolina took seven individual titles Saturday and romped to its third straight Southern Conference wrestling championship.

The Pirates amassed 171 points for a 49½-point margin over host Appalachian State, surprising runnerup, whose Chris Jacobsen received the most outstanding wrestler award.

Appalachian had strength in the middle weight classes to win second place over William & Mary 121½ to 111½.

Trailing the leaders were VMI, 52½; The Citadel, 38½; Richmond, 23½; Davidson, 10½; and Furman 3½.

Jacobsen took top honors by registering three falls in three matches, winning the 150-pound title. He pinned former two-time conference champ Bill Hogan of W & M in 7:22 of the title match.

East Carolina Takes Third In Loop Track

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP)—Mac Collins won the 880-yard and mile runs for the only double and Reggie Clark broke the record in the 1,000-yard run Saturday as they led William and Mary to its ninth consecutive Southern Conference indoor track and field championship.

The Indians won only five of the 14 finals held Saturday but emerged with 90 points to edge out Furman's Paladins, who had 74, and East Carolina's Pirates, who finished third with 52.

Collins was voted the meet's outstanding performer after winning the 880 in 1:54.8 and the mile in 4:11.6. He also ran a leg on William and Mary's two-mile relay team, which won its event Friday night in record time.

The only record broken Saturday was by Clark, who lowered his own mark in the 1,000 from 2:12.5 to 2:11.8. He and Collins in the mile were the only repeat winners from last year.

Freshman Alphonso Irving of William and Mary tied the record of 6 feet, 8 inches set in the high jump last year by another Indian performer, Fred Toepke.

The other William and Mary victory was turned in by Bill Louv, who won the two-mile run in a nonrecord 8:55.5. Louv had anchored the Indians' record-setting distance medley relay team Friday night.

Two other defending champions, one of whom had broken a meet record in qualifying and another who had tied the existing mark, were beaten in the finals Saturday.

William and Mary's Charles Dobson, who set a mark of 7.2 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles, could manage only 7.4 Saturday and was edged in the same time by Jim Detwiler of Richmond.

Maurice Huntley of East Carolina finished third behind Weldon Edwards of Richmond and Dobson in the 60-yard dash. Huntley and Edwards both tied the meet record of 6.2 seconds.

State Holds Off Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—North Carolina State, the nation's No.1 basketball team, countered a strong bid by underdog Clemson Saturday night with a 35-point performance by David Thompson, to win 80-75.

The lead see-sawed in the first half, but Clemson held it only once in the final stanza, 75-74, with 1:27 left. Tommy Burleson and Thompson then got layups and Morris Rivers connected on a one-and-one to complete the scoring for State's 22nd victory against one loss.

Clemson, trailing 2-9 in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings in which State leads, 10-0, making one of its strongest bids of the season for an upset over the team that swamped it by 28 points in their previous meeting this season.

Shooting percentages, rebounding and turnovers were about equal in the game in which State used an aggressive press and Clemson a zone defense.

The victory was State's 28th in a row against Conference teams, equally a record established some years ago by Duke.

Farrell Named Wildcat Coach

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP)—Ed Farrell, head football coach at the University of Bridgeport (Conn.), has been named head coach at Davidson College, it was announced Saturday.

"All of us at Davidson, and especially our players, are eager to make a success of our new program. We believe that Ed Farrell is the man who can do the job, and we welcome him and his assistants to our staff," Spencer said.

Farrell, 39, will assume his new position March 1.

Two of Farrell's assistants at Bridgeport, Bob Tousignant and Phil Janaro, will join the Davidson staff, Spencer said.

The record over the last three seasons was 30-3, including an 11-0 team in 1972.

Last season Bridgeport was 9-1 in the regular season and was selected to play in the college division NCAA championship.

Tar Heels Rip Virginia Cavs

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Bobby Jones scored 18 points and played tenacious defense to lead a balanced North Carolina attack Saturday as the sixth-ranked Tar Heels walloped Virginia, 94-61, in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action.

The win gave North Carolina its fourth straight 20-victory season and seventh in the last eight seasons.

The Tar Heels, after trading the lead several times in the early going, got a big break when Virginia's Gus Gerard, leading scorer for the team, picked up his third personal foul after only five minutes of play.

For the first half, the Cavaliers shot a miserable 21 per cent from the floor. Coach Dean Smith later called it "our best defensive half of the season."

Virginia's shooting improved a bit in the second half, but so did the Tar Heels' even after Smith emptied his bench.

The Cavaliers' overall record dropped to 9-14 with the loss; they are 4-7 in the league.

North Carolina held onto second place in the league standings. The Tar Heels moved to 20-4 overall and 8-2 in the ACC.

Trio Tied For Lead In Gleason Tourney

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Leonard Thompson, a soft-drawling native of North Carolina, won over $90,000 last year in his sophomore season on the pro golf tour but remains a relative unknown.

Does it bother him?

"Not at all. I don't care if nobody knows me. Just so they pay me," the big, rangy guy said Saturday after moving into a share of the third round lead in the $260,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic.

"I don't even think about it. I don't really care. I just want to go out and play my game and try to win me a golf tournament and a bunch of money.

"If I'm gonna win, I'll win. When I'm meant to win I will."

It could be that this is the week for the one-time Wake Forest student who didn't graduate despite "going there a long time—it seems like nine years."

The one-time assistant pro at the Possum Trot Golf Club in South Carolina has hit three in the water this week but still shares a shaky lead with Masters champion Tommy Aaron and longshot Roy Pace.

They're tied at 210, six under par on the 7,128-yard Inverrary Country Club course after 54 holes. Thompson had a third-round 69 in the warm, sunny weather. Pace shot a sparkling 67 and Aaron—who one-putted the last seven greens in a row—put together a 68.

A massive logjam developed at the top in this chase for the $52,000 first prize. At various times during the third round, nine different players led or shared the lead, and with 18 holes to go, 11 players—including defending champion Lee Trevino—were grouped within two shots of each other.

Sam Snead isn't among them—but the 61-year-old marvel was just three strokes back. He had 16 consecutive pars before bogeying the 17th hole and finished with a 73 for 213.

One stroke off the lead at 211 were Hale Irwin, Buddy Allin and Chi Chi Rodriguez. Irwin took a 69, including a bogey on the final hole, while Allin and Rodriguez matched 70s.

Trevino, who had some sharp words for a television commentator, was at 212 along with Jim Weichers, Tom Jenkins, Miller Barber and second-round leader Kermit Zarley. Wiechers had a 68, Jenkins and Barber 70s, Zarley 73 and Trevino matched par 72, rallying from a 38 on the front nine.

"After I finished," Trevino said, "this television announcer (Bob Halloran) says, 'Lee, you played that front nine just terrible.'

"I said, 'yeah, I've heard you before and you don't announce too good, either.' Right on the tube I said it. I ought to get some fan mail out of that one."

Jack Nicklaus, the first man off the tee, broke par for the first time in the tournament. He had a 69 and was six strokes back at 216. U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, winner of three tournaments this year, continued to have his problems. He was at 73 and was out of title contention at 220.

Pace, 33, has won but one tournament—a satellite event—in a decade off and on the tour. But he had it going in the third round.

He missed only two greens, didn't have a bogey and four times hit irons inside of four feet for easy birdies. The fifth came on a 10-foot putt.

Aaron had to scramble down the stretch to get and keep a piece of the lead. He birdied the 12th from four feet, saved par from six feet on the next hole, then dropped birdie putts of 20 and five feet on the next two.

He missed the green on the next three, but salvaged par on putts of six, 12 and four feet.

Thompson had to rally from a double bogey on the fourth, where he hit a shot in the water, and managed the comeback with some exceptional putting. He scored five times in the 15-20 foot range, including one from about 18 feet on the final hole.

Deacons Rip ASU

WINSTON-SALEM,N.C. (AP)—Tony Byers and Mike Parrish triggered a 24-0 Wake Forest first half scoring spree to lead the Deacon basketball team to a 106-60 rout of Appalachian State Saturday night.

Byers, who ran his two-season total to 990 points with 18 against the Mountaineers, scored six and Parrish eight in a seven and one-half minute surge that put Wake Forest in front 37-5 with nine minutes left in the first half.

The Atlantic Coast Conference Deacons shot 64 per cent in the first half for a 61-21 lead over the Southern Conference visitors, who hit only 20 per cent.

Wake Forest, now 13-10, wound up hitting 54 per cent to 32 for Appalachian, now 5-19.

Dave Cook's 12 points led Appalachian, whose Stan Davis, No. 2 Southern Comference scorer, scored only two points, hitting one of six shots in 16 minutes.

Terapins Ease Past Duke Five

DURHAM, N. C. (AP)—Len Elmore led fifth-ranked Maryland with 22 points and captured 17 rebounds as the Terrapins went down to the wire before escaping with a 64-61 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Duke Saturday night.

Duke intercepted an inbounds pass and called time out with 11 seconds remaining as it trailed 62-61. As play resumed, the ball was passed to Pete Kramer who lost it in the lane, being charged with a foul in the process.

John Lucas added 13 points in the Maryland effort as the Terrapins stretched their record to 7-3 in the conference and 19-4 overall.

Duke, led by Bob Fleischer with 18 points, grabbed the lead in the closing minutes of the first half and went into the intermission with a 38-34 advantage.

Maryland tied the game at 42-all with 15:19 remaining in the second half and then carried a lead to the 5:19 mark where Duke tied it again. Maryland again broke in front and held on to the finish.

Duke now is 2-8 in the conference and 10-13 overall.

Spiders Win; Claim Second

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Bob McCurdy and Eric Gray pulled Richmond out of trouble in the last 7½ minutes Saturday and the Spiders clinched second place in he Southern Conference championship basketball tournament by beating William and Mary 88-81.

The Spiders seemingly had the regionally-televised game under control with an 11-point lead in the first minute of the second half, but the Indians stormed back to tie the score twice on the outside shooting of Mark Ritter and Rod Musselman.

McCurdy, who finished with 25 points, finally put the Spiders ahead for good at 64-62 with 7:34 left and he and Gray carried the Richmond attack down the stretch, Gray getting 12 of his 24 points in the last seven minutes.

Davidson dropped to third at 7-3 and William and Mary will be No. 5 with a 5-6 league record.

The victory gave Richmond a 14-11 over-all record while William and Mary dropped 8-17.

Pirates Hosting Southern Swimming

East Carolina University's swimming team will be shooting for its eighth straight Southern Conference championship this coming weekend when the Bucs host the annual Swimming and Diving Championships.

The action all gets underway Thursday, and continues through Saturday.

The Pirates have never lost in the Southern Conference since joining the league nine years ago. The only time they failed to win the title (officially, that is) was in 1972 when no championship meet was held. The Pirates, however, have never lost a dual meet with a conference team, and laid claim to the title that year anyway.

"It's going to be a lot closer this year than it has in the last couple of years," Coach Ray Scharf said. "William & Mary is stronger in the sprints and Richmond looks tougher in the distance events. Both are going to give us a lot of competition for the title."

Scharf sees VMI in line for fourth place in the tournament, followed by Furman and Appalachian State in a battle for fifth, and Davidson bringing up the rear.

This year marks the most competition for the title in a long time, with seven of the eight league teams in the meet. Only The Citadel does not now field a team, and Scharf feels they are close to forming one.

Thursday and Friday, the competition gets underway at noon with trials in events. The finals for those days will begin at 7 p.m.

Saturday, trials will be held at 10 a.m. with the finals starting at 4 p.m.

Tickets to the tournament are on sale at the Minges Coliseum ticket office for $2 for adults and $1 for students and children. Tickets are good for all six sessions at that price.

Thursday, five events will be held.

The meet will open with the 500 yard freestyle. Keith Killoski of Richmond ranks as the favorite with an entered time of 5:02. Ross Bohlken of East Carolina is next at 5:04.7, while defending champion Larry Green is third at 5:05.4.

Three East Carolina swimmers pace the entries for the 200-yard individual medley. Paul Schiffel and Charlie Kemp have both turned in times of 2:05.1, while Greg Hinchman has a 2:07.

Jim Hadley of East Carolina and John McIntyre of William & Mary head the list in the 50-yard freestyle, both timed at :22.4 this year. Dodge Havens of William & Mary and Robert Hagler of Furman are next at :22.6.

Rounding out Thursday's competition will be the 400-yard medley relay. East Carolina has the top time of 3:45.8, while William & Mary is second at 3:47.8, and Richmond and VMI both have times of 3:53.

Friday, six events will be completed, along with the preliminaries in the 3-meter diving.

East Carolina's Bohlken is favored in the 200-yard freestyle. His entered time is 1:48.2, ahead of William & Mary's Keith Havens at 1:49.5 Dodge Havens is third at 1:50.5, while East Carolina's Tom Falk is the defending champion.

In the 400-yard individual medley, Schiffel is defending his title. He's the top entrant at 4:28.8, followed by Kibiloski at 4:29.8 and Tim Cairney of Richmond at 4:32.

Mike Bretting of East Carolina tops the field in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of :54.6, Kerry Dearfield of William & Mary is second at :54.6, followed by ECU's David Kirkman at :55.6.

VMI's Bob Cunningham will defend his title in the 100-yard backstroke. He's entered at :58.5. Schiffel is ranked second at :58.9, while Hinchman is third at :59.3

McIntyre is the favorite in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:03.0. Kemp is second at 1:03.1, whiel William & Mary's Bruce Hartzler is third at 1:03.6.

East Carolina is the favorite in the 800-yard freestyle with a time of 7:21.5. Although William & Mary has no entered time, Scharf believes they'll give the Bucs the most competition, while Richmond, 7:31.6, is third.

Morrow is favored in the three-meter diving, where he is also the defending champion.

Saturday's events will kickoff with the 1,650-yard freestyle. Based on times for the 1,000-yard swim, Greene tops the field in 10:24.0. Kibiloski is second at 10:31.0, while Steve Ruedlinger of ECU is third at 10:43.5.

Keith Havens tops the 100-yard freestyle field with a time of 49.0, while Dodge Havens is second at :49.6. Both Bohlken and Frank Bruni of William & Mary are third at :49.7.

Schiffel is again the defending champ and favorite in the 200-yard backstroke. His time is 2:06.6. Cariney is second at 2:11.0, while Cunningham is third at 2:11.4.

Kemp tops the field in the 200-yard breaststroke at 2:21.2, followed by Kirkman at 2:22.0 and Hartzler at 2:23.8.

In the 200-yard butterfly, Bretting is first at 2:03.9, followed by Schiffel at 2:04.7, and Ruedlinger at 2:05.1, giving the Bucs a possible sweep here.

William & Mary has the top time in the 400-yard freestyle relay at 3:16.0, while the Bucs, the defending champs, are in at 3:18.9. Richmond rounds out the field with a 3:24.0 time.

Following the Southern Conference championships, the Pirates will be competing in the Eastern Collegiate Championships and the NCAA finals later in March.

UCLA Alive And Well In West

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The UCLA Bruins are still alive in Westwood—and aroused too.

Coach John Wooden, who criticized the Bruins for lacking a killer instinct before last week's two consecutive losses to Oregon State and Oregon, said: "Tonight we played with much more intensity than we've had in some time. I've been remiss in not arousing that intensity."

Paced by 17 points apiece from Keith Wilkes and Tommy Curtis, the reawakened Bruin squad routed Washington State 93-68 in Pacific-8 Conference action Friday night, snapping a two-game losing streak.

UCLA remained tied for the lead in the Pac-8 with Southern California, which knocked off Washington 79-64 Friday night. Both schools have 8-2 conference records and are heading for their Pac-8 showdown on Saturday, March 9.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 11 Providence whipped small college power Assumption 112-86 and No. 15 Creighton edged Hawaii 63-59.

The third-ranked Bruins also got 13 points from freshman Marques Johnson as they raised their season record to 19-3 over-all.

The Cougars, 8-16, were led by freshman center Steve Puidokas, who had 23 points and Norton Barnhill with 18.

USC raced to a 37-26 halftime lead and then watched the Huskies claw their way back to within four points, before taking command for good.

Marvin Barnes scored 23 points and grabbed 21 rebounds to lead Providence. Barnes, the nation's leading rebounder, played only 31 minutes in leading the Friars to their 23rd victory in 26 games.

Creighton, led by Gene Harmon and Charles Butler, gained its 10th straight victory and 21st in 25 games.

Cougars Slip Past Indiana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky Colonels Coach Babe McCarthy is a great believer in getting the ball as close to the basket as possible before shooting...and with a front-court duo of Dan Issel and Artis Gilmore, who wouldn't be.

McCarthy saw his eager guards miss four three-point attempts in the first half against Virginia Friday night, and after Louie Dampier missed a fifth early in the third quarter, he ordered his troops to desist.

"We missed four of those three-pointers in the first half and they weren't even good shots," said McCarthy. "I was afraid that type of shooting might become contagious."

The Colonels wound up with no three-point goals but beat the Squires 115-101 anyway before a record American Basketball Association crowd of 15,787. Issel poured in 34 points and Gilmore contributed 20 along with 22 rebounds.

There were just two other games played in the ABA. Carolina beat Indiana 109-106 and New York topped San Diego 121-113.

The three-point shot has become popular with ABA crowds but McCarthy would just as soon his players ignored it.

"All I can say is that you won't find the team leading the league in three-point field goals winning the championship," he said.

The Colonels jumped off to 16-4 lead in the early going and coasted to a 52-43 halftime edge. The Squires narrowed the gap to six points at 88-82 early in the final period, but could get no closer.

Cougars 10, Pacers 106

Nets 121, Q's 113

Billy Paultz scored 28 points as New York posted its seventh victory in the last eight games. Rookie Larry Kenon added 24 points and Julius Erving had 23 for the winners. Travis Grant topped San Diego with 28 points.

National Basketball Association results: Boston 116, Buffalo 109; Detroit 84, Capital 83; New York 117, Cleveland 110; Chicago 117, Portland 100; Milwaukee 122, Houston 113; Kansas City-Omaha 119, Phoenix 104; and Los Angeles 104, Philadelphia 103.

Furman Nips Jax

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Furman University, Southern Conference season champion, held off independent Jacksonville Saturday night for 71-61 basketball victory to avenge earlier loss.

Furman broke out fast to a 9-2 lead and was never headed. Pacing the victors were Clyde Mayes with 20 points and 11 rebounds, Ed Kelly with 15 points and Bud Bierly with 11 rebounds and four points.

Henry Williams, Jacksonville's quick wing man, formed the backbone of the Dolphins' effort as he scored 22 points and snared 10 rebounds.

But Ben Benbow, Jacksonville guard, led all scorers with 27 points.

Jacksonville outrebounded Furman, 48 to 46, but Furman had the better shooting percentage by a margin of 1.3, at 41.6.

Furman is 18-7 for the season. It next appears in the conference tournament with a loop record of 11-1. Jacksonville is 16-8 for the season.

McAdoo Scores, But Boston Takes Victory

By ANDY LIPPMAN

Buffalo's Bob McAdoo scored the most points Friday night. But it was Boston's Dave Cowens who got the most satisfaction.

"I was glad McAdoo got 52 points, as long as we won," the Celtic center said after Boston's 116-109 National Basketball Association victory over Buffalo. "When you're ahead, you can sit back and enjoy the show."

McAdoo was the whole show for the Braves with his total surpassing anything scored this year in the NBA. While he was scoring, his teammates were not. And Cowens, with 30 points plus John Havlicek with .31, equalled more than McAdoo could provide.

"Having a big night like this doesn't mean as much when you don't win," said McAdoo.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Chicago beat Portland 117-100, New York trounced Cleveland 117-110, Detroit edged Capital 84-83, Milwaukee defeated Houston 122-113, Kansas City-Omaha defeated Phoenix 119-104, and Los Angeles squeezed by Philadelphia 104-103.

Bulls 117, Trail Blazers 100

Chicago broke on top early and coasted to its 16th victory in 18 games.

"I told the players before the game that this was the most important game of the year because I figured there would be a letdown," said Dick Motta, Bulls coach. "This was one game I knew our team would have to work hard to win."

Knicks 117, Cavaliers 110

Walt Frazier scored 25 to lead a quartet of Knicks with 20 points or more. Phil Jackson and Bill Bradley followed with 23, while Earl Monroe contributed 22.

Pistons 84, Capital 83

Kings 119, Suns 104

Jimmy Walker tallied 34 points for Kansas City which hit 14 of 20 shots in the final period. The lead changed 15 times and was tied 14 before Don Kojis hit a jumper with 2:12 remaining in the third period to put the Kings ahead 80-78.

Bucks 122, Rockets 113

Milwaukee continued its domination of the Rockets as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 38 points. The Bucks, who have never lost to the Rockets in Houston, shot 65 per cent from the field in the first half and led 60-50.

Bob Dandridge, who scored 28 points, had 12 in the first quarter when Milwaukee took a 37-28 lead.

Lakers 104, 76ers 103

Gail Goodrich scored six points in the final two minutes to push the Lakers within two games of first-place Golden State in the Pacific Division.

Outlaw Ripping A&T Opponents

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — His name is James Outlaw, but they call him "Sheriff" around North Carolina A&T State University.

His 25.5 average, No. 5 among major college basketball teams, has helped the Aggies to a 14-8 record going into their final regular season game today against North Carolina Central, a team they've already beaten twice this season.

Outlaw, a 6-foot guard, and his teammates are playing in the NCAA University Division for the first time this season.

He's a senior who averaged 16.6 points last year after coming to A&T from Ballard-Hudson High School in Macon, Ga., where he averaged 34 points in his final season. His coach there, Warren Reynolds, is in his second season at A&T.

Outlaw admits he thinks often about a pro career. He reasons, "Everybody wants to make it, but I know everybody can't. I really don't want to overemphasize pro ball."

Conceding that "not every team is looking for a scorer," he worked hard last summer on fundamentals, he said. "I know I have to handle the ball and dribble. And I know I'm going to be double-teamed at times, so I have to polish my moves to get clear."

Olympics Suffer From Old Malady

By KAROL STONGER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Olympic Games, as conceived in Greece sometime around the 10th century B.C., were banned in the third century A.D. because they were deteriorating and the athletes had become professionals.

The modern Olympics aren't in the throes of being abandoned, but some of the same problems are pressing Lord Killanin of Ireland, overseer of the renewed international test of athletic skill.

There's been a paucity of cities interested in staging the Games and there's been a running controversy over what constitutes an amateur athlete.

"A year ago we were very depressed," Killanin said Friday in discussing the small number of cities bidding to stage the 1980 and 1984 Games. And he denied that Moscow would get the 1980 Summer Games in a "walkover," especially in view of the fact that Los Angeles is in the running.

Philip Krumm, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, announced at a luncheon attended by Lord Killanin, that bids by Los Angeles and Lake Placid, N.Y., would be submitted to the IOC by the March 31 deadline for consideration as hosts for the 1980 Games.

Lake Placid, site of the 1932 Winter Olympics, had sought to succeed Denver as the 1976 host after Colorado residents rejected a referendum that would have allocated bond money to stage the games. However, Innsbruck, Austria, won the final nod.

Although only bids by Moscow and Los Angeles have been received by the IOC to date for the Summer Games, Killanin said that in addition to Lake Placid, Chamonix, France; the Vancouver-Garibaldi area of Canada and possibly two other sites were interested in the Winter Games.

However, he wasn't discounting the possibility that because of the high finance involved in awarding the Games to a different city each quadrennial, they eventually would have a semi-permanent home.

"Long after you and I are under our tombstones, I think we will revert to the original concept," he said, referring to the early Greek contests.

Ayden-Grifton, North Pitt To State

Big Orange Get Their Revenge

DUDLEY—Charles B. Aycock's girls may have walked off with the Eastern Carolina Conference Tournament championship a week ago, but when the marbles were all on the table, it was the North Pitt Pant-HERS who again came through in their usual championship style.

Friday night, the Big Orange Machine rolled past Aycock, 41-35, gaining revenge over Aycock, and a berth in this week's state tournament in High Point.

North Pitt, which has lost only twice in history, and just once to a league team, gained revenge for that lone loss, in their victory. The only other loss they had was a year ago, when they were beaten in the first round of the state tournament. When that occurred, it was their first loss in three years of competition.

This time around, however, they'll be out to recapture the state title they won in 1972.

The Pant-HERS were never behind against Aycock as they pushed out to a 10-4 lead in the first period of play. The Big Orange continued to pull away it. the second period, building their lead out to 22-12 with a 12-8 advantage.

In the third period, North Pitt continued to be successful, but it began to get a little easy, and they slacked off, allowing Aycock to come back and outhit them, 8-7. That cut the lead to 29-20.

Aycock, who had used a strong second half in their previous victory over the Pant-HERS, tried to do it again, as they continued to cut into the lead. But this time, the North Pitt lassies got together in time. Although outscored, 15-12, they still managed enough to hold off the Falconettes and preserve the victory.

Wanda Whichard led North Pitt with 12 points, while Kathi Manning had 11. Sandy Sirt led the scoring with 18 points for Aycock, while Nancy Evans had 11.

GIRL'S GAME

ZIGFIELD FOLLIES?—Milton Brown (with ball) seems to be practicing his kicks as he pulls down a rebound while other members of the Ayden-Griton and D. H. Conley teams look on. Also trying to get the ball are Danny Garris (44) and Jessie Brown (far right) of the dark jerseyed A-G Chargers and Lawrence Harper (behind Garris) Gerry Mobley (Right of Harper) and Buddy Phillips (22) of Conley. Chargers Rally Past Conley Vikings, 61-54

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD—Ayden-Grifton rode a 12-point rally in the fourth quarter to a come-from-behind win over D. H. Conley, 61-54, as the Chargers won their fourth straight District II championship.

Except on the opening basket, the Vikings had led all the way as they struggled to keep the Chargers at a distance. The point difference hung around four and six points for the most part but with 6:54 left to play a basket by Travis Woods started a six bucket spurt that saw A-G pass the tiring Vikings and take a 51-47 lead which they held for the rest of the game.

Conley hit a better average from the floor, 44 per cent while the Chargers hit 36. Both teams shot profusely in the last period lowering their averages. Through the third period, the Vikings had been making 51 per cent of their shots. The Chargers had the edge on rebounding, 35-32 with Woods leading the way with 17. Jessie Brown gathered nine, Buddy Phillips had nine for the Vikings. The Vikes made seven of their first nine shots.

Although Conley hit better from the floor, 25 field goals to 24, they lost the game from the free throw stripe. A-G connected only six fouls in the second half giving the Vikings one trip to the line. Conley, however, was tagged with ten and the Chargers dropped in two of 14 attempts and that made the difference.

Milton Brown gave the Chargers a momentary lead as he hit a long outside shot with 18 seconds gone. Conley roared back to take the lead on buckets by Milton Tucker, Rick Mobley and Mike Sutton, 6-2.

Woods drove through the Charger lane twice and scored twice to tie the game, 6-6. Mobley quickly put the Vikings back up, 10-6, with a pair of outside baskets. Conley stayed in front by a shade for the rest of the period. A-G pulled within two at 12-10 and 14-12 but the Vikings got two baskets, one from Larry Daniels and another from Clennel Streeter to make it 18-12 with 2:24 showing. The six point margin remained at the end of the first quarter, 22-16.

Danny Garris and Willie Williams combined for three free shots to pull the Chargers to 22-19. It was erased by the Vikings who countered with three field goals as they moved out by nine, 28-19. After Jessie Brown scored, Streeter and Mobley scored lay-ups to give the Vikings an 11-point lead, their biggest of the night.

The Chargers did not let the gap stay that wide long as Milton Brown tapped in a rebound, Woods made two free throws and Jessie Brown a lay-up to close to 32-27 at halftime.

Melvin Stewart's basket at 7:21 in the third quarter again brought the Chargers up to three away, 32-29, and for the next few minutes all the teams did was trade points. Stewart made it a two point difference at 5:15 as he sank a pair of free shots. A-G could not tie it up as the Vikings struggled to stay on top. Mobley's bucket with :05 left in the period gave the Vikings a 48-46 advantage going into the final period.

But the Vikings suddenly failed to find the range and while they were having their problems, A-G was moving up. Woods and Daniels swapped baskets and then Woods came back with another to start the rally. Milton Brown waltzed through the lane to score an easy lay-up, 47-45, and dropped in a jumper from the free throw stripe, tieing it at 47-47 with 5:04 left.

Woods put the Chargers ahead to stay hitting from the corner and Stewart made it a four-point gap scoring from the lane. Brown added his third tally of the period to make it 53-47.

Mobley dropped a frantic shot from the stripe for only the second Conley field goal of the quarter. Woods matched it for the Chargers and after that all the Chargers got were from the free throw line. The Vikings scored twice more after A-G moved up by 11, 61-50 with :20 left. By then it was all but over.

Woods led the Chargers with 25 points and Milton Brown and Stewart each had 12. Mobley led the Vikings with 16, Daniels had 15 and Streeter 11.

The champion Chargers placed four players on the All-Tournament team. Milton and Jessie Brown, Stewart and Woods all made the team. From Conley were Daniels, Streeter and Mobley. From Greene Central was Jerry Carraway, Mike Miller from North Lenoir and Richard Lancaster of C. B. Aycock.

The All-Conference Cheerleading squad was also named. Farmville Central and Conley each placed three girls on the ten-member team. Patricia Griffin, Carolyn Streeter and Jo Sermons made it from FC, Deborah Mills Barbara Carmon and Loretta Adams of Conley, Jan Edmundson and Jo Fields of Eastern Wayne; Janice Lassiter and Rita Shackleford of Greene Central; and Kathy Thompson of Southern Wayne round out the squad.

The Chargers will advance in the playoff to the state level this week.

Favorites Win In City Play

Kentucky Fried Chicken and Coca-Cola moved into the semi-finals of the City Basketball League tournaments with victories Friday night.

In the opening game, Kentucky Fried Chicken roasted the Eagles, 112-65. KFC rushed away to a 40-26 lead by the end of the first half. In the second, they blew the Eagles right out of the gym with a 72-39 advantage in scoring.

Al Faber pumped in an amazing 43 points in leading KFC to the victory. Gene Rackley, Charlie Stancil, Charlie Whitehurst and Richard Slack each added 14, while Bob Doubet had 11. For the Eagles, Ray Parnell had 25 and Charles Meeks had 17.

In the second game, Coca-Cola ripped the Book Exchange 106-51. Coke, too, had little trouble in winning, rushing to a 57-19 first half lead. They outhit the Exchange, 49-32, in the second half for the easy victory.

Jim Modlin led Coke, with an even more amazing performance, hitting 49 points. Wayne Norris has 22, while Gary Rabon had 17 and Jack Warner had 12. For the Exchange, Phil Duffy had 12 and Jack Hodge and Carl Tucker each had 10.

Monday night, the semi-finals will be held at West Greenville Gym. At 7 p.m., regular season champ Happy Store will take on Carolina Dairy. Coke and KFC collide in the other game at 8:15 p.m. The two winners meet for the title on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Elm Street Gym.

Allison Would Like To Hold His Position

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., has a knack for winning the pole position at the Fairgrounds Raceway, but he'd like to do a little better than before in Sunday's National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's Richmond 500 Grand National race.

"Well, we're out there in front again, and that's nice," said Allison after he won the No. 1 spot Friday in a Chevrolet at a speed of 90.362 miles per hour.

"Now, if we can only get some reliability out of the equipment and do something with it on Sunday," added Allison, who has been the qualifying leader for the last five races at the local track.

To win, however, Allison will have to beat out Richard Petty of Randleman, N. C., the Dodge driver who has won the last seven races held on the .542 mile track.

Petty qualified Friday for the No. 3 spot with a speed of 88.775 m.p.h. behind Chevrolet driver Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., who was clocked at 89.987 m.p.h.

In the seven races won by Petty, Allison has been the runner-up on four occasions and he admitted he was getting a little tired of it.

"When we set the track record here (90.952 m.p.h.) last February, I thought we were going to be in pretty good shape, but then last fall, I really felt we had the car to beat him, and we ran into that same old problem with reliability," said Allison.

Defending Grand National champion Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N. C., took the No. 4 spot for the $41,300 race that begins Sunday at 1 p. m. with a speed of 88.409 m.p.h. over 1973 rookie of the year Lennie Pond of Ettrick, Va., at 88.369 m.p.h. Both drove Chevrolets.

Coaching Clinic Is Set Saturday

The third annual Greenville Coaching Clinic will be held at Rose High School Saturday.

The Greenville Clinic and the East Carolina Coaching Staff have joined forces this year to enlarge the clinic.

Pat Dye, the new East Carolina head football coach, will be among the speakers, along with Frank Orgel of his staff. Two former staffmates of Dye, from the University of Alabama will also speak. They are Mal Moore, the quarterback coach and Bud Moore, the running back coach.

The wishbone offense, used both by Greenville High School and East Carolina, will be the main topic, with coaches reporting on what and how they teach.

Registration will begin at 8 p.m. in the Rose gymnasium, with Glen Cox, superintendent of Greenville City Schools giving the welcome. A barbecue lunch will be served at noon, with the final session over at around 4 p.m.

Registration fee for coaches is $5 if mailed prior to Monday night. For those registering later, a $7.50 charge will be made. Price of the dinner is included in the charge.

East Carolina Women Defeated

GREENSBORO — The University of North Carolina at Greensboro downed East Carolina University; 63-50, with a big final period rally Friday morning to advance to the semi-finals of the Women's State Basketball Tournament.

Greensboro lost, however, to favored Elon, who moved into the finals of the tournament, played Saturday, against Western Carolina. The two teams, regardless of the outcome, advance into the regionals later.

The game was tight much of the way, with East Carolina moving into the lead in the third period, only to see it slip away in the final period.

Greensboro inched into a 13-11 lead after the first period, and wasn't able to work up much more breathing room the rest of the way. They outhit the Lady Pirates, 16-15, during the second period, and held a slim 29-26 lead at the half.

East Carolina came back in the third quarter to push into the lead, outscoring UNC-G, 16-9. That put the Lady Bues ahead, 42-38. But they couldn't hold on, as Greensboro stormed back to dump in 25 points in the final period of play, while limiting East Carolina to eight.

Sheilah Cotten led East Carolina with 23 points. Wiggs paced UNC-G with 17, while Corpening had 14 and Morris had 11.

The loss closed out the year for the defending state champs.

Champion Won't Go To Russia

By BERT ROSENTHAL

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Wohlhuter, the National AAU 1,000-yard indoor champion, won't be going to Moscow next week for a meet against the Russians, runner-up Byron Dyce is doubtful—and long jumper Bouncy Moore vows he won't compete in another AAU meet at Madison Square Garden.

Wohlhuter earned the trip to the Soviet Union for the dual meet against the Russians on March 2 by winning the 1,000 Friday night at the Garden in two minutes, 6.8 seconds.

But he said afterward, "I won't go to Russia. I work for a health insurance company in Chicago and it's very busy now."

Dyce, the early pacesetter in the 1,000 until Wohlhuter caught and passed him in the last half-lap, finished second in 2:07.4, and thought he had qualified to face the powerful Soviet Union. But dual citizenship—for the United States and his native Jamaica—might stop him.

Dyce said he was told before the AAU meet that he would be able to compete in Moscow. After his race, he said meet officials told him his status was uncertain.

The American team is scheduled to leave Sunday for Russia, if there are no difficulties obtaining visa clearances from the Soviet Embassy in Washington. If there is a delay, the squad probably will depart Monday.

Moore, meanwhile, was incensed at the conditions of the long jump pit, which was filled with stable dirt and rocks. He was one of four athletes to withdraw from the event. The others were Olympic champion Randy Williams of the University of Southern California, Metropolitan Intercollegiate champion Jim Nathaniel of Manhattan and Arnie Robinson, Moore's teammate on the San Diego Track Club.

Dark Uncertain About Green

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — "I know a little bit about nothing," the Oakland A's new manager, Alvin Dark, said Friday about the team's only personnel question mark: second baseman Dick Green.

Green announced his retirement after the 1973 World Series, but A's owner Charles O. Finley would like to change the infielder's mind as he did two years ago.

Dark, who will open the spring training camp of baseball's world champions here today, said he had no word on the prospects of Green's return.

"Until Monday night, I had no idea that I'd be A's manager," he added.

Dark said he talked by telephone with Finley Monday night, flew from Florida to the West Coast on Tuesday and signed a one-year contract just after midnight that day.

"I'm not prepared like a manager should be," he said. "It's going to mean 18-hour days for me here instead of 12-hour days. I didn't bring my golf club and I probably won't have them in Oakland this year."

Dark inherits a team of predominantly long-haired athletes, several of whom wear mustaches. In his previous managing jobs in San Francisco, Kansas City and Cleveland, he had rules prohibiting long hair and mustaches.

"I'll only try to control things I have control of," Dark said.

Seals Lose 6th Straight Match

OAKLAND (AP) — The California Golden Seals lost their sixth straight National Hockey League game—a 4-3 defeat by the New York Rangers—but Seals' Coach Marshall Johnson was not upset.

"I'm extremely happy. The effort was tremendous," said Johnson Friday after his home debut as coach. "We made mistakes, but I see signs that we are reaching some of the goals I've set up."

The loss left the Seals in the cellar of the NHL West Division, but the Rangers moved to within three points of second-place Montreal in the East.

There were no other games in the National Hockey League.

In the World Hockey Association, the Winnipeg Jets beat the Toronto Toros 4-3 and the Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated the Quebec Nordiques 6-4

Bobby Hull's 40th goal with just two minutes to go carried Winnipeg past Toronto. The Jets took a 3-1 lead into the final period but Toronto tied it on goals by Guy Trottier and Steve King before Hull converted passes by Norm Beaudin and Chris Bordeleau for the winning goal.

Boaters Will Find Way To Enjoy Season

Editor's Note: Despite the fuel shortage, the nation's boaters will find a way to enjoy their favorite sport this season, predicts a longtime enthusiast. Bernie Smith, who in retirement now spends most of his time on lakes, gives some pointers on handling boats with ease and safety.

By BERNIE SMITH

DALLAS (AP) — When the energy panic eases the crocuses will be blooming, the birds will be singing and outdoorsmen will be finding a way to indulge in their favorite recreation.

The boating bug, no respecter of economics, will probably bite before fish will. If the very worst comes to pass, boaters may cycle to the lakes, towing some sort of boat.

Boat salesmen must never be trusted implicitly, no more than other investment salesmen. Boat merchants have been known to demonstrate a glistening new boat on a perfect boat ramp, and sell the little thousand-pound jewel to a person who has to wade chest-deep to load it on the trailer on an inferior ramp.

Let's say you're looking at fiberglass family boats in the trailerable range. The first thing you see is the winch rope hooked to the boat bow. "S" hooks furnished by many dealers are positively unsafe. Slack in the rope, the hook comes loose, and the wonderful fiberglass comes out loser when it rolls off the trailer onto highway pavement. Get a marine snap hook.

Safest boat trailer tires are the 13 inch, but 12 inch are fine. Eight-inch wheels are about phased out on boat trailers, and should be avoided if you plan to trailer your rig very far.

If you're hooked already on 8-inch or even 12-inch tires, there are precautions that will lessen your tire troubles. Presuming your tires are tubeless, have them "vented" by the smartest tire man you can find, and install heavy duty tubes.

Don't let your filling station man tell you 30 or 40 pounds is enough air pressure in your boat trailer tires. If you start any distance with less than the required 60 pounds don't be surprised when the tires start throwing tread as soon as they get hot. (It's called "separating.")

American tire manufacturers have developed wonderful car tires, but are woefully ignorant concerning boat trailer tires. A boater-tire salesman helped me through my tire dilemma. My 12-inch vented tires are going on their fourth year without the least mishap.

Guide rollers on the sides of the trailer keep the boat from straying when loading. If the trailer has those dinky little 4-inch keel rollers, replace them with 12-inch rollers. The boat will center itself in loading, and wider rollers prevent scratches to fiberglass.

Progressive boat trailer factories are placing trailer lights high, preventing corrosion or blown fuses, which often happens if lights are dunked in launching and loading.

Sophisticated boat trailers appeared on the market a couple of years ago with a "dropped" axle, which permits a boat to float or be pushed off in almost any depth water. (If you plan to update a trailer with the dropped axle you may have to raise your fenders. No sweat.)

Most new trailers are coming with Zerk fittings on the end of the axles, which eliminate the chore of repacking wheel bearings. The most popular is the Bearing Buddy.

Your trailer may need a little catwalk on the tongue. Expanded steel or half-inch plywood serves nicely.

The launching and loading technique is so planned out in boating families it sometimes dictates what kind of car they buy. The operation on the boat ramp is greatly aided if the car driver has good vision out the rear window.

Okay, suppose you have signed on the dotted line. After you visit around the lakes you discover that during the dry season some boat ramps have a very poor drop. That's where the dropped axle pays off. Just back your car until the rear wheels are in water about a foot deep, then slap on the brakes. The boat should then glide off the trailer. And that's when you will be hoping your partner is still holding onto the painter.

Those who buy a medium or larger sized outboard motor soon discover tilting it is quite a task. This drudgery is eliminated by a power tilt, one of the sweetest inventions in boating.

We will still be gasoline conscious, so must keep both our automobiles and boat rigs properly tuned and tires aired for constant economy. Motor manuals say for best economy open up your outboard, then cut the throttle back to cruising speed. That way the motor is using the best spark, but little gasoline.

In case of outboard motor failure while out on the water, take the cover off the motor (that's the first thing other boaters notice, your motor). Stand up and wave both arms up and down, the distress signal. Boaters are more cooperative than car drivers and are glad to be of help.

When you have to head for home merely back the trailer to the same depth used in launching. Drive the boat onto the trailer at slow speed, maybe winching it on the last foot — and hoping your partner in the car will drive forward.

Wildlife Afield: Hunts Not Extinction Cause

By JIM DEAN

Man has made his mark on this planet in curious ways. According to the Department of the Interior, 32 species of birds native to the 50 states are now extinct. Nine modern mammals are extinct.

If you ask the first 10 people you meet on the street how this happened, I'd be willing to bet that at least half would lay part of the blame on hunting for sports.

That's a rather curious situation.

For instance, twenty-four of these extinct birds lived in Hawaii and were never hunted by sportsmen. They were wiped out largely by domestic cats and mongooses. How did domestic cats and mongooses get to Hawaii? Men brought them.

Of the remaining eight extinct species of birds, only two—the heath hen and the passenger pigeon—were ever hunted for sport. And yet, in neither case did hunting for sport cause extinction.

The heath hen was pushed aside by spreading civilization in the densely populated northeast. The passenger pigeon was the victim of changing habitat and market hunting.

Market hunting was rather common in the United States until sometime after the turn of the century. Men hunted strictly for profit, trying to kill as many birds as possible without regard for the future of the passenger pigeon. The sportsman, of course, does not hunt for profit, and his very sport depends upon how carefully he protects the breeding stocks of his quarry so that he will have sport in future years.

Nine species of modern-times U. S. mammals are extinct. Only three of these could have ever been pursued by hunting sportsmen. They are eastern elk, Merriam elk and Badlands bighorn sheep. All were wiped out before 1910, during the settlement of their respective ranges. They were hunted for food by pioneers, and for the market, but they were long gone before hunting for sport achieved popularity.

In fact, there is not a single species of bird or mammal in the 50 states whose extinction has been caused by men who hunt for sport.

And yet, sportsmen have saved many species from probable extinction. Wildlife management programs at both state and Federal levels are almost entirely financed by sportsmen's dollars. This money comes primarily from licenses and special taxes.

Because there are sportsmen who like to hunt—and who are willing to pay for the privilege—the elk, wild turkey, deer, pronghorn atelope, beaver and wood duck have been saved and returned to healthy population levels in this country.

In the past 50 years, the American hunter who hunts for sport has poured an incredible $2.5 billion dollars into conservation and wildlife development programs. Currently, some $107 million a year goes to state game and fish departments. This money is paid for licenses and it comes from the hunters's pocket. The Federal excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition contributes another $37 million to this total annually. Duck stamp purchases add another $11 million a year.

Who is paying to insure a future for wildlife? Who has saved a magnificent bird like the wild turkey from extinction?

The man who hunts for sport, who else?

Orphanage Kids Miss Pampering

By HUYNH CONG UT

LAI KHE, Vietnam (AP) — The American GIs from the "Big Red One," wherever they are scattered, will remember.

In 1967, troops from the 1st infantry division built a home near their Lai Khe base camp, 30 miles north of Saigon, and named it the Bethlehem Orphanage after the birthplace of Christ.

They brought clothes and food for the children, brightening their luckless days. Christmas was a special treat then. Santa Claus would arrive in an Army jeep loaded with toys, cookies and other goodies.

Bui Cam Hong, her two sisters and a brother were among the first to enter the orphanage then after their mother died. Their father was in the Army, off on some remote battlefield. That's the way it is in Vietnam.

Then in 1970, the division pulled out of Vietnam, part of the American withdrawal. The tears, the fears, the loneliness, all the pains of being an orphan, returned.

"We have enough food to eat, but what we need is more love," Bui Cam Hong, now 14, told a recent visitor. "We have waited for our father to get out of the Army and bring us home."

But Hong received news of her father's discharge from the army about a year ago. He also had taken a second wife. They never returned for Hong and the other children.

"Mother often comes back to me in my dreams," says Hong. "But she doesn't say anything. She just shakes her head and weeps."

There are now 80 children in Bethlehem, ranging in age from 5 to 15. Hong and about 20 others go to a nearby government high school while the younger children are taught in classrooms built by the American GIs in the orphanage itself.

For the older orphans, aside from being uncertain about their future, there is the pain from the invisible partition between them and other children in the government school. They don't understand it.

"I don't know why," says Dang Van Tan. "But other children keep away from us orphans. They don't play with us and they throw rocks at us. I don't do them any harm."

Among the orphans are two American-Vietnamese children, a boy and a girl. Their American fathers returned to the United States and their Vietnamese mothers are unable to support them.

The boy, 6-year-old Pham Van Hung, is suffering from eye and ear ailments. He is fearful of being taken back by his father, but cannot explain why.

The girl, 5-year-old Pham Thi Le Trinh, says she loves her American father but "father doesn't love me...he goes away...I miss mother but mother has no rice for me..."

There has been no word from either parent.

So far Bethlehem has not faced any critical shortages as there are still funds left by the 1st division.

Rev. Nguyen Van Thang, of the Vietnamese Protestant church, director of the orphanage, says he also receives some help from the South Vietnamese government, the World Vision — an international charity organization — and citizens in the United States. But he says the income meets only half the need and the savings are being used up.

"Now the children can have meat with their rice only once a year for Tet, the Vietnamese lunar new year," says Mrs. Thang, who helps her husband run the orphanage. "The rest of the year, we can afford only rice, some cheap fish and vegetables."

Vienna Sees GapIn Ranks Of Children

By WERNER VOLLMANN
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA (AP) — Forty-six per cent of the Austrians marry when their first child is already on the way, a research institute noted in a recent survey. Fifteen per cent marry after the child is born.

In 1915, the percentage of babies born out of wedlock or shortly after the wedding ceremony was only 27.

The research institute drew no conclusions from these findings, nor did it try to determine whether the babies born before or shortly after the wedding ceremony were unwanted.

The survey was made amid a heated debate on whether or not to legalize abortions. The Austrian parliament recently adopted a bill which legalizes abortions if they are carried out within three months after conception.

This ran into bitter criticism from the two opposition parties and from the Catholic church.

All parties agreed, on the other hand, that a campaign on methods of contraception should minimize the need for abortion.

The purpose of the research institute was to investigate the attitude of Austrians regarding children generally.

The Viennese were found to love children, which contradicted the more pessimistic view of Vienna's mayor, Leopold Gratz, a father of two himself. He felt the Viennese were hostile toward children.

More than two-thirds of the people polled said they thought two children would be an ideal number to have. One-fifth favored three, and two per cent four and more children. Only a tenth of all Viennese who already have two children want another.

However, if the majority of the Viennese meant what they say and had two children, this city of 1.6 million people would not have to rely on an influx from other provinces to keep the number constant.

Each year more people die in Vienna than are born. In 1971, for instance, the ratio was 17,198 births to 28,516 deaths, but, as Vienna still attracts newcomers, the population level is maintained by arrivals from rural districts.

Most children are in families where the husbands are from one to five years older than the wives. In families higher up on the social ladder, the wish for three and more children was also more pronounced, the report said.

When the husband is more than five years older, or in families where the wife is older than the husband, the number of children drops below the average.

Younger couples have their children at shorter intervals and after five years of marriage have all the children they want. Family planning was considered a good idea by 88 per cent of the Viennese.

Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper

The Junior Young Churchmen of St. Paul's Episcopal Church will serve the Shrove Tuesday pancake Supper Tuesday between 5:30 and 7 p.m. in the church parish hall.

The cost of the supper is $1.75 for adults and $1.25 for children under 12.

The tradition of sausage and pancakes on the day before Lent begins originated in the Middle Ages when eggs and meat were not eaten during the 40 days before Easter.

The following day, Ash Wednesday, will be kept with three celebrations of the Holy Communion: at 7 a.m., 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. St. Paul's is located at 401 E. Fourth Street.

Seminar From Tape Cassettes

ROHNERT PARK, Calif. (UPI) — A unique program leading to a bachelor of arts degree for people who cannot spend large amounts of time on campus will begin next spring at Sonoma State College.

The program will offer Saturday seminars on the campus at certain times, but most of the work is to be conducted by mail, telephone and tape cassettes.

Shell Individuality Led To 'Art' Creations

PINK ROSES. . .were designed by Mrs. Jeanette Whitehurst using assorted size shells. She also makes hanging baskets, flower groupings and sea scenes.

By PATRICIA MOORE

Fascinated by the variety and individuality she noticed among shells at the beach, Jeanette Whitehurst began collecting them, carefully storing them in boxes.

Then she found herself with boxes and boxes of shells.

"I could not bring myself to part with them. I wanted to find some use for them," Mrs. Whitehurst recalls.

The "use" she found is called "shell art." With varied types and colors of shells, Mrs. Whitehurst creates sea scenes and flower pictures, each as different as the shells themselves.

Her interest in shell art began two years ago when she created her first flower, using "average " shells on a velvet background. The result wheeted her appetite even more. When she went to Shappard Memorial Library to get gooks to educate herself in this new found hobby, she found she was already doing very much wat the books illustrated as shell art.

Through books and self instruction, Mrs. Whitehurst delved further into this interest, broadly referred to as "shell craft" and sometimes also called shell decoupage.

Shell Pictures

In addition to shell pictures, she makes hanging baskets and flower groupings such as roses and lilies-of-the-valley. This interest has led to study into the history of shell art, which is as ancient as the shells themselves.

Illustrating this point, Mrs. Whitehurst noted that European cathedrals have made use of shell art. There are underground grottoes where shell art is found. And there have been cornices and chandeliers made with shells. The emblem for the Shell Oil Company is the scollop shell. The Nautilus submarine was named for the chambered nautilus, a shell poetically enshrined in the famous poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

What fascinates Mrs. Whitehurst, though, is the variety and complete individuality of each sea shell. "The color gets me—I would never change the color of the shells," she says.

On any given day on a North Carolina beach, one can find shells in lavenders, pinks, clear tones and oranges. Mrs. Whitehust says one does not find blue and green tones in shells on the state's beaches, or much red.

What does she do, then, if she needs these colors for a picture and she does not believe in painting a shell? She orders what she needs from one of several shell supply firms.

The process begins, of course, with an idea—which may be the result of a particularly interesting shell itself, a piece of fabric which is to be the background, a color, flowers, and sometimes even a space she wants to fill.

Implements

The implements are stored on a tray and include dental tweezers, assorted small brushes for cleaning and brushing, long tooth picks for moving shells around on their background, tiny manicure sissors and various glues and cements. One of her most important tools is a hot glue gun, a gift from her husband, which enables her to create three-dimensional flowers as well as work more efficiently on more conventional designs.

Before it is used, each shell must be cleaned with a weak solution of household bleach, detergent and water. Some shells require vigorous cleaning with a wire brush. Mrs. Whitehurst then dries and stores each shell according to size, shape and color in boxes and drawers.

When she is ready to use a particular shell, she oils it with a solution of oil and lighter fluid, which restores the natural color and luster that the sun might have bleached out.

In collecting shells, Mrs. Whitehurst looks for a whole, unbroken shell with good luster. The luster is especially important, she pointed out illustrating her point by comparing some unused dyed shells with natural color ones. Some broken shells have caught her fancy, too, and occasionally she creates a picture with broken or "scrap" shells.

She does her own framing for her pictures, many of which grace the walls of the Whitehurst home. Some have gone to relatives as gifts and some have been sold.

Two other hobbies have complemented Mrs. Whitehurst's interest in shell art. She paints using oils and acrylics, and she is accomplished at drying and arranging flowers. Some of her dried greenery finds its way into the shell pictures when leaves are needed. And the dried flowers and artificial flowers of shells can mix in arrangements.

An instructor in the Department of Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology at East Carolina University, Mrs. Whitehurst holds a B.S. degree and the M.A. degree in Education. She and her husband, Norwood, have a daughter, Nora, who is two and a half.

WORKMAN'S CADDIES. . .are used by Mrs. Whitehurst in storing each shell according to size, shape and color. Her working implements include assorted small brushes, long tooth picks, manicure sissors and various glues and cements.

No one yet refers to her as a gumshoe, a flatfoot, or even more derisively as a pig, but there she is—a policewoman, a Ms. Fuzz, performing in major American cities the same duties as the policeman.

Call it unisex in law enforcement if you care, but cops in skirts (or culottes or pantsuits) are a fact of life in cities that not too long ago had all male enforcers. Acceptance of lawwomen is a mixed bag, however, a United Press International survey around the country indicates.

The pistol-packin' mamas all right, a lot of them are not mamas sometimes are resented by their male counterparts and the male counterparts, wives, sometimes accepted without thought of discrimination, sometimes passed by for promotions and sometimes accused of being liberationists.

As Lynn Conns, 24, single, and, two years on the Tulsa, Okla., force puts it, "From the time I started college I had decided to become a police officer.

"I support the liberation movement. When people say they have never seen a woman policeman, I tell them they still haven't because there is no such thing as a woman police'man'. We call ourselves police officers, although we jokingly call ourselves Ms. Fuzz."

Graduated in Droves

Deputy Inspector Gertrude Schimmel, the highest ranking woman in the New York City police force, summed matters up this way: "We've had policewomen here since around 1888 (long before women's suffrage). They were then called matrons. Their numbers have increased gradually. But now women are coming out of the police academies in droves."

For a long while in New York City, she said, the policewomen worked in special areas, dealing with juvenile delinquency, family relationships, drugs, special detective work and the like. Now they do everything and are assigned around the clock.

Inspector Schimmel said, "There is no longer the question of men and women working together. It's like doctor and a nurse. Just accepted."

New York's police departments boasts one of the least discriminatory policies of any city in the country. Of the 30,000 on the force, 700 are women.

They take the same exams as the men, are graduated from the same police academy, have the same training as the men including use of firearms, boxing, wrestling and judo. They also do the same foot and motor patrol, direct traffic, perform emergency services, operate in high crime areas.

Cops' Wives Complain

As in several other cities hiring women officers, there have been complaints. Some wives of patrolmen have harped on the buddy system of patrol—when their husband's buddy is a woman. And some patrolmen expressed worry about what they would do in an emergency. Protect the "weaker sex?"

Surely there are dangers in the job for either sex. But the big cities do a comprehensive training job. New York, for instance, gives both sexes six months of training and then one year of probationary duty.

And a police department spokesman said that of the 53,000 who took an applicant's exam last December, almost half were women. Another indication of nondiscrimination in most cities is equal pay for equal work, although this is not universally the case.

Even as the "droves" apply, however, the percentage of women police officers remains small counted nationally, according to the Police Foundation, a nonprofit group headquartered in Washington, D.C. Its purpose is to aid police agencies in urban areas.

The foundation reported only two per cent of women making up the sworn officer force in 493 police agencies it surveyed recently. The foundation also reported that female police officers seldom rose above the rank of sergeant or detective.

Discrimination Suits

This is an issue that is going to rise frequently. Only the other day in Philadelphia, a policewoman filed a class-action suit in federal court seeking to halt what she termed a "pattern and practice" of discrimination against women in the police department.

Penelope Brace said she had been denied the opportunity to be upgraded to the rank of detective and had been threatened with dismissal because of her complaints.

In Detroit, there's a civil suit over the practice of assigning a female officer in the women and children's section to the same duties as sergeants in the detective bureau without the resultant rank or pay.

And in Oakland, Calif., one woman has a suit pending alleging discrimination because the department refused to give her the competitive test for promotion to sergeant.

Another "problem" in hiring policewomen has to do with pregnancy and maternity leave. New York reports the turnover greater among women as a result.

In Chicago, Angela Shreiner, 29, filed complaints with federal and state civil rights boards claiming discrimination and seeking back pay because she was not paid during maternity leave. She said policemen get full salary and benefits for up to a year on sick leave.

Some police departments reported masculine resentment of women but most did not.

"When I was hired, I could feel the strain of being a woman cop," said Lt. Marilyn O'Regan, administrative assistant to the Chicago Superintendent of Police.

But that was 25 years ago and today, she said, there are about 100 women in the department, mainly in youth programs, not walking the beat or riding the patrol cars.

"We don't compare the sexes," she said. "No records are kept on which sex is more successful than the other in special jobs. Women active in investigation often make arrests without company of a male patrolman."

Weaker Sex?

Chicago and other cities reported women especially helpful with "tender age" kids and juveniles. And a spokesman said, "Women have become invaluable in rape investigations because of their knack for establishing rapport with the victims..."

Whether women are the "weaker sex" concerns many cities. Sgt. Edward Snyder, head of the personnel and training department in Lancaster, Pa., said, "I would be extremely disappointed if most of our offices didn't feel this way (protective of women); that's male human nature.

"But women are demonstrating that they can take care of themselves better than men had anticipated. The assets (of the women) outweigh the disadvantages."

Philadelphia, with 66 women among its nearly 7,000 officers, reported all its women assigned to the juvenile aid division. But Capt. Ruth Carter, 24 years on the force and commanding officer of the women's unit, said the women "handle every type of case. We have no women that are secretaries. . ."

From other cities, large and small, there were these reports:

Feminine Performance

—Washington, D.C., which has women on patrol just as the men are, plans an evaluation shortly of feminine performance.

—In Dallas, Norma Ferguson talked of the wife problem. She had never heard of any trouble, though there was some talk when women started working in patrol cars. "Nothing has happened," she said. "We socialize in families now. The wives know us. They are more worried about those hookers who come on like they might take the men off against their will."

—Tulsa reported night shift doubling up of partners—to save fuel.

—Salem, Ore., reported a marriage "only last week" of two officers. Salem's acting police chief, Maj. E.J. VanOsdol, said the "feedback" he was getting indicated the men are "just a little reluctant yet to have a female backing them up."

—Boston, with 20 women on a force of 2,600, said the women had been doing the same job as the men for 18 months and "we've found they can be very effective, especially in family disturbances." The department reported "no hassles over romance or love at the first bullet."

— Atlanta, reporting 75 women on its force of 1,503, said most had been hired in the last year and "we are utilizing them in virtually every place we use men." Sgt. Mike Corbin, department information specialist, said there had been no instance where a policeman felt a policewoman had endangered him.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Saturday Evening

FAYETTEVILLE—The wedding of Miss Emily Caroline Sanders and James Ronald Sugg was solemnized in the Camp Ground United Methodist Church here Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dennis Ricks of Fayetteville, and the Rev. H. A. Lewis of Greenville. A program of nuptial music was presented by Thomas McFayden of Fayetteville, organist, and H. W. Wall of Allendale, S. C., soloist.

Daughter of Mr. and Mr. Joe Harry Sanders of Fayetteville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of angel skin fabric featuring a Venise and cotton tatting lace yoke with pink ribbon running throughout the gown. The gown was designed with a natural bodice, leg of mutton sleeves and the watteau train, flowing from the shoulders, was edged in matching lace.

Miss Paulette Sanders of Fayetteville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was attired in an emerald green velvet dress with a cotton tatting lace yoke and short sleeves. She wore a white fur pillbox and carried a white fur muff with a bouquet of pink miniature flowers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Thomas W. Sugg Jr., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Miss Susan Raper, both of Greenville, Miss Diane Ray of Fayetteville, Miss Alice Speer of Wilmington, and Miss Jean Dixon of Washington. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Joey Sanders of Fayetteville, brother of the bride, Thomas W. Sugg Jr. and Ray Sugg, brothers of the bridegroom, Donnie Rivenback and Tim Norris, all of Greenville.

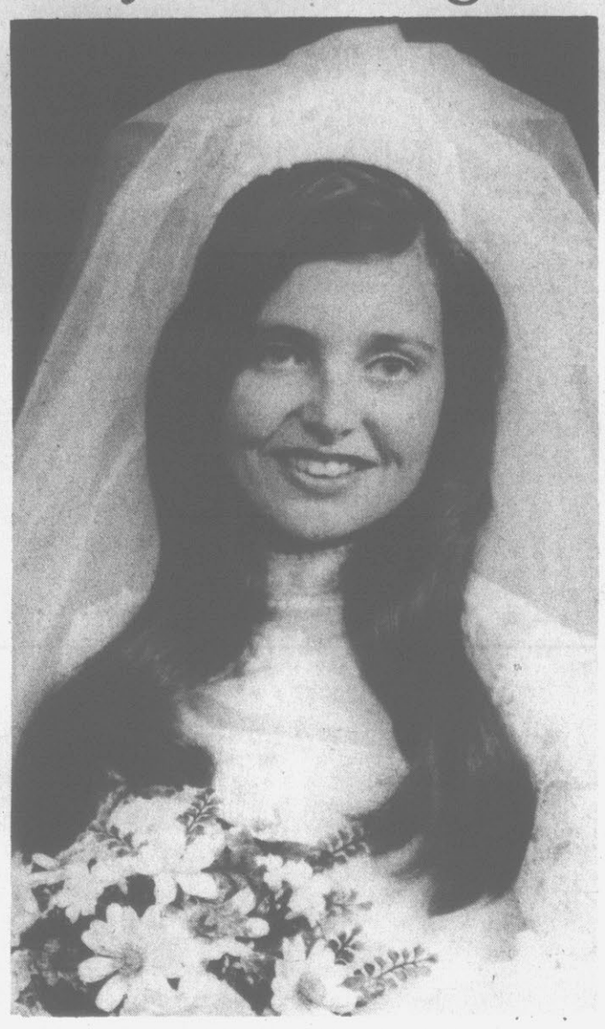
The couple will reside at Rt. 9, Greenville.



MRS. JAMES RONALD SUGG

The bride is a student at East Carolina University and is employed part time at Wachovia Computer Center. The bridegroom is a student at ECU and works part time at Glidden Paint Center.

Septuagenarian Was In The Pink

CANNES, France (WNS)—After her evening health walk Marie Accornero, 77, felt in the pink of condition. Returning to her villa on the Avenue de la Croix-des-Gardes, whe saw a light on in the living room and a burglar inside. Mme. Accornero did not bother to call the police. She walked into the house and beat the thief over the head with her cane. He fled and left his loot behind him. "I was not frightened for a moment," said the septuagenarian ladey later. "I'm too old to care."

Pedetrician's Book On Child-Raising Is Entertaining

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Make way for a book that allows a little freedom in child-raising. For the parents—and child.

"New Wives' Tales" (Prentice-Hall) by Dr. Lendon H. Smith, a pediatrician, even entertains. It also fills you with common sense solutions to problems—be they in the area of the potty, playpen or sandbox.

Dr. Smith has been in pediatrics since 1951 in Portland, Ore. He is professor of pediatrics at University of Oregon Medical School and has written other books for parents.

He says there is a need for new wives' tales for a simple reason. The old ones don't apply anymore.

There are some ground rules when you take the child to the doctor. To wit:

—Ask for the doctor's help. Appeal to the Albert Schweitzer humanitarian sometimes latent under the scientist.

—Never state the diagnosis; that is his job and the main reason he or she stays in business.

—Try to list the problems separately and in order of appearance.

—Let the doctor decide if the patient needs to be examined.

Some new wives' tales:

—"When all else fails, treat the doctor as a sane, intelligent human being who may be saddled with a few old wives' tales himself."

—"Take pictures of the baby; he'll never be that cute again." (The old wives' tale about this was that bright lights from a flashbulb will damage a baby's eyes.)

—"Eyes cross if they are going to cross." (The old wives' tale was that a baby gets cross-eyed if objects are placed too close to his face.)

—"Babies may have sore gums when they are teething, but most fevers are due to viruses." (The old wives' tale was that babies have a fever when they are teething.)

—"If the floor is fairly clean, your toddler does not need to wear shoes." (Old wives' tale held that babies must have stiff shoes when they first walk or they will become flat-footed.)

—"Beating a child for poor school performance is like scolding him for getting the mumps." (Old wives' tale—use the hickory stick.)

—"If Edison had not been thrown out of school, we might still be using candles." (Old wives' tale—if you want to learn anything, you must sit still, keep your mouth shut and listen.)

—"If your child grows up to be happier than you, he may also be smarter." (This replaces the old wives' tale holding that if child does not go to college he will be failure.)

—"Children should learn when it is appropriate to laugh and when it is appropriate to cry." (This takes over for the old wives' tale saying you should never let your child see you cry.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There are three things that are overrated in this country; sex, the FBI, and mothers who get up to get their childrens' breakfasts in the morning.

Several weeks ago, I made public the fact that once a year at Christmas I had breakfast with my children, passed out a few candy canes and told them if they were good they would see me again next year.

The mail was positively threatening. It seems there is something un-American about sacking in while your children run barefoot through the breakfast cereal and the plastic toys.

Pressured by public opinion, I decided this week to get up and have breakfast with my kids. I put on a robe, shuffled out to the kitchen, steadied myself on the door frame and announced, "I am here."

"Who is it?" asked one son.

"Snow White lives!" observed another.

"Are you all right?" asked my daughter, "or is your mattress on fire?"

"What do you want for breakfast?" I asked numbly.

"I already got it. Leftover pecan pie and catsup sandwich."

I opened a window and breathed deeply.

"Will you get the phone?" shouted my daughter.

"It's Gloria," I related, "she wants to know what you're wearing."

"She said she's wearing bright green and you'll clash when you walk down the hall."

"Then tell her the gray skirt and the yellow sweater set."

"She said those are Beaverbrook's school colors and there's a game after school."

"Then tell her. . ."

"Tell her yourself," I said, slumping in a chair.

"Can you iron this?" asked a son. "It's my gym clothes."

The stench made my eyes smart. "Where did you get these?"

"In the clothes hamper, but they were on top."

Someone was hammering on the bathroom door. "Will you get out of there so I can get my bike lock out of the pants I wore yesterday?"

"Not until you pay me the 20 cents you borrowed for lunch."

"Hey, Mom, we're running late, could you give us a ride?"

Numbly, I forced a cup of coffee to my lips. My hands shook.

"I knew she couldn't hack it," said one.

"See you next Christmas," said the other two.

Let Bridegroom Select His Ushers

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My 19-year-old daughter is getting married in the spring. We are planning a large formal wedding which will take place in our synagog. All the girls in the wedding party are tall, beautiful girls.

The problem is on the groom's side. He wants his 13-year-old brother to be an usher. This brother is very short and looks to be about 11 years old. I am afraid if he's an usher he will ruin the wedding.

I certainly don't want to cause any trouble between our families over this, but don't you think since we are going to a lot of expense to make this wedding perfect in every detail, we are within our rights to suggest they don't have this boy in the wedding party? I just know everyone will laugh because he will look like a midget.

PROBLEM IN BROOKLYN

DEAR PROBLEM: If you are Jewish, you should know that a 13-year-old male is considered a man, no matter how short he is. Let the groom select his own ushers and keep your lip zipped.

DEAR ABBY: I'm no kid. I'm 36 and a divorcee. Howie is 40, also divorced. We've been seeing each other regularly for six months and have a beautiful relationship. He is the man I'd like to spend the rest of my life with, but there is one problem. He doesn't mention marriage, and very carefully avoids saying: "I love you." He says: "I care for you, I adore you," and "You're the greatest," but he won't say those three little words I want to hear most. I say: "I love you," to him, but he still won't say it to me. There must be a reason for this. How do you interpret it?

LOVES HIM

DEAR LOVES: Howie is carefully avoiding the commitment that usually accompanies an admission of "love."

After a man says: "I love you," repeatedly, most women expect to hear: "Will you marry me?"

Howie could be allergic to orange blossoms. Before you invest any more time in the relationship, if that's what you have in mind, ask him.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a massage parlor opened up in our town. It's strictly for men, but they get worked over by women—mostly young and pretty, or so I'm told.

Now, why should we women sit home steaming, and wondering what we can do to combat this sort of thing?

I wonder why some brilliant woman doesn't open up massage parlors for women only, and have young, good-looking men there to work the women over?

The same idea could be applied to "girlie shows" where the men flock. What would be wrong with having places where women could go and look at men's beautiful bodies?

FAIR PLAY

DEAR FAIR PLAY: Your "idea" is already a reality in many cities. But for some strange reason it hasn't enjoyed the success of its female counterpart.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NAMELESS, PLEASE": Your situation reminds me of a story I once heard. It went like this: A college president told a coach [who was, at that time, turning out a winning team] that he could have his job as long as he lived. The team then lost three games in a row, so the president called the coach in, pronounced him "dead," and fired him.

Moral: Always get it in writing.

DEAR ABBY: We are studying about reproduction in school. The book says that a female can become pregnant only during a two to four day period every month, but it doesn't say anything about a man. Does the man have a certain time when he is fertile, too?

I am embarrassed to ask the teacher because I don't want to sound dumb.

WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: First: There is nothing "dumb" about your question—in fact, no question is "dumb" if it's sincere, so never hesitate to ask. The male is fertile on a nonstop basis thruout his reproductive life.

Ring enlarged to show detail.

Young Actress Works Hard At Career

By SANDRA GITTENS

NEW YORK (AP) — Deborah Allen, appearing in the Broadway musical "Raisin," says she looks forward to doing, "Oooh, everything! Just about everything in acting, except taking my clothes off.

"Why, my father would come all the way from Texas and destroy that film personally if he ever thought I was doing something like that," she laughs.

The petite actress-dancer says she literally got the part of Beneatha in "Raisin" overnight. She understudied the part of Beneatha and that of Ruth in Washington, D.C., and recalls that "the night before the show closed I went on as Beneatha.

"The producers came to see me do what I was gonna do, and they liked it. So they offered me a Broadway contract the next night, and the following Tuesday we went into rehearsal.

"It happened very fast," she admits, still seeming amazed by the speed of it all. Originally from Houston, Tex., the 23-year-old "overnight" star claims she's always been quite active. In high school, most of her serious energy went into studying dance. She had a three-year Ford Scholarship at the Houston Ballet Foundation.

Later she became a member of the corps de ballet at the Houston Grand Opera and acquired some professional experience.

At Howard University in Washington D.C., Miss Allen stopped dancing for a while and started "partying and running after boys. Then I got back together and changed my major from Greek-Classics to Fine Arts. And that's how I became interested in theater."

After graduation in 1972, Miss Allen came to New York as a replacement in "Purlie."

She says that the way things have been happening, she realized "a lot of things can come your way without your expecting them. I've been quite lucky."

Feeling that right now is a great time to be breaking into acting, she believes that although there's not a true development of black drama nor a fully developed black audience, she's not particularly concerned about future parts in an all-black company, but rather any part that she can do.

"I do think that I would be fortunate enough, however, to come into films when more black writers and producers are really in control — when people will really understand a true genre of black drama. Not just the pusher, the pimp, which is just another stereotype as was Step'n Fetchit. I don't believe either one is true.

"I'm just hoping that while I'm doing my thing on Broadway, there's a young black writer somewhere writing a role that would be good for me."

But being lucky isn't all that she credits for becoming a success. She says that her parents have influenced her quite a bit. Of her mother, a writer and poet, and father, an oral surgeon, Deborah says that although the two of them are divorced and "couldn't get it together among themselves, they got it together for us kids."

"My parents affected me in a very positive manner, because they are very different. But between the two of them, they kind of rounded out what I needed.

"My mother is a very creative woman. She always exposed us to a lot of things. Why, the museum was our playground on Saturdays. We'd go to concerts and plays — I mean most of them were free, but when she would get us interested in something, my father would always support our interest.

As a result, there's her older brother, Tex — a musician with the Louis Haynes Sextet; an actress-sister, Phylicia, who was in Melvin Van Peebles' play on Broadway, "Ain't Supposed To Die A Natural Death"; and little brother Huey, 10, as yet professionally undecided.

But the career side and the "everything in acting" is not all that this young lady is looking forward to. She also wants the other aspects of a "normal life." Some feminists might not like to hear this, she says, but she wants to get married.

"Most people think that just because you want to sing and dance, you don't want those other things. I tell you," she smiles, "I look forward to getting married and having a family. I'm gonna get married some day."

"Well, you know, I don't want to say anything too premature, but I'm going out with someone I really like. And I'm hoping. Yes I am! I'm hoping. I'm hoping to drag that man to the altar," and she burst into a wide grin.

Rogers and Mrs. Lou Ray Roberson received the awards, gold pins, which were presented by Miss Helen Perkins, treasurer of United Methodist Women, and Mrs. Phil Goodson Jr., president. The awards are given annually to outstanding ladies of Jarvis Church, members of United Methodist Women, for accomplishments through the years.

Mrs. Goodson named and recognized new officers, who will serve in 1974-75: Mrs. Jack Koonce, secretary; Miss Perkins, treasurer; Mrs. H.A. Hendrix, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Ralph Tucker, Christain personhood; Mrs. George Fleming, coupons; Mrs. Henry Ferrell, book of remebrance; Mrs. Clifton Everett, leader for Group I; Mrs. James Tucker, leader for Group V; and Miss Laura Bell, leader for Group X.

The program which climaxed a "Week of Prayer and Self-Denial" was presented by Mrs. Ralph Tucker. In her program entitled "The People's Story," she said, "We should commit ourselves to the way Jesus lived . . .to put our faith in action. . .in service to our fellow man."

In closing, she announced eight action groups sponsored by Jarvis Methodist Church and listed leaders of each group: Mrs. Hugh T. Patterson, Library and Weekday School; Mrs. Clifton Everett, VISTA or "Reading Is Fun" (collecting books for children); Mrs. Thurman R. Jones, Crusade for Christ on the East Carolina University campus; Mrs. Troy Barrett, Serve on Church School program and the Methodist Youth Fellowship; and Mrs. Tucker, Operation Sunshine and Day Care Centers at Moyewood and Meadowbrook.

Following the meeting, a tray of sandwiches and fruit was carried to the Operation Sunshine Center for the children's party hour.

Children Will Reflect Treatment They Receive

By DR. ALICE GINOTT

CHILDREN REFLECT the kind of treatment they receive. If a child flares and Mother keeps her cool, the child will simmer down. An example:

At breakfast, Mother served raw sugar.

Martha (7): I hate this stuff.

Mother: Oh, you don't care for it?

Martha: I won't eat it! It turns my cereal all brown!

She stormed out of the room. Mother said nothing. A few minutes later Martha came back to the table.

Martha: I'm going to make my own breakfast.

Mother: If that's what you'd like.

Martha went to the pantry and prepared a cheese sandwich. She finished her sandwich and milk and got dressed for school. Just as she was going out the door, she blew a kiss and said, "I'm sorry I yelled at you this morning!"

Mother related: "My daughter left the house feeling good about herself and about us. We felt good because we kept our cool.

The following episode illustrates a universal truth: In time of stress, what is needed is assistance, not criticism:

Mother (looking about): Where could they be?

Robert: They were on my desk yesterday when I came home from school.

Mother: Where do you usually keep the passes?

Robert: In my shirt. This is not the shirt I wore. He ran to the hamper, found his shirt and his passes.

Because it was late, Father agreed to take Robert to school. While waiting for his father to get ready, Robert made his bed.

Mother related: "Because Robert liked by attitude he made his bed voluntarily. In the past, I would have told him in anger, "of course you can't find anything in your messy room and messy desk. Why don't you prepare yourself the night before! Why can't you get up earlier, your sister always does."

Teacher: She is having lunch in the teacher's lounge. I am going there. Can I take a message?

Teacher: If you think it is important, you may come with me and tell her.

Student: I don't think it's important enough to disturb Miss Linda during lunch. Would you please ask her to bring some to our class when she is finished?

Teacher: Thank you for your consideration.

Boy Scouts Are In Dolls

NEW YORK (UPI) — Guess What? The Boy Scouts are involved with dolls these days.

The "dolls" are Scout Action Figures. They are the latest offspring of the GI Joe doll craze —a "doll" figure for boys that came complete with parachutes, scuba diving equipment and other sorts of soldier gear nearly 10 years ago.

The GI Joe figures were the toy industry's answer to the yen for tin soldiers. Only, like everything these days, they were bigger and better than tin soldiers. And more expensive.

With the decline in war figures and the rise of interest in less warlike toys, the people who put out GI Joes turned to the scouting scene. That's when they came up with Scout Action Figures. Notice —the doll is called a figure, not a doll.

Owen T. Wilkerson, who passes on this information, is with the Boy Scouts of America, in North Brunswick, N.J., Scout headquarters for the country.

He expects the scout figures to be around a long time. The Boy Scouts have been around 64 years.

Wilkerson reports:

"These Scout Action Figures appear to be catching on quite fast. They expect to hit the retail market this spring and really take over by Christmas.

"Will boys play with dolls?" That's a big question.

Seek Those Eligible To Join Food Aid Program

The North Carolina Department of Human Resources has recently launched a program to identify Pitt County low-income households eligible for the federal food assistance program. "Find and Feed" is the Division of Social Services name for the project, which will hopefully go a long way towards reaching the large number of those who are not involved in the food stamp program at this time.

According to a U.S. Senate report in 1973, seventy percent of the eligible families in North Carolina were not involved in the food assistance program.

In a January meeting at the Pitt County Courthouse, Mrs. Paula Kerman of the USDA Food and Nutrition Department addressed a group of Social Service representatives about the mechanics of implementing this outreach program.

She stressed that volunteers are needed to carry out the "Find and Feed" program, adding that "the most effective way of reaching potential food stamp recipients would be to canvass low-income neighborhoods door-to-door.

Mrs. Lois Ito of the Pitt County League of Women Voters is serving as the volunteer coordinator for the program. Mrs. Ito outlined the volunteers' role as not only canvassing door-to-foor, but also trying to prepare families to bring all the necessary documents when applying for the food stamp program.

She added that much publicity work is being done now so that more people in the community will be knowledgeable about this federal program to supplement low-income family food budgets.

Any persons interested in assisting the "Find and Feed" project are asked to get in touch with Mrs. Ito in Greenville at 756-4555. Also, information about Food Stamps or the "Find and Feed" effort can be obtained through the Department of Social Services (758-2167) or the VISTA office (758-5703), both in Greenville.

Liberians Use U.S. Currency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several nations have adopted decimal currency systems and now issue dollars, but Liberia is the only one to use exactly the same coin denominations as the United States. Founded by freed American slaves in 1822, Liberia has many of its coins struck by the U.S. Mint, and United States currency circulates freely in the African country.

Most Workers Drive To Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of the nation's 47.2 million Americans age 16 or older who work in metropolitan areas, most get to their jobs by car — 36.2 million. Cambodian Air War Like WWII All Over Again

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

PHNOM SVAY, Cambodia (AP) — It's like World War II all over again. Five thousand feet over the rice paddies, goggled pilots fly their little gray planes, single propellers churning the air, and signal each other "thumbs up" from their plexiglass cockpits.

By comparison with the air might the United States put into Cambodian skies until last Aug. 15 — when a congressional resolution ended the U.S. fighting role — the Cambodian air force is a mite. One U.S. B52, for example, carries a bomb load equivalent to about three-quarters of the bomb load of the entire Cambodian fighter-bomber force.

"They (the Cambodians) haven't enough aircraft and not enough technical resources or background to handle more planes or more sophisticated ones," one Western military observer says.

Military men have to ask the question — for all the bravery Cambodian pilots exhibit — can they really influence the course of a war that features encircled towns, blocked highways and fighting in areas of difficult and dangerous access?

There's no clear answer yet. Since last August, the Cambodians haven't lost a major battle that might have been won with a better air force.

The combat workhorse of the Cambodian air force is the single-propeller T28 fighter-bomber, provided by the United States prior to its bombing halt.

The "T" stands for training, as air force officers quickly point out with humor-tinged disdain. The "28" designates a model that made its debut three decades ago and has seen mounds of mothballs since.

There are just over 40 of these fighter-bombers in the Cambodian arsenal. Pilots are likewise in short supply.

About 80 qualified men fly in the air force, with about half that number now receiving training in the United States and Cambodia.

But even if additional pilots were suddenly to materialize, the air force probably would not pack a bigger punch. Ground crews can keep only a small percentage of the existing fleet in the air at one time.

An operations officer at the Phnom Penh base estimated only 12 to 15 T28s can make it off the ground on any given day. While only one T28 has reportedly been shot down by insurgent fire, at least five have crashed from mechanical malfunctions.

As much as top-ranking air force officials would like to see their service expanded, some admit they are not yet trained and equipped on the ground to absorb sophisticated jet machinery.

All, however, is not bleak. The slow-moving but accurate T28s destroyed insurgent 105mm artillery pieces during the recent siege of Kompong Cham and effectively blasted dug-in rebels inside the city itself. Almost daily, the fighter-bombers rocket and bomb Communist positions flanking vital supply routes. And they provide air cover for supply convoys plying the Mekong River between Phnom Penh and South Vietnam.

Some of the air force's 20-plus helicopters, fifteen C47s and three C123 transport planes air-lifted crack troops to stem the insurgent attack on Kompong Cham. They've parachuted supplies into a number of Cambodia's encircled towns and cities.

Foreign experts estimate it will take several years to train enough Cambodian personnel to operate modern aircraft. But to hear the pilots talk, they're overdue to get and fly "the big ones."

Photographs of the latest in air hardware compete with Playboy foldouts for wall space on the walls of the T28 squadron dayroom at the Phnom Penh air base. The esprit de corps among the pilots seems high.

"As flyboys they're first class," the military expert said. "They fly by the seat of their pants. Instinctive flying. But these guys feel they're demeaned because they fly these out-of-date planes."

In The Armed Services

Airman William C. Best (above), son of Mrs. Helen G. Best of Greenville, has been assigned to Sheppard AFB, Tex. after completing basic training. Best will receive training as a dental helper at the Technical Training Center at Sheppard. He graduated from J. H. Rose High School in 1970.

Airman David E. Little, (above) son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Little of Rt. 1, Robersonville, has completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex. During his six weeks training, he studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. He is remaining At Lackland for training in the security police field. Little graduated from East End High School in 1970.

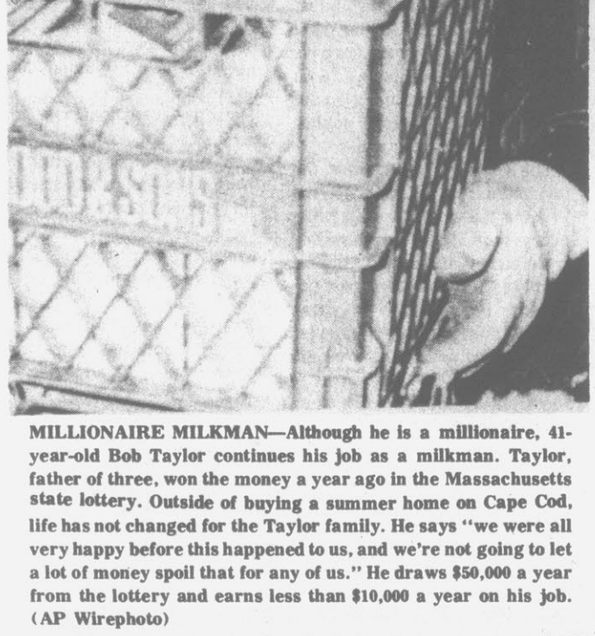
Airman Larry Thomas Lloyd, (above) son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd of Rt. 4, Greenville, has completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex. and is now stationed at Minot AFB, N.D. During basic training, Lloyd completed a Security Specialist Course which game him four college credits toward a degree. He is married to the former Kaye Chauncey of Greenville.

SM. Sgt. Ronald B. Langley, (above) son of Mrs. S. P. Langley of Rt. 6, Greenville, has graduated from the Senior Noncommissioned Officer Academy at Gunter AFB, Ala. During the nine-week course, Langley received advanced study in management techniques, behavioral science and contemporary issues. He has returned to Seymour-Johnson AFB where he is first sergent of the Fourth Combat Support Squadron, a unit of the Tactical Air Command. He is a 1945 graduate of Stokes High School.

Three Million Horses In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — As World War I neared, when the horseless carriage was still a backfiring curiosity, Americans owned some 25 million horses — or about one to every four people.

By World War II, there were between four and five million horses in America. Today's estimate is around three million — and probably increasing, thanks to a new interest in suburban and countryside pleasure riding.



MILLIONAIRE MILKMAN—Although he is a millionaire, 41-year-old Bob Taylor continues his job as a milkman. Taylor, father of three, won the money a year ago in the Massachusetts state lottery. Outside of buying a summer home on Cape Cod, life has not changed for the Taylor family. He says "we were all very happy before this happened to us, and we're not going to let a lot of money spoil that for any of us." He draws $50,000 a year from the lottery and earns less than $10,000 a year on his job. (AP Wirephoto)

'Dolly' Arrives Thursday

Barbra Streisand and Walter Matthau star as Dolly Levi, the matchless matchmaker, and Horace Vandergelder, the cantankerous merchant of Yonkers, in the film version of "Hello, Dolly!", which will have its world television premiere as a special three-hour presentation on "The CBS Thursday Night Movies" Thursday, Feb. 28 (8-11 p.m.) in color on the CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

Michael Crawford and Marianne McAndrew are featured in the film, which was directed by Gene Kelly and based on the long-running, multi-Tony-award-winning Broadway musical "Hello, Dolly!", with music and lyrics by Jerry Herman.

In the story, Mrs. Dolly Levi, the effusive and popular young window-a-bout-town, has made a successful occupation of her natural known as matchmaking.

She takes on the difficult task of locating a suitable mate for the irascible Horace Vandergelder, but the best pairing in this respect that Dolly can find is herself as the party, of the second part.

In the process of setting her own sights on the wealthy widower, she sees the opportunity for making more than one match, and methodically she goes about tying a number of blissful knots before she's through.

Gene Kelly, the director, had a host of doubts, at first.

Nonetheless, in directing this spectacular film he avoided popular concepts surrounding the transformation of a set stage piece to the screen and came out strong to do it.

"I was worried about taking on a show that's been the biggest musical hit I've seen, but that wasn't strong in plot or character, yet had a smash song," said Kelly.

"These things gave me pause, then curiosity. Then the challenge took over."

Andy Williams Hosting Grammy Award Night

One of the lucky breaks that got Andy Williams off to a good start on a singing career, he recalls, is that he had three brothers singing with him who could drown out an occasional off-key note while he was learning his craft.

The problem facing young singers today, Williams believes, is that most don't have this kind of support to give them time to polish their skills before confronting the critics on their own.

For the fourth consecutive year, Williams will host the 16th Annual Grammy Awards at the Hollywood Palladium. The star-studded presentation of the awards, which honor outstanding achievement in the field of music, will be broadcast on Channel 3N-9-11, Saturday, March 2 (10-11:30 p.m.).

Williams, who has long been atop the music world, advocates some kind of national touring company for young performers so they can demonstrate their artistic wares before the public. In essence, what Williams seems to be suggesting is a sort of vaudeville circuit on which entertainers can learn their craft and polish their sour notes, so to speak, at their own pace.

"I believe every young person with aspirations to become a performer needs a place to be heard," says Williams.

Williams started his own career at age eight by singing in a church choir with his parents and three older brothers, From there it was not long before he and his brothers were performing on radio stations throughout the Midwest.

In 1946, Williams and his brothers joined comedienne Kay Thompson in a highly successful nightclub act that toured nationally and abroad for six years.

Williams got his first big break in television in New York, as a singer on Steve Allen's "Tonight" show. His two-week contract turned into a three-year stay on that show.

"I learned a lot there," he says. "I did just about everything except take tickets. I played comedy parts and danced, in addition to my regular singing job. It was very valuable to me as a young performer, and I would like to see other young people get a chance to do that sort of thing."

Andy Williams has won three Emmys, and 16 Gold Album awards, each signifying $1,000,000 in record sales. And, one might note that singers don't win such honors until they've sweetened their sour notes—out of earshot of the mass audience.

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences (NARAS) has named nine additional presenters and eight performers for annual Grammy Awards show.

Williams also will preform, along with Tony Orlando & Dawn, Al Green, Gladys Knight & the Pips, Charlie Rich, Eric Weissberg and Steve Mandell

ANDY WILLIAMS will again serve as host when the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences honors outstanding creative achievement in the field of music, live from the Hollywood Palladium Saturday, March 2 (10:00 p.m.) on Channels 3N-9-11.

Do's And Dont's Of TV For Kids

Children watch lots of television.

Most watch it for fun. But they can also find many hours of enrichment and information, too.

Like most television programs, the ones for youngsters are generally supported by advertising. But commercials in programs designed primarily for children must meet special standards — the guidelines of broadcasters' Television Code.

Here are some don'ts from the Code: Children can't be shown risking harm. And they can't be told to ask their parents to buy things for them. Ads mustn't mislead. And they mustn't confuse young viewers or cause dissatisfaction by comparing one toy with another. Program hosts can't sell to youngsters during their programs, and famous people whom kids admire can't endorse items. Products must not be overglamorized, but shown as they are. Words like "just" or "only" can't be used to make prices seem attractive. And if a doll's clothes or batteries for a toy must be bought separately, the ad can't hide that fact. Medical remedies can't be sold in or near children's programs.

WALL GROUPINGS

When planning a wall grouping, consider whether or not the pictures are right for the room. Some pictures work well in a bedroom but are not harmonious with a formal living room. Specifically, a formal grouping usually has objects and pictures of the same mood, though not necessarily of the same period. You can mix frame styles, colors of mats, interspersed with family memorabilia or even hand painted dishes or baskets picked up during your traveling. Use your personal collections by all means.
When planning new purchases for your home or business, let us assist with your wall to wall carpeting. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

A Cash Family Affair

At the taping of the second 90-minute late-night country music special of the season, "Johnny Cash's Country Music," a friendly family atmosphere prevailed.

Hagan was referring to the fact that the 90-minute special, which airs Sunday, Feb. 24 at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 6 and 7, would be providing entertainment for the family and that many of host Johnny Cash's guests were also family.

For example, the show will include Johnny's wife, June Carter Cash, and their two teen-aged daughters. Also, June's famous mother, Maybelle Carter, and her two sisters, Anita Carter and Helen Carter, perform during the program.

"The original Carter Family is in the Country Music Hall of Fame," Johnny said, "but the Carters are ageless."

Then Johnny introduced the 1974 version of the Carter Family, which included Mother Maybelle, Anita and Helen, and Anita's daughter, Lorrie Davis.

Johnny's brother Tommy Cash, a country star in his own right who made a 27-day tour of Europe performing in England, Greece, Germany, Turkey and Italy, also appears on the special.

But it won't be all family. Also guest-starrring on the program will be 15-year-old Tanya Tucker, who will sing two of her current hits, "Blood Red and Goin' Down," and "What's Your Name"; Bill Monroe and the Blue Grass Boys, an act that is one of the originators of "Bluegrass" music and The Statler Brothers, who were discovered by Johnny and have won a dozen awards since.

Arming Of Iran Is Unveiled

The Shah of Iran for the first time has lifted the secrecy surrounding the most rapid and important military build-up in the Middle East.

He has permitted News producer-reporter Bob Rogers and an NBC News camera crew to document it in a report that will be presented on "NBC News Presents: Special Edition" Sunday, Feb. 24 (10 to 11 p.m., in color) on Channel 6-7.

In a wide-ranging interview with Rogers, the Shah defends his absolute monarchy and discusses the extraordinary growth of its new military power in what is possibly the most crucial area of the world. He also talks about the crude oil price hikes.

Iran now dominates the Persian Gulf and its entrance, the Strait of Hormuz.

FRIENDLY CHAT — Dennis Weaver as Marshal Sam McCloud, finding himself behind bars, chats with Deputy Sheriff Dewey Cobb, played by folk singer John Denver, in "The Colorado Cattle Caper," to be colorcast on "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie" Feb. 24 (8:30-10 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Emily Decided At Age Eight

Emily McLaughlin, who created the role of Nurse Jessie Brewer in the daytime drama, "General Hospital," decided on a career in the theater at the age of 8 when she saw "The Westerner" at the Starlight Summer Theater at Pawling, N. Y. Her parents were agreeable to her choice of career provided she completed her education first.

She was born in White Plains, N. Y., and graduated from high school there. After attending Southern Seminary at Buena Vista, Va., for a year, she entered Middlebury College in Vermont where she received her B. A. in American literature.

She then appeared in such Broadway plays as "The Frogs of Spring" and "The Lovers." Among her off-Broadway credits are "City Love Story" and "Troilus and Cressida." She also played in the American premiere of "The Mousetrap" in Washington, D. C., and toured with "Richard II" and "The Corn Is Green" in 1955-56.

Her television credits include "Studio One," "Kraft Theater," "Camera Three," "Bus Stop," "Twilight Zone," "Sam Benedict," "Checkmate," "Eleventh Hour" and "The Man Who Never Was." For two years she portrayed Dr. Eileen Seaton on "Young Dr. Malone." She has starred as Nurse Jessie Brewer on "General Hospital" since the show's debut on April 1, 1963.

Emily and her son, Robert Frederick Orrin, by her former marriage to actor Robert Lansing, reside in Van Nuys, Calif. For relaxation she enjoys reading, writing, swimming and hiking. She was married to the late Jeffrey Hunter in 1969.

During her summer vacation she will be returning to New England to appear in the summer stock production of "Plaza Suite" at the Barnstormers theatre in Tamworth, New Hampshire.

EMILY McLAUGHLIN stars as Nurse Jessie Brewer on "General Hospital" telecast Mondays through Fridays 3:00 p.m. on Channels 3W-5-12.

Phil Harris Still 'Typed'

Harris, in reality, never was the devil-may-care trippler he portrayed for years so successfully on Jack Benny's radio show. But the image has clung to him. As recently as 1972, the deep-voiced Southerner reigned as King Bacchus at Mardi Gras time in New Orleans, carrying a drinking cup instead of a scepter.

Although he couldn't care less about his stage image in countless nightclub and television shows, Harris does have one deep-roted desire — to land another meaty motion picture part like the one with which he made so strong an impression in "The High and the Might," in 1954.

Coburn Stars As Assassin

James Coburn stars as an international assassin, moving coolly through the scenic beauties and exotic menace of Spain's Costa del Sol, Tangier and Brussels' Grande Place in a society where life has little meaning and death even less, in "Hard Contract", an adventure film with a hard-eyed look at men, women and murder on the "ABC Monday Night Movies", February 25 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

Lee Remick, who will be seen later this season in the epic film presentation of "QB VII", is also starred as a world-weary woman who prefers lies and deception to the hard realities that have made her a rootless wanderer.

When the film was first released, critic Charles Chaplin of the Los Angeles Times found "entertainment through the suspense of its story and the interplay of its remarkable set of characters . . . the words are bright and direct . . . often acerbically funny, moving, provocative and satisfying. Coburn's deadpan methodical executioner is first-rate . . . Miss Remick is immensely good, exuding that strange nice-naughty sensuality which made her so impressive way back in 'A Face in the Crowd'."

In the story, the first directorial effort of writer S. Lee Pogostin, John Cunningham (Coburn) is an American "businessman" whose business is killing people for money, no questions asked. His "hard contract" calls for the elimination of three men in different parts of Europe — men he has never seen.

On his arrival in Torremolinos he meets Sheila Metcalf (Lee Remick), a jet-set beauty who chooses to live a life as emotionless as his own, traveling restlessly with an English aristocrat and her companion (Lilli Palmer and Claude Dauphin) and a guilty-ridden ex-Nazi (Patrick Magee). The meeting changes her life — and his — when she finds herself falling in love with this mysterious man, and he goes about his murderous business with a nagging conscience he thought had been left behind.

The film also stars Burgess Meredith as the man who takes out the "contract" and Sterling Hayden as the final intended victim.

Emotional Question Is Posed

Joseph Bottoms was asked: "What would you do if you were confronted with the situation you are faced with 'Unwed Father' — being asked by your girlfriend to give up for adoption the illegitimate baby you have fathered?"

The 19-year-old actor gave the question his full attention, turning it over in his mind, examining all aspects of it, and pobing it in depth before he replied.

"I don't know," he said slowly. "It's something I can't answer with any degree of positiveness because there are too many things to consider, too many variables. All I can say is that I'm grateful not having to decide such a vital question in my own life."

The decision motivates the plot of "Unwed Father," the "Wednesday Movie of the Week," airing Feb. 27 (8:30-10 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12, with Bottoms and Kay Lenz starring as high school students (Peter and Vicky) who differ on how to solve their mutual problem.

In the story, Peter fights Vicky and her family in order to adopt the baby. Vicky, who refuses to marry the young father of her child, thinks it's only fair to the baby to have it adopted by a prosperous young couple who can give it the comforts and advantages that go with affluence. Peter believes that a father's love - his - is more important to the child than material advantages.

Kay Lenz, who at 19 is one of Hollywood's most talented younger actresses and mature far beyond her years, didn't hesitate when asked what she would do if faced with a problem of such urgency.

"I'd keep the baby," she said firmly. "I can't understand how any mother could do otherwise. No matter what the circumstances, I couldn't - I wouldn't - give my baby away to strangers."

In "Unwed Father" both principals are given full opportunity to explain why they think their decision is best for the child. From the individual points of view, each thinks he or she is making a sacrifice in behalf of the child - one by keeping it, the other by giving it away.

Big Ambitions Drove Barbra

Barbra Streisand is the first to admit she was not a beautiful baby. Nonetheless, her fortune has been her face, her voice, her talent and individuality as a performer.

The star, who has earned famed and major awards — including an Oscar, an Emmy and a Grammy—heads the bill as the matchless matchmaker, Dolly Levi, in the motion-picture version of the Broadway smash, "Hello, Dolly!", to be seen Thursday, Feb. 28 (8-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Ambition has always been the governing force of Miss Streisand's life. Her family had clues to that strength early. "My mother says I had lipstock smeared on my face and was acting on a dresser when I was two," she notes. "She caught me before I fell. Maybe that was the first time I actually acted."

"When I was a kid — a poor one — I was certain I'd be famous one day," she says, noting that success has changed her. "It's made me nicer. My need to become famous was so strong I would have been bitter had it been frustrated. In school I was an ugly duckling and a loner. Nobody believed I could ever be a great actress and singer except me. My own mother laughed at my ambition and told me I was too skinny to aspire to the stage. Now she doesn't know what to make of my success."

There are times when Miss Streisand herself is floored by her success. During the filming of "Hello, Dolly!" autograph seekers constantly were invading the set.

"People asked me to sign autographs," she recalls, "and I forgot how to spell my name — does the 'e' come before the 'i', or vice versa? It's scary. The public creates stars and there's an illusion, and the public doesn't like that illusion to be broken. So people don't really want to know about the real me."

Although Miss Streisand has attracted success in massive doses, she doesn't find it's quite added up to the measurements of her youthful dreams.

"It doesn't even come close," she says. "The excitement of life lies in the hope, in the striving for something, rather than the attainment. I'm a practical person. To me, it's a real drag that you can't hold success in your hand like a hard-boiled egg."

Wambaugh Sure He's A Writer

Now that he has written three books and created a television series, Joseph Wambaugh believes he really is entitled to be known as a writer. The credit goes to his latest book, "The Onion Field," says the creator of "Police Story" (Tuesdays, 10 to 11 p.m.).

"I always felt after 'The New Centurions' that it could have been a fluke," Wambaugh reveals. "As far as I knew, I was the first police officer to write a commercially successful novel, and one that had been received well by the critics.

"Then I felt that 'The Blue Knight' could have been received as it was because of the first book — maybe I was still a publishing freak, a cop who writes books."

"The Onion Field" was published in September of 1973 and has been high on best-seller lists around the country. "After writing this third book, I'm sure I'm a writer," Wambaugh says.

The non-fiction book tells of the kidnapping of two Los Angeles policemen, the subsequent slaying of one of them in an onion field in Bakersfield, Calif., and the trial that follows.

"I got so emotionally involved with all the people I wrote about, and all the research I did, that I feel fiction is somewhat frivolous. I don't hope to go back to writing novels now."

KEN HOWARD portrays an ex-Marine who returns home from China in 1933 and is thrust into the forefront of the search for a notorious gang of bank robbers in "Manhunter" on The New CBS Tuesday Night Movies" Tuesday, Feb. 26 (9:30 p.m.) on Channel 11.

REMEMBER MARILYN — Peter Lawford is the host and Shelley Winters a special guest in "Marilyn Remembered," a "Wide World Special" recollection of the late Marilyn Monroe, which will be presented on "ABC Wide World of Entertainment" Wednesday, Feb. 27 (11:30 p.m.-1 a.m.) on Channel.

A Fond Recall Of Marilyn

"Marilyn Remembered," a remembrance of the charismatic and now legendary film star, Marilyn Monroe, by those who knew her both professionally and personally, will be presented in a "Wide World Special" on "ABC Wide World of Entertainment," Wednesday, Feb. 27 (11:30 p.m. - 1 a.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

Peter Lawford, who was long one of Marilyn Monroe's friends, is the host of the program which has Shelley Winters as a special guest.

John Huston, who directed Miss Monroe in her first important film, "The Asphalt Jungle," released in 1950, and her last, "The Misfits," in 1961, will narrate the story of the late star's life and career which is illustrated by film clips from a number of her motion pictures.

Other guests include Janet Raymond, a Marilyn Monroe look-alike, now aspiring to the acting profession, and Eunice Murray, Marilyn's housekeeper.

Among the film clips to be seen in "Marilyn Remembered" are scenes from "The Asphalt Jungle" - in which the young Marilyn achieved her first prominence - "Something's Got to Give," and "The Misfits." "The Misfits," in which she starred with Clark Gable, was her final completed production.

"Marilyn Remembered" revolves around the friends who knew and admired her and their reminiscences of the girl who emerged from poverty and a bleak childhood to become a screen legend long before her untimely death in 1962.

Shelly Winters, Christopher Jones and Diane Varsi head the cast of "Wild in the Streets," exciting and unusual dramatic color presentation about a 24-year-old President of the United States who tried to create the world in his own image, on "The CBS Late Movie" Friday, March 1 (Starting at 11:30 p.m.). Hal Holbrook, Millie Perkins, Richard Pryor and Ed Begley co-star.

Seven years after leaving home with the $800 he made selling LSD, Max Flatow, now called Max Frost (Jones), becomes a millionaire entertainer. At the age of 19 he lives in a Beverly Hill mansion with his hippie girl friend Sally Leroh (Miss Varis) and an entourage of associates. By double-crossing a California congressman (Holbrook) Max engineers a movement to lower the voting age to 14, then runs for President and wins by a landslide. His first official act is to send all citizens over 35 to compulsory "retirement camps" where they are kept on a steady diet of hallucinatory drugs. Although this is the new generation's world of the moment, a portent of the future is indicated when Max callously kills a pet crawfish.

David Niven Leads Cast Of Bluffers

David Niven has been signed as host-bluffer to lead a cast of bluffers through the one-hour comedy-variety special, "The Bluffers," to be colorcast later this season.

Niven has starred in countless movies, including "The Guns of Navarone," "Around the World in 80 Days" and "Separate Tables," for which he received an Academy Award as Best Actor (1958). His autobiography, "The Moon Is a Balloon" — a best-seller — reveals how he bluffed his way into a major career in motion pictures, After a brief career as a British Army officer.

Niven was one of the three original founders of television's "Four Star Playhouse" and he appeared as a performer in many early TV dramas. More recently, he has been touring the United States giving lectures and being interviewed in connection with his book.

Paul Keyes and Nathaniel Lande, who are producing "The Bluffers", describe the special as an hour "devoted to looking at the world through a rose-colored colored bluff."

Butch And His Group Fight 'Bad Guys'

Butch and his group are more than just a rock combo. They are fighters against the "bad guys" of the world, wherever they may be found.

Each week Butch and his pals check into what looks like a talent agency, where musicians would go to get work. But, with the help of automatic sliding doors, they walk into a futuristic, electronic layout dominated by Mr. Socrates, a computer.

From Mr. Socrates, they get their weekly assignment — see about a luxury yacht that's been "kidnapped" in the Caribbean, help a friendly prince who is in trouble with evil schemers in India and so on. Each week, though, the group will perform at least one rock tune.

To Name Sports Awards

Twenty-one top athletes — including such nationally known stars as Nolan Ryan, Reggie Jackson, Pete Rose, Billie Jean King, John Cappelletti, Ron Turcotte and Bill Walton — have been nominated for the Gillette Cavalcade of Sports — 1973 Awards.

The winners, who will be announced on "Bob Hope Presents the Gillette Cavalcade of Champions Awards" on Tuesday, April 2, will be chosen by a poll of the public during the next eight weeks.

Set Pre-Game Baseball Shows

A study of baseball as it is played in the Caribbean area during the off-season — including action of the 1974 Caribbean World Series — will be taped for showing during one or more pre-game segments of Major League Baseball's Game-of-the-Week in the 1974 season.

Hosted by sportscaster Jim Simpson, the features visually explore the many interesting aspects of winter baseball in the Caribbean area. The taping will take place this week in Hermosillo, Mexico, site of the Caribbean World Series.

The competition embraces teams from Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, Panama and Mexico. The teams are made up of professional players in Organized Baseball, including many stars of the Major Leagues in the United States.

This occasion will mark the second venture of NBC Sports outside the United States to cover the baseball scene as it exists in other parts of the world.

COST $20 MILLION

"Hello, Dolly!," starring Barbra Streisand and Walter Matthau, cost $20 million, making it the most lavish musical ever filmed, with almost as many stars behind the cameras as in front.

'Fly' Is Big Man At Duke

Duke's Bob Fleischer grew to be but 6-7½ and it's a shame when he has to play the likes of 7-4 Tom Burleson, 7-1 Wayne Rollins and 6-9 jumping jack Len Elmore two or three times a year.

Yet, rather than be overshadowed by the ACC's trees, Fleischer has fought through the branches to become one of the premier performers in the nation's toughest league.

Through seventeen games, there was only one big man in the conference who ranked in the top ten in every statistical category and his name was Bob Fleischer. "Fly", as his teammates call him ranked second in rebounding (12.2), second in field goal percentage (56.6), sixth in scoring (16.7) and 10th in free throw percentage (74.0).

One might say that anyone can run up their stats against non-conference "patsies" — not the case with Bob Fleischer. In eight games against league competition, he has averaged 19.1 points to his apponent's 13.9, he has rebounded at a 13.1 clip to his opponent's 11.9 and, even more impressive, he has outpercentaged his opponents from the floor, 57.8 to 45.2.

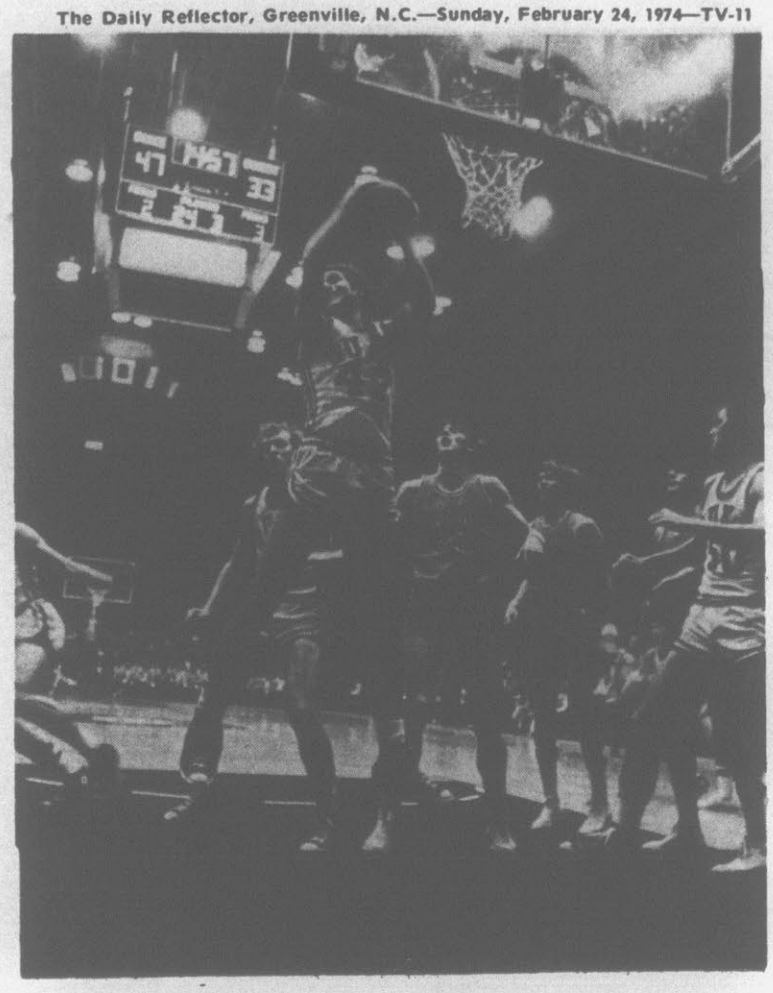
Saturday's game with 3rd-ranked Notre Dame will provide another challenge for Fleischer as he must face Irish All-America candidate John Shumate. Last season the two battled to a near standoff in Duke's 86-74 victory. Fleischer scored 13 points and grabbed 12 rebounds while Shumate tallied 17 points and 11 rebounds.

Of course, stats can always lie, says Joe Basketball Fan. Well, let's look at Fleischer's consistency. Fourteen of Duke's 17 games he has scored and rebounded in double fingers.

The only game that he failed to tally double digits in either category was in a 105-80 win over Yale in which he scored six points and grabbed nine rebounds in only 23 minutes of playing time.

How about his non-statistical attributes? His coach Neill McGeachy says, "Fly (Fleischer), is an outstanding team-oriented player and a more than competent ball-handler. He is probably the best rebounder size wise in the ACC and is a definite All-ACC choice and a potential All-America candidate his senior year."

Fleischer, himself, prefers not to talk about stats. He says, "Stats don't mean a thing, wins and losses do. I just want to have a feeling at the end of the year that I have used my ability to its fullest extent."



GETS ANOTHER — Bob Fleischer brings down another rebound against the Cavaliers. Fly is averaging 12.2 rebounds and 16.7 points per game in the rugged ACC. Duke will visit the North Carolina Tar Heels on March 2 at 1 p.m. on Channels 6-9-11, in their last regular season game.

A 'Legend' In Movie For TV

The redoubtable star makes her first appearance in a movie made for television as the imperious head of a wine-growing family in "Killer Bees" on "Tuesday Movie of the Week," Feb. 26 (8:30-10 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

By no means a television regular - she appears now and then on talk shows and recently guested with Carol Burnett doing an imitation of Charlie Chaplin. Miss Swanson began her career at the age of 13 "before the radio was even invented." Although she has made numerous films and worked with an endless list of stars, she is probably best known for her role of the over-the-hill movie star, Norma Desmond, in "Sunset Boulevard."

As to why she elected to do the story when she has turned down many other scripts, she says: "I hate to wade through some of them, they are so sordid and dreadful. The character of Mme. Van Bohlen, that I play, intrigued me. She could be just as destructive as Norma Desmond and II knew I had to work at it," she says.

Because she is lithe and moves like a much younger woman, Miss Swanson insisted she wear an old-fashioned corset to keep her back ramrod-straight in her role.

"I wear a blonde wig with braids over my ears in the movies and use a German accent," she says.

Miss Swanson also worked with bees - thousands and thousands of bees - and earned the sweet sound of applause from the crew at the completion of a scene in which swarms of them flew about her on a net-screened porch to protect the crew.

The entire production was filmed on location in Nepa Valley, Calif., and some 700,000 bees were imported to the Van Loben Sels vineyard in Rutherford, where much of the production was shot.

In the particular sequence where the star got a hand, 4,000 de-stingered bees were turned loose on her. But as the star points out with some logic, "it's the one or two that might have avoided being de-stingered that I was concerned about."

A woman of boundless energy, Miss Swanson rarely knows where she will be from week to week. Home base for her is New York City where she has an apartment. She also has a home in Palm Springs, Calif., and another in Portugal. She has many interests, one of them a clothes business, and claims she has "the most active life of anybody I know. I'm a five-ring circus," she says, "always something going on."

Additional evidence of this is the fact that her 75th birthday on March 27 will be celebrated in Paris with a film festival of her movies.

She will give listeners a 20-minute lecture on health foods at the drop of a wheat germ and feels one can stay healthy eating natural foods.

Intensely interested in today's world (she believes the current nostalgia craze stems from the realization that "something's wrong with the present"), she worries about man and what he's doing to himself and his world.

"I'm in love with beauty and in love with love and it saddens me to see people soil both," she says.

PHONE LANDING — John Wayne, as a Special Forces colonel in Vietnam, gives instructions to a helicopter for a South Vietnamese evacuation in "The Green Berets," to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" March 2 (8-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

FOR HELEN HAYES

I keep reading that you are going to retire from acting, and then I see you appear in another part. When will you* really *retire?—J. D. F., Indio, Calif.

● For the last several years I have been trying to retire by burning all of my bridges. That's why I made so many announcements that I wouldn't act anymore—to embarrass myself sufficiently so I wouldn't go back to work! But it hasn't succeeded. All along I've had this inner feeling that the theater is not good for me anymore, because whenever I've appeared in a play recently, I've become ill. The last time, I got so sick that I ended up in the hospital. The doctor told me that I was allergic to theater dust. Now, at least, I've made up my mind that I will no longer act in the theater. But I do plan to continue acting in television and movies.

FOR JACK NICKLAUS

Many experts say you're a greater golfer than Bobby Jones and point to the fact that you've won more titles than he did. What's your reaction?—Michael Mathewson, Austin, Texas

● Bobby Jones won his major titles in a much shorter period of time than I did. There's no way of telling how many he would have won if he'd taken as many shots as I have.

FOR PAT MORROW,
Rita Jacks Harrington of "Peyton Place"

I read in Family Weekly that you are interested in politics. Isn't this unusual for a woman—especially an actress on "Peyton Place"?—M. N., Columbus, Ohio

● I come from a family of lawyers, and when I was a little girl my grandfather had us watching "Meet the Press" every Sunday. At the dinner table, we children were not allowed to talk. While the adult conversation went on, we listened—so my political ambitions began early. Besides, I was taught I should pay back to America what I was blessed with.

FOR JULIET PROWSE

How do you keep such a marvelous figure? Do you keep dieting all the time?—F. S. S., Watsonville, Calif.

● I used to. Whenever I was on layoff between television shows or films I put on weight. Once I even put on eight pounds in two months! But since I had my baby a year ago, I no longer have any such problems. Don't ask me why, because I don't know.

FOR MONTY HALL of "Let's Make a Deal"

Is the money you give out on the stage real or fake?—James R. Schlegel, Dubuque, Iowa

● It's real. But in case you're wondering if I carry lots of money in my pocket during the show, the answer is no. Between deals, an associate backstage gives me the money I will use in the next deal, and then I return what is not used when the deal is completed. For very large amounts, we use checks.

FOR GEORGE HAMILTON

I saw you in "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," and you played such a weak-spirited, foolish character. How does it feel to play character parts after having been a leading man for so long?—N. Koenig, Ft. Mitchell, Ky.

● It's true I've been a leading man since I was 18, but I like playing the heavy. In fact, I think I'm better suited for it. Besides, Burt Reynolds deserved to play the lead.

FOR SEN. SAM J. ERVIN (D-N.C.)

I hear you want to make the Department of Justice independent of the Executive branch. That sounds good in light of Watergate, but would it be constitutional?—B. Foustin, Cedar Falls, Iowa

● Yes. The office of Attorney General was established by the Judiciary Act of 1789. It was not until 1870 that the Department of Justice was established by act of Congress. The time has come for Congress to seek ways to improve the administration of justice and to insure its independence and fairness.

FOR SUSAN DEY, Laurie on "The Partridge Family"

Do you think the new morality has made you freer than your mother?—D. A. A., Appleton, Wis.

● Yes, of course. But if I had lived in her day, I'd probably have been as she was. I hate to use the phrase "society dictates," but it seems to be true. Society does change. And because of changing attitudes, I am probably less restricted than my mother was at my age.

FOR SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER (R-Ariz.)

I keep hearing we've got too many generals and not enough troops in our armed forces. Just how top-heavy are we?—Thomas Lang, Canton, Ohio

● We aren't at all top-heavy. Of the leading military countries of the world, with the exception of the Soviet Union (material cannot be gathered on them), the U.S. has 54 generals and admirals per 100,000 active-duty servicemen. Only one country in the world has fewer, and that's West Germany with 47.

FOR SEN. THOMAS F. EAGLETON (D-Mo.)

Fuel shortage or not, I thought we had some sort of price controls. What's going on?—G. G. S., Logansport, Ind.

● Some increase in the price of fuel was predictable in the wake of the Arab oil boycott and the general increase in the price of imported crude oil. But I can't find any reason for the kind of increases now being freely passed to the American people. I think the Administration should order an immediate rollback of the latest round of price increases, followed by a top-to-bottom investigation of possible profit-gouging by the oil industry.

Can you spot the Camel Filters smoker?

© 1973 R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

1. Sorry. Meet "Clean Ed" Mealmangel, discount diner owner. Gimmick: Leaves his thumb print in mashed potatoes. Smokes ABL's "Any Brand Left" in the ash trays. 2. No. And no. Tex'n'Tilly, icky-poo radio-TV personalities. Gimmick: If it moves, interview it. They once even used a stethoscope to talk to a mole. 3. Jerry Jibroni. Spends so much time setting up, he never sees parade. Smokes cigarettes so super-long he almost needs binoculars to light them. 4. He's Tom Thump. His bass drum really is a gimmick: Can't stand the noise, but he likes to wear it. Puts cotton in his ears and in his cigarette filters. 5. Right. He enjoys the passing parade, without any gimmicks. That's why he smokes Camel Filters. They're good tasting, easy and honest. His kind of cigarette. 6. He's "Sweeps" Streate. Hopes mounted police won't parade. But they always do.

Camel Filters. They're not for everybody (but they could be for you).

Toyota introduces ESP.

Toyota created ESP to monitor 11 key service areas. If just one of them needs attention, ESP pops a light on to let you know. Before you find out the hard way.

So if your brake pads are wearing thin, or your brake fluid level is low or your brake vacuum booster is losing pressure, ESP tells you. If you need oil, or water in your battery or radiator, ESP warns you. And if one of your stoplights burns out, ESP is the first to let you know. Even in the daytime.

ESP works constantly when the car is running. And it gives you advance warning. So you can correct the problem before it becomes critical.

ESP is standard equipment on the Corona Hardtops. It's a built-in feature located above the driver. To check the system, turn the key, and ESP lights up momentarily to show you that it's working.

We designed ESP to save you both time and money. But there's more. We feel that ESP takes a lot of the worry out of caring for a car. And to us, that's important. A real innovation. But then, that's what you'd expect from Toyota.

How Not to Raise Your Kids

The Candid Confessions of a Permissive Parent

By Sloan Wilson
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

FAMILY WEEKLY/Elizabeth Gee

Sloan Wilson, surrounded by his children, David, Rebecca, Jessica and Lisa. He says, "My three daughters and my son survived and prospered by the grace of God, their mother and their ability to ignore almost everything I said."

Any library has shelves bulging with books by people who claim to know everything about how to raise children. But I am probably the only self-proclaimed expert on how not to do it. My credentials may in some ways be suspect, since my four children, who range in age from 27 to nine, are doing surprisingly well, but that's not because I didn't make every mistake in the book. My three daughters and my son survived and prospered by the grace of God, their mother and their ability to ignore almost everything I said.

Now one big mistake you can make when you raise children is to believe you know what you're doing. Young educated women who read a lot of books on child psychology often make this mistake, and so do old ladies with dozens of grandchildren, and so do writers like me. The truth is that the development of a child, like its birth, is fundamentally a mystery that has to be approached with awe and respect, not brash self-confidence. What works for one child may not work for another, and what works for one parent may not work for another. The reason that children are not born with sets of directions for raising them is that the emotions of human beings are too complex to be put into words.

Another big mistake you can make is to admit you don't really know how to raise them. Fathers cannot just go around blurting out the truth all the time, because children expect them to have some sort of wisdom and self-confidence. If you spank a child, you have to pretend that you're dead sure that that is the right thing to do, and if you let little Johnny smash his sister in the face with a toy train without anything but a gentle reprimand, you have to pretend that you're dead sure that this is the best way to teach self-discipline. Parents by nature have to be fakers, and that's why children are created in such a way that they really remain quite stupid for five or six years at least. If kids realized how little their parents know and how little self-confidence any intelligent mother or father has, they would be too scared to grow up at all.

"I was extremely thankful for the fact that my children turned out to be rebels, not against society, but against me, and all the permissive fathers like me. Somebody, they said, had to set the rules, and if I couldn't, they would."

Almost everybody knows nowadays that one of the worst mistakes a parent can make is being too strict. This is the way my parents ruined me. Back in the twenties, when I was raised, mothers were warned by doctors to avoid spoiling their children. Following the best scientific advice of her time, my mother gave me a bottle of milk every four hours when I was an infant, and if I got hungry before feeding time, I was just forced to cry it out—a process that, I am told, almost drove my parents and the neighbors crazy.

Cuddling a baby a lot was also supposed to spoil it. And devoted mothers spent a great deal of time keeping everything that might touch their infants surgically clean, because they knew about germs, but had not yet heard much about antibodies.

Toilet training became a grim struggle between every conscientious mother and baby. There were no sugarcoated pills in those days. When my mother decided that I needed castor oil, which the unfortunate young of that period were supposed to require frequently, she held my nose until I had to open my mouth for air and then jammed in a tablespoon of the horrible stuff. Later I had a nursemaid who washed out my mouth with soap whenever I said a bad word. When I was rude to adults, I got spanked with an ivory hairbrush, the back of which was carved with garlands of flowers I still remember vividly. When, at the age of 12, I went hunting with a shotgun my father had told me not to touch, he hit me hard with his belt. I never did that again.

My education about sex consisted almost entirely of the word don't. My father was the descendent of eight generations of New England preachers and schoolmasters, and he strongly felt that sex was for married people and nobody else. All a boy had to know, he thought, was the dire results of sin. He didn't talk to me about it much, but he used vivid language, and I got the general impression that if I kissed a pretty girl, she would have a baby on the spot and I would turn blue and drop dead.

When I got married some years later, it seemed clear to me that though my parents had been well meaning, my early youth had been unduly miserable and their methods simply had not worked. Despite my mother's valiant efforts to avoid spoiling me, my wife kept saying I was the most spoiled man she had ever met. The strict emphasis on cleanliness in my early youth had left me with an unabashed love of sloppiness. I read a lot of the new books on child care and thought I found authority for doing in reverse almost everything my parents had done.

My children were allowed to eat whenever they wanted to and almost anything they desired. It had been discovered that children toilet train themselves and that a child's body is good at fighting the germs that scared my mother so much. The medicines my children took were made to look and taste like candy. When they said dirty words, I knew that was natural, and sometimes they sounded sort of cute, so I just laughed.

As my children grew older, I gave them so many clinical details about sex and prattled so much about the beauty of it all that they soon begged me to stop. There must be something else interesting to talk about, my son said when he was about 12, and I found myself calling him a prude.

In my permissive plan for bringing up children, I had a lot of support from most of my friends in the suburbs where we lived, and some went a lot further than I did. One physician I knew was proud of equipping his 16-year-old daughter with birth-control materials and advising her to enjoy love and youth without guilt. My faith in permissive parenthood began to be shaken when his child went from promiscuous sex to heavy drugs to a serious breakdown, all before she was 20. I was also shocked when the son of another friend of mine was hit on the head by a policeman when he was caught trying to burn down a college building. It wasn't the crime or the punishment that astonished me so much as the young man's surprise. He apparently thought he could express his political beliefs by trying to burn down a building and could attack a policeman without anyone saying no and forcibly restraining him. The discovery that the world was not as permissive as his home seemed profoundly unfair to him.

Of course many of the children of the permissive parents I knew turned out fine, but there was more trouble in those suburbs where so many of us had moved for the sake of the kids than I ever could have imagined. Despite the much-advertised advent of the Pill and sex education, the local schools reported an alarmingly high rate of juvenile pregnancy and venereal disease. We started being scared by reports of marijuana in the high schools and ended by being terrified by reports of elementary school students experimenting with LSD. I was extremely thankful for the fact that my children turned out to be rebels, not against society, but against me, and all the permissive fathers like me. Somebody, they said, had to set the rules, and if I couldn't, they would. Some of their friends called them stuffy little squares, but my older children went on to good colleges and careers.

The fact is that a parent can ruin his children by being too strict and also by being too permissive. I have never found a way to map out a middle ground. Doctors and experts on child care are of almost no help because they follow as well as create the fashions of their era. My mother was following the best scientific advice available when she was so strict. Thirty years later the experts emphasized the need for love so much that my wife hardly dared to put our first daughter down long enough to cook a meal. Now the pendulum seems to be swinging back. Dr. Benjamin Spock once told me, when I interviewed him, that mothers follow the dictates of their hearts, not their heads, and he doubted that any book could change a woman's conduct. The fact that some people are too hardhearted and others too softhearted is a problem he did not answer.

"If kids realized how little their parents know and how little self-confidence any intelligent mother or father has, they would be too scared to grow up at all."

Now that I have, in the person of my nine-year-old daughter Jessica, a second chance at fatherhood, I find that I don't know much more than I did with my firstborn 27 years ago. I try to avoid the crime of vacillating unpredictably between too much strictness and too much permissiveness, but when Jessica makes me angry by making too much noise when I'm working, I'm much tougher than when she annoys somebody else. Jessica has already begun to suspect that I have no idea what I'm doing, but her mother feels that one hug is worth more than a thousand words, and when I make mistakes, Jessie goes to her. The child recently said that she always knew I loved her, because when she did something bad I yelled so horribly, but then I always came in and said I was sorry. No book on child care could recommend such a procedure, but sometimes even the mistakes work.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

IN THIS GRIND-EM-OUT WORLD, IS THERE SUCH A THING AS A QUALITY CIGARETTE?

If the cigarette is Kent there is.

We try to get rid of any taste-robbing imperfections before a Kent ever sees the light of a match. (Over 200 different quality checks in the manufacturing end, alone.)

To complement this blend, we even invented our own filter, the famous Micronite filter—to smooth the flavor of Kent.

Why are we such sticklers about how Kent is made?

Because, that way we can give you the mild, smooth taste that makes Kent what it is: America's quality cigarette.

King Size or Deluxe 100's.

Mild, smooth taste.

The last time I saw Jack Benny was in his beautifully furnished, immaculate Beverly Hills mansion. This time I faced him across his cluttered desk in his Beverly Hills office. He turned 80 on Valentine's Day, and we began talking about his proposed retirement.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Tell the truth now—could you ever think of yourself as not working?

BENNY: Let me put it this way. I could retire up to a certain point. And I'll tell you what that point is. If I made a business of my concerts—and you know I give concerts for charity all the time—if I could do enough throughout the year, then I could probably retire. You see, I LOVE to play the violin. But I also love to get laughs. And I love to talk. So when I give a concert, I can do everything I do in Las Vegas. The difference is, the people who come to concerts are pretty sophisticated—the same people who maybe come to hear Isaac Stern, or Heifetz. In fact, Isaac Stern acts as an agent for me because he tells me where they need the money. I always say he gets ten percent of nothing.

"Everybody knows my stinginess is a joke. But in order to compensate, it costs me a bloody fortune!"

FW: What do you think of today's permissiveness—particularly in movies?

BENNY: It's too bad. Producers are taking the easy way out. And the fact that the films are rated means nothing to me. I mean, either a picture should be permitted to be shown, or not, and not have an X rating or a G rating, or however they rate them.

FW: During the last election there was a Proposition 18 in California that, if passed, would have prohibited the showing of a lot of films. What did you think of that?

BENNY: I voted no because while I don't like obscene films, I don't want censorship. Of any kind, anywhere. Otherwise someone can suddenly say, "Well, we don't want this Jewish joke!" or "We don't want this Italian joke." If a proposition like that went through, there's no telling how far censorship would go!

FW: As you grow older, are you growing more conservative?

BENNY: Not if conservative means stingy, careful with money. This I have never been. Neither has my wife. If I had, I should be the richest actor in show business. But politically—well, I am not a party man. I've never been a Democrat or a Republican. I don't want to get hooked, I guess—I just want to vote for who is right.

FW: You say you aren't stingy. How did that joke start?

BENNY: By accident. In one of my old shows there were a couple of jokes about my being stingy. The audience laughed. A little later, when I did a weekly show, we used the same gag and it worked again. All of a sudden I became a stingy character. And then I realized how humorous it was, an element that is easy to laugh at. It's easy to relate to.

FW: Has this ever gotten out of hand?

BENNY: Sometimes when I do guest shots, they plan on doing too much, and I'll say, "Hey, wait a minute, fellas! I can't be stingy throughout the entire show! There must be other things to do." I'm so identified with it now that I don't have to spell it out anymore. For instance, on the Dean Martin show I walk into a restaurant and a reporter comes out and says there's a big comet in the air and it's going to hit the earth in about five minutes and the earth will be destroyed. I don't say a word, but I go to the phone, and I say to the operator, "Who do I see? I just put a dime in the phone box...." I don't have to go any further. Just my going to the phone gets the laugh.

FW: Did anyone ever take your stinginess seriously?

BENNY: No. Everybody seems to know it's a joke. But in order to compensate, it costs me a bloody fortune! Even with charities. I'm forced into giving a lot more than I can afford sometimes.

FW: How about your insistence that you are 39 years old? How did that get started?

"I don't give a hoot how much people liked me on radio or in vaudeville. That's gone."

BENNY: I kept the year 37 for a couple of years. When I was 38, I kept that up for about another three years. Then when I got to be 39, for some reason or other we thought 39 was a funny number. Also, a lot of little kids think that when you are 40, you are an old man. And who wants to be old?

BENNY: Well, once we decided, for the publicity, to have a big 40th birthday. You can't imagine the letters I received, including one from The Christian Science Monitor, begging me not to do it. The Monitor's letter wasn't humorously written, it was serious. They said that most people know my right age [Jack was born Benny Kubelsky on February 14, 1894]; but the people say, "Well, if Benny stays 39 and keeps working, I can keep on working, too!" So I stayed 39. But we don't play that bit much anymore. Or the Maxwell car joke. That's old stuff now—it's become corny.

FW: You don't look much older now than you did 20 years ago. How do you manage to stay in such good shape?

BENNY: Luckily I don't care much about eating. I love breakfast, but after that I can go on practically nothing. And I play golf—not as much or as well as I used to. But I think the most important thing is to do things mentally. I love to work.

FW: You once told me that one of the reasons you stayed young was because your grandchildren kept you young. Is that still the case?

BENNY: Maybe that was right at the time, but today I feel it's my work that keeps me young. I like practically everything I do, and I don't delve into myself. I don't give a hoot how much people liked me on radio or in vaudeville. That's gone. And when somebody asks me, "What did you like best, radio or television?" I say, "When I was in radio, I liked radio. But I couldn't wait to get into television. If there is something after television, that's what I will like!" You don't live for yesterday or even today. You live for tomorrow.

FW: Did the fact that you and Mary worked together for such a long time help your marriage?

BENNY: Yes. But you know, it was quite by accident that we became a team. When I met her she was selling ladies' hosiery at the May Company. In those days a lot of comedians would bring a girl out onstage to work for them. They were supposed to be dumb girls. All the comedians had dumb girls. Well, one day the one working for me became ill and Mary knew the part, and I said, "You know, you could do this beautifully!" And she did.

FW: After that, did you teach her a lot about the business?

BENNY: Mary's knowledge about show business is absolutely amazing. She claims she learned certain things from me, which she probably did, but there are certain things that you instinctively have to do correctly to succeed. Like she would know enough not to try hard for jokes, that if it was written correctly on paper all she had to do was read it. That's why Ronald Colman and his wife were great on my show. They were dramatic actors, but all they did was read the comedy lines exactly as they were written.

16 Answers To The Questions Dieters Ask Most

Answered by the Doctor Behind The "Computer Diet" Program

By Evan Frances

If you are like most Americans, you are currently on a diet, you have recently abandoned a diet, or you are considering going on a diet tomorrow (or next week, or next month). And, if you are like most Americans, it has not worked, is not working, or will not work.

How come? We asked a renowned medical authority on obesity, Georgina Faludi, M.D., Director of the Obesity and Diabetic Clinics at Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital in Philadelphia. The Hungarian-born Dr. Faludi has studied the cases of thousands of frustrated dieters in the course of her distinguished career. She knows just about every reason (and excuse) for failure in the book. She also knows the nutritional hazards of dieting. And she has invented what she feels is the answer—a new individualized diet program wherein the dieter's regimen is mapped out by a computer capable of making 600,000 separate calculations a second!

Marvin Koner

Dr. Georgina Faludi

Here are some of the most-asked questions Dr. Faludi encounters—the kind that helped her formulate her program—plus more facts about how the computerized program works:

1. Do you think most fat people eat from loneliness, lack of self-esteem or frustration?

Yes—from one or more or a combination of all. The trick is to do something about it. Join a club, change your job, or if you can't do that, learn a new skill or hobby or craft. Start a weight-whittlers group, meet once a week and weigh in "publicly." Don't spend the evening talking about weight. Once the weighing is over, plan to go to a movie or have a discussion about a best seller or a headline story. Then reward your top-loser by paying his or her movie ticket or by giving him or her the best seller.

2. How can I keep myself from midnight-snacking?

If willpower alone won't do it, keep sliced carrots or celery in ice water in a see-through glass jar up front in your refrigerator so they're the first thing you see when you open that verboten door. Also—wrap no-no's in opaque paper and keep them way back in the refrigerator.

3. Must I stop using salt?

No, but use it sparingly. There's enough salt in food without you adding it. If the taste is flat, try lemon-pepper, onion powder, garlic powder, basil and other herbs. They add fillip to foods without adding calories. In any case, promise not to add salt before tasting your food.

4. I never eat breakfast. Must I?

Skipping meals is not good practice. You may not notice it, but you build up an appetite for the next meal and overeat then. If you skip breakfast, your daily consumption will usually be higher than normal. And, although skipping may make you feel noble at the time, by the end of the day you'll be irritable and mad at yourself. This kind of thing is destructive—does terrible damage to a diet regimen.

5. How much should I lose?

There's no general rule. Statistical tables are for the majority. It's a good idea to ask your doctor what he considers an ideal weight for you. When you begin to diet, you'll lose weight

320 almost secret ways to get something back for your tax dollars right away!

by Gary Halbert

Dear Taxpayer:

What do you get?

The "poor" get federal housing, food stamps, and other welfare benefits. The rich get oil depletion allowances, lower interest rate loans, and expense accounts.

What do you get?

The answer to that one is easy. YOU GET TO PAY TAXES! Isn't that nice? It is a bit depressing, isn't it? To work so hard for your money and then each year give Uncle Sam a bigger and bigger share of it.

What can you do about it?

Well, you could always cheat. Or move to another country.

But seriously, if you are already claiming all of the legitimate deductions you are entitled to, there is still something you should do. And that is...MAKE SURE THAT YOU ARE GETTING EVERY PENNY'S WORTH OF GOVERNMENT BENEFITS THAT YOUR HARD-EARNED DOLLARS ARE PAYING FOR!

Millions of Americans just like you are already collecting on them. For example, RIGHT NOW, you and your family may well qualify for one, several or all of these government benefits:

- $5,000 in government loans at below market interest rates—if you know how to apply for the loans!
- Full scholarships and other financial assistance for education. Uncle Sam is paying good money just to locate deserving students!
- Low cost insurance. You can save hundreds of dollars with special government policies!
- A 5-acre vacation hideaway for you and your family. Prices begin as low as $25 an acre!
- Social Security benefits before you reach your sixties. One and a half million children receive social security checks each month!
- Free employment assistance if you are having trouble finding a job because you're not a youngster anymore!
- Free help from the U.S. Secret Service to protect you against counterfeit money and forged checks!
- Free plans and architectural designs for 12 different structures—from a 3-bedroom house to a boat landing!
- A $25,000 start-your-own-business loan, with 15 years to pay it back!
- Free aptitude tests (that would cost you up to $25) to find the job you are best suited for!
- 25% to 75% of your rent paid by Uncle Sam—if you qualify and know how to apply!
- Free government land to stake your claim when prospecting for gold, silver or other valuable minerals!
- Free government service to help you locate lost marriage or divorce records!
- Free protection for your children against hazardous toys provided by the government Office of Consumer Affairs!
- The right to enter a fabulous government sweepstakes—a public drawing to claim oil and gas rights to public lands. Profit potential ranges from $5,000 to $75,000!

You know, a person could fill an entire report just listing little-known government benefits that are available to every U.S. citizen. I know, because with the help of a friend, I did. It's titled "HOW TO GET WHAT THE U.S. GOVERNMENT OWES YOU". It has 320 government benefits that most people have never heard of. But it doesn't just list them, mind you, it tells you how to get them! It tells you how to qualify, who to contact (including all necessary addresses) and what to say.

I am thinking about publishing the report in a hard cover edition selling for around $8.95. Perhaps I will. But this has been a labor of love for me. And right now I'd like the satisfaction of immediately getting the information into the hands of as many short-changed taxpayers as possible. So I've had a local printer reproduce the manuscript in report form and bind it with a soft cover. And I am offering it, personally, direct, by mail, for only $3.00.

If you are interested, please let me know right away as I have only ordered a small press run.

P.S. If you don't take advantage of these benefits, you are only cheating yourself. After all, you've already paid for them. So, order today and see for yourself the hundreds of FREE and inexpensive things the government has for YOU and your family!

P.P.S. Two extra reports, FREE, when you order right away! Free Report No. 1: "Who To Complain to in the U.S. Government"—the complete details on who to contact when you have a problem! Free Report No. 2: "Directory of Regional and Local Addresses of U.S. Government Agencies—so you don't have to go to Washington to get information and satisfaction!

Dieters' Questions

rapidly; then, as you continue, you'll probably slow down to two pounds a week. Later still, you may only lose a pound or so a week. Don't forget: A pound a week is 52 pounds a year!

6. I've been told fish is a dieter's best friend. Why?

Because pound for pound fish has far fewer calories and just as much protein as choice beef. And by the way, another "best friend" is water. You can't drink too much of it. Drinking water not only helps ward off constipation, but taken before meals, a glass of water inhibits your appetite. Sip it slowly—in fact, learn to sip all liquids and chew all foods slowly.

7. If I eat healthy food, why do I have to control my portions?

Because a properly balanced diet means eating the correct portions of food from each of the food groups.

8. Is saccharin safe to use?

It has been used for many years. If you must sweeten your coffee or tea, saccharin is the best bet.

9. Can I include margarine in my diet instead of butter?

They have precisely the same number of calories. But diet margarine has more water and therefore fewer calories. Whenever possible, avoid butter, margarine or diet margarine. Use non-stick coated pans for frying.

10. Why is buttermilk okay if butter isn't?

Buttermilk is what's left over when the butter is taken out. It is an excellent source of protein and has fewer calories than either butter or milk. Try to cultivate a taste for it.

11. Can I use a cream substitute in my coffee?

No. Most such substitutes are made with vegetable oils and have as many calories as cream. Learn to like black coffee or tea with lemon. After two weeks, you'll never miss the cream or milk.

12. Must I do without ice cream forever?

No—not after you reach your ideal weight. For now, substitute ice milk or give yourself a "malted" treat before bedtime by electric-blending one cup of modified skim milk with two ice cubes, a powdered-sugar substitute and/or two rings of canned, unsweetened pineapple or four fresh strawberries or a tablespoon of instant coffee or a teaspoon of vanilla extract.

13. If I try your computer diet, do I have to eat everything on it?

No, but in order to keep a balanced nutrition you should eat at least a part of everything prescribed. Try not to make up for the difference you missed. Just because you skipped something at lunch does not entitle you to a bigger dinner.

14. Do I have to count calories?

No—the computer has done that for you. We just want you to make certain you measure amounts prescribed and adhere to them.

15. Why is this diet better than the "new revolutionary" no-carbohydrate diet I read so much about?

Because any diet that deprives you of essential food ingredients or nutrients is unhealthy. There is a certain amount of protein, carbohydrate and fat needed for your general well-being and maintenance of health. It is possible to lose weight faster in the beginning on a crash diet, but there is no diet that is safer for you than our individually-computed-for-your-needs diet. Besides, our diet alters your eating habits for life.

16. Can my friend go on the same diet I go on?

Why haven't you gotten the message?

There were a lot of people ready for Vantage when we were ready with Vantage. And you wouldn't believe how quickly they began buying them up.

Apparently, many smokers were concerned about 'tar' and nicotine and wanted to smoke a cigarette that reduced 'tar' and nicotine without reducing flavor.

And that's the idea behind Vantage Filter. It gives you the flavor of a full-flavor cigarette. Without anywhere near the 'tar' and nicotine. And it does that better than any other cigarette on the market.

With one exception. Vantage Menthol.

But the problem with Vantage Menthol is that a lot of smokers don't even know that there is a Vantage Menthol.

And there we failed.

In our effort to let smokers know about Vantage, we allowed our menthol to play second fiddle.

Vantage Menthol has the cool fresh taste all menthol smokers go for, and at the same time reduces 'tar' to 11 milligrams and nicotine to 0.9 milligrams.

Now we don't want to fool you. You will find a few menthol brands with lower numbers, but you won't find one that you'll enjoy smoking as much.

Vantage Menthol is here.

If you're ready for us, we're ready for you.

Ready for the family: Dinner Special Pot Roast surrounded by vegetables makes good eating. Other go-withs are whole green beans, baked apples and whole wheat bread.

DINNER SPECIAL POT ROAST

Clear cooking wrap with foil edges
3 lbs. beef, brisket or round
1 envelope from 2¾-oz. pkg. dry onion-soup mix
1 tablespoon flour
1 lb. carrots (about 4-5), quartered
2 lbs. potatoes (about 4-5), peeled
1 green pepper, seeded and slivered
¼ lb. fresh mushrooms, rinsed and sliced

1. Preheat oven to 400°F. Line a large 1½-2-inch-deep roasting pan with cooking wrap long enough to enclose Dinner, plus 3-inch overlap.
2. Trim meat of excess fat. Center meat on wrap in pan, sprinkle soup mix and flour around it.
3. Surround with vegetables.
4. Double-fold wrap, leaving 3-inch overlap, and seal foil edges; pierce wrap on top with meat fork 6 times.
5. Bake 1¾ hours, or until meat is tender and vegetables and potatoes are cooked through.
6. Unfold wrap carefully. Serve Dinner from wrap if you like or arrange it on platter. Makes 6 servings

BUTTERED GREEN BEANS

Clear cooking wrap with foil edges
1 lb. fresh, stemmed, whole green beans
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
4 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, if desired

1. Place green beans on sheet of cooking wrap long enough to loosely enclose vegetables, plus making a 3-inch overlap. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with water; dot with butter.
2. Double-fold plain edges of cooking wrap and foil ends to form package.
3. To cook in oven: Pierce top of wrap with meat fork a few times. Place package in pan and cook with meats about 30-35 minutes, depending upon oven temperature for meat roasting.
4. To cook on range: Place package in skillet with 1 inch boiling water. Cover; cook about 15-20 minutes, or until tender. Keep water boiling in pan at 1 inch throughout cooking time. Makes 4-6 servings

Editor's note: We don't suggest cooking more than 1 lb. beans in package. To cook more, use another package.

BAKED APPLES WITH RAISINS

Clear cooking wrap with foil edges
6 (2½-3 lbs.) medium Rome Beauty or Greening apples, washed and cored
6 tablespoons brown sugar
6 tablespoons raisins
6 teaspoons butter or margarine
¾ cup orange juice, apple juice or cider

1. Preheat oven to 400°F. Line a 2½-inch-deep baking dish with enough cooking wrap to enclose apples, plus 3-inch overlap.
2. Place apples on wrap; fill centers with 1 tablespoon each of brown sugar and raisins, and 1 teaspoon butter. Pour orange juice over all.
3. Double-fold plain edges, making 3-inch overlap; double-fold foil edges to seal; pierce top of wrap 6 times with meat fork. Bake 25-30 minutes, or until apples are fork-tender.
4. Serve warm with syrup from pan. Makes 6 servings

an expert answers your questions about muscles

Our files show that thousands of readers like yourself want to build bulging muscles and achieve real physical power like their favorite athletic champions. How to go about it? We decided to ask an expert, Dave Prowse, 3-times British Weightlifting champion and leading fitness expert. Here are his answers.

Q. What does it take to build muscles?

A. Basically, it takes exercise. Almost any exercise will help to develop at least some of your muscles if you keep at it long enough and hard enough.

Q. Isn't there an easier way?

A. Yes. There is one outstandingly effective training method that is also fast and easy—the one I use and recommend—the new Bullworker system.

Q. What's that?

A. The Bullworker is a revolutionary new muscle-building exerciser based on Isometrics, the science that increases strength up to four times faster than conventional methods. In my opinion, it's the most advanced training system in the world today. Many leading athletes use it: World-famous Heavyweight Boxer Muhammad Ali, World Heavyweight Judo Champion Wim Ruska, and Cycling Champion Eddy Merckx, to name only a few.

Q. How long does Bullworker training take?

A. Bullworker provides absolutely the fastest kind of exercise possible. In fact, an introduction training program takes only 70 seconds a day. No other system—weightlifting, pulleys, or strenuous calisthenics—can give you results so quickly and easily. On the contrary, many old-fashioned methods take hours of sweaty, boring work each day . . . and it's often months before you begin to see improvements. Busy professional athletes and champions don't have time for that. Nobody does.

Q. How long does it take before you begin getting results?

A. With the Bullworker, you can actually begin to see and measure the positive results right from the very first day! Thanks to a built-in measuring device called the Powermeter. After every exercise you just check the reading to see exactly how much your strength has increased from the day before. There's no guesswork involved. Isometric Bullworker training can increase your power at the amazing rate of up to 4% per week! That means a 50% increase in strength in the first three months alone. And I've known many young men who have gone on to double and even triple their strength.

Q. What do those figures mean in visual terms?

A. They mean that in as little as 14 days you can actually begin to see muscle growth in a mirror and verify it with a tape measure. Every week thereafter brings ever faster growth.

Q. But to get such impressive results, don't you have to work very hard?

A. Absolutely not. That's the outstanding advantage of Isometric training . . . it's so amazingly easy! Each "Static-power" Isometric exercise takes only 7 seconds, and you barely have to move. It's not even necessary to disrobe. The Bullworker is so light and compact, it can be used at home, in the office, anywhere . . . even while watching TV! It's a great improvement over bulky, expensive weights, bicycle machines, pulleys, etc.

Built-in Powermeter
You can actually measure your musclepower g-r-o-w-i-n-g from the very first day.

Q. Can Bullworker training even develop bodies which are weak and skinny, or fat and flabby?

A. Definitely! It's been proven by thousands of men of every shape, size and age all over the world. Bullworker training helps transform weak, thin arms into rippling, muscular pillars of strength, build broad, powerful shoulders, turn flat, shallow chests into deep, manly ones, forge loose stomach flab into steel-hard, well-defined muscle . . . build that "V" shape of a real athlete, develop sturdy, contoured thighs and calves. . . . And all this in record time!

What's more, I've known skinny, shy fellows who, after just a few short weeks with Bullworker, turned into real go-getters . . . every inch a man . . . bowling girls over with their dynamism, confidence, and new found power! You really have to see the remarkable effects of Bullworker for yourself to believe them!

Q. How can our readers find out more about the Bullworker, perhaps actually try it for themselves?

A. I understand that the Bullworker distributor in the USA is now making it available—free—on a two week home-trial basis in order to introduce it to the general public. If your readers are interested in developing their bodies, in building muscles and strength faster than ever before possible, I suggest that they contact the US distributor for full details.

The Doctor Lets You In

Why You Can Feel Pain In a Leg That's Not There

Perhaps you've heard that when a person loses an arm or leg, he often still feels pain in the amputated limb. This is called "phantom pain" or "phantom limb." The person does not imagine the pain—it is really there. But it is produced psychologically. How? Subconsciously, everyone has an image of how he looks—a "body image," if you will. This image tells us we have two legs, two arms and other structures. But suppose we lose the lower part of a leg. Now, nerve endings at the knee feel sensations and relay a message of pain to the brain. Our brain, patterned to keep our body image intact, interprets the sensations as coming from the missing foot. There is no successful way to treat such pain, except perhaps by suggestion, hypnosis or acupuncture (although eventually changes may take place in the central nervous system and the pain will go away by itself). It all goes to prove that the mind and the body are very complex in their interrelations.

An Outstanding Collection

Master Sculptor Alfred Brunetti has re-created four of the most significant events in our long struggle for independence: "The Spirit of '76", "Paul Revere's Ride", "Betsy Ross Creates the First Flag", "Washington at Valley Forge." Each plate measures a full 9" in diameter. Group them side by side on your wall. Or showcase them on the attractive custom easel that comes free with each plate and display them on your mantel or table. Together they are a living re-creation of the American Revolution which your friends and neighbors will admire and envy. You can hand them down with pride to your family for generations to come.

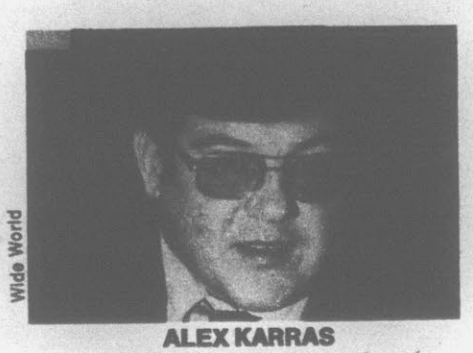
SCAMPY
Super-mutt

"If all humans had the good qualities she has, the world would be a wonderful place to live in." This was the letter and the dog that won the hearts of the judges who recently chose "Scampy" Mutt of the Year—a title we think this floppy-eared bundle of fuzz certainly has earned. Her entry was submitted by the Marlfield Old People's Home in Hampshire, England. Scampy, who is nine years old and who lives at the Home, was awarded this handsome silver trophy and a year's supply of dog food.

What do you do if you are a middle-aged woman who has gone back to work after the children are out of the house and your new boss makes a pass at you? "Frankly at my age, I'd like to be flattered by the thought, but I would be more likely to think that he needed a new pair of glasses," says Nancy Cory of Asheville, N.C., an author of "The Kelly Girl Second Career Guide"—a new source of information for women who want to return to work (Little Brown, $3.50). For Mrs. Cory, the hardest thing to face when she embarked on her second career was "suddenly finding myself taking commands instead of issuing them. Most women are so used to running husband, children, volunteer organizations, etc., it's hard to adjust to 'not being the boss.'"



Wide World

ALEX KARRAS
Like reaching for an apple . . .

What did the Detroit Lions' former defensive tackle, Alex Karras, used to think about while the quarterback called the signals? "Well, if it was fairly sure to be a pass play, he was the one I thought about. The quarterback. He's the guy I had to get to. I couldn't think about the man in front of me; I had to get around him as quickly as I could. One could say that the offensive lineman has no more significance than the fence you climb over to get an apple off the neighbor's tree. The apple is what has all your attention. Any time I began to think about killing the man in front of me, then I was not going to be able to rush the passer." From "Mad Ducks and Bears" by George Plimpton (Random House, $7.95).

NEW TWIST

They've bottles, now, for medicine
That have a special lid.
They can't be opened, it is said,
By any prowling kid.

This special lid or top is safe
It will not yield to childish yank
Or common twist or turn.

I have a bottle full of pills
I keep upon a shelf.
The top's secure—I've tried, and I
Can't open it myself.

Yours is the wide one, Corky.

But, Honey, that's not what I asked you!

I know what you asked me.

But all you had to say was, "Your brush is blue".

And they say we bicker! Hah!

Yeah! How about them?!

They argue a lot more than we ever do.

Mom, if you don't stop the arguing, we're gonna send you to your room!

And Daddy, if you don't quit, we'll cut off your allowance for a whole week.

Why? Was it my fault?

You're right!

Thanks, Mom.

You're welcome, Dear!

Prince Valiant®

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: ARN GOES BEHIND THE GRANDSTAND TO FETCH A NEW LANCE FOR SIR GAWAIN AND, QUITE BY ACCIDENT, UPSETS THE CHARCOAL BRAZIERS OF THE VENDOR OF FISH CAKES.

HANDING A LANCE TO GAWAIN, HE SAYS: "REST AWHILE," AND RIDES ACROSS THE LISTS TO THE LINE OF IMPATIENT CHALLENGERS AND TOUCHES WITH HIS LANCE THE SHIELD OF THE KNIGHT NEXT IN LINE TO CHALLENGE THE WEARY CHAMPION

"THIS IS NO FIT CHALLENGE!" HE ROARS, "I WON'T FIGHT A MISERABLE SQUIRE." "I AM PRINCE ARN, SON OF ALETA THE QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES AND PRINCE VALIANT, KNIGHT. DO YOU RENEGE?"

HE COULD NOT WITH HONOR RENEGE, AND ARN, WHO WAS NEVER GOOD AT JOUSTING, NOW HAS A CAUSE TO FIGHT FOR—GAWAIN'S REPUTATION. INTO THAT CHARGE WENT YEARS OF PRACTICE AND THE TEACHINGS OF LAUNCELOT, GAWAIN AND PRINCE VALIANT.... AND A BIT OF TEMPER.

ARN JOINS GAWAIN. "GO PACK YOUR HAIR OIL, COMB AND BRUSH," HE SAYS, "FOR WE ARE LEAVING LYONS. THERE IS SMOKE COMING FROM THE KING'S PAVILION AND WHEN THOSE GAUDY DRAPERIES CATCH FIRE THE TOURNAMENT WILL END."

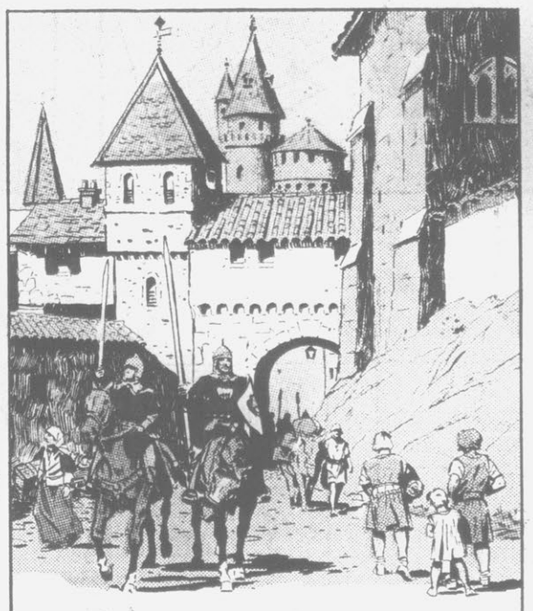
EVEN AS HE SPEAKS, THE WINDBLOWN DRAPERIES BURST INTO FLAME AND THE PAVILION EMPTIES LIKE AN OVERTURNED BUCKET OF PRAWNS.



THEY RIDE OUT OF LYONS, AND DESPITE HIS SPRAINS AND BRUISES, THE AGING SIR GAWAIN IS STILL THE GREATEST CHAMPION, SAVE ONLY ONE, SIR LAUNCELOT.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Light is different. 2. Cap is missing. 3. Cord is different. 4. Board is missing. 5. Belt is missing. 6. Cuff is missing.

'TIS SAID a man attending a long-winded lecture with his wife fell asleep, and, in a vivid, realistic dream, found himself in 18th century France where he was sentenced to the guillotine. In his dream, he was led to the block and then strapped into place.

Suddenly, the executioner let fall the blade, at which moment the man's wife poked her program gently into her husband's throat. Both guillotine and program touched at the same instant and, so great was his shock, he fell dead.

If death was due to instantaneous shock, how does anyone know what the man dreamed?

BULLETIN BOARD

●WITS TESTER! Write the number of the month in which you were born. Multiply by 2; add 5; multiply by 50; add your age; subtract 250. What does the answer suggest?

First, the month in which you were born and then your age.

●Among letters in the place-name UNIONDALE, N.Y., are all of the vowels of the English alphabet. Can you think of another place-name that has them?
