

Thirty-One Units Await 'Occupancy'

By TOM BAINES

Final inspections have been made on 31 units located on the west side of 14th Street in Newtown and only the receipt of shipments of stoves and refrigerators and their installation stand in the way of occupancy.

Ralph Hall, site inspector of the Newtown project, told Housing Authority commissioners Monday night that, as far as construction is concerned, the 31 units are complete and ready for occupancy.

Hall reported that he made final inspections Feb. 28 with a representative of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, architect Cameron Dudley, and the Authority's assistant director J. C. Lamm, and only three minor items requiring touch-up were found.

He said that the HUD official expressed his approval of the units and was pleased with the unit construction. The official recommended that the units be accepted for occupancy, subject to completion of rough grading of the west side site, providing sidewalks to every unit, and providing access from the street to the parking lots.

Hall told commissioners that, barring unfavorable weather, the three items should be taken care of this week.

Executive director Joe Laney reported that ranges for all 78 units in the project are ready for shipment to Greenville and the Authority is in the process of lining up storage facilities for the appliances until they can be installed.

He added that the Authority was notified that the refrigerator supplier is currently out of ten cubic foot units and it will probably be around the 21st to 25th of this month before they will arrive here. The Authority does have several spare refrigerators on hand, he said, and when the ranges arrive, it is hoped that four units can be made ready for occupancy with the use of the spare refrigerators in order to take care of the most needy families who are in critical need of housing. These four units will hopefully be ready within 14 days, Laney said.

The director pointed out that when the shipments of ranges and refrigerators are on hand, installation will only take a day or two. He said that there is a good chance that by the end of the month, the Authority will be able to start moving families into the west side units.

The west side buildings include one five-bedroom unit, two three-bedroom units, four two-bedroom units and 24 single bedroom units. The single bedroom apartments are designed primarily for the elderly.

Hall told commissioners that he expects the other 47 units on the east side of 14th Street to be ready for final inspections within 30 days.

Mrs. Sallye C. Streeter, director of tenant affairs, reported that only one unit out of the 453 operated by the Authority was vacant during the month of February and that vacancy in the Meadowbrook area was due to a death.

Rent averaged $36.53 in the N.C. 22-1 Meadowbrook area, she said, while tenants in N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park) paid an average of $43.48. Residents in N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood) paid an average of $43.85 in rent and tenants in N.C. 22-4 (Moyewood) paid an average of $43.98 in rent.

Mrs. Streeter said that the staff is still in the process of screening applications for N.C. 22-6.

Commissioners authorized the attendance of two staff members and one commissioner at the annual meeting of the Carolinas Council April 29 through May 1 in Charlotte. Laney will attend the session as an officer of the council.

Bikeways Plan To Be Outlined For City Council

A proposed system of bikeways for the city, prepared by the office of the City Planner John Schofield, will be discussed with the City Council at Thursday night's Council meeting.

In his report, Schofield notes that in 1973, some 2,250 bicycles were registered in Greenville and at the end of the school year, 1972-73, East Carolina University had registered 1,700.

He adds that, "It is estimated that there are 4,000 registered bicycles represented about half of the bicycles in Greenville."

With sales increasing yearly, the City Planner points out, the number may soon pass 10,000. He adds that bicycles compete for a limited amount of roadway and when an accident occurs, it is almost always harmful to the bicycle rider.

The report proposes a bikeway plan for Greenville "to provide the bike rider with an element of safety and to insure efficient movement of both bicycles and automobiles."

The system proposed in the report is approximately 31 miles in length, with the cost of implementation figured at between $29,000 and $32,500. The report also includes a "more basic system of 22 miles and costing between $10,000 and $12,600."

Schofield notes in the report, "It is felt that any system will only begin to meet the needs of Greenville's bicyclists. Hopefully a coordinated system can be developed between the city and the university that will insure the greatest amount of safety possible."

Will Argue Disposal Grand Jury Report

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge will listen to arguments in open court Wednesday before deciding what to do with the secret Watergate report given to him by a federal grand jury.

After meeting with attorneys in his office for more than an hour, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica scheduled a hearing for 10 a.m. Wednesday and said that "all interested parties may state their views regarding the disposition of the report and recommendation filed last Friday by the June 1972 grand jury."

Sirica's office refused to say who had asked for the hearing.

Participants in the meeting included James D. St. Clair and Richard Hauser from the White House; Henry S. Ruth, deputy special prosecutor, and Philip

A. Lacovara, Richard Ben-Veniste and Peter Kreinder of the prosecutor's office, and John J. Wilson and Frank Strickler, attorneys for H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

The surprise announcement raised the possibility that the White House planned to oppose release of the report and possibly its transmission to the House impeachment inquiry.

Sirica had ordered all parties not to discuss either the report or the indictments returned by the grand jury Friday. But sources said the report contained the grand jury's findings on the role of President Nixon in Watergate.

White House deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said, "Our position will be made known in open court. I have nothing further to say at this time."

Warren's statement came only a few hours after he told newsmen "there is no present intention" on the part of the White House to ask that the report be withheld from the impeachment inquiry.

Warren said St. Clair, the President's chief Watergate lawyer, had asked for the meeting. He said he was unaware when he made his earlier statement that St. Clair planned to meet with Sirica.

Participation of Wilson and Strickler in the meeting indicated the prime concern may have been public release of the report. As defense counsel for two of the men indicted Friday, they would be concerned that release of the report could prejudice the case against the former White House aides.

Haldeman and Ehrlichman were charged with conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury stemming from an alleged effort to block the investigation of the Watergate break-in. Five other Nixon associates also were indicted.

Monday, Haldeman called a news conference on the front lawn of his Los Angeles home and predicted he would be exonerated of the conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury charges against him.

In a related development, the prosecutor's office asked the U.S. Court of Appeals to deny Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt's request for reversal of his conviction in the original Watergate break-in case.

Also Monday, Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee said the committee was pondering its next step if the White House refused to turn over material requested for its impeachment inquiry.

End of Arab Oil Embargo Anticipated During Week

Contend 'Plot' In Damascus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger escaped an apparent assassination attempt in Syria because his talks with President Hafez Assad ran late and kept him from sightseeing at a famous mosque, U.S. officials said.

In Damascus, a Syrian government source said the report was "unfounded" and "seems designed to upset the diplomatic process that has been begun between the United States and Syria."

Like the U.S. officials responsible for the report, the Syrian source refused to be quoted by name.

Kissinger had a visit to the Omayyad Mosque on his schedule last Wednesday in Damascus, but he was up until almost 4 a.m. conferring with Assad about a possible disengagement with Israel and then returned to see the Syrian leader after a few hours' sleep. Despite the Syrian denial, U.S. officials stood by their account.

As a result, the officials said, Kissinger canceled the stop at the eighth-century shrine near the heart of a crowded market area. Instead, he drove to the airport and flew to keep an appointment with Israeli leaders in Jerusalem.

But he planned to visit the Mosque Saturday morning when he returned to Syria with Israel's proposals.

Kissinger was flying back to Damascus Friday night when word first came to him about the plot, the officials said. He decided to play it safe and avoid the shrine on his second visit.

Palestinian terrorists apparently were behind the reported attempt to slay the secretary. Kissinger and his aides declined to supply details.

go against the United States with supplies at pre-October-war levels is the optimistic expectation of advance next Sunday's meeting of Arab oil ministers in Libya.

Prices are likely to drop to about $7 a barrel from the current $11.65, it was learned as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger returned from an eight-day trip to the Middle East and Europe.

Restoration of production, coupled with conservation measures taken during the recent squeeze, will bring about a plentiful supply of oil for Americans, according to estimates.

In Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabian oil minister and a key spokesman for the petroleum producing states of the Middle East, called for an end to the Arab oil embargo. The Wall Street Journal reported today, Yamani said the Arab cut-off of oil to the United States no longer served any useful purpose.

At the same time, U.S. officials are concerned that the political crisis in Israel could set back Kissinger's scheme for

Boy Rescued From Mudhole

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Rescuers pulled a 13-year-old boy from an eight-foot-deep mudhole that almost swallowed him at a construction site Monday night.

Billy Reynolds had been up to his chest in mud before the Charlotte Life Saving and First Aid Squad got him out after a 45-minute struggle.

Timber, and a ladder to which block and tackle were attached, were used. At first, efforts were made to dig him out. But a rescue worker said, "Quick as we could dig with our hands, the mud would come back in. It was almost like quicksand because it pulls you in."

The rescue squad had been called after a passing motorist tried to get Billy out. He was stuck for an hour and one-half altogether.

having Israel and Syria begin to negotiate through him in Washington a disengagement in the Golan Heights.

Israeli diplomatic and military representatives were due in about two weeks, to be followed within the next two weeks by a similar Syrian mission. But now, officials say, the plan could be derailed if Prime Minister Golda Meir's Labor party has to join forces with the opposition Likud to form a government.

Meanwhile, the president of the Baltex Oil and Gas Corp. of Malakoff, Tex., said that his firm had a deal for 30 million barrels of Saudi Arabian oil. W. Page Ballard said the oil would be shipped each month for five years to the United States.

Ballard said he contracted for the oil through a bank in Malaysia and had no direct dealings with Saudi Arabia.

The price of oil before the Arab-Israeli war was about $3.01 a barrel. Since then, production has been cut about 25 per cent and an embargo imposed against the United States and the Netherlands for their support and friendship for the Jewish state.

U.S. experts consider $7 a barrel somewhat high, but they also are concerned that a lower price could discourage develop-

Nixon Portrait Said Stolen

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—The Duke University Law School, where President Nixon earned his law degree, says a painting of the President worth $12,500 has been stolen from its practice court room.

A spokesman said the portrait was taken between 11 p.m. Sunday and 11 a.m. Monday from the moot court room. It had hung behind the judge's bench for many years.

ment of alternative sources of energy. Kissinger and his aides will say nothing publicly about the Tripoli meeting.

But Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Algeria and other Arab states are now understood to be united in wanting to have the embargo removed and full production resumed. Until now, there have been reports of a phased step-up of production once the embargo is lifted.

Cabinet Is Named

LONDON (AP) — Newly installed Prime Minister Harold Wilson named his Labor cabinet today and immediately began urgent talks to settle the national coal miners' strike.

Michael Foot, named as employment secretary, called in members of the miners union executive. He also had an appointment to meet the employers, the National Coal Board.

The coal strike, now in its fourth week, threatened to bring the country's economy to a halt as coal stocks approached crisis level. Most industry has been on a three-day work week since Dec. 31 to save fuel.

Foot, an intellectual left-winger and former journalist, sits in the House of Commons for the coal mining district of Ebbs Vale in South Wales.

The miners' executive met in special session this morning in anticipation of early talks to meet their pay claim. Wilson, who earlier made clear his first priority was to end the strike, had separate meetings arranged with leaders of both sides of industry, the bosses and union leaders.

Except for the surprise selection of Foot for the employment post most of Wilson's cabinet jobs went to men who served in the last Labor government. James Callaghan, former home secretary, was named foreign minister. Denis Healey, who served Wilson before as defense secretary, became chancellor of the exchequer.

New Tobacco Marketing Plan Drawn

RALEIGH (AP)—A technical committee has drafted a new plan for marketing flue-cured tobacco that is designed to provide fairer sales opportunities for farmers.

John H. Cyrus, marketing specialist with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, said the plan would disregard the five traditional flue-cured belts and would set up five new production areas. Each area would consist of counties where the leaf maturity date is about the same.

Cyrus said the committee would submit its plan to the Industrywide Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Committee at a meeting in Raleigh March 14.

Cyrus said the plan calls for sales to begin in the five areas at one week intervals so that the time elapsing from their opening in Georgi-Florida to Virginia would be about four weeks. Markets in all areas would open earlier than they have in the past.

The marketing expert said the plan also calls for tying the sales opportunity available to each grower directly to that grower's effective leaf poundage quota.

Cyrus said that under the plan the sales season for each market would last approximately the same number of weeks.

He said this would eliminate much of the pressures created by the previous system of closing sales in one belt before sales in another belt opened.

In addition, he said the plan doesn't call for any more buyers and graders than were available last season. He said the buyers and graders would rotate between markets within each production area.

The technical committee included representatives of the state departments of agriculture from each of the five flue-cured tobacco producing states—North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Virginia,

Commissioners Approve Buying New Equipment

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday approved the purchase of a new off-set printing machine for the county.

County Manager H. Reginald Gray said the cost of the new printing machine and plate maker would be $5,971. The new unit will replace an old model not in working condition.

According to Gray the county owned machine saves the county a considerable amount of money in outside printing costs.

In other business yesterday commissioners approved payment of $457 to the Greenville Utilities Commission—the final payment of the county's $30,456 share—for extending sewer service to an industrial site on the Phil Carroll property near the intersection of North Greene Street and N. C. 11-U. S. 13.

Commissioners also approved county participation in extending water mains to the Proctor and Gamble plant site North of Greenville. The county's share of the cost of that project is estimated at $77,206.

Commissioners gave final approval yesterday to an ordinance regulating parking in the county-owned lot adjacent to the Court House to persons conducting business with the county in the court house.

Persons parking in the lot in violation of the ordinance—the new law provides—will be towed away at the owners expense.

The board also held an executive session, discussing the purchase of a new county landfill site West of Greenville.

Priority Given To Agriculture

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Gasoline available to motorists will fall between 25 and 35 per cent short of demand this summer, an executive vice president of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana predicted Monday.

Blaine Yarrington, in Minneapolis to speak at today's Farm Forum, told a news conference there was "no question that we'll provide farmers with 100 per cent of their requirements."

"Agriculture gets its supply off the top, and then come other priority customers, with the motorist on the bottom with the least priority," he said.

Yarrington said he believes the price of gasoline will not rise above 75 cents a gallon this summer.

ECU Streakers Generate Onlookers But No State Record

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer
East Carolina University students failed in their attempts to set a national streaking record—even break the state record—here last night. But at least some of the nude dashers certainly should be cited for an individual record for the length of time spent running around unclad.

Last night's streaking began about 7:30 in front of Belk Dorm at the top of College Hill Drive. Twenty-five to 30 males ran from the dorm with a crowd of several hundred on-lookers cheering them on.

After the initial dash, several streakers broke from the building one at a time, or in pairs for a short time before an announcement was made of an 11 p.m. streak and the crowd of curious viewers left.

The 11 p.m. streak was simply the warm-up for a 1 a.m. assault on the streaking title. They came one at a time, then in pairs, until a dozen, then 20 streakers were again gathered outside Belk Dorm for the 11 p.m. nude dash.

It is these first dozen nude runners that should be given the individual "length of time spent running" record. They kept at it—one at a time and in pairs—for an hour or more.

After mid-night the hundreds of gathered spectators—including ECU students and townspeople lured to the scene by a live remote broadcast of the night's activities over a local radio station—moved from Belk Dorm to the tennis courts nearby, where streaking leaders attempted to produce the mass run which would win for ECU the national title (set in South Carolina with some 500 streakers last night).

The attempt failed, however, when only 150 to 200 persons, including three or four co-eds and not all nude, ran down College Hill to Tenth Street (where they were stopped by police) and returned once more to the "Hill."

ECU police officers patrolling the "Hill" made no attempt to interfere with the happy crowds of viewers or the performers.

One male student onlooker was overheard talking. "It's the highlight of their college career. They'll flunk out the next test. If you add up their IQ, they'd be morons."

Another male said "it's fun to watch, but not participate."

Nancy Moore, a freshman co-ed from Wilson, however, seemed to sum up the feelings of most.

"It's funny...sort of stupid...just a lot of fun," she said as she viewed the streakers.

Running wasn't the only way of streaking last night. Two nudes (one male and one female) made the rounds on a motorcycle, while another nude couple drove through the milling crowd in a car.

One topos co-ed, chauffeured through the crowd by another (but fully clothed) girlfriend also was seen.

It was this car that caused a minor incident at one point near midnight.

Driving through a crowd of people, the vehicle knocked several on-lookers to the pavement, and pinned one student's leg between it's bumper and another car, without serious injury, however.

Two streakers were arrested by Greenville police in downtown Greenville about 1 a.m.

Leslie Darden White, 20 and Linda Marie Pastsari, 20, both of 305 East 14th St. were taken into custody at the intersection of Fifth and Reide Streets on charges of indecent exposure and taken nude to the county jail. They were later released on bond.

Women In Army Reserve Cite Reasons For Joining

By Cindy Adams
NEW YORK (WNS) — What do waterfront stevedore officer Captain Krans, marine engineer Sgt. Kluttz and wheel vehicle mechanic Private Brooks have in common? They're women in the Army Reserve.

And why, you ask? Answer, according to Beverly Krans, aged 32, unmarried, and whose duties encompass loading and unloading at the 1176th Outpost of the Brooklyn Army Terminal: "I was trained as a teacher but that wasn't satisfying and neither was clerical work. At a point when personal problems urged me to change my life I met a WAC who praised the Service. My mother, apprehensive and against the idea, today is as patriotic and proud as I that I wear the uniform. So, after 5½ years of active duty I'm now in the Reserves."

Margaret Kluttz, a 38-year-old grandma, married 21 years to a school teacher and a 15-year veteran of both the Active and Reserve Army right from high school "wanted an education and figured the best and cheapest way is through the government."

The lady sergeant who works on 100-foot tugboats in her transportation unit and overhauls engines on ship-board still retains her femininity. "Just because this is a greasy job dealing with diesels," she says, "doesn't mean I want to be thought of as a man. My hair is always done, my nails are polished, and I wear lipstick and full makeup on the job including flase eyelashes and perfume. I also work in gloves whenever possible. At all times I carry myself as a lady. I won't be thought of as one of the guys!"

Neither Krans nor Kluttz supports Women's Lib. "I enjoy having my cigarette lit and my door opened even when I'm in uniform, and I want my co-workers to watch their language; and if our dining table needs wiping I do it because that's women's work," says Sgt. Kluttz. "I'm definitely NOT Women's Lib," announced Captain Krans. "It's equality only in work. If we do the same we should be paid the same but there's no femininity lost. I've dated fellows in and out of service and a man will treat you as you want to be treated."

"I admit there were some hassels in the beginning," said PFC Linda Brooks, 27, of Waverhill, Mass., the first woman graduate of the Fort Dix, N.J. vehicle mechanics school. The 5'2", 100 lb brunette who topped her class of 84 (83 were gents) explained:

"I'm mechanic oriented. My brother builds commercial machinery. My father collects antique cars. I already truck-and-a-half trucks and I'm now qualifying for the five tonner. My husband's in this same reserve unit and when he joined he said I should, too, so I did."

Benefits of the part-time occupation of Army Reserve are opportunities to learn skills in 118 career fields with $600 to $2,000 swelling your annual civilian income while living at home and devoting only one weekend a month and one two-week period a year to the Service.

Wedding On, Off Like Weight

MUNICH, West Germany (WNS)—Ernst Spiegler, 40, fell in love with Ella Wolff, 33, by correspondence. He proposed marriage after she mailed him a dozen photographs of herself as a slim, blonde, beauty queen. When he finally met his future bride to arrange the wedding, he discovered that she currently weighs 152 lbs. "My weight goes up and down like a yo-yo," apologized Ella. "The wedding has been postponed by mutual agreement until I take off 25 pounds. It won't be long."

MARINE ENGINEER...in the Army Reserve, Margaret Kluttz, is also a 38-year-old grandmother.

Total Fashion Look Counts

By SANDRA GITTENS
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Designer Frankie Welch says a well-dressed woman should not stand out in a crowd.

"I feel that when a person walks into a room you should not say 'Oh, isn't that a beautiful dress!' I think you should say, 'Oh, isn't she a striking person!' or 'Isn't she 'WOW!' or whatever. But not, 'Look at that dress.'"

Mrs. Welch, who dresses many of Washington's fashionable women, owns a boutique in Alexandria, Va. She says the total look of a woman counts — her eyes, the way she talks. Her clothes, Mrs. Welch says, should become an important part of her.

As consultant and fashion adviser to many women, including Mrs. Gerald Ford, wife of the Vice President, Mrs. Welch says she often refers to a point system when instructing a woman on what looks good. "I've been using the point system for about 20 years now, and find that it can apply to anything. Mainly it uses principles of art, so that your costume has balance, harmony, rhythm and proportion," she said.

The rules may be applied to Indian jewelry, a new fashion for many women, about which Mrs. Welch has written a book titled "Indian Jewelry."

"If you're wearing an Indian necklace, let's say, then I would leave the belt and the bracelets off. But, sometimes you throw all the rules out the window."

Holding a silver and turquoise necklace against her brown dress, Mrs. Welch explained that older women may neglect the many possibilities of Indian jewelry simply because they are unaware of them.

For instance, Indian jewelry may be worn with all colors. It complements all skin tones, she added, in comparison to jewels like topaz which do not complement fair-skinned persons.

Mrs. Welch is a Georgia native who says she'd like to educate the public about American Indians. Her great-great-grandmother was a Cherokee, and she values that heritage. People should always be aware of their heritage, she said.

Her interest in jewelry as an art form was spurred eight years ago when she designed a Cherokee alphabet scarf which is used as a logo for her shop. The boutique is papered in fabric of the same design.

The present rage for Indian jewelry, she added, started over three years ago when an

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A bachelor recently received six months' probation after pleading guilty to a federal charge that he falsely claimed ten dependent children on his federal income tax. Listing his age as 20 probably wasn't the brightest cover-up in the world, but the kid showed some imagination and I like that.

More and more I have noticed that the average citizen is bucking the IRS. It isn't a mass mutiny, just a few isolated attempts at rebellion. Like the man who filled in his name and address and said the remainder of the questions was an invasion of privacy. (He was ordered to Missouri for psychiatric examination.) And the citizen who paid his taxes with 85 pounds of pennies. And on a smaller scale, the man who sends his return in every year with postage due.

"Boy," said my husband, "I'd like to have the guts to pull off something like that."

"Are you crazy?" I shouted. "Do you know what happens to people who get cute with their tax returns? They audit them and make them public."

"So, what have we got to hide?"

"Nothing, but if they made our tax return public, we'd be the laughing stock of this country."

"How do you figure that?" "Do you want the world to know that we spent $7.61 last year on entertaining?"

"$7.61," he repeated numbly. "That's right. Clifford Irving spent more on entertaining and he was serving time. And can you imagine the humiliation of people discovering we have only reduced our loan $126.30 in 12 months. And have earned $3.10 in interest on our savings?"

"That's unreal," he said. "Not only that. Do you know what we had to list under major expenditures last year? A new toaster at $23.95."

"That bad," he mused. "Look at these gifts to charity. Beside us, President Nixon looks like Santa Claus."

"Then where did the money go?" he asked. "Bad habits."

"Like what?" "Like feeding and clothing our exemptions."

My husband didn't say anything for a moment. Then he grabbed his jacket and headed for the door. "A guy two blocks over has a skull and crossbones with IRS in big black letters on it waving from his flagpole. I'm going over and salute it!"

I trembled as I embraced him. "Don't let anyone see you," I said.

Cooking Is Fun!

DINNER FOR SIX
Poached Sole Potatoes
Green Peas SaladBowl
Fresh Pear Pie Beverage

POACHED SOLE
A range-top dish.
2 pounds sole fillets, rolled and secured with toothpicks
10¼-ounce condensed chicken broth, undiluted
¼ cup chopped scallion, green tops included
2 tablespoons dry vermouth
White pepper to taste
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water
1 egg yolk

In a large skillet place the fish; add broth, scallion, vermouth and pepper. Bring to a boil; cover and cook gently, turning fish once, until opaque through when flaked — about 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove fish to serving platter; remove toothpicks; keep warm. Stir together the cornstarch and water until smooth; gradually whisk in some of the hot broth mixture; return to skillet; cook briskly, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling. Whisk egg yolk; gradually whisk in some of the hot broth mixture; return to skillet; cook gently, stirring constantly and without boiling, just enough to cook egg yolk — a few minutes. Drain any liquid from fish; spoon sauce over. Makes 6 servings.

dry milk to one liquefied kind and make your own cocoa mix with cocoa, dry milk and sugar.

Think big when you shop for canned goods. If you can't use them in case lots yourself, make a deal with friends and relatives to share canned goods bought by the case at discounts.

Some other ideas the magazine didn't mention include:

Organize Car Pool
Buy flour, sugar, rice and other staples in large bags. Rice and sugar keep indefinitely in airtight containers. One friend, who lives in rural Maine, stores flour in her freezer for months at a time.

If your car is large enough, organize a pool with neighbors for weekly grocery shopping trips.

Store extra loaves of bread and cartons of milk in your freezer to save extra trips to market.

Good cooking smells good, so why use your kitchen exhaust fan all the time? It can remove heat from the whole house or apartment.

Check pan lids to make sure they fit tightly. Food cooks faster in a tightly covered pan.

Turn a burner on after a pan is on it, and before you remove the pan.

If your teakettle doesn't whistle, watch for steam coming out the spout steadily and turn off the heat at once.

Before you go on vacation, empty the refrigerator of perishables and unplug it.

Home Economist Gives Tips On Energy Saving

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — More thoughts on licking the energy and economy crises in the kitchen:

From Valerie Clark, home economist for Wisconsin Electric Power Co.:

Avoid opening the oven door unnecessarily when baking or roasting. You can lose as much as 20 per cent of the heat each time you peek.

In range-top cooking, fit the pan to the burner. A small pan on a large burner wastes fuel.

Straight-sided saucepans and skillets are energy-savers.

On an electric range-top, flat bottomed pans are more efficient than ridged ones because they contact the entire heating surface.

Use Little Water
Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit at sea level. Once it starts to boil, use the lowest possible heat to retain that temperature. Higher heat won't make the water any hotter.

Use as little water as possible in cooking vegetables. You'll conserve more nutrients and need less fuel to heat the pan.

Don't fill your refrigerator so full that air can't circulate properly. A moderately filled one works more efficiently, with lower fuel costs.

Organize the refrigerator's contents so you won't have to keep the door open for long periods searching for various items. And open it as infrequently as possible, to avoid overworking the compressor, and using excess energy.

Check the refrigerator door gasket. If it's loose or leaking cold air, replace it at once.

Plan Meals Ahead
Miss Clark also recommends defrosting whenever the frost becomes a quarter inch thick. Her tips appeared in Our World, a publication for Tupperware dealers, managers and distributors in the United States.

The magazine had other useful ideas for saving money as well as fuel:

Plan meals a week at a time and shop once a week, for everything except necessary extras such as bread and milk.

Cut up chickens yourself — you can save as much as five cents a pound.

Make fortified milk by adding

Are termites destroying your valuable property?

Termites could be working on your home right now without your being aware of their presence!

Junk Mail Sent Back To Company

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Here's how I have succeeded in getting my name off "junk" mailing lists: I simply cross off my name and address, and write, "REFUSED—RETURN TO SENDER" on the envelope. Then I drop it in a mailbox.

It costs the company money to receive this piece of mail back, so they seem eager to drop my name from their list. Of course, you must refuse the mail without opening the envelope, but I've gotten off numerous lists this way.
MRS. C. B.: LOMITA, CAL.

DEAR MRS. B.: Thanks for the tip. Some of those folks who impose their junk mail on people are going to hate us!

DEAR ABBY: My husband insists that because boys will be boys, every boy should have his first sexual experience with a prostitute. He has several reasons: She can teach him about sex, there are no repercussions from the encounter, and it's preferable to learning with some Mama's girl in the back seat of a car.

I didn't know whether to laugh or hit him but on recovering, I informed him that the boy could wind up with V. D., and as for learning about sex in a house of prostitution, that was tantamount to learning about good food in the town sewer.

I also asked him if he thought that when our daughters reach their late teens, they should go to a male prostitute, to learn all about sex, 'cause "girls will be girls," just as boys will be boys. He didn't think that was funny, and said to ask Abby. So I'm asking you.

DEAR M.C.: If prostitutes offer educational courses for inexperienced boys, it's news to me. Perhaps your husband knows some who do. [Is he a graduate?] And what if a student develops such a ferocious loyalty to his "alma mater" that he keeps going back for graduate courses?

I'm on your side, Mother. And I'll bet the prostitutes are, too.

DEAR ABBY: I am nearly 90 years old and have a question which I hope you can answer for me as it has troubled me for a long time.

A relative of mine has the one and only picture of my dear departed mother and her first child—my older sister, who is also now dead. I know that it is possible to have pictures copied. I imagine they simply take a picture of the original, which should do no damage to the original.

My problem is that this relative refuses to let that original picture out of her sight. She is now convinced that it will do the original no harm to have a picture taken of it, but is there any place where this can be done while a person waits? She will not hear of leaving it overnight anywhere. She lives in Chicago. Thank you.

SIGN ME "OLD"

DEAR OLD: There ought to be a photographic studio in Chicago that would produce a copy of the original while you and your relative wait. Ask around.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

Senate Pay Hike Foes Win In First Test Votes

Terrorists Warn Dutch Not To Try Skyjackers

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A guerrilla group claiming responsibility for the hijacking and arson Sunday of a British jetliner warned the Dutch government today against prosecuting the two hijackers. "We hold the Dutch government fully responsible for whatever may happen to our comrades," said a statement published today in several Beirut newspapers. It was signed by the Arab Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine.

The two hijackers, who identified themselves only by the code names Abu Said and Abu Ali, surrendered to police at Amsterdam's Schiphol airport after they doused the interior of the plane in the supply of Scotch whisky that was on board, told the 102 passengers and crew to get off and set the plane afire.

Two passengers were slightly hurt sliding down the emergency exit chute, and the plane was virtually destroyed.

The terrorists said their group planned to attack other British and American planes because the countries supported Israel in the October war.

The Nationalist Youth group also claimed responsibility for the hijacking of a KLM jumbo jet last November shortly after it took off from Beirut. Those hijackers surrendered in Dubai, one of the Persian Gulf oil sheikdoms, and the plane, passengers and crew were not harmed.

Another terrorist group warned Egypt today against permitting a trial on its territory of the five Arabs who fire-bombed a Pan American jetliner in Rome and then hijacked a Lufthansa plane to Athens and Kuwait last December, killing a total of 32 persons.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The issue of a pay raise for congressmen and other high government officials still is unsettled, but opponents won decisively in the first test votes in the Senate.

A resolution to kill the salary increases is pending, but a filibuster to keep it from being brought to a vote is threatened and other maneuvers are in prospect.

The pay raises budgeted by President Nixon, 7.5 per cent

this year and for each of the next two years, will take effect automatically Saturday unless disapproved by the Senate or the House.

The next scheduled Senate vote in the controversy is Wednesday, on the question of whether to invoke the Senate's debate cutoff rule.

A two-thirds majority is necessary to put the rule into effect, and the outcome is in doubt.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who is opposed to the pay raises and who has been urging the Senate to settle the issue, said Monday that he still hopes a filibuster won't develop.

But if it does and a two-thirds majority can't be mustered to cut off debate, the increases could go into effect without a vote.

Sens. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., and Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, both supporters of the President's pay-raise package, tried without success Monday to win approval of compromises.

Fong's compromise would have delayed the start of the increases until Jan. 1, 1975, after this year's elections, but would not have reduced the over-all amount. It was rejected 71 to 17.

Then the Senate defeated, 62-26, McGee's proposal for a single 5.5 per cent increase this year.

Congressional salaries of $42,500 a year have not been raised since 1969, nor has the pay of federal judges, cabinet members and other top executive officials, who would receive increases under Nixon's budget.

Under Nixon's recommendations, the pay of congressmen would go up to $45,700 this year, $49,100 next year and $52,800 in 1976.

Judges and top-level executives would get comparable three-step raises, except that Cabinet officers and Supreme Court justices would receive a single $4,500 increase next year in their $60,000 salaries.

Martin County School Tax Increased By Board

WILLIAMSTON—An increase in Martin County School tax, for some time under consideration, was passed jointly by members of the Martin County Board of Education and the Martin County Commissioners Monday at a joint meeting.

Under the terms of the joint resolution, an increase levy of approximately 10 cents was passed. This will be for supplemental funds for operation of the schools in all eight districts. County School Superintendent Eugene Rogers said the new tax would be effective on July 1 and that this resolution calls for the tax to be distributed between all eight school districts. According to Rogers, in the past each school district has had its own individual levy rate.

In another action, members of the Board of Education voted to leave the Farm Life Community School open indefinitely. Previous plans had been to close this school after the 1973-74 school year. As a result of Monday's action, the school will continue to operate until such time as residents of the area indicate they want the school closed.

In a final action, a decision was made for the schools to change school hours effective Monday, March 18. On that date, schools will take in at 8:30 a.m. and end at 3:00 p.m. Currently the hours are 9:00 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Unusual Electrical Outage Last Night

An unusual electrical outage involving a circuit on First Street knocked out power to several hundred residents for approximately 45 to 50 minutes last night.

Malcolm Green, assistant director of Greenville Utilities, said that power in the First Street area went out at 8:23 p.m. and work crews found the trouble at a power pole at the corner of First and Holly Streets.

Green said that a three-phase power line is located in the area and workmen discovered that two of the three wires on the circuit were out of the insulator and lying down on a cross arm, at the pole.

He explained that it is highly unusual for two of the wires to be out of the insulator, noting that occasionally one wire becomes dislodged from the groove during high winds.

Green said that during installation, the three wires are laid in a groove and a tie wire is wrapped around the insulator to secure the lines. The tie wire was broken, he noted.

The official said that there is no way of knowing the exact cause of the wire problem but he said that the pole could have been hit. He added that the pole and equipment were not damaged.

Power to residents of the area was restored to full service at 9:16 p.m., he said, although the circuit was turned on for a short period of time and then turned back off prior to 9:16.

The three-phase circuit feeds the area from First to Greene Streets and back up to Elm Street, Green said, as well as side streets in the vicinity. Residents living in the Tar River Estates area were also affected, as well as persons living along Elm to Fifth Street and possibly to Tenth Street, he added.

New Chairman Of Pitt Ass'n

A MEMBERSHIP CARD...for the Pitt County Association for Retarded Children is presented to honorary membership chairman, Clarence Stasavich, by Mrs. Barbara Close, membership chairman.

Mrs. Barbara Close has been appointed chairman of the 1974 membership campaign for the Pitt County Association for Retarded Children.

The campaign, to be conducted during March, was announced today by Ms. Vivian Crickmore, president of the Association.

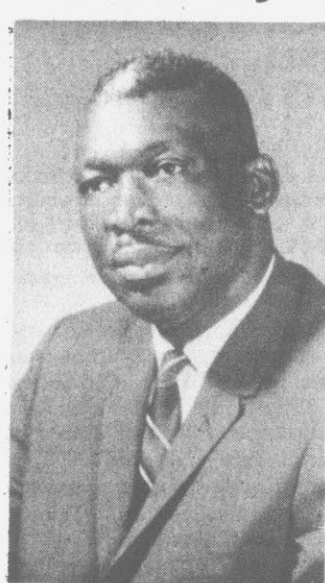

The local membership drive is being held in conjunction with approximately 1,500 affiliated units of the National Association for Retarded Children, all involved simultaneously in seeking members to aid in programs for mental retardation research, prevention, education, and services.

In accepting the appointment, Mrs. Close said, "An estimated three per cent of our population, or more than six million individuals, are believed to be mentally retarded. There's a big—and satisfying—job to be done for the welfare, training, and education of the retarded of all ages. We want the chance to let prospective members know what part they can play in this job."

Serving with Mrs. Close on the membership committee are Clarence Stasavich, honorary chairman; Danny Jones, Mrs. Barbara Privette, Mrs. Carma Baggett, Gordon Edwards, Mrs. A. H. Gillihan, Ms. Vivian Crickmore, Mrs. Boots Mills, Mrs. Penny Dunn, Mrs. Hester Latham, Mrs. Debbie Truax, Dr. Kenneth Quiggins, Mrs. Carol Dohn, and Dr. Frank Close.

She was released under a $500 bond pending hearing of the case in court.

Ready To Trade Their Big Cars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline shortages and higher prices have Los Angeles motorists ready to trade in their big cars, a survey indicates.

The survey, sponsored by Automotive Age-Kelley Blue Book Reporter, an auto industry publication, showed that almost three out of every four big car owners in the area intend to switch to smaller cars for their next purchase unless the gasoline situation improves considerably.

The survey was conducted by J.D. Powers & Associates of Los Angeles and polled 1,000 motorists, of which 400 responded.

There's another Tennessee Sour Mash Whisky, but there's only one George Dickel.

It hurts to be as well-loved as the other Tennessee Sour Mash Whisky and not as well-known. After all, we've been around since 1870 . . . doing some things they don't. Like letting the mash sit a day longer and cooling as we charcoal filter. The result is a whisky we're confident you'll find just as smooth, not quite as familiar, a little lighter and a lot better.

And Now, A Word For Simon

While it is true that governmental meddling with the laws of supply and demand spell trouble for the American consumer, our sympathies lie with William Simon, El Supremo-designate in the energy field.

It's his task to assure that Americans enjoy equitable sharing of such necessities as natural gas, electricity, fuel oil, coal, diesel fuel, Sterno and charcoal briquettes.

Few men in our memory (and it goes 'way back) have labored under such heartfelt mutterings from service station operators, auto and truck drivers, and utilities operators. To these one might add more categories disturbed distributors and consumers; but the picture is sufficiently clear.

Our thinking goes thusly: Mr. Simon is an able and articulate gentleman who did not have to undertake impossible tasks in order that he might live in comfort and security and affection. He picked up his cross and is carrying it in the spirit of service to his fellow Americans. Well, someone had to do it, and with every prospect of failure Simon said he'd try.

The odds against him were overwhelming from the start, and they have been fed by rivalries and jealousies within various echelons of the Administration, in the Congress, and a host of headline-seekers. Even the Shah of Iran got into the act.

Friends and neighbors, this is no way to support an Energy Czar in his czarring business. His job requires a certain amount of public confidence in the man himself and in what he is trying to do.

And, under the rules of the game, he must rely largely on "voluntarism"...in spirit as well as action among all the people to sacrifice some comfort, some convenience, for the benefit of all. That is a lot to ask.

Coupled with that, the determination of allocations looms large. It was complicated this winter by unpredictable weather conditions, the early lack of supply-and-use data, and a reluctance among suppliers and consumers to rely on anyone making those kind of decisions.

All of us knew there were big changes ahead in our life-styles when it came to dealing with the energy shortage. It was, in its own stupid little way, inevitable. We'd best stop grumbling and begin adapting. This is not Mr. Simon's problem or Mr. Nixon's problem or your supplier's problem. It is ours.

And if we don't let Mr. Simon muddle us through to the best of his ability, it is not unbelievable that another of less ability will step in and "voluntarism" will go out, and arbitrary regulation will be the order of the day.

We're entitled to better than that; and so is Mr. Simon. His neck is on the chopping block, too.

Retarded Step Into Spotlight

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—There's a phenomenal success story behind a budding effort to bring the mentally retarded out of the closets, into the spotlight in North Carolina.

In just a few short years, from a shaky start in 1968, the Special Olympics this year will involve as many as 6,000 retarded people statewide. And it's not all for the sporting events. Many, for the first time in their lives, are taking part in some travel, some social activities, some competition.

The overall object, leaders of the movement say, is to "get the word around—to educate the public—that the mentally retarded can take part in public activities. The attitude has been that they can't do anything," says Shelton Blackburn, a programmer with IBM at its Research Triangle installation near Raleigh, and state director of the N. C. Special Olympics, Inc.

Interest Doubles
Last year there were some 25 local eliminations. This year, Blackburn said, the number should double. Last year, some 2,500 participated. This year, "it looks like up to 6,000."

Those local eliminations are being lined up now to be held in April. The state event will be held May 17-19, with an Olympic village and swim events at Meredith College, and track and field at N. C. State.

Most of the participants will be youngsters, though there is no age limitation, Blackburn said.

The state games will not necessarily feature only winners from across the state. "Winners will be here, but if someone would benefit more from coming, from the trip and the social activity, the he will."

"Some of them are just beside themselves at the chance to participate. They have never done anything, largely, and you wouldn't believe the progress that can be made."

"They get into these games and activities, and the usual public image of the mentally retarded just fades: in many cases you simply wouldn't know that many are retarded," Blackburn said.

There is still resistance from some parents to having a child take part.

"It used to be that a parent had two choices: either keep the child at home, hidden usually; or send him away to an institution. But that's changing," said Rep. Jim Long of Burlington.

Long is one of the organizers of the Special Olympics in the state and a member of the board of directors. He said the major contribution of the program is to allow the mentally retarded social contacts and the opportunity to participate in something.

Slow To Change
Even so, public and parental attitudes are sometimes slow to change. If they have not been involved, parents are often "leery of letting their children take part," Long said.

"But when the kids come home excited about this, and the parents let him participate, then they get involved as well. Parents who previously didn't know what to do with a retarded child have learned better how to live with him, teach more skills, through this program," Blackburn said.

Recognition of the importance of the Special Olympics program is also coming from state government which, for the first time this year, is linking state and regional coordinators in the mental retardation program of the Department of Human Resources into both the local and statewide competition.

The non-profit corporation sponsoring the program is now operating the year 'round, Blackburn said, with a budget of some $20,000—made up of contributions. The state event in Raleigh will cost about $12,000, he said, with a large share of that in the form of service donated by Meredith College, State, and the McDonald Corporation which will furnish food.

But above all, sponsors believe, the retarded can see visible evidence that the community, which once rejected and hid him, now cares about him—enough to put the spotlight on him during a three-day event full of sports activities.

Blooper Due A Wrong Guess

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—President Nixon's latest press conference blooper was based on his personal misreading of a two-month-old newspaper clipping without further investigation or staff discussion, raising fresh doubts about day-to-day competency in the Oval Office.

Although Mr. Nixon prepares for his infrequent press conferences at much greater length than his predecessors, he continued a series of factual errors last week when asked about heavy tax deductions he claimed for donating his vice-presidential papers to the nation. Mr. Nixon characteristically replied that other famous Americans—including Dr. Jerome Wiesner, President Kennedy's science adviser and now president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—had taken similar deductions. In truth, Wiesner claimed no deduction for his gift.

Mr. Nixon's statement was based wholly on a clipping from the New York Times of last Dec. 18 contained in his press conference briefing file. The clipping was a United Press International dispatch quoting from a Scripps-Howard story revealing that officials in former administrations donated papers "on which they presumably claimed tax deductions." Scripps-Howard was quoted in the dispatch as saying government records show many officials "donated their papers on which they could have claimed tax deductions."

A list following including, among many others, Wiesner, and Prof. John Kenneth Galbraith of Harvard, former Ambassador to India.

From that long list, Mr. Nixon picked doves Wiesner and Galbraith to mention at his press conference without checking whether either actually claimed a deduction or discussing it with White House staffers.

In the case of Balbraith, he guessed right. In the case of Wiesner, he guessed wrong. A footnote: Reiterating that former President Johnson had urged him to take a tax deduction on the papers after doing so himself, Mr. Nixon told a half truth.

While claiming past deductions, Mr. Johnson and his lawyers decided it would be "unseemly" to claim further deductions once legislation to close that tax loop hole started through Congress.

In contrast, Mr. Nixon's lawyers raced the clock to get the deduction before the law expired. What's more, his lobbyists tried unsuccessfully to delay closing the loophole.

Kicking the Shah
Ignoring the Nixon administration's proposed multibillion-dollar arms sale to make oil-rich Iran the guardian of the Persian Gulf, the Treasury Department last month delayed a World Bank $75 million development loan to Iran as a ploy in global oil politics.

The loan was set for routine approval early in February by the board of executive directors under bank president Robert S. McNamara. But high Treasury officials held up approval, apparently to spunk Iran for taking the lead in raising oil prices.

The U. S.-imposed delay marked another effort by bank-member nations to make loans conform to their own political views. This pressure, particularly intense from the U. S., is undermining the bank's independence.

Treasury's interference with the $75 million loan to Iran's industrial mining development bank caused a one-week delay just as McNamara was encouraging Iran to give future financial help both to underdeveloped and oil-consuming nations hit by soaring oil prices.

A footnote: Energy czar William Simon's intemperate outburst at the Shah of Iran for saying the U. S. is importing as much crude oil now as last year did not help. It took a very high-level apology to calm down the Shah.

White House Switch
Clinging evidence that the White House has abandoned its land-use bill, earlier given "highest priority" by President Nixon, was Secretary of the Interior Rogers Morton's flat refusal to round up votes for it in the House Rules Committee.

Asked by the bill's congressional supporters to find one extra Republican

Strength For Today

THE POOR IN SPIRIT
Many people misunderstand the declaration by Jesus, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." They assume that it was in praise of poverty or melancholy.

But the Greek word "poor" used here means not those who are poor by circumstance, but those who are poor by choice. It really means, therefore, blessed are those who renounce—who give up their own selfish plans and desires that others may live a fuller life.

And who can deny that these people are blessed?

Others are running about the world trying to find happiness in wealth, pleasure, excitement and indulgence. Yet all the happiness is waiting to bestow its treasures upon the heart of anyone who will stop being selfish. Happiness resides not in what we have, but in what we are; not in what we get, but in what we give. If you want deep satisfaction that will be lasting, try renunciation for a change. Put self aside and see if you do not experience a fundamental change in spirit.

Revising The Revision

Harry S. Truman, in terms of his place in history, has been having a great time of it lately. Barry Goldwater, among many others, has acclaimed him the greatest

President of this century. The eulogies spoken in December, 1972, reflected revisionism in progress.

With Merle Miller's "oral biography," some of the revisionism may have to be revised. The Truman that emerges from these pages—from his own recorded conversation—is in most ways a little man: vain, cocky, profane, vindictive, mean-spirited, lacking in charity, compassion or grace.

Most of the conversations were recorded when Truman was 77. It is a twilight time for most old warriors; things that once were seen in sharp black and white, in the harsh light of high noon, tend to soften in shadow. Not with Harry Truman. To the end of his days he was like Samuel Johnson's friend, dear Bathurst: "He hated a fool, and he hated a rogue, and he hated a whig; he was a very good hater."

Miller's image of Truman is honest, and honest biography must be admired. But the image is regrettable all the same. It is all very well for our great men to be revealed "for their human qualities." When Peter Lely came to paint Cromwell's portrait, the Lord Protector gave him positive instructions: "Mr. Lely, I desire you would use all your skill to paint my picture truly like me, and not flatter me at all; but remark all these roughnesses, pimples, warts, and everything as you see me..."

That is what Truman did for himself in his revealing self-portrait. It is not that Miller made no effort to flatter him. Miller tried. As an interviewer, Miller

Other Editors Say Privacy Right

(Jacksonville Daily News)

American people, will most agree, regard their right of privacy as a sacred thing that nobody has authority to punch, spindle or mutilate. The right is protected by the Fourth Amendment which guards against unwarranted search and seizure as well as by numerous laws, including those against electronic snooping.

At the same time, we must concede, Americans demand, and should receive, protection against organized crime, unscrupulous merchants, usurious financial houses, and the excesses of bureaucratic zealots. They also are entitled to national security. None of these needs can be met without some intrusion into the privacy that Americans regard so highly.

As a result, the United States has developed a marvelous technology that monitors the lives and movements from home to work, from job to job and from the cradle to the grave. The technology can serve good purposes, or it can serve bad purposes—and the balance is hard to find. The fact that it might be tipped against the public was reflected in President Nixon's concern with citizens' privacy in his State of the Union speech. His belief that a range of intrusions into personal privacy should be addressed by legislation was echoed by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield in the Democrats' counter to the president's speech. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe adds that the Justice Department already is looking into possible legislation. Additionally, a number of bills to limit electronic eavesdropping and exchanges of personal information among agencies have been introduced.

Such a periodic review of safeguards is all to the good if Watergate does not cast too long a shadow on the deliberations. Indeed, the Watergate investigations illustrate another danger. For example, Sen. Sam Ervin, who is one of the authors of privacy legislation, also is the person responsible for issuing some 500 subpoenas for information that call for scores of records of day to day registrations of hotels and daily activities of persons far removed from Washington—a clear fishing expedition into the lives and businesses of many persons.

Similarly, the energy crisis poses great new dangers to the privacy of individuals. Programs to allocate scarce fuels, a $1.4 billion annual rationing program for gasoline, computerized car pools, electronic controls will dig deeply into the personal lives of the nation's 210 million citizens.

Thus, as it erects safeguards against the more mundane threats to John Q. Public's right to have his personal business remain his own, Congress also must be careful that it does not compound the problem itself by doing evil in the name of good.

Hospitals Adopt Business Aura

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Back in the old days, which weren't so long ago, a hospital periodically raised money by appealing to the philanthropy of those in its area. Some still do.

That type of financing, however, has become almost totally inadequate for a hospital industry that accounts for expenditures of around $32 billion a year, or nearly half the entire amount spent on health care.

Now a hospital staff is likely to call in one of the big investment bankers, particularly Dillon, Read or First Boston or Merrill Lynch, the top three "fund raisers" for an industry that might need $5 billion in 1974.

That figure, based on studies by the American Hospital Association, is for new facilities alone. Other requirements will take millions or billions more — funds that amateur fund raising drives couldn't possibly meet.

In order to obtain this money, hospitals are undergoing an amazing transformation. They are putting their affairs on a businesslike basis. If they didn't, they wouldn't get the money.

When private individuals were the contributors, said Robert McCormack, specialist in hospital financing for Dillon, Read, the hospitals weren't even audited. Then came Medicare and other government funds. Audits were demanded.

Now that hospitals are being forced into the big capital market, where money comes from investors seeking a good return, the latest business techniques are demanded from hospitals. Because of Better records and planning and efficiency the hospitals are much more acceptable to the financial community today," said McCormack.

"The hospitals are becoming more like utilities," McCormack said. He noted that states have the power to set rates and enforce standards, medical and financial, when they issue certifications.

"The hospitals have more of an identity for investment purposes," he explained. "We now have a better data base to compare hospitals in different areas."

Investment bankers can, McCormack continued, "develop a range of parameters that enable us to make an analysis that

Brandt Star In Decline

By ROON LEWALD
Associated Press Writer
BONN, Germany (AP) — A stunning setback for Chancellor Willy Brandt in a key state election has added new fuel to talk that he is losing his grip on West Germany's political life.

The Nobel Peace laureate who gave his country a new standing in world affairs by promoting East-West understanding admitted a "severe setback" after his Social Democratic party lost its majority in the Hamburg city-state legislature last weekend.

Only two weeks after Brandt was forced to deny publicly that domestic policy worries have caused him to consider resigning, his declining popularity was demonstrated by his party's massive 20 per cent slide in the Hamburg election.

The Social Democrats managed to cling to power in Hamburg only with the help of the small Free Democrats, the liberal party which has shared a ruling coalition with Brandt's men in the federal government since 1969.

The Social Democrats lost 14 of their 70 seats in the 120-seat legislature. The Free Democrats gained four for a total of 13, and the big winners were the conservative Christian Democrats, who gained 10 and now have 51, 18 less than the ruling coalition.

The Hamburg voting was the first state election since the socialist-liberal coalition won a sweeping victory in the 1972 federal elections, mainly on the strength of Brandt's foreign policy triumphs. But since then, the gloss has worn off his East-West peace drive.

State elections will also be held this year in Lower Saxony, where the Social Democrats rule in coalition with the Christian Democrats, and Hesse, where there is a Social Democrat-Free Democrat government.

Ralph Capone, the elder brother of Al Capone, a Chicago gangster, was released from the federal prison at McNeil Island near Tacoma, Wash., after serving a term for income tax evasion.

Capone said he would return to Chicago.

Mrs. W. B. Murphy of Snow Hill will be the speaker at Founders Day at East Carolina Teachers College on March 7. Mrs. Murphy is a member of the board of trustees.

Mrs. Murphy is well known in the area for her leadership in the U.D.C. and the D.A.R. and has an active interest in public affairs.

Only the assembly hour, beginning at 10:15, will be devoted to the anniversary this year, and no effort will be made to have the old students return. The annual homecoming of the alumnae will be a feature of the coming commencement, which will mark the end of the 25th year.

A large pageant is planned for commencement showing the history and work of the school.

vote before the committee killed the bill last week, Morton replied sadly: "I am not able to make that effort." The clear implication: he was ordered by the White House to let the bill die.

Earlier, Morton described the bill as the administration's "No. 1 environmental proposal." The White House switch, engineered by congressional conservatives, is viewed by administration officials who fought for the bill for three years as a signal: the President will bend over backwards to appease conservative Republicans for the bitter impeachment battle.

Heavy Work Day For Pitt County Firemen

A series of fires, mostly involving burning forests, resulted in one of the heaviest work days for county firemen in a long time, according to Pitt County Fire Chief Bobby Joyner.

In the afternoon and evening smoldering at Mr. Nixon for his liberalized program—including cash payments to the poor—and his deficit budget. Killing the land-use bill, an ideological monster to militant conservatives, could dilute their rising anger.

hours, a total of seven fires were reported. These were:
—2:59 p.m., Saintsville Road (County Road 1415) in the Belvoir Community, a forest fire endangered a house trailer. Belvoir and Station House Fire Departments answered the alarm.

—3:45 p.m. Gardnersville Fire Department personnel put out a blaze on the farm of Larry Chapman involving a burning tree.

—4:15 p.m. An extensive fire near Stokes resulted in heavy damage to 80 acres of forest. The blaze, which endangered three houses, was fought by personnel of the Stokes, Bethel and Station House Fire Departments.

—4:28 p.m. A packhouse on the Billy Spencer farm in the Black-jack Community burned. The barn was a total loss.

—8:50 p.m. A woods fire back of the Ed Switzer home was controlled by the Pactolus Fire Department. The fire was endangering farm buildings and brood sows.

—9:03 p.m. Station House Fire

Department was again called into action to fight a blaze when an automobile caught fire at Colonial Trailer Court.

—10:25 p.m. Eastern Pines Fire Department personnel fought a grass fire in the Brook Valley Community near Greenville.

Joyner said action to fight the woods and grass fires was a joint one between the county fire departments and the N. C. Forestry Service.

The Pitt County Fire Chief has asked that anyone burning in open areas be especially careful at this time of year. Because of high spring winds and the dryness in forest areas resulting from the winds, Joyner said open burning was hazardous. Anyone burning is requested to

Arrest 2 In House Raid

A raid at a local residence Saturday night by the Pitt County narcotics squad resulted in the arrest of two Greenville men and the confiscation of some $900 worth of marijuana.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the officers, assisted by members of the Greenville narcotics team, arrested Ronald Ray Bryan, 22, of 303-B Summit Street on a charge of felonious possession of marijuana, and George Wadell McAdams of Rt. 5, Box 183-B, Greenville, on a charge of simple possession of marijuana. A hearing has been designated as Friday has been designated as a teacher workday. According to Supt. Ott Alford, the day will be used by personnel to complete records, reports, and report cards.

emerges as one of the champion boot-lickers of all time; he fred Truman nothing but cream-puff questions, whipped-cream tough, and the old man lapped them up.

We get the painting, warts and all. Truman had generous things to say about General George Marshall and a few others, but Truman was not a generous or a forgiving man. Even minor characters are not spared his rancorous recollection. The Rev. Billy Graham is "one of those counterfeits." Wisconsin's Senator Alexander Wiley is "windy." Indiana's Senator William Jenner is "one of the dirty sonsabitches." Adlai Stevenson was "a very smart fella, but there were some things he just never got through his head." Justice Tom Clark was "dumb". As for leaders of the Nationalist Chinese, "they're all thieves, every damn one of them."

By the time these conversations were recorded, ten years had passed since Eisenhower had won the presidency, 17 years since victory in Europe. Truman could not find one kind word to say about him. He speaks of Eisenhower variously as a fool, a damn fool, and a goddam fool. Eisenhower "had a very high opinion of himself." Eisenhower was "very weak as a field commander." In Truman's view, "Ike didn't know anything, and all the time he was in the White House he didn't learn a thing."

There is much worse, of course, about Richard Nixon, the "shifty-eyed, goddam liar," and about Douglas MacArthur, another "dumb son of a bitch," but Truman had the lash for almost everyone who ever crossed him: Joe Kennedy, John Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Madame Chiang, Henry Wallace, Thomas Dewey—let the book fall open. Truman was forever chewing the cud of his infinite animosities: "The old man," he said of himself, "never forgets."

Miller's book is called "Plain Speaking," and that it is. As a general proposition, plain speech, even blunt speech, is better than platitudinous hokum. But there is also a place, especially from an elder statesman, for speech that is kind, speech that heals instead of slashes, speech that does not cut and flay. The vainglorious Truman—"I was always out there pushing"—was incapable of such a speech. It is not necessary to revise one's high opinion of Truman as a President—he was a great President—but this book may prompt some of his admirers to revise their opinion of him as a man.

ment. A Christian Democrat takeover in either would increase their 21-20 voting edge in the Bundesrat, the upper house of the federal parliament.

Christian Democrat Chairman Helmut Kohl asserted that the increase of his party's vote in Hamburg from 32.8 per cent to 40.6 was "a clear and unmistakable slap" at Brandt's party. He repeated an invitation to the Free Democrats to abandon the coalition with the Social Democrats in 1974 and share rule with his party instead.

The Free Democrats have so far declined. But sources in the pivotal party said it is becoming increasingly nervous that Brandt's waning popularity and prestige could halt its own recent popularity rise.

Are you looking for a small car with a choice of gas-saving engines?

USAC Certified Test Results:*

Chrysler Corporation "Slant Six" engines got much better mileage than Nova and Maverick 6's.

Chrysler Corporation "Slant Six" engines got better mileage in city driving than Mustang II's 4-cylinder engine.

Chrysler Corporation V-8 engines got better mileage in city driving than Nova's 6.

You can get V-8 performance with better gas mileage than a 6.

In recent tests conducted by the United States Auto Club, a Plymouth Duster and a Dodge Dart Sport equipped with a 318 V-8 engine actually got better gas mileage in city driving than a Nova equipped with a 6-cylinder engine.

You can get a gas-saving 6 that beat other sixes as well as a "4"

In the same tests, USAC certified that a Dodge Dart Sport and Plymouth Duster, equipped with a 225 Slant Six and a new standard 2.76 rear axle, got substantially better gas mileage in the city and on the highway than Nova or Maverick 6's. And they even did better than a four-cylinder Mustang II in city driving, and got comparable mileage on the open road.

Dodge Dart Sport and Plymouth Duster are priced lower than Volkswagen's most popular model...have up to 20 inches more total hiproom than Maverick...have more trunk space than 3 Pintos...can seat one more passenger than Vega...and have Electronic Ignition standard that can save you up to $62.00 over competitive 6-cylinder engines like Nova's and, with our 318 V-8, up to $90.00 over competitive V-8 engines like Nova's in the first 24,000 miles alone†

Council Meet Set This Week

As one coaching position in the Southern Conference was filled yesterday, speculation still went on the East Carolina University campus.

George Balanis, who took over as interim coach when William & Mary's Ed Ashnault "resigned" in mid-February, was named the new head coach by the Williamsburg, Va., school yesterday.

Since taking over the head coaching job, Balanis had won two and lost three during the regular season. He pulled off an upset of East Carolina in the first round of the Southern Conference Tournament last week, but lost to eventual champion Furman in the second round.

Balanis had served as an assistant under Ashnault, who came under fire for his antics on—and off—the bench.

Rumors had circulated prior to the tournament that East Carolina Coach Tom Quinn might be on the hot seat should the Pirates not do well, but Quinn denied this following the loss to William & Mary.

However, college officials admit that a meeting of the Athletic Council has been called for later this week, at a time not yet set, to discuss the basketball program.

Quinn, who has another year still to go on a three-year contract he received following the Pirates' tournament victory two years ago, said that he is still the Pirate coach, and is continuing with recruiting and looking forward to next season.

Fieldcrest In Upset Defeat

Division II regular season winner Union Carbide got a forfeit victory last night in the Industrial Basketball League tournament, moving into the Divisional finals.

Fieldcrest, which won Division I, suffered an overtime upset, however and was knocked from the field by Grady-White State Highway and NCNB also captured victories, both in overtimes, also.

In the opening game at West Greenville, Union Carbide advanced when Pitt Memorial Hospital forfeited to them.

In the second game, second place finisher North Carolina National Bank gained a 77-73 overtime win over Empire Brush. In the first half of play, Empire Brush inched out into a 39-37 lead. But the Bankers came back to outthrust the Brushmen, 32-30, in the second half, tying it at 69-69 at the end of regulation time. Roy Carawan hit five of the eight NCNB points in the overtime to spark them to the victory, as they held the Brushmen to only four points.

Leon Johnson led NCNB with 22 points, while Randy Martin added 16, Kenny Wood had 15, and Tony Whitehurst had 14. For Empire Brush, Bobby Parker had 22, James Parker had 20 and Edward Coburn had 16.

In the opener in Division I play, Fieldcrest suffered a 76-70 double overtime loss to Grady-White. Grady White went out into a 33-26 lead by the end of the first half, but Fieldcrest fought back, outthrusting them, 34-27, for a 60-60 deadlock in the regulation time. Both teams hit six points in the first overtime for a 66-66 tie, but in the second, Frank Brown sparked Grady-White to a 10-4 advantage, hitting seven himself.

Brown led the Boatmen's scoring with 32, while Marvin Hardy had 18 and Marvin Davis had 11. For Fieldcrest, Louis Williams was high with 30, while Charles Harrington had 28.

In the final game, State Highway took a 73-71 overtime win over Vermont-American. In the first half, the Highwaymen ran out to a 38-31 lead. But Vermont-American rallied and tied it at 69-69 at the end of regulation time with a 38-31 second half.

In the overtime, each team scored two points, then with three seconds to go, Bobby Edwards hit a jumper to give the Highwaymen the victory.

Fred Mills led State Highway with 20 points, while Edwards had 14, Hut Haddock had 12 and Smith Worthington had 10. Vermont-American was paced by Cleveland Taylor with 20, with Lindsay Harris hitting 15, Moses Joyner, 14, Charlie Jenkins, 12, and Walter Hill, 10.

Wednesday night, Grady-White meets State Highway at 7 p.m., while Union Carbide takes on NCNB at 8:15 p.m., both at Elm Street Gym. The overall league championship will be decided on Monday when the two divisional winners meet.

Trying To Stop Cut In Salary

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Tony Oliva, the Minnesota Twins' designated hitter, is trying to avoid a designated salary cut and the issue is whether a designated hitter should be designated a part-time ballplayer.

He met with Twins' President Calvin Griffith for 45 minutes Monday at the team's Orlando, Fla., spring base and continued to demand the $91,000 he received last season when he batted .291 with 16 home runs and 92 runs batted in. Griffith, meanwhile, refused to raise his $84,000 offer.

"The designated hitter is something new," Griffith said. "No one knows what they're worth. I feel, however, they are part-time players and should be paid accordingly."

Naturally, Oliva has a different view.

"I had a good year," he said. "I deserve at least as much as I made last year. Other designated hitters like Orlando Cepeda and Deron Johnson received raises and I'm only asking for the same as I got last year."

Griffith said doctors have told him Oliva, who has had four operations on his right knee, will never again be able to play the outfield. He said if the player doesn't sign by Sunday he may change his offer to a maximum 20 per cent cut.

In New York, meanwhile, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn met with Bill Bartholomew, president of the Atlanta Braves, and you can bet the topic was whether to make Hank Aaron a designated player in the Braves' season-opening series in Cincinnati. The commissioner's office, though, slapped a top-secret lid on the discussion.

Outfielder Ken Berry rejoined the Milwaukee Brewers after a three-day bout with the flu and pitcher Sam McDowell of the New York Yankees, another flu victim, was reported much improved.

Upset Won't Be Big Surprised In Tourney

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On form, Saturday night's final of the Atlantic Coast Conference championship basketball tournament should send top-ranked North Carolina State against the winner of a North Carolina-Maryland game.

During the regular season, none of the bottom four teams has beaten these three top teams in 31 tries.

But it won't be the most surprising thing in the world if form doesn't hold in the tournament which starts Thursday in the Greensboro, N.C., Coliseum.

Look what happened in Chapel Hill last Saturday. North Carolina had to score eight straight points in the last 17 seconds to tie the losing team Duke, and then go on to a 96-92 overtime victory.

And this season, N.C. State won by only three points at North Carolina, by five at Clemson after trailing in the last three minutes, and needed brilliant spurts by All-America David Thompson to subdue Maryland twice. Last Saturday night the Wolfpack led Wake Forest by only two points with four minutes left before winning 72-63.

N.C. State won the tournament last year but was ineligible to continue on and try for the national championship because it was on a one-year NCAA probation for a recruiting violation.

If it wins the championship this time, it will advance to the NCAA Eastern Regionals on its own Reynolds Coliseum Court in Raleigh, N.C. It will play the winner of the South Carolina-Furman game.

But if State should lose in the ACC, all would be over. Because the Wolfpack is the regional host, it is barred from playing in the National Invitational Tournament in New York City.

North Carolina, the NIT winner in 1971, and Maryland, the winner in 1972, could go back there if they lose in Greensboro.

North Carolina State, undefeated in the league, has been awarded a bye in the first round Thursday for winning the regular-season title. This is the schedule for the first round:

1:30 p.m.—Maryland, 21-4 in all games and 9-3 in the conference, vs. Duke, 10-15 and 2-10.

3:30 p.m.—North Carolina, 21-4 and 9-3, vs. Wake Forest, 13-12 and 3-9.

8 p.m.—Virginia 10-15 and 4-8, vs. Clemson, 14-11 and 3-9.

Friday at 7 p.m.—North Carolina State 24-1 and 12-0 vs. Virginia or Clemson. 9 p.m.—North Carolina or Wake Forest vs. Maryland or Duke.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m.—Championship game.

Dayton Stuns Irish With Upset Victory

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

"I won't get any sleep tonight," crowed Dayton Coach Don Donoher after his Flyers upset mighty Notre Dame 97-82 Monday night.

"This is just the greatest win we've had in the time I've been here."

Dayton, egged on by an enthusiastic home crowd of 13,528 screaming, partisan fans, roared off to a 13-point lead in the early going and the Irish never caught up. Notre Dame, ranked No. 2 nationally, crept to within four points, 52-48, five minutes into the second half, but the Flyers refused to fold and won going away.

In other top games, No. 8 Providence whipped Brown 92-77, No. 10 South Carolina defeated No. 19 Creighton 78-69, No. 12 Alabama beat Auburn 97-84, No. 18 Louisville outlasted Illinois State 117-107 and Tulsa shaded No. 20 Oral Roberts 85-84.

Senior guard Donald Smith was the top man for Dayton with a season-high 32 points, 20 in the second half. Johnny Davis added 18 for the Flyers, who closed out the regular season with a 19-7 record.

John Shumate paced the Irish, who wind up 26-2, with 29 points.

Both clubs are headed for NCAA playoff games Saturday. The Irish go against Ohio Valley Conference champion Austin Peay and Dayton faces Pacific Coast Athletic Conference representative Los Angeles State.

Senior Marvin Barnes powered Providence past Brown with 37 points and 23 rebounds. The Friars, 26-3, broke it open midway through the second half and cruised home.

Brian Winters pumped in 29 points and Nate Davis added 18 as South Carolina finished its regular campaign with a 22-4 mark. Doug Brooks led Creighton with 23 points. Both clubs have accepted NCAA bids.

Charles Russell scored 26 points and Ray Odums added 22 as Alabama raised its record to 22-4, the first time ever the Crimson Tide has won 22 regular-season games. Southeastern Conference scoring leader Eddie Johnson collected 28 points for Auburn.

Louisville had to overcome a 38-point effort by Illinois State's Rick Whitlow to notch its 20th victory of the year, against five losses. Bill Butler topped the Cardinals with 24 points and Allen Murphy added 20.

Tim Carson's 25-footer with 48 seconds left gave Tulsa its upset over NCAA-bound Oral Roberts. Ken Smith and Sam High led the Golden Hurricane with 22 points each.

In other notable developments, Tennessee subdued Georgia 97-89 to close out the regular season with a 17-8 record and earn a spot in the Commissioners Conference Association tournament which begins March 14th in St. Louis; Canisius sharpshooter Larry Fogle, the nation's leading scorer among major schools, scored 26 points before fouling out with just over two minutes left in a rousing game against Marhall.

Canisius, leading by three when Fogle left, wound up losing 71-64. Fogle had to be pulled away from a referee after the game and the entire team left town under a police escort.

beating Ball State and Villanova, stayed a close second with 15 first-place votes and 750 points. No. 3 UCLA got the other first-place vote and 658 points.

Maryland, 21-4, advanced one spot to No. 4 after topping Wake Forest and Virginia. Vanderbilt, 23-2, moved into the No. 5 spot after beating Mississippi and Kentucky.

North Carolina, 21-4, fell from fourth to sixth after losing to North Carolina State and beating Duke. Providence, which upped its mark to 25-3 with victories over Canisius and St. John's, N.Y., vaulted from 12th to eighth.

Long Beach State, 23-2 after beating San Jose State and Pacific, moved up from No. 13 to No. 9. South Carolina, 21-4, moved up four places to No. 10 with victories over Duquesne, Pittsburgh and Houston.

Sloan Is ACC Coach

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Norman Sloan of North Carolina State University today was named Atlantic Coast Conference basketball coach of the year.

It was the third time in five years that the honor has gone to Sloan.

Sloan was named on 121 of 142 ballots of members of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Associations.

Sloan guided the top-ranked Wolfpack to a 24-1 record this year and after completing a 27-0 season last year.

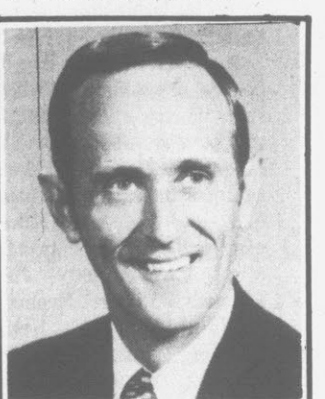

Carl Tacy of Wake Forest, with seven votes, was a distant runnerup for the Gerry Gerard Award. The other votes were shared by Dean Smith of North Carolina, Lefty Driesell of Maryland and Tates Locke of Clemson.

Sloan's Wolfpack this week will defend its ACC championship in the annual tournament at Greensboro. It takes a perfect conference record into the event for an unprecedented second time.

Sloan is a 1951 graduate of N.C. State and is in his eighth year as head coach at his alma mater. In that time he has compiled a 141-71 record.

The Worry Clinic Buck-Passing A Male Outlet

Alta's University Women's Club were almost unanimous in accusing their husbands of the most common masculine fault! Wives, smile sweetly and don't feel unduly hurt, for this is a safety valve, invented by Adam.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE Z-568: Alta D., aged 28, was President of the University Women's Club.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "we'd like to have you conduct a forum for questions after your main address."

Then our members can ask what they wish regarding their personal problems with their children.

"And especially with their husbands!"

Buck-passing
One of the queries that caused the most nods of assent was this: "Dr. Crane, why do husbands try to blame their wives for everything that goes wrong?" "Even when they themselves are obviously guilty of the mistake, they will still twist things and rationalize till they make the wife seem at fault."

Buck-passing is a universal attempt to protect our own ego. Men (and women, too) all wish to feel important.

If we make errors, we feel less important.

So we eagerly try to shift the blame to somebody else, for that helps relieve our ego from being deflated.

And it also may divert punishment, especially when we are children.

Thus when my sister Elsbeth was about 7 years of age, she broke off some of my mother's geraniums that were in a flower bed in front of our home.

"Who broke off my geraniums?" our mother demanded.

Adam was the first inventor of the human race, and his buck-passing device has been used ever since.

You Bible readers will recall that after Eve had fed him the forbidden apple, and both were hid when God entered the Garden of Eden, God made Adam come forth.

"Did you eat the forbidden fruit?" God inquired.

Adam was definitely on the spot!

And, like my sister Elsbeth, he didn't dare tell a lie.

Then a flash of wisdom caused him to invent buck-passing.

"The woman whom thou gavest to be with me," replied Adam, "she gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

So God turned to Eve and asked, "What is this that thou hast done?"

Being a smart wife, she recognized the merit in Adam's unique invention, so Eve immediately adopted it and said: "The serpent, beguiled me, and I did eat."

Alas, the serpent was in the same boat with former President Truman, who had this motto on his desk:

"The buck stops here!"

There is a modern story to the effect that when Adam and his son Seth were taking a hike together, Seth noticed the beautiful Garden of Eden.

"Father," Seth began, "that is a beautiful place so why don't we live there?"

"My son," Adam replied, "we used to live there until you mother ate us out of house and home!"

Wives, men are usually the egotists of the family, which is why they have such an excessive craving to protect their masculine pride, so don't become hurt by their buck-passing.

Attended Study Seminar

RICHMOND, Va.—Marian Fisk of Greenville, N.C., attended an advanced study seminar at Union Theological Seminary here Feb. 25 through March 1.

The topic of the study was "Worship Today: Meanings, Words and Acts."

The study was led by Dr. Ross MacKenzie, professor of church history at Union Seminary. With the main objective to help participants attain a working theology of worship entering more fully into the "practice of the presence of God" as worshippers and leaders of worship, MacKenzie used case studies, lectures, and experimental liturgy.

Accused Kidnap Couple Nixon Cites Fail Gain Jail Release Deadline On Welfare Bill

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — William A. H. Williams and his wife remained in jail today after a federal judge refused to dismiss charges against Mrs. Williams in the abduction case of Atlanta Constitution editor Reg Murphy.

U.S. Magistrate J. Roger Thompson agreed at a preliminary hearing Monday to reduce bond from $500,000 to $100,000 for the 26-year-old Mrs. Williams. But he refused to reduce the $1 million bond he had set for her 33-year-old husband.

Both were bound over to a federal grand jury.

Williams is charged with extortion in the abduction of Murphy, editor of The Atlanta Constitution. Mrs. Williams is accused of concealing knowledge of the alleged extortion.

The couple were arrested Feb. 23, only hours after Murphy was released unharmed following payment of a $700,000 ransom by the newspaper's owners. He had been held captive 49 hours.

FBI agents said they discovered $700,000 in cash at the Williams' home in suburb Lilburn at the time of the arrests.

Pleading for a lower bond for Williams, attorney Tyrus R. Atkinson Jr. contended Monday that "a million dollar bond is just a refusal of bond."

But Thompson, who set the original bond, replied: "I in good conscience could not set a bond lower than what he (Williams) set for Mr. Murphy—if in fact, he did commit the abduction."

Doug Johnston, representing Mrs. Williams, told the court that her bond should be lowered because, he said, her three children need her and because no evidence was presented at the hearing to show she participated in the extortion.

Thompson said he found ample evidence in the finding of Mrs. Williams' fingerprints on a plastic bag containing $4,000, found on her dresser, and in Murphy's telling the FBI that he thought a female had been present during his captivity.

But he added there was evidence to show that her action "was at least secondary" and reduced her bail.

FBI agent Paul B. King Jr. testified at the hearing that Williams was the driver of a car spotted near where the ransom for Murphy was delivered. King said he and another agent saw a car near the ransom site on Georgia 400 and later pulled alongside it at a red light.

Asked by Asst. U.S. Atty. John Gaffney if he could identify the driver, King said, "Yes," and pointed at Williams.

Another FBI agent testified that latest fingerprints found on money wrappers in the Williams' home matched the fingerprints of Mrs. Williams.

Jim Minter, managing editor of The Constitution was questioned closely by defense attorneys about newspaper articles concerning the abduction.

Gaffney objected, contending the attorneys were trying to establish pretrial publicity, which, Gaffney said, did not address itself to the hearing. Thompson agreed.

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is urging Congress to rush through a bill to avoid an automatic March 31 cutoff of new federal welfare payments for up to 200,000 disabled persons.

The emergency measure, unanimously approved Monday by the House Ways and Means Committee, was scheduled for House action today.

The bill involves the new Supplemental Security Income program covering millions of aged, blind and disabled people. Starting Jan. 1, it replaced the old federal-state welfare system for these persons.

The law setting up the supplemental program originally provided that recipients who were on state rolls for aid to the disabled during December 1973 would be covered by the new federal program even if they did not meet the federal definition of disability.

However, before the program began, the law was revised last December in an effort to prevent any conversion to the federal program of people who may have been improperly placed on state rolls in the months just before the change-over.

The Nixon administration maintains the change has created a workload that cannot be finished until the end of this year. The government has been providing benefits under a provision of the law allowing aid for up to three months on the basis of "presumptive disability."

Since these presumptive disability payments cannot be made for more than three months, administration officials said they will be forced to suspend payments at the end of this month for those whose eligibility remains in doubt.

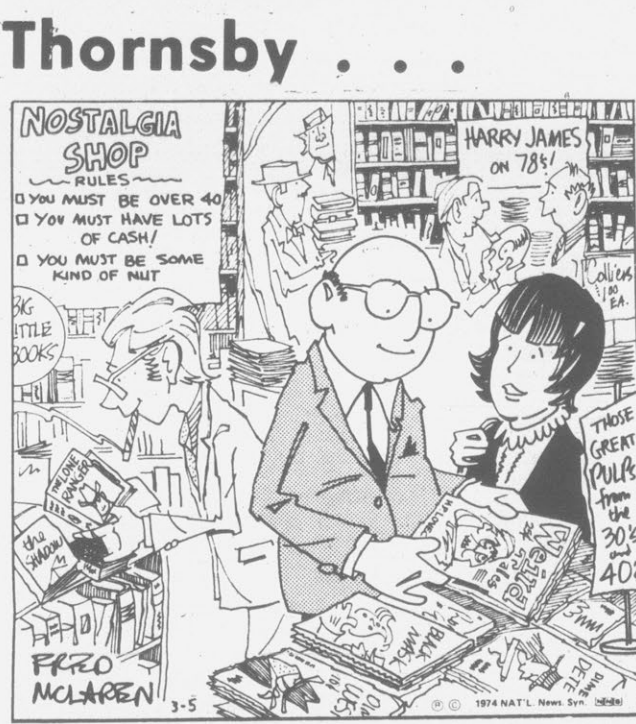

Fireman Hurt
In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP)—One fireman was injured and four units in an apartment complex under construction were destroyed in a fire in south Charlotte early today. The two-alarm fire was at a project between the Pineville and Nations Ford roads which the Sutton-Carolina Corp. of Union, N.J., is building.

The cause was not determined immediately.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass
4♥ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠

When you are playing a contract, you can never have too many high cards. The more you have, the greater care you should exercise in the play. Declarer failed to make full use of his side's assets on this hand, and went down in a contract that should have been made.

The bidding was routine. Once North raised hearts, South's hand revalued to 21 points. Thus, even if North, was slightly below strength for his raise to two hearts, the combined strength of the two hands was sufficient to contract for game.

West led the queen of spades, and declarer cavalierly covered with dummy's king. East won the ace and continued with the ten, ruffed by declarer. After drawing trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy, declarer tried the club finesse. That lost, and declarer was eventually forced to concede a diamond trick and another club for one.

Declarer blew the contract with wasteful play at the very first trick. Defending a suit contract, it is most unlikely that West would lead the queen of spades from a holding that included the ace. Therefore, there was no reason to sacrifice dummy's king of spades to the ace. Look at the difference if declarer plays low from dummy at trick one.

Best defense is for West to shift to a diamond. Declarer captures East's king with the ace, crosses to dummy with the nine of trumps and ruffs a spade. Dummy is reentered with the ten of trumps for a second spade ruff, with most gratifying results. The ace of spades is ruffed away, and dummy's king is established for a club discard. Declarer concedes a diamond and then ruffs his remaining diamond. The club finesse now is for an overtrick. The defenders can score no more than one trick in each side suit.

How N.C. Congressmen Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 21 through 27.

HOUSE
ENERGY BILL UNSTUCK Rejected, 144 for and 259 against, a rule for considering the conference report on the energy emergency bill (S. 2589) which would have permitted points of order to be raised against the measure.

If the rule had passed, a single objection might have forced the House to delete controversial sections of the measure by raising points of order against the sections.

After rejecting the rule, the House adopted a substitute rule that permitted separate votes on certain sections of the measure, such as oil price rollbacks provisions. The effect of these parliamentary maneuvers was to clear the way for passage of the long-delayed energy emergency bill.

Those voting for the original rule argued that the price rollback and other conference-added provisions were non-germane amendments in violation of House rules, and that points of order should be allowed against them. Rep. John Anderson (R-Ill.) argued that the measure is "headed for a veto" which the House is unlikely to override, thus further delaying legislative solutions to the energy crisis.

Those voting against argued that House Members should vote on the separate provisions rather than defeating them with parliamentary maneuvers. Rep. John Flynt (D-Ga.) said that the points of order would submerge the energy bill "in a parliamentary morass."

Reps. Charles Rose (D-7), Earl Ruth (R-8) and James Martin (R-9) voted "yea."
Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Wilmer Mizell (R-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

OIL PRICE ROLLBACK Rejected, 173 for and 238 against, a motion to kill the oil price rollback provisions of the energy emergency bill conference report. In rejecting the move, the House voted to clamp the lid on the price of domestically-produced crude oil.

If the measure becomes law most crude oil will cost $5.25 a barrel instead of the present price of $10.35 a barrel for new crude. Oil from stripper wells—wells that produce ten or less barrels of oil a day—could be priced as high as $7.09 a barrel.

Those voting for argued that oil price rollbacks will force oil producers to switch to more profitable imported oils, thus discouraging domestic production. They said that oil supplies will dwindle, that gas station lines will lengthen and that the best way to regulate the supply and demand of oil is to let the free market set a price.

Opponents argued that a balance must be struck between profits for oil companies and prices for consumers. They said that oil price controls are needed to keep gasoline prices within the means of the average citizen.

Mizell, Rose Ruth and Martin voted "yea."
Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Preyer, Broyhill and Taylor voted "nay."

RATIONING Rejected, 199 for and 211 against, a motion to strike from the energy bill conference report a provision to give the President the power to ration gasoline.

In rejecting the motion, the House voted to use rationing as a last resort for assuring equal distribution of gasoline.

Those voting for argued that rationing would make it difficult for commuters to buy a week's supply of gasoline. Some voted for striking the provision because it does not require Congress to approve a rationing plan put forth by the Administration.

Those voting against argued that rationing would be preferable to long gasoline station lines and skyrocketing prices.

Mizell and Broyhill voted "yea."
Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Preyer, Ruth, Martin, and Taylor voted "nay."
Rose did not vote.

Supporters argued that underdeveloped countries need help from U. S. corporations, and that U. S. corporations need sound, federally-backed insurance for overseas investments. Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) said such an investment is "more palatable" to underdeveloped nations than foreign aid.

Opponents wanted to end taxpayer-subsidized insurance for private corporations. Some opponents argued that U. S. corporations should invest at home, especially in light of present high unemployment.

Sen. Sam Ervin (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."
OPIC TIMETABLE Passed, 48 for and 46 against, an OPIC bill amendment that watered down the schedule for private takeover of federal insurance for overseas investments.

The bill originally called for terminating OPIC's direct insurance role by 1980, thus forcing corporations to seek private insurers.

The amendment changed the rigid schedule into a "guideline dates" and "objectives." Its effect was to extend indefinitely OPIC's role as an insuring agency.

Supporters argued that the foreign policy values of overseas investments outweigh OPIC's cost to the taxpayers, and that a flexible schedule allows OPIC to administer an orderly take over by private insurers.

Opponents argued that a rigid schedule would force OPIC and private insurance corporations to get serious about working out details for a private takeover.

Ervin and Helms voted "nay."

SENATE OVERSEAS INVESTMENTS

Passed, 56 for and 35 against, a bill to continue through 1976 the Overseas Private Investment Corporation's insurance of foreign investments by U. S. corporations. The government agency covers losses due to expropriation, war damage and unconvertibility of currency. The bill (S. 2957) now goes to the House.

OPIC was formed in 1969 to take over programs administered by the Agency for International Development. The bill calls for OPIC to gradually turn over its business to private insurance companies.

Bicycling Is In Legislative Eye

RALEIGH (AP)—Bicycling as an alternative means of transportation during the energy crunch is an idea whose time may have come in the North Carolina legislature.

The state Senate Monday night passed and sent to the House a bill encouraging the use of "moto-peds," which are regular bicycles with small "helper" motors attached. The bill would exempt the machines from the regular state motor vehicles requirements for registration and insurance.

Sen. Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth, who owns a "moto-ped" said it "is the solution to the energy problem that besets us all at about age 40. It gives the spring of youth to the muscles of the middle-aged."

Horton said his machine's engine merely helps the rider get up hills and cannot push the bike faster than 17 miles an hour. The rider pedals as he would on a normal bike when the road is flat. Such machines are common in Europe but are just being introduced in the United States. Horton said his gets 125 miles to the gallon.

Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, another legislator-cyclist, introduced a bill which would create a state agency to develop a system of bike lanes and trails. It sets aside $500,000 that that agency in the next fiscal year.

A note of caution, however, was sounded by Senate majority leader Gordon Allen, D-Person. Allen was limping heavily Monday night as a result of a fall from a 10-speed bicycle he was riding over the weekend.

"Those things are dangerous," he said ruefully.

Soil Testing Facility Moving To Another Site

The North Carolina Soil Testing Division of the N. C. Department of Agriculture, will interrupt the testing of soil on April 1, so that operations can be moved to a new facility on Blue Ridge Road in Raleigh. The interruption will last about three weeks.

The new facility will enable the Division to offer plant analysis and a nematode advisory service soon after the move is complete. Both services will be a source of valuable information for farmers and gardeners.

Persons planning to get their soil tested should get the samples to the laboratory before the last week in March to avoid conflicting with the move.

Advisory Group Meets March 6

The Title I Advisory Committee of the Greenville City Schools will hold its March meeting on Wednesday, March 6, at the conference room of the Board of Education Office, 431 West Fifth Street.

At the meeting, Charles M. Dickens, Coordinator of Federal Programs and Glenn L. Cox, Superintendent of the Greenville City Schools, will present a project status report to the committee.

Robert L. Moore is chairman of the 21 member committee. The public is invited to attend this meeting.
