

Unchanged

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 5.2 per cent of the work force in February despite the energy crunch, the government said today.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, reporting the surprise statistic, said total employment remained unchanged at 85.8 million while the number of people out of work held at 4.7 million.

Specialists in the bureau could offer no reason for the sudden halt in unemployment, which has risen from 4.6 per cent of the work force since last October, primarily because of job layoffs caused by the energy crisis.

The bureau estimated that from November through February between 125,000 and 200,000 jobs were lost directly because of fuel shortages.

One reason for the apparent strength of employment in February was shown in a separate survey of industry employment, showing that nonfarm payroll jobs posted a net increase of 175,000 last month.

This survey showed that even though 151,000 people were laid off in February in the manufacturing industry, mainly because of the energy crisis, another 218,000 found jobs in service-producing industries and 101,000 in the construction industry. The unemployment rate had been expected to go up again as the economy continued an apparent slowdown and the Arab oil embargo cut into industry production.

One bureau official said that one possible explanation is the margin of error built into the monthly statistics. He said that perhaps the January rise was overstated or the February report understated.

City Council Talks Pool Cost Steps

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council has instructed City Manager Bill Carstarphen and architect William Friend to continue negotiations with the low bidder for the municipal swimming pool in an effort to bring the cost down to a more reasonable figure.

The Council, after discussing the bids that were opened recently for the entire pool complex, voted Thursday night to reject all of the bathroom bids and have Friend rework architectural plans for the structure to hopefully reduce costs.

Friend explained to the Council that the pool structure itself is included in one package and the bathroom facility includes the plumbing and electrical work in another package.

Low bid for the general construction, which included the bathroom, was submitted by L. A. Downey & Son Inc. of New Bern ($77,210) while the low bidder for the pool ($19,233) was offered by Kingston Plumbing & Heating and the low electrical bid ($8,585) was submitted by Stuart Shinn Inc. of Greenville.

Gatlinburg (Tenn.) submitted the low bid for the actual pool structure ($165,000) but like the other bids was considerably above the estimated costs as figured in the budget. The budget appropriation called for a pool cost of $90,200 on the basis of $12.27 per square foot while the low bid of $165,000 amounted to $22.45 per square foot.

The total of base bids for the entire complex amounted to some $270,028, it was noted, and was substantially higher than the budget appropriation of $150,000 for the pool project.

Friend noted that several alternates were included in the bids that would lower the overall costs but the alternates were generally viewed as not favorable among the Council.

One alternate on the pool bid called for the use of spot skimmers in lieu of a continuous skimming system but Councilman Percy Cox said that he was definitely not in favor of utilizing spot skimmers.

Boyd Lee, director of the Recreation Department, read a letter from the Recreation Commission that recommended that the Council approve the low bidders and begin negotiations to reduce the project costs.

The letter, signed by Commission chairman Sidney Carraway, said that "We are both awed and amazed at the excessive amounts of the bids." It added, "We realize that all things are increasing daily in price and that there are shortages in many areas of the construction field, but this does not make the initial bids any more understandable."

Councilman Clarence Gray said that he is in favor of the pool and in view of the "terribly high prices," he feels further negotiations are necessary, but not to the point of delaying the project.

Gray urged Carstarphen and Friend to proceed in their negotiations "with deliberate speed so that the public will not get the idea that we are stalling."

Mayor Eugene West commented that based on the current time schedule, the city will not have its swimming pool this summer.

In a matter that was not on the meeting agenda, a delegation of area ministers appealed through their spokesmen to take action to stop the "streaking" activities underway on the East Carolina University campus and in the city.

The Rev. Bobby G. Thomas, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, told the Council that "we have had our faces slapped enough. Something has got to be done." Thomas asserted that the Supreme Court ruled that each city has the right to ban pornography. "You have done nothing."

The spokesman said that the streaking activities across the nation have been "planned and its going to go further." He added, "Call it a fad if you will, but it's time to do something now."

Thomas said that if nothing is done to arrest the "streakers" and stop the local actions, then "We'll put a preacher on each corner and preach the gospel."

He said, "We have become heathens and something needs to be done about it. We are turning the other cheek tonight but we intend to do something about it."

West pointed out that the city has an ordinance relating to indecent exposure and persons violating that ordinance on the streets of the city will be arrested. He added that the city has an agreement with the ECU police that the city will not infringe upon the campus police jurisdiction.

The university is on state-owned property, it was noted, and the city has no jurisdiction there unless its assistance is requested. West said that he thinks the appropriate place to start is at the university and "on to Raleigh" if necessary.

A member of the audience proposed that "if religious organizations of the community want things changed, then they should appeal to the religious organizations on campus" for assistance in stopping the activities.

In other business, the Council approved an agreement between the city and the Redevelopment Commission for the transfer of the Town Common property to the city.

The agreement stipulates in part that the property will be conveyed to the city at no cost for development by the city as a local park called the Town Common. It also requires that the use of the property be subject to restrictions set forth in the Shore Drive Urban Renewal Plan. The city agrees, according to the action, to commence improvements of the Common within one month of the date of the deed and complete the construction within 18 months of the deed date.

Carstarphen explained that an earlier conceptual plan of how the area might look has been revised by the city to reflect the topography more accurately. The current plan is similar but not identical to the original plan, he said.

A low bid of $88,850, submitted by Barrus Construction Co., for the second phase of a three-year resurfacing program for the city streets was approved. The first phase was completed last year.

Council members also voted to accept a bid of $32,447 by Kahalley Lighting Inc. for lighting equipment for the Town Common. The bid, the lower of two received by the city for the equipment, calls for 59 single light post units, 11 three-light post units, four five-light post units, and 16 single light bracket units. Consider 'Muzzle'

By MEL LANG

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—The University Board of Governors today ordered a study of possible policy changes that would muzzle outspoken chancellors such as Leo Jenkins of East Carolina University.

The board directed its governance committee to produce recommendations, probably in April, for development of new guidelines controlling the "relationship between the board and its administrative officers, the president and employees of the board."

Board member Robert Jordan of Mt. Gilead called for the policy study after noting that Jenkins has been quoted in newspapers as saying East Carolina will continue to seek a four-year degree granting medical school, despite the governors' objections to such a move.

The Jenkins quotations were published after the legislature's Joint Appropriations Committee voted Feb. 26 to work toward the development of the second year for East Carolina's existing medical class and to study the possibility of expanding its enrollment. The committee also recommended appropriation of $15 million for a new science building at ECU.

The action was in direct conflict with recommendations by the board of governors.

William Dees Jr., of Goldsboro, chairman of the university board, supported Jordan's call for the muzzling study, saying it "seems to me it would be appropriate to give the president some guidelines" on dealing with chancellors.

"We are not trying to work out a plan of discipline for Dr. Jenkins or anyone else," he said. Earlier, he had called expressed the hope that the 1974 legislature's action would mark the end of continuing bickering over the medical school.

Dees said the board could not expect cooperation from community hospitals or other medical schools "to commit themselves to a long term effort for our mutual benefit if we have to anticipate that every question will be reopened each year."

"There has to come a time when issues are resolved and when those who work with us can be a reasonable confidence and assurance in our long term commitment," Dees said.

Nixon Proposes Series Of Campaign Reforms

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon today proposed new limits on campaign financing and prohibitions on so-called "dirty tricks," saying that "campaign abuses recently publicized ... proclaim that the electoral process needs reform."

"I am doubtful that any legislation can provide the panacea that some seek to guarantee absolute integrity in the electoral process," the President declared in a message to Congress.

But he proposed a series of reforms — and stated his opposition to some other suggestions — which if enacted would change the face of American elections.

Nixon said campaign financing is "the most important area for reform and the area in which reform is most urgently required."

"I conclude that the single most important action to reform campaign financing should be broader public disclosure," he said.

Nixon's eight-page message listed these specific financing proposals:

—No individual could contribute more than $3,000 to any Senate or House candidate or more than $15,000 to any presidential candidate. These limits would apply separately in primaries, runoffs and general elections.

—No cash contribution above $50, no donations from foreigners, no loans and no donation of such non-money assets as stocks would be allowed.

—Organizations other than political parties, such as the AFL-CO's Committee on Political Education or various industry political action committees, could not donate directly to a candidate. They could continue contributing to political parties.

ECU Mall Area Cordoned Off As Crowd Gathers For Streak

East Carolina University police cordoned off the Mall area on the campus last night as a crowd of several hundred gathered to watch an estimated 30 streakers perform.

University officials, who said the Mall area was cordoned off in an effort to "control traffic," said a number of streakers went skinny-dipping in the fountain in the middle of Wright Circle before the night streak was over. No arrests were made on the campus, spokesmen said, and Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said no one was arrested by city officers.

Cannon said additional police were assigned to duty last night after rumors spread that streakers intended a down-town appearance. However, no streakers were seen on city streets.

According to the chief, a crowd gathered downtown after a local night spot, the Elbow Room, was closed for the night by Greenville Fire Marshall's inspectors about 11:15 p.m.

Fire officials said the business was closed due to overcrowding. They noted that similar inspections of all local night spots will be made each week and establishments found overcrowded, with blocked exits, disorderly crowds or other safety hazards, will be closed.

James Mallory, ECU's Dean of Men, said this morning that five persons—none of them ECU students, were arrested on the campus early yesterday on charges of trespassing.

He said the arrests were not connected with streaking, but involved persons found in Jones Dormitory between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. Thursday.

Mallory said those arrested included two males and three females found in the dormitory after the 12 midnight openhouse or visitation curfew.

Far-Apart Math

By The Associated Press

The Federal Energy Office has announced additional gasoline for North Carolina this month, however state and federal disagree on the how much fuel the state will receive.

According to an announcement Thursday in Washington, North Carolina is one of seven states earmarked for more than 100 per cent of its March 1974 supply.

However, the FEO's estimate on how much gasoline North Carolina will receive is eight million gallons below the state energy office's figure.

"Their math and ours is so far apart that we don't understand what it is they're doing," said Fowler Martin, executive director of the Governor's Energy Office.

When asked about the discrepancy, a federal energy official in Washington said, "I don't know who is right, but obviously somebody is wrong."

Thousands Of Skinny, Fat, Sweaty Bodies Compete For Attention

By The Associated Press

Thousands of skinny, fat, goose-bumpy, sweaty bodies, all nude, are competing with the heroes of college athletics for the title to biggest spectator sport in the country.

Thousands upon thousands of collegians, male and female, stripped to the buff Thursday night for a zany frolic of "streaking" that provided more entertainment than television or the local movies.

The craze of romping around campus in the nude has been building in numbers and imagination for weeks, but the fad burst into unprecedented dimensions Thursday as newstyle nudists ran, danced, parachuted, biked, walked and played on campuses across the country.

Some of the bigger and more outlandish nude events: —At Athens, Ga., a University of Georgia streaker proclaimed, "We've got the record," after as many as 1,000 nude bodies raced around the campus. A school patrolman estimated that there were probably more than 20,000 spectators. "I wish I had the courage to join them," said one elderly lady. "They look like they're having a swell time."

—The Georgia claim, however, will certainly be contested in Colorado. Around 1,200 naked students dashed around a quadrangle at the University of Colorado, campus police said. The au natural sprint was witnessed by an estimated 6,000 students and Boulder residents.

—Hundreds of students at Stehen F. Austin University, in the heart of East Texas' Bible belt, stripped to their birthday suits and joined a crowd of about 2,000 in a "streak dance" to the accompaniment of a rock concert.

—Four "bare-a-chutists" bailed out over the University of Illinois wearing only parachutes, helmets and shoes. They landed in the quadrangle near the Illini Union as some 6,000 persons applauded and screamed "Streak! Streak! Streak!"

The naked men scrambled 300 feet to a waiting car and were whisked away.

—Sweet Briar, Va., College president Harold B. Whiteman Jr. stood on his porch and applauded as some 50 coeds streaked by his house. About 200 students from the women's college took part, led by about 15 to 20 seniors wearing their commencement robes fastened at the neck only.

—Five naked coeds at Vassar College discovered that streaking is fun until the boys start chasing. "They ran for about a block up to the Geology building and then five guys started chasing them," a local newsmen said. The women managed to get their clothes back on before the guys caught up with them.

—Eight were arrested and four policemen were hurt when a "streak-in" at the University of Delaware drew about 1,000 spectators and turned into a free-for-all.

—In Orange County, Calif., three high school students performed what might be called a "blue" streak. The three lads dashed across campus and back in a chilly rain before realizing that they'd locked their car — where they'd left their clothes — with the keys inside.

—One of the 20 streakers at the University of South Florida showed up on crutches.

'Her Mistake' Lends Springtime Pleasure To All Passersby

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Old Tar Road (State Road 1700) out Evans Street Extension from Greenville beyond its intersection with State Road 1711 is a wonderland of jonquils now.

The route is one taken by many area people each spring just for the joy of viewing the glorious array of butter-colored blooms. Those who have not yet had the pleasure should "buy hyacinths (or jonquils in this case) for the soul" and splurge on the gasoline or the pedal-power to make the jaunt.

Five miles from the 264 Bypass not far beyond the second road that turns right and leads into Winterville, there's a big brown house set back from the road on the right. Here live Miss Lottie Ellis, who planted the initial dozen jonquils in the area "by mistake" some 40 years ago, and her sister, Mrs. R. E. Boyd. Their yard and a wooded area across the road are covered with thousands of jonquils growing, not in beds or rows, but in wild abandon. There are also many in yards of several homes nearby. Those persons who have been by in past springs will be dismayed that the shoulders of the road have not nearly so many as before. Untold dozens of bulbs must have been moved or destroyed when the road was widened last year, they said.

"I set out the first one around here in our yard," Miss Ellis said, "but Mr. R. H. McLawhorn gets the credit for planting them for miles along the road a number of years ago. It's a shame so many of those were lost this past year."

She explained her "mistake" that created the beauty that is now. "Rock gardens in dishes were in vogue then, so I got what I thought were white narcissus bulbs and fixed six in water with rocks around them. They didn't even sprout, though, so I set them and six others out in the back yard. These Sir Watkins (I learned the variety later) flourished, so the next year I dug up some of the new bulbs and put them somewhere else in the yard. That was in the early 1930's—I don't remember what year exactly."

Mrs. Boyd said they bought more each year and also have done much transplanting. "We have about 25 varieties now, I believe," she said.

"Se give bulbs to our friends a lot, but so often they tell us they just don't get blooms like we do," she went on. "My sister says the soil here must be so 'just right' for them that they'd grow if we dropped the bulbs on the ground."

"I think, too, though that the fact that we don't clip them makes ours do so well. Sometimes the grass is knee-high almost, but we don't mow until the last blooms have dried and completely disappeared. Leaving them as long as they'll stay seems to give the bulbs a chance to grow and get nourishment and multiply."

"A loose, well-drained soil is best," Mrs. Boyd said. "Except for transplanting no care is required and no fertilizing is needed either. Transplanting can be done in the spring or the fall and dried bulbs will keep indefinitely. You just need to dig them while the tops are there, so you can find them."

Miss Ellis said this year's blooming began in mid-February. "This is the earliest I can ever remember its happening," she said. "If we're lucky, we'll still have some at Easter, though."

Abby Advises 'Get Wake Democratic Women Off The Hook' Both Plan March 16 Brunch Will Feel Better

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was really surprised when Joyce asked me to be maid of honor for her wedding. We've been classmates for years, but go with different kids. I can't understand why she chose me. She has many much closer friends. I accepted because I didn't know how to refuse, but now I'm sorry, and I'd like to get out of it.

I've already paid Joyce's mom for the dress, but it hasn't been altered. My mom and I gave a shower for Joyce. We invited her mom, sisters, aunts and friends, and they all acted like they were slumming. They openly snubbed my mom. I had a lump in my throat the whole time.

My family says if I am in the wedding party they will go to the church only to see me, but not to the reception. My dad says he won't go at all. They didn't invite my steady boy friend to be my escort, so I won't have anybody to talk to at the reception. At the last minute, should I say I have an illness in the family, and can't go? Or just tell them the truth?

DILEMMA D.

DEAR DILEMMA: Don't lie. Tell your friend that you have reconsidered and would like out. From what you say, she'll be as glad to get off the hook as you will.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my 70s and I need some advice. I have four daughters, and if I asked them, I'd get four different answers.

A few months ago I saw in the obituary column where the wife of an old boy friend of mine died, so I waited for what I thought was a reasonable length of time and then I wrote him a note and gave him my phone number and said it would be nice to talk to him some time.

He called me up and we talked for a long time. In the conversation he said he'd like to see me again, but he hoped I wouldn't expect any "kid stuff" in the love-making department. I rather got the idea that he was trying to tell me that he was too old for that sort of thing. Well, I'm not, and if that is what he meant I don't want to waste my time with him as I don't have a whole lot of time left. How can I find out without being too blunt?

OLD BUT NOT TOO OLD

DEAR OLD: I think he was trying to tell you that as far as he was concerned, his love-making days were behind him. Whether they are is anybody's guess, but if he thinks they are, they are.

DEAR ABBY: With regard to your reference to the "law" requiring the presence of a nurse during a gynecological examination: An Irish doctor attributed it to the conceit of American women. I am a gynecologist who has practiced for 40 years, and I have always had a nurse present during examinations, but to my knowledge no law exists which requires it.

Physicians in other countries, not being fair game for any and all "suit happy" patients, may have a hard time understanding this necessary precaution. My colleagues in the U. S. A. do. And they had better!

H. H. S. [M. D.]

DEAR M.D.: As I understand it, there is no such "law"—it's just a common practice among physicians. And a wise one, for obvious reasons.

DEAR ABBY: I hope to God you can help me. I am 16 years old and pregnant. I really can't understand how this happened. My boy friend promised he would be real careful.

I have got to find a place to go real quick, because there are four girls in our family, and my mom said if any of us ever got that way we may as well pack up and leave home.

My boy friend is joining the Navy and says he will come back and marry me if I wait until May, but I can't wait that long.

What I want you to tell me is where I can go to have my child? I'd like to keep it if possible and come back and finish school. I don't have five cents to my name, but I am willing to work like a horse as long as I can. Please help me.

ALL MESSED UP

DEAR ALL: There is a Booth Memorial Home near you. It's run by the Salvation Army, and a more kind and generous group of people would be hard to find. Tell them Abby sent you. May God bless you.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen months after the Vietnam war cease-fire, Congress is beginning its first full-scale hearings on legislating amnesty for at least a quarter million deserters and draft resisters. Nixon administration officials were among lead-off witnesses today at a House Judiciary subcommittee hearing, along with spokesmen for national organizations campaigning for amnesty. Chairman Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., said in a prepared opening statement that the Jan. 27, 1973 Vietnam cease-fire accord was signed more than a year ago and the last American prisoner of war came home a year ago this month.

"Now that some time has elapsed, it ought to be possible to examine rationally the question of whether or not amnesty should be granted to those who refused to serve," Kastenmeier said.

The chairman said government figures show 206,775 men were accused of draft law violations in the past 10 years and 9,167 of them were convicted. Another 28,000 were accused of deserting, he said, and 4,000 of them were convicted.

Organizations campaigning for amnesty claim the desertion figure is far too low, contending half a million men deserted during the Vietnam War years.

Kastenmeier said another 545,550 men the Pentagon reports got less than honorable discharges during the 10 years would get amnesty under several of the bills before his subcommittee.

'Award Town'

FARMVILLE — Farmville has been designated a Governor's Award Town, according to a letter received here this week. The award is the result of several months of work by local citizens and signifies that the community is both able and willing to accommodate new industry. Farmville Economic President Jack Lewis said. Another benefit is that Farmville should receive preferential treatment in any application it may make for loans under the Rural Development Act, he added. The presentation of the award will be some time in the next few months.

Pressing Probe Of Break-In

Greenville police are pressing their investigation today into a break-in at Johnson's Furniture Company at West End Circle during the night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the break-in was discovered at 1:46 a.m.

He said thieves gained entrance to the building by breaking through a rear door. One television set and a stereo turntable and two speakers were reported stolen.

Pre-History Stirs Imagination

Maybe, just maybe, mankind's attention may briefly veer from the challenge of the conquest of space to a seeking of knowledge concerning his own past and the past of planet Earth.

True, scientists financed by minute sums (as compared with those devoted to our first steps into space), have devoted their lives to building libraries of knowledge about the past. They lacked one important ingredient: the popular support and enthusiasm of populaces whose curiosity had been stirred to fever pitch.

Perhaps that is now forthcoming. Two men whose speculation and postulations have stirred waves of popular interest in pre-history are Russian-born Immanuel Velikovsky (Worlds in Collision", 1950) and Erich von Daniken (Chariots of the Gods?" 1970) recently seen locally as a motion picture and previously the basis for a television "special" which stirred the curiosity of millions.

Both Velikovsky and von Daniken had the talent to inspire their readers with a burning interest in an era of history that is largely recorded in legends and archaeological finds that are unexplainable in the light of present knowledge and thinking.

It is not too much to expect that the fires lit by these two men result in the kind of research that followed other such interest in unknown fields; but not "soon." The wheels of the gods seem to grind with exceeding slowness.

Only now is Velikovsky permitted to debate his views before a forum of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. For 20 years he has been branded a fraud and charlatan and refused a hearing by his critics. Von Daniken is similarly a heretic by his contemporaries. There is a contrast in the two cases. That is the sense of queuing, more prevalent today than 20 years ago. Too, in recent years the world has seen an unleashing of a new tide of young scientists trained to doubt, to probe, to explore. . . and armed with a knowledge and instrumentation and funding unknown to the past generation. (We get better all the time.) They also enjoy a foundation of unprecedented general interest in fields of research hitherto withheld as overly academic.

As for ourselves: we're for it. The von Daniken and Velikovsky theories may include (and probably do) a host of irrelevances and false conclusions concerning the ancient past; but if a handful survive the testing of modern science the human race will be enriched.

Jaworski Adds New Direction

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—The sealed envelope and locked briefcase handed Judge John Sirica along with the Watergate indictments signaled that special prosecutor Leon Jaworski had escaped his impeachment dilemma with dangerous implications for President Nixon.

Having decided nearly two months ago against sending grand jury evidence directly to the House Judiciary Committee impeachment proceedings, Jaworski is now using Sirica as a conduit. The material handed Sirica last Friday was not, contrary to federal courthouse talk, the product of a runaway grand jury. Rather, it was Jaworski's attempt to prevent a situation where Nixon evidence could be used neither for impeachment nor indictment.

This adds a new direction to the impending constitutional confrontation between the House and the President over demands for evidence. With presidential Watergate counsel James St. Clair getting Sirica to call a hearing for today. (Wed.), Mr. Nixon's lawyers now seem ready to try keeping the secret evidence out of congressional hands. Whether they succeed or fail, however, many Judiciary Committee members feel the President's position has deteriorated sharply over the last five days.

In mid-January, Jaworski declared he must deny the House Committee's request for evidence on grounds of grand jury secrecy. Since it was highly dubious that a President could be indicted (though Jaworski then was undecided on this point), it seemed possible Mr. Nixon might fall between the impeachment and indictment stools and escape any scrutiny.

That prospect caused the first potential disagreement between establishment corporation lawyer Jaworski and his ardent young lieutenants inherited from the deposed Archibald Cox. Moreover, no matter how effectively Jaworski prosecuted the Watergate conspirators, he would be accused of aiding the cover-up if accusations against the President were not thoroughly considered.

Exactly what happened next is murky, thanks to the gag rule imposed by Sirica last Friday. There seems no truth to courthouse rumors of a runaway grand jury that tired to indict Mr. Nixon, next wanted to name him as an unindicted co-conspirator and finally sent the sealed envelope to Judge Sirica against the prosecutor's wishes. However, all signs indicate the question of indicting the President did come up in the grand jury.

Jaworski several weeks ago decided an incumbent President could not be indicted. But for that decision to be made, it can be assumed the grand jury felt an indictment was justified by the evidence. This may have coincided with the grand jury's Jan. 30 request asking the President to testify.

Following this, Jaworski decided to resolve his own dilemma by shipping Sirica evidence concerning the President and Watergate, assuming the Judge's most probable recourse would be to send it quickly to the House Judiciary Committee.

Actually, the grand jury's sealed envelope almost surely does not contain an accusation of Mr. Nixon's complicity in the cover-up as described in published reports. Rather, it is believed to list evidence without coming to conclusions.

Thus was the dilemma transferred from special prosecutor to White House. One senior presidential aide immediately contended Sirica should have promptly disclosed to St. Clair the nature of the secret evidence, but the White House seemed perplexed about what to do.

When Sirica did not quickly dispatch everything to the House last Friday as Jaworski may have hoped, St. Clair had time to win today's hearing. Nevertheless, the President faces unpleasant alternatives: letting the secret evidence go to Congress or seeming to obstruct the impeachment proceedings.

All this has transformed the Watergate landscape, less dramatically than last October's Saturday night massacre but perhaps just as profoundly. The secret evidence has halted for now the escalating debate over whether an impeachment offense need be criminal. Furthermore, Vice President Gerald R. Ford has veered from the strict White House line on Watergate for the first time.

In Phoenix, Ariz., last Sunday, Mr. Ford said the sealed evidence, "good or bad," should be sent immediately to the House Judiciary Committee—words definitely not echoed at the White House. Indeed, Nixon aides telephoned the Vice President's office to ask meaningfully whether the Vice President really said that in Phoenix.

FIRST, THE BAD NEWS....

A Boss Who's 'Nice'

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Appliance store owner Arthur Friedman thinks what's good for his employes is good for him. So he lets them set their own salaries, days off, holidays, vacations, and just about everything else.

Friedman's Appliances has been operating that way for some five years. "Because what the employes want turns out to be what I want, anyway," says the boss. Friedman, 51, never argues and is always smiling. He says he allows his 12 workers to choose the customers they wait on, borrow company trucks and take any kind of leave they think they ought to have.

He said that as a result of his policy, "nobody ever leaves." His longest-tenured employe is Stanley Robinson, who has been with Friedman's for 25 of the 52 years it has been in business here.

"I've never been ripped off," said Friedman. "If you lay yourself open to people, you find what you're looking for."

"It's my opinion people do what they want to do anyway, and it's only a question of who they blame for the consequences," he said.

"Take salary. If I offer a guy $200 a week and he says 'okay, I'll take $200,' he has named his own salary by agreement. Well, if he starts thinking that's too low, he'll blame me for not offering him more."

"But if I say to him 'I'll give you whatever you want. Just tell me what you want,' he'll likely take the same $200 because that's the nature of the world. Only now when he thinks it's too low, he can kick his own behind for not asking more. And I tell the men they can come back the next week and ask for more, but they never do."

Friedman said when he first brought up the do-it-yourself system, his workers "went out of their minds. It was a month before they got to the point of cooperating. They didn't believe it."

Friedman said he had a "so-so" worker who hit him up for a $2-an-hour raise.

"I said, 'Oh, God,' but I finally said okay, whatever you want." (Continued On Page 5)

What Do Tar Heels Desire?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—A small band of people coming from widely different walks of life make up a study group with the rather pedestrian title: "N.C. Council on State Goals and Policy."

Beneath that verbiage, however, there is a role for the council which makes critical to every North Carolinian—despite the fact that this council is probably the least known governmental activity in existence.

Gov. Jim Holshouser has called it, "the most important group dealing with long-range planning that is functioning today."

And Gov. Bob Scott, who established the council, considered it a critical step in helping to outline the future directions for North Carolina.

Diversity of view is a keyword for the work of the council, which has recently published its second Annual Report—reemphasizing statements from the past on goals and directions; and outlining some new areas of concern.

Different Interests
Membership on the council ranges from the governor and lieutenant governor, farmer interests, the business-oriented Citizens Association, university officials, state agency officials, labor representatives, newspapermen, educators, politicians, and industrialists.

This diversity of membership, and a wide range in their geographical locations helped to produce what council members believe is a true picture of Tar Heel hopes and dreams and aspirations.

The council's report is brief, easily read and understood, and loaded with far-reaching implications. The first report listed the areas of economy, health care, learning opportunities, and the environment as major areas of concern.

This year, the report added two new areas: effective government and human resources.

In adopting the second report, the council reaffirmed the one goal undergirding all state efforts as written in the first report: equal opportunity and justice for all citizens.

The council continues organized and working to gather material and study directions for future planning, and in the new report notes that the council is "not intended to be a panacea for our state. It is one assessment of some of the things that ought to be done if we are to be about providing a better life for all of the people of North Carolina."

"It is a starting point, and not, by any means, an end."

Brief Review

Here is a thumbnail sketch of what the council hopes to accomplish in each major area of concern:

—In economy, to help people, where they are, to raise their own level of income;

—In learning opportunities; emphasis is on providing an education for those not staying within the system;

—In health care, focus is on providing a delivery system for health and medical care to all people of the state;

—In the environment, emphasis is on protecting what we have and planning for improvement;

—In human resources; the direction is toward guaranteeing all citizens the opportunity to develop and use abilities and talents;

—In effective government, the council draws attention to growing distrust and seeks to open the door to a better assessment of government and a better access of citizens to that government.

On the subject of the "crisis of confidence in government," the council recommends a number of actions to be taken, including an inventory of means by which citizens can address state government on needs, views, concerns and problems, and how citizens can take part in and influence governmental decisions.

A publication as a citizens guide to government is called for, as are regular statewide studies based on what citizens want and need and the kind of future they desire.

Start With Seat Belts

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—If President Nixon is really serious in his campaign to protect Americans from invasion of privacy, he might start with the 1974 automobile safety belts. These harnesses which are attached to the dashboard buzzers on the dashboard may save lives but they're also wrecking marriages, driving people stark raving mad and causing untold havoc on the road.

Just the other day I was in Tucson, Ariz., and the Sheltons offered to take me to dinner in their new 1974 station wagon. There were six of us in the car, three in the front seat and three in the back. Everyone was in a jovial mood.

Then Shelton tried to start the car. A red light the size of a highway billboard lit up and a buzzer which sounded like an air raid siren went off.

Shelton yelled to his wife, "Fasten your safety belt!"

"It is fastened!" she screamed back over the din.

"Well it isn't fastened right. Put the shoulder strap over your chest."

"It is over my chest," she said angrily. I was sitting between them in the middle seat.

"Maybe it's my belt!" I yelled. I unhooked and then rehooked the belt, but the buzzer wouldn't stop.

"Hurry up," someone in the back seat shouted, "or the whole car will self-destruct!"

Shelton leaned over me, grabbed his wife's shoulder harness and pulled it tightly around her.

The red light went off and the buzzing stopped.

"There," said Shelton, "that's better."

"I'm choking," Mrs. Shelton gasped. "I can't breathe."

"Don't do anything," Shelton cried, "or the buzzing will start again."

"I can only hold my breath for two minutes," Mrs. Shelton gaged.

I lifted the shoulder harned from her neck and the red light went on again and the scream of the buzzer filled the car.

Shelton hit the wheel with both his hands. "I told you not to touch her belt!"

"But her face was all green," I said.

"Everybody get out," Shelton said. "Let's see if I can solve this thing."

We all got out of the car. Shelton studied the front seat.

"All right, my harness goes in this slot, your harness in this slot and your harness goes in this one. Now let's all get back in the car again and I don't want to hear any buzzers."

We got back in and in five minutes managed to get the harnesses around us.

Shelton turned on the ignition and everything on the dashboard flashed red.

"You hold her harness," Shelton yelled to me, "and let her hold yours?"

"Who's going to hold yours?" I shouted.

"I'll hold my own."

"How are you going to drive?" I asked him.

"Who cares, as long as I can stop the buzzing?"

I was holding on to Mrs. Shelton's harness for dear life, and she had my seat belt in the crook of her elbow. Shelton had one hand underneath his seat and was driving with the other.

For five minutes it was quiet in the car. Then Mrs. Shelton said, "I think the circulation in my arm has been cut off. There's no feeling in it."

Other Editors Say Full Speed Ahead

(Raleigh Times)

The House Education sub-committee in its 3-2 vote killing Margaret Keesee's watered-down anti-spanking bill gave the public schools a "full speed ahead" signal on beating children.

Rep. Keesee's original bill, calling for an end to corporal punishment in North Carolina, one of only 10 states still practicing it, may have gone too far for this state's conservative nature.

But her amended bill was mild indeed. It would have limited spanking privileges of teachers and principals and would have required a written report of the spanking. It advocated spanking only as a last resort.

These were not unreasonable restrictions. Yet the sub-committee, which earlier rejected another version of the bill that would have forbidden spanking of children whose parents objected to corporal punishment, was in a punishing mood.

The section of the bill calling for spanking reports was objected to by Rep. Sam Bundy, D-Pitt, on the grounds "Teachers file enough reports already."

Rep. Bundy may not be aware of it, but many of those reports are not nearly as important as a record of physical punishment applied to school children.

In the wake of mounting opposition to corporal punishment, such reports may stand the teacher, principal or school in good stead, particularly in view of the increasing number of lawsuits over spanking.

The sub-committees, casual and callous disposal of all efforts to restrict in any way whatsoever this reprehensible practice in our public schools reflects no credit on the state's legislature. Its action gives license to continued, if not increased, abuse of children by many adults not emotionally equipped to discipline their charges.

And it thrusts on teachers the heavier role of classroom cop, a role she should not have to assume in addition to that of teacher.

Streaking: A New Spring Rite

By The Associated Press
What is there about today's students that leads them to undress and romp in the nude across campuses, stages, basketball courts and other public places?

"Those practitioners of 'streaking' who've slowed down enough to be quoted say it's the fun and excitement. Cheap thrills.

"Those I've talked to say it's a thrill all right, but I wouldn't call it cheap," says Dr. Shelly Duval, a member of the University of Southern California psychology department.

"It would seem that streakers are violating a fairly strong set of norms for sure, and that can always be exciting if you get away with it. As far as I can see it's harmless," he said.

Dr. Zev Wanderer, a 41-year-old psychologist who directs the Center for Behavior Therapy in Beverly Hills, Calif., says part of the reason for the success of streaking is that it is self-assertive activity.

"In a generation where the way to be impactful is to be either a music star or very talented or a thief, an alternative for the student is to run around naked," he said. "It's a relatively easy way to gain fame and notoriety."

But Wanderer says educators should not just laugh it off.

"I think it's significant that this is taking place in colleges because by the time our kids reach that level they've had it with very regimented, conformist school systems," Wanderer said.

"It's a message to the schools that these kids ought to be in alternative open schools where kids can be themselves without having to run around naked."

Robert Ardrey, an evolutionary behaviorist from Rome, explains the fad as a fulfillment of one of man's basic needs.

"In today's affluent society and welfare state, the need for security has largely been satisfied, so boredom sets in," he told an audience at a junior college in Fort Worth, Tex. "Its opposite is stimulation."

William Boldeson, a philosophy professor at the University of Missouri, said streaking is just a form of the rites of spring and is as old as the Greeks.

"It's just innocent exuberance," Boldeson said. "One good blizzard and the whole thing will come to an end."

Whatever the reasons of the younger generation for their wild running in the buff, motives were simpler 56 years ago when retired California appeal court Justice Fred R. Pierce took a barebottomed dash near sorority row.

Pierce, now 74, said he was kicked out of Stanford University for his run in the nude.

And why did he do it? To win a $5 bet with a fraternity brother.

Strength For Today

BEARING THE CROSS

The cross stands central in the Christian faith. The most important teaching of the New Testament is that Christ died for our sins. Something of indescribable spiritual significance happened when the Sinless One died for sinners.

But what many who believe in the saving power of the cross often fail to realize is that the sacrifice of Christ never operates in our behalf until we ourselves begin to live a life of sacrifice. The cross which Christ bore has no power for us until we begin to bear our little crosses. We are to take up these crosses every day and follow him. Jesus made this conditional for his followers; that is, for those who would walk the pathway of salvation until they attain eternal life.

God paid for our salvation: He gave his only begotten son that it might be accomplished. We cannot appropriate the benefits of the divine sacrifice, however, without sacrifice on our part—and this means nailing our sinful desires to the cross of renunciation.

TVA Planning Another Hike In Electric Rates

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Another rate increase may be in store for electrical users along the Tennessee Valley Authority System, the agency has said.

TVA Chairman Aubrey Wagner blamed increasing coal costs for what would be the seventh rate increase in about six years. TVA has raised its basic residential rates by 90 per cent since 1965—the last increase amounting to 14 per cent late last year.

Wagner said the TVA paid 15 per cent more for coal in January than it did in October. "TVA is facing the same kind of trend with its fuel costs that consumers are finding at the gasoline pump," Wagner said.

TVA produces 80 per cent of its electricity at coal-fired electrical generating plants.

Wagner said the average cost of coal received by TVA last October was 37.8 cents per BTU (British Thermal Unit—a measure of heating efficiency). The January average was 43.6 cents per BTU.

"Since this is coal that will be burned in coming months," Wagner said, "this trend is a leading indicator for our operating costs."

In a speech at Nashville last year, Wagner said the agency paid $4.50 a ton for coal four years ago. At that time, the price had risen to $11.70 a ton.

The TVA chairman said the agency's coal costs were rising faster than had been anticipated when the most-recent rate increase was imposed.

In addition, he said, TVA has had difficulty in buying enough coal to maintain normal supplies at its facilities.

"There is plenty of coal in the ground, but demand has outrun production and the result is showing up in higher prices for new fuel purchases," the chairman said.

The TVA rate increases were brought up Thursday as the Tennessee Senate debated a series of amendments on a strip-mining control bill.

"The cost of coal has already moved our electric bills up so high we can't see them," said Sen. Ernest Crouch, D-McMinnville, "and I think this amendment would turn the costs even higher."

Unveil FBI Counterintelligence

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—For nearly four years the FBI employed secret disruptive tactics against black militants and other radical groups.

The purpose was to destroy organizations the FBI considered violence-prone and to topple their leaders from whatever power and influence they had amassed in the black and white communities, according to secret FBI memos made public Thursday.

The sheaf of documents, reluctantly released by the FBI on orders from Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe, also disclosed details of similar counterintelligence operations against the Socialist Workers party and the Ku Klux Klan.

The Socialists have challenged the constitutionality of the tactics in a lawsuit pending in New York.

The documents indicate that the counterintelligence programs differed considerably from the agency's more traditional investigative functions.

According to the memos, the campaign against "militant black nationalist-hate groups" was launched Aug. 25, 1967, and expanded a year later to involve 41 FBI field offices across the nation.

The campaign against the Socialists began with a memo dated Oct. 12, 1961, and against the Klan with a memo dated Sept. 2, 1964. All three operations were officially terminated by a previously-released memo dated April 28, 1971.

The new memos, released under pressure from newsmen citing the Freedom of Information Act, were heavily censored to delete the names of target organizations and individuals.

Saxbe said he considered that information a part of investigative files and thus exempt from the disclosure law.

In describing goals of the black militant campaign, the FBI said it intended to:

- Prevent the coalition of militant black nationalist groups "because it feared 'the beginning of a true black revolution.'"
- Prevent the rise of a 'messiah' who could unify, and electrify, the militant black nationalist movement.

The memo listed several potential "messiahs," but those names were censored out.

—"Prevent violence on the part of black nationalist groups ... Through counterintelligence, it should be possible to pinpoint potential troublemakers and neutralize them before they exercise their potential for violence."

—Discredit militants in the eyes of responsible blacks, white liberals and black radicals.

The memo said the primary targets "should be the most violent and radical groups and their leaders."

The document instructed field agents to report counterintelligence activities regularly, to obtain FBI headquarters approval for each operation, and to make sure "that there is no possibility of embarrassment to the bureau."

In another memo, the FBI suggested that the San Francisco field office undertake a "disruptive-disinformation operation" against the national office of the Black Panther party.

Respond To 45 Alarms

Firemen in Pitt County answered a total of 45 alarms covering 41 fires during the month of February, according to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

Nine of the fires were house fires; 13 grass or woods fires; three were automobiles; two buildings other than houses; and one commercial fire. In addition, there were four mutual aid responses (where one station goes to the aid of another); 11 miscellaneous fires; and two false alarms.

Estimated property loss resulting from the 41 fires amounts to $6,950. Total estimated value of property involved in fires was $1,636,000, with an additional $298,000 in property value exposed to the fires.

Staton House was the most active of the county's 18 fire departments, answering seven alarms.

Miss Kuehn Is Selected

Ronald C. Bourgojn, headmaster of Pamlico Community School, has announced the nomination of Pam Kuehn for the North Carolina Governor's School.

Miss Kuehn, is a junior and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Kuehn of Greenville.

Four hundred of North Carolina's most intelligent and most talented students of high school age gather each summer for eight weeks of resident study on the campus of Salem College in Winston-Salem.

The students selected pursue studies of an advanced nature in an area in which they are most gifted.

Miss Kuehn will pursue advanced work in the field of mathematics.

High administration Nixon officials express relief that the indictments did not accuse Mr. Nixon and he was not an undicted co-conspirator. Obvious to Sirica's gag rule, the White House propaganda campaign to discredit deposed White House counsel John W. Dean III as chief government witness flourishes.

But that cannot obscure the new reality in Mr. Nixon's struggle for survival: either the envelope and briefcase will soon be in the hands of the House Judiciary Committee or bogged down in a court fight thanks partly to the President's lawyers. Either result is bad news for Mr. Nixon.

Counting On The Locals

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Officials are hoping that local tourism in the North Carolina mountains will take up much of the slack in long distance visitors caused by the gas shortage.

James R. Brotherton, acting superintendent of the Blue Ridge Parkway, said he thought the number of visitors on the parkway this spring and summer would not be down drastically.

If out of staters fear gasoline problems, so do North Carolinians who often travel to distant vacations. Now, more people are likely to rediscover their own state's recreational resources.

During February, 225,330 cars, according to official figures, used the parkway which connects the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia with the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in North Carolina and Tennessee. That was a drop of 19 per cent from the month a year ago.

"We've only got three miles to go," Shelton raged. "Hang on."

"Please let go of my harness," Mrs. Shelton begged me.

"If you do I'll kill you," Shelton said to me.

We made it to the restaurant just before Mrs. Shelton passed out.

It was a good dinner but no one really cared. Everyone was thinking of the drive back to the hotel.

Arkansas Has 2-Term Jinx

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—While several have tried, only two Arkansas governors have ever been elected to more than two two-year terms.

Gov. Jeff Davis served three terms from 1901 through 1907 and Gov. Orval E. Faubus served six terms from 1955 through 1967. The latest governor to try was the late Winthrop Rockefeller, who was defeated in a third-term bid by incumbent Dale Bumpers in 1970.

Bond Sales Topped Goal

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County in 1973 amounted to $643,455, according to R. W. Howard, county volunteer chairman.

Howard said that the figure represented 108.9 per cent of the county's 1973 goal of $591,000.

Sales of Series E and H Bonds in North Carolina totaled $90,716,253 in 1973, the chairman reported. The figure was the highest recorded since 1954 and was 104.2 per cent of the state's 1973 dollar goal of $87,100,000.

E Bond sales for the year were $69,603,753, Howard said, while H Bond sales totaled $1,112,500. The combined percentage increase in sales over 1972 was 4.1 per cent.

Nationally, 1973 sales of E and H Bonds exceeded $6.26 billion or one per cent above 1972 figures.

Lutheran Scholars Say Rome Link Now Possible

Ready To Kill To Keep Peace

By JONATHAN BRODER
Associated Press Writer
CHECKPOINT IRBATT, Sinai (AP) — The United Nations force in the Sinai Desert is precariously sandwiched between Israeli and Egyptian armies and ready to kill to keep the Suez peace, its Finnish commander says.

Lt. Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo said the blue-bereted troops of his U.N. Emergency Force have no big guns to defend the buffer strip with, "but machine guns and light arms can kill, too."

He indicated that he does not expect to have to use force, however.

"Our lack of airplanes, tanks and artillery is compensated by the moral strength of the force," he said.

Siilasvuo spoke to newsmen at this desert checkpoint on Thursday, the 133rd day that UNEF has been in the Suez Canal Zone. Several miles to the

NEW YORK (AP) — Theological descendants of Martin Luther, the 16th century German priest who sparked the Protestant break from papal leadership, say conditions are ripe for restoring that connection in a new style now in sight.

The idea will startle many Christians, say a team of Lutheran scholars.

But they contend that under changed circumstances and understandings of the present, Lutheran "recognition of papal primacy is possible" and Lutheran churches should consider affirming it in behalf of united work for Christ.

That appeal to Lutherans from their theological representatives went out in the wake of last weekend's historic agreement by a joint U.S. Lutheran-Catholic commission that the hard lines of the old papal issue have dissolved.

reconciliation," the commission said.

In addition to that landmark finding, both the 13 Lutheran and 13 Roman Catholic participants issued separate explanations to their own denominational folds to help them see the basis for the new outlook.

Calling it a "major advance" toward resolving a historically divisive issue, the Catholic participants said it could be a "prelude to a new relationship" between the churches, and urged their church deal with the new situation.

Rev. George A. Lindbeck, of Yale University, comments: "It is now up to the churches to indicate how far they want to go in implementing it."

So far, prior agreements by official Catholic-Lutheran and Catholic-Anglican (Episcopalian) theological teams on holy communion, the early creeds and the ministry, have not been acted on by the churches themselves.

Their leaders say the findings need first to be assimilated by ordinary members—a process the current separate reports sought to aid.

Even though founding Protestant reformers hurled such denunciations as "antichrist" at the papacy of their day because of the way it functioned with state power to impose its authority, the Lutheran experts point out:

"Today, after over four centuries of mutual suspicion and condemnation... we need to remember that the earliest Lutherans hoped for a reform of the papacy precisely for the sake of seeing the unity of the church preserved."

Signs of such reform now are in evidence, including Catholicism's greater stress on Bible sources and shared collegiality in church government, putting the issue into a "new perspective," the Lutheran scholars say.

For example, Roman Catholic participants point out that in contemporary understanding, the Pope does not have the autocratic authority of a monarch, but his role is primarily as one who "serves" the church.

"We share the concern of our Lutheran partners in dialogue that safeguards should be provided against violation of Christian rights and freedom on the part of all ecclesiastical authority, papal included," the Catholic scholars say.

They suggest that while Lutherans presumably could not take the same position toward the Pope as currently held by Catholics, a distinct canonical status could be worked out so Lutherans could recognize the papacy as a symbol of unity, while remaining self-governing.

The Lutheran participants note that even in the era of the Protestant split with Rome, Lutheran thinkers conceded that in the New Testament, a pre-eminent role was held by the apostle Peter, a role from which the papacy evolved.

"Critical as we Lutherans have been in our evaluation of papal history," they say, "the existence of the papacy has in many ways been beneficial" in expressing and nurturing "visible unity of the church" in a world of divisive non-Christian forces.

The Lutheran group adds that a "renewed papacy," with Protestants in communion with it, "would in fact foster faithfulness to the gospel and truly exercise a Petrine function within the church."

east, Israeli soldiers relaxed around a mobile radar station. To the west Egyptian convoys ferried troops to new positions along a black asphalt road near the canal.

"Welcome to limbo" read a message scribbled onto the checkpoint marker.

The 440-square-mile buffer zone — marked off by black oil barrels — runs from the Mediterranean to the Suez Gulf. It is manned by 7,500 members of UNEF, with battalions from Ireland, Peru, Sweden, Indonesia, Senegal and Finland and contingents from Canada, Poland, Nepal and Ghana.

Siilasvuo said the job of his men was to report cease-fire violations, changes in troop deployment and strength in the areas where only limited Egyptian and Israeli forces are permitted — and to fight off any incursions into the buffer strip.

But they contend that under changed circumstances and understandings of the present, Lutheran "recognition of papal primacy is possible" and Lutheran churches should consider affirming it in behalf of united work for Christ.

That appeal to Lutherans from their theological representatives went out in the wake of last weekend's historic agreement by a joint U.S. Lutheran-Catholic commission that the hard lines of the old papal issue have dissolved.

Cattlemen Say They're Hurting

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattlemen say they are being run out of business by high feed costs and fat profit margins by middlemen who they contend are charging consumers more for beef than necessary.

And to prove their case a group of Iowa cattle feeders — those who fatten animals for the consumer markets — plan to sell beef on New York City streets at 15 per cent less than supermarkets are charging.

Glenn Gregg, president of the Sioux County Cattlemen's Association, said Thursday the New York beef sale may even result in tailgate hawking from a truck chartered by angry Midwestern beef producers.

The plan, he told a news conference, is still to be worked out. But it involves trucking Iowa beef to New York at only the cost of slaughtered beef animals, transportation charges and a $25 per carcass markup.

Gregg said the idea of the New York demonstration, tentatively set for March 15, is to show city consumers that middlemen are taking huge chunks of the beef dollar.

Clarence G. Adams, president of the National Association of Food Chains, said retail profits are dangerously low and that recent declines in cattle prices are temporary.

"The implication that retailers are profiteering is a gross misstatement and one I deeply resent," Adams said.

His comments followed a statement Thursday by Agricultural Secretary Earl L. Butz that middlemen have not passed on to consumers recent declines in cattle prices. Those dropped from $48 per 100 pounds in late January to around $43 this week.

Figures by USDA show feed prices have doubled since a year ago while prices for live cattle are about the same.

Butz said consumers paid a record $1.48 per pound on an all-cut basis for beef in the week ended Feb. 9 and that increased further to $1.53 by Feb. 16. Meantime, he said, live cattle prices dropped two cents per pound.

The Iowa group said it was considering antitrust lawsuits against meat packers and chain stores.

Left to his own devices, today's teen will copy the only, yet faulty, example he has—today's adult."

CHRIST MAKES LIFE COMPLETE

The Face of The Times

Wendy is the outdoor type... doesn't mind the wind in her face... hair blowing in the breeze... loves to ski and go mountain climbing. She's the picture of slightly-disheveled beauty. But bring her indoors—the first thing Wendy reaches for is a comb.

Disorder cannot mar beauty when there is a natural or reasonable cause. But the disorder that comes from irresponsibility or violence casts its ugliness over everything it touches.

Doesn't this mean a growing appreciation of the Church's vital role in our society? The dishevelment we see on the face of the times didn't happen with a passing gust of wind. We need—our world needs—the religious foundation on which a stable society must stand.

Millard Good's 20-Year Secret

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
SPENCER, W.VA. (AP) — Millard Good is a creation of life, that master sculptor. After 58 years, his face is deeply chiseled, his hands are scarred and work-shaped and his eyes carry the reflection of 7,000 lonely nights.

But the voice is quiet and gentle.
"Yep, I just failed my driver's test," he says softly. "The poles weren't placed far enough apart for my big, ol' car. It's nothing. It just means I've got to wait seven days before I can try again."

There was no impatience.
Millard Good, if anything, is patient. He learned it during the 19 years he was Delbert Shamblin.

Good became Shamblin one July evening back in 1954 when he walked away from the West

Virginia Penitentiary and a 20-year sentence.

"I was at Camp Fairchance at the time, a full trusty. I was working outside the fence and wasn't due to go back until 9 o'clock. It had got to the point where I had to leave, so, about 5 that evening I put down my tools and walked away."

He paused, then continued in a monotone.

"I was 16 days getting to Parkersburg ... kept getting lost in the woods, and because I couldn't swim, I'd have to hunt out places where I could get across the creeks. I didn't have anything to eat but two hamburgers and a few green apples
I'd find every once in a while.
I'd have starved to death without those apples."

"Late one night at Parkersburg I crossed the river into Ohio and worked my way along doing odd jobs and sleeping in barns. I'd almost reached Columbus when I was lucky enough to meet a good farmer who wanted somebody to work.

I stayed with him most of the next 19 years and had my own room over a cellar house. When I wasn't working I spent a lot of time in the woods hunting."

The farm where Good lived his secret life was just 100 miles west of the home in which Good's wife and two sons spent those lonely years. After Good's arrest in 1951, they had moved in with Mrs. Good's parents near Spencer, in central West Virginia. Good had been a bricklayer and home owner in another West Virginia town.
And then, one day, he was arrested on a charge of armed robbery.

"I was falsely accused of robbing an elderly farm couple down in Mason County," he said. "Why, until I was put in jail there, I had never been in Mason County before ... never had seen the inside of a jail ... never had even gotten a traffic ticket. I was innocent but I couldn't get anybody to believe me."

"I had $454 on me when I was arrested, but it was money I'd saved up and at my trial I accounted for every penny of it," he said. "But the judge and my grandfather had had a falling out years before and I paid for it."

He was taken to the prison at Moundsville. He had been there for three years and seven

"I never had a single mark on my record while I was in prison," he said, "and that's pretty hard to do. They let me out every day to work and lots of nights I'd come in and have to rattle the bars at midnight to get back inside. They were as good to me as they were to anyone and I hated to break their trust, but my life had been threatened and my life came first."

The Goods had to sell their home to meet legal expenses and shortly after her husband went to prison, Hazel June — at that time an attractive young woman with raven-black hair — took her two young sons to live with her parents.

"We never knew for sure whether he was alive all those years," she said. "But I never gave up trying to clear his name."

Good gave his wife a little hug.

"God bless her, she never gave up on me. Many was the time I was tempted to write her, but I was too scared. I was afraid I'd have to go back and I just couldn't stand the thought. I used to get the Charleston paper every chance I could to see if I could find out anything about my family and I chose the name Delbert Shamblin because Delbert is my son's name and Shamblin is my mother's ... It was as close as I could get to being with them."

"During the time I was in Ohio, my daddy, my brother and my sister all died. My boys grew up and her hair (he said, gesturing to his wife) turned to white. I sat down lots of times and thought to myself I'd just go ahead and die. But then I'd think about my wife and my children..."

He shrugged and looked at his wife. They were seated in the living room in the parsonage of the St. John's United Methodist Church in Spencer.

The minister, the Rev. Carl Dodrill, helped Good shed his false identity and return to his wife and family, which now includes six grandchildren.

There was an intermediary, a man who somehow knew that Delbert Shamblin was Millard
Good.

"I first was contacted about Mr. Good three years ago by a friend of his," said the Rev.
Dodrill. "But I did not give it much thought at the time. The fellow was a friend of Mr.
Good's in Ohio and I don't know how he learned about the story. I didn't ask him. The friend had the feeling that Mr.
Good had been misjudged and something ought to be done."

"Then, when Mrs. Good contacted me a year later, I began to make some inquiries into the case and became convinced the man had a valid argument. It was a long and drawn out process and I went to Charleston and met with the governor a half a dozen times. At first he was skeptical, but after he had his staff make some inquiries, it finally reached the point where he said he wanted to see Mr. Good sitting across a desk from him."

The Rev. Dodrill said it was pure coincidence that he was contacted by both Mrs. Good and Good's friend. During two years of investigation, the Rev.
Dodrill didn't tell Mrs. Good that he had learned her husband was alive and working near Columbus, Ohio. "I couldn't see any reason to build up her hopes," he said.

But with Gov. Arch A. Moore
Jr. interested and ready to talk with Good, the Rev. Dodrill had her place an advertisement in the personals column of the Columbus newspapers.

"I spotted it right away," said Good. "I always checked the papers. I called the number she had put in the paper and came home the day before we went down to the governor's office. It was the first time we had been together in nearly 20 years."

That day, last Oct. 4, was the day Delbert Shamblin disappeared and Millard Good reappeared.

"He was given probation, but I'm sure that before long it will be a full pardon," said the Rev.
Dodrill. Good worked for a while on the maintenance crew of a state hospital, but arthritis forced him to retire.

"You know, the thing that amazed me," the Rev. Dodrill said, "was Mr. Good's lack of bitterness. When the governor told him he was free, he said he wasn't angry with anybody."
Another person who speaks highly of Good is the man who

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Friday, March 8, 1974—7 owns the farm where Delbert Shamblin lived and worked. He still keeps track of Shamblin-Good.
"He never seemed to want to talk about his life when he was here and nobody pushed him," the man said. "He was like a member of our family after all those years and when he told me his story just a few weeks ago, I'll admit it came as a surprise."

"Lots of people have been good to me," Good said, "and all I want right now is to spend what's left of my life with my wife and children."

200th anniversary of the First Provincial Congress of August 1774 held in New Bern, the New Bern-Craven County American Revolution Bicentennial Commission will issue a special Commemorative Medallion.

It was on August 25, 26 and 27 in 1774 that the resolutions adopted by the First Provincial Congress represented the creation of the first revolutionary government in North Carolina.

Designed by Miss Janet Latham of New Bern, one side of the medallion depicts several men in colonial dress around a table preparing resolutions. On the edge are the words
"America's First Provincial Congress, August 25-27, 1774,
New Bern, North Carolina."

The design on the reverse side shows a replica of the flag presented to New Bern by the city of Bern, Switzerland, and the official seal of Craven County. Rays of a sunburst project from behind the flag and seal and wording on this side reads "Bicentennial Festival, August 16-25, 1974, New Bern, North Carolina. A Past to Honor, A Future to Mold."

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — North Carolina egg markets Thursday were weaker on large and smalls and stronger on mediums. Supplies adequate, demand only fair. Weighted average prices for small lot sales of consumer grade eggs in cartons delivered to nearby outlets: Grade A large whites 69.80, medium whites 66.68, small whites 50.48.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — Corn and soybean prices on the state's leading markets were not reported Thursday by the Market News Service.

Hogs
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The overall trend is steady to mostly 50 cents higher. $37.75-$38.75 Kinston, Benson, Lumberton. $36.50-$37.00 Rocky Mount. $35.00-$37.00 Wilson and High Falls. $38.00 Salisbury.

Poultry
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. f.o.b. dock broilers: Market steady at 39.30 cents per pound. Supplies adequate and demand fairly good. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers today totaled 1,047,000.

N.C. Hens: Live supplies very limited on heavy types. Demand very good in state. Too few sales reported to release prices.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, apparently encouraged by the news that unemployment did not increase in February, steadied today after some early declines.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was unchanged at 869.06, recovering from a drop of better than 7 points earlier.

However, declining issues still held a broad lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the selling at the start of the session appeared to stem largely from reports of disagreement among Arab oil-producing countries over where and when to hold a meeting to discuss the future of their embargo on shipments to the United States.

Avis, Inc., was a notable loser on the NYSE, sliding 2 1/2 to 13 1/2 after a drop of 1 1/2 Thursday. The Securities and Exchange Commission accused the company of filing a false and misleading quarterly financial report last year.

At the American Stock Exchange, the noon market-value index was up .26 at 98.69.

Ramada Inns, down 3/4 at 7 1/4, was the Big Board volume leader.

The Amex's most-active issue was McCulloch Oil, down 1/4 at 7 1/2.

The NYSE's noon index of close to 1,500 common stocks was off .06 at 51.91.

were included in the current Capital Improvement Budget. (Lightoller offered a bid of $32,929).

Three recommendations submitted by the Traffic Commission were considered. A recommendation that the protected left turn signal at the intersection of Fourth and Elm Streets be removed was not adopted by the Council since it was found that the controls for the intersection also operate the lights at the Fifth and Elm Street intersection.

Cox said that he would recommend to the Traffic Commission that the intersection of First and Elm Streets be studied to determine if traffic signals are needed there.

The Council approved Traffic Commission recommendations calling for the installation of a no parking zone on the east side of Washington Street from Eighth to Ninth Street, and also requesting the State Department of Transportation to consider the installation of traffic signals at the intersection of Farmville Boulevard and Memorial Boulevard. Cox added that a request for traffic signals at the Third Street-Memorial Drive intersection be submitted to the state.

Howard Porter was appointed to the Board of Adjustments to fill the unexpired term of H. Lloyd Mills who has resigned. The term expires in June of 1975. The appointment of two persons to the Firemen's Relief Fund Committee was tabled for further study and Dr. H. H. Gradis was appointed to a second term on the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Applications for renewal of permits for the use of mobile homes were approved for Eastern Fence Company for the mobile home located at 200 W. Greenville Boulevard, for Holt Oldsmobile-Datsun Inc. for the mobile home located at 101 Hooker Road, and for Fayetteville Mobile Home Brokers Inc. for the mobile unit located at 630 W. Greenville Boulevard. The permits for all three structures, which are being used as offices, were approved for one year.

A request by Harry Lloyd Worthington for a permit to place a mobile home at 910 Taylor Street was approved. Worthington's home burned recently and the mobile home will house his family, it was pointed out. The Council scheduled a public hearing on a request by Mrs. Mary Cogdell for a permit to place a mobile home at 303 Dudley Street for use as a personal residence.

A taxicab operator's permit was approved for Mitchel Jerome Parks. Parks received a temporary permit effective Feb. 25 pending a final review by the Council.

Two applications for Certificates of Convenience and Necessity were scheduled for public hearings in April. Public hearings were also set for April 4 on a request by Mrs. Rosa Bradley for rezoning from Highway Commercial to Medical Arts of property located at the intersection of N. C. 11 and Greenfield Boulevard, and also on a request by Louis Clark for rezoning of 99.82 acres located adjacent to the new Pitt Memorial Hospital site from Office and Institutional, Shopping Center, Medical Arts, and RA-20 to Office and Institutional, Shopping Center, and Medical Arts.

A request by David A. Evans Sr. for rezoning of the intersection of 14th Street and U. S. 264 Bypass from R-20, R-9, and Neighborhood Commercial, to R-9, Highway Commercial, Shopping Center, and Office and Institutional was denied. The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission recommended in February that the request be denied.

Carstarphen said that a request for rezoning the NCNB and W. S. Moye property in Sedgefield Subdivision was withdrawn Thursday afternoon prior to the meeting. Carstarphen said that there is a provision within the City Code that allows a petitioner to withdraw his or her petition at any time upon written notice to the city manager.

Several residents of the Sedgefield area were in the audience to oppose the rezoning action. Cox told them that he would personally not take any action on the matter for at least six months since the request was withdrawn. By withdrawing the request, it was noted, the petitioners could come back next month with the same request before the Planning and Zoning Commission. The commission recommended in February that the request be denied. Other business included: denial of a request by Robert L. O'Neal for withdrawal of Cedar Street, between Fourth and Fifth Streets, from dedication; adoption of an ordinance adopting the 1971 edition of the National Electric Code; adopting amendments to the Uniform Residential Building Code; approval of a resolution authorizing the use of bituminized fiber sewer pipe in the city; approval of an amendment to the city's pay plan deleting two positions, reallocating two positions, and adding eight new positions, classifications; and awarding of contracts to Chapin Construction Co. for general construction on March 18.

The Council voted to reinstate the position of Finance Officer within the budget of the Finance Department; scheduled a public hearing on the proposed Greenville Thoroughfare Plan for 8 p.m. on April 25; and scheduled an informal meeting with representatives of neighborhood interests, owners and developers of the Evans property located on N. C. 43 adjacent to Pitt Plaza at 8 p.m. on March 18.

work at city hall and A. B. Whitley for interior painting on the first and second floors of city hall. Cox voted against awarding of the Whitley contract, saying that the matter should be opened to the other paint companies in town for bids.

Tom Quinn Fired As ECU Cage Coach

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

East Carolina University has decided to make a change in its basketball program. The eight-year tenure of Tom Quinn has ended, and the university is now seeking the man that will replace him.

But there are problems involved. Many of them are problems of the dollar.

We have learned that one member of the current staff would like to have the head coaching position. And we feel that he would be an excellent choice.

That man is Dave Patton.

Last year, his first with East Carolina, he was in charge of the junior varsity program. Without any "star" players, and none taller than 6-4, he performed an outstanding job. His team lost only three games. One, the opener, was in Chapel Hill to UNC, by one point. And the final couple of minutes was played with only four men on the court. Another was in Durham to Duke, when the last four minutes saw only four men on the court for the Bucs, and the last minute saw only three. That game was decided by less than a half-dozen points. The third loss came to Louisburg, with two starters missing on a varsity trip.

Patton's JVs ripped an N. C. State team by more than 30 points, something few, if any, ECU basketball teams can boast of.

And despite the fact that they were shorter than their opponents, they badly outbounced everyone. This can give an idea of Patton's coaching abilities. A further idea can come from his high school record, where his last team was a state finalist in Georgia.

Patton has also shown that he can recruit. This past year, a number of the top performers on the team came to ECU under his guidance. And no one in the Southern will deny that ECU had the top recruiting year in the league.

Patton is well liked by the players, the student body and those fans who have met him. He deserves the chance.

Patton has stated that he is willing to help the university over the burden of fulfilling Coach Quinn's contract. He is willing to accept a low salary and work with just one assistant, avoiding a budget strain.

If usual ECU policy is followed, the Pirates will seek an assistant from a school with a name and a successful program. This, officials hope, will see people crowding into Minges next winter. We will not argue with this idea. It can pay off, we admit, but it is not guaranteed.

For sure, it will cost. A new head coach from outside will cost. He will want a salary equal to that paid Quinn.

Every head coach must have a start somewhere. One year isn't much to ask. The Pirates have the basis for a fine team next year. A recruit here and there in the right place this year could make them a championship team.

Perhaps some will argue that a clean sweep should be made. That a new image is needed. But another conference school which let its coach go in midyear, William & Mary, went with an assistant that coach had brought in, George Balanis, and his performance has already secured the head job for him—along with fan enthusiasm.

Dave Patton is a likable man. He has shown with the junior varsity that he can win. He deserves a chance. It will be in East Carolina's interest to give him that chance.

TOM QUINN OUT—East Carolina University this morning relieved Tom Quinn of his duties as head basketball coach. Quinn had one year remaining on a three-year contract. His team this year finished fourth in the regular season, but was upset in the first round of the tournament (Reflector Photo)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Tom Quinn was "relieved from his duties" as head basketball coach at East Carolina University this morning, Clarence Stasavich, Director of Athletics at the university announced shortly before noon today.

"The athletic council met yesterday and voted to relieve Tom Quinn of his duties as head basketball coach," Stasavich said. "We gave this recommendation to Dr. (Leo) Jenkins (Chancellor of the university) this morning. He still needs to poll the faculty athletic committee before this step is finalized," he added.

Stasavich said, however, that this was merely a courtesy step and that no change from the committee's recommendation is expected.

Quinn, who carried the Pirates to the Southern Conference Basketball championship in the league's tournament two years ago, was given a new contract for three years following the Pirate win. He still has one year to go on that contract, believed to be for $16,000 a year.

"Of course, his contract will be fulfilled as far as salary is concerned," Stasavich said.

Stasavich, questioned as to the future, said that only informal discussions had been made among athletic council members so far, but that he expected something shortly. He did not elaborate, but it is expected that a selection committee, similar to that which selected Pat Dye this winter, will be named shortly by Dr. Jenkins.

Rumors about the impending firing of Quinn had circulated for several weeks, beginning prior to the Southern Conference Tournament held last week. The Pirates were upset by William & Mary in a double overtime contest in the first round of the tournament after a fourth place regular season finish.

The Pirates had just gone through a year described as the best recruiting year ever for the Bucs, and their recruits were judged as the tops in the Southern Conference overall for the season.

Nicky White, a senior, one of two, was named to the All-Conference team, and Reggie Lee, one of the freshmen, was named to the All-Fresh team at the end of the year.

Quinn has two full time assistants his past year. Dave Patton and George Estes, and it is expected that both will be among the applicants for the job.

Quinn, who was contacted at his office, said that reacting to this situation was a new experience for him.

"I feel that I have done my best to bring the East Carolina program to the highest level possible considering the funds available and the other problems which go with trying to bring a program into the big leagues. I have always done my very best and I am very confident of my ability to do the job and I have been always. I consider this (being fired) to be an occupational hazard."

Quinn said that at this time, he had no plans, but that he was going to investigate several opportunities. "I'm in no big hurry," he said.

Quinn came to East Carolina in 1966, replacing Wendell Carr, who resigned after the 1965-66 season when the Pirates lost out in their first Southern Conference Tournament.

The coach brought with him an outstanding record at Newberry and High Point Colleges. He had run up a 61-48 record in four years at Newberry, then was 95-21 while serving four more years at High Point, including three years of winning more than 20 games.

But at East Carolina, Quinn never quite equaled his earlier successes. His first two years, while in a building program, he had a losing season.

Then, in 1968-69, his team zoomed to a 17-11 record, the best he produced for the Pirates, and he was named the Southern Conference Coach of the Year.

Two years ago, Quinn guided the Pirates from a third place regular season finish to two upset victories in the Southern Conference Tournament winning the only Southern crown the Pirates have claimed.

They went into the NCAA regionals, losing to Villanova in the first round.

This past year, the Pirates went 13-12, bringing Quinn's record at East Carolina to 102-106. He has a 258-175 record overall during his career.

A native of Beckley, W. Va., Quinn graduated from Marshall University in 1954. A year later he received his masters from the University of Florida and entered the high school coaching ranks in Cocoa, Fla.

Three years later, he moved into the collegiate ranks at Newberry, beginning his successful career.

Quinn is married to the former Doris Smith of Polkton, and they have two children, Stephanie, and Thomas, Jr.

Gibson Seeking Way To Victory

By BOB CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—Virginia Coach Bill Gibson says he is 'open to suggestions.'

Gibson's team defeated Clemson, 68-63, Thursday night in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament and won the dubious right to face nationally top-ranked North Carolina State in the semifinals tonight.

In other first round games, 4th ranked Maryland whipped Duke, 85-66, and 6th ranked North Carolina downed Wake Forest, 76-62. They will meet in the other semifinal tonight.

N. C. State had a first round bye.

The winner of the tournament moves on to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Eastern Regionals and one or two of the losers will probably get bids to the National Invitation Tournament in New York.

Gibson, who has been looking for a way into the ACC finals for 11 years, said he had no bright strategic ideas for tonight's game against the N. C. State Wolfpack.

"We held the ball against them once this year and didn't do too well (losing 90-70). We tried to run with them and didn't do too well. (Losing 105-93). You tell me what the hell to do."

Someone suggested that Gibson try a box-and-one defense against the Wolfpack, assigning one man to dog David Thompson. "That's not a bad idea," he replied, "but I'm not sure a box-and-three would be enough."

Virginia's star forward, Gus Gerard, had a more succinct solution to the problems posed by playing N. C. State. Gerard, who scored 30 points against Clemson, was asked what he planned to do against the Wolfpack.

"Pray," he replied. "Meanwhile, North Carolina's Dean Smith and Maryland's Lefty Driesell were laying plans for the rubber match in their season's series."

A confident Driesell said his team has reached a peak and was playing as well as it could. "This is the first team I've had that held opponents to less than 40 per cent shooting over a season. Duke only had four inside baskets against us in the first half. We like to make them shoot from the outside," Driesell said.

Driesell noted, though, that if his team has a weakness, it is slowness in the front court, where Tom McMillen, Len Elmore, and Owen Brown or Tom Roy held sway against Duke.

The Tar Heels, with Bobby Jones, Mitch Kupchak and Walter Davis up front, figure to be better able to exploit whatever weakness is there.

But Smith, who would downgrade his team's chances against a high school club, was typically cautious about predicting the outcome.

He recalled the last time the two teams met, when Maryland avenged a mid-season loss with a 91-80 win at College Park. "We'll have to play a fantastic board game to win," he said.

For two of the three losing coaches, it was back to the recruiting trail. Neill McGeachy, the first-year coach at Duke, refused to comment on reports that his one-year contract will not be renewed after the Blue Devils' worst season since 1927.

If McGeachy is fired, it would mean two coaching vacancies at ACC schools. Gibson already has agreed to become head coach at South Florida in Tampa next season.

White Sox In Opening Victory

Baseball Roundup
By The Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox were the first winners and rookie Brian Downing the first hero as major league baseball's exhibition season opened Thursday.

Downing grounded a single into left field with two outs and the bases loaded in the ninth inning to drive in two runs and give the Sox a 9-8 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Chicago had loaded the bases on a walk, an error and a single by Luis Alvarado.

Jim Northrup rapped a two-run homer for the Tigers.

The White Sox and the Tigers were the only teams in action Thursday, but everyone else plays over the weekend when the preseason gets into full swing.

Atlanta slugger Hank Aaron, the subject of much controversy after the club announced he wouldn't start the team's opening series in Cincinnati, also will miss the club's first exhibition game against Los Angeles.

"I talked to him and he feels he just isn't quite ready," explained Braves' Manager Eddie Mathews. Aaron has 713 career home runs, one short of Babe Ruth's all-time record.

The Braves also said that catcher Paul Casanova will fly in from Venezuela today. Casanova is already four days late and will be fined $100 a day.

Both Giants' outfielder Gary Matthews and Yankees' infielder Celerino Sanchez showed up in their respective camp after holdouts.

Matthews, the National League's Rookie-of-the-Year last season, signed for an estimated $35,000, but was miffed because the club publicized his original demand of $50,000.

"It was very embarrassing and it shouldn't have been done," said Matthews, adding, "But I'm not bitter. What's done is done."

Sanchez signed for about $25,000.

Baltimore General Manager Frank Cashen had less luck coming to terms with his troops and announced he will invoke the reserve clause on the team's four unsigned players.

"This is something this ballclub has never had to do before, but today I find myself forced to do it," declared Cashen. Cashen can now send the four — catcher Andy Etchebarren, outfielder Royle Tillman, and pitchers Bob Reynolds and Doyle Alexander — contracts, forcing them to report to spring training, where negotiations would continue.

Should Cashen take no action by March 11, the players will become free agents. But that's not likely.

On the injury front, Texas pitcher Ferguson Jenkins and Oakland third baseman Sal Bando were the main casualties. Jenkins was hospitalized with muscle spasms in his lower back and is expected to be sidelined for about five days.

Bando was sent back to Oakland for examination of the sore middle finger on his right hand.

Senate Candidate Hare In Town

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

With his ever-present sign, U. S. Senate candidate William (Bill) Hare was in Greenville this week, stopping for a while near Biggs Drug Store across the street from the courthouse before going on to the ECU campus.

The 33 year old Wilmington native, reared in Raleigh, is now living in High Point, where he operates a book store and a pet shop in a shopping center there.

"I'm also an ordained minister," Hare said. "I was the minister of the Christian Church in Lincolnton." Hare said that since his church feels a minister should not be involved in politics, he is now "preaching on invitation at different churches."

As a publicity gimmick, Hare made his red and yellow candidate sign which he carried with him first on a long walk from High Point to Raleigh. "I consider myself the working man's candidate," the walking candidate said.

Before settling in to preach and operate his businesses, Hare graduated from Atlantic Christian College and went on to Vanderbilt University where he received the M.A. and B.D. degrees. He and his wife, the former Barbara Clippard have three children—Scarlett, Deanna and Henry.

In his hand out literature, Hare stresses reform programs (using the word "reform" for three of five main views he expounds). These are tax reform, foreign aid reform and campaign reform.

On the tax issue, Hare feels taxpayers need relief by an even more graduated scale of tax, particularly for people with incomes of less than $18,000. To compensate for the tax loss, he would increase corporation taxes. Hare advocates cutting foreign aid by at least half; and he would limit campaign contributions to $10. He explains he has returned all larger gifts.

On views to combat the current energy crisis, Hare feels the U. S. Government needs to step in and create government competition such as was done with utilities through TVA and RVA. "I believe we should develop oil production on government land," Hare commented, "with the oil put out under bids, to be sold and refined by independents."

The title Hare gives to this proposal is ERA (for Energy Relief Administration). "Government production would serve two purposes," Hare said, "to add to the stabilizing factor needed in energy and to produce more petroleum for the economy."

Saying he is deeply concerned about the wave of hijackings, kidnappings and extortions, Hare said he would propose legislation that would severely penalize any firm or corporation negotiating with abductors.

"I think there is a real need for a federal law that would make it a penalty for corporations or firms to deal or negotiate with these people," Hare said. "I feel we need to take steps to eliminate abductions as a profitable deal for abductors. If these people knew there would be no pay off, I think this would stifle the mushrooming wave of kidnappings, piracy and extortions we now have."

The penalty Hare feels should be imposed on a corporation or firm who negotiated with abductors would amount to ten percent of the value of the firm or corporation.

A final comment dealt with the local ECU streaking rite that took place Monday night. "With the weather we had last night, I think the streakers didn't suffer from the cold. Seriously, I feel the best thing is to leave something like this alone. It's purely a fad, and if the students want to continue it, maybe they could make it an annual event, something like Sadie Hawkins Day."

Freeing Of Mortgage Money Clears Hurdle

RALEIGH (AP)—A bill aimed at freeing more home mortgage money but at unrestricted interest rates has won tentative approval from the state House, setting the stage for a showdown vote today.

The House in a preliminary vote gave its approval 71-20 Thursday to the bill, which would eliminate North Carolina's 8 per cent ceiling on mortgage interest rates. If approved, interest levels on mortgages would become open-ended, subject only to competition among lenders.

Rep. Daniel T. Lilley, D-Le

noir, floor sponsor of the bill and an officer in a Kinston savings and loan association, told the House Thursday the measure was "an important bill to liberate thousands of people who want to buy a house and can't find the money."

"We are simply out of the home money market with an 8 per cent ceiling," Lilley said.

He said the possibility of higher interest rates would cause lenders to make more money available for home mortgages. The unrestricted interest stipulation would expire in June 1975, with the 8 per cent ceiling being reinstated at that time.

Lilley predicted that, under competitive conditions, the interest rate would level off at 8 1/4 per cent to 8 3/4 per cent. Mortgages under $50,000 have been restricted to the 8 per cent level since 1969.

The House earlier had rejected by a vote of 53-42 an amendment by Rep. James E. Long, D-Alamance, that would have fixed the ceiling at 9 per cent. After that amendment was defeated, the House tabled - took no action - on a proposal by Rep. Herbert Hyde, D-Buncombe, to make the level 10 per cent.

Speaking for the Long amendment, Rep. Sneed High, D-Cumberland, said he thought it was "absolutely imperative that lending institutions have some restrictions. I think 9 per cent is a gracious plenty."

"I have never known when an individual who really needed to borrow money could borrow it for less than the maximum," High said.

The House did approve an amendment by Rep. John Ed Davenport, D-Nash, that would prohibit application of the bill to any commitment made prior to its ratification.

Loud Applause For Two 3-Car Bailey-Nixon Team Accidents

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Pearl Bailey lured President Nixon into accompanying her on the piano and got roaring approval from an audience of the nation's governors at a White House party.

During the impromptu performance Thursday night, the President played three songs and wound up playing and singing "God Bless America" with everyone joining in.

He jokingly concluded afterward that "the piano will never be the same, and neither will I."

Miss Bailey came to sing at a black-tie dinner the Nixons gave for about 115 guests, including 41 governors who were here for their annual midwinter conference.

Nixon delivered a 20-to 30-minute after-dinner speech on world affairs, according to the governors. But the White House did not permit reporters to hear those remarks or provide a transcript.

However, there was full coverage of Miss Bailey's performance, and she lived up to her title as "ambassador of love" by getting the President and his guests into a warmhearted mood.

"I haven't enjoyed an evening as much in years," said Vice President Gerald R. Ford. "I laughed so hard I cried."

Miss Bailey got the VIP guests clapping along to "Hello, Dolly." She singled out from the front row the usually staid Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz and got him up for a bit of dancing with her.

Then, she got the President into her act.

Preparing A Directory

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company directory representatives are in town working on a new directory for Greenville, Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Fountain and Snow Hill. Scheduled for delivery August 1, it will be the largest telephone directory ever published in this area.

Don A. Collier, District Commercial Manager, said that these representatives will remain in this area through April 23. A large majority of business customers will be contacted concerning the yellow page representation.

The new directory will contain more listings than ever before as a result of the 4,865 new telephones which were installed in the Greenville district last year. This figure represented a gain of 13.2 per cent.

Two three-car accidents here yesterday resulted in an estimated $950 property damage, according to investigators.

Police said the first of the multi-car mishaps occurred about 3:45 p.m. on Dickinson Avenue 23 feet West of the Atlantic Avenue intersection and involved vehicles driven by David Lee Tripp of Route 1, Bethel; Henry Leon Baker of Route 1, Greenville and William Henry Pittman of 300B East Dudley St.

Officers, who charged Pittman with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damages at $300 to the Pittman car and $310 to the Baker auto. No damage resulted to the truck driven by Tripp, investigators said.

The second collision was reported at 5:08 p.m. on Evans Street, 30 feet South of the Second Street intersection.

Officers listed drivers as Joyce Williams King of Greenville; Jeffrey Kenneth Hall of Route 1, Hookerton; and Rena Pollard Cobb of Route 2, Greenville.

Mrs. Cobb was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident.

Damage was listed as $300 to the Hall car and $40 to the Cobb vehicle. No damage resulted to the King auto, according to officers.

MEET MARCH 29

The New Bern District Union will convene March 29 at 7:30 p.m. at Morning Star Holy Church, Ayden.

Services will continue through March 31.

Will Preach At Sunday Service

BETHEL—The Rev. Charles H. Mercer will be the guest preacher for the morning worship service Sunday at the Bethel United Methodist Church.

Mercer is director of the Council of Ministries of the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church. Prior to his present appointment, he was superintendent of the New Bern District. Among his pastoral appointments have been First Church, Laurinburg and Centenary Church, Smithfield.

The Rev. Ellis J. Bedsworth, pastor, invites all the members and friends of Bethel United Methodist Church to attend the service.

Public Hearing On ESAA Plan Set Monday

At 5:00 p.m. Monday, March 11, an open public hearing on the 1974-75 ESAA Grant Proposal for the Greenville City Schools will be held in the Conference Room of the City Board of Education.

This is a chance for parents, teachers, secondary school students and others to learn first hand about the program and the assistance that is being sought. An opportunity will also be given for interested persons to offer recommendations.

Charles M. Dickens, Coordinator of Federal Programs will host the public hearing. Rev. O. James Rooks is chairman of the ESAA committee. The committee held its last meeting on March 4 at Third Street School.

Asgrow RX Hybrid Corn Lines Give You A Healthy Advantage

It's only logical. The more a hybrid can resist stress and disease, the more you can count on it to give you a healthy advantage—in the field and over the scale. And you can count on single cross RX60, RX115, and special RX99A to do just that.

Here's why: It is prescription-bred to resist rust, lodging, Fusarium ear rots, stalk rots, root worms, and corn borer infestation. . . to resist Northern, Yellow, and Race "T" Southern leaf blights. And you can be sure that these lines have the genetic vigor to withstand these stress conditions and still yield with the best. They quickly develop into extremely-uniform plants—healthy plants with massive root systems and sturdy stalks that insure excellent standability. What's more, large, girthy ears are placed at the ideal height for combining or picking.

They look great and yield even better. And this has been proved, on hundreds of farms right in this area. Talk with the farmers who grow these hybrids. Ask them about the ability of the RX Line to give you a healthy advantage. Then—talk with your Asgrow dealer. Ask him to reserve you a supply of Asgrow corn.

Tape Piracy Spells Big Losses To Music Industry

By ALAN WILSON
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — For millions of Americans, the tape piracy racket means saving a few bucks to hear recordings of their favorite music. For the music industry it means profit losses of roughly $250 million a year, and the spending of millions more to avoid those losses.

"Anytime you take that much money out of an industry, it cripples it. Whether it can stand to be crippled and still walk I'm not sure," says Glenn Snoddy, vice president of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences—NARAS.

"The rank-and-file person who owns a tape player is hard pressed not to buy cheaper tapes," said Snoddy. "But he has to come to the realization that he's buying something that's illegal. I don't think you can call anything that's illegal a bargain."

Selling at anywhere from $2 to $3 apiece, the pirated tape is an eye-catcher for music fans—who find the "bargain" at major department stores, truck stops, service stations and record shops.

"They're retailing the stuff at less than what it's sold for by wholesalers. There's no way a legitimate business can compete with that," said Jack Frances, a New York-based investigator with the antipiracy bureau of the Recording Industry Association of America—RIAA.

The academy, the industry association and the Country Music Association, among others, are pooling their time and money to combat the racket—by providing information obtained through their own task forces to the FBI and local law officials.

One big problem lies with the law, or lack of it.

Thirty-one states have no statutes outlawing tape piracy, defined as lifting the sound off a legitimate recording and selling it under another label or no label at all.

Federal copyright statutes prohibit tape duplication only on products manufactured after

Feb. 15, 1972. Everything prior to that is fair game, played by foul rules.

Nevertheless, industry experts say they are making headway against a racket which evolved from the recent advent of eight-track and cassette tapes.

"Our association within the last two years has spent close to $2 million setting up a nationwide network of investigators to track down these pirates..." said Henry Brief, industry association executive director.

"It appears now that we are finally beginning to turn the corner on this thing and gain the offensive against the pirates."

Organized crime has been quick to capitalize on the racket, according to industry officials.

"Elements of organized crime are deeply involved, directly or indirectly, through covert financing and providing protection," says Jules Yarnell, director of the industry association's antipiracy outfit.

The life cycle of a pirated tape can begin in the back of a pickup truck or inside a large factory, depending on the size of an operation. Recording equipment is used to duplicate the original sound from a legitimate tape. From the manufacturer, the tape is distributed to a middleman or directly to a retailer.

Major centers for the illicit racket are Florida, Southern California, New Jersey, North Carolina, Georgia, Oklahoma, Kentucky and southern Ohio.

"It is extremely difficult to prod local authorities to spend a great deal of their budgets pursuing petty criminals," said a Capitol Records spokesman.

"You're never likely to stop the little guy. Just like they never stopped people from making bootleg liquor in their bathtubs."

Tennessee is the only state where tape piracy constitutes a felony. Federal law and the other 18 states with tape laws make it a misdemeanor. Penalties range from $100 to $5,000 fines and from 30-day jail terms to 10-year prison sentences.

"State laws would be okay if all 50 states had laws, but they don't," said Joe Smith, president of Warner Bros. records.

"I remember one case about two years ago when Tennessee passed a strict law and a big pirate there just moved to Selma, Ala., where he was welcomed by the Chamber of Commerce for bringing a new industry into town."

To obtain convictions, which have been rare, the Justice Department issued manuals on tape piracy last April to all federal attorneys.

Experts agree that the performing artists who suffer the most are those who command the greatest popularity — because their products are the easiest to sell illicitly.

"The biggest market is pop, which includes rock," said Jack Frances of the industry association. "Frank Sinatra's 'Ole Blue Eyes is Back' is being pirated. But so is some of Tommy Dorsey's old stuff and other things from that era. They're going to nostalgia now."

Officials also agree that convicting retailers is difficult because law dictates a person must knowingly buy a pirated tape if he or she is to be found guilty.

"That's always their copout — that they didn't know," said Frances, who estimates that one New Jersey outfit produced 100,000 illicit tapes weekly before it was busted.

Retail outlets, like department stores, purchase large supplies of bad tapes "in good faith," says Dick Frank, chief attorney for the Country Music Association.

"That is the situation with 95 per cent of your 'mom and pop' retailers. When you start hitting and arresting relatively local people, you bring down the enforcement to a level of people who are ignorant of what's happening."

"You have to cut off the animal's head at the manufacturing and reproduction level," John Polk, head of the industry association's antipiracy bureau for the South says. "As far as the public is concerned right now, bootleg tapes are a good buy."

Polk said the unauthorized tapes do not have the manufacturer listed on the labels and rarely is there any obvious identifying mark on the manufacturer.

To Recover Sunken Ironclad Pieces

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University investigators plan to bring up pieces later this spring of the sunken Union ironclad warship Monitor. Investigators claim they have located the ship on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean about 15 miles south of Cape Hatteras.

The Monitor, considered the forerunner of modern battle-ships, sank in a raging gale off Cape Hatteras about 1:30 a.m. on Dec. 31, 1862, while under tow by the U.S.S. Rhode Island.

The ironclad, which had fought the Confederate ship Virginia—also known as the Merrimac—to a standstill nine months earlier at the Battle of Hampton Roads, was to be used to complete the federal blockade of the South.

Sixteen Union sailors were lost with the Monitor, a warship designed solely for operations in rivers and coastal waters.

The sunken ship has been the object of numerous searches.

James G. Newton, marine superintendent for the oceanographic program at the Duke Marine Laboratory at Beaufort, N.C., announced the discovery of the vessel on Thursday.

He said it was confirmed to be the Monitor after five months of analysis of underwater television pictures, photographs and historical records.

The next trip to the ship's location will be made this spring, supported by a $20,000 grant from the National Geographic Society and with cooperation from the state.

Newton said that on the spring trip, mechanical claws will be used to bring up pieces of the Monitor that have fallen away from the main part of the 172-foot-long wreck.

The ship's discovery came following a two-week search last August by the university's research vessel, Eastward.

Newton said the Monitor is "lying in 220 feet of water on hard sand and shell-strewn floor," beyond safe skin-diving range. He said it would be "extremely dangerous" to dive to the wreck because of the depth and a two-knot current.

Newton said the Monitor lies in an oblong depression caused by the current, which has scoured the area for a distance of 600 feet beyond the wreck. The ship went down on the edge of the Gulf Stream.

The search area, where the vessel was found, was determined by replotting the track of the Rhode Island as she rounded treacherous Diamond Shoals, dreaded by sailors as the "Graveyard of the Atlantic," Newton said.

One of the most positive pieces of evidence that the ship actually is the Monitor is a unique brass ring at the base of the turret, clearly visible in television pictures, Newton said.

Historical descriptions of the Monitor coincided exactly with the findings made in the search, Newton said.

To Begin Constructing 'Soul City' In Spring

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd B. McKissick, civil rights leader who is a developer of Soul City, says construction of the multiracial city in northeastern

North Carolina will begin in the spring.

It will culminate years of planning and purchase of the first acreage near Warrenton and Henderson in 1969.

McKissick, former head of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), told a news conference Thursday that the first $6 million of debentures guaranteed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development have been received. He said their purchase will enable construction to start.

At Soul City, a spokeswoman, Miss Dorothy Webb, said the bonds represented the first HUD grant to a minority controlled development company. She said Soul City is the largest black economic venture ever attempted.

McKissick said in New York that it is the "realization of a dream, not only a dream for black people, but for all humanity."

McKissick said HUD has guaranteed $14 million of the cost of Soul City, for which a population of 25,000 to 35,000 is projected. He said a quarter of the population will be families of low to moderate income.

He said that besides the grant from HUD, financial support such as mortgages and loans has been given by the Chase Manhattan Bank, North Carolina National Bank and the First Pennsylvania Bank.

He said the first bond money would be used mainly to build convert raw land into improved land, and build roads and help industry. "Our initial building will be devoted to industrial requests in order to provide jobs," he said.

A goal is to have about 1,000 persons working on the city within a year, he said.

Oil Storage Tank Bombed

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — More violence has been threatened by the group which claimed responsibility for bombing an empty Shell Oil Co. storage tank — unless demands for free gasoline and lower prices are met.

"If we hear no reply within 48 hours, we must assume your position and take more far-reaching actions," a letter from "Americans for Justice" warned Thursday.

The group, previously unknown to law enforcement officials, demanded lower gas prices, $30 of free gasoline or heating oil a month for all poor Californians over 65 and publication in full of the letter, attentioned to the San Francisco Chronicle.

Soon after the 2 a.m. blast an unidentified man called the newspaper to claim responsibility and give directions on how to find the letter, stashed in a Berkeley telephone booth.

Shell "obviously has no response at this point," said spokesman Les Allen.

He said the company received a similar note a week ago in San Francisco and turned it over to the FBI.

Plan Using Alternate

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—Plans to use DDT to spray for tree-destroying gypsy moths have been dropped. Sevin, a less persistent insecticide, will be used.

The state Department of Agriculture will spray southeastern Winston-Salem in an attempt to eradicate the moth infestation found last year at the North Carolina School of the Arts.

William Wilder, assistant commissioner of agriculture, told the board of aldermen Thursday that the department believes DDT, used for years until a suspension in 1972, is a better insecticide. But he said it has side effects, and he believes the city has a very good chance of getting rid of the moths with sevin.

The chemical will be sprayed from a low-flying plane. There are to be about five flights, beginning in early April and lasting into July.

No Longer Open To Spectators

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—Streaking shall no longer be a spectator sport at Winthrop College, officials of the predominantly women's school have decreed.

The campus is being closed after 6 p.m. for the indefinite future, to keep the curious out.

The announcement was made Thursday, after several hundred spectators gathered to watch coed streaking Wednesday night.

Visitors with identification and a legitimate reason, such as a date or a campus event, will be admitted.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "we'd like to have a boy, too, not only to help balance our family."

"But my father-in-law is eager to have a grandson to carry on the family name."

"So he has even offered us $10,000 if and when we get a boy!"

"Is there any scientific way to influence the sex of one's babies?"

Sex Problems

The sex of a baby is determined at the very moment the male sperm unites with the female egg (ovum).

The normal male sperm contains both "X" and "Y" chromosomes while the female has only "X" chromosomes.

If the male "X" happens to unite with the female "X" then the baby will be a girl.

If, however, the male "Y" attaches itself to the female "X" then the resulting baby will be a boy.

So the answer to Esther's question lies in trying to increase the chances that the "Y" chromosome will reach the female ovum first.

The "Y" is regarded as the faster moving, but also smaller. And it seems to have a greater chance of winning the race to the ovum, if it is swimming in a slightly alkaline (not acid) vaginal secretion.

For the actual meeting of the sperm and ovum probably occur in the outer one-third of the Fallopian tube.

Dairy farmers have experimented to see how they can load the dice in favor of heifer (female) calves vs. bull calves, for they usually want milk producers.

So they have used a mild lactic acid douch (3 per cent) just before mating the cow with the bull.

This has produced a greater likelihood of female calves.

On the other hand, if they desire male calves, a baking soda douche has reversed the sex ratio of offspring and given more bull calves.

There is some logic to support these findings, too, for acids retard or stop the sperm's swimming movement.

"But, Dr. Crane," you may wonder, "why wouldn't an alkaline vagina favor the 'X' male chromosome just as readily as the 'Y'?"

"And why wouldn't the acidic vaginal secretions favor the 'Y' male chromosome as often as the 'X'?"

Well, here are the suggested explanations:

(1) The "Y" is smaller than the "X" and thus may be hampered more readily by acid.

Indeed contraceptive jelly is merely an acid preparation to stop sperm activity entirely.

(2) In a baking soda medium, both the male "X" and "Y" are helped, but the "Y" is a faster swimmer, which is why more male offspring seem to result from a baking soda douche.

Many formerly sterile wives, with no organic defects to explain their lack of pregnancy, have reported to me that the baking soda douche gave them their first baby in maybe 15 or 20 years of futile previous trying.

And many mothers of an all girl family, have likewise reported finally getting boy babies by the baking soda douche.

So send for my booklet "Facts About Pregnancy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Driver's Test For The Brave

By FRANK N. HAWKINS JR. QUADI CHAHROUR, Lebanon (AP) — If you can speed shift through three forward gears going uphill in a broken down jeep without crashing into the vehicle stopped 25 yards in front of you, you can probably pass the test for a Lebanese driver's license.

It also helps not to forget to signal a halt anytime after jolting to a stop, remembering to use a handbrake that doesn't work and keeping a horn if you get a chance.

These are some of the finer points of taking a driver's test in Lebanon, an ordeal not for the weak or the fainthearted.

Tests in Lebanon are taken in battered jeeps with loose brakes, temperamental transmissions and worn tires that would not dare approach a Pennsylvania state motor vehicle inspection station.

The theory seems to be if you survive the outing, you deserve a license.

The Beirut magazine Monday Morning in a recent article about the testing headlined it "Official Driving Tests: License to Kill."

"Under the present system," Monday Morning observed, "a new license holder is just another owner-driver taking an almost suicidal leap into conditions for which he is wholly unprepared."

The testing starts about 6 a.m., just after sunrise. The jeeps are assembled at this testing station on a narrow mountain road outside of Beirut set aside by the Department of Motor Vehicles as a testing and training center.

Those taking tests have already undergone two or more adventurous training periods on the hilly course designed to introduce them to the wild and woolly Lebanese style of driving. To an outsider looking in, it appears to be 100 per cent confusion. Nervous candidates stand around waiting to be called, watching the shouting examiners and the reckless maneuverings of the jeeps, some by youths obviously well under the 18 year minimum legal driving age.

An obviously ill at ease teenage girl from a good family is one of the day's candidates. She will be one of approximately 325,000 drivers in this nation of about 3 million. If she is not careful she might also end up in one of the nearly 4,000
