Predicts Lifting Of Oil Embargo

By MAURICE GUINDI
CAIRO (UPI) — The semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahran predicted Saturday that the Arab oil boycott against the United States will be lifted at a meeting of Arab oil ministers now scheduled for Cairo Sunday.

Oil industry sources in the Egyptian capital, however, said they doubted the entire boycott would be lifted. They said the ministers might "ease" the embargo to treat the United States like other Western states presently subject to the 15 per cent production cut the Arab oil producers have kept in force.

The oil sources said the move to lift the boycott stemmed from U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's diplomatic efforts in the Middle East.

Earlier, an Egyptian oil ministry spokesman said the ministers would meet "Sunday evening at the Sheraton Hotel in Cairo."

For three days there were conflicting reports about the time and place of the conference. The Libyan regime of Col.

Moammar Khadafy had proposed holding it in Tripoli Wednesday.

The oil ministry spokesman said the ministers are expected to review the Arab embargo on oil supplies to the United States.

Al Ahran, which often reflects official government policy, said the ministers would confine themselves to a single item—a review of the Arab oil situation in the light of all developments in the Middle East since the oil ministers last met in Kuwait Dec. 24-25.

These developments would include Kissinger's prodigious efforts to bring about troop disengagement on the October war fronts. Since late January Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has been urging an easing of the oil embargo as a "gesture" in return for the U.S. efforts.

U.S. Officials Silent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United States officials were silent Saturday on reports that a lifting of the Arab oil embargo was imminent.

The State Department and other offices declined to discuss a report in the semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahran that the Arab oil embargo, imposed during last October's Arab-Israeli war, would be lifted Sunday or Monday.

Officials said they had no knowledge of the reported decision or even whether a summit meeting of Arab nations on oil would be held at Tripoli, Libya, or Cairo—or at all.

Traffic Deaths

The Highway Patrol says at least six persons have been killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina so far during the weekend, including two persons in one wreck in Beaufort County.

Former Aides Plea "Not Guilty"

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seven former members of President Nixon's inner circle marched grimly through a jeering crowd outside U.S. District Court Saturday and pleaded innocent to criminal charges in the cover-up of the Watergate scandal.

Two of them, former White House aides John D. Ehrlichman and Charles W. Colson, also pleaded innocent to separate charges stemming from the 1971 Ellsberg break-in. In Ehrlichman's case, the combined charges carry a maximum penalty of 60 years in prison and 95,000 in fines.

Shouts of "siege hell" and "I hope you get 30 years!" greeted former Attorney General John N. Mitchell as he arrived by taxi for the late-morning arraignment before U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

Released on Personal Bond

All seven defendants, indicted by the Watergate grand jury eight days ago, said nothing during the seven-minute ceremony except to respond "not guilty" in loud, clear voices when each of their names was read by the court clerk.

Sirica released the seven on personal bond and routinely ordered them to surrender their passports, ask his permission if they wish to leave the country and keep him informed of their whereabouts.

He set May 1 for hearing pretrial motions by any defendant who might seek another trial location, move to have charges dropped or take any other legal steps before the cover-up trial begins Sept. 9.

Pleading innocent besides Ehrlichman, Colson and Mitchell were former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, former Assistant Attorney General Robert C. Mardian, former Haldeman aide Gordon C. Strachan and former Nixon campaign committee lawyer Kenneth W. Parkinson.

Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who arrived 15 minutes before the arraignment, went up to Mitchell and Parkinson to shake hands.

In the cover-up case alone, Mitchell faces a maximum of 5 years in prison and 47,000 in fines; Haldeman, 30 years and $21,000; Ehrlichman, 30 years and 45,000; Colson 10 years and $10,000; Mardian 5 years and $5,000; Strachan, 20 years and $25,000 and Parkinson, 10 years and $10,000.

Additionally, Ehrlichman could get 30 years and 50,000 on charges from the Ellsberg break-in, in which he also has been indicted by a state court in Los Angeles. Colson's break-in charges carry maximum penalty of 10 years and $10,000.

23 SVN Children Killed By Shell

By NGUYEN ANH TUYET
SAIGON (UPI)—An artillery shell crashed into a school yard in the Mekong Delta Saturday, killing 23 children, all under 10 years old. The explosion injured 43 other children, a teacher and two other civilians.

A government military spokesman said the incident occurred at Cai Lay, 46 miles southwest of Saigon.

The spokesman said children were playing in the yard of a primary school when the mortar hit at mid-afternoon Saturday. He blamed Communist troops for the attack.

South Vietnamese forces use 81mm, American-made mortars.

Cai Lay lies in the center of an embattled rice-growing area at the edge of Highway 4, the key road through the Mekong Delta.

North Vietnam finally agreed Saturday to return the remains of the last of 23 Americans prisoners of war who died in the so-called Hanoi Hilton during the Indochina war.

Violating Antitrust Laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., accused the five biggest U.S. petroleum companies Saturday of violating anti-trust laws by curtailing gasoline production to drive prices higher.

In a statement, Waldie said he will ask the House Judiciary Committee, of which he is a member, to investigate possible violations by Exxon, Mobil, Texaco, Gulf and Standard Oil of California.

He also asked Attorney General Evelle Younger of California to file suits against the five corporations.

Waldie based his charges on statistics published in Oil and Gas Journal, an industry trade publication, which he said show that while U.S. oil imports are heavier than a year ago, gasoline production is actually less.

Fighting Near Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Fighting between Communist rebel and government troops defending the capital raged on all fronts around Phnom Penh Saturday while three Cambodian army colonels were reported court-martialed for cowardice.

The Cambodian high command said fighting was heavy on all fronts around the besieged capital and around the provincial capital of Kompot, 93 miles to the southwest. Field reports said the Communists lost 39 killed and the government one dead and 14 wounded.

No casualty reports had yet been received from the Kompong Speu area, 30 miles west of Phnom Penh, where government foot soldiers, backed by heavy artillery strikes and T28 fighter planes, were trying to clear Highway 4. The strategic road links Phnom Penh with Cambodia's only deep sea port, Kompong Som.

Church-State Declaration

MADRID (UPI) — The Spanish Catholic Church Saturday defended a controversial Basque bishop and invited the government to begin legal action against him if it thinks it has a case.

The standing commission of the Spanish Episcopal conference, Spain's highest church body, after three days of issued a declaration upholding the right of Msgr. Antonio Anoveros, the liberal bishop of Bilbao, to the "plain and free exercise of his spiritual power and jurisdiction."

Two weeks ago Anoveros issued a sermon demanding greater freedom for the Basque people of northern Spain which the government called "an attack on national unity with the clear aim of sowing civil discord."

San Francisco's State Of Emergency Worsens

By ROBERT STRAND
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—San Francisco, in a state of emergency because of a three-day strike by municipal employees, Saturday was without public transit, sewage plants, a symphony or a zoo.

All but emergency facilities were shut down. Hospitals canceled surgery and released as many patients as possible.

At Laguna Honda Hospital housing 1,200 aged patients, only 15 out of 249 orderlies showed up. The hospital will run out of clean sheets Monday.

As 1,026 cable cars, buses and streetcars remained in their barns, downtown department stores were almost deserted. On Friday people got to work by hitchhiking, bicycling, car pooling—and walking, often several miles.

The city's three sewage plants were shut down, and 100 million gallons of raw sewage and industrial waste poured daily into San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean.

In a separate strike, teachers were negotiating with the school district. Officials said they planned to keep schools open, even though members of a large teacher group not on strike were expected Monday to respect picket lines.

Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, a Democrat seeking the gubernatorial nomination with heavy labor support, sought to mediate the strike.

Alioto, who has had previous successes in labor mediation, declared a formal state of emergency, a move which suspended provisions of the City Charter. The action permitted labor representatives to meet behind closed doors with the Board of Supervisors.

The main dispute involves four miscellaneous service unions asking for a $16 million package, including an 8 per cent increase and a dental plan. The supervisors have offered 5 per cent as part of a 5 million package.

The city contends it faces a 53 million deficit next fiscal year even without a pay raise, and that it cannot meet union demands without a vote of the people to boost the tax rate.

Britain Returns To Full Work Week

By ZANDER HOLLANDER
LONDON (UPI) — Britain returned to a full work week Saturday, ending 10 weeks of an economically crippling three-day week.

But new Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned there were still serious economic problems ahead.

Wilson's minority Labor party government, which took office only five days ago, formally ended at midnight Friday the abbreviated work week imposed Dec. 31 by the former Conservative party government to save fuel during Britain's coal strike.

Ending the coal strike and returning Britain to a five-day work week were the Wilson government's first priorities.

The 269,000 miners Saturday completed voting on acceptance of a record $230 million pay deal they won this week and prepared to return to the pits Monday after a four-week walkout.

But Wilson said the end of the strike and the return to a five-day week did not mean Britain's economic crisis was over.

Man Drowns In Tar River

James Edward Horne, 26, of Route 1, Ayden accidentally drowned around noon Saturday, according to Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey. The drowning took place about five miles east of Greenville off U.S. 264 in the Tar River.

He had been fishing most of the morning with Bernis Kornegay of Simpson. The two were in a small aluminum boat. Shortly after noon, Kornegay's wife, Marie, came down and got into the boat.

The trio were in the middle of the river when the front of the boat went under water and the boat capsized. An unidentified man rowed out and was able to rescue the Kornegays but Horne went down and was not rescued, Harvey said.

Views On Amnesty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional bills providing amnesty for Vietnam war deserters and draft evaders has drawn opposition from spokesmen for two government agencies and support from the American Civil Liberties Union.

The contrasting views were outlined Friday as a House judiciary subcommittee opened hearings on eight bills dealing with amnesty.

Indian Ocean Fleet Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States should seriously consider establishing a new naval fleet in the Indian Ocean, Vice President Gerald R. Ford says in the current issue of a military magazine.

Ford, in an interview with "Sea Power" magazine, produced by the Navy League but not affiliated with the Defense Department, said "I think also that we've got to actively explore the desirability of having an Indian Ocean fleet. I can't tell you the number, I can't tell you what the bases ought to be, but I think it is important to us to explore vigorously the military requirements of such a force being deployed."

Nobel Winner Sutherland Dies

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Earl W. Sutherland Jr., whose research in hormones earned him a Nobel Prize in 1971, died at Jackson Memorial Hospital today after a short illness. He was 58.

The Nobel laureate, a biochemistry professor at the University of Miami, entered Jackson Memorial Hospital Feb. 27 suffering from bleeding at the base of his esophagus, a condition often associated with high blood pressure.

He won the Nobel Prize for his research into cyclic adenylyl acid — cyclic AMP — a cellular chemical involved in the formation of body organs.

The chemical, Sutherland once said, affects "everything from your memory to your toes."

Sutherland, balding and gregarious, was a dedicated and energetic researcher who relished time spent away from his work fishing and gardening.

Sugar Plantation Strikes

HONOLULU (UPI)—Nine thousand members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union went on strike Saturday against Hawaii's sugar plantations.

The strikers were field hands on plantations mainly owned by, and the dispute was the second major walkout in the industry in five years.

"Our people are prepared for a minimum strike of three months," ILWU regional director Robert McElrath said. "All of the plantations will be picketed."

ECU's Regional Development Institute Enters 10th Year

By MIKE PARSONS
ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University Regional Development Institute is entering its tenth year of service with completion of approximately 1,500 projects to its credit.

In most changing conditions, flexibility has been essential to success, says Thomas W. Willis, director of the Regional Development Institute since its inception. For example, a recent shift has been from coastal land development to aiding local entrepreneurs locate financial assistance.

There has been little problem shifting emphasis rapidly from one area to another because of the wide range of comprehensive services the Institute offers.

It is involved in community development, business assistance, informational services and special projects which deal with other interests from time to time. These services are made available to the 32 counties of eastern North Carolina.

"Implementation is the key word," Willis said. Institute philosophy has been directed towards action and solution rather than solving the problem on paper.

Willis is proud of the efforts in community development. For example, the Institute handled 35 projects in this area from June, 1972 through July, 1973. Lenoir and Halifax counties were aided in renovating their airport facilities, and the Institute assisted state and federal efforts to implement regional air service between Beaufort, Greenville and Raleigh.

The communities of Farmville and Ayden received assistance in renovating their business districts. Other communities were aided in funding water and waste treatment systems large enough to handle expected growth. The Institute assisted Onslow and Lenoir counties in locating and planning areas suitable for industrial parks.

Fifteen "wet process" sites were located for industries requiring at least 500,000 gallons of water per day for use in processing or release of treated wastes.

North Carolina history recalls the use of river boats and barges along the rivers of the area. With this in mind, the Institute helped to find 15 sites along navigable rivers that could be used for barge docking. These sites provide a total of 20,000 acres for construction of industrial and warehouse facilities.

The Institute recognizes that in an area characterized by under-employment of resources, small businesses can prove instrumental to economic growth. Willis says. In aiding persons desiring to open a firm, but lacking capital or knowhow, the first step is usually to determine the potential market for the product or service.

If the survey shows the product is feasible, the Institute will then assist in obtaining financing and in some cases will produce and aid in managing a prototype to show how it is done. An example of prototype assistance is the New East magazine. After seeing the prototype, Eden Press of Edenton offered to take over the magazine and publish it in what has become a successful venture.

The Institute has offered assistance in planning an ice skating rink in Greenville. It has offered advice concerning packing industries and fish houses. Sites for marinas have been located for interested persons.

The Institute's library, one of the largest of its kind in the state, contains abstracts and surveys which provide clues to Eastern residents' wants and needs. These abstracts give statistical breakdowns of information pertaining to population, income, political and religious affiliation and many other items which provide an accurate picture of the average citizen of a given area.

The Institute recently sponsored a conference dealing with how to follow the law in dredging—how to dredge and keep within the law rather than merely saying what you couldn't do.

The special projects which the institute has undertaken have at times dealt in other areas of interest.

Ten years ago, Minnesota Beach in Pamlico County did not exist as a town. With the Institute's assistance, the town was drawn up on paper and carried through conception. Today, Minnesota Beach is a fully incorporated town that is one of the largest in the county.

Other special projects have included designing brochures for towns to attract tourists and industry, a study of the feasibility of raising eels for export and the preparation of an environmental impact statement for a new Pitt County hospital.

The impact statement was prepared in cooperation with ECU faculty members, architects, engineers, environmentalists and hospital authorities. Now required for all federal funding for new hospital projects, the statement analyzes the environment, social and economic benefits and costs which will be derived from the hospital in Greenville.

Willis, as director of the Institute, reports directly to the Chancellor, Vice Chancellor and Director of Development at ECU. With this method of organization, the Institute is able to make maximum use of the available resources of ECU.

The Institute returns payment by offering opportunities to ECU students and faculty interested in regional development. Several work-study students work with the Institute, and there are full-time internships available for those desiring practical field experience.

A new home will soon be ready for the Regional Development Institute. Located at First and Reade streets in Greenville, the building will be ready for occupancy in August. It will include a 300 seat auditorium along with conference rooms and office space. The new center will afford the opportunity of a permanent home for the Regional Development Institute to plan another ten years of growth.

has made no decision on where to make his home in exile. Helms, who introduced a Senate resolution to confer honorary citizenship on the Russian novelist, read the letter at the 53rd annual luncheon of the National Republican Women's Club attended by Vice President Gerald R. Ford, Tricia Nixon Cox, California Gov. Ronald Reagan and New York Gov. Malcolm Wilson.

Honorary citizenship has been granted only twice in U. S. history, to the Marquis de Lafayette and Winston Churchill, Helms said.

Solzhenitsyn declined Helms' invitation to visit here saying,

"In my unaccustomed new situation, I must with special diligence and attention concentrate on my particular literary work, on my main literary design for which my entire life may not be long enough."

Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Soviet Union last month after the publication of his novel "The Gulag Archipelago," which was highly critical of the Russian criminal justice system. He has been staying in Switzerland awaiting the arrival of his family since his expulsion.

State Attorney Dies Following Wild Spree

OREGON, Ill. (UPI) — Ogle County State's attorney Richard Caldwell died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound Saturday after a wild shooting spree in the sheriff's office. The man is believed to have shot his wife and a deputy sheriff, killed his son and held two other children at gunpoint, authorities said.

Caldwell, 44, went to the sheriff's office shortly after officers found the body of his 12-year-old son, David, on the lawn of the Caldwell home. Earlier, Mrs. Dorothy Caldwell had been at the sheriff's office and told deputies she had been shot and that Caldwell was holding two of their children at gunpoint.

At the sheriff's office, Caldwell was "talking wildly and waving guns," and ignored pleas of chief deputy Mel Messer to put down the weapons, deputies said.

Caldwell fired through an open doorway, wounding detective Robert Whipple, a sheriff's office spokesman said. More shots were fired and Messer fired twice, the spokesman said.

Caldwell was found slumped beside some file cabinets and "it was determined that Caldwell shot himself in the head," the sheriff's office said.

Kathryn Gelander, an Oregon correspondent for a Rockford newspaper, was in the sheriff's office during the shooting. Caldwell told Messer he was dictating a personal statement to Mrs. Gelander.

"He stated that he had killed his kid and shot his wife and he was trying to make reconciliation but couldn't," Mrs. Gelander said.

She said Caldwell "burst into the office" while she and the office girl were alone there. "He had guns and he stepped over," she said. "I was standing there with my notebook pad and he said if I wanted I could begin taking down his statement."

She said when Messer arrived, "He tried to reason with him to put the guns down but he wouldn't do it. He (Caldwell) shot over behind me from the right side. My ear is a little banged. I felt he was no longer there behind me and I saw him slumped on the floor."

Caldwell, who was elected state's attorney in 1972, was pronounced dead at the scene. Neither Messer nor Mrs. Gelander was hurt.

Mrs. Caldwell was in good condition at a hospital, where a spokesman said she suffered superficial wounds. She and her husband were recently divorced.

Whipple was taken to Rockford's St. Anthony Hospital where he underwent surgery.

Two other Caldwell children were safe and being cared for by friends and relatives. Police said a sister of the Caldwell children "got away"

Syrian Howitzers Hit Israeli Positions

By United Press International
With Israeli forces mobilized to a "pre-war alert," Syrian howitzers pounded Israeli positions on the rocky Golan Heights Saturday. The Syrians said they destroyed a bulldozer and another vehicle in a 15-minute clash.

of clashes began at 12:15 p.m. when an Israeli engineering unit tried to strengthen advanced positions in the central sector of heights. The fighting ended at 12:30 p.m. and the Syrians reported no other casualties except the two vehicles.

opened up Israeli positions near Jeba in the southern sector of the heights, east of Kuneitra in the early afternoon. It said fire was not returned and no casualties were reported. Saturday's clash between Syrian and Israeli troops was the third reported this week on the heights, the scene of the bitterest fighting since the U.S.-authored Middle East cease-fire went into effect.

Syrian and Israeli troops Friday exchanged artillery and tank fire in two separate clashes. Syria also reported clashes Monday. In Tel Aviv, a commander on the Syrian front said Israeli forces on the heights were on a "pre-war alert" because of a possible attempt by Damascus to recapture the territory it lost in the 1973 Middle East war.

"We can see the Syrian soldiers walking round wearing steel helmets and coming in and out of their communication trenches more often," the unidentified commander said in an interview broadcast by the Israeli army radio. "The traffic on their roads has been accelerated. In recent days in view of the reports," he said, "we have gone into a high special alert—an alert which before this we used to call a pre-war alert."

Hearst Family Keeping Vigil

By ART MCGINN
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's family kept their vigil Saturday, waiting for word from her kidnapers on what they have to do to win her freedom in addition to the multimillion dollar food program already under way.

and Catherine Hearst pleaded with the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers to let their 20-year-old daughter communicate with them, there still was no response. But the FBI said it was not worried by the lack of communication. "We haven't been too concerned," said FBI spokesman Thomas Druken. "We're still going on our investigation to locate and identify the people responsible, and the fact that they do or do not communicate is not of any real significance as far as we're concerned."

Gov. Ronald Reagan urged all Californians to join the Hearsts in their long wait by making the weekend a special time of prayer for Patricia's safety. Nearly a week after Randolph opened up Israeli positions near Jeba in the southern sector of the heights, east of Kuneitra in the early afternoon. It said fire was not returned and no casualties were reported. Saturday's clash between Syrian and Israeli troops was the third reported this week on the heights, the scene of the bitterest fighting since the U.S.-authored Middle East cease-fire went into effect.

"Marvelous," Cronkite Remarks About Streaker

AUSTIN, TEX. (UPI)—A streaker sprinted through the auditorium of the Lyndon B. Johnson Library Saturday where the widow of the former President was presenting a journalism award to Walter Cronkite. Secret service agents tackled the nude male and took him from the building. Lady Bird Johnson remained in her seat. Cronkite was speaking to a group assembled for the presentation to the CBS newsmaster of the first Dewitt C. Reddick Communications Award.

"Will whoever eat 600 feet of that on film please let me have it?" Cronkite asked, adding that he wished CBS camera crews had recorded the event. "Are they (streakers) marvelous?" he said. "The only trouble with my generation is we have no imagination." The streaker, wearing red hat and mask, made it only a few feet past a side door before he was apprehended. Reddick is the former dean of the University of Texas school of communications and taught both Cronkite and Mrs. Johnson in journalism courses at the university.

Fails To Reach Verdict

WILMINGTON (UPI) — The bombing trial of ex-Marine Lawrence Little of Jacksonville ended in a mistrial late Friday night when jurors failed to reach a verdict. Little, the proclaimed propagandist minister of the Militant Rights of White People organization, was accused in the bombing last year of a restaurant equipment company here. The jury went out at 4:20 p.m. Friday and announced shortly after 11 p.m. they could not reach a verdict and were deadlocked, with 10 jurors favoring acquittal and two guilty. The prosecutor said after the mistrial was declared that Little would be tried on the charge again.

Senator Jackson To Speak

RALEIGH (AP)—Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who is coming to North Carolina next weekend to speak at the Democratic Party's Jefferson Jackson Day fund-raising dinner, will meet with Democratic members of the General Assembly in the Legislative Building next Saturday. State Democratic Chairman James Sugg said details of Jackson's visit have not been completed but that a caucus with Democratic legislators following his arrival at Raleigh-Durham Airport and a press conference are planned.

$17.5 Million Chicken Firm

COFIELD, N.C. (AP) — A Maryland firm says it plans to establish a $17.5 million chicken raising and processing industry in Hertford County. Officials of Perdue Farms Inc. of Salisbury, Md., said Friday that initial plans call for 300 broiler houses, each holding 16,000 chickens, and a $1.5 million feed mill to provide food for the birds. Construction of the first 20 broiler houses will begin immediately and the feed mill will be under construction within 90 days, a spokesman said.

Everybody Forgot To File

ELKIN, N.C. (AP)—Everyone forgot about the Feb. 25 filing deadline, and there are no candidates for the Elkin school board in the November election. The present school board will remain in office until somebody runs otherwise.

Insurance Age Factor Ruling

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate has voted 21-14 to approve tentatively a bill intended to eliminate discrimination against young men in fixing auto liability insurance rates. But final Senate action on the measure which would prohibit the use of age as a factor in setting auto liability rates was postponed until Tuesday night.

Driverless Car Injures 17

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A runaway car, its accelerator stuck and without a driver, crashed into a Charlotte shopping center supermarket during the Friday afternoon rush hour, injuring 17 persons. Three of the injured were admitted to Charlotte Memorial Hospital. Police quoted the car's driver, Mrs. Katina Hunter Gantt, 22, of Charlotte, as saying the accelerator of her car stuck as she turned into South Boulevard from Archdale Drive, the western and southern boundaries of the shopping center. She told police that rather than risk a collision at a red light she was approaching, she turned into the shopping center parking lot. Officers quoted her as saying she tried her foot brake and parking brake and could not stop the car, then she jumped out. The car crashed through the supermarket's main doors, hitting two checkout counters, scattering people, cash registers and groceries, and finally coming to a stop 43 feet inside the store with rear wheels still grinding.

Vesco Wheeler-Dealer

By JOHN PRYOR
NEW YORK (UPI) — The image of international financier Robert L. Vesco is merging from the conspiracy trial of former cabinet officers John Mitchell and Maurice Stans as that of an incredibly bold wheeler and dealer. Vesco, a co-defendant in the historic case who fled to the Caribbean before the indictment was filed last May, allegedly went so far as to seek the help of President Nixon as a way out of his tangled financial affairs.

According to the testimony of Harry L. Sears, a former lawyer and onetime business associate of Vesco's, the 38-year old millionaire once told him he had telephoned the President's older brother F. Donald Nixon in his efforts to "get to the top." Sears, a tall, heavy set man who was the President's 1972 campaign fund raiser in New Jersey, is expected to wind up his testimony for the prosecution on Monday. Cross examination by defense attorneys will then begin.

JOFFREY HONORED

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Joffrey, artistic director of the City Center Joffrey Ballet, has received the 23rd annual award, $1,000, of the Capezio Dance Foundation. It is given for "long-term development and achievement in the dance field."

Robert Joffrey's citation commends him as "an ardent spokesman for and a stern but loving guide to youth, be they gifted children, teen-age students with dreams or dedicated young professionals, whom he has served, as dancer, teacher, director, for 25 years."

VFW Commemorative To Be Issued Monday

The first commemorative stamp of the 1974 series will be placed on sale Monday in Washington, D.C., honoring the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The stamp, a 10-cent one, will go on general sale across the country on Thursday. Printed in blue and red, the stamp will be of the usual horizontal commemorative format. It honors the VFW on the occasion of its 75th anniversary. The VFW was created in 1899 through the merger of several organizations of overseas veterans. Membership is confined to veterans who have won a campaign medal or badge for service on foreign soil or on hostile waters. One other stamp has also been announced for the month of March, a 10-cent stamp honoring the late poet, Robert Frost. That stamp will have its first day ceremonies on March 26 in Derry, N.H.

Rates Should Be Under Control

An announcement by Greenville Utilities tells us that electric rates will be considerably higher in March due to the higher fossil fuel adjustment charge by Virginia Electric and Power Co.

The additional charge, based on rising fuel cost to VEPCO, will mean an average increase of $1.12 per month, for local domestic customers.

Greenville Utilities buys its power directly from VEPCO for redistribution to its retail customers under a contract it has with VEPCO. The present contract calls for the fuel adjustment.

Greenville Utilities is not subject to control by the State Utilities Commission, but recently that body also decided to allow private utilities companies to tack on an automatic fuel adjustment charge on a monthly basis.

Apparently, since rate cases take months to settle, it was decided that the automatic fuel increase was the easiest way to handle the rising cost of oil and coal which are necessary to the generation of electricity.

It may be a simple way to handle the problem, but it is not the best way. The State Utilities Commission and the Federal Power Commission should maintain their constant control over increasing rates. These regulatory commissions should devise some way of passing on these fuel adjustment charges periodically even monthly if that is necessary so that no additional charge can be passed on to the consumer automatically.

Rising energy cost is a fact of life these days and something we will have to live with, but rates private utilities can charge are supposed to be controlled by state and federal agencies. There should never be any sort of increase that is allowed without careful review by the government commissions.

Oddly Muffled On Gulag Story

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The Voice of America (VOA), this nation's overseas propaganda arm, has been strangely mute about Alexander Solzhenitsyn's monumental "Gulag Archipelago" despite pointed pleas from the U. S. embassy in Moscow to pass the dramatic word in detail to the Russian people.

When excerpts of the great author's work first appeared in Western newspapers last December, the embassy cabled the U. S. Information Agency (USIA) commending VOA's first handling of what was becoming a big international story. But the diplomatic cable also strongly pressed USIA, which runs VOA, to be sure and get into "the substance" of Gulag—that is, to beam great gobs of it into the heart of Russia.

Yet, the USIA high command is so timid about seeming to undercut President Nixon's detente with Moscow that that telegram was never even answered.

Just how much of this policy has been dictated to USIA director James Keogh by the White House or the State Department is not known. Keogh told us VOA policy is made by him and his top aides in conformity with U. S. policy.

Whatever the answer, USIA's refusal to exploit Gulag is infuriating not only anti-Soviet hardliners but other politicians fearful that President Nixon's weakness at home may lead him into unwarranted concessions abroad in his search for foreign successes.

Thus, the policy of playing down news that might affront the White House was applied to Gulag. Actually, according to middle-level USIA officials, former chief Nixon speechwriter Keogh began subtly toning down VOA's coverage of the Watergate scandal when he took over USIA from Frank Shakespeare in early 1973 at the recommendation of then White House staff chief H. R. Haldeman.

But political reaction to Keogh's muted coverage of Gulag far transcends criticism of his kid-glove treatment of Watergate. Powerful politicians of both parties are quietly campaigning to force Keogh to tell millions of radio listeners in the Soviet Union far more about Solzhenitsyn's bitter outcry against the Stalin era.

The first congressional target was not USIA's treatment of Gulag but its apparent playing down in broadcasts to the Soviet Union of news about Soviet dissidents. In a January speech, Sen. Henry M. Jackson questioned whether USIA was trying "to accommodate the Soviet demand that we refrain from broadcasting about what Soviet authorities consider to be matters of an internal nature."

That elicited an overnight response from Eugene P. Kopp, Keogh's deputy director. Kopp wrote Jackson that the new regime at USIA was trying to "reach a wider Soviet audience with more news and information about the United States." In short, spare newsless Russians the harsher facts of Soviet life and give them goodies about America.

of what middle-level USIA officials call the Keogh-Kopp clique, the USIA flatly ruled out proposals from both Congress and VOA itself that excerpts of Gulag be read over VOA. Instead, coverage of the shocking study of the Stalin era was limited to a reshuffle of stories, editorials and commentaries taken from the U. S. media.

In the past, VOA seldom if ever broadcast to Communist nations lengthy excerpts of published material. But Gulag is unique: the most powerful expose ever published in life under Stalin. That's why the Russian service of life under

In public, Keogh says Soviet officials are complaining about present VOA coverage of the Russian dissident movement but boasts "we are holding it." In private, he tells associates inside USIA that one reason for playing down Gulag is fear of renewed Soviet jamming of VOA, which stopped last fall as a Soviet concession to detente. However, neither the German nor the British excerpts have been jammed.

Keogh, biographer and longtime idolator of Richard M. Nixon, takes the public position that USIA is committed "to support, not oppose, U. S. foreign policies." Responding last week to his critics, he said: "The principal goal of American foreign policy is to affect the foreign policies of other nations toward negotiations and away from confrontation, not to transform the domestic structures of these societies."

That is a shocking admission that VOA is being switched from no-holds-barred news into a policy arm of the U. S. Such a switch could destroy its credibility and lose its audience.

The Return To Normal School Hours Welcome

Thanks to longer daylight hours the county and city schools will return to normal hours March 18. The school day had been convening a half hour later due to winter Daylight Time.

The problem may not be with us next year. The trend in national thinkings seems to be against winter Daylight Time. That could bring pressure on Congress to change the law before next winter.

Big Turnover Is In Prospect

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—The time and pressure of committee meetings during the summer and coming back for an experimental annual session of the General Assembly appears to be taking a toll of those seeking re-election.

A higher than usual turnover rate is seen in those filing for re-election, with about 19 per cent saying they won't come back.

On the Senate side, 10 members are not running. Nine are Democrats, one a Republican. Half of those give as a principal reason the pressures of annual meetings. They need to be back at home looking after their business. In the House, 16 Democrats and six Republicans are dropouts.

Senator Gordon P. Allen, D-Person, president pro tem of the Senate and one of those not returning, said the usual turnover rate in the Senate is about 25 per cent, counting those incumbents who don't seek re-election, and those who are defeated.

Pay The Victims
The operator of a small grocery store in Salisbury planted a bug in Senator Robert V. Somers' ear recently, and the result if passed by the General Assembly would be a method of paying back the victims of a robbery.

Somers, R-Rowan, said a grocer suggested that work release for prisoners is fine, but a man who is robbed ought to get something back. The resulting proposal would require the courts to set up a payback system when a man is sentenced for a robbery or break-in and winds up on work release.

The money earned would be earmarked first for payment of his upkeep in prison; next for upkeep of the family; then for restitution to the victim.

The present law, after prison costs and family upkeep, gives the prisoner $10 a week for spending money, and places the remainder in a savings account for the prisoner.

Revive Patriotism
The National Anthem should be played before sporting events—and there has been a trend away from that—Sen. Gordon Allen believes.

Allen introduced a resolution in the Senate requesting that the anthem be used more regularly. "I just think it's the patriotic thing to do," Allen said. His suggestion is part of a nationwide drive to restore the playing of the anthem.

The wording of the resolution which Allen introduced notes Tar Heels are "finding these times especially trying," and mentions political and social upheaval, and growing disrespect for fundamental beliefs.

Playing the anthem would help instill in people and "in particular our children, some understanding and belief in our national heritage."

Lawyers Barred?
At last, a lawyer can serve on a board of county commissioners anywhere in North Carolina.

Two counties—Alamance and Iredell—until now had some antiquated rule against this.

Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, asked for a change for his county since a lawyer there had decided to run.

Senator J. Reid Poovey, R-Catawba, asked Scott what party the would be commissioner belonged to. Scott snorted, "Democrat, of course," so Poovey introduced an amendment.

Senators held their breath—figuring some party schlduggery was afoot. But it turned out Poovey only wanted to put Iredell County, in his district, in the bill, too.

"Again eluding the Congress and the courts, the amazing streaker strikes again!"

And now streaking is with us. The art or sport or group activity of taking off one's clothes and racing about campus is captivating colleges throughout the country.

Other Editors Say Cooperative Effort

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger can hardly be accused of being a petroleum industry advocate. So his views on the energy situation should carry weight with the doubting Thomases who persist in seeing the gasoline shortage as a scheme to boost prices.

Kissinger, in speaking of the Middle East war and energy, has said that "the war in the Middle East brought to a head the energy crisis on a global basis. It brought it to a head, but did not cause it. The basic cause of the energy crisis is that demand for energy has been growing exponentially while the incentives for supply have not kept pace."

"Sooner or later, the energy-consuming countries would have come up against the situation where their demand far outstripped the possibilities of supply. And, therefore, it is essential that a worldwide cooperative effort between consumers and producers be stated so that we can deal with the challenges on a long-term basis."

He was speaking of the international scene. But the principle remains the same domestically.

There must be cooperation and understanding between consumers and producers of energy domestically if the oil industry is to move ahead with the task of new breakthroughs in oil exploration and development.

The atmosphere of suspicion that has been engendered toward the oil industry is wholly unjustified and wholly destructive to the consumers' best interests, posing a continuing threat to the national security.

The billions of dollars that must come from the voluntary investment of citizens in the oil industry and from the earnings of the industry itself to vastly expand petroleum production domestically depend upon cooperative effort. There must be the same kind of effort within the United States as Kissinger calls for in solving international energy problems.

Strength For Today

OUTGROWTH OF LIFE
The novelist Maurice Maeterlinck once made the statement that nothing ever happens to a man which is not of the nature of himself, the outgrowth of his whole life.

So, for example, theft often seems to be the result of sudden impulses; but behind these impulses was a long period of preparation for the dishonest act. In the same way a violent physical attack on another person might seem to be caused by extraordinary circumstances calling forth uncontrollable anger on the part of the person doing the attacking. But here again the ultimate cause of the act lies deep in the personality of the attacker.

Every good or evil act springs from a long mental and spiritual preparation over which we could have complete control if we start preparing ourselves in time. Every thought and impulse hastens the coming of a good or evil day. Both vice and virtue are the outward manifestations of an inner condition of life.

A Big 'If' Hangs Over Us All

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "If."

Over the stock market it hangs threateningly, over the head of the discouraged food buyer and home buyer and motorist. It is the offspring of hope, the spouse of doubt and indecision, the progenitor of alibis.

"If," as Rudyard Kipling and scores of other writers in every age have observed, is a very important word, but hardly anybody today needs to be told that, and that includes the president of the United States.

If the weather holds up, if the Agriculture Department's forecasters are correct in their expectations of a record harvest, if blight remains under control, if strikes are held in check... food prices might stabilize. Such "ifs" characterized many of the administration's forecasts of better times tomorrow, but always it seems today's tomorrow merely becomes tomorrow's yesterday and the problems remain.

If oil shipments from the Mideast return to what was considered normal there should be sufficient fuel for summer tourists. If you look at the statistics a certain way there will be no recession.

For eight years or so investors have been dealing with if and buts in the stock market, waiting to see if the "Street" can straighten itself out, with the net result being an atrophying of the investor's spirit.

Homebuyers have been rendered almost helpless by the plethora of "ifs" regarding the availability of mortgage money and rates and lumber prices and the stability of their employment. Motorists, of course, are in a special category, as are food buyers. But almost every American is a motorist at one time or another and every American is a food buyer all the time, and both face multiple "ifs" in their plans.

Industry has plans for improving plant and equipment late in the current year, but if you look closely at some of those plans you might find them contingent upon the resolution of a lot of "ifs."

Some plants won't be built, for instance, if the board of directors can't get a better reading of the consumer's mind. What if consumers withdraw into a shell and decline to buy the company's product?

And what if interest rates remain high or the international monetary system collapses or the President is

Dream Begins June 19

By KENNETH FRANKLING WICKFORD, R. I. (UPI) — Bob Gainer's career goal is becoming a naval architect, one who designs and builds boats.

But 1974 brings a more immediate challenge. Gainer intends this summer to become, at age 20, the youngest person to seriously challenge the Atlantic in a single-handed ocean crossing.

Gainer, of East Greenwich, R.I., plans to make the trip in a 22 1/2-foot fiberglass Sea Sprite called Hitchhiker to be launched from Wickford Cove on April 6.

"My original idea dates back into early youth," he said. "I've got notes and plans on the trip that date from at least 10 years ago."

Hitchhiker's hull and deck work are finished and Gainer is bolting down hardware and building the mast himself. He saved for three years to finance the project, getting discounts and other help from interested manufacturers.

Gainer's timetable calls for casting off June 19. He expects to reach Falmouth, England 35-45 days later.

"I'm pretty much going to take the same route (the late) Robert Manry used for Tinker-belle eight years ago," he said. The route, for the most part, will keep Gainer about 200 miles south of the New York-London shipping lane.

"I expect to have the same kind of weather Manry did, with 20-foot waves and 60-knot winds at least once during the trip, but my boat won't be thrown around the way his was," says Gainer. "It's at least four times heavier."

Gainer said his family in Hillsdale, N.J. wasn't overly enthusiastic when he announced the quest three years ago. "But they finally gave up and realized I was going to do it. So I have their blessing in a way. My dad has helped in outfitting

To the editor: I've been hearing some pretty strong statements by people in my generation regarding the youth. I'm sure the latest "streaking" episode has added fuel to the flame.

Please do not misunderstand me. I'm not suggesting that I condone this idiotic exhibition. This desire to be seen in one's birthday suit strikes me as bordering on being a little sick. However, in defense of your youth today, I would like to call to your attention the following paragraph, written by Socrates in the fifth century B. C.

"Our youth now love luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority; they show disrespect for their elders, and love chatter in places of exercise. They no longer rise when elders enter the room. They contradict their parents, chatter before company, gobble up their food, and tyrannize their teachers."

I guess things haven't really changed that much! M. W. Aldridge, DDS Greenville

Observations From Editorial Columns

Muzzling Free Press Isn't The Answer

Florida's right to reply law is supported in various quarters under false pretenses. On the surface, supporters contend the law is an extension of First Amendment rights to freedom of speech.

But the record shows that supporters of the law consider it a backhanded way of attacking what they consider to be newspaper "monopolies." The "monopoly" argument was advanced by the Dade County legislative candidate and his attorney in the suit against The Miami Herald that is awaiting review by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Florida Supreme Court used the argument in upholding the law in the case against the Herald. The majority opinion stated that public information is limited "by the growing concentration of the ownership of the mass media into fewer and fewer hands, resulting ultimately in a form of private censorship. Through consolidation, syndication, acquisition of radio and TV stations and the demise of vast numbers of newspapers, competition is rapidly vanishing and news corporations are acquiring monopolistic influence over huge areas of the country."

In ruling against the Miami Herald the Florida court noted that it is the "largest newspaper published in Florida, that it is larger in size than the next two largest newspapers; and that it is not only a large city daily newspaper but also a regional and international newspaper."

Since the ruling other supporters have used the same argument. U. S. Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., who recently suggested enacting a federal reply law, cited the "declining number of newspapers published in the U. S. as an example of the trend toward monopolization of the media."

Chesterfield Smith of Lakeland, president of the American Bar Assn., stated his support of the reply law this week contending it "protects the people's right to know and should be extended to cities where monopolies exist in newspapers. . . like the Miami Herald." Reminded that there are several daily newspapers in the Miami area, including The Miami News, which is highly competitive, Smith replied: "Oh, they have two monopolies." How ridiculous!

The Florida Supreme Court and reply law supporters who base their support on so called press monopolization fail to recognize there is more press competition today than ever before. Never before in history has the American public been offered so much diversity of information outlets. The electronic press has added not one, but dozens of outlets in each community. And the readers in any community have access to a variety of news publications of varying opinions.

Contrary to the opinion in the Florida court ruling citing the "demise of vast numbers of newspapers," there has been little change in the total numbers of papers in this country in recent years. There were 1,761 daily newspapers being published in the U. S. at the end of 1972, only 25 fewer than were being published 20 years ago—and a drop of less than 1 per cent in two decades.

Any attack on press "monopolies" should be made through the antitrust laws, and not through the First Amendment rights granted to a free press. "To the extent that government limits or adds to that which a publisher must distribute, freedom of speech and freedom of the press are thereby diminished," wrote Justice Boyd in his dissenting opinion to the Florida court ruling on the reply law.

This conclusion should be noted by those who are speaking in support of the law. He said: "Almost everyone whose name has been carried frequently in the news media has been offended, at one time or another, by stories or comments with which he disagrees. This is part of the price one pays for success and notoriety. If there exists a problem in this state of affairs, the muzzling of a free press is not the solution to such problems."—Daytona Beach (Fla.) Evening News

Lights Out

Nebraskans will be snuffing out instead of lighting up in elevators, theaters, libraries, art museums, concert halls and public buses beginning the first of July. The state's legislature has passed a bill outlawing smoking in such public places, complete with fines of from $10 to $100.

The idea is that smoking offends many people and they should not have to put up with it. A valid point. Tobacco smoke is a proven pollutant. It can make a nonsmoker's eyes smart, throat scratch and head ache. It can cause health problems for those allergic to it.

Let smokers be confined to smoking areas when in public, or be satisfied to pursue their noxious habit in private. Other states should follow Nebraska's example. If the nation doesn't have enough movements already, perhaps room could be found for a clean lung one. After all, the breath you save may be your own.—Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

Public Forum

To The Editor:

Isn't it odd that there has been no public outcry against that ugly, unintelligible "Logo" which is now being used as the Greenville City letterhead? To identify a major city of a state noted for the common sense of its citizens by the use of sign which might be found on a "Mod" Shoppe of some kind is ridiculous to say the least.

Recently, during my incarnation in the V. A. Hospital at Durham, I heard many people say, "Oh, yes, Greenville; the town with the funny letterhead." And among my rather wide acquaintance among Greenville citizens of all levels of education and all tastes, I have heard NO approval of it. I don't like for my home town to be made fun of.

After 11½ years in Greenville, I would never have ventured the opinion that the City would send out official correspondence to prospective businesses and others on whom we should want to make a sober, reasonable impression, which letters were headed by a "Logo" which isn't even good design nor good commercial art.

Nor would I have believed that the City would stand for the expenditure of some $5,000, for such arrant nonsense. Come to think of it, I suspect that the use of the "Logo" in public City notices approaches illegal substitution of it for the City Seal.

A Conservative View Reflections On Those Watergate Indictments

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The grand jury returned its indictments in the Watergate affair about midday on Friday, March 1, and within the hour the President asked the people "to join in recognizing that those indicted are presumed innocent unless proof of guilt is established in the courts."

This is a wise and proper admonition in any criminal prosecution, and it is especially appropriate to this one. The seven defendants are not charged with federal crimes that are easily susceptible to proof, such as auto theft or moonshining. They are charged with offenses quite difficult to prove, and it is well to keep that in mind from the outset.

The indictment runs to 50 pages. All seven defendants—John Mitchell, H. R. Halderman, John Ehrlichman, Gordon Strachan, Charles Colson, Robert Mardian, and Kenneth Parkinson—are charged in Count One. This count charges broadly that the seven did "combine, conspire, confederate and agree together" to obstruct justice. The abortive trial of the Chicago Seven should remind us that conspiracy is a most ephemeral crime.

Six of the defendants (Mardian excluded) are charged in Count Two with impeding the FBI investigation.

Count Three accuses former Attorney General Mitchell of Making false statements to the FBI. Counts Four and Five charge Mitchell with perjury before the grand jury. Count Six charges him with perjury before the Senate committee.

Counts Seven; Eight and Nine allege that Halderman gave perjured testimony before the Senate committee. Counts Ten, Eleven and Twelve deal with Ehrlichman only, and Count Thirteen deals only with Strachan.

These are the elements of perjury, that an accused while under oath willfully and knowingly gave false testimony to a material fact. The first perjury charge against Mitchell, in Court Four, demonstrates the difficult burden placed upon the prosecution. Mitchell was asked, before the grand jury, if he had any "knowledge" of any "program" or of any "effort, illegal in nature," to get "information" or "intelligence" on the Democrats. His answer was, "Certainly not."

What was within his knowledge? What is meant by "program"? Did Mitchell know of activities "illegal in nature"? All these elements have to be proved, beyond a reasonable doubt, in order to make the charge stick.

That particular allegation in Count Four is among the government's most solid charges. Other counts of perjury have Mitchell saying, "I don't recall that," and "I have no recollection of that." In Count Eleven, Ehrlichman is accused of perjury before the grand jury involving such answers as: "I can't say specifically one way or another. . . I have no present recollection. . . I don't know whether it was during that week or not. . . I'm sorry, I just don't remember."

The most publicized charge against Halderman has to do with a conference on March 21, 1973. John Dean had testified that at this meeting the President asked him how much hush money might be involved in a permanent cover-up. Dean answered, a million dollars. In Dean's version, Nixon went on to say that "There is no problem in raising a million dollars. We can do that." In Halderman's version, the President added, "But it would be wrong." Yet the colloquy quoted in Count Eight as the basis of a perjury charge is not at all clear. It will be no easy task for the prosecution to win conviction on this count.

Other problems are foreseeable. The defense surely will argue that pre-trial publicity has made it impossible to seat an impartial jury. The defense presumably will demand that Richard Nixon himself be summoned as a vital witness in their behalf. If the President refuses to testify, what then? The defense may insist upon having new documents and tapes. What about these? Some of the charges have to do with lying to the FBI. Is this a crime?

It will be months or years before these indictments are finally disposed of. Meanwhile, a suggestion is in order that we get on to other things, and leave these mushy charges to simmer on the back of the stove.

Congressional Pay Hike Vote Dictated By Facts Of Keeping Their Jobs

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

WASHINGTON — Figuratively, this was a week of weeping and wailing and wringing of hands up on Capitol Hill. In the end, members of the House and Senate could come up with no reasonable way to accept their $10,800 pay increase.

This performance could be interpreted as a real shot in the arm for a nation suffering from a shrinking confidence in its leaders. In fact, it could be hailed as a long awaited sign that the national legislature has come to the point where its members place national interest above self interest.

The taxpayer would love some sign, even a small one, that Washington has not lost all compassion for him. It would be possible to set Congress' restraint in that light.

Also, the consumer would relish some straw of hope that wages won't skyrocket this year, pushing prices at the supermarkets to even higher levels. It would be possible to treat the decision by Congress as an example in moderation—anti-inflationary.

Unfortunately, any such view as the above would make a farce of charity. The brutal fact is that the pay action was dictated by political considerations—the

The Young adventurer is no stranger to Atlantic sailing. He made a solo trip to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia three years ago in a Sea Sprite daysailer, a boat the same size but lacking a cabin. He describes it as a "two month leisure trip."

Gainer said he's not worried about the mechanics or possible physical peril on the voyage.

"My only worry is that I'll be asleep when I arrive in England and miss seeing the land as it comes over the horizon. It would be disappointing after 40 days to wake up and all of a sudden the coast is there."

"It's supposed to be a highlight on the trip to first see birds, then clouds, then grey mist and then England. I think it would be disappointing to miss."

If all goes well, he plans to stay with relatives of American friends after his arrival, leaving the following spring on a voyage home via The Azores and Bermuda.

Gainer says he would like to get a temporary job during his stay in England.

Doing what?
"Teaching sailing."

same old "how-do-I-keep-my-seat" self interest that has become the dominant force in Congress since World War II.

Congress' certainly most members, wanted the pay increase, which would have lifted their $42,500 salaries in three steps, to $52,800 by 1976. In their offices and off the House and Senate floors, they argued they were entitled to it. The last raise was in 1960, from $30,000 to $42,500. Living costs have gone up. So has the time Congress stays in session each year.

But Congressmen, being politicians, are sensitive to polls. This is an election year, coming at a time when the public regard for all government seems to have hit a new low, generally attributed to Watergate. In the polls, Congress rates below Nixon (down with used car salesmen).

A visit to the House and Senate office buildings makes it clear that worry this year is not limited to Republicans, who fear Watergate resentment will cost them heavily in terms of seats. The worry is shared, to some degree, by just about every member running this year, which means a third of the Senate and all of the House. The pay raise was seen as inviting more trouble in a bad season.

But while most mouths were watering for the raise, some members privately questioned whether it would be good policy for Congress to have more money under any conditions. Some even went so far as to suggest that the present level is too high. Their theory is that high pay for the office works against the national interest.

While this is obviously a minority view, the thinking is well worth consideration. It may help explain a lot of the "irresponsible" votes in recent times.

The central question is whether the pay of an elective office should be so high as to give it a career attraction. If the pay is truly attractive, then the holder of a House or Senate seat, will be guided less by the national interest than by self interest—votes he feels will keep his job.

And a good case can be made that such considerations have been a major influence over the policies Congress has voted, or not voted, over the past two decades.

For example, in the name of voting "good times" it has set up the deficit spending programs which led to today's wild inflation. And, to keep energy prices low to consumers, it failed, over a period of years, to do anything to avoid today's fuel shortages. In fact, it voted measures which have helped bring the shortage on.

Mail to Congress against the pay increase was heavy and, politically threatening. On balance, this is good. Congress now realizes it can't create a cost of living shelter for itself, while leaving the vast majority of its constituents exposed to the ravages of inflation.

House Speaker Thinks Med School Issue Over

By JOHN KILGO

RALEIGH—House Speaker Jim Ramsey says he feels the controversy over whether to expand the medical school at East Carolina University has been resolved in this session of the Legislature—and the decision is for expansion.

Ramsey was referring to a move by the Joint Appropriations Committee which voted to direct the University's Board of Governors to draft a plan for expanding the ECU med school to two years. Then, in a 40-39 vote, the committee made the measure part of the state's overall budget bill.

The budget bill is extremely difficult to amend on the floor, and should be especially so this year, when the Legislature is fighting to meet an early April adjournment.

"As I see it," Ramsey told me in an interview, "the ECU matter is over. The Appropriations Committee laid that to rest. Any member can ask that the ECU portion be separated from the budget bill and discussed on its own merits. But I believe a majority of the members of the House are willing to go along with the recommendations of the Appropriations Committee. This issue is quietened. It has been resolved for this session, as I see it."

Another controversial measure facing the Legislature is that of no-fault auto insurance. Ramsey says he expects the no-fault bill to reach the floor of the House late this week or early next week.

"I'm sure we'll be sending a no-fault bill to the Senate in a few days," Ramsey said.

Ramsey says he's pleased with the progress this General Assembly is making, and predicts it can still adjourn by April 1.

"I will not be terribly disappointed, however, if we don't get away by the first of April, but before the 15th," he said.

The matter of annual sessions for the Legislature has been discussed by members of the Assembly. Some like the idea, many don't. Ramsey says there is mixed feelings throughout the House on whether annual sessions should become permanent.

"The interim committees between the last session and this session left a bad taste in the mouth of most legislators," Ramsey said. "we just had too many meetings. There's no question about that. And for public relations purposes, we held these meetings in all sections of the state. It involved an awful lot of traveling. I think things can be much improved if the interim committees would meet on fixed dates in Raleigh."

Does Ramsey favor annual sessions?
"I'm staying out of that," he says. "As a citizen, I can see the need for it. But as a legislator, I can see where I might not want any part of it. But I think annual sessions can work if we smooth out the process, especially concerning those interim committees."

Some political observers have expressed concern at the number of legislators who say they won't return to Raleigh next year. Ramsey says the turnover is no more than during an average year. "Many of the people who are not running again for the House will be running for the Senate or other elective office," Ramsey said. "I've looked at the turnover figures and feel they're average for any given year."

'Dream Retirement Plots Are Sometimes Hard To Believe

By PETER ARNETT

AP Special Correspondent Elderly Frank and Kay Hunt moved westward from Iowa to New Mexico last summer with their mobile home in tow and with the enthusiasm of the early pioneers. They needed the enthusiasm.

On the basis of a magazine ad, the Hunts had paid $5 down and $5 monthly for a $299 half-acre "dream" retirement plot in Sunshine Valley Estates near the Mexican border. People from all over America have purchased 71,000 plots in that area.

The visions inspired by the colorful rhetoric of the magazine ad died as the Hunts turned off Route 80 and started searching for their small plot across an arid landscape of mesquite, tumbleweed and sand.

They did find it eventually along a dusty road bulldozed out of the raw desert. They nearly lost it again because returning from nearby Deming two nights later, the Hunts got confused in the desert and after a fruitless search finally spent the night in a motel.

"I hated it, it was nothing like I was led to believe," said Mrs. Hunt. But the pioneer spirit prevailed, and the Hunts are there today, 14½ miles from their mailbox, with their nearest neighbor out of sight across the horizon.

Gray-haired Mrs. Hunt carries a snake bite kit of suction cup, tourniquet and serum at all times. And she has gotten used to feeding water to thirty Mexicans making their way north on foot. They have no telephone because it would cost $4,300 to install.

The Hunts are one of the few couples to make it to Sunshine Valley. A salesman said 20,000 half-acre sections have been sold, but only 12 people live there.

Sunshine Valley and the adjoining Deming Ranchettes are marketed by Select Western Lands, but since selling began 15 years ago only about 400 homes have been built.

Critics of the recreation and retirement land business point to these developments as examples of land sales abuse.

The president of Select Western Land, Carter Kirk, disagreed.

"Every American wants to own land, it is something sacred. That means he'll always have a place to go if things get tough."

"All I ask is his cigarette money: $5 or $6 dollars down the same each month," Kirk said. "A lot of people bought the land just to say they owned a piece of the West, and never had any intention of coming here in the first place."

Few buyers are told that the land they are purchasing in Florida, the Southwest or other recreation areas is assessed at less than 5 per cent of what they are paying for it.

The new federal regulations that went into effect last December forbid the use of the word "investment" in advertising of installment-bought recreation land.

The record shows that few recreation developments grow as rapidly as the pretty brochures forecast. All of the 113,000 acres of the Golden Gate Estates near Naples, in southwestern Florida, were sold in a 10-year campaign. But only seven homes have been built there, and real estate agents say lots cannot be sold for any price.

Governor Holshouser, Mayor West Proclaims Week Of March 10-16 'Employ The Older Worker Week'

Emphasis Placed On Employing Older Workers

"Employ the Older Worker Week" begins today in North Carolina. In observing this week, the State Employment office in Greenville urges local employers to give special consideration to job applicants over 40 years old. The Employment Security Commission office has 1,088 applications from persons classified as "older workers," according to manager James E. Hannan. "There's a wealth of skill, talent, and experience in this group if employers will give them a chance."

Both Governor James Holshouser and Greenville Mayor, Eugene West, have signed proclamations proclaiming March 10-16 as "Employ the Older Worker Week."

Speaking about employment for older people, Hannan says "The Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act prohibits employer discrimination directed to older people if age is the only basis upon which the employer makes his decision."

"Our appeal to employers, however," Hannan added, "is not simply founded on this federal statute. We urge employers to hire older workers on the basis of their ability on the job."

Hannan said he finds that when 40 and 50-year-old workers are on the job, they are considered valuable employees, but if they become unemployed for some reason, the employer's attitude seems to change and they become reluctant to consider an applicant if he or she has reached middle age.

The Employment Security Commission reports that approximately 35 percent of the number of jobless workers filing claims for unemployment insurance benefits are over 40 years old, indicating the difficulty being experienced by older workers in their search for jobs.

The Employment Security Commission office, Hannan states, will give extra attention to placement of job applicants over 40 years old. "We want to bring community attention to the employment needs of the older persons in Greenville."

From July, 1973, through January of this year, 15 percent of new job applicants at State Employment Office in North Carolina have come from persons classified as older workers. The statewide figure runs to over 20,500 individuals.

Slightly over 11 percent of all State Employment Office job placements have been older workers, and about 12 percent of the job development contacts have been for older workers.

For more information interested persons are asked to contact Judy Long, the older worker specialist at the Employment Security Commission Office, 1002 S. Evans St., telephone 752-6146

'Sort Of A Truce' Temporarily Reigns In Belfast

By DONAL O'HIGGINS
BELFAST (UPI) — Brigid McGurrin nodded toward the battered trash can lying in her tiny front garden.

"Our bin-bashing days are over for the moment," she said. "I suppose you could call it a sort of a truce."

Her words reflected a gradual changing attitude in Roman Catholic ghetto areas towards the forces of law and order.

Another hint came when two British army Saracen armored cars drove into her street in Ballymurphy, a Catholic area of West Belfast.

Troops jumped out, sealed off a couple of houses and began a systematic search for arms and wanted men.

Six months ago a British search party would have touched off an uproar of whistle-blowing, feet stomping and the banging of trash-can lids, pots and pans.

Now Mrs. McGurrin and a cluster of women just stared, shrugged and went back to their chores.

"We have some sort of a stake in things now," Mrs. McGurrin said. Other housewives nodded agreement.

After more than four years of bombs, bullets and street brawls, weary residents of the city's working class areas are ready to clutch any hope of peace.

They see such a hope in the new political experiment in sharing power between the Protestant majority and the Roman Catholic minority.

"At least we are involved in some way," Mrs. McGurrin said. "It's no longer just a case of us and them."

This has not meant a total backing for the new Northern Ireland Executive, in which a coalition of Catholic and Protestant leaders are trying to cooperate in running the country.

Deep mistrust of the new setup is evident in ghettos of both religions, spurred by back street extremist propaganda. But there is a readiness to give the executive a chance to prove itself.

"It's a start toward something," Mrs. McGurrin said. "I can only pray that it will work."

To make it work, the Executive has to tackle centuries-old problems of bad housing, lack of jobs and social amenities—problems that have bred strife and despair, made immeasurably worse by years of economic sabotage by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) and other extremist groups.

Minister of Commerce John Hume, a Catholic member of the new Executive, saw this as the first priority.

"There is no use trying to tackle the problem of violence unless we first tackle the conditions that made it possible," he said.

One remaining reason for violence is internment without trial, still the greatest emotive factor feeding the ranks of the IRA.

Mrs. McGurrin remembers well when it began. Her small bedside clock said 4:15 a.m. when she heard the knock. She nudged her husband, John, and asked him to answer it.

"It must be important," she whispered.

Outside her small house stood a squad of soldiers. It was August 9, 1971. Internment had come to Northern Ireland.

Saracens roared into Catholic housing areas. Suspects were rooted out of bed, bundled into armored cars and dumped at three holding centers. In all, 370 men were rounded up that first night.

There was an immediate and terrifying reaction. Enraged Catholics hijacked buses, automobiles, burned houses, threw up barricades and battled troops with guns and gasoline bombs.

"We expected rioting," a British officer said, "but this is war."

Ever since, the policy of imprisoning men and women without trial has been the key factor in rallying support behind the provisional IRA.

No matter how much weary ghettos pleaded for peace, the cry: "Don't forget the men behind the wire" was sufficient to stifle protests.

Today they call it detention.

But the anger still remains.

At least 600 men and women are in detention. The release process has been speeded and the promise has been held out that an immediate end to violence would close the prison.

Hume and his colleagues believe ending detention would signal the end of working class support for the IRA.

"It's their greatest recruiting dynamo," Hume said. "Once it is ended, their emotional pull on the minority will end, too."

This split-level structure encloses two living units, each with two full-size bedrooms, utility space, and functional kitchen.

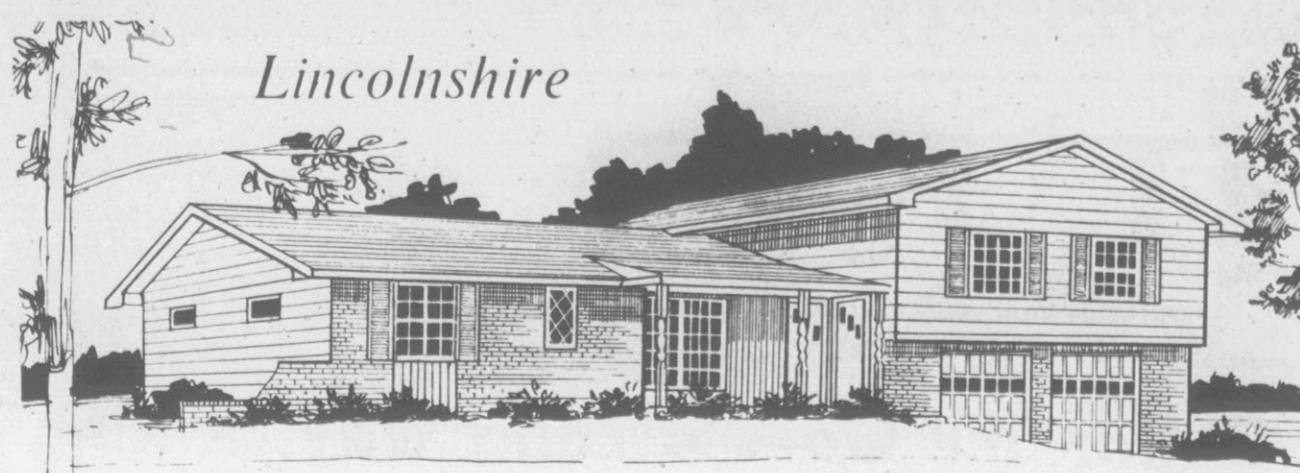

One unit, above the double garage, features a living and dining area which spans more than 20 feet. Other rooms are separated from the living area by a hallway. Two roomy bedrooms are at the front of the unit, with linen and storage opening onto the hallway between the bedrooms and bath. The large bath contains a utility area, with room for washer and dryer.

At the back of the unit, adjacent to the dining area, the kitchen opens onto a patio area.

The second unit, on the lower level of the "Lincolnshire," is also a two-bedroom plan. Here the living and dining rooms are separate, with utility area included at the rear of the dining area. The dining room is separated from the kitchen by a bar/wall containing a built-in oven.

The full bath opens onto the hallway, convenient to both bedrooms. The double garage under the first unit serves both families, with storage areas built at the rear and a terrace opening behind the storage units. The storage areas contain separate furnaces and hot water heaters.

It's still called sandpaper, but there's no sand in it. The misnomer probably comes from the appearance of flint paper, whose mineral particles resemble sand.

Surprisingly, considering the large number of power sanders in home and commercial workshops, hand sanding is still widely practiced. There are those who maintain that power sanding cannot produce the smooth results of sanding by hand, even though the use of an electric machine is faster and easier. This is a questionable theory, to say the least, but it's an undeniable fact that many craftsmen, especially the veterans, cling to hand sanding on the grounds that they can better control the kind of finish desired.

Amateurs who sand by hand have a tendency to purchase sandpaper in a rather haphazard fashion, although they generally recognize the differences between coarse and fine paper. The task of getting the right kind of paper was much more difficult years ago, when grades were designated only by numbers, and even then by different numbering codes according to the manufacturers of the products. Today, most manufacturers of sandpaper and abrasives in general use designations such as very coarse, coarse, medium, fine and very fine.

For a good smoothing job on fairly rough wood, the first sanding should be done with very coarse or coarse, the second with medium and the third with fine or very fine. Whether three sandings with different papers are necessary depends on the original smoothness of the wood that is to be worked.

Flint paper is still widely used. Its soft mineral characteristics make it less efficient in cutting action than other kinds, but it is cheaper. A harder and more superior product is garnet, good for both hand and machine sanding and especially effective on hardwood. Unlike flint and garnet, aluminum oxide and silicon carbide papers are not natural but the products of electric furnaces. Both are exceptionally hard and well suited for sanding machines.

There are various types of sanding blocks that can be used, but if you don't have one, a piece of wood will do. Sandpaper should be cut by tearing it, aided by a straightedge and a scoring tool, such as an awl. The cutting action of the abrasive can often be renewed by cleaning the surface with a wire brush or what is called a file card, sold in hardware stores.

When a very light pressure is all that is required, dispensing with a sanding block is sometimes practiced, making the operation true hand sanding. If you try this, keep the fingers close together and push the paper with the palm and fingers.

(The home handyman will find Andy Lang's booklet, "Practical Home Repairs," of great assistance. To get a copy, send $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

'Castle In Spain' May Be Yours

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Your dream castle in Spain is just that — a dream, something for the wealthy jet setters, not a middle income American family. Not necessarily so, according to Arthur D. Little, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.

"While wealthy Americans long have been buyers of vacation and retirement homes abroad, now their less affluent countrymen also are in the market," says Winslow Martin of the research firm.

"It's a combination of factors," he explains. "Jet travel, for one thing, has brought foreign real estate closer, made it more accessible. It also has made the cost of travel more attractive over the last decade. Another factor is the increased leisure time which Americans have today. A third thing is soaring real estate prices at popular U.S. resort areas, which only the wealthy can afford."

For this reason, Martin says, Americans with more modest incomes are looking abroad, buying villas, renovating castles, monasteries, churches, old farmhouses, lighthouses, and, particularly, buying condominiums.

Condominium Most Popular
The fastest growing segment of the foreign vacation-retirement home market, a Little study found, is the condominium priced from $10,000 to $50,000. "The most popular developments are in Spain and Portugal," Martin said, "although Ireland, the Canary Islands, the Caribbean Islands and the northern coast of South America have their share of American buyers."

"In these locations," he said, "vacationers and retirees find an ideal climate and a living cost that is relatively low, of particular interest to those on pensions."

Most of the condominium developments are part of an "urbanization" or "international community," first conceived to attract middle income European families, Martin explained. These communities, largely self-sufficient with shops, restaurants and extensive recreational facilities, are being built by a number of developers who sell through local and foreign real estate agents.

Developers often rent and manage apartments for absentee owners through a director who lives on the premises. Often, Martin said, developers have two, three or five-year contracts with airlines or other tour wholesalers who provide rented apartments as part of a package plan.

He stressed, however, "prospective buyers should be aware that the term 'guaranteed rental' may have considerable ambiguity in practice."

See Property First
The Little study found promotion of these developments has become considerably more sophisticated than the initial efforts which generally were aimed at vacationers already on the scene. Several developers, Martin said, have established relationships with American and other foreign real estate firms who conduct extensive advertising campaigns. Although it is possible to buy property sight unseen, it is unwise to do so. The buyer should beware in any real estate transaction, and particularly one where he may be unfamiliar with the area, the customs and where he may not plan to be on the scene himself all the time but have to rely on others.

Many developers and real estate agents offer all-expense tours for prospective buyers to inspect properties, these aimed at prospects in the middle income brackets. Martin said, "One firm estimates about 70 per cent of its clientele earns between $15,000 and $18,000 a year."

Borrow at Home
Until recently, Martin said, it was difficult for an American to get a mortgage for foreign property. Now, many of the new condominium and villa developers do their own financing and, in some countries, qualifications have been eased for financing a conventional residence purchase.

"While mortgage terms vary from country to country," he explained, "most European mortgages are written for only 50 to 70 per cent of the selling price. Interest rates often are as high as 14 per cent, and terms only from three to 10 years."

It may, he said, be wise for Americans to finance their purchase with a personal loan from a bank at home, where terms and rates may be more reasonable.

Martin said some countries encourage foreign investment in real estate. "Spain's tremendous popularity is partly attributable to its low property tax and uncomplicated legal arrangements. Under the present government, foreign property owners have the same rights as Spanish citizens."

"On the other hand, some countries actively discourage all foreign property buyers. France is known for its legal complexities and high transfer and property taxes that discourage less affluent buyers."

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q — I am having a house built under an arrangement whereby certain parts of the interior will be left undone so that I can do them myself and save part of the cost. Under the agreement, the inside walls of the basement are to be left in their natural masonry state. The builder suggests that they be covered with Portland cement paint. Can I use any other brand of cement paint? And is there anything special I should know about the application of the paint?

A — Portland cement is not a brand name, but a type of cement. For your purpose, use that type, as recommended by the builder. It is ready for use by adding water and mixing according to the manufacturer's directions. It should not be applied with an ordinary paint brush, but with a scrub brush or special brush made for the purpose. The first coat should be scrubbed on the walls to fill the pores and completely seal the surface. The second coat provides extra sealing and can be in a decorative color. Do not paint the walls for at least a month or two after the house is built.

The Portland cement paint should be cured the same as with concrete; that is, it should be wet down for several days after it is applied. Do this about twice a day after each coat is put on. This curing procedure enables the paint to harden thoroughly.

Q — I'm thinking about having aluminum siding installed over the wood siding on the outside of our house. Will this provide extra insulation as well as a new surface?

A — Yes, especially if you get the kind which has plastic foam insulation on the underside of the siding.

Q — There are open studs on the inside of our garage. I'd like to place lots of small shelves between the studs so that the objects on the shelves aren't exposed. I'm considering some kind of sliding doors. Will this be practical?

A — Not very, although it can be done. An easier way to handle the problem is to hang bamboo blinds that can be quickly drawn up and down as desired.

Q — How long does it take alkyd resin paint to dry before a second coat can be applied?

A — About 24 hours. But why not read the label instructions, which nearly always give you that information?

Q — I painted a room a few weeks ago. Now there are small marks at certain places on the walls. My neighbor says this condition is known as checking and that it comes from putting on a second coat before the first one is dry. Is this correct?

A — That's the most common cause. If you decide to repaint, be sure to sandpaper the affected areas first.

DANGER OF WRONG PRICING

Since human nature is predictable, there is a better chance than you'll put the wrong selling price on your home if you arrive at it yourself.

You may price it far above its fair market value because of sentimental attachment, expenditures you have made, or by heeding a well-meaning friend's advice. A home remaining on the market for months due to over-pricing, frequently becomes a "White Elephant." It eventually sells for a much lower figure than it would have brought originally — had it been priced realistically.

On the other hand, you might under-price it because of unfamiliarity with the local market. This would be financial folly. Your safest bet is to list your home with a Realtor who will help you price it correctly from the start and sell it for the best profit.

Effective Program For Alcoholic Workers' Seeing Gains On Mar. 15

Extended area telephone service between Farmville-Fountain and Farmville-Greenville will become effective on March 15, at 12:01 a.m.

Don A. Collier, District Commercial Manager for Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, said today that with extended area service telephone subscribers in Greenville, Farmville, and Fountain will have access to additional telephones without long distance charges.

In a poll conducted among the subscribers here by the telephone company, a majority of those voting favored the plan. With the extended area plan, subscribers in these three towns will pay slightly higher local service rates rather than long distance charges for calls between the towns.

"Inauguration of the new service required approval of the North Carolina Utilities Commission, plus installation of additional telephone facilities," Collier said.

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

During the past two years, remarkable improvement has occurred in one of the most critical problems affecting American industry—the nine million alcoholics in the work force.

Much of this improvement is directly due to the East Carolina University-based National Occupational Alcoholism Training Institute (NOATI), which trains special consultants to work with persons whose alcohol addiction affects their work performance.

At present, 112 occupational program consultants have been trained by NOATI to work with industries and government agencies in 19 states.

NOATI, the result of a joint effort between ECU's Division of Continuing Education and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, a division of HEW, has produced 210 hours of specialized training using experts from the fields of alcoholism, industry, labor and government.

Training institutes have been held in Pinehurst, San Francisco, San Antonio, Tex. and New Orleans. The trainees include at least two persons from each state who have been specifically prepared to work with businesses and industries in the establishment of employee assistance programs for employees whose work performance has deteriorated due to drug abuse, alcohol abuse, marital conflict or other medical behavioral problems.

NOATI Coordinator Brayom

Anderson said more than 300 U.S. companies now have written policies providing on-the-job help to thousands of employees.

In 1971, a Wall Street Journal survey indicated that only 25 companies had such policies. Perhaps the greatest impetus in the formation of NOATI was a 1971 Congressional report on alcohol and health which affirmed that U.S. industries were losing at least $10 billion each year because of the poor job performance of approximately nine million alcoholic workers.

At the New Orleans institute last month, Dr. Morris Chafetz, NIAAA director, praised the high quality of the NOATI training sessions and the work of the 112 trainees.

"From this good foundation," said Chafetz, "we hope to train a sufficient staff of consultants so that every American industry and state and local government might be given the opportunity of developing an employee assistance program for their employees."

ECU developed its NOATI program with the help of personnel executives from General Motors Corp., ITT, General Electric Co., Hughes Aircraft Co.; mental health agencies in Ohio, Connecticut and Tennessee; the AFL-CIO; and educators from two New York universities as well as the School of Allied Health at ECU.

Meeting On Tues. Night

Richard Kiernan, temporary chairman of the Greenville Bicentennial Committee, announced that a public meeting will be held Tuesday night at the Third Street Elementary School on W. Third Street.

Kiernan, who reported that the public session will begin at 7:30 p.m., said that the purpose of the meeting is to hear final plans for the city bicentennial celebration, scheduled for a week in September.

He added that those present will have the opportunity to vote on the proposals to be made by the Rogers Company, celebrations specialist who are being considered to handle the affair, including the budget for the celebration.

In addition, Kiernan noted that five Greenville citizens will be selected from the attending delegation as trustees to incorporate the celebration.

The keys to economy in water heaters are in your selection and your installation of this important appliance. Water heaters are available in two basic models—round and square. The standard round model can be used anywhere in the house. The square type is designed to fit in kitchen-cabinet areas.

how to select a water heater

Depending on its location, a water heater may be jacketed in an enamel covering or placed in a cabinet that harmonizes with its surroundings. If the water heater is to be hidden from view—in a closet or under the stairs, for instance—it may be installed jacketless, with wire mesh surrounding the tank to hold insulation in place. This model obviously costs less.

Family Size	Heater Size
1 to 3	50-gallon
4 to 7	80-gallon
7 or more	100-gallon

Another way to help determine the right-size electric water heater for your family is to examine your specific hot-water needs. The table below gives the average amounts of hot water used in common household routines:

Average Use	Gallons of Hot Water
Tub bath	10-15
Shower bath	8-12
Baby bath	5
Meal preparation	3
Dishwashing (hand)	8
Clothes-washing (automatic)	18

Locate your water heater as close as possible to the place of greatest use. This saves you long pipe runs, which lose heat. If it's impractical to move your water heater, insulate your hot water pipes. If locations of hot water need are widely separated, it may be economical to install a second water heater.

For her program, Miss Reithmaier has listed four works—the Mozart Sonata in B-flat Major, K.333; Schumann's Kreisleriana, Opus 16 (a set of eight extended fantasy pieces); Anton Webern's Variationen fur Klavier, Opus 27; and the Bach-Busoni Chaconne in D Minor.

Casals Festival Lives

SAN JUAN, P. R. (UPI) — A committee set up by the late Pablo Casals before his death will carry on San Juan's 17-year-old Festival Casals and has dedicated several programs of the 1974 event to the famed cellist's memory.

The festival will run from June 4 through June 22 at the theater of the University of Puerto Rico in Rio Piedras.

across this magnificent country with his life-long friend, the Reverend Joe Twichell. This effort is culminated in Dick Reddy's film, Mark Twain in Switzerland.

Reddy will personally narrate this travel film on Wednesday, March 13, at 8:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. The program is under the sponsorship of The Student Union Lecture Series Committee and is another feature of the Travel-Adventure Film Series.

Reddy will take his audience on a boat ride across Lake Lucern to Weggis where Mark Twain's Villa still exists. He lived here for two months.

At Lucern, the famous walking trip across Switzerland with Joe Twichell begins. The sights around Lucern are visited, viewing them through Mark Twain's eyes and words.

The journey from Lucern to Interlaken over the Brunig Pass are captured. Here we see lake and mountain scenes, country children selling apples, and St. Nicholas Church.

From Interlaken to Kandersteg Reddy traces Mark Twain's trail with views of the Blumli Alps, Blauee (Blue Lake) with its abundance of black trout, Kandersteg, the Gasterthal Valley, and the "Alpine Floral Calendar en route to the Gemmi Pass.

On his journey Twain visited the famous baths of Lorain and the Matterhorn. The story of the Whymper expedition and the tragedy is told. On a visit to Hugh Glacier, Mark tells the incredible story of a glacier accident.

The film concludes with scenes of Switzerland and with Mark Twain writing a letter to Joe Twichell sentimentally reviewing their month together as vagabonds in Switzerland.

The film has broad appeal and should please old and young alike. Tickets for the March 13 performance are on sale in the East Carolina University Central Ticket Office and are priced at $1.00.

ECKANKAR Film Monday

A lecture film narrated by the Voice of the Master of ECKANKAR, Sri Darwin Gross, will be shown Monday, March 11, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Room 201, Student Union Building, on campus at East Carolina University. The color film will last about 20 minutes.

David Hendrickson of Greenville, coordinator for presenting the film, explains that ECKANKAR is based on the ancient science of total awareness. He said this doctrine was brought to public attention in recent times in 1965 by Paul Twichell of California. Referring to the role of the living master, Hendrickson said "the ECK Master functions both as master of the physical or outer world and as master of the inner world."

The film is designed to explain ECKANKAR, according to Hendrickson, and he will be present to answer questions in a question and answer session to follow the film. Persons who are interested but not able to attend the film can contact Hendrickson by writing him at Rt. 3, Box 65, Lot 7, Greenville, N. C. 27834.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

A Show Of Ceramics

The Mushroom Gallery downtown, which has consistently been a showcase for exhibitions of ceramics, again has an excellent pottery show on view for the month of March. John Page, Fayetteville native currently working as an instructor at the Community Crafts of Chapel Hill and the Allied Arts of Durham, has a varied collection of pots, bowls, planters, vases, jars and miscellaneous items on view.

Page works in a wide range of basic shapes, from simple small bowls to tall slender square vases. For most pieces, he relies on texture and glazes for decorative effect. An occasional piece is more ornate, with built-up surfaces altering the smooth or flat walls of clay.

Page is a 1972 graduate of the School of Art, East Carolina University. He studied with Paul Minnis and Charles Chamberlain.

This exhibit is another opportunity to see what is being done today in the field of individual hand-crafted pieces of ceramics. There's a growing number of creative potters working actively in North Carolina. John Page is one who can be counted among the most talented of this group.

A Review — A Woman's View Of Coon Dogs

One of The Raymonds, by Jean Rikhoff. New York, The Dial Press, 1974. 370 pps, $8.95.

Jean Rikhoff's new novel, One of The Raymonds is a projected trilogy about the lives of two families during the 19th and 20th Centuries. The novel is also the current Book-of-the Month Club Alternate.

Every word of this long and gripping novel struggles to give Mason Raymond Butts, a 15-year old, city-educated boy, the right to become what he thinks is a man, which means banishing his books forever and planting his feet firmly in the world of nature. Although the setting for this story ranges from Northern New York state (during the reconstruction period) to Asheville, North Carolina, Jean Rikhoff has used a Southern dialogue that one might speak around any riverside landing or country store in modern Eastern North Carolina. She uses coon, coonhound and coonhunter without quotes or apostrophe.

The bit of history interjected here and there whispers to the reader, "remember, this is just after the Civil War." Thankfully it isn't loud enough to muffle the pathetic cries of Mason Raymond lost in a freezing woods or the affectionate whines of his Hector, a coonhound and gift from his uncle.

That love can be a smothering, destroying force is handled daringly in this novel, not only that of a half-crazy mother, but also of a boy's supersensitive and delicate regard for all creatures of the wilderness. Lost, he stumbles through the woods believing gentlemen never kill. But soon he learns that a starving man sheds blood—kills the living so the living can live a while longer.

Two worlds are stubbornly rotating on every page—one of books; the other, a primitive, earthy existence, and, though the attempt is made, the two never merge. Dragging The Iliad through a swamp of flickering lanterns, "toted" by natural, life-long coonhunters, amid howling hounds and hooting owls, taxes the imagination of this author, and occasionally overtaxes it, too.

It is obvious that Jean Rikhoff favored the Greeks in her own education, that she has never stood beside a 15 year old boy after he'd taken this first chew of tobacco: "The taste was sharp and acrid, like something bad had happened to his mouth; but presently his numbness began to lift a little, as if the tobacco were some kind of strange agent that worked in his blood giving it energy and confidence."

Then there is an astounding account of Mason Raymond capturing a live coon high in a tree at night. With his lantern and a stick of candy, the boy shins up the tree, eases himself out on a limb, and offers the coon the candy. Hesitating a moment, the coon takes it into its "human-like hands" and turns it over before licking away. Mason Raymond slips a bag over its head, trapping the coon.

Other than these two unlikely happenings, which must have come from the bragging side of some old retired coonhunter in need of a quiet laugh, the hunts are solid, like the hunters whom Mason Raymond seeks to emulate.

A constant thread woven into this novel shows how frustrating life becomes when one makes conscious efforts to narrow his "city-educated" mind; the primitive from which he came is lost forever. There is also the discovery that getting back to nature is not just returning to the simple things of life.

With the help of the books the boy takes to the swamp, he finds a world much more complicated and awesome than that of the great teachers and coonhunters he has ever known. He discovers "the Great Single Eye" (God) in every animal, tree, and under every rotten log. To become a man one must not handle nature as a thin-shelled egg in trembling hands. She must be embraced heartily. She endures.

The novel ends amid the rolling echoes of a shotgun blast—two acts of euthanasia. Mason Raymond holds the smoking gun, staring down on the beargutted uncle and hound whom he and I loved dearly. Echoing, too, in my mind, is the fact that Jean Rikhoff, a woman, invaded the muddy, coon-hunting man's world and came out shining in her efforts. Other than the two questionable events mentioned earlier, it was fine reading. And perhaps she's perfectly safe, for what tobacco-chewing, coon-hunting man would spend his time reading a novel anyway.

Tom Forbes
Editor's Note: Forbes is a farmer, an award winning writer of short stories, and a dedicated coon hunter.

Ihrle, Arnold In Tarboro, Wilson Shows

Two out of town art shows of interest to local area residents are now on view in Tarboro and Wilson.

At the public library in Tarboro, the current exhibit is a collection of paintings by ECU School of Art graduate Ralph Ihrle. A Louisburg native, Ihrle showed extensively in Greenville during his student days—at the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, at The Daily Reflector lounge, and in other shows. He is primarily a realist landscape painter.

In Wilson, at Atlantic Christian College, the March show is a one-man exhibit of recent works by Russell W. Arnold, chairman of the ACC Department of Arts.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

BY LINDA M. STANCLIL

The mysterious and fascinating realm of the unknown has attracted writers and readers for centuries. The following books are a mere sample of the available material on debatable subjects of the unknown.

Major Donald E. Keyhoe explores the UFO controversy in Aliens From Space, The Real Story of Unidentified Flying Objects. The author of many previous books on UFOs, Keyhoe presents a wealth of new and carefully documented information which raises many staggering questions about the entire UFO controversy. In revealing proof of the Air Force and CIA efforts to hide the truth from the public, he builds a convincing case for the existence of "flying saucers" and connects them with unexplained phenomena like the Great Blackout of 1965. Keyhoe's purpose is to inform rather than alarm, for he believes that any aggressive intentions by UFOs would have been demonstrated by now, with devastating results. Presenting evidence that we on earth have been under observation by alien intelligence for centuries, he demands that the public be informed so that it can prepare for the inevitable visit from inter-terrestrial beings.

Another phase of the unknown is explored by Hans Holzer in The Truth About ESP. He explains what it is, how it works, and how you can develop it. According to Holzer ESP is not a power reserved for crystal-ball gazers, gypsies, or believers in the occult, but a power latent in each one of us. He believes that every man, woman and child has the ability to obtain information beyond the limitations of the time-space continuum. In The Truth About ESP he tells how to develop your ESP powers, to time in on future events, send messages mind to mind across distances, even communicate with the next dimension. Through twenty years of intensive research in the field, Hozor offers hundreds of case histories dealing with psychic phenomena reported by housewives, teachers, clergymen, laborers, old people and children. He provides test sheets for professional and layman alike to determine one's ESP potential.

The spiritual world is revealed in A Gallery of Ghosts edited by Andrew MacKenzie. An anthology of reported experiences by eminent writers, it contains 19 documented accounts of paranormal events. MacKenzie presents many hitherto unpublished supernatural stories from his own collection along with writings that have appeared elsewhere. His notes on each author in the anthology offer valuable background information on their interest in the paranormal, the interesting features of each reported meeting with a spirit and such intriguing similarities as the observation that ghosts have been frequently reported to be guardians of hidden treasure. He discusses the likeness and unlikeness of the various episodes, looks at the possibility of natural explanations and indicates where these do not seem to be adequate. The result is fascinating narrative and critical appraisal.

Weiskopf, Devlin Tie For Doral Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Tom Weiskopf and Australian Bruce Devlin slipped into a tie for the lead after front-running Jerry Heard made a watery doublebogey five Saturday in the third round of the $150,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

Weiskopf, winner of the British Open and six other titles last season, had the lead alone until he bogeyed the final hole for a three-under-par 69 and a 203 total. 13 under par on the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

The skinny Devlin grabbed his share of the lead with a five-under-par 67.

Heard, a front-running winner in Orlando, Fla., last week and the leader all the way in this tourney, made double-bogey five after hitting into the water on the ninth hole and dropped two strokes behind with 72-205. It was the first time in eight rounds that the easy-going 26-year-old had failed to shoot in the 60s.

"Not too good today," said Heard with a shrug.

He was tied at 11 under par with Buddy Allin, who shot a 68.

Bruce Crampton, who had a hole in one of the fourth hole, and big Bobby Nichols followed at 206. 10 under par and just three off the lead going into the last round of this chase for a $30,000 first prize.

Crampton, winner of four titles last season, had a 67 and Nichols shot 69.

Lee Trevino, the defending champion who is plagued with putting troubles, dropped back with a 72 in the mild, partly cloudy weather.

"I putted like a dog," Trevino said. "My putter's just not there. It happened to Arnold (Palmer) two or three years ago. Maybe it's gonna happen to me now."

Jack Nicklaus improved to a 66 but still remained well back with a 209 total. Sam Snead, a 61-year-old marvel who ranked as the sentimental favorite, had a 71-213.

Heard, who led or shared the lead in the last six rounds going back to last week, held a one-stroke advantage when he went to the ninth tee. He promptly pumped it into the water to the back and left of the green, made five and was out of the top spot.

Weiskopf also got two of them wet, but his remarkable putting allowed him to get away with the loss of only a single stroke. He put in the water on the fourth hole, chipped to about 15 feet and made the putt for a bogey.

On the eighth, a par five, he put his second in a lake but got on with the next shot and again holed from 15 feet, this time for a par.

He also holed a 15-footer for a birdie, twice pitched inside of four feet for birdies, edged to eight feet for birdie on the 14th then took the lead alone with a 30-foot birdie putt on the 17th.

Pitt Tops St. Joe

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Mickey Martin scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half as 14th-ranked Pittsburgh overcame St. Joseph's deliberate style and beat the Hawks 54-42 Saturday night in a first-round National Collegiate Athletic Association Eastern Regional basketball game.

Marquette Bridges Ohio U. By 85-59

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Maurice Lucas poured in 18 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead 11th-ranked Marquette past Ohio University 85-59 Saturday in the opening game of the NCAA Midwest Regional first round playoffs.

Second-ranked Notre Dame met Ohio Valley Conference cowinner Austin Peay in the second game of the nationally televised basketball doubleheader.

Marquette led 37-28 at the half as Ohio refused to wilt against constant pressure. But the Warriors outscored the Mid-American Conference champion Bobcats 22-9 to take a 59-37 lead with 12:43 remaining in the game and were never pressed in winning their 23rd game against four losses.

The victory gave Marquette a berth in Thursday's Midwest Regional semifinals at Tuscaloosa, Ala., the fourth consecutive year the Warriors have advanced to that level.

Freshman Maurice "Bo" Ellis and Earl Tatum each added 16 points for Marquette, while Ohio's sophomore guard Walter Luckett scored 14 to lead the Bobcats, who closed out the season with a 16-11 record.

The Marquette victory was a virtual carbon copy of a 73-49 shellacking of Ohio in the first round of the NCAA tournament two years ago. The Ohioans hurt their own cause badly in the second half with 12 turnovers.

Notre Dame Stomps Austin Peay, 108-66

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Gary Brokaw pumped in 25 points and John Shumate and Adrian Dantley added 22 apiece Saturday as second-ranked Notre Dame took apart Austin Peay 108-66 in first-round action of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Midwest Regional basketball tournament.

The Irish join Marquette, which walloped Ohio University 85-59 in the opening game of the nationally televised doubleheader, in moving on to the semifinal round of the NCAA tourney at Tuscaloosa, Ala., Thursday night.

The Irish poured in 25 of 40 field goals in the first half as they moved to a 54-34 lead at intermission. Brokaw, a 6-foot-3 junior guard was the big gun in that spurt, connecting for 21 of his game total.

Sophomore Fly Williams of Austin Peay, one of the nation's leading scorers, scored 26 points to lead the Governors, but was held to only eight in the second half by

The Irish continued the onslaught in the early part of the second half, outscoring the Ohio Valley Conference co-titlist 25-9 to raise the margin to 79-43. That's when Irish coach Digger Phelps and Governor coach Lake Kelly began to clear their benches.

Notre Dame is scheduled to play the winner of Monday's Big Ten championship playoff between Indiana and Michigan at Tuscaloosa, while Marquette will meet Vanderbilt.

The Irish are making their first appearance in the NCAA regionals since 1971 when they lost to Drake in the first round. It's the 11th time Notre Dame has played in the post-season tournament.

Notre Dame, which had a 12-game winning string broken at Dayton last Monday, raised its season record to 25-2, while Austin Peay closed its season at 17-10.

Decision On ECU Cage Future Monday?

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The fate of the East Carolina University basketball program appeared to be in limbo over the weekend, although there was an unconfirmed report that Assistant Coach Dave Patton would be named to replace Tom Quinn early this week.

Stasavich, East Carolina athletic director said that he and faculty athletic chairman Cliff Moore were to meet with Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, chancellor of the university on Monday. "At that time, we will see where we will go," he said.

"We are going to give first consideration to the university on the two assistants on our present staff first, but if that proves unsatisfactory, we will proceed elsewhere," Stasavich said. Presumably, if either Patton or George (Butch) Estes, the other assistant, is not picked, a committee would be formed to select a new coach, as was done in picking Pat Dye to replace Sonny Randle in football.

The vacancy in the basketball head coaching position came Friday morning when Stasavich announced that the athletic council of the university had recommended to Dr. Jenkins that the final year of Tom Quinn's contract be bought up and that he be relieved from his duties as head coach. That recommendation was approved by Dr. Jenkins and the faculty athletic committee during the morning.

thus releasing Quinn from his eight-year post with the basketball program.

An unconfirmed report reaching the Daily Reflector Saturday was that it was likely that the job would be offered to Patton. The source of the report asked not to be named, and officials of the university had no comment on the report, nor did Patton.

The source said that it was likely that the announcement could come as early as Monday.

Quinn's firing came amid a week-long rumor session that he would be replaced. He admitted yesterday that prior to the Southern Conference Tournament he had been told that the basketball program would be up for review following the tournament.

Quinn was asked following the team's upset loss to William & Mary if he thought his job was in jeopardy, and he told The Daily Reflector that he did not think so. "But I guess this is an occupational hazard," he said yesterday after being told that he would not return next season.

The new coach, regardless of who he is, will inherit a large group of returning lettermen, as 10 of the 12 players from last season's team are eligible for play next year. Quinn used a system of play this season that shuffled in 10 men into the line for a great deal of play in nearly every game, and despite the fact that he had only three returning lettermen at the start of the year, nearly every player got a great deal of experience this year.

Just two men graduate from the team, Nicky White and Roger Atkinson.

It was also generally felt that the Pirates had the best recruiting year in the Southern Conference last spring. In post-season honors, White was named to the All-Southern team, in third place in the vote-getting, while Reggie Lee was named to the All-Freshman team after receiving honorable mention All-Conference.

During his eight-year tenure at the Pirate helm, Quinn's teams won 102 games and lost 104. His first two years, however, were the only bad ones he had as he attempted to lift the program onto its feet. Since then, his teams had won at least 13 games every year. His third year, a 17-11 finish, was his best and earned him Coach of the Year honors in the Southern Conference.

The highlight of his career with the Pirates came in 1971-72, when his team finished third in the Conference then went on to upset both Davidson and Furman in the tournament and win the lone Southern Conference crown claimed by the Bucs. East Carolina, in its lone NCAA tournament venture that year, lost in the first round to Villanova.

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — Nationally top-ranked North Carolina State struggled past Maryland, 103-100, in an overtime thriller to win the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball championship Saturday night and clinch a berth in the NCAA Eastern Regional tournament opening Thursday on the State Wolfpack court in Raleigh.

Parttime starter Phil Spence's layup with 2:04 left in overtime put N. C. State ahead and there was no more scoring until 5-7 Monte Towe hit two freethrows with six seconds to play to clinch State's 24th straight victory in the highest scoring tournament game in ACC history.

N. C. State now has a 26-1 record and has beaten ACC teams 32 in a row.

Maryland, ranked 4th nationally, is 23-5, three losses coming at the hands of N. C. State. The Terrapins, their 11-game winning streak broken, were expected to receive a bid to play in the National Invitation Tournament opening next Saturday in New York.

Coach Norman Sloan's State team had to overcome an early 13-point deficit as Maryland's sharpshooting and aggressive defense produced a 25-12 lead after six minutes.

Maryland finished the half with a 55-50 lead despite 21 points by State's All-American David Thompson, who wound up with 29 points.

His 7-4 teammate, Tom Burleson, poured in 22 of his season high 38 points in the second half to lead the Wolfpack rally and win the outstanding player award in a vote of coaches.

The regulation game ended 97-91 as Len Elmore scored for Maryland with 1:11 remaining.

Each team took two timeouts in the frantic maneuvering during the final 57 seconds of regulation play. John Lucas tried to beat the clock with a 25-footer that was short.

Burleson, hitting often with his hook shots, connected on 18 of 25 shots and picked off 13 rebounds. Thompson hit 10 of 24 for his 29 points and Towe added 17.

Only Owen Brown of the Maryland starters failed to play the full 45 minutes. He fouled out late in the game after drawing three in the first half guarding Thompson.

Mo Howard and Tom McMillen each had 22 points and Lucas and Elmore each scored 18 for the Terps. Elmore also led their rebounding with 13.

N. C. State shot 61 per cent for an overall 55 figure. Maryland finished at 61 after hitting 63.4 in the first half, the third straight half in the tournament in which Maryland had shot better than 60 per cent.

Oral Roberts Nips Orange In Overtime

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENTON, Tex. (AP) — Guard Sam McCants scored two crucial free throws with nine seconds left to play in overtime Saturday night to give hard-pressed Oral Roberts an 86-82 victory over Syracuse and a ticket to the NCAA Midwest basketball regional playoffs.

Oral Roberts will play Missouri Valley Conference champion Louisville on the Titans home court in Tulsa Thursday night.

Texas met Creighton in the second game of the pre-regional doubleheader.

Syracuse, which finished the season 19-7, missed a chance to win the game in regulation play when forward Rudy Hackett failed to connect on two free throws with 17 seconds left to play.

Totan coach Ken Trickey called time out twice to jangle Hackett's nerves. The regulation game ended tied 74-all as Duane Fox of Oral Roberts missed a jump shot at the buzzer.

Fox hit a short jump shot in the first seconds of the overtime and Oral Roberts, which will carry a 22-5 record in the regional playoffs, never trailed from that point.

The hard-luck Hackett missed free throws twice on one-and-one situations which would have pulled the Orangemen close.

With the score 84-82, McCants made two free throws after being fouled by Dennis DuVal, who led Syracuse with 28 points.

McCants was high point man for the Titans with 25 tallies.

Syracuse led by as much as seven points on three different occasions in the first half, which ended with ORU leading 43-41.

DuVal kept Syracuse alive with his deadly gunning in the second half, making four consecutive field goals in one stretch. Oral Roberts kept itself in trouble with six goaltending violations.

Heels Will Take A Bid

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — North Carolina basketball Coach Dean Smith said Saturday his sixth-ranked Tar Heels have voted to accept a bid to the National Invitational Tournament if one is received. Smith said the vote followed Friday night's 105-85 loss to fourth-ranked Maryland in the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

The Tar Heels are expected to receive a bid to the tournament, which begins Saturday in New York. With the loss to Maryland, they are ineligible for competition in the NCAA championships.

No invitation had been received by Saturday afternoon, he said.

Furman Rally Tops Gamecocks By 75-67

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Underdog Furman, trailing by 12 points in the second half, rallied behind Clyde Mayes and Bruce Grimm to upset South Carolina 75-67 Saturday night in the opening round of the NCAA Eastern Regional basketball playoffs.

The victorious Southern Conference champions, now 22-7, will travel to Raleigh, N. C., next Thursday to face Pittsburgh, a 54-42 winner over St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania.

Furman led 39-38 at halftime, but South Carolina, now 22-5, hit six of their first eight shots to open the second half and outscored the Paladins 15-2, rolling up a 54-42 lead with 14:41 left.

The 6-foot-9 Mayes, a junior, then sparked a Furman rally and his steal and breakaway layup brought the Paladins to within 57-56 with 9:19 to play.

Sophomore Craig Lynch and freshman Grimm boosted Furman to a 64-59 lead with 5:19 remaining. After a Brian Winters' jumper for the Gamecocks, Grimm scored three points and Mayes two more to put the game out of reach.

Winters led all scorers with 22 points, while Freshman Nate Davis added 16 for South Carolina. Mayes had 21 and Grimm 19 for the Paladins.

coached at Druid Hills High School in Atlanta, Ga., where his last team went 19-8 and was a finalist in the Georgia state tournament.

Estes, who joined the ECU staff a year ago, was a standout at High Point High School and played for the University of North Carolina, where he also served as an assistant coach.

Following his freshman year at UNC, he became an assistant with the Tar Babies. Following his graduation, he served as an assistant with The Citadel, where his two freshmen teams won the most games in the history of the school, and beat South Carolina for the first time ever.

Both Moore and Stasavich said that they hoped that the vacancy can be filled quickly since this is the height of the recruiting season. The national letter of intent signing date is in mid-April, and the school hopes that by acting quickly, the Bucs will be able to have as good a year in recruiting as they had during the previous one.

A graduate of Georgia Southern, Patton entered the coaching ranks as an assistant at Abraham Baldwin Junior College, and three years later moved on to Dekalb College. Two years later, he returned to Georgia Southern as an assistant.

Veteran Trio Sits On Front

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — A.J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford and Bobby Unser, a trio of hard-nosed veterans, hold the front row spots for Sunday's $300,000 California 500-mile championship auto race.

Each has his own idea about how this first 1974 outing for Indianapolis-type racers will go. But the key word for all three is victory.

"Foyt has the speed," said Unser and Rutherford. "He came up with the fastest car, no doubt about that. But speed alone won't do the job. You gotta have a game plan."

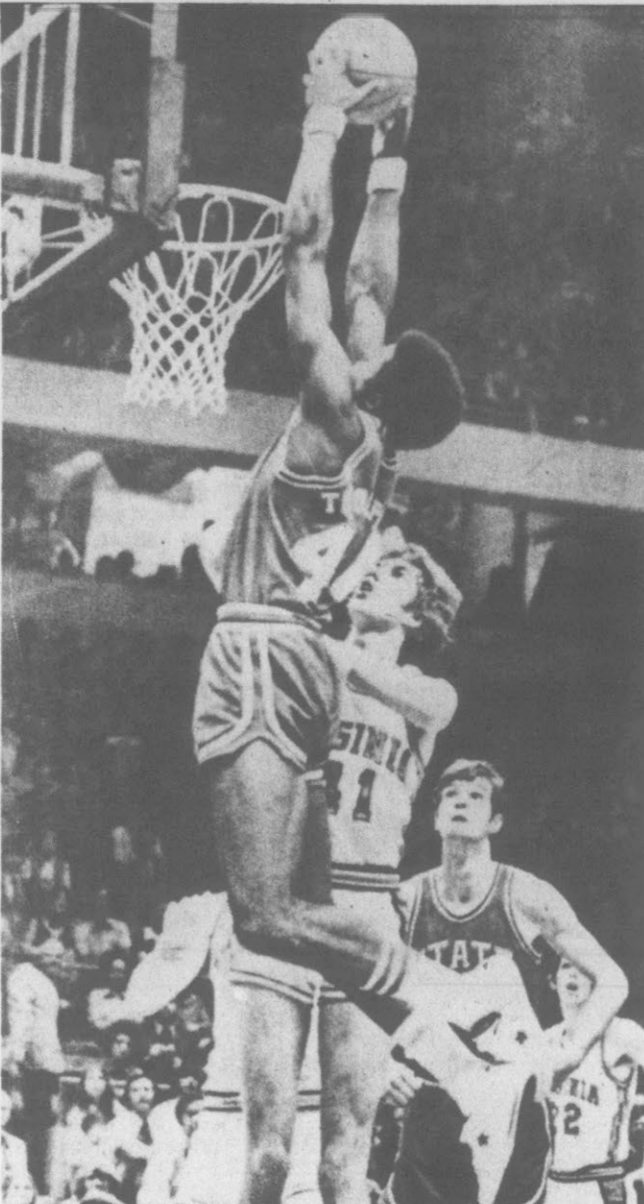

The 200-lap marathon around the 2 1/2-mile Ontario Motor Speedway will have a field of 33 cars, including all four previous California 500 winners, plus five former Indianapolis 500 champions.

In addition to the $300,000 purse, which allocates $40,000 plus accessory and contingency money to the winner, there is $50,000 in lap prize money — $250 to the leader of each lap.

All of the front row sitters admit that any "game plan" for the race revolves around new fuel regulations that go into effect at this race.

Each driver will be restricted to 280 gallons of fuel — down 60 gallons from last September, when the cars last raced at Ontario. Therefore, to go the distance, the turbocharged engines must produce at least 1.7 miles per gallon.

Few of them did that in practice, qualifying or the two 100-milers last Sunday that determined starting positions. Several drivers ran out of fuel during the 100-mile dashes, when the allocation was 57 gallons.

From Wire Reports
GREENSBORO—Last night's Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament finals between North Carolina State and Maryland might have, for intensity and rivalry, made the NCAA finals look anticlimactic.

Both the nationally top-ranked N. C. State Wolfpack and the 4th ranked Terrapins displayed impressive strength Friday night in semi-final victories.

N. C. State, with David Thompson scoring 37 points, whipped Virginia 87-66. Maryland was "awesome" in blitzing sixth ranked North Carolina, 105-85.

A berth in the NCAA Eastern Regionals and a whole lot of pride and prestige were on the line when the two bitter rivals clashed for the ACC title.

If the Wolfpack won, Maryland will almost certainly get a bid to the National Invitational Tournament in New York, but the same doesn't apply if the Terps won.

being played this year on N. C. State's campus, making the Wolfpack ineligible for the NIT. North Carolina probably will accept an expected bid to the NIT, Coach Dean Smith said after Friday's game.

While Maryland had not been able to stop Thompson and the Wolfpack going into the finals in five straight games, Terp Coach Lefty Driesell feels that the Terps are playing as well as they ever have. The Terps looked it in beating North Carolina by the biggest margin the Tar Heels have suffered in five years. "Our defense was awesome," Driesell said. "It got us the lead in the first 15 minutes and they could never make it up. We had to be playing great to beat them the way we did."

Particularly effective for the Terrapins was a lightning fast break that broke the back of North Carolina's press. Driesell credited burly center Len Elmore for the outlet passes that got the ball to guards John Lucas and Mo Howard for easy layups.

N. C. State Coach Norm Sloan, after watching the game, had a sober countenance. All he could say about the Terps was the obvious, "They looked awfully tough."

But so had Sloan's ace, Thompson.

Driesell sounded a lot like Virginia Coach Bill Gibson did on Thursday night, when he was asked what he planned to do to stop Thompson.

"You tell me," he replied. Driesell said the Terps would live or die with their man-to-man defense, playing Thompson straight up.

Thompson's value was never more evident than in the Virginia game, when most of his teammates suffered an offnight. He scored the Wolfpack's first 12 points, giving them a big early lead before the Cavaliers came back behind freshman guard Billy Langloh, who scored 21 points.

The Cavaliers kept it close until early in the second half when Thompson went to work again with a series of driving layups and jump shots that put the game out of reach.

Gilmore Stars As Colonels Rip Nets

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) —

When you're 7-foot-2-like Art Gilmore of the Kentucky Colonels, it doesn't take much to get you sky-high for a game, but the New York Nets seem to be able to raise the big fellow's hackles even higher than usual.

"They talk about him not being a super-aggressive player," Nets Coach Kevin Loughery said with a look of disbelief, "but he's plenty aggressive against us."

The last time the Colonels were in town, Gilmore set an American Basketball Association record by grabbing 40 rebounds. Friday night, his figures read 24 points, 27 rebounds and five blocked shots, as Kentucky stormed to a 111-100 triumph and climbed back into first place in the East Division, one-half game in front of the Nets and 2 1/2 in front of the idle Carolina Cougars.

Elsewhere in the ABA, Indiana defeated Memphis 115-103, Utah clobbered Denver 132-111, and San Antonio edged San Diego 115-113.

"That was as fine a game as Artis can play," said Kentucky Coach Babe McCarthy. "He showed how devastating he can be. He was the difference by a long shot. He could be the differences when it comes to the playoffs."

Asked about his reported economic problems, Foreman said: "If I was rich I sure wouldn't be fighting. I'm not doing it as a hobby."

ference when it comes to the playoffs."

The Colonels went ahead for good at 45-44 with 1:36 remaining in the second half on a free throw by Gilmore after he and New York's Wendell Ladner, a former Colonel engaged in a brief wrestling in a scramble for a loose ball.

The Colonels won the game with a 13-0 burst midway through the second half, turning a 44-42 deficit into a 55-44 lead.

Pacers 115, Tams 103
George McGinnis had 32 points and helped Indiana break open a close game. The Pacers rattled off nine straight points in the second quarter and built a 59-46 halftime lead.

"I thought that shooting definitely was a factor because we're so much more aggressive now," said McGinnis. "We're moving the ball better and getting good shots instead of forcing bad ones."

Stars 132, Rockets 111
Utah Coach Joe Mullaney said it was "the second game in a row our offense has looked like it ought to."

Ron Boone and Willie Wise accounted for much of that offense, scoring 24 and 22 points, respectively. James Jones also helped out with 10 points and five assists in the first quarter, which ended with Utah on top 34-20.

Spurs 115, Q's 113
San Diego Coach Wilt Chamberlain was called for a technical foul with two seconds left, and Jim Silas sank the free throw to culminate a rally that brought San Antonio back from a 10-point deficit.

In the NBA, Seattle beat Buffalo 123-117 in overtime, Golden State defeated Philadelphia 106-96. Houston surprised Boston 113-106, and Los Angeles beat Detroit 129-113.

Exhibition Ball

Twins-Tigers

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Veteran pitchers Mickey Lolich, Woodie Fryman and John Hiller were touched for only two hits Saturday as they hurled the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Minnesota's Glenn Borgmann homered off Fryman in the sixth while Craig Kuskick doubled off Hiller in the eighth. The Twins went to third on a passed ball and scored on a sacrifice fly by Bobby Darwin.

Lolich started the contest and retired nine straight in his three-inning stint. Since the Tigers jumped to a four-run first-inning lead, the veteran southpaw was credited with the victory.

Fryman retired the first seven he faced before Borgmann touched him for the round-tripper.

The Tigers scored all four first-inning runs off Twins' starter and loser, Dave Goltz.

Detroit singles by Eddie Brinkman, Mickey Stanley, Jim Northrup and Willie Horton, combined with a throwing error by the Twins' Ed Palat, opened the flood gates. A one-out double by Gates Brown pushed across Detroit's third and fourth runs.

Mets-Cards

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The New York Mets struck for two runs in the second and fifth innings to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 in an exhibition baseball game Saturday.

Benny Ayala and Jerry Grote doubled for one run and pitcher Jon Matlack singled to score Grote in the second. In the fifth, Wayne Garrett walked, Felix Millan singled, Cleon Jones singled for one run and two walks forced in another tally.

St. Louis scored its only run in the sixth when Lou Brock singled and scored on a double by Ted Sizemore, whose hit was misplayed by Ayala.

Cardinal pitcher Alan Foster was forced to leave the game in the third inning after being hit in the left shin by a smash by Rusty Staub.

In the third, pitcher Sonny Siebert was hit by a line drive by John Milner and left the game limping after the fourth inning.

Phils-Red Sox

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Rookie shortstop Rick Burleson atoned for a costly error with a two-run, tie-breaking single in the seventh inning Saturday, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 5-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Philadelphia

Phillies

With one out in the seventh, Dwight Evans and Frank Vazquez singled and moved up on a wild pitch by young Erskine Thomsen, the third Philadelphia pitcher. Burleson then singled to left and scored a minute later on Juan Beniquez' triple to right-center.

Burleson dropped an easy popup, helping Philadelphia to a pair of unearned runs off Boston starter Bill Lee in the first inning.

The Red Sox got one run back in their half on a walk, a double by Cecil Cooper and a fielder's choice. Bob Montgomery drilled a homer for Boston's other run in the fourth.

Royals-Chisox

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Amos Otis drilled two hits, including a three-run homer, and Gene Garber pitched three perfect innings Saturday, leading the Kansas City Royals past the Chicago White Sox 9-3 in an exhibition baseball game.

It was the first loss in three spring games for Chicago, which was unable to recover after a five-run, fourth-inning Kansas City rally against rookie right-hander Bugs Moran. The White Sox rallied for three runs against Marty Pattin and a 3-3 tie in the third with a five-hit barrage that included a double by Bill Sharp and a triple by John Jeter.

Skip Pitlock, a left-hander, was the only effective Chicago pitcher. He worked the three final innings, allowing one hit.

Astros-Expos

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rookie catcher Barry Foote lashed four straight hits and drove in three runs Saturday to power the Montreal Expos to a 6-2 victory over the Houston Astros in the first exhibition baseball game for both clubs.

Foote doubled in the second inning, hit a solo home run to tie the score 2-2 in the fourth and drove in runs with singles in the sixth and eighth innings.

Ken Singleton drove in two other Montreal runs with a ground out in the first and a single in the fifth. The sixth Expo run scored on Ron Fairly's eighth-inning double.

The Astros scored their runs off Expos starter Steve Renko on Cliff Johnson's solo homer in the second and two Montreal errors in the third. Baylor Moore and Tom Walker pitched shutout ball for the Expos over the last six innings. Dave Roberts was charged with the loss.

Foreman Opens Training Camp

By WILLIAM H. HEATH
Associated Press Writer
CARACAS (AP) — Heavyweight champion George Foreman began training here Saturday for his March 26 title defense against Ken Norton and said he was confident of victory even though he conceded: "It could take 15 rounds."

Foreman, who arrived Friday night from the United States, began his first day in Venezuela with a breakfast of steak and eggs and a three-mile hike from his mountainside hotel to downtown Caracas.

"I feel comfortable here and I slept good," Foreman said.

Foreman held an afternoon workout at the recently-completed, 13,500-seat Poliedro Stadium, where the fight, to be televised to 70 countries, will be held.

Foreman, accompanied by trainer Dick Sadler, former light heavyweight champ Archie Moore and local promoter Aldemaro Romero, told newsmen that he already is in top shape and will concentrate on "trying to keep my condition."

"I'll continue my sparring and running," he said. Sparring partners include Terry Hinke, an Oregon heavyweight; Eddie Jones, No. 4 light heavyweight contender from Los Angeles; Frank Steel of Gary, Ind.; Eddie Brooks of Milwaukee and William Foster of New York.

"I expect Norton to fight the best he can—I know that's what I'll be doing," Foreman said. "It could be a long, hard fight."

"We're not concentrating on any one thing," said Sadler, "because it just doesn't pay. I'm trying to prepare George mentally and physically to adjust to any situation."

Moore said his role is "battle strategy—planning. I've seen Norton fight once and that's enough for me. He's a very strong and very fast man. He'll be a tough challenge, but I believe George has the medicine to handle him."

"Nobody has to tell me. I've got a fight," the 25-year-old Foreman said. "The attitude is to win and survive in the ring with Norton."

The challenger, a 28-year-old ex-Marine, is scheduled to arrive in Caracas March 13.

Playing 'Celtic Way' May Help Los Angeles To Win In The West

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Coach Bill Sharman says his Los Angeles Lakers now are playing "the Celtic way," and he hopes it will help when the Lakers begin an all-important road trip Sunday at Boston.

The Celtic way, says Sharman, is "good movement" and "balanced scoring," which helped the Lakers defeat the Detroit Pistons 129-113 Friday night and keep within one-half game of Golden State in the National Basketball Association's Pacific Division.

Gail Goodrich and Jimmy Price each scored 31 points in the one-sided victory. It was the most points Price has ever scored, but he paid for it with a gash above his left eye which required stitches.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Golden State Warriors defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 106-96, the Seattle SuperSonics got by the Buffalo Braves 123-117 in overtime, and the Houston Rockets upset the Boston Celtics 113-106.

Other coaches should have Sharman's problems.

"Everybody was shooting well," Sharman said. "I hated to take anybody out because they were all shooting well, but everytime I put somebody in they shot well too."

"We didn't play a lot of defense, but we rebounded and we ran well. We had good movement and I really liked the balanced scoring we had. That was the Celtic way," the coach said.

Warriors 106, 76ers 96

Jim Barnett scored 22 of his 26 points in the second half and Rick Barry got 28 to help Golden State rally from a 28-14 first-quarter deficit.

Barry scored 18 points in the second period and the Warriors cut the margin to 51-46 by the half. Behind Barnett's spurge, the Warriors then took a healthy 74-65 lead in the third period.

Sonics 123, Braves 117

Jim Fox sank two free throws with five seconds left in regulation time to tie the score at 109-109, then Dick Gibbs scored six points in overtime to snap a three-game Buffalo winning streak.

Buffalo's Bob McAdoo led all scorers with 37 points, and Spencer Haywood led the Sonics with 31. Fred Brown contributed 29 points to a winning cause.

Rockets 113, Celtics 106

Rudy Tomjanovich got 25 points and helped the Rockets come from nine points back at 74-65 with 6:25 left in the third quarter.

Houston led 49-39 with 4:47 left in the half, but Boston battled back with Jo Jo White getting nine points to take the lead finally at 56-55.

Finley Cuts Williams Loose, But Bars Yanks

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

If there's a major league baseball team in need of a manager, Dick Williams is available. He's a free agent now — with one stipulation.

Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley gave Williams a qualified green light Friday night to re-enter the sport "with any team he wishes." Any team, that is, except the New York Yankees.

Finley and the Yankees clashed last December when Williams was named manager of the New York club. Finley contended that Williams had two years remaining on his Oakland contract and demanded compensation. The Yankees refused—sending Williams into exile.

That forced absence may now be over.

Earlier Friday, the A's played as they had when Williams managed them to two consecutive World Championships. Two home runs by 1972 World Series hero Gene Tenace and one by 1973 star Reggie Jackson carried Oakland past the San Diego Padres 13-3 in the first active day of exhibition play.

In other pre-season games, the Texas Rangers topped the Yankees 9-8 in 10 innings; the Boston Red Sox stopped the Minnesota Twins 5-4; the Chicago Cubs nipped the California Angels 2-1, and the Chicago White Sox clipped the Detroit Tigers 8-7.

Ray Fosse and Deron Johnson also homered for the A's, who packed their scoring into the first five innings. Tenace's second home run, hit with the bases loaded in a six-run fifth inning, highlighted the action.

Rangers 9, Yankees 8

The Rangers won their see-saw battle with the Yankees on Len Randle's bunt single in the bottom of the 10th inning.

The teams combined for 29 hits.

Red Sox 5, Twins 4

Boston's Carlton Fisk drove a Vic Albury pitch off the screen atop the left-center field fence in the eighth inning, lifting the Red Sox past the Twins.

Cubs 2, Angels 1

Rick Reuschel, George Hutson and Dave LaRoche held the Angels to three hits while catcher Ken Rudolph singled in Matt Alexander with the winning run for Chicago.

White Sox 8, Tigers 7

The White Sox blew a 5-1 lead, but rallied with three runs in the eighth inning to beat Detroit.

Rose High School literally walked to an 8-5 victory over the Washington High School Pam Pack in their opening game of the baseball season Friday afternoon.

The Rampants picked up seven of their eight runs in the first inning with only one hit, and five of them crossed the plate before that first hit was attained.

Two hit batters, six walks, a fielder's choice and the lone single brought the runs across as the Rampants built up a 7-0 lead right there.

But after that, they were effectively handcuffed by the Pam Pack, picking up only one more run, in the sixth inning. Meanwhile, Washington made a run at the Rampants, scoring twice each in the fifth and sixth inning, and once more in the final frame.

Overall, Washington outthit the Rampants, 8-6, but good fielding by the Rampants helped to keep them from mounting a more serious threat to their lead. Twice double plays got them out of jams, and in the final frame, a fine fielding situation closed the door.

The Pam Pack got off their first threat in the opening inning, as Tommy Drake ripped a one-out triple into the right-center alley. But the next man grounded out to the infield, holding Drake at third, and a popup finished the threat.

Rose got double plays in the third and fourth to get out of trouble, and the third inning saw two fine fielding plays in doing it. Chick Gurganus opened the inning with a single into center field. The next batter, Ed Cherry lifted what appeared to be another hit to center, but Al Heath made a fine shoetop catch, then nearly doubled Gurganus off first. Stan Lilley followed that with another blast, this one to left, but Griff Garner went back for another good catch, and this time, the relay was in time to get Gurganus, trying to make it back to first.

Rose, meanwhile, got most of its action in the bottom of the first, practically without lifting a bat. Al Heath led off, drawing a walk. Garner was hit by a pitch and Kelly Heath walked to load the bases. Robert Brinkley brought in the first run with another free pass to first, scoring Al Heath. Then, after a strikeout, John Causey scored Garner with the fourth walk of the frame. Gil Whitford got another walk, bringing in Kelly Heath. Ronnie Rasberry's grounder was played to the plate, forcing Brinkley, but left the bases loaded.

Chris Manning was hit by a pitch, with Causey scoring, and Al Heath walked again, scoring Whitford. Garner then got the lone hit of the inning, a chop into right, bringing in both Rasberry and Manning for the 7-0 lead.

Rose threatened again in the second. Causey got a two-out singled and Whitford walked, but a popup ended the frame. A double play helped the Pack in the third. Al Heath and Garner had both singled with one down. But a line drive by Kelly Heath caught brother Al off base for the twin killing.

Rose again threatened in the fifth, as Rasberry singled and stole second, but it wasn't until the sixth that they got their final run. With one down, Kelly Heath singled off the third baseman's glove, then took second on a wild pitch. He moved to third on an out and Jerry Griffin walked. The two worked the double steal, with Heath scoring.

Two more crossed in the sixth. Drake greeted reliever Jimmy Averette with another ringing triple to right center and Ricky Payne walked. The two worked the double steal, scoring Drake. Sammy Bullock followed with a single, scoring Payne as the lead fell to 7-4.

Kelly Heath then came on to pitch, and although he walked two more to load the bases, he fanned three to get out of the inning without further damage.

The final Washington run came in the seventh. Payne drew a two-out walk and Bullock also got a free pass. Woolard then singled to left, scoring Payne, but Heath cut off the throw to home and pegged out Bullock at third base, ending the game.

Rose and Washington hook up again Tuesday in a return match, this one scheduled for 4 p.m. in Washington.

Namesake Falls In Ring Match

NEW YORK (AP) — Now maybe people will pay attention to the man who beat John L. Sullivan.

"They wanted to build him up," said Vito Antuofermo, the man who tore Sullivan down with a lopsided, 10-round decision Friday night in Madison Square Garden.

Because of his name—John L. Sullivan was the last of the bare-knuckle champions and a legendary boxing figure—and his unbeaten record, Sullivan got all the press attention in the days preceding his middleweight match with Antuofermo.

"They were making a big thing out of it," said Antuofermo. "At the press luncheon all the cameras were after him. I sat alone in a corner. I felt like leaving."

Antuofermo, who has only lost once, fought like a man who had been snubbed and wanted to do something about it. He dominated the action for almost the entire fight, keeping the left-handed Sullivan off-balance by battering him at will with right-hand leads and right-left combinations to the head.

"It set me back a little," said the 27-year-old Sullivan of Olympia, Wash., an inactive senior at Eastern Washington State College. "I'm going to be back."

The scrap between Antuofermo, 158½, and Sullivan, 156½, was the feature of a tripeheader that drew a crowd of 7,401 and a gate of $53,352.

Washington finally broke the ice in the fifth, getting two runs off the starting Rose hurler Manning. Robin Woolard led off with a walk, and with one down, Fred Cherry singled to right, moving on to second on the throw to third. Ed Cherry then singled to left, scoring Woodard.

Fred Cherry however was caught dead by Garner's toss from the outfield, but the ball bounced away from Griffin, allowing Cherry to score for a 7-2

Wildlife Afield: Last Day Of Quail Season Should Be Special

By JIM DEAN

Some people hold that the last day of the quail hunting season ought to be something special. I think what they mean is that the quail should have the decency to make themselves readily available and sit tight—just for old time's sake. I guess some would also add that on the last day of the season, the dogs should make no mistakes and hunters should miss no shots.

As we drove to the farm where we planned to hunt, Mike Gaddis and I agreed that this wasn't too much to ask. We were wrong, of course. We turned the dogs out and they hunted the first field nicely. We crossed another field, then entered a thick bottom where Mike had found quail before. Though the weather was fairly warm and windy, the air in the swampy bottom held the last cool breath of winter. The smell of pine was thick and heady, and dry leaves cracked underfoot, sending up a musty odor. We found a hawk's roost high in a tall pine.

As we came out of the thick bottom, we spotted Mike's setter Cindy standing like a statue in the edge of a bean field. We moved forward carefully, but just before we got into range, the birds jumped out wild and sailed down through the woods.

We hunted the singles in a tangle of switchcane and greenbrier, but the skittish quail wouldn't wait for us. Ahead, through the brush, I could hear them getting up in singles and pairs. There is no sound on earth quite like the muffled whir of departing bobwhites. Those birds were too wild for classic hunting.

Finally, Mike shot one, though it flushed well ahead of him. Another jumped out of a fallen tree near me and I missed an easy straight-away shot with both barrels. The smell of gunpowder hung in the air, but that was all. The birds were gone.

We went back to the field and hunted around it, then down into another big bottom. I knew Mike was thinking the same thing I was. Had that been our only chance?

We came out of the bottom, up through a thick stand of honeysuckle and hunted a small bean field. The dogs acted "birdy," but the birds had already left. I could smell the linseed oil on the stock of my double as I wearily hoisted it on my shoulder while we crossed still another thick bottom.

By then, it was beginning to get late, and the western sky turned first orange, then deep red against the black lace of bare trees. The last big field we planned to hunt was planted in beans and corn. We walked through it, smelling the wood smoke from a nearby farmhouse.

"Well," Mike sighed, "it's about over. Wouldn't it be nice to find the last covey of the year sitting right in the middle of this field?"

I nodded, contemplating the prospects. Neither of us was ready for the season to end.

The dogs rimmed the big field, and we crossed through the middle. Suddenly, about 50 yards ahead of us, seven quail burst into the air and flew over a 100 yards to the nearest woods. We had no shot at all.

"It's not fair," I muttered. But it was, and we knew it. Mike and I have hunted too long to believe that fate plays favorites.

But not even the vagaries of fate can steal all the bitter sweet pleasures of the season's last hunt. As I cleaned my double that night, the wonderful smell of Hoppe's No. 9 solvent brought back the afternoon's other aromas—the smell of pine, gunpowder, wood smoke and linseed oil. It's a rich mixture, and maybe it will "keep" for eight and a half months. It always has.

Hang Gliding Is Newest Sport; Short Flights Give Big Thrill

By HOWARD ULLMAN
Associated Press Writer
SIMSBURY, Conn. (AP) — It was a risky day for flying. Gusts were whipping up to 25 miles an hour, curling around the launch site and rippling the bright green and yellow Dacron kite.

It was a day for hang gliders to be kept rolled up, a wind that could send man and kite crashing into the trees. Al Mulazzi knew it.

Fifty feet up the side of the narrow, tree-lined slope and strapped to the craft by a harness, Mulazzi clutched the aluminum trapeze bar beneath the 18-foot sail. He struggled to gain control against a fierce wind.

"It was probably one of the worst days for flying, very erratic winds," the 26-year-old adventurer would say when it was over.

The wind died down momentarily and Al was off. Six brisk steps down the slope and his billowing kite lofted him 10 feet off the ground. His lean body lay prone within the triangular trapeze bar, battling to use the headwind to prolong the glide.

Near the bottom of the hill, a crosswind, the bane of fliers, seized the ship and stalled it. Al landed roughly.

"Usually you land like a bird," he says.

There were three more flights that overcast day. The final one lasted 10 seconds, the longest and most satisfying.

"That last one was real nice. The wind had died down. It was real smooth," Al said. "I had plenty of air speed to take off all day." But the winds were very cross. Even though the flights lasted mere seconds, Al said the seconds stretch out to minutes.

"Your body becomes super-receptive and if you're not in stark terror you can look around and see what you're going to do. You can think your way through the flight."

Mulazzi and Mike Morrissey of Wethersfield are partners in a new firm, one of two on the East Coast, that makes hang gliders.

The relatively simple gliders sell for about $530 each. The sport boomed into popularity in the late 1960s in California.

The young entrepreneurs met at a hang gliding meet in North Carolina last July. Mike, 24 and now a veteran of about 100 glides, had never flown before. Al, an ex-Army paratrooper, had begun the previous November and by the time of the meet had picked up minor scrapes and a few busted hang gliders.

Al hopes to try soon for the hang gliding altitude record. He sees himself being towed up to 20,000 feet by a balloon and with kite firmly clutched in his hands and oxygen and emergency parachutes on his back, letting go. He says he's looking for a spot without airplane traffic.

The current record of 14,350 feet was set last summer when somebody jumped off Pike's Peak, he says.

Asgrow RX Hybrid Corn Lines Give You A Healthy Advantage

It's only logical. The more a hybrid can resist stress and disease, the more you can count on it to give you a healthy advantage—in the field and over the scale. And you can count on single cross RX60, RX115, and special RX99A to do just that.

Here's why: It is prescription-bred to resist rust, lodging, Fusarium ear rots, stalk rots, root worms, and corn borer infestation. . .to resist Northern, Yellow, and Race "T" Southern leaf blights. And you can be sure that these lines have the genetic vigor to withstand these stress conditions and still yield with the best. They quickly develop into extremely-uniform plants—healthy plants with massive root systems and sturdy stalks that insure excellent standability. What's more, large, girthy ears are placed at the ideal height for combining or picking.

They look great and yield even better. And this has been proved, on hundreds of farms right in this area. Talk with the farmers who grow these hybrids. Ask them about the ability of the RX Line to give you a healthy advantage. Then—talk with your Asgrow dealer. Ask him to reserve you a supply of Asgrow corn.

Coon Hunters Proud Of Prized Dogs

Text and Photographs By Carl Tyer

Activities near Vanceboro were for the dogs the first weekend in March. Pure and mixed breeds of hounds.

The first 1974 gathering of the Eastern North Carolina Coon Hunters Association (ENCCHA) near Vanceboro on March 2 saw some 150 persons and 60 canines gathered for racoon hunting competition for the dogs.

The sport of racoon hunting is one pitted mainly between the coon hound and the coon.

A variety of breeds make up those used in the sport, including Black and Tans, Blue Ticks, Red Bones, Treeing Walkers and Plots.

With the increased ability needed to hunt the wily coon, has come the many breeds of dogs.

Coon hunting activities, aside from the actual hunt, often include field trails, of which the ENCCHA holds two events annually.

Coon hunting in North Carolina is considered almost entirely a hounding sport.

With the racoon being a nocturnal animal, the actual hunts are held primarily at night.

To the avid coon hunter, the sound of the running dogs is the fruit of his labor, and often a heavy monetary investment.

The price of a good dog often runs from the hundreds to thousands of dollars.

Activities near Vanceboro by the ENCCHA included a bench show, treeing contest, water race and night hunt, all for the dogs. Dogs entered in the various events included pure and mixed breeds of dogs.

The treeing contest provided competition in barking while the water race tested endurance.

Swimming a watery 80 yard course after a caged coon, dogs went through initial trials and eliminations, often swimming the course four to five times.

Spectators and dog owners involved in the Mar. 2 events in Vanceboro came from all over eastern North Carolina.

To the unexperienced observer, the afternoon's events provided an interesting insight into the lure of racoon hunting to the North Carolina sportsman.

To the hunter, his greatest asset is owning a good dog.

One owner stated training wasn't something that made a good dog, the desire to hunt has to be born in.

Owning a good dog provides the hunter with a great deal of pride and satisfaction especially when he has raised the dog from a pup.

FACE TO FACE. . .the hunter and the hunted, a racoon and the hound meet for a moment prior to the beginning of the water race.

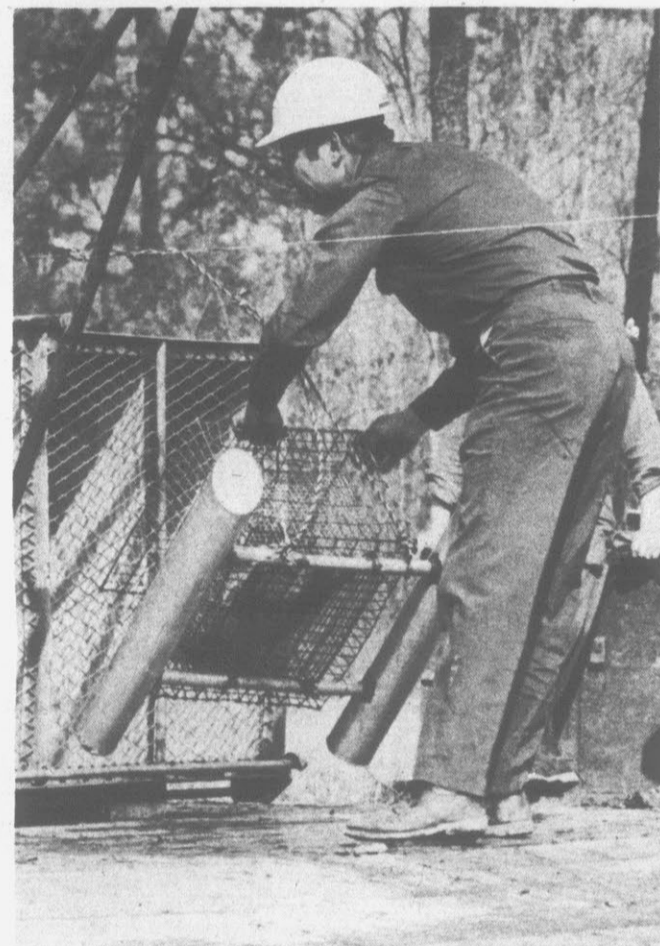

WET PURSUIT. . .with the racoon are in close competition for the lead, almost to the tree, these two hounds intent on their goal.

Pure and Mixed Breeds Shown At The First 1974 Gathering Of The Eastern North Carolina Coon Hunters Association

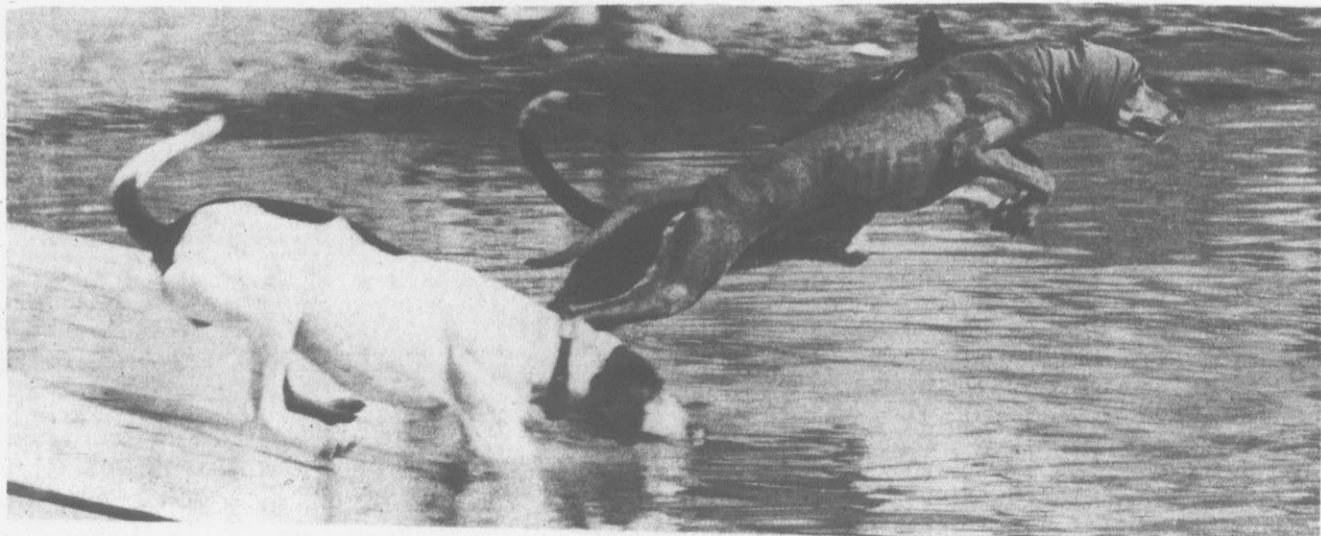

OFF TO A FLYING START. . .a quick bounding leap often makes the difference between winning and defeat.

READYING THE HOUNDS. . .the official starter of the water race gives the entered dogs, in the starting box, a look at their prey before setting the coon on his way down the water course.

Recycling Is One Way To Save Energy

By DAVID A. MILNE
HARRISBURG (UPI) — Dr. Priscilla Laws, a physicist at nearby Dickinson College, is trying to use a slide rule and common sense to help the United States become energy independent by 1980.

While other "researchers" using computers and planning to spend billions of dollars—look to the atom, the sun and the heat of the earth for more energy, Dr. Laws looks no further than her garbage can.

And while industries and the energy conglomerates lobby in Congress and state legislatures for weaker environmental laws, Dr. Laws and recycling proponents want an energy program that would clean it up.

Dr. Laws has been working to find out how much energy can be saved by recycling and reusing our natural resources. Through research of her own and other environmentalists, she has found that:

—If all beverages sold in the U. S. were in returnable containers, it would save enough energy to provide residential electricity to 11 million persons for one year.

—Put another way, each beverage bottle discarded instead of returned costs .5 kilowatt hours of electricity—enough to burn a 100-watt electric light bulb for five hours.

—If all food and beverages were sold in returnable containers, it would save enough energy to provide residential electricity to about 25 million people for one year.

—The recycling of newspaper alone would save the equivalent of 37 million barrels of oil per year. That's enough to provide residential electricity to 10.5 million persons or produce 717.8 million gallons of gasoline.

—If half of the lubricating oil used in the U. S. each year were recycled, it would save enough oil to produce 582 million gallons of gasoline.

—And by eliminating half of the paper packaging used to make products more attractive and convenient, the nation's energy consumption would be cut by 1 per cent.

"Recycling and reuse are relatively painless ways to save energy compared to turning down thermostats and driving slower," Dr. Laws said.

"We haven't had it up to now because government has found it easier to tell consumers to save energy rather than stop industries from continuing their wasteful packaging practices."

Dr. Laws said one of the first steps should be to require manufacturers to stop using extravagant packaging.

Couple Speaks Vows Friday

FARMVILLE—In a double ring ceremony Friday at 8:00 p.m., Miss Rebecca Anne Brumbelee became the bride of Roy Lee Allen Jr.

The Rev. William N. Gordon conducted the ceremony at the home of the bride. A program of wedding music was presented by Miss Dee Anna Braxton, violinist, and Miss Kathryn Finklea, soloist, who sang "O Perfect Love."

Gail S. Ramee of Fairfax, Va., and Catherine Conger of Falls Church, Va., played flutes.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas Brumbelee of Farmville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown designed with a wedding ring collar edged in Venice lace with matching lace encircling the waistline. The long full sleeves were cuffed in Venice lace and the gown had a flowing gathered skirt.

The gown was complemented by a finger tip length veil of illusion attached to a crown of white velvet and lace. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and greenery tied with happiness ribbon.

Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee Allen of Farmville.

The honor attendant was Miss Kathy Brumbelee of Farmville, sister of the bride. She was dressed in a formal length gown of maize organza fashioned like the bride's gown. Her headpiece was of yellow velvet ribbon and she carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and greenery tied with white ribbon.

Johnny Dickinson of Farmville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride is a senior in the East Carolina University School of Art. The bridegroom is a graduate of N. C. State University and is employed by the Singer Furniture Manufacturing Co.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride.

The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth with deep lace edging. The centerpiece was of yellow and white daisies, greenery and gypsophelia.

The three tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Johnny Dickinson, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Marty Bunn poured punch.

A prediction of a sunny spring day on April 27 might well be the future forecast of Donna P. Parker of New Bern, who is weather girl and a reporter for WCTI-TV, New Bern.

Donna will become the bride of Johnny Ray Mullis on April 27.

A graduate of North Carolina State University, the bride-to-be was a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society and Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Her fiancé also graduated from N. C. State University, where he was a member of Phi Kappa Tau fraternity. He is now employed as a technical sales representative with the Trane Co.

The Greenville First Free Will Baptist Church here will be the scene of the May 18 wedding of Donna Kay Hines and Bob Geroge Jr.

Donna Kay graduated from the School of Radiology at Bowman Gray Hospital, Winston-Salem, and is now instructor in the School of Radiologic Technology at Wilson Memorial Hospital.

Bob is stationed at Camp Lejeune, but is also a graduate of Bethesda Naval Hospital School of Radiology, Bethesda, Md.

After their marriage, the couple will be returning to Bethesda where he will have his second tour of naval duty at the Bethesda hospital.

Graduates of the N. C. School for the Deaf, Donya Heath and Darrell Moore, have planned their wedding for June 15 at the First Christian Church.

The ceremony will be performed by Dana Hunt while Ed Plemmons, head boy's counselor at the N. C. School for the Deaf, Morganton, will serve as interpreter during the ceremony.

Donya was surprised with an engagement ring from Darrell on the anniversary of their fifth year of dating.

She is now employed at the U. S. Post Office, Raleigh, while Darrell works at the N. C. Farm Bureau, also in Raleigh.

Formerly All Male Camp Has Women

By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer
FT. JACKSON, S.C. (AP) — The troops were almost in step, just like other newly arrived basic trainees, but the cadence they chanted was different: "We're in step, we're in step, wow, wow, wow!"

Also different was the fact they were definitely female, though the rumpled fatigue uniforms and the black boots were like other trainees.

It was the first week of training for 150 WACs at the formerly all-male facility near Columbia. In coming weeks, other groups will arrive until there are more than 1,200 women undergoing eight weeks of instruction that is — except for marksmanship — the same as men get.

The first company has women from 47 states and two territories. One of the trainees, 21-year-old Pvt. Ann Marshall of Cincinnati, said during a short break, "I love it; it's terrific. Everything, the marching, is so much fun."

She joined the Army because "mainly I wanted to become more self-sufficient" and hopes to become a military policeman. Prior to enlisting she was a desk clerk and receptionist for a motel chain.

Another new soldier, Pvt. Karen Nichols, 28, of Wheaton, Ill., who has a degree from Southern Illinois University, wants to become a physical activity specialist. Being older than most of the other WACs "bothers me," she said, but otherwise the Army is about what she expected.

Tenor sax player Pam Kittrell, 20, of Fernandina Beach, Fla., has her eye on a communications job but she also wants to audition for an Army band. She likes Ft. Jackson but knows the remaining weeks "are gonna be rough."

The WACs at the South Carolina base are the first to receive basic training away from Ft. McClellan, Ala. Each of the companies at Ft. Jackson has an officer or enlisted woman from Ft. McClellan to give experienced leadership. The only men are classroom instructors, mess hall personnel and a drill sergeant for each company.

Sgt. IC Walter T. Haynes, who marched with the women during the day, says he uses the same approach with the WACs that he does with men and adds, "I don't feel that there's that much difference, some minor adjustments."

Tapestries Making A Big Comeback

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—
Tapestry, which has had its ups and downs of popularity during its 3,500-year history, is enjoying a comeback in museums, offices and homes as a result of Americans' new fascination with handicrafts.

The monumental medieval tapestry show currently at the Metropolitan Museum, organized in cooperation with the National Museums of France, and the exhibition of works designed by the contemporary Spanish artist, Josef Grau-Garrig, at the Los Angeles County Museum, underscore the coast-to-coast passion for wool on the wall.

Good antique tapestries generally carry five figure price tags and are too big for practical use by even those collectors who can afford them. Modern tapestries, however, cost no more than handloomed Oriental rugs and can be commissioned to fit any wall-space.

"There's a tremendous interest in contemporary tapestries as there is in all handwork, especially for corporate offices and modern homes where wall hangings soften the hard effect of construction materials," said Lee Naiman of Tapestry Associates, a Manhattan firm which sells tapestries by American, European and Canadian designers.

"Unlike paintings, which reflect light, tapestries absorb light, are warm and invite touch. People love them as art, but they also are good investments as is any good art today."

Aubusson Technique
Most contemporary tapestries are woven by the Aubusson technique, which was perfected in France in the 14th Century, and are priced from $500 to $5,000 and up depending on size and the reputation of the artist. By U.S. and French law, the number of copies of any tapestry design must be limited to six plus two artist's proofs to qualify as an original work of art.

Medieval tapestries, noted for bold design and arresting color, were created by anonymous artists, while tapestries of the 17th to 19th Centuries often were mere characterless copies of paintings or cartoons (design sketches) by famous artists. It was not until the 1920s that French artist Jean Lurcat made tapestry a truly individualistic medium for artists, with emphasis on rougher textures and brilliant colors.

Lurcat and a group of his friends revived the art of tapestry at Aubusson, the traditional French loom capital, at the behest of the French government in the late 1930s. Now, Aubusson weavers turn out some 1,000 tapestries annually, concentrating on designs by stellar artists—Louise Nevelson, Robert Motherwell, Frank Stella, Helen Frankenthaler, Alexander Calder, Jean Arp, and Man Ray.

Now, there are tapestry studios in virtually every Western country where skilled weavers turn out about a square yard of tapestry a month, working under the direction of the artists. The Japanese are the most recent entry in the field. There are some artists who weave their own arrases, but they are rare.

Adele Siegel, who arranged the Grau-Garriga exhibition and was the first New York dealer to specialize in tapestries at her Arras Gallery since 1970, is especially drawn to avant-garde artists who dare to combine jute, nylon, cotton, silk, metal and wood with wool. Experimentation in high relief has given tapestry the third dimension of depth, triggering a logical trend toward moving soft construction tapestries off the wall and into the middle of the room.

Non-objectively Speaking
"Less Painterly qualities are apparent in the newer works," Mrs. Siegel observed. "The techniques available to the artist in expressing himself seem boundless, once the basics are mastered. The medium is beginning to speak, but there is still a lot of groping."

The designs of Lurcat and his disciples mainly were figural, but since the Hungarian painter Victor Vaserey turned to tapestry about 1950, there has been an overwhelming emphasis on non-objective design.

Vaserey, France's Sonia Delaunay and Brazil's Jean Gillon work in geometrics, America's June Wayne and Sylvia Carewe and France's Andre Vilar in abstractions, and Poland's Teresa Muszynska, Yugoslavia's Jagoda Buic and Grau-Garriga in freeform creations.

"Grau-Garrig's tapestries are all one-of-a-kind, since you couldn't possibly reproduce them in multiplicity," Mrs. Siegel said. "His tapestries are shaggy, ropy and have holes in them, and are removed styliscally from medieval tapestries by centuries, but they are created on looms similar to those used by medieval weavers."

Mrs. Siegel said Grau-Garriga's tapestries have tripled in price since she began exhibiting him in 1971. She advises the would-be tapestry collector with a small budget to buy small pieces first and spend a lot of time "educating the eye by looking, looking, looking" because there are not many books on contemporary tapestry.

If you think one of America's most famous culinary offerings, Waldorf Salad, is made today as it was originally, you've got another guess coming! The recipe for it first appeared in "The Cook Book by 'Oscar' of The Waldorf," published in 1896. Patrons of New York City's Waldorf Hotel, which opened in 1893, acclaimed the salad and so the inventor of it, Oscar Tschirky, the hotel's famed maitre d'hotel and the 'Oscar' of the cookbook, included it in his one and only recipe compilation. His directions:

"Peel two raw apples and cut them into small pieces, say about half an inch square, also cut some celery the same way, and mix it with the apple. Be very careful not to let any seeds of the apples be mixed with it. The salad must be dressed with a good mayonnaise."

Somewhere along the line walnuts were added to Oscar's formula, though I regret to say I've never tracked down the cookbook in which this addition first appeared. Here then in modern terms is a recipe for both the original Waldorf Salad and the later version which superseded its forbear in popularity.

WALDORF SALAD
2 cups diced (1/2-inch squares) unpeeled red eating apples
2 cups diced (1/2 inch squares)

celery
1/2 cup real mayonnaise
Lettuce
Mix together the apple, celery and mayonnaise; cover and chill. Serve on lettuce. Makes six 3/4-cup servings.

Walnut Waldorf Salad: Just before serving add 1/2 cup broken walnuts to the chilled mixture given above; or arrange the mixture on lettuce and sprinkle with the walnuts.

Studying The 'Bean' Will Aid New Princess Soya

By SUSAN PRICE
Reflector Staff Writer

Few girls think they have to spend most of their leisure time learning about soybeans. . . but Judy Evans, an East Carolina University sophomore, is trying to find out everything she possibly can about the bean.

And it isn't really so unusual, since she has just been named North Carolina's Princess Soya for 1974. And especially since she'll need to know everything about the crop when she goes to the national pageant in Houston Texas in August.

How does one go about becoming Princess Soya? Judy said girls between 17 and 25 whose fathers produce soybeans are eligible to be nominated in their counties.

Then girls from the 16 soybean producing counties in the state send in forms that are a lot like applications for a job. Eight semifinalists are included in the final contest at the Hilton Inn in Raleigh.

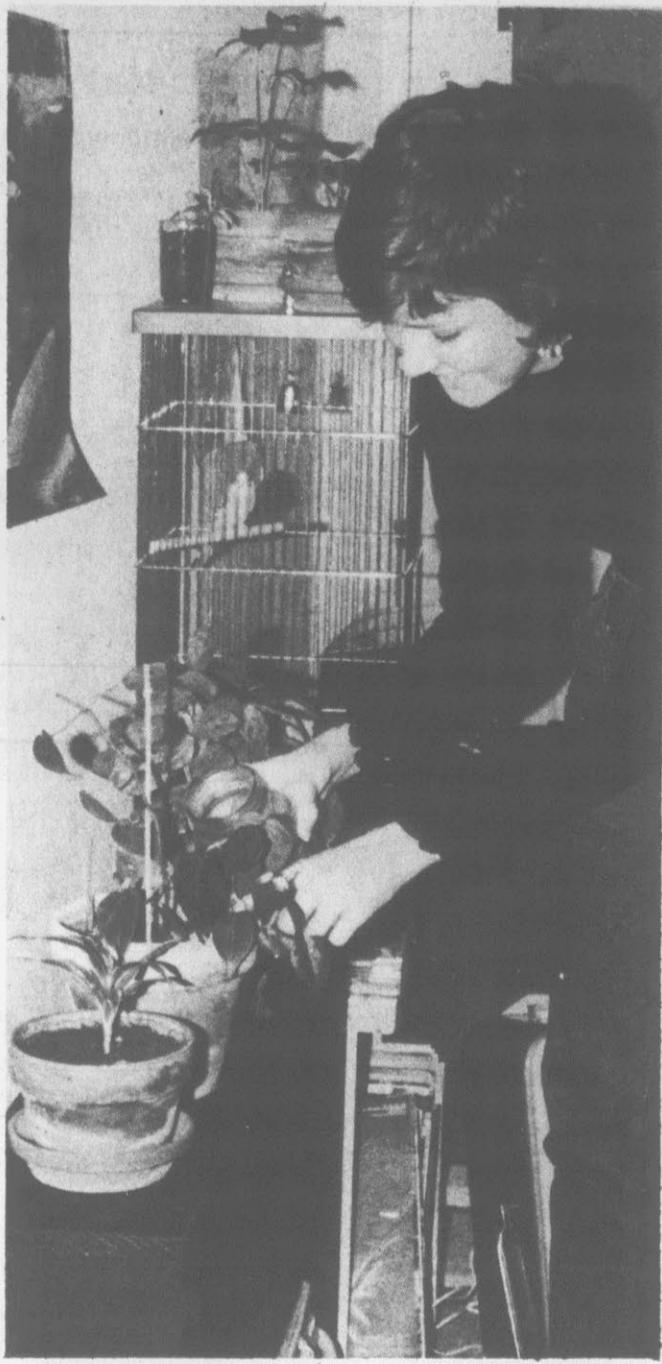

"All the girls did a routine about soybeans. Then each had long dress competition and did a three minute speech on the topic of her choice."

During her reign, the 20-year-old speech pathology major will represent the North Carolina Soybean Producers Convention in various activities throughout the state.

Among her duties will be attending parades, going to processing plants to learn about soybeans, and making several radio and television appearances.

"My reign will probably interfere with my school work, but the people have been very nice about it. They understand that my school work must come first."

Judy was awarded a $200 scholarship for winning the pageant, and noted that she is

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Junius Evens of Route 2, Fremont, the newly crowned princess enjoys raising plants, doing needlepoint and embroidery, playing the piano and talking to her pet parakeet Jesse.

When she finishes school, Judy said she'd like to work with small children with speech and hearing problems.

But for the moment, the farthest Judy can see is August and the highlight of her reign: her trip to Houston for the national pageant.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For the last nine months, a book called "How To Be Your Own Best Friend" has led the list of best sellers.

I have purposely ignored the book because the last time I tried to be a friend to myself I took me to lunch, gained three pounds and have been suspicious of me ever since.

My resistance to thinking highly of myself goes back to my childhood when I was taught to take a chicken back and pass the rest on, hold the door open until the entire city filed in-out, always vote for my opponent for row monitor, and run to the end of every line. How could I have respect for a loser like that?

Ironically, my best friend, Mayva, talked me into reading the book. "You are always putting yourself down," she said, "and you've got a lot going for you."

"If I had any more going for me, I'd tell my life story in an Aysds ad."

"There you go again," she said, "making fun of yourself. Just read the book. You'll see on the jacket that Berry Berenson and Nora Ephron loved it."

"No kidding," I gasped, snatching it from her hand.

I sat there holding the book for a full hour trying to figure out who Berry Berenson and Nora Ephron were. Then I began to read.

The next morning when Mayva popped in she said, "You wanta go to Revco? They've got a sale on vitamins."

"I am in command of my own destiny, Mayva. No one tells me what to do anymore. I'm my own woman."

"Terrific," she said. "Have you got gas?"

"You have never appreciated my potential, have you, Mayva? I think it would surprise you to know that I have talents worth dwelling on."

"Yes, but do you have a tank full of gas?"

"There's a child in me, Mayva. . ."

"My God. . ."

"Not THAT kind of child. Let me finish. There's a child in me that is like being born again. I am opening my eyes to my own wonderfulness. From here on in, I am going to listen to my own voice."

"What are you trying to say?" asked Mayva.

"I am too good for you, Mayva," I said. "Now that I have complete confidence in myself I have replaced you with me as my own best friend."

Mayva turned to leave and then asked, "Then why aren't you happy?"

"Because I'm dull and I'm stuck with me."

See Dermatologist For Advice

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is primarily one of vanity. For years I have been conscious of the fact that all the women in my family have faces that start to sag early. By the time they are 40, they look like bulldogs. I am in my early 30s, and already I can see the same thing happening to me. Is there anything I can do about it?
WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: See a dermatologist for advice on how to slow up the aging process. And see a plastic surgeon later.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a godchild we've seen only twice in our lives. She's 22 now and sent us an invitation to her wedding. We would have gone even tho it would have meant traveling to another state and spending a night in a motel, but the date of her wedding conflicted with the opening of hunting season. My husband loves to hunt, and I've never planned anything that would keep him from his hunting.

I wrote her a nice letter, explaining why we couldn't attend her wedding. A few days later we received this one from her:

"Dear godparents: I received your letter today, and I am disappointed and insulted. My fiance is also a hunter, and so are many of his friends, but they all seem able to make it to our wedding. Hunting season comes every year, but I get married only once, therefore I feel that your excuse is very flimsy and downright disgusting. And please don't send me a gift as it won't be appreciated."
YOUR GODDAUGHTER

Abby, we were shocked! I wanted to reply, but my husband said: "Ignore it." He was also glad we declined now that he found out what kind of a person she is.
SHOCKED

How would you have handled this?
DEAR SHOCKED: When declining the invitation, I'd have omitted the reason. But since you didn't, and she took offense, I'd have ignored her rude letter and saved the price of a wedding gift.

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if your husband came home with lipstick on his shirt, trousers, underwear and some on his neck, too? Also, Norbert has hairs on his coat, and they were a color like nobody in our family has. [Looks like a redhead.]

I questioned him, and he swore up and down he didn't know how any of this stuff got there.

Norbert works in an office with just one woman. I've never met her, but he says she's as homely as a mud fence. I want to trust him, but with all this evidence, how can I?
UPSET IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR UPSET: First I'd find out if this "mud fence" has red hair. If she has, I'd suspect that she was close enough to Norbert to transfer the above-mentioned evidence. [P.S. Any man who comes home in that shape can plead "insanity" and get away with it.]

DEAR ABBY: I am in prison serving a 10-year sentence for the death of my wife. I did a terrible thing which will follow me for the rest of my life. I have two children, 6 and 4. I love them very much. In fact, that is what led to my killing my wife. I thought she was neglecting them, so I put a gun to her head—only meaning to scare her, but I killed her. God help me, Abby. I never meant to kill her.

My problem concerns my children. They are living in a foster home now, but before then, my wife's parents kept them, and naturally they told the kids what happened to their mother but I don't think the kids fully understood it.

The foster parents were advised by a priest to tell the children something about death, so they were told their mother got sick and the angels came and took her away. They seem to accept her death, but they have been asking to visit me. They know I am "locked up." If they come here what shall I tell them?
A NUMBER IN MARYLAND

DEAR NUMBER: Don't lie. Tell them you are being punished because while you meant only to "scare" their mother, you accidentally killed her. [It's true.] With proper counseling, your children will grow to understand your part in this tragedy, and hopefully, they will harbor no bitterness or hate in their hearts for you. God bless.

Copy-Cat Cookery: English Mint Caramels

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Now that the energy crisis is upon us and car gas short, there's bound to be a return to an old-fashioned and delicious home activity — making candy. If this pursuit strikes your family's fancy, we have a great new recipe to recommend. Here's how I happened on it:

My nephew is married to a young British woman and when they return from visits to England, she usually brings me some food I can't get here: one year a special brand of curry powder and one of pappadums; another, Demerara sugar. Last fall her gift was some packages of mint-flavor caramels. No sooner were they almost gone than I had a yearning for more! So I gave the last treasured batchful to some candy-making experts in the hope that they would be interested in duplicating the original. They were. When I tasted their handiwork I thought it an excellent stand-in for the British product and when their recipe was tested in my own kitchen it was successful. I'm happy to pass it along.

But one caution. Caramel-making is a labor of love. The candy needs undivided attention from the person in charge. That's why it's a good family activity — there'll be other hands to answer the phone or doorbell. Also to help with the long and constant stirring and to wrap each caramel individually.

MINT CARAMELS

- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup dark corn syrup
- 2 eight-ounce containers light cream
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1-3rd cup butter or margarine
- 1 teaspoon peppermint extract

Into a large, heavy saucepan turn the sugar, corn syrup and the cream from one of the containers. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Very gradually, so mixture does not stop boiling, stir in the cream from the remaining container. Stirring constantly, boil 5 minutes. Stir in butter about 1 teaspoon at a time. Turn heat low. Still stirring constantly, boil gently until temperature reaches 258 degrees on a candy thermometer until a teaspoonful of the mixture dropped into very cold water forms a ball that is hard enough to hold its shape, yet plastic. (This whole process will take at least 1 hour and mixture will be very thick toward end of cooking.) Remove from heat. Gently stir in the peppermint extract. Let stand 10 minutes. Pour into lightly greased 8-inch-square cake pan, using a rubber spatula to scrape candy from bottom of pan but not around sides. Place pan on wire rack and cool until bottom of pan feels slightly warm. With a small spatula, loosen around edges; turn out onto cutting board. (If candy sticks on turning out, slowly pass bottom of pan over a surface unit, set low, of range.)

Let cool a little more before marking off 3/4-inch squares and cutting with a large, sharp knife. Place caramels, a little apart, on a sheet of wax paper and cool completely. Wrap each caramel in wax paper, folding in and twisting ends. Makes about 2 pounds medium-hard caramels similar to the British product on which this recipe was modeled; for a softer caramel that is sometimes preferred, cook only to 250 degrees but use the same water test.

Note: We used the 4-quart heavy aluminum pan from our pressure cooker in making these caramels.

Four hundred recipes are given in the illustrated "Cecily Brownstone's Associated Press Cookbook" available by sending $4.95 (check or money order made payable to "The Associated Press") to this newspaper in care of AP COOKBOOK, Box G4, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

A Little Light Is Big Help

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (WNS)—Determined to save electricity in the energy crisis, Betsy Drenning tried to brush her teeth in the dark. She dropped her toothbrush, bent to pick it up and gashed her head on the sink. Then she fell downstairs as she sought help. "I spent a week in bed and thought things over while recovering," she said. "Now I use candles."

Keep Lines Of Communication Open With Teen-Ager Between Us

Mother's sense of humor avoided this 'war of words' and turned Ron's criticism into cooperation.

By DR. ALICE GINOTT
MANY PARENTS ARE easy victims of their teenager's provocations. Not this mother. She turned provocation into cooperation.

Ron, 16, saw his mother unloading fresh fruit from a bag. With a wry smile he said, "Do something right for once Mom, and put the fruit right into the refrigerator." Mother replied, "I did something right once. I produced you! Now, help me with the fruit." Ron chuckled and started unloading. Mother related: "How easy it would have been at that moment to start a war of words, 'What do you mean, do something right? Who do you think you are to talk to your mother like that?' 'What helped me keep my cool, and my tongue, was the statement, 'authority calls for brevity.'"

THE FOLLOWING EPISODE illustrates how a mother reached her teenagers by being forthright.

Mother and her three teenagers were riding along, looking for a hamburger stand. After an hour of driving, and listening to constant complaints, Mother stopped the car and said, "My head is hurting from the sun and from your grumbling. What I need is help. I need someone to give me courage and hope—to find our way off this awful road."

The grumbling stopped immediately. The boys responded, "We'll find a place to eat, Mom. We don't mind waiting. And we'll cheer ourselves up with a game."

TEENAGERS' response to parental words of understanding differs dramatically from their reaction to unsolicited advice. For example: Ken (14): I got my lowest grade in social studies. I didn't see two questions worth ten points on the test. That pulled my whole average down.

FAT IS DANGEROUS TO BABIES' HEALTH
DUBLIN (AP) — Fat babies are a problem of modern society, say doctors at St. James Hospital in Dublin. They have a greater tendency to infections of the upper respiratory tract, like pneumonia. They are more likely than thin children to have stomach troubles like enteritis and appendicitis.

Mother: How upsetting!
Ken: Yea. I knew the answers, I just didn't see the questions. I asked the teacher what I could do for extra credit to keep my A average. She let me do a book report on heart surgery. Let me tell you about this book.

That evening, Ken told his father about his test. Father: Oh? Well what can you do to make sure that this will not happen again?
Ken (furious): What makes you think that it will happen again?
Ken walked off in a huff. He never told his father about the book he was reading and how he had already tried to make up for the low grade.

Mother's attentive ear and her reflection of her son's feelings in his predicament opened up channels of communication. She learned a great deal about her son's sense of responsibility. In contrast, Father's rushing in with advice and suggestions enraged Ken, and blocked communication between Father and son.

MOTHER'S EMPHATIC approach in this vignette led her daughter to re-evaluate her words and amend her ways:

Mother visited her daughter at college. They went into a camera shop to get a new battery for a movie camera. The manager indicated that the camera was broken.

Martha 18, accused Mother: "See what you've done! You must have mistreated the camera or dropped it. The telephoto is stuck. It'll cost over $50 to fix it. Meanwhile, I can't use the camera!"

Mother, ignoring the outburst, discussed the problem with the manager.

After they left the store, Mother said, "Martha, problems are not solved by blaming." Martha answered, sarcastically, "I suppose I should've said, 'Mother, dear, this very expensive camera is broken, due to your carelessness. Cameras are not for breaking.'" Mother said, "All you needed to say was: 'Mother, the problem seems to be more serious than we expected. It's not just the battery.'"

There was a long silence, then Martha said, "I'm sorry I've gotten into this habit of blaming. I'm going to get out of it."

Instant good mood prevailed.
A PARENT'S UNEXPECTED kindness, has great impact on a teenager. For example:

Nick (14): Aw. Tomorrow is Monday! I hate school this year. Last week I got kicked out of three classes in one day.

Mother (slowly): If that ever happens again, ask permission to go to the office and call me and I'll pick you up. You shouldn't be in school on a day like that.

Nick, who expected a lecture, sighed with relief. He said, "Gee Mom, you're great!"

Mother made a mental note to look into the school situation to see how she could help.

Choice Aided More Will Benefit By Dempsey From FHA Changes

LONDON (UPI) — Billionaire oil man J. Paul Getty wanted to be a professional boxer as a young man and asked Jack Dempsey for his opinion.

Dempsey put his thoughts into a couple of rights and lefts that dumped Getty on the canvas. Getty changed his mind and went on to become one of the richest men in the world.

That incident of nearly 60 years ago was recalled by Getty as host of a luncheon at his stately home outside London. The former heavyweight champ was in Britain as guest of the Ladbroke and Hertford Clubs.

Getty told the guests who included Mrs. Dempsey, her daughter Barbara and some Japanese oil men, how he had gone to Dempsey's training camp. "Jack", I told him, "we're friends but I want to be a professional fighter. So I want to put on the gloves with you and try to knock you out. In turn I want your promise that you'll do your best to knock me out. This will be the test of whether I've got enough to make it in the ring."

After getting up for the third or fourth time Getty said he thought he would look elsewhere for fame and fortune.

"So you see," Getty said, "how much I owe Jack."

Jack said after the lunch that "I hit him hard enough to convince him he didn't have

Notes Teaching Has Its Perils

NEW YORK (UPI) — Teaching has its perils, says Frank Ward, graduate student at the University of Rochester Department of Psychology.

He offers some tongue-in-cheek advice to novice college instructors. The first problem he tackled: the situation involving a student throwing up during the teacher's first lecture.

Ward's RX: "The show must go on. Ignore minor classroom interruptions and unsolicited comments on lecture quality."

much chance as a professional fighter but not hard enough to really hurt him."

And as the party broke up Dempsey told his old friend: "The oil business hasn't done too badly for you, has it?"

Provocative Drama Next

GE ORIGINAL — Paul Sorvino and Maureen Stapleton star in "Tell Me Where It Hurts," which the GE Theater will present on Tuesday evening, March 12, 9:30-11 p.m. The 90-minute teleplay by Fay Kanin probes the special problems of a woman whose family has grown up. Miss Stapleton has earned plaudits in all areas of dramatic entertainment.

"Tell Me Where It Hurts," a 90-minute original teleplay by screenwriter Fay Kanin starring Maureen Stapleton and Paul Sorvino, will be seen on GE Theater, Tuesday, March 12, 9:30 to 11:00 p.m., on Channel 9-11.

Although the film was shot entirely on location in Los Angeles and Santa Monica, California, the settings and background are such that the local of "Tell Me Where It Hurts" could be set in any city in the United States.

The story tackles the subject of mature women needing a change in their daily pattern of living.

"It is not a story," according to Fay Kanin, "about a woman's consciousness or movements or activism, or any of the words we have come to recognize in the language of the last four years. It is about women, and the men who are inextricably part of them — lovers, providers, adversaries, friends.

"The characters are neither symbols or stereotypes. They are, I hope, only human hungering for ways to change their lives for the better and inevitably discovering that change is never accomplished without pain."

Maureen Stapleton plays Connie, a middle-aged housewife married to Joe, a taxi driver played by Sorvino. Both are facing the first major decision since their wedding.

Others in the cast are Doris Dowling, Rose Gregorio, Louis Latham, Scottie MacGregor, Ayn Ruyman, Pearl Shear and Patricia Smith.

All of the performers have at one time appeared on the New York stage, one of the principal reasons they were cast in their parents by producer Herbert Hirschman.

"I find New York actors less theatrical than Hollywood film players. They don't stress perfect speech when playing ordinary characters. This is a story about ordinary lower middle-class people who aren't too sophisticated.

"I needed the type of actors who could interpret the characters in the Fay Kanin teleplay as she wrote them. I feel we accomplished this," said Hirschman.

Miss Kanin, who two years ago won critical acclaim for her TV film, "Heat of Anger" starring Susan Hayward, believes that "Tell Me Where It Hurts" will be looked upon as one of the most relevant shows about mature married people ever presented on television.

The GE Theater production, directed by Paul Bogart, is a story about six married, middle-aged women, all of whom are friends, each sensing something different is needed in her life.

"Tell Me Where It Hurts" is in the tradition of 'Marty' or 'Brand New Life,' " says Hirschman, "with its affectionate and meticulous attention to real people and real life.

"But it is more pertinent in that it deals with an important contemporary movement and is far more relevant to the television audience."

'Case Of Rape' Widely Viewed

"A Case of Rape," the dramatization of a subject of growing importance and concern, was the most widely viewed "made-for-television" movie in TV history.

The two-hour World Premiere film, which starred Elizabeth Montgomery as the victim registered a 33.2 National Nielsen rating and a 50 percent share of audience. Nielsen also reported it was seen in 21,980,000 homes, an all-time high for a "made-for-TV" movie.

Robt. Vaughn Plays Harry Truman Role

President Harry S. Truman, the plain-talking brilliant intellect with the common man's visage, will be portrayed by Robert Vaughn in the fourth of the widely-acclaimed "Portrait" series.

The program, entitled "Portrait — The Man From Independence," will be telecast Monday, March 11 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

The dramatization will center on the life of Truman in the eventful year of 1929 when his judgeship in Independence, Missouri, put him in conflict with political boss Tom Pendergast (played by Arthur Kennedy) and various contractors.

Confrontation with the contractors led to an attempt on his life and on the kidnapping of his six-year-old daughter, Margaret.

In the story, 45-year-old Judge Truman has the administrative duty of awarding contracts for road construction and other public works.

Contractors who have supported Kansas City political boss

Pendergast and Truman's election to the post, expect favored treatment and contract awards in return.

But the honest and incorruptible man, who was to become the 33rd President during one of the most difficult periods in American history rejects the contractors' bids.

He charges them with having poor material, bad construction and high prices.

In addition, his stand is fortified by his recollections of one of the contractors as a Ku Klux Klan charter head.

PLAYS TRUMAN — Robert Vaughn stars as the young Harry Truman, just beginning his political career, in "Portrait: The Man From Independence" on Monday, March 11 (10-11 p.m.), on Channel 3-5-12.

Children On Tour In 'Make A Wish'

"Make a Wish," the children's series, demonstrates that remote subterranean caves in Indiana are marked with graffiti as are monuments in New York, while the program explores the many meanings of the key word, "line," Sunday, March 10.

The Peabody Award-winning series also examines what it's like to live in the mountains of Wyoming and New Mexico in the course of pursuing the meanings and associations of the word, "mountain."

In the opening segment, singer-guitarist Tom Chapin takes young viewers with him for a walk along a line near the Plaza de Cibeles in Madrid and sings about the many different kinds of lines that exist. For example, he notes, there is the Mason-Dixon line, as well as the skyline of New York—a city where many public places are marred with graffiti.

The practice of writing graffiti has spread from cities to almost every part of the country, Chapin observes, as "Make a Wish" cameras focus on the beautiful Salamander Caves in southern Indiana near Bloomington. Here Dr. Rene Curl, President of the National Speleological Society, leads a tour of the caves where graffiti writers also have left their mark. In addition he explains the unusual water system of the caves and the formation of stalagmites over hundreds of thousands of years.

As part of its study of "mountain," "Make a Wish" goes to Jackson Hole, Wyoming, in the Grand Tetons to interview Wes Marks, a naturalist-photographer, and to Taos, New Mexico, to talk to ski instructor Edwin Blake. The men describe their life styles and their love for the mountains where they work and live.

Visitors Cooled By 'Fun City'

All the miseries that can befall New York City visitors seem to come crashing down on two innocents from the Midwest, played by Jack Lemmon and Sandy Dennis in "The Out-of-Towners." Neil Simon's first comedy written specifically for the screen, airing on "ABC Sunday Night Movie," March 10 (8:30-10:30 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

The supporting cast, representing the often-frustrating local characters who sometimes take the fun out of "Fun City," includes comedy stars Anne Meara, Sandy Baron, Ann Prentiss, Ron Carey and Anthony Holland.

"The Out-of-Towners" opens with good news for George Kellerman (Lemmon), a small-town Ohio businessman who is offered a position as Vice President in his company's New York office.

George and his wife, Gwen (Miss Dennis), depart for a preliminary visit to the city with golden dreams of a new and glamorous life. The gold begins to tarnish quickly.

First, after they suffer through a three-hour holding pattern over the New York airport, their plane lands in Boston, neatly eliminating George's carefully planned big night on the town. The overcrowded train taking them to Manhattan has run out of food. Instead of an elegant French dinner they settle for a peanut butter sandwich.

In New York they discover that most everyone is on strike - including the sanitation department, which leaves mountains of garbage in the "canyons of steel." At the hotel, their reservations have been cancelled - which is just as well, since George's money, identification and faith in his fellow man all vanish as he is systematically robbed every hour on the hour. After that things don't go so well.

"The Out-of-Towners," which had the courage to film on location in New York in spite of its disdainful attitude toward the joys of life in that city, marked a reunion for writer Neil Simon and Lemmon, who also starred in Simon's "The Odd Couple."

WALLS, WALLS, WALLS,

Walls are the largest expanse of unbroken space in any room—something we're often inclined to forget. Usually, we give walls a decorative coating of wallpaper or paint, and think of them only as the attractive back-drop in the room. But walls can be much more than that. In fact, they can often be made to work overtime as highly functional elements, whatever the size of the room. They can be utilized in a variety of different ways. Try them hung with shelves or dressed with wall-hung furniture.

If you are planning a change in your home, you might consider new wall to wall carpet. Expert workmanship is assured. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale." "Carpet Is Our Business, Not a Hobby."

Let's Make A Deal Is In 11th Season

"Let's Make a Deal," an audience participation show starring Monty Hall, is in its eleventh season with daily colorcasts, Monday - through - Friday (1:30-2 p.m.) on ABC-TV. The show's key elements are suspense and surprise as host Hall "deals" in prizes, some of high value and others worthless, in exchange for bizarre items brought to the colorcasts by members of the audience. "Traders," as contestants are called, find the decision "to deal or not to deal" difficult because the prizes are disguised. A garbage can, for example, may contain a mink coat or it may be empty; a neatly wrapped gift package may hold a diamond ring, or merely a cheap bracelet. At the end of each day's program, Hall gives the traders a chance at a major prize, such as an automobile or color television set, located behind one of three doors on the stage. Traders are usually chosen on the basis of their unique objects, or on the way they are dressed. The contestants not only bring unbelievable items retrieved from attics or storerooms, but they frequently offer homemade objects which represent much time, effort and creativity. Monty Hall marked the start of his 11th year as host of "Let's Make a Deal" by reaching an agreement with ABC to produce various late-night variety shows. Monty will also host some segments of ABC Wide World of Entertainment." This expansion of activities is in keeping with Hall's talent for hard work and creativity. In addition to hosting and appearing on various talk shows, he had a highly successful two-week stand at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas. His act was based on the "Let's Make a Deal" format and included singing and dancing. Monty began his professional career in his native Canada.

11TH YEAR — Blackjack with the eleven of hearts: That's one deal that Monty Hall isn't going to get away with, judging from the look on Jay Stewart's face, and even the charms of Carol Merrill won't change his mind. The eleven is just a symbol of "Let's Make a Deal's" eleventh consecutive year on ABC. The popular show is seen Monday through Friday (1:30-2:00 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12, with Monty as host, Jay as announcer, and Carol as the show's regular model.

Last Season For 'Lucy'

Lucille Ball announced today that she would not return next season in her half-hour television series "Here's Lucy." Miss Ball's genius, however, will not be lost to television, since she has agreed to star in a number of specials on CBS-TV.
 In announcing her plans for next season, Miss Ball said, "I am extremely happy to continue my long and successful association with CBS. I always like a change of pace, and doing specials next season will give me a chance to try some exciting new ideas I've been working on for some time."

Following Miss Ball's announcement, Robert D. Wood,

President, CBS Television Network, stated, "Lucille Ball has been the 'First Lady of Television' for 23 consecutive seasons. I join 50 million fans of her Monday night series when I express my disappointment over her decision. It is understandable, particularly since no other star contributes so much energy and artistry to each performance. Our only compensation is that Lucy will be back in a number of specials that will keep her as a member of the CBS Television Network family."

Filmed The Impossible For Scene

"Theoretically, it is not possible to fly two helicopters inside one building. The wash from the first so disrupts the air that the second cannot fly. Pilots and aeronautical engineers consider the concept so dangerous that it has never been tried."

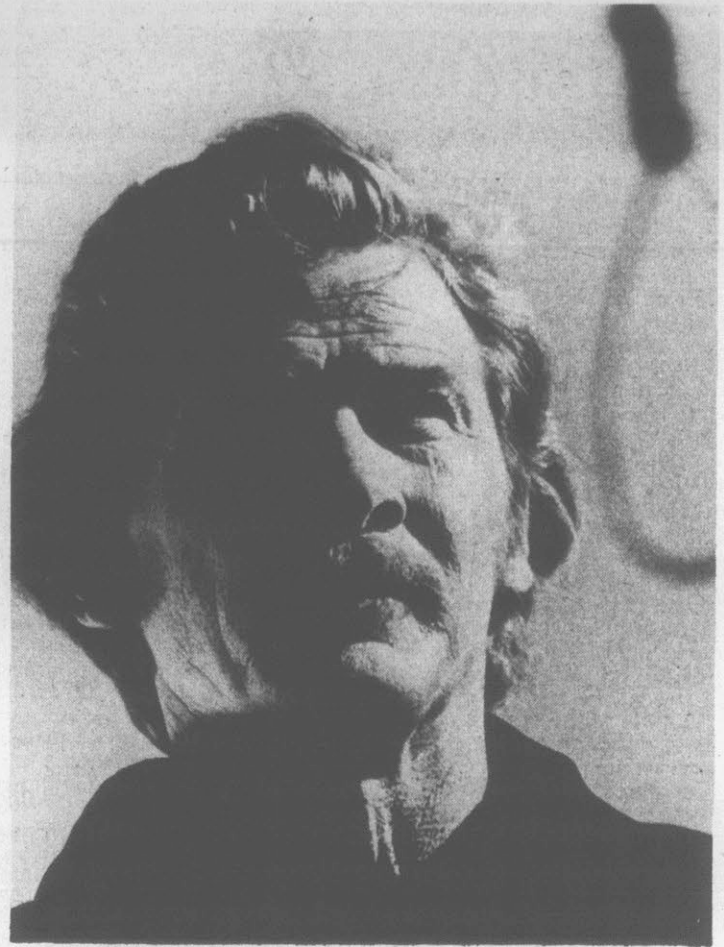

That was the conclusion of a research report prepared for "Birds of Prey" on "The CBS Thursday Night Movie" Thursday, March 14 (9:00-10:30 PM) on Channel 3N-9-11.

But that's what viewers will see—two helicopters flying inside a building—in a climatic scene of the helicopter chase thriller, starring David Janssen as an airwatch pilot pursuing fleeing bank robbers.

How the feat was achieved is a story of technical know-how by skilled pilot James Gavin, who supervised the picture's aerial sequences—including a chopper skimming at car-roof level in a chase through city streets and a flight into a giant open-pit copper mine.

Gavin, a veteran of the Korean War and experienced in both fixed wing and rotary aircraft, relates:

"I was sure that if we went slowly enough and had enough preparation, we could do what the script called for. We wanted to use a big hanger at the inactive

'Paradise' Said State Of Mind

"I've been a lot of places, but I've never found a real paradise where people are happy just because they're there," says Broderick Crawford, who guest stars on the Renee Taylor-Joe Bologna comedy special "Paradise" Tuesday, March 12 (8:30-9:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV. ## Wonder Women Vs. Spy Ring In ABC Film

In "Wonder Woman," the heroine of the popular comic book of the 1940s enters the 1970s as a beautiful woman endowed with unique powers of wisdom and strength, and charged with the recovery of vital documents stolen by an international spy ring, on "Tuesday Movie of the Week," MARCH 12 (8:30-10 PM) on Channel 3W-5-12. Diana Price, otherwise known as Wonder Woman, is a fully capable, independent, but totally female woman. She is faster, stronger and smarter than anyone else, but she never loses her femininity or her sensitivity. The title role of Wonder Woman is played by Cathy Lee Crosby, a former top tennis star who is presently being seen in movie theatres in "The Laughing Policeman." Also starring in the action-advantage film is Kaz Garas as Steve Trevor, Chief of Operations of the Special Projects Section of Combined U. S. Military-Civilian Intelligence. In guest star roles are Ricardo Montalban as Abner Smith, an independent operator in the world of intrigue, and Andrew Prince as George Calvin, his ego-driven assistant.

Pvt. Eddie Slovik's Execution

The true story of Eddie Slovik (Martin Sheen) — who, during World War II, was the only American serviceman executed for desertion since the Civil War — is traced from his young adulthood to his execution in France in "The Execution of Private Slovik," a two-and-a-half-hour World Premiere drama to be colorcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies" March 13 (8:30-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Mariclare Costello co-stars as Slovik's wife and Ned Beatty portrays the Catholic Chaplain who comforts Slovik just before the execution.

Sheen, who was acclaimed for his performances in the Broadway and film versions of "The Subject was Roses" and two TV films, "That Certain Summer" and "Catholics," calls his role as Slovik, "the most demanding and rewarding of my career."

The script is based on the book of the same name by William Bradford Huie.

The producer, Richard Levinson, calls the film, "perhaps the most complicated movie ever made for television." There are 70 speaking parts and it was filmed in 25 shooting days at 80 locations, including Canada.

The film deals with the question of why Slovik deserted and why he was executed. Of the thousands of American servicemen who deserted during World War II, about 3,000 were tried, 49 were sentenced to death but only Slovik was shot.

After his release from a Michigan reformatory — where he served time for minor brushes with the law — Slovik returns to his native Detroit where he meets and falls in love with Antoinette (Miss Costello).

PREPARES FOR EXECUTION — Martin Sheen (center) as Eddie Slovik, who, during World War II, was the only American serviceman to be executed for desertion since the Civil War, has a few brief words with Father Paul Stafford (Ned Beatty, right) in "The Execution of Private Slovik," a World Premier film to be colorcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies" March 13 (8:30-11:00 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

She and Eddie marry, having been told that because of his prison record he would not be drafted. But after they have settled down in a new apartment, and he is advancing steadily in his job, he is drafted.

Bitterly disappointed, Slovik goes off to Army camp, determined never to fire his rifle and to get out of the Army one way or another.

Filming the death scene for "The Execution of Private Slovik," was a highly emotional experience for everyone involved.

"All sorts of strange things were happening. During the filming," Sheen said, "the actor who portrayed the officer who gave the order to fire, stood there and said, 'Ready, aim...' and then there was this long awkward pause before he said 'fire.' So we had to do the scene over."

 The ABC News action-adventure documentary will be seen on Friday, March 22 (8:30-9:30 p.m.).
 Even though the Calypso is in danger of being frozen in during the sub-zero temperatures, and is seriously crippled with a damaged propeller and a gash torn in her wooden hull above the water line, Captain Jacques Cousteau is determined to complete his studies.
 But time is running out. With the ship and equipment covered with snow and ice, Cousteau and his divers face the chilling and dangerous prospect of filming the behavior of Antarctic birds and animals under the most adverse conditions.

Cousteau and his divers discover one of the greatest concentrations of wildlife in all Antarctica - on and below the ice. A colony of near-extinct, beautiful fur seals is sighted from the helicopter, and the Calypso wedges between an iceberg and a land glacier while photographers film the hearty inhabitants at newly named "Port Calypso."

'Go' Looks At Network

"GO" takes a behind-the-scenes look at how a television network functions on the program of Saturday, March 16 (12:30-1 p.m.). Taping by the special mobile cameras was done at the NBC Studios in New York and Burbank. Some of TV's top personalities were caught by the cameras — Johnny Carson, Redd Foxx, Demond Wilson, John Chancellor and Art Fleming.

Home viewers will see a part of the arm-up which takes place in the Burbank studio where "Sanford and Son" originates. They also will be taken on a tour of the set for "The Flip Wilson Show" and will see how the scenic designers meet their weekly problems.

Turning to news, the program shows how the vast news-gathering apparatus of NBC operates with its hundreds of far-flung employees contributing to nightly newscasts. The Telestar Communications satellite is also explained.

Cameras then pick up some of the action involved in coverage of such sports as baseball, hockey and football.

Host of this "GO" Program is NBC News Correspondent Catherine Mackin.

VERY TRICKY

Bill Bixby always knows when he's done a magic scene successfully for "The Magician" because someone in the crew will ask him: "How'd you do that?" Bill's usual answer: "Very well" or "Very carefully."

Peking Opera Rebroadcast

The Chinese Peking opera is an art form that dates back centuries before the birth of Christ.

"Yet the age does not detract from the pure entertainment values," says Tisa Chang, who adapted the 300-year-old opera "The Return of Phoenix" for the television special to be rebroadcast Saturday, March 16 (12-1 p.m.) in the ongoing "CBS Festival of the Lively Arts for Young People" series on Channel 9-11.

A musical fantasy tale of a beautiful young girl, a scheming step-sister and mistaken identity, "The Return of Phoenix" incorporates such Peking opera tradition as colorful costumes and visual humor, with English dialogue and some modern music.

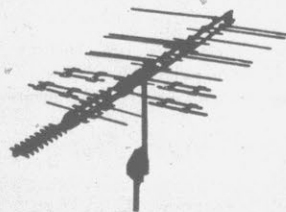

"The Peking opera," Miss Chang explains, "always ends happily and always concentrates on high points rather than spelling everything out. While pantomime and dance style are basic to the storytelling, the essential is music. It establishes mood and atmosphere, and sets the pace of speech and movement into a sort of dance."

Why has Chinese Peking opera survived? Miss Chang says simply, "It's purpose is to stimulate the imagination while using all means of entertaining the eyes and ears."

COMIC RELIEF — Lynette Chun portrays an unlikely mate for any man in "The Return of Phoenix," musical fantasy adaptation of the ancient Chinese Peking opera, which will launch the "CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People" on Saturday, Oct. 27 (1:00-2:00 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Baseball Schedule Is Ready

The Atlanta Braves, featuring Henry Aaron with 713 home runs — just two away from breaking the legendary Babe Ruth's record of 714 career homers — will appear on television twice in the space of three days starting April 6.

In addition to the previously announced prime-time debut of the Braves and Aaron in Atlanta, Monday, April 8 (8 p.m.), Major League Baseball's first Game - Of - The - Week, Saturday, April 6 (2 p.m.) will be colorcast from Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium where the Braves will engage the Cincinnati Reds.

The Braves-Reds game will open an ambitious schedule of 41 regular - season contests on NBC-TV in 1974. Of this number, 26 will be colorcast on Saturday afternoons and 15 on Monday nights.

This matches the total of Saturday afternoon and Monday night games telecast by NBC in 1973, a record year for regular-season games on the network.

The Saturday and Monday games during the season will be in addition to the World Series (as many as three games in night-time hours), the All-Star Game at night, and the National and American League championship series.

This season's 15 Monday Night Baseball games get off to an early start with the telecasting of Aaron's first home game of the season on April 8. The remaining 14 Monday night games will be colorcast May 27; June 3, 10, 17, 24; July 1, 8, 15, 29; August 5, 12, 19, 26; Sept. 2.

Frazier Credits Defense

The New York Knickerbockers are one of the two original teams remaining since the establishment of the National Basketball Association in 1946.

In their 18 years of existence, they have provided the NBA with a strong foundation from which to launch its continuing growth. Although the Knicks were the first pro basketball team to attract over one million spectators in a season, they did not win an NBA Championship until 1970 and then again in 1973.

"I can't find any satisfaction in scoring 25 points and having my team come up a loser," says star guard Walt Frazier. "There is a lot more to this game than just putting the ball in the basket. The only sure way to build a winner is to start with defense."

Walt Frazier not only feels that way, he plays that way. The Knickerbockers pride themselves on being a true team, where all contribute and work for the total effort and success of the group. Although the team is loaded with superstars, they mesh their individual talents to suit the over-all attributes of the squad. This blending together creates a smooth synchronized unit.

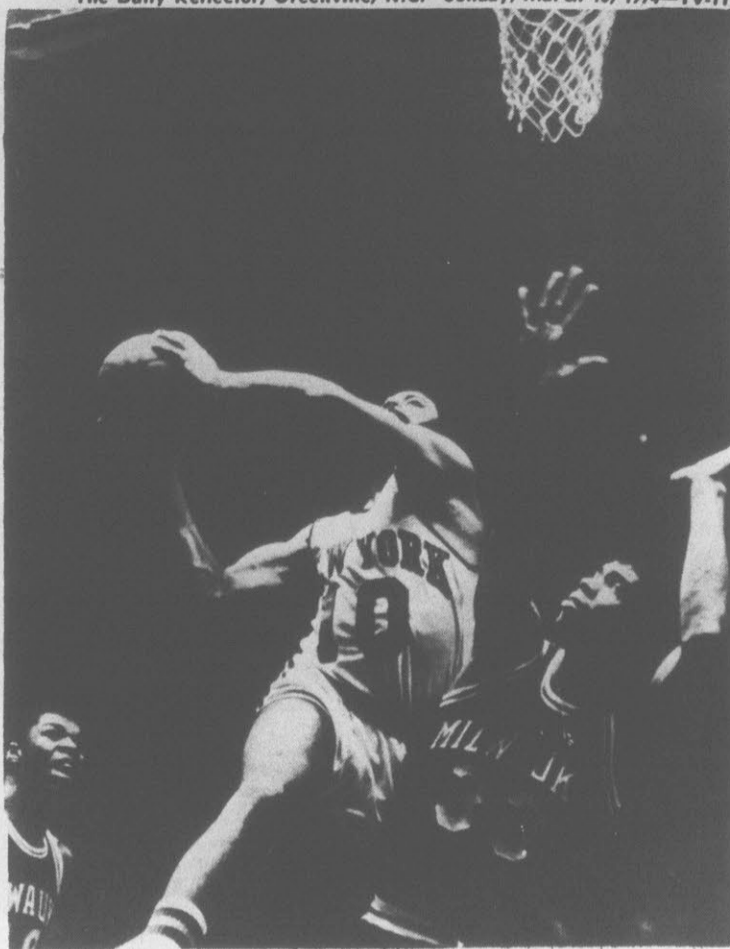

Aware of this, Frazier who could score more than 25 points a game, every game, does a lot more than hit field goals. He and his teammates take tremendous pride in their defensive prowess; as a result, their defense is so effective that it often overshadows the brilliant offensive maneuvers of the squad.

Walt Frazier has established himself throughout the NBA as the greatest defensive guard in the game. His performance on the court has been so superior he is considered a defensive genius.

In 1969, the league's coaches started selecting players for an All-Star Defensive team. That year's top selection was Walt Frazier, and he has been their top pick every season since.

Clyde, the nickname the Knicks have for Walt Frazier, is noted for his fast hands and repeated steals that make him basketball's slickest ball thief; however, when it comes to scoring, Walt is not a "weak sister." He knows it takes points to win; and when necessary, he can flip in those one-handers.

Prior to the 1971-72 season, Walt had a 17.4 per game scoring average. In 1972, the Knicks were without the services of Willis Reed, and Frazier knew he had to up his average if the Knicks were going to survive without Reed.

LEADS KNICKS — The elusive Walt Frazier of the New York Knicks, (center, in white) evades the high-reaching Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Milwaukee Bucks during a typically torrid game between two contenders for the NBC crown. Frazier will lead the New York Knickerbockers against the Golden State Warriors in a live contest from the Oakland Coliseum, Thursday, March 14 at 10:30 p.m. on Channels 9-11.

Triggered 'Industry' In Authenticity Field

When Jean Marsh and her fellow actress and co-creator of "Upstairs, Downstairs", came up with the bright idea of a series about a pre-World War I London family and its servants, they had no idea they would be triggering a small industry in authenticity.

But that's what happened when "Upstairs, Downstairs" turned into one of the most successful costume comedy - drama series presented on British television.

American audiences see the product of this industry for themselves on Masterpiece Theatre's "Upstairs, Downstairs" on Sunday evenings at 9 p.m. on UNC-TV, Channel 25.

Producer John Hawkesworth and script editor Alfred Shaughnessy and their writers took pains to make sure every "Upstairs, Downstairs" episode is historically accurate. John Marsh calmly estimated that she's probably read "Everything that has ever been written about the period."

And thanks to painstaking poring over newspapers of the day, old copies of Punch and other periodicals, not a hair or a hairribbon on "Upstairs, Downstairs" is out of place. The Bellamy household may be fictional, but every stick of furniture is in its authentic, and every topic that causes a to-do in that household was very much a real issue of the day.

Set in Edwardian times, "Upstairs, Downstairs" in the story of the Bellamy family and its servants in Belgravia, a fashionable section of London, during the early years of this century. Years of turmoil and change during which the strict, authoritarian, Empire-building Victorian era came to a close and the youth of Britain began to challenge society, politics and their parents as never before.

Research for the program wasn't confined to history. Hawkesworth and his team had to make sure of the multitude of other facts to avoid anachronisms, or breaches of what was a very strict code of household procedure 70 years ago.

'Oscar' Telecast Scheduled April 2

It's Oscar time again.

The eagerly anticipated event takes place Tuesday, April 2, and will be colorcast on NBC-TV, (10 p.m. to conclusion) from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center.

The Oscar, as well as the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, came into being in 1927. More than 1,200 Oscars have been given out since then.

The statuette was designed by the late Cedric Gibbons, a longtime executive art director at MGM, and executed by sculptor George Stanley for a $500 fee.

Since then it has been changed in only one respect. The base has been raised to give better proportions to the design.

The Oscar stands 13½-inches tall, weighs 8½-pounds and costs

The Academy each year orders 50 Oscars from the official manufacturer, the Dodge Trophy Company, located near Chicago, Ill.

Oscars are engraved the day following the show, since the winners are not known until the ceremonies take place.

The Oscar was known as "the statuette" until 1931, when Margaret Herrick, executive director of the Academy until 1970, commented, "Why, he looks like my Uncle Oscar." A newspaper correspondent picked up the comment.

The nickname stuck and has become world-famous.

Special Offering Of Shakespearean Classic Scheduled

Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice," one of the theatre's greatest classics, starring Laurence Olivier as the unforgettable Shylock, will be a special presentation of the "ABC Theatre" on Saturday, March 16 (8:30-11 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12. Joan Plowright stars as Portia, and Jeremy Brett is Bassanio, with Michael Jayston and Anthony Nicholls, in England's famed National Theatre production of the play.

Adapted from Monathan Miller's brilliant London stage production, this is a new, updated interpretation of the play, never before presented in the United States. The setting shifts from Elizabethan times to Venice of the 1880s. The transition allows for a new relevance for today's audiences, and a deeper understanding of the central character of Shylock, which Olivier creates in a wholly new fashion.

Although Shakespeare wrote "The Merchant of Venice" between 1596-1598, when he was about 33 years old, the lyrical language of the play translates easily to the 19th century.

The London critics hailed Oliver's portrayal. The illustrated London News called it "the best Shylock of our time." The Sunday Telegraph said it was a "performance of stunning magnitude," and The New Statesman agreed, saying Olivier was "a splendid, dignified and superior Shylock."

"The Merchant of Venice" is about the bond that Antonio (the merchant of the title) gives Shylock, so that his young friend, Bassanio, may have the money to woo the lovely Portia.

DISOWNS — Distraught that his daughter has left his home, and that she is marrying out of her religion, Shylock disowns her with the smashing of her photograph. Laurence Olivier stars as Shylock in an updated version of Shakespeare's classic, "The Merchant of Venice," to air as a special "ABC Theatre" Saturday, March 16 (8:30-11:00 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

FOR TRISH VAN DEVERE,
starring in "The Day of the Dolphin"

You and your husband, George C. Scott, are both actors. Do you have any theories about what makes for powerful acting?—J. L., Dubuque, Iowa

● Let me tell you a story about Sophie the dachshund, who got so excited about the fish in our living room aquarium that everyone in the room had to stop and watch her. And all she was doing was looking at fish! There was so much electric energy in her concentration that all the dynamics in the room came down to Sophie, on a stool, staring at the fish. I think George believes completely in the energy of concentration—or, as Sir Laurence Olivier told him, "We know it's all in the eyes, don't we, George?" My own favorite actor is Edward G. Robinson. Just look at his eyes. He never made a mistake.

FOR SEN. HAROLD HUGHES (D-Iowa)

I understand you've decided to retire from the U.S. Senate to become a lay preacher and follow God's calling. Where will you get your income?—A. S. Kravitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● I will be financially supported by the Fellowship Foundation of Washington. I do not know now where my work will take me. At the end of my term, I will take some time to think and pray and wait on the Lord for guidance.

FOR MIKE CONNORS of "Mannix"

Why did you change your name when you became an actor?—L. G., Rifle, Colo.

● My name was Kregor Ohanian (that's Armenian). People were forever asking me, "What's that you said?" and "How do you spell that?" I didn't mind it until I became an actor. I had an agent who advised me to change my name on the grounds that a guy whose name was so hard to pronounce would have a tough time becoming a star. I think it was logical advice.

FOR CELESTE HOLM, actress

How do you feel about nudity in films?—F. A. Langdon, Fishkill, N.Y.

● I'm reminded of what a great French actor once told me. "Nakedness," he said, "is what theater is all about. Every good actor stands naked before the audience. But to communicate your nakedness by actually taking off your clothes—that's too much of a costume!"

FOR FLORENCE HENDERSON

I read that you are the mother of four children, yet you look so young! How do you manage?—B. O. C., Yuma, Ariz.

● Actually I think I look younger now than I did when I was young. That's probably because I was brought up in a serious Catholic family, and at 17 I was very serious-minded. I had a lot of adjustments to make. I had to learn who I was. I don't have fewer worries or responsibilities now—but I do like myself better, and I'm interested in everything.

FOR KEN CURTIS, Festus on "Gunsmoke"

Do you have a Western background?—Mrs. Gladys Greene, Elmira, N.Y.

● Yes, I have a background so close to my role on "Gunsmoke" that some people think I've made it up. I was born in Lamar, Colo., near the Kansas border and Dodge City. My father was a homesteader and sheriff at Las Animas, Colo. We lived in the jail. My mother cooked for the prisoners and I helped out as the jail keeper.

FOR LARRY LITTLE of the Miami Dolphins

Who is the toughest lineman you ever played against?—Richard Dickerman, Mankato, Minn.

● That's hard to say. But Joe Greene of Pittsburgh is certainly one of the toughest.

FOR ROB REINER of "All in the Family"

Do you think that Mike of "All in the Family" is basically right in his political views?—Chuck Goff, Caldwell, Idaho

● Mike has a lot to learn. His knowledge seems restricted to what he learns in college. Many of his ideas are valid, yet many are just as narrow-minded as his conservative father-in-law's. Beyond that, anything I said about his being right or wrong would be unfair to the character.

FOR LIBERACE

Are your hands insured, and if so, for how much?—Gary Cunningham, Jr., Kokomo, Ind.

● I'm often asked this question. The truth is, my whole body is insured. I think it would be foolish to have just my hands insured. Some entertainers have had various parts of their bodies insured and have gotten some good publicity from it. Personally, I don't see what good willing hands would be to a body that was too weak to sit at the piano.

FOR HOWARD COSELL

How did you begin sportscasting? And what is the most thrilling event you've covered?—H.D. Harris, Dickson, Tenn.

● I started broadcasting five-minute weekend radio shows back in 1956, while I was still a practicing attorney in New York City. Probably the most thrilling event I've been associated with was the second Floyd Patterson-Ingemar Johansson heavyweight-championship fight at New York's Polo Grounds on June 20, 1960. Patterson, by scoring the most compelling knockout I have ever seen, became the first man in history ever to regain the heavyweight title.

America in the "Age of Shortages":

A Britisher Explains Why We're Still Better Off than Europe

I was walking along the Avenue Foch in Paris with a French friend recently when he put his hand on my arm and indicated some glass domes, like giant space helmets in the street. "Look," he said proudly, "pay telephones!" I had, of course, seen pay telephones before, but my emotion was as great as his, not because of the avant-garde design, but because they were there at all.

The French are just beginning to get around to what they call "taxiphones," and there are still only a handful scattered around the city.

Even today, the general method of making a telephone call in Paris is to go into a bar, chat about the weather with the suspicious lady at the cash register, buy a token (at excessive price) and then locate the telephone, which is usually in a broom closet or the toilet. The Italian and Spanish systems are worse, and in London I make a mental note as to where pay telephones can be found; otherwise one can search indefinitely. For some reason, the telephone box brings out the worst in the normally tidy and law-abiding British, and they use it for newspaper disposal, vandalism and worse. A familiar sight in London, wherever there happens to be a row of boxes, is that of a furious and frustrated citizen going into and out of one box after the other, seeking one that (a) works and (b) is not reeking of some foul odor.

Self-criticism in the U.S. has reached such a pitch that it is perhaps timely for a European visitor to remind Americans that for everyday comfort and convenience in living, America is still the only country that has found the secret. No European who has ever lived in the United States ever passes a single day without missing some aspect or other of American life.

One might think it difficult, for example, to fall in love with an ordinary brown paper bag, but if one has lived for a long time in Europe, it is—very easy. The brown paper bag—like the telephone that works or the garage attendant who checks one's tires (at least he used to; and I presume, after the present gasoline crisis, he will again)—is what makes people sigh with relief when they return to the United States from a sojourn in Europe.

In the U.S., the brown paper shopping bag is still an essential part of service in all shops. Not in Europe. It never has been. A sight familiar to all specialists in American behaviorism, but to no one else, occurs whenever an American housewife in Britain comes face to face with the girl at the cash desk of a supermarket.

Each waits for the other to make the first move. The salesgirl waits for the housewife to put her purchases in her shopping basket or whatever receptacle she has brought along for the purpose. The American housewife, who has not brought along anything at all, waits for the girl to take a brown paper bag from under the counter and pack the purchases for her. Snag; there is no brown paper bag, and, furthermore, if it was suggested to the salesgirl that she pack the customer's purchases, she would go on strike.

The stalemate is eventually broken, usually by the girl, who says vaguely, "Want a bag, or something?" The American, taken aback at such a question, can only nod. The girl looks around, scratching her head, eventually finds a couple of thin bags suitable only for holding jelly beans, and which promptly rip on the cutting edge of a tea bag, and the housewife staggers away, dropping things as she goes.

That is not the end of the story. As everyone knows, in America these bags are not discarded. They are folded, kept, and serve admirably for garbage disposal. Europeans, having no such bags, dump their garbage directly into the trash cans (which the English call "dustbins" and the French poubelles, after a certain Monsieur Poubelle who invented the trash can and has a street named after him in Paris). The European housewife, periodically scouring away the malodorous agglutinations from inside her trash can, is a phenomenon that scarcely exists in the U.S.

Nowhere in Europe is there a satisfactory equivalent of the drugstore lunch counter, where one can sit, have a quick cup of coffee and a doughnut, and go. The coffee served in the bars in France and Italy is not the same thing at all, nor is the atmosphere. And as for coffee in England, forget it. English coffee is often as good as American coffee, and the brands are usually the same, but the British have never established a behavior pattern in drinking coffee in public, and the cafés that serve coffee are usually too squalid in American eyes to make the pause worthwhile. It is better to wait until one gets home.

Americans who complain about their repairmen do not know their luck. Of course they charge the world, but they come when summoned, do the job, and go. In England there is a well-known vaudeville song about the plumber who came to call. He did the plumbing but blew the fuses, so the electrician came to call. The electrician mended the wires, but tripped over the TV set, so the TV man came to call. And so on, and so on.

But even this fantasy is better than the reality is. An American living in London finally cornered his local plumber in a pub. The plumber had been promising to repair the leaking toilet cistern for weeks. The American bought a couple of beers, and the plumber, taking out his appointments diary, said, "You are getting close, governor. You are now 26th on my list." In the meantime the toilet continued to leak.

France is even worse. In the village in the south of France where I live, most of the inhabitants are either electricians, plumbers, masons, gardeners, house painters and the like. But a repair job may take six months to get done. The reason is that most of them work on jobs for neighboring factories and have little interest in the local housewife or householder. Being neighbors, however, they are also friends. Being friends, they always say politely, "Demain" ("Tomorrow"). But demain never comes. My longest wait—for the plumber—lasted two years.

Americans may not believe this, but parking a car is generally easier in the big American cities than it is in London, Paris or Rome, and parking restrictions are usually more logical. In East Berlin, Germanic thoroughness has reached a ludicrous level. There, as in most Communist cities, traffic is infinitely lighter than in the West, and cars are far fewer. But the conscientious German authorities have placed "No Parking" signs everywhere, in anticipation of the day—sometime in the distant, golden future—when they may expect to have a parking problem. Wishful thinking could scarcely go further in the wrong direction.

One can continue indefinitely. Admittedly one can also continue indefinitely in the opposite direction. As one lurches in the rusty cattle boxes that New York City calls its subway, one pines for the scarlet-and-cream glories of the London Underground or the silent Paris Metro trains hissing along on rubber tires. Watching American cops swagger about, chewing gum—with their guns, billies and handcuffs swinging from their belts—makes one miss London and its straight-backed, unarmed bobbies, or Paris and its elegant flics with their capes.

The American virtues carry their own backlash. The ease and comforts of American living, for example, have produced the uniquely American phenomenon of the "fat boy." The "fat boy," guzzling ice cream, popcorn and chocolate bars, is such a familiar sight that he has passed into American literature and the movies, unnoticed by Americans in the street. To European visitors, he is a tourist sight in himself. One can travel the length and breadth of Europe without seeing a "fat boy." And for "fat boy," read equally "fat girl."

But that is beside the point. Americans are spared many of the frustrations of everyday life, but because they have enjoyed these amenities all their lives, they do not know what they are. Those who have never traveled to Europe will probably be happy to believe me. Americans who have traveled, no matter how much they loved the great European capitals, will be obliged to agree. They say, "We like Europe in spite of the discomforts." Which is a different subject altogether.

Tips 'n' Topics

CELERY: IT ALWAYS COMES THROUGH IN THE CRUNCH!

Celery, the fresh, crisp green vegetable we take for granted in our markets year-round, has an interesting background. Back in the old days, no one ever ate it for fun—only as a medicine. Its taste was too bitter. Then, early in the 17th century, some unknown gardener in Italy or southern France transplanted some wild celery to a choice spot where the soil was deep, rich and moist. To his amazement, the ribs and leaves from these plants had a much more pleasing taste. Today, of course, celery is flavorful, crisp and green year-round.

The largest celery-producing area is in central Florida, part of the half-million acres of farmland reclaimed from the Everglades. There, the rich, black soil is abundant and holds the moisture celery needs to grow crisp and sweet. But even here, celery is a slow, tricky grower, requiring 125 days from seed to harvest.

There is still a certain amount of confusion in some cookbooks, which call for "stalks" of celery when they mean "ribs." A "stalk," or "bunch," is the whole plant. The "rib" is only part of the stalk.

The weight watcher can eat celery freely, since a whole cup of diced celery has a mere 18 calories. Celery's at its market peak now through May.

Miracle Brand Margarine is whipped. Which means more pats per pound. 36 more, to be exact. And that's enough to spread two extra loaves of bread at 18 slices per loaf.

The Superstove™ Range from GE with the oven that cooks three ways. $599.95*

General Electric presents the 30" Superstove™ Range with the Versatronic® Oven System, the only system that cooks three ways in the same oven.

It's a conventional oven, so you can cook your favorite recipes just the way you're used to. Like tender, juicy sirloin steak.

It's a microwave oven. So you can thaw frozen foods in minutes and speed-cook up to 4 times faster than you're used to. For instance, 3 baked potatoes in only 15 minutes.

Or it's a microwave oven and a conventional oven both at once. So you can speed-cook and brown at the same time. A 10 lb. turkey, frozen solid, will be roasted and browned in about an hour and a half. Or a frozen apple pie in 17 to 19 minutes.

It's an oven that does so many fabulous things, you'll want to use it more than you've ever used an oven before. For things like warming gravy right in the gravy boat. (The gravy gets hot, the gravy boat doesn't.)

Yet all this cooking splendor isn't all that expensive. With the Versatronic Oven System, you get both microwave cooking and conventional cooking plus self-cleaning for $599.95*.

And you get something else only General Electric offers: Customer Care... Service Everywhere.™ This is our pledge: that wherever you are or go in the U.S.A., you'll find a qualified GE serviceman nearby. Should you ever need him.

The Superstove Range... another reason why General Electric is America's #1 major appliance value.

Collectors' Classic

Many have heard of it. Some have eaten it. Few have prepared it. But Chicken Cordon Bleu is a gourmet favorite that is delicious and relatively easy to make.

A "Show-Off" Dish— Chicken Cordon Bleu

CHICKEN CORDON BLEU

- 4 (2 lbs.) whole chicken breasts, boned
- ½ cup (¼ lb.) finely chopped cooked ham
- 1½ cups (¼ lb.) grated Gruyère or Swiss cheese
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper
- ¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons dry white wine or sherry
- ¼ teaspoon thyme leaves
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- 3 eggs
- ¼ cup plus 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1½ cups fine dry bread crumbs
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Parsley or watercress
- Chicken-Wine Sauce (recipe below)

1. Cut whole chicken breasts in half. In small bowl combine ham, Gruyère, garlic, a few twists freshly ground pepper, 2 tablespoons wine, thyme and ½ teaspoon salt.
2. Use this ham-cheese mixture to stuff each breast in the pocket made by boning. Refrigerate covered for at least 30 minutes.
3. On sheet of waxed paper, combine flour, remaining salt and a few twists freshly ground black pepper.
4. Beat eggs with 1 tablespoon vegetable oil.
5. Coat each chicken breast in flour mixture, dip in egg mixture, then in bread crumbs, coating well.
6. In large skillet heat butter and ¼ cup vegetable oil until butter foams. Brown chicken breasts slowly on each side. Turn heat down to low and continue cooking uncovered about 20-25 minutes longer, until cooked through.

7. Or if you wish, brown in skillet as in Step 6, but finish cooking uncovered in preheated 375°F. oven for 20 minutes.

8. Add ¼ cup white wine to skillet. Bring to boiling, stirring to loosen all brown particles in pan (deglaze). Continue boiling till liquid is reduced by half. Pour over chicken breasts. Garnish with a bouquet of parsley or watercress.

Makes 8 servings

CHICKEN-WINE SAUCE

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1½ cups chicken broth
- ¼ cup heavy cream
- 1 tablespoon dry white wine
- Dash white pepper

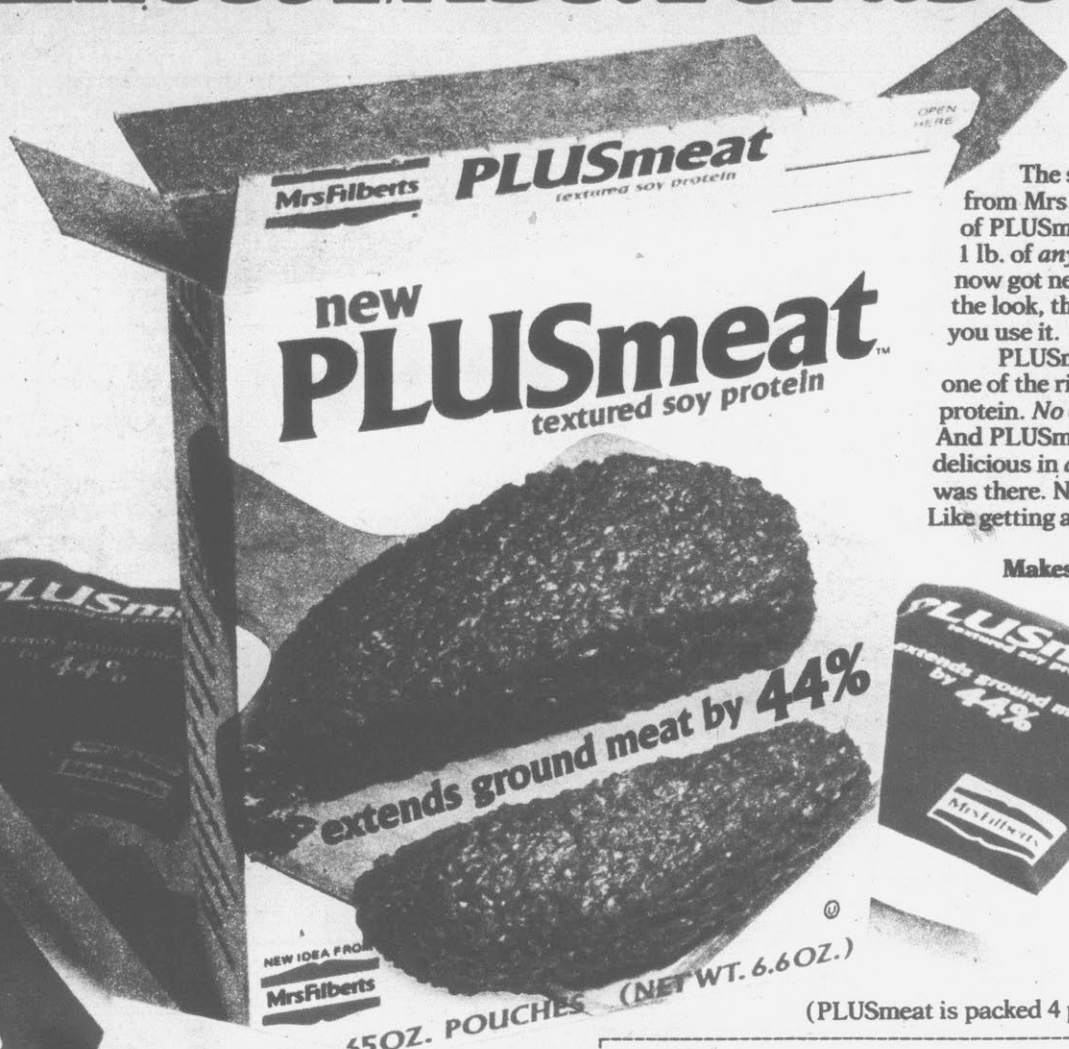

1. In small saucepan, heat butter until melted. Stir in flour smoothly.
  2. Add chicken broth all at once and cook, stirring with wire whisk until smooth and bubbly.
  3. Stir in cream, wine and pepper. Heat; season to taste, adding salt and additional pepper if desired.
- Makes 2 cups*

TIPS FOR SUCCESSFUL CORDON BLEU

1. Timing is important. For tastiest, tenderest results, don't overcook chicken.
2. Do cook until chicken feels firm to the "finger" test—that is, when pressed with your finger.
3. If you must wait to serve, cover loosely with foil and keep warm.

Burt Bacharach Talks About Music, Racehorses and (First, Last and Always)

Angie

Pictorial Parade

"I like to play my music for Angie after it's done. She has a very good ear for it."

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

The interview didn't start out too well. The night before, seemingly tired and nervous, Burt Bacharach had opened at Harrah's Club in Tahoe.

FAMILY WEEKLY: You seem awfully tired. What's wrong?
BURT: I had a tough day yesterday. A six-and-a-half-hour rehearsal, and two shows. That can get anybody down. Besides, I've worked hard the last couple of years. It took me a year and a half on "Lost Horizon," and when I did my TV show in London, I came down with the flu.

FW: Were you disappointed with the critics' reaction to "Lost Horizon"?

BURT: I think it was the worst assassination job ever done on a picture.

FW: Do you think they were wrong?

BURT: I think the picture was better than they said it was. But it seems that once you get a bad critique, each critic tries to outdo the guy before. Nobody gave credit to the attempt to make a picture completely in Hollywood and put people back to work.

FW: Don't you think any of the criticism was justified?

BURT: I didn't say that. I think it happened partly because the picture was ballyhooed so much. The whole attitude went something like "See here, public, this is THE picture you've been waiting for! You should be happy to see it!" I don't think that was right.

FW: What about your own score? Were you satisfied with it?

BURT: I think the score didn't work as well as it should.

FW: Is it true that you turned down "Love Story"?

BURT: It is. When I met with Bob [Paramount Production chief Robert Evans], he had his mind set on a certain kind of music. It wasn't a matter of whether it was good or bad. I simply never had a chance to think how I would feel about it. So I turned it down. But he was right. The music he chose worked, and I respect him for

When your child can't sit still, is it nervousness or is it Pin-Worms?

Fidgeting, distraction, fitful scratching of rectal itch—many people don't know these "nervous habits" can be caused by Pin-Worms. These almost invisible parasites are so common, medical authorities have said 1 out of 3 children examined, and many parents, may have Pin-Worms.

They can infect anyone—young or old, rich or poor. Worst of all, Pin-Worms are highly contagious, so they can spread from person to person, until the whole family is infected.

Fortunately, there is an easy-to-take medication called Jayne's® P-W® tablets that gets rid of Pin-Worms. Your pharmacist will tell you that Jayne's P-W tablets are specially formulated with an effective medical ingredient that drives Pin-Worms out of your system. Ask for Jayne's P-W tablets at your drug store.

FW: Has Angie been able to help you with your work?

BURT: A great deal, particularly in the beginning. I like to play my music for her after it's done. She has a very good ear for it.

FW: Do you need time totally alone—even away from Angie?

BURT: I do. I go to Del Mar seven or eight weeks a year, though not always by myself. We own a house there that we bought two years ago. It's a great place to work, and a marvelous place to relax. Until we bought it, we used to go to Palm Springs for three or four days, and it was like a major move. Take along clothes, pack, unpack. Too much time wasted. Del Mar is a second home. I simply get into the car, drive there, and start another life.

FW: And Angie doesn't mind when you go by yourself?

BURT: At least she hasn't told me she does. Besides, when Nikki is in school [Burt's and Angie's six-year-old daughter Lea Nikki], Angie doesn't like to leave her on her own too long.

FW: Del Mar is famous for its racetrack. Do you race your own horses as well?

BURT: I do. I've liked racing since I was 11, when my father took me to a horse race for the first time. Ever since, I thought that if I ever made it, I wanted horses of my own.

FW: How does Angie feel about your racehorses?

BURT: She likes horses, but not as much as I do, and I figure that if it's an effort to see them run, it isn't worth her time.

FW: Do you set certain hours to do your composing?

BURT: No. I don't start at nine and work until six in the afternoon. Sometimes I work 32 hours in a row. Sometimes I get up at four and work until noon and then go play tennis. But then I have to tell myself not to have a drink with the guys, but go home and go back to work again.

FW: How do you feel about Angie still working as an actress?

BURT: I think it's absolutely essential, and I'm all for it—and not just for her to keep busy. If Angie weren't such a good actress, I would prefer that she quit. But she's too good to stay away from the screen. Unfortunately, she doesn't seem to get the kind of parts that do her justice.

FW: What do you think is the best thing she's ever done?

BURT: "Point Blank."

FW: She did a nude scene in the film. Did you mind?

BURT: Not at all. I thought she looked gorgeous!

FW: Is your daughter musically inclined?

BURT: She seemed to be a couple of years ago, and she tried the guitar and the violin. She has a pretty good ear. But now she's more interested in horses. Incidentally, she doesn't want to be called Nikki anymore. She's Lorne Greene now.

FW: What do you mean—she's Lorne Greene now?

BURT: Well, she's told us that from now on she's not a she but a he, and her name is Lorne Greene. Unless we call her that, she won't answer.

FW: So?

BURT: So we call her Lorne Greene.

FW: When you wrote the music for "Promises, Promises," producer David Merrick referred to you as "a new sex symbol." How did you feel about it?

BURT: I laughed. David's a card.

FW: How did Angie feel about it? And not just that, but when your fans fall all over you at concerts and personal appearances?

BURT: It doesn't bother her.

At least, I don't think it does.

Sports Mini-Profile

O. J. SIMPSON:
The Boy with Rickets Who Became
"Athlete of the Year"

When O. J. Simpson was a child, he suffered from rickets and his mother had him wear homemade braces because she couldn't afford professional treatment. As a result, O. J.'s legs remained bowed and skinny from the knees down. But that didn't stop him from becoming the No. 1 college running back when he was at the University of Southern California; or from becoming No. 1 running back in professional football; or from smashing Jim Brown's rushing record by gaining 2,003 yards last season; or from winning the Hickok Award as "Athlete of 1973" by a record-breaking landslide. . . .

O. J. (his real name is Orenthal James) doesn't like to meet tacklers head on. Instead, he uses tremendous natural speed and an uncanny ability to slip out of tacklers' hands. "A running back lasts a lot longer when he's not colliding with people or trying to run over them with brute force," he tells you. "I'm hoping to last a long time." . . . A native of California, Heisman Trophy winner Simpson was disappointed when he was drafted by Buffalo five years ago. He was even more disappointed when the coach gave him only limited opportunities to run. He was becoming known as "the college star who failed in the pros." But a new coach, Lou Saban, arrived in Buffalo last year and decided to build his offense around O. J., just as USC had done. . . . O. J. is a hero to his young teammates at Buffalo, is recognized as a team leader and official needler at practice. They describe him as "a guy who's always smiling and never angry." His wife Marguerite compares his disposition with that of his mother's cousin, baseball's happy-go-lucky veteran star, Ernie Banks.

What Students Really Think About Sports

Some adults may be surprised to hear this, but when a nationwide group of high school senior boys was polled recently on 14 different things a high school should emphasize, the students ranked athletics last. What did the students feel was more important? They wanted to see more vocational skills taught to boys and girls who aren't interested in college. They wanted more programs to prepare them for family life as a spouse and parent. They asked for courses to improve students' social and psychological adjustment. They were even eager for more encouragement in traditional academic achievement! School, most of them felt, was more boring than it needed to be. Only six percent of the students found their schoolwork "exciting and stimulating." Even worse, only 30 percent thought the things they're learning in high school will be "very important" in their lives.

The Doctor Lets You In

What Makes Your Nose Run?

"Oh, this darn nose—what's making it run so much?" Ever said that while suffering from a cold? Well, it's a good question—what does make your nose run? Here's the answer: A cold is an infection. And when you have an infection or inflammation, all your tissues are "running"—i.e., secreting fluids. The fluid running from your nose is called mucus, a secretion containing, among other things, mucin (an "animal glue") and dead white cells that have been killed while fighting infection. When inflammation strikes, many tissues discharge fluids. But you are most aware of the problem in your nose because the mucous membrane in your nasal passage is exposed and unprotected (that's also why it's the most vulnerable to attack from germs). The point to remember is this: A runny nose is not bad in itself. It is an attempt by your body to throw off an infecting agent. This is why many doctors are cautious about overusing products that block or dry up the nose of a cold sufferer.—By Erwin Di Cyan, Ph.D.

People Quiz

Quiz: Why Some Say "Ouch" and Others Don't

True or False: How much a pain actually hurts is apt to depend on whether you're rich or poor. (See number 2)

Adult sensitivity to pain-producing stimuli is influenced by childhood experience. Presumably the less-advantaged child is subject to appreciably more trauma than the more protected child.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How much pain you can take is likely to depend on your personality type.
2. How much a pain actually hurts is apt to depend on whether you're rich or poor.
3. Pain that is "imagined," or that has no physical cause, can be discomforting, but doesn't hurt nearly as much as real physical pain.
4. Many people have a need to feel pain.
5. A large percentage of aches and pains disappear when a person's mood changes.
6. A person's ability to tolerate pain is related to his capacity to think and reason.

ANSWERS

1. True. In studies at Columbia University, students' tolerance to pain was compared with personality tests. It was found that those who had a low pain tolerance differed markedly in personality from those who were more able to take aches and pains in their stride. Those more tolerant of pain were inclined to lead lives characterized by exciting pursuits, to seek activities that gave promise of thrills, fun or stimulating action. On the other hand, those who scored low on the scale of pain tolerance "generally tended to avoid high-stimulus situations and to seek out low ones."
2. True—as evidenced by the findings of a psychological study which showed that "persons from upper socioeconomic levels manifested significantly less sensitivity to pain than persons of similar ages from lower income levels." It's pointed out that:

3. False. As one leading authority on the dynamics of pain points out: "The supposed differentiations between real and 'psychological' pain are invalid. All pain is real." In other words, a person whose medical examination shows him to be perfectly healthy may be actually suffering as much pain as if he were a candidate for the emergency ward. To illustrate the principle another way: A doorbell makes the same sound whether it's activated by a short circuit or by having someone push it.

4. True. These are the chronic complainers, and their pain may be with or without some physical cause. Says Dr. J. Blair Pace of the University of California at Irvine: "Headache, backache, neck and shoulder pain may be a socially acceptable defense against situations in the patient's life that are far more impossible to bear than the pain."

5. True. One investigation, for example, cites research showing that "approximately 35 percent of more than 1,000 patients in 15 studies reported marked relief from pathological pain after receiving a placebo [a pill without medicine in it]." Conversely, it has been found that concern over the well-being of any part of the body tends to make any pain hurt much worse, and may even produce extreme discomfort in an area that did not hurt before.

6. True—according to the findings of a team of investigators who divided subjects into two groups, based on their ability to tolerate pain. All were then given a standard intelligence test. The group that was the most tolerant of pain made significantly higher scores.

What in the World!

NIXON AND STEVENSON
Candidates' cookout test

In his new book, columnist Stewart Alsop recollects a day in 1956 when he was polling voters. He went up to a man raking leaves in the backyard of his suburban Chicago home and asked him if he was going to vote for Eisenhower or Adlai Stevenson. The man replied that he was voting for Eisenhower because "he's the kind of guy I'd like to invite over for a cookout." Ever since then, Alsop has applied this "cookout test" to presidential aspirants. "Nothing is more obvious," he notes, "than that Richard Nixon fails it even more abysmally than Adlai Stevenson did. His inability to arouse the kind of personal affection lots of voters felt for Dwight Eisenhower or John Kennedy has been

... his greatest source of political weakness." From "Stay of Execution: A Sort of Memoir" (J. B. Lippincott, $8.95).

HIPPO-BACK RIDE
Almost as fun as a daddy?

"Play horse, Daddy!" Millions of weary fathers hear this, or a rough equivalent, when they come home each day. And, when they obey, it's bar-rump, barrump around the floor or yard while little Suzie or Johnny pounds the living daylights out of their trapezius muscles. So daddies know how Esmi the hippo feels. The 200-pound Esmi, who is said to be the world's only "hand-reared" hippopotamus, has just returned from a hard day's wallow and, presumably, wants nothing more than to curl up with the sports page. Little Suzanne Crawley will have none of that. Suzanne's father is general manager of the Longleat Wildlife Park in Wiltshire, England.

The engaging movie newcomer, Sam Waterston, comes from an Ivy League background that's strikingly similar to that of Nick Carraway, the F. Scott Fitzgerald character he plays in the movie, "The Great Gatsby." "The difference," says Sam, "is that I've never been rich." Both Waterston and Carraway attended private boarding schools and graduated from Yale University. Both came from middle-class New England families. About his own background, Sam says: "My father was a teacher at a private boarding school in New England and a great believer in good education. It's nice that my own background was so useful in getting the part. But in the sense that people think it was a privileged existence, it is a bane. Speaking selfishly, I'm grateful it was so pleasant, but I was never into the social thing."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

By Richard Armour

ON THE NAIL

Among the things this writer hails,
Long overdue, are fingernails.
They finish off our fingertips
And help us when we come to grips.
They have their uses, quite a few:
To scratch an itch, to turn a screw,
To open letters, scrape a spot,
To peel an orange, like as not.
Although they must be clipped and cleaned,

Their worth should never be demeaned.
They're somewhat fragile, far from thick,
And just below them is the quick.
But when they sometimes break or crack,
back.

One of the most exciting ways to travel is by wet soap. —B. Fairweather

In England, a busful of American tourists pulled to a stop at Runnymede and one of them demanded of the guide: "What happened here?" "This is where they signed the Magna Carta," replied the guide. "When did they do that?" asked the tourist. "1215," replied the guide. Looking at his watch, the man turned to his wife and said:

My young son recently came the second quietest student in

It's broken again, Mr. Wallet. The handle is clean busted off.

Too bad Virgil.

Can't you borrow one from Mr. Fracas to finish the job?

He doesn't have one.

Dr. Fuddle doesn't either. They both use yours.

Oh?!

Fracas, you're gonna listen to this and I don't want any back talk.

You and Fuddle use my lawnmower, my garden tools, my snow shovel and—Wait, Wallet.

Stop, Fracas! I'm not finished. I knew your shovel was on its last legs.

I even had it giftwrapped but we were away at Christmas and I forgot to bring it over.

For me?!

Fracas, you sweet thing!

Is it okay to take the bow off now, Mr. Wallet?

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: ARN AND SIR GAWAIN ENTER VALENCE. THEY ARE BOTH SILENT, FOR THIS IS THE TIME OF PARTING. THE TIRED OLD WARRIOR TO RETURN TO CAMELOT, PRINCE ARN TO TRAVEL SOUTH SEEKING FORGETFULNESS.....

....TO FORGET THAT TERRIBLE MOMENT WHEN HE HAD SEEN HIS BELOVED LYDIA RUSH HAPPILY INTO THE ARMS OF A TALL VIKING AND KISS HIM RAPTUROUSLY.

AT THE SIGHT OF LYDIA'S SCARAB HANGING ON HIS RIVAL'S BREST, ARN'S FACE GOES WHITE WITH RAGE AND HIS HAND SEEKS THE HILT OF HIS SWORD. "I SEE YOU HAVE A TASTE FOR WOMEN'S JEWELRY. HOW CHARMING!" SAYS ARN CALMLY.

AT THE IMPLIED INSULT, THORVOLD'S FACE REDDENS: "IT IS MY SISTER'S SCARAB. SHE BADE ME WEAR IT DURING MY SEARCH FOR YOU." "YOU ARE LYDIA'S BROTHER?" SAYS ARN, "I SHOULD HAVE KNOWN HER HEART WAS TRUE. WHAT A FOOL I HAVE BEEN!"

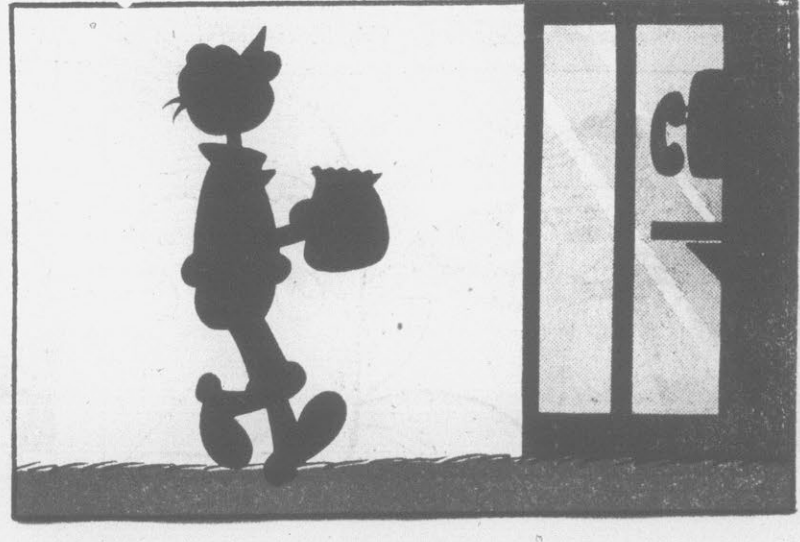

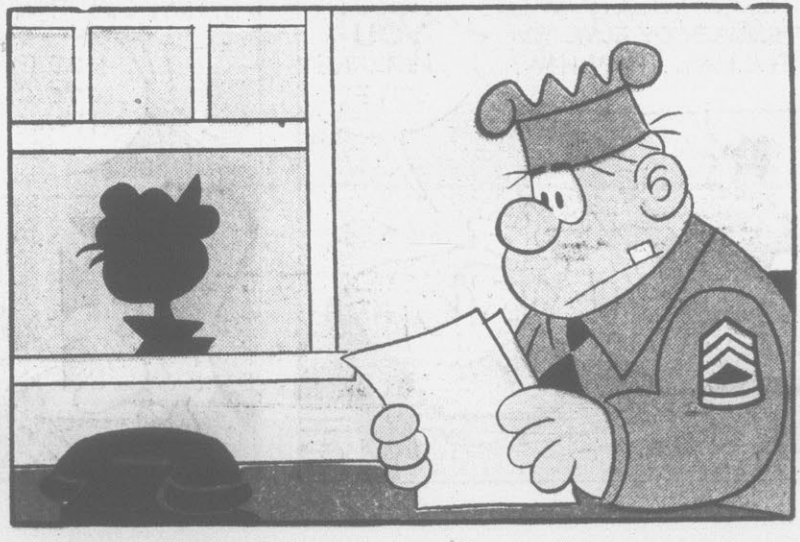

PLANS ARE LAID. ARN WILL RIDE NORTH WITH GAWAIN, AND THORVOLD WILL RELUCTANTLY RETURN TO HIS SHIP...RELUCTANT BECAUSE THE SAFETY OF PRINCE ARN IS OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE. HIS MARRIAGE TO LYDIA WILL UNITE THE SMALL KINGDOM OF HOLYIK WITH THULE AND PROTECT THE NORTHERN MARCHES.

"SLOW DOWN!" CALLS GAWAIN AS THEY BEGIN THE NORTHWARD JOURNEY. "THERE ARE THREE HUNDRED LEAGUES TO GO, SO TAKE IT EASY AND GIVE YOURSELF TIME TO CHANGE YOUR MIND ABOUT WEARING THE DANGLING CHAINS OF MATRIMONY."

BULLETIN BOARD

● SUM FUN! Select a number between 20 and 999. Add the digits in the number and subtract the result from the number itself. Then add the digits in the new number. The result is always 9 or 18. Try it.

● Marilyn Goodenough and family (Marcia, Val, Sue, Gene, Karen and Dee Ann) of Lynnwood, Wash., have thought up some more state scrunch-words, among them: GA. and LA. for GALA, LA. and ND. for LAND, S.C. and ORE. for SCORE, MO. and O. for MOO.

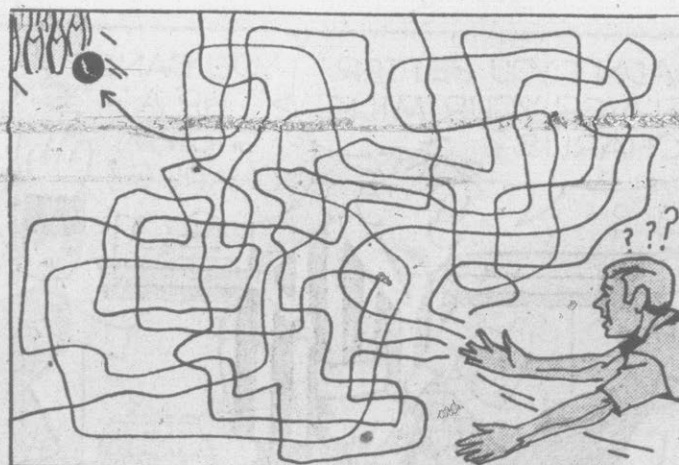

● Quickly, find a familiar flower in this sentence: Sam and Pam took sampans yesterday.

Speaking of flowers, what do you call an elderly flower person? Give up? How about a zinnia citizen?

REMOVE a dozen small coins from your pocket and place them on the table in the form of a square with four coins on each side, as shown above.

Now, challenge your friends to change the positions of four of these coins so that each of the square's four sides will contain five rather than four coins, as it does at present.

YIKES, YIKES! Add colors neatly: 1-Red. 2-Lt. blue. 3-Yellow. 4-Lt. brown. 5-Flesh. 6-Lt. green. 7-Dk. green. 8-Dk. blue. 9-Dk. brown. 10-Purple. 11-Gray. 12-Black. 13-Maroon

SPELLBINDER!

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

CAVALIER

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters. Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagrams: Cave, Har.
