Subcommittee Approves $3 Billion N.C. Budget

RALEIGH (AP) — The Joint Appropriations super subcommittee approved a $3 billion budget for next fiscal year today after making additions and delegations totaling more than $10 million.

The committee kept proposed spending by the state's general fund in balance by cutting the reserve funder for a state housing program from $8 million to $4 million, but cutting a proposed $4.5 million additional appropriation for a state art museum in half and by eliminating a proposed appropriation of $3,-685,000 for a new office and classroom building for the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem.

State budget officials estimated that the proposed general fund budget was about $300,-000 less than anticipated revenues for next fiscal year and that the highway fund faced a deficit of about $400,000.

The committee authorized its co-chairmen, Rep. Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, and Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, to adjust the highway budget so that it will be balanced.

Appropriation increases approved by the committee include $177,283 to provide an additional salary increment for school principals, $4 million for four pilot area mental health programs; $292,000 to the department of human resources to pay increase fees of nursing homes; $122,739 to the General Assembly budget to hire five additional employes; increase an appropriations for the Asheville Orthopedic hospital from $50,000 to $200,000, add $250,000 to the North Carolina Alcoholism Research Authority, and $900,000 to continue economic opportunity agencies if federal funds are cut.

Stewart said he and Scott hope to present the budget to the full joint appropriations committee Friday. This would make it possible for the budget to reach the House and Senate floors next week.

Already voted into the budget was $15 million to get East Carolina University started on expansion of its medical school.

Education got a major share of the additional money allocated by Scott and Stewart, with funds for new math teachers, area health education centers, clerical aid in principals' offices.

Highway patrolmen and community college instructors would get pay raises in addition to the raises for all teachers and employes.

Kremlin Proposals Short Needed 'Breakthrough'

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew toward home today with Soviet proposals that fall far short of the "conceptual breakthrough" needed to produce a new treaty limiting nuclear weapons.

But while acknowledging this failure, a senior American official said President Nixon intends to go ahead with a summit meeting with Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist party leader, in Moscow in early summer.

Without detailing the differences, the official said flatly: "What they gave us is not acceptable."

He added, however, that the United States would try to come up with counterproposals, and that Kissinger probably will go back to Moscow in May.

In the meantime he will confer regularly with Anatoly F. Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to Washington and will see Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at a United Nations General Assembly meeting in New York next month. Technical negotiations will also continue in Geneva between the United States and Soviet representatives.

Kissinger flew to Moscow last weekend saying he expected a break-through to set the stage for an agreement in Geneva that Nixon and Brezhnev could sign at their third summit meeting.

Acknowledging that this forecast was too optimistic, the official said of Kissinger's discussions with Brezhnev over the last three days: "There was movement but I would not yet describe it as a breakthrough."

Before arriving in London, Kissinger told newsmen at Moscow's Vnukovo Airport: "We had a very good feview of Soviet-American relations. I think we made good progress on a number of bilateral issues."

He did not elaborate, and there was no indication his three days of meetings with Brezhnev had achieved the breakthrough he sought in the deadlocked negotiations to limit the two superpowers' nuclear arsenals.

"It depends on what you mean by a breakthrough," Kissinger told a questioner. "We had good discussions ...

"Both sides are determined to continue on the course of improving the relationship between the Soviet Union and the United States as a major contribution to world peace."

Kissinger said a joint communique on his talks would be issued later today.

The American secretary's talks with Brezhnev ended at 9:13 p.m. Wednesday although Kissinger virtually offered in a luncheon toast to work late into the night.

Subdivision Plat Meets Rejection

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A preliminary plat of Kingsbrook Subdivision near Easthaven was turned down last night by the Planning and Zoning Commission on the basis that provisions called for in the subdivision regulations were not met by the developers.

The key point of discussion and disagreement involving the plat centered around the wish of the developers not to develop a section of the property north of 14th Street that would call for construction of a northerly extension of Brownlea Drive as stipulated in the city's proposed thoroughfare plan.

Developer Dillon Watson, representing the property owners, said that although the section that would include the proposed Brownlea Drive extension was not projected for development at this time, the owners had agreed to dedicate the right-of-way for the street if the city wished to handle the construction.

Watson said that the proposed plat reflected no effort by the owners to avoid compliance with the Major Thoroughfare Plan and since the proposed extension of Brownlea did not run through the section included in the plat for development, the owners did not feel that they should share in the cost of the street construction.

He said that nothing proposed by the owners concerning the plat would interfere with the city's thoroughfare plan.

City Manager Bill Carstarphen said that the case appeared to involve one where friends disagree on the definition of subdivision regulations and he expressed a concern that a portion of the land was excluded from the plat. "Our thoroughfare plan calls for an extension of Brownlea in the portion of property that is not a part of your plat," he noted.

He acknowledged the fact that by the developers setting back the property line, the boundary as indicated in the plat does not abut property that would be utilized for Brownlea. But he said that the city can not avoid recognizing the fact that Brownlea is included in the Major Thoroughfare Plan.

Carstarphen said that the city can not ignore the fact that regulations say that the developers will share in the cost of the development of a planned thoroughfare that is in the vicinity of the subdivision.

Watson pointed out, "I simply can't read where it says anything about major thoroughfares that are located in the vicinity."

Mayor S. Eugene West charged that "evasive tactics" were being used by the developers to avoid sharing in the cost of Brownlea extension.

Phil Carroll said that "in this case, the owners just do not wish to develop all of the property they own."

Attorney Thomas Haigwood, representing the owners, said that assuming the commission wished to deny approval of the plat even though Brownlea does not pass through the planned area of development, he asked that the minutes indicate that a

Blood From 60

The Bloodmobile had another good turnout in the county Wednesday as 60 students and citizens donated blood at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Pitt Blood chairman Billy Ross reported that the collection figure was higher than anticipated and he thanked those who turned out to make the visit a success.

Ross noted that there were 25 persons rejected, in addition to the blood collected.

He expressed his appreciation to the Task Force at Ayden-Grifton for its sponsorship and coordination of the school visit and also to school officials for making the facilities available.

The next visit to Pitt County will be at East Carolina University on April 22 and 23. He said that ECU has set a goal of 500 pints of blood and reaching that goal "would really put the county quota in good shape. We are off to a real good start for the year," he said.

Some Cannot

RALEIGH (AP)—The Governor's Energy Office said today that 18 of the 24 oil companies supplying North Carolina will be able to comply with federal orders to send extra gasoline to North Carolina this month.

According to the energy office, Exxon and Tenneco said they will be able to supply only part of their requested increase, while Phillips, Union, Coastal States and Texas City report that they cannot comply at all.

On March 21 the Federal Energy Office ordered the companies to increase supplies to North Carolina by 13.8 per cent.

A spokesman for the state energy office said that the state will not receive 21 million gallons of gasoline rather than the 28 million originally scheduled.

He said Exxon and Texas City said they would send extra gasoline to the Tar Heel State next month in addition to the regular allocation.

Open To Public

A district science fair to be held at Memorial Gymnasium at East Carolina University tomorrow is open to the public between noon and 3 p.m.

Participating will be schools from all over the Eastern part of the state in three divisions—biological, physical, and technological. Junior and a senior high project are judged separately. Awards will be presented between 3 and 3:30 p.m. The fair is sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education.

Avers Political Events Caused Shortage Of Oil

By HARRISON HUMPHRIES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Exxon official denied today that the oil shortage since October is a result of oil company conspiracy or monopoly.

Also, he said, it was not a result of poor planning "but rather the result of political events that the oil industry could neither prevent nor insure against with alternative supplies."

The statements were made to the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multinational corporations by George C. Piercy, senior vice president of Exxon Corp.

Piercy told the subcommittee that spare crude-oil producing capacity dwindled in the 1970s because of heavier demand for oil worldwide and because alternative sources of energy, such as coal and nuclear power, failed to grow as expected.

Also, he said, governments in the Middle East decided to restrict production.

He said Libya cut production from 3.6 million barrels daily in April 1970 to about 1.8 million barrels by last December.

In Kuwait, the government decided in 1972 that "national objectives would best be served by stretching out the life of their reserves," Piercy said. Production there, he said, was cut by 1.5 million barrels daily by last December.

Meanwhile, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a member of the subcommittee, called for a break-up of international oil monopolies.

"Nothing would be healthier for the oil consumers of this nation than to inject a goodly measure of competition into a system that now lacks it," Church said.

Church called the Arabian American Oil Company—Aramco, operating in Saudi Arabia under ownership of four American oil companies, "a monopoly arrangement."

He said prduction setting agreements controlling Aramco, as well as the consortium of companies operating in Iran, have been designed to keep production down in the interest of maintaining prices.

Caracas Seeing Financial Fight

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Heavyweight champion George Foreman, defeated challenger Ken Norton and both fighters' handlers were held in Caracas today in a dispute over payment of taxes.

"Everything is in chaos," said Bill Biron, a Norton backer. "The promoter has left town, leaving us with a lot of bills and commitments. We have wired the United States urgently for $100,000 to get us out of the country. We understand Foreman's group is doing the same thing."

Meanwhile, the head of a Caracas travel agency who said he was owed $160,000 went to court to have the sophisticated television equipment of Video Techniques, Inc., impounded at the airport.

Video Techniques, with headquarters in New York, sponsored the title fight here Tuesday night in which Foreman defended his crown by stopping Norton in the second round.

Henry Schwartz, executive vice president of Video Techniques, flew back to New York Wednesday.

"He left owing me $160,000," said Eddie Blackwell, director of the Tortuga Travel Agency. "We have impounded his truck at the airport."

Foreman, guaranteed $700,-000, and Norton, guaranteed $200,000, were promised that their purses would not be taxed if they fought in Caracas. But Biron said a legal technicality prevented inclusion of the clause in the fight contract.

"However, I have a dozen witnesses who will testify that we were guaranteed no taxes.

Biron said the Venezuelan government was demanding 18 per cent of the fighters' purses and a percentage of all television receipts. He said that could require a "sizable bond, especially in the case of Foreman whose purse was much larger than ours."

The fight was marked by repeated threats by both sides not to go through with the bout. As a result, the closed-circuit television, which was supposed to provide the bulk of the revenue, was reported to be a financial disappointment.

Proclaims Days For Streakers

DOVER TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Mayor Ethel Zaun has set aside certain times of the year for streaking — running public in nude: Feb. 29, except in leap years, and the sixth week of March.

The proclamation issued Wednesday says: "Any citizen caught streaking at any other than on the officially sanctioned period may be subject to a penalty of up to $1 for each pound of flesh exposed in such activity."

U.S. Not Expected To Pay Attache's Ransom

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — The United States government is not expected to meet a $500,000 ransom demand reported for an American mercial attache who disappeared last Friday.

Reliable government sources in Washington said the ransom demand for John Patterson, 31, of Philadelphia, Pa., was slipped under the door of the consulate in this northern Mexican city. The sources said it was signed by the People's Revolutionary Army of Mexico.

The U.S. government is opposed to meeting the demands of foreign kidnapers. When the American consul-general in Guadalajara, Terrance G. Leonhardy, was abducted last May and leftist guerrillas demanded $80,000 ransom for him, his family had to borrow the money from three Guadalajara banks to get him back.

Patterson, his wife and young daughter moved three months ago to Hermosillo, 150 miles south of the Arizona border. The Mexican attorney general's office said he was last seen at 10:30 a.m. Friday when he drove away from the consulate with an unidentified U.S. citizen. The automobile was found abandoned several hours later.

Neither Mexican nor U.S. officials have shed any light on who Patterson's companion was, nor have they said if he also is missing. Visitors to U.S. consulates in Mexico usually have to sign in.

Patterson's kidnaping was not announced until Wednesday and the delay was not explained.

First public word of the kidnaping came at a news conference held Wednesday morning by U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe in Washington in which he announced that he was cancelling a planned trip to Mexico City.

A short time later, the State Department confirmed the incident.

Justice Department spokesman John Hushen said Saxbe was never told that U.S. authorities were keeping the kidnaping secret and was unaware when he mentioned it that the State Department had been keeping it under raps.

Saxbe said he was cancelling the three-day trip, which had been scheduled to begin Sunday, because he was afraid the kidnapers would conclude that his visit was connected with the abduction.

Persons at the hotel where the Pattersons were living said Mrs. Patterson left the hotel Wednesday morning and did not return. But they reported that from Friday until Wednesday she gave no indication that anything was wrong.

Employes at the hotel said the couple's daughter, who was about 4 years old, left Hermosillo several days ago, and it was believed she had been taken to New York.

The People's Revolutionary Army has been involved in student activism at the University of Sonora in this area, but it has not previously claimed responsibility for any major acts of terrorism. The principal urban guerrilla group active in Mexico has been the 23rd of September Communist League, and four of its members are under arrest for the Leonhardy kidnaping.

Tobacco's Impact On N.C. Told At Symposium

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

More than 75 persons attended a Tobacco History Symposium at East Carolina University yesterday.

The topic of yesterday's session presented by the Institute for Historical Research in Tobacco and funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, focused on the impact of tobacco upon towns and town life in North Carolina.

Yesterday afternoon Nannie May Tiley professor emeritus of the Department of History at East Texas State University at Commerce, Texas and a leading authority on the history of tobacco, outlined "The Impact of Tobacco and the Reynoldses upon the Growth of Winston-Salem."

The speaker said there was little business in Winston-Salem that was not based on money derived from the tobacco business and noted that the impact of the Reynoldses on the city has been "tremendous."

Dr. Tilley said, the chief product of Winston—which overshadowed the town of Salem—was dried blackberrys.

However, after R. J. Reynolds established his tobacco company there "the business grew almost beyond his control."

Since that time, Dr. Tilley said, the Reynoldses and their company have contributed much to the development of the city.

She noted that at one time, the Reynoldses paid 40 per cent of the property taxes collected in Winston-Salem and Forsyth County.

Following Dr. Tilley's presentation, Robert F. Burden of the Department of History at Duke University spoke on the topic, "The American Tobacco Company and the Development of Durham as a Tobacco Manufacturing Center."

William S. Humphries, former farm editor of the News and Observer in Raleigh and currently Food and Agricultural News Editor in the Department of Agricultural Information for the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at N.C. State Univeristy spoke at a luncheon on the topic "The Impact of Tobacco upon North Carolina Towns."

Arctic Wilderness Life Spurs Couple To Write

By ANN CONY

NEW YORK (AP) — The lives of Sam and Billie Wright are directed by the sun, or lack of it; clocks have no meaning, work and nonwork are inseparable.

Billie's journal of their first year in the Alaskan wilderness has been published as a book, "Four Seasons North."

The book tells of the beauty of the Alaskan wilderness and the Wrights' rich life there, but Sam and Billie encourage no one to come to Alaska.

The beauty of the wilderness lies in its unpopulated tranquility, and "There are no jobs, despite the construction of the pipeline," they explained in an interview here.

In autumn of 1968 the Wrights began a year-long sabbatical study of the Eskimo and human value choices.

The Eskimos of the North are currently caught up in a period of rapid transition, the Wrights say. Until the beginning of the pipeline construction, "ownership didn't exist" in the lives of the Eskimos. "Acre" is a new word in their vocabulary, the Wrights say. Until recently, land was common property of all — men and animals alike, in the eyes of the Eskimos.

Upon arrival in the Brooks Range of Alaska, 100 miles north of the Arctic Circle, the Wrights met Dishu, an Eskimo woman who, as they put it, was to become their "adopted grandmother." Dishu asked the crucial question, "How you understand Eskimo unless you live like Eskimo early days ago?"

Sam and Billie say they knew she was right. To live through four seasons alone in the Arctic wilderness was the only answer.

They moved into a 12-by 12-foot log cabin just in time to prepare for the fast-approaching, rigorous Arctic winter. With Sam's hunting and survival skills and Billie's enthusiasm they made repairs on their winter camp, brought down caribou and moose for winter meat, gathered berries, hauled water from a not-so-nearby stream, and chopped and stacked wood.

ARCTIC SURVIVAL—Billie Wright, shown gathering wood, says she doesn't encourage anyone to come to Alaska although she and husband, Sam, claim they've found satisfaction in learning how to live in harmony with the land and nature.

The Wrights admit survival isn't easy in the Arctic, especially in the winter when winds howl, the mercury drops to 60 degrees below zero, and darkness settles on the land.

But they found an immense satisfaction in learning to live in harmony with the land and nature, not competing against it, not trying to "conquer" or change it, but rather adapting to meet the demands of the extremes of the seasons and terrain.

Billie notes a similar harmony in her life with Sam. She says the "marriage relationship provides full equality to both members."

Here again there is no sense of competition. Though Sam does most of the hunting, Billie can and does hunt. And Billie claims, "Sam bakes great bread!" Most of their tasks are shared and the various jobs that each perform are equally important.

"Koviashuvik" is an Eskimo word, loosely translated meaning time or place of happiness.

The Wrights say that is the best description of their life in the Brooks Range, a life which no words can really describe adequately, where the environment shapes perspectives, and never vice versa.

There is a timeless quality about the Wrights' life in the Arctic. Daily chores must be done, but there are no strict schedules to adhere to; days do not become dull routines. There is no need for clocks or calendars, the sun and the seasons tell the Wrights when to get up, when to hunt, when to chop wood, and when to stay indoors reading or writing.

Billie claims they have "rediscovered the joy of eating." The Wrights eat when they are hungry, not at "lunch time" or "dinner hour" forced on the rest of the world to fit in with the strict routines of "civilization."

At the end of their first year in the Arctic, the Wrights could not leave. Earlier plans to visit different cultures of the world were scratched.

Sam and Billie have taken a few weeks this winter to tour the country, giving lectures and showing the documentary film they made themselves on human values, the Northern Eskimos and the land.

The Wrights are asked repeatedly about their health. People are concerned about dangers of being mauled by a wolf or a grizzly bear and the problem of treating illness in general without the security of a nearby physician or hospital.

These are very real dangers. But risk is an element in all life, and the Wrights figure that everyone is going to die sooner or later. "What's the difference if it's by a grizzly or a taxicab?" Billie asks.

The Wrights are often asked if they miss the outside world. The answer comes easily. Unhesitatingly, "no."

They have put a lot of time and effort into reading and studying. They have definite ideas on value formation and our rapidly changing society, where "progress" now rules the land.

The Wrights have lived successfully in civilization. Before moving to the Brooks Range, Billie had been an editor, photographer, graphic arts designer, book and film reviewer, chaplain, feminist, poet, advertising executive and fisherwoman.

She was the first woman to be ordained into the clergy in Alaska. Billie says she encountered little discrimination due to her sex in entering the clergy.

Sam Wright is also a minister. His job as professor of human and social ecology at a west coast seminary took him on his sabbatical to the Brooks Range. Also a biologist, Sam is an expert on the wilderness.

Now the Wrights are immersed in their work. In 1968 they founded Tasseraluk Institute, "a nonprofit institution for educational, religious, scientific and literary research and development in social and human values."

DEAR ABBY: Please help me before I go completely out of my mind. I work for this doctor. He's a good one and I love my work, but I never have any time to myself.

The doctor and his wife are friendly with my husband and me, but they are too friendly. We live in a small town, and his car is parked in front of my house at lunch hour and my days off, too, and I just don't like the way it looks.

If the doctor isn't here, he has me tied up on the phone for long periods talking about this or that at the clinic or hospital.

I have my own work to do at home, and I'm always behind with it. My husband and I have other friends, but we can't plan anything without this doctor and his wife, as they pop in without even calling.

I'm afraid to relax in anything but my uniform at home because he even comes in without knocking. What can I do? My husband says he is just being friendly. I like friends, too, but I'd also like to forget about sick people, pregnant women, etc., when I have some time off. I've even considered quitting, but I do like my job.

TIRED OF PRETENDING

DEAR TIRED: If you do not tell the doctor that you can no longer be available after working hours because you have other responsibilities, you may have to quit your job. Your pretended 24-hour-availability has put you in a bind.

Wife Of Designer Hasn't Followed Fashion in In Years

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — Denise Poiret wore pants for the first and last time in her life in 1911.

That was the year that her husband, Paul Poiret, declared, "let women wear pants." At his famous extravaganza, "The Thousand and Second Night," Mme. Poiret escaped from her gilded cage dressed in a feather aigrette and the first pair of pantaloons that a Western woman had ever worn.

"I have always hated pants on women and I still do. All that fabric is very disagreeable between the legs. It's a shame that femininity should be spoiled by something that mostly doesn't even look good on women," Mme. Poiret remarks.

Now, this venerable 88-year-old in a sweater and skirt is delighted, but not surprised, that the whole fashion world has suddenly "discovered" her husband, who died in 1944 and was the father of modern "undressy dresses," the casual clothes of today.

There are Poiret dresses currently on exhibit at the New York Metropolitan Museum, and the Musee Jacquemart-Andre in Paris now features an entire exhibition dedicated to Poiret.

Aside from dresses, it includes paintings, namely by Van Dongen, that were formerly part of Poiret's private collection, drawings of the dresses by Georges Lepape, wall-hangings that Raoul Dufy designed for the Poiret barges that "made" the 1925 Art Deco exhibition in Paris and some of the paintings that Poiret himself did in later life.

A rather rotund and dapper man with a beard and satanic eyes, Poiret gave women back their bodies in 1906. At that time, fashion meant corsets, brocades, tight gloves, painful pointed toes and wasp waists.

Poiret replaced all this with the modern bra, girdle, garter belt and comfortable flat-heeled boots. His colors were red, green, purple and all bright shades instead of wishy-washy 19th-century pastels.

Critics complained that Poiret's "despairingly loose" Greek tunics and robes would encourage women to forget about keeping their figures. Little they knew.

The public was more direct. Less avant-garde people simply greeted the dresses with hisses, catcalls and on occasion even attacked the wearers.

"When I went out on the street, everyone looked at me as if I were peculiar. I was terribly embarrassed. I told my husband I didn't want to go out alone any more. My clothes weren't eccentric. I just wanted to look elegant," Mme. Poiret recalls.

What provoked such public indignation? For example, her favorite dress, very shocking indeed. It was a simple loose sack.

"My husband gave me the freedom to choose my own dresses, but he preferred me in a sack. He never forced me to wear anything I didn't like, such as pants. Besides, he knew I didn't want too many clothes. First, because I loved the dresses I had and wore them for years. And also because I hated wasting my time and standing on my feet for hours during all those fittings," she explains.

As a faithful wife, she always wore a Poiret label inside her dresses. "My husband would have been amused if I had worn another designer's clothes. Once he asked me to, but I refused," she recalls.

She never bobbed her hair either, since her husband frowned upon the 1920s — short flapper dresses, the Charleston, Montparnasse nightclubs and all.

Now, Mme. Poiret still has 40 of her favorite dresses left. Many she gave away years ago to museums or to her "less fortunate friends, who were very happy to have a Poiret dress. Who wouldn't be? I wish I hadn't given them away," she adds with regret.

The ones she does have she still wears with pride. "Last year, I wore my little cloche hat from 1906. It looked good. When I go out in a pre-World War I dress, I don't feel out of style," she says.

What about the retrospective dresses "inspired" — to put it mildly — by Poiret that Paris designers are busy reproducing for spring?

"Frankly, I haven't followed fashion in decades. But there's no reason not to wear nostalgic clothes if they suit you and you like them. For designers to copy old dresses? Why not, if they haven't any other ideas," Mme. Poiret comments.

Actress Interested In Mental Health

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Trish Van Devere has more on her mind than acting. She's interested in George C. Scott, dolphins, taking pictures and mental health.

She's married to George C. Scott and they're starring together in the film, "The Day of the Dolphin." Her hobby is photography and the Scotts have a darkroom in their home in Greenwich, Conn., where they both develop black and white pictures.

But ask about her other interest, mental health, and she doesn't talk about another movie but about a psychiatric institute in Connecticut where she works as a group leader for group therapy.

"I think it is exciting. The only other thing that has interested me besides the theater has been aspects of mental health. I believe when people are cut off from one another, the restructuring of communicating on whatever level has to benefit everybody."

A dozen years ago, Miss Van Devere was acting in a Florida theater at night and working with retarded and disturbed children days. "I went to a sea aquarium one day off and saw dolphins for the first time. We didn't have a formal yardstick to evaluate how the children were getting along. I used to think they were better if they could laugh at something incongruous.

"I noticed that when the diver would bring food into the tank and an electric eel who lived in a rock formation would poke his head out to get the food, one dolphin would get behind him and give him a poke to bother him and then scoot off — it looked like he swam off laughing. The dolphin did that three or four times and then he'd had his joke for the afternoon."

Miss Van Devere got to know dolphins, including their individual differences, a lot better, making the movie "The Day of the Dolphin." Six dolphins were caught off Florida, trained and named Buck, Ginger, Big Mama, Paddlefoot, Lulu and Candy. Buck and Ginger responded best to training and played Alpha, known as Fa, and Beta, known as B, in the picture.

"It was always Ginger who came along the observation window glass and rubbed up against it. She liked to rub against you and have you stroke her. Mama was usually in the ocean pen. When a wild dolphin would go by it would stop over and she'd go to the corner of the ocean pen and they'd chat it up.

"I'd get in the tank with Buck and swim to the middle and he'd come up under my arm and bring me right back to the side. He acted like he thought it was too dangerous for me to stay in the middle. He'd take me for a ride around the tank with my arm over him, but he'd always bring me back to the side.

"With George, he'd leap over him and swim around him, even pull the oxygen regulator out of his mouth when he was down at the bottom. He acted like George could take care of himself.

"George and I both learned how to do underwater stuff. Nobody dubbed for George in any of the underwater shots that were on screen."

What was dubbed was the talking in English by the dolphins. Miss Van Devere says, "That track was laid in. Dolphins don't have vocal folds. They have the intelligence to talk. They certainly communicate and understand; they can do better than talk. They're easy to train but they get temperamental sometimes and once in a while they get bored.

"One day, Mike Nichols, who was directing, said, 'Okay, that's it for the actors for today. I'll work with the dolphins alone here.' They heard that and they thought they were actors, too. They wouldn't work."

Miss Van Devere talks with warmth of voice and animated facial expressions but at the same time projects a quality of ladylike reserve. She was born about 30 years ago in Tenafly, N.J., and was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan in 1965 in speech and drama. "In the mid '60s there was so much civil rights involvement. I joined Scott Cunningham's Free Southern Theater, which had Ford Foundation money, in New Orleans. We traveled through the rural South bringing theater to those who had none.

Later, after the assassination of Martin Luther King, when she returned to New York, Miss Van Devere says she wasn't particularly interested in movies. But her agent, Jane Oliver, kept sending her to try out for movie roles. "One day I read with Carl Reiner and I got the part of the nurse in 'Where's Poppa?'. I still say if I hadn't read for Carl I wouldn't have got the part. You read with a casting director and they practically put you to sleep. Carl gave so much of himself and kind of drew it out of me.

"Then I did 'The Last Run,' one of those latter-day MGM pictures that wasn't very well released, starring George, which is when I met him. Then I starred in 'One Is a Lonely Number,' which I worked so hard on and which Mike Nichols is one of the few people to have seen — he saw it on a plane. Then 'Harry in Your Pocket' which no one saw, even Mike on a plane. That's my list of successes that I've recounted to you. And I've been married to George a year and a half, which is a year longer than my first 'successful' marriage."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Last night, in my dreams, I saw my own tombstone. It read:
ERMA BOMBECK
Girl Scout Cookie Capt. (Ret.)
G.S. Cookie Sale
Feb. 15-March 30, 1974
Her motto: BE PREPAID

As I tossed and turned, my mind went back to six months ago when I was your average goof-off mother who was allergic to children, bazaars, booster clubs, PTSA open house, Little Leagues, FutureFarmers of America noodle suppers, raffle tickets and pillow case bingo.

Then one day I was approached by the Committee to Elect Cookie Captain and all of that changed. The three of them stood in front of the door and smiled, "The peacetime cookie corps needs you."

"But surely you remember I have maternity deferment," I smiled.

"The kid is 15 years old now," they said, "and we need officers who can lead."

I led the entire troop into bankruptcy which is pretty much what you could expect from a woman who pays for school milk by check ... daily. In February, I assembled the troop together and told them to get out and sell. ("There is no need to salute, Mary Ida"). I told them to leave no stones or grandparents unturned and to remember God is on your side. (I put Him down for two boxes of Scot Teas.)

On the day of delivery, I was up to my chair rail molding in Girl Scout cookies and called the girls to tell them to pick them up. "Hello, Gloria, this is Mrs. Bombeck and ... Mrs. BOMBECK ... you remember the cookie pusher down the street?"

"Oh" she said, "well, listen my grandmother is sick and doesn't need 30 boxes and my mom's freezer conked out and she can't use 18 boxes and ..."

And so it went. I have never heard so many excuses for cancelled orders in my life. I have rolled chicken in cookie crumbs, used them for tips, made earrings out of them, fed them to birds, peddled them in massage parlors, dropped them in water to cure headaches, used them for fertilizer and for bridge prizes.

What started out to be neat, efficient records of sales and returns now looks like a scratch pad in the Hong Kong office of H. & R. Block. I told my husband about my dream and mentioned that I saw a pigeon perched on my tombstone.

He said it takes one to know one.

Undercut By Shallow Sniping

Congressman Jack Brooks (D-Tex.) didn't do himself, his political party or the cause of investigating Richard Nixon a whole lot of good last week when his subcommittee reported the President's two homes have cost the taxpayers $17 million. The news report gave no details as to how that figure was reached.

The subcommittee report was allegedly "partisan"; the Republicans saying they knew nothing of it until a few days before it was adopted by a party-line vote.

Actually more than the $17 million expense was involved; but that figure (by design or happenstance) dominated the scene. The presentation should raise eyebrows of the most ironclad Nixon critics, if only because it appears sensation-mongering and lacking explanations as to its basis.

Everyone knows the presidency is an expensive institution. It involves extraordinary demands as Chief of State and the responsibilities of Commander in Chief. The extraordinary role (there's nothing like it in the world) calls for extraordinary outlays. Nobody can say we're getting a bargain or a burden. There is no yardstick.

More than prestige or luxury or comfort is involved; and the question of balancing outlays with results or potential efficiencies can always be raised. As the technologies of management and communications become ever more sophisticated, you can count on their becoming more expensive.

Because President Nixon has two homes outside the White House there is an added dimension. Of course they add cost to the presidency; but owning two homes is hardly a crime.

The Brooks subcommittee knew these things and must have chosen to introduce the $17 million figure for its calculated effect. Why this kind of presentation? To further undermine? To discredit? To add yet another burning brand to the pile around Richard Nixon's feet?

We do not take kindly the implications of the manner in which the report was presented. It reeks of the kind of partisan warfare which should be submerged when the greater questions of possible impeachment proceedings are before the country. The scandals and implications of criminal involvement by the President are too serious to be undermined by such shallow sniping.

Surely, if the case Richard Nixon's protagonist are building is as ill-conceived and poorly constructed as the Brooks subcommittee report, the American people do not deserve the agonies being engendered.

Legislators On A Study-Binge

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — North Carolina's General Assembly is on a study binge.

So far this session, there have been proposals for more than 95 study commissions on subjects from aging to bike trails to water-sewer regulations.

"I had thought this trend was declining, but the spark is rekindled—and there's absolutely no justification for eight out of 10 of these commissions," Rep. Sneed High, D-Cumberland, said.

High is among a small group of legislators opposed to what he terms the "proliferation of study commissions," which often only duplicate material already available, generally are used as a means of getting out of a tough situation on a subject, and in many cases only present a stage or a forum for special interest legislators or groups to present their viewpoint at public expense.

Come And Go

Now ready to retire after 15 years in the General Assembly, High said he has seen hundreds of study commission come and go—producing elaborate, printed reports which resulted in little or no meaningful action.

The Courts Commission, a standing body concerned with all aspects of the court operations in the state, is a rare example of departure from this rule, High said, principally because the members have expertise, originate ideas themselves, and generally embody the work done by the commission on bills to be introduced in the General Assembly buttressed by supportive data to help their passage.

But most commissions, he charged, do not have people with expertise on them, many members are on it for "honoray or social" purposes, and in operation generally wait on professional staff to "just lay something on the table for them, and they rubber stamp it."

So far this session, the General Assembly has approved 31 study commissions; has under consideration by various legislative committees establishment of 39 others; and has killed proposals for 24 more.

Many Subjects

Subjects include governmental ethics, teacher certification, motorboat titling, cost of living, housing, rapid transit, bike trails, pesticide use, highway litter, radiation, pollution, crime, school bus use, mental health, solid waste disposal, forestry, school building maintenance, etc.

Forming a commission is also used as a technique to make sure a subject returns to attention of the General Assembly in a following year.

There are three basic formats: the Legislative Research Commission which will carry out the study unless some other format is suggested in the bill adopted by the assembly; members of commissions may be members or non-members of the assembly, appointed by Speaker of the House and Senate President Pro-tem.

Standing commissions continue in exitence for long periods and perhaps make the most important contributions. These include criminal code, courts, general statutes, mental health.

Special commissions made up largely of assemblymen and state personnel make up the bulk of study groups.

Most of these, staff members of the General Assembly, explain, are created largely for political purposes and exist only for short periods of time to study a specific subject. These often are used to publicize a subject and generate support for legislation.

Staff members say many commissions don't even meet after being established. One staff man, hunting information ona particular subject, called a legislator whom he knew was named to the commission.

The lawmaker didn't have an answer, and said he didn't even know who the chairman of the commission was.

"I looked it up in the files. That legislator was the chairman," the staffer said.

No-Fault Plan Seeing Trouble

By JOHN KILGO

This is the week that was for no-fault auto insurance in North Carolina.

With the Legislature trying to adjourn by April 12, no-fault is still miles and miles away from being resolved. A House bill dealing with no-fault rests at this writing in the House Insurance Committee, chaired by Rep. Sneed High.

And some people who have been pushing no-fault don't like the bill much at all.

Rep. Craig Lawing of Mecklenburg worked through the summer and fall drumming up support for a strong no-fault bill. When the Legislature met in January, Lawing was happy with the prospects. He said at the time that no-fault would pass, and that North Carolina would have the best plan in the nation.

But today, with the Legislature in the twilight of the 1974 session, Lawing is discouraged and displeased.

Says Lawing of the bill now before Rep. High's committee: "To tell you the truth, I believe I'd just as soon not have a bill as have the one now in committee."

Lawing charges that the complicated, controversial no-fault legislation has been amended so many times, studied so many times, and debated so much that what is left will do little for the consumer.

"What we have before the committee at this stage," Lawing charges, "is a bill that the lawyers wanted. It's not the best bill for the consumer."

Lawing says the bill now before the Insurance Committee will go to the floor of the House "if Sneed High wants it to go to the floor of the House."

"If it gets on the floor," Lawing said, "I believe it would be passed in its present form and sent to the Senate. But, in my opinion, if the bill doens't get out of committee this week, it'll be dead as far as this session is concerned."

No-fault insurance would limit a person's right to sue in auto accident cases, and victims would be paid by their own insurance companies. This would cut down on costly, time-consuming court ligitation in auto accident cases. Many laywers, however, don't like that idea.

No-fault has been in trouble since the idea came to life in North Carolina. Former State Senator Neill Jones of Wadesboro chaired a Governor's Study Commission on no-fault and recommended a bill to the General Assembly, last year. It didn't get passed.

Jones had hard words for Rep. High and Rep. Gerald Arnold, whom he said fought no-fault and tried to "sandbag" the legislation. Jones also felt Insurance Commissioner John Ingram held up passage of the bill by refusing to give it his support.

Jones had felt no-fault would pass this time, with elections coming up in November. But Lawing isn't so sure.

"If the bill gets killed this time," Lawing says, "then maybe the federal government will make us pass a no-fault bill that will protect the consumer. The bill they're discussing in committee now is lawyer-oriented."

-AND NOW FOR THE BAD NEWS-

"Tell your President that we've rolled out the red carpet and created a perfect summit!"

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

One Shield Is Enough

We are back again at this business of a federal "shield law" for newsmen. A subcommittee of House Judiciary finally has agreed on a bill sponsored by Wisconsin's Robert W. Kastenmeier. If the full committee can stop hassling over impeachment for a few days, in order to consider this matter, his bill may even be sent to the floor.

It has taken 18 months of hard work to reach this stage. Scores of witnesses have been heard; a dozen drafts of proposed bills have been reviewed and discarded; if any bill at all is to be passed, it will be the Kastenmeier bill or something close to it.

My own suggestion, for whatever it may be worth, sounds a good deal more brutal than I mean it to be: Kill the bill. Kill all the shield law bills. The Constitution itself, interpreted case by case as challenges come along, remains the one best shield the press could possibly possess.

The various proposals before Congress have the same admirable purpose in mind. It is to protect the public interest in a free press, and especially in investigative journalism. This interest is real — and it is in real trouble.

Many of the most important stories carried in the press are developed in this fasion: A telephone rings on some reporters desk. The caller is a friendly clerk, let us say, in the local public works department. He has come across evidence of what appears to be graft. He is willing to point the reporter in the direction of this evidence, provided one thing: "You've got to protect me." The reporter gives this assurance, and goes to work on the story.

Sometimes these things pan out; sometimes they don't. Suppose that in this case the tip is solid. After hard digging, the reporter goes to press. An uproar ensues. The local city council demands to know the reporter's source. A grand jury is empaneled to investigate the corruption. The reporter is subpoenaed. In an extreme case, the director of public works may be indicated. His lawyers demand that the reporter be summoned as a witness for the accused.

The object of a shield law is to protect the reporter in such situations. Under the Kastenmeier bill, he would be granted absolute immunity from having to reveal his source to a legislative committee or to a grand jury. Only in the most compelling circumstances could the reporter be ordered to identify his source at a criminal trial.

Yet, to say that the object is to protect the reporter is to put the matter too narrowly. What is being protected is the public interest in having the graft exposed. If confidential sources cannot be assured that their names will be kept secret, confidential sources will simply dry up. The hypothetical clerk in the public works department will not risk being fired. He will keep his mouth shut, and the corruption will continue.

My own conviction is that in 99 cases out of 100, the courts will understand this problem and will defend the public interest. To be sure, a majority of the Supreme Court has not yet been persuaded, but in the key case in 1972, Bransburg v. Hayes,

Other Editors Say National No-Fault

(Wilson Times)

A bill setting up a national system of no-fault auto insurance has won narrow eight-to-seven approval by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The committee's action clears the way for Senate floor debate on the vill, possibly in early April.

Several states already have enacted insurance rules reflecting the no-fault principle in varying degree. The Nixon administration thinks this is the way no-fault should be handled and it wants Congress to keep its hands off.

This General Assembly has been discussin the bill, but there appears little interest in passing a measure this session.

Under no-fault insurance, a policyholder injured in an auto accident has his medical costs and other expenses paid by his own insurance company regardless of who was responsible for the wreck. It abolishes the traditional system of lawsuits to settle the blame for accidents with the losing party's insurance company then paying the medical bills.

Those who favor no-fault say it could cut insurance premiums by reducing court costs. Trial lawyers argue it crimps an injured person's right to sue.

Several states have enacted insurance rules reflecting the no-fault principle in varying degree.

The Senate Commerce Committee last August approved, 15 to three, a bill setting national no-fault insurance standards for state legislatures, backed up by a federal plan that would take effect in a state that doesn't act. The bill deals with the cost of personal injury only and doesn't require the no-fault principle for auto damage.

But conservatives on the Senate Judiciary Committee insisted on a chance to study legal questions on the bill. It will go to the full 'senate with a favorable report from the two committees.

Sen. Philip Hart, a principal sponsor, said he expects a swarm of floor amendments to be offered but he predicts a no-fault bill will pass. The House hasn't taken any action as of now.

Famine Fight Hurt

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The rise in world oil prices is undercutting Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's struggle to feed the hungry masses of India.

Fuel and fertilizer shortages blamed on the oil crisis, combined with inadequate winter rains, have raised fears that the 105 million to 108 million tons of food grains predicted for this year's crop will not materialize.

The result could be empty stomachs because precious foreign reserves that could buy food abroad are already flowing out to pay for oil.

Official policy here is that India is self-sufficient in food. But the World Bank predicts that in spite of recent agricultural progress the country will have to continue importing about two million tons of grain a year for the next five years.

The cost of oil and related products also is helping escalate prices of the Indian staples, wheat and rice. This is contributing to growing dissatisfaction among millions of lower and middle class families whose subsistence-level incomes can't keep up.

The widespread sense of insecurity over food played a major role in student-led unrest that toppled the Gujarat State government last month and forced Mrs. Gandhi to send thousands of troops to control rioting mobs in Bihar State last week.

Ironically, the oil price boom has hit Indian agriculture particularly hard because of much-heralded progress in use of fertilizers and artificial irrigation.

The relation is close: fertilizers contain petroleum products; when petroleum costs more and becomes rare on the market, so does fertilizer.

The Indian Minister of State for Petroleum and Chemicals, Shah Nawaz Khan, estimated that as a result India will fall about 1.3 million tons short of its 4 million ton fertilizer needs this year.

India imported about 112 million barrels of crude oil last year. Predictions are that it will need about a million more

A PLACE FOR FEAR

Is there any place in our religion for fear?

Many people will say No. They will tell us that fear paralyzes the very powers through which God works in us. The presence in the heart of both fear and faith is impossible.

Why then are we told that the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom? Because the fear of doing wrong, of offending against the goodness and mercy of God, is just as much a part of our religion as love to our neighbor. Through all his teachings Jesus warned men of the serious consequences of transgressing the will of God and made it plain that a man has much to fear who sins against God and regards the matter lightly.

These are the words of Christ: "Be not afraid of them that kill the body, but who are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him who is able to destory both the soul and body in hell."

Compete For Savings Dollars

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The fight for the consumer's savings dollar might seem to be one fought mainly in a carnival atmosphere of pennants and prizes and bonuses, but this gilding merely hides far more basic considerations.

Banks, securities brokers, mutual funds and insurers are all battling for these dollars, appropriating techniques from each other and fearing not a whit about intruding on each other's territory.

But it is the banks and other savings institutions, once the most severely conventional of all institutions, that are breaking the old mold. Many are selling insurance and stocks, directly or in combination with conventional savings plans.

Criticism, understandably, is mounting. Insurers don't like losing business, of course, but the bankers remind them that insurance's most popular and profitable product, whole life, has always included a savings feature.

Indeed, they point out that insurers paid very little interest on those savings, which are referred to as the cash or borrowing value of the policy. For years they paid about one-half the interest offered by banks.

The brokers are upset that more than 65 national banks now have investment services under which individuals may purchase shares of the nation's 25 largest companies on a regular automatic deduction plan.

James Needham, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, urged the comptroller of the currency this week to ban such plans, which he said are not just a radical departure from convention but a violation of the law.

Needham also believes the mutual fund industry might be forced to sue the banks because of the similarity of product that each is promoting. And mutual funds, it should be noted, are losing business as it is.

At the same time, insurance agents are keeping a wary eye on their stock broker associates, who are trying to nourish their shrunken incomes from stocks by selling insurance. Insurance, the brokers have found, isn't nearly as cyclical or treacherous as stocks.

Leaf Planting Rules Amended

The provisions requiring the planting of tobacco within the farm acreage allotment to be eligible for price support have been amended.

According to Stacy Evans of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, planting within the allotment is no longer a condition for eligibility for price support.

Price support will be available on all flue cured tobacco up to 110 percent of the farms quota.

"The farm operator will still be required to certify to the acreage of flue cured tobacco planted on the farm," Evans said. "All other provisions regarding acreage are still in effect."

REAP Will Hold Signup

The 1973 Rural Environmental Assistance Program, terminated Dec. 22, 1972, has been reinstated.

The program was terminated by the Department of Agriculture. This action was appealed to the U.S. District Court which ruled that the program could not be suspended after it had been approved and funded by the Congress.

The ruling was not appealed by the Justice Department and the 1973 program was approved.

The following practices have been included in the program: permanent vegetative cover; stripcropping; planting forestry trees; water impoundment reservoirs; improving stand of forest trees; constructing terrace systems; interim cover crop; permanent wildlife habitat; wildlife food plots; and sediment or chemical runoff control measures.

The sign-up period for the program will begin Monday and continue through the year.

Shot 6 Times But Pursued Assailant

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Leon Revels, 33, of Gastonia, N.C., who is 6-6, weighs 365 pounds and has a 56-inch waist, was shot six times while he was taking a nap Tuesday, but still was able to pursue his alleged assailant into the street.

The man charged with shooting him in an Atlantic City boarding house, Charles W. Goodson, 29, of Gastonia, is quoted by New Jersey authorities as saying they were involved in an interstate auto theft ring which transported cars from Gastonia to Philadelphia.

Goodson was charged with atrocious assault and battery and possession of a deadly weapon.

Police said that Goodson told them that Revels, also known as Joseph Primavera, was wanted in the murder of John Mize, 61, in Gastonia. James Gray, 19, of Gaston County, N.C., has been arrested in that case.

Mize was fatally beaten and stabbed three weeks ago. The police desk sergeant in Gastonia said Wednesday night that as far as he knew, Revels had not been charged in that case.

However, Revels was charged here as a material witness pending further investigation into the murder case.

Police in Atlantic City said Goodson told them:

He and Revels had bought a gun last week. Revels feared Gray would turn state's evidence at his trial. Revels planned to use the gun to shoot the man on the witness stand.

He (Goodson) said Revels threatened to kill him when he wanted to see a doctor to treat his pleurisy. So he got the gun and began shooting.

Justice Lewis Powell was wobbling.Given a fresh case, with a good set of facts, Powell could vote the other way — that is, Powell might vote to protect the reporter, the source, and the public interest alike.

Adoption of a federal shield law would only complicate matters. It would be impossible, in my view, to restrict application of such a law to men and women generally identified with the working press. The proposed shield could be invoked as readily by any person "preparing information in any form for any medium of communication to the public." The bill is too broad.

The First Amendment, protecting a free press from a bridgement by law, does not give a newsman absolute rights; but the First gives us abundant rights, day in and day out, to do our job. We would be well advised, it seems to me, to say to the gentleman from Wisconsin, thanks, but no, thanks.

Hope To Raise Parts Of Old Ironclad Next Week

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University researchers, aided by a special sea probing vessel, hope next week to raise parts of the Union ironclad Monitor from the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, where the historic warship has rested for more than a century.

The Monitor—which fought the Confederate ironclad Merrimac to a standstill at the Battle of Hampton Roads during the Civil War—sank in a raging gale off Cape Hatteras about 1:30 a.m. on Dec. 31, 1862, while under tow to Beaufort, N.C., by the U.S.S. Rhode Island.

It was to have been used later to reinforce the Union blockade of the South.

No attempt will be made to raise the main hulk of the Monitor next week. The historic vessel—considered a forerunner of modern battleships—has been the subject of numerous searches.

Earlier this month, John G. Newton, marine superintendent for the oceanographic program at Duke's Marine Laboratory in Beaufort, announced the Monitor had been found.

Newton, who will participate in next week's recovery efforts, said five months of analysis of underwater television pictures, photographs and historical records confirmed discovery of the lost warship.

The Monitor is lying upside down in 220 feet of water on hard sand and shell-strewn ocean floor about 15 miles south of Cape Hatteras, Newton said.

The university's research vessel, Eastward, located the warship during a two-week search last August with financial support from the National Geographic Society and other organizations.

Now, with aid from the U.S. Navy and again from the National Geographic Society, a return trip is being made to the site.

A specially-equipped 243-foot sea probe vessel, owned by Alcoa and on lease to the Navy, will use its television-guided mechanical claws to raise pieces of the Monitor to the surface.

The sea probe is scheduled to sail from Morehead City, N.C., Sunday morning. It will carry a crew of 49, including a scientific party of 13.

The first order of business will be to make a complete photographic composite the area where the Monitor is resting. These pictures will show scientists where parts of the ship are resting and set the stage for recovery.

Newton believes pictures taken last summer show the Monitor's rudder, lying on the ocean floor separate from the main wreck. Other photographs show what is believed to be part of the anchor cable. If it is followed further, Newton believes the Monitor's anchor can be found and raised.

Newton said it would be "extremely dangerous" to dive to the wreck because of the depth and a two-knot current.

As parts of the wreck are raised to the surface, divers will enter the water. They will apply preservatives to the recovered parts and wrap them to prevent corrosion and oxidation when they are finally hauled from the water into the air.

A Duke University spokesman said the technology needed to raise the entire Monitor "without tearing it all to pieces" is 30 to 40 years away.

The sea probe is capable of recovering a 20-ton payload from 6,000 foot depths. The Navy is paying $40,000 to rent the vessel for a week, a university spokesman said.

Two U.S. Army support vessels—a landing craft utility ship and a launch—left this week to make advance preparations for the return to the Monitor wreck site. They carried sophisticated navigational aids. Radar equipment also was placed at the Cape Hatteras lighthouse and at the Diamond Shoals light station.

This equipment will allow the the support vessels to station themselves within 10 to 15 feet of the wreck site, Newton said.

The Monitor lies in an oblong depression caused by the current which has scoured the area for a distance of 600 feet beyond the wreck, Newton said. The ship went down on the edge of the Gulf Stream.

Sixteen federal soldiers were lost when the Monitor sank. It was designed soley for river and coastal operations.

Newton said the characteristic round gun turret of the Monitor, which inspired the ship's nickname as the "cheesebox on a raft," apparently fell off as the vessel rolled over while sinking. The hull is resting at an angle on the turret, he said.

Newton said the search area last August was determined by replotting the track of the tow ship Rhode Island as she rounded treacherous Diamond Shoals, dreaded by mariners of the time as the "Graveyard of the Atlantic."

One of the positive pieces of evidence that the vessel actually is the Monitor, according to Newton, is a brass ring at the base of the turret, clearly visible in television pictures made last August.

The Monitor—regarded by naval historians as the ship that spelled the end of wooden fighting vessels—was equipped with many innovations unique to her at the time. These included the revolving turret and an armor belt. Descriptions of the ship coincided exactly with the finding made from last summer's search, Newton said.

Gordon P. Watts, underwater archaeologist for the state Department of Cultural Resources, said the wreck site represents "one of the most potentially valuable 19th century marine archaeological sources available in North Carolina."

Lost Fight On Using Stadium

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Phoenix resident has lost his effort to deny use of the Arizona State University football stadium for a crusade by evangelist Billy Graham.

The state Supreme Court held unanimously Wednesday that occasional rental did not constitute state support of religion.

A lease calls for use of the stadium by the Graham Crusade from May 5 to 12 for $39,995.

Bank Is Robbed In Fayetteville

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A masked gunman stole an undisclosed amount from a bank in a shopping center Wednesday.

The FBI said the robber fired a shot into the floor when the manager of the Southern National Bank branch apparently did not move quickly enough on command to lie on the floor.

It was the 12th bank robbery of the year in North Carolina.

Says Mitchell Meddled In Case

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Security and Exchange Commission chairman says one-time Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans meddled in a massive fraud case against financier Robert L. Vesco, a big cash contributor to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

"He made a statement to the effect there was no reason to cause embarrassment here and could we limit the scope of our inquiry?" said G. Bradford Cook, who served three months in 1973 as the SEC chairman.

When it appeared that the SEC might rip the shield of secrecy from Vesco's secret $200,000 cash contribution, Cook said Stans' reaction was: "Oh, oh, that gives me a problem."

Cook is scheduled to return to the witness stand today at an abbreviated session of Stans' trial with former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell on criminal conspiracy charges. The morning session was eliminated so defense attorneys can catch up on some legal homework.

Mitchell and Stans are accused of impeding the SEC investigation in return for Vesco's contribution. The charges included conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury.

The indictment charges that as a part of the conspiracy Stans caused Cook to delete all specific references to Vesco's $200,000 contribution in the fraud complaint that the SEC eventually filed Nov. 27, 1972.

It is also charged that Stans caused Cook to request the SEC staff to pigeonhole transcripts of testimony relating to the contribution, that were to be filed in federal court in support of the fraud complaint.

In furtherance of the conspiracy and the ensuing attempt to cover up its existence, Cook said there were meetings between himself and Stans in such widely separated locations as a rice field in Texas and the dining room in the basement of the White House.

Cook said he told Stans one paragraph in the SEC complaint traced the money from a New York bank through Vesco's hands, without, however, noting its final destination — Stans' Finance Committee to Re-elect the President. Times and dates were specified.

That information produced Stans' "Oh, Oh," remark, Cook said. He continued regarding the paragraph in question:

"Then he said, do you need that in your case, and I said I don't know. He said, do you need all those details. I said I don't know. He said, isn't your case primarily related to looting. I said yes. He said, why don't you see what you can do about it or look into it and get back to me."

Without mentioning this conversation, Cook said he prevailed on SEC staff members to rewrite the paragraph to eliminate all details beyond the fact that Vesco engaged in financial transactions, with the money used for unknown purposes.

Immunization Program Worked

RALEIGH (AP)—The director of North Carolina's immunization program says that North Carolina did not have a single case of polio, tetanus or diphtheria in 1973. John Irvin said it was the first time this has happened since records have been kept and that only 18 states can match that record.

Irvin said that based on population, North Carolina had fewer reported cases of measles in 1973 than any other state in the nation. He said the state has not had a measles death in almost three years. This followed an intensive measles immunization campaign.

Disappointed In Legislature

RALEIGH (AP)—Representatives of nine public interest groups have expressed disappointment with the work of the 1974 legislature.

The group said Wednesday in a joint letter to the 170 state legislators "it appears that in many instances special interests have been served while the broader interests of the public have been neglected or ignored."

The text of the letter was released during a news conference at the legislative building.

Political Tax Date Extended

Delta Airline Sues Over Fuel Contract

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Delta Air Lines filed suit for $1.2 million against Gulf Oil Corp. in U. S. District Court here Wednesday, charging that the oil company repudiated a contract to supply jet fuel at specified prices.

The airline said in the suit that the cost per gallon of jet fuel has increased from 10.93 cents to as much as 33.105 cents. The suit said fuel prices were renegotiated last year at 18 cents per gallon to be effective Jan. 1, 1974, to Dec. 31, 1975.

But Delta charged in the suit that Gulf later said fuel would be available only on a spot-sell basis at a price of more than 22 cents per gallon effective Jan. 4.

The suit said the airline had paid the higher prices to avoid disruption of its service but said by Dec. 31, 1975, it would be forced to pay $5.6 million more than allegedly guaranteed in its contract.

Delta said it would begin paying 18 cents per gallon and expected Gulf to refuse to sell at that price. The airline said no other fuel suppliers are available.

The contract involved fueling Delta planes at Detroit, Mich., where cutting off fuel supplies would mean "massive cancellation of Delta's flights to and from Detroit," the suit charged. It would also mean "widespread disruption of service throughout Delta's entire domestic system," the suit said.

The suit charged Gulf with breach of contract and with exhibiting "wanton and malicious disregard of the public welfare and of commercial good faith."

The suit claimed the airline had paid $420,551 more than it contracted for the fuel and asked for that sum and punitive damages of $841,102.

Orders Delay In 3 Executions

RALEIGH (AP)—Chief Justice William H. Bobbitt of the North Carolina Supreme Court has ordered a delay in the scheduled executions Friday of three men at Central Prison so they can appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Bobbitt signed stays of execution in the cases of David Earl Dillard, convicted of murder in Robeson County, Alton James Henderson, convicted of burglary and rape in Alamance County and Albert (Bo) Crowder, convicted of murder in Wake County.

The convictions were affirmed earlier this month by the state supreme court and are being appealed to the nation's highest court.

Said Considered For Treasurer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The office of Rep. Wilmer Mizell, R-N.C., says Mrs. Grace Rohrer, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, is being considered for treasurer of the United States.

President Nixon will make the appointment. The Mizell office said the field has been narrowed to only a few persons, with Mrs. Rohrer still in the running. She is a former resident of Winston-Salem.

Pilot Movie Is Given A Chance

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Producer Roy Huggins and James Garner, who teamed up in 1957 to give the nation the tongue-in-cheek "Maverick" series, are at loose again with a new show they also hope becomes a hit series.

Technically a pilot for a proposed series, the opus, "The Rockford Files," aired on NBC-TV Wednesday night. Close scrutiny revealed it to be a private eye show that sort of winked now and then.

A "Maverick" it ain't, but it may work, even though it was the sort of whodunnit that raised initial hopes with a brisk strangling, then seemed to take forever before the traditional Great Chase got under way.

Garner played a gumshoe who, as it turns out, has done five years behind bars for an armed robbery he didn't commit. He now tries to solve cases police list as "unsolved-inactive."

Into his life steps a comely young lady (Lindsay Wagner) who wants him to find out who killed her widowed father, a wino we saw done in at the start of the show. The murder is in the "unsolved" category.

She isn't dismayed by Garner's $200-a-day-fee. "Money doesn't happen to be my problem," she crisply informs him. "I can hire a platoon of people like you." And she writes him a check.

It is at this point I begin to like the show. He runs a credit check, the cad, and learns her hopes exceed her bank balance.

But no matter. It turns into love at second sight and detection on the installment plan, the latter leading to a wealthy young widow whose 68-year-old millionaire husband has died on the wedding night.

Stay with us, now. Turns out he expired before plighting his troth. The old wino, his mind fuddled, was picked up, whisked off to Las Vegas and passed off as the groom who "died" later that night.

She collected the millions, the wino subsequently was strangled and things seemed headed toward a happy ending until Garner stepped in.

Despite this plot, the show was liberally sprinkled with funny, offbeat little things that often gave it the sly "Maverick" touch.

If the show becomes a series and the impression ersists, Messrs. Garner and Huggins could find themselves with another winner on their hands.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a thorough beating today as interest rates continued to climb.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 11.03 at 860.14, and losers overwhelmed gainers by more than a 6-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers blamed the broad-based selling primarily on the continued climb of short-term interest rates. After Wednesday's close, New York's Chase Manhattan Bank raised its prime lending rate from 9 to 9¼ per cent, citing rising money costs.

Mapco, down ¾ at 22¼, was the Big Board's most-active stock after a 150,000-share block trade at 22.

Coca-Cola was down 2½ at 112, and Coca-Cola Bottling of New York slipped ⅝ to 9⅛. A Wall Street Journal article discussed the impact of rising sugar prices on the soft-drink industry.

In the glamour sector, Bausch & Lomb was off 1 at 31⅜, trading at new 1974 lows; National Semiconductor was down ¼ at 19½, and Syntex fell 2¾ to 53¾ on the American Stock Exchange.

Among the few gainers was Richardson Co., up ⅞ at 12⅝ after a bright earnings projection.

Olin Corp., which also forecast a significant gain in first-quarter profits, rose ⅝ to 14⅞.

Ansul Co., which announced expansion plans Wednesday, added ⅜ to 15.

The Amex's 11 a.m. market-value index was down .58 at 97.23. The NYSE composite index of close to 1,500 common stocks lost .62 to 50.97.

Sees Rural Area Effect

GRIMESLAND—Robert M. Brown, a candidate for the North Carolina Senate from the district including Pitt County, said today that the effects of the Lilley bill dealing with home mortgages now before the State Senate "is unknown," adding that passage of the measure could "hurt the rural areas."

"Many of the rural home and farm loans are through the Federal Land Bank which generally deals in open-ended mortgages without a fixed (interest) rate.

"It is possible," Brown said, "that under this bill, the ceiling for existing open-ended mortgages would be removed. This would make present payments more expensive.

"You can borrow money for a city home at a fixed rate," Brown said, while "many times the only money available for rural homes and farms is not at a fixed rate."

Brown emphasized, "there should be a 'grandfather' clause for existing open-end mortgages."

A Review

'Mass' Is Entertaining Theater, A Joy To See

Take echoes of Vivaldi and Mozart, touches of Gregorian chants, liberal doses of blues and rock sounds, bring in dances inspired by both classic and contemporary styles, and wrap all these solidly around the basic structure of a church mass, extend and embellish it into two hours of theater—and you have an idea, in simplified terms, of what Mass is like as entertainment. Its consistently rewarding.

The ECU Playhouse-School of Music production of Mass, which opened Wednesday night at McGinnis Auditorium (with performances scheduled for tonight, Friday and Saturday at 8:15 p.m. and a Sunday matinee at 3:15 p.m.) is a joy to hear and see.

The sure hand of Edgar Loessin's direction, Mavis Ray's choreography, the musical direction by Robert Hause and Charles Moore, plus the sensitive lighting and staging by Robert Williams and Carol Beule's colorful costumes, pay off in a production that moves with precision all the way.

Bernstein's score is often captivating, sometimes tender, at other times jubilant and jazzy. It's never dull.

A big share of the pleasure afforded by Mass is in the beauty of movement those directing it have achieved. Somehow, and to me this seems almost a miracle, well over a hundred performers—singers, dancers and instrumentalists are fitted into the action without once faltering. The shifting complicated patterns of movement reflect a strong influence of formal ritual found in church mass.

In the lead role, gifted Negro singer John Russell brings a wide range of emotions into his singing of the role of celebrant—faith and hope, doubt and joy. His is a voice that registers especially rich in the lower ranges.

Ron Lake, the 13 year old juvenile lead, captures in full measure the special quality that is the gift of boy singers for a brief period. The one major disappointment I find in Mass is that Ron only has one big moment at the very end. Nevertheless, its well worth the wait.

The ECU production of Mass is brought to full realization by the large number of people in the supporting cast. Rosalyn Barlowe, Jeffrey Krantz, Deborah Rhodes, Suzanne Shephard, Bill Devins, Rodnay Blaine, Robert McDuffie are among those who contribute a succession of truly fine performances.

Talmadge R. Fauntelroy, a young Negro actor, gives a scintillating touch with his wonderfully fluid singing and dancing in "God Said."

Mass is an interesting theater piece, full of good music and exciting movement. And it's more than entertainment. There's a deep vain of faith and hope running through Bernstein's work. It's contemporary and timeless.

request was made that the commission make findings of fact as to the reasons for denying the plat.

Commissioner Karl Faser said that the plat "does not conform with the ordinances."

The commission cited the Brownlea issue as the main deficiency in the plat but included also deficiencies in elevation, block and lot numbering, and drainage.

Haigwood said that if the plat was denied, another plat would be drawn up and submitted to the commission. He noted that judicial review would be sought after a "perfunctory" denial of the next plat.

The commission voted unanimously to deny the approval of the plat.

In other business, the members of the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission agreed that they would appear at the April 4 meeting of the City Council to request individually that a rezoning request by Louis Clark for some 21 acres near the new hospital site be sent back to the commission for further study.

The unusual action came as a result of developments concerning the property that took place since the last Planning and Zoning meeting when the commission voted to recommend to the Council that the 21 acres be rezoned from Office and Institutional, Shopping Center, Medical Arts, and RA-20 to Office and Institutional, Shopping Center and Medical Arts. Clark had earlier sought rezoning of 78 acres near the hospital site from RA-20 to Medical Arts, Office and Institutional, and Shopping Center and the request was approved.

Faser said that developments concerning the use of property adjoining the Clark acreage by East Carolina University that came up since the recent action was taken by the commission warranted further study.

Chairman Earl Howell said at the outset that he would entertain a motion by the commission that the Council be requested to delay any action concerning the rezoning request until further study could be made. Attorney Fred Mattox, representing Clark, objected to such a request by the commission last night, noting that the owners involved should be present when a decision is made concerning their property.

Commissioners agreed that they would appear at the Council meeting to speak for themselves rather than on behalf of the commission.

Requests by M. W. Crumpler, as agent for W. J. Moore and Harvey Bradshaw, for rezoning a total of 8.9 acres of land in the Manchester Drive area from R-15 to Highway Commercial were recommended for approval.

Crumpler requested that 2.9 acres owned by Moore on the north side of Manchester be rezoned as well as six acres owned by Bradshaw near the intersection of Manchester Drive and Hooker Road.

Crumpler, a district engineer with Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. here, said that the company held options on the property proposed for rezoning and it planned to construct an office building and storage facility there.

He explained that Carolina Telephone plans to relocate its work center operations currently on Chestnut Street to the Manchester Drive area. He said that the facilities and parking at the Chestnut Street operation are not adequate.

Eight Items Await Meet

Eight items are scheduled for consideration by the City-County and Greenville Board of Adjustments at tonight's 7:30 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The City-County Board will conduct a public hearing on a request for a special use permit by Marion M. Mills.

The Greenville Board will consider a request for renewal of a special use permit by Mrs. Maggie Eason and public hearings will be conducted on requests by Larry Whitlow for an administrative review; by George J. MacMillan for a variance; by Carolina Dairy Products for a variance;

By Tim Eisenman for a special use permit; by Tommie L. Little and Associates Inc. for a special use permit; and by Philippi Church of Christ for a special use permit.

Viet Veterans Day Tomorrow

Friday has been proclaimed Vietnam Veterans Day in North Carolina by Governor James Holshouser.

The special day is being observed nationwide as an expression of gratitude to men and women who served in the armed forces during the Vietnam War.

James Nannan, manager of the local Employment Security Commission, said he hopes the special day will remind the community of its employment responsibilities to veterans.

"Employment opportunities for veterans have improved every year," Hannan reported, "but this office still has job applications from 265 veterans."

hannan said that in the latter years of the Vietnam conflict, joblessness among veterans between the ages of 20 and 24 reached above 12 percent. A concerted job-finding effort nationwide managed to lower this rate considerably and today unemployement among this group is around the national adult rate.

"But there are plenty of veterans who need their rightful place in North Carolina's job market. These are the ones we are trying to help," according to Hannan, "and hopefully, Vietnam Veterans Day will help us bring these applications to the attention of local employers."

In his proclamation, Gov. Holshouser urged all Tar Heels to participate in ceremonies and observances that will be held to commemorate the personal sacrifices and distinctive service of North Carolina's veterans during 10 years of conflict.

He said that there are more than 143,000 North Carolinians who served in armed forces in Vietnam during the 10-year period.

Charge Driver In Car Collision

James Woodrow Williams of 207 North Library St. was charged with following too closely following investigation of a 3:50 p.m. collision here yesterday at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Wade Street.

Police said the Williams car collided with a vehicle driven by Georgia Ann Powell of Route 1, Greenville, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Powell car and about $350 damage to the Williams auto.

No injuries were reported.

Pirates Open Spring Drills

East Carolina University opened its spring football drills yesterday, giving new coach Pat Dye his first look at his players.

A total of 95 players showed up for the first day of work, with Dye and his staff running them through a tough workout.

"For the first day of practice there was very good enthusiasm," Dye said afterwards, "and a lot of effort. As is usually the case, the defense is way ahead of the offense. There were some awfully good licks hit by the defense for the first day of practice."

Dye added that one reason for the offense not looking quite as ready is that "there is so much learning to be done that it will take a while before we can expect them to look like a football team."

This year, part of the work will involve the switching from the pro-set used by departed coach Sonny Randle to the wishbone to be used by Dye, and from a six-man front line on defense to a five-man alignment.

The team worked two and a half hours yesterday, and will continue working today, Friday and Saturday. The workout included all phases of work, including plenty of hitting.

WATCHING THEM WORK—East Carolina University head football coach Pat Dye watches some of the action during the opening day of practice along with three of his assistants. The Pirates opened the spring drills yesterday and will continue working every day this week. They have tentatively set this year's spring game for Saturday, May 4. Washington In Win Over Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Washington High School took a 5-3 victory over Williamston High School's Tigers in a Northeastern Conference baseball game yesterday.

The loss was the first in two league starts for the Tigers.

Washington scored first, pushing over two runs in the top of the first inning. Lassiter led off with a double and stole third. Lilley walked, and stole second. Payne followed with another walk, loading the bases. Bullock followed with a single, driving in Lassiter, and Lilley scored when Terry was hit by a pitch.

Washington added another run in the third. Bullock singled and stole second. He moved to third when Terry reached on a fielder's choice, and the two worked a double steal, scoring Bullock for a 3-0 lead.

In the fourth, Williamston picked up the first of its runs. Keith Brown singled and Berwyn Barnhill reached on an error, moving Brown to third. Barnhill stole second, and a single by Danny Todd brought in Brown to trim the lead to 3-1.

Washington came up with what proved to be the winning run in the fifth. Payne singled and moved up on an error. Terry then singled him in for a 4-1 lead.

The Pam Pack struck again in the sixth. Gurganus walked, stole second and scored on Lassiter's single.

In the bottom of the sixth, Williamston got another run. Todd singled and George Brown walked. Eric Godard singled, scoring Todd.

The final Williamston run came in the seventh. Hubert Smith tripled, and Todd singled him in, but the rally died there.

Williamston travels to Plymouth on Friday.

Conley Downs North Lenoir

HOLLYWOOD—D. H. Conley's Vikings pushed over six runs in the fifth inning to take a 6-0 victory over North Lenoir in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game yesterday.

Conley's Bobby Bryan pitched a one-hit game against the Hawks. He struck out eight and walked only one in going the distance.

Conley threatened in the first and fourth inning, putting a man as far as third base. North Lenoir got only one man that far, in the third inning.

In the fifth, the Vikings finally pushed over their runs. Eugene Forrest led off with a walk and Keith Gould reached on a fielder's choice. Ricky Phillips singled, loading the bases. Clennel Streeter followed with a triple, driving in all three baserunners. An error on the play allowed Streeter to finish his trip around the bases for a 4-0 lead. Donnie Cox singled and Randy Adams doubled. Jack Jones than hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Cox, and another error let Adams come in also.

The victory raised the Conley record to 4-1 within the conference. They travel to Southern Nash on Friday for their next game.

The two teams had been locked in a seven-inning scoreless duel before the Rams finally broke the ice and zipped away with the win.

Jesse Hooker started the game for the Rams, going six full innings before finally bowing out after giving up a lead-off double in the seventh. He allowed only three hits during his time on the mound. Dale Pridgen then came in and picked up the victory hurling no-hit ball for the remaining two frames.

Farmer, the losing hurler, allowed only five hits by the Rams, but he was finally reached in the eighth inning.

Prior to scoring, Greene Central had runners on first and Second in the opening inning, and loaded the bases in the second. They put men on second and third in the fourth, and left 12 standing all together.

Blazers Get Pick

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Portland's Trail Blazers will mount an all-out campaign to land UCLA's threetime All-American Bill Walton, the 6-foot-11 center who'll probably command a $2 million contract.

Portland won the National Basketball Association rights to negotiate with Walton when Philadelphia missed in a flip of a coin Wednesday.

Herman Sarkowsky, president of the Trail Blazers, said immediately that his club would pick Walton with its No. 1 choice in the NBA draft this spring.

"I am confident we can sign him," said Sarkowsky of the collegiate prize.

Asgrow RX Hybrid Corn Lines Give You A Healthy Advantage

It's only logical. The more a hybrid can resist stress and disease, the more you can count on it to give you a healthy advantage—in the field and over the scale. And you can count on single cross RX60, RX115, and special RX99A to do just that.
Here's why: It is prescription-bred to resist rust, lodging, Fusarium ear rots, stalk rots, root worms, and corn borer infestation. . .to resist Northern, Yellow, and Race "T" Southern leaf blights. And you can be sure that these lines have the genetic vigor to withstand these stress conditions and still yield with the best. They quickly develop into extremely-uniform plants—healthy plants with massive root systems and sturdy stalks that insure excellent standability. What's more, large, girthy ears are placed at the ideal height for combining or picking.
They look great and yield even better. And this has been proved, on hundreds of farms right in this area. Talk with the farmers who grow these hybrids. Ask them about the ability of the RX Line to give you a healthy advantage. Then—talk with your Asgrow dealer. Ask him to reserve you a supply of Asgrow corn.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

The Atlantic Coast Conference has struck again!

They've come after another Southern Conference coach to be a head coach in the ACC. This time is was Davidson's Terry Holland, who is the new coach at the University of Virginia.

Holland makes the fourth current coach in the ACC to have a Southern Conference background. He joins Lefty Driesell of Maryland, Neil McGeachy of Duke and Norman Sloan of N. C. State in the Southern alumni crew in basketball.

And of course, six of the seven football coaches in the ACC were either head or assistant coaches in the Southern at one time.

It'a funny how the ACC always seems to lord it over the Southern, boasting of their record against Southern teams. Yet when they need a coach.... Oh well!

We look for Davidson to name Bo Brickels, Holland's chief assistant at that school, as the new head coach, possibly before the week is over. Certainly it is a job that will be desired by many.

But Brickles should have the inside track, and we wish him well at the post. Had not East Carolina hired Dave Patton, Brickles would have been our next choice for the position.

Brickles might just make Davidson a threat next year, despite serious losses. He, too, will be looking for a big man, something Davidson hasn't had for some time. They lost three starters off this year's team, and that might be a good enough nucleus to build around.

We still look for a three team race, however, involving defending champion Furman, surprising William and Mary, and, with a couple of helpful recruits, East Carolina.

New coach Pat Dye put his East Carolina football team on the field for the first time Wednesday afternoon, and it wasn't the typical workout most teams see on the first day.

The Bucs hit hard and long. Dye promises to show no more mercy to his charges than did Sonny Randle if as much. And those who went through Randle's drills came out in tip-top shape, ready for anything.

Looking at the Southern Conference this fall, the Pirates, if their search for offensive linemen and for a quarterback have paid off, could again be the team to beat.

William & Mary and Richmond will probably be weaker this fall. VMI will be about the same, and The Citadel could be a little stronger, and might turn out to be the dark horse.

Appalachian will certainly be stronger and might be in a position to challenge for the title. The Mountaineers are putting a lot into their overall program, as a glance at the Commissioner's Cup standings will show.

Furman, after its fine year last year, will probably be the team listed as the most likely to knock off the Pirates.

But September is still about five months away, and a lot will take place between now and then.

In the meantime, it would be nice if East Carolina football, and its prospects in basketball could be taken as much to heart by this area as has the fortunes of N. C. State has around the Raleigh area. A full stadium and a full coliseum couldn't be beat for helping the Pirates along.

Babe's Last Blast Was Memorable One

By ROBERT SHAW
Associated Press Writer

SHANNON, Miss. (AP) — At the time, they seemed to be just another couple of home runs off Guy Bush that pleasant afternoon in Pittsburgh on May 25, 1935, but they were to go down as Babe Ruth's last two.

Now tending his vegetable garden and soybeans on a 50-acre farm in this small northeast Mississippi town, Bush remembers that the first was non-Ruthian, the second, No. 714, a clout of a magnitude he had not seen before.

Then a cocky, successful right-handed pitcher, the 29-year-old Bush had come on in relief of Red Lucas for the Pirates on that day. Ruth, who already had homered off Lucas, was an aging 40, playing out his last days with the Boston Braves after years of stardom with the New York Yankees.

Bush, who had a career record of 176-136, gladly talks now about the last two that completed the revered record that Hank Aaron will tie with his next home run.

Home run No. 713 for Ruth?

"He hit a ball on the handle and he pulled it about eight or 10 feet fair and it just fell into the stands," Bush said. "Just a short fly ball was all it was.

"Well, it made me so mad that I thought to myself, 'Is that the kind of home runs he's been getting?'"

Bush chuckled, and then began talking about No. 714.

"There was a big crowd and they were on Ruth," he said. "They were always on him, cheering him or riding him one. He was coming to bat again.

"And, I said coming out of the dugout, 'Well, that guy who hit the little bloop home run before will be up again in this inning. I'm going to throw three fast balls right by that guy and see what this crowd will do and get my laugh on him.'

"Well, that's what I started out to do. I got the first pitch in there for a strike and Ruth just watched it go by just as pretty, like he was looking at a softball. And, I didn't say a word.

"I got a signal for another fast ball and I come through there with one, I mean, with everything I had on it. I hit the plate, maybe an inch or two inches off the plate, about halfway between his knees and his waist. Just where he could get that fat part of the bat on it.

"He got ahold of that ball and hit it over the triple-deck, clear out of the ballpark (in right-center). I'm telling you, it was the longest cockeyed ball I ever saw in my life.

"That poor fellow, he'd gotten to where he could hardly hobble along. I ain't mad no more then. So, when he rounds third base, I just look over there at him and he kind of looked at me. I tipped my cap just to say, 'I've seen everything now, Babe.'

"He just looked at me and kind of saluted and smiled, and that's the last home run he ever hit. We got that gesture of good friendship.

"He didn't mean any harm because Ruth was the kind of player that didn't want to hurt anybody's feelings. Nobody ever hated Ruth, never disliked him, and he's never disliked anybody.

"He was the greatest. There's never been but one superstar, and that was Babe Ruth."

Ruth retired a few days after hitting the homers.

Bush, now 65, believes Ruth would have many more than 714 homers if he were playing today, because expansion has diluted the strength of modern pitching.

"I see some pitchers now that I'd be scared to pitch to Ruth," he said.

But he has followed Aaron closely and is rooting for the Atlanta slugger to break the record soon. The Braves will be better off when he does, Bush said.

"Maybe there is a little pressure that won't be there when he breaks the record and the team can get back to the business of trying to win a pennant," Bush said.

Bush said he didn't believe in trying to pitch around Aaron to avoid giving up the historic homers, but he also says talk of serving a fat one to Aaron is foolish. If he were pitching, he said, Aaron would have to earn his homers.

"He'd have to hit a fast ball low and inside off me," Bush said. "I'd pitch to him like the ball game was at stake on every pitch."

But he said he was pitching to what he thought was Ruth's weakness—the outside corner—when Babe victimized him.

"He hit with his back to you and I didn't think he could get around in time," Bush said.

He said he didn't know if anyone knew where best to pitch Ruth because "he might miss the ball 18 inches" on one pitch and later, "on the same pitch with the same stuff, he might hit it a mile."

Bush won 15 or more games for seven straight seasons, all for the Chicago Cubs, in a career covering 17 years and five teams. The only other time he faced Ruth was in the 1932 World Series.

Describing himself as a pitcher on the order of Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the Oakland A's, only faster than Hunter, Bush recalls that Ruth didn't get the ball out of the infield on him during the only Series game Bush started before the pitcher caught a line drive on his hand and had to leave.

That was the same series in which Ruth made the famous gesture toward the distant bleachers and then slammed the ball into the stands. Bush believes Ruth called the home run. He also says he was the chief bench jockey whose wisecracks nettled Ruth into the gesture.

Bush said several years later he approached Ruth and asked the slugger to "tell me the truth" about the famous homer.

"Babe put his arm around my shoulders and said, 'It made a damned good story anyway, didn't it, Guy?'" Bush said.

Bush says he gets 20 or 25 letters a week from fans who still remember him, most of them for his record, not for Ruth's homers. He said it doesn't bother him that he was Ruth's victim.

"It makes me feel a little bit good, because Babe was such a great player," Bush said.

Nicklaus Likes Idea Of Challenge

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Johnny Miller's going good.

And that's just fine with Jack Nicklaus.

"It's something of a challenge. It makes it a little more interesting," Nicklaus said before teeing off today with Miller as a partner in the first round of the $150,000 Greater New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

Nicklaus, holder of a record 14 major tournament titles and generally recognized as the finest player the game has ever known, has a history of playing his best when he's challenged.

Recent examples:

In 1971, Lee Trevino scored that unprecedented blitz of the American, Canadian and British Opens. Nicklaus responded the following season with seven titles, including the Masters and U.S. Open, and marked up a record $320,000 in prize winnings.

Last year Tom Weiskopf made a lightening grab for glory that culminated in the British Open. Nicklaus responded with a late season burst that included his record-breaking triumph in the PGA, a total of seven American championships and his second million dollars in career earnings.

Now it's Miller—mod, young, soft-spoken, self-effacing—who's making threatening gestures toward Nicklaus' position as the game's premier performer.

Beginning in June of last year, Miller won the U.S. Open, took titles in France and Spain, scored a record sweep of the first three tour events of 1974 and last week won his fourth tournament of the year in the Heritage Classic, a victory that pushed his season's money winnings to almost $150,000.

"I'm gonna try to win again," Miller said. "I'm playing good enough to win again. There's no reason I can't."

But Nicklaus, who was not playing in three of the four tournaments Miller won this season, had some observations of his own:

"Actually," said Jack, who won this tournament 12 months ago, "I think I'm playing better right now than I was at this stage a year ago. My chipping and putting weren't all they could have been at Doral (his last previous start) but I think it's coming around."

Nicklaus, just off a two-week vacation with his family, is making his last start prior to the Masters in Augusta, Ga., the first of the year's four major tournaments and annually Nicklaus' first big goal.

The 150-man field that will play the 7,080-yard, par-72 Lakewood Country Club course is one of the strongest of the season and almost certainly the best this tournament has ever had.

In addition to Nicklaus and Miller, the standouts are Weiskopf, Trevino, Billy Casper, rookie Ben Crenshaw, two-time 1974 winner Hubert Green, South African Gary Player, Australian Bruce Crampton and big Peter Oosterhuis of England, making his first American appearance of the season.

Perry Feels He Is Being Watched

By ANDY LIPPMAN
AP Sports Writer

Gaylord Perry says he's got the feeling he's being watched this spring. And it's not only to see if he's throwing a spitball.

"I know the Orioles are scouting me and I would understand if the Indians were to trade me," Perry said after he and two Cleveland relievers combined for a one-hitter in defeating California 4-1 Wednesday. "If Phil Seghi (Indian general manager) gets a good offer for me, I realize he can't very well turn it down.

Baltimore scout Bill Werle was in the stands at Tucson, Ariz., as Perry allowed only a triple by Denny Doyle in seven innings, while striking out seven and walking one.

Elsewhere in exhibition baseball, the New York Mets edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3; the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the San Francisco Gaints 4-2; the New York Yankees beat the Atlanta Braves 4-1; the Boston Red Sox defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2; the Montreal Expos trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5; the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Texas Rangers 9-7 and the Houston Astros squeaked by the Detroit Tigers 3-2.

The Cincinnati Reds downed the Chicago White Sox 7-3; the San Diego Padres nipped a split Milwaukee squad 8-6 and the Oakland A's defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-2 in other games.

Cleveland Manager Ken Aspromonte liked what he saw of Perry.

"Gaylord is ready to open the season," Aspromonte said. "He could have gone nine innings just as easily as standing out there. To me, Gaylord pitched like a beautiful piece of chemistry."

The Padres built a 7-1 lead and then held off a Milwaukee rally when the Brewers scored twice in the seventh inning and three times in the ninth.

St. Louis hurler Bob Gibson was touched for a two-run home run by a former teammate, Bernie Carbo, and the Red Sox scored two more runs against him in the fourth.

Jim Cox's single in the 12th inning scored the winning run for Montreal which jumped on Steve Carlton for five runs in the first five innings. The Phillies came back with a four-run seventh.

Tom Paciorek's bases-loaded walk broke a 5-5 tie as Don Stanhouse walked four of the five Dodgers he faced in the seventh inning.

Pinch-runner Dave Campbell scored from third on a single by Houston pinch-hitter Greg Gross in the ninth inning.

came in the first and seventh when they got leadoff doubles.

Finally, in the eighth however, the Rams struck. Ronnie Whitley led off with a walk and Shorty Radford singled. Both advanced on a wild pitch and Dale Pridgen reached safely, scoring Whitley with a bunt. Donnie Blizzard reached on an error, loading the bases and Jerry Carraway walked to force in Radford. Bobby Supel then cracked out a base-clearing triple, and he scored the final run on William Brown's single.

The win boosted the Ram record to 2-2 in the leage and 3-2 overall. Eastern Wanye is now 1-3 in league play and 2-3 overall.

The Rams play host to Ayden-Grifton today.

Robersonville Downs Elm City

ROBERSONVILLE—Robersonville's Golden Eagles won their second straight Eastern Plains Conference baseball game yesterday, rolling to a 5-0 victory over Elm City.

Jimmy Stalls hurled the victory for the Eagles, allowing only one Elm City hit. Stalls fanned six batters and walked just one. He faced only 22 batters during the afternoon, as one of those who reached was cut down trying to steal.

The one-hitter was the second straight for the Robersonville nine, who got one from Matt Wilson last time out.

The game was a scoreless deadlock until the sixth inning, when the Eagles struck for all five of their runs. They had threatened in the first and second innings when runners had reached as far as third. Elm City failed to get a runner past first base.

In the sixth, Wilson led off with a single, and moved on to second on an error on the play. He took third on a passed ball and Doug Warren walked, also stealing second. Gene Griffin singled, driving in both runners, and he moved up on the throw to home. Stalls helped his own cause with a single, and Reid Bullock came on to run for him. Larry Jackson doubled in Griffin and a wild pitch let Bullock score, moving Jackson to third. He scored from there on Carl Bullock's sacrifice fly.

The victory left Robersonville with a 2-0 conference mark and a 2-2 overall record.

Cougars Snap Losing String

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — "I'm a perfectionist by nature," said Julius Erving, and few who saw Doctor J operate on the Denver Rockets Wednesday night would be inclined to disagree.

Oh, he did miss seven of 26 floor shots, but when the accounting was done, it was Erving's 43 points — including12 of New York's last 16 — and third-period defensive strategy that sparked the Nets to a 102-96 triumph over Denver and clinched the American Basketball Association's Eastern Division title.

It was the regular season finale for the Nets, who host the Virginina Squires Friday night as the ABA playoffs get under way. Denver dropped one-half game behind San Diego in the struggle for the final playoff spot in the West and the Rockets must win tonight against San Antonio to force a one-game playoff for fouth-place.

Elsewhere in the ABA, the San Antonio Spurs downed the Indiana Pacers 98-80, the Carolina Cougars beat the Virginia Squires, and the San Diego Conquistadors dropped the Kentucky Colonels 121-108.

Conquistadors 121, Colonels 108

Stew Johnson fired in 40 points and Bo Lamar added 37, staking San Diego to a half-game lead over Denver in the fight for the last playoff berth in the West Division.

Cougars 99, Squires 91

Mack Calvin scored 23 points and rallied Carolina to the victory which snapped a six-game losing streak.

Spurs 98, Pacers 80

San Antonio, backed by George Gervin's 20 points, led all the way and now is tied with Indiana for second place in the Western Division.

Both clubs play tonight, the Pacers playing at Utah and the Spurs hosting Denver.

The National Basketball Association scores: Philadelphia 117, Boston 108; Portland 132, Golden State 122; Seattle 127, Phoenix 123.

Want All Schools Seek Accreditation By SASC

The Pitt County Board of Education has adopted a resolution to have all schools in the county administrative unit seek accreditation by Southern Association of Schools and Colleges.

Southern Association is a regional accreditation agency which serves public and private schools in eleven states and Latin America.

An accreditated school is recognized for having done a good job and for its constant striving to improve its program for boys and girls. There are certain standards and guidelines which the schools must meet before accreditation is granted, and accredited status certifies that these standards have been met and that the schools have projected a long-range plan for further improvement.

Each school is monitored on a regular basis, and must do a completely new self-study every ten years.

The steps in the accreditation process include a study of the community served by the school; formulation of a philosophy and of objectives; and an in-depth study of the curriculum is done, and coordination between the community and its agencies is viewed.

At the completion of the self-study. A published report is issued. A visiting team composed of specialists in the various fields of education then visits the schools, spending time in the classroom and studying how well the school is doing what it says it does. The visiting team then recommends whether the school should be accredited. The process requires the involvement of the entire community as well as the students and faculty.

The benefits that accrue to the accredited school include better learning opportunities for students; better understanding on the part of the community of their role in school improvement; better leadership and teaching among faculty; systematic evaluation; and measurement of the school's program by a consistent set of criteria.

Farmville Central High School and Ayden-Grifton High School plan for the visiting teams to come to their schools in 1975. The other 20 schools in the unit will be ready for visiting teams in the spring of 1976.

Each school has established a steering committee to give direction. Numerous other committees have been appointed. For the remainder of this year, work will center on philosophy and objectives, history of the school, and study of the community. Parent participation is necessary for the school to do its self-study.

Among the standards set by Southern Association are certification of teachers in the field employed; certified librarians; adequate support services; continuing staff development programs; minimum allowances for instructional supplies; clean physical plant; approved bookkeeping system; planned program of instruction, and similar standards.

At the same time that Pitt County Schools are working toward Southern Association, they will be seeking re-accreditation by the state of North Carolina under recently developed guidelines adopted by the State Board of Education.

Survey Shows Price Of Meat Generally Higher Than Ever These Days

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers who shop carefully can find scattered sales at the supermarket meat counter. But an Associated Press survey shows that meat prices generally are higher than ever these days.

The AP checked the prices of seven meat items in 19 cities last April at the start of a week-long boycott organized by consumers to protest soaring costs. The boycott came just after President Nixon froze all meat prices.

In a check of the same meats at the same supermarkets in the 19 cities this year, the AP found 56 per cent of the items were up in price, 26 per cent were down, 10 per cent were unchanged and 8 per cent were unavailable on one of the survey dates.

The situation varied widely from city to city. Five of seven items checked went down in price in Baltimore and the remaining two were unavailable. In Seattle, Wash., however, every item was up in price.

Wholesale prices have been going down, prompting some supermarkets to offer specials and prompting cattlemen to complain they are losing money. In an effort to aid the ranchers, the government announced Tuesday that it was buying $45 million of top quality hamburger for distribution to schools, but economists said the purchase would provide only a brief boost for the producers.

During the week ended March 23, 1974, wholesale prices averaged 66.35 cents a pound for choice steer carcasses — the kind of meat the supermarkets buy — compared with 68.05 cents a pound during the same period in 1973 and with just over 80 cents a pound during the truckers' strike in January.

The decline hasn't found its way to the retail level, however. Supermarkets point out that they are faced with increased costs for other items like labor.

The AP survey covered seven meat items — round steak, pork chops, chopped chuck, sirloin steak, lamb chops, leg of lamb and standing rib roast.

Beef items generally increased more than other meats, but there was no clear pattern. A standing rib roast, for example, cost more in 12 cities — up an average of 17.5 per cent — and less in seven — down an average of 8 per cent.

Pork chops went down in eight cities over the 12-month period and were up in seven, unchanged in two and down in one. In the 19th city, Austin, Tex., the current price usually is $1.89 a pound — up 12 per cent from last year's $1.69 figure. But a special offering this week brought the price to $1.39 a pound, down 17 per cent from last year.

The latest government figures available are for February. A sample of meat items checked by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics at 1,500 supermarkets in 56 cities showed increases on every product. The increases ranged up to 31 per cent for hamburger which went from an average of 84 cents a pound to $1.10 per pound.

The cities in the AP survey were: Baltimore; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Austin, Tex.; Concord, N.H.; Charleston, W.Va.; Hartford, Conn.; Cleveland, Ohio; Columbus, Ohio; New Orleans; Phoenix, Ariz.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Los Angeles; Washington; Sioux Falls, S.D.; Little Rock, Ark.; Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco; and Portland, Ore.

Solzhenitsyn Plans For Family Arrival

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Banished Soviet writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn has been buying inexpensive furniture and kitchen equipment at a large Zurich store in preparation for the arrival of his family from Moscow Friday.

"Everything seems to be ready for the family's arrival," said a neighbor who watched delivery trucks come and go.

Reservations have been made on a Swissair flight from Moscow Friday for Solzhenitsyn's wife, Natalya, their three children and her son by a previous marriage, and Mrs. Solzhenitsyn's mother.

Solzhenitsyn may decide against the publicity of welcoming his family at the airport, sources said, and instead greet them in their new home, a seven-room half of a "twin-house" in a quiet middle class district two blocks from Zurich University.

He moved into the house two weeks ago following his trip to Scandinavia and has been on a shopping spree since to get the place ready for his family.

His lawyer and agent, Dr. Fritz Heeb, said none of Solzhenitsyn's books, papers, files and other belongings has arrived from Moscow. But reports from Moscow said his wife was bringing out more than 500 pounds of baggage, including clothes, toys and hundreds of books.

Salvation Army Assistance Told At Board Meet

The Salvation Army Advisory Board was told Tuesday that the local unit assisted some 474 individuals during the month of February.

The Salvation Army provided 22 food orders to those in need during the month, filled three prescriptions and three fuel orders, assisted four burned out families and helped one family with rent.

In addition, 17 pieces of furniture were distributed, 1,432 pieces of clothing were given and 131 pairs of shoes supplied to those in need.

The Salvation Army also provided lodging for six transients during February, supplied 10 meals for transients and gave other types of aid to four others.

Find Marijuana Plants In Room

Robert Leak Haines, 19 of Rockingham was arrested late Tuesday night in his Aycock Dorm room on the East Carolina University Campus on charges of manufacturing marijuana.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Greenville Police, along with agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and ECU officers found 33 marijuana plants growing in Haines' dormitory room during a search about 11:50 p.m. Tuesday.

Haines was placed under a $2,500 bond pending hearing of the case in court.

Desire To Emigrate Has Begun To Ease In U.S.

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J.—One of every 10 Americans—an estimated 14 million, 18 years and older—would like to emigrate to another country, according to the latest Gallup Poll.

The current figure, 10 per cent, represents a leveling-off in what had been a slow, upward trend since 1948 in the percentage of Americans who would like to leave this country and live abroad.

Following World War II, a Gallup survey showed only 4 per cent of Americans wanted to live in another country. That proportion reached its high point, 12 per cent, in 1971, after a decade of social upheaval in the U. S.

Trend Continues

One disturbing trend which has persisted is that young persons, those between the ages of 18 and 29, are the most likely to say they would like to leave the United States. Among younger people, the proportion who say they would like to emigrate (23 per cent) is more than twice the national figure.

Even though many Americans express a wish to leave the United States, those who do so opt for countries similar to this nation. Canada was named most often. It was followed closely by Australia and Great Britain.

Emigration Sentiment Higher in Other Nations

Although the percentage who would like to live abroad remains near its high point, Americans are still less likely to say they want to leave their homeland than those in six other countries in which surveys were conducted during the same time period.

For example, as many as 4 in 10 (41 per cent) persons in Uruguay say they would like to leave their country if free to do so—an increase of 9 per cent since 1971.

In Great Britain, though, the figure has not significantly changed in three years despite the recent wave of austerity in that country. Presently 39 per cent of Britons would like to emigrate compared to 41 per cent in 1971.

Here are the questions asked in the United States and six other nations:

"If you were free to do so, would you like to go and settle in another country? What country?"

Following is the trend in feelings toward emigration from the United States:

Emigrate From the United States?

	Yes	No	No Opinion
1948	4	94	2
1959	6	92	2
1971	12	85	2
Today	10	87	3

The following table shows the percentage in each nation in the survey saying they would like to emigrate—ranked from highest to lowest—and the top choices of countries in which they would like to settle:

Per Cent Who Want to Emigrate—And Where (Seven-Nation Survey)

Uruguay (To United States, Canada)	41
Great Britain (To New Zealand, Australia)	39
Switzerland (To United States, Australia)	21
Canada (To United States)	15
Australia (To Great Britain, New Zealand)	13
Spain (To Germany, France)	13
United States (To Canada, Australia)	10

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 9,942 persons conducted by Gallup affiliates in seven nations during January and February, including the United States. In the U. S. 1,572 persons were interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period Jan. 18-21.

North Pitt School News

By JACQUI NELSON

North Pitt students had an usually exciting and interesting day last week.

The advanced Spanish classes attended a foreign language symposium Friday at East Carolina University. A program of Spanish, French and other foreign music was given by various high schools in the area.

Foreign cultures were also shown. Thirty-five students from North Pitt attended the event. The classes at North Pitt are taught by Mrs. Barbara Rogers.

Robert Pettis of Pitt Technical Institute, visited the school this week. He presented materials on the courses offered at Pitt Technical Institute.

Joy Denise James, a senior at North Pitt, left Wednesday for Duke University where she will participate in the final competition for the Angier B. Duke Scholarship.

Theresa Ann Knight and Bernita Johnson will visit the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill this weekend where they are invited to participate in a special program for high school juniors.

Fred Glisson, Louis Ayres and Bruce Tripp attended the East Carolina University's Honors Science Seminar recently. They attended two seminars each, in the areas of biology, chemistry and geology.

Ford Planned Retire By '77

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford says he and his wife decided last year, while he was still in the House of Representatives, that he would retire by 1977.

Ford said the bargain holds as long as his wife and children want it to, according to the current issue of People magazine. He said the only possible exception he could envision would be a deadlocked Republican convention turning to him.

The magazine quotes Ford as describing a nervous condition suffered by Mrs. Ford since 1964 and diagnosed as resulting from the pressures of her husband's political life.

The earth's atmosphere weighs an estimated 5,809 trillion tons.

New Bank Tax Legislation Is Adopted By Assembly

RALEIGH (AP)—As expected, the North Carolina General Assembly has enacted into law a bill that would "tax banks like other corporations."

The measure received its final Senate approval Wednesday without debate on a 24-9 vote.

It would repeal the state's six per cent special excise tax on bank income. In its place would go the levies placed on other corporations—a corporate income tax, local property taxes, intangibles taxes, and franchise taxes.

Banking industry lobbyists and the state Department of Revenue agree that the banking industry will be paying about the same amount in total taxes as under the excise tax.

But $1.4 million that now goes to the state will go instead to local governments in property taxes.

Wednesday's lack of debate was in sharp contrast to Tuesday, when Sen. Gordon Allen, D-Person, vigorously opposed the bill before it won key tentative approval.

Allen contended that the banks' argument that they would be taxed like other corporations if fallacious.

He noted that banks derive much of their income from federal securities, a source which few corporations in other businesses use. Federal securities income is tax-exempt.

Allen also pointed out that the intangibles tax law specifically exempts banks from two of its levies—on accounts receivable and deposits with other banks.

He said the banks, if they were really taxed like other corporations, would be paying $25 million per year more than they are currently.

In other legislative activity Wednesday, the House gave tentative approval to a bill which would tighten up the state's drunk driving standards.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would make it a crime for a driver to have a blood alcohol reading of .10 per cent as measured by a police breathalyzer.

Current law makes a .10 per cent reading presumptive evidence that a driver is under the influence. But he can still evade the charges if he can convince a jury that his faculties were unimpaired.

The bill, which won Senate approval last year, could become law today if the House gives it final approval.

The Senate Agriculture Committee Wednesday adjourned a public hearing before voting on a bill which would allow grocers to sell milk below cost.

The bill, sponsored by Forsyth Republican Hamilton Horton, was supported at a public hearing by consumer representative Mrs. Lilian Woo and by a retailer, Charles Gilbert of High Point.

But an attorney for the state Milk Commission, which sets minimum milk prices, said the dairy farming industry opposed the bill. He was echoed by numerous dairy farmers and farm organization representatives.

They all contended that passage of the bill would lead to ruinous price wars.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill which would restrict the use of the state's two helicopters.

If enacted, the bill would probably preclude the use of the helicopters by members of Gov. Jim Holshouser's cabinet. Prisons chief David Jones and Secretary of Transportation Bruce Lentz have both used them to travel around the state.

Everyday, Parents Are Told Leukemia Struck

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Every day, somewhere, doctors have to tell parents: "I'm sorry, your child has leukemia."

Far too often the diagnosis of this blood cancer is a death sentence. How do parents, or brothers and sisters, cope with it? Or with other situations where someone else in the family comes down with cancer?

Usually not too well, with family members often becoming "secondary victims of cancer," says Dr. David M. Kaplan, a sociologist of Stanford University Medical School.

He studied 40 families from the time that a child was diagnosed as having leukemia until three months after the child's death. He reported his results Wednesday at concluding sessions of an American Cancer Society seminar for science writers here.

Only four families came out of the experience "essentially intact" without serious problems, Dr. Kaplan said. The other 36 had either new or aggravated problems that ranged up to divorces, drinking problems, troubles with other children in the family or attempts quickly to have a "replacement child."

Dr. Kaplan told of one family in which a boy died at age three of leukemia. His identical twin five years later said he thought he ought to go outdoors and "get run over" so he "could be in heaven with Jeffrey," his brother.

Advances from cancer research are extending life-spans, "but the extension of life, without a corresponding ability to cope with life under these circumstances, can be a mixed blessing," Dr. Kaplan said.

"Many patients and their families do not know how to make the most of the time they have been given."

He said it is urgent to "make early efforts to help families cope with impending tragedy before patterns of reaction become entrenched."

Whether to tell the truth about cancer is not the question, because even small children know that they are seriously ill, he said.

Giving some advice, garnered from his five year study, Dr. Kaplan said:

—Don't go seeking faith healers.

—Don't think that in the sweepstakes your child will be the lucky one to survive, because if he doesn't "and the battle is finally lost, it will hit like a ton of bricks."

—Make the best use of the time remaining.

—Don't try to have a replacement child while one child is sick. There is enough to do for that child without having the burdens of pregnancy.

—Mourning can be relatively brief if parents have truly realized their child likely will die and has ended his misery.

—"There will be anguish and hell. Try to learn to live with it."

Soldier Charged In WAC Death

FT. LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — A soldier has been charged with murder in the strangulation of a WAC from Jonas Ridge near Morganton, N.C.

Spec. 4 William A. Kaplan, 23, of Tacoma, Wash., was charged Wednesday in the death of Pfc. Marilyn June Barrier, 18, whose disrobed body was found in a wooded area last Sunday. She had joined the Army eight months ago, after graduating from high school.

Death Sentence Being Appealed

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Ernest John Vinson, 24, a black, was sentenced to death Wednesday after a jury found him guilty of raping a white woman.

The woman, Mrs. Norman Coleen Ferguson of Rocky Mount, testified that last Dec. 5 a man came into the sporting goods store in Wilson where she worked, forced her into a back room, and attacked her at gun point.

The all-white Superior Court jury consisted of five women and seven men. Vinson, from Wilson, was sentenced to die April 26, but his lawyer filed notice of appeal.

Good Times Just Beyond Japanese Worker's Grasp

By STEVE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Living standards are inching upward for Ryuko Otani and his wife, but it takes hard work and scarifice.

They live with their 5-year-old daughter, Chikako, in a single crowded room. Mrs. Otani teaches high school English all day. Her husband frequently spends 10-14 hours a day struggling to keep his small plumbing fixtures firm float in Japan's troubled economy.

Together they make the equivalent of about $9,000 annually. They sacrifice for the future and are able to save about half their income. Someday they may enjoy the good life if inflation, the oil crisis or some other shock does not upset their careful planning.

The Otanis are typical of the patient, hard-working Japanese workers who have built their country into the world's No. 3 economic power. Despite Japan's wealth, however, the Otanis have a hard life that many Americans or Europeans would find appalling.

There are 51 million in the Japanese labor force, of whom about 9 million are small businessmen. The average monthly income of a Japnese wage earner is the equivalent of $505, according to the Prime Minister's office.

"A man lives for his work," says Otani. "All Japanese think this way. Anyway, as long as we are healthy we must work hard in order to have a happier future. I don't think money is everything," he adds, "But I'd like more than I have now."

Otani is 43. He was born in 1929 when the world stumbled into a massive depression. He never has had an easy life and he is hoping the oil crisis does not create another economic catastrophe.

Orphaned when he was six, Otani lived with relatives until college. Then he worked his way through Meiji Gakuin, a Protestant school that awarded him a bachelor's degree in English literature.

There were jobs in textile and plumbing equipment factories before he started his own small company four years ago. Otani is happy to be on his own, but he has lost the job security, annual bonuses and other benefits of working for a big company.

In many large industrial concerns, Japanese workers get low-cost housing or housing allowances, large retirement allowances and twice-a-year bonuses equivalent to three to five months pay each. Often medical benefits are free.

Otani gave that up for a cramped office in downtown Tokyo where he spends six days a week processing orders from building companies or tracking down supplies from plumbing equipment manufacturers. About 5 or 6'clock he starts on the second half of his business day — entertaining potential buyers.

"If I do things to become friendly with clients, then big orders are easier to get," Otani explains.

He is like millions of Japanese businessmen who conduct some of their most important business at night in small bars and night clubs.

Perhaps two or three nights a week, Otani gets home "early" from the office — 7 o'clock — to spend the evening with his family.

They live in a straw-mat room about 10 by 14 feet with a sliding wooden door opening onto a narrow lane lined with apartments, shops and some larger homes.

There is no sidewalk. Their daugher plays in the street, but the street is so narrow and hard to get to that there is scarcely any traffic.

The Otanis' $50-a-month room has a desk, color television, dish cabinet, dresser, low eating table and other odds and ends. At night, they fold up the table to make room to unroll the futons on which Japanese usually sleep.

A sliding door at the back of the room opens onto a crowded hallway leading to the next apartment and the toilet shared with neighbors.

When the Otanis want to take a bath, they have to walk down to the neighborhood bathhouse which charges the equivalent of about 20 U.S. cents apiece.

Mrs. Otani cooks meals standing in the back hall, using a single burner gas hotplate and a rice cooker jammed onto a shelf beside a stainless steel sink. She has no hot water or refrigerator and her single luxury is a small electric washing machine outside the back door.

Like most modern Japanese, Otani married his wife for love, rather than using the traditional "Omaiai," or arranged marriage. He met her when she was a high school senior and he was moonlighting, teaching English after his regular job. Patiently they dated during her four college years. She then taught school three more years before they married in 1963.

Her most pressing problem now is trying to save money on groceries, since consumer prices are rising more than 15 per cent annually, about twice the U.S. inflation rate. Pork, a staple, has risen from $1.36 a pound to $1.96 a pound. A long dry spell has helped push the price of vegetables up.

But she feels their real income is going up despite the rising prices. For instance, she is able to buy meat perhaps five times a week now. A few years ago, Mrs. Otani ate pork once or twice a week and made do with fish and vegetables the rest of the time.

The most pressing shortage this winter has been detergent for the washing machine.

The Otanis remain optimistic despite their difficult life in one of the world's most crowded and expensive cities. Otani explains that his savings are growing, his business progressing, his family is healthy and "I'm becoming happier and healthier."

Rise In Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported today that its index of business indicators rose solidly in February for the second month in a row, another indication that the worst of the nation's energy-related economic slowdown may be over.

The business indicators were up 1.8 per cent in February, following a 1.2 per cent gain in January, putting the over-all index at a record 170.6 of the 1967 average of 100.

Economists look to the indicators index for clues to future trends in performance of the economy. The index was off sharply by 2.1 per cent in December.

In addition to the February increase in the index, there have been other signs that the nation may avoid a serious recession resulting from the energy shortage.

Housing starts were up last month for the second month in a row, and unemployment remained steady at 5.2 per cent instead of rising as some economists had feared. Recent reports have shown that investment plans of the nation's business also are encouraging this year.

SENITMENTAL PURCHASE — Actor Kirk Alyn, in suit, who played Superman in films from 1948 to 1951, helps workmen move a telephone booth from the Burbank theater, which is being torn down in Los Angeles. Alyn says he's going to put it in his living room. Actually, Alyn says in the episodes he did Superman never used a telephone booth for transformations from the mild-mannered reporter Clark Kent. Prosperity And PeaceUnderlined

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Never mentioning his Watergate troubles, President Nixon said his administration is making a record of "peace abroad and prosperity at home that will bring victory to Republicans in next November's elections."

At a time when many Republicans are separating themselves from the White House, the President Wednesday night recited his administration's record and proposals to the party's annual $1,000-a-plate fund-raising dinner and said GOP candidates "can win on that kind of platform."

Although some 2,000 were present, a majority of them got in for free. Officials said the dinner raised close to $700,000, a sum $200,000 below last year's previous record low.

Some cheered enthusiastically, while many others applauded only perfunctorily. Afterward, some expressed surprise at the President's failure to mention what one official said was "the one subject on everybody's mind."

He would have gotten a good response from this audience," Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., told reporters.

"It was a very good speech," said Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., "but obviously he left out the subject he didn't want to talk about."

"It's tough to be an administration candidate this year and that was his speech," said one party official.

The closest Nixon came to referring to the threat of impeachment came when he vowed that "over these next three years" his administration would meet its goals for the nation and the world.

Even though polls show the GOP in trouble this spring, he said, "in the fall it is going to be different."

"We're going to win this fall," he added, declaring his administration had already brought peace and that economic upturn would come later this year.

Nat'l Recognition For ECU Chapter

Alpha Gamma chapter of Chi Beta Phi, science honor fraternity, at East Carolina University has been selected as the outstanding chapter of the year in the national Chi Beta Phi system.

The award was announced at the annual national convention of Chi Beta Phi at Athens College, Athens, Ala., according to Dr. T. C. Sayetta, local faculty advisor and national counselor. He said the award was based on science activities by the Alpha Gamma chapter, and its service to East Carolina University, the community and Chi Beta Phi. There are 27 chapters in the Chi Beta Phi system.

Dr. Sayetta, a member of the faculty of the ECU Physics Department, was elected treasurer of the national Chi Beta Phi system.

Fred Obrecht, Alpha Gamma chpater president, also attended the convention as the chapter's official delegate. Dr. Wendall Allen is also a chapter faculty advisro.

Crucial Period In Their Lives

Howard's wife doesn't even suspect the real reason underlying his sexual coldness to her! Indeed, millions of you stodgy wives this very night will force your loyal mates to indulge in No. 4 or No. 5 in order to function in the boudoir! Get help!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE Z-587: Howard J., aged 42, has been married 20 years.

"But Dr. Crane," his grieving wife began, "my husband has just confessed that he has been writing to his college sweetheart, whom he dated before we ever met.

"Their correspondence has been going on for the last 6 months.

"And Howard has admitted to me that he still loves her, so he wants me to buy twin beds.

"For he says it is unfair for him to sleep with me when his heart is elsewhere.

"Dr. Crane, we were very happy till this secret romance happened, so what can I do?"

Male Camouflage

Howard's heart is really not elsewhere!

He still loves his wife but is a victim of "platonic panic."

For men nowadays go into a worse mental state after they pass the age of 40, than did women in their menopause.

Briefly, here is what Howard's recent love-lettering indicates:

(1) Howard is now impotent but terrified lest his wife realize that fact!

(2) So he has desperately sought to divert her attention from his real problem, which is his inability to respond erotically to her charm in the bedroom.

Men of his age resort to various types of sexual "red herrings," such as sudden and excessive use of alcohol.

For when a wife tearfully waits up till 2 a.m. for her half drunken mate to stagger home from a tavern, she will not be expecting him to respond ardently to her boudoir charm.

Other husbands at this crucial "climacteric" period in their lives, become bowling addicts, poker fanatics, reckless gamblers, fast drivers and even hypochondriacs.

For if they can conjure up various aches and pains that no doctor can cure with medicines, they can keep on moaning and groaning, thus diverting their wife's attention from their impotence.

(3) Other frightened males concoct fanciful romances, of the ethereal "moonlight and poetry" type, to explain why they are no longer ardent with their mates.

Sometimes this is done via letter-writing, as in Howard's case.

Others merely sit around and indulge in romantic nostalgia about a former "true love" at the high school or college level.

Note, however, that such men "confess" these "secret" romances, for they realize their wives must know of them, in order to explain their demand for twin beds.

(4) Many husbands, long before they become entirely platonic with their wives, will try to revive their libido by aphrodisiacs, stag movies and pornographic pictures.

(5) Some husbands merely conjure up mental images of seductive sirens as a means of stimulating their own erotic verve to the point they can then approach their wife in the boudoir.

Thousands of you dutiful wives reading this column today, don't even dream that your stodgy bedroom behavior will make your own husbnad resort to No. 5 this very night!

And don't scold such a man if you find he has hidden a pile of pornographic pictures in his den!

Instead, be grateful, for that means he still wants to remain faithful to you but your lack of allure if forcing him to resort to erotic sauces and condiments, as it wore.

So send for my booklet "How to Prevent Platonic Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 dents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MARCH 29, 1974

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Solve problems in an ingenious and up-to-date fashion. Forget past mistakes and bygones now. Look to the future. Don't upset satisfactory conditions as tempted to do, but concentrate on modernizing what doesn't suit you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Find the right friends who can assist you in making the future much brighter. Be understanding and don't argue with kin.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Balancing budget is wise and getting rid of expenses that are outdated. Plan something nice to do with mate. Plan to increase income.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can gain the goodwill of friends so you can achieve your most personal aims easily. Forget finances now, which will work okay anyway.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Meet with people who can help you become more successful. Forget those personal emotional matters that could upset you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't fret about what can't be helped, especially in emotional matters. Join good friends for amusement. Make new friends via the social ladder.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy with vocational matters and have a finer position in the future. Avoid a very emotional person, or you get into trouble yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to please an irate official and you get good benefits thereby. Take it easy tonight, have a good time. Grow in character.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle credit and debts carefully and you get good results. Don't let it bother you if one who likes to find fault does just that.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Work out new arrangements with associates for greater future benefits. Leave close tie alone who is in a bad mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy working and you'll get out of that mood to fret and fume. An associate can be demanding, so pretend to be very busy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Attend amusements with congenials for a happy time. Don't listen to what a demanding fellow worker has to say. Avoid one who likes to argue too much.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Finish home tasks with speed and do what makes family happier. Don't neglect duties for pleasure now or you get into trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she must be taught early to control the emotions, otherwise the big success possible here will be lessened. There is much logical thinking, and the career could be very fine. The education should be slanted along New Era lines, which are well understood by this youngster. Give a good grounding in music and religion. Science studies also are excellent.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠
7 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ◇

Only a few duplicate aficionados have heard of Goldwater's Law, named after American Contract Bridge League tournament director, Harry Goldwater. It states: "Always accept a lead out of turn. If the poor so-and-so doesn't even know whose lead it is, what makes you think he knows enough to lead the right suit?"

Today's hand cropped up at a tournament in Atlantic City, N. J., where Goldwater was officiating. North's bid of seven hearts was a desperate attempt to pick up some badly needed points. He reckoned that there was a better than 50 per cent chance that the opponents would lead the wrong suit, in which case his clubs would provide more than enough discards for his partner's spades.

East heard seven hearts bid at his right, and automatically presumed that it was his lead. Before anyone could say anything, he had the ace of diamonds in front of him on the table. It seemed that North's tactics were about to payoff.

Unfortunately, North had reckoned without his partner. No sooner had the ace of diamonds appeared, than South yelled for the tournament director.

It so happened that the director summoned to give a ruling was Harry Goldwater. South explained that there had been a lead out of turn, and Goldwater mentioned that declarer had four options, one of which was to have the correct hand lead and the diamond suit barred as an opening lead.

Since South had not seen his partner's hand, he did not relish the prospect of playing a grand slam against the lead of an ace. It never dawned on him that his partner might have leaped to seven hearts missing two aces. Playing what he considered to be the percentages, South barred a diamond, and requested West to lead another suit.

West settled for the ace of spades, and that meant down one. Note that if declarer had followed Goldwater's Law and accepted the lead of the diamond ace, he would have made his grand slam with tricks to burn.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

A chance of showers over the state Friday and Friday night, and in the mountains on Sunday. Highs in the upper 70s and overnight lows near 50 degrees.

TAX MISTAKES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)—According to the Illinois Department of Revenue, mistakes made by taxpayers on their returns doubles and sometimes triples the time needed to process the returns.

Bermuda Looks For Boom Year

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Bermuda is confidently looking for a continuation of its tourism boom this year after an impressive 13 per cent gain in 1973 — and the world energy crisis may play a key role in the further growth of the islands' basic industry.

Tourism Minister deForest Trimingham says, "It could be the finest year we have ever had."

He added: "We could profit from the misfortunes of others, although I am reluctant to put it that way."

He pointed to the energy crisis and its effects on the United States, the prime source of Bermuda's tourist trade, and said that the islands' close proximity to the East Coast may give them "a competitive edge and bring us to the top of the pile in 1974."

Trimingham listed some of the ways in which a continuing fuel crisis could work to Bermuda's advantage:

—The airlines' move to curb no-shows on available flights, thereby increasing their load factors.

—Increased visits by well-to-do tourists — "whom we are trying to attract" — possibly staying longer because they have consolidated their holidays into one longer vacation.

—Curtailment of traveling by car within the United States and acceptance of Bermuda because cars never were available here to tourists on a rental basis.

On the other hand, the energy crisis has already hit one key phase of island tourism, the series of College Weeks which annually attract thousands of U.S. students — 11,297 of them in 1973.

Normally, the Weeks are held during the Easter period, heralding the beginning of the peak season. They are regarded as an investment for the future, with students, in theory, returning later on their honeymoons and for family vacations.

But, due to the fuel crisis and corresponding shifts in U.S. school and university spring vacations, the 1974 College Weeks picture is clouded.

"I would guess that we certainly will not attain last year's figure," says Department of Tourism official Ron Mahnke, who organizes activities for the students.

The Division of Health Services has received an application from the City of Greenville in Pitt County for a State grant under the North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1971. The application seeks a grant of $42,547.00 from funds allocated for use in Pitt County. This grant would be applied as a portion of the construction cost of a water supply system project. The project consists of constructing water mains in North Greenville (section 1) and Northwest Greenville (section 2). Section 1 consists of construction of approximately 12100 lineal feet of 14 and 12 inch water main in a proposed State road. The main will serve a new industry now under construction and will complete a loop thereby providing greater supply dependability between Eastern By-Pass and Bethel Highway. Section 2 consists of construction of approximately 4600 lineal feet of 12 and 8 inch water main in Secondary Roads 1200 and 1267 to serve the new Pitt County Hospital and Mental Health Center. It will also serve a completion of the loop between existing mains.
