

Nixon Turns Over Transcripts Of Tapes

TRANSCRIPTS—These are the transcripts of the White House tapes which President Nixon announced he would turn over to the House Judiciary Committee and make public. (AP Wirephoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, in sending to the House Judiciary Committee edited transcripts of many of his Watergate-related conversations, said through his lawyers today that the tapes do not once make it "appear that the President of the United States was engaged in a criminal plot to obstruct justice."

A 50-page submission to the panel considering possible impeachment, prepared by defense counsel James D. St. Clair, also concluded that "The raw material of these recorded confidential conversations establishes that the President had no prior knowledge of the break-in" at Democratic National Committee headquarters "and that he had no knowledge of any cover-up prior to March 21, 1973."

The 1,200 pages of edited tapes were to be made public later in the day but the St. Clair document repeatedly quoted from the tape transcripts. And at points comparisons were made between the content of the transcripts and sworn testimony by ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III who has been the President's chief public accuser.

The transcripts were delivered earlier to an apparently skeptical House Judiciary Committee in a black station wagon. There were stacks of papers for each member.

An hour before the committee's 10 a.m. deadline, White House aides had loaded 38 manila folders and four large black briefcases into the station wagon and headed for Capitol Hill.

The material the President promised to make public in his national television address Monday night was delivered just half an hour before the 10 a.m. deadline for the material subpoenaed by the committee in its impeachment inquiry.

Nixon said, in delivering his Watergate transcripts, "blemishes and all," he expected the American public to find in them proof of his innocence.

An hour before the deadline, White House aides had loaded 38 manila folders and four large black briefcases into the back of the station wagon and headed for Capitol Hill to deliver them to the committee.

In announcing Monday night his plans to release the edited transcripts, Nixon said: "I am placing my trust in the basic fairness of the American people."

Nixon is not turning over the tape recordings the committee has subpoenaed, drawing complaints from Democrats and at least one Republican.

A committee briefing sessions scheduled for this morning was abruptly canceled and committee aides said Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., would refuse to comment on Nixon's offer at this time.

The aide said committee acceptance of the transcripts does not bind the committee to Nixon's terms of response to the subpoena. The subpoena called for delivery of the tapes at 10 a.m.

Rodino is planning to convene the committee Wednesday and try to determine its response to Nixon. Rodino has been offered free television time to make his own presentation tonight and some committee members were urging him to accept it.

In a bid to win committee support for his compromise offer, Nixon has invited Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., and Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., the senior Republican, to listen to the tapes and verify the transcripts.

The President said the material he was making available should end, once and for all, speculation about his role in Watergate.

"As far as what the President personally knew and did with regard to Watergate and the cover-up is concerned, these materials—together with those already made available—will tell it all," Nixon said. Watergate is only one of six areas of presidential conduct the committee is studying in its impeachment inquiry. Nixon did not refer to any others—the activities of the special White House investigating unit known as the plumbers, the ITT antitrust settlement, political contributions by dairy co-ops, White House plans for domestic intelligence gathering and the secret bombing of Cambodia.

Presidential counselor J. Fred Buzhardt indicated today Nixon would be reluctant to supply further tape recorded conversations to the committee.

Interviewed on the CBS Morning News, Buzhardt would not divulge Nixon's response to the additional requests. "It's not appropriate to do so until they receive this material and digest it," he said.

Buzhardt added that "I think this tells the entire story of Watergate... It's a monumental amount of material."

Nixon also faces a deadline of Thursday to answer a subpoena from Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski for tapes and records of 64 presidential conversations.

Rodino, who insisted shortly before Nixon's address that only full compliance with the subpoena would be acceptable to the committee, declined comment on the compromise offer. The National Broadcasting Co. offered him television time for tonight to respond to Nixon.

Hutchinson said he would be "perfectly willing" to undertake the job of verifying the transcripts, but thought the committee should examine them first to see if anything further was needed.

"If it represents the complete record of Watergate, which the President says it does, then I think it would be adequate," he said.

It would take a majority vote of the committee's 21 Democrats and 17 Republicans to accept Nixon's plan. The vote for the subpoena was 33 to 3.

Rodino has declared repeatedly that he does not want to have a confrontation with Nixon over the tapes, and it is likely the committee will take no immediate action.

A briefing session at which no votes can be taken is scheduled for today, and the next likely meeting date is Thursday.

Reaction among other committee members generally was along party lines, Republicans approving of Nixon's offer and Democrats finding it unsatisfactory.

One Republican not endorsing the proposal was Rep. Thomas F. Railsback, R-Ill., who said he thought the edited tapes also should be turned over to the committee.

Railsback said, however, that he thought Nixon had "for the first time come through in a very convincing way" in detailing his role in the Watergate investigation. Nixon had the bound volumes of the transcripts in his office as he spoke and the television cameras showed them to viewers. He said in addition to turning them over to the Judiciary Committee he intends to make them public, along with relevant portions of other Watergate tapes he already has given the committee.

Nixon said he had spent hours over the last several days "personally deciding questions of relevancy"—the main point of dispute with committee members demanding full compliance with the subpoena.

"The overriding issue is can the President control the information we have access to?" said Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah.

Day Of Prayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today is a National Day of Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer in 32 states, an observance that started with Senate passage of a resolution.

"We will be fasting and spending time in meditation and prayer. I'm sure they'll be praying for the President and about the Watergate crisis. That it will be cleared up, that justice will prevail. That's the way I'll pray," said a Kentucky minister coordinating efforts to extend the services nationwide.

The Rev. Tom Carruth of the Asbury Theological Seminary, spoke before President Nixon's televised speech Monday night on Watergate.

He praised the plan for group prayer, saying, "There is great value in united prayer. Something happens when two people pray together that doesn't happen when they pray alone."

The Senate passed the resolution Dec. 20 by unanimous consent with only a few senators present.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., who introduced it, said it was modeled after a proclamation written by Abraham Lincoln setting April 30, 1863, as a day "to confess our national sins and to pray for clemency and forgiveness."

Farmville Receives Governor's Award In Special Presentation

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—Farmville has been added to a select list—that of towns in North Carolina who have won the Governor's Award," Gov. Jim Holshouser told about 200 Farmville residents gathered for the presentation last night.

He intimated that several very desirable industries have shown an interest in Farmville "just in the last few weeks since qualifications for the Governor's Award were met."

Gov. Holshouser was guest of honor at a dinner sponsored by the Farmville Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the local Jaycees, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club, and Rotary Club.

The Governor's Award Program is sponsored by the Commerce and Industry Division of the N. C. Department of Natural and Economic Resources to assist communities in North Carolina of less than 15,000 population in their industrial development.

The program requires that the community achieve certain goals which would place it in a strong competitive position for the attraction of industry for economic growth. To meet these goals, the community must prepare a community audit containing detailed statistics on area resources, publish a community promotional brochure, develop a specified number of industrial sites, have an industrial promotion organization and a chartered development corporation, and conduct an effective clean-up campaign.

At the time Farmville began seeking the Award last year, it had completed all the requirements, except the Cleanup campaign. It was brought to a successful close in February.

The Farmville Economic Council, founded in 1956, is directed by Tom Thompson and presided over by local attorney Jack Lewis.

Lewis accepted the award from Gov. Holshouser last night. He recognized the efforts of all the town's citizens, and the "superlative leadership of Tom Thompson."

State Rep. Sam D. Bundy, filling his accustomed role as master of ceremonies for the affair, was presented the town's Man of the Year Award by former Farmville Mayor Frank Allen.

Bundy said he was born at Joyner's Crossroads about a mile outside Farmville, but "got my daddy to move to town when I was 18 months old." He attended the Farmville public schools and Trinity College (now Duke University). Although he held principalships in Duplin, Edgecombe, and Martin Counties, most of his years in public education were served in Farmville where he was principal of Farmville Public Schools from 1945 to 1965 and of the elementary school here which bears his name from 1965 to 1970. He is an active member of the First Christian Church, a Kiwanian with 30 years perfect attendance, a Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Masons in North Carolina, and a trustee of Mount Olive College. He and his wife, the former Bettie Spencer of Seaboard, have two sons, S. D. Jr., and James Henry and two grandchildren, all living in Raleigh.

He is seeking his third term in the N. C. General Assembly.

$14 Million Ransom Victim Arrives In U.S. Today

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — American oilman Victor Samuelson arrived in the United States this morning after being freed six weeks after his company paid Marxist Argentine guerrillas a record $14.2 million ransom.

Samuelson, flanked by Exxon officials on his arrival at Miami International Airport, was smiling and appeared healthy.

"I'm very happy and I am well," he told reporters. "I have no further comment. I'm anxious to get back to my family."

When asked if he would be flying to Cleveland, his home town, he said: "No, not right away."

The 36-year-old Esso Argentina executive was whisked into a privately chartered twin-engine aircraft which took off minutes after his 8:30 a.m. landing from South America.

Exxon officials would not disclose his destination.

Earlier today, Samuelson's mother in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, a Cleveland suburb, said she did not know whether her son would fly on to Cleveland immediately.

Mrs. George E. Hart said Exxon has kept Samuelson's wife, Diane, and their three children, ages 5 to 10, in "protective custody" at an undisclosed location in the United States since they left Argentina in January.

Samuelson, who had been held 144 days by the People's Revolutionary Army — known by its Spanish acronym ERP, was the manager of the Exxon subsidiary's, Campana refinery 60 miles north of Buenos Aires.

He was freed Monday in front of the suburban Buenos Aires home of his children's doctor, Federico Pfister.

Will Ask Vesco Be Deported

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A leading opposition legislator says he will demand in the National Assembly the immediate expulsion of fugitive American financier Robert L. Vesco.

"Costa Rica should no longer be a refuge for delinquents," Angel Valladares of the National Independent party said in an interview Monday.

Valladares recently returned from Europe where he said he investigated Vesco's financial dealings. He said he would give the assembly proof of the financier's alleged manipulations of mutual funds.

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has accused Vesco and 40 others of siphoning $224 million from a mutual fund. Investors Overseas Services, based in Switzerland. Swiss authorities also want Vesco on charges of bilking the firm's shareholders.

Found Dead

A Greenville Utilities Commission employee was found dead in the Tar River early this morning just upriver from the utilities water plant.

Pitt County Coroner and Medical Examiner E. W. Harvey identified the man as Elmer Moxilla Cox, 55, of 608 West Fourth St.

He said Cox was last seen about 3 p.m. yesterday by fellow workers at the utilities plant. He did not go home last night, the coroner noted.

Cox's body was found about 8:45 a.m. today face down, in the edge of the river, by a Utilities employee. Harvey explained.

The coroner said an autopsy is being performed to determine the cause of death and said investigation of the incident is continuing.

ECU Graduate Student Is Found Fatally Beaten At The O'Berry Center

An ECU graduate student who lived on Rt. 8, Greenville and worked at O'Berry Center in Goldsboro was apparently murdered during her lunch hour at the Center yesterday.

The Wayne County Sheriff Department says the body of 25-year-old Mrs. Mary Carolyn Faulkner Wray was found in the picnic area of the Center for Mentally Retarded Children yesterday about 4 p.m. She was last seen alive about noon.

Wayne County Sheriff Bill Adams said Mrs. Wray, a bride of two weeks, had been beaten on the head with a blunt instrument and had been stabbed on the face and neck with a pencil, which was found near the body. He said he believed she had been sunbathing in the picnic area when she was attacked.

The body, which was to be flown to the state medical examiner in Chapel Hill for an autopsy, was found by an employee of the state institution. It was covered with a blanket, Wayne County Medical Examiner Dr. Jack Drummond said.

According to the Pitt County Register of Deeds Office, the victim was married to Robert Spencer Wray, an ECU student, April 12. She commuted daily to O'Berry in a car pool from her home on Rt. 8, Greenville. She had started working in the Department of Community Service at O'Berry as a community liaison worker March 1.

Dr. Thomas Long of the ECU Psychology Department said Mrs. Wray had nearly completed work on a Master's degree in clinical psychology. He was her advisor, he said. "She did her undergraduate work here, and also at Ohio State University," he said. "She was an excellent student, deeply involved in her field, and a fine young woman. All of us in this Department who knew her well are shocked and dismayed."

The address of Mrs. Wray's father, Horace C. Faulkner, is listed with the ECU Placement Office as Westfalen, Germany. He is with the E. I. Dupont Company there.

Wilson Asserts He Only Seeks Facts In Morgan's Past Role

W. S. Senate candidate Henry Hall Wilson said Monday that he is not using "mudslinging" tactics in his campaign but is only reacting to claims made by his chief campaign opponents.

Wilson, speaking in Greenville, denied charges of "mudslinging" when referring to past political activities of Attorney General Robert Morgan and said he was only seeking the truth in reference to Morgan's role in the 1960 gubernatorial campaign of I. Beverly Lake.

Appearing on television here, the Democratic candidate claimed that Morgan himself first brought up the issue of past campaigns by indicating that he handled the John F. Kennedy presidential campaign in North Carolina in 1960.

Wilson, who served in both the Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson administrations as an aide and was co-manager of the Kennedy campaign in North Carolina, claimed that Morgan's association in the campaign was denied by national Democratic Party officials.

Nick Gallifianakis, another chief opponent in the campaign for the Democratic nomination for the seat now held by Sen. Sam Ervin, again was the target of Wilson criticism. Wilson said that a proposal by Gallifianakis to raise personal income tax exemptions to $1,200 would foster inflation.

Young Mother Really Is His Sister

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago, when I married Peter, we were both 30 years old. I recall that when he introduced me to his mother, I said: "My, what a young-looking mother you have!" [That's what everybody says when they first meet her. She looks about Peter's age.]

After being in this family for ten years, I learned accidentally that Peter's "mother" is not his mother at all. She is his sister! He calls her "Mom." She is only 14 years older than Peter. His real mother died when he was an infant, and his sister raised him after she got married. [Peter was two and she was 16.] Why everyone keeps this a big secret is beyond me. It also bugs me because I'm sure everyone wonders how come Peter has such a young-looking mother and such an old-looking wife.

It would make me feel a lot better if their real relationship were to come out. Would it be wrong for me to spill the beans?

PETER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes. If Peter and his family prefer to keep it a secret, keep quiet. "Mom" may not be Peter's biological mother, but she's the only mother he has ever known, and if it gives him [and her] pleasure to perpetuate the illusion, don't destroy it.

DEAR ABBY: I am having a difference of opinion with my mother. I just started dating and my mother says that when my date comes to pick me up I should be "upstairs, dressing," and keep him waiting about ten minutes.

I think that when my date rings the doorbell I should be the one to answer it. My mom says that if I do, it will make me look too eager. What do you say?

CANDI

DEAR CANDI: I say that at the sound of the bell, come out smiling. I once knew a girl who kept her date waiting half an hour every time he came to pick her up because she didn't want to appear too eager. She'd send her kid sister to answer the door and entertain her date while he waited. [P. S. He married the kid sister.]

DEAR ABBY: I have a pet peeve I have never seen aired in your column. It's women who wear heavy charm bracelets that go "jingle jangle, chunky clunk" in church.

This friend of mine always wears a bracelet like that, and she insists on saving me a seat in church beside her. She always picks two seats way down in the front and in the middle. Every time she moves her hand, those charm bracelets make a dreadful racket, which is annoying to those sitting near us and embarrassing to me. [I've even seen the organist turn around and give her a dirty look between hymns.]

What is wrong with people like my friend? Don't they know any better? Or don't they care? And how can I tell her without hurting her feelings? She doesn't take criticism very well.

LIKES CHURCH—HATES BRACELETS

DEAR LIKES: If your friend isn't aware that her bracelets are a source of annoyance to you and others, do the friendly thing and tell her. Then, if she doesn't leave the hardware at home, find another seat as far from her as possible.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BARBARA G. IN WILKES BARRE, PA.: Please send me your address. I have enough responses to my request from readers on how to square a circle to keep you, in reading material for the rest of your life.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

By Erma Bombeck

As a new tennis player, I feel like Belle Watling (the madam in Gone With The Wind) who tried to buy respectability by giving money to the hospital.

It's an uphill battle for beginning tennis players to break through the barriers of snobbery and elitism to play a game that for years has been dominated by rich kids with weak chins and straight, white teeth.

During the last decade, I can never remember seeing a picture of a Rockefeller coming out of a bowling alley with his gym bag or a Kennedy finkering with his engine just before a stock car race. On the coldest day in the Midwest, I could always pick up my newspaper and see one of them with a white sweater knotted around his neck and shading his eyes from the blazing sun.

The question is, can a woman plagued by varicose veins who learned last week that you have to take the tennis racket out of the press before you play find happiness with a tennis person who was attached to his mother by an umbilical sweatband?

On the court last week I encountered a member of the First Family of tennis who appraised me coolly.

"I only wear white on the courts," I said defensively. "After all, it is a professional sport and..."

"White is tacky," he sniffed. "Everyone, but everyone who plays tennis these days dresses in colors. Tell me, who is your pro?"

"I've been getting a little help with my strokes from Leroy Ace."

He frowned. "I don't believe I've heard of him. What club?"

"The Boys Club. But he moonlights from his garage."

"How well do you play?" he asked before going to the other side of the net.

"I had tennis elbow twice in one week," I said proudly.

"That only means something is wrong with your stroke. You need help. Do you prefer string or gut?"

"I'll play with anybody," shrugged.

"Would you like to warm up?" he hesitated.

"Sure." I popped a ball over the fence. "Would you believe I've only been playing for two days?"

"That long," he said tiredly. "What about you?" I asked.

"I played in the good old days," he said slowly, "before they opened the courts to Democrats."

Legal Separation Is Mrs. Wooles Now Martha's Goal Is Installed

NEW YORK (AP) — "She wants out and not any more harassment," Martha Mitchell's lawyer said as he disclosed that she has filed suit for a legal separation from John N. Mitchell.

Mitchell, the former U.S. attorney general, and onetime Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans were acquitted Sunday of criminal conspiracy charges stemming from a $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

"She wanted us to hold off until after his present difficulties," San Francisco lawyer Melvin Belli said Monday.

The separation suit, filed Monday, seeks custody of the Mitchells' 13-year-old daughter Marty and asks $2,500-a-week for Mrs. Mitchell until a determination of her husband's assets is made. Belli said Mitchell had not responded to a notification of the action and that a summons has been issued, returnable in 20 days.

The couple, who met while she was working in Mitchell's law firm, separated last September. They were married in 1957, the second marriage for each.

"She said that she was very much in love with the man that was but not with the man that is," Belli said in describing the feelings of the often outspoken Mrs. Mitchell.

Mitchell faces an indictment in Washington in the Watergate cover-up. His trial here on charges of perjury, conspiracy and obstruction of justice ended in exoneration on all counts.

Mrs. Dorothy Wooles was installed as president of the ECU Woman's Club at a meeting held Wednesday at First Federal.

She will be assisted by Mrs. Wanza Broome, president-elect; Mrs. Ann Stevenson, vice president; Mrs. Cynthia Wease, secretary; and Frances Giles, treasurer. Mrs. Virginia Durham acted as installing officer for the group.

Invited guests for the salad-dessert dinner were recipients of scholarships awarded by the club this year: Virginia Goff; Kathy Phillips; Jamie Luper; Beth Ivey; Mary Kathryn Savage; Roxanne Hager; and Betty Lou Hatch. A total of $900 was awarded through these scholarships presented by Sue Lanier, scholarship chairman. Gifts were also presented to the students.

Pam Biladeau and Elaine Cannon were co-chairmen for the newcomers dinner. Mrs. Rose Richardson, outgoing president, conducted the meeting.

Winners In 4-H Event

Participants showed how they prepared their favorite foods and explained the nutritive value of the ingredients.

The winners in the contest were: Brenda Roberson, poultry barbecue; Shelia Little, senior egg cookery; Gloria Green, junior egg cookery; Gwen Worlsey, fruits and vegetables use; Vernell and Gary Starkis, dairy foods; and Mary and Sandra Ellis, open class. Judges for the contest were Kathy Huson and Diane Dixon, both of East Carolina University.

The winners received ribbons or scholarships to be applied toward expenses to attend 4-H camp. Winners in each category will represent the county in district competition.

The Decision Is Already Made

William A. Dees, Jr. chairman of the UNC board of governors, attacked the idea of a four year medical school at East Carolina University in a Goldsboro speech last week.

Dees leveled criticism at the Legislature for failing to allow the board of governors time to gauge the impact of the four year medical school at ECU.

He said the two year school, authorized by the Legislature, "will be no good at all in meeting our state's medical needs right now" and that a four year school would have no impact for at least ten years.

Dees, as chairman of the board of governors, as every other member of the board, has both the right and perhaps the responsibility to express his feelings concerning matters pertaining to higher education in North Carolina.

In the case of the expansion of the medical school at East Carolina University, the Legislature has made it amply clear that it wants the school expanded immediately to a two year school with increased enrollment and that it has mandated that it should be developed in time to a degree granting medical school.

The General Assembly speaks for the people of North Carolina, and in its 1974 session it spoke decisively, saying what should be done about medical education at East Carolina University. We believe it was the hope of the vast majority of the members of the General Assembly that such decisive action would put an end to the decade-long controversy over the issue of a medical school at East Carolina University.

The Legislature has made a sound decision in the best interest of all the people of North Carolina and based on all the facts and information available.

Rather than actions and words intended to continue the controversy, it seems it should be the responsibility of members of the Board of Governors, individually and collectively, to carry out with all deliberate speed this legislative mandate.

Sawhill Joined Common Cause

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Apprehension within the oil industry and the White House that federal energy czar John Sawhill will be much more consumer-oriented than predecessor William Simon was confirmed last week when he joined the camp of what true Nixonites consider the enemy: John Gardner's Common Cause.

During a most friendly meeting he had with Gardner last Tuesday afternoon at the Federal Energy Office (FEO), Sawhill suddenly whipped out his checkbook. He not only renewed the March 1973 membership in Common Cause of his wife Isabel, but joined himself with a check on their joint account.

Had hard-nosed Nixon aides known this, they would have gone into shock. Gardner's Common Cause, a liberal lobbying group which has hounded Mr. Nixon for campaign fund scandals, ranks high among White House enemies.

Nearly as distressing to the White House, Sawhill generally agreed with Gardner Tuesday when he proposed registration and regulation of non-congressional energy lobbyists. During a cordial conversation, Sawhill several times stressed the problem of FEO achieving credibility with the public—a favorite Common Cause theme.

Industry lobbyists became worried last Monday about testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee by the 37-year-old Sawhill, once a professor of finance and then a $100,000-a-year financier before joining the Nixon administration in 1973. Sawhill's testimony stressed consumer protection far more than did Simon, a staunch supporter of free enterprise and defender of the oil industry.

"Sawhill sounds like Ralph Nader, Jr.," one FEO official told us. "He changed his colors completely the day he was appointed."

Special Veterans Benefits The White House hopes to keep embattled Veterans Administrator Donald Johnson on the federal payroll until June 16 despite congressional clamor for his ouster, for one reason: to qualify him for a lifetime pension of $5,365 starting at age 62.

To qualify, Johnson, now 49, must complete five full years at the Veterans Administration (VA), counting from June 16, 1969, when he was confirmed for his $42,500 job. One day less and he forfeits the whole pension. The importance of this timing is the reason for White House vagueness about when Johnson, under heavy fire the past year from veterans' organizations and Congress, will actually submit his formal resignation and have it accepted.

Nevertheless, the White House decided to tell angry congressional leaders that Johnson would soon be out in an effort to derail a Civil Service investigation of whether Johnson violated the Hatch Act by pressing high VA officials to contribute to President Nixon's reelection campaign.

Within hours after the White House let it be known that Johnson was on his way out, congressional leaders were quietly asked to drop their demand for the Civil Service investigation. As a result, the probe has been held "in abeyance" until May 15. But Rep. Olin Teague of Texas, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus and a key figure in veterans' affairs, probably will insist that it take place later.

Diplomatic Musical Chairs Despite current investigations of ambassadorial appointments as a reward for contributions to President Nixon's reelection campaign, the White House was so anxious to make room in a choice European embassy for one generous fatcat that a valued Foreign Service officer was lost.

Matthew Looman, a highly esteemed career diplomat, has been promised the vacancy as ambassador to Sweden once U.S. Swedish relations—icy cold from Vietnam—warmed up sufficiently to restore ambassadorial representation. When the promise was broken, Looman resigned prematurely from the Foreign Service at age 53.

The reason: room had to be found for California industrialist Leonard Firestone, long a generous Republican contributor. Although he contributed less than $10,000 to Mr. Nixon's 1968 campaign, in 1972 he gave the Committee to Reelect the President (CREP) a succulent $100,000 in the pre-April period when contributors did not have to be identified. Firestone gave another $15,100 in the post-April period.

Firestone wanted to become ambassador to Belgium—the cushy post held by Dr. Robert Strausz-Jupe, a hard-line, anti-Communist foreign-policy expert with considerable following among conservative Republicans. They would not be pleased by his dismissal.

So, in keeping with its policy of wooing Senate conservatives, Strausz-Jupe was transferred to Stockholm to make room for Firestone in Brussels. Looman, waiting for months to leave for Stockholm, was odd man out. He resigned, and the Foreign Service lost a key man and suffered another blow to its morale.

Strength For Today

MILTON'S BLINDNESS John Milton, the famous poet, was blind. All of his life he had looked forward to writing a great poem wherein man's struggle with evil would be set forth. The blindness came upon him, and it seemed that the dream would never be realized. But he found a solution to his problem. Every morning he dictated to one or another of his three lovely daughters twenty or thirty lines of what was to become that great poem which he feared he would never write.

Milton later laid bare his own heart in his famous sonnet on his blindness. Like others, he would have loved the active life, and when blindness came upon him he felt that the end was at hand. But he put his condition in the hands of God and let him use it as He would. Through a blind man, then, God gave to the world one of the greatest religious poems ever written.

"Thus was the declaration of Milton vindicated that 'They also serve who only stand and wait.'"

The 'Worst' Of Times?

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—For the better part of two days, we had been talking—I had not realized how somberly we had been talking—of what is wrong in America today: high-level corruption, rampant inflation, the loss of privacy, the pollution of everyday life. A student on the front row asked the last question of a long evening.

"What makes you think America will survive, when everything is crumbling around us?"

I paused before attempting an answer. I was spending several days with students at the University of Tennessee's College of Communications. The young men and women, prospective reporters and broadcasters, had been most interested in Watergate, impeachment, and the various crises that dominate the news—crises in the economy, in the environment, in the supply of energy. They were uneasy about Big Brother government. They were not afraid of the future, but they were depressed that nothing seems to be working right. Why did I think America would survive?

The short answer is that our people have survived much worse.

Virginia abounds with historic shrines. The most moving of these is the old ruined church at Jamestown. If one goes there early in the morning before the tourists come, or late in the evening after the crowds have gone, when only the shorebirds are moving and a mist obscures the river's farther bank, one understands: This is where it all began. Here our forefathers brought their small ships, faced the perils of starvation and disease, defended their pitiful company from the Indians, and refused to give up. They survived.

One hundred and sixty-nine years later, in 1776, another generation embarked upon a fateful revolution. Divided among themselves, handicapped for want of men and money, they raised a ragtag army and waged war upon the most powerful nation in the world. If one reads letters and diaries of the time, one understands. These were desperate years. The people knew sacrifice and hardship and despair. But they survived.

The infant republic fell into political turmoil under the Articles of Confederation. Everything seemed to be crumbling. Out of the chaos

Other Editors Say Few Mourners

(Jacksonville Daily News)

Price and wage controls, center of controversy for a financially turbulent 21 months, will die quietly over the next month. There will be few mourners.

The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave President Nixon the authority to enforce ceilings on the pay of the workingman and on the charges for merchandise and services, will expire April 30. Last ditch efforts to preserve controls in some industrial areas failed in the Senate Banking Committee, reflecting public disenchantment with a program that not only failed to halt the inflation spiral, but influenced shortages by meddling with the normal relationships of supply and demand.

And the President himself, who bore the onus of presiding over the unpopular experiment in economic tinkering, had no kind words at its passing.

His administration, he told a group of agricultural magazine editors, would never again "go down the road" to controls.

Nevertheless, there are those who fear that the "super-charged atmosphere" in which the economy fluctuates will again bring Congress to a debate over regulation.

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz is particularly concerned over the potential for escalation of health care costs in a period when national health insurance proposals are under serious consideration.

But even Shultz does not expect a surge of price hikes April 30. Many industries already have been freed from the controls maintained by the Cost of Living Council.

In the almost universal condemnation of Mr. Nixon's handling of wage and price regulation, it is easy to forget that it was pressed upon the President by a Congress apprehensive of public dismay over the mounting cost of living.

And just as public demand brought controls, public response to their demise will determine the nation's future economic stability.

Each wage demand that is not balanced against productivity and each incident of price gouging motivated by greed help to perpetuate the inflation cycle.

Peacetime Experiment Is Over

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—With economic activity declining at the steepest rate in 16 years and inflation raging at its hottest since 1951, the country today ends its first peacetime experiment with wage and price controls.

No matter what explanations are given for permitting the Economic Stabilization Act to expire at midnight, the record speaks for itself: Controls failed. Inflation is worse than ever, and the economic outlook is confused.

In the first quarter of the year the nation's gross national product, or total output of its goods and services, declined 5.8 per cent. At the same time, price rose at an annual rate of 10.8 per cent over-all, 14 per cent for consumer items.

Strongly suggesting that the inflation problem not only is with us but even growing worse is sharp rise in interest rates the past few months through the money market.

It appears now that interest rates bear almost the entire responsibility for restraining inflation. The prime lending rate for top corporate customers is close to 11 per cent and headed higher, perhaps to 12.

And with this rise in interest rates are coming some serious disruptions to an orderly economy. Money is flowing out of a money pinch.

Some economists foresee a real money crunch coming up because, in spite of those high interest rates, many corporations continue to make expansion plans. In fact, capital spending plans are 13 per cent higher than a year ago.

It can be argued, therefore, that monetary policy also is failing to discourage spending.

And if business is willing to continue to pay such high rates, almost inevitably it will be reflected in higher prices.

But the immediate verdict on controls isn't the final answer to the question of whether the federal government can or should play an effective role by intervening directly in the marketplace. That question still is debated.

A good many economists of various leanings maintain the Nixon administration never fully believed in controls, even though it resorted to them. That move, they feel, was largely political.

If the administration had unequivocally stated its faith in the power of wage-price restraints, it is argued, they might have been more effective. Instead, its doubts were revealed time after time.

Will the surge of prices re-

Nixon's About-Face

By DICK BARNES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—In a turnabout from past declarations, President Nixon cited three reasons Monday night why he is setting aside the principle of executive privilege to make public numerous transcripts of presidential conversations.

"First, in the present circumstances the House of Representatives must be able to reach an informed judgment about the President's role in Watergate," he said.

"Second, I am making a major exception to the principle of confidentiality because I believe such action is now necessary to restore the principle itself, by clearing the air of the central question that has brought such pressures upon it...."

"Third, in the context of the current impeachment climate, I believe all the American people as well as their representatives in Congress are entitled to have not only the facts, but also the evidence that demonstrates those facts. I want there to be no question remaining about the fact that the President has nothing to hide in this matter."

Nixon's statement Monday night on the value of the taped conversations precisely contradicted what he said last July in a letter to Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., of the Senate Watergate committee.

This time Nixon referred to the accounts of the conversations as "the evidence which will allow this matter to be brought to a prompt conclusion."

But in the letter to Ervin rejecting a tapes request, Nixon had said much earlier in the Watergate affair:

"If the release of the tapes would settle the central questions at issue in the Watergate inquiries, then their disclosure might serve a substantial public interest that would have to be weighed very heavily against the negatives of disclosure." (Continued on page 5)

Ground Broken For New Church

NEW CHURCH—The architects' rendering of the new Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, to be constructed on the corner of Asbury and Martinsborough Rd. Ground breaking ceremonies were held Apr. 26.

Ground breaking ceremonies were held Apr. 26 on the site of the new location of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Construction on the new $115,000 facility will begin in early May. According to Jim Swearingen, secretary for the Greenville branch, the facility should be completed in the fall of this year.

Wardell Construction Co. of New York will construct the new facility, which is being funded by the Greenville branch and the main office of the Church in Salt Lake City, Utah.

The group is presently holding regular meetings on the campus of East Carolina University, with a membership of approximately 100 persons, according to Swearingen.

Attending the ground breaking ceremonies was the first president of the Greenville branch, which is 27-year-old Dr. Nephi Moroni Jergenson, Lionel Kendrick, stake president, John L. Howard, Greenville city councilman, and Gary McOmver, president of the Greenville branch.

Construction of the new facility will be in four phases, with the present construction to provide a chapel, branch president's office, baptismal font, and combined kitchen and library and nine classrooms.

Second phase construction will provide a larger chapel and revision of the first chapel into a junior Sunday school.

The third phase will see a combined gymnasium and cultural hall built, while phase four will add a second branch president's office, a new baptismal font, and a larger library will be available and additional classrooms and stake center.

Present officers of the Greenville branch include Gary McOmver president, Jim came the Constitution of 1787, the greatest work of political art ever carved by the hand of man, but the Constitution barely won ratification. The switch of a handful of votes in Virginia and New York would have ended the more perfect union before it ever began. The concept trembled, but it survived.

I suggested to the Tennessee students, concerned about contemporary perils to a free press, that they remember the Sedition Act of 1798. A terrible-tempered justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, a man bloated on power, upheld that incredible law. Editors went to prison, newspapers were closed. Freedom of the press seemed doomed. But a free press survived.

The American nation went through the War of 1812, saw its capital in flames, and emerged from that perilous hour to plunge a few years later into the sundering conflict of nullification. The odious practice of human slavery became intolerable. The Union tore itself apart in four years of bloody civil war. Men said the nation would never survive. It survived.

The passions of war could not be calmed. Andrew Johnson was impeached, tried by the Senate, barely acquitted. The South groaned under Reconstruction. The nation reeled under the scandals of successive administrations. In 1976, the office of the presidency itself was bartered off in a political deal. Men and women fought to settle the West. In the great cities, immigrant children labored in the dark and fetid lofts in a new industrialism. It was a wonder they ever survived. But they survived.

We fought our way through a bloody world war, a presidential scandal, a market crash, a fearful depression. Dust storms flew half of Oklahoma away. A fourth of our wage earners were out of work. We saw bread lines and soup lines and old men selling apples on the street. Those who lived through that time still shake their heads and wonder: They wonder how they survived.

Very well, I said to the students, Watergate is bad; inflation is bad, and the environment is polluted. If Mr. Nixon is impeached, the Republic will shudder. We will know political convulsion. But look back! Look back! These are not the best of times, but these are not the worst of times either. It is absurd to suppose that having come through so much, America will crumble now. Survive? Of course we will survive.

closure. That fact is that the tapes would not finally settle the central issue."

Nixon said: "Unless a president can protect the privacy of the advice he gets, he cannot get the advice that he needs."

He had elaborated on that theme at length in past public appearances starting almost from the time last July when the existence of a White House tape recording system first was disclosed at the Senate "Watergate hearings."

MOTHER OF THE DECADE

NEW YORK (AP)—Golda Meir, Israel's caretaker prime minister, has been named the Mother of the Decade by the American Mothers Committee.

But this time, said Nixon, the three factors "combined to persuade me that a major, unprecedented exception to that principle is now necessary."

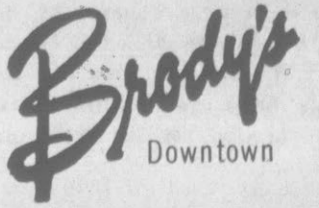

Nixon yielded on tapes before.

After losing a federal court appeal on a case involving tapes sought by the Watergate special prosecutor, Nixon stood short of going to the Supreme Court, choosing instead to hand over the tapes.

An appeal to the highest court, he explained later, would have brought confrontation "between the Supreme Court and the President. And second, it would have established very possibly a precedent, a precedent breaking down constitutionalism that would plague future presidencies, not just (the) President."

Big Board volume was running about even with Monday's very slow pace. Analysts said the low level of activity indicated many investors' continued wariness over high interest rates and inflation.

"It just looks as though everybody's waiting," said William Nelson at Moody's Investors Service. Consolidated Edison of New York was the Big Board volume leader, down 3/4 at 10 1/2. The issue has fallen from a price of 18 since the company suspended its dividend last week.

Natomatic gained a point to 49 1/2 after management said it would recommend a 10 per cent stock dividend to the board of directors.

Sprague Electric was up a point at 17 1/2. The company reported sharply higher operating earnings for the first quarter.

A quarterly earnings gain also lifted Overseas Shipholding group 7/8 to 15 1/4.

Bausch & Lomb was down 1/4 at 25 1/4 on top of a 1-point loss Monday, when the Food and Drug Administration allowed another company to enter the soft contact lens business in this country.

Oil service issues were mostly higher. Halliburton was up 2 1/2 to 145 3/4, Schlumberger 2 1/2 to 103 3/4, and Baker Oil Tools 2 1/2 to 30 3/4.

Metals, airlines, and most drug issues also advanced. On the American Stock Exchange, the most-active issue was mammoth Mart, down 1/4 at 1 1/4. The Amex's 11 a.m. market value index was ahead .14 at 89.99.

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks stood at 47.88, up .10.

Rival Challenges Jones Air Views

Gene Leggett, Democratic candidate for Congress from the First District—facing incumbent Walter Jones in the May 7 primary—challenged Jones to a televised "open forum debate" today.

GENE LEGGETT

At a news conference this morning, Leggett said, "It's time Walter Jones came out and told the public what his viewpoints are. I think he should come out and state his opinion on the issues."

"He's sat up there for four terms, done nothing constructive for the people, at least I don't see anything constructive he has done. I question his willingness to hold office," Leggett continued.

"I'm paying for my own campaign. I bought a used printing press" to print campaign literature on and "distribute it myself. I have no interest groups behind me," the candidate said.

Leggett then questioned, "Who's financing him (Jones)." Commenting on the Watergate affair, Leggett said "this office of the president is being hounded enough." He said there seems to be a "conspiracy to tear down this office."

"They ought to leave the man alone. Everybody makes mistakes. If you look in their closets—of all the Senators and Congressmen—you could shake skeletons out, Democrats and Republican alike."

"It's demoralizing our country, from the top down," Leggett suggested.

Request Art Two Charged With Bldg. Funds Murder Conspiracy

A motion to request that an appropriation of $3,000 be included in the city budget for a study of the Greenville Art Center building was approved Monday night at a call meeting of the board of directors of the East Carolina Art Society. A letter of request will be sent to the mayor and to members of the city council.

In requesting city assistance, the board concurred that there was a pressing need to have an engineering and structural analysis made of the current structure before future plans are projected.

It was brought out there are two directions to take—an extensive renovation-enlargement of the present center, or the building of a new building.

The request for the $3,000 in assistance funds is supplemental to the operating assistance allotment that is normally provided in the budget for the Greenville Art Center. This amount would be used also to cover the expense of an architect's preliminary schematics to show possible plans for renovating and expanding the center.

Another motion passed at Monday's meeting authorizes the director to take steps to have the permanent collection stored during the summer months the center is closed. Storage would be in public buildings that would provide protection for the collection.

The public is invited to attend and to be prepared to ask questions relative to public issues.

Two of the defendants in the Linwood Noah Branch murder case have been charged with conspiracy to murder, according to Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Sheriff Tyson said that Mrs. Connie Hardee Branch, wife of the victim, and Roy Lee Sullivan, the first person arrested in the March 29 assault, are charged with conspiring with two other defendants in the case to murder Branch.

The sheriff said that bond on the conspiracy charges was set at $50,000 for Mrs. Branch and Sullivan. Both were charged earlier with being accessories before the fact of murder and jailed here without privilege of bond.

Howard P. Wiseman of the 1200 block of Ocean View Avenue, Norfolk, and Matthew Jack Wheaton of the 2900 block of Buskey Road, Chesapeake, Va., have been charged with murder in the Branch case and are fighting extradition to North Carolina.

Wiseman is being held in Norfolk while Wheaton is in custody in Virginia Beach, Va.

Leaf Export Hopes High

RALEIGH (AP)—Prospects are favorable for increased exports of American flue-cured tobacco, two officials of Tobacco Associates said after returning recently from a month-long trip to six East European countries and Egypt.

"I am confident after most-favored nation legislation in the U.S. Congress is resolved that our sale of U.S. flue-cured leaf and manufactured products will increase markedly," said Kirk Wayne, assistant to the president of Tobacco Associates which works to promote use of flue-cured tobacco.

Wayne, along with Shelton Griffin, assistant field director of Tobacco Associates, visited East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria and Poland as well as Egypt.

"One of the highlights of our European mission was our visit to Leipzig and the world's oldest trade fair in which Tobacco Associates has participated for spring and fall sales during the past 10 years," Wayne said.

"We are encouraged by the continued interest of trade representatives from the East European countries at our Leipzig talks."

The Citadel Upsets East Carolina, 5-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina University's Pirates closed out their 1974

Southern Conference baseball schedule yesterday the same way they opened it, with a loss.
The defeat, 5-3, at the hands of

The Citadel, marked the second defeat for the Bucs against Southern Conference competition. The only other loss was a 1-0 setback by Furman University in the first game of the year.

In between, the Bucs put together 12 straight victories, easily carrying them to the championship and a berth in the Region III playoffs starting May 23 in Starkville, Miss.

East Carolina got the hitting against the Bulldogs, but it was the tough defense of their opponents that really did the Bucs in. The Citadel pulled off four double plays, and came up with a couple of other fine defensive plays to keep the Bucs at bay, even after East Carolina had rallied to tie it at 3-3.

The Citadel scored first, pushing over two runs in the first inning. Jim Haight walked to open the contest and Ken Feaster singled through the middle. Both moved up on a sacrifice, but Richard Wieters' grounder back to third got Haight going home. Wieters took second when no throw was made against him to prevent a double steal. Chuck Cordell then singled to center, driving in both Feaster and Wieters.

East Carolina came back to threaten in the bottom of the frame. Russ Smith doubled, and Ron Staggs walked, but the first of the twin killings erased the threat.

East Carolina came up with a double play in the top of the second after a walk and a single had put men on base.

Then, in the bottom of the frame, the Bucs got a run. Carl Summerell was hit by a pitch and Johnny Narron walked. Bobby Harrison beat out an infield hit, loading the bases. Ron Leggett grounded into the second double play, but Summerell scored on the play.

The Citadel got another run in the third, an unearned one.
Feaster led off with a single and Dickie Jones reached on an error. Wieters reached when his bunt was played to third to get Feaster. Cordell reached on another fielder's choice, getting Wieters at second, with Jones moving to third. The two runners then pulled off a successful double steal, with Jones scoring to make it 3-1.

East Carolina finally tied it up with a pair in the fourth. Summerell and Narron both singled and were sacrificed up. Leggett slapped a single into left, scoring both to make it 3-3. Leggett took second on the relay, then was wild pitched to third, but the rally died there.

The Bucs threatened in the sixth when Summerell again singled and Harrison walked, but nothing came of it. The Citadel put a man on second on a single and a fielder's choice in the seventh, then got on to third in the eighth on a walk, a sacrifice and an infield out.

But in the ninth, they struck, getting two runs. Larry Leonard led off with a single to right and he was sacrificed up. Haight singled him to third. Feaster laid down a suicide bunt, and Leonard slid under the tag for the go-ahead run.

With runners at first and second and two down, Wieters was intentionally walked, and a single off reliever Bob Feeney's glove brought in Haight with the insurance run.

Two errors put runners on for the Pirates, but they couldn't get the hit when they needed it.
The Bucs play host to Wilmington on Friday at 3 p.m. at Harrington.

Bucs Announce
First Signee

The late starting recruiting fortunes of first year East Carolina head basketball coach Dave Patton paid off Tuesday with the signing of Earl Garner, a junior college all-America player who Patton considers a "crucial player" for 1974-75.

Garner, a 6-foot-6 forward from Baltimore, Md., won National Junior College Athletic Association honors while playing for Catonsville Community College. He is only the second player in Catonsville history to receive such honors.

During his two year junior college career, Garner averaged 19.4 points per game (583 points in 30 games), 12.4 rebounds and 3.5 assists. Garner finished the season hitting on 55 per cent of his field goal attempts. In both rebounds and assists, Garner ranked second for the Catonsville Cardinals.

As a freshman starter, Garner averaged 15.3 points per game, 11.9 rebounds and 2.9 assists and helped Catonsville to its first Maryland Junior College Conference title, both regular season and tournament. The Cardinals were 25-5 in 1972-73.

Garner finished second in career scoring at Catonsville, scoring 1,025 points in 59 games for a 17.8 average. During his career since leaving Northwestern High School in Baltimore, Garner has been named All-Maryland Junior College, first team twice, All-Region (Juco) twice, and to two Catonsville CC all-tournament teams.

At East Carolina, Garner will join a group of experienced forwards led by Robert Geter, the team's second leading rebounder in 1973-74, and co-captain Tom Marsh. Gregg Ashorn, a transfer last year who gained playing experience this year, Chuck Mohn and Al
Edwards also return at forward.

The Pirates lost one forward to graduation—starter Roger Atkinson. In 1974-75, Patton has 10 of 12 varsity players and three of five starters returning.

Patton expects to sign five prospects in all this spring. More signing announcements are expected towards the end of the week and early next week.

BEAR GRASS—Mattamus-keet High School rolled to an 18-10 victory over Bear Grass in a Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference game yesterday.

Mattamuskeet grabbed the lead with five runs in the first inning. Simmons was hit by a pitch and both Cahoon and Jones walked, loading them up. Cuttrel and Harris both walked, forcing in two runs. Balance then cracked out a triple, driving in three more runs.

The Lakers added two more in the second before the Bears came up with two in the second.

Then, in the third, Bear Grass came up with seven runs, taking a 9-7 lead. Richard Harrison walked and Danny Peaks singled. Keith Williams walked, loading them up. A walk to Dickie Williams scored Harrison. Alan Crawford then doubled, driving in Peaks and Keith Williams. Alton Craft doubled to score Dickie Williams, and an error on the play let Crawford score. Jerry Wynne singled in Craft, and a hit by Roy Wynne brought in Jerry Wynne.

But the Bears couldn't hold onto the lead. Mattamuskeet broke their backs with 11 big runs in the sixth inning. The Bears managed to get one more in the bottom of the sixth, but couldn't get another big frame going.

The two teams meet again
today, at Mattamuskeet.

Cowboys Will Go Into Court To Stop WFL—If WFL Will Let Them

May Give Replay Of Home Run As Houston Skins Chicago, 18-2

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League go into state court today to get a temporary restraining order against the new World Football League made into a permanent injunction.

But there is this hitch: The WFL went into federal court in Houston Monday and obtained its own temporary restraining order prohibiting the Cowboys from enforcing their state court order.

The state court prohibits the WFL from contacting or negotiating with any Cowboy players.

"We are scheduled before the judge at 10 a.m. and we will be there," said Cowboy spokesman Curt Mosher. He added that any comments on the WFL's federal court suit would "be premature at this time."

The Cowboy management has subpoenaed 31 of its players to appear at today's hearing but Mosher said he didn't know if all the subpoenas had been served.

Houston federal Judge Woodrow Seals set a hearing on the WFL lawsuit for May 9.

In their suit, the Cowboys asked their players to produce "all documents or writings of any kind pertaining to any offers, negotiations or contracts you may have had with the WFL or any of its members, teams or representatives."

The Cowboys also seek in their suit to nullify the contracts quarterback Craig Morton and running back Calvin Hill have signed with the WFL. Split end Mike Montgomery also has signed with the WFL but the Cowboy suit did not mention him.

The WFL suit seeks to stop the Cowboys and the NFL from interfering in contractual and business relations between WFL officials and Cowboy players who may be interested in signing with the new football league.

The Cowboys obtained the temporary order 10 days ago from District Court Judge Ted M. Akin. It restrained Morton and Hill from engaging in promotional activities for the new league.

Morton has signed to play with the Houston Texans beginning in 1975, and Hill signed with the Honolulu Hawaiians. Montgomery is reported to have signed the Birmingham Americans.

The WFL suit claimed the temporary order is unconstitutional in that it violates the player's freedom of speech.

One of the objections of fans attending sporting events in this media-diluted age is that there are no replays.

Lee May took care of that gripe Monday night when the Houston Astros mugged the Chicago Cubs 18-2.

For those fans who missed May's two-run homer in the sixth inning, the Houston slugger belted ... another two-run homer in the sixth inning.

"All I do is go up there swinging," said the Astros' slugging first baseman, who went 5-for-5 in Houston's 20-hit attack. "I do the same thing every game. Both homers came off breaking pitches."

Elsewhere, the Cleveland Indians edged the Minnesota Twins 3-2 in baseball's only afternoon contest; the California Angels dropped the Boston Red Sox 7-2 and the Los Angeles Dodgers squeezed past the New York Mets 8-7.

In all, the Astros scored five runs in the first, added single runs in the second and fourth, two more in the seventh, plus the nine-run sixth.

May slugged his first homer off Burt Hooton, the fifth of six Chicago pitchers, and followed eight batters later with a 400-foot blast off Jim Kremmel, his fourth of the baseball season.

Dave Roberts, who tossed a seven-hitter, was the beneficiary of May's power production, pitched in offensively with two RBIs.

Indians 3, Twins 2

The Indians cashed in their first dividend from last Friday's seven-player deal with the New York Yankees as Steve Kline hurled an eight-hitter in his first start for Cleveland.

Ninth-inning RBI singles by Oscar Gamble and Dave Duncan made Kline a winner. Bill Campbell, who had not yielded an earned run in any of his 10 previous appearances, took the loss.

Angels 7, Red Sox 2

Tom McCraw knocked in four runs with a pair of doubles to help the Angels snap a five-game losing streak.

McCraw belted his first homer of the season in the second, doubled to set up a run in the fourth, doubled to drive in a run in the sixth and slammed a

The Worry Clinic Many Do Feel 'Phantom' Pain

Dora's husband is a problem to her because of his obsession with a midnight "phantom." Study this case with care for it involves intricate psychology of the human brain and its miraculous functioning.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE A-619; Doris D., aged 25, has a phantom limb.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "Don is a Vietnam veteran.

"He lost his left leg over there, due to a land mine explosion.

"But he gets along very well on his artificial limb.

"However, he often awakens in the night, complaining of intense pain in the amputated foot!

"Yet that foot was buried way over in Vietnam!

"So how can he possibly feel pain in it, at this late date and over 10,000 miles away from it?"

Phantom Pain
This case is duplicated thousands of times.

It illustrates what we call "phantom pain."

But the pain is just as real as if the foot were still attached to Don's leg.

For the pain you feel is never in the arm or leg, hand or foot but always in your brain!

There is a spot in your brain for every incoming sensation, whether of pain or temperature, taste, touch, sound, smell or sight.

That's also why a blind veteran of the war, can also dream in color and still see his sweetheart in the same pretty frock she may have worn when he kissed her goodbye as he headed overseas.

For the brain operates much like a camera. The lens thereof doesn't take the picture.

No; it merely transmits it to the film (which is like the retina of your eye) but the real picture is in the nerve cells of your brain!

The reason Don awakens with a sensation of severe pain in his amputated foot, is due to chance nerve currents that wander through the brain.

When they happen to transverse the identical circuit of nerve cells that served as the original filing center for his left foot, those nerve cells are then reactivated.

So they produce the same intense pain in the left foot which Don originally felt when injured by the exploding land mine.

You camera fans know that when you develop exposed film, you get what we call a "negative."

Thereafter, you can reproduce an unlimited number of pictures from that negative.

And that is similar to the way the brain (via your memory) can let you relive scenes way back in your childhood.

Thus, old men and women, well past 90 years of age, can vividly recall or even "see" exciting episodes from their earliest years.

In old age, unfortunately, our thinking often gets woozy from hardening of the arteries or anemia and low blood pressure, so various nerve centers are "asleep."

That is also similar to what happens even to a young person, who may thus dream of people who have long been dead, but they are alive and participating with present living friends, yet the dreamer finds nothing inconsistent with this fraternizing of dead with the living.

For the "clock" cells of his brain are dormant, thus robbing him of his orientation in time and place.

Old people also may get disoriented even while awake and think they are in their former childhood farm environment, though they are now in a city apartment or a Nursing Home.

So send for my booklet on "Abnormal Psychology" (including interpretation of dreams), enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

Producers are being urged to shoot for average yields of 35 bushels of soybeans per acre in 1974.

That would be 10 bushels per acre above last year's statewide average but it is a realistic goal because county wide average of 32 or more bushels have been achieved in recent years in several acres of the state.

George Prayer of R-2, Ayden produced 70 bushels per acre to take top honors in the state's official soybean production contest in 1973. Another Pitt County farmer, Howard Moye of Farmville, was first runner-up with a yield of 67.9 bushels.

According to the N.C. Crop Reporting Service, Tar Heel farmers have indicated they intend to plant 1,550,000 acres of soybeans in 1974, the same as in 1973. If nitrogen supplies are short, farmers may switch additional acres intended for corn to soybeans.

The soils on many farms are too acid and need lime for good soybean yields. If lime is required, it should be applied and incorporated into the soil as soon as possible.

If nematode problems are suspected, the growers should take a soil sample for a nematode assay.

Here are some additional suggestions for high soybean yields:

—Arrange early for seed supply and treat seed with an approved fungicide.

—Prepare a good seed bed.

—Use several varieties with different maturity dates to reduce weather risk and allow more of total soybeans acreage to be harvested as soon as possible after maturity.

—Consider May 15 as the target planting date. When double cropping behind small grain, plant as soon as possible.

—For early planting in rows 36 to 40 inches wide, seed for a final stand of six to eight plants per foot of row, after allowance for germination.

—Plan a good weed control program using both a preplant or preemergence and a post-emergence herbicide.

—Check field regularly in August and September for an insect buildup. Apply insecticide when an average of 10 corn earworm larvae or stink bugs or both, are present per 10 feet of row.

Alda Writes To Beat Loneliness

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Alda has a system for fighting homesickness when he's in Los Angeles filming "M-A-S-H." He writes. But because of this system he'll have to work doubly hard this summer and next fall.

He now has a second CBS series to worry about. It's "We'll Get By," a half-hour comedy show coming up in September. Alda created it, has written six scripts for it and will be its co-producer.

Alda, who lives in suburban New Jersey with his wife and three kids when "M-A-S-H" isn't shooting, was at home with them, toiling at the typewriter, when asked how he found time to write the new show.

"Well, I'm out there (Hollywood) by myself," he said. "And because my family's back here in New Jersey, I keep myself busy with work I don't get lonely. So I'd write at night and on weekends."

The new show isn't the first TV writing he's done. The Manhattan-born actor said he'd written two "M-A-S-H" scripts that were filmed and a pilot for another proposed series ABC turned down last year. The proposed series was about New York politics, Alda said.

Was it also a comedy? "It would have to be, wouldn't it?" he asked.

"We'll Get By" has an unlikely premise for a comedy series. It's about a sales engineer, his wife and three children. Like Alda, they live in suburban New Jersey.

"There isn't anything about it that sounds like a funny idea, but I think that's one of its strong points," Alda said. "It's not a gimmick show."

"It's an attempt to show, with a sense of humor, people really living in a family. Which hasn't been done yet. There are no funny 'situations,' no cute kids with cute problems."

Alda, who is co-producing the show with Marc Merson, will supervise the script-writing. He'll head back to Los Angeles in mid-May to start production both on "M-A-S-H" and the new series.

Check, Work Given School

WINTERVILLE—The Winterville Ruritan Club has donated a total of $150 to A. G. Cox Grammar School to be used toward beautification of the school site.

In addition to their contribution, Ruritan members also helped with actual work on the project. Paul Hunsucker, club treasurer, prepared and planted the lawn while J.H. Mobley, secretary, and Mrs. Louise Sadler, selected and planted the 92 various bushes and shrubs.

Assisting in the project were several vocational students and school personnel.

It is not difficult to spot the winning line on today's hand. The art is to realize that you might need a safety play.

North-South reached a four spade contract in routine fashion. North rebid one no-trump at his second turn, since he held only three low spades. South chose to jump rebid his six-card major rather than introduce his weak minor suit, and North went on to game on the strength of his three trumps and ruffing value.

The play did not take long. West led a diamond, and declarer could see only one loser outside of trumps. He laid down the ace of spades, and when West showed out, declarer had to lose three spade tricks. Down one.

The 4-0 trump split was unfortunate, but not insurmountable. After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer should have led a low spade from his hand. Had both defenders followed, declarer could have played the ace later, making either four or five, depending on the division. However, when West shows out and East is forced to capture the nine with the jack, declarer can limit his trump losers to two by using the ace-king of hearts as entries to finesse trumps twice.

Under certain circumstances, declarer could make the hand even if West held all the missing trumps. The key to the hand is that there is no way it could cost declarer to lead a low spade at his first turn, while the potential reward for this play would have been substantial.

The battleship Texas was the first vessel to have an airplane launched from its decks.

America Listens, Speculates On Nixon Decisions

By JIM WILLSE
Associated Press Writer

In the Oval Office of the White House, Richard M. Nixon gazed into the eye of the television camera and promised America that the pile of loose-leaf folders to his left would, finally, "tell it all."

In Hallandale, Fla., Harold Harris gazed back at the President of the United States. "He's lying," Harris said, puffing on a cigar. "The accused shouldn't be the one to decide what is relevant."

A continent away, in Santa Monica, Calif., Sydney Albright munched a tossed salad as he watched Nixon on a small black and white TV. "I knew in time the other side of the story would be told. I hope the President's actions tomorrow will indeed be the other side of the story."

Once again, President Nixon turned to the national broadcast media to present a defense of his role in the Watergate scandal. And once again, America listened.

Seated at his desk, the camera panning periodically to the stacks of black notebooks containing transcripts of taped

White House conversations, Nixon placed his case in the hands of the public.

"In giving you these—blatantly and all—I am placing my trust in the basic fairness of the American people," he said. "... I was trying to discover what was right and to do what was right. I hope and trust that when you have seen the evidence in its entirety, you will see the truth of that statement."

But for Bill Sweeney, an executive with an electronics firm, the President's plea was not enough.

"I'm so sick of all his difficult days and all of his trusted friends and all of his transcripts," the 36-year-old father of six said in the family room of his home in Arlington Heights, Ill.

Nor was it enough for Don Peterson of Pleasant Hill, Iowa. "He's just trying to get more sympathy," Peterson said as he watched the speech with a neighbor, Bill Sinnott.

Nor for Walter Juskiewicz, a salesman from Cape Elizabeth, Maine. "I don't think he ever had it in his mind to turn over the tapes," Juskiewicz said. "He's trying to run the investigation himself."

And from Bruce Pemberton of Alexander, Ark.: "Richard, you just took too long."

Nixon spoke 13 hours before the deadline set by the House Judiciary Committee for delivery of White House tapes the panel says it needs for its impeachment inquiry. The President said he would provide the committee—and the public—with transcripts instead, with portions he deemed not relevant to Watergate edited out.

"I think in the long run it will clear a lot of air," said Albright, a 42-year-old apartment manager and self-described Nixon supporter. "But in the short run it's going to create a storm brewed primarily by his detractors."

Bill Sweeney remained generally silent during the speech, but when Nixon again asked that Watergate be left behind, he interjected: "Oh please, don't give me that again."

Later, he took out an envelope on which he had scribbled a passage from a book one of his children was reading. It was the eulogy Nixon had delivered for the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"His life is a reminder to us that there is a moral force in the world more powerful than the might of armies or the wealth of nations," Sweeney read. Then he added: "Why couldn't this man have shown that moral force he talked about?"

Juskiewicz, a 35-year-old salesman, said Nixon should have complied fully with the subpoena. "I think he's trying to be an honest guy, but he's going about it in the wrong way."

The Nixon speech did nothing to shake the opinions of Harold Harris, an 83-year-old retired diamond merchant. "You know the old saying, 'If at first you do deceive, what an awful web you weave.'"

"But I tell you, he's smart and clever," added Harris, who watched the speech in his apartment 15 miles north of Miami. "I'd hate to see him impeached. I'd rather have a smart crook in the White House than a dumb one."

Pemberton, 29, general manager of a consulting firm, said at one point "He's either naive, or he thinks everyone else is. He let it drag on too long.

But I think he's taking a good step."

While he spoke, his wife Linda, also 29 and registered an independent as her husband looked again at their large color television set in their suburban Little Rock home. "The past couple of years have really aged him," she said. "It seems so noticeable."

Five outstanding students in the East Carolina University Schools of Business and Technology took awards in competitions at the 20th annual State Leadership Conference of Phi Beta Lambda honor society in Durham last week.

Open House Set At ARC

Open House will be held Friday from 1 to 4:30 p.m. at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center near Greenville on Highway 43 north.

The occasion is part of the Center's observance of May as Mental Health Month, WBJ ARC director Donald Hayes said. He said the general public is invited to tour the facility and see what "a typical day at WBJ ARC" is. An architect's rendering of the new half-million-dollar activities building for the Center will be on display in the main lobby of the administration building, he said.

WBJ ARC is the voluntary admissions alcoholic rehabilitation center serving the 32 Eastern North Carolina counties in the Eastern Mental Health Region.

If Planters can offer 7.25% savings certificates with a 7.52% annual yield, how come everyone else isn't doing it?

$1,000 Minimum Deposit. Four Year Maturity.

They might if they could. But very few banks have the unique computer system that Planters has.

Our new system compounds the interest on our 7.25% certificates on a daily basis. So if your interest and principal are held to maturity for four years, you get the extra advantage of a 7.52% effective annual yield.

If you don't want your interest compounded and retained with your certificate, you can be paid quarterly by check or we can transfer your interest to another PNB checking or savings account.

Either way, with PNB's 7.25% certificates you can watch your money earn more without lifting a finger to help it. Invest it and forget it.

Come talk to a Planters banker or send in the coupon below. But do it soon, because our new savings certificates are available for a limited time only.

You wouldn't expect an offer this good to go on forever!
