

Transcripts Being Scrutinized Majority Of House Panel 'Dissatisfied'

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is looking to the American people for vindication in Watergate, while House impeachment investigators meet tonight to decide their next move in the quest for White House evidence.

A majority of the House Judiciary Committee evidently was dissatisfied with the edited White House transcripts the President delivered Tuesday in lieu of tapes of 42 presidential conversations the committee had subpoenaed.

The panel's Democratic majority planned to stop short of a demand for enforcement of the subpoena in favor of seeking bipartisan support for a statement declaring Nixon had failed to comply with it.

It was clear from the time Nixon disclosed his transcript plan Monday night that the support he sought was beyond the Capitol; that his goal was to persuade the American public that he had no advance knowledge of the Watergate break-in or the cover-up and that he was providing investigators with the full story of his role.

But, even as the transcripts were delivered to the committee, the President's lawyers were making plans to go to court Thursday to seek to quash a subpoena issued at the request of special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

Jaworski is seeking tapes and documents relating to 64 presidential conversations he says are needed as evidence for prosecution and defense in the forthcoming Watergate coverup trial.

In addition, the Judiciary Committee has requested, by letter, still other tapes covering the Watergate cover-up, the ITT antitrust settlement and Nixon campaign contributions from the dairy industry.

For all the 1,308 blue-bound pages of presidential transcripts, uncertainties remained about what the President knew, and when,

and what he intended to be done. It was, as Nixon's lawyers and the President himself had said, a document marked by ambiguities.

The words that were spoken created a picture of a President feeling increasingly embattled and frustrated by a scandal, the disclosure of which he considered inevitable but which he hoped to control.

And they showed Nixon considering many alternatives, including the payment of hush money to the original Watergate conspirators.

The transcripts covered conversations between Sept. 15, 1972, and April 27, 1973.

But the critical meetings were these:

—Sept. 15, 1972, the day indictments were returned in the Watergate break-in case. Nixon met with White House counsel John W. Dean III, later to become the President's chief accuser before the Senate Watergate committee.

—March 17, 1973, the day the President learned that members of the White House plumbers unit, set up to trace leaks of classified information, had engineered the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

—April 4, 1973, the day the President said Dean first told him about the Watergate coverup. Numerous alternatives including meeting demands for hush money were considered by the President, Dean and White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

—April 14, 1973, the day of a rambling discussion of Watergate by the President, Haldeman and Ehrlichman during which they talked about the need to fire Dean and to convince former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell to appear before the prosecutor and a grand jury.

So far as is known only Nixon and Haldeman, among those quoted in the transcripts, knew that the conversations were being tape recorded.

The President offered to let the two senior members of the Judiciary Committee, chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., and Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., listen to the tapes to verify that the transcripts contained all relevant Watergate material.

But the President gave the committee no role in saying which matters were of primary concern to it.

However, after party caucuses Tuesday, committee members appeared determined to avoid a partisan split over what many considered a futile effort to force the President to comply with the subpoena.

Instead, the Democrats, who hold a 21-17 majority, appeared ready to propose a statement that Nixon had failed to comply with the subpoena, which might be put forth in the future as part of a bill of impeachment.

In his speech Monday night, the President had said the transcripts would "provide grist for many sensational stories in the press. Parts will seem contradictory with one another, and parts will be in conflict with some of the testimony given in the Senate Watergate committee hearings."

He also noted that parts "will embarrass me and those whom I talked with."

The transcripts proved him accurate in all those predictions.

There were frequent parenthetical notes that portions were "unin-

A Dozen Candidates Talk In Forum For Voters Here

A little more than 100 people were on hand Tuesday night at the County Courthouse to hear a dozen candidates for public office speak and to answer questions. The occasion was the League of Women Voters forum for the public to meet candidates for local state and national government offices. All candidates are running on the Democrat ticket.

Gene Leggett, retired Navy officer and candidate for the U. S. House of Representatives was the first to speak. Reiterating his statements made to the press Tuesday, Leggett challenged incumbent Walter B. Jones to a televised debate. He also spoke on the impeachment issue, saying "there's a conspiracy to tear down the office of the presidency."

In reply to the question: "Should impeachment procedures be taken out of the constitution?" Leggett replied: "I'm against impeachment procedures as they now stand. I feel impeachment rules should be updated."

Robert Brown, Grimesland resident running for one of two seats for District 6 of the N.C. State Senate, told the audience: "This is my first venture into politics. I got into this over land use, the way it's developing in this country, this area." Brown emphasized he feels an absence of coordinated policy between county, state and regional agencies on land use policy is creating a situation of confusion. "An individual has the right to develop his land," Brown said, "but he also has the obligation to be a steward for future generations."

Replying to a question on the escalator clause for utilities bills in North Carolina, Brown said "North Carolina is unique in that it is the only state that allows projections ahead of use. It seems in effect we might be paying for projected growth, planning for people not yet on the scene."

Veteran incumbent State Senator Julian Allsbrook gave a resume of his past record in fighting for university status for ECU and for the medical school.

The first question asked him was "Do you think there's a chance for passage of ratification for equal rights at the next session?"

"I voted against it," Allsbrook replied. "There's 43 instances where women have the advantage over men, and only three instances where men have advantages over women. If I could sit down and talk to you," Allsbrook told the lady asking the question, "you'd come over to my side, I'm sure."

Vernon White, incumbent state senator who termed himself a farmer-businessman, spoke of a bill he had introduced "to limit taxation on farm land. If farmers are not to be taxed off farms, they must have some relief," he said.

One question directed to white was "What do you feel about repeal of tax on food?" "I'm in favor of keeping the food tax," White said. "It is the only tax some people pay. Until I could see a good substitute for this tax, I feel we need to keep it."

White also read a prepared statement relative to his property at Grimesland that has been the focus of interest on land-use policy in the county. "I am informed by the trustee who holds the option. . . that to his knowledge his clients have not and are not . . . negotiating with a Boise Cascades or any other company for the construction of a paper mill on the optioned property."

Another incumbent, N.C. Representative Horton Rountree, reminded the audience that to get support for progress at ECU, "we've had to swap, to corral votes to carry the day many times." Rountree mused about the milk situation in North Carolina. "I wonder whether we've gone too far," he commented after relating that the Milk Commission had been established to build up local milk supplies. "We have the highest milk prices in the country," he said.

In reply to a question on the Tenants Rights Bill, which was defeated, Rountree remarked "I was as interested as anybody could be in defeating that bill. The government in its way is taking care of many housing needs. We don't need the type of tenant legislation that would require unreasonable things from landlords."

B. Alton Gardner, incumbent County Commissioner, spoke on industries for Pitt County. "We've got to have land at prices industry is willing to pay," he said. "Conditions have changed. At one time a new industry wanted only land for a building and parking space. Now they want to buy in large volume." Gardner warned about choosing the right industries. "A good industry doesn't expect hand-outs," he remarked. "One that does is not the kind we want."

Attribute Death To Stab Wound

Carolyn Faulkner Wray, the Greenville woman apparently murdered at O'Berry Center in Goldsboro Monday, died of massive bleeding in the chest cavity due to a stab wound to the internal jugular vein, an autopsy showed.

The report from the autopsy done in Chapel Hill showed that both cheekbones and both sides of the upper jaw were broken.

There was no evidence of sexual assault.

The Wayne County Sheriff Department said that two weapons have been found in the area of the assault, a picnic area on the campus of the Center for Mentally Retarded Children where Mrs. Wray was a community liaison worker. They are a pencil and a piece of brick. The autopsy suggested that some of the wounds probably were not caused by a pencil, so a third weapon is being sought.

No one has been charged in the death, Sheriff Adams said.

Mrs. Wray, who was a graduate student in clinical psychology at East Carolina and the wife of Robert Spencer Wray since April 12, apparently was sunning in the picnic area during her lunch hour when she was attacked. Her body was found there about four hours later, covered with a blanket. She and her husband lived on Highway 264-A just outside Greenville, and she commuted to Goldsboro where she had been working about two months. Her funeral and burial are to be held here.

Report Holdups

Greenville police are investigating two armed robberies reported early this morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the first robbery was reported at 12:01 a.m. at Doug's Spur Station at 1025 Dickinson Ave., while the second was reported at 12:28 a.m. at the Pirate's Chest at 706 East Greenville Blvd.

Cannon said a lone gunman—armed with what was apparently a .22 caliber pistol—took about $40 in cash from Ralph Petway of 205 Ridgeway St., the night attendant at the gas station after asking for change and purchasing a soft drink there.

Petway was ordered to lie on the floor and the gunman fled on foot after taking the cash.

The second robbery occurred at the Pirate's Chest, Cannon said, when another lone gunman entered the store and ordered the night clerk, Eugene Gray of 500 Elizabeth St., to hand over the money, from the cash register.

About $380 was taken in that incident, according to Cannon.

Balanced Budget Prime Concern Of Bill Stevens

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Getting the U. S. Budget balanced is one of the primary concerns of William (Bill) Stevens, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate from North Carolina.

"I think inflation will be the principal, the overriding issue in the mind of electors, both in May and November," Stevens said during a brief interview.

"There's numerous causes for inflation, and numerous possible cures. One factor most immediate and positive is our national deficit spending. We must somehow bring it into balance."

The Lenoir native, who resigned from the N.C. State Legislature when he decided to run for the Senate seat, named "three major areas" where he feels the national debt can be pared "without arbitrarily cutting out essential programs."

"Military spending, or let's say military waste is one area," Stevens said. "I'm not talking about cutting the budget in a manner that would lower our guard, but I feel the military budget can stand some close scrutiny."

"Foreign aid is another field where changes can be made. I think America is now entering an era that will require cooperative action on our part as an international citizen, as a competitive trading partner which will alter our approach to foreign aid."

The third area is one Stevens discussed at some length: "Welfare abuse is a costly factor," the candidate said. "There is no easy solution. Our nation is dedicated to extending assistance to people not able to work; those too old without the proper social security backup, and aid to dependent children. 'The problem of abuse,'

Kissinger Prospects 'Very Uncertain'

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's negotiations to separate Israeli and Syrian troops are likely to take longer than his successful Egyptian-Israeli shuttle diplomacy and the outlook is "very uncertain," says a senior aide.

There will be no disengagement agreement for the Golan Heights unless both Syria and Israel make concessions, the American official said. He said Israel will have to make the first compromise move because it is Israel's army that is on the other country's territory and must withdraw.

But he added that Syria will have to modify its initial proposals submitted to Kissinger in Washington on April 13.

Kissinger arrived in Alexandria Tuesday night to discuss the situation with his most enthusiastic supporter in the Arab world, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt. He gets down to the hard bargaining on Thursday, when he flies to Israel and Syria.

The secretary's hopes "were slightly raised" by his talks Monday and Tuesday in Algiers with President Houari Boumedienne and with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Geneva, the senior American source reported. But Kissinger will not begin to be able to gauge his chances of success until he reaches Israel, the aide added.

The source said an Israeli withdrawal on the Syrian front would be "riskier" for Israel than was its withdrawal from the Suez Canal. But a deadlock would be even riskier, he asserted.

Unofficial reports have said that Israel is prepared to return the 300-square-mile bulge of Syrian territory which it captured in the October war. But the Israelis have said repeatedly that they would never give back the bulk of the Golan Heights territory captured in the 1967 war because from there Syrian artillery repeatedly shelled Israeli fishermen on the Sea of Galilee and Israeli settlements in Northern Galilee.

Syria has been reported prepared to accept Israeli withdrawal from the bulge as an initial disengagement. But unofficial reports say the Syrians also are insisting that Israel pledge to give up all the Golan Heights and also return the city of Kuneitra, a mile west of the 1967 ceasefire line, as part of the initial withdrawal.

Two Divorces Catch Her In The Middle

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My brother left his wife and five children and got a divorce. My close friend subsequently divorced her husband. It soon came out that my brother and my friend had been seeing each other for a few years before their divorces. They are presently living together and plan to be married soon. I hope they will find the happiness together they lacked in their former marriages, but there is a problem:

I have always been very close to my brother's wife, and I adore the children. My brother says that his ex-wife is no longer a part of the family, and that if I want to see his children I should do so when he has them for visitation. Brother says that if his ex-wife is invited to any family gatherings, he and his wife-to-be will not come.

I don't want to have to choose whom to invite to my home for a family affair, but I am told that since my brother is closer to me than his ex-wife, he should not have to stay away. During the holidays, I invited everyone and left the decision up to those who wanted to come, but there was side-choosing and ill feelings, so I cancelled the party. My own children are being denied associating with their cousins, and remaining neutral is not easy. Please help.

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Your brother divorced his wife, you didn't, so don't let him dictate whom you shall have in your home. Ask everyone you want, and if Brother doesn't want to come, let him stay away.

DEAR ABBY: Several of us have a question to which we have been unable to find an answer.

When a married man is invited to be the guest speaker for a women's club (business or social), what about his wife?

The affair is usually held in the evening at a motel or hotel beginning with a dinner. What is the speaker's wife supposed to do? Sit home and eat alone while her husband is being fussed over by a bunch of women?

I feel that if a club can't afford two meals, they should get their speakers from the membership.

Also, what if the meeting is out of town over a weekend? Don't you think the speaker's wife should be invited too? Please set us straight on this.

A CLUB DIVIDED

DEAR CLUB: It is customary when inviting a speaker to let him know that his wife is welcome, too. If this courtesy is omitted and the speaker wants his wife to be included, he should say so. Weekends? Absolutely—if the budget permits.

DEAR ABBY: To the lady who was 30 and recently divorced and wanted to know where to go to meet men. Here's what I did at age 36 and newly divorced:

I called around to all the churches [all denominations] and got information on all the religious and social gatherings the churches sponsored for singles in my age group. Then I made a list and took turns visiting all the churches. It took a lot of courage to go to so many strange groups alone, but it paid off because at the Unitarian church I met just the man for me. We have been happily married for 15 years.

HAPPY IN HOUSTON

DEAR HAPPY: Some people go to church to pray. Others go to pray they meet someone. To each his own.

Duchess Of Windsor Visits New York City After Three Years

By PAUL STEINER

NEW YORK WNS—The Duchess of Windsor is back in New York for the first time since her husband's death in 1972.

During her New York stay she occupies the same suite in the Waldorf Towers, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, that was home while she and the ex-King were in voluntary exile.

Here is a quick roundup of anecdotes, little-known facts and historical data about her life, married and single.

—She did not attend the much-publicized wedding of Princess Anne last November.

—Her famous two black pug dogs came to New York with her.

—Although the "Windsor Suite" at the Waldorf does not stay unoccupied during her lengthy absences, the hotel keeps her own furniture in storage for her.

Home Economics Division Meets In Windsor

WINDSOR—"It's a new day—no one has ever used it before," said Mrs. E. J. Pruden Jr. of Bertie County. Mrs. Pruden gave the devotion at the quarterly meeting of the Home Economics Division of the Coastal Plain Development Association (CPDA) here Monday.

Mrs. Jessie Ricks, chairman of the foods and nutrition committee, introduced the speaker, George Hughes, extension horticultural specialist. Hughes is also state chairman of Gardening is for Everyone (GIFE), a program sponsored by the Extension Service. "It's those who need least to plant a garden (financially) who are doing it. We need to encourage more of the low-income to plant," Hughes stressed the nutritive value of collards and suggested the possibility of having a cornbread-n-collards contests. "You can't plant too many collards," he said. "Collards are one thing that people will give away and that means more good food on someone's table." When asked the best time to harvest food, he said when they are coolest, or early morning.

Committee reports were given following workshop sessions.

Those attending from Pitt County were Mrs. R. A. Davis, clothing committee; Mrs. C. R. Mills and Mrs. Jay Boswell, foods committee; Mrs. Rudolph Graves, publicity committee; and Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, associate home economics extension agent.

Mrs. R. D. Richards, chairman of the Home Economics Division, adjourned the meeting by reminding the members of the slogan, "Use it up, wear it out, make it do, or do without!"

—The Duchess, who will be 70 years old on June 19, and Edward were good sports when they were popular and active members of New York's now almost extinct "cafe society." Once at a charity function they good-naturedly posed for photographers wearing paper crowns.

—Six years ago Wallis acquired the then "status dog," a rare Lhasa Apso, a native of Tibet. Elizabeth Taylor, Mike Nichols, Peggy Lee also owned Lhasas at that time.

—Ever since she married Edward there had been minor problems—he like to retire early, she liked to stay up late. He enjoyed smoking cigarettes, she called it a "dirty habit."

—Wallis' first official recognition from Britain's royal family came when Elizabeth II visited Edward, always her favorite uncle, in a London hospital and Wallis was at his side. That was seven years ago.

—When the Manhattan museum, now known as the New York Cultural Center, gave the paintings of Dwight D. Eisenhower a one-man show, the Duke and Duchess were a star attraction at the opening, along with Mamie, the Nixon, and their various offsprings.

—Like most women, she always enjoyed wearing precious jewelry. At a recent Paris dinner party she wore sapphires. She takes notes with a gold pencil.

—Some 10 years ago, frequent European hosts of the Windsors revealed that, say, for a weekend of hunting Wallis and Edward would arrive with a valet, a maid, a chauffeur and two bodyguards. And there was no "kidnaping wave" on at that time.

—Of slender appearance, she has always been a light eater, enjoys hamburgers and chicken pot pie as much as gourmet foods.

—Some 11 years ago she underwent minor facial surgery in a London clinic, but once quipped she doesn't recognize many of her old friends because of "all that plastic surgery."

—She enjoys sending original gifts to close friends. One New Year's she gave each of 15 women friends a handsome diary bound in mink. Each one was picked to match the mink owned by the recipient.

—She was one of the few women who were chosen as Time magazine's "Man of the Year," at a time when few women as well as few blacks, made even an ordinary Time cover.

—In October, 1937, a smiling Wallis and Edward were greeted by a humbly bowing Adolf Hitler when they visited him at his Berchtesgaden retreat, according to the new picture history, "Sieg Heil" Norton by veteran editor Stefan Lorant. Hitler must have been aware that Edward had waited for Wallis' divorce decree to become final at an Austrian castle owned by his friend Baron Eugen Daniel de Rothschild, not only a Jew, but a world-famous Jew.

—During her last stay in New York, she paid her first visit to an import-copy fashion show at Ohrbach's and to another at Alexander's, which specializes in selling great copies of famous European designers at a fraction of original cost.

—In public, such as at a fashion show, she uses a small gold lorgnette to aid her eyesight.

—Last year a play about her romance, "Crown Matrimonial," was a modest success on Broadway. Wallis did not appear, except as an off-stage character—George Grizzard played Edward.

And although she has been away for several years, she was all along at the Waldorf "in absentia," via Charles Hamilton's monthly autograph auctions held there. The Duchess' signature on her coronet-decorated card is said to be worth no more than $7.50, but if the Duke's autograph accompanies it, it sells for somewhat higher.

—About eight years ago, when the film, "A King's Story" was released, Edward had called Wallis Simpson "the most independent woman I had ever met." And, with the Duchess' permission, as he made sure to point out, he gave this illustration:

"After I met her at a weekend hunt, I used to telephone her sometimes. One day I called and was told she was out. I left a message—"Would you please tell her the Prince of Wales called?" Well, nothing happened. She didn't call back. I called the next day and said, "Didn't you get a message that I called?" The Duchess said, "Oh, yes, but I never call men...not even to return a call...he's got to call again."

The bridal table at the reception usually seats only the bride, groom, maid of honor, bridesmaids, best man and ushers.

Miss Sue Odham of Kinston spent the weekend with her parents.

Mrs. Jo Anne Peede of Hampton, Va., has been visiting her sisters, Mrs. Ralph Ford and Mrs. W. D. Williams Jr.

Alton Huggins has returned home from Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Sarah Braxton has returned home from Pitt Hospital.

Mrs. John Riggs has been visiting her family in Canada.

Wayne Sayland of Hertford was a local visitor during the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Carson Edwards of Danville, Va., spent the weekend with the Hal Edwards family.

Mrs. Robert Tillet has been visiting relatives.

Attack Spray Cans As Hazards

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS
NEW YORK (WNS)—Despite their admitted convenience, aerosol spray products are under increasing attack for persistent hazards and extra costs to consumers.

One problem is that some of the chemicals used as propellants may be injurious. Most recently, government agencies have banned the use of vinyl chloride as a propellant because it was associated with 12 cases of liver cancer found so far among industrial workers exposed to high concentrations of it in polyvinyl and other factories using the chemical.

Even though the risk involved was considered relatively small, the agencies felt it was safer to discontinue use of this chemical.

Vinyl chloride has been used widely in many hair sprays but also in many other products including some brands of medicated vaporizers; athlete's foot sprays; some antiperspirants and deodorants; wig sprays and cleaners, and even antiseptic room sprays. On Wednesday, the Environmental Protection Administration banned certain aerosol pesticides containing vinyl chloride.

Earlier, the Food and Drug Administration banned aerosol spray cough remedies, usually labeled "decongestant sprays," containing trichloroethane, a solvent used to reduce vapor pressure of the propellant and to keep the active ingredients in solution. This solvent is an anesthetic when inhaled and disrupts normal heartbeat more readily even than chloroform.

Another frequent problem is flammability of such sprays and, in some products, the dangers of fumes. The Consumer Product Safety Commission reported the case of a woman who used a spray varnish in a small room. While the vapors were still in the air, she lit a cigarette and was nearly consumed in flames.

Nowadays, aerosol cans are labeled "flammable" and it can be argued that this woman should have known better. But Commissioner Barbara Franklin points out that while the can was labeled "flammable," the woman "had no way of knowing the vapors were also flammable."

There is no question but that the aerosol hazards are multiplied by inadequate labels. None of the products I have examined say what the propellant is; for example, whether the product contains vinyl chloride. Despite the recent recalls, many such products obviously still are in consumers' homes and some may even be on store shelves.

In respect to the problems of flammability, fumes and dangers of high heat, some products have prominent warnings in large type. Others provide only obscure statements in small print sometimes buried in the instructions.

Obviously the first and fastest action the government agencies can take is to require that labels state the kind of propellant and set standards for the prominence of warnings.

At least if other propellants or ingredients are found hazardous in the future, consumers will be able to tell if the products they have on hand contain such ingredients.

Consumers should be alert to additional dangers in aerosol can use. One is the danger that the can will explode if punctured or if dropped into a trash fire or incinerator.

Significantly, vent release devices that will reduce this danger have been available for at least four years at a cost of a couple of pennies. But most manufacturers, judging from products on the market, have chosen not to undertake this additional expense.

But even more prominent warnings may not be enough. Some products with hidden dangers such as the spray varnish possibly shouldn't be on the market at all.

Engaged Couples Should Plan Sensibly

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—The newly engaged couple plans the wedding. A sensible wedding. He has his head in the clouds. She is walking on air. How can it be sensible?

A sensible wedding is one in which the bill is paid off before the kids need braces.

Guidelines, from economists at First National City Bank, give tips on three weddings: very small, lavish and middle cost. The latter runs up bills of about $5,000; the lavish, about $19,000; the small, about $1,900. The lowest cost wedding is not listed. It is the one before a justice of the peace. With strangers as witnesses.

The cost of weddings continues to go up. But the marriage market shows no sign of fiscal anemia. Around $8 billion was the wedding bill in 1972. Of that $6 billion was in retail sales of rings, wedding dresses, trousseaus, household furnishings, wedding presents and such. The remaining $2 billion was for services connected with the wedding, reception and honeymoon.

More than eight out of 10 marryin' couples opt for a formal wedding —no matter how many it seems are being wed while barefoot in the meadow at dawn while wearing blue jeans.

Financial Facts

The financial facts of the small, lavish, and middle wedding go something like this: —Very small wedding. Cost $1,900. Wedding dress costs $185 plus $85 for veil, $30 for undergarments, $15 for shoes. The after rehearsal party (costs unknown) was held at a sister's home. Reception cost $525 and included champagne, wine, cake and accordionist. Adding to the cost was $300 in long distance phone bills. Couples worked in different cities up to the first month after the wedding.

—The middle cost wedding included $200 for a bridal gown, $200 for flowers, $110 for veil; $229 for pictures; $1,312 for reception, plus $200 for liquor and champagne and $137 for coffee and Danish. The band cost $225 and the wedding cake $150. When all the bills were in this wedding cost $5,000.

—The lavish wedding included $350 for the bride's dress, $7,000 for the reception including dinner and cocktails; favors, $205; shower for $500; engagement party for $2,000; flower bill of $240; and $395 for pictures. The bride's trousseau came to $300. The band cost $500 and the honeymoon some $3,200.

Check Your Resources

What you pay is determined by your resources. The dress cost is the most worrisome for the bride. She does not want to cut corners on her wedding gown.

The average cost of the bride's wedding dress is $125. A girl can spend a lot more or a lot less. One of the nation's bridal gown makers has gowns that range from $70 to $1,000.

If the bride has bridesmaids, three is the average number plus a maid of honor. The average price of their dresses is $60 apiece.

Most girls having a formal wedding also have a reception. If average, this costs around $700.

P.S. —The average honeymoon lasts 8.2 days and costs $597.

Bridesmaids dresses should not be so fussy that they detract from the bride's gown.

The trial of former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and ex-Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans has ended with both men being found not guilty on all charges.

A jury in New York rendered the verdict Sunday after long hours of deliberation. The case involved a charge of trying to block a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco.

The verdict brought praise from Mitchell who said following the verdict, "If there is one place I am firmly convinced you can get justice, it's from the American people. I have great faith in America and that's why I love this country."

This particular case, of course, is just one phase of the complex investigations that started with the Watergate break-in discovery. Because it involved high government officials it was, and will continue to be, a much discussed matter. Even though a verdict has been rendered in this case, there will continue to be debate about the trial and its final conclusion.

It is our belief, though, that if we, as a people, believe in the American system of justice we will accept the jury's verdict as final. The government presented its case before a jury of 12 citizens and apparently the evidence was not enough to convince the jury. Since reasonable doubt existed in the minds of the jurors, they did their duty and freed the defendants.

There are many other phases of Watergate which are still under investigation, but in this particular case the defendants have been adjudged not guilty and that should end the matter.

Prospects Of Tobacco Exports Are Hopeful

Tobacco Associates, Inc. executives feel the prospects are good for increased export sales of flue-cured tobacco.

Kirk Wayne, assistant to the president and Shelton Griffin, assistant field director, see prospects for increased exports as good, after they made a trip to Europe.

We are pleased that prospects for foreign sale of flue cured tobacco seem bright. We must continue our efforts to expand the overseas markets for tobacco.

The Ford-Style Republicanism

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The nature and strength of Vice President Ford's party leadership were solidified in San Jose, Calif., April 20 when he ignored intense pressure and embraced embattled liberal Rep. Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey of California without sustaining the slightest damage.

While stopping short of endorsing Maverick McCloskey's uphill battle for renomination in the June 4 primary, Ford left no doubt he is Pete McCloskey's pal. That infuriated the California Republican hard core who seem near an old dream: driving McCloskey from Congress. Nevertheless, the incident ended with McCloskey's prestige enhanced and Ford as strong as ever.

This reaffirms that Jerry Ford's ascendancy in the Republican party today is such that he can offend the sacrosanct hard core with impunity. More important, his embrace of McCloskey reveals a Republicanism totally at odds with President Nixon's. Whereas the McCloskeys on the extreme Republican left lead Mr. Nixon's voluminous hate list, Ford truly wants to keep them in a broad-based party.

Actually, McCloskey's mercurial attacks on fellow Republicans often are hard to take even for moderates. When Ford was proposing impeachment of Justice William Douglas, he felt McCloskey's sting. Nevertheless, in seeking good relations with all sorts of Republicans, Ford as House minority leader became McCloskey's friend.

Thus, last fall McCloskey was one of only four Republican Congressmen (the other three were conservatives) whom Ford requested to testify at Senate confirmation hearings for Vice President. McCloskey responded with a ringing endorsement.

It soon became McCloskey who needed help. Obnoxious to hard-core Republicans ever since a win over Shirley Temple sent him to Congress in 1968, McCloskey became anathema with his aborted 1972 presidential race against Mr. Nixon. He now faces his toughest congressional challenge from multi-millionaire conservative Republican Gordon Knapp. So, late last month, McCloskey took out full-page newspaper advertisements with this headline:

"Republicans Like Gerald Ford Are Proud of Pete McCloskey."

Outraged conservatives mailed the ad to Ford and confidently asked him to repudiate both it and McCloskey. What they got was quite the opposite. "The wording in the advertisement was accurate," Ford wrote in reply. "... I am proud of my personal relationship with Pete McCloskey. He is a good friend of mine."

Encouraged, McCloskey asked to introduce Ford to the Republican state convention in San Jose April 20 but was turned down flat by Republican state chairman Gordon Luce. "If that happened," Luce told a friend, "I could never show my face around the party."

Undaunted, McCloskey next invited Ford to appear that same day at "a discussion of the future of the Republican party" to be held at the Hyatt House hotel down the street from the convention. Ford accepted, and McCloskey sent out invitations in envelopes embossed with the vice presidential seal.

Not only the fanatically anti-McCloskey hard core but state chairman Luce went into orbit. What one Ford lieutenant calls a "tremendous pressure campaign" sought Ford's cancellation. Protests poured into Ford political aide Gwen Anderson and the Republican National Committee. Even Sen. James Buckley of New York, scheduled to address the convention at the same time as the Ford-McCloskey seminar, complained that the Vice President was upstaging him.

Ford did not flinch, but did insist that conservative Rep. John Rousselot of California (a John Birch Society member though a longtime McCloskey friend) appear at the seminar as originally scheduled. When congressional business called Rousselot back to Washington, Ford indicated he would not appear with McCloskey alone. Rousselot agreed to return to California.

In San Jose, Ford told an overflow crowd at the Hyatt House that the Republican "wide spectrum" has room for McCloskey and Rousselot. While he made no overt endorsement, the Palo Alto Times headlined: "Gerald Ford Boosts McCloskey Campaign." McCloskey was ecstatic. "Ford is the one guy who brings all us Republicans together," Nixon-hater

JOY IN RELIGION
A religion that does not make a profound difference in one's happiness as well as one's behavior is not of a very genuine variety.

When men and women have really "got religion," the darkness of despair gives way to the light of hope. Restlessness and anxiety are succeeded by peace. People under such circumstances get new tastes. They begin to rejoice in the simple and wholesome things of life. Those who have found Christ have found a new reason for existence, a new source of joy, a new and peaceful outlook on the whole of life, including its troubles.

A sour-faced, complaining, melancholy Christian is a contradiction in terms. St. Paul said, "Finally, brethren, rejoice in the Lord." After he had cautioned and advised them on the matter of their behavior, he ended with the greatest injunction of all, namely, that they should take joy and satisfaction in their religion.

No Fun For The Liberal

WASHINGTON—You would think these would be great times for liberals, but I've discovered many of them are in a deep depression.

Partridge was as glum as I've ever seen him the other day. "These are lousy times for all of us," he said as he munched on a watercress salad.

"How can you say that, Partridge? You should be rejoicing with Watergate and the fact that Nixon is on the ropes."

Nixon any more. Everyone's against Nixon. Who the hell wants to be in the mainstream of American politics? Who wants to march to somebody else's drum?"

"I don't understand." "The first four years it was great to be against Nixon. You could scream and shout about what the man was doing to the country, and everyone thought you were some kind of nut. People would argue with you or ignore you."

"But at least you knew that you were in the minority, and you had a warm feeling because you were sure all of them were wrong and you were right."

"I remember going to parties and people insulting me because I called Nixon a crook. I attended anti-Vietnam rallies and the FBI took my picture. I circulated petitions against Atty. Gen. Mitchell and I wrote letters to editors against Carswell being appointed to the Supreme Court."

"But at least you knew that you were in the minority, and

Other Editors Say Rolling In Wealth

(Henderson Dispatch)

Tiny Arab states of the Middle East, which are supplying more oil to the United States and other nations than any single area in the world, are rolling in wealth. Literally, they have more money than they know what to do with.

This accumulation in the hands of a few backward nations is already a problem for this country and fast becoming acute, necessitating some action here, as Rep. L. H. Fountain pointed out in his article in the Daily Dispatch Thursday.

With this flood of cash in their possession, the Arabs are turning to the United States to invest their super-abundance. They are buying into American business enterprises, and could conceivably gain control of some. This is not a healthy condition for this country and could spell trouble in the near future. It would be tragic for these sheiks to be able to dictate the course of some industries here.

Rep. Fountain suggests it might become necessary for Congress to step into the picture. Indeed no one else can effectively. His idea is that foreign investments in businesses in this country might properly be limited to not more than 25 percent. The point is that the Arabs simply do not possess the knowhow to manage the enormous wealth they are accumulating. They are relatively few in number and lack the training to direct industry.

The problem could be partially solved if the United States were independent of any outside sources for oil supplies. Eventually the country will be. Offshore drilling is being intensified; the Alaska pipe line is getting under way, and thought is being given to use of solar energy. But these things are a long way off. They are not easing the present situation. And our dollars are going into the hands of people who are not wise enough to manage the huge wealth that is accumulating. The Arabs must not be allowed to use our money to get a foothold in American industry.

"Maybe I was considered a radical left-winger, but by gum I had an identity of my own. Then Watergate took place and as time went on all the people I used to argue with started to come over to my side."

"Whatever I accused Nixon of brought cheers from the crowd. The very people who called me vile names admitted I'd been right all along. When I discovered Nixon had no defenders something within me died."

"I see what you mean," I said.

"I guess the final blow came when Sen. James Buckley asked for the President to resign. Can you imagine how it feels for a dyed-in-wool liberal to be on the same side as a Buckley?"

"It doesn't leave you any place to go." "We liberals," Partridge said, "can only thrive when we're in opposition to somebody, in a hopeless cause. We're not any good when the whole damn country is echoing everything we say."

Expect Better Times

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — The Big Three auto makers, coming off sharp first-quarter profit declines, are forecasting an improved market for the remainder of 1974. But sales apparently won't bounce back to 1973 levels.

Ford became the industry's third loser Tuesday when it reported January-March earnings fell 66 per cent to $123.6 million from a record $361 million for the first quarter of 1973.

Worldwide sales of $5.5 billion were off 11 per cent from the same period in 1973, Ford said.

However, Ford's top officers predicted the second quarter would mark an improvement in the industry's sales picture.

Without citing specific sales figures, Ford Chairman Henry Ford II and President Lee Iacocca said, "We are encouraged by indications the U.S. auto market is beginning to turn upward."

Their forecast echoed predictions made by General Motors and Chrysler executives after those firms reported steep profit drops of 85 and 98 per cent, respectively.

Ford's earnings decline was less severe than its competitors' because of its penetration of the small-car market, recently boosted by a sagging economy and consumer fears of gasoline shortages.

The most recent auto sales figures indicate the market is leveling off at sales about 26 per cent below 1973 figures, a slight improvement over the January-March period.

Ford blamed its profit decline on soaring costs and a big-car sales slump. Ford said its U.S. small car sales led the other auto makers, and accounted for half its domestic sales volume.

While Ford made $124 million in the first quarter, GM returned just $120 million, based on sales of $6.9 billion. GM per share earnings were its lowest since 1948, and Chrysler's profits of $1.6 million were its worst since 1970, when the firm showed a loss.

Ford's U.S. car sales were off 24 per cent, but Ford's share of the domestic car market increased from 24.8 to 25.6 per cent.

40 Years Ago Today

May 1, 1934

The robber that entered Paul Balafas' cafe on Dickinson Avenue last night expecting to obtain a good supply of ready cash, left keenly disappointed.

Police reported this morning that sixty cents was taken from the cash drawer and a check this morning indicated that nothing else was missing.

Entrance to the building was made through a back window after the thief tore out a screen and then battered his way through the window.

Balafas, virtually cleaned out his money drawer when he closed the cafe last night and while sixty cents is sixty cents when it comes to paying bills, he was highly elated when he opened his place this morning and saw that his loss was the small sum in the cash drawer.

"Police have investigated, but have found no clues."

Apprehensive Credit Officers

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — As consumers find themselves caught in the pincers of rising prices and shrinking buying power, credit officers are growing a bit apprehensive about the quality of their loans.

Similar conditions in the past almost always have caused the number of "slow pay" accounts to rise automatically, and almost nobody expects this year to be an exception. Evidence of deterioration already is clear.

What makes this year's situation potentially critical is the likelihood that inflation will continue unabated or at a high level for many months more, possibly accompanied by a deteriorating economy.

The worst situation seems to exist in mobile home loans, where delinquencies for the January-February period rose sharply to 4.34 per cent, and repossessions averaged 7.21 per 1,000 loans.

The American Bankers Association, which made the report, considers a loan delinquent when a payment is more than 30 days overdue. However, some merchants and lenders also report deterioration of non-delinquent accounts.

William Ford, ABA chief economist, said the delinquency ratio for all installment loans rose to a record high of 2.69 per cent, breaking the previous high of 2.53 per cent set in the final two months of 1973.

The situation in the home mortgage area is less clear.

While the Mortgage Bankers Association reported delinquencies for the final quarter of 1973 at a 20-year high, savings and loan associations found little or no increase.

The mortgage bankers said 4.7 per cent of its loans were a month or more past due in the final three months of the year, topping the previous high of 4.65 per cent in the comparable period of 1972.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations reported, however, that "The recent runaway inflation appears to have had no appreciable effect on the regularity with which the American family pays its mortgage payments."

It reported that loan delinquency for the first quarter of 1974 was only .82 per cent, or less than 1 per cent of all its loans outstanding. A year ago the rate was almost identical.

The savings associations use a much more liberal measure of what constitutes a delinquency, at least from the borrower's point of view. In its compilations a loan isn't delinquent until it is 60 days overdue.

These are the delinquency ratios compiled by the ABA for various types of installment loans.

Personal, 3.24 per cent of outstanding loans, up 6 per cent from the previous two-month period; mobile homes, 4.34 per cent, up 23 per cent; property improvement, 2.20 per cent, up 20 per cent; direct automobile loans, 1.66 per cent, no change; indirect auto loans (through auto dealer), 2.55 per cent, up 8 per cent.

Opening Of '74 Leaf Sales Can Be Confused

By JACK STILLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Proposed new federal regulations could completely change the system of marketing flue-cured tobacco—a system that has been used as long as most tobacco farmers can remember. Disputes have almost always been a hallmark of the opening of tobacco markets in recent years, but this year's openings—if the changes are approved—are likely to be the most confusing of all. The big change, one which is ringing considerable criticism, would require that a farmer designate before the season opens where he would like to sell his tobacco. If he did not do so, he would not be eligible for price support. In the past a farmer could claim price support in any market. Also, under the proposed changes no farmer would be allowed to designate a market more than 80 miles from his farm.

This, however, is still being argued and Joseph J. Todd, deputy director of the tobacco division of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Washington, said this rule may be changed. Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, said the changes would have a "disastrous effect on the solvency" of tobacco farmers. Dawson Mathis, D-Ga., a member of the House Agriculture Committee, said, "This just demonstrates again the total callousness this administration has for farmers in general and Southern farmers in particular." One of the proposals especially came under fire from Georgia Commissioner of Agriculture Tommy Irvin. Any warehouse exceeding its sales quota on any given day would have to sell less than its quota the second day and bring quota sales in line or price supports would be denied all tobacco sold at the warehouse the third day.

"This is ridiculous," Irvin said, "and I can't understand how federal agricultural officials could even consider such an idea. In essence, the farmer would be punished for the warehouseman's failure to comply and innocent growers could be placed at the mercy of an unscrupulous warehouseman."

Stevens said, "is particularly great in our large metropolitan areas where the poor have fled in great expectation and then found themselves having to go on welfare rolls. "But," the candidate cautioned, "care must be taken not to cut off the real needy in efforts to rectify the abuses. I think with tighter regulations and better enforcement, the major abuses can be corrected." Touching on the ECU medical school, Stevens said "it's no longer an issue, no longer debatable. When I was in the legislature, as I mentioned to Dr. Wooles, (Dr. Wallace Wooles, Dean of the ECU School of Medicine) the only probable reservation in my mind was the question of whether the legislature was competent to set a time table. Evidently the legislators agreed on this, as they returned the question to the Board of Governors. I feel now the ECU Medical School is an accomplished fact." Land use is an issue Stevens feels will be increasingly important in the near future. "In any land use policy, I think there should be substantial local input on any decision making concerning development. "Federal guidelines for developing all lands and resources is something I would work and vote for, but again, I stress that guidelines have to have substantial measures of local input." Stevens mentioned that "the current proposed tax cut at this time is largely campaign talk. It would also be an inflationary measure at a time we're battling inflation." Stevens added he felt the proposal for increase in personal exemption as recommended "is not fairly distributed. What it means is that a person in the lower income level would save 17 per cent of $75 while one at the upper level would save 70 per cent of $75." Stevens, a veteran of Navy service during World War II, is married to the former Allene Broyhill. The couple have six children and are active in the First Methodist Church of Lenoir. He is executive vice-president of Broyhill Industries, a furniture firm that employs over 6,000 workers. He was elected in 1972 to the N.C. House of Representatives for the 34th District consisting of Caldwell, Wilkes and Yadkin Counties. In 1973 he was appointed by Governor Holshouser to the N. C. Board of Transportation. Stevens was in Greenville Tuesday and made an appearance on the "Carolina Today" program over WNCN-TV, before making other local appearances.

McCloskey told us. Nobody at the state convention dared confront the Vice President. Although Luce had been firing rockets to Washington accusing Ford of political blundering, he entertained the Vice President in his hotel suite without uttering a word of criticism. The reason is explained by a conservative congressman with no love for McCloskey: "Nobody is about to knock Jerry Ford. He's all we've got." That spells boundless opportunity for the Vice President, in sharp contrast to Spiro T. Agnew and Richard M. Nixon, to embark on a mission of conciliation within the Republican party.

It would put you back in the minority again and you could find yourself being ostracized by the same people who took issue with you before Watergate. Only this time you would be on Nixon's side and they would be against him. It would be a great way to get back at Buckley." "I'll do it," he said excitedly. No Picture Of Former Senator And Governor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Anyone know what James Turner looked like? Because he served as legislator, governor, and United States Senator, we know a lot about him. But not what he looked like.

A reader's first temptation will be to check Beth Crabtree's booklet, "North Carolina Governors," published by the State Division of Archives and history.

And, sure enough, there will be found a portrait of a handsome curly haired gentleman identified as James Turner. But now comes the rude shock: the man pictured as James Turner is not Turner at all. It is, instead, another famous North Carolinian, Samuel Price Carson.

The error came to light recently while Archives and History was preparing for a revised printing of the popular booklet which gives a brief biographical sketch of each governor.

So now there'll be a blank where Carson's likeness once accompanied Turner's biography.

In our era of sophisticated photograph, it may seem strange that a man could become governor without having his physical image preserved for posterity.

RALEIGH—Announcement was made today of the Pitt County Steering Committee for the Henry Hall Wilson for United States Senate campaign. John Campbell, statewide campaign manager for Wilson announced the names of six Pitt County residents who will direct Wilson campaign activities.

"I am delighted that Dr. William Cobb, Mrs. John B. Spilman, Mrs. Willie Mae Carney, Dr. John Dixon, Mrs. Sellers Crisp, and Mrs. Elois Folger will be working for us in Pitt," Campbell said. "I am sure they will do a fine job."

Dr. Cobb, of 302 S. Library Street, is a history professor at East Carolina University. Mrs. Spilman, of 1913 E. Fifth Street, is a former vice-chairman of the North Carolina Democratic Party. Mrs. Carney is from Bethel and works in the personnel office at Burroughs Wellcome. Mrs. Crisp resides at 1201 E. Fifth Street. Mrs. Folger, of Country Club Road, was county manager for Richardson Preyer's gubernatorial bid in 1964.

Wilson, a native of Monroe in Union County, has visited Pitt County numerous times in his race for the Senate. Monday he was in Greenville to appear on the "Carolina Today" program on WNCT.

Yet Turner is not the only chief executive lacking a portrait: we have no documented likeness of six other governors since statehood. They are Richard Caswell, Thomas Burke, Samuel Ashe, Nathaniel Alexander, Jesse Franklin, and Gabriel Holmes.

All lived before the development of modern photographic methods enabled man to transmit to posterity photographic images of himself, and many of our political leaders were unable to pay the high price of a portrait by an artist.

If anyone should know of a portrait of any of these men, please contact Mrs. Memory F. Mitchell at the Division of Archives and History, Raleigh.

The mislabeling of Carson's portrait as Turner's happened many decades ago, probably during the days of Colonel Fred A. Olds, the "father" of the Hall of History.

James Turner, born in Southampton County, Virginia, in 1766, grew up in Warren County, North Carolina. He served in the House of Commons and State Senate; and in 1802, upon the death of Governor-elect John Baptista Ashe, he was chosen governor.

He served until 1805 when he was elected to the United States Senate where he remained until his resignation in 1816. He died January 15, 1824.

Carson, on the other hand, was a westerner born in Burke County in 1798. He was elected to the State Senate in 1822. Two years later he was elected to Congress where he served until 1833.

In 1834 he returned to the State Senate, and he was a delegate to the constitutional convention the next year.

In 1836, however, he moved his family to Texas where he served as a member of the convention that created the Republic of Texas.

Among Carson's best remembered activities was his killing of Dr. Robert B. Vance in a duel at Saluda Gap, S.C. in 1827.

It was Vance whom Carson had defeated in the elections of 1824 and 1826. An interesting book of historical fiction has been written about his life—"A Long, Long Day for November," by Mrs. Moffit Sinclair Henderson of Salisbury.

Music Added To Art Show

Music has been added to the attractions that will be part of the annual Sidewalk Art Show to be held at the Art Center on Saturday, May 4.

At 11:00 a.m., a special feature will be the appearance of about 20 young students of Mrs. Charles Bath. The group, all members of the Pilot Strings program, range in age from four years old to 15 year old teenagers. They will be playing various stringed instruments in compositions covering a wide scope of music.

At noon, the mid-day attraction will be music by two Jazz Ensembles from the East Carolina University School of Music. Wayne Powell is coordinator of the two groups.

The third event in music will take place at 1:00 p.m., when Miss Mary Jo White will sing, accompanied by Miss Debbie Stokes on the guitar.

Following the 1:00 p.m. performance, the jazz ensemble will provide music periodically during the afternoon.

Refreshments and lunch will be available at the sidewalk show, provided by the Greenville Woman's Club.

Co-chairwomen of the 1974 Sidewalk Art Show are Mrs. Cliff Everett, Jr. and Mrs. Burt Aycock, Jr. Other committee women are Mrs. Joe Davis and Mrs. Eric Fearington, finance; Mrs. Bill Blount, needlework; Mrs. Ben Shappley, poster design; Mrs. Sydney Womack, publicity; and Mrs. Thomas Harwell, collections.

Onassis Oilmen Have Not Quit New England

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
CONCORD, N.H. (AP) —

When Olympic Refineries, Inc., unveiled plans for a $600 million oil refinery, the man who did most of the talking for the company was Peter J. Booras, a Greek-American businessman who has dabbled in politics.

Various described as a spokesman or New Hampshire representative for Aristotle Onassis' refinery company, Booras has been among the most active supporters of the proposal to build the complex on the New Hampshire seacoast. Both he and Olympic say he is not on the company payroll, has no financial interest in the project and is acting only as a citizen who believes the state would be well served by a refinery.

Booras heads a greeting-card manufacturing company in Keene, N.H., but spends much of his time shuttling between Olympic's temporary offices in Concord and Dover.

In 1972, he organized a New Hampshire primary write-in campaign for then-Vice President Spiro T. Agnew to counter what Booras perceived as pressure on President Nixon to dump Agnew from the ticket.

Booras also ran in that primary as a candidate for the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate. Although he outspent his competitors by a substantial margin, he lost the race.

Campaign records show the Booras campaign was financed almost entirely by $30,000 of the candidate's personal funds and more than $15,000 in contributions from outside the state.

One of the largest individual contributors listed by Booras was William Hammerman of 10 Light St., Baltimore, Md. who gave $1,500. That address is the office of the Hammerman Organization, Inc., headed by I. H. "Bud" Hammerman, identified by the justice Department as an Agnew confidant who set up the cash payment scheme for illegal kickbacks.

A reporter telephoning the Hammerman Organization was told that no William Hammerman is associated with the mortgage banking firm.

New Hampshire Atty. Gen. Warren Rudman recently announced his office is investigating several apparent violations of the state campaign finance law in the Booras campaign.

Booras says he was responsible for getting Olympic President Constantine E. Gratos interested in New Hampshire as a potential site for a refinery. Booras did not elaborate.

Before Olympic announced publicly that it was looking at New Hampshire as a refinery site, several Greek-American real estate men began buying options for land on Durham Point and on the Isles of Shoals, small islands off the coast.

Eventually these options put together about 3,500 acres on the mainland, most of it farm and woodlands.

The options promised more than $5 million if the land is purchased. No firm estimate, is available on the price paid for the land options, but from what is known, they probably cost several hundred thousands dollars.

Booras said the real estate men were acting "on my behalf" but that he was actually spending "Mr. Gratos' money."

Onassis, however, say it is not his style to risk his own money so early in such a risky venture. They suggest the option money came from other sources who hoped to gain if the Olympic proposal went through.

One source in New Hampshire's Greek-American community said "Papanicolaou told me that Onassis was paying for the promotion, nothing else." Nicholas F. Papanicolaou is an Onassis protege and listed in corporate records as vice president, treasurer and a director of Olympic Refineries Inc.

George Pappademas, a Nashua real estate broker, helped Booras buy the land options, and town records show he bought a few parcels of land bordering the refinery area for himself.

Olympic spokesmen say the company owns the options, but they remain in Pappademas' name in town records.

Since the town of Durham voted overwhelmingly against rezoning Durham Point, the options covered land on which the refinery cannot be built.

Olympic Refineries Inc., appeared to withdraw to Onassis' offices in New York after it lost the showdown in Durham. It announced the closing of its Concord, N.H., office, and refinery opponents began to drift back to their everyday lives.

Then, at a special town meeting in Newmarket just south of Durham, the townspeople voted in April to welcome a refinery proposal for their community.

Olympic sprang back to life. Engineers were summoned to redraw their plans, and meetings were scheduled with the governor.

"Of course we are going to make a proposal," announced Olympic President Gratos. "It would be ridiculous if we didn't."

Tuesday Saw 2 Accidents

An estimated $650 property damage resulted from two wrecks investigated here yesterday.

Police said heaviest damage resulted from a 6:20 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets and involved cars driven by Adell Garris Holloman of 722 Hooker Rd. and Michael David Carroll of Elkin.

Damage was estimated at $150 to the Holloman car and $250 to the Carroll auto by police who charged Holloman with failing to stop for a stop light.

Faye Puryear Anderson of 207 East 14th St. was charged with failing to see an intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Evans and 14th Streets.

Officers reported the Anderson car collided with a vehicle driven by Grey Davenport Dail of Route 8, Greenville, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Dail car and about $150 damage to the Anderson vehicle. No injuries were reported.

TERRORIST MANUAL

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—A Brazilian manual on political kidnapping was found in an Oakland apartment thought to have been a hideout of the Symbionese Liberation Army after Patricia Hearst was abducted, the San Francisco Chronicle reports.

Dissatisfied...

telligible" or "inaudible" and many places were marked "expletive deleted."

On occasion, the President's anger and contempt flashes out from the transcripts. At other times, he displays compassion and loyalty toward beleaguered staff members and such former close friends as John Mitchell.

Here, from the vast volume, are some of the areas covered:

DEAN CONFLICTS

Dean told the Watergate committee that on Sept. 15, Nixon congratulated him on doing a good job, "and the President was pleased that the case had stopped with (G. Gordon) Liddy."

The transcript shows Nixon telling Dean, "The way you have handled all this seems to me has been very skillful, putting your fingers in the leaks that have sprung here and sprung there."

Nixon's lawyers said the congratulations were offered "in the context not of a criminal plot to obstruct justice as Dean alleges," but rather "in the context of the politics of the matter, such as civil suits, counter-suits, Democratic efforts to exploit Watergate as a political issue and the like."

Nixon said it was on March 21, 1973, that Dean first told him of the cover-up, including the payments of hush money. Dean testified that after two meetings with the President on that date "... it was quite clear that the cover-up as far as the White House was concerned was going to continue."

According to the transcript, Dean told the President early in the conversation, "I have the impression that you don't know everything I know and it makes it very difficult for you to make judgments ..."

Later, after Haldeman had joined the meeting, this exchange took place:

Nixon: "... Let's say, frankly, on the assumption that, if we continue to cut our losses, we are not going to win. But in the end we are going to be led to death. And in the end, it's all going to come out anyway. Then you get the worst of both worlds. We are going to lose and people are going to ..."

Haldeman: "And look like dopes."

Nixon: "And in effect, look like a cover-up. So that we can't do."

When it was suggested that some lower-level aides might be hurt by the Watergate investigation, Nixon said, "We don't want to harm the people either, that is my concern. We can't harm these young people (inaudible). They were doing things for the best interests of their country — that is all."

HUSH MONEY

This proved one of the most ambiguous areas in the transcripts despite the contention of the President's lawyers that it clearly stands out that "the President rejected the payment of $120,000 or any other sum to (E. Howard) Hunt or other Watergate defendants."

Dean and Nixon discussed Hunt's demands for money March 21. And as the President has contended he told Dean it would require not only money, which could be raised, but an offer of executive clemency.

Dean: "That's right. It may further involve you in a way you should not be involved in this."

Nixon: "No — It is wrong that's for sure."

But later, Nixon referred to his belief that Hunt "might blow the whistle and his price is pretty high, but at least we can buy the time on that ..."

Still later, Dean, referring to the seven Watergate defendants, said, "They're going to stonewall it, as it now stands. Excepting Hunt. That's why his threat."

Haldeman: "It's Hunt opportunity."

Nixon: "That's why for your immediate things you have no choice but to come up with the $120,000, or whatever it is. Right?"

Dean: "That's right."

Nixon: "Would you agree that that's the prime thing that you damn well better get that done?"

Dean: "Obviously he ought to be given some signal anyway."

Nixon: "(Expletive deleted), get it. In a way that—who is going to talk to him? Colson? He is the one who is supposed to know him?"

A month later, on April 17, Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman tried to recall the details of the hush-money discussion.

Nixon: "But you remember the conversation?"

Haldeman: "Yes sir."

Nixon: "I didn't tell him to go get the money, did I?"

Haldeman: "No."

Nixon: "You didn't either, did you?"

Haldeman: "Absolutely not."

MITCHELL'S INVOLVEMENT

A close friend and adviser to the President throughout his first administration, Mitchell had early been linked to Watergate. On April 14, 1973, Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman discussed the scandal.

Ehrlichman suggested somebody ought to go to New York to tell Mitchell "the jig is up. And the President strongly feels that the only way that this thing can end up even a little plus for the administration and for the presidency and preserve some thread is for you to go in and voluntarily make a statement."

Ehrlichman wanted Mitchell to admit being "both morally and legally responsible."

Living Together Is No Campus Taboo

DORM LIFE—Couple at Harvard studies together and shares a dormitory room. Living together has become an acceptable thing at many college dormitories. (AP Wirephoto)

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Almost every night a student named Jeff stuffs a toothbrush in his shirt pocket and walks across the courtyard of his Harvard dormitory to spend the night with his Radcliffe girlfriend.

At Beloit College in Wisconsin, 19-year-old Charlie and his girlfriend, Sue, have pushed their single beds together. They've lived in her dorm room for almost a year.

A 21-year-old athlete and his sophomore girlfriend at the University of Louisville in Kentucky have lived in her dorm room since last summer. They rely on their friends not to snitch on them and on a resident adviser who agrees to look the other way.

The college couples are among hundreds of students from Boston to Berkeley — and a lot more conservative places in between — who are living together on campus.

Most of them insist it's no big deal and that seems to sum up the general attitude. The couples, however, requested anonymity, citing possible sanctions or embarrassment for parents.

Interviews with scores of students and administrators at more than a dozen colleges and universities across the country indicate that although living together is rarely discussed in the college catalogue, it's become a popular way of life for some on campus.

It isn't as widespread as the "going steady" craze of the 1950s and early '60s, but almost all students interviewed could name at least two or three couples living together on campus. They saw nothing wrong with it.

The trend raised many eyebrows among parents, alumni and school officials when it appeared in the mid-60s and there was public outcry about campuses becoming dens of dope and sex. But most of that has disappeared.

"Most couples living together in the Harvard dorm have a very serious relationship," said a graduate student assigned as resident adviser to one dormitory, or "house" as it's called at Harvard. "It's a very acceptable thing."

"It's ordinary," said a Harvard housing official. "I don't know how the university could intrude. You couldn't possibly do a thing like bed checks."

When today's seniors were freshmen, living together — regularly spending the night on campus with someone of the opposite sex — was taboo at most schools, including Harvard. If caught, they could have been expelled. These days, it's not so risky.

None of the couples living together on campus had been assigned to the same room by the college. In fact, most use both rooms for the sake of appearance, mail, more storage space — and privacy when they want it.

"He only sleeps here when my roommate is away," said a chubby freshman at Indiana University. "But we eat together, study together and think about getting married some time, but not right away."

Her boyfriend reached over and took her hand. "As far as personal relations are concerned," he said, "you can learn a lot about each other this way. You can cope with problems better and understand each other better. It was a long time after we began spending most of our time together that we thought about sex, four or five months. Our relationship isn't just to sleep together."

College administrators, with an eye on possible public relations problems with the state, community, parents and alumni, said schools try to offer students a choice of living arrangements, ranging from one-sex corridors where someone of the opposite sex dare not tread, to dormitories allowing complete freedom.

"For a whole set of reasons, you're dealing with a very diverse group of students in terms of levels of maturity, past experience, personal needs and hometown environment," said Thomas C. Schreck, dean of students at Indiana where students can choose dorms with closed, limited or open visitation policies. "If you try to force them all into a set mold, you're not addressing yourself to the differences people possess."

A study of 482 member institutions of the Association of College and University Housing Officers shows that 70 per cent of the nation's colleges offer some type of co-ed housing to students. Only 15 per cent of the schools offer men and women rooms on the same floor or in the same suite. The study was produced by David A. DeCoster, an assistant dean of students in charge of residence life at Indiana. He said there is no evidence that co-ed housing or visitation has increased sexual activity among students.

"Literature shows that attitudes have changed dramatically ly in a liberal direction," said DeCoster, who is recognized by many college and university officials as an expert on campus housing. "They are more accepting of peer behavior. But there is no documentation that there are differences in their own behavior. And there is a false interpretation that liberal attitudes mean liberal behavior."

Don, a 22-year-old senior at Tufts College in Medford, Mass., agreed.

"This idea that everyone has lost his virginity at the age of 10 isn't true," he said. "A lot of people here haven't had intercourse by the time they're seniors. Everybody puts on a big show."

"But for those who do choose to start a relationship, it isn't scandalous. It isn't talked about. It's accepted," Don said he had lived with a girl in his dormitory for several months, but they had broken up.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAY 2, 1974

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to avoid feeling depressed because conditions don't seem to be going your way. If you are to sidestep possible trouble it's necessary that you handle every detail with caution. Spend some time taking care of your health.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Keep busy at home, business and other affairs that are important right now. An associate needs your loyal support at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although you want to have fun, it is better that you stick to business first. Make a special point to help one in trouble tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Ideal day to do those things that will make your home more charming. Do something comforting for mate and remove discord at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Morning is fine for attending to personal duties. In the afternoon go over written material and correct possible errors.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have many routine tasks to attend to, so get busy early in the day so you can handle other important activities later.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You need to use extraordinary care in motion since the going is pretty ticklish today and tonight. Make sure all is precise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study the fine points of a monetary plan so no mistakes are made. Put extra money aside so you have it when you need it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21) Don't reveal any personal information to new contacts or you may regret it later. Steer clear of a social affair tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You need to use good judgment if you want to avoid getting into trouble with a higher-up today. Relax at home tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to run off to some new activity now which could be bad since you are not prepared enough. Await a better time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you don't keep promises you have made to others you could lose out where it counts the most. Don't be too demanding.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try not to belittle an associate or you could turn this individual into an unrelenting enemy. Show that you are very dependable.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will like to stir things up just for the fun of it, so teach self-control and to use energy wisely and in right directions. Try to curb a tendency in your progeny to criticize others. Ideal chart for research, investigative and designing work that requires precision and accuracy.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market shrugged off rising interest rates and predictions of a price bulge, now that price controls have ended, and headed higher Wednesday. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.49 to 838.24 at 11:30 a.m., and advances and declines were about even on the New York Stock Exchange. But trading remained light as many investors preferred to wait and watch rather than commit their funds in an uncertain economy.

Citicorp, parent company of New York's First National City Bank, was the most actively traded stock on the Big Board, off ¼ to 40½, followed by Con Edison, up ¼ to 9¾, and Federal National Mortgage, up ¾ to 16¾. Builders Investment Group fell 1½ to 15¾, and Square D lost ¼ to 30. American Motors dropped ¾ to 7¾ after reporting lower first-quarter earnings. CNA Financial was delayed in opening after posting big losses for the first quarter, followed by an announcement that Loews Corp. plans to make a cash tender offer for controlling interest in CNA at a price substantially higher than present market value. The CNA board said it would advise stockholders against accepting the tender offer.

WON'T BLOW OUT
WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica has turned down a request that he disqualify himself from presiding at the Watergate cover-up trial.

county-city school systems merger, Gardner said "It would do away with one administration, cut across lines and help in the transportation problem."

Dr. William B. Martin, candidate for District I Commissioner, focused his remarks on salvaging abandoned school buildings in local communities to serve as community or recreation centers. He also stumped for hospital employees being put on a county hired basis rather than being employed as "part of a board of directors policy."

On the issue of a county wide zoning ordinance, brought up in a question directed to him, Martin said "I'd hate to see the individual municipal zoning taken away, leaving one big concern to tell everybody what must be done. Maybe municipalities within a larger zoning framework might work."

Replying to a question about whether he'd be "reluctant to add taxes," Martin said, "not a bit if they're needed."

Candidate for commissioner from District 5, Ross Persinger, and mayor of Ayden, said "I didn't intend to run, I waited until the last minute hoping someone else from the southern part of the county would run."

Persinger talked about what he calls the inadequacy of support from the Industrial Development Commission. "We urgently need a truly comprehensive planning program for Pitt County," he said. "We can't wait on these things. We must zone the river, not permit industries to build up on it."

A questioner asked Persinger about making commission meetings more open and more easily available for public attendance. "The meetings could easily be held at a different time and place to give the public a chance to be there, to listen in. This should be. As it is now, the public is left out."

Candidate for commissioner for District I, Ed Warren outlined his public involvement in education and community affairs—including United Fund drives and his role as chairman of the hospital board.

Warren said he'd like to see "more women, more blacks and more young people represented in government."

In the question and answer period, one questioner asked him how he could reconcile his contradictory views on industry. (Warren noted in a printed statement he would like to minimize the threat of an industry coming in, offering unreasonable competition in higher wages—he also noted a need of new industries with wage scales to improve standards of living). "The answer to that," Warren said, "is to get new industries in line with what we already have."

Arriving late from a church dinner speech, N. C. House of Representative Sam Bundy spoke briefly about his experience of some 40 years in the field of education.

"What are your thoughts about a recent resolution by industries of North Carolina to do more in hiring military veterans?" one questioner asked.

"I'll personally be glad to do anything that I can to help veterans," Bundy replied, "and I surely think every member of the legislature feels as I do on that issue."

Another question dealt with reasons for absence of young blacks as pages or pageettes to serve in the legislature.

"The procedure for this," Bundy said, "is to list those who ask that a student be chosen. We go down the line. You furnish me," he told the questioner, "with the name of a black student, and I'll assure you the name will go on the list."

Thomas D. Burney, candidate for Pitt County sheriff and at 30 the youngest candidate on the slate, outlined a plan for revising the structure of the county's sheriff department. His plans call for deputies assigned in teams of four for various areas of the county, with one on duty at all times.

"Would your plan call for an increase in personnel?" he was asked.

"Maybe it would mean an increase of one or two people," Burney said. Answering another question, Burney said he welcomed "any opportunity to work with Human Relations people from Raleigh. Any way we can increase the degree of human relations, such as recreational programs in communities, is good," Burney said.

Incumbent Sheriff Ralph Tyson, the last of the 12 candidates to speak, said the three most important considerations of the sheriff's office "is to protect life, property and to prevent crime."

Needs mentioned by Tyson were for "more night patrols, more personnel needed to patrol homes, business, to check on suspicious persons and vehicles," Tyson said "we're just scratching the surface on the narcotics scene. There's much more needs to be done in this field."

In the question and answer period, Tyson said "I think Burney's proposal is fine, only it would take twice the number of personnel we have. We now have 30."

Responding to a question about the need for increased funds for staff and salary, Tyson replied: "We need a salary scale that will attract university trained young men. We had two fine ones, but lost them. We need the type of law enforcement personnel that the SBI and FBI have."

Mrs. Rhea Resnik, president of the League of Women Voters, Greenville-Pitt County, moderated the forum. Time keeper was Mrs. Missie McReynolds.

Each person who attended was furnished a printed question and answer sheet compiled and printed in the April 24, 1974 edition of "The Advocate."

The meeting Friday will commence at 10 a.m.

Truck Acquired By Winterville

WINTERVILLE—A 1974 Ford truck has been purchased by the Town of Winterville to be used in the collection of garbage.

The truck, an 18 cubic yards Truxmore Pakker, is expected to arrive Thursday. Garbage collection will resume at that time.

According to Elwood Nobles, town clerk, the garbage pickup has been handled by a private contractor in the past. However, the contractor failed to show Tuesday so the town agreed to assume the collection of garbage.

Nobles said he was sorry that the citizens have been inconvenienced but the town is doing the best it can.

Lolich Finally Gets First Win

The hard-hitting Kansas City Royals normally would look forward to facing a pitcher who's winless in four decisions and has allowed 5½ runs a game. But not when his name is Mickey Lolich.

"I hate to catch a guy who is 0-4 like Lolich was," said Kansas City Manager Jack McKeon. "You know that a good pitcher's going to win sooner or later. You just know it...."

If McKeon was worried before the game, he was convinced afterwards. Lolich, working mostly with off-speed pitches, scattered eight hits as Detroit dumped the Royals 7-2. Aurelio Rodriguez keyed the Tiger attack with two singles, a double and two runs batted in.

Elsewhere in the American League, the California Angels blasted the Boston Red Sox 16-6; the Cleveland Indians downed the Minnesota Twins 8-3; the Texas Rangers outlasted the Milwaukee Brewers 12-10; the New York Yankees edged the Oakland Athletics 4-3, and the Chicago White Sox shaded the Baltimore Orioles 2-1.

Lolich, a portly left-hander, has lost a little something off his fastball of late and has changed his style of pitching.

"I'm 33 so I throw a lot of sliders and a lot of knuckleballs. I had a good curve ball tonight but the velocity wasn't good," he said.

Angels 16, Red Sox 6

Fire-baller Nolan Ryan struck out a season-high 15 batters but his performance was marred by a fastball that got away in the first inning and hit Boston second baseman Doug Griffin just above the left ear. Griffin was carried unconscious from the field and hospitalized with a severe concussion.

Indians 8, Twins 3

Charlie Spikes stroked a two-run single to extend his hitting streak to 19 games as Cleveland won its fifth straight. Fritz Peterson and Fred Beene, both acquired from the Yankees last week, combined on an eight-hit-ter. Bobby Darwin homered twice for Minnesota.

Rangers 12, Brewers 10
Jeff Burroughs, Jim Spencer and Cesar Tovar hit home runs for Texas. Burroughs and Spencer hit theirs consecutively in the eighth inning to put the Rangers ahead for good. Johnny Briggs drove in three runs for Milwaukee.

Yankees 4, Athletics 3
Back-to-back home runs by Roy White and Chris Chambliss in the eighth inning gave New York the win. Mel Stottlemyre picked up his fifth victory against one loss. Vida Blue dropped to 0-3 for Oakland.

White Sox 2, Orioles 1
Ron Santo's first American League homer, a two-run shot, accounted for Chicago's victory. Stan Bahnsen tossed a seven-inning shutout for the White Sox, besting Jim Palmer. Bobby Grich singled home the lone Baltimore run.

Tuesday's National League results: Houston 4, Chicago 2; St. Louis 7, Atlanta 2; San Diego 2, Montreal 1; New York 8, Los Angeles 7; Philadelphia 6, San Francisco 5; and the Cincinnati-Pittsburgh game was rained out.

BETHEL—Greene Central rallied four runs in the fifth inning to slip past the North Pitt Panthers and go on to take a 9-7 win, spoiling the Panthers' bid for their first win of the season.

The Panthers had pushed over five scores in the third to lead the Rams by 7-3. Had they been able to hold onto the lead, the Panthers not only would have had their first win of the year but a big upset as well.

The win did not come easy for the Rams, however. They used four pitchers during the game. Jeffery Pridgen started but was lifted after pitching to three batters in the first inning. Bobby Nimmo relieved him but lasted only two and two-thirds innings striking out three, walking two and giving up four hits. Jesse Hooker took over in the bottom of the third and got credit for the win. He held the Panthers hitless in the two-and-a-third frames walking four and fanning four. Dale Pridgen finished the game when Hooker got into trouble in the sixth.

Rick Harrell went all the way for North Pitt. He struck out nine Rams, walked seven and gave up ten hits.

Greene Central took a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Donnie Blizzard walked and stole second. An error on the steal let him take third and Blizzard scored on a single by Jerry Carraway. Tim Butts lined a triple to score Carraway and Butts came across on a ground out.

The Panthers came back with two in their half. Aubrey Wynne was hit by a pitch and Craig McLawhorn walked. After Tetterton walked, the Rams changed hurlers. Steve Fuchs hit into a force play that got Tetterton but scored Wynne. Fuchs tried to steal up and the throw to second was errored letting McLawhorn score standing up.

Carraway singled and moved around on a steal in the third but could not score. The Panthers took over the lead in the bottom of the inning as they came up with five runs.

Wynne led off reaching on an error. McLawhorn was also safe on an error but Wynne was thrown out trying to reach third. Tetterton walked and Fuchs smashed a triple to right driving in two runs. Spencer Barnhill singled across Fuchs. Harrell kept the rally alive with a double scoring Barnhill. Ken Perry walked and James Carr got a hit to load the bases. Nimmo wild-pitched Harrell over.

But that proved to be all the Panthers could muster. Greene Central cut the gap by one in the fourth as Shorty Radford reached on a two-base error and scored on Dale Pridgen's single.

The Rams pushed over the eventual winner in the fifth. Butts singled to right but the ball got away and Butts raced all the way around to score. William Brown got a hit and both Joe Heath and Radford drew walks. Pridgen walked forcing in Brown. Hooker popped up and although he was out by the infield fly rule, Heath scored as the ball was dropped. The Panthers tried to pick Radford off going into third on the play but the throw was errored letting Radford score.

The Rams finished it off in the sixth as Brown doubled and scored on a double by Heath.

North Pitt put two on earlier in the fifth as Noel Whitley walked and Harrell reached on an error but both were left stranded. The Panthers loaded the bases in the sixth on McLawhorn's single and walks to Tetterton and Fuchs but they failed to score.

The Rams left nine runners on base while the Panthers left nine, also. Carraway, Butts, Brown and Heath each had two hits for the Rams.

The Panthers were scheduled to face North Lenoir today. Friday they host Ayden-Grifton.

Golden Eagles Rip Woodard

ROBERSONVILLE—The Robersonville Golden Eagles moved a step closer to the Northern Division title in the Eastern Plains Conference with a 6-0 victory over Lee Woodard yesterday.

The win boosted the Eagle league record to 9-1 with three games left to play. They are 11-3 overall.

The game was a pitching duel most of the way between Lee Woodard's Ricky Batts and Robersonville's Matt Wilson. Batts and Wilson both fanned nine, but Batts walked six, while Wilson allowed but one free trip.

Robersonville broke the deadlock in the third with a pair of unearned runs. Gene Griffin walked and stole second. Victor Hardison also walked, and when Wilson's fly ball to the outfield was dropped, both came in to score.

It stayed 2-0 until the sixth, when the Eagles picked up four more runs. Wilson walked and Mark Vaughn ran for him, moving up on a wild pitch. Doug Warren walked, and then both stole up a base. Jimmy Stalls singled in Vaughn and Larry Jackson's hit scored Warren. Mike Matthews reached on an infield hit, scoring Stalls, and a double steal scored Jackson.

Lee Woodard got only two men as far as third, in the sixth and seventh innings as Wilson, now 4-1, retired the first 10 he faced. Matthews and Jackson each had two hits for the Eagles, who travel to Lucama on Friday.

Plymouth scored first, pushing over four runs in the top of the first inning. Atamachuk reached on an error and Styons followed with a single. Roberson's hit drove in Atamachuk, and Lewis followed with a double, scoring both Styons and Roberson. Harrison then singled in Lewis for the 4-0 lead.

Williamston came back with two in its half of the inning. Hubert Smith singled and Keith Brown doubled him home. Brown later scored on a wild pitch.

In the third, Williamston broke into the lead for good, pushing over seven runs for a 9-4 lead. Roy Lilley walked and Phil Selby reached on an error. Smith also was safe on an error, loading the bases. Keith Brown walked, forcing in Lilley. Brown Barnhill was safe on an

Sports Briefs

By The Associated Press
ANAHEIM (AP) — The Southern California Sun of the World Football League announced the signing Tuesday of Tim Guy, defensive lineman from the University of Oregon.

The Sun signed Guy, a 6-foot-6, 247-pounder, after trading an undisclosed draft choice to the Philadelphia Bell, which drafted him in the WFL's ninth round. He was drafted in the fifth round by Buffalo in the National Football League.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Two college players—running back Dean Dreher of Ohio Northern and Guard Bob Martin of Bowling Green—have signed with the Jacksonville Sharks of the World Football League.

The Sharks now have 86 players under contract. Coach Bud Asher said he expects to go to training camp in June with about 100.

ATLANTA (AP) — A proposal to rename Atlanta Stadium in honor of home run king Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves is expected to encounter little opposition from members of the Atlanta-Fulton County Recreation Authority.

The proposal was made Monday by Mayor Maynard Jackson.

Recreation Authority member Lou Zakas said Tuesday he would vote for the proposal.

Aaron Hits His 720th Home Run

Vic Raschi and Lynn McGlothen are from two different baseball eras, but Hank Aaron bridged their generation gap Tuesday night.

Babe Ruth was a "seemingly unreachable 713 homers away on April 23, 1954, when Aaron started his homer brigade in St. Louis, belting No. 1 off Raschi.

Twenty years, 719 home runs and 1,399 extra base hits later, St. Louis was the site of another Aaron home run, this one served up by McGlothen.

"Why should I worry about his 720th," said McGlothen, who helped pitch the Cardinals to a 7-2 victory over the Braves. "He'd hit 719 of them before."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Houston Astros downed the Chicago Cubs 4-2; the San Diego Padres, shaded the Montreal Expos 2-1; the New York Mets edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-7; the Philadelphia Phillies nipped the San Francisco Giants 6-5, and the Cincinnati Reds-Pittsburgh Pirates game was rained out.

Red Schoendienst has had to play and manage against Aaron. He has seen many of the 45 homers Aaron has hit off St. Louis pitching.

Astros 4, Cubs 2
The Astros scored 14 less runs than they did Monday night but still had enough to win the game.

Johnny Edwards' single knocked in Lee May with the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning, sending the Cubs to their seventh loss in eight games.

Mets 8, Dodgers 7
The Mets frittered away a 6-0 lead, then held on to snap the Dodgers' seven-game winning streak.

John Milner cracked a tie-breaking, two-run double in the top of the ninth to snap a 6-6 tie.

Phils 6, Giants 5
Mike Schmidt doubled home one run and scored another on Bill Robinson's single to give Philadelphia the victory over San Francisco.

Padres 2, Expos 1
Derrel Thomas doubled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth and Bill Greif teamed with Vincente Romo on an eight-hitter, pacing San Diego the the victory.

Greif, 2-4, pitched into the ninth and Romo got the final two outs with the bases loaded, striking out Jim Lyttle and inducing Ron Hunt to ground out.

American League scores:
Cleveland 8, Minnesota 3; California 16, Boston 6; New York 4, Oakland 3; Detroit 7, Kansas City 2; Texas 12, Milwaukee 10, Chicago 2, Baltimore 1.

Little Chance

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Because Charlotte can't guarantee to provide a 50,000-seat stadium within two years, the city's chances of landing the Toronto Northmen of the new Canadian Football League are about gone, officials say.

The Charlotte Observer so quotes Leo Cahill, Northmen general manager, in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Bill Hensley, head of the Chamber of Commerce Sports Committee, who has acted as liaison between the Northmen and Charlotte interests, had a similar comment. He said Charlotte was out of the picture for all practical purposes because it could not guarantee the stadium. The largest stadium in the city seats 21,000.

The Northmen are looking for a new home because legislation pending in the Canadian parliament would prohibit the WFL from competing with the Canadian Football League.

J. Alan Hanover, attorney for the Northmen, was quoted as saying Monday that he thinks Memphis, Tenn., is the first choice of Northmen officials if the franchise is forced to leave Canada.

Conley In Loss To CBA

PIKEVILLE—Charles B. Aycock High School gained a 12-3 victory over the D. H. Conley baseball team yesterday.

Details of the game were not made available to The Daily Reflector.

The 10-year-old French trotter Une de Mai has been retired. She earned $1,851,424, twice winning the International Trot at Westbury, N.Y.

Whale-Saving Effort Taken To Japanese

SPERM WHALES are towed by the flagship of the fleet, the Sovietskaya Rossia, soon to be hauled aboard and processed. (UPI Telephoto)

By MARIANNA OHE
TOKYO (UPI) — An American woman concerned about the world's diminishing whale population has brought her campaign to Tokyo in an effort to talk the Japanese out of continuing their whaling operations.

Gail Madonia of Bolinas, Calif., was determined to "bring the truth" about the plight of the whale to the Japanese people through speaking engagements and a public education program.

"Japan is a country not particularly friendly, not particularly educated to the whaling problem," she said. "The only information that has been let out to the press is from the fisheries interests. It is not the true story."

Japan and the Soviet Union, whose combined hauls account for 84 per cent of the world's whale catch, have both refused to halt whaling operations although a resolution to call a complete moratorium on whaling for the next 10 years was adopted in 1972 by the United Nations World Conference on Human Environment in Stockholm.

Whales Diminishing Fast

The International Whaling Commission last year adopted a resolution to halt within three years the killing of razorback whales, whose numbers are fast diminishing. But at the same time it set a total world quota of 37,500 whales to be caught this year.

The Japanese fishery industry claims the whale population in the Antarctic is actually increasing because Japanese fishermen catch only one third of the whale population in that area each year.

"Five of the eight species of great whales are now considered commercially extinct," said Ms Madonia, who came to Tokyo in March for a month of meetings with conservation organizations, Ministry of Agriculture officials and fishery industry representatives.

"The Japanese whaling industry claims it must continue whaling operations to provide protein for the Japanese people. Actually whale meat is only one per cent of the Japanese protein diet," she said.

Project Jonah
Ms Madonia is treasurer of Project Jonah, a whale conservation organization with offices in San Francisco, London, Paris, Toronto and Victoria, Australia.

She was joined in her Tokyo campaign by Project Jonah president John McIntyre and by Dr. Paul Stong, a Canadian scientist who works with free-swimming killer whales on an island off British Columbia.

One object of the campaign was to get the "stop whaling" message to Japan's children. Internationally Project Jonah distributes materials on whales to school children throughout the world, encouraging them to write letters to Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin asking them to save the whales.

"We have a beautiful educational kit on whales and dolphins translated (into Japanese)," the California woman said. "It tells children what whaling is doing to the balance of life in the ocean."

From 500,000 to 500
"Before modern whaling began around 1900, there were about 500,000 northern white whales. Now it's estimated there are 100 to 500 left alive. They were killed by the Dutch, English, French, Spanish and U.S. Before 1900 there were about 600,000 blue whales. In 1972 there were about 600 left. They were killed off by the Russians and Japanese in the 1930s."

"The Japanese whaling industry has not yet realized that whales as a protein source will be gone completely if they don't stop killing them," she said. "I've heard that the Japanese people are very soft about children. I hope the children's campaign will reach them."

$222,333 To Scout Fund

A total of $222,333 has been committed toward the $420,000 goal of the Development Fund Campaign of the East Carolina Boy Scouts of America Council.

The announcement was made by James A. Hackney III, general campaign manager. He said $48,500 has been raised by the Major Industry section, headed by Dr. Harry Billica of Greenville. Initial Gifts, raised by Nancy Holderness of Tarboro, have amounted to $29,610. $54,223 has been raised in the 15 districts of the Council.

The money should be used for improvements at the Bonner Scout Reservation, Camp Charles, and Camp Sam Hatcher, as well as starting an expanded Explorer Program and building a new Council Service Center in Kinston.

An additional pledge of $90,000 from some Kinston citizens to provide the Council Service Center brings the total commitment to $222,333, Hackney noted.

S. Philadelphia Claims Best In Pool-Shooters

PHIL LONGO was a top-notch billiard player in "his day". He often wonders how far he might have gone if he had turned pro. (UPI Telephoto)

By THOMAS NIECE
PHILADELPHIA (UPI) —
It's just another doorway on a big city street pockmarked by urban decay, but for pool players it is a very special place.

It's Phil Longo's Society Hill
Billiards establishment. For 47 years it has been a mecca for some of the best pool-shooters in America. Minnesota Fats, for instance, to name just one.

George Kelly racked them up there before his sister gave up her film career to become Princess Grace of Monaco.
Police Sgt. Frank L. Rizzo, now the city's mayor, used to stop by with his buddies. Angelo Bruno, reputed head of the Philadelphia-South Jersey
Mafia, now serving time in a New Jersey prison, spent many nights at Longo's with his South
Philadelphia cronies.

But Longo's was more than a gathering spot for the local pool-shooting sports. It was the scene of some of the finest pocket billiards played in the east.

Hosted Greats
"Right over there is where I beat Ralph Greenleaf," Longo, 72, recalled in an interview, pointing to a framed cue tip which he used to defeat the 17-time world champ in exhibition play. "And Minnesota Fats played on that table you're shooting on."

"Willie Mosconi gained his first laurels right here," Longo said, surveying the 16 mahogany and rosewood tables—some of which date back before the turn of the century. He recalled Mosconi's sectional tournament victory here in his hometown that sent him to the 1933 world championships. Longo rattled off other names of greats he has hosted — Willie Hoppe, Jimmy Haras, the magical Andy Ponzi.

Pocket billiards haven't been Phil Longo's whole life even though he started shooting at the age of six in the basement of his uncle's South Philadelphia home. His first love was music.

Longo got a job as a singer at his father's taproom before his 12th birthday. A shoeshine boy directed him to a booking agent and before long he was belting them out as a singing waiter at Atlantic City's Club Manhattan.
Later he performed with a quartet and spent time plugging songs for a Philadelphia music publisher.

"I never got to do the things
I wanted to do," Longo said of his days in music. "All I ever really wanted to do was sing, but I was born too early, before radio and TV. I couldn't get the exposure."

Opened in 1927
So he turned to billiards and pool for a living. Babe Ruth was hitting 60 home runs and Charlie Chaplin was entertaining silent movie audiences
when Longo and his bride, Mame, opened their present billiard parlor on South Street near Fifth in 1927. (Mame, too, was quite a pocket billiards player. She held both the state and city women's titles in the 1930s.)

Business was good, and Longo continued to sharpen his skills on the heavy Brunswick tables, but never turned pro.

"I thought I wasn't good enough," he said, noting that he was invited to play in the world championships at New York in 1946 and 1947 when he was Philadelphia pocket billiards titlist. "I thought I wasn't ready, but I was ready. 'I think I'm the only guy ever to beat Greenleaf seven times.'"

Longo smiled as he recounted his string of exhibition victories over a man some called the Babe Ruth of pocket billiards.

Longo discounts talk that the game of billiards is dying, despite the fact the number of parlors in Philadelphia has fallen from a high of more than 200 in the 1930s to fewer than 70
now. He says in fact the game is enjoying a renaissance.

One-Man Crusade
"I've been waging a one-man crusade the last 35 to 40 years to make this game more respectable," Longo said. He is the current president of the Pennsylvania Billiard Association. "I'm as much a businessman as the guy who dispenses groceries. I dispense wholesome recreation."

"I don't run a pool room. I run a billiard academy. Pool room sounds like a four-letter word." He keeps out hustlers and does not allow heavy gambling.

One of the brightest changes in the game, for Longo, is the presence of more female players, who "wouldn't dare to come in unescorted in the early days." Another reason for the resurgence in billiards, he said, is the promotion of at-home tables, "which turn out more players who then want to play in public parlors."

Like a Club
Longo has a strong interest in young people and he enjoys instructing them in the intricacies of the game he no longer plays since he suffered a stroke 14 years ago.

In fact, the Society Hill Billiards establishment is not just a pool room. Filled as it is with memories and the memorabilia of some of the game's great people, it draws many steady customers and oldtimers, too. "It's like a club," was the way one player put it. "Yeah," chimed in another, "I guess this is about the only place left with a pool room atmosphere."

Wearing two sweaters on a rainy spring afternoon, Longo settled into a padded spectator stool. He watched the figures hunched low over the green felt, listened to the clickclick of the balls and pointed his cigarette at a picture of himself in a smiling cluster of pool
greats. "You know," he said,
"I get scared when I look at these pictures. Most of those guys are dead. I'm still here."

New Role For Former Hotel

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)—
The downtown Goldsboro Motor Hotel, the 200-room former Goldsboro Hotel, will close
June 1.

Manager Walter Stansbury
says changes in the patterns of travel made it impossible for the motel to meet expenses.

Efficiency apartments had been created for 36 permanent guests, mostly older people.

New Meat Labels

The food industry, in response to requests from the government and consumer groups, has adopted a standard program of meat identification. Big Star supermarkets are among the first in this area to institute the program.

By reducing the number of cuts and eliminating many confusing and fanciful names, food shoppers will be able to make more valid comparisons...to select meats more wisely...to be sure of getting their money's worth...to prepare meats in the most economical and most appetizing manner.

By referring to the Primal cut, homemakers can easily determine the best way of cooking any particular portion. Most standard cookbooks recommend preparation methods according to the primary cut.

Of course, meat grades are not changed. Big Star continues to sell USDA Choice Beef and USDA Inspected Pork, Lamb and Poultry.

Words on the labels have changed but you can still be confident that Big Star meats are second to none.

Law Day Proclaimed In Pitt By Judge Roberts

District Court Judge J.W.H. Roberts proclaimed Law Day in Pitt County at the beginning of today's session of District Court, in conjunction with National Law Day proclaimed by Congress.

The first Law Day was on May 2, 1958. It is not a "lawyers' day", but rather an occasion for understanding the place of law in our lives, for learning how the law and legal system operates, and for examining how the law can better serve the people and nation.

On the first observance, President Dwight D. Eisenhower stated, "It is fitting that the American people should remember with pride and vigilantly guard the great heritage of liberty, justice and equality under law. . . it is our moral and civic obligation as free men and as Americans to preserve and strengthen that great heritage."

The primary purpose of the observance is to emphasize the values of living under a system of laws and independent courts that protect individual freedom and make possible a free society. That law day occupies only a single calendar day is merely symbolic.

In proclaiming Law Day this morning, Judge Roberts stated, "To each new generation of American citizens comes a new opportunity and responsibility to provide his country with new leadership, fresh wisdom and foresight. As we move into the third century of our independence as a free nation, the responsibilities of leadership will pass to today's generation of youth."

Judge Roberts continued, "In an effort to assist these young men and women, who comprise nearly one-half of our population, in gaining a better understanding of the law and legal process and their leadership responsibilities the 17 annual nationwide observance of Law Day USA on Wednesday, May 1, will be directed toward youth and the law."

About 200 young people, from six year olds to teenagers, took part last Saturday in the first

Forensic Competition for students in private schools of Eastern North Carolina. The competition was extended to also include creative work in art.

Represented were seven private schools from Pitt, Martin, Beaufort, Bertie and Chowan Counties. The event was held at Pace Academy. Mrs. Barbara Evans was coordinator of the competition which included entries in handwriting, creative writing, prose reading, poetry reading, journalism and art.

Individual winners receiving trophies were Lynn Moore, a second grade student at Pace Academy for drawing; Marvin Blount III, a third grader from Pace, miscellaneous art; and Pace seventh grader Jimmy Maurakis, for prose reading.

Liz Branch, an eighth grader, accepted the journalism award for Pace Academy, given to the school for its paper, "The Pace Setter."

A first time event, plans are being made to hold the competition annually.

Nab Fugitive In Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—FBI agents have arrested David Allen Harbour and charged him with escape from a North Carolina prison where he had been serving an eight-to-10-year sentence for burglary.

The FBI said Harbour, 33, escaped in 1972 and has been living here for the past year. He was arrested Monday.

Short Harvest Of Peaches Seen

RALEIGH (AP)—Peach growers in North Carolina's sandhills are facing a short harvest this season because of killing cold on April 3' an authority said Tuesday.

Clarence Black, director of the Sandhills Research Station near Candor, said the cold spell killed embryonic peaches of all varieties.

Black expressed the opinion that the crop this year would be about the same as last year's crop which was badly damaged by hail. He said the trees will produce this year about half the peaches they are capable of producing.

Watts Auman of West End said the early April cold spell hit a 17 acre lot wiping out about half the peaches.

The island of Jamaica got its first constitution from Britain in 1662.

The Worry Clinic
Phantom Pains
Provide Alibi

Dr. Raymond was pestered by a very brilliant multimillionaire patient whom he didn't dare offend. So he asked me to hypnotize this apparent victim of "phantom pain." But his pain was sexual "red herring."

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE A-621: Dr. Raymond M., aged 58, was our leading surgeon at Wesley Memorial Hospital here in Chicago.

"Dr. Crane," he phoned me, "I wonder if you could do me a personal favor?"

"For the chief of the medical department and I have been treating a multimillionaire Loop executive but to no avail."

He complains of excruciating pain in his amputated right leg. "Yet I have severed all possible nerves that connect that leg."

"Moreover, the medical chief has tried various narcotics and even snake venom to allay his suffering."

"Still he will go into paroxysms of pain about 11 p.m. so he can't get to sleep."

"And he is driving us almost crazy, for he has become so persistent that we don't get any sleep, either!"

"Could you possibly go over at 11 p.m. and put him to sleep via hypnosis, as a great favor to us colleagues?"

Phantom Pain?

This multimillionaire's limb had been amputated above the knee, so he had a stump of the thigh extending about one-third of the way down from his hip joint.

As a favor to those medical colleagues, I agreed to visit this patient a few times to put him to sleep via hypnosis.

He was a very cultured gentleman, aged 60, with an attractive wife who was about 40.

As I sat conversing with them, he would frantically rub the stump of his amputated limb, for he always shed his artificial leg whenever he was at home (to make himself more helpless?).

Soon I observed that when he had been invited to a party or the opera.

So I realized his pain was a subconscious device to hold his young wife's attention and keep her away from younger men.

Oh, he may occasionally have had "phantom pain," as during a harrowing dream at night. But most of his pain was malingering.

So I hypnotized him every night for a week, thus giving him 8 or 9 hours of refreshing slumber.

It was then I found that he was secretly afraid he couldn't compete with younger men, if he went out on a date with her to the opera or social parties!

Since he was 20 years her senior and with but one leg, he imagined that he would suffer badly in comparison with men more nearly her own age and without any physical handicaps. This anxiety had then made him platonic, so he exaggerated his stump pain as a sex alibi.

Yet his wife was devoted to him and never suspected that his intense "stump pain" was a subconscious sexual ruse (psychosomatic ailment) to insure his dominance of her interest.

The reason I mention this case is to show how even college educated executives and business tycoons can adopt the very same subconscious strategy that toddlers often evolve to coerce their mothers.

Nervous breakdowns and even insanity can result from bottling up inner unsolved problems or tensions that should be "talked out" intelligently.

So send for my booklet "How to Prevent Nervous Breakdowns," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Even the best of players can have a blind spot. When this hand was played in the trials to select the North American team for the world championship a few years ago, all but one declarer failed to count their tricks, and ended up down one in a contract that should have been made.

West's overall presented South with something of a rebid problem. He had a good hand with considerable strength in his opponent's suit, but he had a singleton in his partner's suit. Therefore, he contented himself with a rebid of two no trump, which showed additional values, the slightly misdescribing the shape of his hand, and North raised to game.

Dummy's eight of spades won the first trick, and most declarers used the opportunity of finding themselves in dummy to take the diamond finesse. West won and shifted to the jack of clubs, and because of the unfriendly diamond distribution there was no way for the declarer to come to nine tricks.

The only declarer to make his contract was former world champion George Raapee. He realized that he needed only four diamond tricks for his contract, and that, therefore, he could afford the safety play of first laying down the ace of diamonds. When the king dropped, it was a simple matter to continue the suit and set up a long card to make his game.

Note that, had the king failed to drop, Raapee would have made his contract even if East held four diamonds to the king. After cashing the ace of diamonds, Raapee intended to cross back to dummy twice with hearts to lead diamonds toward his queen-jack. That would guarantee four diamond tricks against all 3-2 splits and any 4-1 distribution where East held the length.
