Contributions Used For Personal Items, Watergate Committee Says

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee says contributions to President Nixon's 1968 campaign were used to buy his wife expensive diamond earrings and may have financed thousands of dollars of luxury items for his Florida home.

The committee said its investigators also built a strong circumstantial case suggesting, but not proving, that C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo, the President's closest friend, may have diverted for his own purposes at least part of a $100,000 contribution from billionaire Howard Hughes.

A White House spokesman called the report "warmed over baloney" based on "unsubstantiated allegations."

The 350-page report said investigators circumvented Rebozo's refusal to cooperate in furnishing requested financial statements by subpoenaing the records of Key Biscayne contractors who might have worked either for Rebozo or the President.

The effort produced information that in the 1968-1972 period Rebozo spent more than $50,000—much of it in $100 bills—for the President's benefit, buying such items as a 20-by-40 foot swimming pool, a fireplace, major architectural changes and a $1,200 pool table.

It also led to the discovery that Rebozo was using four separate trust accounts, not in his name but in that of his attorney, Thomas Wakefield, the report said.

Through these accounts money was channeled to buy diamond earrings for Patricia Nixon's 60th birthday on March 22, 1972, it said.

Federal campaign law does not prohibit using campaign funds for personal expenses, but the Internal Revenue Service says any funds so used would have to be declared as taxable income for the individual involved.

President Nixon's income taxes for the years 1969 through 1972 do not list any such gifts.

The earrings, containing 20 diamonds mounted in platinum, were ordered from New York jeweler Harry Winston and cost $5,650.

But the President paid only $560 with a personal check drawn on a Washington bank, the committee said. It said his secretary, Rose Mary Woods, supplied another $90.

The remaining $5,000 was supplied through the Rebozo-Wakefield trust accounts in the Miami area and most of that amount originated in the 1968 Nixon campaign, the report said.

It traced this complicated series of transactions:

After the 1968 Nixon campaign, Rebozo closed out the account in his Key Biscayne Bank of the Florida Nixon for President Committee and transferred $6,000 to a special account in Wakefield's name.

Small parts of that total were used to defray certain Nixon expenses and to pay certain expenses of John Caulfield, a White House investigator.

The remainder—4,562—remained untouched for nearly three years.

It was then transferred to the trust account maintained in Rebozo's Key Biscayne Bank by Wakefield's law firm, and soon after channeled to the firm's account in the First National Bank of Miami.

On the same day, $5,000 was withdrawn from that account and used to buy a cashier's check made out to the New York jeweler.

Rebozo told the committee in executive session that the money remaining in the Florida Nixon for President account was owed him as payment for his expenses in the campaign.

Investigators said they could not substantiate that point because Rebozo refused to provide the necessary documents.

The committee did not question Rebozo about the diamond earrings because, the report said, he had left the country and was traveling in Europe, unreachable by a subpoena.

Rebozo has maintained in all his appearances that he is free of any misconduct or impropriety in relation to campaign funds.

Even though the committee has gone out of existence, Rebozo's attorneys are pursuing a court suit to enjoin the committee from pursuing its investigation or from seeking contempt of Congress action against him.

In its investigation in Key Biscayne, the committee found $45,621 in expenditures made for Nixon's benefit by Rebozo which were not reflected in Nixon's statements of assets

AT LAST. . .Ground was finally broken today for the city's new public swimming pool at Guy Smith Stadium. Ground Broken For Swimming Pool

Officials of the city and Greenville Recreation Commission broke ground this morning for construction of the city's new public swimming pool.

Mayor S. Eugene West and Recreation Commission chairman Mrs. Louis W. Gaylord Jr. presided at the brief ceremony at Guy Smith Stadium. Members of the City Council and the Recreation Commission were also present.

The pool complex will include three separate pools. A 5,350 square foot "L" shaped main pool for 25-meter and 25-yard racing will be provided as well as a 1,520 square foot diving well with a one-meter and three-meter diving board and a 400 square foot wading pool for small children.

The three pools will be connected by approximately 10,000 square feet of reinforced concrete deck, and the entire complex will be enclosed within a six foot high chain link fence.

Construction cost of the pools is $144,150, the city reported, with total project cost, including pools, bathhouse, and parking area estimated at $250,000. The project is financed with Shared Revenue Funds.

Construction of the 2,300 square foot bathhouse and 10,000 square foot deck is expected to begin in the near future with the entire facility projected to be completed and ready for use by the summer of 1975.

The completed complex will accomodate a total of 645 persons and is designed for use by the physically handicapped. The Recreation Department will operate the facility.

Architect for the pool project is William E. Friend, AIA, of Greenville while general contractor is Gatlinburg Construction Co. of Gatlinburg, Tenn.

CONVICTED MUST TAKE TEST

If a person has a minor car accident in which there are no injuries, but the one at fault is given a citation, does he have to take the written test when he applies to have his driver's license renewed? Mrs. C.T.P.

Sorry, but any motor vehicles law violation conviction (including prayer for judgment continued) within the preceding four years of a person's application for renewal of his driver's license calls for his taking the written test. Exemption of those who have no such conviction or other mental or physical condition that might impair their driving ability became effective June 1, according to Sgt. Pete Eure of the Highway Patrol Station here.

Guess it's a goal for us all.

NOT ENOUGH MAGNETISM

I am a motorcyclist and would like to know why a traffic light won't turn green for a left turn with the arrow in it when a motorcycle approaches it. It happens only if a car approaches from either behind me or across the intersection from me. Can a motorcyclist turn left on a red light in this case? J.E.G.

Division of Highways District Engineer Charles Snell said that these left-on-the-arrow signals are activated by magnetism between magnetized loops buried in the pavement and the iron in most vehicles. Apparently some motorcycles don't have enough steel (iron is a component of steel) to set up the magnetic action, he said.

Lt. Carl Gilchrist of the N.C. Highway Patrol Office here said you could not legally go unless you have a go signal. Sorry.

WANTS TO RESERVE BOOTH

Who would I contact to reserve a commercial booth at the N. C. State Fair? D. P.

The Agricultural Extension Office Secretary Mrs. Frances Cobb suggested you contact the fair manager, Arthur K. Pitzer. His address is N. C. State Fair, Box 5565, Raleigh, N.C. 27607.

FEEDBACK

Hotline is happy to report that our appeal for a room for a man from Washington County who must receive kidney dialysis treatment at Pitt Memorial Hospital twice a week was answered with several offers from Greenville citizens. The Washington County Social Services Department reports that the gentleman is staying at the Best Value Motel in Greenville and is taking his meals free of charge at the Greenville Nursing Home, as offered by the administrator of the nursing home, George Wilson. Wilson is also providing the former merchant marine with transportation to and from the hospital for his six-hour treatments every Tuesday and Thursday. The man is making his home here temporarily until he can be admitted to the Veterans' hospital in Norfolk, which will take approximately three months, according to the Social Services Dept. Hotline received five offers of accomodations, most free of charge to the gentleman, and we extend our thanks to our readers for their generosity.

Procedure Rules Given Approval

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A "Rules of Procedure" governing the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission was adopted Wednesday night at a special call meeting of the joint commission. The rules cover make up of the joint body, internal procedures, and authorizations assigned the body.

The subject was on the June 26 regular meeting, but had been tabled until last night's special call meeting to give members time to study the document.

Action on another subject, an amendment to the Zoning ordinance, was tabled until the regular meeting to be held July 24.

Also tabled was action on a Sediment Control Ordinance. The joint commission was scheduled to consider this subject for the purpose of recommending action to the City Council. However, it was revealed that since County Commissioners had cut from the budget funds for a person to supervise sediment control, the commission will need to await action by the City Council before making a recommendation.

The cost of advertising fees for legally required rezoning notices appearing in newspaper has been raised. City Planner John Schofield explained that from May 1973 to May 1974 the city had to absorb more than $550 difference between actual advertising costs and amounts paid in by those advertising.

Under a new arrangement, persons with rezoning notices will pay the actual advertising costs plus a standard $5.00 fee.

In a final action by the joint commission, recommendation for approval was given to a request for rezoning Windy Ridge Subdivision (formerly Sandy Acres) from RA-20 to R-9 residential. The property is located on Bells Branch near Brook Valley.

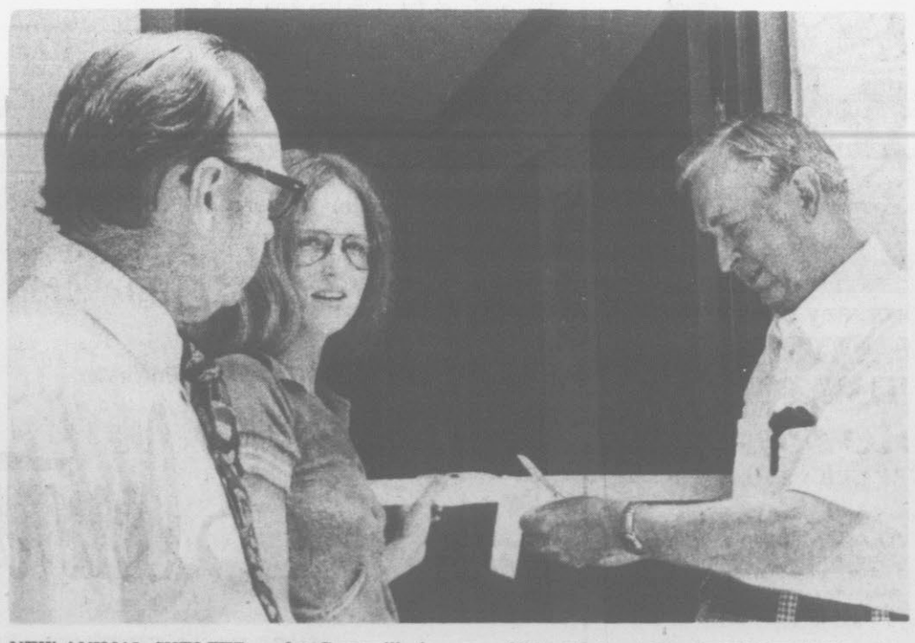

Following the special call meeting of the joint commission, the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission went into session to consider four items.

On a request to annex Lake Ellsworth, the commission recommended approval with a stipulation that the streets be brought up to the standards of construction required by the city.

Also recommended for approval was a revised preliminary plat for River Hill Estates. Developers agreed to add an additional lot to bring the recreation area up to 3.12 acres. For the same property, commissioners recommended approval of a final plat for Section 1, Blocks 3, 4 and 5 of Block A. The property is zoned for R-6.

Recommendation for approval was voted for the final plat of Windy Ridge Subdivision (formerly Sandy Acres). This recommendation is for Section I, containing ten lots, and now meets standards recommended by the County Health Department.

A final city action was approval of a name change for a street. The street in Belvedere formerly named Stafford will be changed to Staffordshire. Request for the name change was made by Judge Charles Whedbee.

Final Arguments Before The Jury

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Associate special Watergate prosecutor William H. Merrill conceded today that John D. Ehrlichman did not approve a break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, but said the former presidential assistant was guilty of plotting an illegal, nontraceable secret search.

Making his final argument to the jury, Merrill said, "It's clear that no one used the word break-in because a break-in was not contemplated ...

"To talk about a break-in would not only be inconsistent with covert, but inconsistent with nontraceable," Merrill said.

Direct testimony and memos entered in evidence at the 11-day-old plumbers trial have said Ehrlichman approved a covert operation on condition it not be traced back to the White House.

Ehrlichman conceded giving approval in the summer of 1971 but denied he ever contemplated anything illegal.

Ehrlichman and three others are charged with violating the civil rights of the psychiatrist, Dr. Lewis J. Fielding of Beverly Hills, Calif., whose office was broken into Sept. 3, 1971.

Ehrlichman is also charged with four counts of lying to the FBI and a federal grand jury.

President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger both provided evidence for the defense Wednesday.

The closing arguments are likely to occupy most of today's session. U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell said he will delay his final instructions until Friday, with the six man-six woman jury begins deliberations.

In court on Wednesday, Kissinger testified for less than two minutes and the President submitted written answers to six questions submitted to the White House by Ehrlichman's attorneys.

Kissinger, who repeatedly has denied any knowledge of the special White House investigative unit known as the plumbers, was called as a defense witness by Ehrlichman's lawyers.

The plumbers, under codirectors David R. Young and Egil "Bud" Krogh, planned and carried off an illegal search of Fielding's offices on Sept. 3, 1971.

Young, brought to the White House by Kissinger when he

City Opens New Animal Shelter

Greenville's long-awaited animal shelter was opened yesterday with a ribbon cutting by Mayor Eugene West.

Pitt County Humane Society President Liz Whalen and City Engineer Charlie Holliday participated in the ceremony at the Shelter yesterday morning.

Located on Cemetery Road, the shelter will serve as headquarters for the Animal Control Divison of the City Inspections Department.

The Shelter contains a small office and storage facility, as well as 20 individual pens for dogs. Separate facilities for cats will be added in the near future. All pens provide both sheltered and unsheltered area for animals.

Chapin Construction Company was general contractor on the building which cost approximately $15,000. The building's design is based on standards developed by the American Society For Prevention Of Cruelty To Animals, as well as suggestions from the local Humane Society.

Commenting on the opening of the shelter, Chief Inspector Alton Warren requested the public's cooperation in the City's overall Animal Control Program. He said during the initial year of the program, emphasis will be placed on two objectives: 1) informing animal owners and the general public of their responsibility under the City's new Animal Control Ordinance; and, 2) reducing the City's stray animal population by picking up and humanely destroying all animals not being properly cared for by their owners.

The chief inspector reminded all citizens that city license tags and rabies inoculation tags are required for all dogs within the city limits. He also requested animal owners' cooperation in compliance with the ordinance restricting animals to their owners' property between the hours of 9:00 p.m. in the evening and 7:00 a.m. in the morning.

The new Animal Shelter will be open from 7 to 9 a.m. and from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and by appointment on other days. Telephone number of the Animal Control Divison is 752-1731.

Funds for the construction of the Shelter were provided through Revenue Sharing.

Jim Swinson is the City's Animal Control Officer.

Cindy Allen Merit Winner

Cindy C. Allen, 120 Avon Lane, Greenville, has been awarded a Meredith College Merit Scholarship, it was announced today by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. She joins more than 3,300 winners of Merit Scholarships named nationwide in April and early May.

A graduate of Rose High School, Miss Allen plans to major in American civilization in college. A member of the National Honor Society and of Quill and Scroll, she has served as a Governor's School delegate (1973), Head Marshal, yearbook editor, Health Careers Club president, and Governor's page. A graduation speader, she is the recipient of a Julia Hamlet Harris Scholarship, a 1974 J.H. Rose Social Studies Award, and a 1972 J.H. Rose French II Award.

Her scholarship will provide between $100 and $1,500 per year ($400 to $6,000 over four college years). The amount of her annual stipend is determined by the sponsoring institution and is based on family financial circumstances and the costs of attending the college.

She was selected from among Finalists in the Merit Program who will attend Meredith, a four-year liberal arts college for women, founded by North Carolina Baptists in 1891.

CINDY ALLEN

All winners of Merit Scholarships were chosen from some 14,000 Finalists in the Merit Program. All scored in the top half of one percent of their state's graduating high school seniors on the qualifying test and met other requirements to advance to Finalist standing in the 1974 competition.

Reader Tells Of Changes And Outlook

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: How could you brush off that poor guy who signed himself "Double Ugly" with all that Sunday school pap?

"Beauty is only skin deep," and "inner beauty counts more than outer beauty" are the usual cliches, but try to impress a hopelessly unattractive loved one—or a personnel director with these facts.

I was born ugly—flapping ears, crooked teeth, and a hare-lip, lop-sided nose, bad skin---name it, I had it. My loving parents were too poor to do anything about it, but when I got old enough to earn my own money, I put aside a little every pay day, and instead of buying a car, I went to the best plastic surgeon and dentist I could find.

Over a period of a few months I had a new face, a new outlook, and a new chance for a normal life. I am now happily married to a lovely woman, have three fine children, a good job, and encouraging prospects.

I hope this makes your column. No one should have to live with handicaps he can overcome. N. S. IN N.Y.

DEAR N: You are right. Unfortunately people are too often taken at "face value." Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY:The letter from the 21-year-old girl who thinks she can hold a man by going to bed with him must have been written by my daughter. That's HER problem.

I can't communicate with her. She resents my advice. The first time she goes out with a man she goes to bed with him. I know it's true because I hear her telling her girl friend about it. (Could she be oversexed?) She lives at home, but meets her dates somewhere else and is dropped off at the corner.

She is a beautiful girl but she's never had a steady boyfriend, which is what she wants.

Once I suggested that she see a psychiatrist but she refused. Abby, you always recommend "therapy." Please tell me what a therapist could do for her and I'll get her to one if I have to drag her there. HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: A therapist will try to help her to understand the reason for her behavior. (Promiscuous people are usually very insecure and have a low opinion of themselves.) A therapist will try to help her build her self-esteem so she can develop better and more lasting relationships.

Don't "drag" you daughter to a therapist. Psychotherapy, unlike castor oil, which will work no matter how you get it down, is useless when forced on an uncooperative patient.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that her father was 80, looked like 60, and he loved to dance. He also loved to show off, and he'd put on an exhibition every chance he got. She asked how she could stop her father from making a donkey out of himself at the forthcoming wedding of her son.

You replied, "Let him dance, and thank heaven you aren't shlepping chicken soup to him at some rest home every day."

Abby, my father is 79, and he loves to dance, too, but his dancing days are over. He had a stroke two years ago and now he's lying partially paralyzed in a rest home. Believe me, I've shlepped enough chicken soup there to feed an army.

My father asks me to read "Dear Abby" to him every night, and when I read that letter about the dancing father, he smiled and said, "Please write to Dear Abby and tell her that Jake sends his love." So I'm writing to tell you that Jake sends his love. And so do I. JAKE'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Tell Jake that I send my love to him, too.

Leader Of Elderly Stresses Life

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Sex after 60? At least twice a week for longer, happier and healthier lives, says a leader of a seminar on the sexual behavior of the elderly.

"It is completely normal for men in their 70s or 80s to be capable of normal, pleasurable sexual relations, and for their partners to respond equally as well," says Helen Parsons, a social worker who leads a series of seminars on the concerns of senior citizens.

But most elderly people repress their instincts because of the "puritanical attitude of society which makes the public think that older people don't have sexual desires," Mrs. Parsons said.

About 30 persons attended a recent seminar that was advertised throughout the city. Many senior-citizen clubs refused to listen to "such dirty things," she said.

"It is terribly wrong what society has done," said Mrs. Parsons. "Of course sexual desires and ability for sexual intercourse live in every man and woman — regardless of their age."

One elderly woman blushed daintily and rushed out of the room when she discovered the topic to be discussed was sex.

Society's adulation of youth, dirty-old-men jokes and the snickers that accompany news that an elderly man has wed a woman less than half his age reinforce guilt older people have toward sex, Mrs. Parsons said.

Sexual inhibitions in older people are strengthened by other impediments to an active sex life, she added.

There aren't enough elderly men to go around, she pointed out, because men tend to marry women younger than themselves. She said 57 per cent of those over 65 are women and two-thirds of the women are widows.

Many of those widows never have sex after their husbands die because they feel guilty about pursuing a man, she said.

A lack of privacy also hampers sexuality, Mrs. Parsons said. Nursing home patients can't visit privately with their spouses. And many older couples live with their children or grandchildren and don't have many chances to be alone.

Pension and federal Social Security regulations also discourage remarriage because payments then are adjusted downward. Mrs. Parsons said many older persons have gotten around those problems by not bothering to get married and living in "Social Security sin."

A geriatrics nurse, Mrs. Dorothy Saltman, said even patients who've been told by their doctors to "take it easy" can indulge in sex — and it can help some of them.

"Sexual intercourse is good, healthy exercise, comparable to a brisk walk around the block or climbing a flight of stairs. In fact it is quite beneficial."

Mrs. Saltman said the adrenalin and cortisone released by the body during sex often eases pain from arthritis.

"Enjoying sex is evidence that one is living. It is an affirmation of life and a denial of death," Mrs. Parsons said.

Japanese cuisine calls for maximum advance preparation, such as slicing, dicing, mincing, or marinating, but a minimum actual cooking time.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Speaking of stereotypes, where does it say that a woman was born to read road maps?

For generations, it has been assumed that the moment a man climbs behind the wheel of a car, the glove compartment door opens automatically, dispensing a road map into the waiting hands of the "little woman."

It happened to me right after the wedding when we climbed into the car to embark on our honeymoon. The glove compartment door snapped open depositing a grease-stained road map into my lap. (I knew it was old when I noted that the six southern states were labelled The Confederacy.)

"I don't read road maps," I said.

My new husband looked at me like I had just announced I slept in a tree hanging from six toes. "Whatya mean, you don't read road maps?"

"I get sick and throw up if I read when a car is in motion."

"So, why didn't you tell me this before we were married?"

"What was all that jazz about sickness and health?" I snapped.

"Big deal! You better worry about how we're going to get to Goose Fork, Michigan."

"Couldn't we stop and ask?"

Now, that's the first revelation. A woman soon finds out that is the last thing a man does. I have seen my husband bite his necktie in half in a rage. I have seen him reading the moss on the tree in the middle of the Everglades. I have seen him going the wrong way on a one-way express shouting, "Same to you, fella," but he never stops and asks.

The second revelation is that no matter how expert you become in reading road maps, he refuses to believe one word of what you are saying.

He once argued that the Colorado River wasn't. It was just a low spot that had been irrigated. That the New Jersey turnpike was built in a circle and that I purposely routed him through New York City at 5 p.m. to punish him for not making a kidney stop all day long.

In an effort to Help Stamp Out Sexism, I recently suggested to my husband that we trade roles. So I drove the car and he read the road map. You know something? It blew another myth. Grown men do too cry . . . out loud, with their head in the no-draft . . . while chewing a road map into little pieces.

Mrs. Sue May Attending Meet

The purpose of the seminar, which is sponsored by the North Carolina Home Economics Association, is to up date professionals in current housing trends.

"Human Needs in Housing" will be discussed by Dr. James Montgomery, who is department head of housing, College of Home Economics, Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Dr. Savannah S. Day, School of Home Economics, Florida State University, will also appear on the program. The roster of in-state speakers includes Nancy Holmes, School of Home Economics, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and Charles E. McKinney, dean, School of Design, North Carolina State University.

Special emphasis will be placed on designing housing to meet needs of elderly and handicapped. "Resources For Locating and Financing Housing," "Second Home Phenomenon" and "Factors Involved In Working With Architects and Contractors" are among other topics on the agenda.

Several tours are scheduled for the group including a visit to Otto Zenke, Inc., Decorator Internationally.

Jury Indicts Senator Gurney

By F.T. MACFEELY
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Edward J. Gurney has been indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with a $233,000 fund-raising effort involving contractors and developers seeking U.S. housing contract influence.

The Florida Republican was charged with bribery, conspiracy, taking part in a cover-up and lying to the special grand jury. The panel returned the indictment Wednesday after a 10-month investigation.

Conviction on all counts could bring up to a 42-year prison term.

No arraignment date was set for Gurney or six other men indicted.

Gurney, the first U.S. senator in 50 years to be indicted while in office, said he is innocent:

"I have an abiding faith in the American system of justice and firmly believe that I will be proved innocent of any wrongdoing in this affair."

Gurney, 60, of Winter Park, a member of the Senate Watergate committee and a staunch supporter of President Nixon both on the committee and off, is up for re-election this year. Florida Republican Chairman L.E. Thomas said the indictment "dealt a mortal blow" to Gurney's re-election bid.

The grand jury probe began after The Miami Herald reported that a Gurney aide obtained funds in Gurney's name from builders hoping to win his influence with the Federal Housing Administration.

Indicted with Gurney were:

James Lee Groot of Washington, Gurney's former administrative assistant; Earl M. Crittenden of Orlando, former Florida GOP chairman; George Anderson of Winter Park, the senator's 1968 campaign treasurer; Joseph Bastien, the head of Gurney's field office in Winter Park; and FHA officials Wayne Swiger of Tampa and Ralph M. Koontz of Jacksonville.

The 33-page indictment also lists 42 unindicted coconspirators. They include contractors and developers, housing officials and the chief fund-raiser, Larry E. Williams of Orlando.

Williams pleaded guilty early this year to channeling a bribe and attempting to avoid income taxes. He was sentenced to six months in prison.

John Priestes, a builder, and William Pelski, a former FHA official, also were sentenced on guilty pleas stemming from the investigation. Both are from Miami.

The indictment says Williams approached Crittenden on Jan. 9, 1971, about raising money and had further discussion with Crittenden and Anderson a week later.

"On or about Jan. 19, 1971, Edward J. Gurney, James L. Groot, Earl M. Crittenden, Joseph Bastien and George Anderson met at the home of Edward J. Gurney in Winter Park, at which time they discussed the setting up of a fund-raising operation for the benefit of Edward J. Gurney and decided to hire Larry E. Williams as the fund-raiser," the indictment says.

Pathologist Says Two Dead Were Suffocated By Gags

By JIM BARLOW
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A pathlogist who identified five victims in the Houston mass murders undergoes more cross examination by lawyers for Elmer Wayne Henly today.

Dr. Joseph A. Jachimczyk, the medical examiner for Harris County (Houston) testified Wednesday that two of the 27 victims died of suffocation. He said gags were crammed in their mouths and their faces were covered with adhesive tape.

Jachimczyk also told how a Lufkin, Tex., pathologist, Dr. Jack Pruitt, missed three bullet wounds in one of the victims and certified that Homer Garcia, 15, died of stangulation.

The medical examiner's testimony came in the trial of Henley, 18, charged with and being tried for the murder of six of 27 youths whose bodies were discovered last August in three locations in and around Houston.

Jachimczyk certified death in five of those deaths and testified he identified them mostly by dental records. The sixth victim, William Ray Lawrence, 15, underwent an autopsy by the Lufkin pathologist.

Defense lawyer Will Gray tried during an hour of cross examination Wednesday to shake Jachimczyk's identification of the bodies. Under Texas law, the state must not only prove that a defendant committed a murder but also must prove the victim is the person named in the indictment.

All six victims had been dead from two weeks to 18 months when their bodies were recovered and were in advanced stages of decomposition, making identification difficult.

At the close of Wednesday's session, District Court Judge Preston Dial extended his ban on reporters talking with members of the jury to "persons residing with a juror or any relative."

The warning came after a San Antonio newspaper contacted jurors' families Tuesday and asked them how their spouses' serving on the jury had affected their lives.

After Gray learned of the contacts, he asked for a mistrial and was overruled.

The lawyer again asked that the jury be sequestered during the trial. Dial again refused.

Charged With Motor Larceny

Two Edgecombe County youths were arrested by Edgecombe and Pitt County Sheriff's deputies yesterday and charged with larceny.

According to Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson, Robert E. Williams, 17, and Charles E. Williams, 18, both of Rt. 1, Box 402, Tarboro were arrested at their place of work, the Long Manufacturing Co. of Tarboro.

The two were arrested in connection with the recent rash of thefts of gasoline motors from cucumber picker equipment in the county, according to Tyson.

Both were placed in the county jail under $500 bond.

Two motors were recovered by deputies, one belonging to B.B. Tetterton of Rt. 5, Greenville and one owned by William Whitehurst, of Rt. 1, Bethel.

According to Tyson further arrests from out of state are expected in the case.

Ten Area People Caught In Sweep

By CARL L. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A state-wide round-up of illegal drug dealers, which began late Tuesday and continued today, by the State Bureau of Investigation, has netted 122 arrest across the state, according to the state SBI head, Charles Dunn.

Ten individuals have been arrested from Pitt County, according to Dunn, with the last person arrested listed as Johnny Marrow. The state SBI office listed no age or address for Marrow.

Marrow was charged with the sale and possession of marijuana, according to Dunn.

The investigation began some three months ago which lead up to yesterday's coordinated arrest by state and local law enforcement officers.

Some 200 officers were involved in the massive round-up, the largest single drug arrest in the history of the state.

Arrest were expected to be made in 27 counties. Dunn stated the individuals arrested were not necessarily linked together in their drug sales, but that some could be connected.

He estimated that about 25 per cent of the arrest involved the sale of heroin, 25 per cent involved various hallucinogen drugs, 30 per cent involved marijuana and the remainder such drugs as codeine and cocaine.

"What we have done is closed out several undercover campaigns," stated the director.

"One reason we did this was so that we could make the public realize that drugs are still very much a problem with us . . . it is evident from this raid that the scope of the problem in North Carolina is great, both as to the location and the types of drugs involved," Dunn added.

Dunn pointed out that another interesting point about this raid was the age of the individuals involved.

"We are dealing with more than just young people," he added.

The SBI director indicated he did not feel this raid would slow down the drug traffic in North Carolina a great deal, but that it could "cripple" it for a while.

"It will depend on how fast they obtain bond and get back out on the street," he stated.

Some 25-50 SBI agents have been involved in the operation and about $15,000 has been spent in making "buys" leading up to the arrest, Dunn indicated.

"Fourteen different drugs were purchased under this campaign," he added.

All of the arrest in Pitt County dealt with the sale and possession of marijuana, while one man was also charged with the sale and possession of MDA.

Guilford County led with the most arrest at 25.

WOM Are Meeting

Women of the Moose, Greenville Chapter No. 1308 will hold the first meeting of the chapter year tonight at the Moose Temple at eight o'clock, according to Mrs. Peggy Jamieson, senior regent.

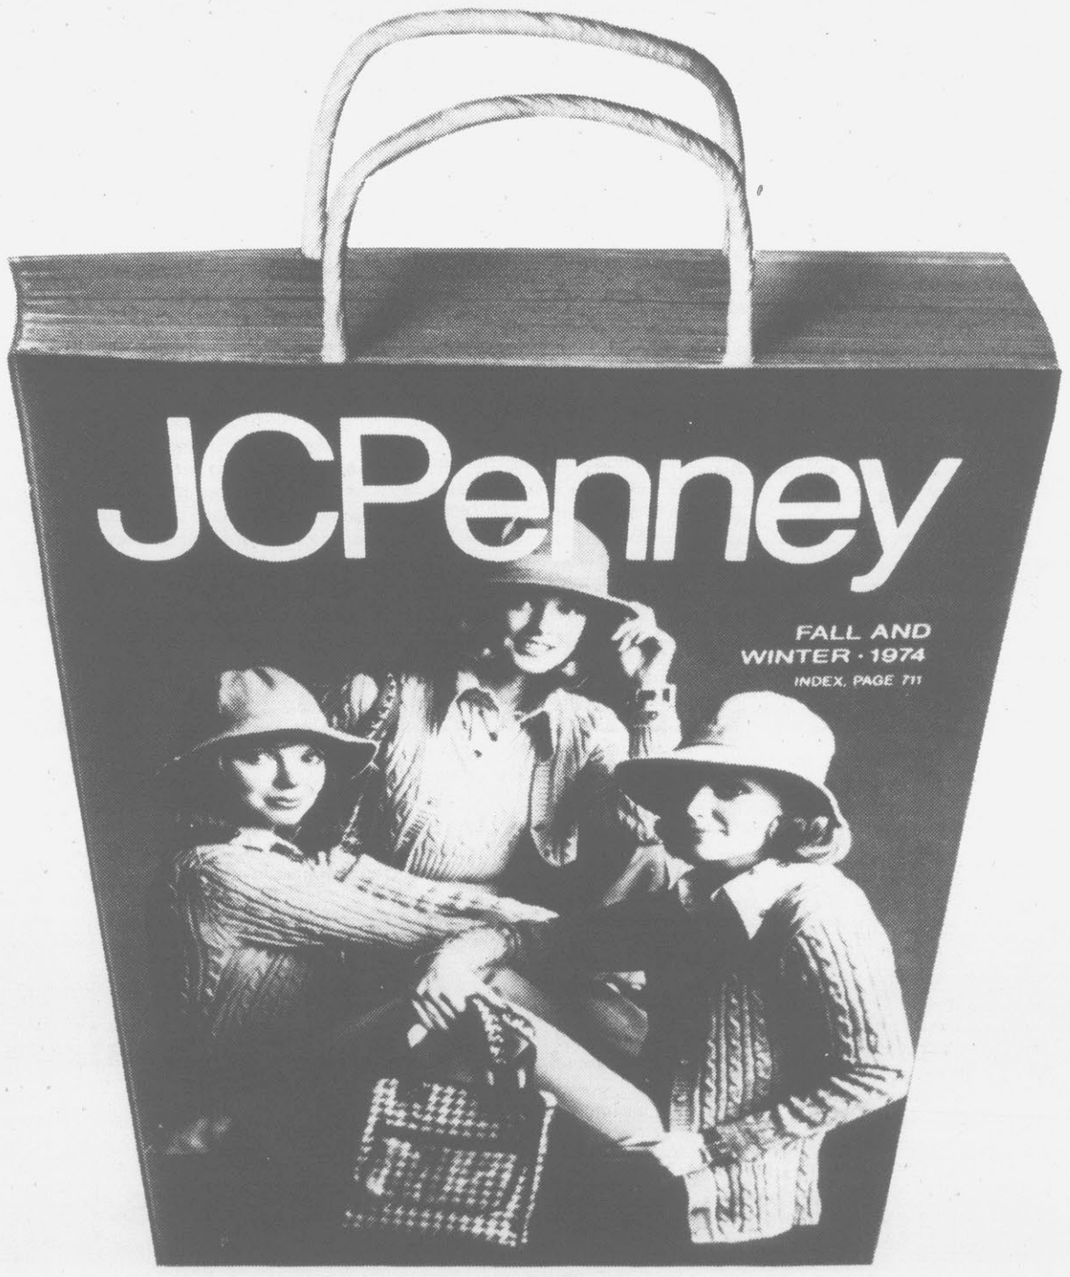

Plans for the upcoming year were discussed by chapter officers and committee chairmen at a dinner meeting in the Red Room of the Moose Temple Tuesday night. Invited guests included Jack P. Morgan, governor of Greenville Moose Lodge No. 875, and James A. Harris, WMOT photographer.

Mrs. Jamieson told the group that the organization has an important role to play in community affairs during the coming year, in addition to their activities on behalf of Mooseheart, the Moose home for children, and Moosehaven, a home for the elderly.

Unrest Not Typical Of Young

It is difficult to say whether it was summer madness or Independence Day fever that caused unrest at Atlantic Beach—which is a favorite beach spot for our area—last week.

There were many arrests and a midnight curfew was instituted after several nights of bottle and stone throwing at the beach area. Reports were that stores and homes were damaged by the vandalism. Arrests were made for public drunkeness, resisting arrest and disturbing the peace.

It was significant to us that the Associated Press report said that about 150 youths were involved in the trouble. Since there are thousands of young people at Atlantic Beach over a July 4 holiday weekend, it is not difficult to see that most of them were well behaved and took no part in the trouble making.

As always, a few unruly people can spoil an enjoyable weekend for everybody.

Fortunately most of the young people at Atlantic Beach for the weekend stayed out of trouble. Those who wanted trouble were brought under control and things returned to normal. The great majority of our young are not malicious and we should never let a trouble-making few cast the image for the young as a whole.

Government Ownership Might Be Best Approach

President Nixon visited the Mar-A-Lago estate which was given to the government by the late Marjorie Merriweather Post, a cereal heiress.

The estate will be used for presidential visits and by other high ranking foreign visitors.

The gift spotlights the problems encountered in expenditure of federal funds on vacation homes owned by the president.

It might be best if future presidents relaxed in homes such as the Post estate, where ownership lies with the government and improvements would be retained by the government.

Would Like Smith

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

CRESWELL, N.C. (AP)—J.B. McGowan would have liked Adam Smith, although he doesn't know who Smith was.

That's partly because J.B. likes most everyone. But Smith, the 18th century author of "The Wealth of Nations" would be a kindred soul.

Smith's book propounded the theory of individual free enterprise capitalism. J.B., in an age of corporate business, is putting that theory into practice.

To find J.B., one drives south out of the farming village of Creswell (pop. 633) in eastern North Carolina and heads through the corn and soybean fields toward one of the newest and largest corporate farms in the nation, First Colony Farm.

A mile or so from First Colony's grain elevator is a sign proclaiming the existence of "McGowanville. Founded April 1, 1973." It's not on the map yet.

McGowanville consists of a small blue general store with a lunch counter and a self-service gas pump out front and "McGowan Drive," a dirt path off the road flanked by seven house trailers.

But it's much larger in the dreams of J.B. McGowan, who owns the whole thing.

J.B. is the beefy 36-year-old with short red hair shoveling dirt in his bare feet around in the back of the store. He smiles broadly and offers a free Coke to a visitor as he shows off the store.

Not too long ago, J.B. McGowan was, like his neighbors, struggling to keep things together. He farmed 140 acres and he worked as a boiler operator in the pulp mill at Plymoth, 20 miles away.

Then a wealthy New Yorker, Malcolm McLean, decided to buy and clear off hundreds of thousands of woodland acres and cash in on the rising price of grains. First Colony Farm was established.

J.B. McGowan saw the main chance coming his way. "I figure if you don't put your money on the table when the dice is rolling, you can't win nothing," he says.

There was a little church building down the road from J.B.'s farm. It was deserted because declining population in the area could no longer support it.

J.B. went to see the people down at the Washington County Production Credit Association and the man at East Carolina Bank, got a loan, and bought the church.

He turned most of the farm work over to his teen-aged boys and remodeled the church. It became the store and lunch counter, catering to the farm's new employes.

Things took off from there. J.B. saw that the farm employes needed someplace to live and he bought the trailers to rent out.

Right now, he's leveling the ground alongside the store for a dining room addition, doing the work himself. Mrs. McGowan tends the cash register in the store.

Business, J.B. reports, "is real good. I'm renting those trailers out as fast as I can get 'em in there. I'm hoping to buy lots more." He's also thinking about buying some prefabricated motel units for the salesmen who call at the farm offices.

The store takes a lot of time. "I figure that's the key to success in a rural store. You've got to stay open. We try to open around 7 in the morning and we stay open til we don't see no lights coming down the

Museum Site Stirs Arguments

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Do North Carolinians across the state really care where a new state art museum is located?

Probably not, leaders of both sides in the broiling controversy agree. And so the debate has been largely provincial—centered around Raleigh people, and only a handful of people from other locations.

So it is that those battling for a central city location—having exhausted a course of appeals through the General Assembly, the location committee, the Council of State, and others will likely yield to the pressures which have held firm for a suburban site.

The last ditch effort by Raleigh Mayor Clarence Lightner, State Representatives Howard Twiggs, Wade Smith, and Ward Purrington, all of Raleigh and State Sen. McNeill Smith of Greensboro came recently as they sought reversal of the suburban site decision, appealing to the commission on state building locations made up of those elected members of the Council of State, chaired by Gov. James E. Holshouser, plus a couple of representatives from the General Assembly.

Out Of Town

The vote was overwhelming support for the site committee decision to go out of town several miles.

The basic arguments for the suburbs are that a legal committee made the recommendation, and that decision shouldn't be lightly overturned. The rationale behind that decision was that a suburban site would provide adequate parking, cheaper land expansive landscaping potential (including a pond), and space for a low-level and sprawling facility with room for future growth.

Downtowners argued basically that an art museum as part of the state government mall complex would attract more people, appeal to pedestrians, provide a handsome addition to the plans for a downtown complex, and keep the "heart" of the state intact.

Senator Smith put it this way: "The Old Capitol is the heart of the state. If you take it and pull it apart several miles, you will have done something to the very heart of the state."

School kids visitng Raleigh on excursions made up a considerable portion of concern on both sides, with those favoring downtown noting that the children could see the art museum while visitng the Capitol, legislative building, other museums, etc. Suburban site supporters countered that the trip to the art museum ought to be an event in itself, not just part of a Raleigh run-through.

While the General Assembly was in session, the Senate voted to put the buidling downtown, but as house consideration was blocked in committee.

All Alone

In Senate debate, State Sen. Hamilton Horton of Winston-Salem emotionally summarized the thoughts of those favoring a downtown location when he painted a verbal picture of a prawling, marble temple of the arts, vacant of any occupants other than the curator who strolls the empty galleries in awesome and splendid isolation, gleefully surveying his domain and exulting, "Mine, all mine," while not another person is in sight.

Does the average North Carolinian know enough, or care enough, about such a decision to be involved? Probably not, admits Rep. Wade Smith, and the elected officials making the decision for the people are doing the right thing.

"There's no impropriety here. Everybody from the committee on up is doing what he truly thinks is right." So, Smith does not envision an appeal of the suburban site decision.

Two recourses appear open: the courts; the 1975 General Assembly.

As to action in the courts, both sides agree that everything has been legal and above-board in the decision-making process and court action would be shaky.

As to action by the General Assembly next winter, that isn't likely if, as expected construction on the suburban site gets underway before the Legislature convenes.

A $20-million plus art museum is going to add class to whatever location is finally used. As it stands now, the museum will be built next to the Polk Youth Center prison unit which will be relocated, and be in the neighborhood of the state's motor pool building and National Guard military center, rather than the downtown complex of state buildings.

Ingram Unsure About Future

By JOHN KILGO

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, just back from a trip abroad to look at insurance programs used in other countries, maintains he hasn't decided about his political future. But some Democrats are meeting to dethrone Ingram, if indeed he decides to seek another term in office.

Some people who tried to get a no-fault auto insurance bill passed in the Legislature feel Ingram did what he could to lay the way with land mines. Ingram denies the charges, and says he was "acting in the best interests of the people of North Carolina."

Nevertheless, some discussions have been held to find a "heavy weight" candidate to oppose Ingram in 1976, should he seek reelection. One Deomocrat, who has attended at least one such discussion, says: "We need a man like Neill Jones to run and beat Ingram."

Neill Jones is a former state senator from Wadesboro. He served as chairman of the Governor's Committee to come up with a no-fault plan, and he has few good feelings for Ingram. He is definitely one who feels Ingram hurt the committee's chances of passing a good no-fault plan for North Carolina.

Jones isn't saying much at this moment, but he does admit there has been talk about finding a candidate to oppose Ingram. And he further admits that he has been talked to about running, and hasn't ruled out the possiblitiy of that happening.

"I would rather practice law in Wadesboro," Jones said, "but if no one qualified can be persuaded to run for that position, I would likely take a close look at it."

Ingram, meanwhile, maintains that he presented "the best no-fault plan to the Legislature, but the General Assembly spent so much time killing a bad bill, they didn't have time to consider a good one."

Ingram says the no-fault bill that was killed probaly would not have lowered the insurance rates in the state. He says his bill would have lowered rates for safe drivers.

The Insurance Commissioner says if people are meeting searching for a candidate to run against him, "they would probably be the same insurance people who think perhaps we're moving in an area of real reform for the people of North Carolina. These people have opposed us before."

Some skeptics have charged that Ingram is using his present office as a stepping stone to higher office, or more specifically, as a rung on the ladder that he hopes would led to the Governor's mansion.

"I've been too busy trying to fulfill my promises to the people to consider what I'm going to do two years from now," he says. "I have too much work yet to be accomplished, and discussing my political plans might jeopardize the programs we're trying to get through. I have not decided what, if anything, I'll run for in 1976, and I don't know when I will decide."

Ingram says the office of Insurance Commissioner offers "opportunity for greater service to the people that I ever anticipated." And while he won't discuss his political plans, some who would like to see him defeated believe he will not run for Governor in 1976. If he runs for reelection to his present post, he can most likely expect major opposition in the Democratic primary.

WatergateWas Far Away

With the Congress scattered, the Supreme Court in recess, and the President out of town, last week provided a fine time for a newsman's vacation. On Wednesday I covered this Underwood like a birdcage, and for four days stayed home and did nothing. It was an altogether Glorious Fourth.

There was, of course, the usual work to be done around the farm, but such work is work only if you make your living at it. When one is not compelled to ride a tractor, riding a tractor is almost as pleasant as floating around a millpond fishing from a rowboat. Mowing requires no intellectual effort. Whether one is making hay or just cutting grass, the labor is rewarding; the sweat is honest sweat, and the job has a visible terminal point: There's always one last row.

Over at Hawthorn Farm, where my son and daughter-in-law live, they were getting in wheat. One afternoon their rickety old combine dropped a part or threw a shoe, and hours were lost while the men searched vainly for the missing piece. Then a thunderstorm came rolling over the mountains, purple as a bruise, and laid the ripe wheat flat. More time was lost while the wheat got back on its feet the next day. They finally patched up the combine and trucked the warm golden grain over to the mill at Rapidan. They got $3.64 a bushel. There wasn't much dollar profit—probably none at all, by strict cost accounting—but there were inner rewards.

The thunderstorm brought fringe benefits. It camped for about five minutes right over our house, and tossed down a couple of scary bolts of lightning. There was a glare, a zz-a-ap and a crash of thunder all in a single second, and when the dishes stopped rattling the TV sets were dead. This eliminated the morning and evening news, along with the Sunday talk shows, and let me say this: It is amazing how well one survives without them.

Thus deprived of Barbara Walters, it was possible to watch the barn swallows instead. A pair of them have been nesting in the garage. They built a castle turret on top of a ledge near the ceiling. On the third of July, four chicks hatched. We could see their fuzzy little black-faced heads hung over the edge of the mud nest, for all the world like Ollie the Dragon in the old puppet shows. One morning I spent a solid hour watching mama and papa swooping in and out, punching food down those gaping mouths. Let me say this, too, that watching swallows beats watching Barbara Walters.

The baby swallows have plenty of infant company. Sunday afternoon a troop of baby quail came running in tiny steps across the lawn. They looked like so many Brownies on an all-day hike. We have a new collie puppy, Piper by name. He didn't know what to make of the quail, but Piper finds every day a day of discovery. He spends his afternoons sleeping in a bed of thyme, and his mornings taking lessons from Lorenzo. From 10 to 11 he has a class in Posing Majestically, from 11 to noon Getting in the Way.

The first week of July marks the beginning of Pickling Time. The vegetable garden, which hadn't been doing much, suddenly erupted with peck baskets of produce. Every evening my wife combined heavenly aromas in great white enamel pots, and by Sunday

Other Editors Say Science Advice

(Christian Science Monitor)

Will tomorrow's arms agreement be based on yesterday's technology? Will President Nixon's heralded effort to make the United States self-sufficient in energy turn out to be a short-sighted way of allocating resources?

These are only two of the fields where public confidence in administration decisions would be bolstered by a certainty that the White House was listening to the nation's best scientific advice. Food, health, transportation, the use of the seas, the exploration of space—these are a few others.

Yet the American scientific community rightly feels that science has not had sufficient access to the Nixon administration. Now legislation to remedy this deficiency is expected. It deserves the most thorough preparation and consideration.

Presumably the legislation will offer some version of a science advisory council within the executive office, as persuasively suggested by a distinguished committee of the National Academy of Sciences. The committee was not directing its remarks at any specific president, according to chairman James R. Killian, former presidential science adviser. But it pointed to the "untenable position" of the present administration science consultant. As director of the National Science Foundation, he finds himself both asking for funds and advising on science budgets.

The proposed Council for Science and Technology would have direct access to the President, offering the administration "highly professional" judgments "undistorted by jurisdictional lines of thought." No less is needed.

Strength For Today

TO CONFESS CHRIST

There are probably many people today who would admit that Jesus was an inspired teacher and the greatest man who ever lived, but such a confession does not make a man a Christian. No man becomes a Christian until he confesses Jesus not only as a man, but also as Lord.

To confess Jesus as a man is nothing more than an acknowledgement and has no direct result on our lives. To confess him as Lord means to put out of our lives anything inconsistent with his spiritual presence in our hearts. Now the Christian must start a moral and ethical housecleaning. He has the obligation to clean out of his heart hate and jealousy, dishonesty and corruption, greed and a desire to dominate, and an inordinate love of pleasure. In other words, a man or woman does not become a Christian until he or she become changed persons. One might have a sincere historical interest in the life and career of Jesus, but unless that interest changes our lives it is of little value.

Can't Ignore Those Numbers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes you can ignore the numbers or say that they lie, but when you're impaled on them, as is the American consumer, you know by the pain that the numbers are real.

Most significant of the numerical spikes are those that show disposable income has risen close to 10 per cent during the past year but that prices have risen even more sharply, although only slightly more so.

But the pain doesn't come from prices alone. Taxes too have risen. So, despite those pay increases, real spendable earnings at midyear are 4.5 per cent below a year ago.

Adding to the financial strain of many families is the necessity to pay off some of the big installment credit loans that were taken out in 1972 and 1973 — some of them forced on consumers by existing financial strains.

According to Harris Bank of Chicago, the rise of installment credit in those two years was exceeded only once before in the past two decades. It increased 15.1 per cent, compared to 16 per cent in 1955-1956.

There were unusual factors at work in that earlier period. It was a time of unprecedented increases in automobile sales, for one thing. For another, it was the beginning of a trend toward those "easy credit" terms we have today. Moreover, debt in relation to income was far less than it is today.

The strains are showing up in the savings rate, which most forecasters believed would rise this year. It might have, for a while, but it too seems to have fallen victim to the need to pay inflated bills.

In the last three months of 1973 it jumped to 7.3 per cent of disposable personal income, after having reached a low point of 5.7 per cent in the previous quarter. In the early part of this year it dropped back to 6.6 per cent.

The most plausible explanation is that consumers had little choice but to spend rather than save because of the increases in the prices of gasoline, heating oil and food. Already at their credit limit, they obtained the money from what might have been earmarked for the bank or an insurance policy.

A good many economic forecasters believe that installment credit, now totaling close to $150 billion, will rise more slowly in the second half of the year. It is, in fact, rising currently at a rate less than onehalf that of 1973.

Soviets Offer Lebanon Aid

By The Associated Press

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev has offered to strengthen Lebanon's defenses against Israeli attacks, Beirut newspapers reported today.

The papers said Brezhnev made his offer in a message to President Suleiman Franjieh, delivered Tuesday by Soviet Ambassador Servar Azimov. Official Lebanese spokesmen said the Lebanese government was happy with the message but declined to reveal its contents.

The authoritative newspaper An Anhar said Brezhnev offered "all kinds of support and assistance to Lebanon and the Arab countries in order to strengthen their defenses against Israeli aggression."

Lebanon has been the target of numerous Israeli raids in retaliation for attacks by guerrillas from Lebanon on Israeli settlements in which more than 50 Israelis have been killed this year. The Lebanese government has been trying to get other Arab governments to underwrite a billion-dollar arms program for the Lebanese armed forces.

Brezhnev's message was in reply to letters Franjieh sent the chief of the Soviet Communist party and President Nixon during their recent summit meeting, reportedly seeking their intervention to curb the Israeli raids.

Lebanon protested to the chairman of the United Nations Security Council Wednesday against an Israeli naval raid Monday night on the Lebanese ports of Sidon, Tyre and Sarafand. Israel informed the council that the raid was to prevent Palestinian guerrillas from using the ports to attack Israeli settlements.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli board of inquiry blamed inadequate security for the terrorist raid on Maalot last May in which 27 Israelis were killed.

The board also recommended better coordination between civil defense and police units, and creation of a small, powerful commission to make fast decisions in the event of future raids.

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency reported that the Soviet government asked Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy to postpone the trip he was to have made to Moscow on Monday. The Russians reportedly asked him to wait until October, but the reason was not reported.

Hearing Slated

The N.C. Governor's Coordinating Council on Aging will conduct a hearing here Tuesday, July 30 "to give citizens and government officials an opportunity to comment on the provisions of the proposed new state plan for implementing Titles III and VII of the Older Americans Act."

The hearing will be held in the ECU Allied Health Building Auditorium on Charles Street. It is one of four to be held throughout the state.

Title III of the federal Older Americans Act refers to services that enable older persons to remain in their own homes, such as home health, homemaker, and the like. Title VII refers to the nutrition program for the elderly.

Copies of the Fiscal Year 1975 Plan are available at the courthouse here, according to Robert Q. Beard, executive director of the Governor's Council on Aging.

Settling CAA Suit

RALEIGH (AP)—The Holshouser administration has agreed to an out-of court settlement in a suit charging the administration with blacklisting Community Action Agencies in the state.

The suit, brought two months ago by CAA representatives, was settled in a consent judgment signed by both parties.

The dispute arose when Gov. Jim Holshouser decided to place the reponsibility for administration of programs aiding child development, manpower, nutrition, aging and family planning in the hands of the state's 17 Lead Regional Organizations.

Indecent Exposure

Robert Gentry Brinkley of 1913 East Ninth St. was charged yesterday with indecent exposure by Greenville Police.

Chief Glenn Cannon said charges against Brinkley stemmed from a 10:55 p.m. incident at Country Club Apartments.

Brinkley was placed under a $200 bond pending hearing of the case in District Court.

The hours are long, and J.B. occasionally takes a short nap in one of the rocking chairs in the corner of the store. Often as not, however, a customer will wake him up to haggle a little over the price of an item. J.B. is flexible.

"We try to give the people what they want," he said, and in hot farming country, that means beer and gasoline.

"We sell about 100 cases of beer a week. And," he says, lowering his voice a bit, "even during the energy shortage, we had gas. I made a little deal with the supplier and he brought us 2,000 gallons a week, even when other stations were closing. Course, now we sell more than that."

If the farm keeps expanding, J.B. figures he will, too. "Someone asked me the other day if I was going to be the mayor of McGowanville. I said, 'No, I'm going to be the banker.'

Now the Underwood is blinking and glaring, the telephone is ringing, and a man is coming out from Culpeper to fix the TV sets. If there's an editorial point in all this, maybe it's a point of perspective. Sometimes it is more important, truly it is, to search through a stubbled field for a combine part, feeling the summer sun and finding meaning in a bird's nest, than to search through the day's dreary news for the meaning of Watergate Washington. Those baby swallows are pure innocence. So is the puppy Piper. Maybe Nixon and Brezhnev should take a nice vacation, too.

Driver Escapes From Hijacker

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A man whose tractor-trailer loaded with tobacco products was hijacked Wednesday escaped from his captors after a man holding a gun on him fell asleep, state police say.

State police investigator E. A. Duff said tobacco products valued at $125,000 and a tractor-trailer rig were hijacked from James H. Patton of Greensboro, N. C., early Wednesday on Interstate 95 south of here in Chesterfield County.

Duff said Patton, a driver for Old Dominion Freight Lines in High Point, N. C., noticed a car following him after he pulled out of a rest area on Interstate 85 near the North Carolina-Virginia line.

The car pulled alongside Patton and fired a shot in front of the tractor-trailer, Duff said, and when Patton stopped a man with a pistol got into the cab and ordered him to drive north.

Duff said Patton was told to get out of the truck at an I95 interchange in Chesterfield County, and one man headed north in the truck while another man took Patton to a motel room.

Patton escaped about an hour later when his captor fell asleep and he was able to grab a pistol from his hand, Duff said.

The tractor-trailer was en route to Newport News when it was hijacked and was loaded with tobacco products from the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., state police said.

O'Brien 'Appalled' Over Report

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Democratic Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien says he is "completely appalled and disgusted" by a report that White House aide John D. Ehrlichman pressured the Internal Revenue Service in hopes of getting O'Brien jailed before the 1972 election.

The Senate Watergate committee staff quoted Ehrlichman as saying in sworn testimony, "I wanted them to turn up something and send (O'Brien) to jail before the election and unfortunately it didn't materialize."

The staff's report, which was made public Wednesday, said Ehrlichman succeeded in speeding up an IRS audit of O'Brien, but the audit turned up nothing wrong in O'Brien's taxes.

It also said Ehrlichman tongue-lashed the head of the IRS for taking too long to haul O'Brien in for an interview, and that Ehrlichman passed along sensitive tax information about O'Brien to President Nixon.

O'Brien, told about the Watergate report by a newsman, said, "I can't comprehend a president or an assistant using an agency of the government to destroy an individual."

The Watergate special prosecution force and the House Judiciary Committee are investigating allegations that administration officials illegally abused the power of the government for political purposes.

The O'Brien incident occurred about the same time as the Watergate wiretapping. O'Brien was a chief target of the wiretappers, captured inside Democratic headquarters June 17, 1972.

One month earlier, according to the staff report, assistant IRS commissioner Roger Barth showed Ehrlichman a "sensitive case report" that showed O'Brien had received substantial payments in 1970 from a firm owned by billionaire Howard R. Hughes. O'Brien ran a management consulting firm then.

Barth, a former Nixon campaign worker, apparently acted without the knowledge of his boss, IRS Commissioner Johnnie M. Walters. Ehrlichman was quoted as saying he suspected Walters was too soft in investigating Democrats, and that he didn't deal with Walters.

Barth said Ehrlichman suggested the Hughes payments might be illegal campaign donations, or that O'Brien might have failed to report them as income on his tax returns, the report said.

It quoted Barth as saying he quietly obtained O'Brien's tax returns and looked them over personally, but found nothing wrong. Meanwhile, Ehrlichman called Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz, and got him to initiate a second fruitless check of O'Brien's tax returns, the report said.

It quoted Ehrlichman as saying he personally briefed the President about the information in the sensitive case report.

Ehrlichman was quoted as saying Nixon was "quite interested."

Despite the two checks of O'Brien's returns, Ehrlichman called Shultz again and urged a more complete investigation.

Ehrlichman was told on Aug. 29 that the IRS had found nothing wrong with O'Brien's taxes, and that the case had been closed. Walters was quoted as saying that Ehrlichman castigated him for delay in the investigation.

Obtaining Samples

Mrs. Jean C. Wilson of Rt. 1, Grimesland, local representative of the Bureau of the Census, will interview a sample of households in this area next week to obtain information on employment.

The households in the area are among 50,000 across the nation scientifically selected to represent a cross section of the American people, according to Joseph R. Norwood, director of the Bureau's Data Collection Center. Information supplied by participants is kept confidential by law and results are used only to compile statistical totals, he said.

One Injured In Accident

One person was reported injured and an estimated $1,450 property damage caused in two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by Milton Lee Frizzell of 300 Clairmont Cir. and Lucy Smith of Route 2, Ayden collided about 10:30 a.m. at the intersection of Wilson and Chestnut Streets.

Police, who said Mrs. Smith was injured, charged her with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety and estimated damage at $200 to her car and $800 to the Frizzell vehicle.

Iric Greg Leonard Jr. of 116A Scott Dorm was charged with failing to stop for a red light after his car collided with a police Department vehicle driven by Charles Bernard Landrith Jr. of Route 5, Greenville, about 10:40 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Streets.

Investigators estimated damage at $200 to the city-owned car and $250 to the Leonard auto.

Fugitive Arrested

An 18-year-old Bronx, New York man, James O'Neill was arrested here yesterday by Greenville police on a fugitive from justice warrant in connection with an attempted murder in New York.

Chief Glenn Cannon said O'Neill was taken into custody about 4:55 p.m. in connection with the July 5 incident in New York and placed in the Pitt County Jail under a $100,000 bond.

Geologist Disputes Claim Nuclear Plant Is Located Near Fault Line

SURRY, Va. (AP)—Geologists contradicted on Wednesday allegations that a geologic fault might be located near the Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s Surry nuclear power station.

The utility has asked the Atomic Energy Commission for permission to build two more reactors at the plant, which already has two.

Geologists for the AEC and a Vepco contractor testified on the final day of a two-day public hearing on environmental aspects and site suitability of the two additional reactors.

June Allen of the North Anna Environmental Coalition told the three-man AEC hearing board Tuesday that she'd heard reports of a Hampton Roads fault, but declined to reveal her source.

John Briedis, a geologist with Stone & Webster, said such a fault was reported first in 1945 by a geologist whom he identified only as Cederstrom on the basis of three wells along the James River from Mathews to Norfolk.

Cederstrom concluded that only a fault could have caused a thickening of strata he found, Briedis said, but in 1957 Cederstrom refuted his earlier findings, saying the thickening was less than he originally thought and there was no evidence of a fault.

Briedis said he had used every known method to determine that the proposed site is geologically safe and that no fault exists.

AEC staff geologist Harold LeFevre also said his investigation disclosed no evidence of a fault.

"We have concluded that there is reasonable assurance that the proposed site is a suitable location for the addition of two nuclear power reactors..from the standpoint of radiological health and safety considerations...," AEC staffers said Wednesday.

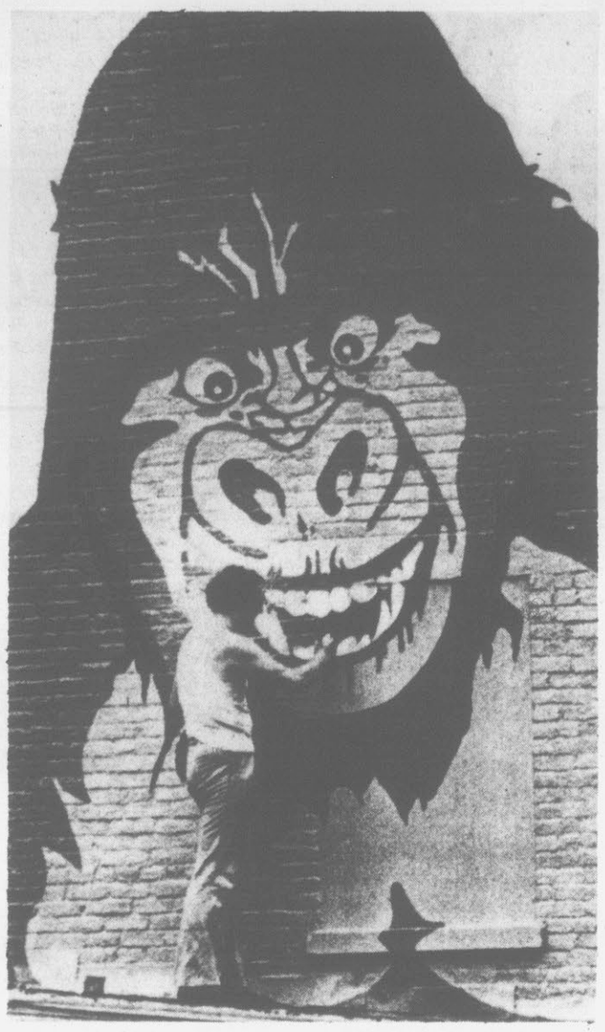

Vepco has filed a limited work request with the AEC so it can begin work on site preparation while the process of getting a construction permit continues.

But the AEC staff told the board late Wednesday that it hadn't had a chance to study Vepco's redesign of part of the cooling system for the two new reactors, and it would take about two weeks to evaluate the changes.

Vepco hopes to begin construction in august.

Dr. Edwin B. Joseph, director of the Virginia Institute of Marine Sciences of the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department, contradicted charges that two more nuclear units would hurt the striped bass population and spawning grounds.

Spawning areas are well north of the power station and it would have little effect on the young fish, Joseph said.

Sinatra, Unions Reach Accord; Australian Tour Will Continue

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australian unions today lifted their bans on Frank Sinatra and a tour promoter said: "The show will go on."

The agreement—without a previously demanded apology from Sinatra—was reached after a three-hour huddle between Sinatra's lawyer, the promoters and Robert Hawke, Australia's top labor union official and president of the ruling Labor party.

"It's smiles all round," said Robert Raymond, one of the tour promoters. "There was no apology. The unions have really shown a lot of understanding and deserve complimenting. They realized it got grossly out of proportion."

Hawke flew to Sydney to meet with Sinatra after a number of unions demanded that Sinatra apologize for insults to Australia's journalists.

The musicians' union said Sinatra could not appear again in the country until he apologized. And the transport union said its members would not service any plane Sinatra was booked on.

Hawke said Sinatra would "never get out of Australia" unless he retracted scurrilous remarks he made during a concert Tuesday night in Melbourne and apologized for the rough treatment his bodyguards gave a television crew.

The hotel employes' union threatened to boycott the Sydney hotel in which Sinatra was holed up.

The singer had scheduled five concerts—two in Melbourne and three in Sydney—at $135,000 each. He still has four to go.

Sinatra's lawyer, Milton A. Rudin, told a news conference his client "regretted the incidents" but would not accept culpability.

He said Sinatra, making his first Australian tour in 15 years, was willing to give a free TV performance to make up for a concert that was canceled Wednesday night.

"Mr. Sinatra is willing and able to perform," Rudin said. "He did not cancel the performance; he was boycotted."

The trouble started Tuesday when Sinatra arrived in Melbourne by private jet from Sydney. Muttering expletives, he brushed past reporters and was whisked off in a fast car.

That night, he interrupted a concert before 8,000 people with a monologue aimed at the press in which he said he had "run all day because of the parasites who chased us .... They won't quit; they wonder why I won't talk to them.

"I wouldn't drink their water, let alone talk to them.

"Boy, oh boy, they're murder. They've got a name in the States for their counterparts, they call them parasites .... I say they're bums, and they're always going to be bums ....

"It's the scandal men that bug you and drive you crazy, and the hookers—the broads of the press are the hookers of the press, need I explain this to you.

"I might offer them a buck and a half—that's true," he continued. He said, "I once paid a broad in Washington two dollars and I overpaid her. She didn't even bathe—most of them don't anyway."

Sinatra had clashed with Washington Post columnist Maxine Cheshire in Washington, D.C., in January 1973.

After the Melbourne concert, security guards for Sinatra tangled with television crews. One cameraman was cut on the face. A bodyguard wrapped an electric cord around another's neck.

Rudin told Australian newsmen the security men were hired because someone had kicked Sinatra when he entered the hotel.

Australian Immigration Minister Clyde Cameron called for a report on the bodyguards' actions. He said that if Sinatra wanted to come to Australia again "and I could stop him, I certainly would."

FEWER BIRTH DEFECTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first year of life, birth defects cause the highest number of deaths. But, in recent years, medical scientists have made considerable progress improving the situation.

"Many children are now leading meaningful lives, thanks to the fact that their problems were identified and treated in time," says Dr. Nina Scribanu, a pediatrician in charge of Georgetown University's Division of Clinical Genetics and Birth Defects.

Military Man May Head Govt.

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Antonio de Spinola is considering naming a military man as Portugal's next premier, a highly informed source reported today.

Spinola was expected to make the appointment to replace Adelino da Palma Carlos either today or Friday, the informant said.

Spinola, a general, is caught in the midst of a political crisis that threatens to shatter the coalition he put together after coming to power following a military revolt April 25. He is expected to seek a civilian cabinet, the source said.

But the informant, who has close ties to Palma Carlos, said it was not clear if the three parties of the present government would accept a military premier. The parties are the Communists, Socialists and the centrist Popular Democrats.

Palma Carlos resigned Tuesday with four other moderates in the cabinet and complained that his post did not have enough authority. President Antonio de Spinola, the front man for the military revolution, asked him to return.

In a broadcast interview Wednesday night, the 69-year-old premier laid down three conditions: A national presidential election to legitimize the military-controlled government, the immediate drafting of a provisional constitution and more authority for the premier, including the right to name the cabinet.

The military majority on the State Council, the holders of ultimate authority in the regime, already have rejected a proposal by Spinola for a presidential election this fall to solidify his position. The premier's other two demands also seemed certain to anger the young officers of the Armed Forces Movement.

Body Was Patterson

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The United States Embassy says that the skeleton discovered last Sunday in a creekbed near Hermosillo,, Mexico, has been identified as the remains of kidnaped Vice Consul John S. Patterson.

Ambassador Joseph J. Jova made the announcement Wednesday night and extended his condolences to the widow and mother of the 31-year-old diplomat who disappeared from the U. S. consulate in Hermosillo on March 22. Earlier, Mexican authorites said there was no doubt that the remains were Patterson's.

Mexican authorities said Wednesday that the abduction was carried out by kidnapers from the United States seeking ransom, not by Mexican terrorists with political motivations. Bobby Joe Keesee, a 40-year-old California carpenter, is being held in San Diego on U. S. federal charges of planning and participating in the kidnaping. Keesee has pleaded innocent.

Arrested In Theft

BOONE, N.C. (AP)—Three men were arrested by SBI agents Wednesday and charged with conspiracy to defraud in connection with the theft of an undetermined amount of jewelry from the home of Irwin Sherwin of Blowing Rock last month.

The three were held in Watauga County Jail in Boone under $25,000 bond each. Blowing Rock Police Chief Douglas Townsend identified them as Travis Lee Greene, 24, of Deep Gap; Rex Robert Church, 28, of Rt. 1, Wilkesboro; and Raylo Greene, 28, of Parlier.

Townsend said Church also was charged, in a nonrelated case, with the theft of a new tractor from Warner Gold of Deep Gap July 2 and held under $10,000 bond in that case.

Sherwin, one of three owners of the Blowing Rock Art and Auction Gallery, returned home shortly after midnight June 27 and found his wife bound. She said she had been tied and blindfolded some three hours earlier by at least two men who then ransacked the house, taking jewelry, credit cards and cash.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — North Carolina egg markets were steady Wednesday. Supplies barely adequate, demand good. Weighted average prices for small lot sales of consumer grade eggs in cartons delivered nearby outlets: Grade A large whites 53.65, medium whites 47.30, small whites 36.43.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—Hogs 1.00-1.50 lower. Kinston and Lumberton 36.50-37.50; Rocky Mount, 35.50-36.00; Tarboro and Bethel 34.50-35.00; Salisbury 36.50; Wilson and High Falls 35.50.

RALEIGH—(AP)—(NCDA)—F.O.B dock broilers, market unsettled to weaker for next week. Supplies are ample and the demand fair. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter today, 1,127,000.

North Carolina hens: Market steady on heavy types, supplies fully adequate to ample and the demand fair. Heavies, at farm, eight cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned mixed today, after a quick decline in early session trading.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off .70 at 761.42, after being down nearly 4 points a half-hour after the opening. Declines led advances 579 to 429 among 1,474 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, where trading was moderate.

On the Big Board, Fannie Mae was most-active, up ¾ at 11⅞. A 119,800-share block crossed at 11¼, up ⅛.

American Telephone was down ¼ at 42⅛, while Clorox gained ½ to 7 and Boeing was steady at 14¾.

Dow Chemical slipped ¾ to 60⅞, and Monsanto fell 1¼ to 58½. A major investment house decided to take the chemical concerns off their investment list.

Stocks hit hard Wednesday recovered a bit also. Burroughs gained ⅞ to 89⅜, and Avon Products jumped ⅛ to 36⅜, Texas Instruments climbed 1⅛ to 85¼. Walt Disney Productions, which rose Wednesday as brokers said earnings were better than expected, continued to gain, up 1⅜ to 36⅛.

On the Amex, the most-active stock was C&K Petroleum, steady at 6. The Amex market-value index at 11 a.m. was down .02 at 74.95.

The Big Board's broad based index gained .04 to 41.69.

Dean Set To Give Testimony

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Dean III, who once said his most difficult problem was "how I could end this mess without mortally wounding the President," faces questioning in the impeachment proceedings he helped to initiate.

It was Dean's Senate testimony a year ago linking President Nixon with the Watergate cover-up that helped set the stage for the current inquiry by the House Judiciary Committee.

His testimony now has been requested by James St. Clair, Nixon's impeachment defense lawyer, who wants to examine him on the narrow issue of a $75,000 payment he helped arrange for Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr.

The former White House counsel played a leading role in all phases of the cover-up until he decided to tell his story to the Watergate prosecutors in April 1973.

Today's session will be something of a homecoming for Dean, who was a minority counsel to the Judiciary Committee for two years before moving to the Justice Department early in the Nixon administration.

"He was minority counsel of subcommittee 3," Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., now the ranking committee Republican, recalled Wednesday. "I sat beside him and he did a good job."

"I know him very well," said Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, R-Calif., another senior GOP member. "He is most competent and I had no reason to question his integrity when he was here."

Dean pleaded guilty last October to conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States. His sentencing has been deferred and he has been cooperating with the Watergate prosecutors.

All St. Clair wants Dean to tell the committee is how he passed on Hunt's request for money to Frederick C. LaRue, a former Nixon campaign aide who has testified that he delivered $75,000 to Hunt's lawyer the night of March 21, 1973.

was Nixon's national security adviser, had been a principal witness in the prosecution's attempt to prove Ehrlichman had a hand in plotting the break-in.

Kissinger, called to damage Young's credibility, testified he knew nothing of, let alone suggested, a plan to gather psychological information about Ellsberg, who leaked the Pentagon Papers study of the Vietnam War to the press.

A CIA official had quoted Young as saying Kissinger and Ehrlichman had requested that the agency prepare a psychological profile on Ellsberg.

When the profile proved inadequate, the plumbers planned the break-in.

A few hours after Kissinger's appearance, Judge Gesell read to the jury six written answers to questions submitted to President Nixon by Ehrlichman's lawyers.

Nixon said he answered the questions "as a matter of discretion, and in the interests of justice ..."

The President said he never authorized the Ellsberg break-in and didn't learn of it until March 17, 1973.

He said he could not recall if he ever gave specific instructions to Ehrlichman and other White House aides not to talk to the FBI once the break-in came under formal investigation last spring.

Warren Lies In Justice Hall

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Earl Warren returned for the last time today to the Supreme Court over which he presided for 16 of its most turbulent years.

The body of the 14th Chief Justice of the United States was borne up the steps of the gleaming white marble building by eight uniformed security officers to lie in state.

Warren, who retired from the court in 1969, died Tuesday night at the age of 83. He will be buried Friday in Arlington National Cemetery.

The nine present justices and three of the four living former members received the casket as honorary pallbearers during a ceremony. Retired Justice Stanley Reed, 92, was unable to attend.

Each of the justices in turned embraced the former chief justice's tearful widow, Nina, and shook hands with other members of the family after filing past the closed, flag-draped casket.

The casket was placed on a black-draped catafalque in the building's Great Hall in front of the courtroom. Behind it was a chair Warren occupied during his years on the court.

Warren is the first justice ever to be honored by lying in state publicly at the building.

Court officials said the building would be open today until 8 p.m. for the public to view the casket. A crowd of about 300 persons was on hand when the hearse arrived.

Public viewing will continue from 9 a.m. until noon Friday after which a funeral cortege will take the body to the National Cathedral for services.

Speakers at the services will include Rabbi Alvin Fine, professor of humanities at San Francisco State University, and Roman Catholic Archbishop Philip M. Hannan of New Orleans, both personal friends.

Prayers will be led by the Rt. Rev. John T. Walker, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington.

Safe After Jet Crash

CHERRY POINT—A 2d Marine Aircraft wing pilot ejected safely from his aircraft moments before it crashed into the Pamlico Sound, approximately 40 miles northeast of Cherry Point this morning.

The aircraft, a PA-4 jet from Marine Attack Training Squadron-203, was on a routine training mission when the pilot was forced to eject around 10:30 a.m.

Cause of the crash was not known at noon. A marine search and air rescue helicopter was dispatched from Cherry Point and picked up the pilot, 1st Lt. Gary Williams, of Atlanta, Ga., who was uninjured.

Investigation into the cause of the crash is in progress.

Lesson In Patience

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Martha Branson, who had her jaws wired shut to lose weight, says it is "a lesson in patience."

So far, Miss Branson, 27, of Columbus, has lost 55 pounds from the 235 pounds she weighed at the start of the enforced diet 13 weeks ago.

Her goal is to weigh 120 pounds.

"It is not so easy to talk," Miss Branson said Wednesday. "When you say something you make it count."

She puts food in a blender and drinks most of it through a straw. Her liquid diet contains about 800 calories a day.

Miss Branson, a secretary in the office of Secretary of State Ted W. Brown, says she will stay wired up until she hits her goal "no matter how long it takes."

and net worth reported last year by an accounting firm.

The report said that as much as $32,000 in currency, mostly in $100 bills, may have been involved and that from an analysis of Rebozo's financial position, the only large amounts of cash to which he had access were the $100,000 payment from Hughes and a $50,000 contribution from an executive of the Winn-Dixie Corp.

The report said that Rebozo had authority to draw on Nixon's personal account in the Key Biscayne Bank and that investigators could find no apparent reason other than concealment for his use of cash or of trust accounts to pay for improvements at the Nixon home.

As to the Hughes payment, the committee noted that each major figure has changed his own story at least once and that each story conflicts in significant details with accounts told by others.

The investigators cast doubt, however, on Rebozo's claim that he retained the money untouched for three years, eventually returning to a Hughes representative exactly the same 1,001 $100 bills he had been given.

The newest bills among the 1,001, which were painstakingly examined by the committee, did not reach a commercial bank for distribution until Oct. 1, 1970.

This is later than the latest date any of the principals has said the final delivery of cash was made to Rebozo.

However, Rebozo and Hughes emissary Richard Danner met in Key Biscayne in late October 1970 and the committee investigators concede that the money possibly could have changed hands then.

Rebozo testified that he did not turn the money over to either the 1970 Senate campaigns or to the 1972 presidential campaign because he feared internal turmoil inside the Hughes Las Vegas gambling empire could embarrass the President if the contribution became public knowlege.

The report said he retained the money into 1973 in the hope that it could be used in either the 1974 congressional race or in the 1976 presidential election.

Training Grant

A grant of $53,436 was awarded the East Carolina University School of Allied Health and Social Professions by the Social and Rehabilitation Service.

The funds will be sued to educate rehabilitation counselors for the N.C. Division of Vocational Rehabilitation Services and the N.C. Division of Blind Services.

About 20 of ECU's 30 full-time graduate students will receive traineeships under the grant during the academic year 1974-75. The ECU rehabilitation counseling program also has 85 part time graduate students.

Sluggers Gain In Tourney

Little Sluggers advanced into the semi-final round of the City League Softball tournament at Evans Park last night. Meanwhile, The Pros, Sunnyside Eggs, and Pier 5, advanced into the quarter-finals.

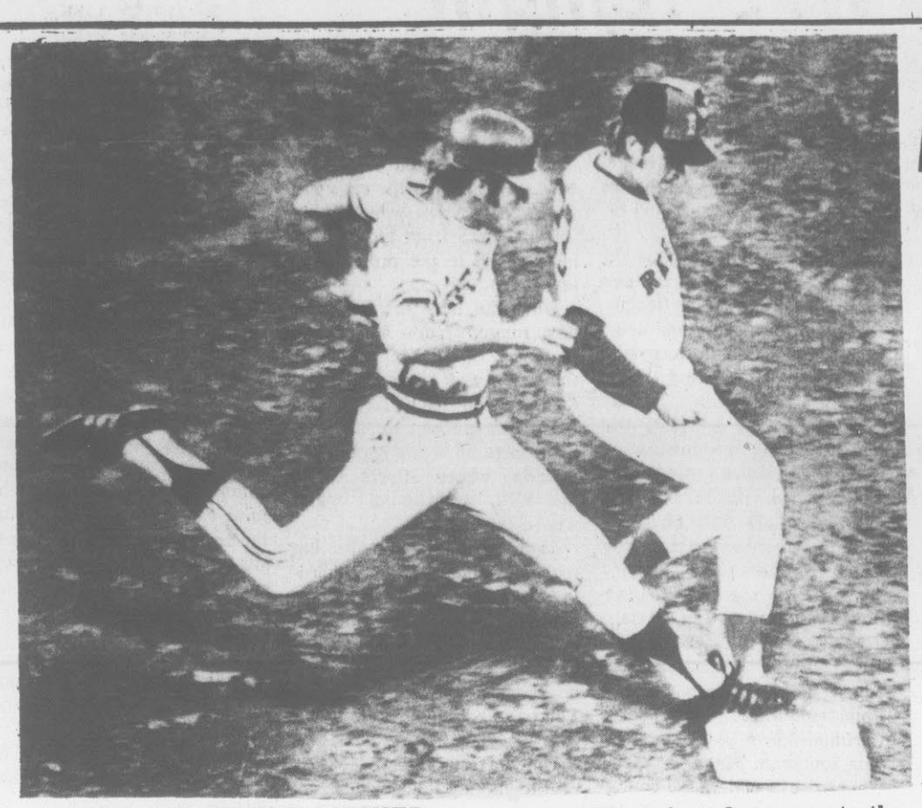

On Field One, Union Carbide eliminated Greenville Utilities from the tournament by forfeit. Earlier, Daniel and The Pros battled eight innings before three base hits in the bottom of the eighth gave the Pros a 5-4 win. Daniel had scored two in the second, and single runs in the third and fourth. The Pros scored twice in the third and fifth innings, before their rally.

The Sluggers pushed the Daily Reflector into the loser's bracket by gaining a 24-2 decision. The Reflector scored their runs in the first and fourth innings. The Sluggers tied it in the first, scored four in the second, six in the third, four in the fourth, and nine in the fifth.

On Field Two, Sunnyside Eggs pushed Hallow's into the loser's bracket by winning, 8-0. They scored three in the second, one run in the third, and four in the sixth.

Pier 5 advanced by downing Shirley's, 17-6. Shirley's jumped to a 1-0 lead before Pier 5 came back with four in the second and two in the sixth inning. They added one more in the fourth, six more in the fifth, and four in the sixth. Shirley's scored three in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Morgan Printers and Carolina Dairies, both in the loser's bracket, played the final game, with Morgan advancing by winning, 16-3. They scored all they needed with seven in the first inning. They added two in the third, two in the fourth, and five in the seventh. The Dairymen scored one in the second and two in the sixth.

Marshall Proves He's Human, Loses To Phillies

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Everybody makes mistakes—even Mike Marshall.

The seemingly perfect relief pitcher of the Los Angeles Dodgers showed Wednesday night that he's only human while losing a 5-4 decision to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Marshall, who has been dazzling in the clutch this season, gave up the winning run on Dave Cash's single in the ninth inning—the first time he's lost in more than a month.

He had won 11 games in 14 decisions and posted 13 saves. In his last 18 appearances, Marshall had allowed just 10 earned runs in 37.2 innings.

In other National League games, the San Diego Padres trimmed the New York Mets 8-1; the Chicago Cubs blasted the Cincinnati Reds 11-3; the Atlanta Braves hammered the Pittsburgh Pirates 10-5; the San Francisco Giants turned back the Montreal Expos 4-3 and the Houston Astros nudged the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

Padres 8, Mets 1

Dave Winfield socked two home runs and Willie McCovey stroked a two-run single, leading Bill Greif and San Diego over New York.

Greif, 4-11, checked the Mets on seven hits, striking out five batters and walking three. He gave up a fifth-inning run.

Cubs 11, Reds 3

Chicago struck for three runs in the second inning and Andre Thornton slugged a three-run homer in a sixth-run eighth that carried the Cubs past Cincinnati.

The Cubs added single runs in the fifth and in the sixth.

Braves 10, Pirates 5

Two-run homers by Dusty Baker and Dave Johnson keyed a 15-hit attack that carried Atlanta over Pittsburgh.

The Braves chased loser Dock Ellis, 3-8, with three runs in the first inning in a rally capped by Baker's blast.

Giants 4, Expos 2

Dave Kingman's run-scoring single capped a three-run rally in the third inning and San Francisco went on to beat Montreal behind Jim Barr's ten-hitter.

Barr, 5-5, started the winning rally with a walk and moved to second on a single by Mike Phillips. He scored when Montreal Montreal pitcher Steve Renko fielded a bunt and threw the ball into the dirt at third in an attempt to get Barr.

Astros 3, Cardinals 2

A pair of two-out singles by Greg Gross and Roger Metzger produced a run in the seventh inning that gave Houston its victory over St. Louis.

American League scores: Boston 3, Texas 1; New York 9, Kansas City 4; Milwaukee 6, Chicago 1; Minnesota 11, Detroit 6 and Baltimore 9, California 1.

Ali's Last?

DEER LAKE, Pa. (AP) — Muhammad Ali says his Sept. 23 bout in Zaire with heavyweight champion George Foreman will be his last fight.

The Louisville Courier-Journal, in a copyrighted story in its Thursday editions, gives as Ali's main reasons for quitting his desire to retire as a champ, his age and his religion.

"This is my last fight," Ali said.

The last, win or lose?

"Yup. But I ain't gonna lose."

Six weeks ago in Louisville, Ali said he would fight after the Foreman bout. But in interviews at his training camp here over the past three days, the newspaper said, Ali repeatedly stressed his decision to quit after the September fight.

Angels Can't Lose Today After Ten Straight Losses

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The California Angels will not lose today.

That's not a prediction. Just a little present from the schedule maker.

The Angels have an off day today, which should not be confused with off days, which they've been having most of the season.

"Maybe a day off will help," said beleagured California Manager Dick Williams. "I know it can't hurt us."

The Baltimore Orioles hurt the Angels Wednesday night, blasting them 9-1. It was the Angels' 11th straight loss, preserving their 0-for-July slump.

Ten of those losses have come under the command of Williams, who was lured back into baseball by a dollar sign and a lot of zeroes. The dollar sign hasn't rubbed off on his players yet, just the zeroes.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox tripped the Texas Rangers 3-1; the Milwaukee Brewers dropped the Chicago White Sox 6-1; the Minnesota Twins pounded the Detroit Tigers 11-6, and the New York Yankees whipped the Kansas City Royals 9-4.

Brewers 6, White Sox 1

Billy Champion pitched no-hit ball for 5 1-3 innings and settled for a four-hitter.

The Brewers, who had beaten Chicago with last-inning home runs the two previous nights, scored enough to win with two runs in the second inning with Don Money's RBI single capping the rally.

Yankees 9, Royals 4

The first half of the game belonged to Marty Pattin. The second half of the game belonged to Bobby Murcer. For posterity, the game belongs to New York.

The Yankees, retired in order through the first five innings by Pattin, picked up a pair of two-run homers from Murcer and a two-run shot by Thurman Munson to beat Kansas City.

Red Sox 3, Rangers 1

Bob Montgomery helped with his bat and foot and Reggie Cleveland, 7-6, tossed a six-hitter.

On a 2-2 pitch with two out in the fifth, Montgomery took off for second and Dwight Evans, on third, broke for the plate as Rick Burleson checked his swing. Catcher Duke Sims' throw was high and to the left of second. Cesar Tovar made a leaping catch and had no play as Evans scored and Montgomery took second on the double steal. The run broke a scoreless deadlock.

Twins 11, Tigers 6

Rod Carew's run-scoring double ignited a five-run eighth inning and Minnesota beat Detroit 11-6 for the Twins' fourth straight win.

Jim Ray, the third Detroit pitcher and the loser suffered a severe eighth inning pounding in giving up five runs on four hits and four walks as the Twins marched 10 men to the plate.

National League results: San Diego 8, New York 1; Chicago 11, Cincinnati 3; Philadelphia 5, Los Angeles 4; Atlanta 10, Pittsburgh 5; San Francisco 4, Montreal 2, Houston 3, St. Louis 2.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians Manager Ken Aspromonte says catcher-first baseman John Ellis will be put back into the lineup slowly, after missing several weeks with a broken bone in his left foot.

Ellis was reactivated Sunday. Pitcher Steve Kline was put on the 21-day disabled list to make room for the returning Ellis.

Player Warned After 2-Bogey

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

LYTHAM ST. ANNE'S, England (AP) — Gary Player has been warned.

"I thought I was going to shoot a 66, but that 17th hole is a monster," said the little man in black from South Africa Wednesday after contenting himself with a two-under-par 69 that gave him a share of the lead after the first round of the British Open Golf Tournament.

"If you miss the fairway, you are in a terrible position because you don't know where to go."

The South African was tied going into today's round with virtually unknown British golfer John Morgan, who put together three birdies in a row to tie the reigning Masters champion.

One stroke behind were Player's compatriot Bobby Cole and Danny Edwards, a former Walker Cup player from Edmond, Okla.

Player, who doubled-bogeyed the hole after ringing in three deuces on the outgoing nine holes, is not the only golfer who will be wary from now on of the 17th, and also the 15th holes at the old Royal Lytham and St. Anne's course.

Johnny Miller, who was in a four-way tie at 72, admitted to a tactical error during play on the wind-swept two holes Wednesday, saying he should have played the two par-four holes as if they were par fives.

"With the wind in your face, they are definitely par fives," Miller said. "Par is relative. I should just content myself with being patient and play them as fives."

Miller and Tom Weiskopf, who also had a 72 along with Liang Luan Lu of Taiwan and Scotish golfer David Chillas, were one stroke back of three players who were tied at 71—Hubert Green, Peter Oosterhuis and Irishman John O'Leary.

"The wind did a complete change from what we had seen during the last week," said Jack Nicklaus after posting a 74. "It turned southwesterly and it was an entirely new golf course for me."

Lee Trevino, just about put himself out of contention with an eightover-par 79.

Afterwards, Trevino confessed, "I just don't like to play anymore. I seem to have lost interest ....

"Nothing would please me more than to take two years off."

HITS IN FIRST WIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie pitcher Craig Swan of the New York Mets failed to bat in his two minor league seasons because of the designated hitter rule. But on May 11 he made three singles in as many trips as the Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 6-3. Those hits gave him four in his first seven major league at-bats.

Although Swan pitched only six innings he achieved his first major league victory. During his stint he blanked the Cubs with four hits. Two relief hurlers finished for the Mets.

Sales Off

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League say season ticket renewals are down about 10 per cent.

The Cowboys sold 33,476 season tickets last year, but are currently in the 28,000 range.

There has been a drop for Dallas' traditional preseason opener—the Salesmanship Club game. The Cowboys will play the Houston Oilers this year and sales have reached only 18,000. Last year Dallas played New Orleans and sales stood at 23,000 over a similar period.

TV Debut For WFL Tonight

By ANDY LIPPMAN
AP Sports Writer

It was novelty night in the world of professional football and the gimmick was a bigger hit than the organizers of the World Football League had expected.

At four of five sites for the first football games in the new professional football league, crowds were bigger than originally anticipated—although at no site did the demand exceed the supply of tickets.

The WFL gets a sterner test tonight during the telecast of the game between New York and Jacksonville which will provide the armchair fans with a chance to judge the merits or demerits of the infant league.

In the first night of WFL activity Wednesday, the Chicago Fire defeated the Houston Texans 17-0, the Florida Blazers edged the Hawaiians 8-7, the Philadelphia Bell trounced the Portland Storm 33-8, the Memphis Southmen beat the Detroit Wheels 34-15 and the Birmingham Americans beat the Southern California Sun 11-7.

Birmingham drew the biggest crowd, where the 53,231 fans, long hungry for a football franchise, saw their dream come true and gave the Americans an extended ovation before the game.

"I was awed and impressed with the enthusiasm of the Birmingham fans," said league President Gary Davidson who was attending the game. "I was expecting a crowd of perhaps 40,000 and to get a crowd of 53,000 is just wonderful."

Club officials earlier had said they had hoped for a crowd of 55,000 to fill the 70,000-seat stadium. Philadelphia drew 45,000, almost 13,000 above what had been expected, but still way short of a sellout in mammouth 102,000-seat John F. Kennedy Stadium. The Chicago Fire drew 42,000 to 55,000-seat Soldier Field, well over its anticipated crowd of 35,000 while Florida drew 18,625 fans to the Tangerine Bowl which holds 30,000.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected for tonight's game in the Gator Bowl between Jacksonville and the Stars, the team Shark Coach Bud Asher rates as tops in the new league.

"We have planted our seeds. Now we'll see how the crop will grow," said Asher, who is making the jump from high school head coach to the professional level.

What the fans saw Wednesday ranged from aeriel displays by Philadelphia's King Corcoran, and Chicago's Virgil Carter, who each threw two touchdown passes, to low-scoring efforts by Birmingham and Florida, whose efforts belied the WFL promise of "more wide-open football".

Even in rolling up its big margin, Philadelphia, according to some observers, appeared well below the standard of the established National Football League and not even as good as the old American Football League in its first season.

The Blazers sufferred a loss off the playing field Wednesday when they released linebacker Bill Bergey from his WFL commitment, allowing him to be traded from the NFL Cincinnati Bengals to the Philadelphia Eagles.

"Bill had not received his July 1 bonus payment from the WFL and Orlando was willing to release its contract with Bergey," said Bengals' Coach Paul Brown, who added the release enabled Bergey to be traded with no strings attached.

College All-Star Clash Cancelled For 1st Time

By JERRY LISKA
AP Sports Writer

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Dyche Stadium, the practice field which was headquarters for the College All-Star football team, was a deserted arena today, and the Chicago Tribune Charities were bereft of perhaps $200,000 after Wednesday's unprecedented cancellation of the annual game, which had been scheduled for July 26.

The 41st annual College All-Star Game became the first casualty of the National Football League Players' Association strike Wednesday when the Tribune canceled the contest against the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins. The move came two days after the 47 collegians, in a closed meeting decided not to play the game unless it was given some sort of dispensation by the NFL union and club owners.

Bill Curry, NFLPA president, told the Tribune his group could not meet this demand after the NFL management indicated the game could be played without affecting negotiations.

Most of the All-Stars were stunned when news of the game's cancelation reached them in informal workouts outside Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium late Wednesday afternoon. Many apparently had believed an agreement could be worked out.

All-Star Coach John McKay of Southern California Wednesday noon canceled a scheduled mid-afternoon workout, the first since the All-Stars arrived Sunday, apparently forewarned the decision to cancel the game was imminent.

Guard Mark Markevich of Penn State, a San Diego Charger draftee, asked a question on the minds of several players. "I'm very disappointed. But how come a decision to cancel was made so early? Why, if charity is such a worthy cause, couldn't the sponsor let this blow over for a few more days?"

According to the sponsoring Tribune Charities, it had picked up the tab for transportation of more than 60 players and coaching staff members, plus room and board for three days, without any assurance of practice until the game or that it would be played.

It also provided final expenses, including $75 incidental money per player and return transportation to the All-Stars' homes or pro training camps.

The Tribune Charities—NFL contract provides for temporary interruption due to uncontrollable events, including a strike. Tribune Sports Editor Cooper Rollow, president of Tribune Charities, said the contract automatically carries over for next year.

Still hanging was the player union promise of $100,000, if the game was canceled, to match half of last season's Tribune Charity receipts of more than $200,000.

After the game was canceled, Curry said he did not know where the union would get the money, but that it would be found.

Rollow said: "The 41st renewal of the game, which has produced $3.2 million for Chicago's underprivileged children, now is scheduled for 1975."

Shortly after the game was canceled, most All-Stars were en route to their pro club training camps where they face the same union picket lines they elected to honor at Dyche Stadium.

TENNIS

GSTAAD, Switzerland — The two top seeds, Spain's Manuel Orantes and Roy Emerson of Australia, advanced to the quarter-finals of the Swiss Open Tennis Championships, Emerson eliminating Thomas Koch of Brazil 6-2, 3-6, 6-0 and Orantes topping Switzerland's Dimitri Sturdza 6-1, 6-1.

BAASTAD, Sweden — Unseeded Susan Barker of Britain defeated Marijke Schaar of The Netherlands 6-1, 7-5 in the women's final of the $50,000 Swedish Open Championships, while topseeded Swede Bjorn Borg scored an easy 6-3, 6-1 victory over American Freddie McNair to gain the second round of the men's singles.

BASKETBALL

SALT LAKE CITY — Vince Boryla, president of the Utah Stars since 1970, announced his resignation as chief operating officer of the American Basketball Association team.

Stars Start Play

Both Greenville Babe Ruth All-Star teams, and both the Pitt County All-Star teams will be involved in the district tournament in Washington starting tonight.

In the thirteen year-old tourney, Greenville will face Pitt County in the first game at 5 p.m. The winner of that game will meet Washington Friday afternoon at 5 p.m. The winner of that game will meet Washington Friday afternoon at 5 p.m. The 14-15 year-old action gets underway at 7 p.m., with Pitt County meeting Creswell. Greenville has the 9 p.m. game with Washington. Both winners and both losers will meet Friday night.

The championship could be decided any number of ways, with the schedule calling for the tournament ending on Saturday.

Golf Is Not Funny To Trevino Anymore

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LYTHAM ST. ANNE'S, England (AP) — Golf is no longer a laugh and a lark for happy-go-lucky Lee Trevino.

"I'm tired of it," says the garrulous golfer from El Paso, Tex., who brought entertainment to millions with his light approach to a game he played so brilliantly.

"Nothing would please me more than to take two years off," he said.

Trevino made his remarks after shooting a 79 in the first round of the British Open—a score that left him 10 strokes off the pace and virtually eliminated him as a title factor.

"I missed putt after putt of around three feet," he said. "I three-putted from 15 feet. I just don't like to play any more."

Trevino said he used to hit 1,000 balls a day in practice.

"I don't hit any now," he said. "I can't stand it."

Trevino came here at the last minute to play in the Open and told everybody it was his strategy—that he always played better without advance preparation.

What he meant to say was he couldn't go through the torture of preliminary practice rounds.

Trevino seems to know what he wants, and now he wants a long rest. He'll probably take it, but he won't leave golf.

"Without golf, I'd be a truck driver or a brick layer," says Trevino. "I just need to refresh my interest."

What Trevino craves is privacy.

Bergey Traded To Eagles

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals have traded Bill Bergey to the Philadelphia Eagles in a National Football League transaction and his controversial World Football League contract has been revoked.

The Bengals and the Eagles made separate announcements of the deal. The Bengals will receive Philadelphia's first draft choice in 1976 and first and second choices in 1977.

"It was a difficult move to make, but we feel that it is in the best interests of all," Cincinnati Coach Paul Brown said.

Bergey, a 6-foot-3, 243-pound defensive back from Arkansas State, was the Bengals' second round draft choice in 1969.

He had two years left on his contract with the Bengals when he signed a three-year pact with the Virginia Ambassadors, who have since become the Florida Blazers of the WFL.

Brown said Bergey has been released from the WFL contract to sign the five-year agreement with the Eagles.

Homes Needed

The Babe Ruth Southeastern Regional Tournament will be held in Greenville during the week of Aug. 1-6. The tournament is being sponsored by the Kiwanis Club-University City of Greenville.

Boys from eight Southeastern states will be guests of the city of Greenville, so there is an urgent need for families who will act as hosts for two or more of the players from these states. The pastors of Greenville are trying to locate families, but so far it has been a slow process. If you wish to lodge any of the players coming in from out-of-state, call your pastor, or call Gordon Conklin, chairman of the housing committee at 756-1245.

Group Claims Misunderstood

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What happens when black superstars band together to make a film? They are misunderstood, asserts comedian Bill Cosby.

The film is "Uptown Saturday Night," and it stars Sidney Poitier, Cosby, Harry Belafonte, Flip Wilson, Richard Pryor, Calvin Lockhart, Roscoe Lee Browne, Paula Kelly and others.

Poitier put the project together and directed it for First Artists, in which he is a partner with Barbra Streisand, Steve McQueen, Dustin Hoffman and Paul Newman.

"Uptown Saturday Night" opened to excellent business in New York and Chicago, but some of the reviews have been dismaying.

"As black film makers, we are subject to a condition in which things get pushed out of proportion," Cosby observed.

"In the first place, this is not a black film made by blacks for black audiences. We are Americans, and we made the picture to be seen and enjoyed by Americans."

Cosby was especially piqued by criticisms that "Uptown Saturday Night" repeated the old movie stereotype of eye-bugging by black comics.

"The color of the skin of a black man," said the comedian in a pedagogical manner, "gives more prominence to the whiteness of the eyes than does the pinkish tinge of the white man's skin.

"Watch George Segal or Jack Nicholson or Walter Matthau or Jack Lemmon when they are doing comedy and you will note that their eyes do indeed bug out. It is only natural in comedy to open your eyes wider."

Most of the reviews of "Uptown Saturday Night" in New York were favorable (11 pro, 1 con, 3 no opinion), but Cosby complained that "we as black Americans tend to be auditioning every time we make a movie.

"Nobody talks about a 'white movie.' But whenever blacks do a film, the critics ask 'Is it a black movie? Is it real?'

"Well, I'll tell you what a real black movie would be: two hours of sorrow, poor people, roaches, being called names and no place to go."

"Uptown Saturday Night" tells about a fun-loving pair (Poitier and Cosby) who lose their money in a night club heist and encounter adventures in trying to recover the dough.

The film was designed as "sheer entertainment," Cosby insisted, "but because we are black, we are compared to Amos 'n' Andy, or anybody who made laughs in the 1940s."

Former Colt Doesn't Feel Like A Traitor

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After 10 National Football League seasons as a player, four more as a sportscaster and one as a writer, Alex Hawkins sets out tonight to cover the World Football League's first televised game.

"I don't feel like a traitor," laughed the man who played nine years with the Baltimore Colts and one with the Atlanta Falcons before retiring in 1968. "It's still football any way you look at it."

Hawkins, 37, is a member of the Television Network (TVN) troika broadcasting the WFL's inaugural just between the New York Stars and the Jacksonville Sharks at the Gator Bowl in Florida.

His mikeside colleagues are ex-ABC sportcaster Merle Harmon and "guest commentator" George Plimpton, a failed quarterback and author of the wild, funny "Paper Lion" best-seller in 1966.

Hawkins, who with Harmon faces a 23-game WFL schedule, will be busier this fall than a flute player's upper lip during the William Tell Overture. But he has no qualms about it.

"I love it," he said. "I was without work last year and it was the first time I hadn't been doing anything in the fall in my entire life. I'm just happy they (TVN officials) gave me the opportunity."

He discussed these and other matters by phone from Atlanta, where he's an executive of a sanitation firm. During the interview, he modified his earlier claim of lacking work on the pro football scene last year.

He said after two years of broadcasting Atlanta games and two years with CBS, he wrote out last season as "a would-be sportswriter" who composed two football columns a week for the Atlanta Journal.

Hawkins, a colorful, quotable character during his playing days, said he didn't find life in the Fourth Estate at all odd because he'd spent more time with newsmen than players way back when.

Hawkins, whose network says 110 stations are carrying the WFL games, said he doesn't think the nation's football craze will lessen this year, even with three pro football leagues on TV by fall.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1974

CARROLL RIGHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning brings changes of a dramatic nature that require you to stop, look and listen before putting them in motion. Speak with thoughtfulness instead of saying whatever comes in your mind. Don't act too swiftly.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are likely to be too thoughtful of yourself and not thoughtful of others now, so make sure you equalize intelligently.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may feel hemmed in but make sure you keep any promises made and derive benefits therefrom. Avoid an extravagant person.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You want to engage in amusements with friends but make sure you don't lose your temper with anyone. Strive for more harmony.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle those outside chores in a cheerful vein and they are soon behind you. Steer clear of a bigwig who is in a bad mood.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Obtain the data you need from the right sources but don't let it take up too much of your time. Good day to make new acquaintances.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have so many tasks to perform that it is wise to find a better method of doing them. Don't fall for an associate's teasing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to understand what an unusual-acting associate has in mind and then come to a satisfactory agreement. Control your temper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can accomplish much today provided you don't permit yourself to be sidetracked by those who want to take you on a spree.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you make plans for amusement early in the day you can then plunge into your work and get much accomplished. Show wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you change your attitude in home matters, you find more harmony is restored. Tomorrow is better to make new arrangements.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your prospectus is fine today, so get busy with plans you have made and make this day really count in your life. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure you don't act in a most unusual manner or you could get into trouble. Don't trust an adviser who is off the track now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those pioneering young people and therefore needs to have the comprehensive education that will help to make the most of this fine God-given quality. Teach to complete whatever has once been started, which is the key to success here. Sports are a must.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Model City Has Few Problems

By PHILIP M. STONE

TAPIOLA, Finland (UPI) — The city of Tapiola has no policemen, and no slums. It does have more than 20,000 persons from all walks of life living in a pollution free town considered by planners throughout the world as a model city of the future.

Tapiola (The Realm of the Kingdom of the Woods) stands on 667 acres of lush green fields and forests on an inlet of the Gulf of Finland six miles from Helsinki.

Twenty years ago Heikki von Hertzen set out to convince men with money that a completely new attitude in town planning was needed.

The banks would not listen, but six large social organizations did, and today Tapiola stands as a monument to privately financed town planning and building.

"Man was both the subject and object of all our activities. We built the town for man and industry and business were subordinate," Von Hertzen, 60, said in a recent interview.

Diverse Planners

He believed that if all of man's needs were to be served, then a cross section of society should plan the city. So besides the architects and engineers, he formed a committee of housewives, sociologists, landscape gardeners and child and youth welfare officers to approve each planning step.

Their success can be measured in the long waiting list of people wanting to move into the town and the frequent visits by foreign city planners.

More than half the town's area is common green, parks and forest and since the town belongs also to the children not one "keep off the grass" sign appears. The gardeners took care to plant especially thick grass that children could not trample into oblivion.

Only 25 per cent of the town is given to housing and that is the key to population control.

"We wanted to build a city where one citizen can still be heard. If we can keep a city's density under control then the citizen remains a human being and can be heard," Von Hertzen said.

Build New Cities

He said Tapiola is an example of how to solve urban blight by building new cities, not expanding existing ones.

"Urban renewal offers the old cities time to plan new cities, but urban renewal is just a delaying tactic; the solution is to build an entirely self-sufficient new town," he said.

Besides the basic municipal needs, Tapiola offers a full social and cultural program, meeting places, and has its own free weekly newspaper.

The town claims that no household is more than 250 yards from a shoppping area. About half the residents work within the town limits although Helsinki, the capital city, is just 20 minutes away by bus. The city has attracted light industry and has a large printing works factory.

The town once had one policeman—to teach traffic safety in schools and organize recreatonal activities—but he quit and so for the occasional police work needed the county police are called.

Building Blended In

The first question that strikes a visitor is where does everybody live. A look at the city, even from its 13-story adminstrative tower, shows just a few apartment buildings but thousands of tall thin pines.

The Finns, however, are masters at blending and hiding building into nature, behind and between trees.

The only place concrete reigns supreme is the main shopping center and adminstrative tower. From the restaurant at the top of the tower one sees the archipelago and the forest and and it ranks as one of the most beautiful sites in the country.

The planners did run into problems. Although foreseeing the bicycle craze (all the wide pathways have yellow lines down the middle giving half to pedestrians and half to bicycles) the planners didn't figure on the volume of automobile traffic.

"Even if we had taken the most far reaching estimates offered 20 years ago we never could have planned for the traffic influx we now face," Von Hertzen said.

He said Tapiola is an example of one lesson city planners must learn. "Everywhere where there are better human settlements there has always been a special organization to do the planning. It must be a group project between the municipal body and the consumer. To build a town is teamwork and experts from all walks of life are needed."

FTC Checking Mileage Claims

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — You've seen those ads that seem to promise more miles than you've ever been able to coax out of gallon of gasoline.

The claims made by the automakers certainly aren't modest. The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) wants to know if they're honest.

The mileage figures have become an important part of auto advertising since the oil shortage created long lines at service stations during the winter. Gasoline climbed to 60 cents a gallon and car sales—especially of big cars—plummeted.

The auto industry efforts to counter the sales slump were made more difficult by mileage figures from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) based on a "suburban-urban driving cycle." Automakers claimed the figures weren't representative, mainly because of the poor showing by the large cars.

The disagreement between the auto companies on the one hand and the FTC and EPA on the other seems to boil down to a simple matter of whose figures are right.

Both Sets Correct

In reality, both sets are correct. It all depends on what you're trying to show.

The EPA figures represent a 7.5-mile driving cycle "patterned after the conditions the average driver encounters going from home to work." That is supposed to account for about 55 per cent of all driving in the United States.

Most of the auto industry ads show results from highway driving at about 50 to 55 miles per hour—a range in which cars operate more efficiently. This represents the other 45 per cent of U.S. driving.

Eric O. Stork, a deputy assistant administrator of the EPA and the man who has taken most of the heat for the agency's mileage figures, says the EPA results are the most representative that are available.

He questions the industry mileage claims, saying they aren't truly representative of the way Americans drive.

Depends on Criteria

"The whole thing depends on what your criteria are, what you're looking for," he said. "If all you want is a big number, I could get you 100 miles per gallon. But is that relevant?"

Ask yourself this question: "When do I most often check the mileage of my car?" You probably answer: "When I take a trip."

Most drivers try to compute the fuel economy of their cars by filling up the tank just before a long highway trip and then measuring the gallons used after the trip. The figure they get is better than if they measured their usual "home to work to supermarket and shopping center" driving cycle.

A recent series of newspaper, magazine and television commercials by the Ford Motor Co., for its small cars showed them obtaining between 26.6 miles per gallon and 32.4 m.p.g. on a 379-mile highway test through Arizona and California. The lowest was the 26.6 m.p.g. by a Mercury Comet and the highest the 32.4 m.p.g. by a Mercury Capri.

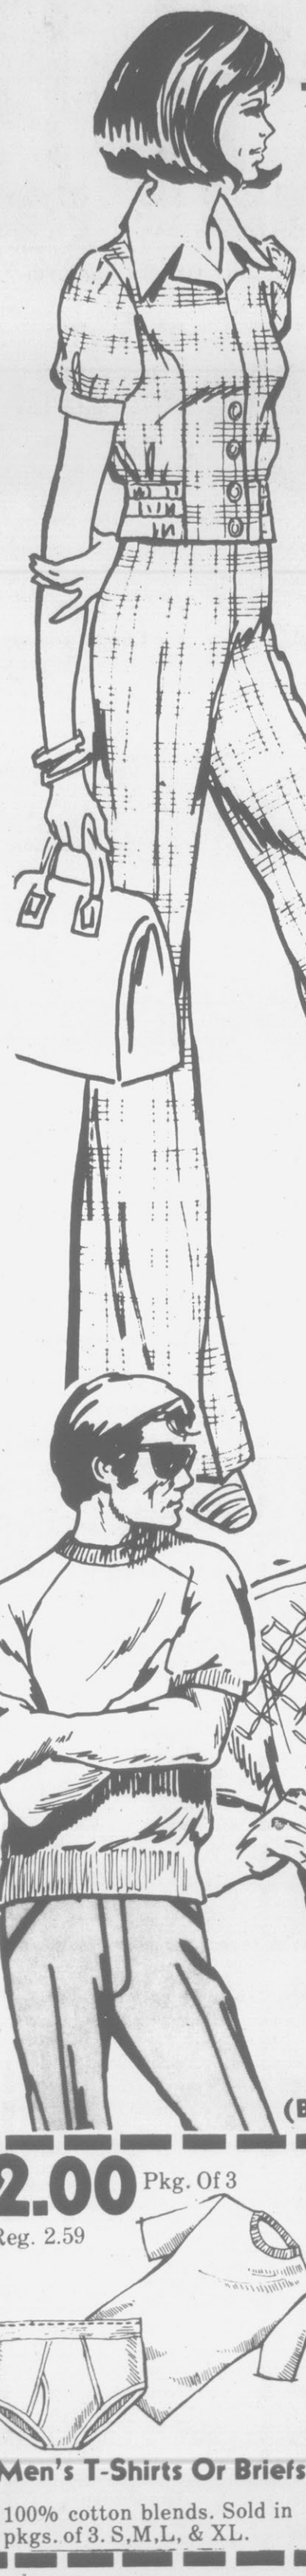

The FTC wants Ford to show these figures are correct and "representative of the performance an ordinary driver can expect routinely under all driving patterns or conditions." Ford has established an elaborate procedure to deal with such requests. It had the answers to most of the questions before they were asked.

Not City Driving

Tom Daniels, advertising manager for the Lincoln-Mercury Division, said that series of advertisements never claimed the mileage results were obtained in city driving.

Biochemists Have Projects

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

Despite its small size, the East Carolina University Department of Biochemistry is among the most active of medical faculties in the nation, as indicated by its recent accomplishments in research, publication and seminar participation, as well as teaching.

ECU's three faculty biochemists have written or co-authored 18 research reports in as many months, most of which have been published in such scientific journals as the Canadian Journal of Biochemistry, Metabolism, Mikrochimica Acta, Cancer Biochemistry Biophysics and Enzyme Technology.

A total of $22,900 was recently awarded Drs. Lynis Dohm and Sam Pennington by the National Science Foundation, the N.C. Heart Association and the ECU Research Council to support research projects. An additional $169,000 for six future projects has been requested by the Biochemistry faculty, and is still pending approval.

Drs. Dohm and Pennington and Dr. Hisham Barakat, the department's research associate, have participated in four seminars and made four public appearances during the past year.

Dr. Barakat joined the ECU biochemistry department last year after completing post-doctoral studies at Baylor University's medical school. Another addition to the biochemistry staff was Beaufort chemist Ed Tapscott, who was hired as a research technician.

Teaching activities of ECU's biochemists included regular lectures to first year medical students, and occasional lectures to classes in nursing, biology, chemistry and medical technology.

Three ECU graduate students in biology have done advanced research under the direction of the biochemistry faculty during the past year.

Patrick Stephenson, a UNC-Chapel Hill alumnus from Beaufort, is still engaged in graduate study. Two others, Denise Kornegay Ward and Thomas R. Ward, have completed their biochemistry studies. The Wards, now living in Raleigh, met and married while working in the biochemistry laboratory.

The ECU biochemistry department had its beginnings in July, 1970, when Dr. Pennington joined the core faculty of what was to be the ECU School of Medicine.

Dr. Pennington came to ECU from the University of Missouri where he had been an assistant professor of biochemistry and a research scientist in the Columbia, Mo., Cancer Research Center.

Like the half dozen other members of ECU's core medical faculty, Dr. Pennington's career as a researcher was extensive, with more than 88 papers, articles, research reports and other publications to his credit.

Dr. Dohm, the second member of the biochemistry faculty, has also gained renown as a researcher, primarily in aspects of the effect of exhaustive physical exercise upon the chemical activity of the heart.

He came to ECU in 1971, after active duty as a captain in the U.S. Army Medical Service Corps. During his service, Dr. Dohm was a researcher in the Denver, Colo. Army Medical Research and Nutrition Laboratory.

The biochemistry program at ECU shows many indications of continuing its astonishing progress in research and instruction along with the growth of the campus medical program in general. The field of biochemistry is one of the most vital in modern medicine, incorporating important research in the prevention of two serious and widespread diseases, heart failure and cancer. ECU's biochemists are noted for activity in both of these areas.

Since the need for top researchers and qualified personnel in the field is so critical, ECU's biochemists are confident that their research will continue to receive financial support from government agencies and private foundations.

Family Big Part Of Brenda's Life

By CHRISTOPHER CABOT
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Since her childhood, singing has been part of Brenda Lee's family — a big part, but never more important than the family itself.

As a little girl from Atlanta, Ga., she started singing professionally in 1955 to help support her family after her father died. She was only 10 years old.

"Eventually, I just started getting hit records and the money was there, and we needed it desperately," she remembers. "It was a chance for me to make a better life for myself and my family."

"I never really took it that seriously," the diminutive singer is quick to add. "I got married when I was 18, so my husband was more important. And I had my children, and they were more important. Unlike many people, I don't put my career first."

Even after a string of top-selling songs in the 1960s and a decade of tours on three continents, Brenda confesses that only recently did she begin to seriously think of herself as a singer.

"I decided about three years ago that 'I'm going to be a singer.' Seriously, when you're nine or 10, you don't think of what you want to do. I did what I had to do.

"Now, when I have a choice, there is more reason for my singing than ever before."

Lyrics are the most crucial element of a song to Brenda. They have to be sincere and sung with feeling.

"Everything I've ever sung I tried to sing with feeling, as if I had lived it, because I put a lot of respect in audiences and people who buy records and people who listen to the radio.

"They know when a person feels something or is putting them on."

Relaxing in her suburban Nashville home with her two daughters, Julie, 9, and Jolie, 7, Brenda says she is not worried about her professional future. She plans to continue playing in clubs in the United States and abroad and to keep recording. She also plans to keep taking care of her family.

"In our business, there are two ways you can take it," she says. "You can choose to have success that you can live with and be satisfied with, or you can work for that superstardom goal to have all this monster success and all this money, but then on the road to getting it, you lose your perspectives."

Brenda doesn't like her music to be categorized as either popular or country-western. She has sold equally well in both markets and sung all types of songs to all types of audiences — from the queen of England on down.

Her first single recording was a rendition of Hank Williams' "Jambalaya," a country-western song. But her million sellers, including "I'm Sorry" and "Sweet Nothin's," were pop songs.

The Worry Clinic

Yardstick For True Prophets

Dr. Flint's wise psychological maxim should be memorized by all school children. For it separates prophets from rabble rousers. Use it to analyze Biblical Moses vs. Aaron and Statesmen vs. chameleon politicians!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE A-682: Dr. Cort R. Flint combines keen psychological insight with his theological excellence.

For example when I was a guest speaker in his Baptist Church (4,500 members,) I learned that he had held over 10,000 counseling interviews with distraught parishioners.

And he always gave them straight-from-the shoulder advice.

"Dr. Crane, he said, "as a young man I learned that those who straddle a fence, never get their feet on the ground!

"What this world needs more than anything else are those who really believe in something and take a stand."

Prophet vs. Politician

That statement is a splendid yardstick for testing true prophets vs. politicians.

It also separates the statesmen from the chameleons who merely try to vote with the majority!

"A politician," runs an old truism, "is thinking of the next election.

"But a statesman thinks of the next generation."

Biblical Moses was thus a statesman and true prophet.

His brother Aaron, though the High Priest of Jehovah, was a politician.

So when the Israelites demanded an idol to worship, Aaron joined the majority.

Apparently, he wasn't sincerely devoted to Jehovah, but merely held the selfish desire to retain his top job in the religious guild!

So he readily agreed to the mob's demands; then asked them to contribute their gold bracelets and ear rings.

Next, he melted them down and produced that infamous Golden Calf.

When Moses came down from atop Mt. Sinai with the Ten Commandments, chiseled on Tables of Stone, he was furious.

In his anger, he even broke the Tables of Stone.

For Moses adhered to basic principles and was not intent on merely currying favor with the majority.

Alas, the prophet is often derided, imprisoned or mocked and maybe crucified, even by the very mobsters whom he is trying to aid.

Jesus thus offered mankind the Golden Rule, plus that superb Sermon on the Mount.

And He tried to help everybody who had any faith, coupled with ambition and "elbow grease."

But the theological union felt that He was hampering their influence and thus deflating their pocketbooks.

So they turned on Christ, mocking and demanding His death.

Pontius Pilate, being attuned to the current polls of public opinion, saw that it wouldn't be popular to oppose the mob.

As a last attempt, however, to preserve the Roman Republic's stress on justice vs. mob action, he asked the courtroom to vote.

Should he release Barabbas, the murderer or the innocent Jesus?

Because the current communication media were then slanting news 100 percent against Jesus, the propagandized mob changed Pilate's Republican courtroom into the most perfect democracy on record.

For everybody was allowed to vote—men, women and children!

And this perfect democracy voted 100 percent wrongly, sending Jesus to Calvary!

That's why Chief Justice John Marshall said a democracy is mobocracy!

And why he opposed the very use of the word democracy, which is a system in which "Might makes right."

So take a definite stand and preserve our superb Republic.

Send for my booklet "How to Save Our Republic," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Opening lead: King of ♣

"Three finesses and not one of them would have worked," muttered South as he entered 100 above the line for his opponents. "I should give up this game!" To the extent that he made his own bad luck, South had a point.

North had a classic take-out double of West's preemptive club opening. South judged well to jump to four spades in response, for with 8 points in high cards and a six-card major suit, he was too strong for a mere bid of three spades—a response he would have to make on a virtual yarboro h. That one sign of life was all North needed to consign the hand to a slam.

West led the king of clubs to South's ace. Without time out for thought, declarer ran the jack of spades, losing to East's king. The club return was ruffed in dummy.

Declarer drew the outstanding trump and entered his hand with the king of diamonds. A diamond to the jack lost to the queen, and that was down one. South took heart from the fact that, had he tried the heart finesse, that too would have failed.

In view of West's preemptive bid, East was marked with length in the other three suits. Thus it was quite likely that both red-suit finesses would fail, and that even the king of trumps would turn up in East's hand. To make the hand, declarer did not need to take single finesse!

After winning the ace of clubs, declarer was correct in leading the jack of spades. He should tempt West into covering if he held the king. However, when West follows with a low trump, declarer should have gone up with the ace. When the king fails to drop, trumps are abandoned temporarily.

Next, declarer tries to drop the queen of hearts by cashing the ace and king and ruffing a heart. This, too, comes to naught, but declarer follows by ruffing his remaining club in dummy and ruffing dummy's last heart, eliminating those two suits from both his hand and dummy. Now, a trump is led.

If West turns up with the king of trumps, declarer has to rely on the diamond finesse. However, if East has the king, as is likely and was indeed the case, he is endplayed. He must either present declarer with a ruff-and-sluff, or lead a diamond into dummy's ten-ace. Either way, declarer avoids a diamond loser.

Lost Her Citizenship

ATHENS (AP)—Lady Amalia Fleming, widow of the discoverer of penicillin, has lost a long battle to keep her Greek citizenship.

The Supreme Court on Monday rejected her appeal to retain her citizenship, taken away during the former regime of George Padadopoulos.

Lady Fleming, who now lives abroad, tried to enter Greece last August after a general amnesty but was turned back at Athens Airport.

Louisiana Supreme Court Upholds Press Gag Of Open Court Hearings

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Louisiana Supreme Court has upheld a judge's order forbidding news stories of open court hearings on pretrial motions in a murder trial.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune said Wednesday the order is likely to be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

A hearing on one pretrial motion in the case was scheduled today.

In a 4-3 vote Wednesday, the state's high court upheld the order by Dist. Judge Oliver P. Schulingkamp.

He told newspapers to "avoid" any editorials on the case before or during the trial and said they could not publish stories on pretrial motions until after a trial jury is seated.

Schulingkamp ordered that no use be made of interviews or "leaks" and that reports of the trial be strictly limited to the court record.

"Liberty of the press cannot be invoked in support of acts which invade the domain within which the authority of the court is exclusive," Schulingkamp said.

An appeal by The Times-Picayune Publishing Corp. was rejected in a one-line majority opinion from the state's high court: "Writ denied. Showing made does not justify the relief demanded."

Three justices dissented, saying they were of "the opinion that prior restraint of the press violates the First Amendment."

The ruling was handed down after deliberations in a five-city interstate conference call. Only three of the justices were in New Orleans at the time.

The case involves the rape and murder more than a year ago of student nurse Jo Ellen Smith. Defendants are Stephen Berry, 18, and Timothy Rudolph, 28.

The Times-Picayune's appeal of the order was taken first to U.S. Dist. Judge Lansing L. Mitchell, who acknowledged that he had jurisdiction but said the matter should be handled in state courts.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected an appeal from Mitchell's ruling.

The issue was taken back to Schulingkamp, who stood by his order. The appeal to the state Supreme Court was then made.

In appealing Schulingkamp's lengthy list of "guidelines," attorneys for the newspaper relied on legal precedent set in a similar Louisiana case.

Larry Dickinson of the Baton Rouge State-Times and Gibbs Adams of the Morning Advocate defied a U.S. District Court judge's order that they not publish stories on a pretrial hearing.

Both were fined for contempt of court. On appeal, the 5th Circuit said the judge's action was unconstitutional.

But the 5th let the contempt citation stand on the ground that the newspapers should have gotten a higher court to overrule the order before publishing the stories.

The Times-Picayune sought such a ruling in advance but ran into what one lawyer called "a morass of procedural complications."

Simon Out To Strengthen Ties

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon headed for the Middle East today to try to strengthen U.S. economic ties with Saudi Arabia and Egypt, two countries that hold important keys for world peace and prosperity.

If the trip is successful, it may result in lower world oil prices, a flow of investment funds from the Arab world to Western countries and closer relations between the Arab countries and the United States.

Besides Egypt and Saudi Arabia, Simon also will stop in Israel and Kuwait in the Middle East, followed by visits to West Germany, France and Great Britain before returning to Washington July 27.

Accompanying Simon are government experts in agriculture, finance, trade, manpower development and education who will assist the Saudis and Egyptians with their internal development problems.

In Egypt, one group will study how the United States can assist further in reopening of the Suez Canal and rebuilding of war-destroyed cities along the Waterway.

In Saudi Arabia, the Simon party is prepared to discuss possible establishment of a branch of a U.S. university.

The stakes of the trip are more than just assisting two Arab economies in their development, however.

Egypt, more than any other country, may hold the key to future peace in the Middle East. Further, once warm Egyptian-Russian relations have cooled considerably and the U.S.. feels the time is ripe to rebuild its former frayed relations.

Saudi Arabia is the chief Mideast supplier of world oil needs, along with non-Arab Iran, and the closer the Saudi economy can be tied to the United States, the more assured the industrialized world will be of a steady flow of oil.

One source on the trip said the United States is hopeful the Saudis will invest up to $8 billion in special, tailor-made U.S. government securities, a sum that would help pay the federal debt and ease government borrowing pressures in domestic credit markets. Investments in Western Europe will be sought also.

U.S. officials say that if they can successfully woo Saudi investments into the areas they want, then other oil producing nations should follow suit, especially those in the Middle East.

Before leaving, Simon told a House Banking subcommittee the United States should review its safeguards against interference in domestic politics by foreign investors.

Heavy Drinkers Risk Mouth, Throat Cancer

By C. BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal report says moderate drinking may be beneficial to some people, but that heavy drinking and smoking combined greatly increases the risk of mouth and throat cancer.

"The wide range of devastating problems associated with the use of alcohol all relate to excessiveness—not moderation," said Dr. Morris E. Chafetz, director of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

"This demands that we, as a society, begin to exercise a sufficient measure of individual and social responsibility in our use of beverage alcohol—a responsibility that has been seriously lacking."

The report was sent to Congress by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as Chafetz outlined its findings Wednesday to a White House seminar for health writers.

Cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx and esophagus and primary cancer of the liver "appear to be definitely related to heavy alcohol intake in the United States and parts of the world where these occur with high frequency in men," the report said.

It found that heavy drinkers and smokers run a 15-times-greater risk of developing cancer of the mouth and throat than abstainers.

According to the report, moderate drinking is considered to be consumption of up to three ounces of whisky, a half bottle of wine or four glasses of beer daily.

Beyond that, a drinker runs nearly 2½ times greater risk of oral cancer, about the same as a person who smokes 40 or more cigarettes daily, the report said.

Chafetz said that for reasons unclear to researchers, the over-all risk of mouth and throat cancer is greatly compounded for people who both drink and smoke heavily.

However, he told the seminar: "There is no evidence that the moderate use of alcohol is harmful to health. Moderate drinkers, as a statistical group, live longer than abstainers or ex-drinkers."

Chafetz said moderate drinkers have a lower rate of heart attacks and that "moderate alcohol use may be physically, psychologically and socially beneficial to active and institutionalized older people."

He emphasized the report does not contend that heavy drinking causes cancer, but said there is a clear statistical correlation between the two.

Chafetz said an increase in heavy teen-age drinking "just blows my mind. It worries me greatly."

Combines Jobs Of Cop, Priest

ROXANA, Ill. (AP) — When this community's police chief admonishes "Thou shalt not ...." he says it with authority. He's a priest.

Chief James Loyd, 39, is a self-taught, ordained minister in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

The sect, with headquarters at Independence, Mo., has priests, as opposed to the elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) of Salt Lake City, Utah.

After joining the force in 1957, Loyd began studying at home for the ministry, with his wife's encouragment. He was ordained here in 1966 and last year he was named police chief.

On Sundays he takes the pulpit of the local Mormon church, often drawing his sermons from police experiences of the previous week.

On Wednesday nights he takes a break from patroling this town of 1,900 to officiate at church prayer meetings. He also serves as treasurer for the congregation.

"People in my congregation have told me they find my sermons much more meaningful because many of the examples I give them are current and real," says Loyd.

A sample sermon topic: "I arrested a boy one time. He pulled out a gun and pulled the trigger and the gun didn't go off. It was a stolen gun and I talked to the owner and he said it had never misfired before. I just felt that this had to do with it not being my time to go because God had something else for me to do."

Houdini Secrets Still Secret

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On July 6, 1914, Harry Houdini stood on the stage of a Manhattan theater and announced that he would walk through a solid brick wall.

He then proceeded to do just that. Or so it appeared.

A huge carpet was spread over the stage to dispel suspicion of trap doors. A team of bricklayers built a wall of bricks and mortar, eight feet high and ten feet long, on a steel beam.

People were called from the audience to stand on the edges of the carpet and encircle the wall to guard against Houdini slipping around one end. The top of the wall could be seen by all.

Small folding screens were placed on each side of the wall and the magician stepped behind one, raised his hand above the screen, and called "I'm going...going...I'm gone!"

A drum roll from the orchestra and an instant later, from the other side, Houdini called, "Here I am," and stepped out from behind the second screen.

Out of that performance grew the legend of the man who could walk through walls, emerge after being buried in a coffin and escape from prisons, packing cases thrown deep into rivers, straitjackets and any kind of fetter known to man.

Along with the legend grew a conviction that the short, intense magician with the sharp piercing eyes possessed an all-encompassing secret which enabled him to perform his miracles. Houdini did little to dispel the notion.

Houdini died on Halloween, 1926, and with his death there developed another myth, that on the 100th anniversary of his birth on April 6, 1874, his lawyer would open a small box containing his secrets and make them known to the world.

As 1974 approached, people began calling newspapers and asking when the box would be opened. April 6 came and went and no lawyer spoke. Houdini's lawyer, B.M.L. Ernst, died in 1938 and Milbourne Christopher, an authority on Houdini's life, says Ernst told him before he died that he never found any such box.

In fact, there was no box and no great secret.

Houdini was a great showman, a resourceful and talented magician, an expert on locks and a performer who never took chances, though he may have appeared to do so. He was a master at the art of misdirection, making an audience think one thing was happening when actually something else was happening.

As an example, Houdini usually could get out of a locked safe on a stage within a minute or so. But that would make it look too easy. To heighten drama, he would sit behind his screen for 10, 15 or 20 minutes calmly reading a book. Just at the right moment he would stagger from behind his curtain, gulping lungfuls of air.

One of his favorite stunts was to challenge the local carpenters' union to build a packing case from which he could not escape. The case usually was exhibited in the theater lobby for 24 hours before the performance.

During the night, Houdini's mechanics would pull out the big tenpenny nails holding one of the boards and substitute short, cut-off nails. Houdini then could easily shove out the key board and escape — behind a screen or curtain, of course. The original nails were replaced before the case was returned.

Houdini died as a result of a mishap in Montreal in late October, 1926, while performing at a theater.

Three students visited his dressing room. One, an amateur boxer, mentioned Houdini's ability to tense his abdominal muscles and withstand a blow. He asked if he could try a punch and Houdini, reading mail on a couch and only halflistening, agreed. The student struck Houdini's midsection, catching him unawares.

In great pain, Houdini completed his Montreal performances and went on to Detroit. Critically ill and with a temperature of 104, he insisted on performing but collapsed on stage.

Surgeons found a ruptured appendix and peritonitis was far advanced. Houdini lingered six more days.

He was buried at Cypress Hills, N.Y., in the big bronze coffin he had used for his burial escape.

Mayan Language May Be Deciphered

By STEVEN CARTER

MECHELEN, Belgium (UPI) — A Belgian researcher believes he is on the brink of deciphering the Mayan language, a script that has puzzled archaeologists for over 100 years.

Working by himself, Antoon Vollemaere has wrestled with Mayan glyphs for almost 10 years.

"Several times it has been announced that the Maya code has been deciphered," he said in a recent interview. "People are suspicious. But we can say it is now virtually deciphered. We have the most important parts. In two years it should be done entirely."

The Mayan civilization, spreading over Southern Mexico and much of Central America, was perhaps the greatest—and certainly the most durable—of the Precolumbian cultures.

Mayan astronomers charted the stars and devised a calendar more accurate than the Gregorian system we use today. The Mayans studied the medicinal properties of plants and produced pain-killing drugs.

Rivaled Egypt

They created a complex agricultural society centered around carefully laid out cities. At their peak, the Mayas developed an architecture rivaling in concept and scale that of ancient Egypt.

But little is known of the history or day-to-day life of the Mayas. Their culture dates from at least 3606 B.C., the year Vollemaere believes is the zero point on the Mayan calendar, to 1640, well after the arrival of the Spanish conquistadores in Mexico.

With the Spaniards came the missionaries, who set about destroying all vestiges of the Mayas' pagan religion, including what must have been thousands of priests' manuscripts.

"The first thing the missionaries did was to burn all the manuscripts and wreck all the idols," Vollemaere said. "They replaced (Mayan writing) with the Latin writing system. They did the job very well because we have only three writing scripts remaining."

It was with copies of the three surviving codices or ancient manuscripts, first brought to public attention in 1839, that Vollemaere, 44, set out to crack the Mayan script.

Deciphering Hieroglyphics

"In 1965, I began studying the methods of deciphering hieroglyphics," he said. "In 1966, I came across my first book on the Mayas. I said, 'Why don't I study this, rather than the Egyptian writing system, which is so well known?'"

Vollemaere's Mayan expertise blossomed. He developed several technical papers, made field trips to Yucatan and Central America, and finally, on the strength of his published works, was admitted to the Sorbonne in Paris as a doctoral student, though he had never attended a university before. His doctorate in Latin American studies with emphasis on Mayan paleology was the first ever awarded by the French university.

From research, Vollemaere concluded the Mayan script had evolved almost entirely to a phonetic, or syllabic and alphabetic system of writing, like most present-day languages. Because its evolution was stopped by the Spanish conquest it retains vestiges of picture writing and other characteristics of early scripts.

Vollemaere also concluded the Mayas had discovered verb conjugation, and the various suffixes in the script gave it a high degree of expressive precision. He found Mayan writing can be reduced to a few dozen basic elements on which thousands of different characters are built.

Mayan Dictionary

The three Mayan codices contain no less than 10,361 hieroglyphs.

"When we decipher the three manuscripts, we won't have too much new material," Vollemaere said. "But the important thing is to know the script. After that comes the interesting part. That is to apply what we know to the Mayan stellae and monuments. If we can read these, then we can know the history as the Maya recorded it."

Vollemaere's current concern is to complete a Mayan dictionary, listing all the known symbols and their meanings. When this is finished, he feels the tools will be there to read any Mayan writing.

There are others working on the Mayan script. What if one of them should beat him to complete deciphering, after all his years of work?

"In the name of science, it's better that it happen," he said. "I know I'm doing my part of the job. But I'm human. I would prefer to be the man who was known to have deciphered the Mayan code."

Trade Is Profitable

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Miami man has turned a trade learned in a handicapped training program into a profitable job, making custom glass figures and repairing glass laboratory equipment.

Thomas Calcagno, 59, learned glass blowing in New York during World War II because "we handicapped people couldn't go into the war."

Calcagno, crippled in both arms and both legs by polio since he was 2 years old, moved to Miami 20 years ago and opened his shop, catering to customers desiring custom-made gifts.

"I've made everything and anything that can be made out of glass," Calcagno said. "I made a glass bird in a glass cage for a wedding, a glass bride and groom for a wedding cake, majorettes for awards for a high school and ballet dancers for a dancing school graduation."

Calcagno also does repair work on laboratory equipment for three Miami hospitals and the University of Miami and has a contract with Dade and Broward counties to repair cracks in pollution control flasks.

Calcagno also conducts tours of his shop and demonstrates glass blowing for 20 to 30 groups of students and scouts each year.

Most of his business is wholesale, but in two or three years Calcagno hopes to have his clientele built up enough to deal strictly in retail trade.

"Most people would rather have special things made for them while they wait," Calcagno said. "They like to say, 'I saw that made just for me' instead of buying something off the shelf in a store."

Language Problems

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Isabel Peron's presidency is creating problems for linguists.

In Spanish nouns are either masculine, usually ending in "o," or feminine, usually ending in "a." The confusion comes because the word "presidente" ends in "e."

The government's official usuage is la presidente, but some scholars maintain she should be called la presidenta. They point out she is the first woman president of Argentina and feel this is the time to set a precedente—or a precedenta.

Studying The Offer

RALEIGH (AP)—Officials are studying a $1 million dollar offer from real estate developers for the establishment of a ferry service from mainland Currituck County to the Outer Banks.

If the North Carolina Department of Transportation accepts, work on the project should begin soon.

There are 55 branches of the New York Public Library in Queens County alone.

New Career For Former Player

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

Now, at 36, the former star defensive back for Kansas City is back in football, the TV varity which demands a far harsher daily preparation than 100 push-ups, four-mile runs and crackback drills.

"I think I'll go home and swim a lot in my pool and maybe visit a few discotheques," he replied deadpan when asked about summer training plans for his new job on ABC's "NFL Monday Night Football" show.

The revelation came at a gathering here in which Williamson, a black action-adventure movie star and TV personality, was introduced as next season's mikeside colleague of Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell.

The previous colleague, ex-Cowboy quarterback Don Meredith, decamped this year after four ABC seasons to go work for NBC both as a Sunday football sportscaster and television thespian.

Unlike Dandy Don, who came to broadcasting direct from football, Williamson is joining ABC's play-by-play platoon more because of his acting and TV talk show activities than those of the pigskin variety.

A tall, lean native of Gary, Ind., and possessor of a degree in architectural engineering, Williamson got his TV career going as Diahann Carroll's love interest in the old "Julia" series.

Before that, he says, he briefly owned two architectural firms in San Francisco and Toronto, but closed them "when I decided I wanted to get into something a little more lucrative."

Williamson, speaking in a pregame, postpress conference interview, said he decided on acting as a means to that end after watching the "Julia" show: "I figured they needed somebody as masculine and handsome as she was feminine. So I said, 'Okay, that's the thing to do.' And I went to Hollywood and became her boyfriend for a year in the show."
