

Supporters Falling Away After Admission

Nixon And Cabinet Hold Urgent Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing a new firestorm in Congress, President Nixon summoned his Cabinet for an urgent session today following his admission he tried two years ago to thwart a crucial phase of the FBI's Watergate investigation.

A White House spokesman, in announcing the late morning session, said "all items" would be discussed. This presumably would include growing demands that Nixon resign from the nation's highest office.

Coupled with his admission that he withheld information from Congress, the public and his own lawyer, Nixon's disclosure Monday about his role in trying to sidetrack the FBI probe dealt a devastating blow to his already dimmed hopes of avoiding impeachment.

Some of Nixon's staunchest defenders in Congress called for his resignation or impeachment. Vice President Gerald R. Ford said he was suspending his public defense of Nixon. Fresh rumors of an imminent presidential resignation swept a capital already awash in such unconfirmed reports, but aides said Nixon planned "to fight on."

A tidal wave of reaction followed Nixon's release on Monday of a statement and new tape transcripts disclosing that:

—Gave orders within a week after the Watergate break-in that the Central Intelligence Agency be used to blunt an FBI investigation that threatened to expose the fact his campaign aides channeled money to the burglars.

—Was told six days after the break-in that his campaign director and former attorney general, John N. Mitchell, may have had some prior knowledge of the wiretapping plans.

—Withheld evidence from his closest advisers and lawyers as well as the House Judiciary Committee, and made erroneous statements to the American public.

"This was a serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility and which I deeply regret," Nixon said in the written statement.

Acknowledging that his impeachment by the House is "virtually a foregone conclusion," Nixon said he would give the Senate for a trial the transcripts of 64 White House tape recordings he is turning over to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica under a Supreme Court order.

The harsh reaction of even some of his closest allies eclipsed the furor that followed his firing last October of special prosecutor Archibald Cox — an incident that triggered what aides later called a firestorm of protest.

But his promise to yield more tapes did little to soften the harsh reaction of some of his closest allies.

Visibly shaken and fighting to keep his composure, Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, R-Calif., the silver-haired lawyer who carried the burden of Nixon's defense in the Judiciary Committee, told newsmen: "After considerable reflection, I have reached the painful conclusion that the President of the United States should resign."

Wiggins said he would vote for impeachment if Nixon didn't quit. Three of his GOP colleagues on the committee also abandoned their support of the President. Five others said they were reassessing their positions.

Other leading Republicans joined in the chorus of resignation or impeachment demands.

"This is the end," said Rep. Harold V. Froehlich, R-Wis. "He's gone," said Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, R-Va.

wave is about to strike the House as far as impeachment goes.... You wonder if he'll have a handful to support him."

But Nixon said in his two-page statement that "I am firmly convinced that the record, in its entirety, does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal of a President."

Aides said the President and his closest advisers discussed his possible resignation during a Camp David conference Sunday.

But they said that Nixon rejected the option and decided instead to follow "the constitutional process" because he didn't want to set "a precedent ... of a President allowing himself to be driven from office."

Two hours after Nixon's statement was given to a crowd of newsmen milling in the press room 30 paces from the Oval Office, the vice president's office was distributing a statement from Ford.

In it, Ford said he had not seen the new evidence and would stand on his views that Nixon is innocent of any impeachable offense "until I have reason to change them."

But the vice president declared a personal moratorium on further discussion of impeachment.

"The business of government must go on and the genuine needs of the people must be served," he said. "I believe I can make a better contribution to this end by not involving myself daily in the impeachment debate...."

The debate was certain to be spurred, however, by the revelations in the three partial transcripts released by the White House an hour (Continued on page 6)

Headlined In Europe

By The Associated Press

President Nixon's latest Watergate disclosures grabbed headlines across Europe today.

Rome's conservative Il Tempo summed up the comments of most of the European press with the headline: "Nixon's admission was pathetic," predicting the end was near for the President.

Watergate returned to front pages in Britain after a lull in interest in recent weeks. The London Evening News, under the headline: "Kick him out clamor grows," said: "President Nixon's bombshell confession left his impeachment defense in ruins."

In Moscow the Soviet news agency Tass stuck to its noncommittal reporting of Watergate with a brief dispatch from Washington on the latest Nixon tapes disclosure. Tass declined to say what was in the tapes nor did it report the latest congressional calls for Nixon's resignation.

In Jerusalem, the daily Maariv warned that a change in the White House could threaten the disengagement agreements between Israel, Egypt and Syria.

WHO HAS HONEY?

I would like to know the name of someone in the area who could sell me honey. I would use several gallons a year. L.C.

Here is a list of persons who sell honey, supplied by the Pitt County Extension Office and confirmed by Hotline. Most of those contacted say they have honey mainly in the spring. Hotline acknowledges that it's likely that some honey sellers in the area may not have been included.

LIBRARY CAN HELP

I need information about some military schools in the Southeast. I need it quickly, since school starts in about three weeks. Mrs. M.J.

Hotline is "passing the buck" to Sheppard Memorial Library because it has such extensive resources, and capable personnel to assist you. There is a reference showing every private school "anywhere" and catalogs for a number of schools that might fit your needs.

IS MONEY MINE OR THEIRS?

I am covered by a group hospitalization insurance policy where I work, and I also have an individual Blue Cross-Blue Shield policy. I recently had surgery at Pitt Memorial. When the payment is settled, if there is a difference—and I think there will be—will it be mine or will it have to be turned in to the insurance companies? Mrs. R.B.

A spokesman for the hospital examined your file and told Hotline that coordination of benefits does not apply in your case, since one of your hospitalization policies is group and the other individual. Refunds should be coming your way from the hospital, she said, and probably from your surgeon and anesthesiologist, also. These will make a nice dent in your next insurance premium, you say.

Cyprus Fighting Goes On

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Fighting between the Turkish army and Greek Cypriot troops erupted again today around the western edge of the Kyrenia mountain range.

At the same time a tense situation developed in the east coast port of Famagusta where an armed clash between Greek and Turkish Cypriot fighters led to the intervention of the United Nations peace force on the island.

The fighting in the Kyrenia mountains centered just west of the town of Lapithos on the seaward side of the range, and at Larnaca on the landward side.

The sound of artillery and machine-gun fire shattered the lull which had taken hold in the area Monday for the first time since the cease-fire agreement was signed in Geneva July 30.

The Cyprus national guard charged the fighting was set off when the Turkish invading force attempted to improve its positions by advancing west of Lapithos, nine miles west of the district capital, Kyrenia.

Ankara radio countercharged in a broadcast that it was the Greeks who launched an attack.

The Famagusta situation followed an outbreak of firing in the area during the night and what U.N. sources described as an attempt by the Turkish Cypriots to infiltrate into Famagusta port, the largest on the island.

U.N. reinforcements rushed to the area at dawn today, and according to the peace force spokesman, "requested the Turkish Cypriots to withdraw."

Heard 2 Miles?

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Sound carries over water, but a cry of distress more than two miles across Currituck Sound?

Mrs. Mary Ashbee thinks a cry did carry that far and reached the ears of a man sitting on his front porch at Nags Head. He rescued her and five other persons from Virginia Beach, Va., who were clinging Sunday to an overturned 20-foot motorboat.

Two girls, aged 2½ and 6, and two women had life jackets but two men did not.

"Another 15 minutes and we would have been goners," Mrs. Ashbee said. "We had two small children and we were just trying to keep them afloat."

"After we had been out more than an hour, Jeff (her brother-in-law, Jeff Black) called for help one more time. We told him to save his strength for staying afloat."

They had just about given up hope, she said, when the rescuer showed up, a tanned man in his 50s. With him was his teen-aged son.

The man said he had heard the cry for help while he was sitting on his porch more than two miles away.

Mrs. Ashbee said she thinks he is a fisherman. But she and the other members of her party forgot to ask his name or that of his son.

Budgetary Matters Before Housing Authority

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer

The Housing Authority faced a table full of figures Monday night as the agenda called for discussion and approval of the quarterly financial report, budget revisions for 1974, and the operating budget for the year ending September of 1975.

Commissioners gave routine approval to the financial data which included figures effective at the end of June. Assistant Director J. C. Lamm noted that the Authority is nine months into the current fiscal year.

A resolution was also approved authorizing several revisions in the current operating budget. Lamm noted that the main revision involved the 78 new housing units in Newtown and a number of other minor budget adjustments were necessary to bring the working figures up to date.

Commissioners discussed the proposed operating budget for the coming fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1, and approved total operating expenditures of $342,000 against anticipated income of $351,680.

According to the tenant occupancy report submitted by Mrs. Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, all but two of the 531 units operated by the Authority were rented during July.

One vacancy existed in N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook) and rent averaged $39.09 while all units were occupied in N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park) with rent averaging $42.93. All but one unit was occupied in N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood) and rent averaged $43.95. She reported, and all units were filled in N.C. 22-5 (Moyewood) with rent amounting to $45.10.

Mrs. Streeter reported that all of the 78 new units in Newtown are now occupied and rent in the project averaged $50.74 for the month.

In other business, executive director Joe Laney reported that he and architect Cameron Dudley of Dudley & Shoe went to the Greensboro office of Housing and Urban Development, recently and gained approval of schematic drawings for the proposed 122 new housing units planned in the vicinity of the present Meadowbrook site.

Laney said that the next step in the process to develop the new N.C. 22-5 project is to go into condemnation on the property. He noted that the Authority's attorney is in the process of drawing up a certificate of convenience and necessity preparatory to condemnation action.

The director noted that landscaping of the Newtown project area has again fallen behind due to the weather and seeding has still not been completed. Laney said that the work will be tackled again when the weather permits.

Approval was given to an amendment to the Annual Contributions Contract which corrected a minor administrative oversight. The amendment, it was explained, was requested by HUD to correct the annual contribution percentage.

Laney said that the Authority received a very favorable report following a (Continued on page 6)

Defense Money Bill Is Signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $22.2 billion military procurement bill has been signed by President Nixon despite what he said were "serious reservations" that portions of the measure are unnecessary or unconstitutional.

In addition to authorizing funds to buy weapons for U.S. armed forces, the bill also set a $1 billion ceiling on U.S. military aid to South Vietnam. The bill is $1 billion below Nixon's budget requests for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975.

In a statement Monday Nixon said the legislation supports his view that America's military forces must be kept strong if world peace is to be maintained.

However, he said, "a number of provisions authorize spending for unneeded equipment and could thus inflate defense spending unnecessarily at a time when we should recognize the need to avoid waste."

He said he would watch spending closely and promised to make a special review of a provision requiring that any new major combat ships be equipped with nuclear power "unless the President advises otherwise."

"I shall recommend nuclear propulsion for ships only when the added cost of such propulsion is fully justified in the national interest," the President said.

Nixon criticized as unconstitutional a section of the bill authorizing Congress to veto presidential decisions permitting the export of certain goods and technology to specific countries.

The bill also sets an active duty military manpower ceiling at 2,149,300 by the end of the fiscal year, 2,800 less than recommended by the Pentagon.

Self-Help Services For Senior Consumers Expand

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS
NEW YORK (WNS)—There's been an increase in services which help the elderly, especially the ill, to stay in their own homes rather than to nursing homes.

These include "meals on wheels" programs, which bring a hot meal a day to seniors, and such medical-supportive services in the home as those sponsored by the nationally recognized Minneapolis Aging and Opportunity Center.

A growing number of community groups, including women's clubs, Scouts and neighborhood settlement houses, also have organized special consumer helps such as shopping services for elderly people and prescription collection services to help them get their prescriptions filled, sometimes at special consumer helps such as shopping services for elderly people and prescription collection services to help them get their prescriptions filled, sometimes at special discount.

Perhaps the most heart-warming trend is to self-help and mutual aid.

One of the fastest growing programs is telephone reassurance, sometimes called Ring A Day. Volunteers—often seniors themselves—call elderly people at prearranged times. In cases of no answer or a medical emergency, the caller knows which doctor, neighbor and relative to notify.

A specialist in problems of widowhood, Dr. Virginia Rogers Van Coevering has written a booklet, Guideline for a Telephone Reassurance Service, published by the Institute of Gerontology, operated by the University of Michigan and by Wayne State University, Detroit.

In the belief that such services can make a vital difference in the lives of isolated elderly people, the institute supplies the booklet at no charge to residents of other states.

The Institute of Gerontology is at 5443 Church St., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104.

One of the most innovative self-help programs is sponsored by the Community Service Society of New York—CSS—in a moderate-income Queens County neighborhood, reports Bernard C. Fisher, director of the Society's Department of Community Services.

The Jamaica, Queens Service Program for Older Adults has brought together all local community organizations and senior citizens groups to provide services and activities with the seniors themselves involved in helping elderly residents.

A Senior Citizen Advisory Council helped to determine priorities and identify what local older people themselves consider to be their primary needs, Fisher explains. The Council initiated a senior-citizen crime prevention program, worked to get free checking accounts for seniors from local banks, helped sponsor health fairs and seminars and distributed a "health passport" for elderly people—a wallet card recording essential health data in case of an emergency. The seniors also helped arrange courses at local colleges in consumer education, home operations, crafts, and cultural arts.

Not only are seniors helping themselves in such programs but increasingly they are helping others through the nationwide Retired Senior Volunteer Program—RSVP.

RSVP already operates in 600 communities with help from the federal ACTION agency. Anyone 60 or older can be an RSVP volunteer.

The talents, skills, experience and time of older citizens is a tremendous national resource, Fisher says. His own department's RSVP is the nation's largest, and SERVE, the CSS pioneering older volunteer program, was the forerunner and model for RSVP.

A 75-year-old woman is one of 35 RSVP volunteers who serves every Tuesday at a hospital for the mentally ill, leading geriatric patients in light exercises, dances, songs, games, and bingo. Another 73-year-old woman, a former packer in a handbag factory, is a volunteer at a school, teaching two young children to read. A man of 91 and his wife in her 80's themselves live in a nursing home and have trouble walking, but they work for RSVP assembling word-game kits used by volunteers to teach reading.

Through neighborhood programs, Fisher says, RSVP works with many older-adult groups—church groups, American Association of Retired Persons chapters, senior citizen clubs, etc. For instance, a group from Co-op City in the Bronx serves at a nearby hospital; RSVP volunteers from a Brooklyn Church make daily phone calls to some 200 homebound persons.

Don't Object To Mother's Request

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The girl I'm dating has been invited to her cousin's wedding. She received a formal invitation, and enclosed was a note which read: "I am sorry, but I must ask you please not to bring a guest as it will be too much. Thank you," and it was signed by the bride's mother.

My question: Isn't it customary for a girl who is dating someone special to be allowed to bring him? I had quite a long discussion with my girl friend. I told her that under the circumstances I didn't think she should attend the wedding either as I do not approve of her going without me as her escort.

I would like your opinion. I OBJECT

DEAR OBJECT: Objection overruled! You aren't officially engaged to her and should not expect to be included. You appear to be unduly possessive of a girl you are only "dating." And you are out of order to insist that she not attend her cousin's wedding because you were not made welcome. Case dismissed.

DEAR ABBY: I've been struggling with this problem for a year and can't seem to come up with a solution.

I am 27, reasonably attractive and divorced. When a girl is 21 and not yet married, she can say no to a fellow and use the excuse that she is saving herself for marriage. But when she's 27 and divorced, what can she say that will be acceptable?

If I say, "I don't believe in sex outside marriage," it sounds like I'm trying to rope myself another husband, which is not necessarily true.

How can I get around this? What I need is some clever saying that will get me off the hook without making me sound like a goody-goody. STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: What makes you think you have to either deliver, or come up with an excuse? Surely you have something other than sex to offer a man. Just say: "No," and don't feel that you have to justify it.

DEAR ABBY: The days when girls went to college to catch a husband are a thing of the past. If girls don't get an education so they can support themselves they will end up on welfare.

The no-fault divorces are telling a story loud and clear. Women are not going to be able to hook a man and live off him for the rest of their lives.

A relative of mine is now looking for work at the age of 67. For 15 years her ex-husband sent her $800 a month, and she spent every dime of it. Last month she was told there will be no more checks and now she is half out of her mind. She's never done any kind of work in her life. She's hopelessly helpless.

She wants to come and live with me. I told her no. At age 45, I went back to school for two years to prepare myself for the job I now have. I like being independent, and I don't want to give up my privacy, which is what I would have to do if I let her come and live with me. Do you blame me? ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I'd have to know more about the relationship between you and this relative. If she is someone who looked after you when you were helpless, it would make a difference.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M AND K: When an argument develops into a physical fight, the one who lands the first blow has lost the argument.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You all know how I feel about high school reunions. I only attended mine because the alumni secretary promised me all the girls would be obese and it would be a real ego trip for me.

Well, she was wrong. I was the only civilian in the room wearing maternity underwear. I missed winning a badminton set for coming the greatest distance by 867 miles. And five people came up to me and said, "What are you doing now? I thought you were dead."

I have felt for some time that people should take a good hard look at the traditional "reunion" and see how it could be improved. I feel one group is one the right track. At a western school, a group of first graders of the class of 1965 got together recently for their tenth reunion. Now that makes a lot of sense. At age 16, there are no bald heads, no insurance salesmen or politicians making points, no losers, no over-achievers, no billfolds of children's snapshots up to your elbow and no starting in February to get the body presentable by June.

But mostly at a reunion of 16-year-olds, there is no sand-bagging. Like, "You haven't changed a bit." Now, there's a classic line. When a cheerleader adds ten pounds above each knee, develops 3-D varicose veins, has bleached hair, borne four children and has a gold-capped tooth in front, she's changed.

Or, "I miss the old football games." I don't know why this is so, but at my reunion, there wasn't a single boy in the room who hadn't played football. Take Dan Folkerth. He came limping up to me, pumped my hand and said, "Son of a gun."

"Why are you limping?" I asked. "Did you hurt yourself?" He looked astounded. "Surely you remember my old football injury."

The only football injury Dan sustained was in the game against Central West when he drank too much beer and fell out of the bleacher and broke his thermos.

Since 16-year-olds are usually without spouses, there isn't the burden of keeping your husband (or wife) awake during the evening while you recall the good times before you met.

I don't know which is worse. Having your husband wander out into the hotel lobby and talking with the bellhop or making remarks when introduced like, "So you're the one who used to write answers on the breath mints and eat the evidence. I like you no matter what everyone in this room is saying about you."

I wish our reunions had stopped at age 16. Then I wouldn't feel such pity for the poor devils who don't look as terrific as I do.

N.C. Delegation Shows Shock

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. James T. Broyhill, R-N.C., says he will vote to impeach if his study of new Watergate transcripts confirms that President Nixon has not been truthful with Congress and the people.

Broyhill and other members of the North Carolina congressional delegation commented Monday after the President conceded he withheld some Watergate information from Congress and from his own lawyers. Nixon also made public a tape transcript showing he authorized an attempt to thwart an FBI Watergate investigation.

Broyhill, three-term representative from the 10th District, said he was "deeply shocked. From the beginning I have called on the President to release all the relevant material to the Congress."

"If the reports of the content of the new tapes are correct, then the President has not been truthful with the Congress and with the American people.

"In the light of these developments, I anticipate that the vote for impeachment will be overwhelming, if the President does not first resign."

Rep. Wilmer Mizell said a new transcript detailing conversations which the President had with top aides on June 23, 1972, is "another piece of evidence to be considered." On that date, just six days after the Watergate burglary, a tape showed Nixon okayed a plan by his top aide to use the Central Intelligence Agency to blunt the FBI's investigation.

The transcript also shows that White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman then told Nixon that his campaign director, John N. Mitchell, may have had some prior knowledge of the wiretapping and break-in. Thus the new transcripts refute a central element of Nixon's defenses—that he did not learn until March 21, 1973, that there was a Watergate cover-up and that some of his top aides were involved in wrongdoing.

Another Republican, Rep. James Martin of the 9th District, said the new revelations were "disturbing." But he added that he has a duty to review all the evidence before deciding whether to vote for impeachment.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he would prefer that the President not resign, but the possibility of resignation is becoming more likely. He said many senators expect Nixon to resign before this week is over.

Helms said that although resignation would remove from his shoulders the burden of judging Nixon, he preferred that the President fight for his office. "It would be easier for me not to have to vote, but I'm concerned about the presidency," Helms said. "In the long run, I say, bite the bullet and let the constitutional process run its course."

A Democrat, Rep. L. Richardson Preyer of the 6th District, said the new transcripts "destroy President Nixon's defense on the obstruction of justice charge, which was based on the fact he did not know of the cover-up. The feeling in the House of Representatives is that the President will resign shortly. There doesn't seem to be any other way out for him."

"I would vote for impeachment now. You can't find many supporters of the President on the House floor."

Preyer said that if the President does not resign, and the House goes through debate on whether to impeach, there will not be enough speakers in the President's defense to use up their allotted 36 hours.

Expect Few Surprises In Today's Primaries

By The Associated Press
Few surprises were expected as voters in Missouri, Michigan, Kansas and Idaho choose candidates for state and national office in primary elections today.

A low voter turnout was predicted in Missouri, where the Democratic nomination for auditor was the only strongly contested statewide race. Only token opposition threatened the renomination bid of U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., who was dropped as the Democratic vice-presidential nominee in 1972 after he disclosed he had been treated for mental depression.

His Republican counterpart, former U.S. Rep. Thomas Curtis, also was expected to win handily. Curtis, a nine-term congressman, almost beat Eagleton in 1968 and was seeking the GOP nod to try for Eagleton's seat again.

In Michigan, interest was focused on the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Front-running former state Sen. Sander Levin was opposed by former Detroit Mayor Jerome Cavanaugh and attorney James Wells. Cavanaugh and Levin vowed to support the eventual winner against William G. Milliken, a Republican running unopposed for renomination who narrowly beat out Levin in 1970.

Over half of the registered voters in Kansas were expected to participate in a primary including a four-man campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination and a two-man race among Democrats seeking to oppose Sen. Robert Dole, former Republican national chairman.

Running for the GOP gubernatorial nomination were Robert Bennet, president of the state Senate; ex-GOP state chairman Don Concannon; Methodist minister Forrest Robinson and Robert Clack, an assistant professor at Kansas State University.

State Atty. Gen. Vern Miller ran unopposed for the Democratic nomination to succeed retiring four-term Gov. Robert Docking, also a Democrat.

Dole is unopposed in his renomination bid. Seeking the Democratic nomination to run against him were U.S. Rep. Bill Roy — the party's only congressman from Kansas — and George Hart, a former state treasurer.

There was no suspense about the Idaho gubernatorial primaries. Running unchallenged for their respective party nominations were incumbent Democratic Gov. Cecil D. Andrus and Republican Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy.

Sen. Frank Church was expected to brush aside token opposition from other Democrats and win renomination for his fourth term in the Senate.

Non-Farm Jobs Up In Southeast

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Employment in nonagricultural work in the Southeast rose about 9,200 from April to May this year, according to figures released by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The figures also show an average nonagricultural worker was on the job about 48 minutes a week longer, earning $4.71 more than a year earlier.

Total nonagricultural employment in the Southeast was listed as increasing 12,783,100 in May of this year compared with 12,773,900 a month earlier and 12,457,900 in May, 1973.

The biggest increase in the April-May, 1974, period was in government jobs, which increased 5,400, and in finance, insurance and real estate, which were up 3,800.

Jobs in retail trade dipped 2,200 and in contract construction

1,600. Florida led the way in new jobs with an increase of 22,800, and new jobs in Virginia totaled 12,100.

All the other Southeast states also showed increases: South Carolina 8,800; Mississippi 3,900; Tennessee 3,700; Alabama 2,100; Georgia 1,500, and North Carolina 100.

The Bureau's report shows an average nonagricultural employee worked 40.1 hours per week in May, 1974 compared with 39.3 in April and 40.5 in May, 1973.

The nationwide averages were 40.3 this May, 39.2 in April and 40.7 a year ago, according to the report.

For May, 1974; April, 1974, and May, 1973, the report shows workers in the Southeast made $137.94, $133.23, and $127.98 per week.

Leaf Price Average Up

FARMVILLE—Prices on the Farmville Tobacco Market averaged higher yesterday according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Market.

Williams said that an increase in piles of tobacco selling for a dollar a pound was responsible for the sizeable increase in sales. He said that prices on top grades of tobacco continued steady.

Williams also added that some primings and non-descript accounted for most of the gains, and practically all grades sold for several cents above support prices. Yesterday's volume consisted of more lugs and cutter grades than any other day of the selling season. Stabilization receipts were also the lowest of the season.

On the day, Farmville warehouses sold a total of 347,626 pounds for a total of $337,015, averaging $96.95 per hundred pounds. For the year, Farmville has sold nearly five million pounds of tobacco for an average of $86.99 per hundred pounds.

SEARCHING FOR BODIES—Rescue workers pick their way through rubble and automobiles searching for persons trapped when a federal building in Miami collapsed Monday. At least six persons were killed in the accident which was blamed on the weight of cars parked on the roof. (AP Wirephoto)

Recover More Bodies In Collapsed Building

By JOHN HOPKINS
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "It was like we were sliding into an abyss. One girl above me was hanging onto a chair. The rest of her was just kicking in mid-air."

Olivia Harris was describing the collapse of an office building roof which sent tons of concrete, steel beams and cars crashing down in a tangled heap of debris on Monday. Authorities said six persons died and that a seventh was missing and feared dead.

Mrs. Harris, 45, was among the 16 persons injured in the collapse at the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration building in downtown Miami near busy Biscayne Boulevard.

Rescuers using spotlights probed through the debris early today, working carefully after a wall buckled and threatened to collapse.

By early today, the bodies of four women had been recovered and police and firemen said they had spotted two other bodies in the debris and were searching for one more.

Recovered were the bodies of Anna Pope, 55, a cashier from Fort Lauderdale; Anna Y. Mounger, 24, a clerk-typist from Miami; Martha Skeels, 50, a clerical supervisor from Miami; and Mary Keehan, 27, a secretary from North Miami.

Authorities identified the three people who were not yet accounted for as Nicholas Fragos, 29, who recently transferred to Miami from Detroit; Mary P. Sullivan, 57, a clerk from North Miami; and special agent Charles H. Mann, 31, who was on his first day in the Miami office after a tour of duty in New Delhi, India.

More than 80 firemen worked through the day and into the night in the 49-year-old building.

"If we make a mistake now it would kill several firemen," Fire Chief Don Hickman said. "There's a big high beam. If it collapsed, I'd lose six or eight. Any sudden movement and the whole building could collapse."

Officials said the weight of 80 cars which were parked on the roof of the building were probably too heavy for it and caused the roof to crash down through two floors of office space.

City Building Department spokesman William Vidal said the structure was last examined in 1968 and was judged then to be safe. He said extensive repairs, including replacement of steel-reinforced columns, were completed in 1971.

Balloonist On Ocean Flight

By PAUL CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
LAKEHURST, N.J. (AP) — Robert C. Berger of Philadelphia, who says he has never been up in a balloon before, lifted off today to attempt history's first successful transatlantic balloon flight.

Berger, 46, and a 10-man crew worked on his 12-story balloon Monday night and early this morning inside a huge hangar at the Lakehurst Naval Air Station, once a large Navy facility for lighter-than-air ships.

Berger said he plans to ride jet stream air currents across the Atlantic Ocean at an altitude of 36,000 feet, landing in Paris in 36 to 48 hours.

Two previous transatlantic balloon attempts in the past year failed, with one ending in tragedy. Thomas Gatch, 48, an Army reserve colonel, disappeared over the Atlantic last February after taking off from Harrisburg, Pa. He has not yet been found.

In July 1973, Bob Sparks tried to cross the Atlantic from Bar Harbor, Maine, only to wind up having to be fished from the ocean.

An electrician with a degree in business administration, Berger is married and the father of four children. He says he has spent $25,000 and two years planning his flight.

The balloon, "The Spirit of Man," consists of a tough synthetic bag made of a substance known as Mylar. The bag holds 320,000 cubic feet of helium and supports a four-foot-wide fiberglass gondola topped by a plexiglass bubble canopy.

Berger is carrying a parachute, an inflatable raft, oxygen breathing devices and other safety items. He planned to wear a helmet, thermal underwear, a flight suit and parka during the flight.

He has a sleeping bag on board and his food supply consists of boiled rice and liquids.

Dramatic Days In The Offing

The fortunes of President Nixon go from bad to worse in this latest, his most critical of crises.

A vote by the House of Representatives for impeachment is a foregone conclusion at this stage. Then the time will come when the president of the United States will be on trial in the U.S. Senate, as the Constitution provides.

No one should believe that a Senate debate on removal of the president from office is going to be an easy time for our nation. It is going to be a time for airing dirty linen at the very top levels of government. Not only will it be divisive here at home, but the eyes of the world will also be upon us and our enemies will be looking for a crack in the mighty United States.

In the end the president may or may not be removed from office, but, regardless, he will be crippled as far as carrying out his duties for the remainder of his term.

An impeachment is the most divisive procedure that this country can undergo. The Senate has only the impeachment of Andrew Johnson to follow as precedent. It is not something that we look forward to; and yet impeachment is unavoidable at this stage. Too much has happened and too much has been revealed following the discovery of the Watergate break-in for us to ignore.

Some forces in Washington would like to see Congress censure the president, rather than go through the impeachment proceedings. This, however, seems to be rejected as impractical.

The seriousness of the situation has caused Robert Griffin, assistant Republican leader in the U.S. Senate to call for the president's resignation as in the best interest of the nation.

"We've arrived at a point where both the nation and his own interests will best be served by resignation," Griffin said.

"... Needless to say, this would be an awesome and very difficult decision for him to reach. But I believe that he will see it that way, too."

Griffin said he considers himself a friend of the president, and certainly Nixon will have to pay attention to what the senator has said.

The Watergate mess has built up to crisis proportions. Some dramatic events occur in the days ahead.

Doubts Over New Concept

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Is the concept of community treatment facilities the long-sought answer to how society can handle a multitude of problems which once required putting people away in various institutions?

Or, is the idea opening a Pandora's box which will produce more troubles than it solves?

That perplexing question faces local and state officials in a wide range of areas: mental health, youthful offenders, prison release, alcoholism, drug abuse, the emotionally disturbed, and so on.

Local and state experts largely have embraced the notion that in all these areas a small facility closely tied to the community can work more effectively at solving individual problems—and at less cost to government—than sprawling institutions.

The key to success is keeping the troubled individual closer to home, in his familiar surroundings, so he learns to cope with the "real world" rather than an artificially secure one.

Money Saved

Money savings naturally

accrue from not having to provide the large institutions, from strong community support, and from allowing individuals to stay at home and even work while undergoing treatment.

From the governor on down, the experts are pushing the community treatment concept, with strongest moves in that direction presently coming in the Department of Human Resources where both mental health and group homes for emotionally disturbed children are in gear; and will soon come in the Department of Corrections where plans are being drawn for community homes to replace the horrors of juvenile offenders camps.

But it is not all smooth sailing for this approach, and many officials close to the scene predict mounting troubles. The flap over Duncraig Manor in Southern Pines is a prime example in which a community has rejected the idea of locating a facility for emotionally disturbed children there. There have been other such incidents across the state, none gaining the publicity of Duncraig Manor, however. As future efforts to locate community facilities intensify, the reaction is likely to intensify as well.

As one official puts it bluntly, "People claim to be all for the idea of community treatment until somebody wants to put a facility in their neighborhood."

Nobody Wants It

"Then, it's just like integration of housing—everybody's for it, but nobody wants it in their neighborhood."

Duncraig Manor is by no means a first in the area of community resistance. There is a long list going back over many years of neighborhoods rising up against prison pre-release houses, alcoholism detox centers, drug abuse centers, etc.

Just recently, Guilford County turned thumbs down on a community facility—already funded, staffed, and the house bought—in which state and federal prisoners would be placed in the community preparatory to release.

An eastern county objected strenuously to plans to put more mental patients back into their homes for treatment at local mental health centers rather than state hospitals.

Charlotte has many other communities. He has seen fight after fight over such facilities.

Ray D. Cohn, a consulting engineer in Charlotte, has been at the center of one such battle. He is chairman of the board of a prison pre-release house called Home of Assurance.

Cohn got into his interest years ago, spent many Sundays in prison teaching Sunday school classes, and has gradually invested more and more of himself in prison reform efforts.

"I used to think you could play on people's emotions in this matter; convince them of right, and wrong so they would accept the concept as the right thing to do," Cohn says.

"But not any more. There will always be a fight, and the only way to convince the public is through enlightened self-interest: if we can convince people it will cost less money to do it this way, and will cause less trouble in the long run, then they will go along."

"High crimes and misdemeanors, indeed! I won't fall for that."

Guard Against Threats

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House end of the Capitol building will be a tightly guarded fortress during the impeachment debate, closed to all not on business because of threats of violence.

House leaders and officials are developing plans that would bar tourists and the general public from the House side.

Members, employees, newsmen and others with a need to enter the building would be subject to rigid security screening. This would include, in most cases, new credentials, searches of all packages, briefcases and equipment, and airport-type electronic metal detectors at all points of entry and access corridors on every floor.

The Senate portion of the building would continue to be open, but security measures would shift there if a trial results from the House action.

Security planning was spurred by what officials described as an alarming outpouring of letters, telephone calls and messages conveying threats against Congress in general and some individual members, especially since the beginning of broadcast proceedings of the Judiciary Committee.

Such threats already have resulted in searches of several areas of the Capitol complex.

Protective measures would be redoubled in the immediate vicinity of the House chamber, which includes the media and public galleries overlooking the chamber and the adjacent work areas for press, radio, television and periodical correspondents.

Majority Whip John J. McFall, D-Calif., chairman of a special bipartisan committee working with policy, intelligence and security agencies, said the plans are nearing completion. They would go into effect a few days before the scheduled Aug. 19 start of the debate. It is expected to continue through Aug. 29.

Periodic sweeps of the immediate vicinity of the chamber, using dogs trained to smell out explosives, are planned. Officials said that some of these will require evacuating the areas.

The public galleries in the chamber itself, where tourists now are ushered in groups and others may sit if they have easily obtained passes from members, would be open only to special ticket-holders from the executive department and diplomatic corps, and to personal guests of representatives and senators, who would be limited to one guest ticket each.

The media galleries would be expanded but not enough, it was expected, to accommodate the hundreds of U.S. and foreign correspondents already applying for admission. Correspondents' committees already are drawing up plans to allocate the limited space. Work space also is to be supplemented, but space limitations will force rationing there also.

Ordinary press credentials would not be valid for admission to the building during the debate. Special area passes would be required.

The INSIDE REPORT

White House Shows Panic

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The impeachment panic now enveloping President Nixon was revealed when chief anti-impeachment legal strategist James D. St. Clair himself secretly felt out key Republican Congressmen Wednesday morning on the "artful dodge" ploy of sending a pro forma vote of impeachment to the Senate for trial.

St. Clair, highly-regarded in the House as a fine lawyer with a lousy case, explored the now-discredited ploy at a private breakfast with the Chowder and Marching Society, an informal social group of Republican Congressmen which Mr. Nixon himself helped found 25 years ago.

"He was obviously interested in it," one key

Republican who attended the closed-door breakfast on Capitol Hill told us.

The matter came up when St. Clair was asked if he saw any political advantage for Mr. Nixon to abort the predictably devastating House impeachment debate—now expected to yield at least a 2-1 margin against the President—and get the articles of impeachment sent immediately to the Senate for trial.

Ducking a direct answer, St. Clair started questioning his hosts about the idea.

He got a rude awakening. An anti-impeachment Republican told him the proposal, first floated to President Nixon by two Republicans through high-level intermediary Melvin R. Laird weeks ago, was an insult to the House.

At the very moment St.

Clair was revealing White House interest in finessing televised debate on the House floor, Nixon aide Patrick Buchanan was peddling the same line to reporters at Godfrey Sperling's breakfast club.

St. Clair's suggestion, that aborting serious debate and a meaningful vote in the House would get Republicans off the hook, evoked hollow laughter. That might have been true a month ago, but the 30-odd Republicans breakfasting with St. Clair knew that the real reason for exhuming the idea now was to get not them but Mr. Nixon off the hook of ruinous House debate. Mr. Nixon scarcely lifted a finger for his party in the 1972 campaign.

A footnote: The fact that Laird played emissary for Republican Reps. Louis Frey of Florida and John McCollister of Nebraska, original backers of the artful dodge ploy, shows that his old colleagues in the House are making full use of his unique back-room talents.

Secrecy on Connally

Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski's office handled the milk scandal indictment of John B. Connally with extraordinary security precautions in an effort to mitigate the previous floor of anti-Connally publicity which will seriously handicap efforts to convict him.

Total secrecy was maintained on the indictment. It was typed not by secretaries but by high-ranking officials on the prosecution force. Jaworski, who has excused himself from the case because of old Texas association with Connally, was not informed that the indictment was coming. Even after the indictment was announced, Jaworski's aides refused to discuss the case.

It may be too late, Edward Bennett Williams, famed defense lawyer representing Connally, intends to argue that his client's interests were damaged by the deluge of publicity preceding Connally's indictment for bribery and perjury.

Jaworski's lawyers regard that publicity as disgraceful, but they were not at fault. The leaks probably came from attorneys for erstwhile

(Winston-Salem Journal)

Travel abroad by members of Congress, often taking along an entourage from staffs and families, cost the taxpayers $1,114,386 in 1971 and $955,820 in 1972, according to studies by Congressional Quarterly.

Unfortunately, figures aren't available for 1973 because of a curtain of secrecy drawn by Rep. Wayne L. Hays, Ohio Democrat. Last October, he engineered an amendment to a routine State Department authorization bill which deleted the requirement that details of travel expenses outside the United States be reported in the Congressional Record.

Fortunately, taxpayers may get a look at the tab for 1974. The Senate moved to restore the publication requirement, and the bill is now before a conference committee. Rep. James T. Broyhill recently added his influential voice to its support on the House side.

The North Carolina Republican, urging that congressional travel expenses be kept in public view, said it is a step which would help restore the confidence of citizens in their elected officials.

Hays never acknowledged any intent to cover-up for his junketing colleagues. He said he was trying to save money by cutting down the cost of printing the Congressional Record. That seems like funny economizing, considering that the few pages devoted to the travel reports account for only a few thousand dollars of the $6.6 million cost of publishing the Record.

Besides, if Hays really wanted to reduce spending, he could speed up the package of bills before the House Administration Committee, which he heads, designed to eliminate abuses in congressional travel and to cut its cost.

The House had better listen to Rep. Broyhill's good advice, and tell the people how much they spend for travel abroad. Otherwise, distrustful voters at the polls may tell them they can go home—at their own expense.

The Country Financed By Debt

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Debt rather than equity has become the dominant method of financing the country today, and the consequences are showing themselves throughout society.

Stock prices, for example, are at their lowest in years, partly because the higher interest rates offered for borrowed money is too attractive for investors to turn down. They sell their stocks and buy bonds.

Increasingly, capital-short corporations are forced to turn to banks, and their irritation is showing. When a company raises money in the stock market it comes relatively free of strings. Stockholders in general are docile. Banks are not; they dictate terms.

Many corporations now are seriously concerned that their future is endangered by their inability to attract people to the ownership concept—to buying the company's stock rather than lending it money via bonds.

Not only do they find it difficult to attract customers, but with stock sales forces a fraction of what they were a decade ago, corporate leaders find it difficult to turn around the situation.

The decay of the equity markets seems to feed on itself. If people distrust stocks today, then they must be resold. But with business so poor, most big brokers have little interest in handling any but the active accounts.

The head of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., forecast last week that "between 100 and 200 firms will merge or go out of business if:

"... short-term interest rates don't decline substantially, if the stock market doesn't improve markedly in price and volume, and if negotiated commissions become effective on May 1, 1975."

The scramble to borrow money is glaringly apparent with small savings accounts.

Ordinarily any interest in Treasury financing comes mainly from the big individual and institutional investors. But this week's refinancing is partially denominated in units of $1,000 and at an unheard of 9 per cent.

This means savings and loan associations and savings banks, which cannot pay more than 7.9 per cent a year compounded, simply cannot compete. And that means they cannot provide home mortgages.

The impact of all this is felt in an even more personal way. Billions of dollars are held in private pension plans to fund the retirement of millions of workers. These plans rely on a healthy stock market to remain viable.

Now that the stock market has fallen into such disarray, some pension plans must reevaluate their estimates of growth. The Dow Jones Industrial Average is back where it was 10 years ago, and many of these plans hold the very stocks that make up the Dow Jones average.

In the opinion of those close to the scene, the complex problem of debt versus equity markets won't be resolved until inflationary pressures recede. Then, they say, interest rates will begin to fall, and stocks will regain some appeal.

Strength For Today

THE POWER OF CONSCIENCE

The eighteenth-century French philosopher Rousseau at one time held the position of secretary to a prominent Italian lady. After her death he helped himself without asking anyone's permission to a little ornament which the woman had owned. When it was discovered in his possession, he declared that one of the maids of the household had given it to him. When the girl was accused of the theft she turned upon Rousseau a look of reproach which, as he said later, "would have melted the heart of a demon." For forty years

Rousseau recalled the incident with great pain, and sometimes the recollection sent him into profound depression.

"Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;

And thus the native hue of resolutions Is sicklied over with the pale cast of thought; . . ."

Rousseau was one of the great thinkers of the eighteenth century, and his ideas had a profound effect on the French Revolution, yet conscience affected him just as deeply as it does people of less exalted attainments.

New Tape Transcripts Reveal Nixon Involvement

LISTENING TO TAPES—Congressmen listen to 19 presidential tapes made available by the House Judiciary Committee in Washington.

WASHINGTON (AP) —
"Don't go any further into this case, period!"

That was President Nixon's indirect order to the FBI after he learned federal agents were on the verge of discovering what he already had been told: The Watergate break-in six days earlier had been committed by the President's men.

Tape transcripts made public on Monday also show Nixon was told his campaign director, John N. Mitchell, apparently knew about the intelligence-gathering scheme in advance and pressured subordinates "to get more information."

Nixon repeatedly had denied knowledge of any high-level involvement in Watergate or any participation in a cover-up of the scandal.

The 46 pages of newly released transcripts include portions of three meetings between Nixon and presidential Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman on June 23, 1972 — six days after the break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate Office Building.

At the outset of a wide-ranging political strategy discussion regarding the ongoing presidential campaign, Haldeman told the President:

"Now, on the investigation, you know the Democratic break-in thing, we're back in the problem area because the FBI is not under control, because (acting FBI Director L. Patrick) Gray doesn't exactly know how to control it, and they have — their investigation is now leading into some productive areas — because they've been able to trace the money — not through the money itself — but through the bank sources — the banker."

"And, and it goes in some directions we don't want it to go."

Haldeman said Mitchell had come up with a recommendation, analyzed and agreed to by White House counsel John W. Dean III, "that the only way to solve this, and we're set up beautifully to do it ... is for us to have (Deputy CIA Director Vernon A.) Walters call Pat Gray and just say, 'Stay the hell out of this....'"

Nixon's top aide advised the plan would work because it wasn't unusual for the spy agency to "put the hold on" FBI investigations that threatened to expose covert CIA operations and "the FBI agents who are working the case ... feel that's what it is."

Under questioning from Nixon, Haldeman said the money used for the break-in was "directly traceable" from Nixon campaign contributors through campaign finance chief Maurice H. Stans and his Finance Committee to Re-elect the President.

Nixon suggested the contributors could tell the agents a false story about the money, but Haldeman cautioned, "Then we're relying on more and more people all the time. That's the problem, and they'll stop if we could take this other route."

"All right," the President said.

Haldeman: "And you seem to think the thing to do is to get them to stop?"

Nixon: "Right. Fine."

They discussed how to get CIA Director Richard Helms to go along with the plan, and Nixon suggested, "We protected Helms from one hell of a lot of things."

He added that exposing E. Howard Hunt Jr., a retired clandestine officer of the CIA, as a Watergate conspirator would uncover "a lot of hanky-panky that we have nothing to do with ourselves."

Nixon apparently was referring to Hunt's role in the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba and perhaps other, still-classified exploits of the romantically inclined American spy.

"Well, what the hell, did Mitchell know about this (break-in conspiracy)?" Nixon said.

Haldeman: "I think so. I don't think he knew the details, but I think he knew."

Nixon: "He didn't know how it was going to be handled though — with (campaign contributor Kenneth) Dahlberg and the Texans and so forth? Well, who was the asshole that did? Is it (G. Gordon) Liddy? Is that the fellow? He must be a little nuts!"

Haldeman: "He is."

Nixon: "I mean he just isn't well screwed on is he? Is that the problem?"

Haldeman: "No, but he was under pressure, apparently to get more information, and as he got more pressure, he pushed the people harder to move harder —"

Nixon: "Pressure from Mitchell?"

Haldeman: "Apparently."

Nixon: "Oh, Mitchell. Mitchell was at the point (unintelligible)."

Haldeman: "Yeah."

Nixon: "All right, fine. I understand it all. We won't second-guess Mitchell and the rest. Thank God it wasn't (special presidential counsel Charles W.) Colson."

The President then ordered Haldeman to call in Helms and Walters of the CIA and "play it tough. That's the way they play it, and that's the way we are going to play it."

Later in the conversation, when telling Haldeman what to tell the CIA officials, Nixon advised, "Don't lie to them to the extent to say there is no involvement, but just say this is a comedy of errors, without getting into it. The President believes that it is going to open the whole Bay of Pigs thing up again."

"And ah, because these people are plugging for (unintelligible) and that they should call the FBI in and (unintelligible) don't go any further into this case, period."

Just before Haldeman and domestic aide John D. Ehrlichman met with the spy agency chiefs early that afternoon, the President spoke to his chief of staff again.

Only a brief portion of the tape of that nine-minute meeting was released by the White House.

The transcript begins with the President telling Haldeman:

"Okay, just postpone ... Just say (unintelligible) very bad to have this fellow Hunt, ah, he knows too damned much, if he was involved — you happen to know that?"

"If it gets out that this is all involved, the Cuba thing, it would be a fiasco. It would make the CIA look bad; it's going to make Hunt look bad, and it is likely to blow the whole Bay of Pigs thing which we think would be very unfortunate — both for CIA and for the country at this time, and for American foreign policy."

"Just tell him to lay off. Don't you?"

"Yep," Haldeman replied. "That's the basis to do it on. Just leave it at that."

Later that afternoon, Haldeman reported the outcome of the meeting with Helms and

Walters:

Haldeman: "No problem."

Nixon: (Unintelligible)

Haldeman: "Well, it was kind of interesting. Walters made the point, and I didn't mention Hunt. I just said that the thing was leading into directions that were going to create potential problems because they were exploring leads that led back into areas that would be harmful to the CIA and harmful to the government...."

"Walters is going to make a call to Gray. That's the way we put it, and that's the way it was left."

Testimony from Walters, Gray and Helms shows that Gray indeed did get the message and ordered a temporary holdup of his agents' pursuit of the Watergate money.

But he pressed Walters for a memo saying that the continued investigation would compromise CIA activities. When Walters refused to provide such written assurance, Gray ordered a resumption of the probe and informed the President that some of his aides were "trying to mortally wound" him by using the FBI and CIA.

Gray testified that after a "slight pause," the President said:

"Pat, you just continue to conduct your aggressive and thorough investigation."

Foundations Least-Trusted, Take Steps Avers Chaplain

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Foundations have begun a major program to help hospitals across North Carolina staff emergency rooms with full-time physicians.

Hospitals receiving grants will be required to provide medical care to patients on their first visit to the emergency room, even if the complaint is not classified as urgent.

The hospitals also will be required to help such patients find permanent care for their illness.

An estimated $600,000 will be spent on the program to help alleviate the uneven distribution of health personnel. The program will strike at two of the state's major problems in health care, especially in small communities. One is the inability of patients to get a doctor. The other is the difficulty of hospitals in providing physicians full time for their emergency rooms.

The project is being undertaken by the North Carolina Hospital Education and Research Foundation. This is financed by the Duke Endowment, the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, and the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust.

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) —

The Roman Catholic prison chaplain wounded in the Texas State Prison shootout says that of all their hostages his convict captors trusted him the least.

"So I had two pairs of handcuffs," the Rev. Joseph O'Brien told newsmen from his hospital bed on Monday.

Father O'Brien refused to say who fired the shots which killed two women hostages and wounded him in the chest during the bloody gun battle in the main prison yard Saturday night.

"These will be court cases," he said.

Two of the three inmates who held 16 hostages after an armed takeover of the prison library on July 24 also died as they tried to escape, including ringleader Fred Gomez Carrasco.

Authorities said Carrasco, serving life for assault to murder a San Antonio police officer, and Rodolfo Dominguez committed suicide.

Father O'Brien said he expected prison officials "to make some effort to stop that man (Carrasco) from getting out of the penitentiary and it's not an ego thing."

"You see we got one of the most dangerous men in the United States and you let him out it starts all over again."

"I always said if Fred Carrasco would go, he would go big. In other words, he was not the convict type. He would never get into nit-picking regulations — breaking regulations, anything like that. Fred Carrasco was criminal and if he was going to go, he was going to go big. And that's what we saw that night."

The priest described Carrasco as a "very sick, very vicious man. I think the world is better that he is not in it anymore."

Meanwhile, Justice of the Peace J.W. Beeler said capital murder charges being prepared against the surviving rebel inmate, Ignacio Cuevas, would be presented to a Walker County grand jury "within the next two days."

Carrasco's wife, Rosa, is charged with smuggling into the prison the handgun Carrasco used in the library takeover.

The two hostages who were killed, Elizabeth Beseda and Julia Standley, were buried on Monday in a cemetery only three blocks from the prison library, where they were employed.

Connally associate Jake Jacobsen. In fact, the special prosecution force has privately scolded Jacobsen's lawyers for highly unethical conduct.

The publicity was an obvious attempt to win total immunity for Jacobsen in return for damaging testimony against Connally — in effect, plea bargaining via the media. It did not succeed. Although Jacobsen's testimony against Connally is expected to be critical, he was indicted for bribery along with Connally.

Bye-Bye Bayh?
Democratic Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana is running into potentially serious problems in his reelection campaign against Indianapolis Mayor Richard Lugar, one described as President Nixon's "favorite" mayor.

Secret polls taken by the respected Cambridge Subey Research for Bayh show a steady increase in Lugar's support, while Bayh holds firm at 48 per cent. Thus, in May 1973, pollster Patrick Caddell pegged Lugar at 27 per cent, last in July, only 7 points behind Bayh: 41 per cent to Bayh's 48 per cent.

What disturbs Bayh's operatives is this steady accretion of Lugar's support plus the decline from 61 per cent to 55 percent in Bayh's rating as a "good" Senator.

Three major reasons for Lugar's gains, despite the Indianapolis police scandals, are Bayh's long record of support for strong gun-control legislation and his pro-busing, pro-abortion record.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened with a powerful upward burst today and then settled back to await impeachment developments in Washington.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 17.21 at 777.61. Gainers maintained close to a 10-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow had surged 25.82 points in the first half hour, in what veteran market-watchers said was apparently a record for the initial 30 minutes of a session.

Brokers said the buying spree was touched off by a series of developments in the past 24 hours which seemed to increase the likelihood of an early resolution of the impeachment issue.

They noted the statement issued by President Nixon after Monday's close announcing release of transcripts of three conversations which he said "may further damage my case," and subsequent news reports of waning support for him in Congress.

Following the early surge, prices settled back somewhat. Brokers said it was normal after a sudden rise in the market for traders to move in and take profits.

Blue chip and glamour issues dominated the Big Board's most active list with virtually across-the-board gains.

Polaroid, the volume leader, was up 1 at 29½; McDonald's 2½ at 43½; Eastman Kodak 3½ at 90; Xerox 3½ at 97, and Urwags 3½ at 94½.

The NYSE's 11 a.m. composite index of nearly 1,500 common stocks was 1.15 higher at 42.68.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.36 at 78.30.

The Amex volume leader was Syntex, up 2 at 40.

Hurlocker told the board that the county maintenance workers have been told of them and commissioners ordered that the problems be taken care of immediately.

Commissioners set a joint meeting with the County Planning Board on August 21 to discuss operation of the county's new landfill and what methods might be employed to make disposal of solid waste more convenient for all residents of the county.

The board also discussed the possibilities of hiring a part time or full time engineer or technician as a sediment control officer to enforce the county sediment control ordinance passed some time ago by the Commissioners. No decision was taken on the matter as commissioners urged the Sediment Control Commission to make recommendations.

after the Nixon statement.

All three conversations were between Nixon and H. R. Haldeman, then his White House chief of staff, June 23, 1972, six days after the Republican operatives were arrested inside Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate complex.

The 46 pages of transcripts disclose Nixon's approval of a plan to cut off the FBI's probe, which was then threatening to expose involvement of his top campaign officials.

GRIFTON—The Griffton Chamber of Commerce is attempting to get toll free telephone service between Griffton and Greenville.

According to Clifton Gentry, immediate past president of the Griffton Chamber of Commerce and executive at First Citizens Bank, it is bad when a community does not have toll free service to the county seat.

"We are in the southern part of the county and just about forgotten," Gentry said. "It cost us between 30 and 40 cents every time we call Greenville even if we only say two words."

Gentry explained the Griffton citizens can call Kinston toll free but that much of their business is handled in the county seat.

"I feel the people here would be willing to pay additional cost for telephone services in order to be able to call Greenville at no cost," Gentry said. "It would result in a tremendous savings and added convenience to be able to dial Greenville without going through an operator."

The Griffton Chamber is contacting all outlying communities in Pitt County that do not have toll free service to Greenville to seek their help in getting free telephone service to Greenville.

"With the combined effort of these communities, we hope Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. will do something about getting us toll free service," Gentry added.

Don Collier, district manager for Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., today stated his company's position regarding extended area service (EAS) between any two exchanges in the Carolina Telephone operating area.

"First of all," Collier said, "Carolina Telephone is required to retain a neutral position during any campaign to bring about EAS."

Plans Leave State Post

RALEIGH—Greenville native Tom Taft, legislative counsel to Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, will leave his state post September 1 to enter private law practice in his home town.

Taft served Hunt as legislative counsel in the 1973 and 1974 General Assemblies by presenting Hunt's views on pending legislation to individual members of the Legislature and represented the Lieutenant Governor at various meetings.

The UNC Law School graduate worked for passage of a bill to expand the East Carolina University medical school and helped promote such legislation as the Senate-passed legislative ethics bill and the new campaign finance law.

Taft also served Hunt as an assistant campaign headquarters manager during the 1972 campaign.

The 28-year-old attorney will leave the $18,000 a year state job to enter the private practice of law with his father, E. Hoover Taft Jr.

Colson Asks Defend Himself

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Former presidential aide Charles W. Colson has asked the Virginia Supreme Court to postpone action on petitions for his disbarment.

Colson's lawyer filed papers Monday asking a delay until Colson is out of prison and can personally defend himself against disbarment action taken by the state Bar Association.

No-Necktie Stirrs Judge

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has threatened a Chicago high school teacher with a contempt citation for refusing to wear a necktie in the courtroom.

The dispute began after Daniel Murphy, 32, a teacher at Mount Carmel High School, filed suit against the school for firing him because he refused to wear a tie.

Murphy contended his tieless appearance was a symbol of rebellion against the school's restrictive policies toward women and black students.

Judge William Lynch of U.S. District Court sympathized with Murphy and said, "We put people on probation for felonies and it seems so frivolous to take a man's job away for not wearing a necktie. I'm not going to permit this man to lose his job for not wearing a tie."

But when the cravatless Murphy approached Lynch, the judge said, "How would you like it if I walked into a courtroom without a necktie? I wear a tie. All the attorneys in court wear a tie. Who do you think you are?"

Murphy did not respond. The judge promised that if Murphy returned to court wearing a tie, he would restrain the school from firing the teacher.

But he warned, "While you are in school you'll have to wear a tie. And if you don't come back tomorrow wearing one, I'll throw you in jail for contempt of court."

Murphy left the courtroom without comment.

"Secondly," Collier said, "the exchanges involved should meet certain criteria to be considered as EAS candidates before Carolina Telephone will conduct an EAS cost study."

The two points which make up the criteria are:

—at least 40 percent of the combined subscribers in both exchanges should make one or more calls during a 30 day study period;

—the volume of calls placed between the exchanges should equal at least two calls per month per subscriber on a combined basis.

"For example," Collier explained, "we have at present approximately 2,429 subscribers in Ayden and 1,363 subscribers in Griffton. When the criteria for good EAS candidates is applied it shows that 1,516 subscribers should make one or more calls during a 30 day period and that a volume of calls between the two exchanges should equal at least 7,582 calls."

A 30 day study could be conducted to determine the necessary rate increase to offset the additional expenses and investment involved with the proposed EAS service. The results would be remitted to the N.C. Utilities Commission for approval to discuss the necessary rates with the customers.

"It is impossible to estimate now what these rate increases would be," Collier said. "There would be considerable differences between rate increases for EAS between Greenville and Griffton and those for EAS between Griffton and Ayden. This would be due to the greater number of telephones that could be called in Greenville as opposed to Ayden."

Collier stated that if everything mentioned above is completed, the earliest that the EAS equipment could be ordered and installed and the change over completed would be sometime late in 1977.

Collier explained that getting toll free service between Griffton and Greenville would not give Griffton toll free countywide telephone service. For example, Farmville residents can call Greenville toll free but cannot call Ayden or Bethel toll free. Bethel can call Greenville toll free but cannot call Ayden or Farmville toll free.

Girls Don't Bother Young Swede Borg

By JOHN SHURR
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hey, Bjorn Borg — young Swedish tennis sensation bound for perhaps another major title — how's your love life?

"Ha," he said Monday just after breezing past Norman Holmes of Melbourne, Fla., 6-1, 6-3, in the first round of the $130,000 U.S. Clay Court Tennis Championships.

"The girls don't bother me," the No. 3-seeded Borg explained. "They're good for my inspiration. And, all their cheering and clapping sometimes disturbs opponents."

Besieged as usual by flocks of autograph-hungry females, the 18-year-old blond champion of the Italian, French and Swedish opens said all the attention is just "part of the game."

"Three or four years ago it felt a little bit strange, though," he admitted.

Borg, who pounded the muscular Holmes with powerful two-fisted backhands and equally devastating forehand volleys, shared the first day's spotlight with top-ranked Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill.

While Borg had to hold the girls at bay, Wimbledon singles champ Connors had his hands full with 1973 Clay Court amateur champion Pat DuPre of Birmingham, Ala.

DuPre, sporting a powerful but sometimes sporadic serve and a steady backcourt game, lost service when it hurt most in both games as he fell from the field, 6-4, 6-4.

Both DuPre and Connors rarely came to the net throughout the match, which was close all the way until DuPre's service was broken in the final game of each set.

For Borg, however, it was smooth sailing almost all the way. He calmly put Holmes away 6-1 in the first set but trailed 2-1 in the second before taking command and allowing Holmes only two more games.

Perhaps Borg's biggest problem in the first day of the eight-day tournament was finding a place to hide. In spite of his verbal appreciation for the girls, Borg showed his face only once before the match.

The top-seeded women's player and Connors' fiancée, Chris Evert, was given a first round bye and sees her first action today. Her younger sister, Jeanne, seeded No. 3, defeated Nancy Ornstein of Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-2, 6-0.

Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan, fourth-seeded, retired from her Monday match with Patty Ann Reese, St. Petersburg, Fla., after becoming ill. Miss Sawamatsu lost the first set 7-6 and was trailing 1-0 in the second when she forfeited.

Another upset in the women's bracket was No. 8 Dianne Ganz of Miami Beach, Fla. She lost to Michele Gurdal of Belgium, 6-1, 6-1.

Among those scheduled to play in men's competition today is No. 4 seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain. Second-seeded Ilie Nastase of Rumania had not yet arrived for the tourney and wasn't expected until Wednesday.

Dodgers Win On Grand Slam Homer In Seventh

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
The Los Angeles Dodgers are alive and well in the National League West. The Cincinnati Reds are just alive.

Opening an important three-game series Monday night, the Dodgers won 6-3 and gave the Reds' pennant dreams a kick in the percentages.

"They're the best club in baseball, there's no doubt about it," said a dismayed Sparky Anderson, the Cincinnati manager, as his Reds dropped 7½ games off the Dodgers' front-running pace.

The Dodgers beat the Reds with Steve Yeager's grand slam home run in the seventh.

"I was looking for a pitch I could handle," noted Yeager, normally not known for his home run hitting. "I got it, a fastball that was down."

In the other National League games, the New York Mets beat the Montreal Expos 10-4; the St. Louis Cardinals stopped the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in 13 innings; the Houston Astros trimmed the San Francisco Giants 7-2 and the Atlanta Braves beat the San Diego Padres 9-7.

Cincinnati starter Don Gullett, 13-8, surrendered all the Dodger runs on homers in the nationally televised game. Jimmy Wynn earlier hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers, the first off Gullett in his last eight starts.

Down 2-0, Cincinnati tied the Dodgers in the top of the seventh on George Foster's fifth homer of the baseball season. He hit it after Tony Perez singled.

Mets 10, Expos 4

Pitcher Tug McGraw's three-run double broke a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning and New York scored three more runs in the ninth to bury Montreal.

McGraw, 2-5, who replaced starter Tom Seaver in the seventh inning, delivered the game-winning hit after the Mets loaded the bases. Ed Kravetz walked with one out and Wayne Garrett singled to center.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 2

Joe Torre's bases-loaded single in the 13th inning lifted St. Louis over Philadelphia.

The victory boosted the first-place Cardinals' lead in the National League East to two games over Philadelphia.

Ted Sizemore doubled off Pete Richert, 1-1, to lead off the 13th. After Bake McBride was intentionally walked, Phils catcher Bob Boone threw wildly into center field on an attempted pickoff, the runners advancing to second and third.

Astros 7, Giants 2

Milt May drove in three runs, two of them with a single that capped a four-run seventh inning, to help Houston beat San Francisco.

A double by winner Don Wilson, 8-8, and Roger Metzger's single gave Houston a third-inning run off loser Charlie Williams, 1-3, before Houston wrapped up the game in the seventh.

Braves 9, Padres 7

Atlanta struck for two runs in the ninth inning, the tie-breaker on Hank Aaron's single, to beat San Diego. Ralph Garr and Mike Lum singled and Darrell Evans walked to load the bases before Aaron delivered Atlanta's go-ahead run with an infield single.

Rookies Shine As Chiefs Win

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Five rookies made their respective coaches forget about striking National Football League veterans Monday night during Kansas City's 20-12 exhibition victory over the Detroit Lions.

The five are quarterback Dave Jaynes and running backs Woody Green and Tony Grisby, all of the victorious Chiefs, and running backs Dexter Bussey and David Wooley, both Detroit hopefuls.

Jaynes, an All-American from Kansas, floated a 46-yard touchdown pass to Craig Clark, Utah State rookie, the first time he threw the ball, capping a 76-yard drive with the opening kickoff. Grisby, from Bethune-Cookman, ripped through for a seven-yard touchdown and led the Chiefs runners with 74 yards on 12 carries.

Green, the Arizona State flash, contributed vital yardage to Kansas City's two first half touchdowns, averaging 4.2 yards per thrust. He wound up with 38 yards on 15 tries.

Bussey, formerly the pride of Texas-Arlington, stabbed one yard for Detroit's lone touchdown. Wooley picked up 38 yards on 15 carries.

Rookie Efen Herrera of UCLA kicked field goals of 32 and 28 yards for the Lions.

Rained Out Tourney Games

For the third time in four days, rain forced another postponement of the Sr. Babe Ruth Tournament which is supposed to be going on at Guy Smith Stadium, as Monday's games were postponed.

Rain forced a doubling up of the Friday and Saturday games and they did not get finished with the first seven until early Sunday morning. Rain washed out Sunday's games and again Monday's were called off.

It had been hoped that one game could have been played Monday evening but the field was still too wet.

The schedule was set to pick up where it left off Saturday but cloudy skies this morning threatened even today's hoped for games. Games were tentatively set to begin at 10:00 a.m. run through 8:00 with six games being played.

Hot Time In WFL Tomorrow Night

By HOWARD SINER
AP Sports Writer

If you can't stand the heat, keep out of Soldier Field.

Still, the unbeaten Chicago Fire might face trouble scaring off its next World Football League visitor — the Florida Blazers.

The Fire, 4-0, takes the WFL's hottest scoring attack — an average of 31 points per game — into the contest Wednesday night against the Blazers, 3-1, who boast a torrid scoring defense — just 7.8 points a game.

In other WFL action Wednesday night, it's Detroit at Birmingham; Memphis at Philadelphia; New York at Southern California; and Houston at Portland. The national TV game Thursday is Hawaii at Jacksonville.

Chicago running back Mike Kellar, a rookie from Northern Illinois, leads the league in scoring with the help of eight touchdowns — five of them Sunday against Hawaii to earn WFL Player of the Week honors.

The Blazers will counter with a defense crew of Billy Hobbs, Larry Grantham, Miller Farr, Rickie Harris and others in an effort to recover from their 7-6 setback last week against Houston in the Astrodome.

Birmingham, 4-0, tied with Chicago atop the WFL Central Division, might have to get by again without ailing quarterback George Mira.

The Americans knocked off Detroit 21-18 last week on a nine-yard touchdown run late in the game by Mira's sub-quarterback Matthew Reed.

The struggling Wheels, 0-4, figure they can finally get rolling with passer Bubba Wyche and running back Jesse Mims leading the way.

Memphis, 3-1, will try to wear down the Bell, 2-2, with the WFL's No. 2 and No. 3 rushers. John Harvey has 261 yards in 48 attempts for the Southmen and J.J. Jennings has 243 yards in 57 carries.

Philadelphia defenders have been allowing only 233 yards per game overall and Bell quarterback Jim Corcoran has thrown for a total of 712 yards.

New York, 2-2, has the league's top rushing offense, led by Bob Gladieux (263 yards), Andy Huff (139) and Jim Ford (114).

The Sun, 2-2, will reply with passer Tony Adams — 52 of 92 for 708 yards — and runner Kermit Johnson — 70 carries for 242 yards.

Crenshaw Still Has A Lot To Learn

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — It's been a long season for Ben Crenshaw, the young man who was hailed as a world-beater then made the painful discovery he was very human.

"Maybe winning that soon wasn't really good for me," the ruggedly handsome youth mused in a soft, Texas drawl as he went about his preparations for the Thursday start of the PGA national championship.

"I'd really have to say I'm disappointed in the year," said the husky 22-year-old who hit the pro tour with more impact and fanfare than any rookie since Jack Nicklaus.

"I'd expected to win again by now. I just found out that I've got a lot to learn."

"As an amateur, I'd never played in competition this much. You have to learn how long you can play and when you should take time off."

"And I had to learn to practice."

"I'd never practiced much as an amateur. I played a lot, but I didn't practice. I didn't practice much when I first came on the tour, either."

"What really jolted me was when I missed qualifying for the (U.S.) Open. I'd played in three Opens as an amateur and then couldn't make it my first year as a pro. That kind of opened my eyes."

Crenshaw won three national collegiate championships at the University of Texas. He attracted a huge gallery last fall when he made his first start as a full-fledged member of the tour

Isaac To Race

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP)—Race driver Bobby Isaac of Catawba, N.C., says he will make the Talladega 500 stock car race Sunday.

Isaac, the 1970 Grand National champion, announced his retirement from Talladega last year. He has not won a NASCAR race in more than two years.

He will drive a 1974 Chevrolet in Sunday's $150,000 chase.

"I know I said I would never run at Talladega again, but I've changed my mind," Isaac said Monday.

He said the Talladega 500 at Alabama International Motor Speedway was too big a race to miss, and he cannot afford to pass it up.

Teams Forming Scouting Pool

By TIMOTHY CURRAN
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Seventeen of the 24 major league baseball clubs are embarking on a new system of finding tomorrow's stars — a Central Scouting Bureau which will provide reports and recommendations to its members.

Formation of the new group was announced Monday, with Jim Wilson resigning effective Sept. 1 as vice president and general manager of the Milwaukee Brewers to head the operation.

His assistant will be Donald Preis, who's stepping down as assistant to the general manager of the Baltimore Orioles.

Wilson, 52, a former major league pitcher and scout, joined the Brewers in 1971 and became general manager a year later. The team said it would not name a successor immediately.

Wilson served on a committee of baseball executives which had studied establishment a scouting bureau, and at first turned down the head job when it was offered to him.

He reconsidered after the committee, headed by Joe Brown of the Pittsburgh Pirates, appealed to Brewers President Bud Selig during the All-Star game break.

"The Brewers made a personal sacrifice for what we consider the best interests of baseball," said Selig.

"Baseball has been very good to me," said Wilson. "If this is my chance to pay baseball as a whole for the good things I've gotten out of it, then I had to accept."

American League President Lee MacPhail, on hand for the announcement, said the bureau will give its members "much better coverage for their scouting dollar."

Two weeks later he finished second in the World Open, the richest tournament in history. It was one of the most phenomenal starts ever by a rookie. In only a handful of 1973 appearances he collected $76,749.

Dislikes Comparison

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Russell Mendez, whose hobby as a rocket-powered dragster driver has turned into a full-time job, dislikes comparison between himself and daredevil motorcyclist Evel Knievel, as he prepares for a spectacular 700 mile an hour run at the world land speed record.

Mendez says what he does is tested and is relatively safe, although he feels it is more dangerous than Knievel's escapades.

"Evel Knievel sells adventures and death," says Mendez. "He thrives on accidents. I live more dangerously than he does. I can get killed a lot more easily going 300 miles an hour than he can at 50 jumping a few cars. Everybody tells me I'm crazy."

His group regularly tours the country and traveled over 120,000 miles last year, "and we didn't have one single accident in all that time on the road," said Mendez.

In over 35 runs in his dragster, he has been involved in one accident, damaging only the machine slightly.

Crosby Singing New Tune

By DAN BERGER
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bing Crosby is crooning a new tune with lyrics that should lift the spirits of women's liberation supporters.

Bing has asked the Professional Golfers Association for permission to invite women to participate in the 1975 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am tourney at Pebble Beach, Calif.

Larry Crosby, brother of the famed singer and director of the rich golf event, told The Associated Press Monday: "Bing wrote to the PGA on Aug. 1 to see if it would be possible to have a couple of gals play."

"The idea was all Bing's," he said, "perhaps because the public has been clamoring for more women's involvement in sports."

There was no immediate reaction from the PGA, the players division or the Ladies Professional Golfers Association.

Confirmation of Crosby's letter to the PGA, however, came from Ted Durein, press director of the major tournament. He said Crosby asked the PGA for approval in a letter sent to Deane Beman, head of the Tournament Players Division of the PGA in Washington, D.C.

Beman was unreachable at his Bethesda, Md., home, and a PGA Tournament Players Division spokesman in Washington said he had not seen the letter.

Durein said tourney officials have a contract with the PGA players division and that if women were permitted, it would be the first time in the history of pro golf that men and women competed on the same course for the same title and prize money.

"Bing thinks it would be a great idea," said Durein, but he added that the PGA "is sometimes a little stuffy so I wouldn't bet on it."

The Crosby, which was inaugurated at Rancho Santa Fe in 1939, moved to the rugged seaside location in 1947. It's the only tourney on the pro tour in which amateurs play with professionals for the entire event.

Larry Crosby said if women were permitted to play in the event, "I personally don't think they would have a chance." He said the four courses which are used for the Crosby are among the toughest in the world, and often the golfers have to battle high winds and even rain and sleet.

The 1975 tourney is slated for Jan. 23-26.

Grich Leads Orioles In Win

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver has a nomination for most valuable player in the American League — his own second baseman, Bobby Grich.

While Reggie Jackson, the slugging outfielder of the Oakland A's, must be considered a favorite to retain his MVP title, Grich didn't lose any votes with his performance in Monday's twilight doubleheader against the Detroit Tigers.

He belted a three-run homer, a run-scoring single and scored three times to lead Baltimore to a 7-4 victory in the opener, then added another hit and a walk in the Orioles' 6-3 triumph in the nightcap.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York blanked Boston 8-0; Oakland split a pair with Minnesota, winning 2-1 then losing 4-3, and Texas outscored Chicago 13-8.

Grich's homer was the 17th of the year for the right-handed hitter, who is now batting .286 with 64 runs batted in and 71 runs scored.

Grich and Paul Blair combined to score 10 runs for the Orioles in the doubleheader, with Blair scoring three times in each game. And it was Blair's two-run homer in the sixth inning which broke a 3-3 tie and put Baltimore ahead for good.

Blair's homer, his 12th of the season, followed a two-out single by Mark Belanger. The Orioles got their final run in the ninth on an RBI single by Don Baylor.

National League scores: Houston 7, San Francisco 2; New York 10, Montreal 4; Los Angeles 6, Cincinnati 3; Atlanta 9, San Diego 7, and St. Louis 3, Philadelphia 2 in 13 innings.

The Worric Clinic Swimming Is A Basic 'Must'

Bruce's tragic experience should shock millions of parents. The world may thus have lost a great scientist just for lack of a YMCA in his city. So be liberal with your gifts to the "Y," for it saves both bodies and souls!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE B-608: Bruce Lockridge, aged 16, graduated with me from Ft. Wayne (Indiana) Central High School.

Bruce was a brilliant boy and came from a very cultured family, which included his younger brother Ross, later the author of the famous novel "Raintree County."

As I recall, it wasn't more than a week after our graduation that Bruce went on a Boy Scout hike. Being an energetic venturesome personality, Bruce led the way as they were wading in the river.

Alas, he stepped off into a deep hole and went under.

And Bruce was only a newcomer to Scouting, so he hadn't yet learned how to swim!

So he drowned, much to the shock of his fine family and to us classmates.

He also was an active member of the Young People's Society of our church.

Since I was then president of that church group (as well as a close personal friend and classmate) his parents asked me to recruit a few other members of our church organization to sit up with Bruce.

For in those days (1919) the dead were usually kept in their own homes till the funeral.

Meanwhile, friends sat up all night in an adjacent room to maintain the "wake" so that the departed would not seem to be forgotten quickly.

My future wife was then a vice-president of the same church society, so she and half a dozen others joined me in our all-night vigil.

But my main purpose in recounting this tragic episode, is to show the value of teaching your children how to swim.

When Bruce and I graduated from high school in the thriving city of Ft. Wayne, the YMCA had only recently been organized, but had no building and no swimming pool.

Even today (1974) about 8,000 die of drowning each year.

So your support of the "Y" helps insure thousands of talented youth a chance to live to a ripe old age and thus repay society by their various talents.

For Bruce combined a brilliant, inquisitive mind, with a dynamic, probing type of personality.

So who knows what great impact he might have made on the advancement of civilization! Parents, please don't delay in making sure your kiddies, even of kindergarten age, know how to "dog paddle" at least a few feet!

For if Bruce had known even that rudimentary stroke called dog paddling he could easily have swum back to shallow water.

At the moment he stepped off into a deep hole, he probably was less than 10 feet from safety!

Don't fret unduly about fancy swimming strokes, such as the Australian crawl, or the butterfly, the backstroke, etc.

Just start with the simple dog paddling, and see that your youngsters can swim at least 10 feet this summer!

For that will usually get them back to an upset boat or canoe or to the shallower water from which they step into a deep hole. But never toss a scared child into deep water as you sadistically employ the "sink or swim" strategy.

Use psychology and gradually get the youngster to dip his face under water for a few seconds as he meanwhile holds his breath. Send for my 200-point "Tests for Parents," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, and use them this summer!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Courthouse Hit By Foreclosure

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Albany County foreclosed on the state court of Appeals building and its own courthouse — to the embarrassment of County Attorney Bob Roach.

"When I said we will foreclose every bleeding piece of property with back taxes due, apparently somebody took me literally," Roach said.

Computers tallied a $16.80 water tax for the county building and a $37.92 water tax for the Court of Appeals building.

"It's a knee-slapper," he conceded. "But unfortunately it's just the type of thing that's been happening to me since the first of January when I started the job."

"I'm trying to get through to the chief judge now," he added.

School To Have Six-Hour Day

Principal J.R. Carraway announces that during the 1974-75 school year at D.H. Conley High School a six-hour day will be re-instituted.

New courses added to the curriculum include art, band, drum and bugle corps and modern dance. Aviation Science will also be added.

Any student who wishes to enroll in one of the above courses should contact the school personally as soon as possible. The school office is open Monday through Friday between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

After the Civil War, more than 32 million acres of Texas public land were given away to promote the construction of railroads.

Opening lead: Three of ♠
The obvious play and the right play are not necessarily the same thing. South held the obvious play in reserve and found a line that gave him an added chance to bring home his contract.

North and South conducted an intelligent auction to reach their best spot. After South had jumped to 5 ♣, North pinpointed his heart stoppers in case South held values in spades and wanted to play in no trump. When South denied a spade stopper by reverting to North's suit, North closed the auction at a club game. West led a low spade to his partner's ace, and declarer ruffed the spade return. It seemed that the fate of the contract hinged on the heart finesse, for declarer had an unavoidable diamond loser unless he was fortunate enough to drop a doubleton queen. However, he was loth to rely on a play that had only a 50% chance of success, so he probed for something better—and found it.

Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and led a club to the nine, drawing the opponents' trumps in the process. Dummy's remaining spade was ruffed and the ace and king of diamonds were cashed, in case the queen dropped. Though declarer had no luck there, he had yet another string to his bow. He continued with a third diamond. When the suit divided 3-3, and East had to win the queen, declarer could claim his contract, for East was end-played.

If East returned a heart, it would be into dummy's ace-queen. Dummy would win two heart tricks, and declarer's third heart would be discarded on the thirteenth diamond. A spade would be no better, for declarer would discard a heart while ruffing in dummy. The ace of hearts and long diamond would take care of declarer's remaining hearts.

Gator Farmer Awaiting 'Go-Ahead' On Harvest

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Beady eyes peer from flower-covered pools where Ed Froehlich raises 1,000 alligators and waits for the day when killing them will be legal.

He moves carefully when he's near the hungry gators. He says they would as soon bite off his leg as not.

"I've got all I can do to jump out of the truck, throw them a couple buckets of fish and jump back in again," Froehlich says of the late summer feeding frenzies of the 4- to 12-foot adults.

Froehlich started his alligator farm in 1966 on the assumption the law eventually will change so he can slaughter the reptiles for their leather.

He raises them on part of his 2,500-acre cattle ranch in Palm Beach County and last year pumped $10,000 into the project. Froehlich, one of the few licensed alligator farmers in Florida, has 15 acres of pens and ponds for the reptiles. He feeds the baby gators every other day with 60 to 80 pounds of chicken necks — skinned, dusted with a vitamin supplement and ground into mush. The grownups get a ton or more of mullet and a few cattle — hide and all — every two weeks.

Froehlich credits the food for his success at alligator farming and reports the hatch of 338 little gators last year. He says, "Gators are like anybody else. They need variety."

In the United States, it's illegal to kill alligators except during tightly controlled hunting seasons in Louisiana. Federal law forbids transportation of alligator skins or products across state lines.

There is no indication the law will be changed soon but Froehlich says changes are inevitable.

"It's a thing that's going to come and I'd like to be on the ground floor," he says. "There isn't anybody closer to nature than me but everything is here for a purpose — to benefit man."

Says Froehlich: "If nature lovers can justify raising cattle for food and leather, why not raise alligators for the same purpose?" The leather is beautiful and the meat lean."

Wallace Has A Stitch Removed

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An undissolved stitch from an earlier operation has been removed from Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in a minor surgical procedure.

Dr. Sheridan Sherley, who performed the surgery Monday at University Hospital, said he checked the governor's kidneys and bladder and found everything fine after the stitch was removed. An aide said the stitch was causing local inflammation.

He said Wallace, who has had several operations since being shot and partially paralyzed in 1972, was expected to return to work next Monday. He said it hadn't been decided when the governor would leave the hospital.

AFTER MEETING—White House lawyer James D. St. Clair is accompanied by newsmen as he walks down a circular stairway at the Capitol. Prison Project In Big Trouble

BUTNER, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Bureau of Prisons is pondering its next move in a dispute with the general contractor of its $13.5-million Federal Center for Correctional Research.

Construction on the massive, half-completed project, located near Butner northeast of Durham, ground to a halt Monday.

"Machinery has been going out for a week," said Bill Proctor, who acts as the government's representative on the site. "They've taken the heavy earth movers, ladders, hammer stalls and portable toilets."

Construction at the site had been tapering off for the past five weeks.

Bureau of Prisons contract officer Tom Martin said in Washington that the project's general contractor, Ranger Construction Co. of Atlanta, Ga., had until the close of business Monday "to submit anything they want us to consider."

"Unofficially, Ranger alleges a number of problems, including bad weather, problems with the soil and payments," Martin said. "But the government's main concern is that the contract time period has expired and the job isn't finished."

The center, designed for research projects to develop inmate rehabilitation programs, was to have been completed April 21.

"If work could be maximized out there, the project could be completed in another six to eight months," Martin said Monday.

Construction is about 58 per cent complete, Martin said.

Two subcontractors, a Greensboro mechanical company and a Durham building materials firm, have filed suit against Ranger seeking past due payments.

The prison also will have a section with a conventional mental hospital for treatment of acutely disturbed federal inmates.

Evacuate Families As Toxic Gas Leaks

BLUFORD, Ill. (AP) — About 400 residents were evacuated early today after a railroad car began leaking a toxic, flammable gas, fire officials said.

An Illinois Central Gulf Railroad car holding an undetermined amount of vinyl chloride was halted near Bluford, a small community in south-central Illinois, said Frank Moore, who surveyed the scene for the Jefferson Fire Protection District.

"About a mile away from it, you could smell the gas," he said. "You couldn't go near it without a breathing apparatus. It's very dangerous and highly flammable."

The chemical is used in the manufacture of plastics. Moore said he couldn't determine how quickly the gas was escaping from the car because of ground fog in the area.

Police began to evacuate residents shortly after 5:30 a.m. when they received information about a possible derailment, officials said. Although the train had not derailed, it was stopped when the leaking chemical was noticed in a routine check, officials said.

Moore said a chain of 17 cars, including the leaking one, was unhitched from the train. The other cars were moved away from the escaping gas, he said.

A similar incident occurred Sunday near Peotone, in northeastern Illinois, when another Illinois Central Gulf freight train derailed and began leaking glycol-ether.

About 500 persons were forced from their homes, but no one was injured.

Text Of President Nixon's Statement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the text of a written statement issued Monday by President Nixon:

I have today instructed my attorneys to make available to the House Judiciary Committee, and I am making public, the transcripts of three conversations with H. R. Halde-man on June 23, 1972. I have also turned over the tapes of these conversations to Judge Sirica, as part of the process of my compliance with the Supreme Court ruling.

On April 29, in announcing my decision to make public the original set of White House transcripts, I stated that "as far as what the President personally knew and did with regard to Watergate and the cover-up is concerned, these materials — together with those already made available — will tell it all."

Shortly after that, in May, I made a preliminary review of some of the 64 taped conversations subpoenaed by the special prosecutor.

Among the conversations I listened to at that time were two of those of June 23. Although I recognized that these presented potential problems, I did not inform my staff or my counsel of it, or those arguing my case, nor did I amend my submission to the Judiciary Committee in order to include and reflect it.

At the time, I did not realize the extent of the implications which these conversations might now appear to have. As a result, those arguing my case, as well as those passing judgment on the case, did so with information that was incomplete and in some respects erroneous. This was a serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility and which I deeply regret.

Since the Supreme Court's decision 12 days ago, I have ordered my counsel to analyze the 64 tapes, and I have listened to a number of them myself. This process has made it clear that portions of the tapes of these June 23 conversations are at variance with certain of my previous statements.

Therefore, I have ordered the transcripts (be) made available immediately to the Judiciary Committee so that they can be reflected in the committee's report, and included in the record to be considered by the House and Senate.

In a formal written statement on May 22 of last year, I said that shortly after the Watergate break-in I became concerned about the possibility that the FBI investigation might lead to the exposure either of unrelated covert activities of the CIA, or of sensitive national security matters that the so-called "plumbers" unit at the White House had been working on, because of the CIA and plumbers' connections of some of those involved.

I said that I therefore gave instructions that the FBI should be alerted to coordinate with the CIA, and to ensure that the investigation not expose these sensitive national security matters.

That statement was based on my recollection at the time — some 11 months later — plus documentary materials and relevant public testimony of those involved.

The June 23 tapes clearly show, however, that at the time I gave those instructions I also discussed the political aspects of the situation, and that I was aware of the advantages this course of action would have with respect to limiting possible public exposure of involvement by persons connected with the re-election committee.

My review of the additional tapes has, so far, shown no other major inconsistencies with what I have previously submitted. While I have no way at this stage of being certain that there will not be others, I have no reason to believe that there will be.

In any case, the tapes in their entirety are now in the process of being furnished to Judge Sirica. He has begun what may be a rather lengthy process of reviewing the tapes, passing on specific claims of executive privilege on portions of them, and forwarding to the Special Prosecutor those tapes or those portions that are relevant to the Watergate investigation.

It is highly unlikely that this review will be completed in time for the House debate. It appears at this stage, however, that a House vote of impeachment is, as a practical matter, virtually a foregone conclusion, and that the issue will therefore go to trial in the Senate. In order to ensure that no other significant relevant materials are withheld, I shall voluntarily furnish to the Senate everything from these tapes that Judge Sirica rules should go to the Special Prosecutor.

I recognize that this additional material I am now furnishing may further damage my case, especially because attention will be drawn separately to it rather than to the evidence in its entirety. In considering its implications, therefore, I urge that two points be borne in mind.

The first of these points is to remember what actually happened as a result of the instructions I gave on June 23. Acting Director Gray of the FBI did coordinate with Director Helms and Deputy Director Walters of the CIA. The CIA did undertake an extensive check to see whether any of its covert activities would be compromised by a full FBI investigation of Watergate.

Deputy Director Walters then reported back to Mr. Gray that they would not be compromised. On July 6, when I called Mr. Gray, and when he expressed concern about improper attempts to limit his investigation, as the record shows, I told him to press ahead vigorously with his investigation — which he did.

The second point I would urge is that the evidence be looked at in its entirety, and the events be looked at in perspective. Whatever mistakes I made in the handling of Watergate, the basic truth remains that when all the facts were brought to my attention I insisted on a full investigation and prosecution of those guilty. I am firmly convinced that the record, in its entirety, does not justify the extreme step of impeachment and removal of a President. I trust that as the Constitutional process goes forward, this perspective will prevail.

Prisoners Flee From AA Meet

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Three prisoners escaped during a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous while the officer in charge left momentarily Monday night to get some cookies for the group of 23.

The minimum-security state prison camp near Taylorsville in Alleghany County of northwestern North Carolina said two of them were serving felony sentences. It listed them as John Fesperman, 19, and Robert Picklesimer, 18. It said the third, Robert Haney, 20, was serving for a misdemeanor.
