

Ford Outlining Goals, Agenda In Speech To Congress Tonight

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pausing briefly in his ever-broadening search for a vice presidential nominee, President Ford outlines for Congress and the nation tonight his new administration's goals and an agenda for reaching them.

The nationally broadcast and televised 9 p.m. EDT appearance before a joint session of Congress is Ford's first major address since his brief speech upon assuming the presidency from Richard M. Nixon on Friday.

In it, aides said Ford plans to set "the spirit and tone of his administration" and appeal for national unity and support in tackling such major problems as inflation.

They said Ford won't disclose the name of his choice for vice president in the address. The search for his successor won't be complete until late in the week, one aide said.

With a whirlwind series of 11 White House meetings on Sunday, Ford accelerated his consultations with congressional and political friends, who said women and Democrats are among those being considered for the No. 2 post.

After the meetings, Ford told a newsmen "I'm not ruling out anything or anybody." Other sources said it was highly unlikely that he would stray from a list of about a dozen GOP leaders in making his selection.

Republican national chairman George Bush emerged from Sunday's meetings with the backing of an influential conservative, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

"He's Mr. Clean and that's what the country wants," Goldwater said of Bush, a former Texas congressman and U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Goldwater, one of the 11 friends and advisers Ford met with in the separate meetings, also ranks high on the list of possibilities. He said he wasn't seeking the job but "sure, I'd accept it."

Bush's name also was mentioned by House GOP Whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois after his meeting with Ford. And it was among three listed by Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott.

But Scott said his first choice still is former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. He contended that the reported opposition to Rockefeller among party conservatives is "grossly exaggerated."

In Chicago, Rockefeller said whether he would accept the vice presidency if it is offered to him is an "iffy question." He refused to comment on his chances for selection, telling reporters, "The President has to make his own decision without any intervention or pressures of any kind."

Melvin R. Laird, former congressman and defense secretary, also met with Ford but wasn't available for comment afterward.

One indication of the direction of the new administration was furnished by Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton. He said Ford will put new emphasis on some Nixon administration policies in energy resources and environment, but not alter their basic intent.

Before moving through the meetings with party and political advisers, Ford conferred for a half-hour with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. A spokesman said Kissinger brought the President up to date on the Cyprus situation.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union pledged to continue its policy of detente and to seek with Ford a further improvement of Soviet-American relations.

And in Cairo, the official Middle East News Agency reported that Ford's new administration has renewed the invitation to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to visit the United States before the end of the year. The invitation was extended by Nixon during his recent Middle East tour.

assistant rector, the Rev. Patricia M. Park.

The assistant rector also asked for comfort for Nixon, who flew to his San Clemente, Calif., home on Friday.

In Essex, Mass., Ford's son Michael said he would like to see Nixon speak out and "make a total confession of what was his role in Watergate." The younger Ford is a 24-year-old graduate student at the interdenominational Gordon Conwell Theological Seminary in Wenham, Mass.

At the White House, Ford signed the first bill of his administration—a measure authorizing the Coast Guard to adopt modern boiler and pressure safety standards for ships.

He then signed a second bill, to make more flexible the penalties for violation of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act.

Later, Ford logged 17 laps in his backyard swimming pool while cameramen recorded the daily ritual which he said keeps his tummy flat.

Cyprus Peace Talks Kept Alive By Sec. Kissinger

By The Associated Press
As artillery fire rumbled after the Turkish invasion began July 20. And the Cyprus peace talks in Geneva stayed alive only through last-minute intervention by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

But evidently in a gesture of good will, Greek Cypriot troops last Sunday began evacuating Turkish enclaves they occupied after the Turkish invasion began July 20. And the Cyprus government freed 13 Turkish prisoners of war in exchange for Friday's release by the Turks of five Greek Cypriot POWs.

The Greeks pulled out of four Turkish villages in eastern Cyprus, and U.N. troops moved in to keep peace. A U.N. spokesman said the Greek Cypriots would evacuate four more Turkish communities in the southern coast cities of Larnaca and Paphos today.

The occupation of Turkish villages by Greek Cypriot forces has been a major issue at the Geneva talks. Many Turkish Cypriot villages remain under Greek control.

The sound of artillery fire Sunday night broke three days of quiet on the Mediterranean island. The shooting appeared to come from the Kyrenia Mountains about 10 miles north of Nicosia, where the invading Turkish army and Greek Cypriots fought until late Thursday.

and the U.N. peacekeeping force—reinforced their defenses on Sunday. Britain flew in 600 Gurkha mercenaries from Nepal and placed on alert in London 400 Royal Marine commandos.

In Geneva, the peace talks among the foreign ministers of Britain, Turkey and Greece came near collapse over Turkish demands to divide Cyprus among its Greek and Turkish populations. The three countries guarantee Cypriot independence under a 1960 treaty.

Kissinger reportedly telephoned Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit in Ankara and urged him to keep the talks alive. The secretary of state then met with President Ford for half an hour to bring him up to date on Cyprus.

The peace talks finally convened Sunday—delayed nine hours by urgent consultations among political and military leaders in Ankara and Athens—but little progress was reported.

The President began his public day by worshipping at the Episcopal church near his suburban home.

Kneeling in a back row pew with his wife Betty and 17-year old daughter Susan, Ford heard a special prayer for the success of his presidency.

"Give him the strength of spirit, body and mind needed for the tasks; the wisdom to see, listen and act for the good of all people," said the prayer written by Suffragan Bishop John A. Braden and read by the church's comment on his chances for selection, telling reporters, "The President has to make his own decision without any intervention or pressures of any kind."

Melvin R. Laird, former congressman and defense secretary, also met with Ford but wasn't available for comment afterward.

One indication of the direction of the new administration was furnished by Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton. He said Ford will put new emphasis on some Nixon administration policies in energy resources and environment, but not alter their basic intent.

Before moving through the meetings with party and political advisers, Ford conferred for a half-hour with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. A spokesman said Kissinger brought the President up to date on the Cyprus situation.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union pledged to continue its policy of detente and to seek with Ford a further improvement of Soviet-American relations.

And in Cairo, the official Middle East News Agency reported that Ford's new administration has renewed the invitation to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to visit the United States before the end of the year. The invitation was extended by Nixon during his recent Middle East tour.

Tobacco Meet

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Flue-cured Tobacco Advisory Committee will hold a special meeting in Raleigh Aug. 15, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced today.

The purpose of the meeting will be to reschedule sales opportunities in the flue-cured tobacco area.

A USDA spokesman said rescheduling was necessary because weather conditions have delayed crop maturity in the northern flue-cured growing areas.

The committee, which serves in an advisory capacity to Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, also will decide whether to meet again on Aug. 22.

Food-Cost Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food costs for low-income families rose 20 cents a week in June while meals designed for richer households went up 10 cents, new government figures showed today.

The Agriculture Department said the cost of a "low-cost" food plan for a family of four in June was $44.10 per week, compared with $43.90 in May.

A "moderate-cost" menu cost $55.10 a week, compared with $55 in May, and a "liberal" plan was $66.70 in June, compared with $66.60 in May.

The three plans, which allow for larger quantities of higher-cost items such as meat, fresh fruit and vegetables for moderate and liberal menus, each went up 50 cents a week from April to May.

In the low-cost plan, a family—including two elementary school children—is allowed more beans, potatoes and grain products. Prices of those have frequently gone up faster than some of the other normally more expensive items.

Compared with a year earlier, the June figures showed the low-cost menu was up 17 per cent, or $6.30 per week. The moderate-cost menu was up 13 per cent, or $6.50; the liberal plan rose 12 per cent, or $7.

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day, but the phone service is available 24 hours a day.

NEEDS BUSINESS ADDRESS
A glass lid of a piece of cookware I've had for years has broken. Can you help me find the address of the manufacturer of Guardian Service Cookware? Mrs. D.G.N.

That address is Century Metalcraft Corporation, 2265 Westwood Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064. The phone number is 213-272-5661.

Hotline is continually calling on Mrs. Margaret Clark at Sheppard Library to provide such obscure addresses. There are three different registers of businesses in the Library Reference Room, she tells us, and one or another of them almost never fails to turn up the address of almost any business in the country. She or one of the other librarians will be glad to show anyone how to use these registers.

ALBUM RECEIVED
I sent a check for $4.98 to WCTI-TV for an album called "Group." I have my cancelled check, but no album. W.R.D.

WCTI, at Hotline's request, contacted Greybark Advertising Inc. in New York City. The album was sent very quickly.

WHO SETS THE INTEREST RATES?
Is there a set interest rate that banks charge for auto loans or small loans (around $800), or do the banks set the rates themselves? Mrs. MC.W.

Interest rates are set by state laws which establish regulations for lending institutions. The maximum interest rate that a bank in North Carolina can charge for an auto loan set up on a monthly payment plan is 15 per cent. A spokesman for the Bank of North Carolina in Greenville, Charles Burnette, told Hotline that interest rates vary according to how the loan will be paid back and they vary from customer to customer, depending on the amount of additional business the customer does with the bank. For instance, if the person seeking a loan has additional money deposited with the bank then lower interest rates may be given, because the bank is making additional money from the individual on his other deposits.

Loans which are paid back on a yearly, one-time basis, can only be charged a yearly rate of nine per cent, while those paid on a quarterly basis are loaned at a rate of 12 per cent. Monthly installment loans can be charged an interest rate of 15 per cent, according to Burnette.

'August Jam' Concert Was 'Last' For Promoter

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Hundreds of young hitchhikers lined the highways Sunday near the Charlotte Motor Speedway on their way home from a rock concert that drew an estimated 200,000 persons.

The "August Jam," which featured Emerson, Lake and Palmer and The Allman Brothers, ended early Sunday after more than 12 hours.

Many of the spectators spent the night on the speedway grounds.

The Cabarrus County Sheriff's Department said 150 persons had been arrested since the crowd began arriving late Wednesday. By Sunday, 25 remained in jail, mostly on drug charges, officers said.

About 140 persons were treated at a local hospital and five were admitted, officials said. Two of the five were hospitalized for drug overdoses and one woman had given birth to a stillborn child, they said.

Deputy Sheriff Ray Atwood said officers were reluctant to make arrests because "if we try to take one of them out of there, they'll gang up on us."

Promoter Stan Kaplan, a

Charlotte radio executive, said many of the 200,000 spectators saw the show for free after a double chain fence was torn down.

Two security dogs were trampled to death when the group of gate crashers charged through the fence, officers said.

Promoters admitted that they had greatly underestimated the crowd.

County officials, who had gone to court last month in an unsuccessful attempt to block the concert, claimed health and safety measures were inadequate.

"I would say the facilities were totally inadequate for the crowd," said Albert Klimas, county health director. He said he planned to consult other county authorities in view of "a total violation of sanitary standards."

Speedway officials hired about 100 young persons to help clean up the debris, which included sleeping bags, empty wine bottles and beer cans.

Track President Richard Howard estimated the damage at about $30,000.

"These people sure made a

Guilty Pleas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey's former press secretary, Norman Sherman, pleaded guilty today to aiding and abetting illegal corporate donations from the milk producers, a spokesman for the Watergate Special Prosecution Force said.

Sherman's business partner, John Valentine, also pleaded guilty, the spokesman said.

Sherman and Valentine were charged in a criminal information with a single misdemeanor count of aiding and abetting the use of corporate money to purchase computer-mail lists used in Humphrey's 1972 presidential campaign and in a number of other Democratic campaigns.

Sherman had been Humphrey's press secretary when Humphrey was vice president. He and Valentine later formed a computer-mail firm with offices in Minneapolis and Washington.

The spokesman said the two entered guilty pleas in U.S. District Court in Minneapolis.

Identify Young Traffic Victim

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A young girl who was seriously injured in a traffic accident Saturday while visiting a Charlotte rock concert has been identified as Connie Harbold, about 16, of Winston-Salem, authorities said.

She remained in critical condition today in the intensive care unit at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said her parents, John and Anna Wheeler of Winston-Salem, had arrived at the hospital after being notified of the accident. Authorities had difficulty in establishing the identity of the girl.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Ceremony Saturday

AYDEN—The marriage of Miss Cindy Moseley to Charles H. Venters was solemnized in a candlelight ceremony Saturday night at eight o'clock in the First Baptist Church here. The Rev. Doug Woodworth officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Moseley and Mr. and Mrs. Spurgeon C. Venters, all of Ayden.

Preceding the ceremony, a program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Betsy Blackwell, organist, and Mrs. Helen Hill, soloist, who sang "More," "The Hawaiian Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white formal gown of silk organza over taffeta designed with a low square neckline. The entire modified empire was overlaid with cluny lace flower designs. All lace details were repeated at the top and on the cuffs of the long Gibson Girl sleeves. Lace bordered the built-in full circular chapel length train.

The bride's headpiece was a chapel length illusion bordered with scalloped lace attached to a Juliet bonnet cap which was covered with matching lace and scattered seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white Georgianna orchids and pom poms tied with white satin streamers.

Miss Camille Venters, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Jody Bulow, Miss Rhesa Wagstaff, Miss Paula Tripp, all of Ayden and Miss Dee Perry, cousin of the bride, of Ahoskie.

They wore formal length gowns of white organza with a blue rose floral design over white taffeta with the identical floral pattern featuring a V-neckline and butterfly sleeves. Self-fabric buttons centered the empire bodice extending to the waistline of the A-line skirt, which was enhanced with forest green ribbon finished in the back with a bow and long streamers. They wore aqua horsehair braid floppy hats to complement their gowns. They carried nosegays of white carnations with pom poms and streamers of blue and white.

Tina Venters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.T. Venters, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Her dress was fashioned similar to that of the other attendants. She carried a white basket of rose petals.

The bridegroom's brother, Bobby Venters, served as best man. Groomsmen were Tim Moseley, brother of the bride, Jimmy Davis, Benny Benson, all of Ayden, Barry Kearney of Greenville.

The bride and bridegroom presented a rose to each mother and a gift to the bride's father as they left the altar. The wedding was under the direction of Mrs. Ethel Ball. Miss Gladys Jones presided at the guest register.

For traveling, the bride wore a red and white dress and coat ensemble, matching accessories and the orchid from her bouquet.

After a wedding tripp to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Ayden.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Ayden High School and is employed at E. I. DuPont, Kinston.

Reader Gives Advice About Telephone Calls

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Tell the small-town bartender who doesn't like to lie over the phone to handle those calls as his big city cousins do. The tactful bartender will page the individual, and if no one answers the page, that is what he reports to the caller.

Some people meet in bars for business reasons, and don't want to be bothered by phone calls; others simply want a few relaxing moments away from their daily routines. A well-managed bar sells a lot more than drinks, which is one reason patrons will pay six times more for a drink at a bar than they would for the same thing at home.

PATRON

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the man who likes to wear ladies' lingerie, and claims to be "all man." My husband was one of those. He, too, served with the Marines, during which time he was sexually involved with an ex-Green Beret. I finally had a private detective get pictures of the two of them together, which was all the evidence I needed. His boyfriend was the father of four, and I was pregnant with my fifth at the time.

We are divorced now, and nobody can understand why I left a handsome, 6-foot, 210-pound, masculine-looking man who was "good" to me and the kids, and who had a pleasant, easy-going personality.

Abby, please warn other women that men who like to wear women's lingerie are not "all men" like they say. I don't care if they're ex-marines, ex-policemen or olympic champions. Don't use my name. My children don't know about their father. Sign me... BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN: Men who get their kicks from dressing in women's attire are transvestites. Some are bi-sexual, some are homosexual, and some, strangely enough, are strictly heterosexual. And unless a woman can go along with it (which takes a very understanding woman), these men are not for marrying.

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me in what state I can marry my former daughter-in-law? She was divorced from my son two years ago.

I have been looking after her ever since her divorce, and we are very fond of each other. It is not what you think. I only want to marry her so she will be the sole owner of my estate.

Answer soon as I have heart trouble.

BORROWED TIME

DEAR BORROWED: Since there is no blood relationship between you and your former daughter-in-law, you may get married in any state.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ROBERTA: Don't envy anyone. Few things are as good on the inside as they appear to be on the outside.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Miss Gail Sykes Weds Saturday

GARNER — Miss Gail Anne Sykes of Greenville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David F. Sykes of Schenectady, N.Y., was married Saturday in St. Mary's Catholic Church here to Lemuel Butler Clayton Jr., son of Mrs. L. B. Clayton Sr. of Benson, and the late Mr. Clayton.

The candlelight ceremony was conducted by Rev. Richard Vosko of Albany, N.Y., at 6:00 p.m.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Richard Sauers and her niece, Miss Cheryl Ann Sauers, of Albany, N.Y.

The bridegroom's best man was Robert Paroli of Wilson. Ushers were Richard Sauers, brother-in-law of the bride, of Albany, N.Y., Stephen Sauers, nephew of the bride, of Albany, N.Y., and Kenley Roberts, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, of Benson.

The bride is a graduate of Odessa Junior College, Texas and East Carolina University, where she received her B.S. and Masters in education. Mrs. Clayton has taught in the Pitt County School System for the past two years. She will join the Portsmouth, Ohio, School System this fall as a remedial reading teacher.

Her husband is a graduate of East Carolina University in industrial technology. He served in the Air Force for four years and went to Syracuse University for foreign language studies. He is employed by the McLean Trucking Co. in Portsmouth, Ohio.

Following a reception at Swain's Steak House, the couple left for their honeymoon to the coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton will make their home in Ohio.

Small Tobacco Growers Face Uncertain Future

By JOHN D. HOPKINS
Associated Press Writer
HIGH SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The men who grow the tobacco for most American and English cigarettes may never have had so uncertain a future as today.

From Curtis Griffin, a pioneer in modernizing tobacco farming, to Marvin Alligood, who keeps some of the old ways, flue-cured tobacco growers say this year's uncertainties are as hard to figure as next year's rainfall.

"We are selling our farms bit by bit," says Jeff McKeithen of Live Oak, who had 40 acres of tobacco this year but says he won't plant any next year if he can borrow on other crops.

In Southside Virginia, the Carolinas and the Georgia-North Florida tobacco belts, farmers cried for help when they saw the early prices at the auction warehouses. They were record prices, but until a few days ago were not up as sharply as production costs.

The day the Georgia-Florida markets opened, companies bid so low that the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp., the price-support cooperative, bought 19 per cent of the tobacco sold. On the Border Belt in North and South Carolina, stabilization bought 23 per cent of the opening day's tobacco. Recently stabilization has bought about 2 per cent of the season's Georgia-Florida tobacco, nearly 9½ per cent on the Border markets.

But stabilization prices fell well below most cost estimates, and great quantities of tobacco sold just above support levels.

"Farmers have been accustomed to at least getting back their production costs through price supports," said Fred Clark, a University of Florida agronomist and tobacco expert.

"The support service was a life raft in the past," Clark added, "but it was a sinking raft this summer."

"Earl Butz (U.S. Secretary of Agriculture) wanted to end the limits on tobacco production but settled for a 10 per cent increase," Clark added. "Many farmers planted the extra land because Butz said stocks were low and buyers would pay well."

Though only 2 per cent of the nation's flue-cured tobacco is grown in Florida, Clark says the state's tobacco farms are far ahead in adopting labor-saving methods that cut costs.

"If our growers feel it's a losing battle," Clark says, "what kind of shape are the rest in?" Curtis Griffin led the way to mechanization. He tested the first mechanical tobacco picker, used some of the first bulk-curing barns, and helped the inventors improve their ideas in his fields by the Suwannee River.

Griffin's high yield and labor-saving methods give him a lower than average production cost.

"Our net will be less than last year," he said last week. "How much we don't know yet. We sold one-third of our crop at less than last year's prices before the market started up."

"As long as we're in this game we'll gamble. But next year we won't plant any more than we can afford to lose."

Warm and aromatic wind pours around the doors of Griffin's tobacco barns, each about the size of a one-car garage. Inside, racks hold the tobacco leaves open to fan-driven, flame-heated air.

His cured tobacco is soft and pliable, not fragile like fallen tree leaves. It is piled and wrapped in burlap squares that protect it on the way to the auction warehouse.

At Watson Warehouse in High Springs, the unwrapped piles of yellow and brown leaf cover the floor.

Facing buyers across a row, the warehouse owner challenges with a high bid on each pile. Auctioneer Matt Dykes picks up the price, "Hundred 'n ten-ten-ten." No takers. "Nine-nine-nine eight-eight-eight Ex In."

He sold the pile at $108 per hundred pounds and the line moved along in less time than it takes to tell it.

The chant goes on. "Hundred 'n six-six-five-five four, three China." China American Tobacco Co. bought it and a boy in an apron ran up to place the company's tag on the pile.

Up one row and down the next, the chant runs with no break but for air and ice water at the end of the row or occasionally when a grower refuses to accept the price.

One farmer who didn't like the price, but thought he could live with it, was Marvin Alligood. While other farmers still talked angrily about possible collusion among the buyers, Alligood said he was making money.

"My boys help me, so I don't hire labor," Alligood said as he cleared space on his dining room table and plugged in his adding machine and spread out a double handful of bills, note pads and scribbled lists of what he spent on his 20½-acre crop.

Gas for curing the tobacco doubled in price, but he used less because he cured part of his crop in a bulk barn. Where he spent $107 an acre for curing last year he spent $175 this year, counting the electricity to drive the new barn's big fans.

Not counting the new barn's cost, his tractor time, his family's labor, or the aging of his equipment, Alligood figures he spent $253 to make an acre of tobacco last year, $382 this year. Since his yield this year looks similar to last year's 2,200 pounds per acre, Alligood said he would break even at the early low prices.

By comparison, the Lafayette County agricultural extension agent, James Morris, added in costs like capital, insurance, labor and rent and came up with an estimated cost nearly 10 times greater than Alligood's.

Morris' calculations went around the room at the Farm Credit Service in Live Oak, where general manager Aubrey Fowler and some visitors talked about the outlook for tobacco farmers.

"The cost-price squeeze is too tight," Fowler said. "It used to be that if you had a bad year you would just plant more the next year and make it up."

"You can't count on that now." "The man comes back from the auction and he looks at his other income," said William Smith, Suwannee County extension director. "He can't count on a good price for his cattle, the corn is uncertain, nobody is talking about soybeans."

"He'll start selling his trees, may even quit the farm completely."

If tobacco farmers are to survive, argued Sam Weeks, they will have to start growing on contract.

"In five years there won't be an auction," said Weeks, manager of Farmers' Mutual Exchange, a supply cooperative.

"I think ... the grower will know before he sets a plant what he will be paid."

Sitting in was Dr. B.F. Whitty, a University of Florida professor and extension service agronomist, who argued for improved farm methods by saying, "There hasn't been an increase in average yield for 10 years."

"This whole thing is cutting the small growers out," Whitty added later. "The little farmer doesn't have the money. One man in Columbia County went totally to bulk drying and the like in one year. It cost him $70,000. Not many want to spend that much, or can."

"It's terribly expensive to use the barns and harvester for only one crop a year," Whitty said. "But in Mexico they use a curing barn 17 times a year, compared to our six."

Whitty and Clark both concede that tobacco production quotas have worked to discourage efficient farming. But few of the men The Associated Press interviewed in North Florida auction warehouses were willing to give up quotas or the price supports that go with them.

"I'll stay in as long as there's an allotment," said Alligood. "It's the only guarantee we have."

Cancels Visits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's three scheduled visits to North Carolina have been cancelled, a White House spokesman said Sunday.

The spokesman said Ford, who made the commitments while Vice President, will re-examine his schedule in the near future, however for the moment he plans to remain in Washington.

Ford was scheduled to appear at GOP functions in Kings Mountain, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Salisbury in September and October.

Last week, state GOP Chairman Thomas Bennett said he still expected Ford to honor the commitments.

Williamston Store Robbed

WILLIAMSTON—A jewelry store in downtown Williamston was robbed Friday afternoon, with jewelry valued at $1,900 taken from the premise.

Williamston police report that Peel's Jewelry Store on Main Street was robbed at about 4 p.m. by a man who carried a weapon and took three diamond rings and a watch before fleeing to a waiting car.

The car, bearing Virginia tags, was stopped by police in Bertie County. The driver of the get-away car, police said, has been placed in jail under $10,000 bond, and a search is continuing for the gunman, who was not in the car when it was stopped.

Three Juveniles Found In Plant

Three juveniles were caught inside the Pepsi-Cola Co. plant on Dickinson Ave. about 6 a.m. Saturday and charged with breaking and entering, Detective Capt. L.J. Russell said this morning.

According to Capt. Russell the three boys, two 10 years old and the other 11, and three other juveniles—ages 9, 12 and 13, allegedly pried open a rear door to gain entrance to the building. The 9, 12 and 13-year-olds had just left the building when the other three were caught inside by the employees of the company.

Investigation of the incident is continuing, the officer noted.

According to the official, Wilson was taken into custody by officers about 10:50 p.m. in a parking lot off Cotanche Street when officers discovered a small bag of marijuana in his car.

Capt. Russell said bond for Wilson was set at $10,000.

Health Units For Soul City

SOUL CITY, N.C. (AP)—Two mobile health care units were dedicated here Sunday, on the site of a proposed new town built by and primarily for black people.

The two mobile units, to be replaced with a building next year, are among the first facilities of Soul City to become operational.

They are operated by Healthco Inc., which was established under the auspices of the Soul City Foundation. The two units will serve the people of rural Vance and Warren counties.

Soul City, according to founder Floyd McKissick, will eventually be a self-contained community of 50,000 people. McKissick describes it as a black capital venture, open to whites as well.

The National Barefoot Water Skiing Championships are scheduled Oct. 4-6 at Cypress Gardens, Fla.

Impact Of A Railway Merger

The July edition of "We The People Of North Carolina" magazine features an article on the merger of Norfolk Southern Railway into the Southern Railway System.

The story points out that the merger increases Southern's tracks in our state to 2,150 miles, which is second only to Georgia, which has 2,784 miles, among the 13 southern states.

"In addition to an expected boost for industrial development along NS, the area will see benefits of the merger through improved service and operational economies," the article says.

"In the operations area, Southern brings an impressive record of innovations and continuing improvements. Examples include the ribbon rail method of welded rail construction; the 'Big John' hopper car, which opened the door to economical cattle production in the Southeast; the tri-level articulated auto carrier; and the unit train for movement of bulk coal shipments to power plant customers."

NS customers should also see improvements in transit times and reliability, better connections, and improved equipment availability."

Optimism is expressed about industrial development along the line.

"The Industrial Development Department at Southern will provide the other big plus for the NS area. Southern is optimistic about the industrial potential of eastern North Carolina.

"The Industrial Development Department works closely with state and local governments, corporations, individual property owners, local development groups, and environmental control agencies in its efforts to stimulate and facilitate healthy industrial growth.

"Services provided by this group include not only assisting industries in finding the best available sites for new plants and warehouses, but also in making the best and most productive use of the land."

Since the Norfolk Southern track passes directly through Pitt County, touching Grimesland, Greenville and Farmville, it can be seen that the merger with Southern will be important to our area. Southern has the resources to improve tracks and facilities along the old Norfolk Southern from Charlotte to Norfolk. It also has the Industrial Development Department to encourage location of industry along its route. The merger should be helpful to the Pitt County economy.

Ford's Party Role

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will have two early chances to show whether he takes the task of building a strengthened national Republican party more seriously than his two GOP predecessors.

The first will come when he picks a vice president, the second in his approach to November's midterm elections.

For all of their own personal success at the polls, neither Dwight D. Eisenhower nor Richard M. Nixon paid much attention to restoring the national Republican dominance that prevailed before Franklin D. Roosevelt's election to the presidency in 1932.

Eisenhower, the war hero turned statesman, had little interest. Nixon, a party man all his life, became more and more interested in his own political fortunes exclusively.

One of the legacies of the 1972 campaign, besides the scandal that ultimately drove him from office, was the bitterness in the GOP over the President's failure to help bring other Republicans in on his coat-tails.

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the 1972 GOP chairman, has said he felt like an outsider at Nixon's victory celebration. GOP lawmakers always felt Nixon could have saved several senators who suffered narrow defeats.

But Ford demonstrated in his long congressional tenure and his brief spell as vice president a devotion to fellow Republicans that could spell brighter GOP days ahead.

His major task, in recent months, has been to help Republican candidates, part of a broader effort to give leadership to the party at a time the national administration was floundering.

Some efforts this fall in behalf of Republicans seem inevitable, and an extended Ford honeymoon could be a big boost to GOP candidates.

Before that, however, Ford must pick his No. 2 man, and the choice will tell much about his views on the party.

In the past, Ford has talked of the need to broaden the GOP base, a view that led him to help liberal Republicans as well as conservatives and to suggest in 1968 that Nixon choose a liberal running mate.

Such a view now would appear to dictate the choice of a party moderate, either an established figure such as Nelson A. Rockefeller or a younger Republican such as Gov. Daniel J. Evans of Washington, Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon or Sen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts.

Many GOP liberals fear a great chance would be wasted if Ford picked a fellow conservative, such as Sen. Barry Goldwater or Gov. Ronald Reagan, especially since the choice must be approved by the Democratic-controlled Congress, rather than a conservatively based GOP National Convention.

Vocational Ed Emphasis

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Among the sweeping changes implemented in the Youth Development Division, officials are putting their strongest hopes for future reward in the shift to vocational education.

Anticipating some cries of alarm from those who insist that "traditional" reading, writing, and arithmetic are important to survival in the modern world, the Department of Corrections is moving heavily into teaching their students to work.

After all, those officials argue, a substantial number of training school students are there because of truancy. Those kids are, they insist, unable to cope with the pressures of learning in a traditional fashion, turned off by a school system which puts emphasis on college preparation, and already well along the road to being dropouts—if not already.

Hate School

"These kids are rebelling against the public school system... that's why we get a lot of them," says Dr. John R. Larkins, head of the youth program.

The program at the training schools have concentrated on providing the same curriculum used in the public school, timed so that students coming in and going out of the institutions pick up and leave off at approximately the same place in the textbooks that their colleagues in public school are studying.

The training school scene is too complicated to permit that, Larkins said. First, most of the 1,136 kids in training schools at a given time are just not interested in their ABC's, he noted.

Secondly, the average stay in a training school is only nine months, and little academic advancement can be achieved in that short time.

Still, most of the youngsters were pushed into the formal education mold. But now if the student shows an interest in a vocation, he can get individualized instruction.

Stonewall Jackson School at Concord will form the nucleus of this new emphasis, with regular programs offered in building trades, food services, auto and small engine repair, home economics, printing, textiles, remedial math and reading.

and additional vocational programs when demand is sufficient.

Community Link
In addition, Dr. Larkins is linking the training school programs into the community college-technical school system. In many cases, training school students will attend classes at the community colleges. Whenever interest is sufficient, the classes will be brought onto the training school campus.

But above all, Larkins said, the courses offered will be in practical areas such as upholstering furniture, physical therapy, nurses training—"all areas in which you can get a job at decent pay in the outside world."

The reorganization of the juvenile system outlined recently by David L. Jones, secretary of the Department of Corrections, calls for grouping the various ages in the system, so that 10-13 year old students will be at Samarkand Manor, the 14 to 15½ age group will be at Dobbs and the Juvenile Evaluation Center, and Jackson will house the 15½ to 17 year olds.

This measure, Larkins thinks, will ease the physical threats to younger kids from the older.

Another measure under the changes coming in September is that all schools in the system will be co-educational, housing boys and girls on the same campus. Girls, incidentally, will have the same opportunities as boys for vocational training.

Also, each student will be given a "contract" for performance whereby he can progress from strict confinement to increasingly more lenient surroundings—with the proviso that violations will send the student to either the intensive treatment center to be located at Cameron Morrison School in Richmond County or the maximum security center at C.A. Dillon School in Durham County.

The future thrust of the juvenile system will be at community treatment homes, and Jones said he hopes eventually to see between 30 and 40 per cent of the population out of the institutions and receiving local care and treatment for problems.

A Visit With Checkers

When President Nixon dropped his bombshell on the American people, I was so shaken up I didn't know what to do. So I went to the graveside of Checkers, the Nixons' cocker spaniel, and sat on the stone.

"Well, Checkers," I said, "Your master has had it."

He's either got to resign, or they're going to kick him out of office. You saved him once, but you can't save him this time. I know what you're saying, "How could it happen? How could a man who had the whole world in his hands blow it the way he did? I can't answer that."

"He did some great things, Checkers, even his worst enemies acknowledge that. He brought about a new relationship with China, and some sort of detente with Russia, and the whole world picture changed for the better under him."

Other Editors Say Conserving Energy

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
One of the most practical and informative manuals on energy and its conservation has been produced through the cooperative participation of the oil industry, the electric industry, the Office of Energy Conservation and other organizations.

Beginning with an explanation of energy, it is stated that the "energy crisis" is misnamed.

What we have is a fuel shortage destined to continue for several years. Efforts to meet the "crisis" are also explored.

The most pertinent parts of the manual deal with how energy can be conserved in the home.

Since the greatest single energy user in the household is space heating and cooling, it is explained how that can consequently be the greatest source of saving.

The heating or cooling of a poorly insulated house is compared with trying to pump air into a leaking tire.

The heating or cooling of a poorly insulated house is compared with trying to pump air into a leaking tire. Adequate insulation in a home can save up to 51 per cent on fuel. Other topics of discussion in the manual include thermostat settings, clothing, use of hot water heaters, food freezers, refrigerators, electrical appliances, lighting and so on.

Some of the energy economy measures are merely reminders of commonsense logic, such as refraining from using dishwashers and laundry room appliances until there are enough dishes or laundry for full loads.

These are the kind of conservation minded suggestions which show that a reasonable level of intelligence in the use of energy has become one of the obvious requirements of contemporary life—the same as learning to drive safely, eat wisely, or knowing how to judiciously use the miracles of modern medicine.

For those who for whatever reason believe there is no energy shortage, they might think in terms of the money they will save by wise use of energy. With the rising rates of both oil and electricity, one can hardly afford to be wasteful of either.

Ending The Nixon Style

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A dramatic shift from the Nixon era of exclusionary politics to an "open door" Ford administration is now being plotted by Gerald Ford's intimates with this symbolic capstone: an offer to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of a major post in the Ford administration.

Humphrey, the 1968 Democratic presidential nominee, is perceived by some of Vice President Ford's key advisers as the best possible Democrat for inclusion in Ford's new-style government. That new style will emphasize an open White House door, genuine bipartisanship in foreign policy and reconciliation within the Republican party.

This is a death sentence for the royal attributes of the Nixon era with pervasive Oval Office political dominance and remoteness from both Republicans and Democrats on Capitol Hill. An offer to old pro Democrat Humphrey, moved by time and events to the deep center from the outer left wing of his party, is seen by some Ford operatives as the obvious catalyst for reconciliation even if he turned down the offer.

The new style in politics would be summed up by President Ford's offer of the vice presidency to Nelson A. Rockefeller. As perceived by longtime Ford ally Melvin R. Laird and other centrist Republican leaders, nominating the world-famous Rockefeller would achieve notable objectives: reassurance to foreign countries; restoration of a truly national Republican party with an anchor in the liberal Northeast for the first time since 1964; finessing the Ford succession problem (Rockefeller, 66, would be too old to run for President in 1980).

Rockefeller advocates, including Laird, advance one other major asset: Rockefeller and his vast political and financial resources could tap valuable new talent to a corrupted national government which has become the target of cynical sneers.

Ford's own staff is small and obviously inexperienced in the business of running the country. Now being eyed as high-level operatives in the Ford White House are a handful of experienced Republicans who, one way or another, ran afoul of the Nixon Berlin wall.

One is Robert Ellsworth, the former Kansas Congressman who was hounded off the White House staff in 1969 by H.R. Haldeman and only recently returned to Washington as Assistant Secretary of Defense for international security affairs; he may be brought back into a top job in the Ford White House, perhaps as director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Others being eyed for top posts are former Sen. Charles Goodell of New York, whose campaign for reelection was sabotaged by the Nixon Oval Office, and Donald Rumsfeld (now U.S. Ambassador to NATO) who as a presidential counselor had his troubles with the Haldeman-Ehrlichman clique.

Secretary of the Interior Rogers Morton is a strong possibility for White House chief of staff. He never has fited emotionally into the weird political world of Richard Nixon. Effectively sidelined by the Oval Office, he is Ford's close ally.

The major objective of Ford's political friends now pressing for such sweeping changes is psychological: to end the Nixon era not with a whimper but with a bang. Each of these moves is designed to rehabilitate and broaden the dangerously weakened Republican party and at the same time (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

The Ten Commandments have lived on, century after century, as a guide for moral behavior because they are relevant to the primary needs of life. There are some things that never change. Customs change, political systems change, but the human body, the human mind, and the human spirit change practically not at all from century to century.

Certain of the commandments have to do with worship. Modern man needs worship as much or even more than ancient man did. Other commandments have to do with truthful speaking and honest dealing. Veracity and honesty are even more necessary today than they were in primitive ancient societies. A day of rest, relaxation, and religious observance is equally vital. Security or life, security of marriage, the security of a good name, and the protection of property, both from dishonest acts and covetous desires—these types of security the Ten Commandments protect as in the days of old.

Economy Given A Top Priority

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It's the No. 1 problem — the economy — so proclaimed by Gerald Ford himself before he assumed the presidency. And he seemed to confirm this by working with economic advisers hours after taking the oath.

If it weren't for Watergate, the true significance of the nation's economic confusion would be evident. The problems are unprecedented in their intensity: A 12 per cent prime rate and roughly the same rate of increase in consumer prices. Undoubtedly inflation helped undermine the presidency of Richard M. Nixon, if only because people thought he and his administration were so preoccupied with his Watergate problems that he ignored their. Their fears seemed to be confirmed when Nixon in his final economic message told Americans to cut back on their spending.

Ford seemingly recognizes the dangers of preaching rather than acting. "It serves no purpose to lecture the harassed public," he said in a recent speech.

Despite Nixon's repeated assurances that the worst of inflation was behind, the worst always was ahead.

On his final full day in office it was announced that wholesale prices for July rose 3.7 per cent, or at an annual rate in excess of 40 per cent.

Significantly, just as prominently as he called attention to his foreign policy successes, Nixon omitted any reference in his resignation speech to his domestic policy. His legacy in domestic economic policy is disarray.

Savings banks are rapidly losing deposits because they cannot offer customers the high interest rates available elsewhere. Home mortgages therefore are frequently unavailable.

More seriously, there is considerable feeling in financial circles that some savings banks are headed for more trouble, and that action to restore confidence is required by the Ford administration.

Public utilities, hard hit by higher energy and borrowing costs, are so severely pinched they must reduce or suspend dividends. This in turn lowers their capacity to raise capital to meet demands for their services.

The purchasing power of the ordinary factory worker is declining. The jobless rate, although still not exceedingly high at 5.3 per cent, is widely expected to reach 6 per cent before the end of the year.

Some people on fixed incomes have been reduced to desperation by the rapid erosion of their buying power. They cannot cut back; they cannot trim any fat from their budgets without cutting to the bone.

The stock market is depressed. Those high interest rates cause trouble there too, because they draw capital into debt issues that ordinarily should be supporting stocks. And besides, corporate profits aren't that good.

A move against high interest rates and high prices has to be a top priority for President Ford. Mere recognition of the difficulties might in itself produce some relief.

GOING UNDER—The Norwegian tanker, Produce, sinks in shark-infested waters Sunday near Durban, South Africa, after hitting a reef off the coast. The crew of 34 and five passengers were plucked from the sea by a South African Air Force helicopter and two water skiing boats. The 13,385-ton vessel was carrying a cargo of molasses. There were no casualties. (AP Wirephoto)

Big Job Of Correspondence And Paper Work Confronting Nixon

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer
SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Massive correspondence and paper work will occupy Richard M. Nixon in coming days, in addition to whatever Watergate turmoil might lie ahead.

Three principal assistants are working with Nixon here at his oceanfront retreat in his transition from president to private citizen. In addition, he has met with two close friends.

The Presidential Transition Act provides Nixon with staff support for six months. Principal tasks are to handle correspondence remaining from the end of Nixon's presidency and to arrange for movement of his voluminous presidential papers. The assistants also are handling liaison with the new White House staff of President Ford.

The three top aides here with Nixon are his former press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler; former appointments secretary Stephen Bull and military aide Col. Jack Brennan. Several lower ranking assistants from White House days also are here along with Dr. Walter Tkach, Nixon's personal physician in Washington.

The staff is working at the office compound formerly called the Western White House, located on a Coast Guard facility adjacent to Nixon's 26-acre estate. Operators at a telephone switchboard, greatly undermanned from previous times, now answer "San Clemente" instead of "Western White House."

Under the Former Presidents Act, Nixon is entitled after the six months transition to nearly $100,000 annually for support of an office staff. An aide said this office likely will be quar-with your master.

"Anyway, the tapes were the only evidence that could convict Mr. Nixon, and he turned some over to the justice people, and he was ordered to turn over other tapes by the courts. I know what you're going to ask, 'Why didn't he burn the tapes?' Nobody knows the answer to that question, Checkers. Either he was stupid or he was so contemptuous of the laws of this country he didn't believe anyone would ever get to hear them. Once he was ordered to turn over the tapes that implicated him his goose was cooked."

"But do you want to know the worst thing your master did? He lied to the American people. He lied to his friends, his lawyers, his own party and everyone who believed in him."

"Why, Checkers, why? You knew him better than we did. Why would a man think the American people would keep him in office after he deceived them time and time again?"

"Was it scorn for us that made him do it? Was it some insecurity in his character that kept him from playing by the rules? Or was it simply a case of a man who was a born loser even when he became President of the United States?"

"Well, I've got to be going now. The country will survive, Checkers. We're much better than your master thinks we are. And we do have some consolation. If things hadn't worked out the way they did, Agnew might have become President and then we would have had to impeach him."

tered at the former Western White House. He also said there definitely will be a presidential library to house Nixon's papers and mementos, although a site has not been determined.

The aide, who asked not to be named, said Nixon has been reading and working in his office, where news service tickers still operate. He said the former president will seek far greater privacy as citizen Nixon than as chief executive.

On Sunday Nixon worked in his office for more than an hour and visited with friends C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo and Robert Abplanalp, aides said. In the afternoon the former President went on a three-hour outing, spending an hour on the beach at Camp Pendleton Marine Base, just south of his residence, then driving with Rebozo to Red Beach to join Mrs. Nixon and their daughter Tricia and son-in-law Edward Cox. The family returned home in late afternoon.

Earlier Abplanalp and Rebozo, interviewed briefly at a nearby restaurant while they lunched, said they had talked several times with Nixon during the weekend.

"We are out here as friends to do what we can—that's all," said Abplanalp. "He seemed fine; he is not upset."

Both men said any more substantive remarks would be inappropriate. Through an investment company, the two own about three-fourths of the acreage in the Nixon compound.

Carson Chosen GOP Nominee For Attorney General's Race

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Republican party executive committee, following the wishes of Gov. Jim Holshouser, has chosen James H. Carson Jr. as the GOP nominee for state attorney general.

Carson, 39, of Charlotte, resigned earlier this summer as a state Court of Appeals judge. He was given the nomination at a meeting of the executive committee Saturday.

He had no opposition and won by acclamation. That prompted one committeeman to say the delegates had "rubber-stamped" Holshouser's request.

Carson will face Democrat Rufus Edmisten in the Nov. 5 general election to fill the remaining two year's of Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan's four-year term.

Morgan is stepping down Aug. 26 to campaign as the Democratic U.S. Senate candidate. At that time, Carson will take over as interim attorney general until after the November election. Holshouser appointed Carson to serve in the interim.

Carson, a lawyer, served two terms in the state House of Representatives, 1967 and 1969. He was appointed to the Court of Appeals by Holshouser last year.

In his acceptance speech, Carson said the election will offer North Carolina voters "a clear out choice between experience and inexperience."

"The Democratic nominee has never practiced law in the state and has never held public elective office anywhere," Carson said. "He has no experience in North Carolina state government."

Edmisten, a lawyer seeking his first elective office, is a former special counsel to the special Senate Watergate committee and aide for 10 years to Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C. He beat seven candidates in voting by the Democratic executive committee last month.

Carson and Edmisten were nominated by their party executive committees because Morgan had not resigned when the primaries were held in early May.

Carson said one of his first acts upon taking office later this month will be to establish "a statewide task force to fight organized crime."

He said his administration would focus on more efficient law enforcement, white collar crime and consumer fraud.

Carson said he has no plans,

Oxcart Taxi Is Even Slower

SAIGON (UPI) — If high speed jet, bus and limousine service has got you in a restless mood, slow down a bit in Saigon's slow-as-molasses vehicles.

Horse drawn "buses" ply regular routes in the Saigon suburbs, and a few cents will take you to a lengthy ride along the capital's northern edge.

If one horsepower is not quite enough, try a two oxenpower vehicle. Oxcart taxis can be hired in Saigon itself or in the provinces at hourly rates, or by the trip.

Grandmother Is Named Trustee

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mrs. Mary Loretto Dillon, mother of five and grandmother of seven, has been elected trustee of the legal governing board of Loyola University of Chicago.

John F. Smith, Jr., president of the board of trustees, said: "The education of young people certainly requires a mother's point of view at the policy-making level."

Dogs Will Be Kept 7 Days

According to the Greenville Animal Ordinance, homeless dogs will be kept at the new Greenville animal shelter seven days before they are destroyed, Greenville Chief Inspector Alton Warren told the Pitt County Humane Society recently.

Lost animals will be held up to three days during which time attempts will be made to find the owners before putting the dogs up for adoption.

Further sections of the ordinance provide for proper care of pets, including giving them shelter, food, and water. Failure of owners to follow this portion of the ordinance can bring action by the authorities, he said.

Current projects were discussed by Humane Society president Liz Whalen and plans were set for a September picnic for members and their families.

Mrs. Whalen announced that Barry Littleton will be Greenville's new animal control officer, replacing Jim Swinson, who is leaving Greenville. Also departing Greenville is Society Secretary Pat Giles. Mrs. Anne Sues will take over the Secretary's duties.

Democratic party." Carson told a news conference he felt no action should be taken to prosecute former President Richard Nixon for Watergate-related crimes. Nixon has suffered enough, he said.

Second District committeeman A. W. Rouse was critical of the way Carson was nominated. "We just rubber-stamped it," he told delegates just before the meeting ended.

"We find ourselves with one candidate who has the whole-hearted endorsement of the governor and all the resources of the party at his command," Rouse said. "It's difficult for a man who wants to be attorney general to come out and say so in the face of this adversity."

Hotels Thrive In Singapore

SINGAPORE (UPI) — The Singapore tourist promotion board says the local hotel occupancy rate and tourist inflow to Singapore have increased this year despite oil crisis, inflation and higher air fares.

For the first five months this year room occupancy rate was 68.6 per cent compared with 65.6 per cent last year and tourist arrivals from January to May rose 13.46 per cent over last year.

Singapore now has about 71 tourist hotels with a total of more than 9,000 rooms.

Twins Honor Killebrew

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"I still get a chill every time Harmon bats," said Minnesota's Jerry Terrell, describing his feelings for teammate Harmon Killebrew, honored in special ceremonies Sunday.

A crowd of 27,303 turned out for Harmon Killebrew Day at Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, and the 38-year-old slugger did more than his share to send the customers home satisfied.

Killebrew singled home Bobby Darwin to give the Twins a 1-0 lead in the first inning against the Baltimore Orioles.

then singled home Larry Hise to tie the game at 3-3 in the fifth. Terrell followed with a two-run single to put Minnesota in front for good.

"The adrenalin was really flowing," said Terrell, who grew up in southern Minnesota and watched Killebrew during his prime. "They should have a day for him every day because he's such a great guy ..."

Killebrew, who ranks fifth on the all-time home run list with 556, choked back tears during the hour-long pregame ceremony. He turned over all proceeds from the event to charity. "It was really an enjoyable day for me and my family," said the reserved, soft-spoken Killebrew. "I was glad I was able to get a couple of hits ... you've got to be lucky."

Elsewhere in the American League Sunday, Kansas City beat Milwaukee 5-2, Cleveland edged Chicago 3-2, Boston trimmed Oakland 2-1, New York nipped California 5-4 and Texas blanked Detroit 9-0.

Royals 5, Brewers 2
Fran Healy's two-run double keyed a five-run first inning that carried the Royals past Milwaukee. Paul Splitterff, 12-12, got the win with ninth-inning relief from Lindy McDaniel and Doug Bird.

Indians 3, White Sox 2
Charlie Spikes hit his 18th home run of the season for the Indians and scored twice, and Frank Duffy delivered what proved to be the winning run with a fifth-inning single to top Chicago.

Red Sox 2, A's 1
Veteran Juan Marichal blanked Oakland on three hits but left the game after eight innings when his shoulder stiffened. Diego Segui pitched the ninth and managed to hold on for the victory.

The 35-year-old Marichal, who came off the disabled list Aug. 2, raised his record to 5-1.

Yanks 5, Angels 4
A two-out error by California's Rudy Meoli opened the door to a two-run New York seventh-inning that helped the Yankees beat the Angels.

With the score tied 2-2, Meoli threw high to first base on Thurman Munson's ground ball, and the Yankees went on to score two runs on a walk to Jim Mason and singles by Sandy Alomar and Elliott Maddox.

Rangers 9, Tigers 0
Jim Bibby posted his 16th victory against 14 defeats by stopping Detroit on four hits. He struck out four and walked three.

Hamilton Beats Belvoir

HAMILTON—Hamilton got two runs in the third inning on a homer adding it to one they picked up in the second to beat the Belvoir Bombers, 3-2, Sunday.

Turner had the homer that won the game. Hamilton held off Belvoir for the remainder of the game to take the win. The winning pitcher was D. Hardison and the loser for Belvoir was Leon Johnson.

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — The clown prince of big time golf is back, and everybody is hailing him as a king.

"Do you feel like the old Trevino?" Lee Trevino was asked Sunday after he had beaten out Jack Nicklaus by a stroke in a cliff-hanging victory for the 56th PGA Golf Championship.

"I don't know how the old Trevino felt," the bouncy, ebullient Mexican-American retorted. "Maybe I will have to ask my wife."

It was hot and humid and there was no icy drink waiting for the new American professional champion.

"I will buy," Trevino said. "Can anybody cash a check." He reached in his dark trousers and pulled out the first prize check for $45,000. Everybody laughed.

Almost everybody laughs at Lee Trevino. He is loose and uninhibited. He is quick with the quip. He has a rich homespun philosophy. He is to golf what Yogi Berra and Dizzy Dean have been to baseball and Muhammad Ali—without Ali's occasional venom and militancy—to boxing.

He has enriched the game with both his skill and his Trevinisms: "If you keep your mouth shut too long, you get bad breath."

"I missed three fairways—the first and 15th."

"Now that I got all this money, maybe I'll buy the Alamo and give it back to the Mexicans."

"I come from such a poor family, my sister was made in Japan."

Since Trevino joined the tour in 1967, he has established himself as one of the giants of the game—twice U.S. Open and twice British Open victor, winner of 18 tour victories and banker of more than $1,270,000 in golf purses alone.

His first PGA triumph solidified his position as one of the three best players of the current era along with Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player.

He gave one of his most impressive and gutsy performances in winning the 1974 PGA crown in a head-to-head duel with Nicklaus, who had to be content with the second purse of $25,700 after finishing one stroke back.

Trevino has become a personal nemesis of the great Nicklaus, beating him in a playoff for the U.S. Open crown in 1971 and also beating him out for the British Open titles in 1971 and 1972.

Nicklaus paid him the supreme tribute after Sunday's futile chase over the 7,050-yard, par-70 Tanglewood course.

"This man is fantastic," Nicklaus said. "He hardly made a mistake out there. He hit almost every fairway and every green. I hate to lose but when a guy plays as well as Lee did, there is nothing one can do."

Trevino fired a final 69—a score matched by Nicklaus—for a 72-hole score of 276, four-under-par. Nicklaus finished at 277, with the closest other pursuers a quartet two shots farther back at 279. They were the fantastic, 62-year-old Sam Snead, 69; Dave Hill, 69; Hubert Green, 70; and Bobby Cole of South Africa, 71.

The final round Sunday evolved into a three-way battle among Trevino, Nicklaus and Cole, with Trevino never once losing the lead although young Cole, 26, pulled even five times.

Mantle, Ford Head List Of Inductees

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — New York Yankees stars Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford, who roomed together during their playing days, were together again today, inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame.

The Yankee stars were among six men who were honored with enshrinement in baseball's history books.

Former umpire Jocko Conlan, Negro League star "Cool Papa" Bell, Sam Thompson and "Sunny Jim" Bottomley were enshrined in ceremonies outside baseball's historic museum.

Bottomley and Thompson were honored posthumously. Representatives of their families accepted plaques bearing their likenesses and records as Commissioner Bowie Kuhn presided and a crowd approaching 10,000 looked on.

This quiet village, the acknowledged home of the national pastime, came alive with activity in the moments before the festivities. Other living members of the Hall, countless baseball dignitaries and fans young and old arrived to pay homage.

But there was no sign of nervousness among the inductees as their greatest moment approached. Mantle spent Sunday on a golf course that bordered majestic Lake Otsego. Bell relaxed at the headquarters hotel, chatting and signing autographs. Conlan reminisced with old friends.

"I recall that in 1948 and '51 I umpired here in Hall of Fame games," said the veteran of 24 National League seasons, six All-Star games and six World Series.

"Never did I think I'd be honored this way. He stifled a sob and added, "I'm a softy. The Lord has been so kind to me, and I'm thankful."

So, too, was Mantle, who put the honor on a level with the feeling he had when his Yankee No. 7 was retired in 1969.

The switch-hitting outfielder powered 536 home runs and drove in 1,509 during 18 pain-racked years, battling continuous leg ailments and illnesses. He won the American League's Most Valuable Player Award in 1956, 1957 and 1962.

The 1956 season was his finest, as 52 home runs, 130 runs batted in and a .353 batting average brought him the AL Triple Crown.

Ford, a sly left-hander, compiled a 236-105 record for a .690 winning percentage—tops among major league pitchers with 200 or more decisions. A 25-4 season in 1961 brought him the Cy Young award. His 322-3 consecutive scoreless World Series innings remain unmatched.

Bell's statistics would have been impressive as well had anyone been there to record the figures during the heyday of the Negro League. His 29-year career in the days of baseball's bus leagues and barnstormers included one season with 175 stolen bases and another with a .480 batting average.

His abandon on the basepaths brought him the title of "the fastest man ever to play baseball" from Kuhn, who singled out Bell for achievement. He once scored from first base on a bunt during a game against a team of White All-Stars and often turned routine singles into triples.

Thompson recorded a .336 lifetime average before the turn of the century. He twice hit over .400 in his 14 seasons.

Bottomley hit .310 in 16 seasons spanning the 1920s and '30s and drove in 12 runs in one game on Sept. 16, 1924.

ALL THE WAY AROUND—Philadelphia Phillies runner Dave Cash slides into home past Atlanta Braves catcher Vic Correll for a score in the sixth inning of a game in Philadelphia Sunday. Cash went all the way around on a long hit ball for the score, but was credited with a triple and a base advanced on an error because Braves leftfielder Ralph Carr bobbled the ball. (AP Wirephoto)

King Not Giving Up

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Clyde King believes in miracles and Dave Cash still believes in the Phillies.

King, who took over as manager of the Atlanta Braves, said Sunday he isn't about to write off the 1974 season. Atlanta had just dumped Philadelphia for the third time in a row, 6-5, to remain 14 games behind the Los Angeles-Dodgers in the National League West.

The Phillies, benefitting from the Dodgers' 3-1 win over St. Louis, still trail the Cardinals by 1½ games in the National League East.

"I believe in miracles, but I believe you have to make miracles happen," said King who watched his 1951 Brooklyn Dodger teammates blow a 13½-game lead to the New York Giants in September. Since taking over the Braves' leadership, King has helped make a few miracles happen and Atlanta has won 11 of 16 for their new skipper while seemingly regaining their punch.

The Phillies, on the other hand, are acting more like they've been punched and have played sluggish ball for about a week. Sunday's loss was particularly painful. Steve Carlton, the team's pitching ace, looked overpowering for the first three innings despite giving up a second-inning run on a walk and a double.

The Phillies jumped on Braves starter Joe Niekro for three runs in the first and one in the second, and with a 4-1 lead, the "Yes We Can" team looked about ready to break out of its slump.

But Atlanta tied it in the third on a passed ball and Vic Correll's two-run single, and after Willie Montanez made it 5-4 with a double in the fifth that extended his hitting streak through seven games, won it on Dave Johnson's flare single to left in the eighth that scored two runs and made Carlton a loser for the eighth time against 14 wins.

"You can't blame Steve Carlton. He won five straight. He can't win everything. We're not playing good baseball," volunteered one Phillie who wanted to remain anonymous. Cash, however, admitted the Phillies weren't playing up to par. "But," he said, "things aren't so bad. We're only a game and a half out, you know. And we've lost three straight before.

"There's no doubt in our mind we can win this thing. We just have to play better ball than we have been playing."

Manager Danny Ozark had to agree with that last assessment. Especially after watching the Phillies strand 10 runners Sunday and a total of 29 in the three-game Atlanta set.

Add to that some questionable fielding and unusual base running and you could understand why Ozark said he was frustrated after the weekend series.

Tom House, who pitched the final three innings, giving up only one hit, earned the Atlanta win. It was his fifth against only two losses.

And King's miracle men seemed to be getting his feeling in the eighth when Johnson flared a Gene Garber offering to left to give Atlanta the win.

"He couldn't have thrown the ball out there any better," said a disappointed Phillies shortstop Larry Bowa. But like Clyde King said, you have to make miracles happen.

Sutton's Hitting More Impressive

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Don Sutton has notched his 15th. His 15th hit, not victory.

The Los Angeles Dodger right-hander has been having better luck hitting than pitching this season—and helped himself Sunday with two singles in a 3-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I'm not Dizzy Dean or Claude Osteen with my hitting," Sutton conceded, "but I believe that I can help myself win ballgames if I can do something else besides bunt. Any time you have nine guys in the lineup that can contribute, you should win."

Sutton hasn't been winning, though, with any consistency. He suffered through a six-game losing streak earlier this year and Sunday's victory, a five-hitter, was only his 10th against eight losses. Last year, he had an 18-10 record and the year before, 19-9.

His earned run average is an extravagant 3.68, above his lifetime mark of 3.01.

He started a two-run rally with a third-inning single and capped the Dodgers' scoring with a base hit an inning later.

In the other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds routed the New York Mets 10-4; year, but hasn't been able to bring off the victory.

"I'm not sure I've really been in position that much," he said. "If I thought I was in position, it was because of a false sense of security."

"But it's encouraging that I played so well here. Lee played a lot better, but that's just about as good, maybe as good or better, than I'd played all year."

Red 10, Mets 4
Johnny Bench drove in five runs with two doubles and his 24th home run of the season and George Foster drove in four runs, leading Cincinnati over New York.

Pirates 8, Padres 1
Dock Ellis posted his fifth consecutive victory, Willie Stargell smashed a three-run homer and Manny Sanguillen drove in two runs in Pittsburgh's victory over San Diego.

Ellis, 8-8, scattered eight hits and allowed the lone Padre run in the fourth inning.

Espos 5, Astros 2
Jim Northrup's two-run homer and Jose Morales' two run double carried Montreal over Houston.

Braves 6, Phillies 5
Dave Johnson's two-run single in the eighth inning lifted Atlanta over Philadelphia.

Giants 5-6, Cubs 3-4
Gary Mathews' home run on Rick Reuschel's first pitch of the seventh inning carried San Francisco past Chicago in the first game of their doubleheader. Garry Maddox led off the ninth with his second home run of the game and Tito Fuentes later followed with a two-run single to lead San Francisco to victory in the second game.

American League scores: Cleveland 3, Chicago 2; Minnesota 5, Baltimore 4; Kansas City 5, Milwaukee 2; Boston 2, Oakland 1; New York 5, California 4 and Texas 9, Detroit 0.

Nicklaus Finishes Second

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — "Well," said Jack Nicklaus with a wry smile, "there's not much I can do about it."

"Life will go on—I suppose." Nicklaus, beaten by Lee Trevino in the PGA national championship Sunday, was responding to a question concerning his failure to win one of the world's four major tournaments this season.

"I've gone through seasons before when I didn't win one of the Big Four," he said. "and I'm sure I will again."

But it was obvious that Nicklaus—whose accumulation of 14 major titles stands as an alltime record—was bitterly disappointed over his failure to add to that horde this season.

This was the first time since 1969 he's failed to win in a quartet composed of the American and British opens, the Masters and the PGA. He builds his season around those four events. This was his last chance of the season. The PGA was the last of the four.

"I came close in three," said Nicklaus, who was third in the British Open, fourth in the Masters, second in this one and could have won any of the three.

"I came closest of all in this one."

"The thing that delights me," said Nicklaus, whose position as the world's premier player is now challenged on at least two fronts, "the thing that delights me is that I played well in this one."

"I really played well." Nicklaus, a wealthy man, now is concerned only with winning the major titles. But the scrupulously honest man refused to take refuge in a possible way out; he declined to give himself another chance.

The new Tournament Players Division championship will be played in Atlanta, Ga. at the end of this month. TPD Commissioner Deane Beman is pushing it as a major championship and hopes to have it take its place along side the Big Four.

Nicklaus doesn't go along with it. His Big Four season is over for the year.

"The TPD championship is just what it says it is," he said. "It is the championship of the tournament players, the windup and climax of the tour season.

"But it isn't world-wide in scope. To be a major championship I think a tournament has to be world-wide in scope. The others are. And that's what makes them the majors. By its very format, the TPD championship is not."

Nicklaus, winner of but one title this year—he won seven in each of the last two years—now is challenged as the world's best by both Trevino and South

Rentzel Catching; Strayhorn Running

By RON ROACH
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lance Rentzel sprinted, then cut quickly to the sideline and grabbed the pass before going out of bounds. The crowd in Memorial Coliseum cheered the eight-yard gain.

They applauded No. 19 as he jogged back to the Los Angeles Rams' huddle.

And the warm reception on his return to the National Football League was still evident after the game. Rentzel could laugh again, and even though the Rams lost 13-6 to Dallas Saturday night, no one could blame Lance for not sulking over the exhibition game defeat.

Rentzel is back after a one-year suspension for actions detrimental to the NFL—marijuana possession.

"The first pass I caught was a quick out," said the 30-year-old wide receiver starting his ninth NFL season. "I heard the fans yelling and it really made me feel great. They are really great fans. It made me feel like I'd made a touchdown instead of just catching a simple pass."

Even Les Strayhorn, whose 67-yard run with a Craig Morton pass set up the winning touchdown for Dallas, couldn't have been happier than Rentzel. Craig Morton, Rentzel's former Dallas teammate, threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Walt Garrison on the deciding score in the fourth quarter.

Morton took time to congratulate his old friend and former Cowboy teammate after the game.

Not even No. 28 of the Cowboys, rookie defensive back Gerrard Williams, could spoil the evening for Rentzel. They had angry words as one tried to beat the other to a pass.

"Jack Snow came back to the huddle and said, 'Watch it, twenty-eight is really throwing elbows,'" Rentzel said.

"I smiled a lot, and I laughed at him," said Lance of No. 28. "And I told him I'd be watching him play on World Football League TV."

A 90-day jail sentence and $2,000 fine have been stayed pending outcome of his appeal, on grounds of illegal search and seizure of his Hollywood apartment in early 1973. He pleaded guilty to possessing marijuana and the appeal was rejected by the California Court of Appeals. However, his attorney said the 1974 season will be over by the time the appeal is taken to higher courts for final verdict.

The Worry Clinic Emotions Can Be Controlled

Vera saved her marriage by the experiment below. Every actor and actress can attest to its value. So make it a rule of your life, for happiness is not a gift from outside nor a destination but a way of living!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.
CASE B-613: Vera G., aged 42, attended a banquet session that I recently addressed.

"Dr. Crane," she began as we sat together at the speaker's table, "I am deeply indebted to your newspaper column.

"As a young wife 20 years ago I became so blue and discouraged that I withdrew from my circle of friends and wanted to die.

But I was a faithful reader of your 'Worry Clinic' and on the very day I felt like committing suicide, you described another lonely, discouraged wife who might have been my twin.

"And you told her that everybody can be happy by following the right psychological formula.

"You said if we'd act the way we'd like to be, then soon we'd be the way we act!

"For you also stated that we cannot control our emotions by direct effort of our will.

"But our mind can regulate and direct our motions.

"So you urged us to go through the proper motions and then we'd quickly begin to feel the corresponding emotions.

"Well, Dr. Crane, I decided to try that rule of psychology.

"As a result, I put up a jolly 'front,' smiling at my companions and acting as if I were happy.

"To my surprise, I found that it wasn't long till I actually began to feel the way I acted.

"For my artificial gaiety, though a mere role adopted as if I were an actress, aroused in me the corresponding emotions.

"Throughout the intervening 20 years, I have spread that doctrine to many other wives who were moody, depressed and lonely.

"And it has transformed many of them, so I wish you'd again remind all your readers to adopt that law of psychology."

Head Dr. James
Dr. William James was our famous pioneer psychologist in America.

He taught his students at Harvard that if they'd assume the physical posture of a given emotion, they would soon begin to feel the emotion itself.

Actors and actresses have proved that fact, for they soon begin to "live" the roles they portray on the stage or before the movie cameras.

Remember, emotions are not subject to a direct act of our will. But motions are!

Our brain can thus make us turn up the corners of our mouth in a cheery grin, thus dispelling our former sour-puss expression.

A frightened person, by an act of his will, can also throw out his chest, double up his fists and assume the posture of a fighter.

'Superfan' Gets Public Into Act

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There are sports fans and there are sports fans. And then there's "Superfan" — Alan Minter, a Miami realtor. He argues a lot about sports in his spare time on radio and television.

He argues with fans each week night on radio station WINZ in Miami, but argued with them the past two football seasons Sunday nights on WPBT-TV and may do it again this season. Both shows are called "Superfan" and the formats are phone-in.

Minter, 34, who says he majored in history and psychology at the University of Miami, tries to avoid controversy, of course.

But he will say, for example, he thinks Howard Cosell is "absolutely horrible" or that ice hockey "is an idiot game ...

just get a bunch of middleweights and put 'em on ice. It's just a fight, anyway."

"Alan is quite knowledgeable about sports and a very opinionated guy, although he often changes his opinion as the occasion merits," opines George Dooley, president of WPBT and a longtime friend of Minter.

It was Dooley who first put him on the air, despite Minter's lack of experience.

Minter was placed in a living room set and told to talk sports with callers, live, for 30 minutes each Sunday after the day's pro-football jousts.

Dooley, who said he's considering a third "Superfan" season with Minter, says the idea was to have a controversial guy who talks like the average sports fan, not like a sports commentator.

And Minter, an avid sports fan who says he played a year of football and three of baseball in college, filled the bill, Dooley said.

In the early days, he added, Minter was wont to end abruptly a sports colloquy by telling the caller, "You're dumb, you swine, I don't ever want to hear from you again" and hang up.

Minter laughed. He conceded he was brash and occasionally rude in the beginning, but only to drum up viewer interest.

He says he doesn't deliberately try to insult a caller, but both shows "have kind of a bar-room atmosphere and they can insult me back. I'll take anything as long as they don't go too far and I don't go too far with them. I've had guys purposely bait me, but that's good, too."

Did he get many threats of bodily harm in the early days from outraged fans?

"No, as a matter of fact, I didn't," said Superfan. "I don't think I come off that way. I think most people go along with my act."

Suspended In Escape

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP)—A prison guard has been suspended after two prisoners escaped Friday from a restaurant in Virginia where the guard had taken them, officials said.

Guard Harrell J. Forbes told authorities at the Currituck County Prison Farm that the prisoners escaped while he was in the bathroom.

According to a prison official, the convicts persuaded Forbes to take them to Dee's Red Carpet Restaurant in nearby Chesapeake, Va., to visit the mother of one of them.

Police identified the escapees, who remain at large, as Acid West Jr., 29, of Chesapeake and Gilbert Gibbs, 30, of Wanchese, N.C. Officers said West was serving 10 years for breaking and entering and Gibbs was serving five years for assault with a deadly weapon.

Lt. Earnest Sutton, assistant superintendent of the camp, said Forbes had signed out the prisoners about 6 p.m. Friday to take them to a movie in Elizabeth City.

Sutton said escorted trips to movies are part of the medium security prison's rehabilitation program. However, he said that taking convicts across state lines is forbidden. It is also against regulations to take prisoners to restaurants where alcoholic beverages are sold, he said.

Forbes, who had been employed at the prison about a month, was placed on leave without pay pending an investigation.

"This thing will ultimately end in his dismissal or resignation," said Sutton.

Environmentalists' Plan Is Rejected

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Depreciation and out-of-pocket operating expenses on 35 North Carolina tobacco farms in 1973 averaged almost 59 cents per pound on leaf sold.

At last year's average market price of around 88 cents for tobacco, this left a margin of 29 cents per pound to compensate the farm owner-operator for his own time and investment.

The 59-cent cost figure does not include labor and management performed by the grower or any charges for his own quota, land or interest on his investment.

The highest cost categories were hired labor; poundage quotas rented-in to supplement the grower's own allotment, and depreciation.

"This analysis is based on 35 farms enrolled in North Carolina State University's Farm Business Records Program in 1973," said Dr. Charles R. Pugh, an extension economist at N. C. State University.

Pugh explained that the farms included in the study were not necessarily representative of all flue-cured tobacco farms in the state, especially in terms of size of farm. But, he added, the analysis of cost per pound may provide other growers some useful benchmarks for comparison.

Sales approximated 60,195 pounds per farm, well above the typical tobacco farm's level of production. Additional quota was leased-in on all but two of the farms studied.

On individual farms the proportion of total ordinary income accounted for by tobacco ranged from 12 to 100 percent. The overall average was 39 percent.

Calculation of tobacco costs involved all expenses directly earmarked for tobacco by the individual farm record, and a pro rata share of general farm expenses based on the proportion of ordinary income derived from tobacco.

On the 35 farms, average costs per pound of tobacco sold, in order of importance, were:

Hired labor, 11.2 cents; rent, 10.4 cents; depreciation, 7.1 cents; fertilizer, 5.2 cents; supplies, including chemicals, 4.5 cents; utilities, including curing fuel, 4.3 cents; repairs, 3.1 cents; interest, 3 cents; warehouse charges and miscellaneous, 3 cents; gas and other fuel, 2.6 cents; taxes, 1.1 cents; and machine hire, 0.8 cent.

Pugh said the difference between an 88-cent market price and a cost of 59 cents for direct cash outlay and depreciation "implies a return of 29 cents per pound for the farmer's own resources."

He added: "there is no direct measure of 'pure profits' unless a value could be placed on possible alternative uses of the farmer's resources. Factors that would have to be considered include rental value of the farmer's owned quota and cropland, value of unpaid family labor and the labor and management of the operator, and interest on owned equity."

The economist said there were "distinct prospects for net returns per pound of tobacco to decline in 1974."

An overall increase of 10 percent in the basic flue-cured quota "may inhibit significant price increases," Pugh said, but indications are that 1974 cost rates will be substantially higher for fertilizer, gasoline, curing fuel, chemicals derived from petroleum, machinery and labor.

The 1974 Regional Graded Feeder Calf Sales will get underway September 12 with a sale in Rocky Mount. This year there will be 35 yearling steer and feeder calf sales held across North Carolina. All cattle sold in these sales will have been vaccinated, male animals castrated, horned cattle dehorned, and in most sales, the heifers will be guaranteed open.

With high production costs these sales should be of interest to more producers this year since it has been a rule for these sales to average $3-$4 per cwt higher than at normal auctions. There is a deadline for consignments and also the cattle must have been vaccinated at least 15 days prior to the sale.

There are also several purebred swine sales coming up during August. The first is the North Carolina State Performance Tested Boar Sale in Smithfield on August 13 at 6:30 p.m. This is an all breed sale of boars grown from approximately 70 pounds to 220 pounds under the same environment at the North Carolina Swine Evaluation Station at Clayton. Figures on Feed Conversion, Average Daily Gain, Back Fat and Loin Eye are available.

The next two sales will be on August 14 and 15 at which time North Carolina Yorkshire and Hampshire breeders will hold their annual sales. The York sale will be at the Goldsboro Fairgrounds on August 14 at 7 p.m. The Hamp sale will be at the Wilson County Fairgrounds on August 15 at 7 p.m.

The North Carolina Duroc breeders will hold their sale in Rocky Mount on August 29 at 1 p.m.

Although these are uncertain times for livestock production, it seems that as we look into the past when the situation looked the worse, a bright future was not far off. Let me suggest that if you are planning to stay in the livestock business these sales might be a very good time to get some new young blood into your herd.

Missionaries For Mormons In City

BRUCE BARKER

DARREL RATLIFF

Elder Bruce Barker of Thousand Oaks, Calif., and Elder Darrel Ratliff of Madisonville, Ky., are the local missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

According to Elder Ratliff, they work under the directions of the North Carolina-Greensboro Mission, Greensboro, and are two of 160 missionaries, mostly in their early twenties, serving in North Carolina. The Mormon Church has over 18,000 missionaries serving in similar capacities throughout the world the young man said.

"We want to share a religious message with the people about our belief in Jesus Christ, the Church we represent, and some programs our church has such as the family home evening program, the welfare program, and the genealogical program."

Elder Barker said. "Our message is different from the message of any other Christian Church."

In order to tell people this message, he said the church calls about 9,000 young men and women each year to leave their schooling or work for a period of two years, and devote their full time to the job. Like all workers in the church, they are not paid by the church for their services, but are entirely self-supporting. When their service is concluded, they will return to college, military service, or their chosen vocations.

The church in this area is located on ECU campus, Rawl Building, room 31. For more information call 758-1203 after 9:30 p.m.

Elder Barker and Elder Ratliff reside at 118 N. Harding St.

MTI Qualifying As Community College

WILLIAMSTON—On August 8, Dr. E. M. Hunt, President of Martin Technical Institute, received notification that the State Board of Education in Raleigh has unanimously approved the application of Martin Technical Institute to become a fully comprehensive Community College by the opening of the fall quarter in September 1975.

According to Dr. Hunt this approval is the culmination of a series of successful steps initiated several months ago by the Board of Trustees of Martin Technical Institute with the purpose of insuring full community college status for MTI as soon as its current dynamic building program is completed in 1975.

Dr. Hunt emphasized that he deeply appreciated the strong and enthusiastic support given to Martin Technical Institute in its difficult struggle to become a community college. Staunch supporters have been the Williamson Chamber of Commerce, The Williamson Town Council and the Board of Commissioners, the Board of Education, the civic organizations, and the people of Martin County.

He continued his remarks with the statement that the final objective which must be surmounted before community college status for Martin Technical Institute can become a reality is the appropriation of funds by the N. C. Legislature to finance the program for the first two years. After the two years the program will be funded by the regular formula which is based on student enrollment the same as all other programs.

Youth Council Meeting Set

The Greenville Youth Council will meet Wednesday, Aug. 14, at the Elm street Gym. The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

The University of Hawaii graduated its first class in 1912, conferring four bachelor's degrees.

Soil Conservation District and Drainage District sponsors of the Chicod Creek Small Watershed Project have rejected a plan prepared by environmental groups to settle the lawsuit which has halted the channelization of 66 miles of Chicod Creek in eastern North Carolina.

The channelization is to be carried out by the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) as part of the Chicod Creek Small Watershed Project. The sponsors of the project are the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District, Beaufort Soil and Water Conservation District, Pitt County Board of Commissioners and Pitt County Drainage District No. 9.

Environmentalists oppose channelization of the Chicod because it will destroy fish and wildlife habitat, increase erosion and ruin water quality. Sponsors of the Chicod project demand channelization to improve drainage in the watershed. A major beneficiary of the project is the Weyerhaeuser Corporation, a multibillion dollar forest products conglomerate.

The detailed plan prepared by environmentalists provides for: —clearing of dead trees, debris and other blockages in the stream to improve drainage;

—joint planning of the work program with the SCS state and federal natural resource agencies to protect fish and wildlife resources from unnecessary destruction.

In rejecting the environmentalists' plan, the project sponsors restated their determination to utilize broadscale channelization, the most destructive possible alternative for achieving the alleged benefits of the project.

By the process of stream channelization, heavy earth moving equipment such as bulldozers and power shovels gouge out the bottom of the watercourse. A stream's natural meanderings down through the watershed are destroyed by excavated shortcuts. All the trees along the banks are cut down and undergrowth is stripped up to 100 feet from the channel's edges. The gutted remains of the streambed are heaped on the banks. Neighboring swamps and wetlands are drained. A living stream is turned into a sterile and muddy ditch.

As Tom Barlow of the Natural Resources Defense Council said, "The Soil Conservation District and Drainage District sponsors of the Chicod project are determined to slaughter Chicod Creek. We anticipate that as a result of this battle citizens across the country are going to realize that Soil Conservation Districts have become agencies for the destruction of America's streams and rivers. They have led the Soil Conservation Service to abandon its traditional role as protector of our nation's water resource areas.

"Each year these Districts force the Soil Conservation Service to squander hundreds of millions of taxpayers dollars to ruin the environmental quality of our nation's watercourses. The time has come for the American taxpayer to put a halt to this devastating use of his tax dollars. It is time for citizens concerned with the protection of America's water resource areas to take control of these Soil Conservation Districts."

The Chicod project has been suspended by federal court order since November, 1971. In May, 1974, the SCS released a second environmental impact statement for the project. The court had ruled that the first impact statement the SCS prepared for the project was an inadequate explanation of the environmental damages that would result from channelization of the Chicod.

In subsequent phases of the lawsuit, the environmental groups will challenge the accuracy of the new EIS, the cost-benefit evaluation the SCS uses to justify the project.

The Chicod Creek case has become a major test case of the channelization activities of the SCS. To date the SCS has destroyed 6,000 miles of stream across the nation. At the direction of Soil Conservation Districts, over 12,000 miles of watercourse in 400 projects sponsored by Soil Conservation Districts are authorized for channelization and waiting construction funding.

The environmental groups suing to halt channelization of the Chicod are the Natural Wildlife Federation, Pamlico Tar Conservation Coalition and Friends of the Earth.

The Schedule For Holsouser

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Jim Holsouser returns to Raleigh today from a GOP strategy seminar in Chicago, but he will leave the state later this week.

Holsouser's schedule, released Sunday, shows only two public appearances in Raleigh this week.

He will make a "major industrial announcement" at a luncheon Tuesday and speak to state government interns Wednesday.

Then he leaves for Georgia. After addressing the Lutheran Youth Regional Gathering in Decatur, he will attend a three-day conference on the future of the South in Helen, Ga.

N.C. GOP Leans To Sen. Goldwater

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., seems to be a popular choice among North Carolina Republicans and conservatives to be vice president of the United States.

Goldwater, an arch conservative who was the GOP presidential candidate in the 1964 election, won the backing over the weekend of the North Carolina Young Americans for Freedom.

And, the Arizona senator also was praised by top state Republican officials as a good possible choice.

Richard Miller, chairman of the conservative YAF which has 2,500 members in the state, directed the group's local chapters to send telegrams and petitions to the White House on Goldwater's behalf.

State Republican chairman Thomas Bennett, Republican Senate candidate William Stevens and the newly-nominated GOP attorney general candidate James H. Carson Jr. said they would support whomever President Ford chooses for the No. 2 post.

But they added that of the names frequently mentioned to be under possible consideration, they thought Goldwater would be most acceptable to North Carolina Republicans.

NEW YORK (AP)— Stock market prices slipped slightly in very quiet trading today in an atmosphere of watchful waiting for President Ford's address to Congress tonight.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 4.77 at 772.53, and losers held a narrow edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said investors' worries over persistent inflation and high interest rates continued to set the tone for the market.

But they noted one favorable factor—an apparent psychological lift for some investors after the change-over in the White House late last week.

By one statistical measure, there were signs of encouragement among small investors even as the market was declining gradually Thursday and Friday. That measure, odd-lot transactions—or trades of less than 100 shares—showed a balance in favor of purchases over sales both days.

For about the last four years, odd-lot traders have consistently, month by month, sold more shares than they bought.

Polaroid was the most-active NYSE issue, down 1/8 at 25 1/2. Aztec Oil & Gas, mentioned favorably in a Barron's magazine article, climbed 1 1/2 to 13 3/4.

RENO, Nevada—North Carolina Superior Court Judge Robert Browning of Greenville, N.C. has completed a four-week course at the National College of the State Judiciary at the University of Nevada here.

Interruption Of Power Possible

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—The president of Duke Power Co. says the nation could suffer an interruption of power if the present rate of inflation continues.

"And you've seen what a power interruption can do to a country during the coal strike in Great Britain," Carl Horn, Jr., said in a television interview Sunday. "It virtually shuts down the economy."

Horn said utilities were hoping for "some upturn in 1975." He said a number of power companies have not been able to raise the capital they need to complete plants under construction.

Dozen Dead In Traffic Count

By The Associated Press
A dozen persons, including three pedestrians, lost their lives during the past weekend in traffic accidents across North Carolina, the highway patrol reported.

The latest victims raised the state's highway death toll for the year to 876, compared with 1,116 a year ago.

Carl H. Coble, 28, of Ramseur, was killed Saturday when struck by a car in Randolph County. Leslie Jones, 60, of Williamston was struck and killed by a car near his hometown Saturday.

The third pedestrian fatality was Willie F. Bynum, 20, of Wilson. Bynum was struck by a bus on U.S. 301 in Wilson County.

Michael F. Quevillon, 22, of Camp Lejeune, died Sunday when his car ran off N.C. 24 near Cape Carteret and hit a tree.

A 14-year-old Franklinton boy, Jerry Wayne Gooch, was killed Saturday night when the car in which he was riding ran off a rural road in Granville County. The youth was thrown from the car, but the vehicle ran over him, the patrol said.

Raymond Andrews, 63, of Rt. 5 Chapel Hill was killed Saturday when his car collided with a train in Orange County.

James Thomas Sizemore, 36, of Summerfield was killed near Greensboro when his motorcycle ran off the road and crashed.

William Penn Glover, 59, of Snow Camp, died in a one-car crash in Chatham County.

Soviet Says Policy Same

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union has affirmed its intent to pursue the process of U.S.-U.S.S.R. detente with President Ford.

"The Soviet Union will continue in the future to maintain with firmness and persistence a policy line towards further improvement of Soviet-American relations," declared Pravda, the voice of the ruling Communist party.

The Kremlin had earlier expressed "deep satisfaction" with Ford's foreign policy plans. Sunday's statement, however, was the first specifically on the future of detente since the resignation of former President Richard M. Nixon.

"The destiny of the world depends to a large degree on the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. and the process of detente," Pravda said.

Among Ford's first moves as president was to send Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev a private message, presumably pledging to follow the foreign policy course set by Nixon.

The Pravda statement indirectly expressed hope that Ford could steer the 1972 Soviet-American trade pact through Congress, where it has been blocked by demands for eased Soviet emigration policies.

The newspaper stressed that the changing of presidents was an internal American affair. But it added that the event could not be ignored by the world.

Predicts Ford To Head Ticket

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott predicts that President Ford will head the GOP national ticket in 1976, despite Ford's past assertions that he's not interested.

Scott, appearing Sunday on "Face the Nation" on CBS television, said, "Conditions may force him to run."

The Pennsylvania Republican added: "I rather think he will run... I think the party will force it."

When Ford was nominated to be vice president last year, he said he would not run for president in 1976.
