

$220 Million Facility Near Aurora

Huge New Phosphate Plant In Beaufort

WASHINGTON—Officials of the North Carolina Phosphate Corporation announced plans for a $220 million phosphate mining and manufacturing facility near Aurora, today.

N.C. Phosphate made the announcement at a breakfast meeting here this morning attended by local civic, business and industrial leaders.

North Carolina Phosphate, with headquarters in Beaufort County, is jointly owned by Kennecott Copper Corp. of New York City and Agrico Chemical Company (a subsidiary of The Williams Companies of Tulsa, Oklahoma).

James Harrington,

Secretary of the Department of Natural and Economic Resources, who attended the morning meeting, said the $220 million investment announcement is the "largest initial investment announcement for non-utilities companies ever made in North Carolina." He noted that the N.C. Phosphate represents "an opportunity to expand the opportunities for Eastern North Carolina." Grosz said the facility would provide more than 600 new jobs initially.

Construction contracts, Grosz said, will be let following studies to assure that environmental considerations can be satisfied. He said a target date for the beginning of construction has been set for "the latter part of 1975."

The project under study would be located near Aurora in Beaufort County. The mine—a strip mining operation—would be capable of producing four to five million tons of phosphate rock a year. There are an estimated 300 million tons of phosphate rock in the 16,000 acres of reserve owned by Agrico and Kennecott.

In addition to the mine, a phosphoric acid plant with an initial capacity of 400,000 to 600,000 tons a year is planned as part of the project and about 1 million tons of diammonium phosphate and ammonium polyphosphate would be produced.

Officials said the development of the mine and plant will help meet a growing world-wide shortage of phosphate, a necessary fertilizer ingredient.

The Williams Companies of Tulsa, Oklahoma, is principally an agricultural chemical and agronomy company, while Kennecott, headquartered in New York City, is a major producer of non-ferrous and precious metals.

Agrico, a Williams subsidiary, has been a major

Pres. Ford Plans National Summit Parley On Inflation

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is moving swiftly to plan an economic summit conference to battle the inflation he labeled "Domestic Enemy No. 1."

And he is pressing Congress to act within 10 days to revive the government's tools to monitor wages and prices.

Congressional Democrats joined Republicans in applauding the tone of Ford's presidential keynote speech Monday night. But some said they will have to be convinced the new President can find the correct cure for the nation's soaring prices.

Ford spoke to a packed House chamber and millions across the country, calling on Congress to join "in getting this country reved up and moving" and pledging to seek a balanced federal budget in the fiscal year starting next July 1.

He never referred directly to the Watergate scandal that drove Richard M. Nixon from the presidency last week but pledged, "There will be no illegal tapings, eavesdropping, buggings or break-ins by my administration." And Ford mentioned his predecessor's name only once, declaring he has supported and will continue "the outstanding foreign policy of President Nixon."

He made no mention of perhaps his most immediate problem—the choice of a new vice president. Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said earlier Monday Ford is "nowhere near" making a decision.

As he emerged from his house in suburban Alexandria, Va., this morning, Ford was asked if he has chosen a vice president.

"No, no, one thing at a time," he said with a laugh.

At the invitation of the Fords, the former president's daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and her husband David joined the new First Family in the Executive Gallery. The former President watched at his San Clemente, Calif., home and wired Ford: "Congratulations on a Splendid Speech."

On the floor of the House chamber, an unusually large number of congressmen and senators were present to hear the 38th President outline his goals for the two-year, five-month remainder of Nixon's shattered presidency.

Ford proposed little specific legislation—the wage-price monitoring authority now and a health insurance measure before the end of the year.

And he said the nation's voters should support the candidates this November "who consistently vote for tough decisions to cut the cost of government, restrain federal spending and bring inflation under control."

Waves of cheers and applause thundered across the cavernous chamber as Ford was escorted in. And members of both parties cheered when the 25-year congressional veteran declared his motto towards Congress: "Communication, conciliation, compromise and cooperation."

But the applause was noticeably louder from Ford's fellow Republicans, than from the majority Democrats, when the President pledged to fight for a balanced budget while maintaining a strong defense.

"It's going to be quite a trick to balance the budget by fiscal 1976, and not cut the Pentagon budget," said Sen. Phillip A. Hart, D-Mich.

"He said the things the country wanted to hear. His big task now is to find the solutions," said Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said "it was exactly what the country needs. I agree with what he said on the economy and the defense budget."

In urging an economic summit conference, to be composed of congressmen, senators, businessmen, labor leaders and executive branch officials, Ford acknowledged he was adopting a plan first pushed by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and later pushed by five freshman senators.

"Neither I nor my staff have much time just now for letter writing," he said. "So I will respond in person. I accept your suggestion and I will personally preside."

The President declared he plans to hold the meeting "at an early date and in full view of the American public. They are as anxious to get the right answers as we are."

Aides said later the target date is within two weeks and added that it may be open to national television coverage.

Ford, an aide said, "is really pushing this ... he wants it to be not just a show thing, not just a collection of people listening to speeches."

In urging reactivation of the Cost of Living Council, without economic controls, Ford picked up a proposal made last April by some Democratic senators and last month by Nixon. He said it "will let us monitor wages and prices to expose abuses."

Earlier in the day, Ford criticized General Motors Corp. for the 9.5 per cent increase it announced.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

REAL NEEDS FURNISHINGS

The REAL Crisis Intervention Center is moving soon to a large unfurnished house at 1117 Evans Street here and is in need of furnishings, including the following: desks and chairs, desk lamps, pole lamps, office equipment, occasional chairs, large rugs (9 by 12 feet or larger), drapery and curtain rods, a refrigerator, a hot plate and coffee pot, a lawn mower, and fix-up materials like tools, paint, and wood.

REAL's in a crisis," Director Marge Baney says. "If you can help, please call us at 758-HELP. All donations are tax-deductible, she reminded.

WESTERN UNION IN A BIND

Why doesn't a city the size of Greenville have a better Western Union service? I haven't been able to reach anybody at the local office lately. A.J.

Western Union here needs to move to a new location—badly, according to WU employee Sarah Davis. It's now in a store building at the corner of Fifth and Cotanche that has been vacated by The Happy Store. A rush work order has been filed in Raleigh, but the moving of teletypes and other equipment is pending. "It may be tomorrow or it may be two weeks from now," Miss Davis said.

The new location will be in The Happy Store on Fourteenth Street. "The only time I can guarantee someone will be at the Fifth Street location is from 9 to 10 a.m. each day," she said.

Telegrams may be sent by calling the toll-free number, 800-257-2231, and charging the cost to one's home phone. Referrals for sending of money orders are made to other WU offices in nearby towns.

"This inconvenience is temporary and we regret any difficulty it causes our customers," Miss Davis said.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

TREASURY NOTES AND BONDS AVAILABLE

Russell Lee, vice-president for retail banking of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. reports that some treasury notes and bonds, mentioned in the Aug. 8 edition of Hotline, may be purchased through the "secondary market" for those interested in investing in them.

According to Lee, private individuals who possess the bonds of notes may wish to sell them and individuals wishing to purchase the bonds or notes may do so by contacting stock brokers or banks. An additional slight charge will be required for the purchase of the bonds or notes on the secondary market, but a return interest rate of around eight one-half per cent is expected, according to Lee.

Urgent Note To Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Henry Tasca went to Premier Constantine Caramanlis' hotel suite at 6 a.m. today to deliver an urgent message from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, diplomatic sources reported.

The sources said they did not know the contents of Kissinger's message. But there was speculation it concerned the Cyprus negotiations in Geneva.

Word spread in Geneva that Turkey had given Greece 24 hours to accept the Turkish proposal for division of Cyprus into autonomous Greek and Turkish Cypriot cantons, including one of more than 600 square miles around Kyrenia. But a Turkish spokesman said the reported warning from Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit did "not amount to an ultimatum."

The United States has been urging Greece to abstain from military action despite Turkey's invasion of Cyprus and the Turks' refusal to retreat at the negotiating table in Geneva. The Greek armed forces are already on a war footing since mobilization was ordered July 20, and today they were reported placed in an advanced state of alert in view of the new situation.

Wilson County Jurors Ordered For Branch Trial

By CARLL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer

Superior Court Judge Perry Martin ruled yesterday that 150 prospective jurors will be brought in from Wilson County in October for the selection of a jury to hear the Lynwood Branch murder case.

Martin made the ruling Monday when a team of five defense lawyers representing four defendants in the case presented this and other motions to Martin.

Trial date has been set for Oct. 14. Defense lawyers filed a motion to either have a change of venue (location) of the trial or that a special jury be brought in to hear the case because of what they contended was an excessive amount of publicity by the news media in Pitt County about the case.

Charged in the March 29 slaying of a 36-year-old Pitt County businessman, Lynwood Noah Branch, are the victim's wife, Connie Hardee Branch, 29, a Kinston crop duster, Roy Lee Sullivan, 29, and two auto salesmen from Virginia, Matthew Jack Wheaton, 42, of Chesapeake, Va., and Harold Payne Wiseman, 39, of Virginia Beach, Va..

Sullivan was arrested on April 23, while Wheaton and Wiseman were taken into custody on April 24. The fourth suspect in the case, Connie Hardee Branch, arrested on April 26.

Mrs. Branch was released on a $100,000 bond on May 15, while the other three suspects in the case are being held in the Pitt County Jail without privilege of bond.

Wiseman and Wheaton are charged with murder and conspiracy to murder, while Sullivan and Mrs. Branch are being charged with conspiracy to murder and being accessories before the fact of murder.

In arguing for a change of trial location yesterday, Mrs. Branch's attorneys, Milton Williamson and M. E. Cavendish contended the case had received more publicity than any other in Pitt County.

Similar motions were filed by the attorneys for the other defendants, Mark Owens representing Wheaton, Fred Harrison representing Sullivan and David Reid representing Wiseman.

Several witnesses were called by the defense lawyers as they tried to establish the fact that an impartial jury could not be found in Pitt County.

Questioned extensively was WNCT-TV news director, Gordon Edwards, concerning a film Edwards made when Wiseman was returned to North Carolina from Virginia on May 14.

Defense attorney Cavendish also produced as evidence of extensive publicity, a file of newspaper clippings on the case.

After reading the clippings, Martin commented that he saw the articles as newsworthy and that they "expressed no opinion," on the guilt or innocence of the accused.

Special prosecutor Louis Gaylord, Jr. argued that it was an insult to the people of Pitt County to assume that an impartial jury could not be found.

After ruling on the motion, Martin retired to his chambers to hear further motions.

91-Year-Old Adding A New Degree August 25

NEW DEGREE AT AGE 91— Frederick B. Noble, 91, will be one of the oldest persons to receive a college degree when he steps up on August 25

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Frederick B. Noble says his age made it easier for him to earn his master of arts degree. Noble, 91, says he's lived through much of the history he studied in class. "I know I'm old, but I don't feel old," said Noble, an attorney.

Nobel has nearly completed three years of graduate study at Jacksonville University and will receive his diploma at commencement on Aug. 25. "My main field is history," he said. "We studied modern European and American history and now are into the New South — 1913 to the present.

I've lived through all of that."

Noble, who earned his first college degree 72 years ago, goes to his law office every morning, takes a noon nap and studies or attends class in the evening.

"I don't find it hard to study, but it is hard to retain information for some time," Noble said. "I can memorize it and keep it long enough for the courses, however."

Noble, born in Preston, Md., earned his bachelor's degree in 1902 from Washington College in Maryland and a law degree from Harvard University in 1907. He has practiced law in Jacksonville since 1908.

Moose Holding A 'Family Day'

The Greenville Bicentennial program was discussed before the Greenville Moose Lodge Monday evening, as were lodge plans for a Family Day on Wednesday and other activities for August.

Lodge Governor Jack Morgan reminded games for the Moose family children would begin at 4:00 p.m., a hot dog picnic lunch at 6:00, and watermelon and more games at 7:00. The pool will be open for the occasion from 10:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Stuart Buchanan, director of the Bicentennial Participation Committee appeared at the meeting to remind that a bicentennial celebration was something that happened only once in a lifetime and the program was designed to make it an occasion of fun for all.

The speaker gave a schedule of planned events and voiced the commission's hope that men and women would join in the spirit of the occasion by dressing in appropriate style of the past. He added there would be a "Constable Brigade" responsible for the issuing of citations, a gaol, and "court" would be held each evening of the celebration. A shaving permit, he said would be available for the reluctant, the unwilling and the unable to grow facial hair.

Attention was called to a special dinner-dance on the evening of August 24.

Paralyzed Cop Is Determined

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Sgt. Barry Worley is determined to resume a normal life, and return to police work. Shot in the back and paralyzed from the waist down at a rock concert on July 13, Worley is confined to a bed at the Charlotte Rehabilitation Hospital.

"In about two months I'm gonna run out either the front door or the back door of this place. I don't know which one, but it's going to be one or the other," he says.

Worley, a city Park and Recreation Commission policeman, was shot five times without apparent reason by a man armed with a small caliber pistol. James W. Parks, 20, of Gastonia, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. A trial is pending.

"Physically, I feel like a million dollars from the waist up," says Worley, who hopes someday to resume his career as a policeman for the recreation department.

"The two months is just a goal I've set for myself," he explained. "Maybe I shouldn't, but I feel better with something to shoot for."

He has received more than 3,000 cards and letters since he was shot, and the one he values most is from Alabama Gov. George Wallace, also a paralyzed victim of an assassin's bullet.

"He said his condition was similar to mine, but I'm a lot younger than he is and I should be able to jump back better than he can," the 27-year-old Worley said of his letter from Wallace.

"He commended me for my spirit. I got mama (Mrs. Vivian Worley) to get a frame for his letter."

Two bullets from the pistol struck Worley in the left shoulder. One hit him in the right forearm. One hit him in the right hip and one in the spine.

Chosen to police the concert because of his many young friends in the community who attend such events, Worley says, "I enjoyed trying to talk to the kids."

He says when he first started policing events attended by longhaired youths, "I tried busting some of the kids. It didn't seem to do much good. Then I tried talking to them."

"When I found hard drugs, I made arrests. But when it was marijuana or something like that, I'd try to handle it on the spot. I'd flush it down the commode in front of them and I'd talk to them."

When Worley was taken to Charlotte Memorial Hospital in critical condition after the shooting, crowds of the youngsters he had befriended gathered on the lawn to await word of his condition.

Some began a fund drive to help pay the medical bills, and Worley's father, Jack Reid Worley, says nearly $3,000 has been contributed.

"To think they thought that much of me," Worley says. "I just couldn't believe it."

His doctors were unavailable to discuss his chances of walking again, but both his parents say the doctors have been pessimistic.

Morrison Award For Speight

MANTEO—Gov. James E. Holshouser will present the coveted Morrison Award for outstanding contributions to the arts to Dr. Francis Speight preceding the performance of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama here on Friday, August 23.

Speight, artist-in-residence at East Carolina University and a native of Bertie County, is the 1973 recipient of the Morrison Award. Announcement of the award was made at the annual winter meeting of the Roanoke Island Historical Association, producers of "The Lost Colony."

The Morrison Award, given by the people of Dare County in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Fred W. Morrison, is awarded annually to a North Carolinian who has made significant contributions to the arts, and who "has demonstrated the highest standards of excellence, significant achievement and creative accomplishment."

Sam Ragan of Southern Pines, chairman of the Morrison Award Committee, said that Speight had met all of these qualifications. In the award citation he said: "A prize-winning artist with a national reputation as painter and teacher, Francis Speight has helped establish a new atmosphere of creativity on the campus of East Carolina University and in many other communities across the state. His influence as artist-in-residence is well recognized, and in addition, through his long-time service on the North Carolina Arts Council he has helped further the arts in all their aspects throughout North Carolina. By his example, his work, and his creative ideas, he is a worthy recipient of the Morrison Award."

Mrs. Morrison is producer of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama and served for eleven years as chairman of the RIHA. A native of Laurinburg, she and Dr. Morrison live in Washington, D.C. and Kill Devil Hills.

Other winners of the Morrison Award have been playwright Paul Green, conductor Benjamin Swalin, actor Andy Griffith, director Joe Layton, and Dr. and Mrs. Mary Semans of Durham.

Besides Ragan, other members of the Morrison Award Committee are President William C. Friday of the University of North Carolina, Mrs. Hargrove Bowles of Greensboro, Mrs. Ernest Ives of Southern Pines, Mrs. Terry Sanford of Durham and Huntington Cairns of Washington, D.C. and Kitty Hawk.

Francis Speight was born in Bertie County in 1896, the son of a Baptist minister and farmer. He attended Wake Forest College for two years before service in the Army during World War I. Following the war he enrolled in the Corcoran School of Art, followed by five years at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia. He was a member of the faculty at the Pennsylvania Academy for the Fine Arts from 1925 until 1961 when he returned to his native state to become artist-in-residence at East Carolina University.

In 1964 he received the North Carolina Award, and in 1960 the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts granted him its highest award, the Academy Gold Medal of Honor. He has won many prizes, including the First Altman Prize for Landscape, the Hallgarten Prize, the Sesnan Gold Medal, the Obris Prize and the Kohnstramm Prize.

Speight's paintings are in the permanent collection of the Metropolitan Museum of New York City, the Greenville Art Center, the Boston Museum, the Toronto Art Gallery, the Norton Gallery of Art at Palm Beach, the North Carolina Art Museum and more than a dozen others. He has been a member of the National Academy of Design since 1940 and in 1960 the select National Institute of Arts and Letters elected him to membership.

He holds honorary doctorate degrees from Wake Forest University and Holy Cross.

Dr. Speight is married to the former Sarah Blakeslee, also an accomplished painter and art instructor. They have two children, Thomas Blakeslee Speight and Elizabeth Sharrock Speight.

Terrorists Leave Town

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Palestinian guerrillas began pulling out of a Lebanese town near the Israeli border today after other residents protested that the terrorists were bringing Israeli raids down on them, Beirut newspapers reported.

The reports said the withdrawal from Rachaya Foukhar was ordered by Yasir Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Israeli jets bombed and strafed the town three miles from the Israeli border last week. Five persons were killed and 27 were wounded.

Israel said Rachaya Foukhar was the guerrilla capital of the Arkoub region of southern Lebanon, an area the Israelis call Fatahland after the Al Fatah guerrillas because it is a guerrilla stronghold and a staging area for raids into Israel.

The Beirut press said most of Rachaya Foukhar's 3,000 Lebanese left after the air attacks and besieged government offices in nearby Marjayoun, demanding that the guerrillas leave their town.

Premier Takeddin Solh held a midnight meeting with Arafat Monday and afterward announced the guerrilla leader was ordering the evacuation.

Bald Head Deal OK'd

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The North Carolina Council of State has given its approval to a tentative deal in which the state would receive ownership of 10,000 acres of marsh and beach at Bald Head Island.

The council approval, granted Monday, is contingent on the outcome of a suit filed by conservationists against the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The Corps had agreed earlier this year to give Bald Head's owner, Carolina Cape Fear Corp., a marina permit if it ceded the 10,000 acres to the state. The corporation would retain about 3,000 acres of high ground, the most suitable for development.

If the conservationists win their suit and block the marina permit, the deal is off.

The lands to come under state control include all of the marshes in the Bald Head complex, located in the mouth of the Cape Fear River near Southport.

They also include several smaller islands and a strand of beach from New Inlet to Bluff Island.

Discrimination In Pay Denied

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Attorneys for J.C. Penney Co., Inc., have denied that the department store chain pays men more than women performing the equal jobs at its stores in Winston-Salem and High Point.

The denial was contained in documents filed Monday in U.S. District Court here and was in response to two suits filed by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Find True Bill On Rape Charge

A True Bill of Indictment has been returned by the Pitt County Grand Jury charging a Pitt County businessman with rape.

Charged was George Hawley, 44, of 108 Josie Lane, the operator of the Stokes Antique and Auction House.

The indictment alleges that a 14-year-old juvenile was raped on July 16 at Hawley's place of business.

Trial has been set for the Aug. 20 session of Superior Court. Hawley is free on a $15,000 bond.

Names Can Cause Mistake

By CHRIS SILVA
BROOKFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "Do you, Christopher, take Robert...?"

I shuddered when the minister said that during our marriage ceremony 18 years ago. Christopher may have been okay as a moniker for Columbus. But I'm female, 5-foot-1, and for over 30 years I've been answering to that male tag. Life has been a succession of miseries.

Even though the women's liberation movement has opened many doors previously closed to us females, I believe sex discrimination has its place when it comes to names.

Ever since I started school I have tried to sneak by with only the nickname Chris, but officials, of course, must have your full name. So I have lived in constant dread of roll calls and introductions.

In high school I was enrolled in a boys' physical education group.

It took some tall talking to get out of that one.

At another point I almost wound up going to a boys' prep school. Seems they wanted me on the swimming team. A modern gal would now use these mistakes to her advantage.

Throughout my schooling, including my college days at Northeastern University, I have always had to engage in long explanations to wriggle out of embarrassing situations that arose from my legal name.

"Your parents were expecting a boy, of course?" people ask after looks of astonishment. I turn my usual deep crimson and may or may not explain that my parents were not expecting a male, but gave me the name Christopher on purpose.

As artists they thought Christopher Hay, my maiden name, would be a good pen name for an artist or writer. Even marriage didn't help. It only changed the maiden name to Silva.

As education writer for WINE radio, my voice behind the mike is strictly female. Listeners would be in shock, despite equal rights, to hear a soprano voice saying "This is Christopher Silva, WINE radio news."

To save our three children embarrassment, the name Chris has been used frequently. And their names were chosen with care, the boys Mark and Eric, and our daughter Lynne Anne. I didn't want them to suffer as I did from a name problem.

For positive identification of my gender I have to carry my driver's license and birth certificate at all times. Both state that I am female.

When I cash a check I always have to go to the same bank because they know I'm not trying to pull a fast one by cashing some male's check with a forged endorsement.

I used to get loads of mail addressed to Mr. Hay. The mail order houses and department stores used to haunt me to buy men's socks, shirts, hats and shoes.

One pamphlet exhorted me to join the YMCA, extolling the

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The way everyone talks about recycling you'd think it was something new. Big Deal. Our family has been doing it for years.

We never throw anything away... clothes, furniture, appliances, toys, canning jars, maternity clothes... cars... we just call up the family and say, "I'm weeding out my treasures so if you want to look through before I give them the pitch".... and before you can hang up there are 30 cars in the driveway.

More junk has been relieved from the jaws of the Goodwill and Salvation Army then anyone wants to admit.

When I was first married it wasn't unusual for me to drop the phone and head for the car shouting, "Pat is getting rid of her hot water heater." My husband said I clocked more hours in a U-Haul than I did in my marriage bed.

There wasn't anything too tacky to be used again. A maternity dress with a knot in the drawstring... a sleeping bag without a zipper... a freezer that heated up... a washer with parts available only behind the Iron Curtain... a dress that could be worn and used to dust the piano at the same time... a pair of boots with a hole in the sole... all were goodies that we fought over like feeding time at the zoo.

I guess nothing generated more excitement than when one member of the family bought something new. I recall when my Aunt Louise bought a new chair, everyone moved up a chair. Her daughter inherited her old chair that had survived three cats in diapers. With the cat chair, her chair with the faded slipcover went to my mother. Mother's chair with the grease stains from Dad's hair dressing went to my sister. Her chair with the spring that came through the cushions came to me and my chair with the rip in the cording went to my cousin, Virginia. Her chair... well, all in all, 15 people played the game of musical chairs.

The handing down of clothes was probably worse. Wearing a

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Tuesday, August 13, 1974—3 discarded dress out was like going to a Hollywood wedding. It was risky to make any comment as everyone at one time or another had had custody of the dress.

The other day I collected a large pile of stuff in the garage. "I think the economy is worse in this country than it has ever been before," I said to my husband.

"What makes you say that?" "Look at the quality of this junk," I said picking up a Nehru jacket.

"This stuff looks familiar," he said.

"It should," I sighed. "It's EXACTLY the same pile of junk I offered ten years ago and now it has all come back full cycle. I don't know what the world is coming to."

American version of an Italian recipe.
6 tablespoons peanut oil
1/4 cup walnuts
1/2 cup grated Parmesan

cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1/2 cup fresh basil leaves
3 cloves garlic, crushed
1/2 pound spaghetti, cooked and drained

In an electric blender whirl together the oil, walnuts, Parmesan, salt and pepper; add basil and garlic; whirl until flecked with green. Toss with hot spaghetti until thoroughly mixed. Serve at once. Makes 3 servings.

He's Not Happy With Note-Happy Wife

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a wonderful woman and I appreciate her many good qualities, but she has one fault that drives me to distraction. When she wants to remind me of something, she doesn't TELL me, she writes me a note!

It's not as if we weren't together half the time. When I get to the office, I find a note in my pocket: "Don't forget to gas up your car, and please pay the electric bill."

At breakfast, she had a note stuck under the toaster: "Get a haircut today, please."

Yesterday, she taped a note to my bathroom mirror: "Are you going to do something about your mother's birthday, which is next Sunday? Or should I?"

How can I get the message across to this note-happy woman that she has a voice to talk with, and I have ears to hear with, and I wish she would communicate with me VERBALLY? Thanks.

BUGGED IN EUGENE

DEAR BUGGED: Use your voice to get the message to her ears. (On second thought, since she's so note-happy, write her a note.)

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a husband who wants to have his cake and eat it, too?

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: If you're smart, you'll bake him TWO cakes. One to eat, and one to have.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding Animal Lovers: When our four children asked for a dog, we explained that many children in the world go to sleep hungry every night. It was decided that for the cost of maintaining a dog we could join FOSTER PARENTS PLAN, INC., a national organization that helps poverty-stricken children the world over. For $16 per month, we are able to assist a family in South America with medical aid, food and housing. But most important of all, this plan has enabled a foster child to attend school—a great benefit in a land where there is high illiteracy.

We get regular reports on "our family," and all the children agree it really is more worthwhile than adding another dog to our suburban neighborhood.

PEOPLE FIRST (ANIMALS NEXT)

DEAR PEOPLE FIRST: Many readers will remark: "We have plenty of disadvantaged in the United States—how about looking after our own first?" That's the question I put to PLAN, INC.

Their reply: "PLAN selects the neediest from those countries not yet able to assist their own poor. Since North America does not fall into this category, PLAN doesn't operate in the U.S.A. or Canada."

"We are presently in Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, Colombia, Haiti, Peru, Korea, Vietnam and the Philippines. PLAN originated 35 years ago to help war orphans. For more information, write to PLAN, Box 400, Warwick, Rhode Island 02886."

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90121.

A Practical America Required

The late Air Force General Carl Spaatz used to say a second-best air force is like a second-best poker hand—it's a loser.

That applies to the entire defense picture, too. Congressman F. Edward Herbert, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, is concerned about the slippage in military capabilities vis a vis the Soviet Union in the air, on the ground and on the sea. He's the man in perhaps the best position to know about these things. A while ago he sounded off on that subject he knows best. He painted a glum picture.

We've been witnessing one war or armed confrontation after another, and lived with a degree of hostility between peoples and governments for most of recorded history; and because we're living with them, today's rivalries appear more dangerous than ever. Every one of them carries a fuse that could touch off a clash between the superpowers.

The biggest single deterrent to date has been the superior military capabilities of the United States; once that is gone, our government will, in effect, be playing with a second-best poker hand.

It brings us back to the concept that America's military is basically a force for peace. . . the hole card when small countries start feuding and diplomacy plays the game, the ultimate card to discourage the Kremlin leadership from more than frothing at the mouth.

And when you get down to it, our own privilege (or right) to political contests, arguing over taxation or merits and demerits at all levels of government, to explore and improve the freedoms we know. . . all depend largely upon a capability to more than defend. Rather, the strength to deter is the ultimate test.

Maybe, someday, more and more people will see it that way. Hopefully, it will not come too late. Our world is not the kind idealists would accept; it is filled with bickerings and tensions and poverty and riches and envy and greed. . . as well as philosophies so divergent they engender bitterness. The practicalities of the world require a practical America; and practicalities are often a bitter pill to swallow.

THIS AFTERNOON

The No-Lead Gas Blues

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—You may have noticed some new gas pumps at the corner filling station—ready to deliver no-lead gasoline for the 1975 models.

And if you ask your favorite pump jockey what he thinks of that, be prepared for a lengthy tirade.

Service station operators are unhappy over the federal regulations which require the new catalytic converter exhaust system on the new cars now being delivered for unweaving in a few weeks.

To the gas pumpers, it boils down to more Big Brother looking over their shoulders; this time in the form of the threat of a hefty $10,000 fine if they should pump regular gasoline into the new car.

Small Nozzle

To help prevent that—in addition to the penalty—the new pumps have a much smaller nozzle than normal, and the new cars will have a correspondingly smaller filler cap into which that nozzle will fit. The regular-gas nozzle won't work.

The reason for all the new gear is the discover that regular, leaded gasoline ruins the catalytic converter system, burns out its innards in short order, and causes the car to pump even more noxious fumes into the air than older models now do.

That is not the only problem anticipated for the catalytic converter system, and federal environmental protection officials say candidly that the new system will probably not last more than two years—just time enough for scientists to gather the data they need to prove the systems are more dangerous than present ones.

Federal experts at the Environmental Protection Agency in nearby Research Triangle Park tried to block use of the catalytic converter, but the big automakers had already sunk some $100 million into research and production of the new system, and weren't about to scrap it for some other approach.

John Moran an EPA official, labels the governmental go-ahead a trade-off between risks of the present system and its polluting results, and unknown risks of the new system.

Those risks to the atmosphere are basically two, Moran said: —the catalytic converter will eliminate carbon monoxide, but substitute sulfate matters and sulfur dioxide in auto exhaust emissions. It will take a couple of years to accumulate enough of those new emissions in the air to measure the effects;

—manufactured using "noble metals" such as palladium and platinum, the new systems will be putting fumes into the air which are not now present, and those can prove toxic causing kidney damage, trouble for asthma sufferers, and danger for older people who breathe the stuff.

Cars Changed
Aside from the unknown results of the catalytic converter, the car buyer is going to notice some dramatic changes in the new models now being produced. Manufacturers say the system will produce better gas mileage—predicting fuel economy boosts of from 13 to 20 per cent.

Cleaner burning fuels will mean less upkeep and maintenance, they say, and the motors will run more smoothly, eliminating the balky starting and cold-running characteristics of recent years with the anti-pollution devices now in use.

Cost will also be noticeable, with most automakers adding on from $150 to $300 to cover the cost of the catalytic converter.

Finally, the driver will notice considerable increase in tire mileage, the makers predict. That is largely due to drastic cuts in power in the new cars. As one manufacturer's agent said: "You will not see many 1975 cars winning an impromptu drag race from a traffic signal."

Technically, the catalytic converter will be a rather cumbersome closed-unit muffler type piece of equipment underneath the car. Motor exhausts will be pumped through and scrubbed in the unit. Heat is essential to its operation and a pipe will run from the motor to raise the unit's temperature to operating level.

The INSIDE REPORT

Preoccupied With Hate

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The malignancy that finally destroyed the presidency of Richard M. Nixon was exposed at its very outset following the 1968 election when the President-elect established temporary headquarters at Manhattan's Pierre Hotel.

One Republican politician newly enlisted on Mr. Nixon's staff was surprised in his first close-up observation of the new President by a uniquely un-presidential aspect of his discourse: the intensity with which Mr. Nixon attacked his "enemies"—particularly liberal Republicans and the press. Far more than mere advocacy of primitive conservatism, this aide felt Mr. Nixon was displaying genuine, deep-seated hostility.

Those resentments smoldered and grew over the long hard political road that Mr. Nixon traveled to the White House, where they were fed by his new struggles against Congress and the despised press. Instead of declining under the actuality of presidential power, Mr. Nixon's animus grew in direct proportion to his political success—even after his record 1972 landslide. From those animosities came the abuse of power and the lawlessness that destroyed him.

This self-destructive inner passion might seem to conflict with the portrait of Mr. Nixon painted by the secret White House tape recordings as the supreme public relations practitioner, preoccupied with scenarios, images and gamesmanship.

The tapes do reveal incessant discussion of public relations unrelieved by issues or serious ideological considerations. One longtime Nixon associate, a top White House presidential aide in the early Nixon days, puts it this way: most Presidents stick to the business of government for their first three years, then campaign for reelection in the fourth year; Mr. Nixon governed for six months at most, then returned his whole attention to reelection for the next 3½ years.

Nevertheless, Mr. Nixon was never truly a political pragmatist, seeking only a majority. Far from it. His gamesmanship was heated out of proportion by the fires of hostility to his enlarging circle of "enemies." This exotic mixture of public relations and hate is pointed up by the fateful transcript of his June 23, 1972, conversation with H. R. Haldeman.

That transcript will have its place in history as the "smoking gun" of the Watergate conspiracy. But parts of the transcript, though irrelevant to Watergate, betray the underlying cause of the Nixon presidency's ruin. Mr. Nixon's lack of interest in issues is stripped bare. When Haldeman informed the President about British devaluation of the pound, Mr. Nixon replied: "I don't care about it. Nothing we can do about it." Although federal revenue-sharing has been heralded as his greatest domestic accomplishment, Mr. Nixon tells Haldeman: "There ain't a vote in it. . . there's no votes in it, Bob."

But the transcript shows that the President was no super-pragmatist interested only in votes. About to launch the most successful Republican courtship of the Jewish vote in history, Mr. Nixon is concerned about daughter Julie's visit to a Jacksonville, Fla., museum because: "The arts you know—they're Jews, they're left wing—in other words stay away."

While his aides were ardently wooing rank-and-file and leadership support in organized labor, Mr. Nixon was preoccupied that daughter Tricia had been greeted at an Allentown, Pa., speech by "20 or 30 thugs—labor thugs out booging"—referring later to the "Allentown Bullies Club."

Aides who fed Mr. Nixon's passion against his enemies, such as Bob Haldeman, prospered. Those who did not were sneered at behind their backs. Faithful servitor Herbert Klein is condemned by Mr. Nixon for being "organized," but his real sin was lack of hate. "He's just not our guy at all, is he?"

Strength For Today

A VICTORY FOR HUMANITY

Some people live from day to day without any purpose outside of the mere gratification of the moment. Quite in contrast to this type of life, the great educator, Horace Mann, once said, "Be ashamed to die before you have won some victory for humanity." Over the entrance to one of the colleges of this country these words are inscribed. That sentence constituted the epitome of his philosophy. He lived for others and showed a multitude how to do the same.

Some people as they come to the end of life would have real difficulty to recall whether or not they had ever done a self-sacrificing deed for someone else. Life must be very unrewarding for those who work merely for a living and use their leisure hours merely trying to forget that soon they will have to be at work again. By contrast, those who live as Horace Mann advised find that not only does life become meaningful and exciting, but that it rewards them as much as they reward others.

YOU MIGHT KNOW HE'D GET IT IN THE END!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

A History Is Biography

SCRABBLE, Va.—What is to be said of the history that now overwhelms us? Carlyle said it, and Emerson too. History is biography. That is all the explanation one can offer; that is all the explanation there is.

In seeking to understand the resignation, we have to look beyond the biography of Richard Nixon. Watergate was a confluence, a great flowing together of a hundred streams of biography.

Together they formed a river of pollution; separately they might have flowed as placidly as the stream at the foot of White Walnut Hill.

The country is the best place to think upon these things. My office windows look upon the mountains. These old hills endure; and they provide assurance that our Republic will also endure. We are in the late summer of the Garden, with plants going to seek, and the seed renewing. The succession of the presidency will move forward as steadily as the turning of the leaves.

There was the biography of John Mitchell and of his tormented wife Martha. In the spring of 1972, when the Watergate break-in was being hatched, the ordinarily phlegmatic Mitchell was a man preoccupied by personal distress. If his biography had been otherwise, he might have imposed the unequivocal veto that would have aborted the blunder.

We know almost nothing of the biography of Gordon Liddy. "He must be a little nuts," the President remarked to Bob Haldeman. It may be a fair appraisal, but it is all part of biography. Liddy was the strong man, the ring-leader, the forceful personality whose persistence could not be turned aside. And because Liddy was the kind of man he was, the burglary went forward.

In the characters of Haldeman, and of John Dean, John Ehrlichman, Jeb Magruder and the rest of the President's men, we find the raw stuff of history. Were they plastic men, easily molded? Or weak men? Or men flawed by too much loyalty? They were what they were.

The historians who will strive one day to get it all in perspective will see these events as the lengthened shadows of the men who made them: Archibald Cox, John Sirica, Elliot Richardson. We will study the lives and ambitions of two young reporters. Who would have supposed that the biographies of men named McCord, Barker, Gonzalez, Caulfield,

Other Editors Say Beyond The Drought

(Christian Science Monitor)

The central problem in the world food picture at the moment is still distribution.

Despite the current drought in the American Midwest, more than enough food is being harvested around the planet to keep everyone fed. America, along with Canada and Australia, will still have enough surplus to make up for the critical shortages recurring in southern Asia, the African Sahel and parts of South America.

Our most urgent concern remains to make certain that sufficient food gets to those who need it simply to survive. It is surely obvious by now that a broader, more creative, global approach to the problem is needed, which should not be surprising, since the critical factors in producing food—weather and economic patterns—are worldwide in scope.

America's experience of drought this summer intensifies the problem and need for fresh thinking on how to cope with the various factors involved.

For those who may doubt that old ways can be changed, there was some good news from West Africa's famine region last month. One reporter called it a "conspiracy of good fortune—because so many things have turned out right."

Large fleets of trucks that had been tied up suddenly became available for transporting relief grain. Red tape was cut to get trucks moving easily across national borders. New priorities were established and enforced by formerly reluctant governments to ban nonessential goods from key railroad lines to keep them open for food. International oil companies agreed to keep up the necessary fuel supplies to keep it all moving.

An extra element of human care seemed to come into the picture. That may yet turn out to be the most important ingredient needed to begin the ending of famine.

Letters To The Editor

To the editor:
As an East Carolina University department (Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology) whose primary clinical concern is the treatment of communication disorders in Eastern North Carolina, we would like to share our collective criticisms of the July 31 "Worry Clinic" article by George Crane. They are as follows:

1. Dr. Crane's use of obsolete terms such as "speech correctionists" and "functional stuttering" are indicative of his lack of familiarity with the profession of speech pathology. These terms, like most of Dr. Crane's written assertions, are not to be found in current reputable professional literature.

2. Regarding his "30 second cure for stuttering": As any stutterer will readily testify, there are numerous quick cures for stuttering; unfortunately they all depart as rapidly as they are acquired. With more than reasonable confidence, we assert that Dr. Crane's "Demosthenes technique" will never be acclaimed by a "cured stutterer".

3. We resent Crane's misleading the public and especially the stuttering public, into believing that the treatment of stuttering is a quick and easy 30-second process if one sends him a quarter. The professional standards of the American Speech and Hearing Association condemn mail order therapy as well as false promises of success for any communication disorder.

Crane speaks not as a professional in his own right but as a lay person trying to peddle his miracle cures. The opinions stated in his column are belittling to his medical colleagues and seriously question his dedication to his Hippocratic oath. We question the editor's decision to publish this column and especially one entitled "Education as Feather-bedding" at a time when the medical, clinical and academic standards of this community, and of East Carolina University, are so frequently under fire.

To the editor:
I think that Mr. Richard M. Nixon has been one of the best presidents we have ever had. Twenty-one months ago, I worked my hardest to get him into office by working on the Re-elect the President committee. I later worked at the newspaper office tallying the votes. That was a long night, but for me, and many others, a very joyous one.

As I work for a lawyer, and am a notary public, I know of the importance in getting everything just right so that there are no flaws. There is such a thin line. This enables me to see Mr. Nixon's position in doing some of the things he did. It is very hard to do everything exactly as it should be done. Like me, and everyone else, he is, and always will be, only human. I was hoping Mr. Nixon's position as president would never come to this and I regret with all my heart that it did. The main thing, is that it may seem like the entire nation is against him and what he has done, but they are definitely not. There are too many people that I know

Jerry Was A Friend

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The applause was for the President of the United States. The cheers were for Old Friend Jerry.

Presidents have waved to congressmen in recognition before. For President Gerald R. Ford, congressmen waved back.

Congressmen and senators have become presidents before. But not this way. Not by appointment to the vice presidency and resignation of a president.

Clearly he was among friends in his first speech to a joint session of Congress, his presidential oath of office not yet four days old.

Political adversaries, yes. Enemies, no.

"Part of my heart will always be here on Capitol Hill," said President Ford, and no one doubted it. Twenty-five years in Congress is a long time and, as Ford said at his inauguration, old habits are hard to change.

There was a special lilt, an emphasis on the word "President," as Fishbait Miller cried as he has so often before: "Mr. Speaker, the President of the United States."

And there was a smiling snap to Speaker Carl Albert's introduction: "Distinct privilege, high personal honor . . . indeed a very personal pleasure."

"I have no need to learn how Congress speaks for the people," Ford said. "As President, I intend to listen."

That could only strike a responsive cord in an audience that has grumbled for years about being treated like wastrel stepchildren.

The last time a president, Richard M. Nixon, addressed a joint session there were some hints. That State of the Union message Jan. 30 was less remembered for the goals and achievements of the administration than for the assertion that "one year of Watergate is enough."

Ford's only reference to the Watergate scandal that was Nixon's downfall and his own accession, received the longest applause.

"There will be no illegal tapings, eavesdropping, buggings or break-ins by my administration," said the new President.

It was one of the few times that Julie Nixon Eisenhower and her husband, David, did not join the applause in the Executive Gallery.

"They were sitting next to the Ford family, symbols of the transition."

Ford promised to be President of all the people, "the black, brown, red and white Americans, of old and young, of women's liberationists and male chauvinists and all the rest of us in between, of the poor and the rich, of native sons and new refugees, of those who work at lathes or at desks or in mines or in the fields, and of Christians, Jews, Moslems, Buddhists and atheists—if there really are any atheists after

Pres. Ford's Bipartisan Hopes Face Rocky Road

By WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A man of Congress, President Ford has pledged to make communication, conciliation, compromise and cooperation his watchwords in dealing with his former colleagues.

It will take all of that to extend the congressional honeymoon into the good marriage Ford proposed.

For one thing, it would be a mixed marriage, a Republican President and a Congress that is dominated by Democrats now and is likely to be more so after the November elections.

And for another, presidential graduates of the Senate and House have tried such courtships before. The outcome often has been bickering, sometimes deadlock.

In his address to a joint session Monday night, Ford quickly noted his respect for the prerogatives of Congress, and said he would not intrude upon them.

"I know well the co-equal role of the Congress in our constitutional process," Ford said.

Controversy over the proper boundaries of executive and congressional authority was a nagging issue during the presidency of Richard M. Nixon, long before the Watergate scandal became a crisis and forced him from office.

There were disputes over the power to withhold appropriated funds, over foreign commitments and warmaking authority.

The late Lyndon B. Johnson was, like Ford, a congressional leader. He, too, came to the presidency in mid-term, and with a pledge to respect "the independence and integrity of the legislative branch."

His consensus politics gained approval of the stalled legislative proposals of his predecessor, John F. Kennedy, and of the ambitious domestic agenda Johnson called The Great Society.

Eventually, he encountered congressional complaints of arm-twisting, and the bitter criticism of a minority of his own Democrats over the escalation of the war in Vietnam.

Congress last year enacted over Nixon's veto legislation requiring presidents to get its approval within 60 days if they commit American forces to action in an emergency.

There was in Ford's speech an assessment of presidential foreign policy powers that could lead to friction with Congress:

"Throughout my public service... I have upheld all our presidents when they spoke for my country to the world. I believe the Constitution commands this. I know that in this crucial area of international policy I can count on your firm support."

Ford is a veteran of 25 years in the House, a former minority leader, a congressional politician. Nixon was not. He had served four years in the House, two in the Senate.

In his efforts to get what he wanted from Congress, the resigned president tried approaches ranging from flattery—as when he told the 92nd Congress it could be history's greatest—to stern lectures, to message aimed beyond the Capitol and to the country.

Ford said he intends to listen to Congress and to the people as well: "I want to be sure we are all tuned in on the real voice of America."

Congressmen complained that Nixon was inaccessible; Ford told them they will be welcome in his White House, that the office door will be open. As an old colleague, he could tell them not to overdo it and get a laugh in response.

Dealing with Democratic majorities, he took pains to emphasize bipartisanship. He praised and accepted a Democratic proposal for an economic summit conference. He urged voters to support economy-mind Democrats as well as Republicans.

But his basic message was one of economic conservatism, a call for cuts in federal spending without unwarranted reductions in the defense budget. Nixon had advocated the same thing.

For all the bipartisanship, Ford spent much of his eight-month vice presidency on the road, campaigning for Republicans. After all, as he told Congress:

"I am dedicated to the two-party system, and you know which party is mine."

The Southern Railway Co. and the East Carolina Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society will sponsor a special passenger train trip from Greenville to Greensboro on Aug. 25.

The train will feature 15 cars and a steam powered locomotive, a superheated 2-8-2 Mikado type that was built in 1911. The locomotive weighs 136 tons and is powered by bituminous steam coal.

Fifteen passenger cars will be included, featuring two air conditioned cars and open window coaches, a commissary car and Southern's two famous open air excursion coaches. The train will have a capacity of 750 persons.

The steam locomotive's trek through this area will be the first for a steam locomotive since 1954.

The trip is one-way. The train will leave Greenville on Aug. 25 at 8:30 a.m. and will have stops in Farmville, Wilson, Bailey, Wendell and Raleigh. After a two-hour layover in Raleigh, the train will continue on to Durham, Mebane, Burlington and Greensboro.

Proceeds from tickets will go toward public interest projects of the East Carolina Chapter, NRHS. Tickets may be purchased from the Red and White Supermarket in Farmville and at Hungates Hobby Shop located at Pitt Plaza.

Mandatory Seat-Belts And Air Bags Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has voted to eliminate a government requirement that new cars must be equipped with seat-belt interlock systems on this year's models and safety air bags by 1976.

The House acted Monday after congressmen said their constituents are fed up with mechanisms that require drivers to buckle up before they can start their cars.

make the bags an unpopular option costing around $700.

The House bill still faces a test in the Senate, where opposition could kill the Wyman amendment. The schedule for Senate action is uncertain.

The amendment would give motorists a choice only of the interlock, at an extra cost, or a seat-belt harness with a dashboard warning light signal if it is not buckled.

Helms Praises Ford Speech

RALEIGH (AP)—"Perhaps the most gratifying aspect of the President's address was his pledge to get the country back on the fiscal track," U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Monday.

Helms' statement was telephoned from Washington after President Gerald Ford addressed a joint session of Congress.

Helms praised Ford's emphasis on cutting federal spending and building a strong defense.

"He emphasized that it is up to those of us in Congress to cut federal spending and balance the budget even if it means cutting back on hometown pork barrel projects," Helms said.

The amendment, sponsored by Rep. Louis C. Wyman, R-N.H., would make both safety features optional rather than mandatory.

Managers of a new car and school bus safety bill, which passed with Wyman's amendment, said the new provision would result in no air bags. They said the bags would have to be mass-produced to carry a realistic price tag, and predicted that elimination of the mandatory regulation would and Ulasevich would figure in the history of the presidency?

In the end, though, we are driven back to the biography of Richard Nixon. History will treat him more gently than men do now—than I do now. The engulfing disappointment dominates my own horizons like a thunderhead over Red Oak Mountain. Nixon was ambitious; in itself, it is no sin to be ambitious. A strong man, he sought power; but effective government demands that strong men seek powerful office. He was a man who would not abandon friends who served him poorly; but an excess of loyalty, with no more, is not an impeachable offense.

The curious thing about Nixon—the aspect of his charter that will baffle biographers—is that this most realistic of men constantly lost touch with reality. He was a man of the law; but in his creation of the plumbers he put himself outside the law. He was a modest man, well versed in the reality of poverty; but in the improvements to his homes he yielded to fantasy. Knowing his own point vulnerable. Keenly sensitive himself, he had little sensitivity for the people and the Congress. Behind a public mask of self-assurance, as the transcripts disclose, was a human being desperately struggling for an unattainable security.

Now, in disgrace, he returns to private life—or to whatever privacy history will allow him. In his own strange way Nixon loved his country and revered his office. No biography would be complete that dealt with Watergate and resignation alone. There will be time enough, when the seasons change and spring comes again, to write of this in tranquility. The important history now revolves around the biography of Gerald Ford.

asks the President. "No," replies Haldeman.

Whatever credits history gives Richard Nixon will be measured by his actual personal contribution to foreign policy initiatives—China, Moscow and ending the Vietnam war. But former Nixon lieutenants now say he never did really understand what Vietnamization was all about, dismissing it just as he did devaluation of the pound or revenue-sharing. Certainly he cared far less about Vietnamization than about his raging hostility to "enemies."

In a 1971 book about the Nixon presidency, we called him "a man with an infinite capacity for keeping a permanent mental ledger of the ills done him over the years." By keeping that ledger up to date—and taking positive action to redress its balance—Richard M. Nixon destroyed his presidency and brought his country to the brink of chaos.

He says the handlers and dogs left too early, and gate crashers got in. Two of the dogs were killed by gate crashers.

Fight Could Have Been Key To Charging Bucs

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes it takes a big donnybrook to wake up a ball club, says Pittsburgh Pirates Manager Danny Murtaugh.

The Pirates engaged the Cincinnati Reds in a bench-clearing brawl which Murtaugh calls "one of the best in a long time" back on July 14.

Since then the Pirates, slumbering giants in the early going, have won 21 of 30. They reached the .500 mark Monday night for the first time this year by beating the Reds 7-4 before a national television audience.

"That fight could have been the game that finally brought together to this club," said Murtaugh.

The Pirates' recent resurgence had boosted them into the thick of the tight National League East pennant chase. On July 14 they were wallowing in fourth place, seven games out; today they are third, but trail front-running St. Louis by just 2½ games.

The Cardinals beat the San Diego Padres 6-5 in 13 innings Monday night, while the second-place Philadelphia Phillies remained 1½ games out by beating the San Francisco Giants 4-1.

In the only other National League game played Monday, the New York Mets trimmed the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1.

Two-run homers by Willie Stargell and Ed Kirkpatrick keyed the Pittsburgh attack, while Dave Giusti turned in a sparkling relief performance.

Phils 4, Giants 1
Hot-hitting Willie Montanez hit two doubles and drove in a pair of runs to pace the Phillies past the Giants. The 26-year-old outfielder, on the trading block last winter and in a slump earlier this year, now has hit safely in 32 of his last 33 games, dating back to July 13, when Montanez cracked four hits against San Francisco.

Cards 6, Padres 5
Bake McBride's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 13th inning drove in the winning run for the Cardinals.

Danny Godby singled to lead off the Cardinal rally and was sacrificed to second base. Lou Brock beat out a grounder to short, Godby dashing to third. Ted Sizemore was intentionally walked to load the bases, setting the stage for McBride's RBI fly ball.

CRUMPLER ON THE MOVE—Buffalo Bills running back Carlester Crumpler, former East Carolina University star, took a Gary Marangi pass, broke this tackle by Kansas City's Barrett Sutton and went for a first down on the Chiefs' 23-yard-line in the first quarter of last night's NFL exhibition game. The Bills won the game, 35-21. (AP Wirephoto)

Black Jack, Oakmont Win

Black Jack and Oakmont, the opening frame of the American Division game, scoring a pair of runs. But Oakmont came back with three in their half of the inning to take the lead, 3-2. Oakmont added two more in the third, two in the fourth and two more in the sixth, with G. Stanley homering. That made it 9-2. St. Gabriel came up with its other three runs in the seventh inning, but it was too late for an effective rally.

Mets 3, Dodgers 1
John Milner slammed his 18th homer, a tape-measure shot off the scoreboard behind the fence in right center, to power the Mets past the Dodgers, who blew a chance to stretch their 5½-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West.

Milner jumped on an Andy Messersmith pitch in the sixth inning and sent it crashing off the scoreboard some 435 feet away. It was estimated to be the longest homer ever hit to right field in Shea Stadium's 10-year history.

Some Players Feel They've Lost Strike

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

"It was a long drawn-out strike," said Buffalo guard Reggie McKenzie, "and our side lost."

That was one reaction Monday as National Football League players drifted into training camps across the country under provisions of a 14-day cooling off period decided on by the players association.

Everyone is supposed to report to camp by Wednesday, negotiations with the owners are to resume Thursday and if an agreement isn't reached in two weeks, everyone is supposed to walk out again.

McKenzie wasn't the only one unhappy with the plan which the players say was suggested by chief federal mediator W.J. Usery Jr.

"If I said I was happy about the way we're going in, I'd be lying," said Washington defensive tackle Diron Talbert.

Offensive tackle Dick Himes Green Bay added, "This could be the worst thing that could happen at a time like this. Nothing's settled. This could be ruinous to team unity. We're going in without a contract signed and we're no better off than we were a year ago."

Meanwhile, rookies and free agents continued to display their talents in three Monday night games. The Pittsburgh Steelers bombed the Chicago Bears 50-21, the Cleveland Browns edged the San Francisco 49ers 21-20 and the Buffalo Bills beat the Kansas City Chiefs 35-21.

Some veterans were pleased with the plan to return to action. But the Minnesota Vikings were the most reluctant warriors in the league. About 33 decided to ignore the players association plan and remain on strike for at least another week.

Some coaches were skeptical or downright hostile to the plan and others delighted to get their best players back.

"I'm very unexcited about it. I don't think Mr. Usery knows much about football," said San Diego Coach Tommy Prothro.

"I think they should come in with the idea of staying in or they shouldn't come in at all," commented Kansas City head man Hank Stram. "I don't like the indecisiveness of the matter. It's not good for anybody concerned."

In Houston there was a difference of opinion between Coach Sid Gillman and owner Bud Adams.

"I'm not about to take a veteran back under those conditions," declared Gillman after hearing of the cooling off period. "All it would do is disrupt our camp. To come in and then maybe walk out two weeks later is the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of."

But Adams declined to bar players from the Oilers' camp.

In Monday night's action, Joe Gilliam, in relief of starting quarterback Terry Bradshaw, threw for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth. Chicago gained just five yards on offense in the entire first half. A crowd of 42,325 was on hand in Pittsburgh.

Will Cureton hooked up with Steve Holden on an 80-yard touchdown play in the final seconds and Chris Gartner booted the extra point to give Cleveland the victory before only 24,008 fans in Cleveland. More than 65,000 fans attended last ANAHEIM (AP) — On Sept. 15, 1969, Nolan Ryan, a New York Mets pitcher, watched Steve Carlton, then of the St. Louis Cardinals, establish a major league record by striking out 19 New York Mets.

On April 22, 1970, Ryan saw Tom Seaver of the Mets equal Carlton's record against the San Diego Padres.

On Monday night at Anaheim Stadium, Ryan watched with something resembling bemusement as he etched his name into baseball's record book with a 19-strikeout performance.

"I guess I'm the only guy in the world to have seen all three of them," Ryan drawled in his Texas twang after his performance defeated the Boston Red Sox 4-2.

"I've always felt that if all the conditions were right and everything fell into place that I might have a chance at the record," he observed matter-of-factly as he gazed into the sea of inquiring reporters after the game.

"I really wasn't thinking much about the record until I noticed something on the scoreboard in the seventh or eighth inning," he said.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit thumped Kansas City 5-1, Oakland edged the New York Yankees 3-2, and Milwaukee beat Texas 5-1.

Ryan threw 170 pitches—115 of them for strikes—as he won his 15th game of the year. He erased the unhappy memory of his last start when he held the Chicago White Sox hitless for 8 1-3 innings before blowing the third no-hitter of his strikeout-studded career and eventually lost the game 2-1.

Sixteen of the strikeouts were swinging.

Although he only tied the major league single-game strikeout record, Ryan did succeed in erasing the hallowed name of Bob Feller from the American League record book. Feller had the old AL mark of 18 strikeouts in a nine-inning game.

Ryan also tied Luis Tiant's major league standard of 32 strikeouts in consecutive games.

Ryan said he still considers his two no-hitters of last season a greater achievement than his 19 strikeouts of Monday night.

Tigers 5, Royals 1
Rookie Ron Leflore's two-run homer keyed a three-run third inning against Nelson Briles and sparked Detroit over Kansas City.

Mickey Lolich, 13-14, scattered five hits for Detroit as the Tigers snapped Kansas City's winning streak at three games.

A's 3, Yankees 2
Jim "Catfish" Hunter notched his 17th victory of the season with a five-hitter, pitching Oakland over New York.

The A's won the game on a pair of unearned runs in the eighth inning scored on an error by Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles.

Brewers 5, Rangers 1
George Scott's two-run single and Darrell Porter's two-run double helped Milwaukee beat Texas. Jim Colborn, 7-10, and Tom Murphy combined to stop Texas on five hits.

National League scores: Philadelphia 4, San Francisco 1; New York 3, Los Angeles 1; Pittsburgh 7, Cincinnati 4; St. Louis 6, San Diego 5, 13 innings.

This is Hank Aaron's ninth and final season with the Atlanta Braves. He played 12 previous seasons with the Braves in Milwaukee.

The Worry Clinic Strength In A Positive View

Note how Joe suddenly became a winning wrestler! He invented his own psychological way to increase his muscular output. And it works! But he must be on guard, for people can become partially blinded by rage!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

CASE B-614: Joe M., aged 18, is on the wrestling team.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "I was a loser in my first 3 matches.

"But one of your 'Worry Clinic' columns gave me the secret for beating my opponents.

"For you said that fear actually weakens a person's muscles temporarily.

"But a positive attitude increases muscle power by almost 40 per cent.

"I'll admit that I was always very nervous and fearful in my earlier matches.

"For I was a freshman and often pitted against older wrestlers, such as upper classmen.

"So I decided to use a little psychology trick to banish my fear.

"While in 6th grade, I had seen a bigger and older boy beating up my little brother. "Suddenly, I became so angry, I waded into him without even thinking about his greater height and weight.

"And I beat him up.

"So now, before I enter the ring, I go back in memory and imagine that my wrestling opponent is that big kid attacking my little brother.

"Then all fear leaves me and I feel like I could throw an elephant to the mat."

Rival Emotions
Fear and anger are opposing emotions.

For fear is introvertible and turns your attention upon the enemy, whom you'd then like to grapple, barehanded.

So you can actually change fear to rage in a few seconds of time, as by the device that Joe employs to "psych" himself into a warlike mood.

To show the muscular difference between fear vs. a positive attitude, consider these data, taken from Page 373 of my college textbook, "Psychology Applied."

A British psychologist tested the hand grip of a group of soldiers.

They were competing to see who was the strongest so they cooperated eagerly.

Their average handgrip was 101 pounds.

Next, they were hypnotized and told they were very weak, feeble, sickly and anemic; then urged to grip the machine as hard as possible.

Under this negative hypnotic suggestion, they strained hard but averaged only 69 pounds.

But before waking them, the hypnotist reversed his former suggestion and now told them they were powerful, Herculean, Samsonlike; then urged them to compete.

Under this positive outlook, their handgrip averaged 140 pounds, which was more than double their strength while laboring under a defeatist attitude.

In our normal waking state, we may not quite attain the depths or the heights possible under hypnosis.

But we go in one or the other direction, so think positively and your muscle will actually show greater strength!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

A POSSIBILITY—Anne Armstrong, White House counselor to former President Nixon, says she is honored to be mentioned as one of those President Ford is considering as a possible vice presidential appointee. She was the top-ranking woman in the Nixon administration. (AP Wirephoto)

Apology For Herb Klein

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Former White House aide Herbert G. Klein has received a telephoned apology from former President Richard M. Nixon for derogatory comments Nixon made about him, the Baltimore Sun says.

Klein, former White House director of communications, said Nixon called on Monday from San Clemente, Calif., to offer the apology, the Sun said in a story in today's editions.

But the Sun quoted Klein as saying he would make no comment on what was discussed, "because I make it a point of never commenting on what was said in conversations with the former or new President."

Nixon's derogatory remarks about the competency of his former aide were revealed in White House tape recordings made public Aug. 5.

The transcript quoted Nixon as describing Klein, a Nixon supporter for 30 years, as "not having his head screwed on."

"He just sort of blubbers around ... sits there with eggs on his face ... he's just not our guy at all."

According to the Sun, Klein said Nixon opened Monday's conversation by saying: "Have you got your head screwed on today?" and then laughed.

The Sun quoted Klein as saying the former chief executive apologized for any embarrassment he had caused, and then added that he had "probably said worse things about other people."

Derail Near Wake Forest

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP)—

An Amtrak passenger train en route from New York to Miami derailed three miles south of Wake Forest Monday night.

Twenty-eight of the 270 passengers were injured, none seriously.

A dispatcher for Seaboard Coast Line Railroad said the second engine of the train left the track shortly after 8 p.m.

Ten of the 12 passenger cars then derailed, but all remained upright.

Many passengers were thrown from their seats and luggage spilled from overhead racks. Only half of those injured required ambulance transportation to Raleigh hospitals. All 28 were treated and released Monday night.

The other passengers walked away from the accident scene and were taken to Raleigh in buses to await another train to Miami.

The cause of the derailment was not immediately clear. The Seaboard Coast Lines dispatcher said the train had passed a check point at Henderson, 20 miles north of Wake Forest, with no apparent malfunctions.

New Books At Library Listed

Looking for a list of new books published in recent months? Sheppard Memorial Library now has available for patrons a "Suggested List" of fiction and non-fiction book titles published to date in 1974.

While used extensively in the local area by book clubs, this list might also be helpful to individuals or other groups in making decisions on book buying.

Nine Grads In Publication

Nine of the seniors graduating in the 1974 class of Rose High School have been accorded listing in the latest edition of "Who's Who in American High Schools."

The nine—three girls and six boys—are: Cindy Allen, Carol Ostrow, Eleanor Webber, Greg Alexander, Jon Caspar, Richard Edwards, Billy Pritchard, Jay Rogers and Mark Walter.

Nixon Short Of Cash, But He Is Still Potentially Rich Man

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is still worth millions, although his financial papers don't show it.

Nixon's disclosure of his net worth late last year did not mention what is almost certainly his single greatest asset: The tapes, papers and memorabilia accumulated during his many years in public life.

A professional estimate made five years ago placed the value of documents and mementos Nixon collected before he became president at nearly $1.5 million. The value of that collection which Nixon still owns presumably increased when he attained a unique place in history by being the first president of the United States to resign.

But by far the most valuable items are Nixon's presidential tapes and documents. At the moment, most of them remain in the White House, but they are considered his personal property and will be sent to him at his request, a government official said.

The Nixon presidential papers, while obviously of great potential value, have not yet been catalogued or appraised.

A spokesman for the General Services Administration, parent of the National Archives, said any papers accumulated in the White House during the Nixon years—except treaties, legislation and similar documents of state—are considered the personal property of the ex-president.

The spokesman said that the famous White House tapes are considered to be among the papers, but no decision has been made on where the tons of documents will be sent.

The Special Watergate Prosecution Force has some materials already and has requested others for use as evidence in various investigations. But officials said those eventually will be returned to Nixon when they are no longer needed by the courts.

Ralph G. Newman, the Chicago appraiser hired by Nixon to evaluate vice presidential papers given to the National Archives, estimated in 1969 that the most valuable materials in the Nixon collection at that time were 1,250 papers, 750 tapes and 100 films.

The papers, consisting primarily of letters to Nixon from American and foreign dignitaries, were removed from the correspondence file given to the government and retained for Nixon. Newman said they were worth $250 each.

The vice presidential tapes, which have an estimated average length of 15 minutes and could contain nothing as important as the secretly recorded White House tapes, were appraised at $25 each. The films were listed at $250 each.

If Newman's estimate is any indication of what some libraries and many private collectors would be willing to pay for the Nixon collection, the ex-president is potentially very wealthy.

Although he was later assessed back taxes on the gifts, he didn't get the papers back because the GSA said the gift was made, even if it was completed too late for tax purposes.

The White House disclosed last winter that Nixon had tripled his net worth while serving as president, to just over $1 million.

Most of Nixon's cash assets have been depleted by the large payments he made toward his back tax bill, payment of his 1973 income taxes and a partial payment on his San Clemente mortgage.

Vietnam Story May Be Revived

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — You rarely hear much about Vietnam on network news shows these days. After 12 years as an almost-constant TV news fixture, it's almost America's forgotten story except for those who lived it.

But next month, NBC-TV may air a quartet of 60-minute shows about South Vietnam, taped there for an unlikely showcase — Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" program. It all depends on how much of a war is going on here late this month.

The segments will be part of an 18,200-mile "Tomorrow" trip, scheduled to begin Aug. 22. In addition to Vietnam, three programs will be done in Hawaii and one in Hong Kong.

The first show will be taped entirely aboard a Hawaii-bound 747 jumbo jet, with a program guest list that includes veteran pilot Ernest Gann, author of "The High and the Mighty," and other aviation classics.

The aim of the Vietnam segments, says Snyder, simply is to see what the country is like today, a year after the last U.S. combat force pulled out of a bitter war that still continues in the northern and the central part of the country.

"Vietnam was so prominent in the news for what — 10-12 years? — and meant so much or so little to people in the U.S. that I think it warrants going back to," Snyder said.

"We simply want to see if we can give any assessments, any kind of look, or get any kind of feeling about what America left behind there after fighting so long and so hard for all the things we were told we were over there for."

Snyder said he hopes to interview President Nguyen Van Thieu, as well as possibly visit the former U.S. base at Cam Ranh Bay and maybe do stories in My Lai, Da Nang and Hue. He said the itinerary isn't set yet.

But the talk show host made no bones about the fact he doesn't plan to become a war correspondent, voluntary or otherwise. He won't venture into active fighting areas, such as the Que Son Valley southwest of Da Nang.

"We're watching the whole scene with a little trepidation," he admitted. "There's still a war going on over there and probably, if it's widespread, we may just scrub the whole trip to Vietnam."

Sue Over Hike In Landing Fees

RALEIGH (AP)—Four airlines are suing the Raleigh-Durham Airport on the claim it was illegal to double the landing fees.

The fees were raised last October after a boarding fee of $2 a passenger was thrown out by a court.

The airlines are Eastern, United, Delta and Piedmont.

The airport claims they owe $300,000 in landing fees, and is suing to collect. They in turn are suing to get the increase rescinded.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: In the midst of some delaying and rather emotional conditions you find you can get out from under annoyances with ingenuity, resourcefulness and organization of details.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can now rid yourself of difficulties hard to do before. Use diplomacy with co-worker who is erratic. Avoid one not your type.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle own worries yourself without discussing with others. Get out of that situation that could mean spending more money than you can afford.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Listen to what a family tie has to suggest concerning some practical affair, even though you think you can solve it best alone. Heed business partner's advice.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Eliminate limiting conditions that are annoying you. Gain cooperation of associates. Study more for greater efficiency.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Do not just fume over what cannot be helped, or you get nowhere. Do something about everything. Be practical with money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) The planets are most favorable now and you can accomplish a good deal, especially since you have excellent judgment as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study business matter objectively and you can handle it with much satisfaction. Have health and beauty treatments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to help a good friend where most needed and gain goodwill. Then out to the social affairs that will bring you in contact with the right personalities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are puzzled about how to handle some matter. Talk it over with a bigwig who has the right answer. Get busy on civic matter that can be helpful to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Look into whatever is of a progressive nature and stop fussing over the old and outdated. Some trip can be particularly fine for you to plan now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle responsibilities instead of gadding about aimlessly. Keep promise made to mate. Avoid one who wants you to take risks.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Gain the goodwill of a partner and then work together on some project that is important to you both. Civic affair can help your career.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be conscientious about doing things, but when some stumbling block presents itself, your youngster will feel dejected, so teach early to know that difficulties will arise and should not be taken in a martyr fashion, but problems should be solved wisely. Slant the education along the lines of professions requiring precision and tact. Sports early.

At the beginning of the 1960s, world bridge was dominated by the big four—the U.S., Italy, France and Britain. Then, several new challengers for world bridge supremacy began to arrive on the scene. The first to make a mark in the mid-60s was Australia, spearheaded by Tim Seres, a former Hungarian and today recognized as one of the world's great players. Watch his defensive technique on this hand from the recent Far Eastern Championships.

South had a difficult opening bid problem. Though he held the strength for an opening bid of two no trump, he had no stopper in spades. Nevertheless, he decided that an opening bid of one diamond should be ruled out because three no trump could be makeable on many hands where one diamond would be passed out. North had barely enough to raise to game.

West led the five of hearts. East put up the nine, and declarer won with the king, concealing the queen. The ace of diamonds felled the king, and declarer continued with a low diamond. Seres stepped up with the queen and paused to consider the situation.

It was obvious that declarer held the queen of hearts as well as the ace, for East would have played either of those cards at the first trick if he held it. Thus, the heart suit held no future. West then considered a club shift, but with Q-10-5 of clubs in dummy and only a doubleton in his hand, it didn't seem that a club shift offered much promise. By a process of elimination, the spade suit was the defenders' only hope.

However, a spade shift was not in itself sufficient. Seres unerringly selected the only card to beat declarer. To trick four he led the jack of spades! This fine play pinned declarer's ten of spades. Whether or not declarer covered with dummy's queen, the defenders could score four spade tricks. Note that had Seres switched to a low spade, declarer would make his contract with an overtrick by simply allowing it to ride round to his ten.

Nevertheless, he decided that

Nuclear Proliferation Poses Dangers

By WILLIAM STOCKTON
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The figures had been checked and double checked, the storage containers in the vault examined once again.

But the inventory still didn't add up.

Finally, as required by law, Ray Janka of Kerr-McGee's nuclear fuels facility at Crescent, Okla., reached for his telephone and dialed Jack Hind, the Atomic Energy Commission's security chief in the Chicago regional office.

Hind grasped the gravity of Janka's news at once. He ordered his staff to work and informed superiors in Washington.

Kerr-McGee had discovered a MUF — material unaccounted for.

The material was plutonium, a radioactive substance used in atomic bombs. Kerr-McGee fabricates plutonium fuel elements for an experimental reactor in Richland, Wash.

More than three pounds of plutonium had disappeared. Three pounds is only a fraction of what terrorists would need to fashion a crude atomic bomb, but the shortage sent ripples of alarm through the AEC.

Next morning AEC inspector Charles Peck flew to Oklahoma City, where he rented a car and drove 40 miles northward through rolling hills to Crescent.

There, he supervised a new inventory of Kerr-McGee plutonium, seeking proof none had been stolen.

Ten days later everyone relaxed. The plutonium was all there. A series of errors in the first inventory was the culprit.

The Atomic Energy Commission says it is experiencing about four MUFs a year. So far they all have been human or machine errors in the complex inventory processes.

But Jack Hind's concern last February reflects a disturbing aspect of advancing nuclear technology. The art of making a nuclear weapon no longer is the exclusive purview of government scientists toiling behind barbed wire fences with multimillion-dollar budgets.

There is growing fear in the U.S. nuclear community that a private group could build a crude but frighteningly deadly atomic bomb. The main difficulty would be obtaining the "special nuclear material," a euphemism for weapons-grade plutonium or enriched uranium.

"The art of making a crude device ... the information is available. It's all unclassified. The things they need are available on the general market," said E.B. Giller, AEC's head of national security. Everything, that is, except the plutonium or enriched uranium that is the heart of a nuclear bomb.

The AEC spent $50 million in fiscal 1973 and is spending $90 million this year for security at the several dozen facilities in the United States where potential bomb fuels are stored or used. The money also is to safeguard the transportation of this fuel around the country.

There are 45 nuclear plants producing electricity today for public utility companies. Sixty more are under construction. All are designed to use uranium, but not of the quality needed for bombs.

Some physicists credit Dr. Theodore B. Taylor with heightening consciousness about the possibilities of homemade atomic bombs.

Considered a crack bomb designer two decades ago at the height of the Cold War, Taylor now heads a private research and development company. He has studied at length the minimum requirements in expertise and materials to build a workable bomb.

"Under conceivable circumstances, a few persons, possibly even one person working alone, who possessed about 10 kilograms — 22 pounds — of plutonium oxide and a substantial amount of chemical high explosive could, within several weeks, design and build a crude fission bomb," Taylor said.

By Taylor's definition, a crude bomb would fit into an automobile — a delivery van, for example — and explode with the power of 200,000 pounds of TNT. Detonated during rush hour in a large city, it might kill thousands.

By comparison, the bomb dropped on Hiroshima 29 years ago this month exploded with the force of 400,000 tons of TNT, killing about 85,000 people.

AEC officials won't disclose how much plutonium and enriched uranium exists in the country to make nuclear devices, except to acknowledge that there is enough in existence to make dozens of bombs.

With the prospect of a Hollywood script writer's fancies turned to reality, the quality of America's nuclear safeguards has become a matter of debate.

"In our present situation there probably are some points in the system where an inside man and a determined group like the Symbionese Liberation Army could acquire some special nuclear material," Giller conceded.

In 1972 inspectors from the General Accounting Office, Congress' watchdog agency, studied safeguards at three unnamed AEC contractors and licensees. They also monitored nuclear material shipments.

In two reports, one issued last fall and another last spring, inspectors documented how easily they gained access to special nuclear material.

Chain link fences gave way. Doors, vents and windows quickly yielded entry to nuclear material storage areas. Guards were poorly qualified. One shipment of nearly 200 pounds of enriched uranium made a 200-mile trip in the back of an open flatbed truck.

After the GAO inspections but prior to release of the reports, the AEC began proposing or implementing tougher security requirements.

Stricter limits on inventory accuracies like the one at Kerr-McGee went into effect 16 months ago. Tougher regulations for plant security and transportation became effective in March.

AEC officials and critics of the AEC agree that transportation is the weak link in American safeguards. The AEC conveys most of its weapons-grade uranium and plutonium with its own drivers, guards and trucks, including special armored trucks designed to be impregnable under attack.

Drivers and guards maintain constant radio communication with AEC headquarters.

Security isn't as tight for nuclear materials shipped by four commercial companies licensed by the AEC.

Before March security was minimal — no guards, no armored trucks. New guards and armored trucks used to carry money are employed. Drivers report to the home office by radio every two hours.

But it will be several years before special trucks are available for the four commercial companies.

More troublesome in coming years will be a continuous inventory of nuclear materials, making certain none have been stolen from a plant an ounce at a time for weeks or months.

Unlike a bank, which can account for every penny, the accounting technology at a nuclear plant isn't sophisticated enough to tally every atom of potential bomb fuel.

AEC officials say it will be several years before the system will detect a theft within hours.

It took Kerr-McGee 13 days to conduct the February inventory. The AEC-supervised inventory lasted another 10 days.

A theft after Kerr-McGee's January inventory might go undetected for nearly six weeks.

Local Scout Earns Honor

Frankford Johnson, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. Milam Johnson of 1906 Fairview Way, received the God and Country Award Sunday. The award was presented during worship services at Oakmont Baptist Church.

Dr. Joel Vickers made the presentation to Johnson, who has won over 50 Merit Badges, in addition to being an Eagle Scout.

The God and Country Award involves three aspects of service, including the community, the world, and the future. For the community, Johnson was recognized for service to the community, the church, and the school. For service to the world, he attended the National Scout Jamboree last year in Pennsylvania. For the future, Johnson plans to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He was a 1974 graduate of J.H. Rose High School.

In addition to this award, Johnson has also won numerous other Boy Scouting awards and honors, including the Historic Trails Award, a Scout Lifeguard Award, and mile swim honors. At Rose High, he was a member of the National Honor Society.

Heat Pumps Stepped Up

NASHVILLE (AP)—A Tennessee Valley Authority spokesman says presently there are about 40,000 electric heat pumps in Tennessee Valley homes.

The pump is a device which helps to generate heat through solar energy and is purported to decrease winter electric heating bills by 50 per cent.

The TVA management division official, Jim Ward, made his report in a meeting on new energy sources sponsored in Nashville by the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

He said higher electricity rates have stepped up heat pump installations in the TVA region to 4,000 per year.

With the outlook calling for more increases in electricity rates, TVA has set an annual goal of 40,000 new heat pumps per year as part of a promotion program.

"The heat pump captures whatever there is in the air in fall and spring and winter and carries it inside the house as the base heating arrangement," said Ward. "Supplemental conventional electric space heating handles the rest of the heating load. As the outside air temperature falls, the pull on the supplemental load rises."

The cost of the pumps is at least $800—about $300 more than conventional year-round air conditioning methods.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—North Carolina egg markets were steady Monday. Supplies were adequate and demand was good.

Weighted average prices for small lot sales of consumer grade eggs delivered in cartons to nearby retail outlets: Grade A large whites, 59.73; medium whites 50.19; small whites 39.09.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—Corn prices were steady to weaker and soybeans were irregular on North Carolina grain markets Monday. No. 2 yellow shelled corn was quoted at 3.24-3.75 per bushel. No. 1 yellow soybeans were 7.27-7.69 per bushel.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took another substantial drop today in an uneasy reaction to a surge in commodity-futures prices.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 7.36 at 759.93, and losers outstripped gainers by 7 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers said inflation worries intensified with a sharp rise in farm-commodity futures prices today since the Agriculture Department's downward revision Monday of its estimate of the 1974 corn crop.

"This seems to compound the problem of inflation," said Newton D. Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co.

Zinder said the declines also might reflect disappointment among investors that the market had failed to show much strength at the opening after President Ford's address to Congress Monday night.

The growth and blue-chip issues favored by institutional investors once again showed some of the heaviest losses.

Polaroid, the NYSE volume leader, was down 7/8 at 25. Among other issues on the active list, Texas Instruments lost 1/4 to 74 3/4; Xerox, off 3/4 to 88 1/4; Burroughs, 3/8 to 85 3/8; McDonald's, 1 1/2 to 38 3/4; and Eastman Kodak 1 to 87.

Farm equipment issues lowered, apparently reflecting concern over economic prospects for farmers because of the adverse weather that has cut into expected production. Deere & Co. lost 1/8 to 32 3/4, and International Harvester was down 1/8 to 22 1/4.

The Big Board's 11 a.m. composite index was off .33 at 41.52. On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index gave up .26 to 78.43.

The Amex' most-active issue was Giant Yellowknife Mines, down 7/8 at 13 3/4 after a 4 1/2-point drop Monday, when the gold-mining company reported sharply lower second-quarter earnings.

Imelda Visiting Chinese Capital

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Imelda R. Marcos, first lady of the Philippines, apparently is heading for Peking.

Diplomatic sources said Monday that Mrs. Marcos would leave Thursday for the mainland Chinese capital. She is the highest level visitor from here to China since her husband, President Ferdinand Marcos, announced plans earlier this year to establish diplomatic ties with the Communist nation. Mrs. Marcos made a similar visit to Moscow in 1972 that led to closer ties with the Soviet Union.

Tobacco Crop Expected Be Largest In Decade

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. tobacco crop this year is expected to be the largest in a decade, mainly because of larger flue-cured and burley crops. Growers are expected to produce 10 per cent more flue-cured and 25 per cent more burley than a year ago.

The Crop Reporting Board of the Department of Agriculture said Monday that total tobacco production is expected to be nearly 1.97 billion pounds, up 13 per cent from 1973.

Flue-cured production is estimated at 1,274 million pounds, 117 million more than last year. An 8 per cent acreage boost and higher yields in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina are responsible.

Burley production is forecast at 563 million pounds, compared with last year's small crop of 450.4 million.

There has been a 15 per cent increase in burley acreage this year and higher yields in all states except Missouri and Virginia.

The August estimate of flue-cured tobacco production in millions of pounds this year, compared with last year:

Type 11—North Carolina 292.3 this year and 283.84 last year; Virginia 111.6 and 111.3.

Type 12—Eastern North Carolina Belt, 418 and 405.9.

Type 13—North Carolina 109.65 and 103.87; South Carolina 168 and 132.65.

Type 14—1.08 and under a million pounds last year; Florida 22.8 and 20.99; Georgia 150.5 and 97.2.

North Carolina is expected to produce 20.88 million pounds of burley this year, compared with 18.28 million pounds last year.

But, the report said, at least the government's actions have been accompanied by a switch to cigarettes with a relatively low content of tar.

The FTC figures showed that the market share of cigarettes with less than 15 milligrams of tar rose from 6.6 per cent in 1972 to 8.9 per cent in 1973.

Phosphate . . .

Products from the proposed new mining project will be earmarked for Agric's existing markets in the United States and abroad.

Plans call for the shipment of approximately 2.5 million tons of phosphate rock and 1 million tons of concentrated product annually through the North Carolina State Port Authority terminal at Morehead City.

Agrico is one of the world's largest fertilizer companies. Exclusive of this proposed mine operation, Agric currently has a $280 million expansion program underway in four other states.

The Williams Energy Company, another subsidiary of The Williams Companies markets Doxel brand LP-Gas through 13 bulk plants throughout North Carolina and Williams' pipeline construction subsidiary has built more than 100 miles of gas transmission lines in North Carolina, including gas lines in Pitt and Beaufort Counties.

Kennecott Copper Corporation mining operations include such products as coal, copper, iron, titanium slag, molybdenum, lead, gold, silver and zinc. It is also the largest domestic producer of copper.

Secretary Harrington said N.C. Phosphate's wage rate will be above the average manufacturing rate for the state.

"Obviously there are problems" Harrington noted, citing "ground-water studies and air quality requirements" as well as "social impacts."

But he emphasized the "companies will meet environmental regulations" and have "joined in a cooperative approach to solve the problems."

"Eastern North Carolina will grow," the Natural and Economic Resources head told the gathering. "It's important to know and plan so that the growth will be orderly."

North Carolina Phosphate's holding on the south side of the Pamlico River surround holdings in the area by Texasgulf Inc. which opened a giant Phosphate mine at Lee Creek several years ago.

N.C. Phosphate also owns property on the North side of the Pamlico River also, as well as having mineral rights options on all Weyerhaeuser Co. property in the area.

Parked Plane

N.C. Highway Patrolman N.B. Johnson investigates happenings on North Carolina's highways involving vehicles which operate on the roads, even if those vehicles turn out to be airplanes.

Trooper Johnson was called to investigate an airplane operating on N.C. 11 south of Winterville Sunday and found, sure enough, an airplane parked just off the road around 5 p.m.

According to Johnson the operator of the single engine plane had experienced engine trouble enroute to Aurora, the pilots residence, and had made an emergency landing.

The closest landing strip was Highway 11 and the pilot sat down and coasted into a driveway.

Johnson stated the pilot sat down in the southbound lane of traffic and no traffic problems occurred from the plane's landing.

No cars were close to the plane when it sat down, according to Johnson, and a local farmer gave the pilot permission to leave the plane on his property until it could be repaired.

Johnson gave no hint to how the pilot planned to return the plane to its proper medium of travel.

Pres. Ford . . .

(Continued from page 1) —His administration plans "hot pursuit of tough laws to prevent illegal invasions of privacy in both government and private activities."

House Speaker Carl Albert promptly supported the plan.

However, Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, declared "It would just be a fake. You've got to have power behind it."

On health insurance, Ford said he has urged efforts by those in the administration and in Congress to agree on a compromise measure.

"I very definitely think we'll get it this year," said Rep. John J. Rhodes, R-Ariz. But time is running short. Congressional leaders hope to wind up the session by mid-October, and the health insurance matter still is in the House Ways and Means Committee.

However, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he thought both the health bill and trade legislation could be passed this year.

On other matters, Ford said: —He plans to sign a massive extension of the Elementary and Second Education Act, despite "reservations" about some of its provisions. But he said he will oppose "excessive funding" in implementing the measure.

—He plans to continue the Nixon efforts for detente with Russia, reopened relations with China and peace in the Middle East.
