

Ford Denies Blanket Pardon Considered

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is not at present actively considering pardons for all Watergate figures, but will weigh any request for pardons which reaches his desk, House minority leader John Rhodes said today.

Scott read a presidential statement which he said Ford asked him to give to reporters.

In it, the President said: "The announcement yesterday by Mr. Hushen concerning a study of the entire matter of presidential clemency and pardons was prompted by inquiries to the White House press office concerning Mrs. John Dean's reported statement in reference to pardoning of her husband and similar public statements on behalf of others.

"Such a study is, of course, made for any request concerning pardon of an individual. However, no inference should be drawn as to the outcome of such study in any case. Nor is my pardon of the former president, under the unique circumstances stated by me in granting it, related to any case which is or may be under study."

Hushen is John W. Hushen, the President's acting press secretary.

Hushen said Tuesday at a White House news briefing the President was making a study of possible pardons for all Watergate figures, those already convicted and facing trial.

The announcement drew a tidal wave of criticism. Later, in discussing the possible pardons, White House Counsel Philip W. Buchen declined to set a timetable for a final decision by the President.

But Buchen indicated Ford's study might not be completed by the scheduled Sept. 30 start of the trial of six former aides and associates of former President Richard M. Nixon on charges stemming from the Watergate cover-up.

Scott was asked by reporters if there was indeed a presidential study of Watergate defendant pardons.

"I think there are none,"

Scott replied.

Scott said if and when the President receives any request for action by Watergate figures he would react by considering them and considering the request "most carefully."

Rhodes said that the President wanted to make clear that any request for a pardon

"would not be thrown in the wastebasket."

Both Scott and Rhodes said they supported the President's decision to pardon Nixon.

City Council To Seek Get $7 Million In HUD Funds

The City Council voted Tuesday night to proceed with the preparation of a proposal to be submitted to the Department of Housing and Urban Development as application for over $7 million in community development funds.

The funds would be made available over a six year period if the city's plan, which would provide essential data pertaining to the city's needs, current programs and proposed projects, is accepted by HUD.

Local officials, including council members Dr. Frank Fuller and Mrs. Mildred McGrath, Mayor Eugene West, and City Manager Bill Carstarphen, learned at a Community Development Workshop last week in Atlanta that the proposal has to be in HUD's hands no later than April of 1975 with the initial release date on the funds set for Jan. 1, 1975.

The federal monies will be dispersed through the recently adopted community development legislation that becomes effective Jan. 1, 1975.

Carstarphen explained that under the program, the local government would receive and disperse funds that in the past have been granted directly to the Housing Authority, Redevelopment Commission and other agencies. The city government, in applying for the community development grant, would set up a system of priorities for local spending.

Under the new legislation, the three-year application plan would spell out priorities projected under the combined programs of urban renewal, public housing, neighborhood assistance, recreation, and water and sewer grants.

Carstarphen said that HUD is placing "heavy emphasis" on making certain that local governments are in a position to handle the new program before funds are granted.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day, but the phone service is available 24 hours a day.

HOTLINE APPEAL

NEEDS HOUSE TO LEASE

I want to start a family-care home, licensed by the Department of Social Services, that would get five people out of one of the big state institutions and give them family life again. I have tried to find a house to lease on a yearly basis. Licensing requirements say it must be one-story and have at least four bedrooms. Mrs. I.F.

Anyone having such a house please call Hotline at 752-6166 or 758-1336.

PLEASE PRINT AGENDA

Why doesn't The Daily Reflector publish the agenda and the place of the County Commissioners' meetings? E.C.

We usually do not get this agenda until it is too late to have it published in advance of the first Monday 10 a.m. meeting. However, Stuart Savage, the staff writer who usually covers the Commissioners' meetings, checked with the County Manager's office about the possibility. It was indicated that every effort would be made to get us the agenda on the Friday prior to the meeting, so it could be published, probably in Sunday's paper.

ORDERED POOL PART—NOT RECEIVED

We purchased a swimming pool earlier this summer. Enclosed with the pool was an address and list of accessories and parts that could be purchased. We ordered a filter for $8.90 but haven't received it. This was in May. Mrs. G.T.S.

Your filter was ordered from Lo-Mart Industries in Brooklyn, N. Y. Lo-Mart told Hotline that your part was sent out on June 5, but didn't know if it was mailed or sent via United Parcel Service. They are going to find out what happened to the original order, but in the meantime, reshipped your order.

EMPLOYMENT INFORMATION REQUESTED

Hotline has received several inquiries from individuals seeking information relating to employment on the Alaskan oil pipeline project. The individuals were specifically asking who they should contact concerning employment.

The Employment Security Commission in Greenville has some information regarding this project, according to the ESC manager. The latest information indicates that only native Alaskans are being hired at present because of contract stipulations. The ESC cautions against anyone striking out for Alaska with hopes of finding employment on the pipeline.

The Council voted to have the city manager begin immediate development of the application for submission to HUD as soon as possible.

In other business in last night's session, the Council approved the law bid for grading and planting of the Town Common and installation of street trees in the Shore Drive and Central Business District areas. Little's Nursery of Greenville, in association with a Scotland Neck firm, submitted the low bid of $47,197.15 for the landscaping work.

Bids were also approved for the new municipal swimming pool's bathhouse and deck. Chapin Construction Co. submitted the low bid of $74,852 for the general construction while Stuart Shinn Inc. offered low bids of $16,000 and $7,474 on the plumbing and electrical work. Bathhouse bids were rejected several months ago when the pool bids were opened and the city manager and architect were instructed to attempt to lower the bathhouse cost through negotiations. West and Councilman Percy Cox voted against approval of the bathhouse bids last night.

Architect William Friend said that a cost reduction of only $6,700 was achieved due to increased costs in almost every phase of the project. The reduction was also achieved through several changes in specifications.

Council members voted to switch some $29,000 from three recreational capital improvements accounts to the swimming pool appropriation category.

Roderick M. Phillips and Lemuel Clemons were reappointed to new terms on the Human Relations Council and student representatives from Rose High School and East Carolina University will be appointed after the names of prospective members are submitted to the Council. Tommy Morris was named to his fourth term on the Permanent Building Codes Review Board and Lacy Harrell was selected to serve as second alternate on the Board of Adjustments.

Following a public hearing on the rezoning of Windy Ridge Subdivision, located on State Road 1704 north of Tuckahoe Subdivision, from RA-20 to R-9, the Council approved the request. The subdivision contains some 17.6 acres.

Public hearings were held on street improvement petitions involving curb, gutter, and paving on Van-nortwick Street from Moore Street to the end and involving the installation of curb, gutter and paving on Moore Street from Railroad Street to Legion Street.

No Rate Increase For Next 30 Days

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector Managing Editor

There's not much good news about electric rates these days; but at least Greenville Utilities customers won't have to worry about a rate increase for 30 days.

This is true despite the fact that the State Utilities Commission has granted Virginia

Electric and Power Co. a temporary 17 percent increase in retail rates. VEPCO supplies GUCO on a wholesale basis and GUCO generally follows VEPCO's retail rate schedule.

The differential won't last beyond the end of the year at best. GUCO's wholesale contract with VEPCO expires then and an increase is a virtual certainty.

The matter was thrown out at the local Utilities Commission meeting last night by Director Charles Horne. No action was taken which left the rates as they have been—without the 17 percent increase recently granted to VEPCO.

Penn Central Milked Again?

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former Penn Central Railroad officers and three other men have been indicted on federal charges of conspiring to misapply $4.2 million in Penn Central funds.

The Justice Department said today that the five also were charged with mail and wire fraud in a 23-count indictment returned in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia Tuesday.

The defendants are David C. Bevan, former chairman of the finance committee and chief financial officer of the now-bankrupt Penn Central Transportation Co.; William R. Gerstnecker, former corporate vice president of Penn Central; Fidel Gotz, a West German financier who lives in Vaduz, Lichtenstein; Joseph H. Rosenbaum, a Washington, D.C., lawyer, and his brother, Francis N. Rosenbaum.

Bevan and Gerstnecker were charged with actually misapplying the money.

The indictment charged that from July 1969 until about Nov.

1, 1970, the defendants conspired to misapply Penn Central funds through a scheme involving a $10 million loan Penn Central obtained from a German bank syndicate.

The defendants allegedly arranged the loan by falsely representing the intended use of the money and then diverting $4.2 million of the loan to Gotz through a dummy Lichtenstein company, First Financial Trust.

The Lichtenstein corporation also was named a defendant in the conspiracy indictment.

"Under the stated terms of such loan, the loan proceeds were to be used to finance the rehabilitation of rundown railroad cars and equipment used by the Penn Central Transportation Co. in its business," the indictment said.

Commissioners approved the purchase of a line truck from USI at a net cost; after trade-in; of $32,547. Delivery was promised in 30 days.

A used tractor purchase was approved from Bone International, Inc. at a cost of $7,500.

A safety award was presented by Ed Askew for 481,921 man hours of work without a disabling injury in the Water and Sewer Departments.

The Commission adopted options in the state employees retirement system which allow employees to take credit for military service; make repayment for voluntarily withdrawn accounts and to take credit for out-of-state service. Employees would have to make payment to the system for the time claimed and the cost to the Utilities for the first year would be approximately $2,688.

Commissioners approved a plan to allow lighting of gas furnaces for half price during September. The normal charge is $7.50 but it will be $3.75 this month.

Commissioners approved the transfer of an excess liability policy from Moseley Bros. to Tadlock Mutual. The annual premium is approximately $17,000.

Commissioners approved the institution of condemnation proceedings for right-of-way needed for a new power transmission line north of Greenville.

Big Jet With 82 Aboard Crashes Near Charlotte

Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — An Eastern Air Lines jet carrying 78 passengers and a crew of four crashed this morning in a wooded hillside today as it was approaching fog-shrouded Douglas Municipal Airport here.

There were no immediate reports on the number of casualties, but a spokesman at Memorial Hospital reported about 12 persons were brought there for treatment.

William Rawlings, the airline's sales manager for the Charlotte district, said Eastern ground personnel were in contact with the jet moments before it crashed.

"Our Eastern people had no idea anything was wrong. Everything appeared normal. There was fog this morning but the exact cause we do not know," Rawlings said.

The DC9-30, a stretched version of the DC9, was Eastern's Flight 212. It had left Charleston, S. C., on schedule at 7 a.m. It crashed at 7:33 a.m. about two miles from the Charlotte airport.

An Eastern spokesman said 71 of the passengers were bound for Charlotte. Seven others were scheduled to go on aboard the plane to Chicago, he said.

Mayor John Belk of Charlotte and other witnesses who reached the scene before police blocked all traffic in a two-mile radius said the jet apparently exploded after hitting the ground.

Mrs. Thomas Cox, whose home is less than a mile from the crash site, said she heard the jet as it passed her house. She said there were "three big booms when it went right over our house. I never heard it (a plane) sound like that before."

"They brought one (person) down and put him on my porch. He was pretty badly burned. He lay there for a long time," Mrs. Cox said.

The plane crashed about two miles south of Charlotte's city limits, one mile off Interstate 77.

In Miami, Eastern officials identified the jet's pilot as Capt. J. E. Reeves, 48, who joined the company in 1956. The first officer was listed as James M. Daniels Jr., 36, and the flight attendants were E. A. Kerth and J. C. Watson. All were based in Atlanta.

Ervin Melton, a rescue member of the Woodlawn Fire Department, said he found four men and one of the flight attendants when he arrived at the crash. "The four men were conscious but were badly burned. The stewardess said she was okay, to take care of them," Melton said.

Duckett Named To UF Role

William Paul (Bill) Duckett Jr., Business Office manager for Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. here, will serve as chairman of the Goal Buster Division for this year's Pitt United Fund drive.

Announcement of Duckett's selection was made by Hugh Bazemore; overall campaign chairman for the upcoming UF effort.

Duckett, born in Asheville; earned his B.S. degree in math from East Carolina University and taught math in East Carteret and Beaufort Counties in 1967. He taught math at Jamesville High School from 1968 to 1970 and joined Carolina Telephone in October of 1971.

Duckett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Paul Duckett of Washington.

The division chairman and his wife, Josephine, have one child and they attend University Church of Christ here. The Ducketts live at 2706 Shawnee Place, Greenville.

"I think the United Fund is a fine organization and I feel that all citizens of Pitt County should do everything that they can to support it," he commented.

Bazemore said: "We are glad to get Mr. Duckett's services again this year. His past contributions to the United Fund drive have been very productive; and we are fortunate to have a man of his dedication to our cause handling this important division."

Bicentennial Ladies Day Activities Are Announced

Among the events planned for Ladies Day during the Bicentennial Celebration will be a buffet luncheon with entertainment and a garden party-home tour, according to Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh and Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick, co-chairmen of Ladies Day.

The buffet-entertainment will be held at the Greenville Country Club from 12 until 2 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9 and is open to the public.

Entertainment at the luncheon will be provided by Harriet Woodcock's one woman musical presentation of "The Story of the Trapp Family Singers" with songs from The Sound of Music.

Mrs. Woodcock has presented her "one-star" programs for several years. She narrates stories, interpreting the different characters in revealing episodes and intersperses all with appropriate songs.

Mrs. Woodcock had a children's radio program in Pittsburgh, which she wrote and narrated, using different voices for the characters, and later had a similar program over the local CBS radio station in Macon, Ga.

She later headed the Radio Department at Wesleyan College. Upon returning to Pittsburgh she became a public speaker for Columbia Gas of Pittsburgh and traveled in the tri-state area.

Following the entertainment the diners will attend a garden party and tour the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. White, 425 W. Longmeadow Rd. in Greenville. The latter is from 2 until 3:30 p.m.

Tickets for the luncheon, entertainment, tour of the home and garden party are all included in the $5.50 charge, according to Mrs. Ed Clement and Mrs. William H. Taft Jr., co-chairmen of the ticket committee. The refreshments for the garden party are provided by the Dig and Delve Garden Club, chaired by Mrs. Herbert R. Paschal and Mrs. Charles Stevens.

Second Husband Research Continues On The Pill, Now In Its 20th Year

Wills All To His Children

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for nearly two years. This is the second marriage for both of us. I was a widow with very little money, and he was a widower with quite a lot. We both have married children.

He just told me that he is leaving everything he has to his children. I get nothing. His children practically ignore him. They are just waiting for him to die. On those few occasions when he sees them, they show him no respect or consideration at all. My children treat him much nicer than his own do.

I am not a rich woman, but I made out my will to leave three-fourths of everything I have to my children and one-fourth to him. Should I change my will and leave my children everything?

He is 70, overweight and has high blood pressure. If he dies first and leaves me nothing, I will have to eat up my capital, and I am afraid I won't have enough to bury him. What should I do?

REMAINING ANONYMOUS

DEAR REMAINING: Leave everything to your children. If he dies first, his children will be only too happy to bury him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I and our infant daughter recently moved into a new home. A friendly neighbor told me that if I needed a sitter, her 16-year-old daughter, Mary, was available. Last evening I hired Mary from 8 p.m. until 10:30 p.m.

When I left, the baby was asleep, so that all Mary had to do was sit. I instructed her NOT to accept any collect calls because my husband was out of town and the call would be wasted. I told her to help herself to a soft drink and some cookies if she wanted a snack. She said, "No thanks, I'm on a diet." (I believed her because she is terribly overweight.)

When I returned, Mary said, "Oh, your husband called. I forgot and accepted the call."

After she left, I noticed that my drawers had been rummaged through and that a whole month's supply of birth control pills was missing! Later, I found two empty spaghetti cans and the carton from a half gallon of ice cream in the trash.

My question: Should I tell Mary's mother? That little sneak needs to be punished. My husband says to skip it.

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Tell her mother. But not so she'll punish her daughter. (The last thing Mary needs is more punishment; she's already brutally punishing herself!) The girl obviously has some serious emotional problems which desperately require professional treatment. It would be kind of you to urge that mother to get her daughter into therapy. My question: If she were YOUR daughter, wouldn't you want to know?

DEAR ABBY: Is there anything really improper about a single female walking into a top-notch restaurant to lunch or dine alone, aside from the fact that it takes a certain amount of nerve to do so?

I am a lover of good food, and I don't always have an escort to take me where I'd like to dine. However, I wouldn't want to look like I'm trying to pick up someone because I came in alone.

What say you?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Quit wondering and treat yourself to a lunch or dinner wherever you can afford to go. As long as you mind your own business, you need not worry about giving anyone the wrong impression.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All occasions."

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Pill is 20 this year and scientists still don't know exactly what it does to a woman's body, or what all its dangers might be. Research continues even as new birth control drugs are being developed, some perhaps as dramatic as The Pill.

By WARREN E. LEARY

AP Science Writer

SHREWSBURY, Mass. (AP)

— It was a time when people were trying to forget about Korea and the slogan of the day was "I Like Ike." Few talked about population problems.

It was 1952, and birth control meant diaphragms, condoms, rhythm or abstinence.

Birth control didn't concern Dr. Min-Chueh Chang as he despondently walked into his boss' office to report the apparent failure of his fertility research.

Dr. Gregory Pincus listened attentively as Chang explained that his hormone work with rabbits and rats was inconclusive. Chang had hoped the hormones would increase fertilization, but instead they only seemed to stop ovulation.

"I was not pleased but Pincus was rather excited," Chang remembers. "He told me not to worry and to go on with my work. He was a man of vision." Pincus' "vision" came in part from friends who had begun talking about population control and the need for improved contraceptives. What for Chang was failure, for Pincus seemed opportunity — the opportunity to develop a hormone compound that stopped ovulation and therefore acted as a contraceptive.

By 1954, Chang and Pincus had found two progesterone hormone compounds that female animals could take orally to stop ovulation, preventing pregnancy.

The birth control pill was born.

It wasn't the first hormone preparation that inhibited ovulation. The first was developed in the 1930s by researchers working with steroids. But these hormones were scarce then, and they couldn't be taken orally. The great achievement of Dr. Chang and Dr. Pincus was the development of a birth control compound taken by mouth.

Twenty years later, "The Pill" is a term synonymous with contraception. About 50 million women throughout the world use it, international government studies say.

Never before have so many people regularly used drugs as potent as hormone compounds for such extended periods. They do so although scientists argue about the side-effects of contraceptive pills and the potential dangers from long-term use.

The work by Chang and Pincus at the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology, in Shrewsbury, was only the beginning. Since then several new formulas for The Pill have been developed.

Today's pill basically is either of two female hormones called estrogens combined with one of six different progestogens. The progestogens are sex hormones that also can be used alone as contraceptives.

Combinations of these hormones in various strengths and dosages give users in many countries a choice among 25 to 30 brands.

It is an irony of science that sex hormones occur naturally in the body to set up and aid pregnancy, but when given in increased doses on certain schedules, prevent it.

Chang, who admits to having been born in China "about 60 years" ago, still does fertility research at the Worcester Foundation. He says he is more interested in basic research than social application, "but it is gratifying to know what came out of our early work."

Today's pills work largely by preventing ovulation — the production of eggs ready for fertilization — or by changing the lining of the uterus so that a fertilized egg cannot attach to the womb's side.

But scientists acknowledge that they do not know in fine detail what birth control pills do to a woman's body to prevent pregnancy. No one understands all the effects of tipping the delicate hormone balance.

Mrs. McCormick thought it would be and supported the research with donations which eventually totaled $300,000.

Pincus, who died in 1967, became the principal promoter of further research on The Pill. He went on globe-circling talking tours to raise funds and to encourage skeptical scientists and laymen to accept the efficacy of oral contraceptive pills.

The Pill's use has climbed steadily, particularly among women under 30 years of age. The only noticeable dip in popularity came in 1969 and 1970 when the hazards of The Pill received wide publicity.

The side effects throw a long shadow over oral contraceptives. Studies show that pill users run a greater risk than non-users of thrombosis — blood clotting in the veins that can be fatal — stroke, high blood pressure, gallbladder disorder and other problems.

Some side effects appeared to lessen when second-generation pills with lower hormone dosages were introduced in 1969.

But critics maintain that too much still is unknown about possible long-term effects, such as increased cancer risk or genetic problems in offspring.

Proponents of The Pill say the risks are minimal considering the social benefits. Millions of persons not born because of birth control pills would have added to today's population problems, they maintain.

A five-year analysis of health data on 46,000 British women was published recently by the Royal College of General Practitioners. Comparing pill users to non-users, the report concluded that risks from oral contraceptives were minimal.

Dr. Sheldon J. Segal, vice president of the Population Council and a noted researcher in the field of reproduction, says that within five years several new developments will be tested and marketed if they prove safe and effective.

Segal includes in his list of contraceptives in sight a male pill combining steroid hormones to arrest sperm production; removable clips or other devices to assure reversible vasectomies; and devices in the tubes carrying sperm from the testes that can immobilize or cripple the sperm cells.

For women, possible new contraceptives include devices implanted under the skin that can secrete antifertility agents for months; hormone-secreting intrauterine devices; and a monthly pill or suppository to bring on a menstrual cycle even if the woman has recently become pregnant, in which case the pregnancy would end.

Segal said in an interview that women also might see a monthly pill to suppress ovulation, a post-coital "morning-after" pill that can be used regularly, a pre-coital "night-before" pill, or a pill that can exactly regulate the menstrual cycle so the women can safely practice the rhythm method.

She Joins Black Church To Relate And Receives A License To Preach

HARTFORD (AP) — Barbara Risley Kingston, a white woman tired of sitting in white churches listening to how to relate to black people, joined a black church. Now she has been licensed to preach in a black church in Charleston, S.C., and hopes soon to be ordained a minister in a predominantly black denomination.

"They've been perfectly delightful," Mrs. Kingston said of her congregation at the Morris Brown AME church in Charleston.

"I feel pretty secure in a black community. They were really good about it."

She says she hopes to become one of the first white women in the nation to become an African Methodist Episcopal (AME) minister.

In a telephone interview, Mrs. Kingston said she was "dissatisfied with her white Congregational church's approach to race relations, and sought something more relevant."

"I met people and groups I didn't know existed," she said.

"I don't like black people any better than white." But in the white church she says she never came into contact with black people. "This just seems to be where the broken relationship is."

AME churches have a few white ministers and several black women ministers, but Mrs. Kingston is believed to be the first white woman to seek ordination, according to a Hartford minister.

"She would probably be the first white woman to be ordained," said the Rev. W. Melvin Campbell, pastor of the Bethel AME Church in Hartford.

Mrs. Kingston is a native of East Hartford and graduated from the University of Connecticut.

In May she was awarded a master of divinity degree from the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Columbia, S.C., making her the first woman ever to graduate from that school.

She belonged to a white Congregational church in Charleston but eventually switched to the black Congregational church there.

She said her interests led her to AME churches, a Civil War breakaway faith from the white Methodist churches.

Theologically, she said she sees no problems in becoming an AME minister.

"I don't see very much difference theologically. Basically, they are United Methodists, and I don't see much difference."

Distance Did Not Change

BRUSSELS, Belgium (WNS)—Lilliane Bruck, 36, threatened to leave her husband Pierre because he had to drive five hours a day to his garage job and was always late getting home to supper. He saved his marriage by getting a new job with a trucking firm only three blocks from his house. His new job? "Pierre is a long-distance truck-driver and only gets home once or twice a week," explained Mrs. Bruck.

Using That Surplus Revenue

If there is any question about where the so-called state revenue surplus will go, one only has to look at the record $348 million requested for new public school programs and services requested for the 1975-77 biennium.

The school budget request will total more than $1 billion for each year of the biennium.

Of course, the Advisory Budget Commission and the State Legislature don't have to—and probably won't—grant all the requests for new spending. Some of what is requested, however, is going to be desirable, and some even necessary.

Included in the requests are a top priority item of $22.9 million for more reading personnel, or training present personnel and equipment.

Some $40.5 million would increase the kindergarten by around 1,400 classes, something the state has already made a commitment to.

These requests for new programs for education represent only one phase of government. Every other department from highway patrol to higher education has ideas on new and expanded programs which will be requested.

We are all for the budget makers taking a hard look at existing programs for possible waste and at new programs for their need.

We wouldn't even object to some adjusting of taxes to correct inequities. If we go into the cutting of taxes for political purposes and disturb the basic state income from taxes too much, however, we can expect financial problems in the future.

More than once tax cuts have been rammed through as elections approached, only to leave to some future Legislature the job of imposing new taxes to pay for needed state services.

The year 1975 will be one for careful spending by the Legislature, but we also should not act too hastily in reducing taxes, if we are to avoid having to increase them at a later time.

South Must Plan For Economic Energy-Use

A news report says Southern governors are pessimistic about their area's energy prospects.

As the nation's projected growth area, and with the most catching up to do, it has to be of concern to the governor's of the region that tight and expensive energy supplies have become a problem.

The South, even more than the remainder of the nation, must plan to use its energy carefully and efficiently, if we are to continue the expansion that will mean better living for our people.

Nixon Funds Appeal

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration proposes to combine the benefits of two separate laws in order to provide Richard M. Nixon more than twice the funds former President Lyndon B. Johnson received for his period of transition to private life, government records show.

General Services Administrator Arthur F. Sampson is to defend the $850,000 Nixon budget proposal before a Senate appropriations panel today.

GSA figures obtained from congressional sources show that the Nixon budget for his first 10 months out of office compares with a total of $1.1 million spent for Johnson, his immediate predecessor, during the four years Johnson lived after retiring as president.

Of that total, Johnson received about $370,000 for transition expenses and $37,000 in pension funds during his first 17 months out of office. The presidential pension has since been increased to $60,000 annually.

The Nixon proposal, worked out by Nixon aides and Sampson in unannounced meeting in San Clemente, Calif., immediately after the resignation, would take full advantage of both the Former Presidents Act of 1958 and the Presidential Transition Act of 1963.

The Transition Act provides a former president with up to $450,000 for office, staff and other benefits during his first six months out of office. The Former Presidents Act provides for a pension, to begin immediately after a president leaves office, plus up to $96,000 for staff salaries and "suitable office space, appropriately equipped" to begin at the end of the transition period.

A Justice Department memorandum prepared at Sampson's request indicates that Nixon is not eligible for full benefits under both laws at the same time.

The Nixon proposal, however, would extend the transition period from six months to more than 10 months, ending on June 30, 1975, the end of the current fiscal year. At the same time, Nixon would be receiving $400,000 in pension, staff salaries and other benefits under the Former Presidents Act.

A GSA spokesman cited the Johnson transition as a precedent, noting that he was the only president to receive the benefits of both acts and pointing out that he extended his transition period from six months to 17 months.

But GSA documents show that Johnson received only his pension and Transition Act funds during that 17-month period and didn't begin getting staff and office money under the Former Presidents Act until the transition ended.

Calculations based on the GSA figures show that Johnson received an average of about $31,000 a month during the transition period and about $17,000 a month after that. This compares with $85,000 a month Nixon would receive during his first 10 months and $33,000 a month after that if his level of spending under the Former Presidents Act remained stable.

Mixed Tree Reactions

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—What a person sees when he looks at a stand of trees depends on his own interests. Timber is both a natural resource—precious and to be tenderly cared for—and a crop which needs to be harvested from time to time.

The conflict is at the heart of an effort by state foresters to find out what the public thinks about woodlands, and how best to serve future public needs.

A Forest Practices Study Committee set up by the General Assembly is wrestling with the dilemma, and will try to come up with some guidelines. Two public hearings have been held, one at Lexington and one in Asheville, and two more are scheduled.

One this week (Sept. 12) will be held in original Washington, and another is slated October 10 in Fayetteville.

The purpose is to find out if the public thinks state regulation of woodlands is needed, and if so what kind of law would work best.

Seek Incentives
Those involved in the two hearings held earlier say the trend is toward a state incentive program rather than regulation—that is, for aid programs to help pay for good forestry practices instead of law demanding such.

It will be a long while before that committee, chaired by Ralph Bryant, professor of forest management at N. C. State University, makes its recommendations. Then, the direction must be filtered through the forestry service bureaucracy and the General Assembly.

In the end, however, Bryant and his committee hope to outline programs meeting all those various problems which are seen in a stand of timber—the beauty in the eye of a homeowner or passerby; the protection in the eye of a conservationist or wildlife lover; the fun in the eye of a camper or outdoorsman; the dollar in the eye of the timber dealer and wood product interests.

Basically, the committee is looking at methods of timber harvesting (debating clear-cutting, selective, thinning, and partial cutting); logging roads and their impact on the land and nearby streams; what it takes for man and nature to regenerate a cut-over forest; and how to get idle timberland back into good production.

Dick Klason, assistant state forester, says landowners, timber interests, and forestry service people all agree that a better job has to be done in protecting trees and avoiding stream pollution.

But, Klason says bluntly, you've got to cut trees; both for the wood in them, and because "trees are not permanent... they're gonna die. That is the nature of trees."

When the average person complains about trees being harvested, they are not aware that "the forest is an ever-changing type of thing, and is changing all the time. It takes intensive management and harvesting to make them work," Klason said.

Tom Hegele is the fire prevention staff specialist for the state forestry operation, and is staffing the committee hearings.

Basic Conflict
Hegele hopes that the public airing will help resolve the basic conflict between timber interests and environmentalists, who do not, he thinks, look at trees realistically.

"People too often look at a tree, and don't think of wood... or they look at wood, and don't think of a tree," Hegele said.

He recalls a particular movie circulated by those opposed to tree cutting in which the narrator continually makes the point that we've got to stop cutting down trees.

"And there he sits, in a room richly paneled in wood, at a wooden desk, with a stack of paper and books on the desk, and he repeatedly makes points by jabbing a wooden pencil in the air. If we don't have wood, we don't have anything... everything around is made from a tree," Hegele said.

As the public hearings and study proceed, Hegele believes a philosophy of woodland management based on a "dominant use" system is emerging.

In short, he explains, at a given time a particular woodland is best suited for a particular use: camping, wildlife, homebuilding, or harvesting.

The object would be to bring together those uses which can best be served in conjunction, but keeping in mind that the woods do mature, grow old, and die, and that the uses must change over the years.

The INSIDE REPORT

Ford Has Fragile Base

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
CINCINNATI—Although President Ford wins an almost unanimous "favorable" rating from middle and upper-income voters in two strongly Republican suburban precincts here, the shocking fact that these same voters say they know scarcely anything about the man or his policies carries the threat to his popularity of rapid deterioration.

This apparent contradiction stems from the unprecedented way Mr. Ford became President—not following a long presidential campaign which made previous Presidents well known to voters in advance, but by appointment to Vice President and sudden accession to President. That means Mr. Ford, despite phenomenal popularity during his presidential honeymoon, lacks the hard constituent base—party workers and millions of voters who cast their ballots—which his predecessors brought with them when they entered the White House.

A Cincinnati businessman in suburban Madeira, asked whether Mr. Ford would do better on the economic crisis than Nixon, summed it up: "I could not begin to answer that question because I don't know enough about him. I don't know anything about him."

The lack of a durable constituent base, despite his massive honeymoon popularity, carries grave political risks for Mr. Ford. It requires speedy, successful performance—particularly on spiraling inflation and threatening economic disaster—far more so than with a President backed by a national voter mandate.

The demand for just such swift performance, but lacking real confidence that Mr. Ford can produce it, underlined our interviews with 55 voters in tree-shaded suburban Norwood and Madeira in company with pollster Patrick Caddell of Cambridge Survey Research.

With inflation and the economy labelled the most important national issue by 54 of our voters, only 24 voters—well under half—said they had "more confidence" in Mr. Ford's ability to deal with the economy than in the disgraced former President.

Indeed, even among 1972 Nixon voters who call themselves Republican, Mr. Ford's confidence ratio on handling the shaky economy was only marginally higher than Nixon's. Ten of the 25 Republicans who voted for Nixon said they had "more confidence" in Mr. Ford, while three said they had less.

Likewise, not one of the six Democrats in our sample who voted for Nixon agreed that with President Ford in office, the economy would improve over what it might have done with Nixon still President. As one Republican voter, a biochemist in upper-income Madeira, told us: "Ford doesn't have a single problem today with either party, but that's because we don't know

The Sleeping Bag Crowd

WASHINGTON—I was very surprised to read in the newspaper last week that Mrs. Ford said her family was cutting down on their food bills as a way of fighting inflation. The reason why I was surprised was that Mrs. Ford has teen-agers, and there is no way under the sun that you can cut a food budget when you have teen-agers living in the house. It isn't the immediate family that costs money—it's feeding everyone else's children that sends your food costs skyrocketing.

Public Forum

To the editor:

President Ford's full and absolute pre-trial pardon of former President Nixon is a grave disservice to the nation.

First, Ford's action in pardoning Mr. Nixon before indictment or trial suggests that the Watergate cover-up is continuing in the White House. It has appeared increasingly likely in recent days that Mr. Nixon would be indicted and tried—that, in other words, a clear majority of the American people were unwilling to have this case swept under the rug. The pardon seems clearly designed to head off this mounting probability of a trial for the man who made Ford President. Particularly in view of the fact that, as Vice President, Ford strongly defended Mr. Nixon's complete innocence even after having access to the evidence, the timing of the pardon is suspicious, to say the least.

Second, the Ford pardon makes it doubtful whether any of the other Watergate defendants can receive a fair trial. By the grant of a pardon, the President indicated his belief that Nixon—and, by implication, his former aides—are guilty of criminal offenses. How can the Nixon aides receive a fair trial when the man occupying the nation's highest office has become so certain of our former President's guilt that he has granted him a complete pardon before any trial or even an indictment?

Third, President Ford's action undermines the principle of equal justice under law. His handling of the Nixon case (like Mr. Nixon's handling of the Agnew case) makes it appear that, in his judgment, the higher a person's position, the more lenient the legal, moral, and ethical standards to which he should be subjected. If anything, the reverse should be the case!

Finally, the pardon jeopardizes citizen respect for the law. Ford's action suggests that, in the future, a person in high office can commit any ethical or legal wrong without fear of punishment—when the heat is on, he can simply resign and his resignation will be viewed as sufficient punishment. Balderdash!

I viewed the advent of Mr. Ford's administration as a breath of fresh air. Now, I'm not so certain.

Three sleeping bags showed up at the door. A voice from one of the sleeping bags said, "We're very good friends of your daughter Hilda, and she said we could camp on your property when we got here."

"I have no daughter named Hilda," I said.

"What's her name?" a voice from another sleeping bag asked.

"Jenny."

"That's it," the voice said.

"We're good friends of Jenny, and she said we could sleep on your lawn so we won't be arrested and tortured by the police with chains and rubber hoses."

"We won't be any bother," a voice from another sleeping bag said. "We have stale doughnuts for dinner."

I gave permission for them to camp out on the lawn. When my daughter came from home I informed her that three of her dearest friends had arrived and set up camp.

"Boys or girls?" Jenny asked.

People's Lobby Broadens Goals

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Buoyed by its successful drive for a strict California campaign reform law, the People's Lobby is now talking about amending the U.S. Constitution so citizens can propose laws through petitions.

Joyce Koupal, director of the Los Angeles-based activist organization formed in 1968, says an office is being opened in Washington, D.C., to contact congressmen and to coordinate efforts in other states.

"What this means is that we want to put the initiative (petition) process and the vote of confidence process into the Constitution," she said. "We want to make potential presidential candidates understand it could be an exciting solution they could offer.

"We can successfully put this into the presidential campaign," said Mrs. Koupal, whose husband is the group's executive director. "We will put a president into the White House on this issue."

The initiative petition long has been used as a tool for the citizens to propose legislation or amendments to the state constitution.

To make the ballot, a proposed constitutional amendment requires the signatures of 8 per cent of the number of voters casting ballots in the last election for governor or 520,806 until after this November. An initiative drive to put a new law into the statutes takes 5 per cent of the last gubernatorial vote, 325,504.

The legislature also can put proposed constitutional amendments to the voters by a two-thirds vote of each house.

The controversial campaign reform measure was Proposition 9 on the June 4 ballot in California and passed by more than 2 to 1. It imposes campaign spending limits, restricts lobbying activities and sets up a commission to oversee campaign practices.

"Keep controversy at a minimum — never debate" and "Your organization does not have to be visible to be effective" are two pieces of the advice the People's Lobby gives other groups in a recently published booklet.

"Debate only gives a platform to your opposition and causes confusion in the minds of people who are listening," Mrs. Koupal said. "If people are confused, they tend to vote no. Of course, with a candidate, it's different."

Asked if people should be kept ignorant of the issues so they will vote blindly for an initiative, Mrs. Koupal said, "That's the way the professionals do it and we studied the professionals. That's the way we win right now. As initiatives are used more and more and the educational process goes on so that people aren't fooled by a slick public relations firm, that won't hold water. That's what we're waiting for."

"We're winning because we're not stupid."

She also said work with persons who influenced community opinion is more important than sending out press releases.

yet what he is planning to do."

Here lies the potentially dangerous threat for the President. Although his honeymoon is now in full bloom, failure to launch a credible administration attack on inflation soon could consume his widespread but shallow popularity in a nasty backlash unopposed by the nonexistent national constituency that would normally come to the aid of a new President.

Moreover, we found only slender indications that Nixon's demise and Mr. Ford's accession have had much impact—at least yet—on widening the thin base of the Republican party.

One out of every three Nixon-Republican voters of 1972 did say they would be "more inclined" in the post-Watergate era to vote for Republican candidates for Congress. But independents who voted for Nixon in 1972—the obvious target for broadening the Republican party—told us Mr. Ford's accession would make "no difference."

That suggests only limited Republican gains in the November election. Republican dissident voters, who could not stomach Watergate and either voted Democratic or stayed home during the disastrous Republican showing in the special congressional election here last spring, are returning to the party. However, this trend stops far short of showing any new Republican increments. Thus, the congressional seat in this formerly rockribbed Republican district is likely to be kept by Democrat Thomas Luken, who won last spring's special election.

With the President's prowess on the economy being awaited here with healthy skepticism, his single major policy switch—pledging conditional amnesty for Vietnam draft-dodgers—struck a highly responsive chord. Over 60 per cent of each category of voters—Republicans, Democrats and independents—agreed with the President's amnesty position.

But compared to Mr. Ford's overwhelming task on inflation and the economy, amnesty is a trivial diversion. Whether the political base of the President's overwhelming popularity of the past month can be deepened into a real Ford constituency depends directly on his economic mastery, and time is running very short.

know," I replied.

It turns out that sleeping bags require large amounts of nourishment. While those of us who lived in the house could get by on bluefish or eggs, the sleeping bags had to be fed steak, ham, imported cheeses, French bread, butter and a good brand of beer.

Every day my daughter, who never did find out their names, carried down provisions to the sleeping bags. The zippers would open up automatically and they would consumer $60 worth of groceries at a feeding.

In exchange for the food, the sleeping bags strummed music on a guitar in our living room while I was trying to watch the evening news.

After the sleeping bags departed, a new group of sleeping bags arrived and said they were friends of my son Edward. I probably would have been nicer except I have no son named Edward. The nearest thing to it was Joel. While it bothered me, it didn't seem to bother Joel. He took all the sleeping bags to Kronig's grocery store where they charged everything to me for a picnic they were holding with some other sleeping bags on the beach.

Now that I'm back in Washington, the sleeping bags are starting to show up here. Many turn out to be friends of the sleeping bags who camped on my property in Martha's Vineyard. If I refuse hospitality for them I am considered an ogre by my children, Hilda and Edward, or whatever their names are. But if I let them spread out on the grass I'm going to get another $800 grocery bill.

I'm sure Mrs. Ford is telling the truth when she says she's been able to cut back on her food bills. But I figure the only way she has been able to do it is by having the Secret Service boot all the goose-feather sleeping bag acquaintances of her children right off the White House lawn.

Gasoline And Fuel Oil Supply Is Looking Good

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's supply of gasoline and fuel oil "looks good for the remainder of the year," but the supply picture for natural gas is just plain discouraging.

Gen. John J. Tolson, chairman of the Governor's Energy panel, said in an interview: "What I'm worrying about right now is natural gas. We know for a fact that North Carolina will be cut a minimum of 31 per cent or a maximum of 44 per cent on natural gas for the coming winter. That is not good. We still haven't gotten word from Washington just what our exact cut will be, but North Carolina is taking a heavier beating in the natural gas supplies than most other states."

Tolson said the natural gas reduction will affect industrial consumers.

"We have been trying to find out from industries what their fuel requirements for the winter will be," Tolson said. Many will have to turn to alternate fuel sources, such as propane gas or fuel oil.

He said that if a coal strike comes in November as predicted it will mean that prices for No. 2 fuel oil and residual oils will go up.

Although gasoline and fuel supplies "look good now, the thing that will prevent the possibility of long lines at service stations during the winter months is a moderate degree of conservation," Tolson said.

The steadily increasing cost of coal and other fuel has sent electricity bills soaring in North Carolina in the past several months.

Carolina Power & Light Co. receives hundreds of calls daily from customers complaining about their bills. CP&L's district manager, Leslie A. Pearce, said the company's customer relations section gets as many as 200 calls an hour.

Mexican And U.S. 'Blitz'

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mexican-based machines that produce illegal amphetamines and the persons accused of peddling the pills in this country were captives or targets today of a blitzkrieg by federal narcotics agents.

Indictments returned by federal grand juries in 10 U.S. cities were opened at 12:01 a.m. EDT, the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) said. They named 125 suspects — most described as middle-class and in their 20s.

By 4 a.m. EDT today, 97 persons had been arrested in the United States and 25 in Mexico, an agent at the command center here said. More were expected in custody by later in the day.

Mexican authorities had no comment on their role in the probe.

"We're going to take out all the major people involved in this conspiracy," a DEA spokesman said, reiterating agency descriptions of the operation as the largest ever undertaken by federal drug agents and a crushing blow to illegal amphetamine traffic.

An hour after the indictments were opened, the spokesman said 61 men and women were in custody, including about 20 arrested in and near Milwaukee Tuesday and several seized earlier in Mexican cities.

He said the DEA would go to trial with "evidence exceeding 10 million tablets," all of it seized before the Tuesday midnight push by U.S. and Mexican authorities.

Eight Mexicans were arrested Monday in Tijuana, Mexico City and Guadalajara, a DEA official in San Diego said, describing them as suspected financiers, chemicals importers, machine operators and smugglers.

He said he did not believe Mafia figures in the United States were involved.

Among the key indictments noted by federal narcotics sources were those for two Latin Americans and a U.S. citizen in San Diego.

They are accused of importing "mini-bennies" from Mexico — small white tablets with a cross on them — and routing them to Milwaukee for distribution to Chicago and Denver, an official said.

DEA officials in Boston, Chicago and Portland, Ore., denied that arrests were being made in their cities, as the headquarters announcement said. Washington officials said the 10 cities were the sites of indictments and arraignments — "the conspiracies are centered in those cities."

The other cities named were San Francisco, Phoenix, New York City and Charleston, W.Va.

DEA Administrator John R. Bartels Jr. said the arrests would destroy a network of drug-peddling conspirators he described as being solely responsible for an annual flood into the nation of 3 billion "pep pills."

The contraband pills, the "mini-bennies," were said by Bartels to generate street sales of $1.6 billion a year.

The volume is five times that of the legitimate medical supply, set by federal law.

Secondary road 110, 4.9 miles, widen and resurface from N.C. 11 to secondary road 1753, costing $171,500;

Countywide surveys, plans and right of way signatures, costing $12,000.

The projects which have been approved in Greene County include:

—Secondary road 1326, 1.2 miles, grade, drain, base, and pave from secondary road 1300 to secondary road 1301, costing $62,800;

—Countywide surveys, plans and right of way signatures, costing $3,500.

These projects are only a part of the two counties' secondary road projects for the 1974-75 fiscal year. Pitt County's total allocation for the year was $227,631 and Greene County's was $69,327.

GRAD HEARS OF PAROLE—Victor L. Taylor breaks into tears at graduation ceremonies at Marion Federal Prison at Marion, Ill., upon hearing he was granted a parole from charges held against him in Oklahoma by Oklahoma Gov. David Hall. Gov. Hall gave Taylor the pardon in recognition of his receiving an M.A. degree in Psychology from Southern Illinois University. Taylor, serving time on other charges, will be eligible for parole from Marion in 1976. (AP Wirephoto)

Air Disapproval

DETROIT (AP) — President Ford's pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon met with strong public disapproval, according to a national telephone survey conducted for Knight Newspapers and CBS News.

The survey results released on Tuesday indicated that 59 per cent of the respondents in the poll disapproved of the pardon, with 26 per cent approving and the rest undecided.

Two-thirds of those who disapproved said they disapproved "very strongly."

In addition, only 48 per cent of the 629 persons interviewed said they approved of the way Ford is conducting himself as president. The approval rating was 71 per cent in a mid-August Gallup Poll.

In response to another survey question, 55 per cent said they now support pardoning the others indicted or convicted for Watergate-related crimes, with 29 per cent opposed.

Interviews were conducted Monday night — before the White House disclosure that pardons were being considered for all persons charged in Watergate-related cases.

Field work for the survey was done by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J.

Voters Oppose Merger Plan

DURHAM (AP)—Durham city and county voters soundly defeated the proposed merger of their city and county governments Tuesday.

Complete but unofficial returns gave 13,124 votes against merger to only 6,198 for.

If the issue had carried, there would have been a merger of the two governmental units, separate city and county tax districts and a 16 member board of government.

The defeat of merger came in the face of the decision of the Durham Committee on the Affairs of Black People to back consolidation. Seven of eight predominantly black precincts voted for merger, but voting in these precincts was below the countywide average.

"I think people had the good sense to see through the facade of Madison Avenue techniques, and they did not go for that and they're not going to go for that," said Claude Jones who led the anti-merger forces.

Jones also attributed the defeat to what he called the "arrogance" of the Board of Directors of the Greater Durham Chamber of Commerce. He said the people did not like the idea of the chamber trying to tell them what was good for them.

Floyd Fletcher, who led the merger forces said his side accepted the verdict of the voters with disappointment but with hope that merger will be accomplished some day.

Some Upsets Scored In Yesterday's Primary Vote

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

Rep. Hugh L. Carey scored a smashing victory in New York's Democratic primary for governor, while nine governors and five senators won easy renomination in the last big round of primaries to pick candidates for the Nov. 5 elections.

Although Tuesday was generally a good day for incumbents, three congressmen were defeated: Democrats Bertram L. Podell of New York, who goes on trial for perjury today, and Robert O. Tiernan of Rhode Island, and veteran Republican Glenn R. Davis of Wisconsin.

In the major races in 13 states and the District of Columbia, however, there were few upsets.

In Maryland, former state Sen. Louise Gore scored an unexpected victory in the Republican primary for governor over Rep. Lawrence W. Hogan, the first GOP member of the House Judiciary Committee to support impeachment of former President Richard M. Nixon.

Miss Gore will be a distinct underdog in November against Democratic Gov. Marvin Mandel, who easily won renomination. Other Democratic governors who won renomination were Reubin Askew of Florida, Wendell R. Anderson of Minnesota, Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin and Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont.

Also victorious were four republican state executives, Govs. Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts, Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire, John Vanderhoof of Colorado and Malcolm Wilson of New York.

Wilson was unopposed for nomination to a full term in the post he assumed when Nelson A. Rockefeller resigned last December.

The only incumbent senator with primary opposition, Republican Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, easily won renomination.

And Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo. and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., were all unopposed for nominations to new six-year terms.

In the District of Columbia, which is electing its mayor for the first time this year, appointed Mayor Walter Washington led the Democratic primary over attorney Clifford L. Alexander Jr. The Democratic primary winner will be heavily favored in November.

In New York, where Rockefeller led the Republicans to four straight gubernatorial victories, Carey had strong labor backing as he easily defeated former off-track betting boss Howard J. Samuels.

Samuels lost his fourth bid for governor despite backing of both the state Democratic organization and many party reform leaders in a primary that saw Democrats reject all major candidates chosen at a party convention last June.

They chose a woman, state Sen. Mary Anne Krupsak of upstate Canajoharie, as Carey's running mate for lieutenant governor and gave the party's Senate nomination against Javits to former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, a transplanted Texan running on a platform of political reform.

Here are other primary results, by states:

—FLORIDA: Askew swamped three opponents, winning some 75 per cent of the vote. His November opponent is Republican Jerry Thomas, a conservative former Democrat. In the Senate race, millionaire drugstore owner Jack Eckerd defeated Public Service Commissioner Paula Hawkins for the Republican nomination to succeed Sen. Edward J. Gurney, who chose to retire after his federal indictment on charges of bribery, conspiracy and perjury. Rep. Bill Gunter led the 11-candidate Democratic field. He faces an Oct. 1 runoff against Secretary of State Richard Stone.

—MASSACHUSETTS: Sargent easily defeated his conservative rival, Carroll P. Sheehan. Former state Rep. Michael S. Dukakis won the Democratic primary over state Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn. In an upset, veteran Secretary of State John F.X. Davoren was ousted by a Democratic reformer, state Rep. Paul H. Guzzi.

—MARYLAND: Mathias routed perennial candidate Ross Z. Pierpont and will run in November against Baltimore Councilwoman Barbara Mikulski, the winner of an 11-candidate Democratic race.

—COLORADO: Vanderhoof, who became governor when

John A. Love resigned last year to become federal energy chief, defeated Denver millionaire Bill Daniels. State Rep. Richard Lamm, who led opposition to holding the 1976 Winter Olympics in Denver, won the Democratic nomination. Dominick will be opposed in November by Gary Hart, George McGovern's 1972 campaign manager and victor over two Democratic rivals.

—NEW HAMPSHIRE: Thomson, a conservative, won renomination over a Republican moderate, State Senate President David L. Nixon. The Democratic primary was won by former State Sen. Richard Leonard. In the race to succeed retiring Republican Sen. Norris Cotton, Rep. Louis C. Wyman easily won the GOP primary and will face Democrat John A. Durkin, former state insurance commissioner.

—VERMONT: Salmon, an easy winner, will face House Speaker Walter L. Kennedy, who defeated two GOP rivals. In the race to succeed retiring Sen. George D. Aiken, the Senate's senior Republican, Rep. Richard W. Mallary defeated former Federal Power Commissioner Charles Ross in the GOP primary. Patrick J. Leahy, state's attorney of Chittenden County, won the Democratic nomination.

—CONNECTICUT: Former Assembly Speaker William Ratcliff and consumer advocate Toby Moffett won the Democratic congressional nominations in the 5th and 6th Districts.

—UTAH: Democrat Alan Howe and Republican Stephen Harnsen won nominations for the 2nd District seat of Rep. Wayne Owens, who is the Democratic nominee for the Senate. Ron Inkley won the GOP nomination to oppose Democratic Rep. K. Gunn McKay in the 1st District.

—WISCONSIN: Lucey, winner over a single foe, will be opposed in November by Republican William Dyke, former mayor of Madison. Nelson will run against state Sen. Thomas E. Petri, winner Tuesday over token opposition. Davis, 59, lost to state Sen. Robert W. Kasten, 32, in the suburban Milwaukee district.

—MINNESOTA: Anderson, an easy primary winner, will seek a second term in November against Republican state Rep. John W. Johnson, unopposed Tuesday. In the major race Tuesday, James Oberstar, top aide to retiring Rep. John A. Blatnik, was nominated in the 8th District over state Sen. A.J. (Tony) Perpich, brother of Lt. Gov. Rudy Perpich.

—ARIZONA: Democrat Raul Castro, who narrowly lost in 1970, and Republican Russell Williams were nominated for the governorship being surrendered by Republican Gov. John R. Williams. Goldwater's November rival will be Scottsdale newspaper publisher Jonathan Marshall.

RHODE ISLAND: Tiernan was edged by freshman state Rep. Edward P. Beard.

Ayden Board Bars Self-Service Gas Pumps At Site

AYDEN—The Ayden Board of Commissioners denied a request from Charlie Hardee of Quick Fill, Inc., that a special use permit be granted for a lot located on the corner of Third and Laurinburg Streets.

The property was to have been used for self-service gas pumps without an attendant on duty.

The request was denied earlier by the Ayden Planning Board. Dr. Stephen Sudor, chairman of the Ayden Planning Board told the commissioners his only reason for voting against the placement of gas pumps on that particular site was because of safety. He explained the property is located only one block from the Ayden Elementary School.

Mayor Ross Persinger read a letter from Douglas Stocks, a gas station operator whose station is located near the property in question. Stocks stated he was against the proposed project but gave no reasons for his feelings.

Robbie Robererson also voiced opposition to the project.

In a vote of 3-2, the commissioners denied the request.

The board held a public hearing on street improvements including paving on Laurinburg Street and curb and gutter for Seventh Street between Washington Street and Montague Avenue.

Both projects were approved by the board and will be done within the current fiscal year.

A report from the Electric Committee, composed of Ayden citizens who were appointed by Mayor Persinger about six months ago, was given by Commissioners J. Elliott Dixon.

Dixon explained the committee had reviewed the electrical rates and structure of the electrical system for the town of Ayden. The report gave a summary of the buying power of Greenville Utilities Commission; why the electrical rates were increased; and why the different rates for winter and summer months.

The report was approved by the board and copies will be available for review by Ayden citizens.

The board named St. Louis Sticker Company, St. Louis, Mo., as apparent low bidder for windshield decals which will replace the metal town tags.

The bid was 12 cents per decal. The town will order 1,800 decals for 1975.

The board received two other bids, one was 22 cents per decal and the other was 24 cents per decal.

Eugene Smith was appointed to serve another three year term on the Ayden Zoning Board of Adjustments. R.E. Roberson and Mrs. Leolia Dixon were appointed to the Library Commission. They replace Clyde Simmons and Nina Phillips.

The board amended their ordinance on the opening and closing of graves in the town cemetery so that the charge would be $35 for opening and closing a grave on week days and $50 for Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Previously, the town would charge $35 during the week if the grave was dug on Friday and closed either Saturday or Sunday. The charge for the weekend was $65.

Representatives from the Daughters of the American Revolution explained Constitution Week and the upcoming bicentennial. They asked the board to display flags on Lee Street during Constitution Week later this month. The board agreed to check the matter and try to get the flags up by Constitution Week.

James Pridgen and James Lamb appeared before the board concerning the application of a taxi cab franchise to operate in the town of Ayden. They were advised by the board to consult the town attorney to get all the necessary information that is required by town ordinances.

The board instructed Ayden Police Chief Tommy Burney to make a background investigation of both men. Oct. 14 was set as the tentative date for a public hearing to consider the request.

A 1952 fire truck was declared as surplus and will be advertised and sold through sealed bids. The vehicle has been replaced by a 1974 model.

Tillman Chauncey was named fire chief to fill the unexpired term of Charlie Tripp who resigned last month.

The board agreed to purchase ads in the Ayden-Grifton High School football program and in the school annual.

Looking To Emergency

RICHMOND (AP)—The State Corporation Commission has ordered the 18 companies who distribute gas to retail customers in Virginia to come up with contingency plans for emergency distribution.

The SCC gave the companies until Oct. 31 to present contingency plans for supplying customers in event of unforeseen emergencies such as unduly cold spells lasting as long as 10 days and seasonal volume limitations in case the entire winter heating season is unseasonably cold.

Company officials and SCC staff members met last week to discuss the situation.

The SCC said estimates are that there will be a daily cut-back for the 1974-75 winter of 22 per cent by Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Corp. and a further reduction by Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. of about 12 per cent. The two companies supply the majority of the natural gas to the 18 distribution companies.

East Tennessee Gas Co. supplies a small amount to the southwest part of the state.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in indecisive and very light trading.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial was up 2.42 at 660.59, but losers held a 5-to-4 advantage over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the market appeared to be caught between balancing upward technical forces and the continued depressants of inflation and recession fears.

In addition, said Saul Smerling at Standard & Poor's Corp., "there is concern that President Ford's pardon of Richard Nixon could be divisive."

"The news came as bombshell, and the market generally doesn't like bombshells."

Sony Corp. was the Big Board volume leader, down 1/4 at 6.

Ryder System fell 1 1/2 to 5 1/2 in active trading. The truck-renting and leasing company said it was anticipating write-downs and associated losses of some $7 million in its Toro Petroleum Division during the third quarter.

Ryder's stock sold as high as 31 1/4 earlier this year.

Berkey Photo, which said it expected to show a yearly loss of about $2 million, was down 3/4 at 3.

The Big Board's 11 a.m. composite index of all its listed common stocks was up .01 at 36.18.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index rose .07 to 66.44.

Coit International led the Amex most-active list, down 1/4 at 1.

Graham Clarifies Swamp Fever Law

WINTERVILLE—State Agriculture Commissioner James A. Graham was the keynote speaker at the meeting of the Winterville Ruritan Club Tuesday night.

Graham explained the 1939 law governing procedures concerning Equine Infectious Anemia (swamp fever). He explained the law in order to eliminate confusion over the disposition of horses found to have the sickness.

"According to the law, no persons shall sell, trade or transport any animal affected with a contagious or infectious disease," Graham stated. "The owner must confine any affected animal and isolate it from other animals and not permit it access to any waterway which passes beyond the premises of the owner.

"While EIA may not be as contagious as some other animal diseases, it is recognized as a contagious disease," Graham said.

Graham added, "This in no way states that a horse having been given the Coggins Test and found to have EIA must be destroyed. The Coggins Test is the universally accepted method of testing."

Graham said efforts underway to find more equitable procedures in enforcing the EIA law and its rules and regulations.

Turning to the general agricultural situation, Graham reported that early dry weather damaged the corn crop to the extent there would probably be a yield of 10 bushels per acre less than last year.

"Delay in tobacco harvesting, particularly in the piedmont and western part of the state, due to water, has caused it to take on new growth," Graham said. "Prices, however, have been good, running around $1.12 a pound for good quality."

Graham said wet weather has caused an excessive growth of weeds in some soybean fields with spray programs being delayed. This could cause some loss of yield.

"Peanuts have sustained some damage due to wet weather. Weeds and grass are a problem," Graham noted. "As you know, harvest will be much later than in 1973."

Graham said there are reports of some damage to sweet potatoes from wet weather but overall there will be a good crop.

"The N.C. Department of Agriculture continues to develop markets for our products across the nation. Livestock marketing specialists have visited potential cattle buyers in northern and midwestern states," Graham said. "This month, 76 breeder swine will be exported to Venezuela. A livestock marketing specialist will accompany the shipment and contact other prospective buyers."

Graham was introduced by State Senator Vernon White of Winterville. Graham lauded White's long history as an agricultural leader and friend of the farmer in the legislature.

Family Member Says Depressed Nixon Not 'Lifted' By Pardon

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of Richard M. Nixon's family says the former President is "in a deep depression" which was not lifted by the full, presidential pardon he received.

In addition, Nixon was said to be in physical pain from a phlebitis condition that had publicly been described as resolved last July.

This family member said that Mrs. Nixon and other relatives are worried about the condition of the ex-president.

The family member sought out a telephone interview on Tuesday night saying that "this is something someone should talk about," but asked not to be identified by name.

This person has seen and spoken with Nixon both before and since the President resigned Aug. 9 and talked with Nixon by telephone as recently as Monday night.

This family member knew of no specific physical problem other than the phlebitis, a blood clot which developed in Nixon's left leg just before his June trip to the Middle East.

"From the way reports are coming back (from Sen. Clemente, Calif.), I just feel there is something more. It bothers me," this person said.

"It is enough to worry Mrs. Nixon. The worse it would be, the less he would talk about it."

"In other words, he's obviously in pain. He's obviously concerned about his health, but he's not talking about it."

This family member said, "Emotionally he's still way down and that's what bothers me even more."

"He is in a deep depression. I would hope the pardon would eventually lift that but I just haven't noticed that. There was no sudden elation."

Nixon's mind, however, remains acute, this person said. Since the resignation, the former president has discussed his financial affairs with this member of the family.

"I went over some things and he kept right up with them," this family member said. "He has a strong mind and it was as strong as ever. He grasped the specifics, recalled them and even caught me up on a few things."

Asked Nixon's feelings about the events that led to his resignation under fire, this family member recalled that Nixon had said the resignation was "abhorrent to every instinct in my body."

"He is a fighter and he wanted to stay there, but his mind overcame his emotions. His mind and reason, his sense of values, his concern for the country, and his sense of realities won out in the end," the family member said.

"After he made his decision he had to live with that other feeling, though. That's a very tough thing to do. In talking with him, his consolation is in saying it was the right thing for the country."

"He has said that on numerous occasions and when going over it again he always comes back to that. It's going to be a long time before he finds peace for himself."

RECORD SETTING STEAL—The St. Louis Cardinals' Lou Brock sets a major league record of 105 stolen bases in a single season with this slide into second base during Tuesday night's

Thompson Leads U.S. To Comeback Victory

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — David Thompson, North Carolina State's All-America, received a Russian jersey after the finale of the USA-USSR six-game basketball series but paid for it with lots of bumps and bruises.

"It was a very tough physical series," said Thompson, after the 82-72 American victory Tuesday night to give the USA All-Stars a 5-1 record against the USSR National Team. "The Russian team is a lot more physical than any American college team."

Thompson led all scorers with 30 points, to pace the Americans, scoring 17 in second half to spark a comeback by the USA squad.

The Americans led, 41-33 at half time but the Russians stormed from behind in the opening moments of the final period to wipe out the margin.

Thompson, a 6-foot-4, 195-pounder, thrilled the crowd of 6,534 including USSR minister counselor Anatoly Gromyko and U.S. Secretaries Rodgers Morton, Frederick Dent and Earl L. Butz, with his leaping ability, especially his famed "alley oop" layouts, his drives toward the basket, and his out ide shooting.

USA Coach Norm Sloan of N.C. State said, "I'm glad it's over. It was a tough series. It was the best American team that could have been put on the floor at this time."

The Russians led, 23-16, midway through the first half, but the Americans came right back with ten straight points before play was stopped temporarily when the referees brought both sides together for what was described as "an interpretation of the international rules." Steve Green of Indiana said afterwards, however, it was "just a stalling tactic by their coach. He's been doing that the entire series to stop the momentum of our ballclub."

The official reason given for the delay, according to Green, was that the referees wanted to discuss Thompson's shot blocking, because USSR coach Vladimir Kondrashin complained many of them were illegal.

At the beginning of the second half, the Russians scored the leadoff better in the second inning before Buddy Bell, Joe Lis, Frank Duffy, Angel Hermoso, John Jeter and Gamble singled. That put Cleveland in front 6-2 and chased Lolich, 16-18.

Indians 12, Tigers 6 Cleveland reached Detroit's Mickey Lolich for five runs on six straight singles in the second inning and went on to beat Detroit.

Lolich, who had won his four previous decisions against Cleveland this season, retired the leadoff better in the second inning before Buddy Bell, Joe Lis, Frank Duffy, Angel Hermoso, John Jeter and Gamble singled. That put Cleveland in front 6-2 and chased Lolich, 16-18.

Both American players went to the floor.

Green got up and went after Miloserdov. Thompson jumped into the middle, and the Americans came off the bench. The referees stepped immediately between the players before any physical damage could occur.

After a brief time out, play continued, with most of the players exchanging handshakes.

After the game, the USSR's Alexander Salnikov, who led the Russians in scoring with 20, and Thompson exchanged playing jerseys.

Thompson, who led the N.C. State team on a Far East eight-game tour before the six-game series with the Russians, said after the game: "I'm going home to rest before going to school because I'm tired."

Lou Brock has made good on his promise to the fans of St. Louis.

Brock, who had said he wanted to break Maury Wills' stolen base record before the home fans at Busch Stadium, did just that Tuesday night, stealing second base in the first and second innings to boost his season total to 105 — one more than the standard set by Maury Wills in 1962.

"I'm glad to get it over with, although I'd have liked it to be during a winning game," said the incomparable Brock, whose Cards were beaten 8-2 by the Philadelphia Phillies.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh beat Chicago 12-4, Los Angeles blanked Atlanta 1-0, Cincinnati beat San Diego 5-2, Montreal defeated New York 6-4 and San Francisco edged Houston 6-5 in 11 innings.

Wills said he had mixed emotions about seeing his record broken, but hailed Brock's outstanding performance.

"My hat's off to him," the former Los Angeles Dodgers' infielder said. "I never thought anyone would approach the record this soon, probably not in my lifetime."

The thefts came during the Cards' 142nd game and Brock's 134th. Wills stole his 104th base in the Dodgers' 165th game of the 1962 season.

After leading off the first inning with a single, he broke for second on the second pitch by Philadelphia right hander Dick Ruthven and easily beat the throw from catcher Bob Boone, which bounced into center field as Brock went to third.

In the seventh inning, Brock again waited until Ruthven had an 0-1 count on Ron Hunt before streaking to second, once again well ahead of Boone's wide throw to the bag.

The thefts by Brock, who has been thrown out 29 times this year, also lifted him to 740 for his career, eclipsing the mark of 738 set by Max Carey of the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1929. Only Ty Cobb, who had 892, and Eddie Collins, who had 743, stole more bases during their major league careers.

Brock's baserunning efforts overshadowed the slugging of Phils third baseman Mike Schmidt, who blasted a two-run homer and two doubles and drove in four runs. He now leads the majors with 35 homers and is tops in the NL with 110 RBI.

The Phils' victory dropped St. Louis 3½ games behind front-running Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Dodgers 1, Braves
Don Sutton blanked Atlanta on four hits to raise his record to 15-9 and Ron Cey drove in the game's only run with a single in the second inning. Sutton ended the game by striking out home run king Hank Aaron on a sharp curveball.

Reds 5, Padres 2
Cincinnati's Don Gullett scattered six hits and fanned 11 batters in pitching the Reds to a 5-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Pirates 12, Cubs 4
Ken Brett, making his first start since injuring his elbow Aug. 6, tested his arm and his bat Tuesday and found both to be in good working order. He pitched the first six innings of the Pirates' 12-4 rout of the Chicago Cubs, and also rapped out three hits.

Richie Hebner contributed four hits to Pittsburgh's 20-hit barrage, including his 14th homer of the season.

Giants 6, Astros 5
Tito Fuentes broke a 4-4 tie with an RBI single and Bobby Bonds drove in what proved to be the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning for the Giants.

The Astros came back with a run in the bottom of the 11th on Cliff Johnson's RBI single, but fell one run shy.

Expos 6, Mets 4
Willie Davis slugged a two-run homer and Larry Lintz drove in three runs with two singles to pace the Montreal attack as the Expos tripped the Mets.

Notre Dame Climbs Into Second On Poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Notre Dame's defending national champions climbed into second place in The Associated Press college football rankings today, closing in on preseason leader Oklahoma.

The Fighting Irish, No. 1 a year ago but third in the 1974 preseason poll, was the only member of the Top Ten to see action as the season got under way last weekend. Notre Dame defeated Georgia Tech 31-7 Monday night.

Oklahoma continued to lead with 22 first-place votes and 917 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Notre Dame received 17 first-place votes and 863 points.

Ohio State, which had been second, slipped to fourth with nine first-place votes and 802 points, one point behind Alabama, which received five first-place ballots. Alabama was No. 4 in the preseason poll.

The rest of the Top Ten remained the same — Southern California in fifth place, followed by Michigan, Nebraska, Penn State, Louisiana State and Texas.

Notre Dame is idle this weekend but all other members of the Top Ten open their seasons.

The most impressive first-weekend winner was Arizona State, which clobbered Houston 30-9 and shot up from 15th to 11th. UCLA remained 12th after a 17-17 tie with Tennessee but the Vols moved up from 16th to the 15th position vacated by Arizona State, behind Pitt and Maryland, which repeated in the 13th and 14th spots.

North Carolina State climbed from 18th to 16th by trouncing Wake Forest 33-15. Idle Arizona remained 17th while Missouri, another idle team, was voted into the Second Ten as No. 18.

Houston, 11th a week ago, fell to 19th by losing to Arizona State while idle Arkansas and Stanford tied for 20th. In the preseason poll, Arkansas was 19th and Texas A&M 20th.

Baseball Also On Buc Slate

There was another game in town Tuesday just beyond the East Carolina University football practice fields.

Running, throwing and hitting the little white baseball were what George Williams, head coach of the defending Southern Conference champion baseball Pirates and conference "Coach of the Year," called "a flock."

"Yes, we had many people to show up for fall workouts," said Williams. "We weren't very organized, but that will come in a while."

The Pirates will engage in a controlled scrimmage Saturday at 12:30 at Harrington Field with Louisville Junior College. This will give fans in town early for the football game with Bowling Green a chance to see some afternoon baseball next door to Ficklen Stadium.

During the scrimmage, both teams will substitute players at random, in hopes of finding some winning combinations for 1975 teams. As Williams said, "It is sort of hard to pin down, but we have a lot of people."

"Over the years people have known about the East Carolina University baseball tradition, and maybe with winning the title again last year, more people want to be a part of it. I really don't know, though."

Following Saturday's scrimmage, the Pirates will hold a similar type contest against Atlantic Christian College prior to the Pirate football game against East Tennessee State. Sept. 28 the Pirates again will be at home to take on Campbell College.

Courageous Is Easy Winner

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Sports Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — An Australian real estate promoter made it known months ago he would spend as much as $9 million to dislodge the America's Cup from the United States.

He also may use a few more strong words to go with his money, the words being aimed at the Yankee crew manning the Courageous, a boat that very well may send him home in frustration.

Alan Bond already has spent an estimated $6 million in his challenge to win the 123-year-old Cup, but in Tuesday's first race in a best-of-seven series his gold-colored Southern Cross went down in shocking defeat.

Courageous, with crack helmsmen Ted Hood and Dennis Connor in control, outdistanced the Aussie challenger by 4 minutes and 54 seconds in light wind and came home at least one-half mile ahead.

The two boats were to race the second heat beginning at 12:10 p.m. today over a 24.3-mile course located some seven miles offshore in Rhode Island Sound.

"We're not discouraged," Bond said after the first race. "The crew hasn't lost its confidence. We made some purely human errors, and we won't make them again in the next race."

But Bond saved his strongest words for Connor. He accused the American of shouting such phrases as "false start, false start" as the two boats maneuvered around the starting line.

"I don't know what he was trying to do, or to prove, but if he does it again, I'm going to file a protest," Bond promised.

Better sailing weather was expected for today's start. The forecast was for winds up to 16 knots, giving both boats a chance to operate at peak efficiency.

The start of the first race was delayed by heavy fog on Rhode Island Sound and the two yachts didn't get away until 2:10 p.m., the latest possible time they could have started under terms of the match.

The Americans have successfully defended the Cup 21 times since it was brought to this country in 1851 and over that time have won 67 races to only seven by all the challengers combined.

The Southern Cross was touted to be the most formidable challenger the Americans have had to face. But after the first one-sided contest, many veteran yachtsmen feel the Cup will remain in this country for another three years at least.

Respass feels that to be able to beat Williamston, the Eagles have to move the football. "We have to move to win. If we shut them out we will have an early Christmas present. They execute better than any team."

Mills expected to beat Gates. The Tigers mauled Gates, 47-0 mainly on four big runs. "The first game last year was like this," Mills said. Gates should have been playing for the state championship last year. I wasn't surprised but I didn't expect that big a score.

"It was a long-run game," said Mills. "They were 11 big plays; no long drives. I was pleased with the yardage." Williamston picked up 386 rushing.

The Tiger coach expects both teams to be a little tight for the game Friday night. Both, he says, will be up for it.

For Jamesville, their second week of football showed much improvement. According to Coach Linc Page, the Bullets moved the ball better and did an overall better job despite losing to a J.V. team from Rocky Mount last Thursday night.

This week the Bullets host South Edgecombe. "They play what we prepare for in practice. We plan to do what we normally would do," said Page.

Indirect Signals That Castro Wants To Talk

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Indirect signals from Havana that Fidel Castro may be interested in talking with the United States have inspired the Ford administration to begin an extensive review of U.S. policy toward the Caribbean island.

The Cuban premier is thought to be more receptive to a dialogue with Washington in order not to remain totally dependent on the Soviet Union, which supplies his regime with some $1 million a day in aid.

The feelers are being conveyed sometimes through the occasional American visitors to Cuba and also by a less hostile posture generally by Cuba toward the United States.

Although no firm decision is imminent, the policy review could eventually lead to a reversal of the U.S. effort to isolate Cuba from the rest of the hemisphere.

The United States broke relations with Cuba in 1961, imposed a trade embargo in 1962, and joined with all other hemisphere nations except Mexico in 1964 in trying to isolate Cuba both diplomatically and economically.

However, six nations have since repaired relations with Havana. Panama has announced its intention to follow suit, and Colombia, Costa Rica and Venezuela have asked the Organization of American States to convene foreign ministers in Quito, Ecuador, in November to consider a reversal of the embargo.

At this point, Cuba seems to prefer reopening direct channels with Washington to re-entering hemisphere councils, including the Organization of American States.

If these talks develop, they could consider such topics as lifting travel restrictions that prevent most Americans from traveling to Cuba, trade barriers that also limit other countries which deal with Havana, or even an exchange of diplomats.

Since many of these anti-Cuban measures were written into the law, the administration would need Congressional support to accomplish a policy reversal.

One Injured Bank Robber Quickly Caught

One person was reported injured and an estimated $570 property damage caused in two collisions here yesterday.

Officers said John Roderick Doggett of Shady Knoll Trailer Pk. was injured when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car about 6 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Reade Streets.

Investigators, who charged Doggett with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, identified the driver of the car involved as Linda Skinker Bauman of Route 2, Ayden and estimated damage at $195 to the car and $25 to the motorcycle.

Joe Cobb of Riverhead, N.Y. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 6:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth and Shepard Streets.

Officers reported the Cobb auto collided with a vehicle driven by Robert Lee Cherry of 801 Douglas Ave. causing an estimated $275 damage to the Cherry car and about $75 damage to the Cobb auto.

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A suspected robber was trying to outrun police in a hostage's Volkswagen.

He had a pistol on the seat between his legs. As he concentrated on threading his way through traffic, the hostage reached over, got the gun, and threw it out the window.

Police caught the man minutes afterward Tuesday. They charged him with bank robbery in a theft from the Home Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The hostage, Rodney Skaggs, a professor of speech and drama at Campbell College in nearby Buies Creek, said the man told him it was a blank pistol. "But I wasn't taking any chances," Skaggs said.

He said he was the only customer when the robber took him hostage. He quoted the man as saying he didn't want to hurt anyone, but only wanted the car for his getaway.

Police said about $2,000 was recovered with the arrest of the man. He was booked as Edward Eugene McLean, 21, of Washington, D.C., and held in jail in Fayetteville under $25,000 bond.

It was the second robbery of the day at a financial institution in the state. They brought to 45 the number of robberies of banks or building and loan associates in North Carolina this year.

Two men robbed a branch of the North Carolina National Bank in Charlotte.

Two tellers, one carrying a money box, walked across the bank parking lot to open a drive-in window for the day's business. The two robbers ran up behind them, ordered, "Drop it, drop it."

The teller dropped the box. The men picked it up and ran. The amount it contained was not disclosed.

He ran into a woods to hide and gather his thoughts.

When his mother came home from work, she found the body of his 8-year-old sister in a bedroom of their home on a rural road between nearby Gibsonville and McLeansville.

Richard came home about nightfall. Bloodhounds, deputies and policemen had searched wooded areas around the house. The police said they couldn't understand how Richard escaped being found.

They said he gave this account:

He and his sister, Mary Elizabeth Hawks, had just got home from school Tuesday. He got a pistol from a drawer in

Opine Syrian Strength Doesn't Match Israel's

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence estimates are that Soviet arms shipments have substantially improved the quality of Syria's military forces and more than made up the losses suffered in the October war with Israel.

But the Soviet aid, including a new line of jet fighters, is not enough to tip the balance against the Jewish state, and Israel would triumph should fighting resume between the two countries, it is believed here.

This assessment of Syrian strength, however, does not take into immediate account the likelihood that Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin will convince administration officials during his four-day visit that Israel needs a further upgrading of its air and ground strength.

In an arrival ceremony Tuesday on the White House lawn, the former general stressed that "only a strong Israel, able to defend itself against aggression, has a chance of winning a peace."

President Ford, at Rabin's side, seemed to give the kind of assurances the Israeli leader is seeking. "We are committed to Israel's survival and security," he said.

Rabin, who spent almost an hour with Ford afterward in the Oval Office, gets to the details of his negotiations today with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and with Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

The Soviets are known to be replacing Syrian equipment on a one-for-one numerical basis — except for the additional bounty of a new line of jets. In the process, however, they are understood to be turning over more sophisticated gear than was lost during the war.

Still, the intelligence estimate is that Israel would win a war confined to the two states if one broke out.

Evans To Head Ayden UF Drive

AYDEN—DeLyle M. Evans has been named chairman of the Ayden United Fund Drive; according to Joe Tripp, director of the Pitt County United Fund.

Evans, 27, attended the Ayden and Winterville schools and graduated from Washington High School in 1965. He received an A.B. degree in history from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1969 and attained the law degree in 1973 from Wake Forest University. Evans is presently engaged in private practice at 303 S. Lee St., Ayden.

He is a member of the Ayden

Rotary Club, Ayden Golf and Country Club and the Winterville Ruritan Club. He is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; Greenville.

Evans stated, "I am quite happy to head this very important drive. A large portion of the contributions for the United Fund from Ayden will come back to the Ayden Community. Therefore, I feel that the time spent will be well worth the benefits that this community reaps from a successful drive."

Projects the drive has aided in the past include the Ayden Rescue Squad; the Ayden Recreation Program; Personal Relief Fund and the Christmas Basket Program.

The United Fund Drive will be kicked off on Oct. 1; according to Tripp.

Exception To The Law

HARTSVILLE, S.C. (AP)—The "Wagon Man" and his Old Red, his mule, will not be forced off the streets of Hartsville.

A judge ruled Tuesday that although the ordinance prohibiting mules within the city limits is valid and enforceable, the case of 74-year-old handyman Early Wilds and 16-year-old Old Red is "unusual."

"This is also a court of equity," said Darlington County Judge D. Carl Cook. "Early Wilds has no other means of making a livelihood and is an old person. It would not be equitable to force him to move his mule from the city of Hartsville."

As Wilds and Cook left the courtroom, the judge said, "Now you tell Red for me."

Wilds supports himself and his wife on his Social Security check and the money he earns plowing home vegetable gardens with Red. He said he had no place to stable Red other than a shed at his home.

So Wilds will continue to guide a mule-drawn wagon through the streets of this northeastern South Carolina town of 9,000, as he has done for 50 years.

RULES, RULES, RULES. Seems that everywhere you go there's a stop sign. The latest is a stop sign in the Pacolet River just above the dam at Clifton Mill No. 2 in Spartanburg. Obviously placed there by a wag, the sign really

N.C. Wouldn't Claim Both Of 2 Candidates

By DR. H. G. JONES
Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — How could North Carolina fail to claim the vice-president when the candidate for each party was a native of the state? It happened in 1852.

In that year the Democrats nominated William Rufus King for vice-president and the Whigs nominated William Alexander Graham for the same office. King, the victor, died before reaching Washington.

William A. Graham was born at Vesuvius Furnace near Lincolnton in 1804, a son of Gen. Joseph Graham. After graduation from UNC he practiced law in Hillsborough and served in the House of Commons. In 1840 he was elected to the United States Senate where he served three years. In 1844 he became governor, serving two terms.

Declining appointment as minister to Spain, Graham in 1850 accepted appointment as secretary of the navy. He resigned in 1852 to accept the Whig vice-presidential nomination. Following his defeat for national office, he was elected to the State Senate three terms and to the Confederate Senate.

In 1866 he again was elected to the United States Senate but was refused admission. Later he was a delegate to the Union convention in Philadelphia; a member of the board of Peabody trustees; and arbitrator selected by Virginia on the disputed boundary between that state and Maryland. It was in the latter duties that he died at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., in 1875.

William Rufus de Vane King was born in Sampson County in 1786, the son of William King, a long-time member of the General Assembly. The youngster graduated from UNC at the age of 17 and studied law at Fayetteville. At the age of 20 he began the practice of law in Clinton. The following year he was elected to the House of Commons.

King was only 25 when he was elected to the United States Congress. He served until 1816 when he became secretary of the U.S. legation at Naples and later at St. Petersburg. Upon his return to the country, King moved to the new territory of Alabama where he was elected a delegate to the convention that organized the state government. Upon the admission of Alabama to the Union in 1819, King was elected to the U.S. Senate, serving until 1844, when he resigned to become a planter at Selma, Ala.

His "retirement" was short-lived. He accepted President Polk's appointment as minister to France, 1844-46 and in 1848 again went to the U.S. Senate where he remained until December, 1852, following his election as vice-president.

Because of ill health, King went to Cuba to recuperate. There, under a special act of Congress, he was allowed to take the oath of office as vice-president of the United States on March 4, 1853. The following month he arrived at his plantation in Alabama and died on April 18.

Thus, though King became vice-president, he did not have the opportunity to exercise the powers of the office; and his native North Carolina, which provided both vice-presidential candidates in 1852, ended up without a vice-president of its own.

Revival Begins On Wednesday

More Southern Pupils Being Bussed To Schools

By The Associated Press

When public school bells rang in the South this fall, fewer children were around for the return to reading, writing and arithmetic, but more were being bused.

Enrollments were down from last year in Louisiana, Tennessee, Alabama and South Carolina while Georgia projected a decreased school population. North Carolina remained about the same as last year.

Only Florida reported more pupils in classes this year. "Most of the parents this year say they don't care where their child goes to school," said John Goonen, director of Florida's pupil placement.

Southern officials gave several reasons for the lessened enrollment—a leveling off of the birth rate and continued white flight to the suburbs to avoid integration.

Tennessee and Louisiana also reported a decline in pupils in private and parochial schools.

Busing apparently increased in most Southern states and none reported any major problems.

Orange County, Fla. expects 86,000 pupils this fall, up about 725 from last year. About 8,000 will be bused, the second year of a court-ordered plan which caused controversy last year.

In Jacksonville, the second year of fully integrated cross-busing for the school system opened in late August. "It looks like one of the smoothest openings we've had in the last several years," said Francis Brown, director of transportation.

He said about 56,000 of the 110,000 pupils in the system are riding buses. He said 38 buses were added this fall, bringing the total to 515.

In Tennessee, enrollment is expected to be around 900,000, a drop of about 25,000.

"We have a baby bust, for one thing," a state education official said. He also noted that private schools continue to siphon off potential public school pupils, particularly in the elementary levels.

In Memphis, a decline of 2 per cent in early white enrollment is linked to white flight to private schools to avoid court-ordered busing.

Harry B. Sharp, assistant superintendent in charge of pupil services, said 77,118 blacks and 33,400 whites—a ratio of 70 to 30—were enrolled. At the end of last spring's term, about 42,300 whites, or 32 per cent of an enrollment of 118,000 were in school.

White enrollment in public schools last fall dropped by about 12,000 with the start of large scale busing this fall under a federal court order issued in the summer of 1973. Last spring, between 27,000-28,000 were being bused.

Georgia public school officials estimate an enrollment statewide of 630,615 for grades one through seven—down 12,651 from last year. For grades eight through 12, officials forecast 404,042 pupils this year—a gain of 1,515.

In populous Atlanta, pupil enrollment was down this fall about 3,600 from last spring, when 88,000 were enrolled. Officials estimate, however, that more children will be registered by mid-September.

An education official said the drop was "due to a combination of factors, the flight of both blacks and whites to suburbs and the high mobility rate of residents." Atlanta's school system is busing about 200 more pupils this fall.

Louisiana officials said pupil populations declined in public, private and parochial schools because of lower birth rates in the 1960s.

The Orleans Parish enrollment is expected to be down about 5,000 this year—a drop of about 5 per cent.

In Alabama, Birmingham's city school enrollment this fall was 50,682, down 11928 from last spring. The system is 60 per cent black and officials attribute the pupil loss to moves to the suburbs.

The Mobile city-county school system had an attendance this fall of 60,500—down 4,989 from last fall. However, officials say when registration is completed, they estimate about 100 more pupils. Approximately 26,000 of these children will be bused, officials said.

Officials in Mississippi claim little change in enrollment figures from a year ago, and busing was expected to be about the same. However, a private school official claimed Mississippi's first grade population was slowly dropping each year.

In South Carolina, public school enrollment this fall is estimated at about 530,000, down 3,000 from last year. A school official said the decrease reflects the national trend of a lowered birth rate.

In North Carolina, an education official said busing will be "about the same as last year," but he said cost has cropped up as a major problem.

"The cost of operating school buses has simply been reflected in inflation," said Dr. A. Craig Phillips, state superintendent.

He said the number of pupils in North Carolina being bused had leveled off to about 800,000. "North Carolina has been busing for a long time," he said. "We are now trying to find a way to eliminate standees."

The state has about 1,120,000 pupils in public school, Phillips said.

One system still under supervision of federal court is Charlotte-Mecklenburg, the state's largest, with about 78,000 pupils. The system is one of the original plaintiffs in U.S. Supreme Court decision on busing to achieve racial balance.

In Florida, a unique state law allows schools to send children home in Dade County (Miami) who cannot show proof of immunization for diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, polio and rubella.

Melon King Outdid Self

PORTLAND, Tenn. (AP)—Every year for the last 15, Herbert W. Money has grown the biggest watermelons in these parts.

This year, the watermelon king has outdone himself—thanks mostly to an abundance of rain and melon know-how.

"I figure we've gotten about 14,000 melons this year and they are the best and sweetest I have ever had," said the burly melon man.

Some of them tip the scales at more than 100 pounds.

Money peddles his melons from what used to be a strawberry shed on a Louisville & Nashville Railroad spur where growers once shipped large amounts of strawberries.

He moved to Portland 15 years ago and has been winning blue ribbons for his watermelons at the Tennessee State Fair like clockwork.

"I just work my head off and the good Lord has been good to me," said Money.

He works about six months out of the year in this Sumner County community just below the Kentucky border in Middle Tennessee, and spends the rest visiting friends.

"It doesn't take much for me to live and I visit some friends in Florida where there is plenty of sunshine and pretty girls," he smiled.

Vail: A Little Town That Was Built By Recreation

RECREATION RESORT—Guests lounge in sun by hotel pool at Vail, Colo., fast-growing "boom town of the Rockies." In its first dozen years Vail has seen close to $50 million worth of construction finished, and another $10 million worth is underway.

By MARY LEONHARD
Arizona Republic Writer
VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Between the winter and summer seasons in this recreation town, population falls to what it was in the recent past, when a few families of Greek descent kept flocks of sheep on the slopes of Gore Creek Canyon — now the site of this new "boom town of the Rockies."

Vail is a favorite skiing spot for President Gerald Ford, who has a condominium here.

The wide canyon, its swift, clear stream and the still-snowy mountain range above are named for an English nobleman, Lord Gore, who brought a hunting party here in the early 1800s. This was the summer home of Ute Indians until gold and silver hunters came, late in the last century.

After the prospectors came lumbermen, who stripped some hills of trees to build railroads and mines. Disgusted at being dispossessed, the Indians set spite fires, burning thousands of acres of other forest.

Snowfalls are profuse in this part of Colorado. Snow is called white gold now. But it was a big bother to the pioneers, though they learned to get around on skis. They called them snowshoes. (Today's snowshoes were called webs then.)

In this rough Rocky Mountain region, only the river valleys were homesteaded. The mountains became part of the White River National Forest, used mostly for lumbering.

Then, in 1940, Colorado's highway department managed to get a paved road (U.S. 6) over a pass in the Gore Range, connecting the remote valley with Grand Junction, 150 miles west, and Denver, 100 miles east.

The mountain pass was named after Colorado's chief highway engineer, Charlie Vail. And use of the mountains for winter sports began.

During World War II, ski troops were trained at Camp Hale, 20 miles south of here. One of the trainees was Peter Seibert, later the founding father of Vail Village ski resort.

Outdoorsman Seibert and Earl Eaton, a native of the valley, in 1957 hiked to the summit of its southside mountain. They found hidden from the highway spacious bowls and open slopes, marvelously suited to skiing. The fires of the past century had made them open country.

Seibert, Eaton and others they interested in their project bought valley sheep ranches and got permits for ski runs in the national forest. In the summer of '62 they built the original resort, whose 10 square miles of ski slopes make it the most spacious in the nation.

They called the village after the pass that made it possible. The mountain, too, bears the Vail name now.

Vail Village was so popular and grew so fast that it had to incorporate as a town four years later. Today it is a remarkable municipality in many ways, a new 20th-century kind of town whose sole industry is recreation — both winter and summer kinds.

There are only 600 year-round residents. But any winter weekend the population swells to over 10,000. Vail, at a 8,200-foot altitude, has summer temperatures in the 70s during the day, in the 50s at night. It offers jeeping, fishing, hiking, horseback riding, tennis, golf and swimming. The ski-lift gondolas start their summer runs for sightseers June 1.

After the original construction Vail Associates, the limited partnership headed by Seibert, began selling land to developers and builders, and to individuals who built fashionable homes on the lower mountain-sides. Second-home condominium apartments are Vail favorites.

Vail's first buildings were Austrian-Alpine, designed by Fitzhugh Scott, Milwaukee architect-land planner. Their deceptively random placement, their tall stance and whimsical trim are delightful. Later buildings are more urbane, influenced by the San Francisco and Denver architects who were attracted here.

Vail outgrew its original master plan, stretching up and down the valley. It's now five miles long, a mile and a half wide. Most streets are closed to autos. People move around on foot or take the free minibuses which circulate from 7 a.m. to midnight.

The town is building a 1,000-car, four-level parking garage into a hillside at the town's entry beside Interstate 70, which now crosses the valley north of Vail.

Vail's revenue sources would cheer any property-tax payer.

Only 12 per cent of municipal income is from property tax. Of the other sources, 36 per cent is sales tax; 8 per cent, recreational fees; and 16 per cent, such items as parking fees, building permits, fines — and ice skating.

Paints Rainbow Colored Horses

By JAMES V. HEALION
HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — When Tracey Cameron tells friends she's painting horses all colors of the rainbow, they know she's not putting them on because she restores carousels.

The 26-year-old artist from Pacanac Lake, N.J. is nearing completion of a commission involving the restoration of a 48-horse, two-chariot merry-go-round.

The shining array will be placed in Bushnell Park to accommodate the wishes of the late Betty Knox, a city council member, who left money for civic and cultural improvements.

Tracey says the kids who ride the merry-go-round should pay for the privilege. "As little as a dime. If they didn't, it would absolutely be a wreck. I've seen parks where such rides are free," she said.

Those thin dimes could mean as much as $60 an hour in revenue, she says.

Tracey found the merry-go-round at a Canton, Ohio, amusement park and said she paid $55,000 for the whole works which included a band organ that cranks out such songs as Vince Youmans' "Tea for Two" from the 1924 musical, "No, No Nanette."

The production of merry-go-rounds ceased with the advent of World War II and in the postwar years, the carousel lost the allure that it once had through the length and breadth of America. It was popular for centuries in Europe where the idea originated in Turkey with women tossing perfume at men on horses riding in circles. The girl with the deadeye who hit the mark the most was the winner, Tracey says.

Carousels are enjoying a revival in the new "Theme" parks both for their revenue and nostalgic appeal, she says. A Florida park is currently negotiating with her to handle a project which involves $1 million.

Tracey works with three associates, Roy Superior, who was her instructor at the Hartford Art School; her brother Steven, 23, and David Youvaisis, an art student at the University of Connecticut.

Youvaisis was working deftly with an air brush, amid a litter of paint-filled paper cups one day when a troop of little kids scampered through the studio for an impromptu preview.

One of them was asked what she liked best about the horses. "The design," she replied in tribute to the riot of color the artists expertly apply.

Tracey says there are now 156 vintage merry-go-rounds in the United States and she expects to be talking to some of the owners if her present plans materialize.

Siamese Twins 'Sing Gospel'

By JAMES LAWRENCE
DENVER (UPI) — For Yvette and Yvonne McCarther, togetherness is a way of life. They are Siamese twins.

Yvonne and Yvette, having traveled with circus sideshows at an early age, today boast of a budding career as gospel singers.

Happiness now seems to be an everyday part of the twins lives, but it has not always been that way. They were born 25 years ago at Los Angeles General Hospital, joined at the top of the head. They were hospitalized until the age of two, and shortly after their release they were signed with a circus.

"I never wanted to do it," their mother, Mrs. William McCarther said, "but I didn't have any choice. At that time my husband and I had separated and it was up to me to feed the family the best way I knew how."

"The girls only spent about two years with the circus and with the money they earned I was able to build a 15 room house for them and the rest of the family."

The twins have six brothers and sisters.

Mrs. McCarther said medical officials offered her a "large sum of money" for the twins at their birth, but she refused.

"I remember them (hospital officials) waking me up to tell me I was a 'famous mother,'" she said. "They wanted to take my children but I brought them into this world, and I was determined to take care of them—they are mine."

Asked about the possibility of the twins being separated, Mrs. McCarther said she had talked with medical specialists about it, but that she believed "whatever God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

Dr. Richard Perkins, an assistant professor of obstetrics at the University of Colorado Medical Center, told UPI such operations were rare and that their success depends on how and where the twins are joined. He said twins joined at the head and not sharing any common organs would have the best chance of being separated.

Yvonne and Yvette have been singing gospel music since the age of six, but interrupted their career ten years ago to take private tutoring lessons at their suburban Los Angeles home.

"We studied long and hard with the intention of going on to college," Yvonne said.

"But we flunked the entrance exam," Yvette said, laughing.

"We were kind of disappointed after not passing the test," Yvonne continued, "so instead of sitting at home feeling sorry for ourselves, we told our mother we wanted to go back on the road. We wanted to meet and talk with people."

In 1972, the twins made their "comeback" appearance at the Philadelphia Metro. From that engagement they have been traveling across the nation spreading their brand of Gospel music which is coupled with a sense of humor.

mentalists," he said.

Besides trapping the females, the professors are working to develop chemosterilants that could be used to render male mosquitoes incapable of fertilizing the females.

"We think you can use these potent self-destruct substances to control them," McDaniel said.

Restoration Funds Sought For House

By KEN JACOBSON
AMSTERDAM (AP) — The Rembrandt House, one of Amsterdam's foremost tourist attractions, is settling through its foundations, and an all-out campaign is underway to raise funds for its restoration.

The 1606 structure, built in the year of the great Dutch painter's birth, sits on soft, sandy ground along the edge of a street which urban renewal turned into a major thoroughfare a few years ago.

The house was Rembrandt's home from 1639 to 1658. It was there he painted the famous "Nightwatch," there that his son Titus was born in 1641 and there that his wife Saskia died the following year.

Precluded by Saskia's will from remarrying, Rembrandt took a mistress, Hendrickje Stoffels, who bore him a daughter, Cornelia, in 1654. Four years later, Rembrandt was forced to sell the house, having come upon hard times.

According to construction experts, the structure has subsided by a foot and traffic threatens to accelerate decay. New cracks are appearing on the facade with increasing regularity.

Almost half the money needed for restoration — estimated at 900,000 guilders, or about $345,000 — is being provided by the national government's monument fund, the city of Amsterdam, the province of North Holland and the Rembrandt House Foundation.

To help come up with the remainder, 300 tiles from the original house which will not be used in the restoration are being put on sale. Dutch Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard have already bought two of the tiles, which are going for 250 guilders (nearly $100) each.

The Rembrandt House draws hundreds of visitors per day all year round. Among its attractions is an exhibition of Rembrandt's complete etchings, which number 250, and six original drawings by the great Dutch master.

If all goes well, restoration will be completed by February 1975.

Destroy Pheasants With Encephalitis

By KATHLEEN PALM
ORONO, Maine (UPI) — Thousands of pheasants had to be destroyed in northern New England last year after they were stricken with encephalitis.

Many horses were affected, and at least one person was hospitalized in Maine with the dreaded illness.

Encephalitis, a brain inflammation often called American sleeping sickness, is carried by hordes of whining Aedes triseriatus, better known as mosquitoes.

Specialists at the University of Maine here now are working on a federally funded project they hope will diminish, if not eradicate, the threat of encephalitis and other mosquito-borne diseases.

"It is appalling there is so little known about the mosquito when there have been so many problems with mosquito-borne diseases over the years," says Dr. Michael Bentley, an associate professor of chemistry. "There is almost nothing known universally to date about mosquito chemistry."

Bentley and Dr. Ivan McDaniel, an associate professor of entomology, are using their specialized knowledge to discover ways to lure egg-bearing female mosquitoes to places where they can be exterminated.

"We're hoping to build a better mousetrap, so to speak," McDaniel says.

"We're hoping to devise methods of leading them to sites that could be lethal to them, since that would probably be more useful than trying to eradicate the species through the use of insecticides."

"If an outbreak of encephalitis were to occur it would be better probably to kill the mosquitoes in selected sites than to spray whole areas with pesticides, which is frowned on now by ecologists and environ-

Prince Charles Appears In No Rush To Take Wife

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — Prince Charles, approaching his 26th birthday, has pushed the date of a possible marriage back by a couple of years to the chagrin, not to say despair, of mothers with eligible daughters on their hands.

The Heir to the Throne hasn't said anything specific about marriage but royal circles place that construction on his decision to stay in the navy at least until the end of 1976 and then go in for an intensive course in the French language.

"I would never say he won't get married within that time but it certainly sounds like he doesn't have it in mind," a palace source said. "He has a wide circle of friends and there may be someone special among them but as far as we can see now it's the navy first."

The Prince, whose birthday is Nov. 14, is determined to pass what is called a Helicopter Conversion Course which involves taking off and landing choppers on ships. He already has his wings as a jet pilot.

He has other courses under consideration, as well, in a dedication to naval life which has been traditional in his family for centuries. His great grandfather, King Edward VII, his great grandfather, King George V, and his father, the Duke of Edinburgh, all loved seafaring until royal duties beached them.

That will happen to him as well some day and there are anxious mothers who wish it would happen soon. The Prince has years to spare, if he prefers to bachelor it for a while. This isn't the case with some of the riper girl eligibles.

Until domesticity beckons, Charles is leading an active life professionally and by all reports, socially. Any future king would be attractive to girls, but the tall, handsome son of Queen Elizabeth would do well in the romantic stakes even if he were a commoner.

He has dated a score of girls whose names have promptly been seized upon as possible only friends or acquaintances. One of these was platinum blonde Laura Jo Watkins, 20, of San Diego, who met him briefly at a cocktail party when his ship stopped over in California and later on chatted with him in London.

No one would seriously regard an American as a possible queen—and even less so a Roman Catholic American. Charles, of course, will succeed his mother as head of the Church of England and can only marry a Protestant. That would seem to eliminate—the regret of many romantics—beautiful Princess Caroline, 17, daughter of Princess Grace and Prince Rainier of Monaco.

No one quite knows where to place the newest addition to the lengthening list of pretty girls the Prince has squired—an attractive, pale blonde named Davina Sheffield, 23, who was introduced to him by his sister, Princess Anne.

Davina, a member of a military family, a former debutante and more recently manager of a dress shop, was not announced as a guest at a house party at the royal Scottish estate of Baginbun. Her presence only became known when she attended church services Aug. 26 with the Prince, Queen Elizabeth, Queen mother Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

Her mother said the invitation to Balmoral was not important in itself.

"If only," she said, wistfully, "they could be left alone to develop their friendship like any two young people."

But, of course, they won't.

A few days later—Sept. 2—Charles ended his summer vacation and started his helicopter course.

Those who claim to know about Charles go by the general rule that if the name of a girl has become public she is not a future queen. There are apparently two kinds of girls whose names he protects—the girls he is serious about and the girls he could never possibly be serious about.

But sometimes security fails. He is an old and devoted friend of Lady Jane Wellesley, 23, daughter of the Duke of Wellington, and they obviously enjoy each other's company. She is also very eligible. But there is a feeling the embarrassment both felt at the persistence of journalists while they were vacationing at the Wellington estate in Spain last year set back a relationship that otherwise might have flowered.

Some think it still may. Any bachelor who can't make up his mind is bound to lose a few girl friends and Charles is no exception. Among those who have moved on are Lady Caroline Percy, daughter of the Duke of Northumberland, Lady Henrietta Fitzroy, daughter of the Duke of Grafton, Lucia Santa Cruz, daughter of a former Ambassador from Chile, Georgianna Russell, daughter of a British diplomat, Rosie Clifton, daughter of a wealthy landowner and believed to have been a genuine possible in her time.

Where, then, will the Prince find his Queen? There aren't vast numbers of girls who would meet his qualification of understanding the limitations and formality as well as the duties of her future station. Someone from the British aristocracy such as Lady Jane Wellesley or the princesses of the European royal houses, perhaps.

One thing is definite—Prince Charles is not anxious to rush into matrimony.

"If I'm deciding on whom I want to live with for the next 50 years," he said recently, "that's the last decision I would want my head to be ruled entirely by my heart."

Telemetry Aids Hospital Care

CHICAGO (UPI) — Twelve suburban hospitals have developed a regional telemetry system that coordinates the 12 facilities for a mobile emergency care system.

The system allows a physician at a hospital to monitor the blood pressure, temperature and other vital functions of an emergency patient still under the care of a paramedic.

The first train to run between Boston and Providence, R.I., made its trip on June 2, 1832.

Trolley Comeback

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The trolley is coming back to San Francisco.

The city has ordered 345 new electric trolley coaches for its Municipal Railroad system. Advocates of the trolleys persuaded officials that trolley lines are less harmful to the environment than gasoline buses.

TONNAGE

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentina shipped 3.3 million tons of corn and sorghum to world markets in the first five months of 1974, a 38 per cent increase over the previous year, according to the National Grain Board.

Federal Pay Boost Deferral Draws Usual Protests

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's deferral of a 5.5 per cent pay boost for federal employees has drawn a fusillade of protest from labor, and shapes up as a major test of his persuasive powers with Congress.

Ford has postponed the scheduled Oct. 1 raise until Jan. 1, thereby saving the federal payroll $700 million in the name of fighting inflation. Federal employees unions want Congress to restore the original date.

Beyond that, such groups as the National Federation of Federal Employees, the American Federation of Government Employees and the National Treasury Employees Union are lobbying for a larger boost. Most are united behind an AFL-CIO proposal of 8.4 per cent.

Their reasoning centers on an inflation rate hovering around 12 per cent, plus government surveys showing increases in private industry wages of 6.3 to 7.1 per cent—surveys which are six months out of date.

Under the Federal Pay Comparability Act, Ford's delay of the pay hike—affecting 1.4 million civilians and 2.2 million military employees—can be overturned by a simple majority in either the House or Senate.

As president, Richard M. Nixon succeeded in postponing similar boosts for two successive years, but his third try in 1973 was overturned by the Senate.

"As far as federal employees are concerned, President Ford is a second-hand Nixon," says Nathan Wolkomir, president of the 120,000-member National Federation of Federal Employees. "Ford had the opportunity to prove to the career service that he really cared ... but he blew it. He showed he really doesn't understand."

Vincent Connelly, president of the 50,000-member Treasury Employees Union, vowed "a rather massive protest" to Congress. The law allows 30 days for Congress to act, and Sept. 30 is the deadline.

Already the wheels are turning. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, has introduced a resolution to overturn the delay, joined by Sens. Frank Moss, D-Utah, J. Glenn Beall, Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Mike Gravel, D-Alaska.

Chairman Gale McGee of the Senate Civil Service Committee is sympathetic, and has set hearings on the proposal. The Wyoming Democrat believes both that the increase should be higher and that it should come Oct. 1.

Even Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., a frequent critic of inflationary federal spending, has endorsed an October implementation. So has Senate Majority Whip Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

While the federal bureaucrat can point to a number of statistics to show that his standard of living is slipping, there is still evidence aplenty that this lot isn't all that bad compared to other American workers. For example:

—A comprehensive survey by the Commerce Department showed that in 1973 the average salary for the federal civilian worker, including blue-collar jobs, was $13,000. In private industry it was $8,900.

—A Civil Service Commission survey of 12 leading private employers showed that none provided better fringe benefits than the federal service. Most notable in that area is the government's pension plan. It provides the retired worker up to 80 per cent of his salary, with guaranteed cost of living protection. While that's four to five times better than Social Security, the cost to the worker is about the same.

—A Library of Congress report showed that while average military pay was $6,587.14 a year, a factor which tends to lower the salary averages government-wide, the man in uniform collected thousands in supplementary advantages. These included $1,440 for housing, $698 for food, $473 in federal tax benefits, $831 for "special items" such as hazardous duty, clothing and proficiency, $770 for medical care, $96 in commissary and exchange discounts and $1,266 in retirement credits.

The salaries of federal workers began a dramatic surge during the Kennedy administration in an effort to attract better-qualified applicants. In the past decade, the civilian branch has received a dozen substantial raises, and boosts for the military, particularly since its conversion to an all-voluntary force, have more than quadrupled pay levels in some cases.

The result is that while the entire government payroll, including the now-independent Postal Service, has remained static at about 5 million employees, the cost has more than doubled to $60 billion.

White-collar jobs for college graduates start at the GS-5 level, where "step 1" will pay about $8,500 presuming the upcoming increase holds at 5.5 per cent. Almost automatically, such an employee will be promoted to GS-7 after one year, GS-9, in another year, GS-11 two years after that, and then GS-12 in another two years.

Hence in seven years, he would be at a level with a salary range now set for $18,500 to $24,000.

While unions and some congressmen complain that that's not enough, the Civil Service Commission is swamped with applicants. Last year, 459,000 persons applied for 83,000 clerical openings; 187,500 applied for 12,500 junior executive slots; and 24,000 applied for 7,800 openings in engineering and scientific jobs.

Anniversary For Chile Is Low-Key

By CHARLES E. PADILLA
SANTIAGO (UPI) — Somber, low-keyed ceremonies have been ordered by the military government this Sept. 11 in commemoration of the coup d'etat that altered the destiny of Chile one year ago.

Only two official ceremonies are planned, a solemn field Mass at Santiago's Academy of War and a lone speech by Junta leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

It will be a far cry from the ear-shattering blasts of rockets and rattle of machineguns that sounded the death knell for the leftwing regime of President Salvador Allende and the birth of a tough, rightwing military government on Sept. 11, 1973.

Allende, a Marxist, was elected president in September, 1970, for a six-year term. According to the Junta government's official death notice, Allende committed suicide in the burning presidential palace as it was being stormed by troops the day of the coup.

So ended Allende's attempt to transform Chile into a socialist state—and the social and economic chaos the experiment generated.

In its place, the four-man Junta, one of the toughest military governments ever seen in coup-infested South America, has installed a nationalistic, rabidly anti-Communist regime and law-and-order by force.

It looks to be around a while. Gen. Pinochet said recently that "the Junta will leave when its goals are met—there are no time periods."

An indication this could take years was given July 6 when the government ordered the nation's voting lists, classified as "fraudulent," churned into pulp and sold for industrial uses.

Chile before the coup was perhaps the most politicized nation in South America. Twelve months later it has been transformed into a political vacuum.

Junta member Gen. Gustavo Leigh said Aug. 19 that the military government was "trying to de-intoxicate an ill body, because Chile is a nation drugged with politicians."

"This is why we are on a diet of water and crackers but we expect the virus of politics to go away," the commander of the air force said.

The de-intoxication process bans all political activity—speeches, reunions, elections. Leftwing parties were dissolved and non-Communist parties, such as the Christian Democrats, were frozen in an "indefinite recess." Demonstrations and strikes, a daily occurrence before the coup, are forbidden.

Cost in lives for this drastic change was high. Although the official death toll caused by fighting Sept. 11 and the days following has not been released, military sources privately put the count at 5,000.

Many thousand other Allende supporters have had their lives uprooted and many have left for exile abroad.

The foreign ministry has granted more than 8,000 safe conducts to political refugees since last September. Another several thousand, the exact number is unknown, have left voluntarily either for political reasons or to seek greener economic pastures elsewhere.

Another 2,000 persons, according to a figure given by Gen. Pinochet in August, remain imprisoned awaiting trial by military tribunals. Included are more than two dozen former cabinet ministers and top officials of the Allende government.

A state of internal war and a nightly curfew remain in force with no clue to when they will be lifted.

The military's harsh measures to insure total control have met with little resistance from Chileans weary of three years of corruption, violent street clashes and nauseating whiffs of tear gas.

With the nation's internal security under iron control, the albatross around the Junta's neck is inflation—both domestic and international.

Inflation ravaged Chile by a world record 678.1 per cent from July, 1973, to July of this year, official statistics show.

The staggering inflationary rate, coupled with the total bankruptcy inherited by the military government, plunged Chile into its gravest economic crisis in its history.

Figures provided by the government on Aug. 12 show the national balance went from a $343 million surplus in 1970 when Allende assumed office to a deficit of $792 million by the time he was ousted three years later.

For the average Chilean, the disaster is felt most in the pocketbook.

One of the military government's first acts was to let market prices float to more realistic levels after years of artificially low subsidized rates.

The result was that the price of everything—bread, meat, sugar, medicine, clothes, fuel, household items—skyrocketed by up to 15 times what they cost before the coup.

"We are now paying in dollars but earning in escudos," a public service employee, father of three children, said.

Wages range from $20 monthly for maids to $200 for university professors. But a new Fiat automobile costs $7,000 and a used 1969 Ford Mustang recently was offered for sale at $14,000. Gasoline costs 92 cents a gallon for regular and $1.40 special.

Food costs have risen so sharply that poor families can afford meat only sporadically. Going out to dinner is practically out of the question for most middle class families.

Still, the government is optimistic about the future.

"There are clear signs that we are starting to control the rate of inflation," Fernando Leniz, the Junta's economic minister, said Aug. 19.

"There are projects for $1 billion in investment by foreign countries in our fishing, forestry and mining industries."

"But most important is that we are putting our house in order. We have renegotiated the foreign debt and we are paying our bills."

"But never has a nation at peace suffered such destruction as Chile."

BISHOP DROVE STEAM TRAIN

WAKEFIELD, England (AP) — A steam locomotive on a preserved railway has been named "Eric Treacy" after the Bishop of Wakefield who is a railroad enthusiast. Dr. Treacy drove the steamer for five miles over the railway which runs over the North Yorkshire moors.

Burial Space In Japan Is High Priced

By BARRY SHLACHTER
TOKYO (AP) — Like almost everything else in Japan, the cost of being buried is going up sharply. In fact, one expert in the field figures it is getting near the point where many people can't afford it.

Japan's soaring inflation, coupled with this island nation's critical shortage of land, has boosted the cost of cemetery plots 30 per cent and more in the past year, said Shigeo Uchida, who runs a burial consulting service in a Tokyo department store.

"The large, Japanese-style graves — with a tall headstone and surrounding wall — can no longer be afforded by most people," Uchida said.

These Japanese-style graves in newer cemeteries now cost the equivalent of $3,000 to $17,700, depending on the size and how close they are to a major city. The so-called Western-style graves in Japanese cemeteries, with smaller tombstones and no walls, cost roughly half that amount. The prices do not include the funeral ceremonies themselves, which often run into thousands or tens of thousands of dollars.

The traditional small family plots of old Japan, with wooden markers clustered together on land attached to Buddhist temples, have nearly filled up and are harder to come by. Now temples usually reserve them for long-time members or patrons with large donations.

With affluence creating a demand for larger, more elaborate burial sites, the land for them is getting scarcer and is bringing a move to outlying areas, some three or four hours away from the family of the deceased.

"The situation has gotten so bad," Uchida said, "that the last of four municipal cemeteries not already filled to capacity turned away half of the more than 8,000 people applying last year to buy the smaller, Western-style plots."

The city-run cemetery, a 2½ hour drive from central Tokyo, uses a lottery to thin out the too numerous applicants. But families with unlucky numbers are allowed to store the remains of their loved ones in coin locker-like burial vaults and try again in next year's lottery.

Not surprisingly, the cemetery business has become big business in Japan. Some firms advertise plots on television, others on subway walls. The ads point out the unspoiled natural surroundings or other attributes, such as being three minutes from a golf course or amusement park.

To help alleviate the shortage of gravesites and to offer a less expensive alternative, urban Buddhist temples are selling miniature apartment-like cabinets to hold remains. The small cabinets — called "reishitsu" — are big enough because the Japanese traditionally cremate their dead and gather the ashes into foot-high ceramic urns.

Several temples in downtown Tokyo, while constructing modern, ferro-concrete edifices, allocated space on the top floors for this increasingly lucrative business. The black lacquered or stainless steel-sided cabinets — 7 feet high and 2 feet wide — are sold from $1,800 to $2,850, plus a small yearly fee for upkeep.

Part of the costs for gravesites and funerals is offset by customary donations from friends and relatives — euphemistically called "incense money" or "koden." Grieving families are obliged by custom to give a gift in return, however. "I enjoy my work," said Uchida, the gravesite consultant whose job is to locate a suitable site, arrange the funeral service, flowers, death mask, catering and legal red tape.

But finding an available grave is the toughest part.

Soccer Star Is Snazzy Dresser

COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — Soccer player Franz Beckenbauer and conductor Herbert von Karajan are among the best dressed men in West Germany, according to the Institute for Men's Fashion. The list included a prominent TV personality, a disc jockey and politicians. Beckenbauer, 27, considered one of the best players in the world, skipped West Germany to the 1974 World Championship in July.
