

Breakthrough Doubtful

New Moscow Talks

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrives in Moscow today for another attempt to move the Soviet and U.S. governments toward an agreement to curtail the nuclear arms race. But Western observers doubt any dramatic breakthrough is likely.

Kissinger is believed to have sent the Kremlin new proposals to get the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) moving again, including a schedule of suggested limits on the production of offensive missiles.

Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev has given no indication what his response might be. But the prospect, in the view of Western observers, is for more difficult bargaining in the second round of SALT talks, which opened in Geneva last month and then recessed to await the outcome of Kissinger's third visit to Moscow this year.

Also on the American secretary's agenda are the future of Arab-Israeli peace negotiations and the possibility of a get-acquainted meeting between Brezhnev and President Ford during Ford's visit to the Far East next month.

In the first round of SALT negotiations in 1972, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed on a permanent limitation of defensive missile systems, known as ABMs. But limits on offensive nuclear arms were only agreed on through 1977.

The two governments have agreed in principle that this pact should be renegotiated to extend its life through 1985. During his visit last March, Kissinger tried to achieve a "conceptual breakthrough" but failed, and at their meeting last summer Brezhnev and former President Richard M. Nixon could only agree that a new agreement should be "completed at the earliest possible date."

Meanwhile, the Russians are pushing ahead with nuclear missile development in an attempt to match the American technology which has produced the multiple-headed missiles known as MIRVs. A new round of Soviet missile tests has begun in the Pacific.

Associated Press correspondent Barry Schweid reported from Washington Tuesday that Kissinger will view the Soviet response to his proposals for arms negotiations as a test of Brezhnev's interest in promoting detente with the new American administration.

Kissinger leaves Moscow Sunday and goes to India and Pakistan. He will also visit Iran, possibly the Middle East and Turkey, and will address the world food conference opening in Rome Nov. 5.

Muskie Hits Ford Remedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie has proposed requiring business to pay a share of the cost of fighting inflation and recession as a major part of a Democratic alternative to President Ford's proposals.

Sharply critical of Ford's suggested economic remedies, the Maine Democrat said Tuesday night, "If the President wants Americans to eat less, drive less and demand less, he should be prepared to ask some of them to charge less."

Muskie spoke on NBC-TV in a speech billed as the Democratic response to Ford's address a week earlier in Kansas City.

The senator called for the Federal Reserve Board to pump more money into the economy in order to make credit more easily available for housing and small business. And he demanded firm presidential pressure on business and labor leaders to depress wage and price increases.

"I would like to see the President meet regularly with business and labor leaders in all major sectors of the economy to work out guidelines for action and agreements for restraint," Muskie said.

"A temporary cut in payroll (Social Security) taxes to help fatten pay envelopes should be a central part of a trade-off to help moderate wage demands. But let us be clear that if vigorous, voluntary wage-and price-control efforts fail, mandatory action must be taken."

The thrust of Muskie's speech was much the same as one last week in which Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield recommended a stronger governmental role against inflation and recession. Mansfield's remarks were in response to Ford's message spelling out his economic proposals, whose centerpiece was a 5 per cent surtax on middle-and upper-income Americans and on corporations.

Opposing the 5 per cent surtax, Muskie, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said many Americans believe "they have been sacrificed to ... Republican economic policies."

School Bus, Train Collide

ROCKMART, Ga. (AP) — A work train backed into a loaded school bus at a railroad crossing today, killing at least seven children, authorities said.

Police said there were about 30 children, mostly 10 to 14, aboard the bus. They said seven were killed and most of the others were injured, some seriously.

Darrell Smith said he was pumping gasoline at a service station about 50 feet from the crossing when the collision occurred. He gave this description of the accident:

"The bus was stopped, and it started on across. The train was backing up, it seemed like it speeded up and hit the bus."

Smith said one of the workmen jumped off the train and ran to the front of the train yelling at the engineer "Go back. Go back."

Police said the train dragged the crumpled bus several hundred feet down the track, which was left littered with blood, bodies, shoes and schoolbooks.

When the train came to a halt, the caboose was derailed and on top of the bus, which was overturned.

Joan Miller of Aragon ran to the scene and said, "There were all these little children lying around. One of them had his head cut off. Some of them were turning black and blue. There were more than two kids pinned under the bus. One of the kids was crying and looking for two of his brothers."

"Some of the kids were dead and they were covering them up," she said. "Some of the parents were at the scene crying and looking for their kids."

Wheaton Given Life And Ten Years For His Role In Branch Murder

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Matthew Jack Wheaton, his wife by his side, was given a life plus 10 years sentence by Judge Perry Martin here yesterday afternoon.

Wheaton, 43, a Virginia automobile salesman and father of three teen-aged children, confessed to shooting Lynwood N. Branch the night of March 29 for $2,500. The court approved plea bargaining with Wheaton because his detailed confession on the stand last week was instrumental in convicting those said to have paid him to carry out the murder of Branch. Convicted were Branch's wife, Mrs. Connie Hardee Branch, 29, and her alleged lover, Roy Lee Sullivan, 26, of Kinston. Both of them also were given life and 10-year sentences by Judge Martin.

Wheaton, a slight gray-haired man, pled guilty to accessory before the fact of murder and guilty to conspiracy to commit murder, in lieu of first degree murder. A larceny trial was interrupted in order to hold the trial for Wheaton, which lasted less than an hour and a half.

Wheaton's attorney, Mark Owens, presented into evidence letters substantiating Wheaton's character "up until the tragedy that took place in Pitt County." He briefly recounted Wheaton's life. He was born in Washington, N. C., in 1931, Owens said, and moved to the Norfolk area with his parents when he was 12 years old. He completed high school there and entered the Army in March of 1952. He rose to the rank of E-5 (Sergeant) and was wounded in Korea. He was honorably discharged and went back to the Norfolk area, where he soon married the lady who was here beside him. He did different things to earn a living including selling insurance, working for a finance company, working as a shoemaker, and then as an auto salesman. He and his wife have three children, 17, 16, and 14, one of them considered a gifted child and a participant in the Governor's School of Virginia this past year.

Judge Martin said, "Mr. Wheaton, I hope you won't be offended when I tell you I've never been more shocked than I was a few minutes ago when I heard you are only 43 years old. You look much older, but what you've lived through in the past few months will make a man grow old."

"You give no reason or explanation for your action. You are well aware of the suffering you've caused for all concerned—your family and the family of the dead man. You have said that the best thing that's happened to you in these months is that you were able to make a full confession."

"You have been in my presence long hours in the past weeks. You must know what I thought of you when you walked through that door the first time, knowing of your confession to this deed. But I have been impressed with your candor in testimony, and I am not a man who's easily impressed."

"You know already the sentence I will give you. It's going to be difficult for your family, but it's going to be difficult for you, too. You are obviously an intelligent man. I want you to read and study while you're where you're going. Read and study everything about David, a man who murdered and had people murdered. Read about Paul and John who spent a lot of time in prison, as you will do. Perhaps they will give you something to hang onto. For if a man has nothing

New Cancer Test Said 87 Per Cent Accurate

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A test still in experimental stages has been 87 per cent accurate in detecting cancer in humans, scientists at the Medical College of Virginia say.

The test requires a patient to swallow a capsule of fat containing radioactive carbon-14. Twenty hours later, an instrument measured the amount of radioactive carbon dioxide in air exhaled.

The test is based on the fact, known for years, that cancer reduces the body's stores of fat, Dr. Giovanni G. Costa said Tuesday. He said the presence of radioactive carbon dioxide above certain levels seems to indicate the presence of tumors in the body because it indicates the fat in the capsule has been broken down.

Fat is composed of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. Its breakdown produces water and carbon dioxide. Making the carbon in the fat capsule radioactive makes it possible to trace what happened to it.

Costa said the test has been given over the past 30 months to about 160 people — healthy volunteers, known cancer patients, patients with diseases other than cancer, and patients with disorders not yet diagnosed.

Costa said in those already known to have cancer the test was 90 per cent accurate, and over-all it was 87 per cent accurate. He said some tumors uncovered "were very tiny."

CANCER TEST RESEARCHER—Dr. Giovanni G. Costa, a Medical College of Virginia scientist, says MCV researchers have devised a simple test that appears to be 87 per cent accurate in detecting different forms of cancer in humans. (AP Wirephoto)

DOLLS NEED WORK

Is there anyone in this area who can repair and refurbish china dolls? I have several that need some work. E. B.

Mrs. L. H. Churchill of 2519 S. Memorial Drive, Greenville, says she will be glad to look at your dolls and see what she can do. She loves to work on all kinds of dolls, she says. Her phone number is 756-2200.

WANTS EXERCISE

I am a new citizen of Greenville and am disappointed to learn there is no YMCA or YWCA here. Does the Recreation Department or the high school have an adult exercise program? I would readily volunteer to help out if there is a need. Mrs. W. E. M.

The Greenville Recreation Department offers both women's and men's exercise program at the Elm Street Gymnasium. The women's classes are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at both 8:30 a.m. and 1 p.m., each lasting an hour, and Monday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Men's classes are from 5:30 to 6:45 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Alice Keene, who conducts the women's classes, said she would be happy to put you to work. Just introduce yourself when you attend your first class or call her at the Recreation Department.

IN-TOWN HUNTING?

Is it permissible to hunt within the city limits? B. G.

"There's no state law against hunting within corporate limits," State Wildlife Protector Kay Dunn said. However, you should check with the town in which you live. Most places, it's illegal to discharge a firearm within the city limits. It is in Greenville, and it's also illegal here to discharge an air gun within 200 yards of an inhabited structure. You could hunt with bow and arrow, apparently, if you can find a place where there's appropriate game.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Ceremony On Sunday

The Memorial Baptist Church was the scene of the Sunday afternoon wedding of Teresa Latham Briley and Morris Babson Vicars. The Rev. C. Norman Bennett Jr. performed the double ring ceremony at three o'clock.

A program of organ music was presented by Joe Goodwin.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Briley of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Vicars, also of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white miramist organza designed with a portrait neckline trimmed in a ruffle of chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The modified empire waistline featured appliques of chantilly lace also beaded with pearls. The long fitted lace sleeves were styled with ruffled lace cuffs. Beaded appliques of lace trimmed the full skirt with a deep ruffle flounce of miramist organza overlaid with a border of chantilly lace extending around the hemline and attached chapel train.

The bride wore a three tiered fingertip imported illusion veil edged in chantilly lace attached to a Camelot cap featuring matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried a nosegay of white daisy chrysanthemums centered with a white cattleya orchid tied with satin ribbon.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of J. H. Rose High School. The bridegroom is employed by Delmas Farm Supply, Ash, where the couple will reside.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a green and white pants suit and wore an orchid lifted from her nosegay.

An after-rehearsal party was held at the home of the bridegroom given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Vicars.

Cosmetics Expert Explains Differences In Skin Tones

By SANDRA GITTENS
NEW YORK (AP) — Necessity being the mother of invention turned into a success story for Barbara Walden.

Former actress, now businesswoman, Miss Walden founded Barbara Walden Cosmetics as a result of not finding a line of makeup complementary to her dark complexion.

The company, which has been in existence now for six years, began as a solution to her immediate problems. As an actress, Miss Walden was constantly at odds using makeup created for white women. Finding it would streak, cake and dull her natural color, she decided to develop a makeup that would enhance her natural skin tones.

Right from the beginning, however, she encountered problems.

"The problem came dealing with my chemist," she says. "I knew what I wanted, but I only had an idea of what I needed. So having no background in chemistry and trying to explain to my chemist what I wanted, he thought I was insane."

"When I started saying, 'I want to do a cheek blush in brick,' he'd say, 'What do you mean, brick?' I said, 'Well let me show you what I'm talking about.' I took him two bricks and rubbed them together, showing him the power that came from them. The color is just gorgeous," she says. "But that's exactly how we arrived at getting the colors for our blushes."

"The next problem was trying to convince him to develop our foundation makeup in skin tones instead of colors."

She explained that the skin tones found in the black woman are almost never the pink ones found to be the basic color in white makeup. Rather, oranges, yellows or even some of the beiges dominate in the skin tones of black women.

"For instance," she continued, "you can put 10 black women in a room together and out of them you will find almost each one has a different undertone. You can also put 10 white women in a room and you will find almost the same undertone — pink dominates. "No matter how fair the black woman's skin may be, you'll find very few will have a pink undertone — you'll find the oranges and yellows but rarely will you find pink. So the thing we had to do was to work with the tones in skin of black women," she said.

One special thing she took into consideration while dealing with the foundation makeup was texture. Finding that most black women have oily skin, a heavy moisturizer base was used. This, she said, cuts down on streaking, caking and smearing as it allows the makeup to blend with the natural oils.

"We found that because our makeup has a lot of moisture in it, it appeals to a lot of people who have dry skin as well," she said. "Another interesting thing is that it is also selling to a lot of nonblacks."

Miss Walden says the most important thing in makeup is not its use but skin care treatment. Claiming that there is "no such thing as bad skin," she advises proper cleaning, care and diet as the essentials for healthy-looking skin.

"We even have a policy that we will not make up a young girl in the store unless she's 18 or over. Makeup ages them and makes them look harsh," she says. "I feel very strongly about this. I also believe that a young girl should start taking care of her skin and be trained to do so at the age of 10. I tell their mothers to start putting the body lotions on their child's hands so they will learn what it's all about. You'd be surprised at the number of girls who look as though they had walked on their hands and knees because their mothers had not bothered to explain this to them. So we have a lot of young people using our products — our skin care and hair care, but not the makeup."

The line of products she has on the market is limited, she says. "I wouldn't put out anything I wouldn't use myself," she adds. So two more of her inventions stem from a personal solution and have gone on to become, as she puts it, "big sellers, even with the men." She calls them "lip dark" and "lip light."

"Now," she says, "we have several lipsticks in the line and we have them because I've done a lot of research and tests on them."

"One of the really special things for me, and I didn't realize that this was so special among black women, was the lip dark."

Explaining that her bottom lip is very pink while the upper one is very dark, Miss Walden says, "naturally, whenever I wore lipstick my lips were always two different colors."

"But when I was working with my chemist who designed my makeup, he suggested we work with something with moisture in it to treat the lips. We then came up with an item that is now called lip dark, originally designed for me. It evened up the skin color so now when I wear lipstick I get the true color on both lips. Yet it wasn't until I started working in the stores that I noticed I wasn't the only one with this problem. So that's how it got introduced on the market."

"Lip light," she relates, is the opposite of lip dark and is for women whose face pigmentation is lighter than their lips.

Record Number Of Women On November Election Ballot

By ROBERT ROTH
WASHINGTON (WNS)—There is nothing new about women in politics. They have been in it since the Suffrage Amendment was ratified in 1920. Or since the Women's Rights Convention met at Seneca Falls, N.Y., in 1848. Or, since Dido was queen of Carthage. Or, some would say, since the Garden of Eden.

But during all that time a woman in a position of political power was a rarity, a curiosity, a deviation from the norm. The difference now is that women running for office are now an accepted, everyday part of the political scene.

Nor do they run as they once did—as successors to their husband—but, in their own right and they campaign not as feminists but as advocates of political change unrelated to sex.

There are 16 women in Congress now and 45 running for election this fall, 13 more than were contenders two years ago. Some of them are going to win.

Three women—in Maryland, Oregon and South Carolina—are running for the Senate, though none is conceded more than an outside chance to be elected.

There are three women candidates for governor—in Maryland and Nevada, where they are expected to lose, and in Connecticut where the woman Democratic candidate, Rep. Ella T. Grasso, is an odds-on favorite to be elected.

Four women are running for lieutenant governor—in New York, Arkansas, Nebraska and Rhode Island. Their fate will be determined by what happens to the head of the ticket, just as it would if they were men.

In the competition for election to lower-echelon state posts, women are more in evidence than ever before and more of them are running for mayor, for county supervisor, and for city council jobs. It is a fairly safe bet that when the votes are counted there will be more women in elective office than there have ever been in the history of the country.

This is particularly noteworthy because for the last decade the part of women in politics showed signs of decay rather than growth. Ten years ago there were 19 women in the House of Representatives as against 16 now and there was one woman senator, where now there is none. There are fewer women in state legislatures now than there were then.

The current surge is partly due to the women's liberation movement which has given women, even those who want no part in the movement a consciousness of their own power and their own responsibility in civic affairs.

No longer are women content to be the telephone operators, the receptionists, the stamp lickens at campaign headquarters. They want something more than assignment to the PTA and women's club, circuit, and they are getting it. A record number, nearly 1,600, were entered in major primary contests this year.

Few women now enter the political arena as a gesture, to focus attention on an idea or an ideal. They are in it now to win and they have a definite awareness that this year may give them their

Lack Of Communication Is Your Problem

By Abigail Van Buren
1974 by The Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law died six months ago and since his death, my mother-in-law has practically lived with us.

She comes over every night for supper and sits all evening. It's not that she stays so long, but I work, and frankly, I would like to be able to come home and just relax.

She has always been very critical of anyone who doesn't keep a spotless house, and although I'm a fairly good housekeeper, I feel she will criticize me. It's gotten to the point where I hate to go home after work because I know she will be there. She's a nice person, and I get along with her, but I need time to be alone.

She spends every weekend here, and I can't accomplish anything because she is always looking over my shoulder.

She's well enough to go everywhere we go. She went on our vacation with us, and if she wants to go next year, I'd just as soon stay home.

I hate to be a stinker, and I wouldn't want to shut her out completely, but this is too much.

My husband is unfortunately her only "child" and she doesn't get along with the other relatives. Help!

SUFFOCATING IN VA

DEAR SUFF: Your problem is not your mother-in-law, it's the lack of communication with your husband. Your objections seem reasonable enough to me.

Have a heart-to-heart talk with hubby, and let him know how you feel.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married next month and was very happy about it until last night, when Ted and I had a long talk.

He told me not to expect him to stay faithful to me all our married life because all married men go out on their wives sooner or later and he doesn't think he is going to be any different.

Abby, I love Ted very much, and I don't think I could stand it if I knew he cheated on me.

What should I do?

IN LOVE

DEAR IN: Tell Ted that in this age of the liberated woman, all married women go out on their husbands sooner or later; and since you feel a part of the new sisterhood, the arrangement he proposes is at least negotiable. (In any event, the "T" in Ted stands for trouble.)

DEAR ABBY: I was told that years ago, if a man didn't want to be drafted in the U.S. Army, he could PAY someone to substitute for him. I know it sounds like a dumb question, but I can't find the answer anywhere. Can you help me?

INQUISITIVE

DEAR INK: It is not a "dumb" question. And it WAS true, but no longer is.

By the terms of the Conscription Act of 1863, a man eligible for the draft could avoid service by providing a substitute, or paying a commutation of $300.

One-time President Grover Cleveland paid a substitute $150 to serve for him in the Civil War. (Cleveland had two brothers in the U.S. Army and a mother and two sisters to support at the time.)

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Recalling That Other Tea Party

By W.L. BRETZ

NEW YORK (WNS) — Have you ever burnt a bra? Boycotted the meat counter? Supported a political cause? Written a letter to the editor? Openly met with other like-minded persons to protest social injustices?

If so, you have much in common with your revolutionary grandmothers of colonial America.

Thoughtful, concerned social and political activism by women in America is as old as the country herself—but what can you recall about this subject from American History 110?

Do you remember the Edenton Tea Party? You've never heard of it? Astonishing!

By all rights the Edenton Tea Party should be as familiar to every schoolgirl and schoolboy as the Other Tea Party which occurred a few months earlier in one of the Northern colonies.

On October 25, 1774, 51 courageous, "matriotic" women from the tidewater and coastal plain in the colony of North Carolina gathered in the then-important port of Edenton with open and avowed revolutionary intent.

Protesting against the injustices of the British colonial administration, the Edenton patriots resolved to boycott tea and other imported British products. They did not use the term "boycott" however, for at that time their revolutionary actions preceded the coining of this term by almost a full century.

After drafting and signing a resolution expressing their beliefs and intents—subsequently published in newspapers locally, as well as abroad in England for even King George himself to read—these founding mothers ceremoniously burnt all of their personal stashes of the expensive imported tea which they had purged from their pantries.

Undoubtedly they would have burnt their bras too, had they been wearing any of British manufacture.

Rather than disguising themselves as Indians in an attempt to avoid personal responsibility for their actions, the Edenton patriots carried out their protest openly—revealing their true identities, and exposing themselves and their families as known revolutionaries. Rather than ripping off and trashing a cargo of someone else's tea, as much in the interests of cutthroat capitalism as in the interests of political persuasion, they voluntarily sacrificed their own personal stores. Motivated solely by political concerns, they absorbed the economic cost of their protest themselves.

The Edenton Tea Party is a model of responsible, non-violent, nondestructive, albeit radical and revolutionary, political action. It should be taught to all of our citizens. Small wonder that we are plagued by dirty tricksters today, when the moral and ethical standards set by the Other Tea Party are promoted in legend and American History 110a, while those established by the Edenton Tea Party are ignored.

Do your part... sit down with some friends and burn a little tea together this coming October 25th, the 200th anniversary of the Edenton Tea Party. You'll be boosting the Bicentennial in a wholesome manner, commemorating a notable event in America's history, celebrating two centuries of political and social struggle so bravely begun by our founding mothers, and building a constructive alternative to the mode of politics characterized by the Other Tea Party.

If you can't lay your hands on some genuine East Indian Bohea Black, just light up whatever you've got stashed around the house. When will you have another chance to kill so many birds with one stone?

Buying Soups

There's a long aisle of all kinds of soups at the grocery store today—so the problem is getting the best buy.

Knowing the characteristics and conveniences of each kind of soup can help you decide—and it might save you some money, too.

Soup that only requires heating—for instance—is the most expensive. This kind of soup is usually more hearty and less watery than other forms.

Next in cost is the dried soup base where you just add boiling water and stir. This kind is especially convenient for those who only want one cup of soup as their dried soup base is packed in individual packets.

Condensed canned soups that require dilution with milk or water are next down the price range. These soups are really versatile—since they can be used in sauces and casseroles too.

Dry soup mix that requires a fair amount of cooking is the least expensive.

You're probably paying more for each convenience—with soups that only need to be heated costing the most, and soup mixes that require cooking costing the least. So pick the soup that best fits your needs—and you'll be getting the best buy for your money.

Grades Of Bacon

Plan how you want to use that bacon before you get to the meat case. Then choose according to your needs—and you can save money.

Usually you'll find three grades of bacon with appropriate price brackets.

Bacon flavor may be the same in all three groups if they came from the same packer. It's only the uniformity of slices that is different. So the best buy for you will depend on how you want to use that bacon.

A first grade bacon has slices uniform in size and shape. This grade comes from the center part of the belly and is the highest priced.

As a cured slab of bacon is sliced, the slices at the ends lack uniformity in size and shape—but they still have the same bacon flavor. These are usually packaged as a second grade bacon and are less expensive. Finally, there are the bacon ends and pieces—a package of irregular slices. This is the lowest priced.

So if you need uniform bacon slices for something special like wrapping pieces of meat or for hors d'oeuvres, the first grade bacon is your best buy.

But if you want bacon to dice and use to season other dishes, thin bacon ends and pieces are the bargain for you.

Just remember—these grades of bacon tell you what kind of slices you're getting. They're not an indication of the bacon quality or flavor.

Mexico Now Will Get Attention

It may be that the United States has too often taken its neighbor to the south—Mexico—too much for granted.

Too often, it seems, our main concern for Mexico has been whether a way could be found to keep the Mexican migrant laborers in their own country.

All this may soon change. There are reports that Mexico has made important oil discoveries. First reports had them as huge, although the Mexico government has denied this and said the oil reserves are far less than originally rumored.

Wherever the truth lies, the discovery of oil in Mexico is bound to raise the interest of our government. There would be an oil supply much closer to us than that of the Middle East, and the additional oil would help swell the local supply.

The report of the oil discovery made the meeting of President Ford and Mexican President Lois Echeverria of far more interest than it once might have been.

The U.S. president must have meant it when he said, "It is a working partnership of mutual cooperation which exemplified the spirit behind the new dialogue into which we have entered with the nations of Latin America."

The United States and Mexico have a common border which gives them common problems. We have not always listened to Mexico's side of the problems, but with oil on their side the Mexican government can now get our attention. It may be a healthier arrangement for both nations.

Help For Private Industry?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—What would it mean to citizens of a county in North Carolina if the voters approve, on November 5, allowing local governments to issue bonds to aid private industry?

Suppose you live in a county which qualifies (and about 70 counties qualify as having "economic deficiencies" under the law) and your local power structure is wooing a new industrial prospect, or an existing local industry is about to close down because the law requires some new and expensive air or water pollution control devices.

Your local Board of County Commissioners could set up a County Pollution Abatement and Industrial Facilities Financing Authority which would have the power to put the backing of the local and state governments behind some bonds to help out.

There would be seven members, appointed by the county commissioners, on the Authority. That board could decide to sell bonds up to $5 million for a single industrial prospect—but with no limit on the number of different projects which could be helped.

Tax Exempt
Those bonds will be sold through the normal channels handling local governmental bonds (the Local Government Commission in Raleigh) and sold to the high bidder. Income from the interest would be tax free to the buyer.

The local Authority would then use the money to build a plant designed and located to suit the needs of the prospect. The local government would own the building (or the pollution control equipment) and lease it to the industry involved.

Then, the county would continue to own that building or equipment for the term of the bond (up to 40 years, though 13 years is average), and then the county could sell the plant to the industry.

North Carolina is one of only two states in the nation not now involved in some form of revenue bonds to aid private industry, a fact which industry hunters say hurts their prospects.

Here, in brief fashion, are some of the questions and criticisms raised about his proposal.

What counties would be able to issue such bonds? To qualify as a distressed area, a county must have at least one of the following: unemployment at least six per cent for 12 months; average manufacturing wages at least 10 per cent for 12 months; per capita income at least 10 per cent lower than state average; loss of population due to lack of jobs.

Is local tax money to be committed? No. A county or state can't spend public money on private industry. Only the local and state government's good faith is used to back the bonds.

What if the industry goes broke? The local authority is holding the bag, owns the building or equipment, and must find a new lease holder, or lose its credit reputation by not paying the bonds.

Will there be safeguards or restrictions? The State Department of Natural and Economic Resources and the Local Government Commission both will monitor activity; there is a $5 million limit for any one industry. Critics contend, however, that state-level checks will stand little chance in the face of booming local support for a bond issue for a given industry, despite any possible pitfalls.

Why a Constitutional amendment for the voters? Twice, the General Assembly has tried to pass such laws, and twice the North Carolina Supreme Court has ruled them unconstitutional. So, legislators decided to go for the amendment instead.

Shouldn't a healthy industry pay its own way? Faced with high interest, and trouble raising capital on the stock market, many industries are hunting better ways to finance new or expanded building.

Letter To The President

Dear Mr. President,

I'm having a helluva time. I watched you on television the other night while waiting to see the World Series, and your message really got to me. Ever since I heard you tell us that the best way to fight inflation was not to spend money and not to waste anything, I've been trying to follow your advice with very questionable results.

For example, the next morning I went down to the supermarket and bought some soup bones. I made the mistake of telling the butcher I wasn't going to buy any steak until the price came down.

That evening I received a visit from two members of the cattleman's association who said they had heard about what I said in the supermarket, and they wanted me to know that they were having the worst year in their history and if I didn't give a damn about the food industry in this country, they wouldn't give a damn about me. I explained to them that you had said the only way to fight inflation was to live within my budget—and you know what they did? They shot two steers in the head on my front lawn. It cost me $89.50 to have the carcasses carted away.

Other Editors Say Costly, Little Used

(Wilson Times)

For seven years now, the City of Wilson has been subsidizing municipal bus service marked by decreasing patronage and increasing expense to taxpayers.

Wilson's bus service dilemma began in 1967 after Herbert E. Barkley halted a private operation. He told city council he had suffered a financial loss for each of the 12 years he ran the bus company if consideration was given to depreciation and his own services as mechanic, bookkeeper and part-time driver.

The city was without bus service for a short while until an agreement was negotiated with Cape Fear Valley Coaches, a Fayetteville firm for six days per week, with a guarantee of $5 per hour.

Any difference between income and the guarantee was to be paid by the city.

Since then, bus service has been a recurring headache for city council. The operation, suffering from a lack of patronage and caught in the inflation spiral, has never been self-supporting. From time to time, council has had to raise the subsidy.

Several approaches to cutting costs have been tried, but the subsidy eventually climbed to an average of $1,225 during fiscal 1973-74. Saturday service was eliminated, the number of routes has been reduced, and fares have been doubled from 25 cents to 50 cents during the seven-year period.

The last subsidy hike occurred in April, 1974. In an effort to offset an increase from $6.25 to 6.50 per hour, council raised the fare from 35 cents to 50 cents and cut the number of routes from three to two.

These actions reduced the subsidy to $425 per month, but already skimpy patronage began a further fall-off. Whereas an average of 300 persons per day were utilizing bus service during fiscal 1973-74, the number plunged to an average of only 180 during June, July and August of this year, according to an October 10 memorandum to council from City Manager T. Bruce Boyette.

At the same time, Boyette informed council Cape Fear Valley Coach Company had requested an immediate increase to $7 per hour for the two buses now operating on two routes covering 17 bus hours per day.

Boyette warned in April, when the subsidy was raised to $6.50, that the city could not continue to operate the buses unless patronage increased. "People interested in bus service must understand they must use it or lose it," he said. Since then, the already poor patronage has dropped almost one half.

Seven years of costly subsidies and public indifference have amply demonstrated that Wilsonians simply will not support a municipal bus operation.

The subsidy hike issue will be before council again Thursday. Every effort has been made to retain bus service, but the time has arrived to end a costly operation that benefits only a fraction of one per cent of the citizenry.

INSIDE REPORT

Rumsfeld Taking Charge

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—Although the power of Donald Rumsfeld's White House chief administrative post is still ambiguous, he has made one breakthrough of symbolic importance by streamlining the President's speech-writing process under the command of Robert Hartmann. President Ford's most intimate personal aide.

Ex-newspaperman Hartmann, a fastidious word-smith, has had trouble finishing final speech texts for the President until just before Mr. Ford is due at the podium. Indeed, Hartmann's tendency to be incommunicado, polishing Mr. Ford's speeches until just before delivery, has raised numerous eyebrows at high administration levels both in and beyond the White House.

Rumsfeld was appalled at the risks this last-minute process posed for the President, who found himself reading one part of his Oct. 8 economic speech to Congress for the first time as he delivered it in the House.

Mr. Ford had long been accustomed to an easy-going highly flexible speechwriting process as Republican leader of the House and later as Vice President when what he said counted for very little. But even though he has never been a hard taskmaster for his staff, Mr. Ford himself complained two weeks ago that he wished his speeches would be ready in time for careful reading before delivery.

The problem was how to coax Hartmann into faster action without alienating the President's most powerful aide. Rumsfeld's success was clear last Monday, when Hartmann put the final, finishing touches on the President's Kansas City speech more than 24 hours before it was delivered last Tuesday evening.

A footnote: Predictions of an inevitable Hartmann-Rumsfeld power struggle may be highly premature. Although Hartmann is a tough, abrasive diamond-in-the-rough fully aware of his No. 1 status in the Ford White House, he also knows the President desperately needs an administrator to keep the machinery running.

New SALT Chip
Without fanfare, the Air Force is on the brink of a major breakthrough in development of an airborne intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) which could radically transform lagging U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks.

Two "inert" tests of a simulated Minuteman ICBM have now been completed, with a third test scheduled late this month in which an actual 86,000-pound Minuteman missile will be dropped at high altitude from its C-5 cargo ship. The first stage of the missile will be fired for 10 seconds, then dumped into the Pacific Ocean off the coast of California.

The significance of this so-called "stand-off" missile option, marrying the C-5 and the ICBM, is that the Russians cannot possibly duplicate it; they lack the capability of building wide-bodied aircraft such as the C-5. Indeed, Moscow has been fearful of just such a development. Since the first Air Force test last month, Soviet diplomats have made strong, but unofficial, complaints.

Most Air Force officers have fought a long, rear-guard bureaucratic battle against the new weapons system, which — if fully developed — would give the U.S. a seemingly impregnable second-strike nuclear capability from invulnerable cargo planes circling the Asia land mass.

Their complaint: too clumsy, too costly and not strictly an Air Force weapon at all. Instead, they have pushed the expensive new B-1 bomber and various types of bomber-carried cruise missiles.

But the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Air Force Gen. George S. Brown, disagreed with his old Air Force buddies and ordered full speed development.

The real push, however, came from Secretary of State

Strength For Today

BAPTISM
Jesus told Nicodemus that unless a man be born of water and the spirit he cannot enter the Kingdom of God.

To be born of water meant that he must be baptized; and baptism is only the outward and physical sign of that inner cleansing of the spirit which comes with repentance.

But that is only half the story. After being born of water he must also be born of the spirit, which means that the finger of God must reach down and make the soul of that man live and move under new power. The theological term for this process is regeneration. This rebirth under the power of God's spirit is not a thing that man can understand any more than he can understand whether the wind cometh and goeth. It is a great mystery. But it comes like a bracing breeze across the sin-sick soul of man. It is not necessary for us to understand it any more than it is necessary for us to understand the wind. When it occurs, the transformation wrought by Christ takes place: "Behold, I make all things new."

White Collar Crime Crackdown

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors say they're digging into more white-collar crimes than ever in support of a Justice Department crackdown on corruption in corporate boardrooms and public offices.

"I think everybody has the push on and it's high time," said a Southern prosecutor whose comments were echoed by a score of other U.S. attorneys interviewed about the department's recent emphasis on investigating fraud, embezzlement, political kickbacks and similar crimes. Several asked not to be identified by name.

The prosecutors said they're anxious for the drive to continue although the complex and time-consuming investigations strain their limited manpower. And some are upset with what they consider light treatment of white-collar criminals by judges and juries.

The U.S. attorneys are pressing Congress and the Ford administration for more money to hire more lawyers for those investigations and other duties in civil and criminal cases.

Meantime, many prosecutors say they're prodding state and local authorities to take over the prosecution of such routine cases as drug violations and auto thefts to free more of their own time for corruption probes.

The campaign was born out of the kickback investigation of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and the Watergate scandals which shook public confidence in government and especially in the Justice Department.

As part of a bid to regain public support for the department, Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe has promised fair prosecution of the rich and poor alike and urged harsh prison sentences for white-collar crooks.

Some prosecutors said the Agnew and Watergate cases gave them the public support they needed to indict prominent individuals without suffering from accusations that their investigations were politically motivated.

"The Agnew case indicated two things to us — it's possible to crack these cases, and the public damn well wants us to," said Dean C. Smith, U.S. attorney in Spokane, Wash.

The prosecutors were unanimous in appealing for more money to hire more lawyers to handle investigations of white-collar crime.

"We can't possibly prosecute every crime committed, but right now the emphasis is on white-collar crime," said one U.S. attorney. "I'm finding an increasing determination to defer to local prosecutors on a number of cases so we can go into the white-collar cases."

Despite the department emphasis, some prosecutors are upset that judges continue to treat white-collar criminals leniently.

"We spend $100,000 of the taxpayers' money to build a case and then the guy gets concurrent sentences of three months in prison. I'm not happy with that," complained one prosecutor.

Curious As To Project

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is asking Russia about some puzzling construction and radar developments to make sure they do not violate the nuclear arms limitation agreement, administration sources say.

These sources stressed there is no evidence of any Soviet cheating but that "we are approaching the Russians on certain ambiguities, certain things they are doing."

In recent months, U.S. reconnaissance satellites reportedly have picked up photographic evidence that the Russians are building something that looks as though it could be new ICBM silos.

Sources also said the United States is asking the Russians about signs that they are developing a new mobile radar that some experts think could be used in connection with the Soviet antimissile system.

Presumably Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will discuss the matter with the Russians during his Moscow talks.

The 1972 interim agreement on strategic offensive weapons forbids the construction of any additional launching silos for intercontinental ballistic missiles beyond those in place or being built as of July 1, that year.

"Something is being constructed," said one administration source, describing the number as small.

"They say it is for command and control," he added, indicating the United States already has had some discussions with the Russians.

There is nothing in SALT agreement to bar new underground bunkers for controlling the Soviet missile force.

The 1972 U.S.-Soviet treaty limiting antimissile systems states specifically that "each party undertakes not to develop"

HQ For World Medical Detectives Is In Atlanta

HERTA WULFF examines organisms under a microscope in the maximum security building of the Center for Disease Control. She was photographed from outside the lab from behind a window. (UPI Photo)

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR
ATLANTA (UPI) — One massive block of buildings on high ground east of Atlanta houses the deadliest strains of viruses known to man.
It also:
—Is headquarters for the world's busiest and widest-ranging medical detectives.
—Is the center of a giant worldwide drive to eradicate smallpox in 1976.
—Stores rare vaccines for preventing little-known but lethal diseases, along with some of the world's rarest poison snake venom antivenoms.
—Keeps tabs on most of the communicable diseases of man and issues a warning when an epidemic appears likely.
This complex of buildings near Atlanta is known as the Center for Disease Control, an agency of the U. S. Public Health Service with worldwide responsibilities.
The center and its 3,600 employees is one of the world's most respected health authorities. It is a laboratory diagnostic center for the World Health Organization, the Pan American Health Organization and the International Society of Microbiologists.
William C. Watson, the center's assistant director for operations, was hard-put to adequately describe in a few words the principle mission of his huge medical agency. It's main job, he noted, is to "control disease," but added that even that no longer is sufficient to describe the work of the agency.

"The whole gamut of environmental health problems is now our responsibility," he said. In addition to its other jobs, it recently was given the tasks of overseeing the nation's occupational safety and health, urban rat control, lead-based paint poisoning control, and the national clearinghouse for smoking. One of the functions of the latter program is to reduce on a national basis deaths and disability caused by smoking.
The center's budget in fiscal year 1974, Watson said, was $141 million. This fiscal year, the requested budget totals $140 million, not including $13 million for rat control.
The eradication of smallpox by 1976 is one of the center's most important jobs.
"It will be the first time a major disease has been eradicated from our planet," Watson said, adding that the United States spends millions annually protecting itself against smallpox.
In 1967, smallpox was endemic in 29 countries. Today, it is confined to one nation.
"It has boiled down to India," Watson said, "really, just one state in India."
In one of its buildings a strict guard is maintained at a "hot lab" where research is being conducted on viruses deadlier than the bubonic plague that killed millions in the Middle Ages.
Dr. Walter R. Dowdle, director of the virology division, Bureau of Laboratories, said the "hot lab" is continuing its research into the mystery virus that causes lassa fever. This deadly virus first came to the attention of world health authorities in 1969. It quickly killed a number of missionaries and laboratory workers in Nigeria and this country, plus hundreds of African villagers.

The lab, after years of painstaking research, traced the virus to one species of rat. Dowdle said research is now directed toward determining if other types of rats carry the virus.
The maximum security lab, where extraordinary precautions are taken to prevent accidents, is being expanded so that it can conduct research into more of the mystery viruses coming to the attention of medical authorities around the world.
One of these, Dowdle said, is an organism known as herpes type-B found in certain monkeys. "It can be highly fatal," he said, noting that it has caused 20 deaths among lab workers and persons who have monkeys as pets.
Dowdle said he recognizes the dangers inherent in the work of the hot lab but says "to tell you the truth, it's the safest lab in the whole building."
Not far from the lab buildings, the epidemiologists have their offices and research areas. They are the "medical detectives" on call 24 hours a day who track down the sources of diseases and recommend ways to eliminate them.
One of their success stories occurred in May, 1970, when 250 students at an Ohio school became severely ill with nausea, headache, fever and loss of appetite. Local doctors suspected histoplasmosis, a sometimes fatal respiratory ailment.
If the source of the illness were not found, it could infect other students for years to come. The center's epidemiologists, called in by local authorities, discovered that dust in the school courtyard, frequented by starlings, was the source of the infection.
From its laboratories came the first warning of the impending Hong Kong flu epidemic that struck an estimated 30 million Americans in 1968-69 and many millions more in other countries.
The center really began in 1942 as the office of Malaria Control in War Areas, located in Atlanta because of its nearness to areas in the United States where malaria still raged. Later it was expanded into a center that could assist state and local health departments in fighting a host of communicable diseases.

Local Squad Served Fair

RALEIGH — The Greenville Rescue Squad was represented at the North Carolina State Fair here yesterday, providing assistance at first aid stations on the grounds and displaying their newest rescue unit.
The Greenville squad is one of several rescue units from across the state invited to participate in the service and display functions during the fair, through a cooperative venture of the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads, the Office of Emergency Medical Services of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources, and the Wake County Chapter of the American Red Cross.
The 'squad's newest rescue unit was displayed and four of the unit's registered emergency medical technicians — including Tony Brannon, Michael Branch, Billy Woolfolk and Stuart Savage — aided medical personnel and first aiders in the emergency treatment and transportation of sick and injured fair-goers.

best chance yet. They are encouraged in this belief by the demand, a byproduct of Watergate, for new faces, for persons unconnected with the old world of politics for which the public has developed a cynical distaste.
History does not show that women in politics are less corrupt than men but they are less identified with corruption, possibly because they have been less involved in politics. As Gloria Steinem, patron saint of Women's Lib, has noted, women have not been corrupted by power because they haven't had much.
They lack promises to be remedied to some extent in the coming election but they still have a long way to go. Men continue to rule the political roost. If there is a woman political boss anywhere in this country, she hasn't surfaced.
Women are a majority of the American population but a minority of political power and privilege. The day when a woman may become president is far distant. Still, the idea does not seem as fantastic as it once did.

Henry Kissinger and, during his last months as President, Richard Nixon. They viewed the potential new weapons system as a powerful bargaining chip in the SALT negotiations. Since they are totally unable to match it, the Russians may be more willing to talk turkey on limiting their own missile development in exchange for U.S. agreement to rule out the new stand-off option.
An earlier bargaining-chip device — the threat of major U.S. deployment of a sophisticated anti-ballistic missile (ABM) system in 1970 — was probably the key factor in persuading the Kremlin to negotiate the first strategic arms limitation agreement in 1972. Massive ABM deployment was scrapped as part of that agreement.

bullet—but they were so infuriated, they threw a chair through my window, which cost me $56 to replace.
Well, I got home that night and had a visit from Richard Kaltenborn who works in a children's clothing store. Richard had just been laid off from the store because no one was buying clothing. Ever since your message, they haven't sold two pairs of jeans. The store told Richard if people started buying again, he would be rehired. The reason he came to see me is that he was strapped for cash and asked if I could loan him $400. I had no choice but to loan him the money since we hadn't bought children's clothing ourselves, and I felt responsible for Richard's unemployment.
Just as Richard left I received a call from Mr. Rumstead who owns the local theater. He wanted to know if I was coming down to see "The Great Gatsby" that night. I said no, we weren't, because we were fighting inflation.
"That does it," he said. "I'm closing the theater for good."
Because the kids have no movie theater to go to any more, they're now hanging around the house with their friends, and it has cost me $45 for beer and pretzels alone.
Of course, we're not going to go near a store for Christmas, as that is really throwing money down the drain. Somehow the newspaper I work for found out about it, and I got a call from the advertising department. The man said if we're not going to buy anything for Christmas, they're not going to get advertising and they won't be able to pay me for the column. I'll be very frank with you, Mr. President, this could put me in a class with my friend Kaltenborn.
But this is neither here nor there. What I'm really writing to you about is, could I please have my WIN flag to fly over my house, because I want everybody to know how easy it is to fight inflation?—Economically yours, A.B.

Famous Belgian Resort Looks For Face-Lift

By RAYMOND BOVE
OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Ostend, the seaside resort for naughty weekends in the gay '90s, is going to lose some last relics of the Victorians in its first major face lift for nearly a century.

The new look will be resolutely modern. Two wars, floods and real estate developers have already taken a heavy toll of the old Ostend.

The first sight of the continent for the eloping couple on the deck of the plush side-wheeler from Britain used to be a shoreline of fussy villas and gingerbread towers emerging slowly from the mist. Now it's an almost unbroken row of high rise concrete apartment houses.

The fabulously kitsch casino, or Kursaal, as it was known when it was the center of high-life in Leopold II's days vanished during World War I. Most of the elaborate villas and the lush hotels later fell victim to the Nazi army's urge to wall up the Atlantic against an Allied attack.

Practically all that remains standing to evoke the past splendor is the modernized race course and the Thermes, or baths, where sea-water therapy is applied for various ailments and where a spring provides a steady running stream of pungent mineral water.

There are also the massive railway station sitting alongside the harbor and a handful of hotels. Extending its seaweed-covered pillars beyond the harbor stands the old wooden pier, battered by several encounters with ships tossed about by the temperamental North Sea.

Mayor Piers, the man who says "nothing is too good for Ostend," is firmly intent on removing what he considers ungainly constructions that are an eyesore in a predominantly modern resort.

Ostend was once known as the queen of beaches and the beach of queens. Mayor Piers thinks his projects for modernization may help it recover this lost title. But the thousands of tourists who flock in every summer are likely to deter any royalty.

Leopold II, the Belgian monarch who turned the small fishing port of only several hundred inhabitants into a playground for princes and dukes in the second half of the 19th century, had a private villa built at the end of the long promenade. Though modernized on several occasions, the huge red-roofed building hasn't hosted any member of the royal family regularly since the end of World War II. The villa has been donated to the city and will become an international congress center.

Ostend is no longer a fashionable place to spend a holiday, though it still remains a popular resort for the not-so-rich. A lot of drinking and jesting is still done in the countless cafes. Most of it is done by Englishmen who make the three-and-a-half-hour crossing for a taste of continental living.

But if the few well-to-do visitors come only in the winter now, the sheer number of less well-endowed tourists more than makes up the difference.

Yet despite an average yearly two million "nights" registered by the city's 200 hotels, Mayor Piers is well aware that Ostend has also got to count on other industries besides tourism to keep the resort prosperous.

Industrial estates will be developed southwards to accommodate light, nonpolluting industries and the harbor is to be altered to accommodate larger merchantmen.

But the biggest changes that are to take place over the next ten years or so will center on tourism anyway, Piers says.

"The yacht port will be enlarged to harbor over 1,000 pleasure craft," Piers explains. "The old monumental railway station will be demolished, to be replaced with an ultramodern concern with improved facilities to cater to the railway and ferry passengers."

"I also want to demolish the old Thermes and the adjoining hotel to put up an ultramodern cure center instead," Piers added.

When all these transformations are completed, all that will remain of King Leopold's touch will be the neo-Gothic cathedral and a series of blind arches bordering the promenade.

Slow Delivery After Arrival

SYDNEY (UPI) — Inefficiency and industrial strife on the Australian waterfront has cost $360 million in the past three years, according to a survey conducted by the Australian Transport Study Group.

The survey found that most goods which entered Australia by ship took from three to seven weeks to reach their destination — after they reached port.

Restaurateurs Not Hurting Due Inflation

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation hasn't spoiled the American appetite for eating out, but it has meant that restaurant diners eat less and waste less.

To hear many restaurateurs tell it, business is good. The customer count is up, not just in fast food eateries but also in some table service restaurants, says Henry W. Bolling, president of the National Restaurant Association, Chicago.

But the head count is down in restaurants patronized by middle aged to older customers, and those on a fixed income, he added.

The industry isn't immune to inflation and Bolling said its impact is most apparent in two areas.

"People are trading down in menu items in terms of portion sizes," Bolling said. "More are choosing a smaller steak if there's a choice of weights."

"They're eating what's on their plates. The lettuce underliner that comes under some salads that might have been discarded by the customer is being eaten. They're also eating baked potato skins. They're becoming aware of waste."

In New York, some restaurateurs say their patrons are ordering fewer premeal cocktails, or are switching to less expensive wine or beer.

And inflation, in the form of a substantial rent increase, forced Jack Dempsey to close his restaurant in New York's theater district.

But in general, Bolling said, the attrition rate of restaurants is down, mainly because multi-unit firms are building more restaurants.

This rosy outlook was shared by many restaurateurs questioned at a lawn party at Gracie Mansion, New York's mayoral residence. The party was given by the Hospitality Industry Foundation of New York, a promotional organization founded earlier this year to boost the city's 10,000 restaurants.

Most of the 400 invited guests were taxi and sightseeing bus drivers, tour guides, elevator operators and hotel bellmen, policemen and women and airline stewardesses, the people visitors to New York are likely to ask about where to dine out.

Stephan Dag, manager of historic Fraunces Tavern in lower Manhattan, said his dinner business was up 50 per cent over last summer. He attributed the increase in customers to a change in management and chef. Dag said he thought restaurant business in midtown might be suffering because of security problems and lack of parking space.

That some restaurants are suffering is obvious to the observer who sees far more empty tables than formerly at midday and in the evening.

Even fast food chains such as Nedick's are hurting. Lewis Phillips, its president, said his dollar volume was unchanged last month because he'd had to raise prices, but his customer count was down.

Middle income customers are spending less and lower income customers and school children are bringing lunch from home to save money, Phillips said, adding:

"A coffee break costs 75 cents—50 cents for a Danish and 25 for coffee, about $1 with tip. That's an exorbitant price."

Jerry Berns, whose "21" Club in midtown Manhattan is popular with high-salaried executives and celebrities, speculated that neighborhood family restaurant business was off. And he said that while his customers don't actually ask for doggie bags, they aren't averse to them.

"We now suggest that they take with them anything that would be good cold—particularly red meats, which are readily portable," he said.

"Our steaks are large. And I was brought up in a house where one ate everything on his plate. It goes against the grain to throw away good food."

Vincent Sardi, whose restaurant has been a theater district landmark for decades, thinks neighborhood restaurants increased their business this year because many New Yorkers, feeling the inflationary pinch, vacationed at home.

Of all restaurateurs questioned, only Hiroaki Aoki, owner of the Benihana chain of Japanese steakhouse restaurants, reported an increase in dollar volume. He credited this to his chain's simple menu, which consists of steak, chicken, shrimp and vegetables.

"What we worry about is the meat shortage forecast for next year," he said.

Fully Aware Of Racing Trucks

DALLAS (UPI) — The Department of Public Safety says it knows about truckers racing at 80 miles an hour along the state's highways and sympathizes with complaints from motorists.

"We don't have enough people to watch everybody," says Lt. Chester Fant. "We'd have to have as many patrolmen as there are motorists in Texas to effectively control them."

Chrysler Corp. Reports Losses

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) Chrysler Corp. has reported a third-quarter profit of $11.2 million in U.S. and Canadian operations and increased sales revenue worldwide. But the firm wound up losing $8 million for the quarter because of overseas losses.

The North American profits were offset by losses totaling $19.2 million overseas, Chrysler said.

The figures announced Tuesday show Chrysler still in the black for the year so far. The nine-month earnings are $21.4 million, an 88 per cent decline from $181 million a year ago, and a per-share drop from $3.42 to 38 cents.

It was only the second quarter in 3½ years that the nation's third largest auto maker reported a loss. General Motors and Ford Motor Co. plan to report their third-quarter results next week.

The loss came despite record revenues for the period. Sales totaled $2.8 billion, up from $2.3 billion for the third quarter of 1973.

Trading of the firm's stock was temporarily halted on the New York Stock Exchange

Tuesday. It closed at 10¾, a low for the year.

Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend said the firm has been unable to recover $249 in material and labor costs added for each car since January 1972 despite price increases averaging about $1,000 since 1974 models came out a little more than a year ago.

Townsend blamed the third-quarter loss, equivalent to 15 cents a share, on "a combination of decreased units, inadequate price increases and increased costs which have persisted throughout the industry during 1974."

His contention was illustrated by sales figures for the first nine months of the year — $8.5 billion worldwide, a $100 million increase over the comparable period of last year but nevertheless representing a drop in the number of cars sold. Chrysler said U.S. vehicle sales through the first three quarters were off 18 per cent to 1,025,074 units, and worldwide vehicle sales declined eight per cent to 2,275,535.

During the first six months of this year, the Big Three auto makers reported the lowest cumulative profits in 13 years but all remained in the black.

Subpoenaed To Air Mormon Practices

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The president of the Mormon church has been subpoenaed to reveal all church policies and practices concerning blacks, who are denied full participation in the 3.3-million-member religion.

Lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People subpoenaed President Spencer W. Kimball, 79, leader of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), to appear Nov. 14 to give a deposition in a federal court suit against the Boy Scouts of America.

A church spokesman declined comment Tuesday except to say, "The subpoena was delivered yesterday to a church attorney. The church legal counsel has it under advisement."

The church's ban of blacks from its lay priesthood — held by all faithful, nonblack, male members 12 or older — is at the root of an NAACP racial discrimination lawsuit filed in July against the scouts.

The NAACP, along with two 12-year-old black scouts and their guardians, charge the Boy Scouts with discriminating against blacks by denying them top leadership positions in Mormon-sponsored troops.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge Willis W. Ritter issued an injunction against the scouts ordering them not to discriminate, pending trial.

Scout lawyers filed a document denying the allegations and asking that the case be dismissed.

Offered Sum Not To Wed

LONDON (AP) — The London Evening News reported today that lawyers for Happy Rockefeller's aunt Rachel Fidler had offered Welsh barman Michael Wilson $48,000 not to marry the millionaire's nearly 50 years his senior.

The News said Wilson told it he refused — "I got very angry and told them I am not a fortune hunter" — and that Miss Fidler said at her home near Philadelphia:

"I have no intention of changing my mind. The more they press me, the more determined I am to marry Mr. Wilson."

The newspaper said Miss Fidler's lawyers "were expected to make one more attempt today to get the couple to call it off."

"I think it is because I am a miner's son that they feel I am not fitted to marry Miss Fidler," said Wilson, a handsome 29-year-old who is visiting his mother in the Welsh town of Llay.

He said he would be telephoning Miss Fidler today.

"... Yes, reversed charges," he told a questioning newsman.

Wilson said the difference in their ages is irrelevant because their relationship is based on companionship.

Quake Hits Remote Area

HONOLULU (AP) — A major earthquake struck a remote area of the South Pacific, authorities reported today. There were no early reports of casualties or damages.

A spokesman for the International Tsunami Information Center said the tremor, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale, was recorded at 8:15 p.m. HST Tuesday in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands.

A quake of 7.2 is classified as major and would be capable of heavy damage.

The center said the location of the quake was such that a Pacific-wide tsunami, or seismic sea wave, will not be generated. The epicenter of the earthquake was not immediately known.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus, a reading of 7.2 would be 10 times greater than a reading of 6.2.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.3.

Profits Up For Oil Companies

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's largest oil companies have posted increases in their third quarter profits that range from one fourth to one and a half times the earnings reported a year ago.

The nation's largest oil firm, Exxon Corp., said Tuesday its profits for the three months ended Sept. 30 went up 25.4 per cent over the third quarter of 1973. Shell Oil's earnings rose 158 per cent, the earnings of Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco) doubled and Gulf Oil Corp. reported a 31 per cent jump.

Exxon's earnings totaled $800 million in the third quarter, or $3.58 a share, compared with $638 million, or $2.85 a share, in the same period last year.

Exxon Chairman J. K. Jamieson said the major reasons for the higher earnings were worldwide chemical sales, inventory profits abroad arising from higher crude prices and increased prices for domestic crude oil and natural gas.

Shell, the U.S. subsidiary of the Royal Dutch Shell group, said third quarter profits of $216 million, or $3.21 a share, compared with $83.6 million, or $1.24 a share, in the same period of 1973.

Like Gulf and Amoco, Shell attributed the increases to higher crude oil prices and chemical product sales.

Gulf earned $275 million, or $1.42 a share, in the latest quarter, but only $210 million, or $1.08 a share, in the previous third quarter.

Gulf noted reduced profits in the international sphere, but said domestic and foreign activities shared equally in the third-quarter profits.

Standard Oil of Indiana enjoyed a jump in after-tax profits during the latest quarter to $269.5 million, or $4.22 a share, from $147.3 million, or $2.11 a share, in the like period of 1973.

Amoco Chairman John Swearingen said worldwide chemical and petroleum operations contributed to more than half of the earnings gain.

Church Plans Fall Festival

BELL ARTHUR—A harvest festival will be held Saturday at the Arthur Christian Church here.

The event will be held from 6-9 p.m. and will include the sale of crafts, hot dogs and candied apples.

Entertainment will be provided by Smokey Bear and skill games will be held.

All proceeds will be used for the benefit of the fellowship hall.

Resigns Post

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (SP)—William R. Henderson who has long been at the center of controversy over development of Bald Head Island has resigned as chairman of the board of Carolina Cape Fear Corp., the developers of the island.

The 50-year-old Henderson said Tuesday he had wanted for some time to sell his interests in the development of the sub-tropical island in the mouth of the Cape Fear River. He said he had waited until he was sure the island would be developed in an environmentally pleasing manner.

Henderson said he had actually owned only 15 to 20 per cent of the project and his share was absorbed by other stockholders in the corporation. The firm is now headed by an operating committee headed by James G. Spearman, Greensboro savings and loan executive.

Cattlemen Plan For A Second Slaughter

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — Some Midwest cattlemen caught in an economic crunch will have 1,000 calves slaughtered here Saturday.

But instead of being shot or knifed and dumped into open pits, the calves will be processed without charge at the Dubuque Packing Co. The veal — about 65,000 pounds — will then be shipped to hurricane victims in Honduras.

"I got word this afternoon that the Red Cross in Honduras has agreed to accept the meat and distribute it," Chuck Stoltz, the plant's vice president, said Tuesday.

Some farmers in Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois offered the meat for Hondurans last week after more than 600 calves were killed and dumped into trenches in Wisconsin.

That slaughter, by members of the National Farmers Organization, was to draw attention to a price squeeze being experienced by producers. But it also drew criticism as a wasteful form of protest.

Jim Runde of Cuba City, Wisconsin treasurer of the NFO, said the new action will accomplish the same purposes — drawing attention to the cattlemen's economic plight and keeping cattle off the market — at the same time that it gets food to needy people.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The annual market for small computers in Europe totaled $157 million in 1973 and should reach $1 billion by 1983, according to Frost & Sullivan, a market research firm.

Two Milk Producers Speak Against Pricing Plan

RALEIGH (AP)—Two dairy farmers told the state Milk Commission Tuesday that a policy of allowing stores to sell milk below cost could reduce the income of farmers.

John McClain of Henderson County and Zeno Ponder of Madison County also cited higher farm costs and asked for a $1 increase in the price farmers are paid for 100 pounds of raw milk by processors. They said they represented the state's dairy farmers.

The $1 increase would amount to about four cents a half gallon. No decision was made on the request.

The Milk Commission voted 4-3 to change its policy on stores selling milk below cost. Under the new policy, stores may sell milk as a "loss leader" as long as it's not an attempt to stifle competition unfairly.

Gov. Jim Holshouser's four appointees voted as a bloc to change the policy. Holshouser recently announced he will ask the legislature to repeal the law prohibiting loss leader sales of milk.

Farmers and farmer organizations spoke out against the governor's proposal, saying it would drive dairy farmers out of business because profit losses caused by such sales would be passed down to farmers.

The Milk Commission sets the minimum price that must be paid farmers for raw milk. It is now $10.62 per hundred pounds (2 1/2 half gallons). Holshouser has said that protection will prevent losses being passed back to farmers.

Commissioner Hamilton Horton of Winston-Salem, a Holshouser appointee, said the law against loss leaders doesn't prevent the commission allowing such sales when it's in the "public interest." He said the law is aimed at preventing unfair sales that could stifle competition.

Lillian Woo, another Holshouser appointee, said the new policy will require proof that a store is using loss leader sales unfairly before the commission steps in to halt it.

Despite the new policy, the commission voted 4-3 to notify 19 stores that they may be illegally selling milk below cost. The stores had not been shown to be competing unfairly.

Stanly County dairy farmer

Branch Lilly, a Holshouser appointee, broke from the Holshouser bloc to give that effort a majority.

Under previous policy—and in the case of the 19 stores—the Milk Commission wrote letters to merchants who appeared to be selling milk below cost. The letters advised them they might be breaking the law and that further action could be taken. A staff member said the letter usually put an end to any loss-leader sales.

When Ponder urged the commission to investigate rebates to stores from processors, commissioners said they would ask the companies for information on wholesale prices and rebates. Mrs. Woo said that information is needed before the board can decide if it should control the retail price of milk, a power the commission has but does not exercise.

The commission now controls only the price paid farmers. But it has been urged by farmers and farm organizations to control milk prices at all levels. Processors are companies that package milk and other dairy products. Rebates are given stores for volume sales of fresh milk.

Says Lawyer Didn't Try

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Attorney Percy Foreman never examined a file of material gathered on behalf of James Earl Ray when Foreman was defending Ray in the Martin Luther King Jr. slaying, according to a Memphis lawyer.

Russell Thompson, who said he was hired as Ray's local counsel, told a federal court hearing Tuesday that he would have expected defense attorneys to look at the two files of documents collected by one of his investigators.

Thompson said neither Foreman nor previous Ray defense attorney Arthur Hanes Sr. of Birmingham, Ala., had attempted to look at the files.

Ray, 46, is attempting to withdraw his guilty plea and stand trial in the April 4, 1968, King slaying.

Ray's attorneys attempted Tuesday to lay the groundwork for their contention that neither Foreman nor Hanes pursued a supportable defense before Ray pleaded guilty and accepted a 99-year prison sentence.

They maintain that Foreman, of Houston, Tex., had a financial interest in a book about Ray's case and that he coerced the guilty plea. The attorneys also say the state withheld evidence that bore on Ray's guilt or innocence.

Interrupted By Four Protestors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Howard K. Smith's ABC television news show was interrupted briefly by two men and two women apparently protesting the treatment of prisoners in Northern Ireland.

The interruption at 6:17 p.m. EDT Tuesday was seen by those watching the 6 p.m. ABC evening news.

Smith was coanchoring the show with Harry Reasoner, who was in New York, when the four people walked in front of the cameras.

Racial Attitudes Compared By Boston Students

Govm't Role Discussed At Meeting Of LWV

"The Role of Government in Land Use Planning" was the topic of discussion at a meeting sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County Tuesday night.

E. E. Howell, Chairman of the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission, Greenville-Pitt County, spoke of the need for greater public interest and involvement in land use planning. He pointed out that the future generations will not have clean air and water without adequate planning now. Howell stated that there is a need for closer working ties with the Pitt County Planning Board.

David E. Bosley, Mayor of Grifton, focused on who has the power in land use planning and enforcement and on the role of the tax structure in land use planning. Bosley said that the General Assembly is responsible for what happens to the land in North Carolina, even though the General Assembly has not wanted to face this responsibility. He stressed that present tax policies tax improvements to property heavily while lightly taxing location values. Stating that the present tax structure, as it relates to land use, rewards greed and punishes thrift and industry, Bosley suggested that tax structure changes are needed.

Whit Morrow, Manager of the Northeastern Regional Office,

N. C. Department of Natural and Economic Resources, spoke of the role of the state in land use planning. He observed that most land use policies have been delegated by the state to local levels. The top priority goal of the Department of Natural and Economic Resources is to equip each locality to make community plans properly. He also mentioned the work of the Dept. of State Planning and the Dept. of Human Resources in planning at the state level for parks.

After making the presentations, the panelists answered questions from the audience.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "The only similarity between our school and your school is the blackboard," said one of four Boston high school students here to take a look at Charlotte's integrated school system.

"People just seem to get along," said Bob Messina, a member of the Boston group which arrived late Monday and met with student leaders and school administrators Tuesday.

The Bostonians, two black and two white members of the Hyde Park High School biracial committee, will visit four integrated high schools here today and will return to Boston Thursday.

About 18,000 of Boston's 92,000 public school students are affected by a court-ordered busing program that has been marred by violence and some white student boycotting since schools opened last month.

"People (in Boston) were not willing to listen," said Dana Gonsal, committee cochairman. "People want to close their minds and not want to understand where the other man came from."

Another Boston student, Linda Lawrence, said blacks and whites in her city were afraid of one another because the races had lived apart culturally.

"White people have never dealt with black people and the black people haven't dealt with the whites," she said. "It's a new experience."

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system has been integrated under a court order that required massive busing. Charlotte students invited the Boston group and arranged for the visit so they could share their experiences.

"We're still working at it every day and we don't have any miracle answers," said Charlotte student Dwight Covington. "But what was a new situation for you 10 years ago is a new situation for you now. And we want you to know we've learned a lot about judging anybody, black or white, as an individual. It just took time."

The host students admitted that racial fighting still occurs here, but they said generally the students have accepted desegregation and are trying to make it work.

Last week one high school was closed at noon after racial fighting involving nearly 100 blacks and whites.

"We haven't really accepted it fully," said one Charlotte student. "But we've adjusted to it real well."

Plan Fewer Immigrants

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada has taken steps to cut immigration about 40 per cent, leaving the door open mostly to persons with needed skills or jobs waiting.

The new immigration regulations, announced in Parliament Tuesday and effective immediately, are a response to government fears that soaring immigration will add to mounting unemployment.

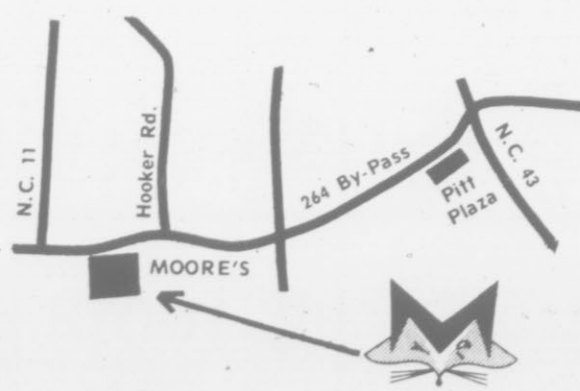

Immigration Minister Robert Andras estimated that the restrictions will reduce the influx from an estimated 260,000 to about 200,000 in 1975. He said uncontrolled immigration would create problems of housing and social services as well as unemployment.

Immigration during the first six months of 1974 reached 104,089, a 47 per cent increase over the same period in 1973 and 92 per cent higher than in the first half of 1972. Unemployment rose by one-half of one per cent to 5.8 per cent of the labor force in September.

Workshop Held By LWV Here

'WIN' Seen As Another Losing Bid

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Don't Be Fuelish" campaign ran out of energy, and some experts are saying the administration's latest drive for voluntary public action—WIN—will probably end up a loser.

The WIN or "Whip Inflation Now" campaign, kicked off last week in President Ford's economic message, comes exactly a year after the oil embargo led to an emergency appeal for voluntary oil conservation—an appeal many experts say has been disappointingly ineffective.

"It won't work," Dr. James Murray, a social scientist for the National Opinion Research Corp. says of the upcoming WIN campaign.

Murray, who surveyed citizen attitudes to conservation pleas this past year for the Federal Energy Administration, says: "It's a big, government rip-off. The 'Don't Be Fuelish' campaign has had no influence and combining it with inflation won't have any effect either."

"Most people tend to react on how something affects them personally, not on objective information from an ad," says David Freeman, former White House energy adviser who also did studies on the government's conservation program.

"This type of public relations campaign is useful only if it's accompanied by real news and hard government action," says Freeman, until recently director of the Ford Foundation Energy Policy Project and now a U.S. Senate consultant.

The "Don't Be Fuelish" campaign and the new WIN campaign, which will include an energy-saving plea, are coordinated at the government's request by the Advertising Council, the goodwill arm of the advertising industry. The council organizes about 25 of these public service ad campaigns each year.

The production of the ads is paid for by a volunteer agency enlisted by the Advertising Council. The ads are distributed by the council free of charge, and time and space for the ads are donated television and radio stations, newspapers and magazines. The ads also run for free in buses and subways.

The Federal Energy Administration approached the council during the oil embargo in October with an urgent request for a campaign on fuel conservation.

"Last year's 'Don't Be Fuelish' campaign got one of the biggest responses from the media we've ever seen," says council vice president Dean Fritchen.

Fritchen says both Ad Council staff and volunteer agency Cunningham & Walsh worked weekends and during the Thanksgiving holiday to get the message out on an accelerated basis.

The first 'Don't Be Fuelish' ad was shown during the widely-watched Super Bowl Game Jan. 13. During the next six months, media of all sorts donated a total of about $25 million worth of time and space to showing the message, the FEA says.

By early summer, 'Don't be Fuelish' began losing the popularity contest with other issues for public attention, and the campaign was begging for an occasional spot on the air or in print.

Why did it fail?

For one thing, the government never put any money into the campaign itself, ad sources who asked not to be named say. Without any dollar commitment, public service campaigns must rely completely on publishers, station managers and producers for its support, they say.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved broadly lower today in an apparent continuation of the previous session's late weakness.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off about a point, and declining issues held a broad lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Traders apparently remained distressed by the latest consumer price index figures which showed a 1.2 per cent rise in September. In addition, a leading bank report voiced pessimism Tuesday that the economy can recover soon.

In more promising developments, banking analysts and economists were reported optimistic that interest rates will take a sharp drop in the next eight months or so.

Early stock prices included: American Cyanamid, off a point at 20 3/4; American Motors, up 7/8 at 5 1/2; Ford Motor, off 1/4 at 32 1/4; and Kresge, off 1/4 at 22 1/2.

On Tuesday, the Dow declined 6.96 to 662.86 against a background of discouraging economic news. Volume totaled an active 18.93 million shares.

The NYSE composite index of all listed common stocks fell 0.15 to 38.57.

Illustrating the market's underlying strength, gainers outnumbered losers by a narrow margin.

Leaf Quality Said Down

FARMVILLE—The quality of tobacco on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday was down as compared with the quality of tobacco sold Monday.

Louis Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville market, said a few grades of leaf tobacco were weaker than on Monday. Top grade of leaf cutters remained about the same with a few exceptions.

Top practical price paid ranged from $1.12 to $1.15 per hundred pounds.

Several piles of quality leaf brought $1.20 to $1.25 per pound. The volume of lugs and non-descript grades continue to increase as the end of the season approaches.

The market sold 631,814 pounds of leaf for $711,604, for an average of $112.63 per hundred pounds. To date the market has sold 27,876,546 pounds of tobacco for an average of $106.41 per hundred pounds.

Goal Out Of Reach

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration has tentatively concluded that the United States cannot be independent of imported oil because no substitutes for oil are in sight, the Washington Post said in its Wednesday editions.

The agency, in a draft of its Blueprint for Project Independence, contends that coal is no substitute for oil because it is too difficult to burn and mine and that atomic power is only a substitute for coal, not oil, the Post said.

Synthetic fuels, solar energy and geothermal power provide no early relief from imported oil because they are at least 10 years away from making even the smallest impact on energy use, the Post quoted the draft as saying.

Project Independence was announced by former President Richard M. Nixon as the overall plan designed to free the United States of its dependence on imported oil by 1985.

Other government officials said later, however, that the actual goal was to reduce the amount of oil imports rather than end them entirely.

The Post said the Project Independence blueprint, scheduled to be made public in its final form Nov. 7, concludes that even the oil produced by all-out drilling in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and the Gulf of Alaska would free the nation from imports for only a few years' time.

Deep-drilled domestic oil would be even more expensive than foreign oil, the Post quoted the draft as saying.

Jaguars, Rams Battling For Berth

Farmville Central's Greg Joyner

For the teams of the East Carolina Conference, the 1974 season is rapidly drawing to a close with just three games left on the schedule but for two of those teams, the season may be over after Friday night.

This year the ECC gets two playoff berths, those going to the top two teams in the league. Southern Wayne has all but locked up the number one spot and this Friday night the second spot may be decided as Farmville Central travels to Snow Hill to face Greene Central.

In Friday night's games, Robersonville smashed Rock Ridge, 62-6; Williamston fell to Ahoskie (7-0) 50-13; Conley scalped the Eastern Wayne Warriors, 33-6. Farmville Central bopped North Lenoir (3-4), 28-0; North Pitt edged past Aycock (0-7), 13-12; and Greene Central stopped the Ayden-Grifton (4-3) charge, 24-0.

Both Greene Central and Farmville Central have identical conference records, 5-1, both losing to Southern Wayne (7-0). The Jaguars have one move overall loss than the Rams having lost their non-conference opener to Rose. Greene Central slapped Saratoga Central in the Ram's first game, 36-6.

In losing the Southern Wayne, Greene Central gave up 27-7 but Farmville Central lost 52-0 to the Saints. The Rams have used several people to get their points. Anthony Corbett has scored seven times and Linwood Underhill is right behind with six as is Mike Canady. Jeffery Warren is third on the list with four TD's to his credit.

The Rams have won their last four games and through the seven games this season are averaging 226.4 yards rushing each time out. The Jaguars have not been as effective rushing for 173.4 but FC's Greg Joyner and Carroll Griffin are completing 55 percent of their passes for 89 yards a game to just a 57 yards average for Ram quarterbacks Jerry Carraway and Melvin Briggs. Joyner has also thrown seven touchdowns passes to just two for the Rams and this will give the GC coaches something to worry about. The Rams have only hit on 34 percent of their's.

Farmville Central's kicking game has been better than the Rams' as Tony Oakley has made three field goals and 10 extra points. The Rams have not made a field goal yet.

Both teams have had their biggest games against North Pitt as they recorded over 300 yards rushing. The Rams picked up 336 while the Jags ran for 311. Farmville Central completed three passes in the game for 77 yards while the Rams failed to complete one.

Both have beaten Southern Nash (3-4), and Ayden-Grifton in common games. The Rams took Southern Nash, 13-6 while FC beat the Firebirds 33-18 a week later. The Jaguars surprised A-G 27-14, and the Rams dumped them 24-0.

Jeff Wilkes is the leading Farmville Central scorer with five TD's. Ricky Shreve and Jojo White have both scored twice on Joyner passes.

The Jaguars have mainly been using Wilkes and Ronnie Gay to carry the ball with help from Ricky Shreve, Jimmy Prayer and Cedric Joyner. The Jaguar defense is led by Wardell Blow who blocked a punt in the North Lenoir end zone for a score last Friday night and Bynum Satterwhite, a defensive lineman.

The Rams have been getting their yards from a host of running backs led by Underhill and Corbett. Warren, Donnie Blizard and Mike Canady have all seen action. One of the favorite Rams targets is 6-5, 205 lb., senior Tim Butts. Butts caught a TD pass in the GC win Friday night. Butts works overtime on the defensive unit.

Barring some unforeseen upset by one of the lower teams, the winner of Friday night's game may get a berth in the state playoffs.

In other games, A-G will be trying to recover from their loss to Greene Central last week as they travel to Southern Nash. The Chargers loss Ned Craft early in the game killing their running attack and hampering the defensive effort as Craft was one of the team leaders in both these departments. Craft will be out for the rest of the season with torn knee ligaments.

Another Charger was injured and is now through. Quarterback David Pratt was hit hard shortly before the first half ended Friday night and the coaches later found out that he suffered a separated shoulder. Pratt played with the injury in the second half but will be out for the remaining games also.

Coach Mike Overton will be relying on his defense the pull the Chargers out.

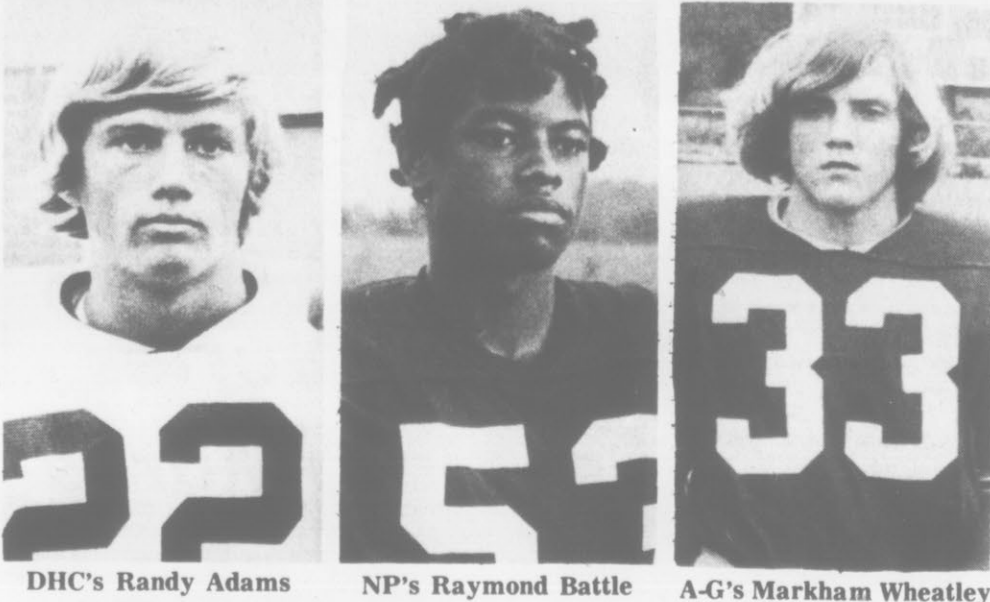

D. H. Conley will be traveling to North Pitt to try and spoil the Panther's homecoming. The Panthers won their first game last Friday. They put together a drive in the last minute after the defense forced a turnover and pull out a score to win the game on Fred Glisson's extra point after the first Panther TD.

North Pitt will be trying to make it two in a row and turn in their best season yet. The Vikings, however, will be hoping to get above the .500 mark in the conference standings with a win. Conley stormed Eastern Wayne scoring twice in the first period and twice in the last. They picked up 277 yards in total offense with Calvin Clemmons running for 107. Now that the Panthers have tasted winning, they may surprise the Vikes.

In other area games, South Edgecombe (4-3) meets Robersonville (5-2) while Edenton, undefeated in seven games, is hosted by Williamston (5-2). The Tigers have lost their last two games and should be looking to get back on track at the expense of Edenton.

NBA Has Not Phased Rookie

By The Associated Press
Rookie John Drew says he's shocked to be in the pro basketball ranks, which is exactly the way he's making some other people feel.

Drew poured in 41 points to lead the Atlanta Hawks to a 125-92 rout of the Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday night. He is now averaging 32.3 points per game after three National Basketball Association outings.

"Drew's having a lot of fun," said Atlanta Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "Maybe one day he'll wake up and realize he's in the NBA and get nervous. But I don't really think that's going to happen He's a great offensive player, and he's getting better on defense every day."

Drew, meanwhile, says he's plenty nervous.

"I'm still shocked to be up here," said Drew. "I've read about people like Tom Van Arsdale and Billy Cunningham, and now I'm playing against them. I've been nervous all day."

Atlanta jumped out to a 14-2 lead over Houston and never looked back. Dwight Jones added 24 points and Lou Hudson 23 for the Hawks. Clyde Lee led Atlanta rebounders with 21 while Drew, who is barely 20 years old, had 18.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the New York Knicks beat the Houston Rockets 110-100, the Buffalo Braves silenced the New Orleans Jazz 134-118, the Milwaukee Bucks nipped the Chicago Bulls 92-90, the Washington Bullets got past the Kansas City-Omaha Kings 123-121 and the Portland Trail Blazers edged the Golden State Warriors 107-106.

quarterback. With two more years to build up his confidence and leadership Perkins could develop into a good quarterback. But the Panthers have to grow along with him. "We will be greatly improved," he said, speaking about all the sports at North Pitt. "More guys want to participate and we will be a lot better."

With up being the only way for the football Panthers to go, sophomore Perkins may provide one of the nuclei that North Pitt needs for a good football team.

In the American Basketball Association, the San Diego Q's edged the Memphis Sounds 109-106 and the Spirits of St. Louis beat the Virginia Squires 118-112.

The Milwaukee Bucks erased a four-point deficit in the final 38 seconds to beat the Bulls. Bob Dandridge scored a pair of baskets to tie the score, then Lucius Allen stole the ball and sank a pair of free throws with two seconds left for the victory.

Bob McAdoo scored 33 points and grabbed 22 rebounds to pace Buffalo past the winless New Orleans Jazz.

Wes Unseld's basket with 13 seconds gave the Bullets their victory after Nate Archibald had tied the score with a basket with 32 seconds to go. The Kings had a last chance to tie, but Jimmy Walker missed in the closing seconds. Elvin Hayes had 35 points for the Bullets, 22 of them in the first half.

Earl Monroe led New York on a 15-5 spurt late in the third quarter, then the Knicks outscored Houston 13-4 at the start of the fourth quarter to clinch the victory.

Sidney Wicks' tap-in with 15 seconds remaining lifted Portland to victory. Geoff Petrie, Portland's high scorer with 27 points, took a long jump shot that went off the rim and Wicks tipped it in for the winning basket.

Nelson Aiding Panther Hopes

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL—Last week, North Pitt football coach Pat Smith expressed doubt that the Panthers would win a game this season. But he was proven wrong as the Panthers perked up and beat C. B. Aycock for their first victory of the aging season. The Panthers, down 12-7 with less than three minutes to go, got a break as Joey Nelson intercepted a pass and then behind sophomore quarterback Donnie Perkins, they drove to the game winning score.

In just his second year of football, Perkins has one of the toughest positions on the field. As the seventh game was coming up last week, not only did the Panthers need a win but also Perkins.

"I felt that we needed a win. Everybody wanted to win it," he said. As late as it was in the season, football had become work instead of fun. "Sometimes it has been fun," said Donnie, "but mostly it has been work." That was until last Friday night.

The Panthers got a drive going that resulted in the game's first score in the first quarter. "We started driving and took it in," Donnie said. "We ran up the middle and used the reverse to James (Carr). To top it off I threw a TD pass to Carr."

Perkins says that Thursday night he went home thinking that if Panther kicker Fred Glisson could get one kick over the crossbar, the Panthers would be able to win. Glisson got his chance and his kick in the first period was the winning margin. "Without it we wouldn't have won."

But the Falcons rallied and went ahead on a third period score, 12-7. "We just wanted to stick to our plays," Perkins said. "We had confidence they would work. They weren't a good team. The defense pulled us through."

Nelson's interception gave the whole team a lift the quarterback noted. "It really psyched me up and it turned the ballgame around and gave the whole team a lift."

Perkins himself scored the TD on a sneak that felt "real good." The bus ride back home was happier than it had been in previous weeks.

Perkins decided to play football when he was an eighth grader. He had watched his brother play and in the ninth grade, he made the J.V. team easily. "There weren't that many guys out," he said. Perkins played slot back that year but was moved to quarterback this year.

"We think he's good for his size," said his coach Smith. "He is getting better with each game. He can throw as good as anybody but he hasn't had the time he needs."

Donnie feels that the plays that have worked best for North Pitt this year are the run up the middle and the sweep. "The passing is improving with every game," he said. He hopes that the receivers can learn to hold onto the ball better which will help. "Unless they are scared of getting popped they just don't concentrate."

Perkins does not limit himself to just football. He is also a basketball player and a baseball player. He is a member of the student government association as well as a sophomore classroom president.

"My hobbies fall under one subject," he said, "sports." He hopes someday to be able to play in college. "That's one of my goals."

He likes music and dancing when he gets time off from practice. Perkins prefers Gladys Knight and the Pips, the Ohio Players, Earth, Wind and Fire and New Birth.

The Panthers will be hosting Conley this Friday night; the game is also the Panther's Homecoming. "It will be a physical game, a touch game," the quarterback said. "I think we will hold out."

Responsibility, determination, confidence and especially leadership are things a person has to have in order to be a good

Bowl Scouts To Watch Contests

By The Associated Press
Scouts from bowl games will be watching North Carolina State and Maryland Saturday in their game which could decide the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship.

Both are nationally ranked, the Maryland Terrapins No. 15 and the North Carolina State Wolfpack 17th.

N.C. State had been undefeated in six games, four in the conference, before it was knocked off 33-14 by North Carolina last week. It skidded seven places from No. 10 ranking nationally.

Maryland jumped three places in the poll after beating Wake Forest 47-0 for its third straight shutout.

Maryland, which will be the home team against N.C. State, is 3-0 in the league against State's 4-1.

North Carolina, 2-1, also is in contention. All the other teams have lost at least two league games.

Room in the press box has been made for scouts from the Cotton, Liberty, Sun, Peach and Fiesta bowl. If scouts from other bowls show up, room will be found for them.

The Wolfpack dealt Maryland its only ACC loss last season, 24-22, and went on to win the league title. In 1972 the teams played a 24-24 tie. Both games were at N.C. State.

Maryland coach Jerry Claiborne says he wishes N.C. State hadn't got beat by North Carolina because now, "They really have their backs to the wall."

North Carolina coach Bill Dooley also says his club is catching an opponent at the wrong time. The Tar Heels play Saturday night at South Carolina, which looked good in upsetting Mississippi 10-7 for its first victory after losing five straight.

South Carolina rolled up 435 yards in total defense while holding Ole Miss to 23.

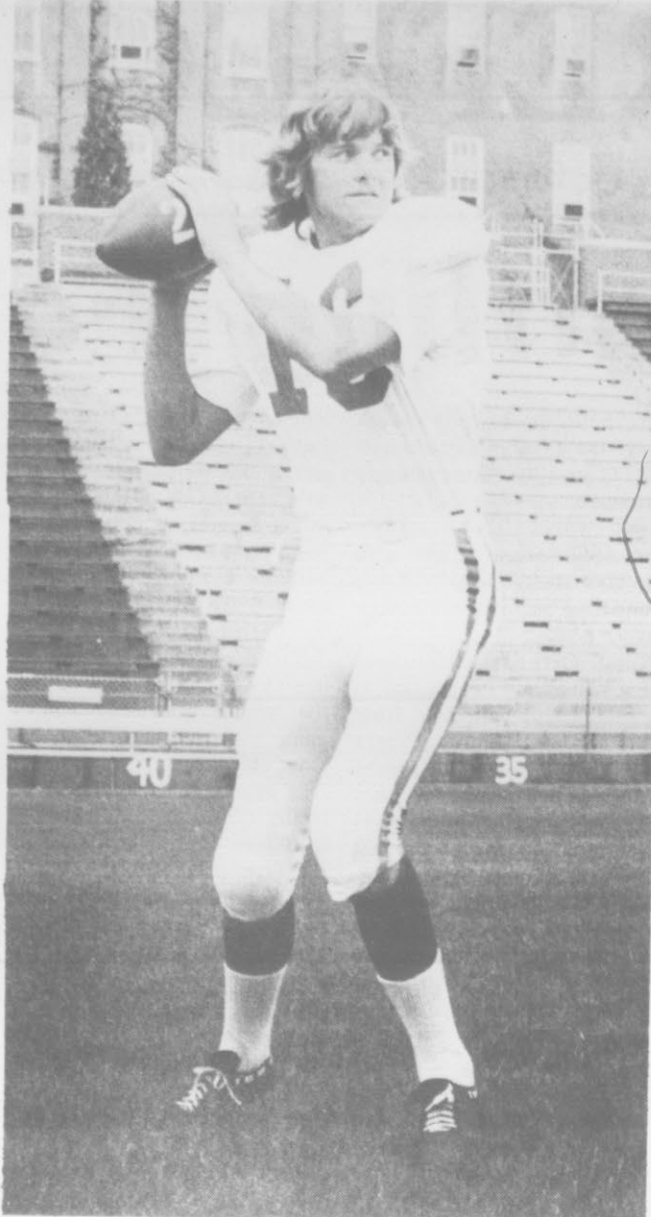

Dooley says of South Carolina, "They were having their problems earlier in the season, but now they seem to have jelled. They're playing like last year's 7-4 USC team. One of the major reasons for their earlier problems was a rash of injuries. But now they are healthy again, and they played very well against Mississippi."

North Carolina is 4-2. It received votes for this week's national rankings, but not enough to make the top 20.

In other games for ACC teams Saturday, Clemson will be at Tennessee, Duke at Florida and Virginia at Wake Forest.

It will be the seventh consecutive time that Clemson has been an underdog. But the Tigers have compiled a 3-3 record, upsetting Georgia, Georgia Tech, and Duke 17-13 last week. They have lost to Texas A&M, N.C. State and by 41-0 to Maryland.

Clemson coach Red Parker says his staff and players respect Tennessee, "But I don't feel any fear or opponents among all our people."

Dayton Quarterback Tom Vosberg

Dayton Hurler Seeking Marks

DAYTON—University of Dayton quarterback Tom Vosberg takes aim at a couple school records Saturday when the Flyers test Southern Conference power East Carolina in a 7:30 p.m. game at Greenville, N.C.

Vosberg, who set three single game records with a 29 of 47, 318-yard passing performance against Toledo last week, is rapidly closing in on two other school marks—1) for the most completions in a season and 2) for the most passing yardage in a season.

In seven games to date, Vosberg has completed 97 of 202 passes for 1,399 yards. He needs just 118 yards to tie Ken Polke's mark of 1,517 yards set last year and is only 11 completions away from tying the record of 108 completions established by Polke in 1973 and Frank Siggins in 1951.

Vosberg has also thrown 11 touchdowns passes this year and needs only four more scoring tosses to tie Siggins' 1951 season record of 15 touchdown passes thrown.

Despite all of Vosberg's passing success this season, Dayton will be carrying a five-game losing string and a 2-5 record into Saturday's encounter with the 4-2 East Carolina Pirates.

"It's like I said at the beginning of the season," said Vosberg, a 6-5 senior from Tucson, Ariz. "Throwing touchdown passes and setting records really won't mean a thing unless we have a winning season."

"I really can't take all the credit for what success I've had passing," Vosberg added. "I've received excellent protection for the most part from the line. And I can honestly say the receivers on this team are as good as any I've thrown to. They've made some super catches."

Vosberg has thrown to 12 different receivers this year. Five have caught 14 passes or more—flanker Kelvin Kirk has 16 catches for 324 yards and four TDs; split end Jim Snow has 16 for 278 yards and two TDs; tight end Frank McCallion has 16 for 187 yards and three TDs; split end Doug Kastilahn has 15 for 219 yards and one TD; and running back Kevin Conley has 14 for 126 yards.

While the Flyers ready their air arsenal for East Carolina, the Dayton defense will be looking for a way to stop the Pirates' potent ground attack.

East Carolina runs a wishbone offense, the first Dayton opponent to do so this year, and is averaging 282.5 yards a game rushing. The Pirates have had 13

Alston NL's Top Chief

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Alston, the Los Angeles Dodgers' unflappable general, was named The Associated Press' National League Manager of the Year today.

The stoic Alston, who guided the Dodgers to the National League pennant this season for the seventh time in his 21-year big league career, won in a rout.

Alston outscored Danny Murtaugh, manager of the National League East champion Pittsburgh Pirates, 290 votes to 87. Voting by the nation's sports writers and broadcasters took place prior to the league's playoffs.

Red Schoendienst, whose St. Louis Cardinals battled Pittsburgh down to the end for the East title, finished third in the balloting with 26 votes.

Finishing behind the top three were, Danny Ozark of the Philadelphia Phillies with six votes; Atlanta's Clyde King with three and Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson with two.

Alston took a relatively young team to the heights this year. It was his tender, loving care that made champions out of the Dodgers.

"I know that the players have enough to think about on the field, so I try not to give them too many problems in the clubhouse, says the easy-going Alston.

Known as a superb handler of men, Alston's tempered personality gave the Dodgers quiet confidence throughout the tough National League West battle with the Cincinnati Reds. In modern terminology, Alston kept the Dodger ship "rocking steady."

Once asked his philosophy, the dean of major league managers noted: "I put most everybody on the back and kick the rare ones that need to be kicked."

Alston was born in Hamilton, Ohio, 62 years ago and once worked as a high school basketball coach and science teacher. He entered the Dodger organization with their Trenton, N.J., team and also managed at Montreal before being named the Dodger field boss for the 1954 season.

Alston signed a one-year contract that season, and uniquely has kept up the pattern throughout his glamorous career.

"One-year contracts are a matter of pride with me," Alston says. "I wouldn't want to work anywhere where I wasn't wanted."

Alston's accomplishments stamp him as one of the most successful managers of all time. Only two men have managed one team longer than Alston has. Connie Mack managed 50 years with the Philadelphia Athletics and John McGraw had 31 years with the New York Giants.

Alston has won four World Championships, a feat surpassed in the game by only three other managers. And only four managers in the history of major league baseball have won more pennants.

Murcer, Bonds First Big Trade

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Gabe Paul is at it again.

The president of the New York Yankees looks like everybody's grandfather, smiling and always affable. He is also always ready to make a trade.

Paul has remodeled the ball club with a series of major trades, the latest one Tuesday when he swapped Bobby Murcer to the San Francisco Giants for Bobby Bonds, in an exchange of two of baseball's top outfielders.

The Bonds-Murcer swap, made on the first day of the inter league trading period, ranks as one of the biggest one-for-one deals ever made in terms of the names involved.

The Yankees' National League rivals, the New York Mets, also made a deal Tuesday, sending reserve catcher

Duffy Dyer to the Pittsburgh Pirates for outfielder Gene Clines. In the day's other trade, the Milwaukee Brewers sent second baseman John Vukovich to the Cincinnati Reds for left-handed pitcher Pat Osburn.

Bonds and Murcer both are 28 years old, both earn more than $100,000 and both arrived in the major leagues at about the same time.

Bonds was called up to the Giants midway through the 1968 season and hit a grand slam home run in his first major league game. He set a major league record by opening 11 games with home runs in 1973.

Murcer came up for keeps in 1969 and his 140 career homers placed him 17th on the Yankees' all-time list. Bonds hit 186 for San Francisco, No. 6 on the Giants' list.

Bonds' best year for average was 1970, when he batted .302. Murcer's top season was 1971 when he hit .331 with 25 homers and 94 RBIs.

Conversely, the Mets-Pirates deal was not for long-ball hitters. Neither Clines nor Dyer managed a home run last season or hit for high average. Clines batted .225 in 107 games with Pittsburgh, appearing mostly as a pinch-hitter, while Dyer played sparingly behind Mets backstops Jerry Grote and Ron Hodges, and compiled a .211 per centage.

Vukovich saw limited duty with the Brewers and will be assigned to Cincinnati's Indianapolis farm club. Osburn collected a 2-3 record and 2.52 earned run average with Indianapolis, earning a brief trial with the parent club but finishing with no decisions.

Lady Bucs Take Match

WILMINGTON — East Carolina University's women's tennis team continued to roll along yesterday, downing the University of North Carolina-Wilmington, 6-3.

The victory was the sixth for the Lady Pirates against only one setback. East Carolina won five of the six singles matches to insure their victory. UNC-W came back with two wins in the three doubles, but it was too late for them to claim a victory.

The Lady Pirates will be playing host to Duke on Thursday at 3 p.m. on the Minges Courts.

Summary:
Cynthia Averett (EC) defeated Joan Swart, 6-1, 6-1.

Moscow, Lake Placid Awarded Olympics

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer
VIENNA (AP) — Moscow and Lake Placid, N.Y., were chosen today to stage the 1980 Olympic Games. As expected, the International Olympic Committee chose Moscow in preference to Los Angeles, the rival candidate. Lake Placid was the only applicant for the Winter Games. Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, announced the decisions in the crowded main room of Vienna's City Hall. He was handed a sealed envelope by an aide, tore it open and announced that Moscow had been chosen for the Summer Games. Applause broke out and people swarmed around the Russian delegation with congratulations. Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, a 6-foot-4 former quarter-miler and basketball player, pushed his way through the throng to shake the hands of the Russians. As the hubbub died down, Killanin announced that Lake Placid had been approved, too. He said the voting was secret and no figures would be given. But one IOC source said the voting was 39-22 for Moscow over Los Angeles, and unanimous in favor of Lake Placid. Moscow's victory was the climax of six years of all-out campaigning. The Soviet capital and Los Angeles both lost out four years ago when Montreal was chosen for the 1976 Games.

The Russians had stepped up their campaign in the last year, seeking the Olympics as the biggest event for their national prestige since the revolution. Los Angeles, meanwhile, pitched its campaign in a low key and pledged to stage an Olympics in the spirit of international friendship, emphasizing that all visitors and press would enjoy complete freedom in California. Mayor Bradley and his aides shook hands with one Russian official after another. "That is the spirit of the Olympics," said Los Angeles City Councilman Donald D. Lorenzen. The Lake Placid team, although virtually certain of success since they had no rival candidate, admitted they felt relieved when Killanin announced the result of the voting. "After all, we could not be sure," said Senator Ronald Stafford, one of the Lake Placid delegation. "There has been a lot of talk in the IOC of scrapping the Winter Olympics altogether, and we set out to convince the committee that we could run the Games well." The last time the Winter Olympics were staged in the United States was in 1960 in Squaw Valley, Calif. The United States has not hosted the Summer Olympics since Los Angeles staged them in 1932.

Lenoir Rhyne Bears Are On Prowl Again

By KEN ALYTA
AP Sports Writer
HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The Bears are on the prowl again. After winning or sharing 14 Carolinas Conference football titles, eight in a row, from 1951 through 1968, Lenoir Rhyne College's fortunes begin to dip. The last three seasons the Bears won only 12 games, tied two and lost 18. But here they are, with a new coach in 28-year-old Jack Huss, rolling along with a 4-1-1 record and making like the Bears of old, winning big. After an opening game tie with Gardner-Webb, they beat Wofford and lost a 9-7 game to Presbyterian. Then they began to click. They trimmed Newberry 23-8 and routed two Southern Conference teams, Appalachian 31-10 and Davidson 48-7. They open their conference season at home Saturday night against Mars Hill and next week they wind up their home campaign against Carson-Newman. Then come three difficult road tests, starting with Furman of the Southern Conference. After that the Bears play nationally ranked Elon and Catawba. Huss, an outstanding passer, punter and signal caller for Lenoir Rhyne from 1965 through 1968, returned last year as an assistant after coaching three years at Gaffney, S.C., High School. When Danny Williams left the top job at Lenoir Rhyne after one year as successor to Hanely Painter, Huss moved up. He has a flock of talented backs running the wishbone offense, and only five seniors on his squad of 63. "I was concerned about our defense at the start of the season; we just don't have a lot of size," Huss noted Tuesday. "But we've been able to use a lot of people and the second stringers have played very well," he added. "We have an all-freshman second offensive line that is only a step behind the front line. They came here with a desire to play. "Our defense has played well all year and our offense is moving now after sputtering at times in early games." The most exciting of the Bear runners is Scott Crawford, a sophomore halfback from Belmont, N.C. The 6-footer who weighs about 185, ran for over 1,000 yards last year and in six games this season has netted 679 yards in 85 carries, scoring nine touchdowns. He's also caught six passes for 60 yards and a touchdown and completed two of four passes for 80 yards and one score. "He has great open field ability," Huss said. "He has speed and quickness, but runs under control. Greg Corpening gives him fantastic blocking. Greg is the best blocking halfback I've ever seen."

Against Appalachian Crawford ran 17 times for 157 yards and scored three times, once on an 86-yard sprint. Against Davidson he netted 177 yards in 13 carries, including a 76-yard scoring run, passed 35 yards for a score, and caught a three-yard TD pass. Fullback Ike McWhirter has run for 469 yards and junior Mike Everett and sophomore Tommy Bradley have divided the quarterback chores effectively. Painter, now concentrating on the duties of athletic director, says "We've been hungry for a few years, but it looks like the Bears of old are back."

Maryland Gets Nod Over State

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "We expect another team to try and beat us, but we're not going to let it happen." So says Ohio State's Woody Hayes as the 6-0 Buckeyes get ready to defend their No. 1 ranking against 1-5 Northwestern. "Only way to avoid it is preparation," adds Hayes. "We'll be ready. We do want to keep all four backs running." The four main backs are tailback Archie Griffin, who's averaging 6.9 yards a carry, quarterback Cornelius Greene at 6.3, fullback Champ Henson at 5.0 and wingback Brian Baschnagel at an astonishing 13.1. Those averages have remained pretty much the same for the last few weeks and Hayes, believe it or not, isn't happy about it. "We've had offensive consistency around 73 per cent for three straight weeks," he said. "The reason we're not getting better is using other players so much." The number will stay around the 73 per cent level again as the Buckeyes use a lot of players in beating Northwestern ... 56-7. Last week's score was 45 right, 17 wrong and two ties for .726, bringing the season's scoreboard to 279-108-12—.721. All three Upset Specials went down the drain, however, although West Virginia came within seconds of beating Miami, Fla., before losing by a point. Oklahoma 56, Kansas State 7: If that's a good score for Ohio State, why not for Oklahoma? Michigan 35, Minnesota 14: For the Little Brown Jug Minnesota gets juggled and mugged. Alabama 42, Texas Christian 7: TCU won't stop 'Bama, even though the Horned Frogs have won all three previous meetings with the Tide. Auburn 20, Florida State 7: Auburn has never lost to FSU and there's no reason to start now. Southern California 34, Oregon State 7: USC's passing game might not be as good as it should be, but the ground game, led by Anthony Davis, is no problem. Notre Dame 14, Miami, Fla. 7: Hurricanes come on strong to avenge last year's 44-0 shellacking, but not strong enough. Upset Special of the Week ... Baylor 21, Texas A&M 20. You know the times are changin' when the winner of this one is still unbeaten in Southwest Conference play. Second Upset Special ... Georgia Tech 24, Tulane 21: Yellow Jackets are unbeaten at home since the Notre Dame opener. Third Upset Special ... Princeton 24, Penn 21: A prize to anyone who can spell Snickenberg and Bellizeare. Bonus Upset Special ... Indiana 20, Wisconsin 15. Indiana lost by 40 to Ohio State, Wisconsin lost by 45, which means the Hoosiers are five points better. Doesn't it? Nebraska 28, Oklahoma State 17: Cornhuskers were fit to be tied last year; this time, they're humming ... with Dave Humm. Penn State 31, West Virginia 14: Lions always wins this one ... or does it just seem that way? Texas Tech 24, Southern Methodist 17: Red Raiders can't afford another SWC setback. Florida 27, Duke 14: Unless the Gators decide to look ahead to Auburn. Texas 35, Rice 7: Officials won't lose this one for the Owls. Arizona State 41, New Mexico 14: Last year it was 67-24. Maryland 24, North Carolina State 22: This game and next week's meeting with Penn State will prove how good the Terps really are. Hornets Seek Tie

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — The World Football League's East Division lead is at stake tonight as the currently leading Florida Blazers meet the second place Charlotte Hornets. A Charlotte victory would put the two teams into a tie with three regular season games remaining. The Hornets, formerly the New York Stars, are 2-1 in their Charlotte appearances, and 10-6 overall, while the Blazers are 11-5. The two clubs have met once before with Florida taking a 17-15 victory. Both will be in the WFL's eight-team playoffs next month. Florida quarterback Bob Davis is the league's No. 3 passer while Charlotte's Tom Sherman is No. 4. Davis has compiled a record of 193 completions in 344 attempts for 2,386 yards and 17 touchdowns. Sherman has completed 151 of 326 passes for 2,117 yards and 14 touchdowns. On the ground, Florida has the league's No. 2 runner, Tommy Reamon, who has gained 1,109 yards in 277 carries and scored six touchdowns. The Blazers are playing under new owners who acquired the club last weekend. The game with Charlotte originally had been scheduled for Orlando, home of the Blazers. The game was shifted to Charlotte several weeks ago when the Blazers ran into financial difficulty. The Blazers agreed to the shift for a $75,000 guarantee or 50 per cent of the gate, whichever is larger.

Says Will Move Race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The president of Daytona International Speedway threatens to move his racing events to Alabama unless Florida officials permit campers on the speedway's infield. William France Jr. asked Atty. Gen. Robert Shevin for a ruling Tuesday on claims by the state Public Health Division that the speedway should be classified as a campground. The speedway permits recreational vehicles to use its facilities during racing events, but owners of nearby commercial campgrounds have complained to the state. Campground classification would subject the speedway to a host of other regulations, including requirements for special water and sewer facilities. France, who asked Shevin for an exception to state law, said he was going ahead with a ticket-printing order for the Daytona 500, held in February. But he said he would move the race to Talladega, Ala., if Shevin's ruling is unfavorable.

Points Raised On Green Mill Run Channelization

Dr. Vincent J. Bellis, an associate professor of Biology at East Carolina University, is one of several individuals in Greenville whose comments have been requested by the U. S. Army Engineer District office in Wilmington relative to the August 1974 draft environmental statement the engineers published on the Green Mill Run in Greenville.

In a paper dated August, 1974, Dr. Bellis has outlined several specific comments on the proposed plan. Some highlights from his statement follow:

"This Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) provides a generally adequate description of the physical changes to result from the proposed flood control project. However insufficient information is given for independent evaluation of the various alternatives to channelization. Some attempt should be made to support rejection of these alternatives by citation of realistic benefit-cost figures.

Also combinations of alternatives such as limited engineering together with flood insurance and zoning should be considered.

"... It would be useful to have a breakdown giving the acreages of land subject to various flooding conditions: 25-100 year floods—with and without project. What fraction of these lands are currently in use as: (1) commercial; (2) residential; (3) vegetated?

"... it is stated that the only source of waste coming into Green Mill Run is from a stockyard. This should be amended to read: only known point source... Actually many citizens use the stream as a convenient dump for leaves, fallen branches, and other refuse. Runoff from city streets adds significant amounts of dissolved lead, oil, and grease. Fertilizer and pesticides are added by residential gardeners. Despite these environmental insults the stream supports breeding populations of mosquitofish, crayfish, suckers, and salamanders. Carp and eel ascend each spring to breed.

"A variety of birds regularly seek cover and food within the canopy overhanging the stream. From this refuge, they are enticed to backyard feeders by many residents adjacent to the floodplain. Clearing of a 100-foot wide strip along the run of the stream will greatly reduce the availability and effectiveness of this refuge for wild birds.

"... Wahl-Coates Elementary School, in cooperation with several civic groups, has established a nature trail which features the escarpment and flood plain of Green Mill Run. Guides to the completed trail will explain 150 million years of the earth's history and a 10,000 year occupation by man as indicated by evidence available at the site. Certainly sponsors of the channelization project should co-ordinate their activities with the planners of the Wahl-Coates Nature Trail to insure minimal damage to interpretive structures and trails considered.

PTA Meeting On Thursday

The Elmhurst Parent-Teachers Association will meet in the school auditorium at 8:00 p.m., Thursday. Program highlights include a skit entitled "Miss Jones will be Glad To", to be performed by a group of parents and teachers.

An Indian Rain Dance by second grade students; and choral selections from the Bicentennial Program are to be performed by fourth grade students under the direction of Mrs. Joanne Moore.

There will also be an open house following the meetings.

already in place and currently in use.

"Much of the flooding currently observed in Green Mill Run is of the nuisance variety, with little real loss of property. Much of the flood plain within the city is maintained as lawn. "Actually, excessive runoff originates in paved parking lots which funnel water into tributaries to Green Mill Run. This EIS argues that project completion will enhance the environment by making possible

Quartet Will Be Singing

more intensive use of existing urban areas", and will "stimulate growth and development in an established urban environment". the pressure to use flood plain land as parking space will be nearly irresistible in the downtown area and along Tenth Street at ECU. Thus completion

Plan Wedding Program Sunday

The members of St. Stephen Church will sponsor a wedding program Sunday at 6 p.m. at the church.

Men and women are asked to wear their bicentennial outfits for the program.

Participating will be the Rev. Leroy Redden and Melvin Chestnut.

A reception will be held following the wedding.

Rehearsal will be held Saturday at 7 p.m. at the church.

of this project can be expected to encourage the very activity (paving) which is the major cause of our current runoff problem. Has this project been designed to take care of anticipated faster runoff resulting from its construction?

"... Further channelization of Green Mill Run can only worsen an already environmentally harmful situation. By its own figures of this EIS, the Corps of Engineers recognizes nearly 200 miles of proposed or completed channelization in the lower Tar River. The proposed Green Mill Project will add only two miles to this total but these two miles will include high pollution potential urban drainage.

"Some property owners (have) constructed buildings almost within the creek. Even completion of the proposed project will give these people little protection from severe flooding. Protection in such cases should be provided in terms of insurance and such flood proofing as is practicable. Flood plain zoning is in order, but under no circumstances should large amounts of federal and local tax money be used to protect the relatively few who may actually be significantly damaged by flooding..."

Black Cats Held In High Esteem

NEW YORK (UPI) — Black cats were linked with Halloween during the Middle Ages — a time when superstition rode high.

In ancient France and Britain, Druid priests worshipped Samhain, the God of Death, on Halloween night. The Druids believed black cats were sacred beasts and embodied the souls of persons whom Samhain had punished.

Electric Car Cheaper To Run, Says Builder

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Dick Bassett says he took a basket of surplus military electrical parts and a junk auto body and turned them into a little electric car that hums along at 40 miles an hour for up to 50 miles.

"My wife and daughters drive it continuously," he said. "It's an awful lot cheaper than a gasoline-driven car."

"The idea of an electric car isn't anything new, but putting one together and driving it around town sure is," said Bassett, 48, an engineer at Sandia Laboratories.

Bassett said the car costs a little over half-a-penny per mile to operate, based on the current price of electricity. He said he has about $1,000 invested in the car. Nearly three-fourths of the cost is in the 10 lead-acid storage batteries, five each in what had been the car's engine and trunk spaces.

"It's a weird feeling, sitting at a stoplight in the car. When the accelerator isn't depressed, there's no sound. No power is consumed. You always wonder if you're really going to move when you hit the pedal," Bassett said. "My wife has a problem with it while shopping. People in parking lots constantly walk in front of the car, because they can't hear it coming."

"We also have trouble getting service at drive-in bank windows, because tellers depend on an intercom to alert them that a customer is coming. We usually wind up blowing the horn."

The idea of the car, he said, had been in the back of his mind a long time.

"I really decided to do something about it when the energy crisis came. The car body had to be light and boxy, so I bought a 1963, four door foreign compact sedan. I began by stripping everything out of the car—motor, radiator heater, hoses, the works."

"It weighed about 1,595 pounds to begin with. I stripped about 300 pounds off of it," Bassett said.

He acquired a surplus aircraft generator from a California firm — a 28 volt, 300-amp generator that weighed about 80 pounds and delivers about 36 mechanical horsepower.

Bassett discarded the car's clutch assembly and bolted the generator directly to a four-speed transmission he rebuilt.

"I rigged a flexible coupling, but I was counting on the synchromesh in the transmission to let me shift gears without a clutch. It worked out real fine, but we never use first gear. It's such a high gear ratio, it just spins the wheels or tends to lift the front end of the car."

Controlling the speed proved another problem.

"That was solved by rigging the accelerator pedal to sequenced micro switches, which are used to operate surplus, 400-amp, 28-volt relays," he said. "That gives the car three electrical speeds in each gear. The pickup is fantastic. And when you let up on the accelerator pedal, it becomes almost freewheeling."

The batteries are charged by plugging a charger into a connector in the grill.

"An overnight charge is sufficient to restore even a completely dead battery," Bassett said.

WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 10 through Oct. 16.

House
NUCLEAR SUPPLIES Rejected, 143 for and 230 against, a move to recommit to conference and thus kill a bill regulating the supply of U.S. nuclear material to foreign nations. Recommendation was favored by those seeking increased congressional control over distribution of reactors and other material used in developing nuclear energy as a power source.

The House subsequently approved the conference report on the bill (S 3698) and sent it to the Senate. The bill allows Congress to stop shipment of nuclear material to foreign countries by signing a binding resolution within 60 days of the Administration's decision to ship. The resolution would be immune to presidential veto.

Supporters of recommitment said all of Congress deserves input into government policy which might "determine the survival of civilization," in the words of Rep. Bella Abzug (D-N.Y.). Now, the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy is Congress' main voice in this area.

Opponents said the bill provides ample means for Congress to stop the transfer of nuclear material. Rep. John Anderson (R-Ill.) warned his colleagues against becoming "intoxicated" with power in an effort to heighten Congress' role in foreign policy decisions.

Rep. L. H. Fountain (D-2) voted "yea."

Rep. Walter Jones (D-1), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Wilmer Mizell (R-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Earl Ruth (R-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

Rep. Charles Rose (D-7) did not vote.

VETO VOTE Failed, 223 for and 135 against, to override President Ford's veto of a bill withholding military aid to Turkey because of Turkish aggression in Cyprus. The tally fell 16 votes short of the required two-thirds margin and thus sustained Ford's veto.

The Turkey clause was attached to a continuing appropriations bill (HJ 1131) providing stopgap funding for several federal agencies.

Those voting to override said Turkey has violated U.S. laws forbidding aggressive use of American military aid. Rep. Herman Badillo (D-N.Y.) said, "We must not be cajoled or intimidated by the Administration into condoning and approving its failure to accurately implement the laws of the land."

Opponents generally acknowledged Turkey's misuse of U.S. military aid, but said the Administration deserves more time to seek a Cyprus settlement before any said cutoff. Rep. James Cleveland (R-N.H.) said the veto is justified by "a practical realization that cooperation between the Congress and Executive is badly needed."

Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Martin and Taylor voted "yea," Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Mizell and Broyhill voted "nay." Ruth did not vote.

NATIONAL VISITOR CENTER Passed, 198 for and 159 against, a bill to authorize $12.9 million to complete a major visitor facility in Washington which has been under construction since 1968. The project involves converting most of Union Station on Capitol Hill into a full service center where visitors would begin Washington vacations.

Passed by the House and Senate, the bill (HR 17020) awaits approval by President Ford.

Supporters said funds are needed to complete the project before the Nation's 1976 Bicentennial when an expected 40 million Americans will visit Washington. Rep. Kenneth Gray (D-Ill.) said abandoning construction now would be a "national disgrace."

Rep. H. R. Gross (R-Iowa), an opponent, called the bill a "boondoggle" and "a raid on the taxpayers." He cited promises made by a House Public Works Subcommittee in 1967 that after initial funding no more money would be requested.

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Mizell and Preyer voted "Yea." Ruth, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "Nay."

Andrews and Rose did not vote.

AID TO TURKEY Rejected, 27 for and 40 against, an amendment to cut off military aid to Turkey on Dec. 10. The amendment is part of emergency appropriations legislation (HJ Res 1163) drafted in the wake of President Ford's veto of a bill that would have stopped aid to Turkey immediately.

Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.), the sponsor, agreed that in immediate aid halt would be "on solid legal ground," but warned it would result in a Turkish tilt toward the Soviet Union, Turkish intervention in the Middle East and increased Greek-Turkish friction.

One opponent, Sen. Adlai Stevenson (D-Ill.), said the Administration has "concentrated its efforts on evading the law" instead of negotiating a solution.

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "yea." Sen. Sam Ervin (D) did not vote.

INTEREST RATES Adopted, 48 for and 27 against, an amendment lowering from 9.5 per cent to 8.5 per cent the interest ceiling for loans made under a program aimed at stimulating the sale of middle-income housing.

It was attached to the Home Purchase Assistance Act of 1974 (S 3979), which would guarantee $7.75 billion annually in the form of conventional mortgages and Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration loans for middle-income housing. The bill was subsequently passed and sent to the House.

Supporters said the lower interest ceiling would make housing more accessible and, by stimulating the home-building industry, would combat the problems of inflation and unemployment.

Opponents said the program could pay for itself with a 9.5 per cent ceiling, but that a government subsidy would be required with the lower ceiling. "I certainly believe we ought not to call on the taxpayers to subsidize middle-income housing," said Sen. Edward Brooke (R-Mass.).

Ervin voted "yea." Helms did not vote.

Famine In Bangladesh Unleashes Its Refugees

By MYRON L. BELKIND
Associated Press Writer
DACC A, Bangladesh (AP) — Hungry Bengali refugees are leaving their homeland again, touching off fears of another exodus into India like the one that sparked war between India and Pakistan in 1971.

Then, an estimated 10 million Bengalis crossed from what was East Pakistan to escape a crackdown by the Pakistan army. Now, the Bengalis are seeking refuge from a devastating famine that has cut across Bangladesh, threatening with starvation as many as five million of its 77 million population.

In 1971, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government gave the refugees food and shelter, then claimed the burden was too great and went to war with its traditional enemy. This time, with a friendly Bangladesh government in the Bengali homeland, India is barring the refugees.

India has its own famine, and it feels Prime Minister Sheik Mujibur Rahman's Bangladesh government should take care of its own citizens.

The exodus began with a trickle in July and August, as several hundred Bengalis crossed into India in the face of ravaging floods.

It intensified in September, after the Indians opened feeding kitchens in West Bengal to fight that state's worst famine in at least three decades. Hearing of free food across the border, the Bangladesh refugees packed their few belongings and set out to join their Bengali cousins in India.

By early October, according to Indian figures, the trickle became a tide as more than 500 destitute Bengalis were trying to enter India each day but were turned back by Indian border police.

The Bangladesh government started this month its own food relief program for millions of landless peasants who have become nomads, moving from village to village looking for something to eat.

Most of the 4,500 free kitchens in Bangladesh provide little more daily rations than a few hard chapatis, or wheat pancakes. Bengalis generally eat only rice, shunning wheat.

Reports reaching Dacca say tens of thousands of small farmers have sold their land in northern Bangladesh just to feed their families. Diplomatic sources in Dacca said the exodus to India, although still far from the proportions of the 1971 upheaval, has caused strains in relations between India and Bangladesh.

But while Bengali refugees have found trouble entering India, rice grown in this country has not.

Rediscover B.B. King

By WILLIAM J. HOLSTEIN
WINSTON, Ont. (UPI) — B.B. King's music is deeply rooted in his rural Mississippi youth, in hunger and deprivation, in years of pain in short, the blues.

Now young affluent white music fans are "discovering" King and other greats of the rhythm and blues business such as John Lee Hooker, Boogie Woogie Red and Sunnyland Slim.

"I've been playing the blues for 27 years and now I'm being discovered," King said after his performance at the recent Ann Arbor Blues and Jazz Festival. "It's better late than never."

The three-day festival was a financial disaster, but the succession of old-time black blues artists brought the young white crowd to its feet repeatedly, reminiscent of the high-powered rock concerts of the late 1960s.

The blues men say one reason for their increasing popularity with the young white market is that the roots of rock and roll are clearly discernible in the blues.

"Lightning" Hawkins, Blind Lemon, Sonny Johnson—we never taught our kids to look up to them, but a lot of white kids know about them already," King said. "A lot of young blacks don't know about it because black adults including myself didn't teach them."

Among the characters at the blues festival was One String Sam, a toothless, grandfatherly man who plays an instrument he first made when he was nine years old out of wire and a barn board.

Using only a broken drum stick and a small glass, Sam makes the string mean and wail over an incredibly wide range of sounds. All the while he keeps a beat going and shouts out the blues.

Backstage, he tells stories about some of the early giants of the blues, such as Bessie Smith and Blind Lemon who reached their high points in the 1920s.

Like many of the blues men, Sam was born in the deep South. Tallahatchie, Miss., a and later moved north to Chicago's South Side.

Another festival star was Junior Walker, born in Arkansas but raised in Chicago. He is a small, inconspicuous man backstage in his streetclothes but when he walks on stage with his shiny tenor saxophone, his presence is electrifying.

Walker, a one-time choir boy, said church gospels and the early blues artists, including his uncle, T-Bone Walker, are at the root of much of today's blues.

"It all came more or less from the church, that's the root of it," he said. "That's where I got a lot of ideas from."

For decades, many black rhythm and blues artists have been limited to recording on "race records," or else have their music rerecorded by a white group. Until recently, the raw blues had to be laundered before it could break into the lucrative white market.

When Sonny Dae, a black rhythm and blues singer, recorded "Rock Around the Clock" in 1954, the publishing company that owned the song decided to have it rerecorded by Bill Haley and the Comets. The Haley record was a smash. Sonny Dae remains largely unknown, while Haley is often credited with launching a musical revolution.

The incident is recounted in "Rock is Rhythm and Blues (The Impact of Mass Media)" by Lawrence Redd, a Michigan State University radio instructor.

Redd's thesis is that rock and roll is the creation of black rhythm and blues artists whose work was aped by the likes of Elvis Presley, Haley and the English groups that invaded the United States in the early '60s.

It may be the new interest in blues among young white people which finally sets the record straight about the roots of rock, the blues men say.

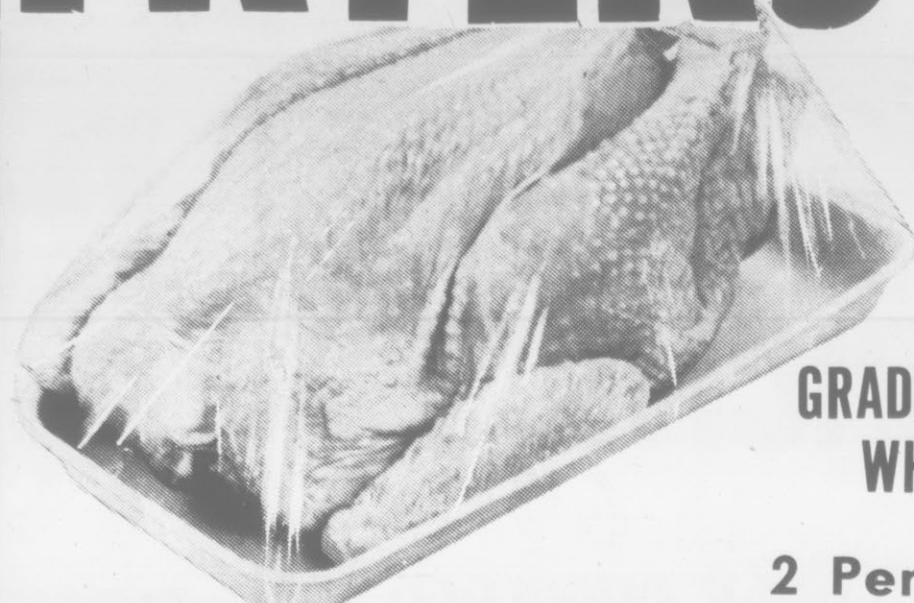

"I think young people are ready for the truth," King said. "They are ready for people to be honest with them. Blues is not the kind of music that says what it ain't."

'Super Rat' May Turn To New Locales

By ROBERT MUSEL
 UPI Senior Editor
 LONDON (UPI) Super Rat, the best fed rat in the western world, will shortly be looking for a new lodgings and the folks who live in the west end of London are worried that he may choose them as hosts.

The trouble with Super Rat is that when he comes to dinner he stays. It is centuries since he first made his appearance in the Covent Garden Market which handles most of Britain's fruit and vegetables as one of the three biggest markets of its kind on the planet.

Super Rat was around when King Charles II met an organge seller named Nell Gwyn in its environs. He was well-established when the monarch gave the market its royal charter in 1670.

And doubtless he and his numerous progeny and a satellite horde of mice would have been glad to hang around three centuries more. Except that some time in mid-November or shortly thereafter, the Covent Garden Market will close down and move from its eight-acre site in the heart of London to a more sparsely populated area two miles away and across the River Thames.

When the transfer from its historic lodgings to a new 68-acre, $88.8 million complex in a district called Nine Elms takes place, the problem of Super Rat will be "the number one priority," according to Geoffrey Holland, leader of the General London Council development scheme.

When the mountains of fruit and vegetables disappear overnight, this tenacious and formidable forager doubtless will go exploring. Under present plans he will find sewers blocked and poison everywhere, because these sewers and streets lead to the theatrical district, to some of the big hotels and department stores and to some of the more expensive housing in town.

A reporter touring the Covent Garden area as the countdown to closedown continues found very few market men sighing for the good old days.

Back in the 17th Century and even before the gardeners of the old Abbey of Westminster used to sell their surplus produce there. Hence the name, which originally was spelled Convent Garden.

Gradually a market established itself and in 1552 the Earl of Bedford acquired the site, formally valued at five pounds three shillings sixpence.

About 1660 the Bedfords commissioned architect Inigo Jones to develop the area as a square, and he is responsible for the lovely piazza (when the trucks are out of the way) and the exquisite church of St. Paul's.

The square became a gathering place for the nobility and lesser members of the populace and then King Charles' charter authorized the sale "of all manner of fruits, flowers, roots and herbs whatsoever." It was where an imaginary Prof. Henry Higgins picked up a flower seller named Eliza Doolittle in "My Fair Lady."

The market grew steadily until today it handles about 1.2 million tons of produce a year, worth upwards of $216 million, as well as flowers and plants worth $28.8 million. The garden sets the price for other markets all over the country.

There are 250 traders in the market, employing 3,500 men. About 4,000 vehicles a day arrive to deliver or collect boxes of apples, trays of strawberries, sacks of cabbages, boats of tomatoes and similar items either locally grown or imported from all the continents.

In a sense Covent Garden is a victim of its own success. Situated in a maze of narrow streets like the Paris market, Les Halles, which had to move out of the congested part of Paris, its increasing trade meant increasing congestion and almost indigestible traffic.

"The inconvenience and danger which at present exist," and the fact that something would have to be done about it, was duly noted by the Queen.

Queen Victoria, that is, in 1886.

So much criticism blew up about the market and its environs that the present Duke of Bedford's grandfather could take it no longer and sold the property just before World War I. He was very friendly with Czar Nicholas of Russia so he invested the proceeds—about $10 million—in czarist bonds.

"Come down the cellar," the present Duke said sadly to a UPI reporter at his stately home, Woburn Abbey, "and I'll show you cases of worthless bonds."

Nine Elms will be everything Covent Garden is not. It will have plenty of parking space for trucks and cars. It will have a railroad siding so some of its loads can be carried by rail and not clog the roads. It will have something that Covent Garden has too little of, to hear the market men talk, and that is sanitary conveniences.

And, it is hoped, it won't have Super Rat. Though even if he showed up the chances of keeping him under control in modern, concrete sheds and skyscrapers is infinitely better than ever it was at Covent Garden.

Few of the market men still carry produce in baskets on their heads. The younger generation prefers wheelbarrows and fork lift trucks. One trader asked if he would miss the old market, said:

"We deal in fruit and vegetables, not sentiment."

'Delivery Points' For Carryover Leaf Named

Delivery points have been designated by Stabilization Corporation to handle growers' carry over tobacco in the South Carolina, North Carolina border, and Eastern North Carolina belts, according to Fred G. Bond, general manager. The following deliver points will be open for receiving tobacco from Nov. 12 through Nov. 12 through Nov. 14: Whitehead and Anderson, Lumberton, telephone 919-739-5458; and Tobacco Growers Services, Fuquay-Varina, 919-552-2231. Bond emphasized the following points for producers who plan to deliver tobacco: —obtain a marketing card or other identifying documents from the County ASCS office prior to delivery;

—schedule the delivery by telephoning Stabilization's representative at any of the designated points beginning Monday, Nov. 11, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

—the tobacco is to be delivered in standard tobacco sheets; at the time of delivery, the sheets will be exchanged;

—only tobacco that is graded into official USDA standard grades will be accepted;

—all participating producers be members of Stabilization.

There will be an official government grader to grade the tobacco. A receipt will be given to each producer listing the weight and grade of each sheet of tobacco delivered.

Also, the producer will be asked to sign an agreement processed and redried in the usual manner and offered for sale as soon as possible after July 1, 1975. That tobacco which does not sell for a satisfactory price will be tendered to Commodity Credit Corporation for loan under the 1975 program.

Proceeds from sales or loans advanced during the carryover period will be distributed to participating growers after July 1, 1975.

'Skidivision 74' Best Ski Film

NEW YORK (AP) — Of the 48 films entered in the first International Ski Film Festival here, judges chose a winner in each of five categories. Then a film titled "Skidivision 74," produced by Willy Bogner Jr. of Munich, was given the grand prize.

The five films all will be shown at ski shows in San Francisco Cow Palace, Los Angeles Convention Center, Chicago Arlington Park, Detroit Cobo Hall, Boston Commonwealth Pier Exhibition Hall and New York Coliseum during October and November.

Offer 10 TV Movies Monthly

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — A closed-circuit network using General Electric Cablevision's airspace reported recently that 1,600 Walnut Creek TV-cable users have signed up for a "movie package" which features first-run films.

The Walnut Creek channel carries 10 showings of 10 current motion pictures per month.

Somebody Took Poisoned 'Pot'

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — The San Rafael Independent Journal recently received a frantic phone call from a man who did not identify himself.

He told the newspaper that someone had stolen a 7.5-foot-high marijuana plant from the front porch of his home which he had been spraying with a deadly drug which could prove fatal if the leaves from the plant were smoked.

"I was doing it according to instructions in a handbook which said if properly handled the plant would become super-pot," the caller said, "but the treatment had not been completed."

"I can't go to the police, but I don't want someone to die, either."
