

India Urged To Join Nuclear Export Ban

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger called on India today to cooperate with international efforts to block the spread of nuclear weapons.

"We take seriously India's affirmation that it has no intention to develop nuclear weapons," he said in a carefully worded speech before the Indian Council of World Affairs. "But India of course has the capability to export nuclear technology. It, therefore, has an important role in this multilateral endeavor."

The Indian government exploded an underground nuclear device May 18, joining Britain, France, China, the United States and the Soviet Union in the exclusive club of nuclear powers.

Since then, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi repeatedly has promised India will use its new nuclear power only for peaceful purposes. But her pledges have been greeted with scepticism in many quarters, including Washington.

Mrs. Gandhi gave Kissinger a frosty reception at the start of his visit, which is aimed at mending relations between the United States and India. But later they both agreed that those relations are "on the way up."

Kissinger's comments on nuclear proliferation were designed, according to U.S. officials, as the secretary's major public address during his three-day reconciliation visit to India.

Kissinger was reported to have carried a similar message to Mrs. Gandhi during his talks with her and Foreign Minister Y. B. Chavan earlier today. Kissinger and Mrs. Gandhi expressed confidence as they entered the talks that Indo-

American relations were improving.

Before Kissinger arrived at her office, Mrs. Gandhi told newsmen that "with any two countries, any two individuals, things go up and down." But, she said, relations with the United States are "on the way up."

"I agree with that completely," Kissinger said. "Relations are on the way up."

In an interview published a few hours before Kissinger's arrival from Moscow Sunday, Mrs. Gandhi said the Indian government had "always tried for good relations with the Americans" but unfortunately they have regarded India as marginal to their global strategy.

India has particularly been irked by the U.S. "tilt" toward Pakistan in the 1971 war that gave birth to Bangladesh. Kissinger is also trying to coax India away from the Soviet Union, which has shipped India an estimated $1.75 billion worth of arms.

Crisis 'Need' Raised

ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE (AP) — President Ford says an embargo on foreign oil imports might be necessary to help solve the nation's energy problems. But he says it would take "an international crisis of major proportions" to convince him that wage and price controls were needed for the economy.

To improve national morale, Americans must overcome "self-destruct" feelings, Ford said.

"Somehow, we've gotten that attitude, that we're condemning ourselves so much. We're hurting ourselves when we should be doing just the opposite."

The President spoke for an hour in an exclusive interview with AP Special Correspondent Saul Pett a week ago tonight on the return trip from his visit to Mexico. In his shirtsleeves, tie loosened, Ford sipped bourbon and water at a table in his private compartment on Air Force One. It was his first interview since taking office 10 weeks ago.

The President: —Predicted his wobbly "marriage" with Congress would improve after the elections. "The leaders come from relatively safe districts or they aren't up for election," he said. "Everybody else is, and that makes a hell of a difference."

—Answered detailed questions about former President Richard M. Nixon's pardon, and said there was no "conceivable" way — "none whatsoever" — that Nixon's chief of staff could have gotten the impression Ford might favor a pardon.

—Came close to tears as he described his last, fateful meeting with then-President Nixon, who thanked him "profusely" for defending him. Ford found himself at a loss for words. "He was strong... What the hell do you say in those circumstances?"

Ford discussed energy and the economy in the same context.

Q. What would it take in the energy and energy situation to bring on those tougher measures you hinted at?

A. In energy we could really put an embargo on foreign imports which would have a much more severe impact on availability and supply.

Q. What would it take, to do that?

A. The failure of the Congress or the public to respond. Congress, if it failed to respond, would be a failure of the public's failure to conserve.

Q. Are you philosophically opposed to wage and price controls as something to be used only as a last resort? What would persuade you they were necessary?

A. Outside of an international crisis of major proportions...

Q. You see no reason to have them?

A. It has to be a very major international crisis... I don't see anything domestically that would precipitate it.

He suggested that America's malaise has grown out of a vague masochism, not from the seeds or wrong policy or leaders who misled.

"The feeling that does worry me is this... There is a self-destruct kind of feeling (among Americans). I don't point the finger at the press or anyone. But you look at it. It sort of started when they (Continued on page 6)

Arab 'Oil Weapon' Against The West Reviewed In Rabat

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Arab ministers discussed using the oil weapon against the West again and "sought to establish a joint position in response to the threats of the oil consuming countries," the official Moroccan news agency said today.

No details were disclosed, but officials said the "threats" included recent statements by President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the major oil consumers regard the continued flow of oil from their main sources of supply a vital interest.

The oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Algeria, Qatar, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates met Sunday on the sidelines of the Arab summit, which has bogged down over the rival claims of Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization to future control of the west bank of the Jordan River.

The summit reconvened today with Jordan and the PLO still at an impasse.

"It is either the PLO or Jordan," said spokesmen for King Hussein and guerrilla chieftain Yasir Arafat, using identical words. Both insisted the conference must choose between them.

"The PLO rejects the right of Jordan to represent any part of Palestinian territory at any time and under any circumstances, including withdrawal negotiations," PLO spokesman Yasser Abd Rabbo declared.

The three-day conference was to have ended today, but it may be extended another day.

The West Bank territory was taken by Jordan in the 1948 Palestine War and held until Israel occupied it in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War. Hussein demands that it be returned to him if Israel gives it up and insists that meanwhile only he can negotiate with Israel on behalf of the Palestinians living on both sides of the Jordan. Israel agrees with this position and refuses to negotiate with the PLO.

Arafat and the PLO claim that they are the legitimate representatives of the Palestinian people. But Hussein contends that they only represent the Palestinians in refugee camps in Lebanon and Syria and those who have emigrated to other Arab countries. However, Hussein has pledged to let the Palestinians in the Jordan Valley determine their future in a referendum after Israel relinquishes the West Bank.

Hussein also has warned that he will boycott any Arab-Israeli peace talks if the summit meeting designates the PLO spokesman for the West Bank Palestinians.

After six hours of debate behind closed doors Sunday, the tone of the various statements indicated that Israel's stance was helping to build up support for Hussein among the other Arab governments.

The dispute postponed conference discussion of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's proposal that the next step in the Arab-Israeli peacemaking process be individual, bilateral negotiations between Israel and Egypt, Syria and Jordan for more Israeli troop withdrawals.

Arraigning Guard For Theft Of $4.3 Million

CHICAGO (AP) — A security guard was to be arraigned today on bank robbery charges in the theft of $4.3 million in cash from a Chicago security firm.

Ralph Ronald Marrera, 31, an employee of the Purolator Security Co. Inc., parent firm of the Armored Express Corp., allegedly failed a lie detector test in connection with the robbery. He was arrested Sunday by Chicago police in a suburban home of relatives.

He had been sought by federal and local authorities since Friday when a federal warrant was issued for his arrest.

Marrera was the only guard on duty when thieves took more than $4 million—weighing about 700 pounds—out of an Armored Express Corp. vault Oct. 20. Another $21 million was left behind because the thieves apparently lacked either the manpower or the time to remove it, authorities speculated.

A spokesman said Sunday that police went to the home of Mat Sparduto, the husband of Marrera's father-in-law, after searching through civil records to determine where his relatives lived in the Chicago area.

Marrera was charged in a federal warrant with bank robbery, bank larceny and use of explosive devices.

Authorities at first estimated the theft at $3.9 million, but the FBI revised the figure upward last Friday.

Another man, Charles Marzano, is being sought in a nationwide search. Two other men were questioned earlier and released.

A $195,000 reward has been offered for information leading to the money's recovery.

Indian Chief Is Lottery Winner

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cherokee Indian Chief Little Fox says he would "like to go back to my people" some day. And with $1 million he'll be able to do it.

Little Fox is the Indian name for Omar Watts, 56, who won first prize Sunday in the first Ohio Lottery Commission millionaire drawing. Watts, who'll get $50,000 yearly for 20 years, said he will first stay in Ohio because "there are some friends I want to help — people who helped me."

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

MARKED UP, AND UP, AND UP

I constantly see items in the grocery and other stores marked up one, two, three, and four times. I think the merchant should get a fair profit and I know he's up against tremendous overhead costs. But why shouldn't he sell all of a shipment of an item at a reasonable percentage over the amount he paid for that shipment, and then go up if he has to pay the wholesaler more for the next shipment. I think this kind of practice would go a long way toward holding down inflation, as the President is urging us to do. Mrs. F. M.

Hotline is told by the Consumer Affairs Division of the N.C. Attorney General's Office that N. C. has no laws concerning price increases. Hotline was told that Maryland consumers have had some help from their state legislators on this practice in their state. However, a check with Maryland Consumer Affairs Division Head John Ruth reveals that the opposite is true. Stores there, as here, may price as they like. One store, Safeway, has publicized that they do not mark up within shipments, but no others have gone along, Ruth's secretary said.

If any Hotline reader knows of a state that has a law against the practice, we would appreciate the information.

Sirica Calls Up E. Howard Hunt For Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite defense objections, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica summoned Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt Jr., to the witness stand in the Watergate cover-up trial today, with neither prosecution nor defense willing to vouch that he will tell the truth.

Hunt, who headed the Watergate burglary team, was the second witness called in the trial of H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, John N. Mitchell, Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson, all former White House or campaign aides to ex-President Richard M. Nixon. All are charged with conspiring to obstruct justice in the Watergate investigation.

As the Watergate cover-up trial entered the fifth week, defense lawyers strenuously objected to using the court witness procedure to obtain what they contend will be unreliable testimony.

Haldeman's lawyer, John J. Wilson, was especially vehement about instructions to the jury on the procedure of calling court witnesses.

"I have never read such a startling charge in my life," Wilson said. "It's deceptive. It's not honest."

Plato Cacheris, one of Mitchell's lawyers, called the procedure an "improper influence on the jury. I therefore resist it and resist it vigorously."

Richard Ben-Veniste, an assistant prosecutor who Hunt claims tried to get him to commit perjury, said there are numerous instances before the grand jury when Hunt lied and that the court witness device would permit leading questions to bring out Hunt's motivations to testify falsely.

David G. Bress, representing Mardian, said what the prosecution was proposing was to "say they have a witness who will make out their case but that witness is a liar."

And chief prosecutor James F. Neal said that the government's theory in the case is "that the defendants conspired to pay money ... to Mr. Hunt to keep him from telling what he knows." He said it was necessary to probe exactly what it was that Hunt knew.

Ford Urged To Scrap Public Welfare 'Maze'

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is being urged to scrap the maze of federal public-assistance programs in favor of a proposed new welfare program guaranteeing poor families a minimum annual income of $3,600.

Named the Income Supplement Program, the plan was developed over the last year in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and has been circulating within the President's Cabinet the last three weeks.

HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said initial reaction has been cautious.

HEW planners estimate the program's first-year cost at $21.6 billion. Although as many as 42 million Americans might be eligible because of their low incomes, the department believes that 10 million of that number would not apply for their cash benefits.

The proposed plan would replace Aid to Families with Dependent Children, which covers 10.7 million persons at an annual federal-state cost of $8 billion; Supplemental Security Income aiding 3.3 million aged, blind and disabled poor; the food stamp program, which has doubled in cost to more than $4 billion the last two years; and clothing and housing allowances.

"All of this is predicated on agreement and willingness to put all these existing programs into one," Weinberger said in an interview. "If we're talking about adding a new program on top of everything else, I am the first man to oppose it."

In a draft memo obtained by the weekly National Journal, Weinberger argues that the proposed plan, a form of negative income tax, would make Congress more keenly aware that sweetening the welfare pie in the future would require tax increases.

Weinberger said in the interview that if a more liberal Democratic Congress were elected next month, public assistance programs already on the lawbooks would come under strong pressure for benefit increases.

The President is being told that the present welfare system is a runaway nightmare, which distributes assistance inequitably to the poor, at a total cost no one has yet been able to tabulate.

Wording Hit By Ecologists

RALEIGH (AP)—The Conservation Council of North Carolina (CCNC) said Sunday the wording of a proposed constitutional amendment misleads the public and should be removed from the Nov. 5 ballot.

The CCNC voted Sunday to take the matter to court. The said a suit will be filed this week against the state Board of Elections.

The proposed amendment would allow state and county governments to issue tax-exempt bonds to help industry build new plants or install pollution equipment on existing plants.

Opposed is the amendment's wording on the ballot. In part, it says the amendment is to "create jobs and employment opportunities and to protect the environment by authorizing the issuance of revenue bonds to finance industrial and pollution control facilities, among others, for industry."

Walter Kaufman, outgoing

CCNC president, said the amendment is a "colossal fraud designed to bail out the utility industry and to finance industrial expansion under the guise of pollution control." He said little of the money would actually go to businessmen who need help in buying expensive pollution-control devices.

Another CCNC objection is that other public bonds, such as for schools, will be forced to compete with the news program in the current tight money market.

State Treasurer Edwin Gill has opposed the amendment. He said it threatens the state's bond rating.

John Curry, president of the CCNC, said the amendment was proposed after the courts struck down laws passed in 1971 and 1973 authorizing such bonds. The courts ruled the bond program did not come under the "public purpose" provision of the state constitution.

Choice Of Women For South St. Louis Voter

By TERRY GANEY
Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The male chauvinist voter in south St. Louis hasn't a chance Nov. 5. Any way he casts his ballot, he'll send a woman to Congress.

The contest for Missouri's 3rd District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives is the nation's only three-way ladies' race, with incumbent Democrat Leonor K. Sullivan facing opposition from Jo Ann P. Raisch, a Republican, and Marie S. Nowak, an independent.

"I think it might be a more interesting race having all women," says Mrs. Raisch, a 38-year-old mother of two teenage boys. Politics is not new to her family. Her husband William is seeking his third term as a state representative.

"People are tired of the old-time politician. People want someone new; they want someone young," Mrs. Raisch says. "That's the usual thing they (opponents) say," according to Mrs. Sullivan, who is Missouri's first and only congresswoman.

"If I can't carry on, you'll never see me run for Congress."

I think you're as old as you feel," says Mrs. Sullivan, who does not look her 72 years.

She was first elected in 1952 to fill the seat of her late husband and has been returned to Congress for 11 consecutive terms.

"I think 22 years in office is too long," says Mrs. Nowak, a 54-year-old eighth grade mathematics teacher.

"No one seems to believe anybody. It seems like there's such a lack of confidence and faith in the government. I think the only way to restore that is to get some ordinary citizens — those who don't owe anybody any favors," Mrs. Nowak says.

The district, which covers south St. Louis City and south St. Louis County, is populated mostly by middle-class whites.

For Mrs. Sullivan, it's the first time she's ever been opposed by one member of her sex, much less two, but the veteran Democrat contends it will make no difference. She says Mrs. Nowak, as an independent, will take votes away from the GOP candidate.

Mrs. Raisch disagrees, saying the independent will cut into Mrs. Sullivan's strength.

while Mrs. Nowak contends that disenfranchised or undecided voters will line up behind her, deserting both political parties.

Both Mrs. Raisch and Mrs. Nowak have two children each, while Mrs. Sullivan has none. Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. Nowak are widows.

Mrs. Sullivan says she has budgeted between $20,000 and $30,000 for this year's campaign, which is relying on the mailing of literature.

The door-to-door methods employed by Mrs. Raisch will cost her $2,200, according to her estimates.

Mrs. Nowak says she receives volunteer, after-school assistance from a core of about 25 of her pupils and that she expects her drive will set her back $3,000 or $4,000.

Will Oppose 'Surcharge'

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—Democratic Senate candidate Robert Morgan says he would oppose any income tax surcharge "until we close the loopholes for the super rich and the giant corporations."

In a television interview broadcast Sunday night over station WXII-TV, Morgan said he opposed the surtax proposed by President Ford because it would be a burden to middle income groups.

The 5 per cent surtax would be levied on taxable incomes over $7,500 for single persons and $15,000 for families. The measure is part of Ford's anti-inflationary package which awaits Congressional action.

"I certainly would not add additional taxes to those that I think are the least able to pay taxes while at the same time giving substantial tax benefits, relief, to those who are best able," Morgan said.

"If you are going to have a surtax, it should begin substantially above $15,000 and above $7,500," he added.

Saturday Night Wreck Killed Five Teenagers

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Flags fly at half staff on public buildings here today in memory of five teenagers killed Saturday night when their car ran off the road and slammed into a tree.

The youths were returning from a high school football game, officers said.

School officials said that West Lincoln High School, where the victims attended, and West Lincoln Junior High would be closed today so students could attend the funerals of four of the victims.

Services for the fifth are scheduled for Tuesday.

The Highway Patrol said the car in which the youths were riding was traveling at a high rate of speed when it left a rural road some seven miles west of Lincolnton.

One passenger survived and is listed in satisfactory condition at a local hospital, officers said. She was identified as Rose Anne Peeler, 16, of Rt. 6, Lincolnton.

The victims, all age 16, were identified as Cynthia Rena Hoyle of Vale; Charles Richard Towery and Tamera Ruth Beam, both of Cherryville; and Wray Robert Blanton Jr. and Terry Wayne Heavnor, both of Lincolnton.

Their deaths brought to 11 the number of persons killed this weekend on North Carolina highways.

The weekend fatalities pushed North Carolina's high-way death toll for the year to 1,262, compared with 1,580 for the same time last year.

Other victims were: —Samuel Byrd, 51, of Durham, who died when his car was struck by a train in Wake County.

—Uly Langdon, 54, of Rt. 3 Benson, who was struck by a car Saturday night on N.C. 50.

—Ernest Raymond Cloutier, 46, of Benson, who was hit by a car in Benson.

—Charles Kenneth Seagle, 22, of Rt. 2, Newton, who was killed Saturday in a head-on collision near Newton.

—Paul Sherard, 55, of Goldsboro, who was hit by a car near his home.

—Robert S. Johnson, 18, of North Wilkesboro, who was fatally injured when his car ran off the road Friday night and crashed near Wilkesboro.

Two Dead In 'Shoot-Out'

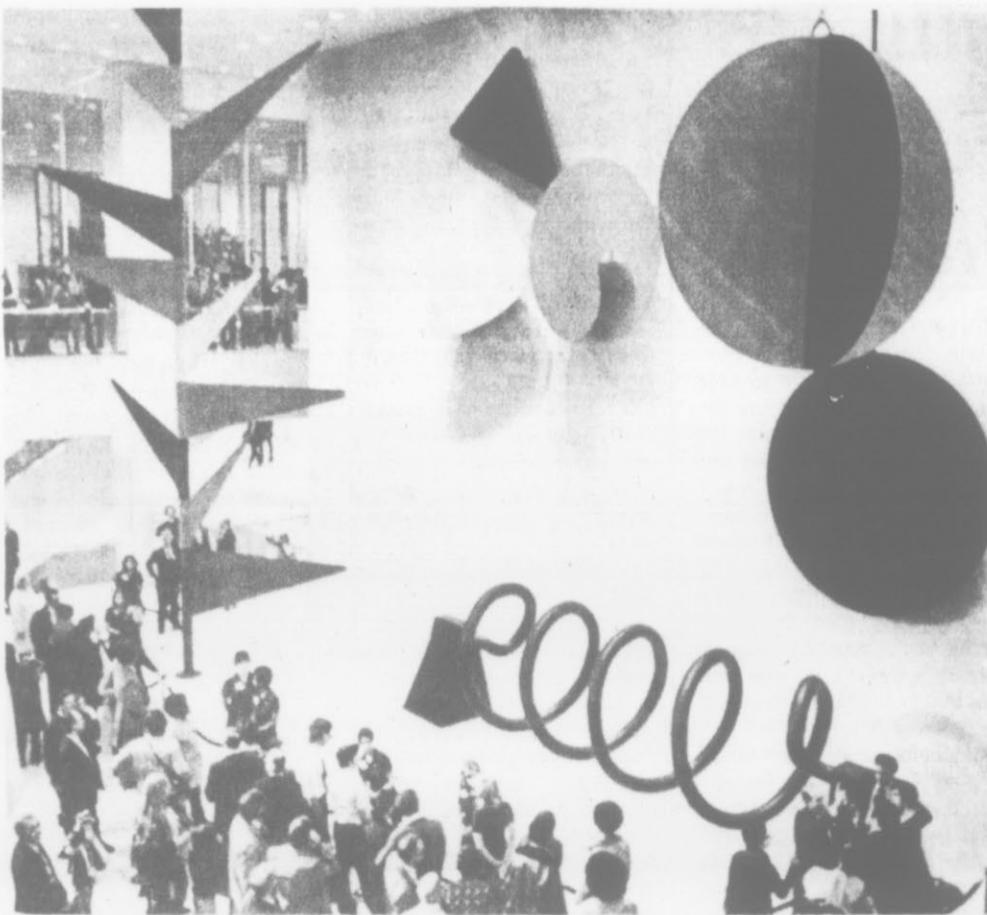

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP)—The pistol deaths of two men after what Davidson County Sheriff Fred Sink said appeared to be an argument at a small night club continued under investigation today.

Sink gave this account: Deputies arrived at the club at about 2:30 Sunday morning and found Bobby Eugene Hayes, 37, of Kernersville, dead and Robert Eller, 36, of the Midway community wounded. He died about an hour later at Winston-Salem's Baptist Hospital.

In addition, two women were hospitalized with pistol wounds believed not serious. They were identified as Olivia Hayes, wife of one of the victims, and Annie Ruff of Thomasville.

Sink said two pistols were confiscated, one the property of Eller and the other belonging to a man Sink declined to identify. The bodies were sent to Chapel Hill for autopsies. No charges have been filed pending further investigation.

The club where the shootings took place is in Midway near the Forsyth County line.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white crystal organza designed with a fitted bodice of re-embroidered lace, with borders of embroidered floral appliques outlining the portrait neckline and natural waistline. The fitted sleeves of re-embroidered lace and organza, trimmed in scalloped chantilly lace, featured a trumpet oversleeve of crystal organza edged in the scalloped lace. The full skirt was edged at the hemline with a deep ruffle flounce or organza bordered in double panels of scalloped chantilly lace which extended around the attached chapel train.

She wore a profile headpiece of re-embroidered lace, beaded with pearls, with an elbow length illusion veil edged in matching lace. She carried a colonial nosegay of white roses and german statice centered with a rose corsage featuring white satin ribbon streamers.

Miss Lillie Ann Darden, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Annette Price and Linda Valerio, both of Greenville. Junior bridesmaids were Michelle Darden and Beth Darden, sisters of the bride.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of peach polyester crepe designed with a scoop neckline and long fitted renaissance sleeves trimmed in ivory Venice lace. The modified A-line skirt, that extended to an attached sweep train, featured a self-tie belt with long streamers extending down the gown back.

They wore pillbox headpieces of peach crepe encircled with matching ivory Venice lace with peach illusion veil. They carried a nosegay of white pom poms, feathered champagne carnations and German statice with matching ribbon.

F. Gene Manning served his son as best man. Groomsmen were Bobby Manning, brother of the bridegroom, and Ryan McLawhorn both of Winterville, Al Darden, brother of the bride, and Phil McLawhorn, both of Greenville.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Darden wore a formal length gown of Nile green knit designed with a high rolled neckline of draped chiffon. She wore a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal length dusty rose knit gown designed with a high neckline, long fitted sleeves and bodice of raschel lace. She wore a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Ophelia Darden, Mrs. C. B. Strickland, Mrs. Willie Mae Claybaugh and Mrs. Mellie Dail were remembered with corsages of carnations.

For traveling the bride changed into a burnt orange pants suit with matching accessories and the rose corsage lifted from her bouquet.

The bride graduated from Rose High School, she is presently attending Greenville School of Commerce and is employed part-time with Rose's Stores, Inc.

The bridegroom graduated from D. H. Conley High School and attended East Carolina University. He is employed with Rose's Stores Inc. as assistant manager.

Following a wedding trip to the Outer Banks, the couple will reside in Winterville.

Following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained with a reception at their home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Brantley Strickland Jr. greeted guests. Cake was served by Mrs. Allan Tyner and Mrs. J. L. Lucas poured punch. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Darden said good-byes.

Mrs. Marianna Strickland presided at the guest registry at the church and reception.

Mrs. Rach C. Tucker directed the wedding.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents at their home in Winterville. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Manning.

The table was covered with a white organza cloth over pink. An arrangement of pink carnations with white miniature mums decorated the table. The wedding cake was served by Mrs. Alan Tyner and punch was poured by Mrs. Ray Oglesby.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Dail.

DEAR ABBY: I like the way you remind your readers to be a little more patient with their elderly parents.

My mother is an 88-year-old widow who doesn't need any extra patience as yet, and I doubt if she ever will.

She reads and writes in seven languages, and proof-reads the Hebrew lettering for marble tombstones. Mom owns a duplex. She lives downstairs, alone, and rents the upstairs to a 92-year-old retired sea captain named Jack. Jack is bright, alert and sharp as a tack.

The other day when my brother Dave was visiting our mother, in his cute and kidding way he said, "Ma, what's this I hear about you fooling around with Jack?"

With a twinkle in her eye, Mom shot back, "Don't worry, son, I'm on the pill!"

Panel Program Given Members At Meet

The Alpha Iota Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa meeting was held at Tom's Restaurant Tuesday night.

President Norma Gray welcomed Mrs. Shirley Marham, district vice-president, and Mrs. Martha Blake, president-elect, of Havelock. Mrs. Blake is president-elect of Beta Alpha Chapter.

The district vice president announced a district workshop to be held Saturday, Jan. 25, in New Bern, N.C.

Alpha Nu of Alpha Delta Kappa, the Pitt County Chapter, were also guests for the evening.

A program, "To Tell The Truth," was presented by Patricia Check. Members of the panel were Mrs. Elizabeth Savage, Mrs. Evelyn Blue, Mrs. Betty Speight, Mrs. Mickie West, and Mrs. Becky Groome.

Guests on the show were Mrs. Louise Spear, Mrs. Bibian Mills, and Mrs. Ann Bryd. The panel was to decide which guest was the real Agnes Shipment Robinson, the founder of Alpha Delta Kappa.

President Gray introduced her husband, Dr. Wellington B. Gray, dean of School of Art, ECU, and a judge in the Miss America Pageant. Dr. Gray's program consisted of his three years' experience as a judge for the pageant.

Dr. Gray's reasons for being a judge are having a friend, who extended the invitation, an educational endeavor and being a professionally trained East Carolina University professor.

He stated that the girls are judged on personality, poise, grace, and general appearance. Also, each girl must be able to think, act, and react in different situations.

Mrs. Ann Bryd, president of the Pitt County Chapter, Alpha Nu, expressed appreciation to the Greenville chapter for hosting the Pitt County Chapter.

Plans for a "trash and treasure sale" to be held at the Elm Street Recreation Center, Nov. 19, were discussed.

President Gray will conduct a Christmas art workshop, Tuesday, Nov. 5, in the art room at Wahl-Coates School.

Opportunity Not To Be Ignored

The City of Greenville has the opportunity to gain control of 338 acres of land on the north side of the Tar River.

The land stretches from a point some 200 yards downstream from the Town Commons to a point on the north side of the river from the city garbage disposal site behind Greenwood Cemetery.

The property was given to East Carolina University sometime back by Barrus Construction Co. and the university is willing to dispose of it for approximately $75,000, provided the land is put to public use. Developer Phil Carroll negotiated the plan and put up $2,500 in option funds.

There are state funds available for matching grants to purchase land for open space and a half million dollars was appropriated by the Legislature for this purpose.

There is a Nov. 1 deadline for applying for the funds and apparently the city has made this deadline by sending in an application to the state along with a letter from Mayor Eugene West stating the resolution will be considered at the Nov. 7 meeting. The project already has the approval of the Recreation Commission, which requested council action.

We have long advocated that the flood plain area on the north side of the Tar within the city somehow be brought under public control. This land should not be built upon and its natural state altered. With the major industrial and business developments north of the river, the flood plain provides an excellent green belt for our city. Modern municipal planning calls for green belts of trees and growth to help keep down noise and provide beauty.

Even left in its natural state, the land can serve the public. Nature trails and hiking trails could be developed through some of the area. There could also be biking paths and perhaps some of the high land could be developed as a park for picnicking.

Controlling the flood plain is most desirable and the city has the opportunity to acquire 338 acres for an investment of $35,000. There is no question with us that the property should be purchased. It can be the first step toward municipal control of all the flood plain land on the north bank.

U. S. Energy Policy

Heavy Money Outlays

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political trust run by the AFL-CIO has spent $1.4 million on politics this year, its latest campaign finance reports show.

The national trust run by the American Medical Association has spent $792,697 in the same period, and its 38 state committees have spent additional sums.

The AMA's spending is followed by that of the United Auto Workers union, which has spent $763,395 this year.

These were the largest totals spotted in a review of the latest campaign finance reports, which arrived in Washington last week. The reports cover the period between Sept. 1 and Oct. 14, and give totals for the year so far. Another wave of reports is due late this week, covering all but the final week and a half before the Nov. 5 election.

A number of other groups have spent more than half a million dollars so far this year. They include the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, $516,975; The Machinists union, $500,690; The Maritime Engineers union, $552,059; and the California Teachers Association, $576,966.

Those spending more than a quarter-million dollars include the Steelworkers union, $297,317; the Railway Clerks union, $251,909; the trust run by real estate dealers, $272,092; and the trust established by the National Association of Manufacturers, $257,996. A trust run by California dentists has spent $311,845, more than half of it given to state-level candidates.

The listing is not comprehensive because some reports are tardy, and because some groups such as the Teamsters and the AMA give money through a welter of state and local committees that makes the bookkeeping complicated. But the list gives some idea of which groups are spending large sums to influence this year's congressional and state elections.

The largest single gift spotted in the current flock of reports was $40,000 from the garment workers to Hugh L. Carey, the Democratic candidate for governor of New York.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., got $15,000 from the Auto Workers and another $15,000 from the Retail Clerks union.

The AFL-CIO passed out gifts of $10,000 each to Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Gary Hart, the former McGovern campaign manager who is running for the Senate in Colorado. Magnuson now has received a total of $20,000 from the AFL-CIO.

The Auto Workers gave two gifts totaling $19,000 to Democratic Rep. Richard F. Vander Veen, who won a special election earlier this year to replace the seat left vacant when Gerald R. Ford became vice president.

The Auto Workers also gave two donations totaling $17,000 to John S. Reuther, Democratic candidate for congress against Rep. Marvin L. Esch, R-Mich., of Ann Arbor. Reuther is a nephew of the late Walter Reuther, founder of the union.

The Auto Workers also gave gifts totaling $13,000 to former astronaut John Glenn, Democratic Senate candidate from Ohio.

Tax Slash Plan In Works

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—Despite the continued insistence of several colleagues on proposals to eliminate the sales tax on food, State Rep. John J. Hunt, D-Cleveland, holds firm on his proposal to cut the income tax schedule instead.

Hunt is not opposed to elimination of the food tax, as such, but he believes low income people need more than just token relief.

"They talk about some taxes being morally wrong and regressive. Anybody who makes under $100 a week, and has to pay state income taxes ... well, that approaches immorality," Hunt says.

And there are people in that category: more than half a million of North Carolina's two million wage earners were paid under $4,000 per year in 1972.

Yet, that group paid into the state's income tax coffers $19 million.

1975 Proposal
Basically, under Hunt's plan which he is now researching and plans to introduce in the 1975 General Assembly, anybody making less than $5,000 per year would pay little or no income tax. Hunt's budding proposal is pegged to an increase in the off-the-top exemption granted each taxpayer. Currently, you get a $2,000 exemption for the head of a household, plus $600 for each dependent.

While a sliding scale is kept in the proposal to ease the legislative bargaining certain to accompany any such plan, Hunt would like to see any taxpayer who makes under $8,000 per year receive an additional $2,000 exemption—a total exemption of $4,000, plus that for dependents. Actually, income tax records show that North Carolina has 1.8 million taxpayers—90 per cent of them—who like an adjusted gross income below $12,000 per year. Between $8,000 and $12,000 Hunt proposes a sliding scale to allow an increased exemption, but less depending on the climbing salary.

Depending on how high up the income ladder the additional exemption might be applied, the loss to the state in revenue could reach up to $85 million. The loss from the sales tax on food is estimated at around $60 million.

Hunt sees the flexibility of his proposal—the ability to tailor it for certain categories thereby reducing the loss to the state—as a key ingredient.

Here is how he sees the proposal affecting a husband and wife, both of whom work. In the husband earns $7,500 and takes the present $2,000 exemption, he pays $160 in taxes; if the additional exemption were given, he would pay $76.

$177 Savings
If the wife makes $6,800 and takes the $1,000 exemption for a person not the head of a household (since her husband claimed that), she pays $205 now; would pay $112 under the proposed change. The total savings would amount to $177 per year.

But the bugaboo in a tax cut scheme is always how to make up the loss.

"It has to bother you that with just a slight adjustment in the alcohol taxes, we could totally eliminate the state income tax for a lot of people," Hunt says. "Anybody who has got enough energy and gumption to get out there and work deserves a break especially so in these belt-tightening times.

"Consumers have got their belts tightened to the last notch, and need some help." Alcohol is where Hunt thinks the loss can be made up easily.

First, while the normal state sales tax is charged on anything you buy, it is not charged on whiskey sales. Alcoholic drinks are heavily taxed by both federal and state governments—but that four cents is not added onto the purchase price of a bottle of liquor as it is on milk or bread, Hunt said. The four-cent sales tax (with a penny kept locally) would produce from $5 to $7 million in revenues.

A two-cent tax hike per can of beer would yield $15 to $17 million, Hunt said, and the tax on wine is still 60 cents per gallon and hasn't been changed since 1947. That would produce a "couple more million" he said.

Then, Hunt thinks the state should cut into its surplus to make up the rest of the loss. It is, he thinks, time for the state to "give an indication to the people that government is tightening its belt, too."

Has CBS No Shame?

WASHINGTON—As everyone knows, I have always been in the forefront of the fight for women's liberation. My body is scarred from battling on the picket lines at the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City and the Miss Universe Contest in Miami. As we say in the lib movement, "I've paid my dues."

Therefore, I believe I can deal with the following subject with complete objectivity. What on God's green Astroturf is a woman doing acting as a sports commentator during a professional football game?

Last week I turned on the Redskin-Giant game, leaned back in my chair with a beer in my hand and a bowl of potato chips at my feet. Suddenly I heard this strange voice on the air. It sounded exactly like a woman's. My first thought was that CBS' Pat Summerall had had a serious operation. Then I decided that the sound on my set had gone awry. But a few seconds later a very pretty brunette came on the screen who was introduced as Jane Chastain, and Summerall said she was going to do the color for the game.

Other Editors Say No Mr. Clean

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

The race for North Carolina attorney general has generated more sparks than any other this season.

And to listen to some of the campaigners in that race, one gets the impression that nothing—absolutely nothing—has been learned from the "dirty tricks" tactics that spawned Watergate.

First, someone in the Republican ranks had a look-see at Democrat Rufus Edmisten's state tax returns. Only the returns weren't there. This fact was used to embarrass Edmisten at a debate in Chapel Hill.

Then it was determined that Republican James Carson slipped into the University of North Carolina posing as a North Carolina resident when, in fact, he was legally a resident of New Jersey. North Carolina residents enjoy a lower tuition.

Edmisten's headquarters now complain of personal harassment. Automobile tires have been reported slashed. Electric power has been interrupted. Phones have been jammed with nuisance calls, say Edmisten aides.

A college newspaper, we are told, carried a slanderous advertisement concerning Carson. Edmisten's headquarters said it was embarrassing to them that the ad appeared and that they had nothing to do with it.

A Wilson tobaccoist sent out letters supporting Edmisten but setting forth a position on cigarette smuggling which the Edmisten headquarters says is not their candidate's position at all.

The North Carolina GOP headquarters seized on the same letter and mailed it out in the belief it helps Carson instead of Edmisten.

What stands out as apparent in this campaign is the lack of coordination or control over the respective organizations. The candidates have not managed to remain lily white and above it all while the dirty tricks have proceeded unabated.

The result has been that while neither candidate has managed to lift himself up very high in the minds of the voters, both have done a pretty good job of tearing the other man down.

Mr. Clean is the little man who wasn't there in this race.

Incumbents' Advantage

RALEIGH (AP) — This was supposed to be a year in which voter cynicism would make it tough on incumbents of every stripe.

But a look at North Carolina's 11 Congressional districts shows that the advantages of incumbency far outweigh any mood to "throw the rascals out."

In three of the districts, the incumbents do not even have token opposition. L. H. Fountain in the 2nd, David Henderson in the 3rd and Charles Rose in the 7th can go ahead and sign new leases on their Washington residences now.

Rose, a freshman, faced two candidates in the Democratic primary and dispatched them handily. As in the 2nd and the 3rd, the Republicans didn't bother to even try to take the seat.

I contested districts, few of the incumbents are expected to have any problem winning reelection.

In fact, not since 1966, when Republican Jim Gardner beat Harold Cooley in the old 4th District, has a North Carolina incumbent been beaten in a bid for reelection. Before that, the last successful challenger was James T. Broyhill, a Republican who nipped Democrat Hugh Alexander in 1962. In 1968, Broyhill beat incumbent Basil Whitener, but that was a race that, because of redistricting, pitted two incumbents against each other.

Thus, in 66 general election campaigns, incumbents have been beaten by non-incumbent challengers only twice.

There are as many reasons for this as there are candidates. One that cannot be overlooked is the incumbents' contention that they reflect the will of their district so well that the voters want to keep sending them back to Washington.

But that is far from the whole story. An incumbent congressman has campaign tools at his disposal that are beyond the means of all but the best financed and managed challengers.

He can keep his name in front of the voters by sending them newsletters and questionnaires, all at government expense. He can use free facilities to tape "messages to the constituency" that will be used by many radio and television stations. He can write a weekly newspaper column.

He can make news more readily than a challenger by virtue of his office. In the 4th District, for example, incumbent Democrat Ike Andrews arranged for a Congressional subcommittee to come to Raleigh and hold a public hearing just before the spring primary.

Others arrange with government agencies to announce the news of new grants from federal programs for the district. It matters little, and is rarely noted, when the Congressman in fact voted against the program that supplies the funds.

Rep. Wilmer Mizell, 5th District Republican, makes a habit of announcing every three months that revenue-sharing checks have been mailed to local governments. Of course, the real news would be if they were not mailed, since Congress authorized the funding for five years.

A Congressman can make friends throughout the district by helping his constituents out with Social Security problems, appointments to the military academies and other services.

A voter may not know how his congressman voted on the Strength For Today

WHY NON-CHRISTIANS? What keeps people from becoming Christians?

Sometimes it is a childhood environment of very low ethical standards in which they can find no good person they can admire. Or again, among other background factors, it might be relationships in the family which prevent them from forming a positive and admirable father image.

But many people are kept from Christianity by Christians themselves. These Christians block the way to Christ as did the crowd of believers who blocked the doorway of the house in Capernaum in which Jesus was speaking, and kept the four friends of the paralytic from bringing the man to Christ for healing.

Many people seem to be so interested in their churchiness that they have very little interest in the people for whom Christ died. The small, unnecessary kindness to someone in trouble, the favor which is given before it is asked for, the sacrifice of time and effort—these actions, when done by Christians, make more converts than a library of doctrine.

A Time For Good Management

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — American industry now is in a cyclical phase that requires the utmost in managerial performance by both small and large business, with bankruptcy being the penalty for incompetence.

When times are good, it has been observed, a business can coast along while violating every credo of good management, but such companies disappear after the first test.

Eugene Jennings, management professor at the University of Michigan and consultant to business, comments that many managers know how to exploit good times but few can handle the downturns equally well.

There are few clearer illustrations than the fast food franchises that proliferated in the 1960s, when almost any concept could attract money, and their disappearance in the 70s, when people began counting pennies.

The well operated business, such as McDonald's and Kentucky Fried Chicken, managed their way through the critical period during which Americans assessed this new phenomenon and debated whether or not to support it.

The fast food concept was accepted, despite the seemingly contradictory evidence of thousands of failures, but it was the relatively few well-managed companies that proved the point.

A comparable situation prevailed on Wall Street, where the Merrill Lynchs and some smaller, less known but equally well managed brokers continued to make money while scores of others fell into bankruptcy or liquidation.

An examination of the failure of 64 firms in the process of liquidation during 1972 showed these causes:

Poor books and records, noted in the failure of 44 firms; misconduct, 26; high operating costs-poor controls, 21; mismanagement, 28; lack of knowledge of securities conditions, 18; dealing in highly speculative issues, 29.

The study, by the Securities Investor Protection Corp., found that in only 10 instances could "adverse market conditions" be singled out as a cause. All the other reasons qualify under the heading of mismanagement.

The Bank of America maintains that more than 90 per cent of business failures are due to managerial incompetence and inexperience.

Among management errors it listed were downgrading the need for experience, sloppy bookkeeping, reckless money management, failing to plan, misuse of time, inattention to marketing, ignoring the human factor.

The situation that now appears to be developing — a worsening of recession and a continuation of a high degree of inflation — doesn't threaten just a few industries, but all.

Score Largest Seizure Of Counterfeit Money

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Secret Service agents have confiscated more than $8 million worth of bogus but realistic $100 bills in what they called the largest seizure of counterfeit money in U.S. history. Four men were arrested Sunday and booked for investigation of manufacturing and possession of counterfeit money, said Robert E. Powis, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles office of the Secret Service.

U.S. Helps Mexico Modernize Weather Forecasting Work

By ALFONSO CHARDY Associated Press Writer MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — The United States is spending $400,000 a year to help Mexico modernize its weather forecasting operation and improve tracking of hurricanes.

"We have a great cooperative program between Mexico and the United States," says Mike Sunray, weather expert for the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City. Sunray supervises the assistance program.

The money, an allotment from the annual $500-million budget of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, is given Mexico in equipment and training for Mexican weathermen, Sunray said in an interview.

Four other Americans involved in the assistance program are advisers who supervise the operation of 10 weather stations in Mexico.

The stations are operated by Mexicans and are part of the government's loosely knit weather forecasting system managed by the Agriculture Ministry.

All of the 10 stations' equipment and data-gathering techniques are from the United States and are supervised by U.S. weather experts, Sunray said.

The stations are useful to the United States because they gather what Sunray called "raw data" on wind direction, temperature, humidity and other conditions which may affect the United States.

"We get this information and send it up daily to Washington for the National Weather Service to digest and distribute around the nation for local weathermen," Sunray said.

He said the information is vital for the Southwest, mainly the U.S. border states, which are affected by Mexican weather conditions.

Mexico and the United States signed a joint agreement in 1942 for such cooperation, which had been requested by the U.S. government to provide weather data for supply planes during World War II.

"We have renewed the agreement annually and we hope to expand the agreement to continue helping Mexico improve its weather forecasting techniques," Sunray said.

"We get this information and send it up daily to Washington for the National Weather Service to digest and distribute around the nation for local weathermen," Sunray said.

He said the information is vital for the Southwest, mainly the U.S. border states, which are affected by Mexican weather conditions.

Oyster Crop Holshouser With Is Reviving GOP Campaigners

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut's oyster industry, which lay dormant for years because of badly polluted waters, is showing new life signs which mean more jobs and a boost for the state economy, a state official reports.

The industry began dwindling in the late 1930s "when the state became industrialized. The state was growing by leaps and bounds and when it did grow that fast, we put more effluents into the waters," said John Baker, director of the state Agriculture Department's aquaculture division.

Sulfuric acid and other contaminants from industrial waste killed off seed oysters in beds near the shores, making it virtually impossible to support the industry, he said.

New technology and new ideas have been developed, he said, with the advent of the state Department of Environmental Protection so that the harmful effluents are "not as harmful."

Almost 100 persons are currently licensed by the state to harvest seed oysters which, in turn, are sold to commercial firms which plant them in their own beds until they mature in 4 to 5 years.

Between September and December 1973, Baker revealed, the harvesters "took 80,000 bushels of oyster seed out of the Housatonic River...one of the biggest takes on the natural beds."

"I'm very encouraged because in 1972 we didn't have an area in the state that was open for marketing."

To help bolster the revived industry, Baker said his division has been reseeding natural oyster beds along the Long Island Sound coast and the Housatonic.

The arrests capped a three-week investigation, Powis said. He said the men will be arraigned Tuesday morning before the U.S. magistrate.

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)—Gov. Jim Holshouser and Republican candidates for the U. S. Senate and attorney general were up before sunrise today, greeting workers at Gastonia's Firestone plant as the GOP "Victory Caravan" resumed its trek across the state.

Bill Stevens, candidate for the Senate, and Atty. Gen. Jim Carson joined Holshouser in shaking hands with workers at the shift change at the plant's gates.

"Hello, I'm Jim Holshouser," was the governor's typical introduction. One surprised woman remarked, "Hey, that really is Gov. Holshouser."

To which he replied, "It sure is."

The governor told a newsman he thought the "momentum is swinging in our favor" and said he was especially going to follow the 6th District congressional race. Republican Steve Ritchie is opposing incumbent Democrat Richardson Preyer in that contest. Holshouser said, "I think we've got a chance" in that race.

Traveling in campers, the party left Gastonia for appearances at Kings Mountain, Shelby, Boiling Springs, Rutherfordton, Henderson and Asheville, where the governor will attend a rally tonight.

The tour began in Charlotte Saturday and winds up Sunday at Randleman.

TERMITES OR ANTS?

Don't be half sure. Call a professional pest control operator for an inspection today.

The potential damage to property from termites can exceed the damage from tornadoes, hurricanes and fire. This is why termite protection is as important as a homeowner's insurance policy.

All Contributed To A Breakdown

TORONTO, Ontario (AP) — Margaret Trudeau says the stress of being the wife of Canada's prime minister, anxiety over the birth of their second child and her first active political campaign all contributed to the mental troubles that sent her to the hospital last month for psychiatric care.

She was not ready to be Canada's first lady when she married Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau in 1971 and the marriage was "a total catastrophe in terms of my identity," she said in a television interview Sunday.

She added: "I prepared myself for my marriage to Pierre Trudeau, but I didn't prepare myself for my marriage to the prime minister."

She was 22 then and Trudeau was 51.

Mrs. Trudeau arrived in Tokyo on Monday to attend a christening ceremony later in the week for a Canadian oil tanker.

In the television interview, she described herself as still a "flower child" and said loss of freedom is one of the worst problems of life in the executive mansion in Ottawa.

"It's like being a prisoner because I'm never alone, except inside the house," she said.

"It's certainly not the glamorous, exciting life that most people think it is. It's a lonely life. It's not a free life — but it's a good life."

She said that following the birth of their second son last Christmas, she experienced postnatal depression. She said she hadn't had time to feel the "responsibility of another life."

Mrs. Trudeau said that campaigning with her husband before the election last July left her feeling "very, very weary and very emotionally tight." She said she was "reaching kind of a crisis stage" when she entered a Montreal hospital for treatment of severe emotional stress.

Women Again Defy Episcopal Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — Three women who were ordained as Episcopal priests have again defied their church leaders by celebrating Holy Communion at the nondenominational Riverside Church.

As the women reached a candle-decorated table Sunday at the spot where an altar would have been in an Episcopal church, about 2,000 persons attending the ceremony burst into applause.

Hanging over the chancel rail was a brightly colored sign with the legend: "In Christ there is neither male nor female, bond nor free, Jew nor Gentile, we are one."

The women priests then consecrated the elements of communion, an act historically performed only by male priests. They also gave communion to women and men who did not kneel, another departure from tradition.

The three celebrants said they held the eucharistic service "according to the official authorized services of the Episcopal Church, despite a declaration by the House of Bishops that we are not priests."

The women, the Revs. Alison Cheek of the diocese of Virginia, Carter Heyward of New York and Jeanette Piccard of Minnesota, were ordained in Philadelphia July 29 by four bishops after their diocesan superiors had refused the apostolic laying on of hands.

On Aug. 15 the House of Bishops, one of the governing chambers of the Protestant Episcopal Church, expressed the opinion that the ordinations were invalid. However, the body affirmed its approval in principle of women's ordination.

Challengers to incumbents often complain that a seat in Congress was not intended to be a lifetime appointment. They say that laws should be changed to strip incumbents of some of the perquisites of office.

But the laws are never changed, because if by chance a challenger does win, he becomes an incumbent. Things look a little different from up in Washington, somehow.

NEW YORK (AP)—Concern over the slowdown facing the auto industry dragged stock market prices downward in quiet trading today.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 7.90 at 628.29, and losers opened up a 5-to-2 edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said a sharp drop in third-quarter earnings reported late Friday by General Motors Corp. pointed up the slump confronting the auto makers and served to heighten recession worries.

At the same time, Ford and Chrysler were announcing new layoff plans.

GM was the most-active issue on the Big Board, sliding 1 1/2 to 31 3/4, and trading at its lowest levels since the mid-1950s.

Ford, in second place on the active list, was down 1 1/2 to 29, and Chrysler lost 3/4 to 9 1/4.

Seemingly ignored in the downtrend was a continuing decline in the prime lending rate. Several major banks cut their basic short term rates on corporate loans today from 11 1/2 to 11 3/4 per cent, and the First National Bank of Chicago joined New York's First National City Bank at 11 per cent.

Gold and silver stocks moved against the market current, rising sharply on top of some strong receipt gains. The price of gold bullion, which reached a five-month high late last week in European markets, advanced again today.

Homestake Mining was up 3 1/4 to 48 1/4; ASA, Ltd., climbed 4 1/4 to 87 1/4; International Mining added 1 1/4 to 13; and Rosario Resources was up 1 1/4 to 32 1/4.

The NYSE's 11 a.m. composite common-stock index as off 35 to 36.72.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index dropped 23 to 67.13.

General Interiors, which agreed to a merger with General Foods, was up 1 1/4 to 6 1/4 on the Amex.

Cardinals Still Flying Unbeaten

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After Sunday's 23-20 success over the Washington Redskins, the St. Louis Cardinals still look like supermen in the National Football League. It was the seventh straight victory for the irresistible Birds, the only unbeaten team in the NFL.

"The Cardinals are a big-play team," acknowledged Washington quarterback Sonny Jurgensen. "They made the big plays."

Two of the biggest plays made by the Cardinals were touchdown passes by Jim Hart to Earl Thomas and Donny Anderson. It was no easy task, considering that the Redskins are one of the top defenders against the pass.

"The biggest thing was giving me time to get rid of the ball," said Hart, having an extravagant season for the Cardinals. "Our offensive line did a fantastic job."

Hart, who has been hot and cold throughout his NFL career, is currently hot — the precise reason that the Cardinals are flying so high these days.

While improving their sparkling record, the Cardinals tightened their hold on the National Conference's Eastern Division while the Redskins dropped further down the ladder with a 4-3 record. The Redskins, off to their worst start under Coach George Allen, remained tied for second place with the Philadelphia Eagles, a 14-10 loser to the New Orleans Saints.

In the other NFL games, the Los Angeles Rams beat the New York Jets 20-13; the New England Patriots defeated the Minnesota Vikings 17-14; the Buffalo Bills trimmed the Chicago Bears 16-6; the Miami Dolphins stopped the Baltimore Colts 17-7; the Oakland Raiders whipped the San Francisco 49ers 35-24; the Houston Oilers upset the Cincinnati Bengals 34-21; the Cleveland Browns stunned the Denver Broncos 23-21; the Dallas Cowboys downed the New York Giants 21-7; the Detroit Lions nudged the Green Bay Packers 19-17 and the Kansas City Chiefs turned back the San Diego Chargers 24-14.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, leaders in the American Conference's Central Division, met the Atlanta Falcons tonight in the weekly televised game.

Rams 20, Jets 13
Lawrence McCutcheon scored two touchdowns 31 seconds apart in the fourth quarter to power the Rams over the Jets. New York led 13-6 going into the fourth quarter before McCutcheon scored the game-winning points for Los Angeles, the NFC's Western Division leader.

Patriots 17, Vikings 14
Jim Plunkett threw a 10-yard scoring pass to Bob Windsor with three seconds left to give New England a dramatic victory over Minnesota. Plunkett led the Patriots on an 86-yard drive in the closing minutes. A 55-yard pass from Plunkett to Randy Vataha, his onetime teammate at Stanford, set up the winning score.

Bills 16, Bears 6
Substitute Larry Watkins ran for a touchdown and John Leyboldt kicked three field goals to propel Buffalo past Chicago. Buffalo's O. J. Simpson was held to just 62 yards, one of his lowest days in the pros.

Dolphins 17, Colts 7
Benny Malone and Don Nottingham, a pair of little-used running backs, took charge in the second half and helped Miami beat Baltimore. Nottingham replaced injured fullback Larry Csonka late in the first half and scored on a two-yard plunge in the third period to give Miami a 10-7 lead. Malone roared 23 yards around left end late in the fourth period for the score that put the game away for the Dolphins.

Raiders 35, 49ers 24
Oakland turned two San Francisco fumbles into touchdowns, with rookie Harold Hart running 40 yards to score on one recovery, as the Raiders beat the 49ers.

Oilers 34, Bengals 21
Dan Pastorini's passes ripped apart Cincinnati's defense and Houston, a loser in 32 of the last 35 games, jumped on every Bengal mistake to pull off an upset.

Browns 23, Broncos 21
Quarterback Brian Sipe, who entered the game in the fourth quarter, scored two touchdowns to lead Cleveland to a come-from-behind victory over Denver. Sipe, making only his second appearance of the season replacing Mike Phipps, scored the winning touchdown with 1:56 remaining in the game.

Cowboys 21, Giants 7
Drew Pearson, the NFL's leading receiver, caught one TD pass and threw another to help the Cowboys beat the Giants.

Lions 19, Packers 17
Errol Mann, who had a 27-yard field goal blocked with 1:58 remaining, kicked a 41-yarder with nine seconds left to propel Detroit over Green Bay.

Chiefs 24, Chargers 11
Veteran Len Dawson combined with rookie Woody Green on a 67-yard scoring pass to trigger Kansas City past San Diego.

Saints 14, Eagles 10
Jess Phillips rammed over from four yards out with 1:10 left in the game to carry New Orleans over Philadelphia.

Andretti Loses Helmet; Allison Hospital Bed

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Allison made it from the hospital to the race track end victory in 24 hours.

Mario Andretti lost his helmet to a thief, then won the last battle of the season but lost the war.

It all happened at Riverside International Raceway during the weekend. And a two-day turnout of about 40,000 loved it all.

Allison, a 36-year-old stock car driver from Hueytown, Ala., was injured in a massive pile-up of cars shortly after the start of Saturday's second heat in the International Race of Champions series.

He spent a while in a Riverside hospital and didn't get to run in the race, won by two-time world champion Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil.

But he was back Sunday for the third heat, after spending the night on a heating pad nursing a hairline fracture in an upper vertebrae. Not only did he win his race but will be one of nine drivers who will go on to the final race at Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 14.

A purse of $200,000 will be distributed, based on a points system, with $40,000 going to the over-all winner.

Fittipaldi, who placed fifth in the first race in Michigan a month ago, won Saturday's event and placed third behind Allison and Bobby Unser Sunday, goes to Florida as the points leader. He has 41 points to 38 for Unser, with George Follmer in third place with 36 and Allison fourth with 33.

Also moving into the finale were A. J. Foyt, David Pearson, Cale Yarborough, Sweden's Ronnie Peterson and 1974 Indianapolis winner Johnny Rutherford.

Richard Petty, stock car racing's biggest winner; two-time world champion Graham Hill, and South African Formula 1 ace Jody Scheckter were eliminated.

Andretti, one of the world's top road racers, won the final race in the year's Formula 5000 series. But the championship he had worked for all season went to England's Brian Redman, who needed only to finish fifth or better to win it. He trailed Andretti all the way to finish second.

Andretti, who revealed that someone stole his favorite helmet just before the race, was consoled somewhat by a check of more than $13,000. It brought his take from six races to $65,000.

Third place went to Warwick Brown of Australia, fourth to Al Unser and fifth to Graham McRae of Costa Mesa, Calif. Andretti, Redman, Brown and Al Unser drove Lola-Chevrolts. McRae was in a car of his own design.

The IROC contestants are driving identically-prepared Chevrolet Camaros in place of the German-made Porsches that featured last year's inaugural series.

Expected To Hold Hearing

MONTREAL (AP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, is expected to hold a hearing this week on a brawl in a game last Friday night in Oakland between the California Golden Seals and the Philadelphia Flyers.

Bob Kelly and Don Saleski of Philadelphia were handed indefinite suspensions Saturday for their conduct during the game in which referee Brian Lewis assessed 232 minutes in penalties.

The scores might go over the century mark most of the time, but any pro basketball coach will tell you defense is the key to victory.

"We have been playing our best defense in our last few games," said New York Nets' coach Kevin Loughery. "In our last couple of games, we had held teams to under 30 points at the half."

The Nets gave up only 37 points in the first half enroute to a 109-91 American Basketball Association victory over the Spirit of St. Louis. In the only other ABA action Sunday, Utah stopped San Diego 95-80.

In the National Basketball Association Sunday, Los Angeles defeated Phoenix 123-116 while Portland crushed Seattle 120-94.

Loughery said St. Louis mistakes and poor shooting can be attributed partly to inexperience, "but we have a quick defense and like to force those mistakes."

St. Louis was able to penetrate the Nets' defense for only 14 points in the second period while New York, behind Julius Erving, center Billy Paultz and forward Larry Kenon, rolled to a 60-37 advantage at halftime.

Erving ended up with 20 points and 13 rebounds to take game scoring honors. Rookie Marvin Barnes scored 24 points, high for St. Louis.

Guard Ron Boone fired in 17 points in the second half to lift the Utah Stars to victory.

The WORRY CLINIC Eyes Require Constant Use

My Aunt Lelia is a victim of a widespread though false medical notion. Scrapbook this case today or mail it to any elderly friends and relatives. For eyes, glands and muscles are stronger when used regularly!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph.D. M.C.
CASE B-678: Lelia H., aged 85, is an aunt of mine.

She developed cataracts and had one of them removed by her ophthalmologist.

When fitted with eyeglasses to compensate for the removal of the cloudy lens of her eye, she could see quite well.

In fact, she could then read the newspaper, enjoy TV and appreciate the beautiful foliage, flowers and colorful feathers of the birds.

"But, Dr. Crane," her neighbor informed me, "she has absorbed the idea somewhere that if she uses that good eye, it will become less sensitive."

"So she no longer reads very much and keeps her TV turned off."

"For she thinks if she boards the sight of that eye, her vision will last longer before she becomes blind."

"Dr. Crane, is that true?"
Medical Malarky

Actually, regular use of an eye or arm or stomach or sex organs is medically desirable.

For rust occurs in machinery that is not in constant action. Silverware likewise tarnishes when kept locked up for special occasions, as when company arrives.

Your muscles also weaken and grow smaller unless you exercise them every day.

That's why we have a medical axiom to the effect that if you lie sick abed for even one day, it will then require a week for your leg muscles to regain their former strength.

And a week off your feet may take a month for you to feel as strong in the legs as before your illness.

Eyes likewise require constant use to remain strong. Alas, disuse tends to make the retina atrophy and become partially blind.

Which is one reason why we urge that crossed eyes in kiddies be straightened early.

For at the start, the retina of each eye may be 100 per cent sensitive.

But the child can't concentrate on the visual fields of both eyes when they are crossed, so she tends to select one of those crossed eyes and ignore the other.

Soon that "ignored" eye, though originally possessing perfect vision, will atrophy and become relatively blind.

Same applies to you oldsters if you believe the false notion that covering an eye or shielding it from light, will make it stronger.

It doesn't. Instead, it really weakens the eye by reducing its keen vision. So never fret about going blind because you look through your eyes too much.

Many TV may fatigue the external muscles of your eyeballs and thus make you sleepy.

But the passage of light through your lens or that of your eyeglasses, doesn't wear out the glass or the lens!

Nor does light coming through your windows, wear out the windows!

So be sure you use your eyeglasses and keep exercising the eye that has been operated on for a cataract!

Likewise, keep your hearing aid in action! Don't even turn it off at night (as to save the batteries) for stimulation produces better blood supply to any organ and thus keeps the latter more youthful!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

What action do you take?

Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—You have forced partner to bid and he might have done so on scant values. Therefore, you should proceed with caution—a bid of two diamonds adequately describes your values, for with a weaker hand you would have simply overcalled in diamonds, not doubled and then bid the suit. You should be reluctant to support partner with just three trumps since he did not bid freely. If he rebids his hearts, you can then raise.

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. In view of your initial demand bid, this must be construed as a forcing pass. Partner might want to bid three no trump, or introduce a long suit of his own, or even double three clubs, and you will be much better placed after hearing what he has to say. The one thing he cannot do on this auction is to pass.

What action do you take?
A.—None at all. A pass is the safest way to show your mediocre holding with no real prospect of improving the contract. Do not worry about the possibility that partner will have to play one heart doubled—that rarely happens. What is certain is that any action by you can only make the opposition's task easier, by offering them the opportunity to make penalty doubles at a higher level.

What do you bid now?
A.—Five diamonds. Though you have a near minimum opening bid, and are facing a partner who passed originally, the fact that he could not stand for your double of three hearts suggests that he is short in that suit. Thus, the hands appear to fit well and game should be reasonable undertaking.

What do you bid now?
A.—Five diamonds. Partner appears to have an unbalanced hand, and a contract of three no trump might prove vulnerable to a heart lead. We want to be in game even opposite a weak distribution. Also, if partner's second bid was a waiting move with a good hand, he will be ideally placed to contract for slam.

What do you bid?
A.—Pass. At this high level, partner's double is a two-way action, showing a good hand. True, you might miss a slam, but with a near certain trick in the opponent's suit, you can expect a reward virtually equivalent to anything you might have missed. The unequivocal takeout bid is four no trump, which at this level should be played for all suits, not just minors.

What do you bid now?
A.—Three hearts. Your hand is worth one move towards slam. Should partner have the right heart holding (singleton, King-doubleton, King-Queen, etc.), twelve tricks could be there. If partner fails to make some constructive effort in light of your try, you can then settle for the modest project of game.

'Rhoda' Strains To Fill An Hour

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Backed by lots of hype, hoopla and promotional gas, Rhoda Morgenstern and boyfriend Joe finally get married tonight in a special one-hour "Rhoda" show on CBS.

The union may prove the highest-rated betrothal in TV history.

The show is importing from Minneapolis almost the entire cast of the "Mary Tyler Moore" show as wedding guests — Miss M., crusty Ed

Asner, whimsical Gavin MacLeod, Cloris Leachman, the feline landlady, and Georgie Engels, Ted Knight's dim, but lovely, girlfriend.

Alas, Ted won't be on hand, possibly because he laughs at weddings. Good Ted.

This wedding has a few laughs — or at least the prelims do — but 60 minutes is a long time to wait for occasional mirth. In the short form, "Rhoda" is crisply funny. In this form, it's a soggy, soggy do.

It starts with Rhoda—Valerie

Harper—and Joe—David Groh—thinking of a quiet City Hall wedding. But as viewers know by now, Rhoda's mother—Nancy Walker, while tiny, is overbearing.

And she changes the wedding plans, of course. She tells Rhoda she'd like the wedding held at her apartment and in fact already has invited some people over for a get-together.

"Before or after the wedding, mother?" Rhoda asks.

Mom: During.
How many were invited?
Mom: Not counting musicians — 79.

All this leads to predictable last-minute tumult, heightened by the arrival of Miss Moore and Miss Engels, who were expected, and Asner, MacLeod and Miss Leachman, who weren't.

The only really funny lines come from Carlton, the spaced-out, never-seen doorman, and towards the end of the show from Rhoda, who is forced to Chairman Ayers stated that this will be the last of ten Rallies across the State and will be held at the National Guard Armory in Williamston, located on U. S. Highway By-pass North. It will begin promptly at 5:00 p.m. Tickets are now available through County Chairmen across the District at a cost of $3.00 each.

Present for this occasion will be the Democratic Members of the Council of State, the candidates for State and National Office, including Robert Morgan, Rufus Edmisten, Associate Justice Susie Sharp, and our own Congressman, Walter B. "May I urge all Democrats from across the First District to be present with us on this occasion since it is our desire to make this the largest and most enthusiastic rally of all," Ayers stated.

Each year the stored tobacco moth causes serious damage to stored tobacco on many farms. Most damage caused by this insect occurs between the time the tobacco is cured and the time it is sold. The attack of this insect is confined to flue-cured tobacco and Turkish tobacco, preferably of the better grades, which are those high in sugar and low in nicotine.

The life history of the tobacco moth is similar to most other insects. The moth lays the eggs in or near piles of stored tobacco. The larvae are tiny when first hatched, but grow to about one-half inch in length. They are pinkish-white in color with a reddish-brown head. When the larvae is fully grown, it spins a weblike cocoon in which it transforms into a pupae, then emerges as an adult moth. In summer conditions the life cycle from egg to egg averages approximately 50 days. Usually the tobacco moth passes the winter as an adult larvae. In the fall, most of the mature larvae leave the tobacco and migrate to cracks and crevices about the building where they spin loose cocoons of silk in which to hibernate.

Most farmers have either finished, or are nearly finished, marketing their tobacco crop. Therefore, it is a good time to start control measures that will help keep the losses caused by the tobacco moth, to a minimum. As soon as the crop is graded and sold, the packhouse and grading room should be thoroughly cleaned. When cleaning, all trash should be removed from the packhouse and destroyed. No seed, feed, or fertilizer should be stored in the packhouse. If grain or feed is stored in the packhouse, the moths will breed in this material until tobacco is harvested again.

At the present time, we do not know of an insecticide that can be used for controlling this insect. Therefore, it is most important that the sanitation practices outlined above be followed.

When the temperature begins to warm-up in the spring, and moths are seen again, resin strips hung in the packhouse at the rate of one per 1000 cubic feet should be beneficial in helping keep the moth infestation at a low level.

Workshop Is Set Nov. 11

East Carolina University's seventh annual workshop for students and teachers of piano has been scheduled for Monday, Nov. 11.

Theme of the workshop will be "18th Century Keyboardism: Then and Now." Areas of emphasis will include a program on the Renaissance harpsichord and the fortepiano, the "missing link" between the harpsichord and the modern piano.

Students and teachers attending the workshop will participate in discussions and master classes, hear lectures and attend a performance by Dr. George Lucktenberg, chairman of the Graduate and Piano Departments in the Converse College School of Music.

Well known for his study and work with early keyboard instruments, Dr. Lucktenberg conducts an annual teachers' workshop at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich., and has conducted similar program at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore and other institutions.

Dr. Lucktenberg's workshop programs are developed around his own instruments, replicas of the elegant Louis XV period harpsichord and the 1784 fortepiano, as used by Mozart.

Persons who wish to attend the workshop must register by Wednesday, Nov. 6, with the ECU Division of Continuing Education, Box 2727, Greenville. Further information and registration materials are available by mail or by telephoning 758-6143.

All workshop events will be held in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center on the ECU campus.

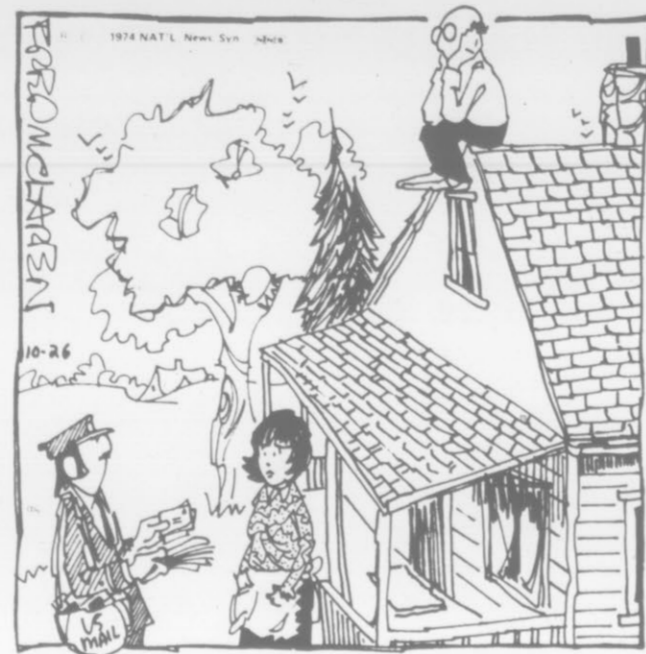

First Family At Camp David

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP)—President and Mrs. Ford spent a relaxing weekend at Camp David and introduced their new dog, Liberty, to the wooded mountain top retreat.

A spokesman said Ford swam and played golf both Saturday and Sunday and coaxed Liberty into the water Sunday. The President managed to squeeze in some work Sunday morning and had time to watch football on television in the afternoon.

Mrs. Ford, recovering from cancer surgery a month ago, went walking in the cool fall weather. The first family returned to the White House in time for Sunday dinner.

Malthusian Theory Catching Up With Bangladesh

By MYRON L. BELKIND
Associated Press Writer
Dacca, Bangladesh (AP) — Death, disease and starvation in Bangladesh have created a 20th century nightmare that shows no signs of going away. "It's here. It's happening, just as Malthus predicted 150 years ago," said a foreign economist.

He was speaking of Thomas Robert Malthus, the 19th century British economist who theorized that population would increase up to the limits of subsistence — and would then be kept in check by famine, pestilence and general human misery.

That, according to a consensus among diplomats, international relief workers and even some Bangladesh officials is exactly what is happening in this Florida-size country of 77 million that was the province of East Pakistan until the 1971 India-Pakistan War.

It is the world's eighth most populous country and, except for some small islands, the most densely populated. The population is growing, after subtracting deaths—which normally total 1.3 million a year, by 2.2 million people a year, a staggering 3 per cent annual increase. The current annual population growth in the United States, is less than 1 per cent.

Bangladesh has an average of 1,400 persons crowded into each of its 55,126 square miles, nearly double the density of Japan. The United States has only 58 people for each square mile.

There is a severe famine throughout the country. The most conservative diplomatic estimates say 750,000 persons will likely die of starvation or diseases related to malnutrition from August through November this year. Some foreign economists anticipate a famine-related death toll of one million.

The period ranges from early August when floods destroyed about 300,000 tons of the summer crop, to early December when the winter crop will be harvested.

For all practical purposes, Bangladesh has run out of food. There are no more reserves to give the population a minimum subsistence diet. The government also is short of money to import food.

Diplomatic sources say that Bangladesh had arranged last summer to import about 400,000 tons of food. But it could take delivery at the time of only 50,000 tons because it had insufficient funds to honor letters of credit for the rest.

The result is death for many and misery and physical and mental retardation for those who survive, especially babies whose brains have been permanently damaged by severe malnutrition.

Bangladesh requires 12.5 million tons of food grains this year. The government estimates a crop no larger than 10 million tons.

To help fill the gap, the government has arranged for imports of 600,000 tons for the last quarter of 1974 — either through foreign gifts or commercial purchases. But the bulk of the food is not expected to arrive until after Nov. 15, too late to save hundreds of thousands.

Starting Nov. 1 the more than five million persons who rely on government ration shops will receive only five pounds of food grains a week per adult, or 11.4 ounces a day. Previously the ration was six pounds per week.

"And we can't reduce the food grain rations any more, unless you have some substitute or additional foods such as meat," said A. M. Khan, the Bangladesh food secretary.

For large sections of the population the only substantial food comes from the government-supplied food grains. These people have no money to buy meat or fish or even rice that might be available on the open market.

Rice now costs the equivalent of $1 for a kilogram, or 2.2 pounds, four times the price six months ago. In a country where the average per capita annual income is only $67, the current price of rice is what many Bangladeshis earn in a week. The per capita annual income in the United States is about $4,400.

What alarms many foreign observers is that this year's famine does not appear to be a temporary natural calamity that will disappear if there is a good food crop next year.

"We have what seems to be a permanent problem in Bangladesh, and that is what gives the Malthusian theory relevance here," said another foreign economist. "The problem is intertwined with high prices, low purchasing power and population growth. And then everything is aggravated further by smuggling."

Authoritative sources say that the widespread smuggling of food grains into neighboring India in the past year has cost Bangladesh at least one million tons of rice — more than enough to prevent mass starvation in the next six weeks.

According to the Bangladesh government's own estimates it also has lost at least 400,000 bales of jute — out of a total production of six million bales this year — across the border.

Both Indian and Bangladesh officials say it is impossible to closely patrol the 1,350-mile border but when Bangladesh was East Pakistan, the border was sealed and there was no known smuggling of any sizable proportions.

The loss of jute means the loss of millions of dollars of desperately needed foreign exchange. Jute last year earned the country $330 million of its total exports of $397 million. This year jute is expected to account for $440 million of export earnings that the government hopes will reach $500 million. But Bangladesh requires $1.5 billion to pay its import bill. That leaves a gap of $1 billion that Dacca hopes the international community will fill through foreign aid.

Since Bangladesh became independent 34 months ago, it has received $2 billion in international assistance, including $500 million from the United States, either through grants or long-term loans.

What has especially disappointed — and angered — international representatives has been the officially acknowledged corruption that has permeated Bangladesh along with black marketeering of scarce commodities and hoarding of food grains. The prime minister, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, continually acknowledges these evils by declaring his intention to crack down on corrupt officials. But there is no sign that the sheik's pronouncements have had any effect. Bangladesh has fisheries, natural gas, forest and what one official says is the agricultural potential to grow 50 million tons of food grains a year."

Bangladesh also may have deposits of offshore oil. It has given oil exploration rights to several foreign companies in recent months.
