By MARGARET GENTRY

School officials were unable to give an estimate of the damage to the room, but said maintenance workers were cleaning the room this morning and expected classes to be able to use the room later today.

Nixon Aides Warned Him

Medical District Plan Is Accepted

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
After months of study, workshop sessions, and meetings with property owners, the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission has accepted the Medical District Development Plan as revised in October.

Frank Wooten, local attorney representing the Jesse Roundtree Moyer Sr. heirs, questioned whether it would be feasible to zone a small segment of Moyer property on N.C. 43 for medical use in view of the proposed five-laning of the highway.

Light Company's Model House Has Energy-Conserving System

By DOROTHA BROOKS NEW YORK (UPI) — "There's nothing really different about living in this house — except for the unusual number of people who are interested in it, and maybe its cost."

A $120,000 house which looks like a modest single-family home that should cost, perhaps, $35,000 to $50,000 in just about any American community. Mary Anne, husband Kenneth, a structural foreman for PP&L's construction department, daughter Roxanne, 12, and son Kenny, 7, moved into their new home on Labor Day. They rent, not own, it and will be there only a year.

Like all new homes, this one had a few bugs. It had more than the usual possibilities for such bugs in the big package of heat and energy-conserving ideas, and in the myriad electronic sensors and recording devices to help evaluate their performance.

Mary Anne slipped at the recent home preview — let on that the specially insulated draperies designed to conserve heat energy were being operated by hand until the unit was hooked up that will do this automatically morning and night.

Robert Romancheck, PP&L supervisor of research and technical services, who is in charge of the project, said the model is expected to result in an energy-conserving system that can be incorporated into ordinary homes, cutting energy demand to one-third the normal residential usage, at less than $500 extra cost, barring price fluctuations. Cost of the prototype included all studies and new devices.

Romancheck and energy conservation consultant Robert W. Deppen conceived the idea and Allentown, Pa. architect Donald W. Duncklee was commissioned to design the home "to appeal to average tastes: modern but not modernistic."

"The most efficient shape to conserve energy in a house would be to build it as a sphere," Romancheck said, "but who'd want to buy it? So we went to a two-story design — that's the best compromise CIVILIZED

A privacy panel in front of the home's main entrance also performs this windbreak function. Privacy panels at the rear (south) actually are solar heat collectors. Solar heat panels also make up a fence-rail around a south-facing upper-story deck. "Since the sun is very low on the horizon in the cold months, we incorporated our panels into vertical surfaces," Romancheck said, "rather than use ungainly roof collectors."

Plans for Christmas parties for the three TMR classes in Greenville were discussed.

Plans were formulated for a project to raise funds for the disaster fund of the International Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority.

Hearing Is Vital Language Tool

By CRISPIN Y. CAMPBELL Associated Press Writer NEWARK, N.J. (AP) —

Jody appears to be an average 18-month-old toddler. He walks, he breaks things, his vision is good and, according to his grandmother, he's the most beautiful baby on the block.

The family is anxiously awaiting his first word. Jody's mother is a little worried, even though it is said even Einstein didn't talk until he was 4 or 5. But, unless Jody gets help, he probably won't talk when he's 4 or 5. The most beautiful baby on the block is deaf and won't grow out of it.

According to Annette Zaner, director of Professional Services for the division of Communication Disorders at Newark's Mount Carmel Guild, a community service organization of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese, hearing is necessary to language development — "if you can't hear, you can't easily acquire a language to speak or learn to read."

Ms. Zaner, as she prefers to be known, an audiologist and speech pathologist for more than 20 years, says vocalization at about 18 months of age is not evidence of the beginning of language development.

"Language development is an on-going thing from the minute the child is born," she says. "We are only aware of it if the child performs linguistically, by following verbal commands or by first words."

Because normal development occurs in a relatively orderly fashion, with certain things perceived at certain times, there are critical periods for this development, she notes.

"The critical period for language development is between 2 and 4 years of age; this is when we have to find the hearing-impaired child. After 4 years of age, it is almost too late for them to acquire a minimal knowledge of the language without effort."

Once it has been determined, through testing, that the child has a hearing impairment, he is fitted with a hearing aid and begins the arduous task of acquiring a language.

"You can't just take a kid who's never heard before, give him a hearing aid and expect him to pick up language," Ms. Zaner stresses. "He has to learn to listen, he has to listen to distorted sound. And, he must learn to support what he hears with what he sees in order to develop language skills."

After the hearing-impaired individual has completed his education, from pre-school programs through special secondary schools or colleges, he faces the problems of an un-

The mail reveals that there are many women on the domestic scene who would like to write a humor column. The foremost problem confronting most of them is they have not laughed in ten years.

Just to show you how time has a way of putting things in perspective, I went into his room yesterday. The stereo made my eyes lock, there were two years of TV Guides under his pillow, the only thing on a hanger was a canteen, his water bed smelled like a condemned gym and thanks to his open windows, we have been air-conditioning the state in the summer and heating it in the winter.

I laughed... all the way to my encounter group.

Keeping Noses Out Of Business

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When an interested person asks a question that you consider too personal to answer, what's so smart about making a coarse reply like: "If I thought it was any of your business, I'd tell you," or, "If you'll forgive me for not answering, I'll forgive you for asking?"

Does it boost the replier's ego to imply that the questioner was stupid? How would you like to be disarmed by such a remark?

What's wrong with a simple reply like, "I appreciate your interest but I'd rather not talk about it," and then switching the subject to something less disturbing?

DEAR CIV: Why thank the questioner for his "interest" when his interest is clearly nosiness? ("Why did your daughter and her husband get divorced?" Or, "What's your husband's take-home pay?" Or, "Do you dye your hair?") How does one really "appreciate such interest?"

You're 50 per cent right, however. "I'd rather not talk about it" is an adequate reply.

DEAR ABBY: I fully understand the reasons why first cousins should not marry in cases where there may be children, but in my case that is impossible because I am 66 and he (my first cousin) is 70.

We want to marry, but have been told we cannot because it is against the law in the state in which we live. Is there any state where we can marry? We will go anywhere. It is absurd for us to be denied marriage under the circumstances and we will take it to the Supreme Court if necessary. Why should the law make lawbreakers of two respectable people who want to spend the rest of their lives together?

DEAR LOVERS: Before you take anything to the Supreme Court, talk to a lawyer. Laws differ in various states, and they sometimes change suddenly, too. I quit "practicing law" a long time ago.

DEAR ABBY: In response to that mother whose child got hysterical when she saw the doctor coming toward her in a white coat, you said the doctor was guilty of unprofessional conduct and deserved a reprimand from his county medical society. Bull!

A doctor's time is far too precious to spend trying to humor a spoiled brat.

You goofed. Ten lashes for Abby with a wet tongue depressor.

DEAR N.J.: Before you reach for that tongue depressor, let's review the bidding: The doctor enters the examining room and is greeted by a screaming, hysterical little girl. The doctor gruffly says, "Who needs this," and stomps out of the room. He returns to address the mother in a nasty tone, "Take her home, and don't bring her back unless she's really sick!"

Many children are frightened at the sight of a man (or woman) in a white coat because of a painful previous experience. They aren't "spoiled brats," they are sensitive little people, and deserve to be treated with kindness and understanding.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any legal limit to the number of times a person can get married?

DEAR COUNTING: Not if you remember to get divorced between "I do's."

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Homemaker's Haven
By Addie Gore

It's time to feel good! With FEELING GOOD—the delightful, lively, entertaining and informative new television show for the entire family—that's devoted to your most important possession, your health.

THEME AND OBJECTIVES: The theme is prevention, and the objective is increased public awareness of good health practices and personal responsibility for one's own well being. The series will stress self-help ideas: how to stay well, how not to get sick; and the fact that most people have more control over their health than they realize.

SHOW TOPICS: Eleven priority areas will be covered. Each will be treated several times during the season (but rarely, if ever, will a show be limited to a single topic). While prevention is the main theme, the series will also cover health problems that are relatively easy to detect and treat (hypertension, diabetes) as well as more serious problems that have a high incidence in our society (cancer, heart disease). Other topics will include alcohol abuse, prenatal and child care, dental care, exercise, nutrition, mental health and aspects of the health care delivery system (when and where to seek help, the doctor-patient relationship, role of allied health personnel, etc.)

Every week, FEELING GOOD will bring you heart-pounding drama, belly-laughing comedy, hair-raising guest celebrities, eye-opening facts, toe-tapping dance, finger-snapping songs and mind-bending information.

Try FEELING GOOD, for a change. And for your good health.

The entertaining show FEELING GOOD premieres, Wednesday, November 20 at 8 p.m. on your local public broadcasting station. That's channel 2 and 25.

And if you can't get to your set at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, November 20, take heart. You can see a rerun of FEELING GOOD at 3 p.m. the following Friday.

So make a special point to watch the new television show FEELING GOOD—on channel 2 and 25 starting Wednesday, November 20, at 8 p.m. And—you might enjoy FEELING GOOD so much—you'll want to catch it again at 3 p.m. on Friday.

Once you try FEELING GOOD—you could become a devoted viewer. So try a dose of FEELING GOOD every week.

Cementing A Needed Alliance

President Ford has accomplished what no other post World War II U.S. president has been able to do. He has visited Japan, our closest ally in the Orient.

The president's visit to Japan should do much to help relations between our two countries. Japan is presently in a quandary over the uncertainty of Middle East oil following the embargo of last year. Since Japan depends on the Middle East for virtually all of the oil to feed its industrial complex, the country is at the mercy of the oil producing nations. Like the United States and European nations, its economy has been severely shaken by the huge increases in oil prices. Thus Japan needs the friendship of the United States.

President Ford is extending that hand of friendship by visiting Japan. To back it up, he has promised the Japanese that they can count on a "stable supply of agricultural imports from the United States."

While this doesn't eliminate the petroleum problems, it does alleviate another fear of the Japanese; that is not having enough food for the people.

President Ford has also invited Emperor

Hirohito to visit the United States.

"The presidential visit to Japan is of a good will nature, but it does seem to be well received by most of the Japanese public. It should do much to cement good relations between the two countries and at this particular time Japan and the United States need each other's friendship as never before."

Bill-Payers' Old Trick Is Now Short-Circuited

The old trick of not stamping letters which contained payment to a firm has been eliminated by a new postal regulation.

Some bill payers had learned that the recipient would pay the postage in order to get his payment. Now, however, the post office won't deliver the postage due mail and it is returned to the sender.

Another old American custom passes away.

Work Releasees Cutback

By BILL NOBLITT
 RALEIGH — Add to the growing list of people hard hit by the economic situation the men in prison seeking work release jobs.

In just three months, nearly 300 inmates have been cutback on the program — down from 1,850 participants in August to 1,565 now.

But the problem is further compounded when you realize that hopes for increased numbers of prisoners going on work release have been dashed.

For instance, corrections officials earlier this year outlined plans to have a total 1,000 men working on the roads — not under guard as they were in the past, but on work release.

Currently, there are 326 men employed by the Department of Transportation on work release, and Kip Kautzky, chief of the prison program services section, says, "In all honesty, I don't see how that goal of 1,000 can ever be reached."

No blame
 It's nobody's fault, Kautzky

says, but just the circumstances: gasoline tax collections are down, secondary road fund spending is off course, and any hiring being done for road work is giving first consideration to people in the community who are out of work.

Looking at the overall figures for work release, Kautzky says simply that "such times of economic stress, it is just more difficult to locate jobs for our work release people. . . the priority is going to go to people in the communities who need those jobs."

Corrections Secretary David Jones agrees the economic slow down is having side effects in his department.

The work release slowdown is one; and more people committing crimes is another.

"We're not talking about something that is going to happen in the future. . . it's here now," Jones said.

"Let me ask you: you've got a man applying for a job on work release, and at the same time, you've got a man in the community out of work and hunting a job.

"Now, let's be realistic. It doesn't matter how much you say you don't agree with this. . . but who is gonna get that job?"

Of course the turnaround in work release efforts creates a ripple effect in the already overcrowded prison system.

Lost Chances
 More men must be kept inside rather than being allowed to move into release programs; families which might have been supported by fathers earning money on work release remain on welfare; prisoners cramped and worrisome over lack of job and rehabilitation programs become more disgruntled, and the problems compound.

A bright spot in the picture, however, is dramatic increase in numbers of prisoners taking advantage of new study release programs available at a host of community colleges or vocational schools.

Kautzky said enrollment in this program has grown from 365 students in November, 1973, to 750 this month. "We continue to see increases in this program," Kautzky said, and hopes it can take up some of the slack from the work release losses.

A combination of programs are being offered at various prison units across the state, with prisoners attending classes at the colleges in some cases, and the programs being brought into the prisons in others.

Kautzky said the economic trends are also contributing to a change in the makeup of the prison population. He said statistics show noticeable increases in numbers of young people being committed, and a sharp jump in length of terms.

Especially troublesome is what he terms a "dramatic increase" in prisoners sent up for armed robbery, and prison experts see a direct link between the increase in this crime and the deepening economic recession.

A Fine Mind Is Retired

One of the wisest men in our town retired the other day, but such are the riptides of news around here that his departure passed as quietly as the falling of a leaf on a millpond. None of the papers or broadcasting stations had a word to say about Mortimer Smith when he stepped down as executive director of the Council for Basic Education. He merits a farewell salute.

At 68, Smith ranks among the country's foremost critics of education. It is an eminence achieved more by accident than by design. He started out to be a businessman, shifted to freelance writing, and in 1945, largely out of concern for the education of his own four children, became chairman of his regional school board in Newtown, Conn.

It proved a dismaying experience. Smith perceived that basic studies were being sacrificed to "social adjustment." He packed his trenchant observations into a bestselling book, "and Madly Teach." A few years later he wrote a second book, "The Diminished Mind." In 1956, with the help of Arthur Bestor and others, he became the moving spirit behind formation of the Council for Basic Education. A year later, he was named its executive director.

Last month, after 17 years in the post, he made his farewell address to the CBE board. In my own view, at least, his remarks provide a superlative statement of what education truly is all about.

"My view," said Smith, "is that two overlapping functions must be emphasized in schooling — the acquiring of basic skills and knowledge, and the development of moral sensibility."

'Tis the season to mail early.

Before Dec. 10 for packages, before Dec. 15 for cards.

The MOOD TODAY

Palestinians Face Choice

Editor's Note: Associated Press Correspondent Paul Treuthardt surveys the mood of the Palestinians in Jordan since the Arab summit conference in Rabat last month recognized the Palestine Liberation Organization instead of King Hussein's regime as the government of a future Palestinian state.

clear that the Palestinians living in Jordan will sooner or later have to pledge renewed allegiance to him or take Palestinian status and live in Jordan as foreign Arabs.

This choice dominates discussion among the Palestinians, whether they live in Amman's crowded bazaar, in elegant homes on the hills overlooking the capital, or in the dusty alleys of refugee camps whipped by the first winter winds.

It even overshadows fears of a new Middle East war.

A foreign stranger is welcome to join the long discussion over tiny cups of sweet Turkish coffee.

"But you must understand," said a Palestinian businessman, "we don't know what the future holds. It is natural to be cautious."

The gut reaction is to want to assert their Palestinian personality, to feed the dream of returning home, to be citizens of their own country. But realism speaks otherwise.

"I have a thriving business, a nice home, my children were born in Amman. I have been here 26 years," said a building contractor. "This is my home. One of my daughters is married to an East Jordanian. Give it all up to start over in Tel Aviv? Ridiculous, even if anyone considers that will be Palestine in my lifetime."

Said another: "You must remember there are the '48 people, who come from pre-1967 Israel, and the '67 people, refugees since the Israelis occupied the West Bank in 1967. I am from Jenin. It's more likely I may have a state to go to. But then why? I served in the Jordanian army; I have my pension, my business, my family here. Could I start again back there? I have a stake in Jordan."

"Of course I want to go home to the West Bank, but will there be jobs for all of us?" said one of the 5,000 men in the Bakaa refugee camp who takes a bus to Amman before dawn every day to work on construction projects.

Despite his doubts, he said he is an unwavering supporter of the PLO. Other Palestinians here are not so sure.

"If I live in a house, I want to know the family," said a teacher. "I know the king. He may have some faults — but I have always been well treated here and feel pretty secure. What would life be like in a Palestine with a PLO government? I know them only as a collection of guerrilla groups. I don't doubt their fighting spirit, but I don't know them as administrators."

Public Forum

To the editor:
 I noted in Hotline the complaint about the city trash collectors and Mr. Allen's reply.

I would like to add a few words to what Mr. Allen has said in defense of his refuse collectors. I have never known of better refuse collector teams than those which have served my area of Greenville. I consider the late Mr. Ken Beatty among the best Public Works officers I have ever known, and his refuse collections crews the very best. It appears that Mr. Allen and his crews have continued in the Beatty tradition. I, for one, appreciate the good work of these men who do so much to keep our town clean. Please, fellow citizens of Greenville, let us be thankful for these good men. They deserve praise, not criticism.

Optimistic Views See Erosion

By JOHN CUNIFF
 AP Business Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP) — At the very time American corporations are making their commitments for 1975 the economic news seems to have taken a turn for the worse, reinforcing the need of pessimists, eroding that of optimists.

One result, says Walter Headley, economist and vice president of the Bank of America, is that industry is cutting expectations even more, not in "meat ax" style perhaps, "but they're rounding down."

The bad news seems plentiful as the autumn leaves.

Wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of nearly 28 per cent in October, and that means consumer price increases for many weeks ahead. The coal miners are on strike. Auto makers are cutting production and laying off workers.

If the coal strike continues it will mean steel production will be cut. If the auto makers can't sell their cars then the glass and rubber industries, among others, will be hurt. All are very basic industries.

Industrial production continues to drop even without these events and expectations. It fell 0.6 per cent in October, the steepest since February. Unemployment is almost certain to reach 7 per cent by early 1975.

The dismal record of the past haunts the present and clouds the future. The third quarter inflation rate has just been revised to 11.8 per cent from 11.5.

Housing continues in a slump. Consumers are said by pollsters to be cutting their spending plans. First National City Bank, which recently joined the consumer pollsters, found only six of 100 people nationwide felt the economy would improve within the next six months.

Albert Sindinger of Sindinger & Co., which polls consumers by telephone seven days a week, and has been doing so for well over a decade, found "confidence over the past weekend was like an iceberg melting."

Abroad, the U.S. dollar continues to slump as speculators move into West German marks, partly because that country stated it wouldn't mind if the mark floated higher in relation to some currencies, including the dollar.

The world worries about being able to recycle the dollars accumulating in the Mideast. "People here are drenched by gloom and doom from West Europe about the problem of recycling dollars," said Headley. "In Western Europe they just won't listen to optimism."

Those investors who hoped the stock market had found the bottom it has sought so earnestly are learning that the bottom must have many tiers, and they don't appreciate the pun.

The Mideast political and military situation doesn't seem to improve. Food prices continue to rise.

The word "depression" has forced its way back into the vocabulary.

There is a vague feeling circulating, if you believe what you hear, that leadership hasn't grasped the enormity of the economic problem, doesn't understand its urgency, and probably has no answers anyway.

Energy Conservation Push Set

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Jim Holshouser announced an energy conservation program for state government Wednesday, but within hours of his news conference, two state employee associations took exception to part of his plan.

Holshouser's energy conservation program had a strong emphasis on action by the state government and included a nine-day Christmas holiday for state employees, Dec. 21-29. He said a similar holiday last year resulted in 50 per cent electricity and heating fuel savings for the period.

The period covers two weekends and includes the three normal days off for Christmas and two days to be subtracted from the employees' annual leave.

Spokesmen for the State Employees Association and the State Government Employees Association said they object to the two extra days being subtracted from the annual leave. They said it would have been acceptable to subtract one day from annual leave with the other day being an extra day of leave. The organizations said they represent a total of more than 32,000 state workers.

In his energy speech, Holshouser said the coal miner strike could cause a serious shortage of electricity if it goes on "for many weeks." A severe cutback in natural gas supplies is "perhaps an even more serious threat," he said.

Holshouser said the natural gas supply will be cut 31 per cent "under the best plan," but a Federal Power Commission plan could cause cutbacks of 35-45 per cent. The FPC decision on natural gas allocations is being fought in the courts in an effort to get a larger allocation to North Carolina, Holshouser said.

The higher cutbacks being sought by the FPC "could result in many factories either trying to find alternate fuel supplies or closing down, putting thousands of people out of work. With the number of job layoffs we already are experiencing because of the current economic situation, we simply have to do everything possible to minimize any other factors that could contribute to unemployment in North Carolina," Holshouser said.

Last year's mild winter was a factor in there being relatively few problems in getting over the energy shortage then, he said, adding that a severe winter is predicted for this year.

Holshouser said each department head in the state government is to appoint "an energy conservation coordinator" to ensure conservation steps are taken in every agency. The state will also have a council to consider ways to save energy in governmental operations.

State employees will be encouraged to join car pools, he said, and the Department of Transportation will be asked to look into other transportation innovations such as mini-buses.

Business and industry will be encouraged to save energy with citations given to firms showing "outstanding achievement in energy conservation," he said. Public education will be emphasized, Holshouser said, with the state using "every available tool to bring the energy conservation message to the people of North Carolina on a continuing basis."

Tape Players Stolen From 4 Parked Cars

Four tape players — with a total value estimated at $490 — were reported stolen from four cars parked in the First Presbyterian Church parking lot on Elm Street yesterday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the four reports were received between 1 p.m. and 2 o'clock yesterday.

John Charles Williams of Jones Dorm reported a player and speakers, valued at $150, were taken from his car, while Joey R. Lewter of Aycock Dorm reported a $110 tape player taken from his vehicle.

William Aman of Belk Dorm reported the theft of a $140 player from his vehicle, while Phil Mobley of Belk Dorm listed a $90 player stolen.

Investigation of the thefts is continuing.

(Continued from page 4) observes, some authorities believe the schools "would do well to steer clear of moral affirmation entirely," but he strongly disagrees with that view. Some moral values may be shifting; many others endure.

"Millions of people believe in affection, in friendship, in love of country, and millions of people want some governing purpose in their lives. Millions still believe that murder, cruelty, stealing and dishonest dealing are wrong."

If teachers would at least teach simple honesty, Smith remarks, they might well prepare their pupils to become intelligent critics of government, of business, and of the press. Instruction in moral values can take many forms: "There are many fraudulent or counterfeit aspects of our private and public lives that could be discussed in social studies classes. We could begin with examination of a common human frailty, the willingness of people who would not steal from each other to steal from the telephone company."

Smith's farewell address is not likely to be reprinted in professional journals. He is much too down-to-earth for them. But good principals, teachers, and school board members would benefit greatly from pursuing Smith's homely goals: basic knowledge, and moral values. Parents will find no better yardstick for measuring how well our schools succeed, and how badly they fail.

The Army, Navy and Air Force all sent Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger base-closing recommendations about a year ago. But no action was taken then because the national economy had weakened.

Those lists have been reviewed and updated and the congressional elections are over. So a new base-closing package is considered likely. Officials indicate it will affect at least one other service, probably the Air Force.

While an across-the-board reduction in the base structure was deferred, the Army has moved ahead with a series of reductions in the United States and abroad designed to scale down its support and headquarters overhead.

The impending actions involving depots and the Frankford arsenal are said to fit into this continuing Army program.

TO SAY THANKS—Approximately 1,000 employees of Pan American World Airways gather on the steps of the Capitol Wednesday to say "thank you" for action that kept the planes in the air. Faced with financial trouble the airline had asked for a govern-

Survivors Of 747 Crash Praise Action Of Crew

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Survivors of the Lufthansa jumbo jet crash praised the crew today and said without their quick action many more lives would have been lost.

Fifty-nine of the 157 persons aboard were killed when the West German airline's Boeing 747 lost power as it took off from Nairobi airport for South African Wednesday, plunged into a muddy field and exploded. It was the first fatal 747 crash.

"Looking at the scene, one would not expect too many survivors," a local civil aviation official said. "I think the crew reacted very fast at the first sign of trouble, and that accounts for the very large number of survivors."

Renate Kahn of Dallas, Texas, said an American steward, Tom Scott of Los Angeles, forced open an emergency door that two stewardesses were unable to wrench free, shouted "Out! Out! Out!" and got dozens of passengers moving toward the exit.

"We all would be dead if it hadn't been for him," said Mrs. Kahn. "Scott took an 89-year-old, deaf German man and dragged him out. He went back inside and checked the body of the plane until he was sure no one else could be rescued. He left only then. That's beyond the call, in my book."

A Lufthansa spokesman said the cause of the crash has not been determined. The plane, which had come from Frankfurt, was about 200 feet off the ground when it lost power and dropped back to the ground.

"The plane taxied and took off, and then there was an awful shudder," said John Bing, a travel agent from Johannesburg, who was unhurt. "Bric-a-brac in the passenger section flew in all directions with great momentum. The port wing caught fire, then the plane ditched."

Bing said the 54-year-old German pilot, Christian Krack, "made the most remarkable landing by any pilot ever. His skill saved lives."

Most of the passengers were German, but officials said 12 Americans were among the survivors. They reported 98 of the 139 passengers, including 13 of the 18 crew members, escaped, 73 of them virtually unharmed. Three of the injured were reported in serious condition.

Loss Leader Said Illegal

RALEIGH (AP)—State Atty. Gen. James Carson says it is illegal for North Carolina stores to sell milk as a loss leader.

The opinion was issued Wednesday by Carson at the request of the State Milk Commission. The commission voted 4-3 last month to allow below-cost milk sales unless they were used unfairly to stifle competition.

Carson said it was the intent of the legislature in enacting a state law banning loss leader sales of milk to forbid its retail sales below the store's actual cost.

Lillian Woo of Raleigh, a milk commission member and consumer advocate, said she was "very disappointed with the opinion."

Mrs. Woo contended that in her opinion the law says below-cost sales are legal unless they are for the purpose of both attracting business and "injuring, harassing or destroying competition."

Carson's decision broke a tie. Two assistant attorneys general said loss leader sales would be legal and two others said they would not be legal. Both sides presented their arguments to Carson.

Gov. Jim Holshouser announced about two months ago he would ask the General Assembly to change the law and allow stores to sell milk as a loss leader.

OK Strike By Butchers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A butchers strike was expected to begin today against nearly 100 Big Star and K-Mart food stores across the Carolinas.

President John Russell of Local 525 of the AFL-CIO Meat Cutters and Butchers Union said members Wednesday night authorized the strike to begin immediately. He said picketing was to begin this morning.

Big Star and K-Mart supermarkets are operated by Colonial Stores, Inc. of North Carolina and South Carolina.

Russell said equitable pay is the key issue in the strike. He said the company does not pay its Carolinas' employees wages comparable to stores in neighboring states.

He said that a journeyman meat cutter is paid $4.75 an hour in the Carolinas while in Virginia they make $5.77 an hour.

Local 525 has about 3,500 members in the Carolinas, Russell said, and approximately 550 are involved in the dispute.

"The union recognizes that this may involve a long and bitter struggle until a settlement is reached," Russell said. He added that there have been no formal talks with the company in weeks.

Local Guardsmen Have Been Named Recruiters

Three members of the 514th Military Police Company, North Carolina National Guard, of Greenville have been named Recruiters for the Army National Guard. Receiving their recruiter certificates during ceremonies Sunday at Fort Bragg were 22 Lt. Glenn M. Lassiter, Sgt. Joseph E. Braxton, and SP4 Leslie M. Spaulding.

The ceremonies climaxed a two day school at the North Carolina Military Academy at Fort Bragg where some 70 National Guardsmen and Guardswomen were instructed in recruiting. Mayo E. Allen of Greenville, First Sergeant of the 514th MP Company, was an instructor at the Recruiting

Death Ruled For Arsonist

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP)—A Wilkes County man convicted of first degree arson has been sentenced to die in the North Carolina gas chamber, bringing to 59 the number of persons awaiting execution in the state.

Ivy Whitley, 29, of Rt. 1, Hayes, was convicted Wednesday by a Wilkes County Superior Court jury which deliberated less than half an hour before returning its verdict.

Judge Dennis J. Winner also sentenced Whitley to life imprisonment on consolidated charges of breaking and entering, kidnaping and larceny from a person. The judge set the execution for Feb. 28, but appeal is automatic in capital cases.

The charges grew out of an incident last April 7 involving Lester "Fuzzy" Roark, 83, of the Round Mountain Church Road area of Wilkes County.

Investigating officers said Roark was kidnaped, beaten and robbed and left on a roadside, and his house was burned.

Robert Pruitt of West Jefferson, also charged in the incident, is awaiting trial.

The three new Recruiters join SSgt. William Bryant, a previous graduate of the Recruiting School, to form a Recruiting section for the local unit. Their duties will be to acquaint local young men and young women with the benefits the National Guard has to offer them such as specialized training and schooling, extra income, low cost Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, leadership opportunities, and a chance to serve their country while living at home. The Recruiters are also interested in prior servicemen and service women who wish to earn extra money while using their military acquired skills or while developing new skills as a National Guard member.

The 514th Military Police Company is commanded by Captain Bobby G. Webb of Rocky Mount. The 170 member unit is one of the top Military Police units in the state. During their two weeks annual training at Fort Bragg last summer, the local MP's received a superior rating from the First Army evaluator.

Anyone interested in more information about the National Guard should contact the SFC George L. Pleasant or SP5 Walter D. Ezzelle, Jr. at the Greenville Armory, located adjacent to the airport, or call 752-5093.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — E. Pat Hall, developer of the Carowinds amusement park, said Wednesday he may run for governor of North Carolina in 1976.

He said he probably would not reach a decision until after Jan. 1, if he does seek the nomination.

Ordered To Open Meets

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners was ordered Wednesday to open its meetings and make public its records of license revocation proceedings against doctors.

Wake Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey issued a preliminary injunction in a case brought against the board by The Charlotte Observer. The newspaper said its reporters had been illegally denied access to board records.

The board immediately complied with the order. Its records revealed it was investigating Dr. Harold R. Hoke, 48, who operates an abortion clinic and counseling service in Charlotte.

Judge Bailey ruled that records of the board's actions were required to be open to the public under the state open meetings law, which prohibits most government bodies from meeting in private or refusing to divulge records.

WOTM To Plan Future Projects

Greenville Chapter No. 1308, Women of the Moose, will hold the November business meeting tonight at the Moose Temple, starting at eight o'clock.

Mrs. Peggy Jamieson, senior regent, said that reports on Chapter Development Committees will be heard and plans for up-coming projects discussed.

Mrs. Wilma Turner, chairman of the publicity committee, asked members to bring listing cards for the 1975 Birthday Calendar to tonight's meeting. The calendar, now in final stages of preparation, will be printed and distributed early in December, she said.

Future Looks Good To Bob Morgan's Foster Son

By EDITH LOW
Charlotte News Writer
Written for Associated Press
Rupert Tart has the world by the tail and his future looks good. It wasn't always so.
The 24-year-old junior at East Carolina University is the foster son of Sen-elect and Mrs. Robert Morgan.

Until nine years ago, the Morgans took him into their home, Rupert had known mostly bad times. The eldest of seven children who lost their father when he was 11, he had become a high school dropout at 14.

He watched his mother struggle to survive. He saw his three sisters and three brothers sent to live with various relatives.
"My mother had little money.

We were on welfare and had only the minutest necessities," he said in a recent interview.
Rupert said his family had already been divided when he met Mrs. Morgan, whom he calls "Mama Katie." Rupert was working with the Neighborhood Youth Corps, and Mrs. Morgan was director for the corps' county organization.

self and her husband. She said she had three little girls at home - Margaret, Mary and Alice Jean. She explained that she had liked my smile, my attitude and that they knew I needed help," he said.
"She said she could have no more children and they should like to help me go back and finish high school and college - this, that and the other."

Morgan got a friend to open a drug store that night so he could buy gifts for the boys to go under the Christmas tree, Rupert said.
His brother Monroe is now a freshman at Lees McRae College. Brother J. C. is a senior at the University of North Carolina and David, now married, is in the Army.

ever they needed.
"If Daddy Robert was in the area, he always called and went by to see them. They are as welcome at the Morgans' home as I am anytime. They are always treated as one of the family," he said.
Rupert said he has never met more compassionate people than the Morgans.
"Mary and Margaret are that way, too. The Morgan stuff has rubbed off on them. Nobody knows the Morgans go to local rest homes ever year - and talk to black and white old folks. They give them money, buy things for them..." he continued.

He added, "If it had not been for the Morgans, I don't know where my family would be. I owe them the last nine years of my life. They deserve a lot of credit as human beings. They owed us nothing but gave us the world."

$29,117 Pledged UF By B-W And Employees

Burroughs Wellcome Co., and its employees have pledged $29,117.44 to the 1975 Pitt County United Fund drive, according to plant manager G. Henry Leslie who announced the results of the plant-wide solicitation.
Leslie said that during the month of October, a staff of 42 employees, covering all departments, volunteered to collect United Fund pledges. Richard Moldin headed this year's campaign for the company as chairman and was assisted by Curtis Ward as vice chairman and Andrea Pinianski who handled the bookkeeping. The plant manager commented, "Our contributing employees, totaling 74 per cent participation, will share a deep sense of satisfaction and pride as employees and company contributions of over $32,000 have been pledged for the benefit of those less fortunate than ourselves."

Combined company and employee gifts to counties other than Pitt County were: Beaufort, $1,693; Martin, $690.50; Craven, $281; Edgecombe, $263; Lenoir, $26; and Greene, $63.
Burroughs Wellcome has its corporate headquarters and research laboratories in Research Triangle Park and its complete pharmaceutical production facilities here.

Hugh Bazemore, UF campaign chairman, announced that with Burroughs Wellcome's "most generous gift, we have now reached 94.5 per cent of our 1975 goal."
Bazemore said that total pledges and contributions received to date amount to $185,603.06.
He commented, "We are most confident of attaining our goal of $196,643 within the next four or five days."
The chairman again asked that all campaign workers close out their divisions and turn in their final reports as soon as possible.

"She interviewed me for the job, and that was the only time I remember seeing her before she asked me to come live with them," he said.
Later, Rupert said, Mrs. Morgan came to see him.

Last Flue-Cured Sale Is Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The final flue-cured tobacco sale of the 1974 season will be held today in Danville.
Only one market operated in the Old and Middle Belt tobacco area Wednesday as South Boston held its final sale.
Sales totaled 267,371 pounds for an average of $80.06 per hundred pounds, an increase of $17.20 over the average Tuesday on sales at the Oxford market.

"The hardest part was that I was in unfamiliar territory in a completely new atmosphere and it was a shock. I had never had attention - I was a nobody. Now, with the Morgans, I was still no better than before, but people looked at me differently because I was higher up the ladder," Rupert said.
Rupert is still close to both his mother and his brothers. He credits the Morgans with that, too.

Some Progress By Greyhound

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Negotiations that began Sept. 16 broke off while rank and file members took a strike vote and balloted on a proposed contract from Greyhound. The offer was overwhelmingly rejected and a strike was authorized. The union members had been working since Oct. 31 on a temporarily extended contract.
Before the walkout, union officials said they wanted an across-the-board pay raise of 60 cents an hour and one cent more in mileage rates. The old pact provided drivers with an average wage of $5.75 an hour or 21.8 cents a mile, whichever was greater.

Promotion For DeGaulle's Son

PARIS (AP) — Rear Adm. Philippe de Gaulle, son of the late French president, has taken another step up in his military career. He was named on Wednesday as commander of the sea patrol arm of the French navy after 21 months commanding ships monitoring missiles fired from a launching center in southwestern France.

Skit Raises Rights Issue

Equality of rights under the law was the focus of a skit, "Are Women Prisoners?", presented by the ERA Coalition at the Tuesday night and Wednesday morning meetings of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County.

The skit dealt with questions such as "Why do we need the Equal Rights Amendment?", "What will the E.R.A. do? not do?"

Questions about legal rights, equal pay for equal work, rights to privacy, military service and benefits, social customs and relationships, and equal rights for men and women were also discussed.

The ERA Coalition, which is composed of a variety of groups who support the passage of the E.R.A., is interested in presenting the skit or sending speakers to other groups. Groups or clubs who are interested in a presentation on the E.R.A. may contact Stephanie Carstarphen, 756-6519, or Tenna Gross, 752-2679.

Asbestos Suits Plea Is Heard

NINETY SIX, S.C. (AP)—Fire Chief W. A. "Bubba" Summer made his plea for four asbestos suits and town officials listened.

Summer lost his pants in his last fire. He told the town council the flames were so intense that his polyester street trousers, protected only by a raincoat, got so hot they melted.

Council members approved the purchase of the four asbestos suits for the volunteer fire department.

"But they didn't say anything about replacing the pants. That's my loss," Chief Summer noted.

Dark Streets For Christmas

MCADENVILLE, N. C. (AP)—Once known as "Christmas Town USA" because of its twinkling streets at Yuletide, McAdenville will be dark again this Dec. 25.

For the second successive year, only one Christmas tree will be lighted in this Gaston County mill town of about 750 persons.

"It was a great disappointment, but everybody was agreeable that it would be our patriotic duty," said W. J. Pharr, president of Pharr Yarns and Stowe Mills, major owners of the town.

The mills had put up Christmas lighting annually until last year when they yielded to former President Nixon's request to conserve energy.

No Suspects In Gun Murder

CARY, N.C. (AP)—Authorities say an investigation has failed to turn up any suspects in the slaying of a North Carolina State University student Tuesday night.

Wake County deputy Lonnie S. Covert said Craig P. Lyon, 22, of Winston-Salem, was shot as he and his girl friend studied at a dining room table in an apartment near Cary. Lyon would have graduated next month.

Covert said the shot was fired through a window with a 30.06 rifle. He said the tracks left by the killer appeared to be those of a man

Five Collisions For Greenville

More than $2,300 property damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Haviest damage resulted from a 3:55 p.m. mishap on Elm Street, 22 feet south of the Drexel Lane intersection and involved cars driven by James Ralph Sermons of Route 1, Cove City, Stacy Lynn Hagan of Route 6, Greenville and Max Ray Joyner Jr. of 1724 Circle Dr. Police, who charged Sermons with exceeding a safe speed and Hagan with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $250 to the Sermons car, $400 to the Hagan auto and $25 to the Joyner vehicle.

Beverly Anne Glenn of 804 Willow St. was charged with failing to yield the right of way following investigation of a 2:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of Reade and Cotanche Streets. Investigators identified the driver of the second vehicle involved as Anne Moyer Mayo of Tarboro and estimated damage at $100 to the Mayo car and $400 to the Glenn vehicle.

James Arthur Chance of Route 1, Bethel was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a four-car collision at the intersection of Third Street and Memorial Drive at 5:55 p.m.

Officers identified the drivers of the other vehicles involved as Alice Daniels Streeter of 1704 West Third St., Naomi Best Parker of 3163 Paige Dr. and Gwendolyn Halto Fields of 319 North Elm St.

Damage was estimated at $50 to the Chance car, $200 each to the Streeter and Fields vehicles and $100 to the Parker car.

Gerald Alfred Fabisch of Route 8, Greenville was charged with exceeding a safe speed following investigation of a 5 p.m. mishap on U.S. 264, 975 feet East of the Evans Street intersection.

Police said the Fabisch car collided with an auto operated by Eddie Mack Cherry Jr. of 1908 Myrtle Ave., causing an estimated $100 damage to the Cherry car and about $320 damage to the Fabisch vehicle.

An estimated $100 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Jarvis Streets.

Officers identified the drivers involved as L. Trevette Weeks Jr. of Orlando, Fla., and Paula Harrell Cowan of Winton.

Miss Cowan was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

'Hike-A-Thon' On Saturday

A "Hike-Bike" will be held Saturday in Greenville as part of a national benefit for the Association for Retarded Citizens.

Pitt County citizens are asked to participate, either as participants or sponsors, in the event which lasts from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Bikers will gather at Aycock Junior High School and the measured course of 15 miles will begin and end there.

Hike-Bike chairman Danny Jones said, "I know we can count on the citizens of Pitt County to help make the campaign here an outstanding success. Interested riders or sponsors are urged to contact the Pitt County Association for Retarded Citizens at 758-6921.

Deputies Seek Reinstatement

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Two deputies fired after a post-election dispute with Mecklenburg County Sheriff Don Stahl filed suit in federal court Wednesday seeking reinstatement.

The former deputies, Everett "Sam" McCollum, 29, and Ray Crist, 36, said in the suit that Stahl violated their voting rights.

McCollum was fired Nov. 6 because, Stahl said at the time, he admitted he had voted for Stahl's Democratic opponent in the general election. Crist was fired the same day for protesting McCollum's dismissal.

Stahl, a Republican, was re-elected.

Report Sale Handful Defend Israel Of Buildings In UN Assembly Vote

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—The Wachovia building, Winston-Salem's tallest, and the Phillips building, both in the downtown business area, have been sold for about $26 million to a New York general partnership, Wachovia Associates.

The buildings were owned and operated by the D. L. Phillips Investment Builders Inc. of Charlotte and were sold Monday as part of the settlement of the estate of Dwight L. Phillips, a Charlotte builder who died in December 1973.

Tom P. Phillips, president of the Phillips firm, declined comment on the sale but Lester Burnette, general manager of the Phillips office, said Wednesday there would be no change in operations.

The 30-story Wachovia building was completed in 1965 at a cost of about $16 million. The 10-story Phillips building was completed in 1972 at a cost of about $10 million.

Principal tenants of the two buildings are the Wachovia Corp. and R. J. Reynolds Industries.

By GENE KRAMER Associated Press Writer UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A small but influential group of nations is defending Israel's right to exist as the United Nations General Assembly nears a vote on the Palestinian claim to nationhood.

The United States joins in the assembly's Palestine debate today with a speech by Ambassador John A. Scall upholding the Israeli position.

Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Canada, Greece, Finland, Belgium and Nigeria are among the countries who have spoken out for Israel's right to continue as a nation.

Most of them also said Israel should withdraw from the Arab territories occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Italy and Britain also voiced support for Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's efforts to arrange an Arab-Israeli peace settlement.

The assembly is scheduled to vote Friday on resolutions still under negotiation between Arab and Third World backers of the Palestine Liberation Organization and other nations whose support they want.

The majority of the countries in the week-long debate have backed the PLO demand for self-determination and the creation of a Palestinian nation.

PLO chief Yasir Arafat, the first speaker in the debate, made clear that this new nation should include the territory that is now Israel, but many of his supporters have been silent or vague about the future of the Jewish nation.

The resolution drafted by the Arab and Third World countries also is silent on this point, and some of the members of the European Common Market and other have started calling for explicit guarantees of Israel's continued existence.

A PLO spokesman said his organization has "a disposition to accommodate our European friends" if this can be done "without diluting certain basic positions."

Another PLO official said the Palestinians want to "correct" the U.N. Security Council resolution of 1967 which called for guarantees of secure borders for Israel provided it withdrew from occupied Arab territories.

Endorsing Bond Issue

The Pitt County Development Commission has endorsed the bond referendum that would activate the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District.

Meeting Wednesday night, the Commission further urged the voters of the three towns involved in the referendum, Ayden, Grifton, and Winterville, to support the issue on Dec. 10.

According to Commission executive director Dr. Sylvester Greene, "The Commission is impressed that not only is this development needed, it is essential to the livability and growth of the three towns involved in their promotion and operation, as well as continuing livability."

Members of the board expressed confidence that the passage of the bond referendum would insure increased "industrial progress for that section of the county."

Other reports heard during the meeting indicated that several new industrial clients have been looking at various locations in the county in the past two months.

It was also noted that at least four industries that have been considering locations in the area have culminated their plans and expect to make formal announcements within the next few weeks.

Bishops Decide To Push Public School Quality

By GEORGE CORNELL AP Religion Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — With its own schools hard-pressed to survive, the Roman Catholic church has decided to put greater efforts into increasing the quality of public school education.

This task must be pursued "with greater priority than in the past," say new strategy guidelines of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The document outlines a drive to exert an "effective concern for all educational institutions serving American society," public schools as well as church schools.

It says Catholics in cooperation with all citizens have a responsibility to "provide enlightened, albeit critical support for public education" to improve its content and moral tone.

Elaborating later at a news conference Wednesday, Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Cincinnati, newly-elected president of the bishops' conference, said the church has become increasingly concerned with public education "because the well-being of society depends on it."

He said that doesn't mean any shift away from sustaining church schools, but means stepping up work to improve public schools where he said teaching of moral values is gravely lacking.

"We must proceed on both fronts," he said. "That has been my philosophy for a long time. Certainly the fact that more than half the Catholic children go to public schools is a factor. But beyond that is our obligation to the well-being of the whole society."

The bishops Wednesday also approved a resolution calling progress in efforts for Christian unity and saying new world conditions make that cause even more urgent.

Vote Take-Over Of Bus Service

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Charlotte's City Council voted Wednesday night to take over operation of the city's municipal bus service.

An informal agreement approved by the council calls for the city to lease the bus service but retain City Coach Lines Inc., the owner, to manage the system.

The city would apply to the federal government for money to help buy the system.

The two-year proposal calls for the city to pay City Coach Lines $45,000 a year for the lease and about $85,000 a year to manage the system.

Hallsboro Next Challenge For Eagles

Last Friday night, three area teams entered the state playoffs with high hopes but two of those teams were shot down rather rudely while the third saw their hopes soar higher.

Rose High and Farmville Central both were dumped out of the state 4-A and 3-A playoff respectively. Rose, the Division I champ, fell to Sanford, 13-9, while the Eastern Carolina Conference's second place team, Farmville Central, could not capitalize on a fourth and one and lost to Havelock, 26-14.

Robersonville, however, smashed Apex, 40-7. The Eagles, winners of the Eastern Plains title, will host Hallsboro this Friday night in Robersonville which is an advantage.

"It will definitely play a part," said Eagle coach Noland Respass. "They have a long way to come." Hallsboro beat Red Springs last Friday night, 18-0.

Last Friday night's game was physical and Respass expects another this Friday. "They are a physical team just like us," Respass said. "It will be difficult to get points. They run a full T. They're a powerful running team. Each back carries about 30 percent of the time so you can't key on one." Respass says their strongest play may be the power sweep. They also throw off play-action formations. "They have five men who can run the hundred in 10-10.5 seconds." All four backs and one end lead the fleetfooted group. And while they have a strong running attack, they are "not a good passing team."

Defensively, Hallsboro is slightly bigger than the Eagles but what Robersonville lacks in size, they make up in strength. "I don't know a weakness," said Respass about Hallsboro.

Last Friday night, Robersonville had trouble getting started and this was due to lack of field position says the coach. "They were trying to keep us inside the 15 or 20." But the Eagles did not let the poor field position stop them, they scored five of their six touchdowns on plays covering 43 yards or more. Three were over 70 yards long.

"We went to the triple option, it's been good to us all year." It was definitely good last week as the Eagles rolled up 502 yards rushing. Ricky Spruill had 223 of them while Robin Fowler had 112 from the fullback spot and quarterback Jimmy Stalls rushed for 101. 89 on one touchdown play.

The Eagles did an effective job of containing Apex's Butch Cannady. "We hurt him," said Respass. "We got him gun-shy." With Canady shackled, Apex could only muster 142 yards rushing.

Respass said Apex was a good club despite the beating his team gave them. "They had one of the best kickoff men I've seen."

Robersonville will have to throw more this week. They passed only five times last Friday because the Eagles didn't need to. With Spruill running the ball, the Eagles stayed on the ground. "Ricky had a great ball game. We pitched to him and he couldn't be stopped," said Respass.

"Stalls made one of the darnedest runs in the first half. He broke six tackles I know of. He was tremendous. He ran the option as good as could be."

This week, Respass expects a low scoring game. Should the Eagles put the most points on the boards, they will advance in the playoffs and be right back at home the following week and after that it's the state championship game.

Scott Complains About Lights; Then Puts Them Out For Pistons

By The Associated Press
Charlie Scott complained about the lights at Cobo Arena Wednesday night — and then put them out for the Detroit Pistons.

The Phoenix star scored a game-high 33 points despite what he considered poor lighting conditions as the Phoenix Suns beat the Pistons 114-106 in the National Basketball Association.

Early in the game, Scott complained to referee Mendy Rudolph about a "lack of lighting." But the lights were at full power, according to Cobo electricians, and nothing could be done to appease Scott.

It was shortly after this that Scott went on a scoring binge. He combined with Dick Van Arsdale for 21 points in the second quarter to help the Suns forge a 56-51 lead at halftime.

In the other games Wednesday night, the Buffalo Braves beat the Washington Bullets 115-104; the Golden State Warriors downed the Boston Celtics 120-115; the New York Knicks tripped the Philadelphia 76ers 105-95 and the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the New Orleans Jazz 99-95.

Phoenix increased its margin to 86-78 in the third quarter when Curtis Perry had eight points and the Suns team shot 70 per cent. Detroit got within five points in the fourth quarter but couldn't catch the streaking Suns.

Dave Bing was high man for Detroit with 27 points and Bob Lanier had 26. Van Arsdale finished the game with 19 while teammate Keith Erickson had 17.

Bob McAdoo scored five of his 27 points in the final minutes as Buffalo pulled away from Washington. It was the ninth consecutive victory for the Braves.

Randy Smith paced Buffalo's attack with 28 points, 16 in the second half, and Jack Marin added 25 points, 17 of them in the second half. Washington's Elvin Hayes led all scorers with 30 points, but he had just four after intermission.

League-leading scorer Rick Barry hit for 42 points, including four crucial free throws in the final 18 seconds, to lead Golden State over Boston. Barry hit on 17 of 34 shots from the field. He went into the game with a 31.5 point average.

Walt Frazier scored 30 points and Earl Monroe added 27 to lead New York to its fourth straight victory.

Fred Carter was high scorer for the 76ers with 21 points, followed by Doug Collins with 19 and Billy Cunningham with 16.

Jim Fox' layup with about three minutes left capped a 15-point Seattle rally, and the SuperSonics used a tough defense to beat New Orleans.

Fox, Spencer Haywood and Archie Clark each contributed 18 points to the Seattle victory. Slick Watts had 17.

Jim Barnett led the Jazz scorers with 18 points.

Karate Club Does Well

The East Carolina University Karate Club has completed its fall season with another successful sweep through its schedule.

In three tournaments during the fall season, the team amassed nearly 60 trophies.

In a tournament held in Atlanta, Ga., East Carolina captured 13 trophies. Then, at Camp Lejeune Marine Base, they added 28 more. They closed out with a meet in Fayetteville, winning 18 trophies.

The club will be out to defend its Southeastern U.S. title on December 7, when it hosts the annual competition at Rose School. Clubs from all over the country are expected to join in the action.

The tournament will open the 1974-75 season for the team, led by instructor Bill McDonald.

Richmond Rebuilding With New Coach Sloan

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(One of a series)

RICHMOND, Va. — The University of Richmond won't be the same this year when it comes on the basketball court. Gone are two fixtures, one there a long time, and another, just for a short—but exciting—time.

The losses include Coach Louis Mills, who was the dean of the Southern Conference coaches. He resigned late in the spring, during a shake-up of the athletic department that saw a net athletic director hired, and both the football and basketball coaches quit. Mills has moved on to become assistant athletic director at Virginia Commonwealth.

The other loss was senior Aron Stewart, who led the league for two years in scoring and was the Outstanding Player of last year's tournament.

In the void left by Mills' resignation has come a former assistant at Richmond who built a fine program at George Washington, Carl Sloan. It is hoped by Richmond fans that he'll ignite a program like that of the Colonials for the Spiders.

But there is no way to replace

Stewart. Sloan will have to come up with some other ideas there.

The Spiders, because of the late turnover, suffered in the recruiting wars. Sloan was able to bring in three freshmen, 6-0 John Campbell, 6-0 Bill Sutton and 6-8 Ken Hefner. "We look for Campbell to help us this year," he said. "So our squad is going to be basically what was left over from last year."

"It's going to be hard to replace Stewart, both in his points and his rebounds. But Eric Gray (6,7) and Bob McCurdy (6,7) both averaged over six rebounds each, and should improve here. Our biggest problem, however, does appear to be rebounding."

Sloan does look for the Spiders to have speed and quickness. He calls the team small, however, despite the size of his two front courtmen. Others returning who lettered include 6-5 Steve Catlett, 6-1 Mike Sanford, 6-5 Dave Williams and 6-2 Kevin Eastman. Both McCurdy and Gray are proven scorers, averaging 17.6 and 16.0 points respectively last year.

Sophomore Nate Sherman, 6-6, and Williams, a senior, are both expected to play a lot. Sophomore Steve McCurdy (Bob's brother, and 6-8) is expected to move into the center position, with Catlett and Eastman at the guards.

"Our primary goal is to have the best possible team we can have and to have the best possible recruiting year we can come up with in the spring. In fact, we're going to be recruiting all year long," Sloan said. The Spiders are foregoing a JV program, allowing a coach to recruit fulltime.

Sloan feels that Bob McCurdy is as good a shooter as anyone in the league, and that "Gray has moments of brilliance. If he can become consistent, we could have a good team."

Sloan wants his team to have speed and quickness, to press, fast break, and have a controlled fast tempo offense. "On defense, we'll use both man and zone full court presses," he said.

In the conference race, Richmond looks to Furman to again carry the banner in front of the rest. "They are head and shoulders above the rest of us," Sloan said. "East Carolina is very strong, and Davidson has a winning tradition, and four of their top eight back. I think William & Mary, The Citadel, VMI and us all have a chance to finish fourth."

A key to it may be the play of Steve McCurdy. "We want to move Bob outside. Then, if Campbell will come along at the guard spot, we will be in good shape by tournament time."

Decision On W&M's Future

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—A decision is expected Friday on whether the College of William & Mary should soft pedal athletics or shift into overdrive. A compromise, however, seems in the offing.

Dr. Thomas A. Graves, president of the college, said paradoxically Wednesday that he is convinced W&M supporters are prepared to support a big-time football and basketball program and it also is apparent that more attention must be paid to nonrevenue sports.

A special committee that studied the present subsidization program at W&M recommended to the board of visitors earlier this month that the college either adopt a go-for-broke sports program or begin a demerit program leading to "amateur" sport.

The board will begin a two-day meeting today, and its decision on the sports program's future is expected Friday.

Graves said he had talked with alumni and friends and had received numerous letters about the recommendations of the committee. He said he is convinced that supporters "are prepared to give their financial and moral support to a strong, high-caliber and self-supporting program of...revenue sports."

On the other hand, Graves also said, "It is clear to me that more attention and support must be paid to the nonrevenue...sports for both men and women, and to the intramural programs which offer special opportunities for wide participation."

Final Bowl Berths At Stake Saturday

By The Associated Press
In one game, Nebraska goes to the Sugar Bowl, win or lose. Oklahoma won't go to any bowl, win or lose. In the other game, the winner goes to the Rose Bowl, the loser goes nowhere.

It would appear that there is less at stake at Lincoln, Neb., where Oklahoma and Nebraska tangle, than in Columbus, Ohio, site of the Michigan-Ohio State confrontation.

But that's wrong. Dead wrong. Oklahoma has a cherished No. 1 ranking to protect and No. 6 Nebraska has its pride.
But even if these four teams were nowhere in the polls, and going nowhere in the bowls, Saturday's games would be significant events. That's what college football rivalries are all about.

"All these games have tremendous emotion. This year will be no more or no less," Coach Woody Hayes said Wednesday after sending his fourth-ranked Buckeyes through a light workout. "Both teams will be tight in the first quarter. In a game of this magnitude, that's bound to happen."

Hayes, when informed that Ohio State team was an eight-point favorite Saturday over visiting Michigan, said, "I know, and you know, it's a toss-up."

For the most part, strategy, records, coaching and grudges can be tossed out the window for these classic battles. Emotion will pick the winner.
Emotion would probably settle the issue even if 87,000 fans in Ohio Stadium and millions more on national television weren't witnesses, and a Rose Bowl berth weren't hanging in the balance.

Additionally, Ohio State, 9-1, needs a victory to share the Big Ten crown with No. 3 Michigan, 10-0, for the third straight season.
Although Ohio State owns the only loss between the two powerhouses — a 16-13 setback to Michigan State at East Lansing, Mich. — the undefeated Wolverines have not been overly impressive on the road, beating Stanford 27-16, Wisconsin 24-20, Indiana 21-7 and Illinois 14-6.

The Wolverines have been vicious at home, whipping every opponent by at least 17 points.

"You people expect us to win by 50 all the time," Schembechler told reporters. "You can't go out and do that week after week."
Except if you're No. 1, like the Oklahoma Sooners, who have kicked around almost every opponent but were unable to kick the NCAA probation that has grounded them from bowl participation.

Surprises rarely turn up in games of this magnitude because, as Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne pointed out, few major changes can be expected from teams that have been successful.

"When you're leading the nation in total offense (as Oklahoma is) you're not going to switch to the power-I," Osborne said. "You can wear yourselves out preparing for something you'll never see. Teams that move the ball won't throw a whole lot of gingerbread at you."

WFL Playoffs Opening With Players Bitter

By HOWARD SINER
AP Sports Writer
The debt-riddled World Football League, vowing that team members will get some of the gate receipts to make up for back pay, begins its three-part playoffs tonight amid lingering bitterness.

The Philadelphia Bell, 9-11, faces the Florida Blazers, 14-6, at Orlando, Fla., in a nationally televised game. And the Hawaiians, 9-11, play the Southern California Sun, 13-7, at Anaheim, Calif.

"We have tremendous dissension on the team," said quarterback Bob Davis about Florida, winner of the WFL's Eastern Division title. "All this was caused originally by the money problems."

The WFL and the players union jointly announced Wednesday that 70 per cent of the gate receipts from each of the first two playoff games will be divided equally by the participating athletes.

The Blazers, who have not been paid for 12 weeks, and the Sun team members, who have not received last week's pay checks, decided that they would join the scramble to reach the Dec. 5 World Bowl contest.

In the WFL semifinals next week, the Florida-Philadelphia winner plays the Southmen, 17-3, in Memphis and the Southern California-Hawaiians winner meets the Americans, 15-5, in Birmingham.

"This business about the playoffs broke our concentration," said Jack Pardee, the Florida coach. "I just hope we can get it back."

It was a reference to the WFL playoff schedule — completed after a confusing flurry of internal bickering and false announcements — that pitted Florida against the Bell, a team with a losing record.
"Now it's coming down to the pride factor," said Davis. "I was ready to hang it up when I heard we were playing Philadelphia."

The Blazer offense is led by Tommy Reamon, the top WFL rusher with 1,576 yards and 11 touchdowns. Florida's defense tops the league with averages of just 248 total yards allowed per game and total 14 points.

The key to Philadelphia's attack is King Corcoran, who has passed for 31 touchdowns and nearly 3,000 yards. But Corcoran, who has hit on 280 of 545 passes, has thrown a league high of 24 interceptions.

Southern California, meanwhile, is worried about several injured players including passer Tony Adams and receiver Dave Williams. But only runner James McAllister is definitely going to miss the game.

"The Hawaiians think they are the best team in the WFL right now and they could well be," said Tom Fears, coach of Southern California, the Western Division champion.

Coach Mike Giddings of the Hawaiians said he will depend on quarterback Randy Johnson and his offense to control the game.

"If we turn the ball over to their offense, they will score a lot of points," said Giddings about Southern California.

Barnes Fails To Make Game

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
Rookie center Marvin Barnes is such an awesome figure on a basketball court that he casts a gigantic shadow, even when he isn't at the game.

Barnes was an American Basketball Association no-show when his Spirits of St. Louis turned up at the Nassau Coliseum to play the New York Nets Wednesday night. And the game, which the Nets won 109-104, took on secondary importance.

Elsewhere in the ABA, Denver beat Indiana 117-106; San Antonio downed Memphis 102-96, and San Diego crushed Virginia 142-111.

Barnes' size is definitely large at 6-foot-9, his talents are evidently huge — witness his recent 48-point, 30-rebound performance against San Diego — but his problems are apparently are just as big.

The appetites of the 22-year-old Barnes also come in king size and published reports indicate he has already spent all his bonus money.

"He went out and bought all the things he had once dreamed about," Don Schupak, a Spirits trustee, told newsmen. "He just had a lack of understanding for the financial planning that had been done for him by his lawyer. He wondered where his money was."

No explanation for Barnes' disappearance was given.
"He has never expressed any dissatisfaction with his contract," Spirits President Harry Weltman said. Barnes had signed a million dollar pact.

Barnes has been averaging 22.1 points a game and 14.8 rebounds.

Terp, Heel QBs Battle For Lead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — With Scott Gardner of Virginia out of the race, the battle for individual total offense honors in the Atlantic Coast Conference is between Bob Avellini of Maryland and Chris Kupec of North Carolina with Avellini having the edge.

Gardner, the total offense leader all season, has now missed three games which eliminates him from the running for individual honors.

Avellini has an 87-yard lead on Kupec with the regular season final for both teams coming up Saturday. The Maryland quarterback has 1,585 yards in 20 games to 1,496 for Kupec.

In passing, where completions per game determine the championship, Avellini has a 10.1 average while Kupec has 9.8. Avellini has 101 completions for 1,551 yards while Kupec has hit on 98 for 1,391.

Stan Fritts, of N.C. State is still the rushing leader. He has finished regular season play with 1,169 yards and a 106.3 average. James Betterson of While Barnes was making his moves off the court, Julius Erving was doing his on the court and they led to the Nets' victory.

Erving collaborated on a steal with two teammates, raced down the other end of the court and hit a three-point play with 1:27 remaining that gave New York a 103-101 lead, and the Nets never looked back.

Billy Paultz had 28 points for the Nets. Erving added 25.
Gene Kennedy and Freddie Lewis both tossed in 21 points, and Maurice Lucas grabbed 18 rebounds for St. Louis.

The Nuggets moved toward their sixth straight victory by scoring the first eight points of the fourth quarter. Bobby Jones led the way for Denver with 29 points. George McGinnis had 27 points for the Pacers, who have lost 11 of their last 15 games.

Center Swen Nater scored 22 points and grabbed 22 rebounds to lead the Spurs to their fourth straight victory, sending Memphis to its fifth loss in a row.

Bo Lamar had 29 points and 15 assists to lead San Diego past Virginia in a game that was one minute short of the regulation 48 because the time clock knocked a minute off midway through the first quarter. Both teams agreed to play without restarting the clock.

San Diego, which led all the way, received additional scoring help from Travis Grant, with 23 points, and Warren Jabali, with 20.

In the NBA, it was: Golden State 120, Boston 115; New York 105, Philadelphia 95; Buffalo 115, Washington 104; Seattle 99, New Orleans 95, and Phoenix 114, Detroit 106.

To Play On Field

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The Birmingham Americans, seemingly exiled from their home field by tax liens, got a reprieve Wednesday and announced they would play their semifinal playoff game at home next Wednesday.

The owner of the financially troubled World Football League team, Bill Putnam had said the Americans could not play at Birmingham's Legion Field because "we can't ask the players to play for nothing."

The Internal Revenue Service and the state of Alabama had filed tax liens attaching any gate receipts at the field.

But Wednesday Putnam said federal, state, county and city tax officials have agreed to take only 30 per cent of the gate, leaving 70 per cent for the players after game expenses and sales taxes.

The IRS filed its lien against the Americans Tuesday, claiming the team owes about $237,000 in back taxes, and also filed a $180,000 claim against Putnam.

Earlier, state, county and city authorities had claimed the Americans owe back taxes. And Birmingham Trust National Bank says the Americans owe it almost $800,000 for a loan.

Hard Going For Moonshiners

SOMEWHERE IN NORTH CAROLINA (AP) — "The moon ain't shining so bright these days," said the man called Sam. He laughed, and tried to hold his enormous belly in place.

Sam is a moonshiner by trade, and that's how he began his personal impressions of the nation's inflationary economy.

Sam was interviewed by Merritt Sallinger of the Norfolk, Va., Ledger-Star behind an abandoned farmhouse in the swamp woods of northeastern North Carolina on a recent, frost-chilled night.

In the moonshine business, Sam is known as "a factory man." He is also out of work.

Truth is, the spiraling costs of production — the cost of sugar, largely — and what Sam calls "a dying market" are sending moonshine operations down the drain. "I'm ruined," Sam moaned. "I think this business today would break a banker."

He should know. For 30-odd years, this man has engaged in the moonshine trade. He has made mistakes, paid fines, served time in jail.

Some of his expensive stills have been found by agents and destroyed. He relocated them and started up again.

"But that was when there was money to be had," Sam said. "Like I told you, the market is almost gone and a man just can't afford to build a factory no more." A couple of years back, he had a 280-gallon cooker, a 150-gallon doubler (barrel), two 55-gallon doublers, 60 feet of 1½-inch copper coil, mash boxes and a 150-gallon boiler he fired with coal.

Sam said, "That was my plant, and back then it cost about $700 to set up. That same rig today would cost a man over $1,200."

With that still, Sam made nearly 600 gallons of moonshine whisky twice a week. He sold it from the site at $4 a gallon.

To get that much, he needed 4,200 pounds of sugar, 600 pounds of rye flour, 70 pounds of corn meal and 11 pounds of yeast. He also needed 24 100-pound bags of coal to make the 600 gallons of moonshine.

On today's wholesale market, this list of supplies would cost more than $2,600. But few moonshiners are able to come by wholesale prices, so the cost is well above that figure — and rising.

"A man would have to get more than $7 or $8 a gallon to make a decent profit," Sam said.

And buyers are vanishing. "People are getting rid of the slums, and when you ain't got no slums, you ain't got much of a market for this stuff."

Law enforcement pressure has increased the risk of discovery of stills. "You spend all that money and work and set up a clean rig, and the next day you show up to start a run and half your stuff has been hauled off by the cops, and the rest beat to pieces," Sam said. "You just want to cry."

Filipino Boy Sees Father In Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 16-year-old boy allowed to fly to the United States from Manila after his father held the Philippine ambassador at gunpoint says, "He did it because he felt much love for me in his heart."

Napoleon Lechoco Jr. arrived here Wednesday and was allowed to spend 30 minutes with his father at a mental institution where the elder Lechoco is being examined to stand trial.

"I am the eldest (of seven children). He did it for me," the youth said after the reunion with his father.

Earlier in the day, the boy apologized to Ambassador Eduardo Z. Romualdez for his father's actions. His father, a 44-year-old law clerk for the Prince Georges County government in suburban Maryland, faces a federal charge of assault upon an ambassador. Lechoco held Romualdez at gunpoint for 11 hours before surrendering early Tuesday in exchange for a promise his son would be allowed to leave Manila and rejoin the family.

Lechoco and his wife emigrated to the United States two years ago. Six of their children came to the United States two months ago, but Napoleon Jr. stayed behind with his grandparents.

The elder Lechoco charged during his siege that his son was being retained in the Philippines against his will and demanded his immediate release. The Manila government insisted the youth had been free to leave at any time.

Cannon Mills Employees Reject Union In Key Vote

CHANGING THE GUARD—Clasped hands are more in evidence than swinging arms as a squad of mini guardsmen marches away from Buckingham Palace. The children from a kindergarten near Chelsea Barracks had been taken by a teacher to watch the changing of the guard—professional style. (AP Wirephoto)

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — Employees of Cannon Mills, whose towels and sheets are found in nearly every American home, rejected the AFL-CIO Textile Workers Union of America Wednesday in the biggest labor election ever conducted in the textile industry.

By a vote of 8,473 to 6,801, employees at 15 Cannon plants in Cabarrus and Rowan counties declined to accept the union as their bargaining agent.

Tabulations completed late Wednesday night revealed that 55.5 per cent of the ballots cast were marked no.

Both labor and management viewed the National Labor Relations Board election as bellwether for future of union efforts in Southern textile industry. The TWUA represents about 10 per cent of the 500,000 workers in the South.

Cannon's board chairman, Don S. Holt, issued a terse statement after the outcome was announced around 11:30 p.m.: "We are very pleased for the fine vote of the company's employees in the election which was concluded today...this was an expression of confidence by Cannon people and of their desire to continue working together to maintain a productive and successful manufacturing company."

Scott Hoyman, Southern regional director of TWUA, said a decline in textile employment and the recent coal miners strike may have affected the vote.

Hoyman said he felt that the substantial support the union got in its first attempt to organize Cannon is a good omen for a brighter future for Southern textile workers.

"I think that the real heroes of today's vote are the almost 7-000 workers who had the courage to oppose the recommendation of their employer and pressures exerted from their business and institutional interests in these communities," he said.

"The TWUA will carefully investigate any supposed irregularities either prior to the election or during the election before making any decision as to whether or not a protest and other charges should be filed," Hoyman said.

He said the union will closely scrutinize Cannon in the future to make sure that no union supporter is mistreated because of his beliefs and activities.

Asked if Kannapolis, Cannon's home base, has seen the last of the union, Hoyman replied, "We hope to remain an active part of this community."

The ballots were taken to District Court in Kannapolis shortly after the polls closed at 9 p.m. About 200 spectators from both sides gathered in the courtroom and a round of applause went up when the results were announced by NLRB official Ronald Yost shortly before 11:30 p.m.

Yost said the voting was carried out quietly and without incident. He said there was a minimal number of challenges. The union effort was the largest ever undertaken by the TWUA.

Union officials had predicted the proposal would be approved by at least 60 per cent. Cannon spokesmen had predicted its defeat.

The NLRB had ordered the election for production and maintenance workers in the two North Carolina counties. Plants in Graham, N.C., and in Central and York, S.C., were excluded although management had asked that the 3,000 workers in these plants be allowed to vote.

The NLRB held that these plants did not share the "common bond" that applied to those in Rowan and Cabarrus counties, which adjoin each other.

During the campaigning, the company declined to specify an average salary level, saying it would be "like comparing apples to oranges."

But a union organizer said the Cannon pay scale ranged from $2.43 an hour to $3.99, with fewer than 100 workers making top pay. Another union official said the average pay for textile workers in North Carolina is $3.30 an hour.

At issue in the campaign — perhaps even more than wages and fringe benefits — was whether the historic close relationship between the company and its workers has changed. In the past, employees have shunned union involvement both because they feared it would upset the close relationship between them and their employers and because of a general distrust in the union.

In the last 50 years at least three union efforts failed at Cannon before the election stage.

A workers were lined up to vote, one said, "The union may lose because there are too many old people" working for Cannon.

Another said, "We're going to suffer either way it comes out." And a young woman quickly added, "But how long have you been suffering already?"

ABC Permits Suspended And Revoked

The State ABC Board suspended permits issued for a Grimesland store and revoked permits issued to a Route 3, Greenville business at a meeting Monday in Raleigh.

The board suspended for 60 days, permits issued to Zip Mart, Inc. for the Grimesland Supermarket, on charges of "failing to give the licensed premises proper supervision from about July 12, 1974 through August 14, 1974, by failing to have a qualified and approved manager . . ."

The board revoked permits issued to Mrs. Dorothy Nichols for Dottie's Grill, Route 3, Greenville, for "allowing malt beverages to be consumed on the licensed premises on or about August 10 . . . ; allowing persons to engage in gambling on the licensed premises on or about August 10 . . . ; possessing alcoholic beverages on the licensed premises . . ." and "failing to give the licensed premises proper supervision . . ."

Publishers Plan Merger

MIAMI (AP) — Shareholders of Knight Newspapers Inc. and Ridder Publications Inc. have approved a merger effective Nov. 30 that gives the combined company the largest circulation of any U.S. newspaper group.

The agreement calls for one share of Ridder common stock to be traded for six-tenths of a share of Knight stock. A share of Ridder preferred stock will be exchanged for a share of Knight preferred.

The new Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc. will publish 35 daily newspapers in 16 states, with combined seven-day circulation of 26.9 million.

Individual papers will retain editorial and business autonomy, said Lee Hills, chairman and chief executive officer of Knight, and Bernard H. Ridder Jr., president and chief executive officer of Ridder.

The companies will dispose of their broadcasting interests and devote themselves exclusively to newspaper publishing, they said.

Hills will be chairman and chief executive officer of the new company. Ridder will be vice chairman and chairman of the operating committee. Alvah H. Chapman Jr., president of Knight, will be president of Knight-Ridder.

Knight publishes daily newspapers in Ohio, Florida, North Carolina, Georgia, Michigan, Kentucky and Pennsylvania. It has a number of subsidiaries.

Tanaka's Resignation Is Believed Inevitable

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's leading newspapers said today that Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's early resignation has become inevitable.

Three dailies — Asahi, Yomiuri and Mainichi Shimbun — said he is likely to announce his decision to step down on Monday, the day President Ford returns to the United States.

The Kyodo news service reported sources in Tanaka's ruling Liberal Democratic party said he has decided to resign in about five days.

The Nihon Keizai Shimbun, Japan's leading economic daily, said the resignation announcement probably will come Friday or Saturday, as soon as Ford leaves Japan.

Demands for Tanaka's resignation, from within his own party as well as from the opposition parties, developed after the magazine Bungei Shunju made detailed allegations in its October issue that Tanaka used his official position to increase his personal wealth.

The prime minister denied the charges in a televised conference Nov. 11, promised he would make a point-by-point rebuttal to prove "I have done nothing illegal," and said he was determined to continue in office. He has not made this promised rebuttal report, and some newspapers said he is not sure such a report would be enough to dispel doubts and suspicions.

Tanaka's popularity also has been hurt by inflation now running at 25 per cent a year, his lavish election spending and the report in October by an American admiral that U.S. warships were entering Japanese ports without unloading their weapons. In one recent newspaper opinion poll, only 17 per cent of those queried supported Tanaka.

Allege Robbed Man Near Store

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Booker T. Darden of 904 Taylor St., arrested Tuesday on robbery charges, allegedly robbed a man near the In and Out Grocery on North Greene St., rather than a clerk in the store as reported in yesterday's edition of The Daily Reflector.

Cannon said Ralph Pollard of 1213 North Pitt St. was allegedly robbed of $7 on October 23 while on the railroad tracks near the grocery store.

Shooting Admitted, Acquitted In Case

MAYS LANDING, N. J. (AP)—A North Carolina man who admitted he shot a companion, claiming he was held captive, has been acquitted of atrocious assault and battery.

Charles W. Goodson of Gastonia said the companion, Leon T. Revels, who was wanted for murder in Gastonia, had held him captive and threatened him.

Revels was shot while asleep in a rooming house in Atlantic City last March 26.

Goodson, 29, also was acquitted by an Atlantic County Court jury of assault with a gun, but he was convicted of possession of a gun without a permit.

Revels, 28, who stands 6 foot 6 and reportedly weighed 400 pounds at the time of the incident, testified with Goodson. Revels said he awoke after Goodson shot him in the mouth.

He pursued Goodson, who fired five more shots into his upper body without felling him, both men testified.

Goodson told police that he and Revels belonged to a car theft ring that operated between North Carolina and Philadelphia. Goodson said he and Revels were on good terms most of the time in Atlantic City.

Goodson said Revels, before falling asleep, had waved a gun and a knife in his face and threatened, "I don't know whether to cut you up or just shoot you."

Revels is awaiting trial for the stabbing death of John Mize, 60, in Gastonia in early March.

Judge Manuel H. Greenberg continued Goodson's $17,000 bail and he was returned to the county jail to await sentencing Dec. 20 on the gun conviction.

After the Monday night bowling game, everyone cheered the winners and cheered up the losers.

Mac was there.

Five Attorneys Fined By Court

GREENSBORO (AP) — Five attorneys were found in contempt of court Wednesday and fined $25 each for failing to appear in court at the time their cases were scheduled.

One lawyer, Max Ballinger, protested the ruling of Superior Court Judge Julius A. Rousseau and was placed in custody of the bailiff.

Rousseau ordered the attorneys rounded up when they did not show up when his docket was called at 9:30 a.m.

"We're not going to run the court around here without the lawyers," he said.

The Worry Clinic Spirit Of Law Often Ignored

Horrendous as is the case of Miss X, such rapists and murderers are often turned loose to kill others, because of petty technicalities. "It's the spirit of the law," as Jesus would say, that counts!

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph.D., M.D.

CASE B-694: Miss X, aged 48, had been a faithful office worker for 22 years.

She never had missed a day or even been late for work in all that time.

Then on Monday she failed to show up at her desk. Astonished, her employer telephoned her neighbor, and asked the latter to see if she could find out what was wrong.

The neighbor found Miss X beaten almost beyond recognition, with her hands and feet wired together.

She was still alive and groaning but unconscious.

When the police arrived, they found no clues to this sadistic crime, but the neighbor suddenly noticed a dog in the kitchen.

"Officer," she excitedly exclaimed, "Miss X never had a dog!"

So the alert police released the dog and then trailed it 2 blocks up the street.

There the dog ran upon a front porch and began scratching at the front door.

The householder and his wife said the dog belonged to their grown son, who was away from home.

But the police later picked him up, still wearing a bloody sweat shirt.

When asked how he happened to have blood on his shirt (and also some scratches on his cheek), he glibly said it came from a goose he was trying to kill.

To support his story about the goose, he then named a friend who lived a few miles in the country.

But this friend denied that the suspect had ever been at his house and also said no goose had been killed or cooked.

So the suspect's alibi was ruined.

By blood analysis and other obvious signs, the suspect was convicted of assault and attempted murder.

The victim, Miss X, had to be sent to an institution, for she never recovered normalcy in mind or body.

But the suspect's attorney appealed the case, after the State Supreme Court judges voted 7 to 0 to confirm the earlier decision of the local judge.

Later, the case was brought up to our U.S. Supreme Court.

For the defense attorney argued that when his client was apprehended by the police, they had been guilty of a technical error.

In telling him his rights, they had thus inadvertently stated: "Anything that you say may be used for or against you!"

They had thus inserted the additional two words "for or."

And on this minor technicality, this case had continued since 1966 till this late year of 1974, when it was finally presented to the U.S. Supreme Court at Washington, D.C.

Maybe we better heed the wise advice of Christ who said:

"Ye strain at gnats but swallow camels!"

Many honest, law-abiding Americans are growing incensed at the coddling of criminals and their release on petty technicalities, despite their commission of heinous crimes whose brutality fits Roman Nero!

Jesus also vetoed the picaresque worship of the letter of the law, and shocked his ecclesiastical critics by stating:

"The Sabbath was made for man; not man, for the Sabbath."

Americans with judicial "horse sense" paraphrase that and urge:

"The law was made for man; not man, for the law."

"But we might convict an innocent person," some will protest.

Yet, by trying to avoid that injustice, we now release rapists, murderers and other arch criminals, who probably kill at least 10 law-abiding citizens (more likely 100) for every such conviction of an innocent person!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

TRAINING CIVILIAN PATROL—Residents of Beit Shean, Israel, are instructed in the techniques of handling a rifle as the town prepares to form a civilian patrol guard in response to Tuesday's Arab guerrilla attack which left four Israelis dead. As the instructions were being given Wednesday funeral services were held for victims of the attack. (AP Wirephoto)

Organist To Offer Concert On Sunday

Miss Karen Grace Register of Kinston, an accomplished soloist, pianist, and organist, will appear in an organ concert at the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church near here Sunday night at 7:30.

The daughter of Fred M. and Nina Grace Register, also of Kinston, Miss Register is a 1974 graduate of East Carolina University, and holds a bachelor of music degree with a major in church music.

In her particular field, Miss Register has served as organist-choir director at Calvary

Memorial United Methodist Church, Snow Hill, and organist-choirmaster at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Kinston. Currently, she is teaching private lessons, full-time, to a class of 30 piano and voice students. A member of the First Free Will Baptist Church, Kinston, she sings soprano in the choir.

In her concert at Reedy Branch, Miss Register will perform selections from the great masters, including the music of Louis and Francois Couperin, the church musicians of Louis XIV of France, the German composers Johann Sebastian Bach and Dietrich Buxtehude. She will also render selections by William Billings (America's first full-time musician), Daniel Read, and Lowell Mason.

Assisting in the concert will be Tommy Manning, editor at the Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, who is regular organist at Reedy Branch. He will be delivering background material on Miss Register's selections and will perform a reading entitled "Desiderata."

The public is invited to attend.

"Trump out Cancer" is this year's theme of the American Contract Bridge League Charity Foundation. The Foundation hopes to donate more than $100,000 this year to the American Cancer Fund, and bridge players everywhere can join in the effort. On November 29, ACBL bridge clubs throughout North America will be hosting a Continent-wide Charity Game, with the American Cancer Fund as the beneficiary. You can play your part in fighting this dreaded killer by playing in this game. Contact your local bridge club for the location of your nearest game. However, charity need not extend to the bridge table. South's generosity on this deal was appreciated by his partner. North-South reached a fair three no trump contract in quick time, and West made his normal lead of the jack of spades. East went up with his king and declarer won the ace. There were eight tricks on top, and the ninth trick could come only from the diamond suit, so declarer entered dummy with the jack of hearts and led a low diamond. Had East carelessly played low, South would have gotten home. But the defender was wide awake. He grabbed the ace of diamonds and continued with a spade, and declarer was a gone goose. When West eventually got in with the king of diamonds, he had just enough spade tricks to beat the hand.

Declarer made his donation to the opponents' cause at trick one. Despite the fact that he had two stoppers in the spade suit, he should have held up his ace. Consider the difference this play would have made.

Declarer wins the likely spade continuation and leads a diamond. If West takes the king to play a third spade, he will have no re-entry to his good spades. And if East wins the trick with the ace of diamonds, he cannot continue spades. Either way, declarer has the time to set up the diamond suit and come home with an overtrick.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1974

Your DAILY HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A curious Friday in which you would be wise not to try to travel or to extend your horizons or interests, but at the same time it is an excellent day for using your best judgment to think out the ways by which you can quietly organize your future for greater success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Busy yourself with improvements to present setup at home or business, instead of going off on any tangent. Control your temper.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't waste time with duties that aren't working out well. Ideal day for the social and becoming more popular, making new friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Avoid know-it-all associates. See what a higher-up suggests for your advancement. Handle credit, vocational matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Follow hunches to gain aims. Don't work under pressure and don't get into dither over something that's just flim-flam.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Fulfill promises. Listen to what an associate has to say and understand the right meaning. Forget about pleasure jaunts now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Long talks with partners will reveal what is on their minds, but don't upset the present arrangement because of a family tie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make your surroundings more pleasant. Avoid recklessness and use care in driving. Handle routines wisely and don't get behind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't spend too much for entertainment today, or you will regret it later. Use talents you keep idle and make the future brighter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't go out for fun, but try to please kin more, get your home in better condition. Avoid wasting time with a bore.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get out and take advantage of a fine opportunity. Don't hesitate to ask favors of those who can grant them. Be charming.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Consult monetary experts. Steer clear of idle friends who can deter progress. Make new ones who are up-and-coming.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Let your wishes be known to others who can help you attain them, but postpone talks with bigwigs until Monday.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have excellent intuitive faculties and will want to trust them rather than other people, and thereby will know just what to do or say at the right time. Give the best education possible, but don't encourage to go into foreign countries, as big business, corporations and the like are fine for him or her on own home grounds. Ethical training early.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

PG INTERNATIONAL AMUSEMENT CORP (R)

Soon Pay-Off On 30 Studies

By JAY SHARBUTT AP Television Writer NEW YORK (AP) — For the past two months, Tenold R. Sunde has been toiling on 30 separate studies of American humor. And soon, he and the CBS Radio network will let listeners in on the gags.

Sunde is the producer of a project called "A Sense of American Humor," which CBS Radio will air the weekend after this in 30 segments ranging in length from four to nine minutes. The series is hosted by Roger Mudd.

It starts off by asking Steve Allen, Phyllis Diller, Jonathan Winters, Bill Cosby, Jean Shepherd, Carol Burnett and Stan Freberg what they feel makes Americans laugh and how it helps us.

Subsequent segments go into various laughter branches—the humor of cartoonists, of newspapers, of vaudeville and burlesque, of radio, TV and Hollywood, of music, of ethnic and dialect jokes and so on.

There also are segments on great comediennes and comedians, on satire, on American political humor, and even silent humor, the last a possible first for radio.

Producer Sunde, who said he acted as sort of a surrogate for host Mudd in gathering interviews for the series (Mudd being tied up in the Washington newsbeat), said he got the assignment last summer.

He said he spent a month planning it. Then, after CBS approved what he proposed to do, he grabbed a tape recorder and spent most of September on the road, interviewing more than 60 humor experts.

They ranged from such well-known citizens as Sid Caesar and Woody Allen to the not-so-well-known Dr. Walter Blair, a University of Chicago scholar in the field of early American humor.

October was spent culling more material from books and articles and pulling recorded material from the CBS archives.

"Now, it's just a question of weeding this down," said Sunde, who was in the process of weeding and writing when interviewed.

Plans Rebuilding Port Cities On Suez Canal

By MICHAEL S. BARRETT
CAIRO (UPI) — Osman Ahmed Osman, king of Middle East contractors and cabinet minister in charge of rebuilding the war-shattered Suez Canal area, says it will take nearly $6 billion and five years to complete the job.

Osman, 67, whose title is minister of housing and reconstruction, said in an interview that life in the Suez cities of Port Said, Ismailia and Suez should return almost to normal by the end of this year despite continuing efforts to clear damage caused in two Arab-Israeli wars.

"I will need $5.9 billion for the next five years. I already have about $1 billion from our friends," he said, referring to friendly nations.

With Soviet help, Osman built the Aswan dam and serves as chairman of Egypt's $1.25 billion Arab Contractors Co., and its five affiliates in seven Arab countries.

He said work was progressing on the hurry-up schedule imposed July 27 by President Anwar Sadat. Sadat toured the canal recently and was so pleased at the rapid progress that he rewarded workers with substantial bonuses.

"The president is very happy," Osman said. "He didn't expect what he saw. He was there in June, and when he returned this month he found nearly everything changed."

Osman's job includes constructing thousands of new housing units. "I want to make it a garden and inside this garden the city," he said, "not the city and inside it the garden."

"Sheraton is insisting on building a big hotel in Ismailia. Hilton is insisting it wants a hotel. They are interested, the people are interested, and that means a lot of tourists will want to come and see it."

Osman rejected the idea of repopulating the area with paramilitary units to ward off any future Israeli attacks.

"I said we are going to develop Sinai, to let some people live in it, to put some irrigation into it, some cultivation. We are going to have some villages and cities in Sinai, but I didn't mean they would be paramilitary," Osman said.

"Our nation likes peace, we need peace and we are looking for peace. But if the Israelis insist on occupying the land, of course, we will fight."

Lawyers Divided Over Publicity Impact On Trials

Dershowitz; F. Lee Bailey, and Robert Meserve, former president of the American Bar Association. (AP Wirephoto)

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Is it possible that some crimes may be so heavily publicized that no defendant can get a fair trial? Two prominent lawyers say yes.

Is the case of Lt. William L. Calley Jr., such a case? They say no.

"I think Calley got a fair trial as anybody gets for committing a crime of that kind and being court-martialed," said Harvard Law Prof. Alan Dershowitz, a noted civil liberties expert.

"The jury reacted against publicity," said criminal attorney F. Lee Bailey of Boston.

Bailey and Dershowitz commented on Calley's case and several others like it after being asked for their views on the question of a fair trial in cases that get extensive, nationwide news coverage. Also asked to comment on the topic was Robert Meserve, a Boston lawyer and former president of the American Bar Association.

The three said discussion of prejudicial publicity inevitably comes down to what jurors think, and nobody knows much about that. Are jurors honest about their prejudices when examined before selection? If not confined, do they obey the judge's instructions not to read newspapers or listen to radio and television news about their case?

"The average juror," said Bailey, "is announcing his willingness to be with the government."

Bailey won a new trial, and eventual acquittal, for Dr. Sam Sheppard, accused of murdering his wife, on the grounds the celebrated 1954 trial in Cleveland had been a circus, poisoned by local press clamor against the defendant. Bailey himself was censured by the Massachusetts Supreme Court in 1972 for, among other things, out-of-court statements in a New Jersey case.

Recalling the Sheppard case, Bailey said: "In the retrial the first jurors, if we'd had them, would have voted to convict again."

"The best juror is the one who says: 'Sure, I read the paper, but I will decide the case on the evidence,'" said Bailey. "I would keep him, unless he knows something specific about an alleged confession, etc., whose admissibility into evidence is going to be argued.

Then I would excuse him; he just can't put that knowledge aside.

"In my own experience, if a juror disregards the judge's instructions — in a case where the jury is not locked up — and reads about the trial, the other jurors turn on him and say: 'You're going beyond the rules.'"

Meserve thought the empanelling of the Watergate cover-up jury as well as he jury in New York which acquitted former U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans on non-Watergate charges required "to some degree an act of faith, a belief that people will do their best to be honest citizens. I think that's justified, speaking generally."

There is a dilemma here, Meserve said. "It seems to me that generally speaking, you can't find jurors quite frequently who are intelligent people who don't know something about most matters that come before them—or haven't at least formulated a sort of opinion about matters of the type that come before them."

Dershowitz says he is sure that, human nature being what it is, some jurors disregard judges' instructions. "I don't think you can completely count on it being an airtight system. There are many problems with the jury system, and it's such an important system I wouldn't want to tamper with it."

The Watergate cover-up jury, Dershowitz said, presents a "mixed picture" for the defense.

"The fact that all these jurors know of the President's pardon (of Richard Nixon) is a tremendous advantage. The judge refused to strike, apparently, the jurors who might allow that fact to influence their decision."

The jury now hearing the Watergate cover-up trial is confined where news of the trial cannot reach it and possibly affect its deliberations.

Nonetheless, U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica should have moved the trial from Washington to insure an impartial jury, Bailey and Dershowitz said.

"I'm not happy seeing Richard Nixon's gang being tried by blacks and liberals in the District of Columbia," said Dershowitz.

He thought it would have been "a lot fairer" to have moved the trial to "a district of Maryland where it (the 1972 election) was very close, and where you had a mixture of whites and blacks."

A majority of the Watergate cover-up jury is black.

"I would have moved the trial to another city not so fired up," said Bailey.

Moving a trial is one way to assure a fair trial, as Bailey notes in summing up a judge's options:

"Have a thorough voir dire examination to get rid of those jurors who are prejudiced. Second, move or delay the trial. Third, try the case — and if you can assign unfairness, reverse the conviction and try it again or dismiss it, as in the Bobby Seale case in Connecticut.

"Let the man go unpunished. This is the price society pays." Black Panther leader Seale was charged with, among other things, kidnaping resulting in death. After a jury — selected from a panel of 1,500 — failed to reach a verdict in 1971, Connecticut Superior Court Judge Harold M. Mulvey dismissed all charges against Seale, saying: "With the massive publicity attendant upon trial just concluded, I find it impossible to believe that an unbiased jury could be selected without superhuman efforts, efforts which these defendants should not be called upon either to make or to endure."

"Every so often, we're going to have a case where we can't bring a guy to trial," said Dershowitz.

Lieutenant Gary W. Hein, a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, was a speaker at D. H. Conley High School last week.

Lt. Hein is assigned to the Naval recruiting district in Raleigh. He spoke on the advantages and disadvantages of the Navy. After his short lectures, Lt. Hein showed a film-strip depicting the life and various jobs offered in today's Navy.

He was assisted by Petty Officer Second Class Eddie Avery, a recruiter from the Navy recruiting station in Kinston.

Lt. Hein will be speaking to three other JROTC units in Pitt County in the near future.

Scot Moonshiners Set 'Pattern' For The Breed

By GREGORY JENSEN

GLENLIVET, Scotland (UPI) — Up from the Highland glen wound the moonshiners, a little parade of hard-handed Scots farmers in ragged kilts and false whiskers riding shotgun on two horses carrying four small kegs. They appeared by careful arrangement at a 150th anniversary celebration which commemorated the start of the legal Scotch whisky industry — the birthday of The Glenlivet, the first distillery in Scotland to operate openly with a legal license.

Before then, all Scotch was moonshine. "Smugglers" like these, transporting the illicit product of their illegal stills, would have been ready to defend their whisky against raiding tax men to the death, if necessary. It often was.

Whisky grew from misty obscurity, but almost from the moment it moved into recorded history it was the center of a battle. Government after government fought to control it, to license it, above all to tax it. In the long run governments always lost.

Highland Scotsmen knew their glens too well. They found too many crannies in these wild upland valleys where they could hide small stills, too many routes over the high mountains where whisky could be smuggled to markets, too many ways of outwitting the excise men who hunted them.

The hunt was often bloody, but armies of tax men were no more effective than a finger in a dike. In 1823 excise officers seized 14,000 illegal stills in Scotland. There must have been 100 times that many undetected.

But that year England's parliament passed a sensible whisky law, and George Smith decided to take advantage of it. Smith ran one of the 200 illicit stills in this wide, heather-covered glen, the valley of the River Livet in far northeast Scotland which even now is remote and unpeopled.

Smith licensed his distillery in 1824. Glen Livet's remaining 199 "smugglers" did not take kindly to the idea.

"I was warned before I began, by my civil neighbors, that they meant to burn the new distillery to the ground and me in the heart of it," Smith once wrote.

"The Laird of Aberlour presented me with a pair of hairtrigger pistols, and they were never out of my belt for years."

The Laird of Aberlour's pistols lay on a table during The Glenlivet's 150th birthday party. The celebrations drew 350 guests from all over the world, for the industry Smith started has grown to enormous proportions.

Scotch whisky is now one of Britain's three biggest exports — with the United States as the biggest single customer. Products of The Glenlivet alone go to 115 countries, either undiluted as a "single malt" whisky or in the blends which make up most scotch.

Every year Scotland produces 10 per cent more whisky than the year before. This distillery is by no means Scotland's biggest, but it turns out 1.3 million gallons a year.

Outside the birthday party's tent was steel framework for a new distillery which will almost double that capacity. The whisky it makes will have to mature at least five years, more often 12 years, before it is drunk.

Many other Scotch distillers are also expanding. Is this not a foolish risk in a world of inflation and uncertainty?

"We believe," said company chairman Capt. Iain M. Tennant at the anniversary party, "that quality products will always be in demand in any country that maintains its freedom — the freedom that gives man the right to earn, save and spend according to his wants and wishes."

Space Technology Advancing Medical Treatment

EDITOR'S NOTE — Down-to-earth use of sophisticated space technology is helping doctors treat a variety of ailments. Space scientists and the medical profession hope the technology transfer will continue.

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1954, Mrs. Cleste Thompson contracted a severe case of poliomyelitis that left her paralyzed except for head and neck movement and a slight motion of her left thumb.

The California housewife, 19 and the mother of a young child, was bedridden and totally dependent on hospital attendants.

Today Mrs. Thompson can maneuver in an electric wheelchair, feed herself, comb her hair and type letters. She runs a telephone answering service.

Down-to-earth use of sophisticated equipment and techniques developed for the U.S. space program makes this possible.

Mrs. Thompson operates the wheelchair and electrically-powered, robot-like arms through a pressure device mounted like a harmonica in front of her mouth. She achieves movement and mobility by touching her tongue to a series of switches that look like large vitamin capsules.

Dr. James R. Allen of Rancho Los Amigos Hospital in Downey, Calif., who helped adapt these space-developed devices for Mrs. Thompson, said:

"The value of this technology transfer from space to medicine is readily apparent. Hundreds of thousands of other disabled people with varying degrees of paralysis or amputation can be helped by similar applications of aerospace technology to medical problems."

Files of the national Aeronautics and space administration contain many examples of how today's medical techniques are being advanced by space technology. The field of medicine has benefited more than any other space spinoff area primarily because of NASA breakthroughs in electronics and miniaturization.

A rechargeable heart pacemaker that eliminates the need for periodic surgery to implant new batteries is one of the most important. The new instrument, smaller than a cigarette package — half the size of older ones — operates on nickel-cadmium cells which are used for power in most U.S. satellites.

The new pacemaker can be easily recharged by the patient at home. All he does is slip into a special vest to which the pacemaker is magnetically recharged for recharging. It takes about 90 minutes. The pacemaker controls weak or erratic heart rates and has been implanted successfully in more than 600 persons without failure.

Another major spinoff is a compact medical unit carried by ambulances in Houston and other cities. The 40-pound, suitcase-size unit, called Telecare, includes an electrocardiogram display and radio system that can transmit cardiac data to the hospital. Physicians waiting for the patient can relay advice and be better prepared to handle the case when it reaches the hospital.

Telecare results from NASA-developed electronics that measure vital signs in astronauts.

A hospital in Huntsville, Ala., is using space technology to help patients who have lost use of arms or legs. Using eye-operated switches, breath-controlled devices and pressure devices like Mrs. Thompson's, immobile persons can open and close doors and windows, regulate room temperature, change radio or television channels, dial a telephone, adjust a bed position, turn pages of a book or call a nurse.

NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., has made effective use of computers to enhance pictures of Mars, Venus, and other planets sent from spacecraft millions of miles from earth.

Similar techniques are now being used to analyze infrared photos of skin burns and to study blood vessel X-rays.

An X-ray system used to inspect welding in rockets has been adapted by NASA and Vanderbilt University to diagnose tumors and to examine cardiovascular flow. Combined with other techniques, the system is used to study children with congenital heart disorders. It helps doctors determine when patients should have surgery.

A special garment to provide a portable sterile environment for astronauts returning from the moon has been adapted by the National Cancer Institute to protect leukemia patients from infection when they are undergoing chemotherapy.

NASA has also developed a small radio transmitter pill which, when swallowed, can monitor deep body temperatures by means of an FM receiver and associated electronics. It is coated so it will not dissolve and it can remain in the digestive tract for up to a week.

A super-clean "white room" technique used in production and testing of satellites now lowers the risk of infection in surgery. Portable equipment removes dust and germs from operating rooms. Doctors and attendants wear helmets like those worn by astronauts and clothing that bacteria cannot penetrate.

The list of medical spinoffs from space includes a device to diagnose ear defects in children, a portable light indicator for blind persons, a sleep analyzer, and swift, almost painless dental drills made of pinpoint-size ball bearings developed for satellites.

To assure continued transfer of its space technology, NASA has established four biomedical application teams.

Dr. Sam Lee Pool, chief of the medical applications branch at NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, explained:

"These particular organizations assist NASA in providing specific responses to requests for biomedical information. They also visit universities, medical schools and centers and solicit from them requests for NASA technology. We discuss their problems and see if there might be a match between what we are doing and what they need to do."

African Bishops Write Ground Rules For New Breed Of Missionary

By PETER J. SHAW
VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Black Africa's young Roman Catholic churches are looking for a new breed of missionary willing to take orders from local hierarchies rather than give them.

"We want to make it absolutely clear to our older brothers and sisters that we still need missionary personnel and material help for our evangelization," Cardinal Maurice Otunga of Nairobi said at the close of the recent Fourth World Synod of Bishops.

A declaration on "coresponsible evangelization" issued by the 30 African bishops attending the Synod spelled out new ground rules for Catholic missionaries eager to tackle the 200 million Africans yet to hear about Jesus Christ.

"Missionaries coming from abroad will take into account the aspirations of the young churches for more autonomy and responsibility," the declaration said. "They will be available for and participate in the searchings of the young communities under the direction of the local hierarchy."

"Financial help coming from outside must be integrated into projects planned and to be worked out by the local churches instead of being decided upon unilaterally and handed over too mathematically."

The declaration echoed the Synod call by many African bishops for more local flexibility to adapt the faith to the particular customs of the faithful.

Pope Paul VI frowned on this in his address closing the Synod, saying "it would be dangerous to speak of diversified theologies according to continents and cultures. The content of the faith is either Catholic or it is not."

Cardinal Otunga did not consider that a rebuke.

"The Holy Father understands and appreciates our aspirations for self-reliance," he said. "I think he's saying these are good things but they must be launched with care. We can go ahead but we have to be cautious."

The declaration said there was "a growing questioning among missionaries coming to Africa from sister churches as to today's real significance and future of their work of evangelization on African soil."

It said "Christian life is insufficiently incarnated into African ways, customs and traditions. Very often it is live merely at the surface without any real link of continuity with the genuine values of traditional religions."

Every activity in the process of building up the African churches "must operate in constant reference to the life of our communities," the declaration said. "We must bring to our Catholic faith not only those cultural and artistic experiences which are part of our heritage—real, even though as yet modest, Africanization—but also a theology which enables us to tackle the challenges arising out of our historical background and the ongoing evolution of our society."

Theology, it said, "must be open to the aspirations of the people of Africa if it is to help Christianity to become incarnate in the life of the African peoples. To achieve this, the young churches of Africa must take over more and more responsibility for their own evangelization and total development. They must combine creativity with dynamic responsibility."

The bishops denounced "every gesture, every word, every writing likely or calculated to interfere with cooperation between the elder and younger churches" and said they hoped "this clear stand of ours" would rekindle missionary fervor.

They warned would-be-missionaries that local churches would be giving the orders and the road would have some bumps.

But "present difficulties where they do exist are passing ones," the declaration said. "Passing friction and occasional confrontation are part of human interrelationships and when frankly and sincerely faced in common lead to stronger and more mature work together."

"This is the case in Africa today," the declaration said. "We have to be thankful for it."

Pagan Rites In Chad 'Culture'

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — Persistent reports from travelers say that some people have been killed and many more tortured for refusing to participate in pagan initiation rites for Chad's 14-month-old "Cultural Revolution."

Chad embassy officials in Paris say the reports are "imagination." Diplomats in Chad, a half-desert, half-prairie country in north central Africa, call the reports "exaggerated" or say that "some have died but not in great numbers."

The latest charge came from the Evangelist Assembly in Paris, a Protestant group with missionaries in Chad, which said some 50 Christians "are known for sure to be dead. Some have been buried alive. One man was brought to our medical center with his legs cut to ribbons. Another was sewn up in a tom-tom and died after 15 days of immobility."

Various Protestant groups have asked French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to protest the killings to Chad President Ngarta Tombalbaye during the latter's visit to Paris Nov. 20.

Because those reported killed were mainly Protestant Christians, a group of Canadian evangelists in Toronto charged Tombalbaye was trying to stamp out Christianity.

But the Cultural Revolution and its initiation rite appear to be more pro-African than anti-Christian. Tombalbaye, himself a Protestant, launched his revolution in August, 1973, in an effort to turn the former French colony back to its African heritage and away from Western influence.

Names of people, streets and cities were Africanized. Men were ordered to participate in the yondo, a puberty rite from the Middle Ages reported to include flogging, burning with coal, scarring, sexual indignities, mock burials and drug-ging.

The two million Moslems in the north have not been forced to go through it, apparently because Islam is considered more African than Christianity. But the European-educated elite, including bankers, professors and Christian pastors, are taken by truck in groups of 150 into the bush for 45 days.

To Toronto evangelists, the ordeal may mean torture but to Africans it is their ancestral way of life.

"The rite is a baptism with a sacred character to form men psychologically and physically during a monastic period," a Chad embassy official said. "The initiated go into nature to lead a life of discipline. It is extremely severe."

"However, I never heard anybody died from it. One must guard against false, imaginative interpretations of the initiation rites."

One traveler who visited several Chad villages said those who resist have been punished with death or torture. He said Protestants objected because idols and fetishes displayed during the rites were against their religion.

On advice from priests, Roman Catholics have gone along with the rites and then gone back to their churches to confess, according to reports.

The magazine of the National Movement for the Cultural Revolution recently said yondo "has nothing against Islam or Christianity."

But Chadian political exiles in Paris have charged African pastors "are daily tortured and executed, buried alive." Former Chad cabinet minister Toura Gaba distributed pamphlets denouncing "the execution of Christians who refuse to submit to yondo, which has been proclaimed the state religion in the south."

Sources in Paris said 20 American missionaries have been expelled from Chad for advising local followers to resist the rite.

The Evangelist Assembly said the Baptist church "no longer exists officially, many medical centers, churches and schools are closed."

Bicentennial Plans See Grassroots Groundswell

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
UPI Senior Editor

A look at the Big Birthday Bungle, formally known as the American Revolution Bicentennial, shows a groundswell of grassroots activity that adds up to a prouder national celebration in spite of several false starts.

The Bicentennial, which was midwived by Congress in 1966, became official with the re-enactment of the Boston Tea Party in 1973 and was to have gotten into high gear in 1975 for the 1976 finale.

But lack of leadership, programming and money at the national level made it obvious by mid-1973 that if any celebrating were to be done, it would be on a do-it-yourself basis at the community level. The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration set up a program which to date has awarded 1,659 hamlets, towns, and cities the "Bicentennial Community" designation, permitting them to use official flags and insignia and share in funds distributed to the states from its $8 million annual budget.

Former Navy Secretary John Warner, head of the Bicentennial Administration, said the Bicentennial has proved to be "a means by which the people's faith in their ability to achieve things could be restored."

"A national Bicentennial Expo might have detracted and diverted attention from the thousands of local events that are now the heart of the celebration," he said on his return to Washington from opening an agricultural museum in (AIFROB) Ark., and a mining museum in Centennial, Wyo. "The interesting thing is that absence of historic linkage to the Revolution has proved no deterrent to the participation of most communities."

Local projects tend to fall into categories originally laid down for the Bicentennial—heritage, festival and horizons. These are most generally fulfilled by historical restorations, performing arts events, and civic improvements. A few annual events with no visible link to the Bicentennial, such as the Chilliipiad—Texas' chili championship—have won dubious recognition as commemorative events.

The Bicentennial could well involve more than half the nation's 200 million population. And almost no one will escape the commercial aspects of the celebration such as Betsy Ross ice cream, commemorative spoons, coins, and medals, and reproductions of Washington's sword and Hitchcock rockers. Americans are embarked on an unprecedented wingding that underscores the nation's unity in diversity. It is a series of sideshows without a main event, but like the Centennial patchwork quilt stitched by New York City quilters for display in the Federal Hall Memorial, the over-all effect is beautiful.

Some projects are relatively inexpensive. Four hundred volunteers in South Bend, Ind., aged nine to 79, painted the city's fire plugs to resemble Revolutionary War soldiers. In Desha County, Ark., volunteers decided to spruce up a World War II Japanese relocation camp cemetery.

Or they can cost a bundle—like the $700,000 Sacramento, Calif., will spend on a monument commemorating the Pony Express' first run to California's capital.

New York's Metropolitan Museum and the federal government will spend the most on individual projects. The museum is building an $11.9 million American Bicentennial Wing to house the world's most extensive collection of American decorative art. And Washington is getting a 45-acre Constitution Garden on the Mall.

The most spectacular event will be the sail-by of 100 square-rigged ships from all over the world in New York Harbor on July 4, 1976. There also will be an international "Bikecentennial" for cyclists who wish to follow a new Trans-America trail between Astoria, Ore., and Jamestown, Va.

Quincy, Mass., has taken on the practical project of putting central heating in the birthplaces of two presidents, John and John Quincy Adams. The Greek Orthodox Church of North America has purchased a historic house in St. Augustine, Fla., for a shrine honoring the arrival of the first Greeks on this continent in 1768. Granbury, Tex., Columbus, Ga., and Littleton, N.Y., will restore their old "opry" houses.

Opera is very much a part of the Bicentennial, with 32 major opera companies, 25 community companies, and 22 college workshops scheduling Bicentennial production with American themes for the 1975-76 season. In other musical tributes, Cleveland's Singing Angels have commissioned choral works for Bicentennial concerts in urban and rural areas, and Pittsburgh's Wind Symphony will give barge concerts in 76 U.S. ports.

Miss Lily Peter, beloved philanthropist of Marvell, Ark., is presenting five concerts a year through 1976 by organists following Bicentennial themes. More grandiose is the North Dakota Bicentennial Commission's international youth band festival for 100 concert and marching bands in July, 1976.

Re-enactments are a natural. Green Mountain Boys will again capture Fort Ticonderoga, N.Y., on May 10, 1975 and Gen. Richard Montgomery's marching route from Rhinebeck, N.Y., to Quebec will be followed by car. Wagon trains from 50 states will encamp at Valley Forge.

The Smithsonian Institution in Washington will open its largest component, the Air and Space Museum, on July 4, 1976, featuring recreated Wright and Lindbergh flights and Space Age rocket ships. Mount Vernon is getting a sound and light show. The National Zoo will try to mate its pandas in 1974 in hope of getting a Bicentennial cub.

A few projects have racial themes. The major black event will be an exhibition of 400 pictures portraying "The Black in American History" in Cleveland, Jackson (Miss.) State College is sponsoring a Phyllis Wheatley Poetry Festival. The Navajo nation will stage a year-round exposition of arts, dance and crafts at Window Rocks, Ariz., in 1976. The Stockbridge-Munsee Indians are building a museum and history library on their Wisconsin reservation, and the Creek National Council house in Oklmulgee, Okla., is recreating a pioneer Creek home.

An outstanding educational program will be a three-year exhibit at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry depicting 50-year segments of "American Inventive Genius." Philadelphia will host a Bicentennial Congress of World Unity for leading humanitarians.

Parks that will outlast the Bicentennial are popular projects. Boynton Beach, Fla., is building one complete with reproduction Liberty Bell, gazebo and fountains, and Oklahoma City is constructing a Bicentennial Plaza with performing arts center. The California Department of Parks has begun planting 100 "Liberty Tree" redwoods in Sacramento.

The business district of Rochelle, Ga., has had a whole Bicentennial facelift. Merchants converted the fronts of 30 shops to French architecture to honor Rochelle's ancestral city, La Rochelle, France. San Juan, P.R., is embarked on a major restoration of its Spanish Quarter, from the cathedral to city hall.

A Bicentennial footnote to Revolutionary War history is scheduled to be written in stone in Rome, N.Y., near Oriskany Battlefield where the Stars and Stripes were raised under fire for the first time in 1777. The city will construct a national Tomb of the Unknown Revolutionary Soldier, to be dedicated in 1977.

More Americans Pawn Jewelry

NEW YORK (UPI) — More Americans are pawning their jewelry to fight skyrocketing inflation, reports The National Enquirer in a nationwide survey.

A pawnbroker in Trenton, N.J., says "I haven't seen anything like it since the Depression." Another pawnbroker in Detroit reports the situation is so desperate that "workers are hocking the tools that they need to make a living."

The survey indicates that the pawnbroking business is up 25 to 100 per cent throughout the country in the past four to 12 months.

Cancer Victim Plans Opera

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Less than four weeks after undergoing cancer surgery, soprano Beverly Sills is preparing for another opera.

"I feel great," she said Tuesday between acts of a dress rehearsal of "the Daughters of the Regiment." "I've lost 40 pounds."

She admitted with a chuckle that she had lost 35 pounds by dieting before the operation and said, "I did it the hard way. If I'd only known."

Time Hasn't Eased Bitterness Felt By Many Vets

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Timothy Day masks his frustration behind a face half-paralyzed by an enemy bullet that tore into his cheekbone and came out behind his ear.

The 26-year-old former Marine corporal was wounded three times in Vietnam before he was 20.

He'd kept his disillusionment hidden for years, he says, but now it pours out bitterly.

"Of those who fought in Vietnam, pick anyone's death," Day challenges. "I wonder how many Americans know why that man died."

"... Why do people hate us so bad for fighting in that war?"

Day and two other disabled Vietnam veterans interviewed with him believe they have been put on the back shelf of the nation's conscience. So, apparently, do many others among the 338,851 servicemen listed by the Veterans Administration as disabled during the Vietnam era.

"They feel like they are rejected by their own peers," says Dr. Roger C. Floren, chief of the mental hygiene clinic at the VA hospital here. "They come back to their home towns and find the kids they went to school with have jobs and are married and don't want them around. They are criticized for going to war ... They feel that Vietnam, being an unpopular war, no one wants to listen to them."

Day, 5 feet 11, has the rugged features of actor Charles Bronson.

"We were caught in an American bad dream, and America wants to forget it happened," he says.

"But we don't want people to forget," insists Chester Stanger, 25, a burly former Marine sergeant whose left leg was blown off when he stepped on a North Vietnam mine.

Former Army Spec. 4 Maury Rahm, 27, bearded and with long brown hair, sat quietly in a wheel chair, occasionally moving only his left arm. His other limbs are paralyzed, the result of a sniper's bullet that smashed into his skull.

"But it was worth it to me to fight there," Rahm said slowly. "My only regret is the way we pulled out of that war. We lost it. There was no peace with honor."

Day and Stanger, and to a lesser extent Rahm, resent the public attention given to the prisoners of war when they returned last year from Hanoi.

"The people cared more about the POWs who were shot down than about any of the thousands of other Vietnam veterans," says Stanger. "They threw big parties for the POWs, offered them jobs, gave them cars."

"For the dead and wounded they didn't do a thing," adds Day.

Thousands of other veterans share this anger toward the POW, says Dr. Peter Bourne, teacher of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, a White House consultant on drug abuse, a man who spent a year in Vietnam during the war and since then has published papers on the problems of the returning combat veteran.

"I not only understand but share their bitterness because, having been there myself, the idea that a POW contributed that much more really got to me ... The disabled veteran doesn't necessarily want to be treated as a hero. He just wants recognition for the horrendous experience he has been through, and some consideration when he comes back for a job. There comes a resentment for having been wounded in a war this country didn't care about."

American participation in the Vietnam ground war ended two years ago. Today nearly half of the 338,851 Vietnam-era veterans with service-connected injuries have a disability rating of 10 per cent or more. Twenty-five thousand are rated 100 per cent disabled.

On an average day there are 9,450 disabled Vietnam vets in the nation's 172 VA hospitals, says a spokesman for the VA. And 5,800 of them are either psychotic or undergoing psychiatric treatment.

Personality disorders relating to behavior and to relationships with others are higher among Vietnam veterans than they were among the veterans of World War II and Korea, says Dr. Gordon Braatz, clinical psychologist at the VA hospital in Minneapolis.

Day and Rahm aren't optimistic about the future. They say they take each day as it comes. Each has two children, as does Stanger.

"My wife worries a lot about the bills," says Day. "I don't. If I want to get drunk instead of paying the electric bill, I'll get drunk. I live for myself. But still my family is my future."

Rahm, who said he went to Vietnam believing he was fighting for a cause, is severely limited by his disability — his paralyzed legs and right arm. He sleeps late and "musters for lunch. I don't like to drink, so at night I work in a shop in my garage. I spend most of my time there working on stereos and tape players. I flunked out in the second semester at electronics school, but I think I'll go back."

Stanger has "no regrets. I love everything I did. The past was beautiful. Life is too perfect for people to be hateful and headstrong. I got that attitude the day I was hit. I don't have to prove anything to anybody, now that I've proved it to myself."

Day recently had a fifth operation to clear a stubborn infection in his skull where the enemy slug penetrated. "They've taken out everything I had to hear with," he said, gently adjusting the black leather patch he occasionally wears over his left ear.

He receives a $188 monthly disability check and $110 a week as a materials handler for a publishing company.

"It was the only place in town that would hire me, because I'm deaf in one ear."

A Veterans Administration spokesman in Washington said the unemployment rate among all seven million veterans of the Vietnam era "is lower than for the nonveteran population."

He said unemployment statistics are not available for the disabled veteran.

Stanger, a bearded, soft-spoken 6-footer, who weighs 220 pounds, wears an artificial leg and is a clerk-typist at the Des Moines VA Hospital. He had wanted to be a police officer.

He receives a $334 disability check each month. It once was $200 higher, but a review board decided that his disability wasn't as great as originally determined.

Disability pensions now range from $32 to $1,400 monthly. They would go up 15 to 18 per cent in 1975 if President Ford signs a bill approved by Congress to increase the VA budget from the present $13.7 billion annually to $14.1 billion next year. Ford has said he'll veto the bill as inflationary.

Rahm drives his specially equipped car to the nearby VA hospital several times a week for physical therapy. He gets a $1,297 disability check monthly and lives with his family in a comfortable $40,500 ranch house. The VA gave him $12,500 to help equip the house for his special needs.

The car has changed Rahm's life. "The first three years at. after I was wounded, I didn't have a car. Guys used to drive me around. If nobody was able to, I had to stay where I was for it." Day thought about his return from Vietnam. "It's sad to come back to a country that didn't believe in your fighting for it." Rahm: "Some World War II people don't like our war." Day: "What makes their war better than ours?"

Mood Of America: There's Trouble In River City

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
MASON CITY, Iowa (UPI) — There's trouble right here in River City. It isn't just Watergate, which is still on a lot of people's minds, but about how they're tearing down a local train depot.

In neighboring South Dakota, the fencepost talk about politics often turns to the early frost that killed almost everything that managed to survive the summer drought, especially the corn and soybean crops.

In the vast, lonely stretches of the upper Middle West, scores of towns have lost passenger trains that once were their main link with the world beyond. It is more a symbolic loss than anything else, but a loss nevertheless.

In Rochester, Minn., home of the Mayo Clinic, some entrepreneurs banded together several years ago to convert the Chicago & North Western depot into a restaurant, where a couple can dine in one of several passenger coaches still on the tracks and dance alongside an old steam locomotive.

A coast-to-coast vacation left this reporter with an impression many Americans this year are concerned mostly with the ordinary stuff of life—weather, crops, weddings, deaths, what's different in town.

This seemed true in suburban Chicago and San Diego, Tucson, Ariz., and Hubert Humphrey's little hometown of Doland, S.D. And yet, never far from the surface, there was a hardness of opinion about Watergate and the right or wrong of Richard M. Nixon and his pardon by President Ford. No matter where they stand, the people are unequivocal and vocal in their opinions.

In Pierre, S.D., a middle-aged woman emerged from First Methodist Church on a sunny Sunday noon and made a disparaging remark about Nixon to a friend. "What DID he do?" the other woman asked. When the first didn't have a quick reply, she repeated, "What DID he do?"

One evening in Prairie Village, Kan., an upper-middle class suburb of Kansas City, a barechested resident bit into a prime steak he had just forked off the charcoal grill on his patio.

Tourists Learn Paradores Of Spain A Treat

By PETER UEBERSAX
MADRID (UPI) — estimated 30 million tourists visiting Spain this year profited from one of the nation's great travel bargains — the government-run chain of three-and four-star paradores (hotels).

The paradores, many of them converted castles or palaces, offer comfortable and sometimes unusual accommodation at reasonable prices. A room or suite with bath averages 700 pesetas ($12) a night for two, including breakfast. You can buy a four-course lunch or dinner, choosing among 20 dishes including regional specialties, for 250 pesetas ($4.25).

Spain's 88 paradores are the nation's biggest hotel chain in number of hotels, even though their combined annual turnover of two billion pesetas ($35 million) amounts only to one per cent of the total business of the catering industry.

They are being built at the rate of half a dozen every two years to open up new regions to tourism and to set standards of comfort and service for the new resorts that usually develop around them.

Some are converted medieval palaces and castles, others abandoned monasteries and still others are strikingly modern buildings.

The favorite of former U.S. Ambassador Robert C. Hill, an avid parador fan, is the 14th Century castle of Oropesa overlooking a medieval village and the Castilian plains from the top of a cliff.

The writer prefers the parador of Nerja in a little known part of the Costa del Sol—bungalow-type buildings in a tropical garden grouped around an olympic-size swimming pool, with a lift taking bathers down to a sand beach and crystal clear waters 90 feet below.

The parador in Cuenca is a converted 12th Century castle with medieval decor and furniture. The government hotel at Bayona, on a peninsula in the ocean, is surrounded by walls dating from Julius Caesar's time. The famous Moorish castle and gardens of Granada's Alhambra would not be complete without the parador which is located in a rose-covered convent built in 1495.

The paradores have helped to turn modern Spain into Europe's most popular tourist playground. But the idea behind them dates back to the 1920s when only the rich, eccentric or restless members of the "lost generation" ventured into Spain.

The first parador—it still exists—was opened in 1928 in the Sierra de Gredos range near Madrid, perched 5,500 feet up a pine covered mountain-side.

"Other followed," said Francisco Gutierrez de Luna, a Tourism Ministry official in charge of running the chain. "It is a success story that has survived the monarchy, the Primo de Rivera dictatorship, the republic, the civil war and our present regime. The chain will keep expanding, because it is doing a useful job."

With most of Spain's regions now opened up to tourism, one of the main functions of paradores is to keep resort areas going the year round. About 80 per cent of tourism is concentrated on the summer months, but the nearly one million employees of the tourist industry must find work for more than just a few months.

"We even bought and operate our own snowplows to keep paradores going throughout the year," Gutierrez de Luna said. He readily admitted that being pioneers is sometimes a costly business.

"Some paradores are running at a loss, even though average occupancy is 75 per cent," he said. "Over-all, we are now in the black, especially if you count the money which it would cost the government to maintain some national monuments now serving as paradores."

Students completing the first cycle are: Mary E. Bell, Evone D. Bond, Addie M. Bridgett, Evon C. Outlaw and William L. Webb, all of Windsor; William O. Daniels, Gloristeen Hardy, Effie T. Hawkins, and Mildred A. Jenkins, all of Williamston, Irene Brown, Parmele, and Mary A. Brown, Bethel.

Dr. E. M. Hunt, President of Martin Tech, was guest speaker and also presented each enrollee with a certificate denoting completion of the H.R.D. program.

Immediately after the graduation exercise, a graduation luncheon was held at the Town and Country Restaurant in Williamston.

Ratifying Of Constitution Wasn't Easy

By Dr. H. G. JONES
Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Exactly 185 years ago North Carolina ratified the Constitution of the United States. With that action we became citizens of the United States of America. But the road to ratification was not easy.

Although North Carolina's delegates to the constitutional convention of 1787, meeting in Philadelphia, had voted for the final document, these men represented the upper class eastern planters and businessmen rather than the common North Carolinian. Consequently, when the voters went to the polls in 1788 to elect delegates to the Hillsborough convention to consider ratification of the federal constitution, the results were more representative . . . popular view.

Led by men like Thomas Person, Joseph McDowell, William Lenoir, and Willie Jones, the anti-Federalist candidates won a heavy majority of the convention seats. Though the crushing defeat of the Federalists—men like Allen Jones, William Hooper, and William Blount—dictated the final decision of the convention, the supporters of the Constitution succeeded in obtaining a lengthy discussion of the document.

The fears of the anti-Federalists centered around the powers of the proposed central government—powers that they felt "would sward the states and menace individual liberty," and that the new government, with its "monarchical tendencies" might be controlled by the conservative eastern interests to the detriment of the common people. For instance, they were suspicious of provisions for reelection of the president, a strong judiciary, and congressional control over elections, taxation, and commerce.

These fears resulted in neither outright rejection nor ratification. Instead, the Hillsborough convention voted 184 to 84 to propose that a declaration of rights be added to the Constitution and that there be held a second federal convention "previous to the ratification of the Constitution" by North Carolina.

Although no second federal convention was held, Massachusetts and several other states which ratified the Constitution proposed a set of amendments, and by the fall of 1789 Congress had submitted 12 of them to the states. There appeared a good chance that most or all of them would be approved. Furthermore, only North Carolina and Rhode Island were outside the union, and many North Carolinians objected to being associated with Rhode Island, a colony somewhat noted for radicalism and paper money.

Among the other reasons for a change in the views of many voters in 1789 were the conciliatory attitudes of the federal officials, including George Washington who was already President of the United States, and the improved economy in the country. There was also concern for the defense of North Carolina's western lands reaching to the Mississippi River.

This mellowing of opposition to ratification led to an overwhelmingly Federalist delegation at the convention of 1789 which met in Convention Hall in Fayetteville. Samuel Johnston was again president of the convention, and the Federalists were led by their best talent—William R. Davie, Hugh Williamson, John Gray Blount, John Sevier, and others.

Anti-Federalists attempted to require further amendments prior to North Carolina's ratification, but on Nov. 21, 1789, the members voted 194 to 77 to ratify the "Constitution and form of government" of the United States. North Carolina became the 12th state to join the union.

The site of Convention Hall is now occupied by the Market House, built in 1836. Thus it was on this spot—but not in the present building—that North Carolina became the 12th of the United States of America.
