Democratic Plans Being Wrapped Up

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

House Democrats, in control by the biggest margin in a decade, are putting the finishing touches on their economic and organizational plans for the new Congress that convenes Tuesday.

A special Democratic task force on economic and energy problems is to make its official recommendations today.

President Ford is scheduled to announce his economic program in the State of the Union address at 1 p.m. EST Wednesday. The President's plans reportedly include a tax cut of undetermined scope and higher tariffs on imported oil.

The House Democrats' proposals are expected to include tax reductions of unknown size for low and moderate income persons, moves to force interest rates down, allocate credit, provide more public service jobs for the unemployed and stimulate the housing industry.

To complete the organizational work for the new Congress, the Democratic caucus returns to work today to consider, among other things, a proposal to create a special committee to investigate the Central Intelligence Agency.

Three congressional committees already have announced inquiries into allegations that the covert agency violated its charter by engaging in domestic spying. A special commission headed by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller is making an investigation for the executive branch.

The caucus also is scheduled to vote on a proposal to abolish the House Internal Security Committee, formerly the Committee on Un-American Activities, by transferring its jurisdiction to the Judiciary Committee. A similar proposal lost in the closing weeks of the last Congress and, regardless of the caucus decision, the full House, including Republicans, will have the final word on this issue.

Other resolutions call for further opening up of legislative proceedings to the news media and public, continuing the trend of changes voted at the December caucus.

After disposing of rules changes, the caucus is scheduled to recess until Thursday, when it could erupt into stiff fights over confirmation of committee chairmen. Opposition to some chairmen has surfaced, especially among the 75 new Democratic members.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield was scheduled to present his personal economic

Bombers Hit Big N. Viet Convoy

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) —

South Vietnamese bombers flying 100 missions today wrecked a 400-truck North Vietnamese convoy carrying troops and supplies for an offensive against Kontum in the central highlands, 2nd Corps headquarters said.

It was one of the biggest South Vietnamese air campaigns of the war.

The 2nd Corps command said more than 200 Soviet-built Molotov trucks were destroyed and 170 North Vietnamese troops were killed.

The command said South Vietnamese bombers hammered the convoy for more than six hours and set afire scores of trucks carrying fuel, antiaircraft guns and troops of a North Vietnamese division that planned "to open big attacks against military region 2 (the central highlands) with the main target Kontum," 260 miles north of Saigon.

Spokesmen said the convoy was moving toward Kontum and was attacked about six miles to the northwest of the city. They said the convoy had come through a North Vietnamese road network in Laos.

Kontum, 25 miles east of Lao-tian and Cambodian borders, was a main target in the 1968 Tet offensive and again in the 1972 Easter offensive, and although North Vietnamese troops entered the city they never succeeded in capturing it.

There was no immediate corroboration of the 2nd Corps headquarters claim, which presumably was based on pilots reports. In the past, pilots have at times made exaggerated or duplicating claims.

At Least 45 Dead In Wintry Storm

By The Associated Press
Severe storms raged through the Midwest and Southeast over the weekend, killing at least 45 persons. Rain and snow were expected to continue disrupting widespread parts of the nation today.

The Midwest blizzard—described by a National Weather Service spokesman in Minneapolis as the worst in 35 years—whipped wind to 90 miles per hour and left at least 44 persons dead between Friday night and today. Another person died in a Florida tornado.

"The storm was as large as any hurricane," the Weather Service spokesman said. It downed power lines, stranded motorists and disrupted air traffic. Michigan officials estimated damage at $1 million in that state alone.

By today, storm related deaths had climbed to 11 in Nebraska, where 16 inches of snow fell, eight dead in Iowa, nine in Minnesota, four in North Dakota and two in Michigan, eight dead in South Dakota and one each in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Six members of a family from the northeastern South Dakota community of Summit were found dead in their home late Sunday, apparently the victims of asphyxiation, authorities said. Three other members of the family were in serious condition this morning at St. Bernard's Hospital in Milbank, hospital spokesmen said.

Frigid arctic blasts continued over the upper Midwest, keeping most of the area below zero today, but skies were generally clear.

Winds averaging nearly 60 miles per hour whirled through the central Rockies. Rain, freezing rain and snow slammed the Pacific Northwest. Travelers advisories for winds and high wind warnings were posted for Southern California mountains and deserts, and for Colorado and Wyoming.

Rain continued over much of the middle and lower Atlantic region, with Sumter, S.C., reporting an inch of rain.

EUTHANASIA FOR PET

My dog is 12 years old and is getting blind and deaf and having coughing spells that I know cause her pain. I feel I should end her suffering, but I'm new in town and don't know where to go to have her put to sleep. Mrs. E. E.

Either veterinary clinic in Greenville would help, as will the Greenville Animal Shelter.

Dr. J. C. Bateman said the Bateman Clinic would charge $5 for an averaged-sized adult dog, if the body is taken back home, $6 if the body is left at the clinic. The receptionist at the Barwick-Lowery Clinic said the charge is $6 for any dog, and the body is disposed of by the Clinic. Both clinics use an injected overdose of phenobarbital, which causes the animal to go to sleep quietly.

The Animal Shelter charges $3 and will dispose of the body for you. You should take the animal there and speak to the Animal Control Officer between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m. An injection which causes paralysis and death is used here.

Cut Prime Rate To New Level

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth biggest commercial banker, today became the first major bank in nine months to set its prime rate below the 10 per cent level.

The bank cut the rate it charges on loans to its most credit-worthy commercial borrowers by ½ point to 9½ per cent, effective immediately. It was the first time a major bank had let the key rate fall below the double-digit level since last April 11.

Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, third largest in the nation, trimmed its prime rate ¼ point to 10 per cent.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A

"sea of humanity," frustrated by decades of losing Steeler football, rocked downtown Pittsburgh in a long-awaited victory celebration which was marred by a few raucous confrontations.

The outbreaks left 224 persons arrested and 35 persons — including nine policemen — with injuries, according to Police Superintendent Robert W. Colville.

A few store windows in the Golden Triangle district were broken, but Colville was unable to make an immediate assessment of property damage.

For most of the celebrants, Sunday night was a time for dancing in the narrow streets to the chants "We're No. 1" and "Dee-fense, dee-fense."

Car horns, bells and whistles resounded in the canyon of office buildings as the fans braved swirling snow and subfreezing temperatures to vent their joy over the Steelers' 16-6 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl IX.

City fathers had asked fans to hold up their celebrating until this afternoon, when a motorcade will mark the team's return from New Orleans with the first National Football League title in its 42-year history.

But less than an hour after the game-ending gun sounded in New Orleans, police reported that a "sea of humanity" choked traffic at Sixth Street and Liberty Avenue, in the heart of the downtown district. The throng at that one area was estimated at 10,000 or more.

Police, equipped with helmets and nightsticks and using police dogs, tried unsuccessfully to disperse the crowd which stalled automobiles and buses for blocks. Several young fans climbed atop one city bus. A few others hurled cans, bottles, snowballs and firecrackers.

A police lieutenant was struck in the head and knocked down by one thrown bottle and reserve forces were called in, Colville said. Police began making arrests and the crowd was broken up.

Most of those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct or intoxication. Colville said. Patrolman J. C. Schaff, at the main downtown precinct, added that one person was charged with resisting arrest, another with a drug violation and two others with aggravated assault.

Fatal Wreck

AYDEN—Gary Michael Manning, 18, of 107 West College St., Ayden was killed yesterday when the car he was driving collided with another vehicle two-tenths of a mile North of here on rural paved road 1149.

Highway Patrolman M. B. Johnson said the Manning car, headed South, went out of control in a curve, skidded sideways and collided with a North-bound car driven by Annie Kilpatrick Harris of 1813A West Third St., Greenville, in the North-bound lane.

Mrs. Harris was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital for injuries she received in the crash.

Trooper Johnson, who said the Manning car was a total loss, estimated damage to the Harris vehicle at $1,000.

Transco Reduces Natural Gas Cutback

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina will have roughly 60 per cent of the natural gas it needs this winter, rather than only 55 per cent as earlier predicted, the governor's office learned Sunday.

A spokesman for Gov. Jim Holshouser said Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Co. (Transco) telephoned Holshouser Sunday and told him the state's cutback in natural gas has been reduced by 10 per cent.

Transco announced Dec. 27 that it will reduce North Carolina's gas supply by 6.75 billion cubic feet. The cutback is now expected to be about 6 billion cubic feet.

The governor's spokesman said Holshouser wasn't told why the extra gas became available to North Carolina. Transco is the only company supplying gas to North Carolina.

Marvin Wooten, chairman of the state Utilities Commission, said Transco eased its cutback decision after taking into consideration the winter will be warmer than originally anticipated.

Wooten said he didn't understand "why they didn't know this last week or even last month. It's just another example of the inaccuracies of their projections. It is also curious that it comes on the heels of the FPC (Federal Power Commission) calling a new hearing."

The FPC investigation into why natural gas supplies were so drastically cut was initiated after North Carolina officials complained and asked for the investigation.

The governor's spokesman said Holshouser was pleased that the cutback was reduced, but it wouldn't change the state's desire for an investigation or stop plans to ask the federal courts to divert gas from other areas to North Carolina.

State officials have predicted that if the cutback were to have been as severe as Transco first announced, some 46,000 North Carolinians would have been put out of work because of factories being shut down. State officials haven't estimated what the effect of the lessened cutback will be, but Holshouser said the state still isn't getting nearly enough gas.

To help cope with the shortage, the Utilities Commission has ordered North Carolina's three gas distributors to refuse new gas customers until April 15, the end of the winter heating season.

Last year, North Carolina's gas supply was cut 15 per cent, but conservation measures eased the impact considerably.

Billion-Dollar Bonanza For Unemployed Tar Heels

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive female divorcee who recently retired after a long, distinguished career as a university English professor.
Now that I have a great deal of free time, I would like to find suitable male companionship.
Although I receive numerous offers (the loggers in this town are practically beating my door down), I don't know how to meet men who could appreciate my best qualities, such as the art of conversation.
There must be some other retired women in small towns with similar problems. Have you any suggestions?
IDLE BUT ANXIOUS IN IDAHO

DEAR ANXIOUS: Enroll in an adult education class and do a lot of listening. Conversation could be considered "dessert," and since man cannot live on dessert alone, are you prepared to provide some meat and potatoes?

DEAR ABBY: I just had to write to defend that woman who writes notes to her husband to remind him of things. I've been doing it for years.
First of all, that letter couldn't have been written by my husband because he doesn't believe in communication, and note-writing is a form of communication.
This wooden Indian I'm married to might send up smoke signals if he could find his lighter, but on the other hand, fires within the city limits of Dallas are frowned upon.
Anyway, I say three cheers for that note-writing wife. I sure wish my husband would write me a note once in a while. It would confirm the fact that he's still breathing.
IGNORED IN DALLAS

DEAR IGNORED: Your problem is far more serious than you realize. The ultimate in humiliation, women confide, is not in being belittled, berated, or even beaten. It's being ignored!

DEAR ABBY: I recently visited a friend in his New York apartment. We hadn't seen each other for 15 years. While he was in the kitchen mixing up drinks, I noticed that he had a splendid library. Then I noticed that he had a few books that I also owned.
I don't know what made me do it, but I took those books down from the shelf and turned to the fly leaves, and sure enough, my name was there!
He had borrowed those books from me years ago, and neglected to return them.
I put them back before he returned, and said nothing. Since then my irritation has grown.
Should I now tell him that I want my books back?
IRKED IN INDIANA

DEAR IRKED: Certainly. No wonder your friend has such a "splendid library." He's a "collector."

DEAR ABBY: This is to encourage the 52-year-old woman whose husband wants a divorce. Let him have it, then sharpen up some of your old skills and get out on your own.
I was 47 when my husband entered his second childhood. He wanted a divorce to marry a younger woman. I fought and wept and begged! I thought my life was over. I finally came to my senses and let him go. At age 48, I went to work as a secretary, married my boss two years later, and couldn't be happier.
A 52-year-old woman can do anything a younger woman can do except maybe have a baby. And what 52-year-old woman in her right mind would want that?

Considers Banning N.C. Pay Toilets

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Rep. Fred Hutchins Jr., R-Forsyth, says he is thinking about introducing legislation to ban pay toilets in North Carolina.
Hutchins' disclosure came over the weekend in "Legislative Preview 1975," on WXII-TV.
"I don't know if people have the same trouble I have...you know when you get into a bathroom and need a dime and you haven't got a dime...the trouble you're facing," Hutchins said.
"They've recently outlawed pay bathrooms in the State of Florida, and I hope North Carolina will do the same," he added.
Hutchins also said he would fight passage of the Equal Rights Amendment for women with every bone in his body.

Dr. Best Stays On Commission

Gov. Holshouser has appointed a 20-member Human Relations Commission, with two holdover members, one of whom is Greenville physician Dr. Andrew A. Best.
Members of the Commission serve at the pleasure of the Governor, rather than terms of fixed duration.
Dr. Best, a general practitioner here since 1954, has served for the past several years as chairman of the Eastern Regional for the Human Relations Commission. He is a former member of the UNC Board of Governors and is now a member of the Board of Trustees of East Carolina University.

Investigate Holdup Case

A Sunday night armed robbery at the Kwik-Pik Market in the Eastern Pines section is under investigation by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.
According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, the store's night operator told officers a young man carrying a hand gun and wearing a ski mask over his face entered the market and demanded that the money from the cash register be placed in a bag.
The night clerk reported that he put the $56 in cash from the register into a bag and the young man grabbed the bag and fled from the store.
Sheriff Tyson, who noted that the clerk was not injured in the robbery, said that the incident took place at 8:16 p.m.

By DAVID R. NELSEN

RALEIGH (AP)—Thanks to the ever-worsening employment problem, state and local governments have been given $1 billion of federal money to play with.
The billion-dollar bonanza is to provide thousands of jobs for unemployed persons. The nation's staggering and stumbling economy has put so many people out of work that Congress decided to give state and local governments money to create jobs.
Those getting first priority are supposed to be out-of-work persons who aren't qualified for unemployment compensation or other existing programs.
The new employment scheme also call for salaries averaging about $7,500 a year with a maximum of $10,000. Of course, state or local officials may add to the salaries, but that appears unlikely.
It is expected that the first persons hired under the program in North Carolina will report to work later this week. And, as spending of the $1 billion begins, there is a federal hint of another $4.5 billion to come.
While the emergency employment program partially fills a pressing need, it is ripe for abuse.
Congress specified that the funds must not be used to fill vacancies in state or local government for which local funds had been appropriated. After all, the program was designed to provide new jobs, not lessen local government's financial burden.
But, federal officials freely admit policing is virtually impossible. So, state or local officials who want to cheat a little may well do so—with impunity.
A case in point is the North Carolina Department of Transportation. Troy Doby, the transportation secretary appointed by GOP Gov. Jim Holshouser, made a lot of political hay recently when he bragged about how much DOT is saving by not filling vacancies.
Doby's department bally-hooed the "job freeze" and said it will save the state $4.5 million or more a year as 529 vacancies were left unfilled. Now, DOT officials say, that figure is even higher.
Meanwhile, Doby and his gang requested some $3.6 million of the federal handout to hire between 300 and 400 persons. These would mostly be laborers at the $7,000 salary level, department spokesman said.
There are several aspects of Doby's pronouncements, claims and requests that deserve further consideration.
First, North Carolina's unemployment rate is soaring—fitting 6.6 per cent in November. Doby's job freeze, commendable as it sounds, contributes to the raging joblessness.
Also, his freeze isn't all it's cracked up to be. A department spokesman said the program has been in effect since last February, while Doby made it sound brand new.
Further, the freeze has a built-in nine-month delay. H.Y. Kinard, Doby's assistant for management, said a job is "frozen" only after being vacant for nine months. Then, he said, it cannot be filled without high-level approval.
One recent change in the program, according to Kinard, is that standards for "unfreezing" a position have become stricter, thanks to the worsening economy.
Generally, the 529 frozen jobs were paying salaries in the $9,000 to $10,000 range, and none were "executive" positions, Kinard said. But, because of North Carolina's unemployment and faltering economy problems, Doby wants to hire 300-

Has Answers On Housing

Can a house be designed to adjust to family needs? What is retirement housing? Just how does a retirement home differ from good housing for young people? Do special safety features really make the house look different? Does a home built with safety in mind necessarily cost a lot of money?
These questions will be answered in a program entitled "The House That Reason Built." The slide presentation will stress desirable housing features and show how they can be incorporated when building or remodeling according to Mrs. Sue B. May, home economics extension agent.
The program will be presented in the Agricultural Extension Building Tuesday at 10 a.m. and repeated at 7:30 p.m. All interested persons are invited to attend either session.
At the evening meeting, in addition to the program on housing, tips on new ideas and sewing will be discussed by Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, associate home economics extension agent. Miss Addie R. Gore, home economics extension agent, will discuss ways of making good use of leftovers.

Cars Collided Saturday Night

Wayland Randolph Radford of 1411 Broad St. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:47 p.m. mishap Saturday on Memorial Drive, 25 feet North of the Dexter Street intersection.
Police reported the Radford car collided with a vehicle driven by Donnie Lee McLawhorn of Route 6, Greenville, resulting in an estimated $400 damage to the Radford car and $600 damage to the McLawhorn auto.

400 persons at salaries about $7,000 each.
What it boils down to is this: Doby leaves 529 people out of work at $10,000 salaries and "saves" the state $4.5 million then wants to hire maybe 300 persons at $7,000 salaries for a cost of $3.6 million. The difference is that the $3.6 million is federal funds, too often regarded as Monopoly money by state and local officials.
It also must be remembered that the $4.5 million Doby is "saving" Tar Heel taxpayers

Sanford Building N.C. 'Base'

It is obvious that former governor Terry Sanford's plans for making a serious race to obtain the Democratic nomination for president are moving along.

Sanford, now president of Duke University, has announced plans for taking a leave of absence on Jan. 1. While Sanford still holds back on making a formal announcement he said that "if I did get into the race and decide 1976 prospects were good . . . then I would obviously spend the time in hard campaigning."

If he won the nomination, he would take another leave of absence and if he were elected president, then Sanford says he would resign as president of Duke University.

With the 1978 presidential elections approaching, Sanford has a lot to do in order to become the Democratic nominee. He has to build his political base in his home state as rapidly as possible. It cannot be forgotten, for instance, that Gov. Wallace defeated Sanford in the North Carolina presidential primary.

Sanford is already making base building efforts. Just recently, for instance, he announced that he would favor repeal of the food sales tax in North Carolina, if any tax reductions are possible. The tax was imposed during Sanford's term as governor and perhaps was the most unpopular thing he initiated. We shudder to think what condition the North Carolina schools would be in today if the additional revenue brought about by the food tax hadn't been forthcoming, but it was unpopular nevertheless.

At any rate Terry Sanford is laying the groundwork for a presidential race and he certainly should not be counted out at this stage. He has a good record of public service and he is respected within the national Democratic Party. He has broad experience as an administrator through his service as governor.

Sanford may not be the front runner for the presidential nomination at present, but on the other hand the race for the Democratic nomination is wide open. There is no real top contender at present. Many things can happen before the party conventions nominate the presidential candidates, but expect to see a building campaign for Terry Sanford.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Monitors Of Medicaid

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—A private corporation founded by physicians is attaining growing importance in monitoring spending of state and federal dollars for health care.

The little-known North Carolina Peer Review Foundation has just been awarded a contract of $1.5 million to review Medicaid patients in an effort to cut the length of time spent in hospital by those patients.

This puts in the neighborhood of $2 million annually the monitoring contracts held by the Peer Review Foundation—an organization set up and operated by physicians.

In this, as some state officials fear, setting the fox to guard the hen house? Why, in short, should doctors be paid to review the length of time spent in hospitals by Medicaid patients when both the hospital and the patient's doctor are already being paid?

For one thing, says David T. Flaherty, secretary of Human Resources, it is a requirement of federal law that each Medicaid case be reviewed, and national statistics show that the average period of time spent in hospitals by Medicaid patients in North Carolina is longer than that spent elsewhere in the nation.

Cut Threatened
The federal program threatened to cut by one-third the Medicaid dollars to North Carolina unless a review procedure were implemented.

The investment of $1.5 million in the contract with the Peer Review Foundation will avoid that penalty, and will also cut the annual outlay for Medicaid patients by somewhere between $4 and $8 million per year—by reducing the stay in hospitals, Flaherty said.

Some measures to cut back the annual outlay for Medicaid, he said, is critical. Some 325,000 North Carolinians are served by the program each year. Recipients must qualify as indigents in the program administered through county social services offices. Money is made up 70 per cent of federal funds.

Total Medicaid expenditures for fiscal 1973-74 were $127.3 million; for 1974-75 they jumped to $182 million; and projections for 1975-76 are $211 million; and for 1976-77 they are $241 million.

Health officials are alarmed at that dramatic increase and fear strong impact on both state and county budgets unless halted.

Enter the Peer Review Foundation to provide a process to certify need for admission and length of stay, a review of continuing care, and a record-keeping system under the $1.5 million contract just completed with the state.

Still, critics contend that the doctors and the hospitals caused the abuses and should be able to correct them without spending state dollars. The review should be automatic in order for doctors and hospitals to continue receiving Medicaid money, some suggest.

Why Pay Doctors?
Additionally, some officials wonder why state employees could not perform the review work.

"I don't know of a layman who can judge a physician's performance," responded Dan Mainer, executive director of the Peer Review Foundation.

"The only person qualified to review a physician's performance and work is another physician," Mainer said. That was the reason for organizing the foundation in February, 1973.

Mainer said other safeguards are built into the system, including a provision that no physician can review a patient under his own care, and no physician can perform consulting services in a facility in which he may own a financial interest.

When fully staffed later this year, the foundation will have some 50 full-time employees, including nurses, social workers, and clerical help.

Physicians are hired on a consulting basis, and the contract calls for 4,000 hours of "physician advisor" time at a cost of $156,000; that comes to $39 per hour. A medical director working half time on the review job is budgeted at $25,000.

Mainer explained that in the beginning of federal health aid the review work was done by volunteer medical society committees across the state, but physicians found they could no longer give the time away from their schedules required by the growing complexity of programs.

The INSIDE REPORT

'Cassandra' William Simon

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—Having lost his tenacious struggle to limit the gargantuan budget deficit, Treasury Secretary William Simon has no intention of resigning but instead plans to carry his fight semi-publicly into the halls of Congress—threatening President Ford with his first great personality-policy crisis.

That may begin with Simon testifying behind closed doors to the Senate Finance Committee within two weeks. His testimony there would criticize neither President Ford nor his new economic policy but would paint a nightmare picture of its possible results:

A heavy drain on capital markets, a new rise in interest rates, failing corporations, total disaster threatened. What's more, he will push a much tougher line against oil-producing nations than the present policy shaped by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Simon the Cassandra would confront Mr. Ford with a major dilemma. Can he permit his designated economic spokesman to press on Capitol Hill the arguments he lost in the White House? But should he fire Simon, the beleaguered President would court trouble from Simon's influential conservative friends on Wall Street and in Congress. Nor is it certain anything short of outright firing could muzzle Simon.

Simon appeared to have lost his battle at the economic policymaking showdown in Vail, Colo., Dec. 28 for a relatively restricted budget deficit around $20 billion for the next fiscal year. The consensus: Simon did not convince the President that budget director Roy Ash, Simon's arch-foe, failed to cut all fat from the budget.

Returning to Washington, Simon continued the fight. He telephoned the President in Vail and argued that his opponents had stressed the favorable economic impact of a $40 billion-plus deficit without measuring the unfavorable financial impact, of massive federal borrowing. He then pressed new options, including an 8-10 per cent across-the-board budget cut (including defense). If he failed, Simon said privately, he would have trouble presiding over an American tragedy and might return to Wall Street moneymaking after delivering a critique to Congress.

He failed. The tax and budget decisions now made will insure a deficit between $35 billion and $45 billion—far too much for Simon. There will be no meat-axe budget cuts. Taxes will be slashed. But still, Bill Simon will not quit.

He has accepted advice from intimates that there is no creature less significant than an ex-Secretary of the Treasury selling bonds on Wall Street. His parting blast, no matter how Cassandra-like, would be a 48-hour newspaper sensation at best. So, Simon has no intention of quitting.

To carry his quintessentially conservative message to the potentially most liberal Congress in history might seem quixotic. The decision for stimulative tax reduction has been made by the administration and Congress alike and is long past reversing.

But Simon will not oppose tax reduction as such. Rather, he will recommend simultaneous tax reduction (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

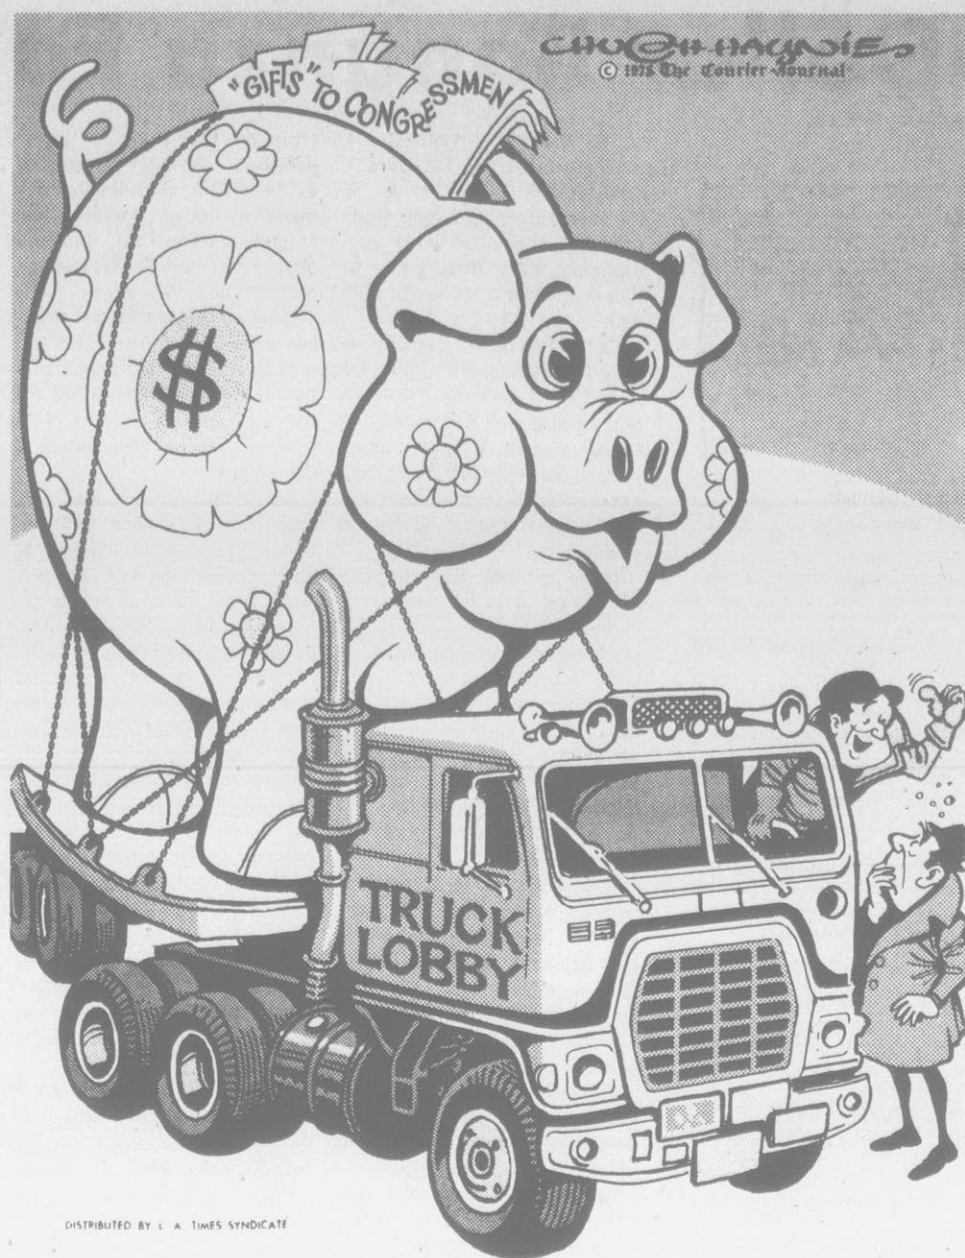

JONATHAN EDWARDS
Jonathan Edwards was one of the most outstanding Christians that America has produced. He was also a most notable philosopher and theologian. Entering Yale College at the age of thirteen, he was graduated and ordained into the ministry at nineteen.

But apart from the great works of philosophy and theology which he wrote—and which are incidentally studied by all students of these subjects today—he presided over the beginning of the revival movement which extends down to the present day. The movement started in 1735 in Northampton, Massachusetts, as a result of Edward's fervent preaching. In the coming years it spread westward in a wave, like motion, sometimes burning low but then reviving in even greater fervor and intensity.

Paradoxically, Edwards was not an emotional preacher, but his words had the power to pour out the spirit of the living God upon all who heard him.

The Sensitive CIA Man

WASHINGTON—Although the CIA is supposed to be secret, everybody in Washington knows at least one person who works for it. My CIA connection is Rumpelmeier, who has been in and out of the cold for 25 years.

"Nobody understands us," Rumpelmeier told me the other day as we changed taxis for the third time to make sure no one was following us.

"Why do you say that? I asked.

"Well, take all the hoopla about the CIA that is going on how. They are accusing us of every crime under the sun."

"Are the charges true or not?"

"I can't say," he replied. "Let me get this straight, Rumpelmeier. Accusations have been made against 'the company' which could or could not be true and, although you say no one understands you, you can't respond to them."

"That's correct. If we answered the allegations we might compromise the illegal actions we had to take in order to do the job we're supposed to do."

"Well, how can we understand you if we don't know what you're doing?"

"Why can't you take us on faith?" he wanted to know. "I'd like to, Rumpelmeier. Everyone would like to. But if we're not careful you people could turn out to be another KGB. You certainly wouldn't want a KGB in this country would you?"

"I'm not allowed to answer that," Rumpelmeier said. "The problem as I see it," I said, "is that the American people want a strong intelligence agency, but not one that could turn against us."

"You think that way because you don't know us," Rumpelmeier said. "If you knew what we were doing you wouldn't say that."

"Well, what are you doing?" I asked. "I can't tell you," Rumpelmeier said. "Let's get another taxi."

We settled in our fourth cab. "Nobody appreciates anything we do," he said sadly. "We're the only ones in this town who can't talk about our work. Do you think it's fun to go to a party and hear everyone bragging about his profession? The guy next door to me is a lawyer. When he wins a case he tells everyone on the block. Down the street is a man who works for the Defense Department. Every time he gives a billion dollars away he is congratulated. But if I overthrow a government, I have to keep my mouth shut. I can't even go to a cocktail party and say, 'I had lunch with a Polish defector today.' It gets to you after a while."

"Of course it does," I said sympathetically. "But don't forget, you chose to work for the company. Surely you knew what you were getting into when you joined up."

"Everybody needs appreciation," he said as tears came into his eyes. "We all like to hear people say, 'Well done.'"

"But how can I tell you 'Well done' when I have no idea what you did? Now if you

Tapes Review Urged

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —

The chief prosecutor in the Watergate cover-up trial says he thinks someone should review the remaining tapes from the Nixon White House to determine if parts of them should be made public.

In an interview in his Nashville law office, James F. Neal said any such review would depend on whether the courts rule that the tapes belong to former President Richard M. Nixon or to the government.

That issue currently is pending before a U.S. District judge in Washington.

If the judge rules that the remaining tapes belong to Nixon, Neal said he assumes "that ends the matter."

If the ruling is that they belong to the government, "It seems to me we're almost in a situation where they've got to be reviewed in view of all that's occurred . . .," Neal said.

"And yet it's important that the person or group of people be very fair about it and be sure they don't divulge anything that's not necessary because of some overriding public interest," he said.

As for the cover-up case where he headed the prosecution team, Neal said he believes the American people "know the essential part of the picture."

That case ended Jan. 1, when a jury returned guilty verdicts against former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, ex-White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman and former assistant Atty. Gen. Robert C. Mardian.

The jury acquitted Kenneth W. Parkinson, a Washington lawyer who had once represented Nixon's re-election committee.

All were charged with conspiring to obstruct the investigation of the Watergate break-in.

Without the White House tapes, "It would have been a more difficult case with respect to Haldeman and Ehrlichman," Neal said. "I believe the case would still have been extremely strong with respect to Mitchell. And of course the tapes didn't have any significant effect, it appeared to me, on Mardian."

Before the disclosure in July 1973 that Nixon had taped some of his White House conversations, Neal said the cover-up case depended heavily on the testimony of former White House counsel John W. Dean III.

At first, "I didn't believe John Dean's testimony regarding the involvement of the President," Neal said.

"When you started listening to tapes, you started believing John Dean," Neal recalled. "The more tapes you listened to, the more confidence you had in Dean which is very good because there's nothing more disturbing than to prosecute with witnesses that you just still have a nagging doubt about, and when you have something like the tapes that eliminates that nagging doubt so that you do believe John Dean, then you can go ahead with a clear conscience."

Oil Money Being Put Into Air

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Much of what the Mideast earns from the oil it takes out of the ground is being put into the air, and U.S. aircraft manufacturers are benefitting more than those of other nations.

More than $700 million of commercial aircraft were sold to Mideast carriers by U.S. manufacturers in 1974, and there are indications that the transactions will continue for several years.

These sales are distinct from orders for military aircraft, the largest of which was announced last week and which would involve Saudi Arabia in payment of $756 million for 60 Northrup Corp.

jet fighters.

Mideast Markets, a publication affiliated with the Chase Manhattan Bank, quotes Amer Sherif, an important Arab air official, as saying Arab airlines will more than double capacity in the next five years at a cost of $2.5 billion.

It interprets this and other comments by Sherif to mean that the 90-odd jet aircraft owned by 14 Arab carriers should double in number, "with an emphasis on the purchase of wide-bodied convertible aircraft for quick shipment of heavy or oversized industrial equipment."

It quotes Sherif, who is assistant secretary-general of the Arab Transport Organization, as saying in an interview that current plans by Mideast airlines involve a need for additional capacity equivalent to 115 Boeing 707s by 1979.

Among the transactions agreed upon during the past year, according to Mideast Markets, are these: —Two Boeing 747SP and three advanced 727-200 jetliners, by Syrian Arab Airlines at a cost of $100 million.

—Two extended-range L1011 TriStar jets for Gulf Air, the carrier representing Bahrain, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Oman, to be delivered by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Additional sales are possible under the contract.

—Four Lockheed L1011 widebody transports by the Saudi Arabian airline, plus two Boeing 707-320 long-range convertible cargo-passenger transports.

—A letter of intent by Egypair to buy six DC9 series 50 twin-jet transports valued at $45 million from McDonnell Douglas Corp.

—Two second-hand Boeing 747-100s for $64 million by Trans Mediterranean Airways, the Lebanese freight carrier.

—Three Boeing 737-200s and one 727-200 to be delivered this year to Air Algerie.

—Five Boeing aircraft purchases by Iraqi Airways.

If the projections hold, it would mean a significant contribution to the U.S. trade balance, as well as to the companies involved.

'Poor Farm Boy' Aims For N.C. Governorship

By SUSAN QUINN

"At a time when the political figure who owns the most campaign finances often wins the election," Zeb Vance Kitchin Dickson said, "as a poor farm boy I'm campaigning for the office of the Governor of North Carolina.

Dickson announced to the press Feb. 14, 1974 his intentions to seek election to the office of Governor for the 1976 term.

A resident of Eden and retired school teacher, Dickson, visiting in Greenville Saturday outlined his "Program for Progress" in 12 points: (1) greater Highway safety; (2) reduction of automobile insurance; (3) four-day work week when practical; (4) universal health care-not socialized medicine; (5) work corps for the unemployed; (6) two-year medical schools with nursing training in Eastern and Western North Carolina; (7) course in home nursing in high schools and junior colleges; (8) total use of school facilities for adult and drop-out education, physical development and recreation; (10) crime prevention; (11) youth conservation; and (12) control of lobbying.

Dickson also advocates decreased highway and inner-city speed limits, an economic control council made up of "the ordinary common people of North Carolina, work corps for anyone without a job that is willing to work, and better communication between the state government and the people of the state.

"The greatest challenge of our time is to restore government to the people at the precinct level," Dickson explained. "It's not that we have lost faith in our government but rather that the government has lost faith in us," he said.

"I will be running for the governorship with hopes of giving cheer and confidence to the people, renewed faith in self, hope for the future and charity for all mankind," Dickson explained.

"I don't want credit for Chile."

"Well, what do you want credit for?"

"I can't tell you. Can't you just say 'Well done' without knowing what I did? Is that asking too much?"

"All right, Rumpelmeier. Well done."

"What for?" he asked nevvously.

"I have no idea."

"How did you know I was involved with that?" he said with alarm.

"I didn't. I just guessed it."

and spending reduction, President Lyndon B. Johnson's formula for boosting the economy in 1964, though necessarily on a far larger scale today. Considering the improbability of serious budget reduction, what Simon would then do about tax reduction is unclear.

Beyond the budget deficit, Simon will find sympathetic ears in attacking domestic economic woes through far greater economic pressure on member nations of the oil cartel. That would put Simon in semi-public confrontation with Kissinger, easily the administration's most powerful figure.

While attacking Kissinger on Capitol Hill would have been suicidal six months ago, it might be good politics today. Congressmen grumble that Kissinger has engaged in sabre-rattling against oil-producing states while flinching at the use of economic countermeasures. New York-based economic consultant Eliot Janeway, a Simon confidant, has told him of strong endorsement from business audiences when he predicts a "Kissinger depression."

The President has effectively ended semi-public criticism of Kissinger's strategic policy by Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger. Far more explicitly than Schlesinger, Simon may soon be repeating in Congress the arguments that failed at the White House. The question arises, then, whether Mr. Ford will try to muzzle him and, if that fails, sack him.

Whatever the merit of his arguments, Simon has formidable allies. While Simon may go semi-public, Dr. Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board will go fully public in warning of catastrophe. Simon is highly regarded in Congress, particularly by Southern conservatives. If Simon resigns, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr., of Virginia told the National Assn. of Manufacturers last month, "It will be a sign that the administration is abandoning the battle for fiscal responsibility." Thus, Simon's plans to play Cassandra in Congress dangerously complicate Mr. Ford's tangled leadership puzzle.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—North Carolina's hog markets were steady to $1.25 higher today. Wilson, 39.50-40.50; High Falls, 38.50-39.50; Rocky Mount 39.00-39.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson, 40.50; Salisbury 39.00.

(RALEIGH)—North Carolina's broiler market was steady today. Supply was adequate and demand good. Weights were desirable.

The North Carolina fob dock weighted average price for less than truck lots of sized plant grade broilers to be picked up at docks this week is 41.07 cents per pound. The estimated slaughter today is 1,050,000 birds.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market moved ahead again today, but ran into some profit-taking pressures after a strong opening.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 6 points at the outset, showed only a 3.05 gain at 661.84 by 11:30 a.m.

Gainers maintained about a 7-2 lead over losers in brisk trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The early advance was spurred by a prime rate reduction to 9 3/4 per cent by New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust, the fifth largest bank in the country, while numerous other banks were variously cutting their basic rates on corporate loans to 10 and 10 1/4 per cent.

Morgan's action carried some psychological importance since it was the first time a major New York bank had posted a prime of less than 10 per cent since last spring. In the interim the key rate had gone as high as 12 per cent.

Once the impact of the news passed, however, selling appeared by investors nailing down profits racked up in the 55-point rise in the Dow over the past two weeks.

A.B. Chance climbed 1 1/4 to 15 1/4, and Emerson Electric lost 1/4 to 25 at the top of the Big Board's most-active list. On Friday Emerson announced tentative plans to acquire Chance, swapping .74 of an Emerson share for each Chance share outstanding.

Arizona Public Service lost 1 1/4 to 12 1/4. The company said it faced problems resulting from Mody's Investors Service's withdrawal of its rating of the utility's commercial paper, or short-term corporate IOUs.

The NYSE's 11 a.m. composite common-stock index was up .27 at 38.84.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index rose .62 to 67.94. Goldfield Corp., the Amex volume leader, was unchanged at 1/2.

Firm Recalls Sentenced For Baby Cereal Fatal Shooting

PITTSBURGH (AP) — H.J. Heinz Co. has recalled all boxes of its instant dry baby cereal after small metal fragments were found in two boxes.

The company said in its announcement over the weekend that the recall was voluntary and being taken because it could not ensure that other boxes might not contain similar fragments, found to be pieces of aluminum.

A Charlotte, N.C., housewife found the metal in the boxes a week ago.

Last month, two other consumers in Charlotte found metal filings in boxes of Instant Rice Cereal.

Products being recalled include Instant Rice Cereal, Instant Barley Cereal, Instant Oatmeal Cereal, Instant Mixed Cereal and Instant High Protein Cereal.

"Although no injuries have been reported and the possibility of any injury occurring is slight, we believe consumer safety must be our paramount concern," said Raymond F. Good, president of Heinz U.S.A.

Nonusers have been asked to discard the contents of any boxes in their possession and to mail the box tops to Heinz, P.O. Box 28, Pittsburgh, Pa., 15280, for a full refund of the purchase price and the cost of postage. Cost of the recall was estimated at $250,000.

The company also said that it has halted manufacture and distribution of all dry cereals to redesign protective systems in the manufacturing process. Production is expected to resume in a few weeks.

It Was 'Mean Joe Greene' And An Old Man's Dream

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was Mean Joe Greene, his wrecking machine — and an old man's dream.

Not that Franco Harris didn't have something to do with it. After all, a Super Bowl rushing record is not to be overlooked.

But in the long run — which Minnesota never had — it was Pittsburgh's ferocious front four that ultimately gave the Steelers and their 73-year-old owner, Art Rooney, their first National Football League championship after 42 years of frustration.

Greene, Dwight White, Ernie Holmes and L.C. Greenwood had about as much subtlety as a cement wall — and all of its effectiveness — when the Vikings tried to move the ball on the ground. Seventeen yards was all they got, which is to say they got nowhere.

If there was any deceptiveness in Super Bowl IX, it was only in the 16-6 final score. The six points the Vikings got weren't really of their own making. They were the result of a blocked punt. So, in effect, the Steelers, defense came up with a shutout.

"They've never played a better defensive game, never," Coach Chuck Noll said emphatically. "Our defense has been fantastic all season and I think it's appropriate that they should finish things off like they did."

They finished off the Vikings not only by turning their running game into oatmeal but by turning quarterback Fran Tarkenton back into a scrambler. He'd sort of lost that image in the last season or two. But in chilly, overcast, windswept Tulane Stadium, he nearly lost a few limbs.

Tarkenton spent virtually the entire afternoon trying to avoid being ground into hamburger by the half-ton meat grinder known as Greene and Co. Rarely did he have a chance to set up and scout around, looking for a receiver.

And when he did throw the ball, the Steelers were usually there to spike it back down his throat, tip it away or intercept it. Of his 27 passes, only 11 wound up in a teammate's hands, the end result being 102 of the Vikings' total 123 yards.

Unlike Tarkenton, Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw usually threw the ball not because he had to but because he wanted to. He completed nine of 14 attempts for 96 yards, four of them coming on a fourth-quarter touchdown pass to tight end Larry Brown that sealed the Vikings' doom.

Bradshaw, who has been called everything in the book from just plaid dumb to a quarterback who choked when it counted, knew exactly what he had to do in this most important of pro football games.

He just handed the ball to Franco.

Harris, combining the finesse of a slashing halfback and the brute force of a bulldozer, pounded out 158 yards on 34 carries and scored the Steelers' first touchdown with a nine-yard sweep in the third period, a run made delightfully easy by Gerry Mullins' block that changed Minnesota's Wally Hilgenberg from a linebacker into a cartwheel.

"You've got to be kidding me," Harris said when informed of his record performance that broke the marks of 33 carries and 145 yards and turned Miami's Larry Csonka into a Super Bowl second-best. "I can't believe it. I never thought it could have been that high."

In the end, though, the ultimate accomplishment was by Greene and his cohorts, who played a super game when a lot of people had thought they'd peaked two weeks ago, limiting the Oakland Raiders to 29 yards rushing in the 24-13 American Conference championship victory.

"I sat and watched the people playing in the Super Bowl for eight years," said Greene, The Associated Press' Defensive Player of the Year. "Now we've won it and it's even greater than I thought it could be ... I finally got the Super Bowl ring. I finally got it."

The Steelers' first points of the game came on a safety. A safety, more than an interception or a fumble recovery, is like a road sign reading: "Falling Rocks."

It means, simply, that a player on the other team is in danger of being buried under a landslide — one of bodies rather than boulders.

That's what happened to Tarkenton midway in the second quarter. Buried deep in his own territory (as the Vikings were most of the game), he mishandled a pitchout to Dave Osborn, then was forced to pounce on the loose ball in the end zone.

The safety, the first in Super Bowl history, was the only scoring in the first half. It was strange, seeing a 2-0 score on a football scoreboard. It meant that Pittsburgh's offense, numerically, at least, had been equal to Minnesota's, which is to say ineffective.

But the strategy started working the moment they got their hands on the ball in the second half, when Bill Brown of the Vikings fumbled away the kickoff. Harris boomed through the left side for 24 yards, lost three on the next play, then careened in for the touchdown and a 9-0 lead.

It stood up until Matt Blair blocked a Bobby Walden punt early in the fourth quarter and Terry Brown scooped up the ball in the end zone for the Minnesota touchdown.

But, perhaps typically, Fred Cox' extra point was no good, hitting the left upright. So the Vikings trailed by three points instead of two.

Not that it mattered. They were already clearly on their way to losing their third Super Bowl game, not what you'd call a disgrace since getting into three of them is no mean feat in itself.

If they weren't dead then, they were 6½ minutes later. The Steelers took the ensuing kickoff and, from their own 34-yard line, careened down the field with the biting force of winds that whipped through the stadium.

With Harris and Rocky Bleier chomping up huge chunks of real estate like the home-steaders in the Oklahoma land rush and Bradshaw making things interesting with a 30-yard pass to Brown, Pittsburgh camped momentarily on the Minnesota doorstep.

Then Bradshaw swept right and, going at full bore, launched his touchdown pass to Brown dead center in the end zone.

Steelers Basked In A Championship Feeling

By GARY MIHOES
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers felt too good to pop any champagne corks or toss their coach in the shower.

All they could do after winning Super Bowl IX was slap hands, hug one another and bask in the mellow satisfaction of the first National Football League title in the club's 42-year history.

"I'm sick and worn out but I'm a happy, happy man," said defensive end Dwight White, who played most of the game after spending a week in the hospital with viral pneumonia and losing 18 pounds.

"I feel so good I'm almost weak," tackle Joe Greene said as he milled around the subdued, steamy locker room.

"I just want to sit back and savor it," quarterback Terry Bradshaw said between puffs on a victory cigar, courtesy of Art Rooney.

Rooney, the 73-year-old Steeler owner, was off in a corner with his usual cap, overcoat and cigar — but minus the burden he'd carried in 42 years without an NFL title.

"I don't deserve much if any of the credit because my sons Dan and Art and Coach Noll have been running the team," Rooney said in his characteristic monotone.

"But this is still the greatest thrill in my life," he added.

"The other years were good years too despite the frustrations and I have no regrets, but I'm happy for our players, coaches and the people in Pittsburgh."

Rooney had a cigar for everybody in the locker room. NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had a glistening, silver super bowl trophy for Rooney, whose dad used to run a saloon on Pittsburgh's North Side.

"This entire team dedicated this effort at winning the Super Bowl for Mr. Rooney," offensive tackle Jerry Mullins said after the team gave Rooney a game ball.

Mullins and the Steeler offensive line helped Franco Harris shake loose for 150 yards rushing, 13 better than Larry Csonka's old Super Bowl record.

The Steeler defense, which held Minnesota to 123 total yards, was keyed by defensive end L.C. Greenwood, who batted down three of Fran Tarkenton's passes.

A key factor was the play of reserve linebackers Loren Toews and Ed Bradley, who played most of the second half after Andy Russell and Jack Lambert were hurt.

"Our reserves came through for us," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll, "but all year we've been doing whatever it takes."

Backup quarterback Joe Gil-led to a four-yard touchdown pass from Bradshaw to Larry Brown in the fourth quarter.

"That gives you an idea of how everyone was contributing," said Noll.

The victory left each Steeler $15,000 richer.

"The money is fine," said Joe Greene, "but you don't play like we did just for the money."

"I don't think we realize yet what we've done," said Bradshaw.

WCU Coach Resigns Job

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Hartbarger resigned as basketball coach at Western Carolina University Sunday in the midst of his third straight losing season.

The assistant coach, Fred Conley, was named to succeed him.

Hartbarger, 37, came to Western Carolina five years ago from Virginia Tech, where he was an assistant. Before that he was head coach at Ferrum Junior College in Virginia.

He had an 86-73 at Western Carolina, an independent school which has applied for admission to the Southern Conference. The school has won five and lost seven this season.

Conley, 35, a graduate of Marshall College in West Virginia, came to WCU two years ago from a high school in Pompano Beach, Fla. His teams had a 105-34 record during his five years as head coach at the high school.

Athletic Director Bob Waters said no decision about the future of the WCU basketball program could be made until the end of the season.

The Citadel And VMI Play For 4th Place Tonight

By The Associated Press
Either The Citadel's Bulldogs or Virginia Military's Keydets, neither regarded as anything like contenders in preseason speculation, will take over fourth place in the Southern Conference basketball race tonight.

VMI, which turned in the league shocker of the season Saturday night with a 98-95 victory over Richmond's Spiders, and The Citadel, which had more trouble than expected before edging Appalachian State's Mountaineers 70-69, tangle on the Keydets' home court. The Keydets, Bulldogs and Spiders are tied for fourth at 2-2 behind William and Mary's Indians and East Carolina's Pirates, both 2-0, and Furman's two-time defending champion Paladins, 1-0. Davidson's Wildcats are 0-2, Appalachian 0-3 in league play.

While VMI was snapping a five-game losing streak with its first victory over the Spiders in Richmond since Feb. 19, 1963, Davidson was ending an eight-game skid with an 81-77 non-league triumph over St. John's, N. Y. Another streak also ended, but this was a winning string. East Carolina, which had won seven in a row since losing its first three, was beaten 79-77 by host Connecticut in the championship game of the Connecticut Classic.

In tonight's only official action aside from the meeting of The Citadel, 5-3 over-all, and VMI, 2-6, Davidson will play for the second time in three nights at Charlotte, N. C. The Wildcats, 3-8, take on Virginia, 4-5, of the Atlantic Coast Conference. Furman is at home in an exhibition game against Athletics in Action.

The Keydets, beaten 95-90 at home by Richmond, shot 61.9 per cent from the floor as they overcame 30 personal fouls, 32 turnovers and a school-record 44-point performance by Richmond's Bob McCurdy in beating the Spiders.

VMI ran up a 20-point lead with 12 minutes left, but the Spiders twice closed to within a point down the stretch, and Keydet Coach Bill Blair said

"the officials almost took us out of it."

But McCurdy, who was 19 of 30 from the floor after scoring 42 points just three nights earlier against Duquesne, missed the front end of a one-and-one foul situation with nine seconds left and the Spiders down by three points.

The Keydets were led by Curt Reppart, seven of eight from the floor and 20 points; John Krovic, seven of 11 and 17 points; and Will Bynum, eight of 12 and 16 points. Sophomore Kevin Eastman had 27 points for the Spiders, now 3-6 overall. Sophomore Rod McKeever's jumper with two seconds left gave The Citadel its victory over Appalachian, which dropped a 99-94 decision earlier on the Bulldogs' home court.

The lead changed hands six times in the last 4:38 before Dave Cook's jumper gave Appalachian, 1-10 over-all, a 69-68 lead with 14 seconds left. But McKeever, who ended with 24 points and scored 10 of The Citadel's last 12, came through with his game-winner.

Freshman Mike Ange had 13 points for the Bulldogs. The Mountaineers were led by Kinney Baughman with 19, Donnie Stringfellow with 17 and Tim White with 16.

Davidson staged a 12-4 run to pull even with St. John's in the second half, fell behind 75-74 with 2:02 left, then went ahead for good on two free throws each by Jay Powell and Larry Horowitz, who finished with 32 points and seven rebounds.

Horowitz scored 20 points in the second half as the Wildcats rallied from a five-point deficit. Greg Dunn had 13 points and became the 12th Davidson player in history to pass the 1,000-point career mark.

Two free throws by John Thomas with 23 seconds left and Connecticut leading 76-75 and another by Joe Whelton after a technical foul on the Pirates offset a Donnie Owens jumper with seven seconds left. Thomas and Lee Otis Wilson had 18 points each for Connecticut, while the Pirates, 7-4, were led by Bob Geter with 17 and freshman Wade Henkel with 16.

ACC Race In Focus After This Week

By The Associated Press
The Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race will be in clearer focus after North Carolina State plays at Maryland on Thursday and is home to North Carolina in a regionally televised game Saturday afternoon.

Those three teams are undefeated in the conference in the early-season play.

The Maryland Terrapins are 3-0 in the league and 11-1 in all games, losing only to UCLA.

The N.C. State Wolfpack is 1-0 and 10-1, and has lost only to Wake Forest.

The North Carolina Tar Heels are 1-0 and 7-3.

Six of the nine games ACC teams will play in this week are conference games.

The only game tonight is Virginia vs. Davidson of the Southern Conference in the Charlotte, N.C., Coliseum. It will be a homecoming for Virginia coach Terry Holland, who guided the Davidson Wildcats last season.

Virginia lost 74-73 last Saturday at independent Virginia Tech on Larry Cooke's 10-foot jump shot with nine seconds left. At the same time, Davidson snapped an eight-game losing streak by beating St. John's of New York 81-77 in the Charlotte Coliseum.

Virginia is 4-5 and Davidson 3-8. Larry Horowitz scored 32 points for Davidson. In other games Saturday: Maryland broke free of visiting Wake Forest with 18 consecutive points early in the second half and beat the Deacons 89-73. It was the first loss for Wake Forest after five victories. Sophomore guard Skip Brown had 32 points for the Deacons, but he lacked effectiveness during the Maryland surge.

Wake Forest is 1-2 and 8-4.

North Carolina recovered after trailing 8-0, shot 58 per cent in each half, and routed Howard University 109-67 at home.

It was the first basketball game between an ACC team and a predominantly black school.

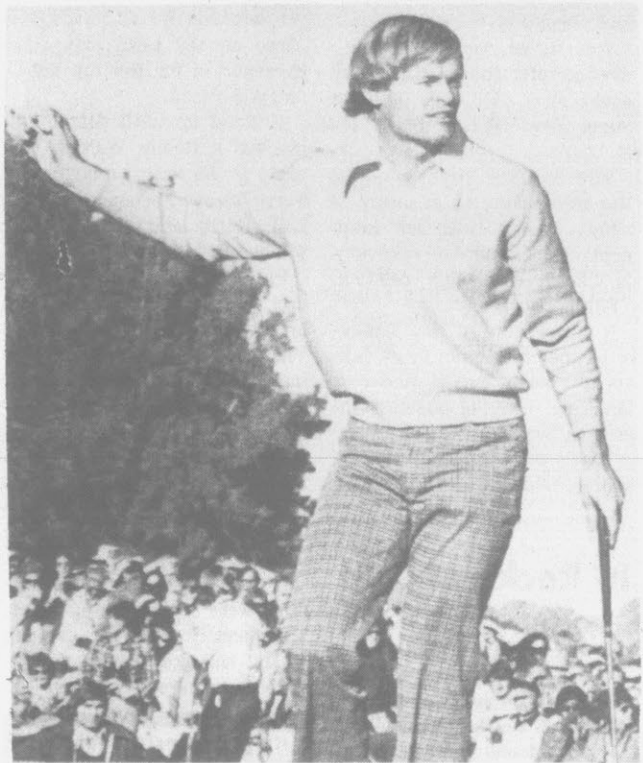

Howard, led by 6-6 Chapel Hill native Vadnay Cotton, hit seven of its first eight shots. The Tar Heels didn't gain a tie until the game was 7½ minutes old. Howard lost its six game against three victories.

Duke won its third straight game at home and raised its record to 7-3 by defeating South Florida 95-86. Pete Kramer scored 26 points for the Blue Devils, who spoiled the return of former Virginia coach Bill Gibson to ACC country.

ACC teams are idle Tuesday. On Wednesday, North Carolina will be at Wake Forest, Clemson at Duke and Penn State at Virginia.

N.C. State at Maryland is Thursday's only game. Friday is an open date. On Saturday North Carolina will be at N.C. State, Duke at Virginia, Wake Forest at Clemson and Maryland will play Navy in Baltimore.

OPEN WINNER—Johnny Miller lofts ball on winning Phoenix Open Sunday by 14 strokes. His final-round 64, combined with earlier scores of 67, 61 and 68, left him with 260, the lowest 72-hole total in 20 years of tournament play, and 24-under par for the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course. Petty Chosen Driver Of Year

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP)—Richard Petty, who drove Dodges to a record fifth NASCAR Grand National championship, has been chosen stock car driver of the year for 1974.

He and winners in other categories, all selected by members of the National Motorsports Press Association, will be presented with trophies at the association's annual awards banquet in Southern Pines tonight.

Petty won the Winston Cup Series with 10 victories in 30 starts. He finished in the top five 22 times.

He scored seven of his victories on superspeedways, and earned nearly $280,000 in prize money. It was the third time in his 16-year career that he had won more than $200,000. He now has 164 career victories and more than $1.8 million in earnings.

Other finalists were Cale Yarborough, David Pearson, NASCAR's top rookie Earl Ross, and county and western singer Marty Robbins, who drives in the big races.

Herman Hickman, public relations director of the North Carolina Motor Speedway at Rockingham, will get the Joe Littlejohn Award, named in honor of the former driver, promoter and one of the original founders of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR). It is presented to the individual or group contributing the most to the association during the year.

Hickman will receive his trophy from Littlejohn, now retired and living in Spartanburg, S.C.

Hickman, 46, is a former sports editor of newspapers in Greenville, S.C., Concord, N.C., and Winston-Salem.

Dozier Mobley, an Atlanta free-lance photographer, swept all three first place awards for excellence in motorsports pictorial journalism—single, series and color.

Dick Jones and Bob Perry, both of WITN-TV, Washington, N.C., each won television awards for spot news.

Don Hunter of the Charlotte News and Howard O'Reilly of Atlanta won three prizes in the magazine writing, color photography and photo series categories.

TV Log Dead Catfish Is Also Dangerous

By C. G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A catfish may be more dangerous dead than alive to the unwary fisherman, a Duke University physician warns.

The reason, he says, is that fishermen are not careful in handling their catch after the fish are dead. The anglers forget or don't know that they can still get a painful, toxic sting from the fins of the dead fish, he says.

Dr. Charles H. Scoggin of the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N. C., describes the dangers and after effects of catfish stings in the Jan. 13 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The potential of these fish for inflicting a very distressing sting to unwary humans is apparently poorly appreciated by physicians in this county," he wrote.

Scoggin, now on leave at the University of Colorado in Denver, said in a recent telephone interview that no one knows how often fishermen or others handling catfish are stung.

But he said it seems to happen "with a fair degree of frequency" and appears to be fairly common among fishermen.

There are about 1,000 species of catfish, most of them living in fresh water. They are the only known fresh-water fish known to have a toxic sting, Scoggin said.

Most toxic catfish stings occur while fishermen are handling the fish to remove them from hooks or to clean them, he said.

The catfish's stingers are located in the fin spines on its back and sides. When excited, the fish extends the spines to protect itself.

When the stinger penetrates the skin, the venom glands are exposed and toxic secretions enter the victim's flesh. "Surprisingly little" is known about the nature of the venom, the physician said.

Deaths have resulted from stings by Japanese salt-water catfish, but none is known to have occurred as a result of a sting from any American variety, Scoggin said.

The severity of the sting is related to the amount of venom injected into the victim, he said. Generally, he added, the sting is followed by an immediate stinging, scalding, or throbbing sensation. On rare occasions a person may go into shock.

Scoggin said wounds are generally mild, even if painful, and the symptoms subside in a few hours. Complications usually don't occur, he said.

There is no danger in eating catfish once they are cleaned and cooked because the venom sac is removed in the cleaning process, Scoggin said.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1975, The Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠ J ♠ AKQ106 ♦ 73 ♣ Q9832

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

2 NT Pass 3 ♠ Pass

3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

6 ♣ Dbl?

What do you bid now?

A.—Six no trump. East's double is conventional, asking for an unusual lead—generally the suit first bid by dummy. He probably has the ace-queen of diamonds over your partner's king, and at a club contract a diamond lead will give the defense the first two tricks. By converting to six no trump, East becomes the opening leader and partner's suit is protected from a lead through.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠ A5 ♥ J8 ♦ QJ43 ♠ AK1062

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠

Pass 2 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. When partner makes a jump shift after passing, he generally has a pretty good suit or a fit with your suit. Your hand merits another bid, and your trump support is adequate under the circumstances.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠ 6 ♥ AJ10 ♦ AKQ762 ♠ AQ9

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Despite the fact that you don't fit partner's suit, your hand seems good enough to insist on game, so you should jump shift. Three clubs is the recommended action—a jump to three diamonds would not be forcing and would understate your values considerably. If partner raises clubs, you can revert to diamonds—that is why you choose to jump shift in the lower-ranking suit rather than in hearts.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠ 95 ♥ 987432 ♦ 1076 ♠ AQ

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. There is a strong temptation to double, but your hand—and your trumps—are not quite good enough. There is a likelihood that someone will remove the double, in which case you will be badly placed in the ensuing auction.

Q.5—As South vulnerable, you hold:

♠ 1092 ♥ J8742 ♦ KJ6 ♠ A9

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♠ Dble. Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—Three hearts. You have quite a good hand facing a takeout double, and it is your duty to make this known to partner. A mere two heart bid could be made on a bust, and partner will pass on many hands that could easily produce a game. Note that the jump in response to a takeout double is invitational, not forcing.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠ 983 ♥ QJ9842 ♦ 84 ♠ 72

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass Pass Dble.

2 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid two hearts. Even though partner doesn't rate to have much in this suit, even a low doubleton or a singleton honor could make this the best contract. Your hand doesn't rate to produce many tricks for partner at any other contract. If partner can't stand hearts, he can always correct to spades himself. However, we wouldn't quibble with a direct preference to two spades.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠ AQ96 ♥ K98 ♦ KJ6 ♠ J82

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one no trump.

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. A double by you in this position would show the equivalent of a one no trump opening bid, and is penalty-oriented. Should you enter the auction with this motley collection and find West with the balance of power, the result could be extremely bloody.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠ AJ8752 ♥ AQ6 ♦ AQ93

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ 3 ♦ ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four diamonds. Even though partner could do no more than give you a single raise, prospects for slam are bright. East's overall increases the chances that partner holds working values. The cue-bid not only conveys your strength, it enables partner to give due weight to any honor cards he holds in hearts and clubs.

Bowles Assails Administration

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—

Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles Jr., the Democrat defeated by Gov. Jim Holshouser two years ago, today accused the Holshouser administration of putting party interests above the interests of the state.

In an advance copy of a speech to a Greensboro civic club today, Bowles said Holshouser's administration "has acted as though its first responsibility was to strengthen the Republican party and let the state take care of itself."

Bowles said the size of state government has been increased by 13,000 workers in the last two years and "what money has been saved in much-heralded efficiency studies has been spent elsewhere." He said the "elsewhere has too often been for such things as a new office for the governor," estimated by some sources to cost about $360,000.

The money used in moving offices "would have built a rural health clinic, or it could have been used to lower our tax structure," Bowles said.

"What we have in Raleigh today are new players but the same old, tired game; the same old game of favoritism, frills and folly," he said.

Bowles praised Democrats for not playing politics during the past two years and said they "have rejected every effort to strip the governor of significant powers."

Last fall's Democratic landslide victory "was the greatest voter rejection registered against any governor in the modern history of North Carolina," Bowles said, adding that voters "clearly rejected abuse of power."

Bowles said the General Assembly, which is overwhelmingly Democratic, must provide North Carolina's political leadership during the next two years.

New Congress Will Feel Influence From Watergate

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the first issues scheduled for debate when the new Congress convenes next week is whether the American people finally have the full story of Watergate and whether the scandal has created support for tighter control over the FBI and CIA.

Thus Watergate, which dominated events on Capitol Hill for the past two years, remains a powerful influence.

Congressional sources expect these questions to be raised early in the new session: — Will the final report of the special Watergate prosecutor's office give a complete account of the scandal that drove Richard M. Nixon from the presidency? — Will that report lay out why some people were prosecuted and others were not, including why Leon Jaworski agreed to allow former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge in connection with the ITT investigation? — Will anyone review all the tapes from the Nixon-White House and determine if portions should be made public? — Does anyone know the full story of the involvement in Watergate of the FBI and the CIA? — And will the public ever know the details of the domestic surveillance activities of the FBI and CIA, not only during the Nixon presidency but also under his predecessors? — Once again, attention will focus on the House Judiciary Committee, scene of the hearings on the impeachment of Nixon.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino

Jr., D-N.J., wants his committee to rule on the Justice Department budget, which includes the FBI. Justice is one of several major government departments that now deal solely with the appropriations committees of Congress for approval of their budgets.

A major exception is the Defense Department, which goes through a two-stage procedure of getting authorization for expenditures and then appropriation of the money.

"Rodino wants an ongoing type of oversight," a committee source said when asked why the chairman was pushing to require the Justice Department to submit its budget requests to the Judiciary Committee.

The Watergate prosecutor's office and the FBI also are going to come under close scrutiny from the Rodino committee.

A subcommittee headed by Rep. William L. Hungate, D-Mo., plans to hold hearings late in January on the final report currently being drafted by special prosecutor Henry S. Ruth and his staff.

Ruth opposes trying to make the final report a complete history of Watergate that would include information never used in court, such as activities of Nixon associates who never were charged with a crime.

Jaworski was quoted earlier this week as saying he doubted a case could be made against Nixon intimate Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo for his role in handling campaign contributions.

Rebozo has denied any wrongdoing and said he was "delighted that Jaworski came to the only conclusion any fair-minded person would come to based on the facts."

Ruth had no comment. But sources in the prosecutor's office had suggested long ago that it was wrong to speculate that Rebozo would be indicted.

Some members of Congress would like Ruth to lay out in the final report all he learned about Rebozo.

But it is believed that Rodino agrees with Ruth that such a procedure would violate Rebozo's rights.

The prosecutor's final report does appear certain to revive the simmering dissatisfaction among Senate liberals over the handling of the Kleindienst-ITT case.

"How did Kleindienst help?" asked one Senate source who noted that Jaworski had said Kleindienst's cooperation had been a consideration in allowing the former attorney general to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge.

Kleindienst was charged with failing to testify fully before the Senate Judiciary Committee when he was asked about the handling of the ITT antitrust settlement. He received a one-month suspended sentence.

In contrast, former California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was charged with perjury. He was convicted and received an 18-month suspended sentence.

So far, no other charges have been brought in the ITT investigation. Gen. Robert C. Mar-dian.

The question of whether Nixon or the government controls the tapes is before the courts for decision.

If the decision is that the government owns them, Ruth would oppose being given the task of listening to them and culling out any Watergate tidbits that ought to be made public.

But James F. Neal, chief prosecutor at the cover-up trial, where 28 presidential tapes were played publicly for the first time, believes someone should go through the tapes if they end up in the hands of the government.

Interviewed at his Nashville, Tenn., law office, Neal also said he knew nothing more about possible CIA involvement in the Watergate break-in than came out at the cover-up trial.

The defendants made an issue of the CIA backgrounds of the Watergate burglars, but the jury rejected their contention that the spy agency's involvement may have been greater than anyone knew.

But new allegations about CIA activities that may have violated restrictions against the agency conducting domestic operations has led to new congressional investigations in the post-Watergate mood of the new Congress. But no one knows yet how much of these probes will ever become public.

Sen. Ralph Scott Sees No State Tax Relief

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—Another legislator, State Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, has predicted there won't be any tax relief during the 1975 76 session of the General Assembly.

In a speech to the Political Action Committee for Education (PACE), a teacher's political group Saturday, Scott also called for better management of the North Carolina prisons system and criticized Secretary of Corrections David L. Jones. "We have seen one of the best prison systems in the country slide steadily downhill," Scott said.

He said the prisons were merely "warehousing" inmates rather than rehabilitating them, adding that rehabilitation had become a thing of the past.

"If David Jones is a prison administrator, I'm a nuclear scientist," Scott told the group. "It will take some time to improve our prison facilities, but we could get some good management out there right now if the governor would just do it." After hearing of Scott's comments, Jones said they were "just opinion and not based on fact. The fact is, that under this administration I have increased the efficiency of the umbrella agency that I am responsible for."

"The professionalism of the people involved in the correctional system has drastically improved. For example, the minimum standards and training for all correctional employees and also for youth development have been greatly improved," Jones said.

Scott joined a chorus of veteran lawmakers who have been predicting that tax relief is "out of the question" even though a number of groups and individuals are calling for changes. One change virtually all reformers are demanding is repeal of the sales tax on food.

Scott said, though, "We have needs coming out of our ears, so a reduction in taxes is out of the question. People are hard-pressed financially, so an increase in taxes is out of the question. We're just going to have to do the best we can with what we have...."

The senator commended former Democratic governors Terry Sanford and Bob Scott. They "had the guts" to do "the unpopular thing of proposing taxes to raise the money needed for education, mental health and other services," he said.

Referring to the food tax beginning during Sanford's administration, Scott said: "As the fellow says, let's put the hay down where the goats can eat it.... During the past 12 years, Gov. Sanford's program has produced a total of $617 million for use in the state's general fund. During the past five years, Gov. Scott's program has put more than $233 million in the general fund."

Scott, an uncle of the former governor, said if it had not been for Sanford and Bob Scott, "teachers would still be working for slave wages and we wouldn't have made all the other advancements we have made in education."

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Tobacco experts at North Carolina State University have cautioned against increasing the chlorine content of tobacco fertilizer for 1975.

The N. C. State University group issued the caution after learning that the fertilizer industry wants to increase the amount of chlorine permissible in tobacco fertilizer because of a shortage of low chlorine fertilizer materials.

Such an increase, the agricultural scientists said in a prepared statement, could hurt tobacco quality and decrease the demand for U. S. leaf in world markets.

Signing the statement were S. N. Hawks, tobacco specialist with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service; Drs. W. G. Woltz and G. S. Miner, scientists with the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station; and Dr. C. B. McCants, head of the Department of Soil Science.

Hawks said the statement was prepared with the consensus and support of tobacco research and extension personnel in other flue-cured producing states.

The current problem, Hawks explained, stems from a shortage of sulfate of potash, which is recommended for tobacco fertilizers because it is low in chlorine. Fertilizer manufacturers would like to substitute some muriate of potash, which has a higher chlorine content.

"Extensive research has shown that small amounts of chlorine will improve tobacco yields, but excessive rates will produce dingy, dark tobaccos that burn poorly," Hawks said.

Current regulations of the N. C. Department of Agriculture permit from 2 to 4 percent chlorine in tobacco fertilizer, depending on the particular analysis. The N. C. Board of Agriculture would have to approve any changes.

Hawks said the average tobacco grower currently uses much more potash than is usually needed for maximum yield. Therefore, he urges a "total educational effort" to get growers to cut back on the use of potash.

"If they will cut back," he explained, "they can reduce fertilizer costs, and we should be able to get by with current supplies of sulfate of potash."

The shortage of low chlorine sources of potassium is expected to ease by 1976.

"We commend the fertilizer industry for appraising us of this problem, but, we believe the best interest of the tobacco industry will be served by promoting better use of available low chlorine fertilizers rather than permitting greater use of chlorine," the N. C. State University group concluded.

Farm Scene

Edwin L. Yancey
County Extension Chairman

The 1974 Census of Agriculture being conducted by the Bureau of the Census will bring up to date farm statistics collected for the year 1969 when the last farm census was taken.

Cooperation from every farm and ranch operator is needed in order to insure an accurate measurement of changes in Pitt County. Farm business records are to be used in filling out the report form, but when records are not available, reasonable estimates are fully acceptable. The Census Bureau must have a good report from each operator if county records are to be complete and accurate. The report forms (questionnaires), mailed out about January 1, should be filled out and mailed as early as possible.

Nothing is revealed in the published reports that might disclose information about an individual operator. The data are combined into county and State totals that provide benchmarks for keeping up with changes in farming. The only source of statistics on agriculture that are comparable, county by county, on a nationwide basis.

The 1969 census counted 2174 farms in Pitt County; 1837 reported selling $2,500 or more of agricultural products, and 207 reported sales of $40,000 or more. The market value of all agricultural products sold in 1969 amounted to $40,419,218, an average of $18,592 per farm.

Recession, Inflation Put Assembly On The Spot

Some Suspect Russians Plan 'Upstage' Mission

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union may try to upstage the United States during next July's joint U.S.-Russian manned space mission by having a second crew of cosmonauts in orbit at the same time. That's the opinion of some American space observers who have been studying the Dec. 27 launching of a Soviet Salyut 4 space station. They say the high altitude of the station will give it a long life and the possibility of being inhabited by several different crews during the next year.

The Soyuz 17 crew was launched Friday night, perhaps to visit the station for 30 to 60 days, which would be a record for Russian cosmonauts.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says it has no evidence the Salyut will be manned next July during the joint mission in which American and Soviet spaceships are to link up in orbit. But officials don't rule out the possibility.

By having two cosmonaut ships in orbit during the joint flight, the Russians could hope to influence some of the world that they have returned to the glory days of Sputnik when they were the undisputed leaders in space exploration — a role they lost to the United States' Apollo man-on-the-moon program.

It also would draw attention from the fact that the much more sophisticated American Apollo craft will be making all the critical rendezvous maneuvers to achieve docking with the Russian craft in July.

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—Rampant inflation and deepening recession are expected to put North Carolina's legislators on the spot as Tar Heel citizens turn to the General Assembly demanding whatever relief it can give. The session begins Wednesday.

One form of help a number of individuals and organizations apparently believe the lawmakers must deliver is repeal of the 4 per cent sales tax on food. But, several legislative leaders have consistently maintained that 1975 is not the year for major tax revisions and, they say, the tax must stay on.

The push for repeal of the food tax is coming from virtually every direction. Among those backing the effort has been the Christian Action League, the state AFL-CIO, Consumers on the Warpath, the North Carolina Council of Churches, a coalition of black organizations and the Consumers Council of North Carolina. The list goes on to include even the father of the food tax, former Gov. Terry Sanford.

Another piece of consumer legislation certain to be considered this year is no-fault auto liability insurance. At a closed meeting last week, Senate Democrats reportedly decided to make auto liability insurance a top priority item.

A number of states have adopted no-fault auto liability insurance, in many cases resulting in huge savings to consumers.

No-fault coverage means that a driver's own insurance company pays for injuries and property damage in most accidents, without regard to who caused the accident. In most no-fault programs, the vast majority—possibly 90 per cent—of the accidents are handled routinely without a need for the case to go to court.

The savings under no-fault came because the cases don't need to go to court to determine who pays. Such court determinations take time and result in high legal fees.

Frequently, lawyers lead the fight against no-fault, claiming it will deprive a person the right to sue. But, proponents of no-fault say the lawyers are simply afraid of losing income.

Here are some other consumer issues likely to come before the 1975 General Assembly:

—Milk pricing is certain to become an issue. Gov. Jim Holshouser and his four appointees to the state Milk Commission want the legislature to repeal the law prohibiting retail sales of milk below cost.

Dairy industry representatives and a legislative committee that studied the dairy industry lean toward more price controls, making a clash virtually certain. Holshouser, being a Republican, faces difficult odds with the legislature dominated by Democrats.

Each side has argued that its own plan will reduce retail milk prices. The side leaning toward more controls frankly admits it is trying to protect the industry as its first priority.

—Landlord-tenant legislation that would give renters stronger bargaining power is being pushed by several groups. Lillian Woo, head of the Consumers Council of North Carolina, said her group wants a law "to delineate the responsibilities between landlords and tenants."

Tenants are generally at a disadvantage now, she said.

—The 8 per cent ceiling on interest for home mortgages will automatically be restored July 1, unless the legislature acts. Last year, the General Assembly removed the interest ceiling for a one year trial. Mrs. Woo said her organization will work toward restoring the ceiling. A member of the House banking committee said he believes the ceiling will remain off.

—Consumer groups are also expected to push for a law that would forbid penalties being assessed for prepayment of a loan.

—On credit card accounts, Mrs. Woo said she hopes the legislature will reduce interest charges. Now, the interest charges are applied to the previous balance unless the entire balance is paid. The CCNC supports a change to applying the interest charge to the unpaid balance.

Simply put, if you get a Master Charge bill of $500 this month and pay $400, you will be charged $7.50 interest on your next bill—1½ per cent applied to the previous balance. If, on the other hand, the interest is charged on the unpaid balance—$100—the charge would be only $1.50, a difference of $6 on the following bill.

—Also on interest rates, the CCNC promised to work toward forcing loan companies to charge lower interest for loans of $100 or less. The legal rate is now 30 per cent, Mrs. Woo said.

—Competitive pricing of drugs may also become an issue during the session. Consumer representatives are expected to push for a law that would require drug stores to post a price list of the 100 most commonly prescribed drugs. Opposition is expected from pharmacists and drug store owners.

—North Carolina's so-called "fair trade" law is probably in for another attack. While it has been found unconstitutional in court, Mrs. Woo said she hopes lawmakers will repeal it just to show good faith. Fair trade laws allow manufacturers to set retail prices on their products.

—Utilities also will probably face an attack by consumers. One of the major fights likely will be over the law passed last year that allows utilities to include projected costs in rate increase requests. Consumer groups are expected to seek repeal of the law.

—A law that would limit mechanics' liens may also be an issue this session. One possible form of such a law would limit a lien to the amount of a written estimate. An example of abuses the law would end is a person being unable to get his car back because the estimated $25 repair job ended up with a bill of $200.

—Television repairmen may come under state licensing and regulations. A bill that would require the repairmen to furnish a written estimate and guarantee the work done is expected to be considered.

—State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram has promised to work for legislation that would prohibit what he called "age discrimination" in auto liability insurance.

Tax-Listing Is Moving Slowly

The month of January is nearly half-over and according to Pitt County Tax Supervisor Phillip Michaels, the listing of both personal and real property for tax purposes "has been light."

Michaels estimates that "barely one-sixth of the total listings have been completed." He said last year, "nearly $14 million worth of property was not listed on time."

"Failure to list during the regular listing period results in a 10 per cent addition to the late lister's tax bill," he emphasized.

Under North Carolina law, all property—both real and tangible personal—must be listed for tax purposes during the month of January. The regular listing period in Pitt ends on Friday, January 31, Michaels noted.

"Until then," the tax Supervisor explained, "all listing places are open Monday through Friday all day, and on Saturday until 12 noon."

Persons should list property in the township in which it is located, Michaels explained, adding that property owners may call the Tax Supervisor's office at 752-4711 for the exact time and place lists will be working in the various townships.

Michaels said that failure to list property as soon as possible will result in long lines during the last few days of January.

Two Arrested For Drug Possession

Two men have been arrested by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and charged on drug possession counts.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, Pitt narcotics officers arrested Robert Archie McPhail Jr., 23, of Box 424, Ayden, around 2 a.m. today at his residence and charged him with simple possession of marijuana.

Sheriff Tyson said that officers confiscated a quantity of marijuana plants and seed at the time of the arrest.

McPhail, who was placed under $1,000 bond, is scheduled for a hearing in District Court here on Jan. 17.

Pitt officers also arrested David DeForrest Suggs, 18, of Rt. 5, Box 246, Greenville, at 10:30 p.m. Sunday and charged him with felonious possession of methamphetamine and felonious possession of marijuana.

Bond for Suggs was set at $2,000 and a hearing scheduled for Jan. 17 in District Court here.

Raleigh Office Again Held Up

RALEIGH (AP)—A Raleigh financial institution was robbed today for the second time this year.

Police said two men wearing ski masks robbed the Tryon Hills branch of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association. They escaped on foot, but officers say a getaway car may have been waiting close by.
