Summit Conference For Oil Producing Countries

By JOHN LAWTON

ALGIERS (UPI) — The world's major oil producing countries agreed Saturday to stage a summit conference next month before meeting with Western industrial nations for crucial talks on energy and how to spend their billions of oil-earned dollars.

The oil summit and support for a U.S.-proposed mid-year energy conference was decided on by ministers of 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries who among them produce 85 per cent of world oil exports.

OPEC officials said the heads of state will not consider any change in the price of oil, which has been frozen by the oil cartel at $10.12 for a 42-gallon barrel for the first nine months of 1975.

"We have agreed on a summit, but not on a date," Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said after the second day of the ministers' conference at the Palace of Nations outside Algiers on the Mediterannean coast.

Iranian Interior Minister Jamshid Amouzegar said the summit probably will be held in Algiers at the end of February. OPEC officials said the date will be announced today.

The summit will determine the stand producers will take in meeting with the United States and other industrial powers on the energy crisis.

Amouzegar said the producer-consumer talks will take place in June or July.

The OPEC conference came out in favor of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's proposal for talks confined to producers and Western industrial nations who consume most oil, leaving the developing countries out of the first stages. France has insisted on inclusion of the developing countries.

Amouzegar said the OPEC chiefs will discuss all oil issues, including the recycling of petrodollars—how to reinvest the estimated $100 billion that flowed to the oil-producing nations in 1974 to keep the world monetary system afloat.

Stockpiling of dollars by the relatively underdeveloped producing nations, with assurances of even more to come as a result of the steep oil price hikes in the past year, is seen as one of the most serious problems afflicting the economies of industrial nations.

Military Quotas Filled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Perhaps aided by the economic recession and rising civilian unemployment, the military services all exceeded 100 per cent of their recruiting goals in December.

And the Pentagon said Friday that 96 per cent of December's recruits scored in the average or above-average mental categories, the best showing for any month since the Defense Department began keeping such statistics nearly 24 years ago.

Figures also showed that blacks accounted for 16 per cent of the December enlistments, the fifth straight month in which the black percentage has declined.

Military officials have said they will not impose any racial quotas, but Army Secretary Howard H. Callaway indicated last year that his service would give greater emphasis to recruiting in suburban areas.

Thais To Vote Today

BANGKOK (UPI) — Millions of Thais are expected to vote Sunday in an election designed to usher in a new democratic era in Thailand after nearly 40 years of military dominance.

The voting climaxes a three-month political campaign and ends a 15-month transition period that began with a bloody student revolution in October, 1973, which brought down the former military regime.

Women Priests On Faculty

NEW YORK (AP) — The prestigious Episcopal Divinity School of Cambridge, Mass., has given faculty appointments to two women ordained Episcopal priests in defiance of church rules.

The women, the Rev. Susan Hiatt of Philadelphia and the Rev. Carter Heyward of New York, will have full priestly rights, including the celebration of holy communion.

In a statement Friday, the seminary said the appointments were approved by an 8 to 5 vote of the board of trustees and gave the women "all the privileges of other ordained members of the seminary faculty."

Gromyko To Visit Egypt

CAIRO (UPI) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko will visit Egypt Feb. 3 for talks with government officials, Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi announced Saturday.

In a statement distributed by the Middle East News Agency, Fahmi said President Anwar Sadat received a message from Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party.

Fahmi said Sadat also has received a message from President Ford, but did not reveal its contents.

Cosmonauts Begin Third Week

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts began their third week aboard the Salyut 4 space station Saturday. They did scientific experiments, ran the vacuum cleaner and received radioed greetings from family and friends, Tass said.

It was supposed to be a day of rest for Lt. Col. Alexei Gubarev, the mission commander, and civilian flight engineer Georgi Grechko. But they asked ground controllers if they could do some unplanned work, the agency said.

Controllers sent back a message saying: "Your enthusiasm is most welcome, but you are to work only until lunchtime."

Riot In Portugal

A hospital spokesman said four policemen and two demonstrators were injured by rocks.

Kissinger Visits Nixon

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was spending a private weekend with friends here after visiting with former President Richard Nixon in their first face-to-face meeting since Nixon resigned.

Kissinger spent about four hours Friday at Nixon's oceanside villa, Casa Pacifica, apparently dining with the former chief executive.

Likely To Block Oil Fee

WASHINGTON(UPI) — Congressional Democrats appear likely to block President Ford's price-raising $3 per barrel fee on imported oil, but a victory will put the political onus on them to come up quickly with an energy program of their own.

Democrats are generally agreed that if Congress blocks the Ford import fee plan for 90 days, as expected, they must either produce a program within that time or stand back in embarassment and allow Ford to impose the fees after all, while—probably—criticizing them for the delay.

Auto Layoffs To Rise

DETROIT (AP) — Layoffs in the auto industry will rise by 20,000 next week, to nearly 248,-000, as the nation's car makers maintain a slow production pace to match the continued sales slump.

Despite an improvement in sales in mid-January, the industry still has more than a third of its 687,000 hourly employes off the job. Some 185,000 are on indefinite furlough.

Sharply reduced sales this model year have left dealers with a record 100-day car supply.

Some 329,00 workers—nearly half the industry's blue collar work force—have been scheduled for layoffs of varying periods during January, with furloughs in any given week from 280,000 to 230,000.

The companies are closing 16 assembly operations next week, compared with 11 this week, when 228,000 workers were off the job.

Search For Terrorists

BY ANDREW TULLY III

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police and federal agents Saturday mounted a full scale manhunt for at least two Puerto Rican terrorists believed responsible for the bombing of a colonial era tavern jammed with diners, killing 4 persons and injuring at least 45.

The Friday noontime explosion ripped through an 18th Century annex to the famed Fraunces Tavern where George Washington bade farewell to his officers in 1783. A note found by police and signed by a Puerto Rican nationalist group said the bomb was aimed at "reactionary corporate executives."

The tavern and its annex, in the heart of lower Manhattan's financial district, also housed the Anglers' Club, a private eating club. Both are popular with Wall Street financial and business executives.

Lt. Kenneth O'Neil said the bomb contained "something in the nature of 10 sticks of dynamite."

He said the bomb was activiated by a "short delay mechanism. I think they were looking for a prominent landmark and this served their purpose...they didn't care if they killed people."

Police found a note in a phone booth near the tavern signed by the terrorists. It warned the American government it had "unleashed a storm from which you cannot escape."

The note said the bomb had been planted in retaliation for a bomb allegedly placed by the Central Intelligence Agency Jan. 11 in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, in which two supporters of Puerto Rican independence were killed and 11 bystanders injured.

Friday's explosion blasted through the floor of the second story Angler's Club, hurling patrons of the tavern and club to the floor and filling the air with splintered furniture and debris.

Three persons were killed outright. They were identified as Harold Sherburne, 66, of New York and Pine Orchard, Conn.; Frank Connor, 33, of Fairlawn, N.J., and Alejundro Berger, 30, of Cherry Hill, N.J.

A fourth man, James Dezork, 32, of Wilmington, Del., died Friday evening in a hospital.

One of the injured, Camille Pesce, 19, of Palisades Park, N.J., remained in critical condition Saturday. Seven others remained hospitalized in fair condition.

Five Dead In Plane Crash

By DANIEL C. RIKER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A small plane descending through low clouds toward Washington National Airport hit a radio tower and crashed in flames Saturday, killing five persons including the publisher of the Columbus, Ohio, Evening Dispatch and two Columbus executives.

Flaming debris fell on the American University campus in northwest Washington, where the radio tower was located. Most of the wreckage came to rest in the back yard of the university president's home, setting fire to a small shed.

A National Transportation Safety Board spokesman said all aboard the twin-engine plane, including the pilot and co-pilot, died in the crash.

The victims were identified as Edgar T. Wolfe Jr., 49, publisher of the newspaper; Carlton Dargusch Jr., executive secretary of the Ohio Broadcasters Association and the former law partner of Attorney General William Saxbe; Fred LeVeque, 49, a prominent Columbus real estate executive; Richard White, 50, the pilot; and Bob Hatem, 29, the co-pilot.

Love Is Needed

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — The new Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan, began his tenure by calling on Christians to help the poor and observing: "The world desperately needs loving."

"We must grow till our arms get right round the world," said Dr. Coggan, 65, enthroned Friday as the 101st archbishop at Canterbury Cathedral in a 90-minute ritual dating from the installation of St. Augustine in 597 A.D.

Police marksmen on rooftops overlooking the cathedral and squads with Alsatian dogs guarded against possible attacks stemming from the sectarian strife in Northern Ireland. No one was allowed near the cathedral for several days before the ceremony without a pass.

Vatican envoys attended the enthronement for the first time in the 400 years since the Church of England denied papal supremacy and broke with Roman Catholicism. Pope Paul VI was represented by Jan Cardinal Willebrands, head of the Secretariat for Christian Unity.

Kennedy Calls For End Of Aid To Vietnam

By JOHN F. BARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., called Saturday for an end to all U.S. military aid to Indochina and an immediate truce in South Vietnam.

In a statement on the eve of the second anniversary of the Paris agreements, Kennedy said "the President's request of $520 million in special military funds for Saigon and Phnom Penh borders on fiscal irresponsibility."

"Congress must finally put an end to this senseless spending for a war most Americans no longer support," Kennedy said.

"What we need today is an immediate truce in South Vietnam. We need a return to the conference table, and a renewal of diplomatic efforts to accomplish the political goals of the ceasefire agreements," he said.

"I think the American taxpayer would be shocked to learn that the ceasefire war has already cost the United States some $8 billion. And no matter how often Congress acts to limit federal spending in Indochina, the administration always finds ways to spend more by backdoor financing or supplemental appropriations," Kennedy said.

He said "there apparently remains a determination within the administration to impose its views on the countries of the area. And in the absence of any change in Vietnam, on American terms, we shall continue to fuel a senseless war."

Kennedy noted administration claims that failure of Congress to grant further military aid would be a violation of the "clear understandings" South Vietnam had been given at the time of the ceasefire.

"What understandings? And who made them? And why are they hidden from Congress and the American people?" Kennedy asked.

Plan Vigil For MIA

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Antiwar activists and the families of nearly 1,000 men still missing in Southeast Asia both plan candlelight protest vigils outside the White House tonight.

The two demonstrations on the anniversary of American withdrawal from the nation's longest conflict reflect the opposite poles of U.S. post-war attitudes toward Vietnam. It appeared almost certain their paths would cross.

The antiwar National Students Association met Saturday to map a three-day campaign, including a candlelight march around the White House, opposing President Ford's emergency request for $300 million in supplemental military aid to South Vietnam.

Activist Tom Hayden said the antiwar movement would work to defeat Ford's request in Congress. He refused to rule out the possibility of street demonstrations to protest continued American aid to Saigon.

Elsewhere in Washington, meanwhile, the families of nearly 1,000 missing American servicemen gathered to demonstrate they are "tired of waiting" for long-promised help from their government. Their plans included a candlelight vigil in Layfette Park, across Pennsylvania Ave. from the White House.

Angered by what they consider governmental indifference, hundreds of relatives urged increased pressure on Hanoi to learn the fate of those they call the "orphans of the peace"—servicemen who disappeared without a trace during the nine years of U.S. participation in the Indochina war.

Two organizations which have been active since 1969 in the cause of men missing in action in Indochina, VIVA and the League of Families, cooperated in the new MIA protest. VIVA stands for Voices in Vital America, and is dedicated to maintaining a drumfire of publicity and protest so the men still unaccounted for will not be forgotten.

Rep. G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss., in a speech prepared for the VIVA meeting, said he has found no evidence of "any real initiative to secure a factual accounting directly from the Communist regimes or through third party countries."

"Even though I am not encouraged to believe any servicemen are still alive, based on the information at hand, I am not willing to take the word of Communist officials without the cold, hard facts called for under the Paris peace accords," he said.

Montgomery said he was sure the Communists would not allow inspection of air crash sites "until we bring some type of pressure to bear on them."

VIVA spokeswoman Page Derks of Los Angeles said the families have written an open letter to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, to appear in Monday morning newspapers, and are hoping to receive his response.

If they have not heard from him by 1:30 pm EST Monday, she said, the entire group plans to go to the State Department to see him.

ECU Medical School May Not Need $54 Million

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—A long-time supporter of East Carolina University says the Greenville school may not need all of the $54 million currently earmarked for development of its medical school.

Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, said Friday that ECU will probably be able to save money with modifications in current plans to develop the school.

If Rountree proves right, it could free a substantial amount of money for other purposes, giving new hope to supporters of a proposed veterinary school at N.C. State and a new law school building at N.C. Central University in Durham.

ECU's chancellor, Dr. Leo Jenkins, said Friday it would be premature to predict that ECU would not need all the money it currently has in the budget proposal of the Advisory Budget Commission.

Jenkins confirmed, however, that ECU is currently studying the possibility of doing without its own teaching hospital and using instead a wing that would be added on to Pitt Memorial Hospital, which is currently under construction.

$20 million of the suggested ECU appropriation is for construction of the teaching hospital. Legislative sources said Friday that using Pitt Memorial instead could save $10 million without jeopardizing ECU's accreditation application.

Jenkins said ECU would like to save money in any way it could, but he declined to make a prediction until the fledgling medical school hires a new dean. "You couldn't ask a new man to come in here without giving him some input into the planning," Jenkins said.

If the $10 million or more were freed for other uses by a revised ECU plan, there would probably be a scramble for the dollars among agencies and interest groups which were disappointed by the Advisory Budget Commission.

Among them would be the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, who saw their $50 million top priority capital improvements request slashed to $7 million. The ECU appropriation and the $3.5 million the board asked for beginning the veterinary school were treated separately. The veterinary school was cut from the final budget proposal.

Restoration of some of the board's request would give new hope to supporters of a proposed $2.5 million law school building at N.C. Central. It is currently not in the top priority category, but a $2.5 million nursing school building for the predominantly black Durham campus is.

Rep. H.M. Michaux, D-Durham, said Friday that N.C. Central would like to use the nursing school allocation for the law school building, and use the old law building for the nursing school.

But one legislative source said that just because new money may come from the ECU allocation does not mean it will stay within the university system budget.

It could also be used to raise state teachers' pay or to form the nucleus of the $75 million needed to repeal the sales tax on food this year, he said.

Explosion On Irish Border

MOTORCYCLE CRASH . . . Lewis Cannon II of Stokes was injured Friday night when the motorcycle he was operating collided with a car operated by Eleanor Morris of Plymouth on N.C. highway 33 near Stokes, according to the Pitt County Highway Patrol. Cannon was listed in fair condition in the intensive care unit of Pitt County Hospital Saturday. Investigation of the accident is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By FRANK JOHNSTON

BELFAST (UPI) — A landmine explosion on the Irish Republic border wounded a British soldier Saturday and there were fears an expected Irish Republican Army cease-fire could be jeopardized by treatment of IRA hunger-striking prisoners in Ireland.

Expectations, nevertheless, remained high in Northern Ireland that the IRA would declare a cease-fire within 48 hours, restoring peace to the province after 10 days of sporadic attacks on military and other targets following termination of the IRA's 25-day Christmas holiday truce Jun. 16.

British army officials said they considered the landmine incident at Crossmaglen, 60 miles south of Belfast, part of the IRA's final flurry before downing weapons in an indefinite truce Monday.

Taped Evidence Submitted In Trial

By DAN LOHWASSER

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A detective was called to the witness stand Saturday to corroborate the testimony of a shoplifter who said she sold stolen goods to Mrs. Marguerite Lightner, wife of Raleigh's first black mayor.

Detective Norris Privete confirmed he had supplied Mrs. Linda Jones, a confessed shoplifter and heroin addict, with electronic devices to record conversations Mrs. Jones had with Mrs. Lightner.

Mrs. Jones, who cooperated with police in hopes of winning a lighter sentence for herself, has testified in detail concerning the alleged conversations.

Mayor Clarence Lightner has been at his wife's side throughout the week-long trial, which has been highlighted by Mrs. Jones' testimony that she stole expensive clothing and food stuffs and sold them to the mayor's wife.

Mrs. Lightner is charged with conspiracy to receive and dispose of stolen goods.

In one of the conversations, Mrs. Jones testified Friday, Mrs. Lightner cautioned her daughter against telling her father that she (Mrs. Lightner) was purchasing stolen clothing because, "Daddy would kill me."

Mrs. Jones has stuck by her story despite stiff cross examination by defense attorneys. The defense will begin presenting its case next week, but Mrs. Lightner is not expected to take the stand.

Friday Mrs. Jones read from transcripts of two taped conversations, allegedly made Nov. 26 and 27, 1974. The dialogue indicated Mrs. Jones was showing Mrs. Lightner a coat which Mrs. Lightner believed to be stolen, although it was one that police had supplied to Mrs. Jones for the purpose of gaining evidence against Mrs. Lightner.

"I know you would have a fit if I even thought of letting someone else have it," Mrs. Jones quoted herself as saying.

"This is gorgeous, ain't it?" Mrs. Lightner allegedly replied.

The coat, however, did not fit Mrs. Lightner and she allegedly kept it for a friend to try on.

Mrs. Jones said the next night she returned to the Lightner home and was paid $95 for the coat.

Tax For Social Security?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory panel says $7 billion in income tax revenue should go to help finance the Social Security System. That could add substantially to a national debt already expanding at what some officials say is an alarming rate.

The system has been on a pay-as-you-go basis since its beginning in the 1930s. It is now financed exclusively by payroll taxes on workers and employers.

The Social Security Advisory Council said Friday that the system needs either the subsidy or higher payroll taxes. Otherwise, the system will run up a deficit of $3 billion to $4 billion in calendar 1976, it said.

Half of the needed $7 billion is to cover an expected 8½ per cent benefit increase, a Social Security spokesman said.

Quakes Shake Imperial Valley

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — Three more earthquakes shook the Imperial Valley Saturday morning, bringing to at least 29 the number of tremors which have jolted Southern California during the past two weeks.

The quakes have caused no injuries and only minor damage.

Saturday's tremors, which occurred at 6:31, 6:54 and 7:09 a.m., registered from 3.8 to 4.2 on the Richter scale.

Funerals Instead of Reunion

They came together instead at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital to mourn the deaths of five of their number in a plane crash survived only by an infant girl.

The baby, 15-month-old Holly Hill, was in fair condition with minor cuts and scratches, hospital spokesmen said.

Reletives identified the dead as John Gary Hill, 28, pilot of the plane, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; his wife, Jean, 24; Rufus H. Robinson, 50; and his brother, Joseph Robinson, 45, both of Deerfield Beach, Fla.; and William Felton, 56, of Pompano Beach, Fla.

The Hills were the baby's parents.

Storm Lashes Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Tropical storm Lola lashed the Philippines with winds up to 80 miles an hour Friday, leaving at least four persons dead, three injured, 5,000 homeless and heavy damage, officials said.

Weathermen said the storm weakened Friday night, then headed toward the South China Sea.

Natural Gas Earnings Up

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Despite the natural gas shortage, Piedmont Natural Gas Co. has reported an increase in total revenue, net income and earnings per share for the 12 months ending Dec. 31.

The company said a substantial portion of the increase was due to a nonrecurring emergency gas purchase from Washington Gas Light Co. of Washington, D.C, which was resold to industrial customers.

Net income rose 14.5 per cent to $6.08 million on revenues of $75.07 million, which were up 11.8 per cent over last year.

Earnings per share were $2.45, up from $2.19 a year earlier.

Days Work For United Fund

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Most of the 600 workers at Kemp Furniture Industries showed up on a nonwork day Friday to help the Wayne County United Way campaign attain its goal of $379,418.

The workers contributed a day's pay, which the company said it would match. The campaign had fallen $58,000 short of its goal, but Friday's intake pushed its total over $47,800.

Like A Plumbing Course

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Sex education should be taken from the classroom and returned to the home where it can be taught within the family's own value system, a sex counselor said Friday.

"Sex education in schools is basically a course in plumbing," said Dr. Sol Gordon, professor of child and family studies at Syracuse University.

During a speech at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Gordon said classrooms were not equipped to communicate the emotional values that belong in meaningful relationships.

One Bill Passed In 8 Days

RALEIGH (UPI) — During its first eight days in session, the 1975 North Carolina General Assembly has enacted one bill, is on the verge of enacting another and is faced with a number of major pieces of legislation.

The lone measure approved by both houses during the first four days in session was a bill to restore the state's right turn on red light law for motorists —which had been abolished effective Jan. 1 by the 1974 session by mistake.

A bill abolishing the one-week waiting period for the state's nearly 200,000 unemployed before they can apply for benefits has cleared the Senate and is expected to win House approval later this week.

Other key legislation introduced during the past week includes bills to:

—Eliminate age discrimination in auto liability insurance, sent to the House Insurance Committee to await a joint hearing with a yet-to-be submitted companion measure in the Senate;

—Provide $6.9 billion for the state's 1975-77 budget; referred to the House Base Budget Committee;

—Bar the state from regulating the personal appearance of state employes or imposing sanctions against state employes because of their appearance; sent to the state personnel committee;

—Require state government to perform energy consumption analyses on major construction projects and renovations to state buildings; assigned to House Rules Committee temporarily;

—Establish a commission to study and examine the educational, vocational and work programs for female inmates in the state prisons; temporarily referred to the House Rules Committee;

—Abolish the fuel adjustment clause used by utilities in passing on fuel price hikes to customers; assigned to the Senate Public Utilities Committee;

—Appropriate state funds to cover instructional fees now being paid to local school systems by students; asssigned temporarily to the House Rules Committee;

—Appropriate state funds to sponsor summer recreation programs and make use of public school recreational facilities in the summer; House Rules Committee;

Major legislation introduced during the first week of the session and now pending before committees in the House or Senate for consideration includes bills to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution; abolish North Carolina's death penalty; to abolish two of the three cents state sales tax on food; and to eliminate the sales tax charged on returnable drink bottles.

Bangladesh Adopts One Party Rule

DACCA (UPI) — Three-year-old Bangladesh Saturday adopted one-party rule and elected Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman its first president "to ensure an effective administration and a Socialist economy to end exploitation."

Terming the constitutional change a second revolution for the 70 million Bengalis, Rahman told parliament after it elected him unanimously that he would work to "ensure democracy of the exploited masses and to end all forms of injustice and exploitation."

Rahman was sworn in as president for a five-year term after parliament adopted the constitutional change without debate. Parliament is controlled by the president's ruling Awami League party, now the only political party in the land.

Rahman called on the Bengalis to unite "to ensure an effective administration and a Socialist economy to end exploitation."

One-party rule, Rahman said, "will also be a democracy where the people will have their rights." He called on the Bengali people to "join in the national development and take a new approach and begin a new life afresh."

"This is our second revolution," Rahman declared, referring to independence from Pakistan three years ago as the first.

Five Held In Slaying Of Pantego Bank Teller

ROBBERY SCENE — Gunmen held up this branch of the Southern Bank here Friday morning, taking an undetermined amount of money and killing a woman teller. (AP Wirephoto)

PANTEGO, N. C. (AP) — Five men were held without privilege of bond Saturday, charged in a bank robbery slaying that shocked this small eastern North Carolina town.

Mrs. Dorothy Cuthrell, about 50, working alone after opening the Pantego branch of the Southern National Bank and Trust Co., was left fatally wounded Friday morning.

Within about three hours the five men had been arrested, four in one car and one in another car and both about 75 miles apart, according to Highway Patrol Lt. Carl Gilchrist.

Four men were arrested in neighboring Hyde County within an hour by Trooper R. W. Dale on U. S. 264 east of Pantego. One man was arrested about noon on U. S. 64 north of Pantego by patrol Sgt. G. S. Ake.

Gilchrist credited Dale with turning up undisclosed evidence later in the day which led to charges against the men.

They were held in the Beaufort County jail at Washington and were identified as John Lawrence, 27, and George W. Phifer, 40, both of New York City; Hillary R. Boyce, 26, of Jersey City, N. J.; and Leroy Armond, 40, and Isiah A. Peterson, 47, both of nearby Belhaven.

Lawrence, Phifer and Hillary were charged with murder and Armond and Peterson were charged with accessory to murder, Gilchrist said.

Gilchrist said large amounts of money were found in each of the cars and an automatic pistol was found in the car carrying the four men.

Gilchrist said the recovered money corresponded approximately to the amount the bank said was missing.

The robbery was discovered about 9:15 a.m. when a woman customer entered but could see no one in the bank, although she saw money on the floor. She went next door to sound the alarm.

Belhaven Police Chief Rudolph Hall, who was dispatched to the scene by the Beaufort County Sheriff's Department, said he found Mrs. Cuthrell, who was still alive.

Hall said she spoke to him briefly, but he did not disclose what she said. Mrs. Cuthrell died a short time later.

It was the fifth bank robbery in North Carolina this week and the 12th this year.

The bank posted a $5,000 reward in the case.

Bill Would Abolish Age As Insurance Factor

by ELIOT BRENNER

RALEIGH (UPI) — It took less than four hours for the insurance industry last week to get wind of legislative maneuvers to change North Carolina's insurance laws.

Rap. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, submitted a bill that would eliminate age classifications in auto liability rates and just four hours later representatives of the insurance industry were in the Houses clerk's office checking off the 55 names on the bill so they could mount their lobbying effort.

Insurance has been one of the more touchy subjects in the General Assembly in the past and this year will be no exception.

Hightower's bill, written with the approval of Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, would abolish age as a criteria for liability insurance and authorize Ingram to set up new ratings based on motorists driving and accident record.

In addition, the bill, which has been sent to the House Insurance Committee, would also provide that drivers rated as poor because of their past record pay premium surcharges that would cover no less than one-third the amount insurers need to cover claims.

A similar measure has yet to be introduced in the Senate, but when it is, House Insurance Committee chairman Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, promises joint public hearings for the industry and others to present their arguments.

A move last year to institute a form of no-fault insurance cleared the Senate but died a slow death in a House committee. But it's just a matter of time before the issue raises its head again in this session.

After 30 Years, An Award For World War II Marine

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Marine Sgt. John "Smokey" Smoyak, leader of the hazardous World War II mission on Iwo Jima 30 years ago and now a jobless cancer victim, will be decorated next week with the Bronze Star for heroism.

Smoyak's commanding officer verbally recommended him for the medal after Smoyak and his squad survived a night 300 yards in front of U.S. lines monitoring Japanese preparations for an anticipated attack.

But the commander was injured before the order went into writing. Smoyak suffered a shrapnel injury two days later and also was evacuated.

More than 5,000 Marines died in the month-long battle to take Iwo Jima in February 1945.

"It was a mixup that lasted for 30 years. We feel that we owe it to him," Marine Col. James L. Day, director of the 4th Marine Corps District here, said Friday.

The ceremony, with a band and color guard, will be held next Friday at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Tom Weiner, 49, a former Marine who served with Smoyak and who now is an assistant high school principal in Deptford, N.J., recalled the mission: "Going out there meant almost certain death. Smokey was between us and the Japanese. We thought they were going to have an all-out attack. Smokey would have been the first to get it. He spent the night out there calling back what the Japs were up to."

Weiner did not accompany Smoyak on the detail.

"It's a surprise to me," Smoyak said in a telephone interview Friday from his home in Eatontown, N.J. "Everybody who was on Iwo should be decorated. Right now I'm doing absolutely nothing. I had cancer and had an operation on it ....I still can't work, though. I had a heart attack. It's kept me home."

Farm Short Course Begins February 3

Bankers in North Carolina are continuing their award-winning service to agriculture through the sponsorship for the 23rd year the annual two-week Short Course in Modern Farming at North Carolina State University, set for February 3-14, in Raleigh.

Scholarships for 2,402 young North Carolinians involved in agriculture have been provided by the hometown banks of this state since the Short Course began in 1953.

This week, the County Key Banker for Pitt County, J. W. Pou, announced that the banks in Pitt County will send two young farmers to Raleigh for the Short Course. All expenses will be paid by the banks.

Attending the Short Course from this county will be Clifton Dixon, Route 2, Greenville, and Kenneth Manning, Jr., Route 1, Bethel.

An enrollment of around 100 is expected for the 1975 Short Course. While in Raleigh these young farmers from all sections of North Carolina will learn to recognize and evalute technology in a changing agribusiness environment. The program covers broad areas of interest to agricultural leaders and specific commodity information.

8th Precinct Meets Jan. 30

On Thursday, January 30 at 8 p.m. a meeting for all voters in the newly redesignated Eight Precinct in Greenville will be held in Room 214 of Joyner Library.

In December 1974, the Second Precinct in Greenville was merged with the Eight Percinct due to the fact the Second Precinct was not growing in voter count, and because it is a small precinct. This action was taken by the Pitt County Board of Elections.

The January 30 meeting, for the purpose of electing a precinct chairman, was suggested by Pitt County Democratic Chairman Henry Oglesby. Jack Gross, chairman of the former Second Precinct; and Carl Darden, chariman of the enlarged Eighth Precinct, are scheduled to be present.

Registered voters are asked to attend in order to elect a new precinct chairman.

Jack Spain To Head AAG

CHAPEL HILL—Jack H. Spain of Greenville has been named head class agent for the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's Alumni Annual Giving campaign for 1974-75.

Spain, a 1923 graduate of the university, will direct the AAG effort for his class. He is former administrative assistant to the former Senator Sam Ervin. He was administrative assistant to the late Senator Clyde Hoey and was mayor of Greenville in 1939-40. He is now retired.

Since its beginning in the fall of 1952, AAG has raised over $3,5000,000 for the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Keep School Planning Flexible

It appears that plans are finally moving along again for the new school to be built near the Evans Park off Hooker Road.

Once envisioned as a junior high school (seventh, eighth and ninth grades) the city board of education decided last week to develop the school for sixth and seventh graders. This would mean that elementary schools would house students from grades one through five. For the sixth and seventh grades all city students would go to the new school. All eighth and ninth grades would be at Aycock School and then all students would go to Rose High for tenth, 11th and 12th grades.

The board was also told that final action has been taken to acquire the site of the school at a cost of $143,180. It will be adjacent to the Arlington Boulevard proposed extension across from the Evans Park.

Several reasons were given for making the new school a facility for sixth and seventh graders. Included were simplicity of administration, ease of teacher placement and creating more space in elementary schools.

Mrs. Terry Shank, member of the board also pointed out it would eliminate competition in sports and other events that would occur if there were two junior high school.

Finally, she said, the construction of a school for sixth and seventh graders would reduce the cost factor since expensive and sophisticated science equipment would not be required, as it is for older students.

The basic over-all plan seems all right to us, but we would urge the planners to make the design of the building as flexible as possible, so that the building could be converted to a conventional junior high if need be in the future.

The plan seems to suit Greenville at its present size, but there is reason to believe there is more growth ahead for our city. It may be that several junior highs will be needed as our population grows, and possibly another senior high.

A building built for sixth and seventh graders could have the flexibility in it to convert it to use by the higher grades, if we plan carefully. That might save us a considerable investment in the future.

"But then...after we bought Fort Knox...the rest of the deal was quite simple."

Pay Raise Issue A Hot One

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Tar Heels can expect some wailing and gnashing of teeth from state employes who are not on the receiving end of hefty pay hikes in the proposed state budget for 1975-77.

Teachers had pushed for a "cost-of-living" increase of 10 per cent in each of the coming two years, and an additional three per cent hike to make up for a raise last year lower than they thought proper.

State employes (other than teachers) had not spelled out their terms through their associations, but had based a pitch on the need for a cost-of-living increase.

Instead, the budget put forth by Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., and the Advisory Budget Commission recommends a five per cent pay raise beginning July, 1975—and no pay hike the following year. Total cost of that proposal alone will run $76.5 million in the coming fiscal year, and another $77.6 million the next to continue salaries at the higher level.

If any one thing is likely to prompt legislators to return to Raleigh for annual session, the pay issue is it. Observers agree that the absence of a pay raise of suitable proportions, and the suggestion that no pay raise be given in 1976, has left the door open for future consideration if economic conditions improve.

What's Missing?

What is not recommended in a budget proposal to the General Assembly is often as important as what is.

Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., says he does not expect department chiefs to lobby for increased programs beyond those recommended in his budget—for the simple reason there's no money. But, he is not telling them don't try. Both the Department of Public Instruction and the university system are likely to give lobbying a try, since both are hard hit.

—A $25 million assault on reading problems. The governor says that is throwing money at the problem without knowing the answers, and goes instead for a $2.7 million pilot research project to try to find what will work.

—An $8.9 million early childhood screening program to "catchup" all pre-kindergarten children in thorough testing to detect emotional, mental, physical and social disorders apt to hinder learning; trimmed to a $3.5 million pilot project to screen some 10,000 first year; 35,000 the following.

—Both a veterinarian school at N. C. State, and a "related facility" at predominately black A&T in Greensboro, and a new building at the N. C. Central University law school.

—A prison building program of some $200 million, including delay of renovation at old Central Prison; trimmed to $38.1 million and likely to cut even more.

—Proposed headquarters building for State Bureau of Investigation ($6 million), and adding 300 new highway patrolmen.

Teacher Decline

A steady drop in public school enrollment is cutting ever more sharply into the numbers of jobs available for regular classroom teachers.

Figures contained in the new state budget show the decline continuing through 1977, and experts say the birth rate projections will reflect a continuing decline.

Expanded teacher employment is taking place in special skill areas such as kindergarten, learning disabled, exceptional children, and reading.

But in regular classroom work, numbers of teachers are linked to numbers of pupils on a 25-to-one ratio.

Thus, a pupil drop of 8,709 projected for next year, and of 4,926 the following year is coupled to a corresponding loss of 270 classroom teachers.

Chilly Swim Custom

By KEN CAFARELL

BOSTON (UPI) — In 1869 some hardy soul thought it would be invigorating to take a midwinter dip in Boston Harbor and started a tradition that has left many Bostonians shivering in their galoshes.

Every day of the year a small, grizzled group that includes septuagenarians dashes briefly into the frivid waters from the L Street Bath House, sometimes chopping through several inches of ice to take their constitutional.

Because of that, the L Street Brownies have acquired a national reputation akin to that of the famous Polar Bear Club. But the Boston organization is a social club that brings together the most diverse elements in the city in a sharing of a common heritage.

"Out on the beach they're all the same," said William Toland, 77, president of the Brownies for the past 11 years. "We have doctors, lawyers, professional people of all kinds, businessmen, laborers —you name it."

"Out on the beach you can feel the pulse of the city just by listening to the conversation," he said.

"Most of the members (about 700) have their roots in South Boston. They move away, then come back to visit and want to find out about their old friends. They just go down to the bath house and they find out.

"Sometimes they start talking to a stranger and find out he's a cousin," Toland said.

The club's reputation rests on six or seven rugged men who, from habit and a sense of tradition, swim daily.

"It's just one of those things that you do because you've always done it," said Toland.

Sunday Morning Notes

The 500,000 gallon water tank on Greenville Boulevard at 14th Street is being repainted. Workmen sand-blasted the tank and then applied a primer coat of bright orange. Over the weekend pranksters climbed the tank and last week the word. "SunKist", a popular brand name for oranges, appeared on the side of the tank.

A worker at the tank said whoever did it was "pretty good with a brush."

The work was all for naught, however; the bright orange tank, wording and all, was covered with a coat of blue late last week. Some 40 to 50 gallons of paint are required to cover the tank.

Jane wondered what it was.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Turned out that was right. The big steel tank had been specially fabricated as a bulk storage tank for the newspaper's ink supply.

Since Jack had seen drawings of it, he recognized it.

D. J. Whichard, chairman of The Daily Reflector board, and your columnist got behind the same truck carrying the tank on Charles Boulevard. We, too, wondered what it was, but we didn't figure it out—until the truck pulled into The Daily Reflector parking lot.

A girl who was recently married was asked how she liked married life.

A youth entered a restaurant and looked around.

"Can I help you" the waitress asked.

The youth replied that he was looking for a girl and described her.

40 Years Ago Today

January 26, 1935

A comprehensive driver's license bill, to become effective immediately after its ratification by the General Assembly, has already been decided upon by the joint sub-committee on roads. Actual translation into bill form is being done by Charles Whedbee, legislative advisor to Governor Ehringhaus. It will be submitted to the roads committee as a whole next Tuesday.

The bill will provide for a period of grace in which drivers who can show that they have been driving for six months or more and have not been arrested for violation of existing regulations may obtain a license without examination.

After the grace period, all drivers will be required to pass an exmination, the rules to be laid down by the highway department. The acutal exmination will be in the hands of the highway patrol.

The highway patrol is to be increased to between 150 and 200 men during this legislative session.

INSIDE REPORT

Jackson 'Abandons' Saigon

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Sen. Henry M. Jackson, long a rugged and lonely champion of strong national defense and this country's international commitments, has decided to oppose emergency military aid for embattled South Vietnam—a drastic change casting sober shadows on both Indochina and the Seantor.

Jackson's astonishing decision derives from his new premise that no further American aid can save South Vietnam, a conclusion reached long ago by dovish Senators he has always opposed. That Jackson has reached agreement with them so late in the day arouses suspicion that presidential politics is the cause. Jackson does not claim South Vietnam can survive without U.S. aid but seems content with a virtual death sentence for the South Vietnamese against Hanoi's legions, well-equipped by Moscow and Peking. That puts Scoop Jackson in step with his arch-enemy and the most passionate foe of Saigon, Sen. George McGovern.

In the State Department, Jackson has been viewed as the indispensable Democratic supporter of President Ford's request for another $300 million to send desperately needed ammunition and aviation fuel to Vietnam. Chances of the Democratic Congress fulfilling U.S. commitments to Saigon were slender at best. Now they may be gone.

But apart from the abandonment of Indochina, there will be an impact on Jackson's long campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, which even skeptics believe has become realistic. While this late conversion on Vietnam will not dim the anti-Jackson animus of the party's left wing, it will dishearten—even sicken—many old admirers. To them, it is evidence of what can happen to courageous public servants hypnotized by the beacon of the White House.

Until now, Jackson's courage on Vietnam has been unique among nationaly ambitious Democrats. His support of Kennedy-Johnson intervention in Vietnam was the rule rather than the exception for Democratic Senators. But while Democrats were tumbling over each other to repudiate Saigon once Republican Richard M. Nixon became President, Jackson strongly supported Vietnamization.

He did object to Nixon's use of American troops in the 1970 Cambodian incursion. But as recently as April 21, 1972, Jackson said he did not consider it "responsible" for Sen. Edmund Muskie to threaten to withdraw military aid from Vietnam. As for Nixon's bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong, he complained it came "about six years late."

The South Vietnamese army (ARVN) has since survived without American ground or air support. But even so, Jackson displayed private disenchantment about aid to Saigon. Although his own adivsers until now have persuaded him not to change position, even his warmest admirers cannot deny this disenchantment is a product of a presidential campaign which has come to dominate his thoughts.

Jackson is a realistic enough politician to know that a deathbed conversion on Vietnam cannot melt the animosity of long-time anti-war Democrats. Nor has he abandoned his lifelong commitment to a strong national defense.

Nevertheless, in over four years of tenacious national campaigning, Jackson has operated in a political world which regards those who advocate arms to protect South Vietnam as lunatics. He has spent progressively less time thinking and talking national security and almost none at all on Indochina. With his heavy emphasis on the economy-energy crisis, Jackson today is not well informed on Vietnam.

In defending his forthcoming vote against the new aid request, Jackson talks about profligate weapons firing into the air by ARVN troops imitating the departed Americans. As authority, Jackson cites Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia—a junior but highly regarded member of the Armed Services Committee recently dispatched to Vietnam for a fact-finding mission by

THE SIN OF AVARICE

What is your attitude toward money?

You may say that you have little toward which to maintain an attitude, but people's philosophy about money does not depend on the amount of it they possess. There can be just as much avarice on the part of people who have little money as on the part of people who have much and want more. In the last analysis money is power, and power, as we all know, can be used for good or evil.

Jesus left no doubts in men's minds as to what is a Christian's duty regarding money. Thirteen of his twenty-nine parables refer to the right use of money. Jesus said more about money than he did about prayer, about life after death, about church attendance, or right living. The sins which Jesus most sternly condemned centered about the wrong means of getting, keeping, and using money.

This emphasis is not difficult to understand, for all of us have a duty to concentrate all of our powers to implement what we know to be the good in this world.

Convenience Card Is Different

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Do you tend to think of all those shiny plastic cards in your wallet as credit cards? If you do, you fail to recognize a distinction the convenience card people would like you to know about.

Pressured by rising prices, many consumers are using all their cards as automatic credit devices, which some of them are. But the convenience card people say theirs aren't, and they're fed up about the situation.

"If people need credit they should use a bank card," said R. Newell Lusby, chairman and president of Diners Club which, along with American Express and Carte Blanche, offers a convenience, or travel and entertainment, card.

"If they have credit, and need convenience, they should come to us," he continued, attempting to point out the difference between a bank card, which is a credit device, and his card, which he says isn't.

The bill for a convenience card is due in full when rendered, he explained. A bank card permits you to pay your bill over a period of time, charging you interest on the unpaid balance.

When a customer uses a convenience card as a credit card — that is, extends his payments over several months instead of paying in full when the bill is presented — he forces the card company to borrow from a bank.

This, of course, is expensive, and that's why the convenience card people are cracking down on deadbeats. "You don't create any additional financial capacity by using my card," said Lusby. "We're not a new credit facility."

He goes further: "Most people probably shouldn't buy things that are not clearly within their means to pay for."

Just what is the convenience. Mainly the assurance you can transact business without cash almost anywhere and, in addition, have monthly records for accounting and tax purposes.

The convenience cards derive their income from a combination of merchant discounts and membership fees. Bank cards have small merchant discounts but rely heavily on revolving credit charges.

The convenience cards discourage use of their cards as revolving credit vehicles because they don't charge interest. The bank cards encourage credit because they do. Some even offer lines of credit in the thousands of dollars.

For these reasons you might find your bank card people encouraging you to borrow, while Lusby is doing his best to discourage it. It helps banks, it hurts the convenience cards.

Public Wary Of Reacting

PRINCETON, N.J., — With Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's refusal to rule out force in dealing with the Middle East oil situation causing worldwide debate, the latest nationwide Gallup Poll shows that only one in 10 Americans would favor military intervention in the event of another oil boycott by the Arab nations.

Most in the survey (35 per cent) believe the U.S. response should be to develop our own energy resources, while many others (24 per cent) think we should withhold the sending of food and other commodities to the Arab nations.

Kissinger's statement on the possiblility of military intervention mentioned the use of force "only in the gravest emergency" and in the event of the "strangulation of the industrialized world."

Boycott Would Have Devastating Effect

World attention is currently focused on the intentions of the Arab nations since another boycott could have a devastating effect on the economies of many nations in the world.

The views of a 41-year-old housewife, interviewed in the current survey, reflect those of many others:

"If the Arabs do that to us (impose a boycott), we should take just as drastic measures—they're heating us but we're feeding them, so we should stop feeding them."

Here are the views of a resident of Lake Worth, Fla.: "We ought to increase domestic production and cut down on our use of oil—stop high-speed driving and sacrifice unnecessary trips."

"Absolutely no war," said a San Francisco resident, "we should put our minds to getting along without their oil and learn to sacrifice."

A 52-year-old male executive from a Rye, N.Y., computer firm would not rule out the use of force: "A minority shouldn't rule the world, even if force is necessary. I don't think there should be one group controlling such a vital resource. In this country, we outlawed cartels years ago, and if force is the only way to eliminate this injustice, it may have to be used."

Vietnam Still Fresh In Minds

The use of military force for any purpose may be repugnant to many Americans because of the nation's traumatic experience with the Vietnam war. Gallup surveys in the final years of the war showed large majorities of Americans believing it was a mistake to have become involved in Vietnam.

This question was asked:

"If the Arab nations impose another oil boycott on the United States, what policy do you think the U. S. should follow?"

Here are the national findings:

What Should U.S. Do If Arabs Impose Another Boycott?

Try to become self-sufficient	35
Develop new energy resources	15
Conserve energy, don't waste	12
Ration gasoline	5
Use other forms of fuel—coal, etc—coal,	3
Economic sanctions: put embargo on Arab nations—don't send food, other items	24
Military intervention	10
Seek oil from other nations	3
Negotiate-have international conference with Arab nations	4
Meet the Arab demands-meet terms	2
Other responses (including those who say they oppose military intervention)	18
No opinion	33
	129

(*Adds up to more than 100 per cent due to multiple responses)

The findings reported today are based on telephone interviews with a total of 826 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 100 scientifically selected localities across the nation.

Yes, Now My Wife Talks To The Philodendron

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va.—My sister Patsy sent us a book for Christmas, and life around this farm for the past month has not been quite the same. It has been chattier, for one thing. My wife is talking to the philodendron, and I am arguing politics with the rubber tree. It is hard to get any work done.

The book is "The Secret Life of Plants", by Peter Tompkins and Christopher Bird. It was published by Harper & Row in 1973, but things are always a little late finding their way to Rappahannock County. If you know all about this book, and if you believe it's a pack of nonsense, kindly turn your attention to today's editorials instead. This is a serious matter.

The authors begin their account with the experiments of Cleve Backster, a lie-detector examiner. It appears that back in 1966, out of sheer curiosity, Backster hooked up his polygraph to a dracaena in his office. The dracaena is a kind of potted palm, sometimes called the dragon tree. To Backster's amazement, when he watered the plant, the polygraph registered emotion. The plant was saying, "thank you." When Backster thought about burning a leaf with a match, the polygraph registered panic. The plant was saying, "you beast!"

Other experiments followed, in the United States, in the Soviet Union, in India and elsewhere. What the experiments appeared to indicate is that plants have feelings. Plants are afraid of pain; they respond to affection; they have a flair for musical criticism; they suffer from the sulks and the blahs. When they drink too much, they complain of wet feet.

My wife read the book first. I was down at the greenhouse one morning, just puttering around, when she came in.

"Good morning, Phil," she cried. I looked around. My name isn't Phil. She was talking to the philodendron. "Howza boy?" she asked. "Sleep well?" The next thing I knew she was patting the leaves of a camellia. "Just look at your new growth," she gushed. She went to an aloe. "How are all the babies this morning?" I thought she had gone bananas.

"Don't think that," she said firmly. "The bird of paradise knows exactly what you're thinking. It doesn't like it." Sure enough, the bird of paradise was plainly offended. A geranium was curling its lip. The lemon tree looked sour.

Then I read the book. Now we have the gabbiest place in the county. To be sure, we had been talking to the birds and to the collies all along, but the birds are flighty and the collies aren't interested in much besides sports and the stock market. Once you get to know them, plants will talk about anything. The rubber tree, for example, is an old Republican type. On the morning after Sen. Carl Curtis defeated Sen. Jake Javits for whatever it was they were running for, the rubber plant put out a two-inch sprout and positively chortled.

The gardenias, as you might expect, are on the liberal side. When one of them started gloating about Mr. Hebert's ouster as chairman of House Armed Services, I threatened to prune its two top branches. The gardenia started to cry. It's hard to argue with a weepy gardenia. I don't get along too well with the fluffy ruffles, either, probably because it speaks only a fern language.

Backster and his fellow experimenters believe that some plants have enough electric potential to operate small switches on remote request. It also seems possible that plants, which cannot tell a lie, could be used as witnesses. Hook a polygraph to a philodendron and old Silent Phil will tell you if junior is swiping your gin.

Our neighbor, Mrs. Carney, the colonel's wife, read the book, too. She is a no-nonsense gardener, and didn't know quite what to think of it. But on New Year's Day she transplanted a couple of pine trees, smacked the mounded earth with her spade, and gave it to them straight: "If you bums don't grow," she said, "I'll pull you up by the roots." Those are pretty smart pine trees. Now they salute whenever she walks by, and they're growing every day. The Backster effect, as it is called, may not work for everybody, but here in the mountains, where there's nobody much to talk to, an aspidistra named Hubert is nice to have around.

Recession And Energy Policy Deeply Tangled In Auto Industry Woes

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Any solution to the twin problems of recession and energy policy are deeply tangled in the present plight and future outlook of the giant automobile industry.

For example, it's hard to see how there can be any promising recovery at the end of the slide, no matter, tax cuts or other stimulents, if automobiles are still on the sick list. The ramifications of this industry are vast.

And it's equally hard to see how autos truly get back on the track in advance of the basic energy decision Washington has to make. Rebates may well move a few of the stockpiled cars. But too many buyers want to know what use they can make of the cars in the years ahead and at what cost. And most can "make do" — wait and see.

It's the sort of situation which is going to make it difficult for Congress to simply vote tax cuts and pump up aid to the growing ranks of unemployed. It can't afford to dawdle on the energy issue without risk of both deepening and prolonging the recession.

This dilemma may actually work in favor of President Ford's energy conservation scheme. Thus far, critics have concentrated on the fact that the Ford plan is complicated — many sided, and thus hard to explain — and expensive in that it not only would like all fuel costs, but the costs of all goods and services which are big fuel users.

Little has been said of the program's impact on the auto makers. But there can be no doubt that the President and his advisers considered all angles as they put the proposal together.

It puts the industry under no direct and harsh pressure to make sudden and baic changes in production. The industry has promised to increase gasoline efficiency by 40 percent, at least, by 1980 models.

This Time lag may be too great, as many claim. And also, the improved efficiency on gas may be too little. If the program called for a sudden change in production, then buyers would stay out of the market to have a look at the "new car". The auto unions will be under pressure to curb wage demands during what might be called the transition period. If they don't then they may well remain priced out of work.

Most alternatives, the popular ones, to the Ford scheme would put the auto makers under immediate pressure to go to new small cars and new small engines. Their current venture into this area has been something short of satisfactory. They haven't match the imports in performance and comfort. And it will take time to do it.

There's no question but what a high excise tax on gasoline would cut back on fun driving and conserve energy. But this could also mean two or three years before the auto industry makes anything that can be called a recovery.

Rationing would have much the same impact on the market for automobiles. The standard auto with its high gas consumption, isn't much of a bargain if its use is severely limited.

The often mentioned who feel the need to travel could do it, although they would need to increase their vacation budgets.

Politically, anything that alters the status of the auto is risky. Ford might be best off if Congress snatches the energy ball — asserts its leadership.

Chairman John Stennis of Mississippi.

Actually, Jackson and Nunn have discussed Vietnam only briefly. While Nunn refuses comment until his Vietnam report is completed, intimates say it will support the Ford request as assuring stability of supply for Saigon. Nor is Nunn expected to charge reckless use of ammunition by government troops, who in fact are defending beleaguered positions with short arms rations imposed by congressional aid cuts.

Coming to a momentous conclusion with superficial study is wholly out of character for Jackson, whose well-deserved Capitol Hill reputation stems from careful decisions based on documentation and his staffers have not been consulted. For that reason alone, some Jackson men still hope he will change his mind as a matter of conscience.

If not, he will sadden some loyal supporters. One of these—who is also a stout defender of South Vietnam's fight for survival—recently told us he cannot bear to attend receptions and dinners at the South Vietnamese embassy, so deep is his sense of Saigon's imminent betrayal by the United States. That feeling of guilt could become overpowering if Henry M. Jackson follows his present intent.

Today In History

Today is Sunday, Jan. 26, the 26th day of 1975. There are 339 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1942, the first American expeditionary force arrived in Europe during World War II. The troops were put ashore in Northern Ireland.

On this date — In 1788, Sydney, Australia, was founded as a British penal colony.

In 1837, Michigan became the 26th U.S. state.

In 1880, Douglas MacArthur was born in Little Rock, Ark.

In 1952, the famous Shephard's Hotel in Cairo was burned by mobs demanding that the British withdraw from the Suez.

"It's something that you do automatically," he said.

But Toland himself is not among the midwinter bathers.

"It does affect the system," he said.

However, Dr. Michael J. Donovan, who at 45 is one of the younger club members, says the effect seems to be salutory.

"There are an awful lot of old men going into the water," said Donovan. "But their physical condition is remarkable —so is their longevity."

IT'LL TAKE THE WHOLE TEAM TO BEAT 'EM!

A Two-Edged Sword In The Missionary's Zeal

Have you ever noticed how people who have done something that they find satisfying personally often become self-appointed missionaries and diligently seek to convert all their friends? Like the man who recently quit smoking and takes his picture of a smoker's lung to his best friend's dinner party. Or the friend who hears you're pregnant and rushes right over to spend two hours discussing the creative value of permissive child-rearing, while her child exhibits his creative talents—by setting fire to your curtains, swinging by your hanging plant, and dropping your glass ashtray on your glass table top in order to see which one breaks first.

Now, my husband recently found that, in spite of my cooking, he had gained ten pounds in the three years we've been married. Hoping to convert the appearance of his stomach from Jello to tempered steel, he joined the businessman's athletics course offered three nights a week at ECU. Three days after he had joined, he set about trying to convert me.

"You really need to go swimming with me," he urged, flexing his muscles and looking for all the world like the Pillsbury Doughboy in gym shorts. "It'll firm you up."

"If I firm up anymore, I'll be invisible," I quipped. "Besides, I don't like to swim."

GAIL MICHAELS

"You just don't like to swim because you don't know how," he said confidently. "But I'm going to teach you." He struck a Charles Atlas pose.

"How are you going to teach me?" I asked.

"We wouldn't be in the same pool, would we?"

"Of course, we would," he answered. "Say, honey, don't you think that since I started this course, I look a little like a blond Mark Spitz?"

"You look more like Tim Conway modelling Jockey Shorts," I snorted. "And I 'm NOT going to swim in a pool with a bunch of men!"

"Why not?" he demanded, choosing to ignore my opinion of his physique.

"Because I can remember when I had to take swimming in college, and we had to dress in those horrid little tank suits. I spent the whole class time trying to cover up with just two arms ALL of what nature hadn't given me."

"Well, you don't have to wear a tank suit," he answered, as he began to run in place. "Besides, everybody there will be swimming for their health. "I'm sure they won't notice that you're shaped like a gourd."

"They won't have a chance. I get all the exercises I need driving," I snapped.

"And just how do you get exercise, driving?" he asked incredulously.

"You should know—you're the one who bought a car without power steering," I answered. "Two more months of driving that car, and I'll be ready to meet Muhammed Ali in the ring."

"I still think you ought to go swimming with me," he persisted.

"I tell you what—you teach me to swim, and I'll teach you to needlepoint."

He threw in the towel. Conversion can work both ways.

In Midst Of Energy Shortage, N.C. Opposes Spoiling Stream

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — In the midst of a worldwide energy shortage, North Carolina has gone to court to block a hydroelectric project it says would destroy a mountain stream in the northwest corner of the state.

"A lot of political reputations are on the line in this thing," said one state government source.

The controversy, which has been brewing more than 10 years, has made allies of poor farmers who want to be left alone, crusading environmentalists, and political conservatives who feel the state should decide what happens in its own borders.

On the other side of the issue are the Appalachian Power Co., of Roanoke, Va.; the Federal Power Commission and the state of Virginia, which stands to gain economically from construction of the two dams on the New River.

Suits against the licensing of the dam have been filed in U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro and in the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. The state of Virginia has asked to join the Washington suit as a codefendant.

At the heart of the controversy is a small river that rises in the northwest mountains of North Carolina, twists through Virginia into West Virginia, where it joins a confluence of streams that spills into the Ohio River.

Despite its name, the New River is believed by geologists to be among the world's oldest streams, dating back possibly 100 million years.

Although there are several dams downstream, in North Carolina the river is still freeflowing, winding among steep hillsides and through farm land.

Cut off from the rest of North Carolina by poor roads, the people along the river in Ashe and Alleghany counties have developed a fierce independence. For generations families have tended cattle along the hills and raised corn and tobacco on the lands along the river. Many of the houses are rambling, frame dwellings.

In 1962 Appalachian Power Co. began preparations to build two dams 30 miles apart in Grayson County, Va. The dams would flood 30,000 acres, of which 13,200 would be in Ashe and Alleghany counties.

At the time the state's political leadership either approved of the project or made no attempt to stop it. Politicians who would later oppose the dam thought the project would bring in tourist dollars.

But since then, ecology has become a national crusade. Throughout the state, many wondered if the dams were worth the loss of thousands of acres of rustic scenery.

"You recall that 10 years ago, no one knew what an environmental impact statement was," said Hamilton Horton of Winston-Salem, a former state senator and chairman of the Committee To Save The New River. "No one ever laid down the pros and cons... We tended to enbrace these things on the word of whoever wanted to build them."

During the 1974 Congressional session, both of North Carolina's U.S. senators sponsored legislation to block construction of the dams until the Interior Department could determine whether the river should be protected in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

The Senate approved the bill in May; however, the House Ways and Means Committee refused to allow debate and the measure died. A similar bill has been introduced in this session by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Some lawmakers said they feared a victory by opponents of the project might open the door to other antienergy efforts.

"If they stop the production of power here, they're going to climb higher up the ladder and stop the production of nuclear power," said Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn.

The license granted by the FPC to Appalachian Power went in effect Jan. 2. However, the company said construction has been delayed pending the outcome of the court cases.

North Carolina contends the project is unnecessary and would cause severe personal and economic dislocation.

"I think to put it in laymen's terms, the detriments will far outweigh the benefits," said Millard Rich, who is handling the cases for the state Department of Justice. "Two hundred miles of river will no longer be free-flowing, 300 families will have to move, many from their ancestral homes."

Asked if the nation's energy needs should come first, Rich said, "Our position is we have to look after North Carolinians. A person losing his land is not too interested in whether a person in Ohio has all the power he wants."

The state also maintains the company's projected power requirements are unrealistically high and that the extra electricity will not be needed, Rich said.

Top Car Retailer Owes Success To Missing Dog

CAL WORTHINGTON sells more new and used cars than any retail dealer in the world. He says much of his success is due to his dog Spot; but there is no dog "Spot". (UPI Photo)

By JACK V. FOX

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Cal Worthington sells more new and used cars than any retail dealer in the world and he owes much of his success to his dog Spot.

Except there is no dog Spot.

In the grand tradition of television auto hucksters, the lanky Oklahoman sold 16,000 cars and grossed $50 million past year with a corny spoof in which he appeared with a hippo, tiger, bear, whale, possum, boa constrictor, llama, lion, lizard, goat, goose, Brahma bull and a gorilla.

Everything but a dog.

Cal chuckles in satisfaction when asked how he hit on the TV gag that has made him better known to aficionados of the late late shows than the movie stars.

"There was another Southern California dealer and he used to come on holding this little puppy close to his face," he says.

"He would nuzzle the puppy and then he would say—folks, I just got this little puppy from the pound. I just love him. Why don't you go down and get a puppy from the pound?

"I tell you, it was sickening. Made me want to throw up. He was such a phony.

"Well, I had been doing commercials just standing in front of cars. I went to a trainer and got a gorilla. Meanest animal you ever saw.

"And I went on TV with him, putting my face up close to his. And I said—folks, I just got this little fellow from the pound and I just love him. Why don't you go down and get a little fellow like this from the pound?

"Well, everybody on the set broke up. I knew I had hit on something so I went on and invented my dog Spot."

Another car salesman had a magnificent German shepherd named Storm. The dog sat on the hood of a car during the spiel.

A few weeks later Worthington came on with a pig on a leash—his dog Spot.

He wrestled with a bear. He examined a tiger's teeth. He brought on the goose, Elmer, who would bark quack when his name was whispered in his ear. He had a lizard blown up photographically until it looked like a dinosaur.

Not long ago he appeared with a calf.

"This is my dog Spot," he said. "I might give you a little bull but I wouldn't give you a bum steer."

Last year, Worthington went to Sea World in San Diego to do his bit with a killer whale.

"I was going to ride on his back around the tank waving my cowboy hat," Cal recalled. "The trainers told me I would spook the whale, he would dive and come up and bite me in two. So I just sat real still and rode my dog Spot around the tank."

Cal is almost as well known for the song he composed whose verse pledges that to sell a car "I will stand upon my head 'til my my ears are turning red."

"Has 26 stanzas," he said proudly.

Worthington almost fell off his office chair when told there was a report he was a graduate of the Harvard School of Business applying shrewd psychological sales techniques.

"I was one of nine kids and we were the most poverty stricken family you ever saw," he said. "I chopped cotton and dug ditches. I quit school when I was 15 and left home and lied about my age and got in the Civilian Conservation Corps."

Worthington said he read everything he could get his hands on and went to night school. When World War II came along, he wanted to be a pilot but the Army Air Corps would accept only applicants with at least two years college.

Cal passed an equivalency examination, became a bomber pilot and flew with the 8th Air Force over Germany. When he got out he tried for a job as an airline pilot but was turned down because he did not have a college education.

"I bought a filling station franchise in Corpus Christi for $500 and sold a few cars for customers," he recalled.

"One day I bought a car and parked it in front of the post office with a 'for sale' sign and sat on the fender and by the end of the day I sold it. Made $60.

"Well, I thought I had died and gone to heaven. I bought three more cars and rented a vacant lot and in one week I sold them and made $400 in that one week."

Since then it has been all superlatives. Last year Worthington sold more than 6,700 cars at his Dodge dealership and 9,600 at his Ford franchise.

Worthington is not rosily optimistic about the future. His sales were down sharply in November and December. He thinks the energy crisis is a long term affair that means manufacturers must give up making huge automobiles.

But Cal has no doubts about himself as a salesman.

"People like me. I'm not stuffy. I tell them that if I can't sell them a car I'll eat a bug. How can you beat that?"

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION

NOTICE OF INTENT TO HOLD PUBLIC HEARING AND ADOPT NEW RETAIL ELECTRIC RATES

The Greenville Utilities Commission of the City of Greenville has received notice that the Federal Power Commission has tentatively approved, effective February 21, 1975, a new wholesale electric rate schedule proposed by Virginia Electric Power Company.

The proposed new rate is estimated to increase Greenville Utilities Commission's annual cost of of electric power by $2,471,411.93, or 51.73 per cent, over the current base cost paid to VEPCO, exclusive of the fossil fuel charge.

To compensate for this increased wholesale cost of electric power the Greenville Utilities Commission proposed to adopt new retail electric rates effective March 1, 1975 as follows:

Residential Service

II. MONTHLY RATE

A. For billing months of June through September:

First	90 KWH at 6.11c per KWH
Next	120 KWH at 3.39c per KWH
Next	390 KWH at 2.55c per KWH
Excess Over	600 KWH at 2.86c per KWH

B. For billing months of October through May:

First	90 KWH at 6.11c per KWH
Next	120 KWH at 3.39c per KWH
Next	390 KWH at 2.55c per KWH
Next	900 KWH at 1.74c per KWH
Excess Over	1500 KWH at 1.20c per KWH

C. Where customer notifies Company that an electric storage water heater is in normal daily use and Company approves that installation as to type, design, tank size, heating element ratings and thermostatic control so that the connected load per water heater shall not exceed 5500 watts, then up to 390 kilowatthours of those in excess of the first 210 kilowatthours of monthly use shall be at 0.2 per kilowatthour less than stated in subparagraphs II. A. or II. B.

D. The minimum charge shall be $3.50 per billing month, which charge shall be increased or decreased in the amount of the applicable fossil fuel adjustments.

E. Each kilowatthour used is subject to adjustment for changes in supplier's (VEPCO) fuel costs, in accordance with VEPCO's rate for North Carolina Jurisdictional Customers.

The proposed new Residential Rates will increase the users cost approximately 20 percent (with Fuel Charge) as follows:

Copies of other proposed new electric rates, including; Outdoor Lighting Service; Municipal and Housing Authority; County, Municipal & Housing Authority All-Electric Building Service; General Service Electric Heating; and County Electric Service are available in the Business Manager's office, Greenville Utilities Building, 200 West 5th Street, Greenville, North Carolina.

The Greenville Utilities Commission proposes to maintain these rate schedules until June 30, 1975, or (1) until such time as the Federal Power Commission makes a final determination of VEPCO's Wholesale Electric Rates, or (2) until such time as the North Carolina Utilities Commission makes a final decision on VEPCO's proposed Retail Rates for North Carolina's retail customers, or (3) until such time as revenues from the proposed new rates is not sufficient to offset the Commission's cost of purchasing electric power, and the cost "to operate, maintain, improve and extend electric utilities" to serve its customers.

Notice is hereby given that on Monday night, January 27, 1975, at 8:00 P.M., in the City Council Room of the City Hall Building, 201 West 5th Street, Greenville, North Carolina, a public hearing will be held by the Greenville Utilities Commission on the proposed rates, prior to any final or formal action by the Commission.

Former Army Doctor Macdonald Charged With Murder Of Family

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Former Green Beret Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald is scheduled to be formally arraigned in Raleigh Feb. 18 on murder charges in the 1970 slayings of his wife and two daughters at Ft. Bragg.

U.S. Dist. Atty. Thomas P. McNamara said Saturday a hearing on MacDonald's return to North Carolina, similar to an extradition proceeding, probably will be held early next week in California before a U.S. magistrate.

But, McNamara said, it may be several months before MacDonald is brought to trial because of possible motions by his attorney, Bernard Segal of San Francisco.

MacDonald, an emergency-room doctor at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach, Calif., was arrested Friday at his home in Huntington Beach, Calif. He was placed in the Orange County Jail in Santa Ana under $500,000 bond.

A federal grand jury, which has been hearing evidence in the case intermittently since last August, returned a sealed envelope Friday containing the indictment. MacDonald's last appearance before the grand jury was Tuesday.

His wife, Collette, and their daughters, Kimberly and Kristen Jean, were beaten and stabbed to death Feb. 17 1970 in the family's apartment at Ft. Bragg.

MacDonald told Army investigators four hippie-types, chanting "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs!," entered the duplex and knocked him unconscious.

He said that when he regained consciousness he found his family dead and the word "Pig" scrawled in blood on the headboard of his bed. MacDonald received stab wounds in the attack.

After a five-month investigation in 1970, the army dropped charges against MacDonald, saying the charges were "not true."

Virginia Legislature Defeats ER Amendment

By SUE JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Legislators' worries were eased somewhat today, knowing that the Virginia General Assembly had disposed of one of the major controversies of the 1975 session — the Equal Rights Amendment.

A resolution to ratify the amendment was put to its death Friday by an 8-7 vote in the Senate Privileges & Elections Committee.

The same committee had raised proponents' hopes last Friday by reporting the measure for floor action by a vote of 6-5.

But proponents predicted the demise of ERA earlier this week when, after the resolution's brief consideration on the floor, the Senate voted by a narrow 21-19 margin to recommit it to committee.

That action ostensibly was to allow one committee member who had been absent last week, Sen. Paul D. Manns, D-Caroline, to cast his vote in committee.

Fuel Rate To Drop

RALEIGH (AP)—Carolina Power & Light Co. customers who have been complaining loudly about their soaring electric bills will get some relief in February.

Sherwood H. Smith Jr., CP&L executive vice president said the company's fuel adjustment charge will drop about 5 per cent in February—the second time it has dropped since it was instituted early last year.

Smith anticipated that the fuel adjustment charge will trend downward during the remainder of 1975. He predicted that by June the charge will be about 40 per cent below the January peak of $1.05 per kilowatt hour in North Carolina and .99 cents in South Carolina.

For February, the fuel adjustment charge will be 99.4 cents per kilowatt hour in North Carolina and 93.7 cents in South Carolina. State taxes cause the difference in the two states since the fuel costs in the two states are the same.

Attorney General's Office To Join Investigation

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's attorney general's office has joined a list of agencies investigating a political slush fund which John J. Ryan, former North Carolina manager for Southern Bell, said he operated.

Atty. Gen Rufus Edmisten said Friday that the investigation would be carried out under the supervision of Deputy Atty. Gen. Jean Benoy and that the investigation will not be confined to Southern Bell.

"The investigation into the matter of public service companies and the manner, and degree of compliance or non-compliance with existing law, as well as rules and regulations of the state's regulatory agencies will not be limited to Southern Bell," Edmisten said in a statement.

Edmisten said Benoy has subpoena power "and the power to grant full immunity for testimony given during the investigation."

"The investigation will be conducted with a view towards determining whether or not past violations have occurred as well as determining what, if any, additional legislation may be needed to assure compliance with the law relating to public service companies," Edmisten said.

Earlier the state Utilities Commission and Keith Snyder, U.S. attorney for North Carolina's western district said they were investigating the matter.

Ryan has stated he made contributions to various candidates in the 1972 North Carolina elections from the slush fund he said he operated with the approval of Southern Bell's top management.

Southern Bell President L.E. Rast has denied the company had ever approved a slush fund or had forced executives to contribute to candidates.

However, the company said it had discovered some $40,000 worth of bogus vouchers in June 1973 "which may have been diverted to political contributions."

The entrance to the second level is from the porches which are extensions of each side of the home. Although the entry is in the living room, it is placed at one end close to the hallway to avoid traffic crossing the living and entertaining area. The spacious living room has a large picture-type window, providing natural light for the entire room.

A few steps up from the living room is the sleeping wing, with two bedrooms sharing a roomy bath. The rear bedroom is especially large, with a large sliding door closet. A separate linen closet is provided near the bath and an additional storage space is provided in a hall closet.

The "Bridgedale's" exterior is of brick and siding, further contributing to the image of a single dwelling. The unit would be a welcome addition in any neighborhood since it is certain to attract quality tenants who are looking for a quiet and attractive rental.

The three levels on the interior and the variable use family room create interest and provide convenience.

Garden Clinic

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. How can you control goosegrass in a lawn? (J.B., Wilson)

A. All material that is used for preemergence control of crabgrass will control goosegrass to a lesser degree. (W. M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. My oak tree has large potato-like balls on the twigs. From a distance they look almost like walnuts. What causes them? (L. H., Fayetteville)

A. Wasps. Your tree has oak potato galls, which are caused by one of of about 700 species of gall wasps that infest all kinds of plants. Spraying is not practical because adult wasps emerge from these galls over a long period. I would suggest that you cut off and burn as many of the infested twigs as possible. A severe infestation not only gives a tree a bedraggled appearance but can actually kill it. (Fred Whitfield, extension forester)

Q. Last year my strawberries were so malformed and mishapen that they hardly resembled strawberries. As a matter of fact, some blossoms failed to develop into fruit at all. I know I have a good variety (Apollo) because in 1973 I had an excellent crop of beautiful berries. What happened last year? (B. C., Wallace)

A. Probably frost injury to the blossoms. Part of the individual seed producing parts of the flower were killed and where these failed to developed the fruit also failed to develop causing deformed fruit. Poor pollination can also cause the same problem. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. Which trees make the best firewood? (J. L., Raleigh)

A. Trees with the highest heating value include ash, red oak, white oak, beech, birch, all hickories, hard maple and dogwood. Trees with medium heating value include red maple, cherry, walnut, elm, sycamore and gum. Trees with relatively low heating value are yellow poplar, yellow pine, cedar and the lowest of all — white pine. The heaviest wood on a dry weight basis tends to have the most fuel value per cord. (W. T. Huxster, extension forester)

Whether a floor is wood or concrete, it must be prepared properly to receive resilient floor tiles.

Once this has been accomplished, the actual installation of the tiles involves little more than patience, care and common sense. As with the use of paint, it is difficult to spoil the job if adequate attention is given to preparation of the surface.

How a floor is constructed plays a part in how it is prepared before installation of the tiles. If it is of double construction (that is, a top floor and subfloor) and the boards are 3 inches or less in width, it is possible to lay the tiles directly on it. In that event, however, the floor must be level, free of defects and without a covering of paint, varnish, wax, oils, etc.

Should the floor be only a single layer, as it often is in an attic, or the boards are more than 3 inches wide, an underlayment is necessary. This usually is either hardboard or plywood of a special type. In buying it, merely specify that it is to be used as an underlayment. At the same time, get special coated nails for use in attaching the hardboard or plywood to the subfloor. When nailing, space the nails about 6 inches apart, allowing about 1-16th of an inch between sheets of the underlayment material.

Some authorities recommend cementing heavy lining felt to the underlayment before applying the tile, but I have successfully tiled several floors without doing this.

Neither underlayment nor felt is required when installing tiles over concrete. But it is important that the proper kind of tile, such as vinyl asbestos or asphalt, be used on concrete, especially on concrete underground, as would be the case in a basement.

Because resilient floor tiles mold themselves to the contour of the floor, all holes and cracks in the concrete must be patched before the installation. Paint, grease and oils must be removed, although removal of paint is not necessary if the concrete is not in direct contact with the earth. There are special kinds of mastic available for use when the concrete is extremely rough and can not be smoothed by sanding.

(For either of Andy Lang's helpful booklets, "Installing Resilient Floor Tiles" OR "Wood Finishing in the Home," send 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — Our living room is rather small. We intend to paint it for the first time since we moved in four years ago. Can you give us some tips on what colors to use to make the room seem larger?

A. — Generally, a small room can be made to appear larger with the use of light colors. Painting the walls and woodwork the same color also will make a room seem larger. In selecting the colors, remember that the color chip sample will look lighter than the painted wall.

Q. — This isn't a question, but rather a tip some of your readers might make use of. I recently had need for a good-size desk, but didn't want to spend the money they were asking. I took two old filing cabinets I had — the type with two large drawers that stand 28 inches high — and repainted them. I bought a piece of plywood three-quarters of an inch thick and cut it 26 inches one way and 44 inches the other. I then placed the two cabinets in line with each other, separated enough so that it was 26 inches from the side of one to the side of the other. I placed the plywood across the cabinets. Then I drilled holes in the metal and fastened the top of the plywood to the cabinets. The result: a business-like, handsome desk, especially after I had finished the plywood with a sealer and varnish. The best part of it is that the filing cabinets can still be used for filing or anything else required.

Q. — You recently told a reader the difference between a running foot and a board foot of lumber. You then gave an example of how to compute the board feet in a piece of lumber bought at a lumber yard. My figures came out different from yours. Who was right?

A. — You were. A typographical error was the culprit. However, the method given for computing a board foot was correct — multiply the length of the wood in feet by the nominal thickness and width in inches and divide by 2.

Q. — Can I use enamel over an old varnished surface?

A. — In nearly all cases, yes. Once in a great while, the stain on the wood will bleed through. If you want to be 100 per cent certain, apply an enamel undercoat to a small area and wait a couple of days. If no discoloration shows, it is safe to proceed with undercoating. If bleeding does occur, apply a coat of stain sealer. Wait at least 24 hours, sand very lightly, wipe off the dust and then go ahead with the undercoating.

Reduce Taxable Sale Profit

If you sell your home and make a profit, Uncle Sam will expect to get a share of that profit in the form of income taxes. That is, unless you reinvest your proceeds in another home or are over 65.

Therefore, those who profit from a home sale, put the check in the bank and rent an apartment, should not overlook any legitimate expenses which would reduce the size of the taxable gain.

Expenses such as the Realtor's commissions, deed preparation, legal and appraisal fees, and any escrow fees, can be taken off the top.

So-called "fix-up" expenses also can lead to tax savings. This "fix-up" work must be done during the 90 day period before the sale and payment must be made no later than 30 days after the sale.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at LOUIS CLARK AGENCY, 315 Evans Street, Greenville. Phone: 752-4173. We're here to help!

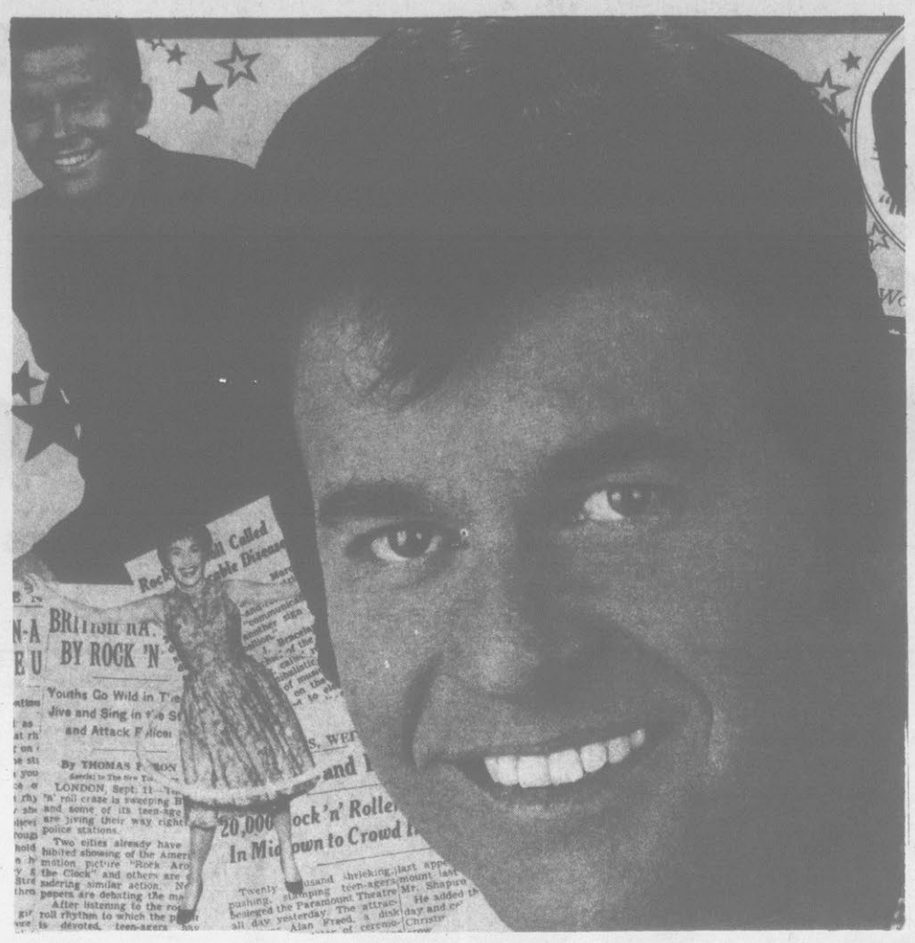
"Sock, Hop, Bop" Coming On Saturday Night



DICK CLARK . . . a well known master of ceremonies in the late 50s and 60s, who played a major role in the popularization of music in that era.

Nostalgia for the not so long ago will be the order of the day when Radio Station WOOW joins hands with the Greenville Recreation Department to bring back a taste of the late 50s and early 60s in song and dance.

On Saturday, February 1, beginning at eight and lasting until midnight, WOOW will present "The Sock, Hop, Bop" show, at the Elm Street gym, featuring popular music and dances of the period 1955-1963.

The event is a brainchild of personnel at Radio Station WOOW, a benefit affair to raise money for the Special Olympics, a program of the Recreaton Department designed to provide recreation for Greenville's handicapped. All proceeds from general admission and from sales of refreshment being handled by the Recreation Department will go to the Special Olympics fund.

General admission charge will be 25 cents for all ages, which will reflect the typical price of admission charged for most local bop or hop events of those years. Refreshments will consist of soft drinks, pop corn and lots of bubble gum.

"We're trying to make this as authentic as possible," Carl Davis of WOOW and one of two master of ceremonies said. "The sock, hop, bop is aimed primarily at people who were teen-agers during that period, but all ages, young and old, are most welcome to come and have a good time."

Contests will be held, with prizes awarded to best dancers, in five separate categories of dance, as well for those in the most authentic costumes. After the individual contests, a grand contest for the top dancers and best dressed will be held.

In addition to David, Gus Pistolis of WOOW will also be on the scene as a mater of ceremony. Two disc jockeys, Larry Shane and John Stevens, will be carrying spots on the radio simultaneously with the festive event at Elm Street.

"For everybody's pleasure," Davis said, "there'll be lots of good music numbers from the late 50s and early 60s. Some of the performers whose music we'll be playing are Elvis Presley, Carl Perkins, Bill Haley, the Everly Brothers, Paul Anka, Joey Dee, Fats Domino, and the Shirelles.

"We're hoping the response will be good," Davis said, "not just because it's for a good purpose, but we think it will be fun for everybody attending."

Music Auditions Announced

The first stages in the annual auditions of young artists in the category of violin, piano and voice have been announced. The program is sponsored by the N.C. Federation of Music Clubs.

The North Carolina auditions will be held Saturday, February 15 in the music building of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Winners in the three categories at state level will advance to competition in the district auditions, to be held at Converse College, Spartanburg, S.C. on Saturday, March 1.

Following the district auditions, district finalists will compete during the convention of the National Federation of Music Club Biennial to be held in Atlanta in the Marriot Hotel April 23 through May 2. Winners will appear on the convention program.

The auditions are open to outstanding young artists in the three categories based on the following age requirements: piano and violin—applicants 18 to 30 years of age as of March 15, 1975; voice—(both men and women), opera and oratorio, 23 to 35 years of age as of March 15, 1975. Age limits may be extended by the equivalent of time an entrant may have spent in any branch of military service, provided proof is presented in the form of military records.

Auditions are open to native and naturalized citizens of the U.S. and Puerto Rico, and to citizens of other countries who are residing and studying in the U.S.

A $2,000 cash award will be given to each first place winner in each classification in the national final auditions; and $100 to each winner in North Carolina.

Bulletins on rules may be obtained from Mrs. Walter Vassar, N.C. Young Artists Auditions Chairman, 1501 Mimosa Drive, Greensboro, N.C. 27403 or telephone 272-5946.

Opera Auditions Set At ECU

1974-75 Metropolitan Opera National Council District Auditions will be held at East Carolina University Feb. 22. Young singers from the eastern half of the state will participate in the auditions, which are designed to select winners for regional auditions later this year.

Applicants must be in the following age brackets: sopranos, 18-30; mezzos-contraltos; 20-30; tenors, 20-30; baritones, 20-32, and basses, 20-33. No age waivers are granted to present or former Armed Services members.

Each applicant must be prepared to sing a minimum of five arias and is encouraged to provide his own accompanist if possible.

The purpose of the Metropolitan Opera National Council's auditions program is to help discover new operatic talent and to make it possible for young singers in all parts of the U.S. to be heard and aided in their careers.

Monitor Declared "Unique Marine Sanctuary"

By PEGGY HOWE

The Monitor will be preserved.

The long-lost Civil War ironclad gunboat, discovered and identified last year off the coast of Cape Hatteras, will be designated a "Unique Marine Sanctuary" this week.

In ceremonies on Thursday January 30 in Washington, on the 113th anniversary of the Monitor's launching, the Secretary of Commerce Rogers C. B. Morton will designate the site as the first "Unique Marine Sanctuary." The sancutary will be administered by the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

The wreck, lying in 200 feet of water, is already listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Marine Sanctuary designation means that the federal government will further protect and control the site for restricted archaeological and scientific exploration.

The Monitor, designed by Swedish engineer John Ericsson, and built in a record 101 days, was launched Jan. 30, 1862. It was the Union's answer to the Confederate ironclads, blockading and ravaging Northern ports during the early days of the Civil War.

In addition to its many innovations, the Monitor was important because it marked the transition from wood to iron construction and sail to steam power, thereby revolutionizing the construction of war vessels.

These innovations and other secrets of her construction have been buried in the waters off Cape Hatteras since a terrible storm sank the gunboat Dec. 31, 1862. The vessel had survived the historic, but indecisive encounter with the Merrimac in March, 1862, and was being towed to Beaufort to blockade the port there.

According to reports in ships' logs, the day dawned bright and beautiful, but grew steadily worse as the Rhode Island steamer towed the unseaworthy Monitor across the "Graveyard of the Atlantic" of Cape Hatteras.

One of the towlines broke, and the other was cut to avoid swamping both ships. The gale grew steadily worse until the captain finally gave the order to the crew to "save yourselves." The red lantern distress signal sank below the waves about one a.m. with the loss of 16 sailors. The rest of the crew of 60 had been saved by the lifeboats of the Rhode Island.

For more than a century archaeologists and historians have wondered about the location of the Monitor's resting place. Her exact position could be plotted up until two hours before sinking, but unusual currents and shifting sands on the ocean's bottom had enabled the vessel to elude discovery until last year.

During several extensive expenditions to the site in 1973 and 1974, marine scientists and archaeologists from Duke University Marine Laboratory and Cultural Resources underwater archaeologists, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and later, Alcoa Marine Corporation, located and positively identified the Monitor.

Since the wreck lies on the outer edge of the continental shelf — beyond protection of any national agency other than NOAA, something more than the "territorial limits" had to be devised for protection of the wreck.

Fearful that treasure hunters, looters, salvagers or simply the curious would disturb the site before the Monitor could reveal her secrets, Cultural Resources archaeoligists met with Department of Commerce officials in Washington and the idea of a Marine Sanctuary was born.

Dr. Kent Schneider and Dr. Steve Gluckman of the Department of Cultural Resources and their staff have been instrumental in implementing means of restricting the site so the wreck could be properly researched for its historical value.

The wreck is extremely fragile, Dr. Schneider explained, and with present methods nearly impossible to raise intact. So, all examination and exploration will have to be done on the ocean floor.

On Sept. 26 Gov. James E. Holshouser asked the Department of Commerce to designate the area as the first unique Marine Sanctuary.

Dr. Schneider is optimistic that many heretofore unknown secrets will be revealed during archaeological exploration of the site.

"Ordinary ship's items would be there," he said, "either on the ship or around it." In addition, details of her innovative construction not now available would be concepts in the construction of the ship.

The idea of the Marine Sanctuary was to preserve the area, Dr. Schneider explained. "We aim to guide research, not prohibit it," he emphasized.

Dr. Schneider said permits to explore the wreck are an involved process with proposals reviewed all along the way by Cultural Resources officials, NOAA and a federal review board, including the Navy, the Smithsonian Institution, the National Park Service and others — all with an interest in the Monitor. NOAA makes the final decision to permit research, and violation of the sanctuary rules would cost $50,000 a day or confiscation of ship, Dr. Schneider warned.

Dr. Schneider emphasized that no funds from the federal government or the state will go into Monitor research at the present time. He mentioned, however, that several foundations and private groups do fund marine archaeological research.

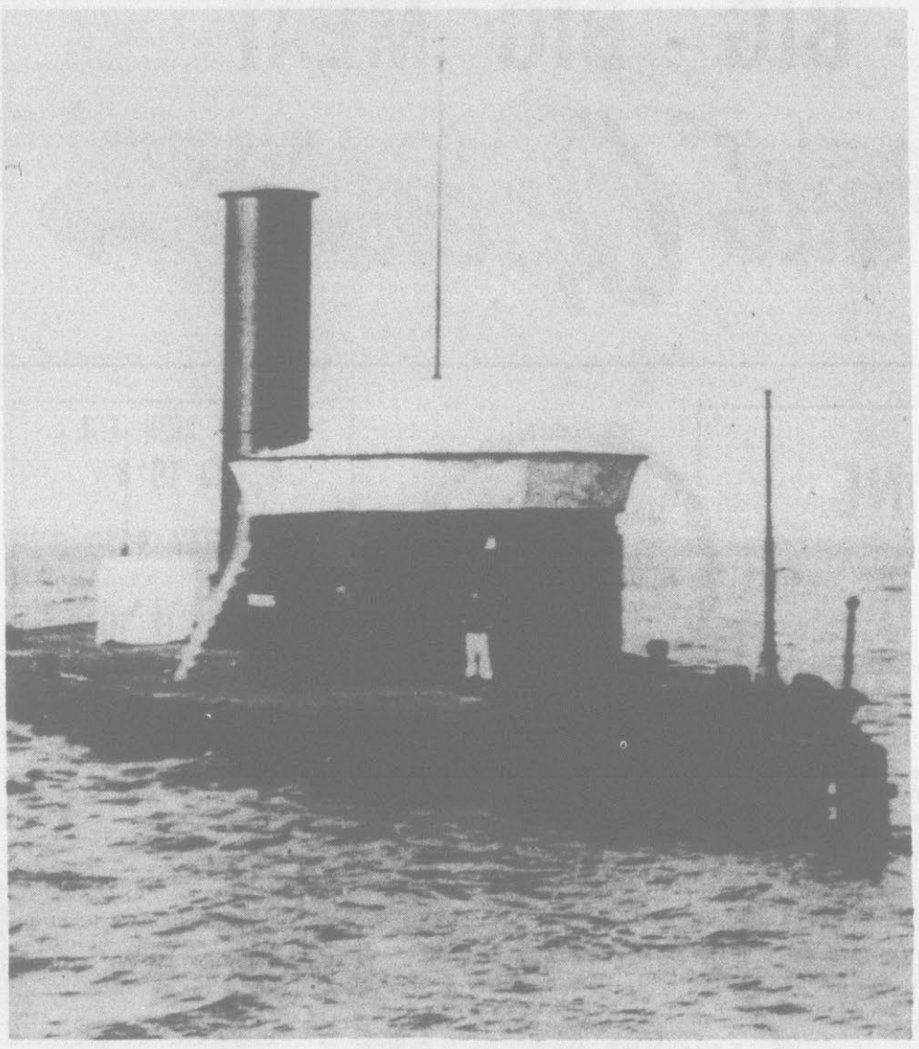
"We are trying to generate a long-term research plan," the archaeologist continued.

"The Monitor has been there for 113 years. We must collect the data as well as our emotions before work which might destoy the ship is conducted. It is our feeling that research on the wreck should fall into logical sequences.

"For example," he went on, "we must collect and collate historical research as well as analyze the artifacts already retrieved from the wreck itself. From this base rational and productive on site archaeological research can best proceed."

Dr. Schneider revealed his excitement and enthusiasm for the research on the Monitor. "Since I was a kid," he smiled, "the battle of the Merrimac and the Monitor has been all-consuming."

And for him and many other archaeologists, the protection of the Monitor site will continue to be all-consuming — with the anticipated research at the site of the famous "cheesebox on a raft."



THE IRONCLAD "MONITOR" . . . dubbed a "cheesebox on a raft" revolutionized the construction of war vessels. Sunk off Cape Hatteras 113 years ago, the resting site of the vessel has been determined and has now been declared America's first "Unique Marine Sanctuary." Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By June Parker

One of the new books at Sheppard Memorial Library is Strictly Speaking Will America Be The Death Of English. Newman focuses on the sorry state of the English language as reflected in its use by sportscasters, presidents, vice-presidents, diplomats, corporation executives, advertisers, and Watergate defendants. He blasts away at the pompous, the grandiose, the stilted, and the hollow by pointing out phrases that have been used such as "evaluate and make a judgment in terms of a response" instead of merely saying that he needed time to think about the matter, the use by weathermen of thunderstorm activity and headwind components instead of thunderstorms and headwinds, and television is "facing the quadrennial challenge of giving focus and perspective to the polemics of contending partisans" instead of every four years, television must present the opinions of each candidate. The use of inflated languages becomes hilarious in the recalling of the Watergate hearings.

Along with the pompous, Newman also cites examples of downright misuse of words by those in authority-escapegoat for scapegoat, shiek for sheik, Knitpicking for nitpicking, Ghandi for Gandhi, and anthropoligist for anthropologist. Also used were the expressions, young juveniles and true facts as if there were any other kinds.

Newman gives as the cause of the use of such language the scarsity of ideas covered by the superfluity of words. If one has nothing to say, be sure to it with the most number of words possible. He states that America needs better ideas in place of empty words composing nothing.

Edwin Newman is a highly recognized newscaster with the NBC television network. He has anchored coverage of Robert Kennedy's and Martin Luther King's assassinations, the Vietnam ceasefire, and the six-day Israeli War. He has received the Peabody Award, several Emmys, and the French Legion of Honor.

From the world of reality to the world of mysticism in non-fiction is the book Tales Of Power by Carlos Castaneda. In his three earlier books, he told the story of his triumphant and daring journey into the unknown in his initiation into sorcery. In this book, he completes the final, awesome secrets of sorcerer's explanation of the world. In the earlier works, don Juan had performed his acts of power in the lands of his birth; the desert. Now, he joins Castaneda in the urban world of the crowded, busy city streets. He uses this scene to complete Castaneda's perception of the world making him "a man of knowledge" and a "man of power." The story is brought to an unexpected conclusion in a series of spectacular tricks, lessons, and visions. It is don Juan's final statement-the fulfillment of Castaneda's fantastic opportunities to unlock "the door to the unknown."

Duck Story Success Spurs Marine Sergeant To Write

By SGT. DAN WEBB

"Well there was this duck, see, and he wanted to tell his side of a day in the life of a duck during duck hunting season," said Staff Sergeant Michael Schlimmer, non-commissioned officer in charge of the Training Section in Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-14. "And that's how I got started writing. My first story was a humorous account of a duck who endeavors to evade hunters during duck hunting season."

When SSgt. Schlimmer isn't writing reports and orders for the Training Section, he's writing and selling articles for himself. The author of two short stories and more than 30 poems, Schlimmer is presently working on his first novel.

Spending from twenty to 25 hours a week on his manuscript, Schlimmer has completed a third of the book. "It's a human interest story," he explained, "about a couple who become separated and spend five years trying to get back together."

His first story, an imaginary duck's narration, introduced Schlimmer to a special library of information. "The account came from my imaginativeness," he said. "I have a vivid imagination and like to use it. I just make up my own world when I write."

The duck yarn was purchased by a sports magazine and Schlimmer was convinced to write his next story. A closer-to-truth tale about a motorcyclist's adventures was also sold to a magazine.

"The information for that story came from my own experience," he stated. "I've been riding motorcycles since I was 12.

"The poems I write are about love and nature," Schlimmer went on. "They just put my feelings into words."

The 29-year-old Tipton, Iowa, Marine began his writing career when he discovered how easily he could convey his ideas with a typewriter. "My only goal is just expressing myself the best way I can," he stated. "In writing I can do that.

"I've given thought to making journalism a full time career," Schlimmer continued, "but I don't want to feel pressured into writing. I want to have the time to express myself just the way I want. Now I can do that."

For the nine-year Marine Corps veteran, writing is just a hobby, but a very profitable one.

Offer Help On Living With Handicapped Child

The Divison of Continuing Education at Pitt Technical Institute is again reaching out to meet the needs of the community by offering a course entitled "Living With Your Handicapped Child" to begin Feb. 4.

The course, scheduled to run through April 22, is for parents or guardians of handicapped children.

The course is a cooperative effort between Pitt Tech and the Developmental Evaluation Clinic at East Carolina University.

"No doubt about it, Eastern North Carolina is in dire need of this type of learning opportunity," stated Edgar Boyd of Pitt Tech. "Five percent of Pitt County's population is mentally retarded and the national average is three to four percent."

Mental retardation refers to those of subaverage intellectual development. The definition and figures includes those who are "functioning retarded" in addition to those who are malfunctioning from birth.

The course is designed to help parents and their handicapped child live more comfortably together by providing parents or guardians with skills and knowledge to enable them to help their child reach his potential.

"An outstanding team of instructors has been selected and include psychologists, therapists and other related practitoners in the field. An advisory committee of professionals in this field has cited the following points as key factors to be gained by parents or guardians participating in the course:

—Help parents identify cause, types, and degrees of retardation in order to bring their goals and expectations in line with the child's ability;

—To explain the use of medication in helping the handicapped child reach his potential;

—To make parents aware of the resources available to them in seeking help for their child;

—To help parent decide what is the best placement for their child;

—To aid parents in the area of sex education for their child;

—To give parents some skills in behavior modifications techniques;

—To give parents an understanding of the law and their handicapped child;

—To give parents help in the area of their child''s socialization, cognitive and motor development.

—Feb. 4, behavior modification techniques, including the technique of pinpointing, recording and evaluating behaviors;

—Feb. 11, behavior modification, examples of use;

—Feb. 18, behavior modification;

—Feb. 25, teaching self-help skills; how to break tasks into component parts and teaching one part at a time;

March 4, Cognitive development, language development, colors, shapes, clothing, holidays, alphabet;

—March 11, motor development, standing, walking, running, skipping, balancing, jumping and throwing;

—March 18, socialization, values, dealing with fears of the child, helping the child relate to others, how to handle the child in public, how to best handle the feelings of other adults and children;

—March 25, sex education;

—April 1, community resources, public health, special education, physical therapy, vocational rehabilitation, social work, sheltered workshops;

—April 8, legal concerns, rights of retarded child, wills, inheritance, trusts;

—April 15, general knowledge of retardation, help the parents identify causes, types and degrees of retardation;

—April 22, the child's place in the family, time spent with other memebers of the family, sharing the responsibility for the reatrded child, dealing with the feelings of other family members towards the retarded child.

The class will meet each Tuesday from 7 until 10 p.m. on the Pitt Technical Institute campus and will be limited to 30 adults.

In order to insure a place in the class, one may register at the continuing education office, room 113 in the Humber Building at Pitt Tech Jan. 28, 29, 30 and Feb. 3 and 4 from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Spoiling A Stream?. . .

(Cont'd from A-5)

According to Appalachian Power, the 1.8 million kilowatts generated by the project would be used primarily during peek periods by consumers in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. The company also has contracts with utilities in North Carolina and along the Eastern Seaboard to provide power if they run low.

"We feel the economic benefits are several," said C. R. Lovegrove, an Appalachian spokesman. "There will be the construction payroll, many of the workers will be hired locally and much of the payroll would be spent in the area."

Although some environmentalists have called the river one of "the last free-flowing streams in Eastern America," the river has been blocked by dams in Virginia and West Virginia for some 60 years. Among the largest are the dams that form Claytor Lake near Radford, Va., and the Bluestone Reservoir in West Virginia.

If North Carolina succeeds in blocking the dams, the Interior Department will study the river for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic River System. Designation in the system would restrict further development.

Gov. Jim Holshouser has offered to draw up a plan whereby the state would administer the designated area under a plan approved by the Interior Department.

However, in the two counties involved, The Wild and Scenic River System is as unpopular as the dam.

"Every inch of the New River is in private hands," said farmer Fred Colvard. "I'd hate to see the government get into the deal."

A woman storekeeper whose property would be on the edge of the upper lake said residents do not want to lose their land, but feel the Wild and Scenic River System would deny them full control.

"What good is it to own the land if you can't do what you want with it?" she asked. "I'd say if most people had to choose between the dam and the scenic river, they'd take the dam."

However, some opponents of the dam say such fears are based on misinformation and that the scenic river is the only option left.

"I am not unaware that the people want to be left alone," Horton said, "But that's an option that they simply do not have."

Douglas Wheeler, deputy asst. secretary of the Interior, said scenic river designation would not mean the end of local control.

"We would not want to extend our control if the lands within the component were protected by a valid zoning ordinance," Wheeler said. "If it is farmland, we would probably have no interest in acquiring land except as an easement to insure that it stays farm land."

Although opponents of the dams stress the agriculutal loss, neither county is a major agricultural area. In 1973 Alleghany County ranked 77th out of North Carolina's 100 counties in total cash receipts from farming, according to the state Dept. of Agriculture. Ashe County ranked 61st.

But for some, the preservation of the river is not only a question of acres lost or scenery destroyed.

"As a state, we've done everything we can to tell them we don't want this thing," Horton said. "And yet some subordinate of the federal government licenses a private company and can somehow bludgeon the state of North Carolina."

Collector Of Gas Masks

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — In a small confined corner of his South Sacramento home, stacked to the ceiling, are five or six dozen foam heads James Sheldon uses to display his collection of gas masks, some dating back to World War I.

"I got my first gas mask at California State University at Chico," explains Sheldon, a Navy medical corpsman. In checking out the equipment he became interested in further investigation and collection.

Before long he was owner of tactical remnants of nearly all the war-torn countries of the world — survival masks from Germany, Japan, Italy, Vietnam, Russia and the United States.

He scrounged in flea markets for his masks.

He said some of the older masks were made of leather. He has a Viet Cong one made out of a shower curtain. His latest fancy U.S. Army mask has a hookup for drinking and even for giving artificial respiration.

His mask hobby, he says, is only beginning.

"There are more than 50 models produced in the U.S. alone and many countries have a dozen models."

Bucs Survive Scare By Keydets, 82-80

LEXINGTON, Va.—Prior to setting out for Lexington, Virginia, and last night's Southern Conference game with Virginia Military Institute, ECU Coach Dave Patton said that his Pirates would be fortunate to win.

"It's the worst place in the conference to have to play at," Patton said, "because of the corps of cadets, who sit right on top of you and scream their lungs out."

Patton couldn't have been more right. For East Carolina had their hands full with the Keydets, and escaped with their lives, 82-80.

Leading by only two points with 16 seconds left, the Bucs lost the ball, then got it back when the Keydets blew their chance to tie it up. Larry Hunt then made two pressure free throws with six seconds left to pad the Buc lead to 82-78, and the Pirates just stood aside to let John Garnett score the final basket unmolested.

The Pirates got a standout performance from their two big inside men, Larry Hunt and Robert Geter. Geter pushed through 23 points, a number of them at key times as the game bounced back and forth through the evening. Hunt picked up 13, but came down with a game high 16 rebounds. Geter added 12, but astoundingly, VMI outrebounded the Bucs overall, 52-44. Dave Montgomery, a 6-6 freshman, led the way with 13.

The Pirates, who had shot the eyes out of the basket in their two big wins over Richmond and Davidson easily in the week, suffered through a 41-per cent first half, but then came back to hit 60 per cent in the second half, and that meant the difference.

VMI, which hit 52 per cent in the first half, fell off to only 46 for the game as the running game began to tell on them somewhat, but they continued to hang in there, holding as much as a three-point lead late in the contest.

East Carolina grabbed the opening lead, but VMI stuck right with them, offering basket-for-basket for the first few minutes. The Bucs took the lead at 10-8 on a layup by Buzzy Braman, then got a four-point lead as Ken Edmonds hit on a fast break.

But VMI came back with seven straight points to charge into the lead, 15-12. Will Bynum started it off, then John Krovic hit two field goals, and added a free throw after being fouled on his second shot. East Carolina fought back, however, and regained the lead on a jumper by Braman at 20-19.

The two again traded the lead, with Curt Reppart putting the Keydets back out, 24-22 on a three point play with 10:30 left. Ron Carter hit a jumper for the Keydets' biggest lead of the half, 26-22.

Gregg Ashorn added two buckets around one by Donnie Owens and the Pirates regained the lead, 28-26. Owens hit again and Braman got a free throw to run it to 31-26. After another VMI basket, a three-pointer by Geter upped it to 34-28. Then, just a minute later, Ashorn hit a jumper for a 37-30 lead and it appeared the Bucs might be off to the races.

But VMI didn't fold and came roaring back to finally tie it up at 41-41 on Carter's basket off the break. Hunt hit a free throw for a 42-41 lead, but baskets by Garnett and George Borojevich let the Keydets take a 45-42 halftime lead.

VMI upped that to five with Krovic hitting the first points of the second half. East Carolina struggled back and finally gained a 51-49 lead when Hunt got a three-point play. The Bucs moved out by six, but again the Keydets fought back. They were finally able to push ahead on baskets by Krovic and Steve Chapin, 62-59 with about 10 minutes to go.

Then, a trading session started. East Carolina regained the lead at 63-62 as Geter hit two in a row, the last with just under eight minutes to play. From there until three minutes were left, the lead changed hands ten more times. VMI inched out by three points, 76-73 with Chapin and Reppart hitting, but Braman cut it back to 76-75 with 3:05 left in the game.

With 2:20 left, Geter hit to put the Pirates into the lead, and then their board power began to tell. After a missed shot, Geter was fouled and picked up two free throws, with 2:17 to go, giving the Bucs a 79-76 lead. After one chance at the line failed, Braman hit on the first of a one-and-one for an 80-76 lead.

Garnett cut it back to two, and with 16 seconds left, the Bucs lost the ball on a five-second in-bounds play. VMI missed their shot in the attempt to tie it up, and Hunt was fouled on the rebound.

Hunt canned both shots with six seconds showing, and that provided the margin.

Besides Geter and Hunt's totals, Ashorn hit 14, Braman had 16 and Owens had 10, giving the Bucs even balance again.

VMI had four in double figures: Reppart and Krovis with 15 each and Garnett and Bynum with 10 each.

The win boosted the Pirate record to 12-4 overall, and to 7-0 in the Southern Conference. They held onto their Southern Conference lead, and will hold it at least until next Saturday when they meet Furman University, 4-0, in Showdown-South.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—All-America David Thompson tossed in 29 points to lead fifth-ranked N.C. State to a 106-80 defeat of Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The Wolfpack used a sticky man-to-man defense throughout the game, holding Wake Forest to only 41 per cent of its shots from the floor while the Wolfpack hit on 56.5 per cent of its shots.

State, now 12-2 was never behind as Phil Spence controlled the opening tap and Thompson laid in the game's first basket with only four seconds gone by.

Spence, who scored 18 points, was the leading rebounder with 15. Three other State players scored in double figures as the Wolfpack hit baskets against Wake Forest's zone defense from inside as well as from 25 feet out.

Notre Dame Upsets UCLA

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Adrian Dantley matched his nation-leading scoring average of 32 points Saturday as Notre Dame got revenge from fourth-ranked UCLA, 84-78, in a hard-fought college basketball contest.

The Fighting Irish, who had blown a commanding lead in losing an earlier meeting at UCLA, took charge in the second half and established leads of as many as eight points.

Dantley, a sophomore forward, connected for 18 of his points in the first half in which the lead changed hands 11 times and ended with Notre Dame holding a 46-44 margin.

Early in the second half the Irish outscored the Bruins 10-2, then the lead changed hands five times until just 6:06 showed on the clock.

Tar Heels Outlast Maryland By 69-66

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Two pressure free throws by Mickey Bell with three seconds remaining clinched a 69-66 upset victory for 14th-ranked North Carolina over third-ranked Maryland in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday.

The Tar Heels, who took over the ACC lead with a 4-1 record, stymied and befuddled the Terps over the final 12 minutes while playing out of their four-corner offense.

After a field goal by Ed Stahl put North Carolina ahead 61-60 with 10:10 remaining, neither team scored until John Kuester sank two foul shots to put the Tar Heels ahead 63-60 with 1:56 left.

The second free throw by Kuester was a bonus shot, and Phil Ford added two more while sinking four free throws for a 67-64 North Carolina advantage with 55 seconds to play.

A basket by Mo Howard pulled the Terps, now 13-3 including 4-2 in the ACC, to within 67-66. Ford then missed in a one-on-one foul-shot situation with 28 seconds to go. The Terps rebounded, but John Lucas failed from the floor on Maryland's final chance.

Tommy Lagarde led the Tar Heels with 16 points and Ford added 15. Mitch Kupchak, North Carolina's leading scorer and rebounder, scored 12 points while playing only 19 minutes before fouling out with 7:21 left.

Maryland sank eight of its first nine shots to take a 22-17 lead, but fell behind 43-38 at halftime after going into a shooting slump.

The Tar Heels took a 49-42 lead on three quick baskets by Kupchak after intermission. But Maryland rallied behind Lucas—who scored 17 points—and went ahead 60-59 on a basket by Tom Roy with 10:41 to play. The Terps didn't score again until the 1:18 mark.

Rose Holds Off Wilson Rally For Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILSON — Rose High School survived a rally by the Wilson Titans in the final four and a half minutes of the game to pull out a 71-63 victory Friday night and remained in at least a tie for the Division I cage lead.

The victory raised the Rose record to 11-4 overall and 4-0 in Division I. Pending the outcome of Northeastern's game, the two teams are deadlocked for the lead, with a fateful meeting set Tuesday.

Rose went the final 4:30 with only one field goal and that came in the final 10 seconds. They used six free throws to protect their lead after Wilson rallied from 16 down to pull back within four in the closing seconds.

The Titans put on a furious press that forced several Rampant turnovers—they got only five shots during that period, although they were trying to burn the clock. In addition to the six free throws that made, they had three other one-and-one chances at the line during the same period, but missed out on them.

The Rampants again had fine balance in their scoring, putting five men in double figures. They controlled the backboards for most of the game, but it was their free throw shooting that really told the tale.

Although the Rampants hit on 29 of 56 shots, a fine 51.8 per cent, they made only one more goal than the Titans did. They made 28 of 67, a lesser 41.8.

Rose cashed in on 13 of 20 at the free throw line, however, while Wilson made good on just seven of 19.

Mike Brewington hit the opening basket to put Rose into the initial lead, but Wilson came back and forced itself into a five-point edge. They took the lead at 5-4 on a free throw by Geoffrey McVeigh, they moved further out on a jumper by him. That was the completion of a five-point play by the Titans. James Griffin had scored with 5:58 left, and at the same time, a foul was called under the basket. That evoked a technical on Donnie Shields of Rose, leading to McVeigh's two shots. He added another jumper with 4:47 left to run the lead to 9-4.

Brewington came back with two straight baskets and Tyrone Taft hit a free throw to tie it up. Wilson went back out, but baskets by Ronnie Barrett, who hit his first six without a miss, and Taft put Rose into a 13-11 lead. Wilson tied it up but baskets by Shields and Taft in the final 20 seconds gave Rose a 17-13 lead at the end of the period.

Barrett hit to open the second period, running the lead to five. Then, after a Wilson basket, Shields and Macon Moye each hit to up it to 23-15. Late in the period, Linwood Brown hit on a layup to up the lead to eight, 29-21, but Rose settled for a 31-24 margin at the end of the half.

Wilson came back stronger in the third period, hitting the first two baskets. After a Rose goal, Wilson got two more to cut the lead to 33-32, but the Rampants pulled back away on shots by Barrett and Taft. It stayed nip-and-tuck, although never closer than three, the rest of the period, until Shields hit a three-point play with 23 seconds left for a 49-41 lead that lasted the rest of the way.

Rose quickly pushed out by ten on opening baskets by Brewington and Shields as the final period began. After several exchanges, Lindberg Morris scored on two straight drives to run the lead out to 63-47 with 4:45 left, and it looked like it might be all over.

But Wilson then began to close, and the rest of the way, outhit Rose, 16-8. Greg Parks sparked the rally, dumping in three baskets, and generally making the going difficult for the Rampants with his ballstealing. The lead fell to six at 65-59 before Taft hit two at the line, then Wilson ran off four more to cut it to 67-63 with 28 seconds left.

However, two free throws by Morris and a basket by him put the game out of reach and gave Rose the eight-point spread.

Shields led the Rampant scoring with 15, while Barrett had 14, Taft had 13, Brewington had 12 and Morris hit 10.

Thomas Williams led Wilson with 16, while Parks had 15 and McVeigh hit 10.

Rose's junior varsity snapped a nine-game losing streak with their second victory in 13 starts by downing Wilson, 71-66, in the first game of the evening.

The two teams each hit 14 in the first period, but Rose was able to inch to a 29-28 lead at the half. The Rampants outhit Wilson, 21-15, in the third period, running their lead to 50-43. They held off the Baby Titans in the final period although outhit 23-21, to take the win.

Randy Pellisero and Derek Brewington each had 18, while Curtis Keys had 14 and Ocalus Randolph had 11 for Rose. Charles Wright had 17 and Tim Broome had 11 for the Titans.

The Rampants play host to Northeastern's Eagles Tuesday night in a battle of the Division I leaders.

Lefty: Terps Are Overrated

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—"We're vastly overrated; vastly overrated," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said Saturday after his third-ranked Terps lost their second consecutive basketball upset, 69-66, to North Carolina.

"I'm not giving up," Driesell said. "We'll practice twice tomorrow."

Maryland, which lost 83-82 to Clemson earlier in the week before facing the 14th-ranked Tar Heels, came apart while trying to combat North Carolina's four-corner offense during the final 13 minutes.

The Terps went almost 9½ minutes without a point after a basket by Ed Stahl put the Tar Heels ahead 61-60 with 10:10 to play. North Carolina also went more than eight minutes without scoring, but sank eight foul shots in the final two minutes to clinch the victory.

"I can not classify this as a masterful coaching job," said Coach Dean Smith of North Carolina. "We intended to go out and play in the second half, but we went into the four corners to protect Mitch Kupchak."

Kupchak, North Carolina's leading scorer and rebounder, played only seven minutes from the first half after getting into foul trouble and then incurred his fourth foul with 14:06 remaining.

"Ironically, Mitch got his fifth foul while on offense," Smith said. "But we had to stay in the four corners because Phil Ford also had four fouls."

North Carolina was charged with its sixth personal foul with 13:06 to play, but Maryland didn't even get a chance for a bonus point at the foul line the rest of the way.

Maryland had been charged with only one foul when the Tar Heels had picked up No. 6, but North Carolina wound up converting four bonus free throws among its last eight conversions from the foul line.

"When they had a 6-1 advantage in fouls," Smith said, "we wanted to make them do something on defense—make them foul."

The Terps had a chance to win after Ford, who had sunk four previous free throws, missed from the foul line and Maryland grabbed a rebound.

But John Lucas missed a shot from the top of the key for Maryland, and Mickey Bell grabbed the rebound for the Tar Heels with the score 67-66. Bell then converted two free throws with three seconds to play.

"I was sure that Lucas' last shot was going in," Smith said. "Give Bell a lot of credit for getting the rebound away from Tom Roy."

"I take the blame," Driesell said, "but the players have to take the blame, too."

Then, referring to the field goal attempt by Lucas, Driesell added: "We got beat by a bad shot."

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Placid Gene Littler calmly, almost mechanically, put together a four-under-par 68 and pulled away to a commanding four-stroke lead—including eight over Johnny Miller—in Saturday's third round of the $185,000 Bing Crosy National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

The soft-spoken 44-year-old Littler, who had to mount a comeback from cancer to score his 25th tour victory in the 1973 St. Louis Open, once had it six under par for the day but drifted back after encounterimg swirling fog at the Cyprus Point course.

He finished with a 207 total, nine-under-par, after one round on each of three courses on the spectacularly beautiful Monterey Peninsula. He played his third round out of the range of the national television cameras which focused their attention on the show business celebrities playing at Pebble Beach, the site of Sunday's final round.

Tom Watson, the stocky, muscular young man who holds the Western Open title, was a distant second after a par-72. He had a 211 total.

Miller, the runaway record-setting winner of the first two tournaments of the year, managed a two-under-par 70—usually a creditable score at Pebble Beach but a far cry from the heroics he performed in Arizona. Miller had a 215 total.

"How do I like Miller's position," Littler said, repeating a question.

"I like him eight shots behind a lot better than seven behind."

Jack Nicklaus never really got it going. Nicklaus, making his first start of the season and facing Miller's challenge to his spot as the game's premier performer, could do no better than a par-72 at Pebble Beach and was out of contention at 217, 10 strokes back of Littler.

Lou Graham had a 70 at Cypress Point and was third at 212, five off the lead. Australian Bruce Devlin, Roy Pace and Rod Curl followed at 213.

Deal For Team Fails To Jell

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Just when the sale of the Indiana Pacers was supposedly all but finalized, the deal apparently fell through again Saturday.

The collapse sets the stage for intervention by the American Basketball Association, probably next week when the league meets during the All-Star Game break. However, whether the league can take over the team completely is a sticky legal question, sources said.

The deal was to have been approved Saturday morning at a meeting of shareholders and the board of directors of the ABA team. But the meeting took no action because there was not a quorum.

Dick Perk, head of a 10-man group offering to buy the team, was livid after the session and accused the Pacers' operating group, Indiana Pro Sports, of "playing games with me.

"I've had it," he said, adding that any further negotiations with IPS would have to be initiated by IPS or the league.

A Pacer spokesman responded: "A finalized offer had not ever been received from the Perk group. So the meeting Saturday had nothing to look at or ratify.

"There never was a sale, per se, agreed to. There were only guidelines for a sale," the spokesman added. "Their offer left the door open in many areas."

Perk agreed that there were some loose ends in the deal, but he insisted: "We've not been able to negotiate with them."

Rampants Take Second Meet

Rose High's swimming team has gotten off to one of its best starts in several seasons winning their second meet in a row as the Rampant swimmers passed Jordan, 82-72.

The Rampants won the first event, the 200 yard medley relay but Jordan of Durham took the top two places in the next event, the 200 freestyle. After that, it was all Rose High.

Art Klose was a triple winner of sorts winning the 100 free outright and swimming the anchor on the 200 medley relay and the 400 freestyle teams that took firsts for the Rampants. Mike Wooles won two taking the 50 free and the 100 breast. He was also on both the relay teams giving him four first place finishes. Linus Martinez was on the 400 free relay team and won the 200 individual medley.

The Rampants will swim next in the Atlantic Seaboard championships and will visit Ravenscroft School in Raleigh on February 15.

Olympics Have Money Problem

MONTREAL (AP) — Staging the 1976 Summer Olympic Games in the best facilities possible has become a matter of honor, but the price of honor remains to be established.

Despite continued assurances from Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau that the Games would be self-financing, the Quebec government now has accepted that a deficit of more than $200 million will result.

Before hearings by the national assembly's standing committee on municipal affairs in Quebec City this week, Premier Robert Bourassa formally undertook to find ways of covering the deficit.

He suggested that since Montreal would inherit about $500 million worth of facilities the city should pick up part of the tab. He also urged the federal government to cooperate.

The premier's commitment to finance part of the deficit perhaps was foreshadowed by a fateful coincidence May 12, 1970. In Amsterdam, Montreal was awarded the 1976 Summer Games by the International Olympic Committee. In Quebec City, Premier Bourassa's new Liberal government was sworn in.

Committee hearings were called when controversy flared over construction costs and deadlines. Reports suggested the Games' costs had ballooned to $653 million from $310 million, the cost of building the Olympic Village to house 9,700 athletes had doubled to $70 million and a construction strike jeopardized readiness for the July 17, 1976, opening.

While Mayor Drapeau and the Games organizing committee (COJO) were at odds on the costs, both said construction deadlines would be met.

Mayor Drapeau estimated the total cost of the project at $600 million but insisted expenses would be met by modifying some revenue programs and prolonging others.

The mayor denied charges of extravagance and blamed price increases and depreciation of the dollar for the mounting bill.

At the hearings, he again promised self-financing.

The committee spent much time studying the possibility of changing or replacing the most expensive item on the Olympic bill, the 70,000-seat main stadium designed by French architect Roger Taillibert. COJO set the stadium price at $380 million. Drapeau responded with a $320-million figure.

When the committee meets again Tuesday, it will examine more closely the possibility of moving the Autostade, a 33,000-seat stadium built for Expo '67, to the Olympic site, piece by piece. The Autostade is also the home of the Canadian Football League's Montreal Alouettes.

But with more uncertainties likely to develop from that alternative, it appeared the current stadium plan will be executed.

The committee also will study Olympic Village cost estimates. A COJO spokesman told the hearings Thursday it would cost a maximum of $43 million, not $70 million as a consulting firm has suggested.

The committee, however, will want to know how estimates for the village by several reputable firms could vary by as much as $35 million.

North Lenoir Eases Past Farmville

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE—Sloppy ballhandling and poor shooting by the Farmville Central Jaguars enabled the North Lenoir Hawks to take a 46-38 victory Friday night. The Farmville Central girls, however, won to remain in a tie for the conference lead.

The girls broke open a tight game in the last quarter to dump the Lady Hawks by ten, 34-24. That was the only Farmville Central win of the night as the Baby Hawks beat the Jaguar javees, 61-43.

The Lady Jaguars remain in a tie with Southern Wayne for the Eastern Carolina Conference number one spot. Both teams have lost two games; one to each other. The Saints have the edge, however, having scored more total points in their two meetings.

The Lady Hawks surprised the Farmville Central girls by jumping out to a 6-0 lead before two minutes had been played. Julia Moye sank two field goals for the Lady Jaguars to break the ice but they could get only one more bucket in the opening period. The Hawks added five points for an 11-6 lead after the first quarter.

Kathy Suggs cut the north Lenoir lead to three, 11-8, with two second period-opening free throws. Vickie Vail matched them with a field goal but her bucket was the only score the Lady Hawks got in the frame. Farmville got a long jumper by Jennifer Counterman, a baseline shot by Moye and a lay-up by Wanda Phillips to pass the Lady Hawks at 14-13 with 4:28 left in the half. Counterman's tap-in put the Lady Jaguars ahead for good, 16-13.

Farmvill Central added two points to its lead in the third quarter, 8-6, and moved out to a ten-point spread in the final quarter on a free shot by Moye, 32-22.

Vickie Vail led the Lady Hawks with 14 while Counterman led the Lady Jaguars with 10.

For the first quarter and most of the second, it looked as if the Jaguars were going to be able to suppress the Hawks. That was not to be. Late in the first half, North Lenoir passed Farmville Central but lost the lead momentarily. They got it back on the last two shots of the half and never lost it again.

Both teams were plagued with sloppy ballhandling but the Hawks were able to work some of it out during intermission. The Jaguars didn't. When they weren't having trouble hanging on to the ball, they were having trouble getting their shots to fall in. Several times during the second half, the Jaguars had three and four shots in a row that refused to drop through.

Mike Corbett put the Jags up by four with the game's first two tallies. North Lenoir countered on baskets by Clarence Wiggins and Bradley Staton, 4-4.

The game was tied once more and then Corbett put the Jags in front for almost the rest of the half. His basket was followed by field goals from Mark and Walter Gorham. Corbett added one to make it 14-6 with 1:30 to go in the period.

The Hawks cut the lead to four, 14-12 and it was four at the end of the period; both teams added another field goal.

But then at the start of the second period, Farmville Central started having problems. Joseph Pearcill cut the gap to 16-14 but Corbett put it back at four, 18-14. The Jaguars didn't make a basket for the next four minutes.

In the meantime, North Lenoir was slowly catching up. Anthony Suggs scored five points to put the Hawks up by 19-18. Walter Gorham broke the Jaguar dry spell and Danny Nobles canned a jumper for a 22-19 Farmville Central advantage. Wiggins and Pearcill both scored as the Hawks went back on top to stay.

North Lenoir outscored Farmville Central in the third quarter, 10-4, moving out by as much as nine, 33-24. With 4:28 to go in the fourth period, the Jaguars began to hit and it looked as if they were coming back. Corbett hit twice and Jeff Fields and Greg Joyner once each cutting the margin to 41-34. That was as close as they could get.

Corbett led the scoring with 16 and Pearcill had 14 and Wiggins 12 for the Hawks.

Greene Central Captures Victory Over Chargers; A-G Girls Win

SNOW HILL — Greene Central cashed in at the foul line and outlasted Ayden-Grifton, 60-57 Friday night in the Eastern Carolina Conference. Ayden-Grifton's girls won their game, 37-32.

In the junior varsity contest, Greene Central took a 55-30 win.

Ayden-Grifton outhit Greene Central from the floor, 50-48, but the foul line made the difference. There, the Rams hit on 12 tries, while Ayden-Grifton was successful in only seven attempts.

The Chargers jumped into a 19-13 lead in the first half, and continued to hold that during the second period. Greene Central outhit them, 14-13, but was down, 32-27, at intermission.

In the third period, the Rams charged into the lead, allowing Ayden-Grifton only six points, while pouring in 16 of their own. That put the Rams into a 43-38 lead. Ayden-Grifton tried to rally, outhitting them, 19-17, but it wasn't enough. With 29 seconds left, Ayden-Grifton missed on a shot that could have put them into a 59-58 lead, but the Rams got the rebound, and with 13 seconds left, Melvin Bridges put in two free throws that put it out of reach.

Tim Butts and Jerry Carraway led Greene Central with 15 points each, while Marvin Rouse added 11. For the Chargers, Willie Williams burned the nets for 28.

In the girls' game, both teams hit eight points in the first period, but the Chargerettes pulled away in the second frame. They held the Ewes to just one free throw, while they added 14 points to their own score for a 22-9 halftime lead.

Greene Central came back, 16-10, in the third period, but was still down, 32-25. They again outhit the Chargerettes, 7-5, but it wasn't enough.

Audrey McCarter led Ayden-Grifton with 15, while Vertha Dixon added 10. Delilah Pridgen had 13 for Greene Central.

Panthers Bomb Eastern Wayne

BETHEL—Donnie Perkins scored 22 points and pulled down eight rebounds to lead the North Pitt Panthers to a 70-43 Eastern Carolina Conference win over Eastern Wayne Friday night.

The Eastern Wayne girls, however, came through with a 33-27 win. The Squaws had to rally in the last frame to do it.

Eastern Wayne jumped out to an 8-2 first quarter lead but the Pant-HERS caught up and passed the Squaws with a 12-point surge in the second period. At halftime, North Pitt had a four-point advantage, 14-10.

North Pitt increased the lead to 24-14 in the third period but in the fourth period, the Pant-HERS must have fallen apart as they could only score a grand total of three more points. Eastern Wayne was dumping in 19 points in the meantime and those points gave the Sqaws the win.

The Eastern Wayne boys could not stage a comeback in their game. They had almost had it in the first period as North Pitt rolled in a 20-4 lead. The Panthers took the second period, 12-10.

Both teams scored 18 in the third quarter but North Pitt finished off the game with a 20-11 barrage in the fourth period, to take the win.

Keith Naylor led the Warriors with 11 and Sandy Jackson had 10. Vincent Barnhill had 16 more for the Panthers.

Elm City Nips Robersonville

ROBERSONVILLE — Only ten players played the whole 32 minutes, five on each team as Elm City beat Robersonville, 45-36, in an Eastern Plains Conference game Friday night.

No substitutions were made for either team as both coaches went the distance with their starting five. Robersonville prevented a sweep by Elm City as the Eagles won the first game of the night beating the Elm City jayvees, 52-51. The Elm City girls bombed Robersonville's girls, 62-41, in the second.

Elm City practically had the girls' game won after the first quarter. They rolled up a 15-8 lead and added three to the margin in the second period, 15-12, for a 30-20 halftime lead.

Elm City put the game away in the third period with a 17-8 burst and finished the Lady Eagles off with a 15-13 fourth period.

Elm City had four girls in double figures. Lydia Roundtree led the scoring with 26, Marge Helmer had 12, Minnie Atkinson 11 and Melinda Cherry 10. Beatrice Forrest led the Lady Eagles with 13.

Elm City's boys took a 16-12 lead in the opening frame of their game but neither team could change the margin as both added eight points in the second period. Elm City picked up a point in the third, 7-6 and pulled out to the final nine-point spread with a 14-10 fourth quarter score.

John Virgil led Elm City with 25 and Robert Atkinson had 10. Gregory Bonds led the Eagles with 12 and Ricky Purvis had 10.

Team Two In Victory

Elmhurst II gained a 30-18 victory over Elmhurst I in the Elementary Basketball League Friday.

Team Two pushed into an 11-2 lead in the first period and never lost the lead again. They held a 15-6 halftime margin, and were out 19-14 at the end of the third period.

Bears Surprise Belhaven Five

BEAR GRASS—Bear Grass broke into the winners' circle for the seventh time this year as the Bears edged Belhaven, 54-50, getting a some revenge for two earlier losses.

The Belhaven J.V.'s beat Bear Grass, 36-31, and the Lady Bears lost their game, 37-29.

The Bear Grass girls actually had the first quarter lead, 10-8, but the Lady Bears lost their shooting hands in the second period, and could not get a point as Belhaven was taking the lead, 17-10.

Belhaven added a point to the spread in the third quarter but neither team could gain an advantage over the other in the last frame as both teams scored eight.

The Bears also took the first quarter lead but they managed to hang on to it. They went up by five, 13-8, and increased it to 32-19 in the second quarter. Belhaven began to come back in the third period as they outhit Bear Grass, 14-11. They took the fourth period also, 19-12, falling four points short of a tie and five short of a win.

Belhaven's girls were led by Ruby Borden and Bernita Whitfield. Each scored 11. Janet Holliday led the Lady Bears with 15.

Belhaven's Vaughn Topping led the boys' with 27 and Rudy Broden added 11. For Bear Grass, Randy Stokes had 14, Mark Gardner 12, and David Price, and Vernell Rodgers, 10 each.

Dr. J Leads Nets To Victory

By The Associated Press

Brian Taylor's steal and two free throws with three seconds left gave New York a 112-110 victory over the Kentucky Colonels Friday night in the battle for first place in the Eastern Division of the American Basketball Association. But it was Nets forward Julius Erving who left them shaking their heads.

The man nicknamed "Dr. J" for the way he operates on the court poured in 42 points, including 16 in the final period. He sank half his 24 field goal attempts and all his 18 free throw tries. He hauled down 18 rebounds. He handed out 10 assists. He made 10 steals. He blocked two shots.

He dazzled the season-high crowd of 12,293 at the Nassau Coliseum.

"He's the best forward I've ever seen," said Nets Coach Kevin Loughery, who played and coached for 11 seasons in the National Basketball Association before taking over the Nets last year. "There was one time when I thought it was Elgin Baylor, but when you consider both ends of the court, Doc has to be the guy.

"When it gets down to the important part of the game, he wants the ball. That tells you something about the guy and the kind of leadership he gives to the team. When we play against the real good teams and have big crowds, he responds."

Elsewhere in the ABA Friday night, the San Diego Q's nipped the Virginia Squires 108-105, the Memphis Sounds edged the Spirits of St. Louis 107-103, the Indiana Pacers beat the San Antonio Spurs 114-105 and the Utah Stars trimmed the Denver Nuggets 119-116 in overtime.

Despite Erving's effort, the Nets and Colonels were tied 110-110 with 30 seconds to play, and Kentucky had the ball. They held it for one last shot, but never got it off because of Taylor's steal. Pacers 114, Spurs 105

Rookie Billy Knight scored 26 points for Indiana, picking up the slack after his running mate at forward, All-Star George McGinnis, was ejected from the game midway through the third period after scoring 21 points and grabbing 19 rebounds.

Q's 108, Squires 105

Jim O'Brien hit a pair of jumpers in the final two minutes to preserve San Diego's victory and saddle Virginia with its 13th consecutive loss.

Sounds 107, Spirits 103

Tom Owens scored 32 points and grabbed 17 rebounds for Memphis, which built a 16-point lead in the third period and then held on.

Memphis guard Rick Mount reinjured his shoulder in the third period when he collided with Spirits guard Freddie Lewis. Mount, out for eight weeks until earlier this month, may be lost for the season.

Stars 119, Nuggets 116

Young Moses Malone helped Utah snap a seven-game losing streak by scoring 24 points and pulling down a career-high 26 rebounds.

Denver's Wali Jones sent the game into overtime with a long jumper that tied the score at 107-107 with two seconds left in regulation play. But Utah jumped in front quickly in the overtime, then clinched the victory on John Roche's basket with 16 seconds to go.

Pack Nails Williamston

WASHINGTON — Strong Washington High School romped to an 87-47 victory over Williamston's Tigers Friday night.

Washington made it a clean sweep with a 65-39 win in the junior varsity contest.

Williamston fell behind in the early minutes of the game, as the Pam Pack forged a 19-8 lead in the opening period. Washington came back to pour in 25 points in the second frame, holding the Tigers to less than half that, 12. That gave the Pack a 44-20 halftime edge.

They continued their pullaway in the third period, boosting the margin to 59-26 with a 15-6 advantage. They finished it off by outhitting Williamston, 28-21.

Washington was paced by Albert Spencer, Lonnie Moore and Kenny Rogerson, each with 17. Barry Wallace had 10 to lead the Tigers.

East Carolina Women Post Fourth Victory

HARRISONBURG, Va.—East Carolina University's women captured their fourth basketball victory of the season Friday night, downing Madison College, 63-58.

The contest was a close one all the way, although East Carolina was able to inch out to as much as a 10 point lead during the contest. Shooting 45 per cent from the floor in the first half—and getting all their points from there, the Bucettes moved out to a 36-26 lead by intermission.

Madison came back in the second period, however, and slowly chopped away at the lead, gradually coming back to as close as five, the final margin of the game. East Carolina ended up with a 44.7 per centage from the floor with only slightly less accuracy in the second half, and that helped the Pirate attack.

They also improved at the line, making 50 per cent of their shots.

The Pirates also had success at the boards, as Sheila Cotton led the way with 13. Lu Ann Swaim added eight and Susan Manning seve.

Miss Swaim also paced the scoring with 16 points, while Miss Cotton hit 14 and Ellen Garrison added 10. Katherine Johnson paced Madison with 20, while Gail Freshwater added 18.

In a junior varsity game, East Carolina gained a 62-55 victory. Belinda Byrun led the JV with 16, while Mary Bryan Carlyle hit 11. It was the first outing for the JV.

The ECU varsity, now 4-1, will play the first game of a doubleheader on Tuesday night at the SCOPE in Norfolk, Va., against Old Dominion. The men's teams of the two shcools will meet in the second game.

Bertie Tops EBA

WINDSOR—Bertie Junior High School took a pair of games from E.B. Aycock Junior High School Friday afternoon. Bertie won the varsity contest, 61-54, and took the junior varsity 35-30.

Aycock fell behind in the early minutes of the game, and was down 14-10, at the end of the first period. Bertie came back with a 17-12 margin in the second period, running its lead out to 31-22 at the end of the first half.

The Phantoms tries to get a rally going in the third period, but could only outhit Betie by one, 12-11, and were still down, 42-34 going into the final period. Aycock again outscored them, but only 20-19, and it was only a dent in the lead.

Larry Speight led Aycock with 16 points, while Greg Guthrie had 14. Hilton Thompson hit 16, James Hardy had 13 and Edward Outlaw and Gene Williams each had 12 for Berie.

Rural Architecture In Eastern North Carolina

Eastern North Carolina has an abundance of rural architecture; farm houses , tobacco curing barns, storage barns and smoke houses, sheds and tool shelters.

Admittedly, a great deal of it is commonplace, without architectural distinction. Nonetheless, there's an almost endless variation in structural design, much of it original; designed by the individual farmer in the size and shape to fit his own particular needs.

GM To Give Rebates

By LEE MITGANG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's biggest car maker, General Motors Corp., gave in to the prevailing strategy in Detroit this past week and promised car buyers cash rebates from $200 to $500 on its small cars.

And as a result of the new rebate policy, which all four Detroit car makers now have adopted, car buyers seemed to be nibbling for the first time in months.

Although industrywide car sales reported this past week for the mid-January period were still off 15.4 per cent from a year ago, Chrysler's small car sales were up 12 per cent.

Sales at the other three auto makers continued to slide, since they set up their rebate programs later than Chrysler. But industry watchers expressed hope that the rebate program, coupled with the tax cut both President Ford and the Congress agree is necessary to stem the recession, will stimulate increased car buying.

Meanwhile, fourth quarter earnings reports appearing this past week showed the effects of the recession, with big oil producers, airlines and consumer-oriented firms like General Electric Co. the most deeply affected.

Exxon Corp.'s fourth quarter profits, in marked contrast to the sharp gains of previous quarters, were up only 9.3 per cent. Standard Oil Co. of California's gained about 3 per cent, while Mobil Corp.'s quarterly earnings actually fell 50 per cent, and Texaco's fell nearly 29 per cent.

Airlines, even those many consider the healthiest, showed the effects of higher energy costs and fewer passengers. United Airlines fourth quarter net plunged 89 per cent and Delta Airlines declined 46 per cent.

Firearms Play Larger Role In American Violence

United Press International

The following is from a study titled "Firearms and Federal Law: the Gun Control Act of 1968" by Franklin E. Zimring in the Journal of Legal Studies of the University of Chicago Law School. Zimring is a law professor and codirector of the Center for Studies in Criminal Justice of the university.

Without doubt, the role of firearms in American violence is much greater in 1974 than in 1968.

Rates of gun violence and the proportion of violent acts that are committed by guns have increased substantially since the Gun Control Act went into effect.

Behind these increases lies the probability that hand gun ownership has become at least a subcultural institution in the big cities which are the main arena of American violence.

During this period, regional differences in gun ownership and use have been moderated as the large Northeastern cities that were traditionally areas of low ownership and use have experienced large increases in hand gun use.

The special role of the hand gun in urban violence is one of the more obvious lessons of the data we have assembled. For many purposes it seems more appropriate to divide recent fluctuations in homicide and assault into "hand gun" and "other" categories than to speak of homicide rates as an aggregate —since 1966, rates of hand gun homicide have increased more than three times as much as homicides by all other means.

The data gathered in the present effort suggest, but not compel, two other conclusions about patterns of hand gun ownership and violence in the United States.

First, the sharp rise in the proportion of violence attributable to hand guns in Northeastern cities may lead to modification of the hypothesis that general patterns of hand gun ownership determine the extent to which hand guns are used in violent episodes. While it is still true that these regions with the highest general levels of gun ownership have the highest proportion of gun use in violence, the past decade has produced an increase in hand gun use in the Northeast that leaves cities in that region closer to but still below the national average hand gun share of violence.

This could be due to a substantial rise in hand gun ownership in the general population in these cities, but that would mean that a vast Northeastern urban hand gun arsenal has been accumulating during the past ten years. It is more likely that hand gun ownership increased substantially among subcultural groups disproportionately associated with violence without necessarily affecting other parts of the population. It is, to give a concrete example, neither necessary nor likely that gun ownership among middle-class New York Jews (other than small merchants) has increased dramatically in the past decade as New York hand gun homicide has increased....

Whatever the future holds, the federal Congress is unprepared to make intelligent policy choices concerning the federal role in firearms regulation. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, with all its faults, has an informational monopoly on firearms regulation. No committee of the Congress has paid sustained attention to the administration of the Act, or prodded the Bureau toward producing the kind of information that is needed for intelligent planning. With sporadic exceptions, those members of Congress that introduce new firearms proposals are failing to obtain or use available information. In the near future any real reform in the administration of the Act will have to be internally generated by the Bureau. If Congress is supposed to be the policy-setting institution, the Gun Control Act of 1968 may stand as an example of the blind leading the halt.

The links between domestic violence during the 1960s and the 1968 act are important but susceptible to overstatement. The John Kennedy assassination helped focus attention on the ready availability of mail-order guns: the Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy killings put pressure on Congress at crucial points in the legislative career of the Act, just as the escape from jail of John Dillinger had expedited the passage of the National Firearms Act of 1934.

But the basic approach of the 1968 Act had been worked out by the Treasury Department in 1965. And the only legislative initiatives produced by the Robert Kennedy shooting, a series of proposals for a national strategy of licensing gun owners, did not affect the shape of the 1968 Act.

If the violence of the mid-1960s had little impact on the provisions of the Gun Control Act, it had a profound effect on the problems that the act addressed. Urban riots during the period 1964-1968 and increased fear of crime had a manifold impact on the quality of American urban life.

One consequence of this increasing turmoil and fear was an increased demand for firearms as instruments of self-defense, particularly in big cities. Handgun sales, the best index of demand for urban self-defense weapons, averaged 600,000 a year during the first four years of the 1960s: by 1966 the market for handguns had doubled to 1.2 million: by 1968 the market had almost doubled again, to an estimated 2.4 million, although this figure may have been abnormally high because importers and private citizens were rushing to purchase imported handguns before the import restrictions in the 1968 Act came into effect.

The increase in urban gun ownership was paralleled by an increase in urban violence. Perhaps the most spectacular case study of gun violence was the city of Detroit. In 1965 Detroit experienced a total of 140 homicides.

GREENVILLE TV & APPLIANCE

Israeli Policewoman Prefers Own Country

Dalia Tauber, a 24-year-old Israeli policewoman, enjoyed her first visit to America but was glad to return home.

Miss Tauber met Mrs. Fidler and her son on an organized tour of London during the summer of 1973. They began corresponding and Miss Tauber decided to come to Greenville.

"America is not for me—Israel is my country," Miss Tauber said when asked if she would like to live in the U. S. permanently.

"I would not like to live in America because there are too many internal problems here," Miss Tauber explained. "America has always been pictured as the dream country, but is is not true. There seems to be much insecurity here.

"I would rather live in Israel. I feel more sure of my job and my life in Israel," she added. "However, if I did come to live in the United States, I would like to live in the South because Southerners are more relaxed and friendlier than the people in New York."

Miss Tauber has been employed as a Tel Aviv policewoman for about two years. She works in the special duties department and is responsible for obtaining information from informants and putting cases together. The information is then turned over to the detective division and they investigate the theories.

"We investigate papers while the detective division investigates people," Miss Tauber explained. "I worked in the detective division for one year but that work was too hard. I had to transfer to another department."

Miss Tauber received five months of investigative training in an Israeli police school.

She said, "There is a great need for both policewoman and policemen in Israel but few people want to fill those positions."

Tel Aviv has the largest detective department of any city in Israel, and there are five women employed in the office with Miss Tauber. However, other police dapartments in Israel do not employ women, the visitor said.

The policewomen do not carry guns.

"The policemen carry guns but there is no need for them,"Miss Tauber explained.

"Mrs. Fidler's father was telling me about the number of murders committed in Charlotte during 1974. There were 80 murders in a population of 300,000 people.

"Israel has a population of three million people and there are no more than four or five murders committed each year. These murders occur usually among the criminals," Miss Tauber said. "There are no killings for money or drugs."

Crime In Israel

Miss Tauber explained there is crime in Israel—but it is small crime, such as breaking into homes and the black market.

"The largest number of crimes include breaking into homes and stealing cars," Miss Tauber said.

"Israel has so many financial and political problems, agricultural problems and security problems that no one wants to kill anyone else," the Israeli policewoman explained.

Miss Tauber said there are so many men and boys killed in the border fights that there is no murder in the cities. She explained there is enough killing in the war itself.

Prior to joining the police department, Miss Tauber served in the Israeli army for three years.

She went into the army at the age of 18 and planned to serve a two-year term. "At the end of my time, I was asked to serve another year so I did," Miss Tauber said.

"Everyone has to serve in the army—it is a duty—but it is something everyone wants to do. Girls are required to stay in the army for two years while boys must serve for three years," although "persons can be deferred for religious reasons," Miss Tauber said.

According to Miss Tauber, it is much cheaper to live in Israel than in America.

Standard Of Living

"The standard of living is much higher here," Miss Tauber said. "An Israeli who has a four room apartment is very well situated. Very few people in my country own homes.

"Essentials are much cheaper is Israel, "although luxury items such as appliances and cosmetics are very expensive.

"Israeli women are not as clothes conscious as the American women are. We usually buy what we need. We do not have closets filled with dresses and outfits as most American women seem to have," Miss Tauber said.

Miss Tauber said the materialistic life of the Israeli youth is not as high as in America.

"We are more concerned with intellectual things and survival," Miss Tauber emphasized. "We do not think about a bigger car or more spending money but instead are concerned about learning and seeing new things and advancing the mind."

Doctor fees and health services too are much cheaper in Israel.

"These services are controlled by the government. We pay $5 a month for health services and could stay in the hospital for two years and not have to pay anything," Miss Tauber explained, adding, "everyone who is able to work must work to take care of themselves. There is no social services department in Israel."

Miss Tauber said there is no women's liberation movement in Israel because there is no need for one.

"Women are equal in Israel. A policewoman receives the same salary that a policeman does. Women have the same rights as men and get the same salary if they do the same work as men do. The women have no need to protest for equal rights," Miss Tauber stated.

Advancement Noted

"Israel is an extreme example of advancement in a short time. The country has existed for only 26 years (since 1948). We have developed ourselves to a very high point in a short time in all areas, including agriculture and science," Miss Tauber emphasized.

"The schools are advanced culturally. Students begin learning English in the fifth grade and continue to study that language until they complete high school.

"Students must begin learning either Arabic or French when they become freshmen in high school," Miss Tauber said. "The more advanced and better books at the Israeli universities are written in English so it is important for the students to learn English."

"I was very impressed with the ministers and the simplicity in the church services. I enjoyed the services and the singing," Miss Tauber said. "I also like the way families have prayer before meals and during their church services.

She explained "Israeli men and women do not marry as young as the Americans. The boys serve in the army for three years and then have to study at the universities before they can marry. The average marriage age is between 23 and 26."

Both Miss Tauber's parents are Yugoslavian. They escaped to the mountains of Italy during World War II, then went to Israel in 1946 to live in a British camp.

In 1948 Israel fought a war of liberation against the Arabs and the British, and Israel gained its independence.

Miss Tauber's father has been a press photographer for 15 years and her mother is a housewife. They live in Haifa, Israel. Her only brother is living in London and studying karate and physics. She has no sisters.

Miss Tauber said the one thing she prays for is peace for all the world.

"When you see what a nice life is like, you can believe that there is one God who leads the world," Miss Tauber said.

Miss Tauber feels she will not make another trip to the United States because of the expense. "It is Mrs. Fidler's turn to visit Israel," she said.

MISS DALIA TAUBER. . .says she will long remember the few weeks she spent in the United States with her friends, the Don Fidler family.

SPENDING TIME TOGETHER. . . Miss Tauber and Greg, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Fidler, take an afternoon walk beside Lake Glennwood. Greg's dog Micky also liked the relaxing stroll in the warming rays of the afternoon sun.

LISTENS TO MUSIC. . .Miss Tauber listens while Mrs. Treva Fidler plays some of her favorite selections on the piano. Miss Tauber especially enjoyed the music and services she observed in the local churches.

Female Ex-Convicts Need Help Re-Entering Society

By RONALD L. LITTLEPAGE

HOUSTON (UPI) — The 70-mile bus ride from Goree prison unit for women in East Texas to Houston is lonely and frightening for a released convict.

Often her thoughts drift to the life that sent her to prison—theft, drugs, prostitution. Not much to look forward to beyond the $100 the prison gives her except the same life on the streets she lived before.

But if she's one of the lucky ones, she'll be met at the station by Peggy McCoy, 42, a three-time loser who has spent 12 years behind bars.

Mrs. McCoy, an attractive, doe-eyed woman, greets the exconvict with a smile and a hug and offers her a home, a chance, a new start, through the New Directions halfway house for women.

"It's harder for women to come back to society and face it and cope with it," Mrs. McCoy said in an interview, sitting in the halfway house's warm, comfortable living room.

"A man can come back and he can walk in and apply for a job and they'll probably say, 'Oh well, the boy's a good ol' boy. He just got caught stealing food for his kids.'

"But you let a girl walk in and ask for a job and say that she's an exconvict and immediately their thoughts come to, 'Well, she's no good. She's not a fit mother. She must be a prostitute.' It's harder for a woman to take this. This is why so many of them haven't been able to make it."

When Mrs. McCoy was released from prison the second time in 1970, there wasn't a New Directions program waiting. She was soon on heroin again and back in trouble, stealing what she could to support her habit.

Arrested and released a third time in 1972, she looked up Sonny Wells, a five-times excon and founder of the New Directions rehabilitation program for men. After kicking a methadone and heroin habit, she persuaded Wells to open a similar program for women.

Since the halfway house for women opened a year ago, 82 women have lived there. Only one has gone back to jail.

"Our program is to try to help a person when they've been involved in the criminal justice system someway," Mrs. McCoy said.

"Maybe they're on drugs, maybe alcohol, maybe just family living problems. But let's find out what the problem is. Once you do away with the drugs, you still got to deal with the problem."

The staff is made up entirely of exconvicts. In the group therapy sessions and the one-to-one encounters, they know what's going through the women's minds.

"We let them know we're here and that we know. We're a family," Mrs. McCoy said. "I went to prison the first time in 1957 and nobody asked me what my problem was. I just did my time and got out.

"But I got pretty well educated in prison. That's where I learned what dope was about and what pimps were about. I have two children who are now 24 and 20 and my husband took full custody of them. So it was real easy for me to stay in that bag that nobody really cared or understood me.

"Basically I would say every girl's problem is the same as mine—wanting to be loved, wanting to be accepted. In this program, we have trouble with people not wanting to leave and they come back after they move out on their own. This becomes home."

New Directions recently opened a second halfway house for women. The two homes can accommodate about 30 residents.

The women are free to find jobs, date and spend weekends away. But someone is always on hand if needed.

"If it wasn't for this program, I would probably be doing a life sentence," Mrs. McCoy said. "I say that New Directions saved my life.

"It wasn't any big hassle for me because I was tired and I was ready to find another way to live. I think all of us reach this point sometime in our lives, but if there's not somebody there to tell us some of the things you have to go through, it's rough.

"It hurts to change your lifestyle. But once you make up your mind to do these changes and take a risk, it gets better each time."

Walk-In Surgery Saves Time And Money

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

Next time you need a minor operation don't be surprised if the doctor proposes "in-and-out surgery."

It's also called same-day or walk-in surgery.

To save the patient time and money and even free hospital beds for more seriously ill persons walk-in surgery is catching on all across America.

These procedures lend themselves to in-and-out surgery, say the proponents:

—Tonsillectomy, D and C (dilation and curettage-scraping of the uterus), removal of skin growths, vasectomy, therapeutic abortions, hand surgery, biopsies, removal of cysts, skin grafts, face lifts, hair transplants, small lacerations.

A report on ambulatory surgery, pioneered in 1961 at Butterworth Hospital in Grand Rapids, Mich., has been published by Blue Cross of Southwest Ohio, in Cincinnati.

Perspective, the Blue Cross Plans quarterly, distributed nationally, is getting the word around the country.

The in-and-out surgery didn't begin to boom until five years ago. It is now one of the fastest-growing trends in medicine.

Where it is a part of the hospital scene, many operations that traditionally required a hospital stay of anywhere from two to five days are performed on an outpatient basis. Patient enters and leaves the same day.

Hospitals in many large cities, according to Perspective, have facilities that provide for such surgery. Independent, free-standing clinics entirely devoted to walk-in surgery also are growing in number and importance.

At least 45 Blue Cross Plans across the country today provide coverage for this type of surgery.

In New York City, 100,000 subscribers received benefit for in-and-out surgery in the last year. In Boston, 25,000 subscribers did; and in Phoenix, 25,000.

Consider Verticare, the Blue Cross of southwest Ohio's same-day surgery program. It resulted in savings of $250,000 the first 24 months' of operation.

When walk-in surgery concept got started, medical economists predicted that the idea, if adopted nationwide, could trim the country's collective hospital bill by $135 million a year.

It also, by rendering unnecessary the nearly 10,000 hospital beds then slated for construction, would save the public another $200 million.

Here's how the day was spent by a Chicago woman who went to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in Chicago for same-day surgery on her hand:

At 6:40 a.m., the admitting office clerk attached ID bracelet.

At 7:10 a.m., pre-surgery checks were made for temperature, blood pressure.

At 7:15 a.m., the patient was wheeled into surgery.

At 7:30 a.m., she underwent surgery on the right hand.

At 8:30 a.m., the operating room nurse and surgeon report the operation a success.

At 1 p.m., back in patient's room, a Candystriper served lunch.

At 1:30 p.m., the orthopedic surgeon made a bedside call and discussed plans for follow-up care.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The divorce rate has never been higher in this country. Experts put the blame on youth, feminine unrest and the high cost of living.

There is one theory that puts the blame on improper mating. Two people are thrown together who are emotional misfits. They have even devised a rating system.

For example, some husbands and wives are docile, uncaring, stoic people. They don't care if their own dog bites them, the shower runs cold, the paper is late or their insurance expires. These are the unflappable No. 1's. No. 1's should never sleep under the same electric blanket. They could burn themselves up and no one would know.

Some husbands and wives are independently strong. Each does his or her own thing within their own domain. She cooks. He washes the car. She launders. He changes fuses. She has a daughter. He has a son. No. 2's are dull.

No. 3's are aggressive personalities. They shout a lot and each feels he or she is the dominating influence in the family. They cannot hang wallpaper together, hang a picture, agree on the same TV channel or set up housekeeping without a live-in marriage counselor.

No. 4's are volcanic. They have varicose veins in the neck from yelling. They rarely listen and fight constantly over the children (each rejecting custody).

The No. 5's are the worst kind for a marriage. They're quiet, moody, sullen. No one knows what they're thinking. (Or for that matter if they're breathing.)

Now, this is important. NO MARRIAGE COMBINATION SHOULD EXCEED 6. A 4 and a 1, maybe, or a five and a 1, but no more.

I once knew of a 3 who said to her husband, "I would marry Dean Martin in a minute if he asked me," and her husband (a No. 4) broke her nose.

The worst case I ever knew was a 5 and a 2. They went camping together. He asked her if she would help him park the trailer. She said it was man's work. He didn't say anything. Finally, she stood behind the trailer shouting, "Turn the wheels the other way." (She didn't say what the first way was.) Then she would instruct, "You got this much more room." (Which meant nothing as she was behind the trailer.) Then she would shout, "Pull over there and back toward me," (which also meant nothing).

Finally, the No. 5 ran over her foot and said, "I'm going out for a pack of cigarettes." He was never seen again.

Remember, if you can add, you can plan a happy marriage.

Kindness Kills

CLERMONT-FERRAND, France WNS—Widow Marguerite Faure, 57, fell in love with Paul Duminy, the 62-year-old roomer she took into her house. She fed him rich foods, fancy pastries, delicious candies and "the finest liquors" for two years until he proposed marriage. Unfortunately, Duminy died from a liver complaint two days before the wedding. "I killed him with kindness," wept the stranded bride, who weighs 168 lbs. She has donated the wedding cake to a local bachelors club.

THE ROMAGNOLIS' TABLE. . .is broadcast locally on UNC-TV's Channel 25 at 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Margaret and Franco Romagnolis have been cooking together for almost 21 years.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Although Franco has lived in this country for more than 20 years, he still has a fractured way with the English language. What turned out to be his nemesis, however, was not talking, but cooking.

Since "The Romagnolis' Table" is produced at WGBH-Boston, the same station where Julia Child ruled the kitchen for many years, some of the basic equipment was used.

"The stove looked like the panel of a jetliner—seven burners lined up in front of me," says Franco. "On the first program, I was explaining how to heat the oil to brown lamb for abbacchio alla cacciatoro and I though I had turned on the right burner. I felt this terrible heat on my elbow and realized that the pan with the oil in it was not heating up at all. What was heating up was up elbow. I kept on going, but for the next rpogram, the TV crew drew arrows on the stove so that Margaret and I would know which button to push."

Margaret and Franco have been cooking together for almost all of the 21 years they have been married. They met and fell in love in Rome where she was working for the Marshall Plan Radio Information Service and he was a radio engineer who answered her call for technical help.

They now live in Watertown, Mass., with their four children, Gian, 20, Marco, 19, Paolo, 18, and Anna, 15. Cooking is an important part of their family part.

"Blithe Spirit", a comedy about spiritualism written by Noel Coward, will be presented by the Eastern Kentucky University Players Jan. 29-Feb. 1.

The play will be performed in an arena theatre arrangement of the Gifford Theatre, Richmond, Ky. The cast includes Judy Wahlert of Greenville.

Tennis Clothes For Everyone

WIMBLEDON, England WNS—Designer Teddy Tinling, who has put sex appeal into women's tennis clothes here for years and years, has decided to do the same for men. There were 28 feminine stars wearing his outfits in this year's Wimbledon matches. "Actually, I designed clothes for Ken Rosewall and Lew Hoad in the 1950s," said Tinling. "Now it's time for a certain sartorial liberation for males."

Rehabilitating Offenders Appeals To Lawyer

By SUSAN SANFORD
Advertiser-Journal Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — When Emily Gassenheimer started law school in 1958, she knew exactly where she was going.

She also knew it was going to take her somewhat longer than the average student to get through her courses. Pregnant with her third child, and with a husband and two small daughters requiring much of her time, Mrs. Gassenheimer had to attend classes when she could fit them into her lifestyle. Now, 16 years later, she has reached her goal.

In 1974, Mrs. Gassenheimer graduated from Jones Law School and took the state Bar Exam — an experience she describes as "the most humiliating, demoralizing thing I've ever been through. All those bright-eyed young people, fresh out of law school, and there I was competing with them," she said.

"When it was over, my husband Irvin and my daughters and I had a party to celebrate. They were behind me all the way, and we were all glad it was over," she said.

In her office on Scott Street, Mrs. Gassenheimer is immersed in the work she was aiming toward all along. "I've known for years that I wanted to combine both legal and rehabilitative aspects in working with offenders," said the dark-haired attorney. "I feel that a lawyer's job does not stop with getting a client acquitted. If you keep a man out of jail, yet put him back into a crime-producing situation, where neither his needs nor society's are being met, then you've only done half a job. I think this is particularly true in the case of juvenile offenders," she said.

"I don't believe in pampering criminals," she continued, "but I do believe in effective rehabilitation. It is obvious by now that crime is a problem that touches everyone — it's no longer on the other side of town. Society has tried for years to reduce crime, yet the crime rate continues to increase. Our old methods of dealing with the situation are not working, and I think it's time we tried something new."

A slender woman with dark, friendly eyes and a warm, open manner, Mrs. Gassenheimer has a deep interest in her fellow man. Her many years of volunteer work with various community services include serving on both the State Mental Board and on the board of the local Mental Health Assn.

Mrs. Gassenheimer is currently involved in working with the Community Council, the social planning division of United Appeal. The Criminal Justice Committee of the Council, of which she is a member, has recently completed a year of research.

"We have visited the city and county courts, the jails, juvenile court, the Department of Pensions and Security, the Family Guidance Center, the Youth Facility — all these related services, in an effort to determine which services may be overlapping and where the gaps are," she said. "We have also made studies of what cities in other parts of the country are doing in these areas, what programs have been implemented elsewhere.'

The 30-member Criminal Justice Committee, according to Mrs. Gassenheimer, is now concerning itself chiesly with three issues: juvenile offenders, bail bond reform and adult offenders. Mrs. Gassenheimer is a member of the subcommittee on Services to Youth in Trouble, and shares the view that the rights of the juvenile offender are many times overlooked. "How can we teach our young people respect for the law when so often it is obvious that the law has no respect for them?" she said. "The problem of juvenile crime touches everyone today. As with crime in general, it's no longer kids on the other side of town who are getting into trouble.

"The committee members feel that the juvenile age should be raised to 18. As it is now, 16-and 17-year-olds are tried as adults, in adult courts in many places. We feel there should be a uniform juvenile court system established," she said.

"I also feel society has a responsibility to rehabilitate juvenile offenders. You know, the first offense is really a warning to society that this person is off on the wrong track, and that is when we need to start rehabilitation."

The Honeymoon Makes A Comeback

STROUDSBURG, Pa. (AP) — During the turmoil of the late 1960s, the honeymoon waned, along with a number of other traditions.

But, say managers of the Pocono Mountain honeymoon resorts in northeast Pennsylvania, an area which calls itself "the honeymoon capital of the world," the honeymoon is very much back in evidence.

"Newlyweds from all over the country honeymoon with us," comments Charles Poalillo, a Pocono honeymoon resort owner, "and you can see a subtle change, especially in their appearance, over the past few years.

"Young men," he continues, "are wearing their hair significantly shorter today than they did just a few years ago. The girls, too, have opted for the more highly styled, sophisticated look."

Moreover, Poalillo notes, while some couples are still choosing to write their own wedding vows and dress in casual attire, the great majority decide on the traditional marriage ceremonies, a church setting and a white gown for the bride and a tuxedo for the groom.

"I visit all the resorts regularly," says Bob Uguccioni, spokesman for the Pocono Mountain Honeymoon Center here, "and it is remarkable to see the metamorphosis in appearance, attitudes and manners."

Ron Logan, a honeymoon resort manager, comments: "The newlyweds really enjoy dressing up in their best clothes every night and showing off their new suits and gowns. The grooms automatically hold chairs, open doors and order meals for their wives. The guys now do it as a common courtesy, and the girls really seem to enjoy it."

The Poconos, annually host to over 250,000 newlywed couples, is famed for the romantic decor of its resort accommodations. Sunken bathtubs and over-size beds have been fixtures for nearly two decades, with the owners adding heart-shape, circular and hexagonal tubs and beds in recent years.

WOTM Projects Planned On Thursday Night

Women of the Moose, Greenville Chapter No. 1308, heard plans for development committee projects at the business meeting Thursday night at the Moose Temple.

Mrs. Evelyn Cottam, chairman of the membership committee, plans a Sarah Coventry party, the date and time to be announced. Mrs. Martha Jackson, chairman, said the hospital committee will sell needle threaders to raise funds.

The chapter voted to redecorate the Twilight Room in the Moose Temple and approved the purchase of new aprons for WOTM food service workers.

Plans for a Chapter Day Rally in Washington, March 2 at 1:30 p.m. were announced. WOTM members from Greenville, Goldsboro, Kinston, Washington, and Snow Hill will participate.

Mrs. Holly Simonowich, chairman of the Moose Clothing Bank, made an appeal for additional clothing and shoes for needy families in the Greenville area. She said that clothing for children is especially needed, the bank's supply having been depleted in November.

The chapter will make a contribution to the Mooseheart Health Center in honor of Miss Kay Cancie. Miss Cancie, WOTM grand chancellor, of Mooseheart, Ill., will be honor guest at a special enrollment ceremony Jan. 30 with the Greenville chapter as hostesses and guests from other eastern North Carolina chapters attending.

Mrs. Betty Diehl, chairman of the food service committee, reported on activities of the group during the holiday season and Mrs. Linda Thompson, chairman of the Academy of Friendship committee, reported success with the recent sale of a "money tree" to raise funds for committee projects.

Serve A Savory Instead Of A Sweet

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Dentists, doctors and nutritionists have been warning Americans for some years that they consume too many sweets. Now the high price of sugar may help to create a new food-style — one of benefit to health. For an evening refresher when company comes, instead of a big cake, why not offer a big savory?

A "savory" is a British term that means, according to Webster, "a cooked or uncooked dish of stimulating flavor served at the end of dinner, but sometimes as an appetizer before the meal." British savories are never sweet.

A savory we tried recently, one dreamed up by a California cook, is as decorative looking as a frosted and ornamented cake. This savory has a pastry base spread with a well-seasoned cream-cheese mixture and is topped with a lattice of pastry and brisling sardines. We served it recently, instead of a sweet, to a group of neighbors at an evening get-together and they all voted for it.

SARDINE SAVORY

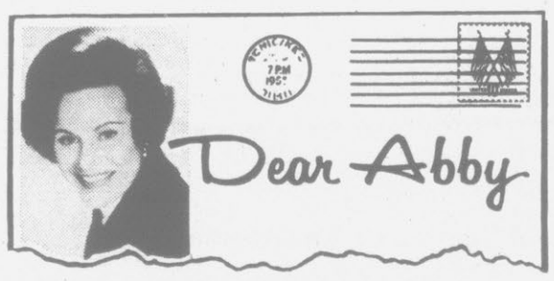
2 cups flour, stir to aerate before measuring
1 teaspoon salt
2-3rds cup solid white shortening
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
Ice Water, about 6 tablespoons
8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon minced chives
or green top of scallion
1 teaspoon prepared Dijon mustard
¼ teaspoon dill weed
¼ cup finely chopped pimiento-stuffed green olives
3¾-ounce can brisling sardines, drained

Into a large mixing bowl turn the flour and salt; with a pastry blender cut in the shortening until particles are fine. Cut in butter until the size of small peas. With a fork, stir in enough ice water to make a stiff dough; divide in half. On a floured pastry cloth, with a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll each half into an 8 by 10 inch rectangle. Trim edges with pastry wheel. Place each rectangle on a small ungreased cookie sheet. Cut out center of one rectangle, leaving a hollow with a 1-inch-wide border.

Fold cutout portion of dough in half lengthwise; roll into a 5½ by 12 inch strip; cut into seven strips, each 12 inches long. Cut one strip in two. Make a diagonal lattice of strips across hollow rectangle of pastry, with three long and two short strips (for two corners) going in one direction and three long strips going in the other direction. Moisten ends of strips and tuck under rectangular "frame"; pinch gently together.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until golden — 12 to 15 minutes. Let stand on cookie sheets, without disturbing, until cold. Beat cream cheese with the remaining ingredients except the sardines; at serving time gently spread over solid pastry. With two wide spatulas, lift lattice pastry and place over cheese-spread solid pastry. Put sardines in open spaces in lattice pastry. Cut into 9 pieces. Serve on bread-and-butter plates with seafood forks or on salad plates with salad forks. Makes 9 servings.

Abby Hears About Reader's Pet Peeve



By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've been wanting to write this for ten years, but the problem has become increasingly worse every year, so here goes a pet peeve which I'll wager plenty of others have:

I refer to the business of subtly pressuring people to give Christmas gifts to those whose JOB it is to perform a service.

I live in an apartment building where there are two doormen (a day man and a night man), also an elevator operator, two girls on the switchboard and six men in the garage. Before Christmas the manager sends me a list of their names. I think you're getting the idea.

Abby, these people are not "volunteers." They are paid to do a job. If any one of them had gone out of his way to do something special for me, no one would have to tell me to give that person a present. I ask no special services, and get none, so why is a present in order? And that goes for the mailman, the paperboy and the hairdresser whom I tip 52 times a year! (SHE should give ME a present!)

Thanks for letting me get this . . . .

"OFF MY CHEST IN CHICAGO"

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to the 20-year-old man who said he liked older women interested me. You said he was probably looking for his mother, and you recommended counseling.

What about older men who prefer girls 20 or 30 years younger than themselves? Would you say that they are probably looking for their daughters, and recommend counseling for them, too?

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: The 20-year-old man wrote to say he "grooved on women between 45 and 50 with gray hair and middle-age spread." Now if that doesn't sound like he's looking for Mamma, I miss my guess.

On the other hand, most older men who go wild over young chicks have insatiable egos and a horror of growing old. It may be only a coincidence, but when a young beautiful girl marries a man who's old enough to be her father, he's usually very rich—or famous

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to meet that young kid who likes gray-haired women with a middle-age spread. (You said maybe he was looking for a mother.)

Well, I like young boys. Maybe I'm looking for a son. But what difference does it make as long as we both find what we're looking for? Sign me...

"46 AND LIKES 'EM YOUNG"

DEAR ABBY: I am nearly 70 and widowed. Recently, my daughter visited me, and I mentioned that I had made provisions for my kidneys and eyes to be donated after my death, and I also told her that I had already made provisions to be cremated.

She said, "No way! I will not permit you to be cut up and cremated!"

Abby, this is MY wish. I have no use for a plot of ground for someone to keep up, or a headstone for someone to visit once a year. What right has my daughter, the oldest of my five children, to say that SHE won't permit it?

My plans are made and I've even paid $250 for my cremation, and I don't want those in charge to have to hassle my daughter after I'm gone. So what can I do?

MADE MY PLANS

DEAR MADE: What you "can" do depends upon the state in which you live. There are state laws covering this situation. Talk to your lawyer. I'm with you, Mother. Your wishes should be carried out as soon as you are.

DEAR ABBY: I simply must write to say "thank you for being there." I'm a guy who reads you faithfully.

I find your column interesting and exciting, and your recipe for pecan pie was super. It made my Thanksgiving dinner!

It takes a woman like you to bring out the latent heterosexuality in me. Sock it to me, baby!

Fall Brought Her New Job

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands WNS—Beppie Doelker, 22, was so eager to become an actress that she applied for a role in a hard-core pornography movie. In the crush at the film agent's office, she was pushed against a window and fell 30 feet to the street below. Miss Doelker got up unhurt and was promptly signed to a steady job as a stunt woman.

Popularity Interrupts Sam Ervin's Fishing Plans

By DOLLIE L. SMITH

MORGANTOWN, N.C. (UPI) — Sam J. Ervin Jr., had plans of going fishing after retiring from the U.S. Senate Dec. 31, but the former Watergate Committee chairman's popularity is standing in the way.

Since Congress adjourned Dec. 20, marking the end of the 78-year-old Ervin's 20-year Senate career, the white-haired "country lawyer" has found little rest from a public who remembers him as chairman of the committee and as a champion of civil liberties and freedom of the press.

Much to his dismay, the fishing equipment given to him by various groups at his retirement is stored in a closet in his rambling brick Morganton home, awaiting his use at nearby Lake James, in the mountain trout streams or along the North Carolina coast.

On the first day of his retirement, the three-month Watergate conspiracy trial stemming from the probe by his committee ended in the conviction of four top aides to former President Richard Nixon. A week later U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica ordered the release from prison of three other Nixon aides already serving sentences on guilty pleas.

Ever since, the bushy-browed constitutionalist has hosted a parade of newsmen seeking his thoughts on Watergate events as well as given about 50 news interviews by telephone across the nation and in Canada.

He's already made one return trip to Washington to appear on a morning news program broadcast and will continue making trips there and to New York about every two weeks for more guest appearances.

"ABC said sometimes they would interview me on the public questions, sometimes they would ask me to make a talk on the public questions, and sometimes they'd let me philosophize," he told UPI in an interview.

Large cartons of books and papers and stacks of hundreds of framed pictures, plaques, awards and editorial cartoons accumulated during his years in Congress remain stacked in several rooms of the one-level home, occupied by Ervin and his wife, "Miz" Margaret, since they were married 50 years ago.

Besides not having time to decide where to put all the books and wall hangings in a house already filled with such, Ervin is frustrated by not having time to answer the deluge of mail which arrives daily at his home and small downtown office.

He said he has had 40 to 50 requests to make speaking engagements of "all kinds."

"Unfortunately, I'll have to decline most of them or I'll never get anything done," he said.

Ervin, whose career in politics began "unbeknownst" to him when he was nominated for the North Carolina House of Representatives while attending Harvard Law School in 1922, plans to keep to a minimum his involvement in civic and church activities.

"At one time I had 17 jobs besides trying to make a living just before I became a Superior Court judge in 1937," the blue-eyed senator said, sitting at his desk in his home library surrounded by floor-to-ceiling cases of legal and congressional documents and treasured books.

"Since I've come home I've been asked to become a member of about five or six committees or commissions and I've decided I won't do that."

One of the committees, he said, was a fund-raising group, another, a national citizens committee to investigate the alleged illegal activities of the Central Intelligence Agency, and another, a group opposing the Equal Rights Amendment.

"While I'm opposed to the Equal Rights Amendments...I think it's unnecessary and foolish...I think the world's too overorganized," he said. "I don't want to get too organized."

He said he is already committed to two speaking engagements in North Carolina this month and then will be on the west coast for several more during February.

There also is the book he promised to a publisher before the Watergate Committee assignment, dealing with the "various controversies and fights I've been in in Congress trying to preserve the fundamental rights of people."

"I hope to do that—and get started on it soon," he said. "I've always toyed with the idea that there might be an appropriate place for a book on the uses of humor in law and politics."

That book, he said, would contain some of the stories he has become famous for telling in order to make a point; stories of the Bible, the classics, some of his experiences in the hills of North Carolina, or history.

"I've been collecting them all my life," he said, remembering when he used to sit and listen to stories told by judges when they visited with his father, Samuel James Ervin Sr., a well-known Burke County attorney.

"The best ones I've heard," he said. "My wife says she knows most all my stories because she's heard them so many times. But she still enjoys them because I seem to enjoy telling them so much."

Ervin never had political ambition, but he served three terms in the state legislature, was on the Burke County Superior Court for two years before being appointed to the State Supreme Court.

After serving six years on the high court, he was elected to complete the final year of the congressional term of his brother, Joseph, who died in 1945.

Then he returned to Morganton to continue in private law practice at his third-floor walkup office on the town's square where he hung out his original shingle.

He re-entered the political world reluctantly in 1954, but this time to stay, when he was appointed and then elected to fill the seat held by U.S. Sen. Clyde R. Hoey who died in office.

Of all his career experiences, which did he enjoy most?

"I've been fortunate in that I've enjoyed about everything I ever did," he said. "If I had to pick one thing more than another I would say I believe I got more satisfaction out of practicing law than in anything else I've ever done."

As for returning to law practice:

"I don't know. I don't think I'll ever get bogged down in the practice of law particularly along the line of legal work anymore because you can get tied down with an awful lot of insignificant things. If an interesting case came along that didn't have very much work and a great big fee, I would be tempted to take it."

Queen Bee Cost Inflated, Too

"A queen could be bought for only $1.50 or $2 only 18 months ago, but today one costs $5 or $6," according to E.C. Martin, an insect biologist at Michigan State University.

Martin says the cost is up because of a bee shortage brought on by a booming demand for honey —as consumers seek something to replace high-priced cane and beet sugar.

'Finale' On Franklin

Melvyn Douglass stars as the octogenarian Benjamin Franklin in "The Statesman," fourth and last in the mini-series of 90-minute drama specials based on the life of the great American colonial patriot and diplomat, to be presented Tuesday, Jan. 28, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV and seen on Channel 9-11.

Co-starring in the drama are Michael Learned, who co-stars on "The Waltons" on the Network, David Wayne, William Shatner, Kristoffer Tabori, Donal Donnelly, Anthony Zebre and Stephen McHattie.

Douglas enacts Franklin during the final period of his illustraious political career, after his return to Philadelphia from France following a decade of service to his country as one of three commissioners representing the Americane colonies at the court of Louis XVI. Although old and ailing, Franklin nonetheless devoted his efforts and his prestigious influence to the ratification of the Constitution by the 13 finally independent but still separate American states.

Douglas, born in Macon, Ga., gained his first theatrical experience with a stock company in 1919. Following his first Broadway appearance in "A Free Soul" in 1928 and a resounding success in a drawing-room comedy, "Tonight or Never," two years later, he eventually went to Hollywood to become one of the film capital's most sauve leading men in pictures such as "Theodora Goes Wild" and "Ninotchka."

Roles in "Inherit the Wind and "The Best Man" subsequently established Douglas as one of the theater's most distinguished actors, and his work in the 1963 film "Hud" earned him an Academy Award. Television audiences will recall inparticular his performances in two specials, Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" and "Do Not Go Gentle Into That Good Night."

Michael Learned appeared with the Canadian Stratford Shakespeare Festival and with the American Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Conn. Her television credits include many roles for the CBC and she is an Emmy winner for her portrayal of Olivia Walton on "The Walton" series.

LAST OF THE SERIES — Michael Learned, as Benjamin Franklin's daughter Sarah Bache, Kristoffer Tabori (center) as Benny Bache, Franklin's grandson, and Melvyn Douglas, as Franklin, star in "The Statesman," last in a mini-series of four 90-minute drama specials devoted to the life of the colonial hero, Tuesday, January 28 (9:30-11 PM) on Channel 9-11.

'Karen' Bowing In As Contemporary Comedy

"Karen" is a half-hour contemporary comedy series which will be premiering on the ABC Television Network Thursday, January 30, from 8:30 to 9:00 p.m. and seen on Channel 3-5-12.

Karen Valentine stars as Karen Angelo, an intelligent, single woman who views the world and her work with unorthodox wit and humor. Karen, who is employed in the dynamic and ever changing city of Washington, D. C., believes in people and wants to make government work for them. She works for a citizens' action organization known as Open America, and in the first episode, Karen prepares for her first appearance before the House Subcommittee on Government Reorganization, at which her boss, Dale Busch, has asked her to read a statement. When an elder statesman, Lowell G. Bates, attempts to close the proceedings to all spectators, Karen proceeds to stick up for her rights.

Dena Dietrick portrays Dean Madison, an ex-newspaperwoman and the office manager of Open America. Aldine King portrays Karen's roommate, Cissy Peterson, who works for the FBI. Joseph Stern is cast as Ernie Stone, a good friend of Karen's and a lawyer turned bartender.

Will Seltzer is cast as Adam Cooperman, a 20-year-old junior at Georgetown University, who has taken a year off to work for Open America for college credit.

Karen Valentine is much like the character she plays in "Karen." She is soft spoken, vibrant and has a sunny disposition — but most of all — she is a go-getter.

When the energetic Miss Valentine finds time to relax, she likes to dance, sing — and shoot a game of pool.

PREMIERE—Karen Valentine stars as Karen Angelo, a bright, involved young woman who works for a citizens action organization in Washington, D.C. in the new ABC-TV contemporary comedy series "Karen", which airs on Thursdays (8:30-9 p.m.) on channels 3W-5-12.

High-Flying Actor In Doctor's Role

After serving 19 months as a Marine fighter pilot in the South Pacific during World War II, Peter was a flight instructor at the Naval Air Station at Corpus Christi, Texas, when a chance suggestion started him on his acting career.

A neighbor's mother-in-law, veteran Hollywood character actress Enid Parrish, one evening asked the handsome young Marine captain if he had ever thought of becoming an actor.

He hadn't, but he soon did. On leaving the service, he, his wife and young daughter moved to Hollywood where he entered the Pasadena Playhouse. After his course at the Playhouse, Hansen began his steady ascent up the ladder of success.

He appeared on Broadway in "The Bat," had the male lead in the road company of "Arsenic and Old Lace" and later played important roles in motion pictures, plays and many TV series. He originated the role of Lee Baldwin in "General Hospital" in the serial's first season. In addition to daytime drama, Peter appears in commercials.

He recently has taken up flying again as a hobby.

"It came up because I wasn't that busy on the show. Lee's role in the past year has been subservient to the others, and in this off-time it just seemed a marvelous chance to get in and revitalize the license," he said.

"When I decided to fly again, I went to the FAA, showed them my old license, and asked them what I had to do to become airborne.

"The guy took the old license, went to the typewriter, and typed me up a commercial license right there. And it was legal!" Peter continued, still shaking his head in disbelief. "I told him he was crazy; I'd kill myself and everybody else . . . I didn't take advantage of it. I started over like a new pilot."

When asked how he felt about his daytime Emmy nomination, he responded, "Oh, it was marvelous. I got an Emmy nomination and two grandsons in one month. I never expected the nomination, because I'd done so little on the show last year.

Pretty And Personal

The bathroom you create by remodeling can be just as pretty, personal, and convenient as a brand new bathroom in a new house. Existing walls set square footage limits of course—so, for that matter, do blueprints. But there are virtually no limits these days to the variety of material and designs that you can get in everything that goes into a bathroom: fixtures, cabinetry, walls, floors, ceilings and lighting.
Pretty up this personal room with new floor covering. Regardless of your color scheme or design tastes we have the carpeting to make your bathroom as pretty as can be. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

Unpopular Man's Trial Became A Classic Case

Lambdin P. Milligan was not a heroic man. He was abrasive and widely disliked. He was obsedded with hatred of President Lincoln. But this unpopular man's trial during the Civil War was resolved by the United States Supreme Court in a decision which has become a classic case in Constitutional law.

Richard Basehart stars as Milligan in "The Case Against Milligan," a historical drama based on an actual case arising from President Lincoln's suspension of the constitutional right of habeas corpus, to be broadcast Sunday, January 26, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS-TV and seen oon Ch. 9-11. This is the fifth in The American Parade series of 13 hour-long specials dealing with major themes of American history being presented over a three-year period in conjunction with the nation's 1976 bicentennial.

Milligan, an Indiana lawyer and teacher, was a "Copperhead" — the term for Northerners who were sympathetic to the Confederate cause. He and several other members of a Copperhead secret society were arrested in the fall of 1864 and convicted by a military commission of conspiracy against the Union, inciting insurrection and giving aid and comfort to the enemy. They were sentenced to be hanged.

Milligan protested that his arrest and trial were illegal because the Army had no jurisdiction over him, a civilian, and because he had not been duly indicted, nor judged by a jury of his peers. His appeal to the Federal court was based on a petition for habeas corpus — the prime Constitutional safeguard against false imprisonment and illegal detention. President Lincoln had suspended the priviledge of habeas corups in 1863 for the duration of the war.

Milligan obtained a stay of execution, and the Supreme Court subsequently ruled in his favor.

As an interesting sidelight to the case, it is not clear, even today, whether his commutation order was signed by President Andrew Johnson or forged by Secretary of War Edwin Stanton, who had known both Milligan and his wife since his law-school days.

Also, the opinion was written by Justice David Davis, who had long been friends with Lincoln. Davis had been a circuit judge in Illinois when Lincoln was a lawyer there, and he had been a political campaign manager for Lincoln, who later appointed him to the Court. Now Davis was charging, in effect, that his friend Lincoln — who had been assassinated a year and a half earlier — had exceeded his Constitutional powers in broadly suspending the writ of habeas corpus.

AWAITS TRIAL — Richard Basehart, as Lambdin P. Milligan, waits in chains for his trial to begin, in "The Case Against Milligan," Sunday, January 26 (7:30-8:30 PM) on Channel 9-11. The historical drama, the fifth in THE AMERICAN PARADE series of 13 specials dealing with themes of Constitutional history, is based on a landmark case arising from the suspension of the right of habeas corpus by President Lincoln during the Civil War.

Weekend Reports On Condominiums

"Weekend," colorcast Saturday, Jan. 25, from 11:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m., on Sunday, Jan. 26, in the same time period on Channel 6-7, is NBC News' late night TV magazine.

By 2000, HUD predicts, 50 per cent of all Americans will live in some form of condominium. Florida, which has the largest number of condominiums in the country — 250,000 units — is a good example of what can go wrong in building condominiums and living in them, according to Sy Pearlman, producer of the report. "Weekend" will focus primarily on what has gone wrong, moving in on eight condominiums to spotlight some of the problems. The story was filmed in Miami, Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach.

The Mozambique feature spotlights a country in transition. When Portugal decided to get out, as a result not of events in Africa but of a military coup in Lisbon last year, nobody was more surprised than Frelimo (Front for the Liberation of Mozambique) itself, Bob Rogers, who produced the story, notes. "If all of the Portuguese leave, the country will collapse," he says. "We follow in detail Frelimo's efforts to convince them to stay." The report highlights the fact that Mozambique depends on close economic ties with white-ruled South Africa and Rhodesia for its prosperity. Can the guerillas come to terms with their own ideology and continue these relations? The report asks this question.

Africa's "Sin Street," in Lourenco Marques, Mozambique's capital city, reputedly the raunchiest city on the continent, will be visited.

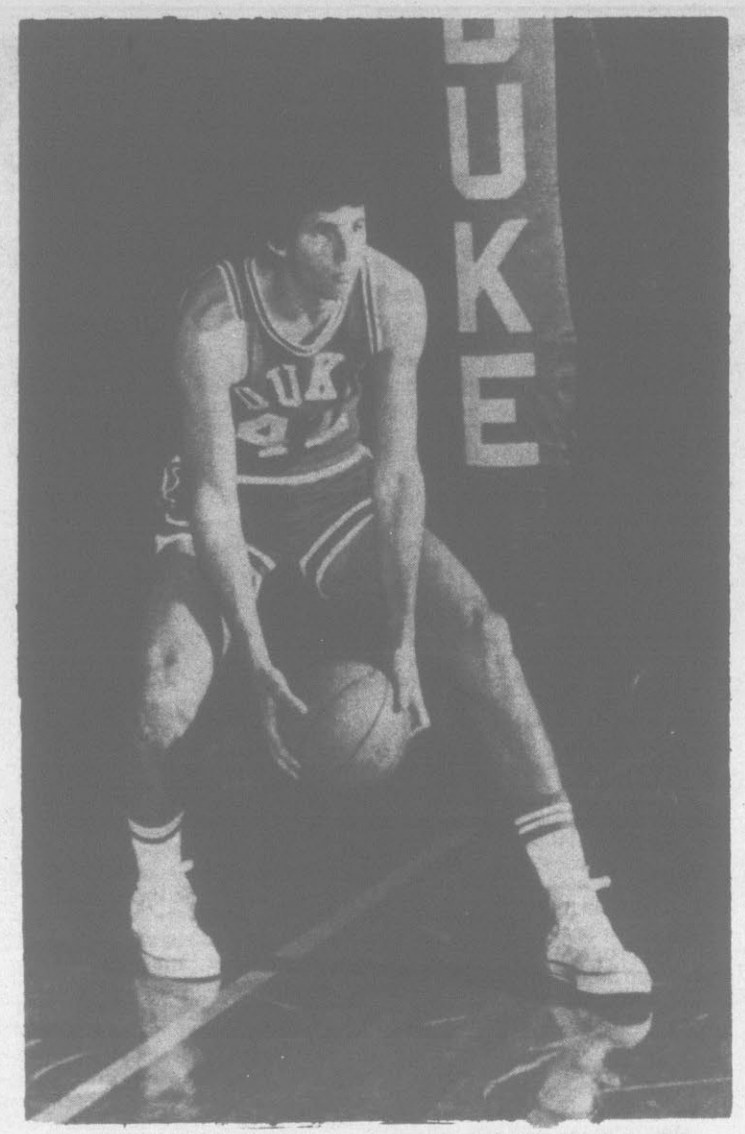
Garfield Guest On 'Gunsmoke'

Allen Garfield guest stars as a school teacher in an episode of "Gunsmoke" that makes a strong statement for compulsory education for children, even in the less enlightened Dodge City of the 1870s. The segment, titled "The Fires of Ignorance," will be presented Monday, Jan. 27, 8:00 to 9:00 p.m., on CBS-TV and seen on Channels 9-11.

The script was written by Jim Byrnes and directed by Victor French, familiar to viewers of "Gunsmoke" from his numerous acting appearances as a member of the series' "stock company."



BOB FLEISCHER (6-8, 215) senior co-captain for the Duke Blue Devils is again this season the leading scorer. Duke will host N.C. State in a game televised on channels 3N-9-6-11 at 9:00 p.m. Monday. Duke will also host Virginia on February 1 in another televised ACC battle.

Fleischer Is Among The Best

For the past two years Duke basketball star Bob Fleischer has been one of the most under-rated players in the Atlantic Coast Conference, but this season the steady senior from Youngstown, Ohio, is proving he is one of the best players in the nation.

As a sophomore and junior, Fleischer proved he was the most consistent player on the Duke squad by combing a two-year average of 13.3 points a game and 10.5 rebounds. Last season he was second in rebounding in the tough ACC with a 12.4 average and ninth in scoring with a 15.7 mark.

This season his play ranks him among the leaders in both the ACC and National Statistics. In 10 games, he is averaging 19.1 points and 11.8 rebounds. His shooting percentage of .634 ranks him number four in the nation.

For the past two seasons, the 6-foot 8, 215 pounder played center for the Blue Devils, but new coach Bill Foster's offense places him at the big forward position.

"Bob is one of the outstanding college basketball players in the nation," says Foster, who came to Duke this season after building successful programs at Rutgers and Utah. "He is really a coach's delight. He works so hard at improving his game. Every time he goes on the floor either at practice or during a game, you know he will always give his best effort."

In two tournaments this season, the Carolina Classic and the Big Four, Fleischer has been most impressive being named to both all-tournament teams. In both tournaments his play earned many votes for the most valuable player.

Against LSU he had a career high of 33 points, and he pulled down 19 rebounds against Wake Forest and 18 against South Florida. He had 15 rebounds in the second half against the Deacons.

Although Fleischer has an excellent academic future, he wants to postpone graduate school to give pro basketball a go.

Will Rebroadcast 'Strangler' Story

"The Boston Strangler," the movie which details the cold chill of terror that stalked the streets of Boston for almost two years in the true story of a man who strangled 13 women, will be rebroadcast on "ABC Monday Night Movie," January 27, 8:30 to 10:30 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Based on the best-selling book of the same title, the movie also stars Henry Fonda as John S. Bottomly, former Massachusetts Assistant Attorney General who headed the "Strangler Bureau," and George Kennedy as Detective Phil DiNatale, whose determined police work led to the arrest of Albert DeSalvo, the self-confessed killer.

It is June, 1962, and the brutal strangling and sexual assault of a middle-aged woman in the Back Bay area of Boston soon proves to be only the first of a series of similar murders that bring panic to the city. As the count grows, Massachusetts Attorney General Edward W. Brooke, Jr. (now Senator Brooke), played by William Marshall, persuades Assistant Attorney General Bottomly (Fonda) to head a special agency to coordinate all information pertaining to the stranglings.

SCHROEDER, the Peanut pianist, adds a bright note to St. Valentine's Day as he makes sure every heart is in the right place, in the new animated Peanuts special "Be My Valentine, Charlie Brown", to be boradcast Tuesday, Jan. 28 (8:00-8:30 p.m.) on channels 3N-9-11.

Schulz Remembers Those Valentine Days As Rough

"The world of kids is a rough one," says Charles M. Schulz, the creator and childhood prototype of his cartoon non-hero, Charlie Brown.

"A lot of what poor Charlie suffers we've all suffered," says Schulz, whose newest animated cartoon story, "Be My Valentine, Charlie Brown," a special based on the characters from his "Peanuts" comic strip, will be presented Tuesday, January 28, 8 to 8:30 p.., on CBS-TV and seeno on Channel 9-11.

Schulz remembers the bittersweet excitement of one Valentine's Day celebration in grammar school, when the class Valentine box was opened and the cards distributed.

"It was like mail call in the Army," Schulz recalls. "Everyone gathered in a group while the names of the luck recipients were called out. The non-receivers kind of slunk away, pretending not to care."

Valentine's Day, with its potential happiness and disapointment — each year he approaches his mailbox with renewed hope only to find it empty of Valentine cards. And he waits in vail for his name to be called when Valentines are distributed at school.

"This is our fifth holiday show in the television series of specials," says Schulz. (The others concern Christmas, Thanksgiving, Easter and Halloween.) "We've tried with each of them to remind people what these holidays were originally all about and to entertain and have a little fun in the process.

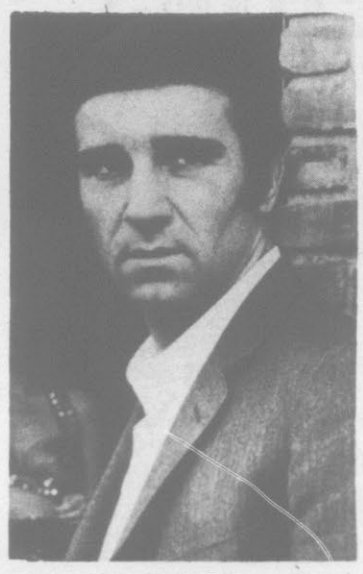
"We're all inclined to lose sight of the simple pleasantness that a special day is supposed to bring. We're sorry that poor Charlie has to go through such trials and tribulations to prove our point, but he does have a habit of doing things the hard way."

Valentine's Day, as Schulz points out, is a simple celebration of romance and friendship. In this latest special, Charlie puts his friendship to the test — and they flunk out. Or so it seems.

"It's hard to make things go right for Charlie Brown," complains Schulz, his creator, "because he has a genius for spoiling everything. But we try — we really try."

EYE CATCHER

Pat O'Brien, who stars in "The Sky's the Limit," a to-parter on NBC-TV's "Wonderful World of Disney," says he still gets butterflies in his stomach as the cameras start to roll. "But they always fly away as soon as the action starts — especially if I'm working with a good actor who'll look you right in the eye as he acts," the 75-year-old actor explained.



PAROLE OFFICER — Tony Lo Bianco stars as a newly released ex-convict who takes a job as a parole agent in an experimental program in "Shadow in the Street," to be colorcast on "NBC World Premiere Movie" Tuesday, January 28 (8:30-10 PM) on Channel 6-7.

More 2 And 3-Hour Movies Scheduled

The ABC Television Network has signed 22 top creative people associated with theatrical feature films to development agreements for two and three-hour motion pictures for television, Brandon Stoddard, Vice President for Television, ABC-TV, recently announced.

In making the announcement, Mr. Stoddard stated, "ABC pioneered the 90-minute televison motion picture form with 'Movie of the Week' now a TV staple. During the current season we have increased our committment to the two hour movie with five major projects still to air this spring: 'Death Be Not Proud,' starring Arthur Hill and Jane Alexander; 'The Legend of Lizzie Borden,' starring Elizabeth Montgomery in the title role; 'Hustling,' starring Lee Remick; 'Love Among the Ruins, starring Katharine Hepburn and Laurence Olivier, and 'My Father's House,' starring Cliff Robertson and Robert Preston.

"Our commitment to longer films will increase substantially for the 1975-76 season," Mr. Stoddard pointed out. "Judging by the increased interest of top talents like these from theatrical films, the television motion picture may have just begun to flower."

Al Ruddy, producer of "The Godfather" and "The Longest Yard," will produce his first TV movie for Paramount, a prison escape film based on an incident at Alcatraz in the late 1940s.

Edward Anhalt, who wrote the screenplay for ABC's "QB VII," will write and direct his first two-hour film for television, "Loving Strangers," as will Melville Shavelson. His film, "Valentino," is a lighthearted look at the Hollywood ballyhoo of the 1920s, for ABC Circle Films.

LETTERS OF CREDIT

Kaye Stevens, a regular on NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," maintains a correspondence with 310 youngsters across the country who are in juvenile detention homes.

Clint And Jessica In Suspense Story

Clint Eastwood and Jessica Walter star in "Play Misty for Me," a suspense drama on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" January 27, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 7.

Dave Garland (Eastwood) a popular California disk jockey is visiting a favorite hangout when he meets Evelyn Draper (Walter), one of his fans. She has been a frequent caller during the request segment of Dave's radio program, always asking that he play her favorite song, "Misty." Obviously unbalanced, Evelyn has already begun to make a pest of herself when Tobie (Mills), Dave's steady girl, returns from a trip.

Who's The Funniest? A Panel Decides Jan. 29

Barbra Streisand, Woody Allen, Flip Wilson, Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Alan Alda, Johnny Carson, Jack Klugman, Valerie Harper, Art Buckwald and Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. are among the nominees who have been selected to compete for the American Academy of Humor Awards.

The awards presentation will be telecast on the ABC Television Network special, "The First Annual Comedy Awards," Wednesday, Jan. 29, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12. The awards are being given in recognition of funniest performances in the areas of motion pictures, television, stage, nightclub or concert, and print, and also will be presented to the funniest woman and funniest man in America.

Two-hundred and fifty charter members of the newly-formed Academy voted on the nominees, who, in turn, will be voted upon by approximately 60,000 of their peers in the entertainment world.

The bronze figure which will be presented to the winners was created by famed caricaturist Al Hirschfeld. Although his drawings number in the tens of thousands, his sculptured pieces are limited to roughly ten, and none of them has ever been publicly displayed.

Hirschfeld was asked by the Academy to sculpt a figure which would be symbolic of the art of comedy. While lunching at New York's famous 21 club, he struck upon the idea of the figure, a hand balancing an egg on its forefinger, as a representation of "the precarious position of the comic who must balance the egg or lay it."

Of course, Hirschfeld himself is a humorist who understands the heart of comedy. For 50 years his line drawings have been hunorous offerings capturing the personality of a star or the flavor of a play.

AWARDS HOST — Alan King is host of the "First Annual Comedy Awards," on ABC-TV, Wednesday, January 29 (8:30-10 PM), when outstanding contributors to the art of comedy will receive the pictured bronze figure of a hand balancing an egg on its forefinger. The piece, sculptured by famed caricaturist Al Hirshfield, symbolizes the precarious position of the comic who must balance the egg or lay it.

Peter Gunn Back In Action Feature

Peter Gunn, one of the first of television's super-cool private eyes (1958), will be on the home screen once again when he copes with lies, ladies and larceny in "Gunn", an action feature on the "CBS Late Movie," Wednesday, January 29, at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 9-11.

Craig Stevens, who originated the character of Peter Gunn, is present again as the suavest of sleuths, with Helen Traubel replacing the now deceased Hope Emerson as Mother, the waterfront night-club owner who employs Laura Devon as Edie, Gunn's club-singer sweetheart. For this feature film version, Edward Asner is seen as Lt. Jacoby.

In the story, Peter Gunn sets out to find the man who killed a gangland czar who also happened to be a friend of the detective.

TEAMING UP — Lew Archer (Brian Keith, right) asks underground newspaper editor Rick Faust (Marjoe Gortner) to go undercover to investigate a suspected extortion ring in "The Turkish Connection", the premiere ipisode of NBC-TV's "Archer" series, to be colorcast Thursday, January 30 (9-10 PM) on Channel 6-7.

Brian Keith's New TV Series Scheduled Premiere Jan. 30

Brian Keith will have the title role in "Archer," the new action-drama series set to premiere Thursday, January 30, on NBC-TV and Channel 6-7, from 9:00 to 10:00 p.m. Lew Archer is the famous detective originated by author Ross Macdonald.

Archer is a man's man. Once married and divorced, he is attractive to women but basically indifferent to them. However, if something spectacular passes, he'll turn around.

Archer makes little use of his gun. He prefers to rely on his wits more than anything else. If he finds himself in a tight spot, he tries to talk his way out or think his way out.

Archer conceals very little from the police, and often works with his close friend, Lieutenant Barney Brighton (John Ryan), a detective in the Homicide Division of the Los Angeles Police Department. Barney is Archer's contemporary, but is more cop than friend — and Archer knows it.

TV's newest detective lives in a funky pad in the Hollywood Hills. He cares little for fashion and has no palate for fine wines or foods. His '67 Chevrolet has definately seen better days.

Keith's parents were well known in the theatrical world and, during his early years, his play area was confined to train aisles, dressing rooms and backstage.

Because of his childhood environment it was a 'natural' inclination that led him into acting. His first job was with a stock company in Clinton, Conn. Keith was hired at $50 a week and has been acting ever since.

Special Film On Flight

Through the eyes of four high-school boys who devote all their spare time to restoring vintage airplanes, the fun and excitement of mankind's age-old romance with flight unfolds, from the early balloon and biplane pioneers to landings on the moon, in "Flight: The Sky's the Limit," a Smithsonian special to be presented Friday, Jan. 31, 9:00 to 10:00 p.m., on CBS and seen on Channel 9-11.

The special features four Washington, D. C., high-school students—Bryon Cooke, Leroy Ellis, David Muse and Tyrone Segears — who, because of their love of flight, volunteer to work with restoration experts at the Smithsonian Institution's Silver Hill facilities, where vintage airplanes are restored for display in the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum.

The broadcast follows the boys from Silver Hill and the Air and Space Museum to an aerial circus in Virginia, taking a look at historical moments in the air, including the Wright brothers' flight at Kitty Hawk, Lindberg's solo venture across the Atlantic, the ill-fated last flight of the dirigible Hindenberg, the breaking of the sound barrier with the development of jet aircraft and other milestones in man's conquest of space.

STUDENT OF FLIGHT — Byron Cooke, checking out a tiny biplane model, is a high school student who helps restoration experts work on vintage aircraft for display at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum, as seen on "Flight: The Sky's the Limit," a Smithsonian special, Friday, January 31 (9-10 PM) on Channel 9-11.

'That' Cat, Hat And All, Will Be Back

The well-versed cat with the stovepipe hat and the lion's share of fans springs into action once again in "Dr. Seuss' The Cat in the Hat," animated Seussian special to be rebroadcast Friday, Jan. 31, 8:00 to 8:30 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11.

The CBS special, based on one of Theodor (Dr. Seuss) Geisel's famed children's classics, recounts the adventures of an audacious cat who has helped millions of youngsters learn to read as the symbol of the Dr. Seuss word-teaching series.

LEARNED THE HARD WAY

"When I was four years old, I decided to see what would happen if I opened the car door while it was moving," said Dick Smothers, whose new show, "Smothers Brothers Hour" premiered recently. "I fell out of the car, landed on my head and have been deaf in one ear ever since."

"DEVLIN", the story of a 20-year-old college student who supports his orphaned brother and sister with his extraordinary skill as a motorcycle stunt rider, is televised on ABC-TV Saturdays (10-10:30 a.m.)

Another Contract For Curt Gowdy

Curt Gowdy, whose play-by-play sports commentary on network television has covered the broad spectrum of America's most significant football games, has been signed by the NBC Television Network to a new long-term contract as a football commentator.

The announcement, made by Carl Lindemann Jr., Vice President, Sports, NBC-TV, follows one made earlier this month regarding the renewal of Godwy's contract, also long term, to broadcast major league baseball on NBC-TV.

"We associate Curt's excellence in reporting with NBC Sports' attracting the largest audience of any network covering NFL weekend football this season, and we are pleased to make this announcement prior to his coverage of the season's climatic game, Sunday's Super Bowl in New Orleans, the fifth Super Bowl game he has done."

Gowdy, the first sportscaster to win the coveted George Foster Peabody Award for excellence in sportscasting, began at NBC in 1966. He had covered the play-by-play action in Super Bowls, Pro Bowls, Rose Bowl, Orange Bowl, American football Conference championship and play-off games and the top contests during the curse of the regular season in the National Football League.

Looking back over a long list of 'great games' during his football career at NBC, Gowdy picks two notable events which stand out most in the mind: one is the upset victory of the New York Jets over the Baltimore Colts in the 1969 Super Bowl; the other occurred in 1971, when the Miami Dolphins defeated the Kansas City Chiefs in the longest football game ever played.

Italian Film To Premiere

Sergio, a lonely, small boy, runs away from home but learns, after an exciting and frightening adventure, that no one can run from reality, in "Un Amico," an Italian film which will have its American television premiere on "The CBS Children's Film Festival" Saturday, January 25, 1:00 to 2:00 p.m.

Exploring a small island, Sergio and three other children whom he has met on a beach encounter a trio of somewhat sinister men, who bring them back to the mainland. There, one of them, called Professor, explains to Sergio that he had been in prison for a crime he did not commit, and that he had escaped in order to find the guilty person and turn him over to the police.

As they talk, Sergio realizes that Professor is taking him home, but the boy, having found his first real friend in the no-longer-omnious Professor and afraid he will never see him again, says he wants to stay with him.

Orphans Supported By Motorcyclist

Voices for the animated series include Mike Bell as Ernie, Mickey Dolenz as Tod and Michele Robinson as Sandy. Norm Alden is the voice of Hank the ringmaster of the stunt circus.

William Hanna and Joseph Barbera are the Executive Producers of the weekly series, and the Bank Street School of Education is acting as consultant to the show.

Writers for the series include Willie Gilbert, Sam Locke, Paul Roberts, Maurice Tombragel, Rik Vollaerts, Carey Wilber and Shimon Wincelberg.

'World Series Of Auto Racing' Set

ABC's "World Series of Auto Racing," featuring round two of the "International Race of Champions" will be televised Sunday, Jan. 26, from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m., on Channels 3-5-12, as a part of "ABC's Wide World of Sports" on the ABC Television Network.

The "International Race of Champions" is a unique event in which 12 of the world's greatest drivers from the major disciplines in auto racing compete in identically-prepared vehicles in a series of four match races — two on oval courses, and two on road courses.

The first race in the series, seen earlier this month on "Wide World," was run on an oval. The race to be seen on Jan. 26 will be the first of the two road course competitions.

In the "IROC," many of the usual variables are eliminated, and the drivers compete on an equal footing without regard to mechanical differences. The format is designed to produce a world-class championship, based as strictly as possible on driver skills. The purse for the "IROC" is $200,000.

"ABC's Wide World of Sports" viewers on Sunday, Jan. 5, saw the great USAC (United States Auto Club) driver, Bobby Unser, capture and hold the lead in a very tight race at Michigan International Speedway. That victory gave Unser the first round lead over second and third place finishers, stock car greats Cale Yarbrough and Davidpearson.

Finishing in the back of the field at that event were A. J. Foyt and Richard Petty (whose cars were involved in a controversial accident), Graham Hill and Jody Scheckter, all of whose cars were disabled and did not finish.

'Tainted Lady' Earns Award

The American Cancer Society presented a special award to CBS-TV's "Medical Center" series at the Society's national convention meeting in San Francisco recently which was attended by 1,000 volunteer leaders from all over the country.

Chad Everett, "Medical Center" star, and Walter Dishell, M.D., the series' medical advisor for the last six years, accepted the award "for the effective 'Tainted Lady' episode.

Super Quick Rivers

"People don't realize it, but we played with virtually six players down the stretch," says Norm Sloan, head coach for the North Carolina State Wolfpack basketball team, in discussing his squad's capture of the NCAA National Championship last season. "Monte and Mo were in it all the way." Monte Towe, the 5-6 magician, and Moe Rivers, a super quick handed defensive specialist were the guards last year and have returned this season.

Rivers was probably the most underrated player in the nation last season. A classic defender, he averaged 3 to 4 steals per game. Down the stretch, Rivers was the only wolfpacker to play every mintue against both UCLA and Marquette in the NCAA finals.

For his brilliant play is the NCAA title match against Marquette, scoring 14 points and turning in an exquisite defensive performance, Moe Rivers was single out by coach Sloan.

During the regular season against ACC opposition, he was a consistently good performer hitting double figures nine times. His conference high of 19 points was scored twice against North Carolina at Chapel Hill and then against Wake Forest. In non-conference competiton against Davidson, he connected for his season's best of 24 points.

Moe is considered a solid pro-prospect because of his quickness and stamina. His ability to turn a game around with deft ball playing pilfering makes him a valuable asset to the State team and their 1975 aspirations.

Ski King To 'Comment'

Two-time World Cup skiing champion Karl Schranz, acknowledged by most authorities to be the greatest downhill racer of our time, will serve as expert commentator for "ABC's Wide World of Sports" coverage of the Ladies World Cup Downhill Skiing Championship via sattelite from Lizum, Austria, and the Men's World Cup Downhill Skiing Championship via satellite from Patscherkofel, Austria.

The Ladies World Cup competition will be telecast Saturday, Jan. 25, 4:30 to 6:00 p.m., and the Men's World Cup competition will be telecast Sunday, Jan. 26, 3:30 to 5:00 p.m., on Ch. 13-18.

MIGHTY MOE — Morris (Moe) Rivers (6-1, 155) senior guard for the Wolfpack of North Carolina State is said to have hands quicker than those of the fabled Marshall Dillon. Moe averaged 3 to 4 steals per game last season. State will appear on television Channels 6-9-11 on Monday Evening January 27, at 9:00 PM when they meet the Duke Blue Devils. N. C. State will also be seen on Saturday, February 1 at 1:00 PM against Maryland.

Actor Is Flattened By 'Emergency' Guest Star

Because he plays the 'unmarried paramedic,' Randolph Mantooth receives quite a lot more mail (especially from young girls) than his co-star Kevin Tighe, who plays the role of the 'married paramedic' on NBC Television Network's "Emergency!" series.

Randy may be more popular with teen-age girls, but Kevin looked like an absolute filet mignon to the 'guest-star' of the episode "It's How You Play the Game" Saturday, Feb. 1, 8:00 to 9:00 p.m., on Channels 6-7; an 11-year-old tiger named Wilhemina.

Asked to pose for publicity pictures with the frisky tiger, both Kevin and Randy agreed. Everything went fine, although it was soon obvious that the tiger had an absolute crush on Kevin and couldn't snuggle close enough to him.

Everyone was laughing as Wilhemina began 'mouthing' Kevin, leaving 'mouth marks' (not bites, just saliva) on his shirt. But suddenly the 600-pound tiger decided she'd found a new playmate, where-up she knocked Kevin flat as a pancake and sat on him.

The laughter stopped: the photographer and the crew were scared to death and the whole picture session suddenly wasn't quite so amusing. The trainers stepped in immediately and Wilhemina was reminded of her manners.

PET PROJECT — Randolph Mantooth (left) and Kevin Tighe, who star as paramedics on NBC-TV's "Emergency!", get friendly with Willie, who appears with them in the episode "It's How You Play the Game," to be colorcast Saturday, February 1 (8-9 PM) on Channel 6-7.

Suzanne Pleshette reportedly is unhappy with her role on Bob Newhart's show, and has told the series' producers that if her role isn't 'fattened,' she doesn't want to return next season.

James Garner will undergo surgery on his right knee later this month to correct a minor problem he's had with the knee since he fell while playing tennis several years ago.

Robert Wagner stars in "Universal TV's "Switch," a 90-minute pilot movie for CBS, Wagner will portray a detective.

Barbara Anderson and Don Galloway, who portrayed fellow police officers in "ironside" in the early stages of the series, become husband and wife in an ABC movie called "You Lie So Deep, My Love." This movie is not a pilot for a projected series.

Joey Bishop will receive a reported $6 million during the next five years as part of the deferred payment agreement he made with ABC when the network exed his late-night talk show.

Doris Day plans to return to recording. Doris says she hopes to record an album this Spring, having been encouraged to do so by her son, Terry, now employed by RCA.

Tony Curtis returns to where he started his career, Universal Studios, to star in a TV movie for NBC called "McCoy."

Chosen Only For Abilities

"At least I know I wasn't selected for this role because of my looks or a fancy wardrobe," joked Berlinda Tolbert, a pretty, vivacious girl, who is featured as Lionel's fiancee in "The Jeffersons," new comedy series which is seen Saturday evenings from 8:30 to 9:00 p.m., on CBS and Channel 9-11.

Appearing as Jennie Willis in her first television series, Miss Tolbert described how she auditioned for the part on only minutes' notice, and minus the kind of wardrobe and make-up preparation that a young actress normally would undertaken for such an important event in her career.

"My husband and I were shopping when he got this sudden impulse to call our answering service," Miss Tolbert explained. "There was an urgent message to call my agent, who said he had an appointment for me to audition and I had 10 minutes to make it. Luckily, we were in the area, but my appearance was tacky. I had no make-up, my hair was hidden under a floppy hat, and I was wearing a pair of old blue jeans."

Transport Industry Regulation Is Reviewed By TV And Found Wanting

ABC News investigates the federal regulation of a key industry, transportation, and shows how old policies contribute to today's inflation and mounting economic loss, on the documentary special, "ABC News Close-Up on Washington Regulators: How They Cost You Money," airing Saturday evening, Feb. 1, 8:00 to 9:00 p.m., on Channels 3-5-12.

In announcing the program, A Westin, ABC News Vice President and Director of Television Documentaries, commented: "President Ford asked Congress to create a National Commission on Regulatory Reform nearly five months ago, but Congress has not acted. Our investigation centers on the regulation of the country's transporation system, which has a major impact throughout the American economy.

"We will examine a number of regulatory policies started many years ago, that, in effect, allow price fixing.

Magruders On 'Tomorrow'

Jeb Stuart Magruder and his wife will be host Tom Snyder's only guests on NBC-TV's "Tomorrow" following the January 28th "Tonight Show." "This is the first time Mr. and Mrs. Magruder have appeared together on any TV program since his release from prison," says "Tomorrow" producer-director Joel Tator.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR RONA JAFFE, author of "Family Secrets"

I heard you speak about your book on TV. What's it like to be on a book-promotion tour?—T. McD., Waterbury, Conn.

● It's hard work, because you're always rushing somewhere, usually to the airport at 5 a.m. in order to be coherent for a 7 a.m. TV show! When I toured for my last book, someone had the bright idea I should sign books in all the five-and-tens. I arrived in a chauffeur-driven limousine, stepped out on a red carpet, was greeted by a battery of photographers and was handed a big bouquet. As I went into the store, the manager took away my red roses, and I never saw them again, not even in my hotel room. But in the next city, I could swear I was handed the same flowers, a little less fresh.

FOR BEA ARTHUR, star of "Maude"

Why do you always wear a long vest and keep your neck covered in the show?—Anna Crook, Randolph Center, Vt.

● "Maude" started off in a rush. We concentrated on the script more than we did the clothes. For the first episode, I put on the first thing that came to hand—a long vest—because it was comfortable. The costume designer said, "That's a great look for the show. Let's stick to it." So we did. I always wear a scarf with color because since I let my hair go gray I find I need a splash of color near my face.

FOR EVEL KNIEVEL

You promised you would jump the Snake River Canyon. Now some of the youngsters are saying you're chicken for not trying again. Won't you try once more?—Marvin Harwell, Gurdon, Ark.

● You try it.

● I don't agree. For me President John F. Kennedy was. What made him so difficult was that he was young and handsome and was less capable of being cartooned. But in the long run everyone is cartoonable.

FOR LUCILLE BALL

Do you consider yourself a success?—Ann Regan, Brighton, Mass.

● If your concept of success is happiness in what you're doing—in being a mother, in being a wife—then I'm a success. But if you're talking about the kind of success that's about dollars and cents, forget it. The real wealth is not out here in Hollywood. It's all highly taxable, and money has never been important to me.

FOR JULIA CHILD, "The French Chef"

Every good cook can have a failure. I would like to know what your greatest cooking blunder was.—Mrs. Margaret Lewis, Dubuque, Iowa

● I've had so many blunders I can't even remember the worst. Many of them happened right on TV—usually with apple desserts because I've used the wrong kind of apples.

FOR BOBBY VINTON, singer

I know you are concerned about the image of Polish Americans. Why then did you decide to use "Bobby" instead of your real first name, which I believe is Stash?—D. M. Thomas, Atlantic City, N.J.

● I use my middle name instead of my first name, which is Stash, because when I was growing up every boy in my neighborhood was called Stash, Stanley or Chester.

FOR ARNOLD PALMER

● In most sports, left-handers are either equal to right-handers or else have an advantage. But in golf the clubs are different. Through the years, left-handed clubs were not readily obtainable, and most left-handers found that they could play the game as well or better as right-handers. Many of the fine players through history have been natural left-handers playing right-handed golf.

FOR BUDDY EBSEN

Is it true you were offered the role of the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz"?—Harold Jones, Bonita, Calif.

● I was not only offered the role of the Scarecrow, but I was cast in it originally before the switch was made to Ray Bolger. It's still a painful memory. I was recast in the role of the Tin Man. But, after two weeks of filming, the aluminum dust from the metal costume caused a very severe lung infection and I had to bow out altogether.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

We don't hear about those wild Hollywood parties any more. Have they gone forever?—B. B., Boise, Idaho

● No. They're just not written about as much. Try these: Mia Farrow poured a bucket of champagne over Rona Barrett's head. According to Rona, it was because of something she reported about Mia. . . . George Maharis went to a party for a girl who had everything—except him. He was presented atop a prop birthday cake, in the nude, covered with whipped cream. . . . Arlene Dahl gave a Come-As-You-Were party, where 100 stars turned up as the persons they believed they were in previous lives. . . . Rona Jaffe was at a soiree where the women all hated a dazzling blonde who outshone them. It turned out that the "gal" was really a guy!

NFL Scout "Harry Cartwright" Picks the Hottest Prospects

When the National Football League teams convene in New York this Tuesday and Wednesday, January 28-29, for the annual draft of college players, they will have at their disposal one of the finest groups of offensive and defensive linemen in recent memory from which to draw, but a sub-par group of quarterbacks, running backs and wide receivers.

This is the expert opinion of one of the top professional football scouts in the country, whose advice FAMILY WEEKLY has solicited in preparing this analysis of the upcoming pro draft of undergraduate talent. We call our expert "Harry Cartwright," but that is not his real name. For personal and professional reasons, he chooses to hide his real identity behind a pseudonym, and we have respected his wishes. This is the second year Cartwright has consented to evaluate the pro football draft for FAMILY WEEKLY, and the analysis he offers here is similar to the expert judgments he regularly hands down to general managers and coaches in the NFL.

Cartwright positively drools when he discusses the senior crop of offensive and defensive linemen. "I think there are many players from both sides of the line who'll go in the first or second round," he says. "Not only are there many outstanding linemen available, but they are guys with great pro size and speed, people who could step onto an NFL roster and make a club right away."

A defensive lineman has been the first player chosen in the draft for the past three years. First there was Walt Patulski of Notre Dame, who was tapped by the Buffalo Bills in 1972. Then John Matuszak of Tampa was drafted by Houston in 1973, and since has been traded to Kansas City. In last January's draft, Tennessee State's massive Ed "Too Tall" Jones topped the list of 442 players selected during the two days of drafting.

Cartwright thinks the trend will continue and that a defensive lineman will again be the first man selected on Tuesday.

"It looks as though it should be Randy White, the defensive end from Maryland," Cartwright observes. "He's 6-4, 250, but more than that, he's a Jack Armstrong type, an all-around sort of person, a fine individual as well as athlete. He can play either end or tackle, and he'd do well at either position. He has great upper-body strength and outstanding speed. A team can build a defense around him, and he seems to have the ability to learn the different types of defenses the pros are now using. He does it all, he's everything you want. He accelerates well, sheds blocks well, and so forth. A super athlete."

One interesting rookie confrontation could occur next fall in the NFL if the team that drafts White meets the team that selects the player Cartwright rates as the best among the available crop of offensive linemen—Georgia's 6-8, 260-pound tackle, Craig Hertwig.

"He's actually bigger than that," says Cartwright. "He's maybe half an inch taller than his listed 6-8 and probably will play at 270 in the pros. You know he's fast and agile because he once played tight end. He's got tremendous potential. Not only does he have that amazing size, but he's a good technician, knows the game, and he has what we like to call 'quick feet.' There hasn't been an offensive lineman this tall in the pros since Bob St. Clair of the San Francisco 49ers, who retired in 1964. He's going to create lots of problems for people."

There are plenty more to choose from on both defense and offense right behind Maryland's White and Georgia's Hertwig, according to Cartwright. "If White isn't the first player chosen in the draft," he says, "then it could be another defensive linesman, like Mike Fanning of Notre Dame or Mack Mitchell of Houston. They're also ends. Fanning is 6-6, 255, and Mitchell is 6-8, 235, one of the tallest defensive linemen around, as big as 'Too Tall' Jones from last year. Of these two, I would say Fanning has more experience now, but you've got to love Mitchell's size, and he can put on more weight too.

"Behind Hertwig among the offensive linemen, I'd have to go with Ken Huff, the 6-4, 255-pound guard from North Carolina, Kurt Schumacher, 6-4, 250, the Ohio State tackle, and Eugene Clark, Southern California guard, 6-3, 255. Schumacher didn't really get any recognition until John Hicks graduated, but everybody knows about him now," Cartwright points out. Hicks recently completed a fine rookie season in the NFL with the New York Giants after being chosen third of all players in the country in the 1974 draft.

At 220 pounds, it's plain to see that my stomach used to sit on my lap, while my true age—only 27 years—was hidden under all that fat.

Now, at 128 pounds I can stand or sit without worrying about pounds of fat getting in my way. Or keeping me from finding stylish clothes.

By Judie Evaskovich—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

For every fat person, there comes a moment of truth. Mine came standing in line at a check-out counter. I was with my 24 year old niece, her two young ones and my own two. As the sales girl stapled the last bag, she said: "Thank you for shopping here and have a good day." Then she turned to me and added: "You have a nice day, too, Grandma." I was so shocked, I couldn't believe my ears. But when I looked at myself in the wall mirror, I had to believe my eyes. Because there I was... all 220 pounds of me in a huge MuMu, with no make up and my hair pulled straight back. Only my mother and my birth certificate could have proved I was just 27 years of age.

You see, I was one of those overweight people who wouldn't have a full-length mirror in my house. I was happier just looking at myself from the neck up. Somehow it made me think I was slimmer from the shoulders down.

As for catching reflections of myself in store windows, I'd always turn the other way and stare at the slim girls on the street. It was a kind of escape. I'd pick one out of the crowd that I wanted to look like and say to myself I was going on a diet that night. But when I'd get home, I'd turn on the TV, get out the snacks, and forget the whole thing.

When I think back now, my eating problem came from the way I was raised—not on three meals a day, but one continuous feed. My parents, you see, came from Czechoslovakia. To them, giving a child food was a sign of love.

I was the "baby" of eight children, and spoiled wild. Why, my father thought nothing of feeding me a half gallon of ice cream. As for my mother, she piled on the potato pancakes and homemade noodles and pastry, so that by fifth grade, I couldn't even do a somersault. I'd just roll over like a barrel.

Unfortunately, my eating pattern didn't change even after I grew up and married. Fact is, on my wedding day, I weighed 30 pounds more than my husband, John. Of course, the joke of our honeymoon was who was going to carry who over the threshold.

It wasn't so funny, however, two babies later and 60 pounds heavier. My husband was so embarrassed by my fat, he hated to take me to socials. But when he did, I'd just sit in a quiet corner in a size 26½ dress and a 46D bra and look like his mother.

I'll tell you, clothes were really a problem at that size. Once when I was pregnant, I tore a pink sheet in half, cut a hole in the middle and made a tent dress. It was enough to make my cold sober landlord see pink elephants.

From what I've said, I guess you can understand how much I needed help. But I knew from past experience that reducing pills were not the answer. What did the trick, however, was something I found at the store where I'd had the "Grandma" insult—a display of some pictures of a girl who'd taken a load off her knees and thighs on the Ayds plan. And that's what put me on it. The change in her appearance was so beautiful, I bought a box of the butterscotch fudge Ayds on the spot.

I took one or two with a hot drink before meals and Ayds really helped me cut down on what I ate. Now, I never said to myself that I wouldn't eat this or wouldn't eat that. I just decided to eat three meals a day. But I put it into my head that I'd stop eating when I was full. I also put smaller portions of food on my plate. And even with no snacking in between, I was satisfied on the Ayds plan. I lost a little better than a pound a week. And since Ayds contain vitamins and minerals but no drugs, they didn't make me nervous either.

Frankly, it wasn't until I'd taken off about 50 pounds that my neighbors in Arnold, Pa., started noticing. That was because I kept wearing those tent dresses. Nobody could see how I was shrinking underneath. But my husband knew and was delighted. So was I, because when I got to 128 pounds on the Ayds plan, my stomach no longer had to sit on my lap.

There's just one last thing I'd like to say—which is important. I figure I saved money while I lost weight on the Ayds plan. Because that candy helped me eat less, so I could stay well within my food budget. Besides, I wasn't tempted to waste money on fattening candy bars. Ayds were a real morale builder, too. I'll tell you, I don't expect to look like a grandmother again for years. And thanks to the Ayds plan, I'm going to be a "skinny" one.

tions in the 1975 draft also could see several of these big linemen tapped by the NFL clubs: on defense, Doug English, Texas, 6-5, 250; Mike Hartenstine, Penn State, 6-3, 235; Gary Johnson, Grambling, 6-3, 260; Jimmy Webb, Mississippi State, 6-5, 245; Pat Donovan, Stanford, 6-5, 235; Charles Hall, Tulane, 6-6, 250; and Rubin Carter, Miami, Fla., 6-2, 260; on offense, Doug France, Ohio State, 6-6, 260; Dennis Harrah, Miami, Fla., 6-5, 260; Marvin Crenshaw, Nebraska, 6-6, 240; and Al Krevis, Boston College, 6-5, 265.

Anthony Davis

Dan Natale

Kyle Davis of Oklahoma, 6-4, 225, and Geoff Reece of Washington State, 6-4- 235, appear to be the two highest-rated centers in the nation, but neither is a surefire first-round pro pick, in Cartwright's estimation, because of the plethora of outstanding performers at the other offensive-line positions. "Very often a team will draft a guy who's played at tackle or guard in college and make a center out of him," says our expert scout.

Smart Cooking For Special Occasions

"Crepes"–A Very Special Kind Of French Roll-Up Pancake

Marilyn Hansen introduces us to some extra-special recipes from the Magic Pan, which went from a small storefront location in San Francisco to 26-city prosperity. Now you too can serve these delicious crepes.

BASIC CREPES

1½ cups milk
3 eggs
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup all-purpose flour
Vegetable oil

1. Put milk, eggs, salt and flour into electric-blender container. Cover. Blend at top speed for 30 seconds.
2. Scrape down batter on sides of blender with spatula. Batter should be the consistency of heavy cream.
3. Cover and refrigerate. If possible, allow to stand an hour or two before cooking. Batter will thicken as it stands. If you find the batter is too heavy, beat in a few tablespoons water.
4. Before preparing each crepe, brush the crepe pan or small 6-inch skillet with oil to cover entire bottom. Heat pan until hot, but not smoking.
5. Pour in about 2-3 tablespoons batter, tilt pan to coat bottom evenly with batter. Cook over medium heat about 1 minute until the top of the crepe is dry and the bottom is lightly browned. Turn crepe with spatula and cook on other side about 20 seconds. Tip out onto plate.
6. Repeat, stacking crepes with waxed paper between each. Makes 12-14 crepes

SPINACH SOUFFLE CREPES

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup minced onion
¾ cup minced fresh spinach leaves
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk, scalded
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
4 eggs, separated
½ cup grated Swiss cheese
12 Basic Crepes
Cheese Sauce, recipe below

1. Preheat oven to 375°F. Melt butter in medium saucepan. Add onion and cook, stirring, 5 minutes, until tender. Add spinach and cook, stirring, about 3 minutes to evaporate most of the moisture.
2. Stir in flour smoothly. Add hot milk and cook, stirring, until mixture comes to boiling. Season with salt and nutmeg.
3. Add egg yolks one at a time, stirring well with wire whisk until blended. Add grated cheese.
4. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold into egg-yolk mixture with a light hand. Pour into a well-buttered 1½-qt. soufflé dish.
5. Set dish in a pan containing 1 inch hot water. Bake about 35 minutes, or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.
6. To assemble: Place about ⅓ cup of baked spinach soufflé in center of each crepe. Spread lightly with spatula. Roll up. Place in shallow oven-to-table baking dish. Top with Cheese Sauce.
7. Place dish under broiler about 4 inches from heating element for 2-3 minutes, to brown sauce lightly. Makes 6 servings

CHEESE SAUCE

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese

2. Heat to boiling, stirring until mixture thickens. Add remaining ingredients, stirring until cheese melts. Makes 1 cup

Take Food, Not Medicine, If You Suffer from Any of These Ills!

"Why do I AVOID prescribing drugs?", says this brilliant physician, who has cured thousands of patients with nothing more than ordinary food alone! For these four vital reasons"—

1. Because drugs do not produce health. They merely mask the symptoms of a disease . . . cover up the condition, while the body struggles on valiantly to cure itself.

2. This is the reason why so many men and women, of all ages, no sooner fight their way out of one ailment, than they fall right into another. Why they are always "half-sick." Why they never really know what it means to be completely free of pain, in glowing health. Because they, and their doctors, do nothing more than merely fight off each new attack, and never drain out the poison that is left from that attack, or rebuild vital weakened tissue before it can fall prey to new disease!

It is "Tissue Weakness" That Opens The Door To One New Disease After Another! And NO Drug—Only Food—Can Build REAL TISSUE STRENGTH Again!

3. The lasting way to fight disease, then, is not just to counter-attack each new symptom in its turn . . . but to build such sheer physical strength into each threatened cell of your body that the organism that causes that disease is either destroyed, or rendered harmless, the very instant it enters your body!

4. This is done in two ways: First, to use a medical-diet to drain out the poisons that make your body weak today. And, finally, to use a second, even more powerful medical-diet to pour Super-Nutrients—Nature's own medicines—into every crippled organ of that body . . . not only to force out that specific disease, as fast as humanly possible, but also to leave that organ perhaps even healthier than before it was first attacked!

See How This NATURAL Method Has Worked—In Thousands Of Case Histories, With Almost Every Ailment You Can Imagine!

Let Dr. Nittler's patients speak for themselves:

"When I came to you I suffered from swelling and tingling of extremities, almost constant hunger, periodic weakness, great sensitivity to glare and loud noise . . . Since becoming your patient I find myself energetic and alert until nearly midnight, awake fully by 7:30 or 8 each morning, in good spirits, not sluggish, and continuing throughout the day glad to be alive.

"I had visited several skin specialists hoping to find help in the removal of what appeared to be growths on my face. Biopsies were taken; result negative. I asked how to get rid of these growths; how to prevent their growing back. I received a shrug of the specialist's shoulder (later, his bill!); Dr. Nittler took one look at the area involved and prescribed (natural) medication for external application which within one week's time cleared up the difficulty. It has not returned."

And Still More Thrilling Results! All Told In The Patient's Own Documented Words!

"However, on Easter Sunday, March 29, 1970, I suffered not only another occlusion, but an acute cardiac arrest. . . . Only extreme good luck made it possible for me to write these words . . . They (his regular physicians) believed open heart surgery to be the only hope . . . It was at this point that I was referred to Dr. Nittler . . . he started me on his "basic heart program". . . . Within weeks, I noticed great improvement . . . an increased surge of well-being with each passing week. My family doctor continues to monitor my case. He is honest enough to admit I've shown great improvement. He says my heart is beating more slowly and stronger . . . My laboratory tests are all normal."

"I've been subject to asthma all my life. It would come with a cold or when I laughed or exercised too hard. The situation became dramatically worse in 1966. For some reason I'd catch a cold every four to six weeks . . . it would go to my chest, develop into asthma, and I could hardly breathe. . . . So I went through Dr. Nittler's whole program . . . Now (1971) the few colds I catch are very mild. I can't even remember the last time I had asthma with or without a cold!"

"In the latter part of November past, I broke out in an allergic dermatitis—severe hives . . . in addition, I would get a severe pain in an area above the right kidney . . . It was an acute shattering pain that immobilized me. I was next given cortisone. After 24 hours this would lessen the severity of both hives and pain. As long as I continued with cortisone . . . I was fine, but when I stopped, severe hives and pain recurred. I seesawed back and forth in this manner for several weeks . . . Then on the tenth day under Dr. Nittler's care, something wonderful (to me, a miracle) happened—I was free of my ailments! . . . Now I am in the thirteenth month after the doctor's care, enjoying the best of health and feeling great."

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

What Are the Inner Reasons for Our Behavior?

True or False: When a wife nags her husband it's usually because he's done something she doesn't approve of. (See number 3)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The chief reason people get hooked on mood-altering drugs is because they are trying to make their problems disappear instantly and effortlessly.

2. Nobody knows what goes on in the mind of a potential murderer—or what makes him tick.

3. When a wife nags her husband it's usually because he's done something she doesn't approve of.

4. The reason many people let their dogs roam at large, creating assorted nuisances and hazards to others, is to bug non dog owners—who they feel don't understand or appreciate man's best friend.

5. The way people vote is influenced to a large extent by the newspaper they read.

ANSWERS

1. True. Dr. V. Alton Dohner of the U.S. Public Health Service has evaluated the findings of his own and other leading studies, which show that "A major inadequacy in drug abusers is the inability to tolerate frustration, anxiety, tension, mild depression or other psychological discomfort as part of everyday life. These people have a tendency to seek a quick solution to their problems via alcohol, tranquilizers, stimulants, sedatives or other mood-altering agents. There is emphasis on quick relief that requires little effort from the individual." The study points out that a certain amount of anxiety, tension, frustration and fatigue is normal and necessary for the growth and maintenance of a healthy personality.

2. False. The noted psychiatrist and authority on violence, Dr. David Abrahamsen, profiles the psyche of the man who is likely to kill in his definitive treatise "The Murdering Mind": "The prime marks of the murderer are a sense of helplessness, impotence and nagging revenge carried over from early childhood. Intertwined with this core of emotions that color and distort his view of life and all his actions are his irrational hatred for others, his suspiciousness and his hypersensitivity to injustices or rejection. Hand in hand with these go his self-centeredness and inability to withstand frustration. Overpowered by frequent uncontrollable emotional outbursts, he [needs] to retaliate, to destroy, to tear down by killing."

3. False. University studies show that when a woman nags her husband it's "usually a response to nagging sensations from within," and that nagging provides an outlet for her nervous inner tensions. Since, as psychiatrists point out, bottling up tensions and frustrations and denying them means of expression can have an ill effect on physical and emotional well-being, husbands might take consolation in the fact that nagging does appear to serve some useful purpose.

4. False. University of California animal researcher Dr. Bruce Max Feldman, who has made a study of the matter, finds that "dog ownership is a subtle and complex psychological phenomenon"—and that the reason many people allow their dogs to roam freely, despite leash laws, is because they identify with their own desire not to be restrained. They forget, he points out, that unsupervised dogs are ill-equipped for life in modern society.

5. True—according to a survey conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute of Social Research. An evaluation of election studies over a 20-year period showed a consistent relationship between the voter's choice of candidate and the candidate favored editorially by the newspaper read most often. The investigators conclude that the political stand of this country's newspapers may be one of the most underestimated forces in politics. One reason offered why newspapers are so effective in shaping public opinion: "The newspaper endorsement is perceived as a nonpartisan message that appears to cut through the confusing arguments of the campaign and reduce them to a single conclusion."

Do You Believe in ESP?

Here Are Some Famous People Who Do...

By Brett L. Bolton

Have you ever walked into a completely strange room and felt you had been there before? Have you ever guessed what someone was about to say—seconds before he said it? Almost everyone has had some such odd experience at one time or another. But is it really ESP at work or just plain coincidence?

Some very famous people believe in ESP and other "inexplicable" phenomena. Below, a few of these people tell their personal stories.

JAYNE MEADOWS

Jayne's "sixth sense" seems to come through in the form of dreams. One of the earliest experiences she had occurred shortly after she began her climb in the world of show business.

Jayne Meadows

She arrived in New York wearing her mother's engagement ring, which she had borrowed in the hope "it would make me look more glamorous and less poor." At that time she was living in a charity club for aspiring young women. One morning, in a rush to get to a modeling job, she forgot the ring and left it on the basin in the bathroom she shared with two roommates.

While posing for a portrait painter, she suddenly realized that the ring was gone. She called the club, but the ring had disappeared from the basin and was never found.

"Two or three years went by," says Jayne. "I had long left the club, done several Broadway plays, and was living in Hollywood under contract with MGM.

"While visiting New York, I had a dream one night. I saw a chorus of girl dancers and one of them was one of my old roommates. Her arms were outstretched and on her left hand was Mother's ring.

"That morning my doorbell rang, but when I opened the door, there was no one there. I buzzed for the elevator operator and asked if he had brought someone up. He had not. As I walked back to my door, my foot hit a light object and I looked down. There in the dim light of the hall I saw a tiny piece of brown paper, crumpled up. I picked it up and when I opened it, there inside was Mother's ring!"

PAUL LYNDE

Paul Lynde

"Whenever I go to New York and I'm walking along Fifth Avenue I will see someone I knew when I lived there, but as soon as I run up and say hello, I'll find myself quickly apologizing: case of mistaken identity. And always, the physical resemblance is uncanny.

"But—and this is the curious thing—the very next person I'll see will be the one I thought I knew seconds before. This has happened to me every time I have been in New York—that is, if I'm on Fifth Avenue."

ARLENE DAHL

Arlene describes what she calls her "blessed gift": "I've always been very sensitive to the vibrations of other people, but I had written it off as coincidence until 1956, when I bought a book on tea-leaf reading. It was intended as a game to pass away a weekend with friends. Once the game began, I found I wasn't referring to the symbols in the book at all, but saying what came to my mind. By the end of the weekend I was so frightened at my accuracy that I wouldn't read for anyone again for about a year. At about that time, someone gave me a deck of tarot cards and I found I could 'tune in' with those too.

"Five years ago, Skip Schaum, a man I was dating occasionally, asked me to give him a card reading. I saw a big romance coming up for him and told him I foresaw a marriage before December of that same year.

"Shortly afterward, I went to France to make a movie. While there, Skip came over to see me on some business matter and we somehow started dating steadily. He suddenly proposed, and two months later, on December 7th, we were married." Arlene laughed, "It was the first time in my life I had predicted my own future without realizing it!"

JOAN BLONDELL

Joan explains that she has always been highly intuitive: "It's almost a continuous thing with me. I just sense things before they happen or at the very moment they are happening.

Joan Blondell

"The first incident was when I was seven. My whole family was on a vaudeville tour. My younger sister Gloria, who was called Sissy, was too small to travel so we left her with a lady friend of ours in Chicago while we went on the road for a couple of weeks.

"The night we were on the train going back to pick her up, I suddenly woke up, crying hysterically, saying, 'Sissy's leg is broken!' Mother couldn't comfort me and when we arrived the next morning at our friend's house, we found Sissy with a cast on her leg. Timewise, the accident coincided with the precise moment I got the mental picture and started bawling."

BILL ANDERSON

The well-known singer and songwriter became a believer in ESP when a "hunch" apparently saved not only his life, but the lives of the men in his band as well.

Bill Anderson

While on his way to an engagement in South Carolina, Bill decided to catch up on some of his fan mail. One letter from a lady tea-leaf reader in Wisconsin held an ominous warning. She wrote that Thursday of that week could prove fateful for him and advised him not to travel on that day. "I dismissed the warning as nonsense and then dozed off around midnight.

"I slept fitfully and awoke sometime during the early morning. I looked out the window and it was very foggy and eerie. I saw a road sign that said Anderson—my own name. It was Anderson, S.C. Suddenly I remembered the letter.

"I told the driver to pull over to the side of the road and stop. I told him we were spending the night right there.

"The next morning, about a hundred yards ahead, we saw a highway crew washing down the road. A fuel truck had overturned, spilling oil all over a sharp bend in the road.

"I asked the crewmen what time the accident occurred and they told me 'around midnight.' That was near the hour when I had read that strange letter. It was also now Thursday."

MICHAEL M. RYAN

Michael, who appears in the long-running daytime drama "Another World," recalls an experience that seemed very odd to him. In 1965 he rented a "retreat" on Staten Island for his wife and three young sons. One afternoon, as he tells it, the Ryans were out surveying their grounds. Suddenly, by what seemed to Michael to be a kind of telepathic message, he was directed out into some woods in back of the house. There he found some furniture partially buried in the earth and covered with leaves. Vicki, his wife, was shocked at the good condition of their findings, considering their place of storage. With great enthusiasm the Ryans set about refinishing everything.

Michael M. Ryan

As each piece was completed, Michael and Vicki seemed to know just where to place it. He says, "It was as though a pair of unseen hands, using us as an instrument, restored the house as it might have been when the previous owners were alive."

They made inquiries as to who the owner was and learned it belonged to an old-time actress and her husband. The woman had died shortly after Michael rented the house.

"After a friend of ours told us about the American Association of Retired Persons, I said to my wife, 'Irma, Everybody's having fun but us. Lots of people out there are having a marvelous time and we're sitting home counting the years.' So I picked myself right up and filled out an AARP coupon just like the one on this page. I want to tell you it was the best thing we ever did."

Irma and Peter McNulty

WHAT'S AARP?

AARP is the American Association of Retired Persons or as we like to think of ourselves—The new social security. Non-profit. Non-partisan. An association of more than 6 million people. Anybody who's over 55 can belong. And all it costs to be a member is $2 a year. Which is almost like buying a whole new life for a few cents a week. You can stay home and enjoy it. You can be rich. Poor. Healthy. Not so healthy. It's probably one of the few organizations in the world that offers you the opportunity to give so much of yourself, if you so desire and at the same time provides so many benefits and services. Simply because its one purpose is to help you continue to feel vital, important and involved in every part of life.

WHAT YOU GET

To begin with, you can continue your education. You can fill your leisure time with hundreds of new meaningful activities. At home. Or outside. You can meet new people. Make your voice heard in government. Be assured of reasonable prices on medicines, travel, on many of the necessities of life including health insurance. You'll receive two fine publications written just for you. In other words, you're going to have fun again and find that life is more than just a way to pass time.

DON'T STOP LEARNING

AARP's Institute of Lifetime Learning offers a full program of education courses in music appreciation, psychology, creative writing, literature, government, and a variety of other subjects. There are home study courses or you can attend lectures at regional centers around the country.

BE REPRESENTED IN GOVERNMENT

AARP's legislative program represents your interest with state legislatures and Congress. Its 33-point program is a Bill of Rights for all older persons retired or not. We let you know what's happening. So that you can know about all of the legislation put through on your behalf, and what remains to be accomplished.

FEEL BETTER WITH HEALTH INSURANCE

Medicare doesn't cover everything. So one of AARP's most important benefits is eligibility for supplementary Group Health Insurance Plans. They help you to pay for the best medical and surgical treatment, and include a Skilled Nursing Facility and Home-Nursing Care Plan. You'll feel better just having this kind of protection.

PHARMACY SERVICE

Because of the buying power represented by more than 6 million AARP members, AARP makes it possible for you to get over-the-counter and prescription medicine and supplies at realistic prices and have them delivered to your home, postage paid.

GO PLACES

Where would you like to travel? Around the world? Across the country? The AARP recommended travel service can help you do it. You can choose from a wide variety of quality tours and cruises, ranging from luxury to economy, escorted by experienced tour directors. The world is there. All you have to do is go into it.

FEEL LIKE WORKING?

Just because you're retired doesn't mean you can't work. Mature Temps, an AARP recommended service, may be able to help you supplement your retirement income with part-time or temporary employment. There are offices in a number of major metropolitan areas across the country. Just call. Their service is free.

PARTICIPATE IN CHAPTER ACTIVITIES

Chances are there's an AARP Chapter near you. (There are over 1600 of them around the United States). If you'd like to go to a meeting and find out about the inside workings of AARP, just come on over. It's a great way to make our association grow stronger and a fine opportunity for you to meet dozens of vital people your own age.

WANT TO GET INVOLVED?

At Local Chapters you'll have the opportunity to find out about community services in which you can lend a helping hand. You can learn more about the Defensive Driving Courses, the Consumer Information Desk or participate in the Tax Aide Program. Or just meet new friends.

NEED ADVICE?

AARP provides its members with a series of booklets that guide retired people through areas of particular concern. They cover everything from how to get personal help, to health advice, moving, diet, and all the little problems that trouble you from time to time.

WORRIED ABOUT AUTO INSURANCE*?

As an AARP member, you will receive information about how you may be able to actually save money on your auto-insurance with a policy that has guaranteed renewable and limited-cancellation features.

LIKE TO READ?

When you join AARP you automatically receive subscriptions to AARP's official publications, Modern Maturity and the AARP News Bulletin, two publications filled with news and features of special interest to you.

Your annual membership dues of $2 help cover the cost of these publications, which means for as long as you're a member of AARP your magazines will keep coming.

There's so much more to AARP than we have room to tell you here. And really, the best way to find out is to join. The coupon below will enroll you so that you can take advantage of all the AARP benefits and services. There's only one requirement. You have to be 55 or over. We don't think you'll mind telling us if you are.

NFL Draft Preview

The increasing emphasis on defense in the NFL and the high draft positions in recent years of such players as John Matuszak, "Too Tall" Jones and John Hicks have endowed the line positions with a glamour that was lacking in former years. What has happened to the traditional glamour spots of quarterback and running back?

"There's been a drop-off in overall quality in those positions in the past couple of years," says Cartwright. "Last year no quarterback was selected in the NFL draft until the third round, and that may happen again this time. The first quarterback picked is likely to be Dave Humm from Nebraska, 6-1, 181, who will be the first left-handed passing specialist the league has brought in since Ken Stabler, now a great star at Oakland.

"Or the first quarterback chosen could be Steve Bartkowski from the University of California. He's 6-4, 215, the size the pros want, but up until this year he hadn't really done much. Now he seems ready for the pros, and someone is sure to take him in the first few rounds. Steve Joachim of Temple, who's 6-3 and 210, also is one of the better quarterbacks available."

At running back, Cartwright singles out two of the more glamorous performers in the country as likely high draft picks, and as possibilities to go high in the first round. One is Anthony Davis of Southern California, who gained more than 1,000 yards on the ground in each of his three varsity seasons and scored four touchdowns against Notre Dame last fall to lift the Trojans from a 24-0 deficit to an astonishing 55-24 victory over the Fighting Irish. At 5-9, 190, Davis lacks great size, but his blazing breakaway speed should make him a serious threat on kick returns as well as from scrimmage in any pro backfield.

Though he tore up his knee in spring practice and seemed through with football at least for 1974, Roosevelt Leaks,

Dave Humm

Steve Bartkowski

Wide World

Steve Joachim

Texas' powerful 5-11, 220-pound fullback, effected a remarkable and courageous return to action by the fall and could be the first fullback tapped in the upcoming NFL draft. Other highly touted running backs include Walter Payton of Jackson State, 5-11, 200, who led the nation's small colleges in scoring this past season, racking up six touchdowns in one game; Mike Thomas, University of Nevada at Las Vegas, 5-10, 190; and Andy Jones, Washington, 6-2, 215.

Cartwright feels there is little depth among quality receivers in this year's draft, and that two wide receivers, Danny Buggs of West Virginia and Larry Burton of Purdue, and one tight end, Dan Natale of Penn State, stand out above the rest.

"Buggs is 6-3, 190, with tremendous speed," Cartwright points out. "He ran the 60-yard dash in college track, so you know he can gain plenty of yardage after he catches a ball. Burton is 6-1, 187, and finished fourth in the 200-meter dash at the Munich Olympics in 1972. But he's not one of those track guys who come out for football because they think they can take advantage of their speed. He went to Purdue on a football scholarship. He can play this game and he's going to be a good pro.

"Natale, 6-3, 215, can do everything you ask from a tight end. He has the good hands that you want, and he's a better blocker than Ted Kwalick, the last great tight end Penn State turned out, who's been with San Francisco the past six years."

To defend against the passing game, Cartwright feels that the two best safeties this year are Dave Brown of Michigan, 6-1, 188, and Robert Giblin of Houston, 6-2, 205. The two best corner backs are Neal Colzie of Ohio State, 6-2, 196; and Mike Washington, of Alabama, 6-3, 195.

Among the linebackers, he likes Tom Ruud of Nebraska, 6-3, 225, for the middle, and Rod Shoate of Oklahoma, 6-1, 215, and Richard Wood of Southern California, 6-2, 215, for the outside spots.

With recent rules changes making kicking more crucial, many clubs are concentrating on selecting good people to do their punting and place-kicking. This year's top selections among field-goal specialists should be Joe Danelo of Washington State, 5-9, 167, and Steve Mike-Mayer of Maryland, 6-0, 180, both soccer-style booters. Mike-Mayer is the brother of Atlanta Falcon place-kicker Nick Mike-Mayer, one of the NFL's top "toes."

Tops among the punters appears to be Neil Clabo of Tennessee, 6-1, 197, who has a great touch for the coffin corner, a skill highly prized in the NFL since last year's rule change prohibiting the punting team from sending down all of its linemen on kick coverage was instituted.

St. Valentine's Day Ingot and Pendant

ORDERS MUST BE POSTMARKED BY FEBRUARY 14, 1975

THIS YEAR, CHOOSE AN exciting gift of rare and enduring beauty that captures in precious gold and silver, the beautiful sentiment of St. Valentine's Day. The Hamilton Mint is proud indeed to present its first annual St. Valentine's Day Ingot and Pendant – two original works of medallic art by master sculptor Alfred Brunettin.

The ingot entitled "Together", contains a full ounce of pure .999 fine silver, the finest and purest silver available, and portrays a man and woman in profile with cupid looking on. This proof quality ingot has a delicate satin finish bas-relief design on a gleaming mirror-perfect background. This beautiful ingot is available for $12.95 in silver, or in 24 Kt gold on .999 silver for just $17.95.

PENDANT AVAILABLE IN SOLID SILVER, SOLID GOLD AND GOLD ON SILVER

Entitled "Love Token", this elegant pendant tells of love and shows two lovers in a garden. The pendant will be struck in .999 fine silver with a lovely matching sterling silver chain for $19.95. You may also select the pendant in 24 Kt gold on silver for $24.95 or in 18 Kt solid gold for $175. (Both gold pendants come with matching gold plated sterling chain.) Each represents a truly wonderful and thoughtful gift that will be treasured for a lifetime.

STRICTLY LIMITED FIRST ANNUAL EDITIONS

First Annual Editions have traditionally been greatly prized by knowledgeable collectors and because rarity can add substantially to a potential increase in value, The Hamilton Mint will enforce strict limits on the 1975 St. Valentine's Day Ingots and Pendants. Only enough ingots and pendants will be struck to fill those orders received by the deadline of February 14, 1975. Then, the minting dies for both works will be destroyed and no further first editions will be struck – ever! You will also receive a registered Certificate of Authenticity, attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of each offer.

Handsome Display Case Included
You will receive, at no extra charge, a deluxe presentation case for your ingot or pendant, which is also ideal to protect or display your gift.

SOMETHING TO BANK ON

The bank where I bank isn't biggest of all;
It's not, I confess, in a skyscraper tall.

The bank down the street does a lot more glad-handing.
The interest rate isn't what has allured;
It's the same at them all, and the same is insured.

Then why don't I move, and on fast-moving feet,
To the bank or the savings and loan down the street?
I'll tell you the reason, and hope you'll not frown;
Their ballpoint pens are the best in the town.

NANCY & HENRY KISSINGER
Telephone troubles

Washington rumors had it that Henry Kissinger's parents wouldn't attend his wedding to Nancy Maginnes because she is a Gentile. But here's the real story: "On the eve of his wedding Henry called from Washington to tell them the good news, said a friend of a friend. But it was Friday night, and because they are Orthodox the parents could not answer the phone. Nor could they until after sundown Saturday, by which time the wedding was over. Why didn't he telephone home on Friday afternoon instead? Some sources guess it was because Kissinger didn't finally make up his mind to go ahead with the wedding until Friday night, possibly because he was unable to arrange for a honeymoon hideaway in Acapulco at La Serena, the lavish villa of Mexican millionaire Estaguio Escandon, or because of a delay in securing the Rockefeller jet which flew the newlyweds to Mexico." From "Henry Kissinger, the Private and Public Story," by Ralph Blumenfeld, the Staff and Editors of The New York Post (A Signet Special, $1.75).

Photographer Carole Cutner has her schoolgirl daughter to thank for the most important assignment of her career—taking the official birthday pictures of Prince Charles. Mrs. Cutner's surprise commission came after she took photographs of her daughter's school jubilee celebrations, which were attended by the Prince. "He liked the pictures, and I was asked to show further samples of my work," says Mrs. Cutner, who lives in London. The picture of the Prince shown here is the birthday picture Mrs. Cutner took for Charles' most recent (26th) birthday.

Can a woman boss beat the "I won't work for a woman" syndrome? "A woman supervisor needs a friend on the job," advises James L. Hayes, president of the American Management Associations. "Pick out a male and win him over. I know of one woman who stayed up nights cramming football statistics to convince a male colleague that she understood his interests. I know another female boss who took her all-male department for coffee and said, 'You know, without your help, I'm not going to succeed. I really need you.' The men warmed to her openness and offered to help. Acceptance of any new manager takes a while. For women, it just takes a little while longer."

Because of Human Vanity...

ONLY ONE WEEK TO LIVE

The harp seal—to its extreme misfortune—has a baby so beautiful humans wish to wear its fur. Each spring the migratory seals form two herds, one in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence, the other off the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador. There, literally forming a nursery on the ice floes, the seals give birth to their white, silky-furred pups.

Then, each year Canadian and Norwegian sealers come with their clubs. The nursing seal pups cannot get away—less than one week old, they are too young to swim. Most never do. The pups are clubbed and skinned before their mothers' eyes. The pelts are destined to become luxury furs and leather.

But, the killing cannot go on forever, because the seals will not last. Only 20 years ago there were twice as many as there are today, and the number continues to decline. So far, recommendations to end the killing have been ignored.

Only continued, forceful public opposition can stop this insane killing. The Canadian government has been the target of massive protests since the brutality of the killing became known in the early 1960's. And, Canada has reduced the quotas on seals in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. But, the killing is now concentrated on the seals off the Newfoundland-Labrador coast. Thousands of baby seals will die there this spring with the Norwegians doing much of the killing. Norway too must know we will not condone the brutal destruction of a species and the slaughter of infant animals for the sake of fur and leather garments.

PLEASE DO NOT REMAIN SILENT. PLEASE HELP. Please write the Norwegian Ambassador and Prime Minister.

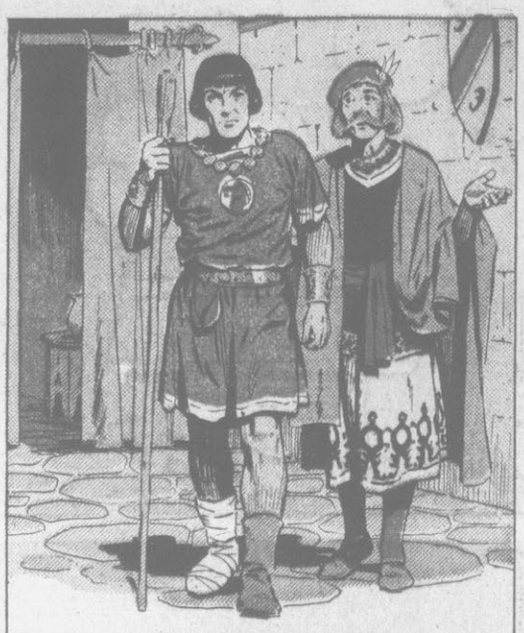
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT NURSES A TWISTED ANKLE AND AS THE LONG DAYS PASS HIS TEMPER BECOMES SHORTER. IT IS RUMORED THAT HE EVEN SNAPPED AT ALETA.

IT IS NOT RECORDED WHO WON THE ENSUING QUARREL, BUT VAL LOOKS RELIEVED WHEN A SERVANT BRINGS A SUMMONS FROM THE KING.



"BOLTAR HAS RETURNED WITH INFORMATION OF GRAVE IMPORTANCE, FOR THE KING HAS CALLED THE COUNCIL INTO SESSION."

BOLTAR HAS A FRIGHTENING TALE TO TELL: "OUT OF AFRICA CAME A FLEET OF SHIPS LIKE A PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS. THE NAVIES OF THE INLAND SEA WERE TAKEN BY SURPRISE AND MONTHS OF TERROR WOULD PASS BEFORE THEY COULD UNITE IN DEFENSE.

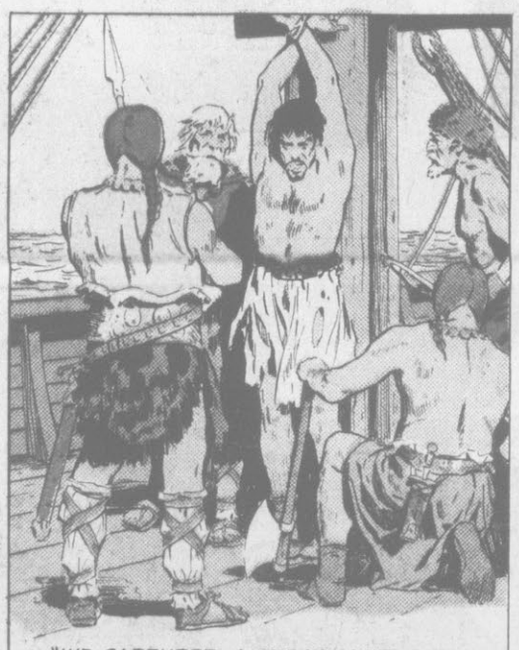
"HAVING A FASTER SHIP I FOLLOWED. WHEREVER THEY WENT ONLY DEATH AND ASHES REMAINED. I AM USED TO WAR, BUT NEVER HAVE I WITNESSED SUCH FIENDISH BRUTALITY AS THAT MYSTERIOUS FLEET LEFT BEHIND.



"WE CAPTURED A STRAGGLER AND PERSUADED ITS CAPTAIN TO NAME HIS LEADER. 'BELLA GROSSI,' HE SAID, BEFORE HE DIED."

BELLA GROSSI, WEALTHY, AMBITIOUS AND RUTHLESS. SINCE BOYHOOD HE HAD PLANNED TO CARVE OUT AN EMPIRE OF HIS OWN JUST LIKE ALEXANDER, CAESAR AND ATTILA HAD DONE BEFORE HIM. SUCCESS IS WITHIN HIS GRASP.
