Ford Counts On Faster Recovery Than Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says the economy will improve faster than some experts predict and that it will be in good enough shape to justify his seeking election in 1976 for a full four-year term.

Before returning to Washington from a 26-hour visit to Atlanta to promote his economic-energy program Ford said Tuesday that he believes the economy "will do better by the end of this year than the experts think."

Ford was expected to continue plugging for his programs in a breakfast meeting today with 100 Democratic members of Congress, including chairmen of 13 major committees.

He voiced his optimism at an Atlanta news conference shortly after the White House sent a gloomy economic message to Congress predicting higher unemployment, permanently higher energy prices and a less bountiful standard of living for Americans.

Asked if the economic forecast might change his mind about running, Ford said he believes there "will be an improving picture" although it will not be "as good we we would like it."

"I think the economic circumstances will be good enough to justify at least my seeking re-election," the President said.

Ford said his $349 billion record peacetime budget, submitted to Congress Monday with a $52 billion deficit, was carefully written to avoid "the rekindling of double digit inflation." He said, however, it was not "an austerity budget."

The President also declared he would "vigorously oppose any attempt" by Congress "to slash without rhyme or reason" his $92.8 billion defense budget because it could jeopardize national security.

He based his optimism about economic recovery partly on the determination of business to sell its goods and "some evidence" that public confidence is improving. He characterized cash rebate programs being used by auto and appliance industries to stimulate sales as a "good, hard marketing practice."

Ford said his predictions about improved conditions later this year probably would be translated into a 5 per cent increase in the Gross National Product, the total output of the nation's goods and services. "It will undoubtedly mean an increase of about two million in those employed," he said.

The best way to turn the economy away from a recession would be action from Congress, "the quicker the better," Ford said.

Vicious Ice Storm Creates Shambles In Central N.C.

By The Associated Press

Duke Power Co. said electrical service to an estimated 30,000 customers in the Charlotte area was interrupted late Tuesday and early today, primarily by broken power lines that snapped from heavy coatings of ice or blows from falling tree limbs.

The utility said more than 45 additional work crews were en route to the Charlotte area from other parts of its own system and from Georgia, South Carolina and West Virginia to help restore service.

More than 4,000 customers in Charlotte were without power at 9 a.m. today.

Charlotte-Mecklenburg County schools opened today, but several closed within an hour because they had no electricity.

Duke Power spokesman Bill Burton said the main impact of Tuesday's storm was in the triangle formed by Charlotte, Gastonia and Lancaster, S.C. Ice damage also was reported in the Greensboro-High Point area.

The storm left downtown streets covered with tree limbs in Rock Hill, a South Carolina city 25 miles south of Charlotte. A Rock Hill newsman said the streets "look like a tornado went down them."

In Greensboro 10 vehicles were involved in an early morning pileup at the interestion of Interstate Highways 40 and 85. Authorities said nine persons were injured, three of them seriously.

Burton said the Duke Power system was experiencing continuing problems although temperatures had warmed slightly early today, moving above the freezing mark in the Charlotte area.

"The ice is not forming now, but it also is not melting. We had trees that stood during the night that now are giving up the ghost," he said.

The storm left three or more inches of snow in much of western North Carolina. Public schools remained closed today in several counties.

A traveler's advisory was in effect for central and western counties, although the Highway Patrol said all highways were open.

'No Doubt' Of Assembly Meeting In '76: Green

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—House Speaker James C. Green says there is "no doubt" the North Carolina General Assembly will meet next year to deal with budget matters because of the uncertainty of the economy.

Green said in an interview a resolution will be prepared and introduced within the next few weeks calling for the lawmakers to meet in 1976 near the income tax filing deadline.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, looking beyond 1976, says future legislatures will likely convene in January to get organized and appoint committees, perhaps in one day. Then a 30-45 day recess would be taken.

Hunt said this had been discussed recently by Senate and House leaders.

Rep. Kitchen Josey, D-Halifax, House majority leader, agreed that such a proposal makes a lot of sense because of the wide gap between the time the General Assembly normally convenes in January and the April 15 income tax filing deadline. Income tax collection figures are needed to determine the expected revenue for the next fiscal year.

In 1975, the legislature is off to its slowest start in years. During the three weeks since it convened, 75 bills and resolutions have been introduced in the House compared to 255 during the same period in 1973 and 135 in 1974. The Senate has received 77 compared to 213 in 1973 and 93 in 1974.

"The number of bills don't determine the quality of a legislative session," said Sen. W.D. Mills, D-Onslow.

Green disagrees with some legislators who feel the General Assembly convened too early this year and that a recess should be taken.

He cited the energy, utility and economic problems and said, "We're here at work and staying busy."

Hunt agreed with Green that the lawmakers have a lot of budget work to do and should stay in session and get on with the job.

The 1973 General Assembly agreed to experiment with annual sessions and came back in 1974. Two sessions in a row may account in part for the lack of legislative bills being introduced.

"Down the road apiece we're going to have annual sessions, but they should be limited," Green said. Some states limit sessions to 90 days.

Josey said that because of the "unstable and unpredictable economy," legislative leaders feel it would be wise to hold a session in 1976.

Indians Charged

SHAWANO, Wis. (AP) — Charges that could bring prison terms of more than 90 years have been filed against five of the Indian militants who surrendered after a 34-day seige at a religious order's estate.

Twenty-eight others were charged with criminal trespass to a dwelling and disorderly conduct when they appeared for arraignment Tuesday. Nine persons under 18 were to be handed over to juvenile authorities.

All 33 of the adults pleaded innocent.

The Indians, members of the Menominee Warrior Society, seized the former Alexian Brothers novitiate in nearby Gresham on Jan. 1. They surrendered Monday.

Under a pact with the Chicago-based order, the former Roman Catholic abbey is to be deeded to the 2,300-member Menominee tribe as a health and school facility.

Mike Sturdevant, 30, of Neopit, chief spokesman for the demonstrators, was charged with armed robbery, armed burglary and false imprisonment.

Judge Upholds Divorce Terms

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A federal judge has upheld Alabama's law requiring six months' residence for divorce action in a case brought by a former North Carolina woman.

In the suit, Regina Ann Baker said she moved to Montgomery last Aug. 1 and initiated divorce proceedings Aug. 29.

She said her husband, in Missouri, did not contest the action. However, a circuit judge in Montgomery objected on grounds Mrs. Baker had not resided in Alabama for six months.

Mrs. Baker contended that the law violated rights to due process and her right to travel. But U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., without elaborating, upheld the constitutionality of the residency law and rejected her complaint.

Out-Argued

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Audrey Ash was going routinely about her duties at a convenience food store when a man walked in and demanded money.

He had his hands stuck in his pockets, but didn't produce a weapon. Mrs. Ash refused his demand and they began to argue.

They traded remarks for several minutes and then the potential robber said, "All right lady, you win."

He walked out of the store, his hands still in his empty pockets.

Two Delegations Express Concern

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Two delegations of interested citizens, one concerned with the completion of the Farmville Central High School athletic field, and the other seeking improvements at the Stokes Elementary School, appeared before the Pitt County Board of Education yesterday to express their concern.

Joseph C. Griffin, spokesman for the Farmville group, asked the board of education to complete the athletic field at Farmville Central before the board sells the current field to the Town of Farmville.

Griffin represented the Farmville School Advisory Council, the Farmville Area PTA, the Farmville Central Athletic Boosters Club and the citizens of the area.

Board members have been negotiating with the Town of Farmville for the past several months on the sale of the athletic field to be used by the town for recreational purposes.

Although the board allocated $54,000 last year to begin construction of the athletic field, Griffin said it would take another $40,000 to bring the field up to completion as compared with the other three new county high schools (this price does not include a field house).

The additional money would be needed for lighting, fencing and either removal of bleachers from the present field or the purchase of new bleachers.

"Due to inflation," Griffin explained, "we need more money. We cannot do the job for $54,000."

Griffin said the people in Farmville want the school board to ask the Pitt County Commissioners for additional money.

"I feel we are asking no more than what is right," Griffin explained. "The local people feel the Farmville athletic field was constructed and paid for by money from taxes paid by Farmville people, with the exception of the cost of land.

"The Farmville Booster Club is very active. We have good membership and are supporting all programs in the area, but when you talk about $40,000 it is beyond what we can handle. The people in Farmville feel the money received from the sale of the present field should be used for the completion of the athletic field at Farmville Central.

"We realize that the athletic program is not the most important phase of school but it is important," Griffin said. "Athletics have helped young people participate in school who otherwise would not have been able to be active in the school environment.

"We feel we have done the best we could. . .that we have supported the athletic program year in and year out, both at the high school level and the junior high level . . . and have been very dedicated to the program," Griffin said. "We feel we can now expect help from someone else when we cannot help our-

LOST $300

Mary H. Parker, who works for the Pitt County Board of Education, is appealing to the honesty of someone who found three $100 bills she lost at Harris Supermarket on Memorial Drive Friday afternoon. There was no identification with the money, she said.

She said she had just cashed the first paycheck she had received since before Christmas and had the money in her purse in a small brown envelope. She says she will give a reward for information leading to the finding of the money. Her phone number at work is 752-6106; at home, 753-5695. The person returning the money would, with his or her permission, be written up in Hotline as the honest person he or she is.

CHILDREN'S FURNITURE, BOOKS NEEDED

Several members of a Social Work Interviewing Class at East Carolina University are renovating the waiting room of the Pitt County Department of Social Services.

"We really need some little tables and chairs for children, and some books for them to read as they have to wait with their parents," Mary Ann Vail said. Anyone wishing to contribute may call Miss Vail at 758-2217.

TRACK DAMAGED

I have been using the Aycock School track every morning. Now I find it's locked. Why can't a Greenville citizen be able to run on this track? J.B.

City School Superintendent Glenn Cox said he's sorry, but it's a case of abusers ruining the privilege for everyone. Motorcycles, and bicycles and even football cleats have damaged the track. "We've closed it till we can figure out a way to allow its use for the general public, without having it damaged further," he said.

Free Parking On Dollar Day

DOLLAR DAY REMINDER. . .Mrs. Janie Hudson of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Associations holds up a Dollar Day sign to remind local shoppers that the semi-annual clearance event will be held Thursday.

February Dollar Day will be held Thursday in Greenville with local merchants offering many bargains for local shoppers.

According to Harold Creech, manager of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, the citywide event is a favorite of area shoppers because it is a major clearance of winter merchandise so that merchants can make room for summer goods.

Free parking will be provided for shoppers.

First Steps In Fighting Drugs

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—A report on efforts in combatting Farmville's drug situation was made last night.

Town Administrator W. A. Martin said he will attend a law enforcement workshop in Greenville Feb. 13-14. From it he hopes to get pointers in an effort to get some kind of evaluation of the Farmville Police Department done.

Judge Robert Rouse has been contacted, he said, and says he will be glad to check out any warrant that is thought to be responsible for a case's being thrown out of court.

Eli Bloom, District Attorney, has requested that a report on each case investigated by the Farmville Police Department be sent to him as well as to Pitt County, so he will be better informed about each before the case is tried.

Drug Committee member Vassar Fields said he does not believe this plan will be sufficient and suggested that Pitt County investigate the possibility of having a liaison man who would visit all the police departments and thoroughly understand each case and report to the district attorney, as Wayne County now has.

The Rev. Bob Parvin appealed

"Home Owned & Operated For Over 50 Years"

Many Problems Plague Some

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

Miss M., attractive young woman, is the mother of a son, 3. She's got multiple problems.

The little family lives in a dilapidated apartment in a city in the northern part of the United States.

Miss M.'s troubles are among about 100 cases detailed in a National Institute of Mental Health report —The Troubled Family.

The families all live in a place researchers prefer to call River City. It is a fictitious city that has all the marks of your typical inner city — poor housing, broken families, little money, and more than one trouble to a family.

Researchers found, in fact, that six or more major troubles plague 71 of the 96 families studied.

Dr. Bertram S. Brown, director of the Institute for Mental Health, said the study was undertaken for this reason:

"To contribute to a better understanding of the problems faced by those who are disadvantaged and needy in many aspects of their existence.

"It also was designed to provide an assessment of the strengths and limitations of existing services."

Miss M. seems at first to be your typical hippie —shunning materialism of the larger society for a happy, simpler life. Not so.

Researchers found Miss M. has had both suicidal and homicidal urges, even toward her offspring. She also has a low opinion of herself and expects people to reject her.

Some of these problems have been known to agencies trying to help her since she was an adolescent. From the age of 15 she has had counseling and therapy.

The report on Miss M. continues in a like sad theme:

In trying to find love, she has borne three illegitimate children, lived in a hippie commune, housed numerous friends and taken in almost every stray animal she could find. Her thinking is described as vague, fragmentary and muddled. "She wants to love and be loved," a social worker said.

Miss M. is not a stranger to problems. She, too, was an illegitimate child, rejected and abused by her mother. She rejected and abused her last child, much in the manner in which she herself was treated.

Miss M.'s shabby one-bedroom flat above a store has little heat in the winter. She is intelligent and had some college. But she seldom worked and most of her life has been on public assistance. Her life centers around the three year old, Peter. Her relationship seems to be that of a little girl towards a doll—"but a little girl with a dangerous temper," says the report on Miss M.

"She uses her son for companionship and warmth. However, one minute she screams at him and the next smothers him with affection."

In an analysis of Miss M.'s troubles, seven major problems were identified. Three were not matched by services. They were left hanging. Despite this, the family was involved with six different agencies.

The problems identified and the service system used go like this:

MENTAL HEALTH, Community Mental Health Center.

PHYSICAL HEALTH, General Hospital.

FAMILY RELATIONSHIP, Family Service, Voluntary Child Welfare, Public Child Welfare.

INCOME. Public Assistance.

Problems left hanging included employment, housing and isolation.

In the annals of "The Troubled Family in River City," Miss M.'s problem-pocked life is almost typical. Most come with overtones of despair —despite all the help provided.

It is from the multi-problem families that come many of the juvenile delinquents. Case histories show many prison inmates come from problem-plagued families.

The multi-problem plagued family was first identified a quarter of a century ago. Some help has been expanded for such families but much remains to be done.

"At the National Institute of Mental Health we are keenly aware of the need for comprehensive and integrated services for persons with multiple problems," says Dr. Brown.

"The inauguration of the community mental health centers program in 1963 was a major step toward providing the mental health component of needed care.

"To be effective, such services must be in partnership with other human service agencies to meet the complex needs of families so sorely in need of social concern and care."

He made this additional point in the River City report:

"Individuals with problems are not necessarily problem individuals.

"But a lack of adequate and timely assistance can make them so."

Special Tour Conducted For Division Group

A special tour of historical Halifax was conducted for members of the Coastal Plain Development Association (CPDA) Home Economics Division quarterly meeting.

Members were told of archelogical diggings and plans for restoration of sites by 1976.

Because of the importance of the Halifax Resolves and the drafting of the first State Constitution in Halifax, the State is appropriating more money for this site than for any other.

Mrs. R. A. Davis, of the Greenville clothing committee, reported that the construction of clothing for patients at Cherry Hospital will continue. The Home Economics Division has been responsible for almost 500 garments having been made and donated to the hospital in the past few years.

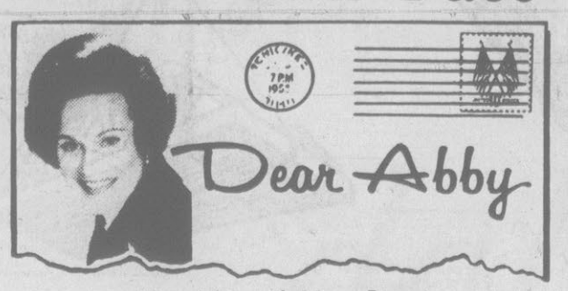
According to Mrs. Nathan Smith of Pactolus, the housing committee will stress home landscaping and will encourage families to plant at least one tree this year.

Mrs. Howard F. Burns of Greenville and vice chairman of the 10-county Home Economics Division met with the foods committee. It will again promote gardening is for Everyone (GIFE—rhymes with gift). In addition, they will disseminate information on proper preservation of the garden products.

Mrs. Burns introduced the speaker, Miss Jan Christensen, home economics editor, Agricultural Extension Service, North Carolina State University. Miss Christensen gave tips on co-operating with the different types of media for publicizing educational events and activities.

The business session was conducted by Mrs. R. D. Richards of Wilson County, chairman of the division. She reminded members of the theme and motto for the year—Resourceful living: Use it up, wear it out, make it do, or do without.

Let Son Develop At His Own Pace



By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a very nice, but extremely shy 17-year-old son. He has never had a date in his life, and I'm sure it's because he's afraid he'll get turned down.

He is an A-B student, but doesn't do very well in sports, which could be the reason he isn't very popular with the "in" crowd at school.

He is slightly overweight, but there are fatter boys who seem to hit it off with girls, so that can't be the reason.

It breaks my heart to see him alone all the time.

A girls' club is having a dance, and the girls ask the boys. One of my best friends has a daughter in this club. Should I put a bug in my friend's ear and ask her to ask her daughter to ask my son? He wouldn't have to know I arranged it.

SORRY FOR SONNY

DEAR SORRY: Don't put any bugs in anybody's ear. Your son may be a late bloomer. And another one of his problems could be a well-meaning mother who's inclined to run interference for him. Let him develop socially at his own pace.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from the girl who lied. I wondered if sometime in her life she was forced to lie. Let me tell you my story:

When I was very young, I found that if I told the truth when my mother questioned me about a mischievous act, I would get a spanking, so naturally, to escape the spanking, I lied. She was a strict disciplinarian (she meant well, but her method was all wrong), so in order to get along with her I lied until I was 28 years old, when I married and had my own home.

When mother visited me for the first time, she asked me a question, and knowing that the truth would displease her, I lied. I felt like a child, and right then and there I made a vow that I would never lie to her again. Also I made a vow that I would never live with anyone I had to lie to in order to get along with. I'm 48 now, and I've kept both vows.

I know that some of my answers don't please the questioner, but I always tell the truth. I've often wondered who will account for the lying I did for the first 28 years of my life.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN: There is only one reason people lie. It's because they haven't the courage to tell the truth. More emphasis should be placed on truthfulness, and less on punishment.

DEAR ABBY: I was very angry after reading your reply to the woman who refused to use birth control because it goes against the teachings of the Catholic faith. There is no reason why people should question anyone having a large family. The number of children a couple should have should be left up to the individual couple. As this woman pointed out, she is asking no one's assistance in the upbringing of her children.

In my opinion, many people are limiting the size of their families not only because of their concern for the world, but because if Mom has too many children then she may not be able to work for some time, which may mean not having the latest car model, and the children won't be able to go to camp, and Mom won't be able to have new furniture for the house.

If people are happy living like this so be it. However, if they want a large family with a lot more responsibilities, which in their opinion means a lot more fulfillment, then it's their business.

Inflationary Schemes Prevail

President Ford, who has always been a fiscal conservative, has presented a budget to Congress calling for expenditure of $349.4 billion in 1975-76.

The sheer size of the budget is awesome, but what is devastating is the size of the projected deficit in 1976—it is $52 billion. That figure is conservative. If Congress does not enact some cuts in spending—a doubtful prospect—the budget deficit could soar to over $70 billion. And in the midst of all this some Democratic leaders in Congress are talking about still greater tax cuts than those proposed by President Ford.

In fairness to the president it must be pointed out that the majority of the budget is made up of so called uncontrollable expenses, Social Security, Medicare and other social programs and it is in some of these areas where the president wants to make cuts—a prospect which is likely to be stoutly resisted by big spenders in Congress.

While President Ford deplored the big projected deficit, he said it is necessary to restore economic growth. Well, maybe so, but it is also well to remember that the huge deficit will give the nation a great chance to rekindle the fires of inflation.

Recession right now is on everyone's minds. Certainly it is real to anyone who has been laid off from a job. But at the same time we are still in a crushing inflationary cycle which, though it shows signs of abating, is a tremendous threat to every wage earner of the nation.

Tax cuts, hugh deficits and big government spending could very well come at a time when the economy is beginning to turn upward again anyway, and the sure result will be more of the inflation which has buried us all for the past several years.

This is a time for government to move cautiously in the field of economics. We can do what we can to make the burden easier for those who are presently unemployed. Beyond that we should attempt to bring government spending more in line with revenues. We have a feeling that with such an approach by government the economy would gradually turn itself around and we would wind up with a far more stable financial situation by 1976.

Regrettably we don't see the statesmanship and restraint which would bring this about developing in Washington.

Phillips Defending Effort

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—North Carolina public schools are the butt of critics of late who denounce fads, frills, and gimmicks of "progressive education" as responsible for consistently lower test scores here than elsewhere in the nation.

Not true, says State Superintendent of Schools A. Craig Phillips. "I believe very strongly that every youngster is doing better today than at any time before. He is better off individually than he was 10 years ago."

Still, proponents of the "back to basics" movement clamor for a return to emphasis on the three Rs, and point to statewide tests administered by Phillips' own agency as proof that kids are not learning as well as they should.

In reading, those tests show just over half of the Tar Heel children one or more years behind the national average in achievement, and some 66 per cent who need special help in reading, but not getting it.

Missing The Point

Critics who use those test results as grounds to denounce the public school program are missing the major point, Phillips said in a recent interview:

"Most folks have not realized that this is the first line base data that deals with all of our kids. A statewide assessment? There has never been one before.

"Only a portion of our children were tested and evaluated . . . never all of them," Phillips said. In the days of dual schools in North Carolina, tests were usually given only in the white schools while the black schools were passed over. Thus, the scores reflected the achievement level of only more advance students.

Comparing current test scores which include the lower income, rural, and black children against previous data paints a false picture, the superintendent said.

The point is, Phillips argues, that public schools today are working with a completely different clientele than they were a decade ago, and this affects teaching methods, test scores, and curricula.

Where once classrooms were largely made up of children from similar backgrounds, today "all kinds of kids are being thrown into the hopper." The impact of that social change—rich and poor, black and white together in the same classroom—cannot be discounted.

Educators know full well that more than any other single factor, the home environment has the most impact on achievement. A kid whose parents are well educated, whose home is filled with books, magazines and encouragements to learning, whose parents listen to the child and talk with him—urging discipline and performance at school—does work at a higher level than the student who does not enjoy that social background.

Race A Factor

The problem is not, Phillips said, simply a matter of race—although that is a factor. Recent tests across the state have shown distinct differences in achievement levels between kids in urban Piedmont sections, rural eastern counties, and the mountains.

Scores have also been broken down into performance by race, and results verify Phillips' contention that the overall test scores reflect a lower achievement level than they would if only the upper income, white kids were tested; as they once were.

There is no lack of attention in the public schools to teaching reading, writing, and arithmetic, Phillips believes. The problem is that the teachers must give individual attention to a highly diverse mixture of children—no single teaching method will do these days.

"The point is that kids from so-called good homes are doing better today than they were. But when that level is weighed with the overall level of achievement, it looks lower . . . And at the same time, the growth of the low achievement level child is even larger than my kid and your kid," Phillips said.

Phillips is optimistic on the future. Recent tests of third-graders prove the advancement brought about by kindergarten work, and by 1978 all Tar Heel youngsters will be eligible for public school kindergarten.

"My hope—and it goes beyond simply a hope—my belief is that the level of achievement of North Carolina youngsters is being significantly improved . . . There will be clearer evidence of that in the next four years," Phillips said.

The INSIDE REPORT

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A secret report flashed to the State Department of an imminent Communist coup d'etat in Portugal last week turned out to be premature, but top Ford administration officials remain convinced that a classic far-left takeover in Lisbon is possible any moment.

That has forced a painful reassessment at highest levels here of American military power in the Atlantic Ocean. The reassessors must ponder this hard reality: the drastic political upheaval in Europe's westernmost country threatens the U.S. with a major political setback—and a consequent Soviet gain in world politics.

One quick fallout is military. If Portugal leaves the North Atlantic alliance (NATO), a catastrophe now given 50-50 odds, the most important anti-submarine warfare base in the entire Atlantic will immediately be compromised. That base, located in Portugal's strategic Azores Island, employs top-secret sensor devices and wide-ranging spotter aircraft to monitor movement of all Soviet shipping, particularly submarines, in the vast Atlantic approaches to Gibraltar.

The savage course of political events in Portugal following four decades of right-wing rule by the Salazar dictatorship points precisely toward such new erosion in the troubled Western alliance.

Ten days ago secret word flashed through diplomatic channels to the State Department that a brutal Communist-style coup d'etat was imminent. This was only hours after the ruling 20-man Armed Forces Council decreed a single, centralized labor union in Portugal, insuring Communist control of the entire labor movement.

No coup developed. But events since then have strengthened fears that the far left, dominated by Communist, is determined to strangle center and center-right political parties, delay indefinitely the promised elections for a constituent assembly and strike for total power within the next several months.

That adds up to a classic political coup. When the Social Democratic Center party met last week in a formal convention, it was mobbed, surrounded and besieged by street gangs of left-wing toughs despite a pledge by the Armed Forces Council of freedom to prepare for the long promised constituent assembly elections.

When the Socialists petitioned for the right to hold a mass demonstration last Friday, the Communists scheduled their own mass demonstration the same day. What followed was a transparent Communist-inspired solution: both demonstrations were disallowed.

Even more revealing was last week's unpublished comment by Gen. Otelo Carvalho, acting commander of the continental operations command. As cabled to the State Department, Carvalho raised the gravest question yet about the elections: "The results of the spring elections will not necessarily represent the will and the best interests of a majority of the Portuguese people."

Originally promised by March 31, the earliest date for the elections now appears to be late April. But Gen.

WHO WAS JESUS?

"Who do men say that I am?"

This was Jesus's question which called forth the famous answer from Peter, "Thou are Christ, the son of the living God."

Students of the Bible have always recognized this question and answer as constituting one of the most important episodes in gospel history. The lesson lies in the significance of the word "who." Jesus wanted to know whether men had caught the significance of the fact that he was the supernatural Messiah.

The importance of Jesus does not lie in what we think about his teachings, or the place he holds in history, or the importance of his message for modern life. Religion can only be built on faith in the supernatural son of God, for this supernatural being alone can save us from our sins.

New Watergate Story?

WASHINGTON—"I'm getting desperate," said Plotkin, an unemployed friend of mine. "I think I'll break into the Watergate."

"Are you mad?" I said. "Why would you want to break into the Watergate?"

"I figure it's worth $200,000 if it's worth a dime."

"You can't get $200,000 for breaking into the Watergate. They don't have that kind of money around there."

"I don't expect to get it from the break-in, dummy," Plotkin said. "I plan to sell the literary rights to the robbery. I decided that for what they're paying for Watergate books I could get a Book of the Month out of it. You see, all the other Watergate books have to do with the old break-in. But my story would be about a fresh robbery, so it would be different."

"Plotkin, nobody is going to pay you a fortunate to write a book about your break-in. You never worked for the White House."

"What's that got to do with it? I'm a better writer than most of those guys."

"Publishers are paying vast sums for Watergate books not because of the break-in but because so many people in power were involved in covering it up. If you broke into the Watergate, I doubt if it would get into the newspapers."

Plotkin said, "You don't know that. All you have to di si say the word 'Watergate' to a publisher, and he'll write out a check. You know what a good thief needs these day?"

"A lawyer?"

"No, a literary agent. I thought you might know someone who would handle the rights to my break-in. I think we should keep the paperback contract separate from the hardback sale and put the movie rights up for auction. If we can get Robert Redford to bid against Paul Newman, we could even get a piece of the picture."

"You certainly have thought this out, Plotkin. But aren't you afraid to go to prison?"

"For breaking into Watergate?" Plotkin laughed. "What could I get, six months?"

"You might get more than that," I warned.

"Not if I turned state's evidence and saw the error of my ways."

ART BUCHWALD

"But in order to turn state's evidence you'd have to implicate somebody else. Whom could you implicate?"

"Nixon," said Plotkin happily.

"How could you implicate Nixon? He would have nothing to do with your break-in."

"So what? He has a pardon from Gerry Ford so they couldn't touch him. It isn't as if I was sending as innocent man to jail."

"But, Plotkin, Nixon has had enough problems of his own without tying him in with a break-in he had nothing to do with. You have to be fair."

"Yeah, but if Nixon hadn't spent so much time covering up the other Watergate break-in and had worked on the economy instead, I might not be out of a job now."

"I don't like it," I said. "But I'll call a literary agent friend of mine and ask him for you."

I placed the call. "How much are publishers paying for Watergate books?" I asked my friend. "Yeah, it's the story of a break-in and it implicates Nixon. . .$75,000? Right, I'll get back to you."

I told Plotkin, "You can get $75,000 against 15 percent royalties and 50 percent of the paperback sale."

"That's all?" said Plotkin in disgust. "The hell with it. It isn't worth my time."

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

The jury decision in the Marguerite Lightner conspiracy case offers another "twist" for which all North Carolina citizens can be eternally grateful.

Naturally, the Lightner household and their close friends are overjoyed and triumphant with the verdict of acquittal which the Wake County jury handed down. The fears and apprehensions have been put to rest, and the uncertainties and discomforting dreams have been diminished. However, the legal procedure and its outcome only satisfy the mundane requirements of life.

On the other hand, each of us should be admonished that our moral and social life is as critical, if not more crucial, than our legal life. People, every one of us, must be extremely careful of the company which we keep. "Birds of a feather do indeed flock together," and it is one's responsibility to rid himself of unwholesome cohorts. At times, to be in the midst of or in the friendship with professional gamblers, professional bootleggers, drug pushers, trained thieves, prostitutes and street hoodlums is as bad, if not worse, than being a member of one of these classifications. The consequences are most severe inasmuch as it takes an individual a lifetime to establish his reputation and character.

The other verdict, the parable, the moral of Mrs. Marguerite Lightner's conspiracy case sets forth: "To avoid the fruits of sin, stay out of the devil's orchard."

Rebates, But No Price-Cutting

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Seeking to lure a reluctant public into the market place, scores of companies are offering rebates and other cash incentives to purchasers of their products.

While most of the incentives center around the automotive industry, publishers, appliance makers, homebuilders, rental agents, banks and a boatbuilder, among others, have joined the latest marketing fashion.

Some rebates amount to real bargains, but industry in general has shown a strong resistance to outright price cuts. Some companies are caught in a bind — prices too high for buyers, too low for profits.

In New York, a builder is offering possession of homes six months before mortgage payments begin. An apartment house rental agent seeks to attract prospects by setting up four-figure bank accounts that they will receive upon successful completion of new leases.

General Electric Co. plans $2 to $5 rebates on certain small appliance purchaes. Ferro Corp. has offered to pay employes 10 per cent of what they pay for major appliances bought before April 15.

The most publicized rebates have been offered by auto makers. Manufacturers of accessory products have related programs to assist in selling cars.

The importance of the car to the economic was related in this way by Steuart Henderson Britt, a marketing consultant and professor at Northwestern University: "What happens in Detroit affects the size of tips in Wichita and retail sales in San Diego."

Buried in the effort to sell products are arguments against the use of electric energy, as with appliances, and against befouling the atmosphere, as with automotive exhaust. It is patriotic now to buy cars; cars move the economy.

For the time being, the economic problem is foremost. Surveys show the public has lost confidence, and when that happens people retrench. Illustrative of this, the savings rate is extremely high, more than 8 per cent, despite rising joblessness.

In times past marketing men would have sought to free that money by lowering prices, but some consider that a route mined with problems today, one that almost inevitably would be followed by embarrassing price increases.

Moreover, the immediate economic future is so uncertain that no marketing man is unaware of the possibility of economic restraints being imposed, thus locking a company into prices that might leave little profit.

'Eager' For Tax Refund

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says people appear more eager than usual to get tax refunds. In fact, some people are a little too eager.

They want President Ford's proposed tax rebate now.

The rebate is only proposed so far, of course. Although Congress and the White House agree generally that some tax benefit is needed to prod the economy, they must resolve their differences and write any rebate into law before the government can dispense the money.

But some taxpayers have apparently taken all the talk about rebates going on in Washington to mean they're entitled to get 12 per cent of their tax back now. In figuring up their tax bill for refund, some early filers have computed in the proposed rebate, the IRS says.

An IRS spokesman said the number of such mistakes is "of quite minor proportions" so far. The only thing citizens get for their trouble in computing the 12 per cent is a letter from the government accompanied by either a notice of additional tax due or a smaller refund check than they had counted on.

Other than that snag, the early returns in the annual tax derby have been brisk. Officials haven't decided yet whether that's because the IRS promised to get early refunds out faster.

But the Treasury Department, which writes the government's checks, reported individual tax refunds of $77 million for the month of January, compared to $45.3 million in the same month last year.

That's a 70 per cent increase but still only a drop in the bucket compared to the billions of refunds paid out later in the tax season.

The IRS reported refunds so far are averaging $363.98, up

40 Years Ago Today

February 5, 1935

The city relief agency moved rapidly today in its effort to provide proper clothing for over two hundred children of the destitute as investigations went forward in other phases of the relief situation.

Mayor R. C. Flanagan said clothing is being supplied to 231 school children. They will be provided with shoes, underclothing, sweaters and other wearing apparel necessary for school attendance.

The relief campaign got underway yesterday with most of the day spent in receipt of applications for assistance.

In announcing the campaign, Flanagan said only people found to be in dire need and distress would receive attention of the city. Work will be provided for a member of a family investigated and found in actual need.

Three hundred and fifty persons will be at work on various projects in the county by tomorrow, it was announced today from the local office of the Emergency Relief Administration.

Mrs. Cross Will Speak

Oakmont Baptist Church, Greenville, will begin its observance of W.M.U. Focus Week by participating in a Baptist Women's Day Service at the 11 a.m. worship hour, Sunday. The speaker for the service will be Mrs. Gilmer Cross, president, North Carolina Woman's Missionary Union.

Mrs. Cross, a native of Greensboro, now makes her home in Lexington. Prior to moving to Lexington she lived in Goldsboro for 18½ years, where her husband was pastor of the First Baptist Church until his death in 1969.

Mrs. Cross has served North Carolina Baptists in many ways as W.M.U. member-at-large on the Executive Board, as State Prayer Director, as a member of the Camp Committee, as First Vice-President, and now as State President. Mrs. Cross also serves her National Convention as a member of the executive committee of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The Worship Service is open to all.

from last year's $339.38. And the number of returns received with a week to go in January was 2,645,000 — again up from 2,494,000 in the same period last year.

But despite heavier early returns, IRS said it's sticking by its original estimate that the waiting time for refunds will increase from four or five weeks now to eight weeks or more as the April 15 deadline approaches.

Carvalho's words undermined the basic concept of holding elections at all—and laid the groundwork for dismissing the results if they are held, indicating the far left knows it could not possibly win a fair electoral test.

In the background of the Portuguese drama are major failures of U. S. policy during the 40 years when Portugal slept under the Salazar dictatorship. Contacts by American diplomats with the underground political opposition were virtually nil. Thus, when the dictatorship was suddenly overthrown the U.S. found itself in the dark. Almost nothing is known even now about the inner workings of the armed forces movement or its ruling council.

Moreover, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency has been rendered useless as a secret investigating or operating arm in Portugal. While Soviet funds are assumed to be lubricating the Portuguese far left, the U.S. finds itself prevented from competing in a struggle of external intervention. As a top State Department official told us: "This is the classic spot for a little clandestine help, but we wouldn't even attempt it in the political atmosphere at home."

Besides losing U.S. and NATO base rights in the Azores, a Communist-style takeover moving Portugal into the third world or eventually the Communist camp could well infect Spain across the border. Beyond that, it poses this still more menacing question:

Would Western Europe perceive a neutralist, pro-Communist Portugal as another example of America's decline? If so, the loss of base rights in the Azores would rate low among the lethal byproducts of the tragic drama being played in Lisbon today.

Three Arrested For Break-Ins

Joel Henry Bowkley Jr., 17, of Ayden, and Stephen Craig Tucker, 19, of Route 1, Winterville were charged early today with seven counts of breaking, entering and larceny in connection with cases reported here January 31 and February 2, Chief Glenn Cannon reported today.

According to Cannon, Ayden Police Chief Tommy arrested the two, along with another man — Billy Faulkner, 19, of Ayden — last night in connection with break-ins in Ayden February 2. That led, according to Cannon, to Bowkley and Tucker being charged in connection with the seven break-ins here.

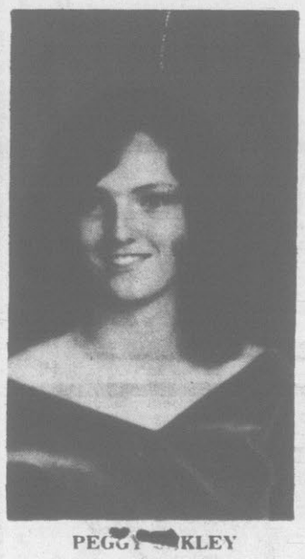
The Greenville break-ins for which Tucker and Bowkley were charged included February 2 break-ins at: The Little Mint on Memorial Drive where $2 was reported taken; Shoney's Restaurant where about $200 was reported missing; Tipton Annex where a sign was reported taken and the building vandalized; an apartment at Tipton Annex where 20 sets of cufflinks, seven tie pins and other jewelry were reported missing; and the Little Mint on North Greene Street where $70 in cash and 3½ cartons of cigarettes were stolen.

Break-ins reported January 31 for which the two were charged included: The Pet Kingdom at West End Circle where between $200 and $350 was reported missing, and Avery's Gulf Station on Memorial Drive where several keys were taken.

Bond in each of the cases was set at $2,000, making the total bond for the two defendants on the Greenville charges $14,000 each.

Wins Honor At N. Pitt

Peggy Oakley has been named North Pitt's 1974-75 Betty Crocker Family Leader of Tomorrow.



PEGGY OAKLEY

Miss Oakley won the honor by competing with other seniors in the written knowledge and attitude examination on Dec. 3.

She is now eligible for state and national honors and will receive a specially designed award from General Mills, Inc., sponsor of the annual educational scholarship program.

Release Sum For School

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners on Monday authorized the release of $400,000 in school bond money for proposed school construction during the months of February, March and April.

This action took place at the February meeting of the commissioners.

On county taxes, two actions were taken. One extends the deadline for listing taxes from January 31 to February 15. The second action was that of commissioners going on record to place tobacco curing barns under the category of real estate instead of personal property, which such barns have been classified in the past.

In a final action, commissioners agreed for the town of Everetts to hook onto the water line at the Blue Ridge Company, but at no cost to the county.

Programs Given Set Of Books

The Greenville Recreation Department's Programs for Exceptional Children and Adults have received a new set of Childcraft and World Book from Field Enterprises Educational Corporation. The Department's name was submitted for gratis sets by the local manager, Mrs. Madeline Vincent.

The books will be used by program participants. They will also be used by the staff as resource material in planning programs.

"If the funds are not provided by the board of education, we will have a half completed field that will be almost useless," Griffin said.

Board of education members allocated approximately $43,000 to the other three high schools four or five years ago for the development of their athletic fields. Due to tight money and inflation, Farmville Central continued to use the athletic field in Farmville. Since that time, the board has allocated $54,000 to Farmville Central for its athletic field (the extra money was added due to inflation). However, the Farmville people say they cannot complete the new field with the money allocated. There would be no money for lighting or bleachers.

The board agreed to take the matter under advisement and a decision will be made as soon as possible.

The Stokes group, with John Lloyd Corey as its spokesman, asked the board that some immediate improvements be made at Stokes Elementary School.

Corey showed slides and explained some areas that needed correcting, such as poor drainage on the school campus, the replacement of nine wooden frame structures that are being used for classrooms. The buildings have leaking roofs termite deterioration, cracks in the walls and are heated by pot-bellied stoves.

"Due to poor drainage on the site, the students sometimes get their feet wet going to lunchroom and to the restrooms," Corey said. "There are other things, too, such as an old rusty oil tank that students could get hurt climbing on and a partially completed building started 10 years ago to house a heating system that hasn't been installed yet."

Corey said the wooden buildings were hazardous and that the problems on campus needed to be corrected immediately.

"We are asking for an addition to replace those wooden buildings," Corey said.

The matter was taken under advisement by the board.

Tom Craft, associate superintendent of Pitt County Schools, told the board members that steps had been taken at the South Ayden School site to comply with the regulations of the Ayden Building Inspection Department.

Craft said some steps taken by the maintenance department included: erecting no trespassing signs on the property; secured the windows and doors in the boiler room; removed walls of old block building north of the gymnasium; metal doors were welded shut and other doors were chained; the building was cleaned and relieved of a large amount of rubbish.

Craft said the Town of Ayden had been notified that the board of education would sell the property to the Town of Ayden for the appraised value of $38,500. If the town decides not to purchase the property, the site will be put up for public sale.

The board tabled permanently the matter that teachers in kindergarten through eight have additional training in the area of reading.

Superintendent Ott Alford said there seems to be some concern and opposition to the recommendation of additional training and that it would possibly take 15 years for implementation . . . it would be best to forget the recommendation.

Alford said it might be possible that the matter be dealt with more directly within the framework of the latitude the superintendent has by the state board of education regulations wherein all certificate renewal courses must be approved by the superintendent.

Alford presented a list of facilities that are needed no later than Sept. 1, including spaces for kindergarten and new programs in art, music and for the handicapped.

The needs listed include: W. H. Robinson, two kindergarten classrooms and conversion and remodeling a part of the gymnasium into a media center; A. G. Cox, conversion and remodeling part of old gymnasium into media center; Ayden Elementary, two kindergarten classrooms and one primary classroom; Ayden Grammar, enlarge present library by taking in one additional classroom of approximately 600 square feet;

Chicod, conversion and remodeling of old agriculture shop to provide two additional classrooms; G. R. Whitfield, conversion and removeling of old cafeteria to provide two classrooms and enlarging present library; Pactolus, one kindergarten classroom; Belvoir Primary, conversion and remodeling of part of gym to provide two kindergarten spaces; Sam Bundy, approximately 600 square feet to enlarge administrative and storage areas; North Pitt, five classrooms to house JROTC, occupational handicapped program, occupational cooperative program, home economics and music.

Jack Edwards, assistant superintendent, told the board that the State board of education has adopted a resolution that the conversion of all measurement language to the International Metric System of Measurement in all phases of public education in North Carolina not later than the year 1981 and that North Carolina institutions having approved programs of teacher preparation begin to provide for the teaching of the modern metric system by the school year 1975-76.

In its resolution, the State Board said the metric changeover is desirable because of the increased use of the metric system of measurement in the United States.

Carol Toot, director of occupational education, presented the occupational plan for 1975-76 for the board's approval.

The occupational budget for 1975-76 totals $751,700, including state, federal and county money.

Occupational education programs at Ayden-Grifton High and D. H. Conley High total $98,400 each while the program at Farmville Central amounts to $110,400 and at North Pitt, $134,400.

Occupational programs at the middle schools include: Bethel Middle, $38,400; G. R. Whitfield, $36,000; A. G. Cox, $24,000; Farmville Middle, $36,000; Ayden Grammar, $24,000; and Stokes-Pactolus Grammar, $12,000.

Anticipated new resources for a handicapped program at North Pitt totals $12,000, and for a Cooperative G program amounts to $25,000. Projected new non-matching funds total $50,000. A total of $30,000 has been projected for equipment and supplies while $2,700 has been earmarked for travel expenses.

Toot told the board the use of resources had been designed to better fit Pitt County's needs during 1975-76.

ANDRE-MICHEL SCHUB. . .a young French pianist, will perform the dedicatory music Sunday at the Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University. The 8 p.m. program is open to the public and is free. Schub is first prize winner of the 1974 Naumberg Piano Competition.

Pianist Giving Sunday Recital

Parisian pianist Andre-Michel Schub will perform a dedicatory recital on the new Steinway piano at East Carolina University's Mendenhall Student Center Sunday, Feb. 9 at 8 p.m.

His program will include selections by Bach and Beethoven and the complete Rachmaninoff Opus 32 Preludes. The public is invited to attend the recital free of charge.

First prize winner of the 1974 Naumberg Piano Competition, Schub began his piano studies at the age of four with his mother, and later studied with Jascha Zayde in New York and Rudolf Serkin at the Curtis Institute, from which he graduated in 1973.

Schub performed the Liszt E flat Concerto with the American Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall in 1969 and was chosen to perform the American premiere of the Gideon Klein Piano Sonata on a CBS nationwide broadcast in the fall of 1971.

Since then, he has been a participant at the Marlboro Music Festival and last spring performed in the "Music from Marlboro" East Coast tour.

Schub was hailed as "a name to remember" by Detroit critics after a performance there, and the September, 1974, issue of High Fidelity Musical America spoke of his New York recital as "exceptional" and went on to say:

"He is a truly superb pianist. . .with a rare coloristic sense, a flair for projecting big and little masses of sound, an uncanny ear for sorting out moving strands and, best of all, a wonderful blend of dashing drama and lyrical introspection. Schub is unquestionably destined to join his generation's pianistic elite."

Two Governor's School Choices

Janet Burney and Chris Riggs have been selected as nominees of Ayden-Grifton High School for the Governor's School of North Carolina.

Miss Burney is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Burney of Ayden and Riggs is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Riggs of Ayden.

Governor's School is a six-week residential program on the campus of Salem College, Winston-Salem, for 400 intellectually-gifted North Carolina high school students.

The final selection by state-level screening and audition teams will be made by April.

Major Roll Call Votes Cast By Tar Heel Senators

By ROLL CALL REPORT

WASHINGTON—Here's how North Carolina Senators were recorded on major roll call votes Jan. 23 through Jan. 29. There were no record votes in the House during that period.

RAIL AID Passed, 59 for and 27 against, a bill providing $275 million in emergency federal aid to avert financial collapse of eight railroads serving the Northeast and Midwest. The bill (S 281) goes to the House.

Penn Central would receive most of the money, in the form of grants and loan guarantees. The aid is intended as a stop-gap measure to keep freight moving until the U.S. Railway Association, created by Congress, finishes its current reorganization of the bankrupt railroad network. The reorganization is scheduled for completion this year.

Supporters said the funding would prevent a Feb. 14 shutdown of the railroads and nationwide economic catastrophe. Sen. Lowell Weicker (R-Conn.) said that in 1973 86 percent of the public funds spent on transportation went to highways and less than one-quarter of one percent went to railroads. "I propose that we have exactly what we paid for in this country when it comes to rails—nothing," he said.

Sen. James Allen (D-Ala.) said Congress should forget federal railroad aid and let free enterprise work its will. ". . .They need to be operated on a basis where they can make a profit as a business enterprise, and not through subsidization ad infinitum by the government," he said.

Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

DURKIN-WYMAN Passed, 58 for and 34 against, a motion instructing the Senate Rules Committee to establish a procedure for resolving the disputed Nov. 5 New Hampshire Senate election. Republican Louis Wyman was the apparent winner until a recount put Democrat John Durkin ahead by ten votes. Wyman then appealed to the New Hampshire Ballot Law Commission, which named him the winner by two votes. Durkin then thurned to the Senate.

The party-line vote reflects partisan interpretations of the constitutional provision which allows the Senate to "be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members. . ." In the past, the Senate invoked its authority only when election fraud had been charged; fraud is not an issue here.

Supporters said the "extraordinary circumstances" require Senate action. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) said, "The Senate has its own constitutional responsibility to carry out, and the sooner we accept it the sooner this difficult case will be resolved."

Opponents said New Hampshire is entitled to be final arbiter in the absence of any allegation of fraud. Sen. Dewey Bartlett (R-Okla.) accused the Democrat-controlled Senate of "flaunting the apparent will of the people of New Hampshire."

Morgan voted "yea." Helms voted "nay."

WYMAN-DURKIN Rejected, 39 for and 53 against, an amendment calling for a new election in New Hampshire to resolve the Durkin-Wyman dispute (above). Following failure of this Republican-backed move, the Senate voted to send the issue to the Rules Committee.

Supporters warned that resolution by the Senate rather than within New Hampshire would set a dangerous precedent. Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) said, "What some are trying to do to New Hampshire. . .can be done to any of the other 49 states."

Opponents said that the Senate has a constitutional responsobility to act on Durkin's petition, even it its eventual decision is to send the dispute back to New Hampshire. Sen. Howard Cannon (D-Nev.) said, "I, for one, would not vote to send it back. . .when we have not even looked to see" if the Senate can resolve it.

Helms voted "yea." Morgan voted "nay."

INTELLIGENCE INVESTIGATION Adopted, 82 for and four against, a resolution setting up a special Senate committee to study federal intelligence abuses. The 11-member committee will investigate allegations that the Central Intelligence Agency has illegally spied on U.S. citizens and that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has kept files on congressmen.

The resolution (S Res 21) does not leave the Senate, although the House may decide to start a similar probe of its own. The Senate committee is also separate from the presidential commission headed by Vice President Rockefeller, which is studying the alleged CIA abuses.

Supporters criticized the CIA's lack of accountability to the Congress. Sen. Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.) said that since the CIA was formed in 1947, a series of covert changes ordered by various Administrations have turned it into "a shadow government" with a "secret charter."

One opponent, Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), said a full-blown investigation would harm the confidential character of intelligence work Thurmond said charges of abuse should be probed by the presidential commission or the Central Intelligence Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee.

Morgan voted "yea." Helms voted "nay."

RALEIGH (AP)(NCDA)—North Carolina hen markets were steady today. Supplies are adequate, demand good. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter today totaled 1,045,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — An early advance gave way to profit taking in the stock market today, leaving prices mixed in active trading.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 3.67 at 704.40, while gainers maintained a moderate lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow climbed more than three points at the opening in response to the Federal Reserve's second reduction of the discount rate in a month.

The cut in the important rate on loans from the Fed to member commercial banks, from 7¼ to 6¾ per cent, was widely viewed as a further step by the central bank toward a more stimulative credit policy.

But analysts noted that the market was meeting resistance from its own internal forces after its exceptional rise since the start of the year.

Against a background of recession and inflation worries, it appeared a good many investors were taking a cautious view of the market's chances for any substantial further gains in the immediate future.

State Mutual Investors, the most active issue on the NYSE, slipped ⅜ to 1⅝ in trading that included a 126,800-share block at 1½.

Beker Industries, a fertilizer producer, jumped 2⅛ to 18½. The company estimated 1974 earings at more than triple the year-earlier figures, and said it expected 1975 profits to double the 1974 level.

Dow Chemical, which reported sharply higher fourth quarter earnings late Tuesday, was up ¾ at 62 in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index was up .04 after the first hour.

On the American Stock Exchange, the amrekt-value index gained .18 to 74.36.

Nixon Material Has Clearance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of boxes of nonpresidential documents and memorabilia belonging to Richard M. Nixon have been tentatively cleared by a federal judge for shipment to California.

The boxes include Nixon's collections of elephant figurines, gavels, political cartoons and thousands of pieces of mail received at the White House since he resigned last August. The material has become tangled in the dispute over whether a former president can take his records with him after leaving the White House.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey on Tuesday approved the transfer of the nonpresidential materials to Nixon but said Nixon's lawyer would have to go before the U.S. Court of Appeals before Richey could sign an order releasing the boxes.

Referendum On Fee Hike

A referendum is being conducted at East Carolina University today and tomorrow by students on the question of an increase in student activity fees at the school.

The proposed fee increase is to be used to pay for new lights for Ficklen Stadium.

Installation of the new stadium lighting is already underway and the student vote would have no binding effect on the project.

SGA president Bob Lucas said "I just don't think the students were given a chance to make any decisions on this project. If the vote shows students are not in favor of the $6 per year increase ($2 per quarter) in fees, Lucas said, he will inform University officials.

The new lighting system—costing $475,000—would increase the lighting capacity of the athletic facility from 196,000 watts to 600,000 watts.

In addition to the lighting item, the referendum will also ask student opinion of a $9 fee increase for expansion of the university's intramural athletic program, and whether or not students feel they should be consulted before any increase in fees or tuition are approved.

Report Onassis Is 'Improved'

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The condition of Aristotle Onassis improved slightly today and his life is not in danger, his secretary and his brother-in-law reported.

The secretary said the 69-year-old shipping magnate's private jet was ready to fly him abroad for treatment "although the doctors do not feel that is needed yet."

The doctors said Onassis has been suffering for some time from myasthenia gravis, a progressive debility or weakening of the muscles, and that the condition has been complicated by an attack of influenza and high fever.

His wife, Jacqueline, was at his bedside, and a heart specialist was flown from New York to attend him.

Mile For Mile '74 Was Safest

CHICAGO (AP) — Mile for mile, 1974 was the safest driving year in more than four decades, the National Safety Council says.

Some 10,000 persons are alive today who would have been killed last year if motorists hadn't slowed down, the council said Tuesday.

An estimated 46,200 persons were killed in traffic accidents in 1974, 17 per cent fewer than in 1973, council statistics reveal.

Free Throws Give Bertie Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WINDSOR — Bertie's Falcons had a sharp eye for the basket in the first half, and then cried "foul" all the way home for a 79-68 victory over the Rose High School Rampants last night.

The loss was only the second for the Rampants in Division I competition, but severely dimmed their hopes of a regular season title.

Bertie shot with radar-like accuracy during the first half of the game, building up a 46-35 lead during the initial periods. In the first seven minutes of the second period, for example, they hit ten of their first 11 shots. Only in the final minute, when the reserves came in did they miss three more, giving them a quarter percentage of 78.2 and a first half mark of 69.2 percent.

In addition, they made 10 of 11 from the line in the half to help their cause along.

In the second half, however, Bertie cashed in on only six shots from the floor— a mere 12 points. But they got all they needed as the whistles blew long and loud against the Rampants. During the second half, Bertie went to the line 26 times, hitting on 20 of those trips.

Rose had a total of 27 personals, plus one technical called against it. That gave Bertie 37 total chances and they hit on 30 of them. Bertie, meanwhile, had just 18 called against it, three of those coming in the final minutes of play when the game was out of reach. Rose hit on eight of 16 shots from the line.

And overall, the Rampants hit on six more field goals—12 points.

Some sloppy play also contributed to the loss, as the Rampants didn't rebound well and a large number of turnovers.

Rose did grab the inital lead, hitting their first two shots, then getting a free throw, Donnie Shields dropped in the first basket after 10 seconds, and Tyrone Taft followed with another. Shields added a free throw for a 5-0 lead as Bertie missed on its first two shots.

But the Falcons missed only two more the rest of the period, as they pushed through eight of their last 10, and added six free throws.

Ben Pillman started it off with two from the line. Kenneth Rascoe followed with two baskets for a 6-5 Falcon lead—and they never trailed again.

Bill Davis hit for an 8-5 lead before Rose could score again. And from there, with Rascoe hitting three in a row, the Falcons outhit Rose 10-2 and built up an 18-9 lead. They stretched that to 22-11 before Rose cut it to 22-13 as the period ended.

Rose trimed it back to five points, 24-19 in the early seconds of the second period, as Bertie missed its second shot of the frame. But they didn't miss another until they were inside the one-minute mark. The Falcons shot away, boosting their lead to 15 at 36-21 on two free throws by Pillman with 4:04 left. After several exchanges, a drive by James Rankins upped the lead to 44-27, the widest spread the Falcons enjoyed. Rose came back in the final minute against the reserves to cut the lead to 46-35 at halftime.

Rose could make no headway in the third period as play degenerated to a run and shoot type game with neither team using much offense. The Rampants were constantly harrassed by fouls, as Bertie hit on 10 of 13 during the period, while getting only three field goals, Rose came within 10, but trailed, 62-47 as the period ended.

Early in the final period, Rose cut the lead to nine, 66-57, but they could come no closer. Again, Bertie used the foul line, cashing in on 11 of 13 shots, again hitting just three field goals.

After cutting the lead to nine, Rose had the chance to cut it to seven, only to see a foul called against the Rampants, and a technical on the heels of that. From there on in, it was just a question of finishing the game.

Davis led the Bertie scoring with 20 points, while Tyrone Perry had 19, Pillman had 14 and Rascoe had 12. Rose was led by Ronnie Barrett with 18, Taft with 16, Shields with 13 and Lindberg Morris with 11.

In the junior varsity game, Bertie ran away with a 63-45 victory. After a close first period, Bertie inched into an 8-6 lead. But they blitze Rose in the second frame, 29-8, and built up a 37-14 halftime lead.

The Rampants tried to rally, outhitting them 16-13, in the third period, and 15-13 in the final. It wasn't enough, however, as Bertie snapped a three-game winning streak by the Cubs.

Danny Summer led Bertie with 17, while Larry Bass and Terry Perry each had 13. Curtis Keys had 12 for Rose.

The Rampants, now 12-6 overall and 5-2 within Division I, will play host to Northern Nash on Friday. Bertie is now 6-13 overall and 2-5 in the league.

Farmville Girls Ice Tie For League Title

SNOW HILL—Farmville Central's girls moved a step closer to the Eastern Carolina Conference championship last night with a 52-32 romp over Greene Central. Greene Central's boys downed Farmville Central, 50-35, while the Ram junior varsity won, 46-41.

The win insured the Lady Jags of no worse than a tie for the title. A victory by them Friday against North Pitt, or a loss by Southern Wayne either last night or Friday, would wrap it up.

Greene Central threatened a surprise in the game, moving out to a 10-8 lead in the first period. But Farmville came back to take control and move out to a 23-16 halftime margin.

They again outhit the Ewes, 17-4, building their margin to 40-20 at the end of theird period. Both teams tossed in 12 points during the charge to the wire.

Julia Moye led Farmville Central with 18 points, while Wanda Phillips added 12.

In the boys' contest, Greene Central also slipped out into the lead after one period by two points, 8-6. But this time, the Rams didn't lost control. They outhit Farmville, 18-9, for a 26-15 lead at intermission.

The Rams continued to pull away, 10-8, to lead, 36-23, as the last period began. The Rams outhit Farmville, 14-12, to wrap up the final frame.

Tim Butts led Greene Central with 14 points, while Thomas Jones had 11. Mike Corbett led Farmville with nine.

Lady Pirates Nip Greensboro

GREENSBORO — The East Carolina University women's basketball team picked up its eighth victory of the season last night, but it had to struggle to get past UNC-Greensboro, 63-62.

The game was a fight all the way. Neither team was able to build up an advantage over the other one. DERBY FIELD LIMITED

LOUISVILLE (AP) — There may never be another 23-horse field in the Kentucky Derby as was the case in 1974. Officials of the Churchill Downs track are limiting future 3-year-old classics to no more than 20 horses, based on money earned.

Had the rule applied in 1974; horses such as Pat McGroder, with only $6,730 in earnings, Consiglioro ($10,905) and Lexico ($11,513) would not have gone to the post last May. Pat McGroder finished 10th, Consigliori 20th and Lexico 22nd.

Conley Tops Panthers; Wins 3rd Title

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD—D. H. Conley shook off a last quarter rally by the North Pitt Panthers to pull out a 54-48 victory and won their third Eastern Carolina Conference Championship in a row.

The Vikings have taken the conference crown by themselves the last two years and the year before, 1972, they were in a four-way tie for first at the end of the regular season. This time they took the title with three games to spare over North Pitt, the only team that had a shot at the championship going into the final week of the season. Last year, the Vikings won with just a game's lead over Ayden-Grifton, which went on to win the state 3-A title.

The D. H. Conley girls gave the former state champion girls' team a time of it in the early going of their game but finally fell, 42-30. The girls' game provided almost as much excitement as did the boys following it.

Conley, surprisingly enough, got the opening basket as Alice Costin blew in a shot from the corner. North Pitt came right back with a three-point play by Mary Brown to go ahead, 3-2, but Costin was hot and she hit again to give the lead back to the Valkyries, 4-3. Joy Forbes dropped in two free shots and Brown added a field goal for a 7-4 advantage and it stayed at the difference until Ella Fleming and Mary McCraken combined for a five-point play putting Conley back on top, 9-7. It was to be the last time the Conley girls lead.

Slightly over a minute later, Forbes pulled the Pant-HERS within one, 9-8, and Pat Pippens hit the first of her 10 points to give the Big Orange a 10-9 lead. Pippens added a lay-up to make it 12-9 at the end of the period.

The Pant-HERS ran the margin out to seven points in the second quarter out-hitting Conley by a meager 6-2. In the third quarter, North Pitt began to run away with it as they outshot Conley, 14-5, to double Conley's score, 32-16. Forbes hit the first two buckets of the period and Brown the last three.

The Valkyries rallied slightly in the last frame cutting the lead from 16 down to 12. North Pitt had gone up by as much as 19, 39-20 in the last quarter managed to cut it to the final spread on two buckets each by Costin and Rosa Adams.

Brown led the Panther girls with 15 in addition to Pippens' 10. Forbes had nine. Costin lead the Valkyries with 12 and McCraken had nine.

Each team shot once before a point went up in the boys' game. Neither team was awarded a shooting foul until early in the third quarter and until the fourth period, North Pitt had not been to the line. Only 12 free throws were attempted; six were made. North Pitt sank two of four and Conley four of nine.

While 21 fouls were called on the two teams, 13 on North Pitt, eight against the Vikings, only six were called in the first half. Just three players were in foul trouble, Panthers Vincent Barnhill and Donnie Perkins had three each and Calvin Hawkins had three for Conley.

The Vikings took a large number of shots in the first half, 31, and made 13 of them for 42 percent. The Panthers, however, could not seem to find the basket hitting just 26 percent of their shots. The Vikings ended up having scored on 46 percent from the floor, North Pitt 34.

Conley took the opening lead on its second shot of the game, a tap-in by Rick Mobley. Jessie Harris gunned in a shot from outside tieing it but two buckets by Melvin Williams put the Vikes ahead for good, 6-2. Harris hit again but Conley marched it with two more baskets for a 10-4 lead. Both teams made three field goals during the final three minutes of the first period for a 14-10 margin.

Abram Hardy scored for North Pitt opening the second quarter, cutting the lead to two, 14-12. Again, the Vikings put up two field goals, by Williams and Clennel Streeter. Donnie Perkins scored as the lead dropped back to four, 18-14 but suddenly Panthers were shut out. For the next 3:41, nothing the Panthers put up would fall through. The Vikings, meanwhile, were using the opportunity to run the margin over the ten-point mark to 26-14 at 1:08.

Vincent Barnhill finally broke the string with a hook shot and Perkins hit a shot from midcourt after the final horn pulling the Panthers within eight, 26-18.

The Panthers opened the second half with a trio of shots and on their fourth attempt. Barnhill sank a rebound and quickly added another as the Vikings saw their lead dwindle to 26-22. The Vikings went to work and were soon back up by 13, 35-22. Williams broke the ice on Conley's fifth shot of the third period and added a free throw. Mobley and Hawkins scored and Williams hit again with 4:57 left in the period for a 35-22 tally.

Harris got hot for the Panthers and began bombing them in from 25-feet but his shooting was not enough for the Panthers to cut more than a few points off the lead. Perkins and Harris got buckets to close to nine, 37-28 and the Panthers put it there again at 39-30 and 41-32 but Mobley's basket with :11 left put the margin back at 11, 43-32.

The Panthers pulled as close as seven, 49-42, in the last period but with 3:50 left, the Vikings started slowing things down. Conley only shot four times the while fourth period making good on all four. Perkins, Harris and James Carr did all the scoring for the Panthers in the last period getting six, four and six respectively. Carr hit on a three-point play with 14 seconds left cutting the lead to six. The Panthers could not get the ball to trim any more off the lead.

Harris finished the game with 18 points, Perkins had 12. Mobley had 20 to lead the Vikings and Williams had 13.

North Pitt closes out the season at home Friday night hosting Farmville Central while Conley takes on Southern Wayne in their season finale.

In their two previous meetings this year, the two teams had split. The Vikings won the first game, the season opener for both, on the Panther's home court. The Vikings, however, were upset in the Pitt County Invitational tournament during Christmas by North Pitt. That game did not count in the standings. The teams are almost assured of meeting again in the district tournament in two weeks.

Davidson Rips UR

By The Associated Press

East Carolina's Pirates, knocked out of the Southern Conference basketball driver's seat last Saturday night by Furman, try tonight to remain in position to overhaul the two-time champion Paladins when they tangle again next Monday.

The Pirates, 7-1 in league play behind Furman at 7-0, play at Appalachian State, winless in eight conference starts and 1-17 over-all. The Mountaineers have lost their last 14 games.

East Carolina takes a 13-5 over-all record into the game, one of two tonight involving conference teams.

The other has Virginia Military's Keydets, 9-8 over-all and winners of eight of their last 10 starts, at home against Bridgewater's College Division Eagles, 6-13.

Davidson's Wildcats moved back into contention Tuesday night for a home-court spot in the championship tournament's opening round March 1 with a 103-79 romp over Richmond's Spiders, who had won an earlier meeting 67-61. It was the only game for league teams.

The victory boosted the Wildcats to 2-4 in conference play and dropped the Spiders to 4-4. Davidson is now 5-14 over-all, Richmond 5-11 against all opposition.

Davidson built a 42-37 halftime lead with a 23-8 edge off the boards, then cracked Richmond's pressing defense for easy layups to pull away after intermission.

Larry Horowitz scored 29 points, Greg Dunn 16, Jay Powell 14 and Eppa Rixey 13 for the Wildcats. Dunn also pulled down 10 rebounds and Powell had 11 assists.

Richmond's Bob McCurdy, the nation's No. 3 major college scorer, led the Spiders with 23 points, but it was his lowest total in 12 games. John Campbell had 20 points and Kevin Eastman 18 for the Spiders.

Henderson Has Thing For Playing Cavaliers

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Tom Henderson has a thing about the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The 6-foot-3 Atlanta Hawks rookie guard is averaging 12 points a game. But against the Cavaliers, Henderson pumps in 25 points a game.

"I don't know why I do well against Cleveland," Henderson said after leading the Hawks to a 111-97 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday night. He scored 27 points.

"Maybe they bring something out of me," the Hawks' No. 1 draft choice from the University of Hawaii said.

Henderson scored 14 of his points in a third-period surge that saw Atlanta break away from a one-point halftime lead, 49-48, to an 83-71 margin going into the fourth quarter.

The Hawks broke a four-game losing streak, posting only their second victory in their last seven games.

"We've got to win to get in the playoffs," said John Drew, another Atlanta rookie. "Before tonight we figured we have to win 21 of 28 to make it. Tonight was a good night to start."

Drew wound up with 20 points and 17 rebounds.

In other NBA games Tuesday, Philadelphia toppled Buffalo 111-105 in overtime, New York romped past Los Angeles 109-94, Chicago stopped Portland 102-90, Golden State nipped Houston 107-105 and Phoenix edged Washington 90-89.

Warriors 107, Rockets 105

A 38-point performance by Rick Barry was just enough as the Golden State Warriors weathered a Houston rally that just fell short in the game's waning moments.

Calvin Murphy paced Houston with 24 points while Cliff Meely added 21.

Bulls 102, Trail Blazers 90

Bob Love burned the nets with 38 points and the Bulls grabbed 32 rebounds off the offensive boards to romp past Portland. It was Chicago's fourth consecutive victory and their 12th in the last 16 games.

76ers 111, Braves 105 OT

Philadelphia blew a 19-point second period lead, then had to scramble from behind to tie Buffalo and send the game into overtime. Fred Carter scored six of his 35 points and Billy Cunningham made two big plays in the extra session for the 76ers' victory.

Knicks 109, Lakers 94

Guards Earl Monroe and Walt Frazier scored 20 points apiece as the New York Knicks broke a two-game losing streak.

Lucius Allen paced the Lakers, who now have lost three straight, with 23 points.

Suns 90, Bullets 89

The Phoenix Suns came from behind in the second half and nipped Washingtom behind Dick Van Arsdale's season-high 30 points.

Elvin Hayes paced the Bullets, who led by 15 points early in the game, with 22 points.

Salary ($60,000) Wasn't Enough

By JOHN LUNDQUIST
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former tight end John Mackey, who earned more than $60,000 a year salary during the height of his career, thinks he wasn't paid enough.

An attorney for the National Football League asked Mackey Tuesday if $61,832 base pay and for preseason and postseason games with the Baltimore Colts "wasn't a large sum of money."

"Not if he was the best tight end in the NFL — whatever he received wasn't enough," replied Mackey.

The 33-year-old Los Angeles resident, now an athletes' agent, wound up a tedious two days on the witness stand. He and 15 other present or former players and the NFL Players Association are suing the league over alleged antitrust violations they say keep players in servitude without enough freedom to bargain with other teams.

The Rozelle rule is named after NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. It gives the commissioner the right to assign players or draft choices when two teams can't agree on compensation for a club that loses a player who plays out the option year on his contract and signs with another one.

Mackey said his salary with the Colts, where he starred for nine years, was puny compared with what some athletes get.

"Some basketball players get $100,000 at a younger age than I was," Mackey told defense attorney John French.

French persisted that Mackey did all right for a former history major at Syracuse.

Maryland, State Get Wins

By The Associated Press

Atlantic Coast Conference basketball is so tough that nationally ranked teams had to withstand rallies by league opponents to win home games by fairly narrow margins Tuesday night.

Sixth-ranked North Carolina State needed David Thompson's 39 points to win 92-89 over Clemson, which was seeking its sixth straight victory.

Fourth-ranked Maryland sank eight free throws in the last minute and one-half to shake off Virginia 86-79.

N.C. State coach Norm Sloan said, "If we get to playing two good halves in a row, we'll be good. We had a real good second half against Maryland and a good first half here. But when you're that far ahead, you shouldn't ever let it get that close. David Thompson was fantastic tonight."

In the home game against Maryland last Saturday, the N.C. State Wolfpack was down 55-37 in the first half, and 57-43 at intermission before losing 98-97. Against Clemson, State led 18 points at halftime and by as much as 22 points in the second half before the Tigers started to come back on the shooting of guard Skip Wise and forward Colon Abraham. Both are freshmen.

A basket by Wise with eight seconds to go moved Clemson within one point. But Mo Rivers sank two free throws to clinch the victory.

N.C. State won the game with a 17-2 spurt in the last five minutes of the first half.

"We looked like the Clemson teams of old, just standing around," said coach Tates Locke. "Our kids just weren't ready. We didn't respect their fast break. They're the quickest team in the league."

Wise finished with 22 points and Abraham with 12. Wayne "Tree" Rollins also had 16 and David Brown 14 for Clemson.

Maryand now is first in the conference on a 6-2 record, and is 15-3 in all games. N.C. State and North Carolina are second at 5-2, and Clemson is next at 5-3. In all games the records are N.C. State 14-3, North Carolina 12-5 and Clemson 11-8.

Maryland led by 17 points in the first half. But Virginia pulled to within 78-75 with 2:10 remaining to play. Lucas, who led Maryland with 25 points, then missed a one-and-one free throw. But the Terps converted four consecutive bonus situations from the foul line. Lucas made four of these eight points.

Maryland made 22 of 25 free throws in the second half.

The Terps' three-guard offense scored 59 points. With the 25 by Lucas, Brad Davis had 24 and Moe Howard 20.

Andy Boninti was the leading scorer for Virginia with 22. Wally Walker scored 16 of his 20 while pacing the Cavaliers' second-half rally.

Virginia is 2-6 in the league and 9-8 overall.

There is one game for ACC teams tonight, Wake Forest at Duke. Both are run-and-gun teams, and the Wake Forest Deacons beat the Blue Devils 122-109 at home two weeks ago. In this rematch Wake Forest will be looking for its first victory on the road in the ACC. It has lost four such games. Wake Forest has beaten Duke five times in a row over the last two seasons.

Saints Rip Ayden-Grifton

DUDLEY—Southern Wayne High School romped to a trio of wins against Ayden-Grifton High School last night. Southern took the boys' varsity game, 73-34, won the girls' contest, 45-38, and took the junior varsity, 60-38.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton had a chance to play spoiler, ending Southern's hopes of a share of the title. But Southern ran out a 10-6 lead in the first period, and although it stayed close the rest of the half, they surged to the win. Both teams pushed through 13 in the second period, giving the Saints a 23-19 edge at intermission.

Southern outscored the Chargerettes, 10-7, in the third period, boosting its lead to 33-26. Both then hit 12 in the final period.

Cheryl Armwood led Southern Wayne with 14 points, while Vivian Best added 10. Audrey McCarter led Ayden-Grifton with 14.

In the boys' game, Southern romped away to an 18-8 lead in the first period as the Chargers went through the woes of a night where nothing went right. They missed their shots, they turned the ball over, and they were beaten on the boards. Leading scorer Willie Williams got only three points, and failed to connect from the floor.

Southern built its halftime lead to 37-12, and ran out a 58-17 lead going into the final period. The Chargers outhit them in the final period, 17-15.

Michael Oliver led Southern with 20 points, while Ronald Bass had 11 and Anthony Williams had 10. No one hit double figures for the Chargers.

Democratic Economic Program Now Taking Shape

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As confrontations between President Ford and the Democratic leaders of Congress move closer, the long-promised Democratic economic program is beginning to take legislative form.

President Ford has challenged congressional Democrats to match their criticism of the administration's economic initiatives with specific programs of their own.

In response, House Speaker Carl Albert last week called in committee chairmen and asked for pledges that economic and energy legislation would be reported out by specified dates.

Among the first to respond was the Banking Committee, which drew the assignment of shaping legislation to nudge interest rates downward. It is now near the end of hearings on bills to force banks to extend loans for low-and middle-income housing and certain other purposes.

The panel has set a target for a House vote before the end of February on the bill, which is strongly opposed by the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve Board.

The committee also has scheduled subcommittee hearings to begin Thursday on various proposals to aid the depressed housing industry. Among the proposals are ones to inject federal money into the mortgage market and to lower interest rates.

The committee has a goal of reporting to the House by early March some form of legislation to make it easier for a prospective home-buyer to obtain a mortgage.

Some Democratic-directed committee activity has been reaction to Ford proposals rather than affirmative movement along alternate lines.

The Ways and Means Committee, for example, is bringing to the floor a bill to suspend for 90 days the authority that Ford used to raise the tariff on imported oil.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., contends passage of this bill is a necessary prelude to any Democratic legislation to reduce demand for imported petroleum. If the presidential plan for control by price raising gets well under way, it will preempt the field, Ullman said.

Ways and Means also is finishing its version of a tax-cut bill designed, like Ford's, to stimulate buying and thereby the economy. However, the developing Democratic version is directed more toward the lower end of the income scale.

Ullman's proposal would include no tax rebate for individuals with over $30,000 income. Ford's plan would allow a rebate of up to $1,000 for a family with $41,000 income and over.

At the lower end of the income scale, Ford's program would give a taxpayer at the $5,000 level a refund of $12. Ullman would give a taxpayer at the $5,000 level a total tax break of about $260.

The committee expects to report its tax-cut bill to the House by the end of February, then move into energy taxation.

Appropriations subcommittees are working their way through lists of proposed cutbacks and postponements submitted by Ford. The consensus is that nothing like the $17 billion in reductions he advocated will be approved — an outcome that would swell the prospective deficit beyond the nearly $52 billion forecast by Ford.

Ford already has received one rebuff on a spending-cut proposal. Most Republicans joined Democrats on Tuesday in propelling through the House, 374 to 38, a bill nullifying proposed increases in the cost of food stamps to low-income recipients. The Senate is expected to act soon.

State Reduces Interest Rate

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Council of State lowered Tuesday the rate of interest charged banks on state funds placed with them on certificates of deposit. The rate fell from 7¼ to 6¾ per cent.

The state rate is based on the yield available on U.S. Treasury obligations. Lower yields on short term treasury securities prompted the action.

Timber-Cutting Suit Brought

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP)—Weyerhaeuser Corp. has been sued for $750,000 on a charge that the company cut timber on a woman's land after she had rejected several of the firm's offers for timber rights.

Georgia Humphrey, described in the suit as a "poor, uneducated black widow," filed the suit in U.S. District Court. The suit said Weyerhaeuser cut timber on 33 acres after Mrs. Humphrey refused them rights.

Weyerhaeuser officials refused comment.

PTA MEETING

The Agnes-Fullilove sixth grade PTA will meet Thursday night at 7:30. All parents are encouraged to attend. A brief program of music will be presented, followed by visitation of rooms.

The Education and Labor Committee will have to move fast to meet its goal to send an expanded public service jobs bill to the House in February. The Public Works Committee has a little more time, but still a difficult goal to produce legislation speeding up construction of public works by mid-March.

Further down the line are an array of energy conservation measures and a decision as to whether standby controls on wages and prices are necessary.

Chancellor To Go To China

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, D.W. Colvard, will be among 21 heads of colleges and universities in the United States who will visit China in the spring.

He is believed the only educator from the Carolinas to be invited.

On his three-week visit he will tour college-level educational institutions in the People's Republic of China. He will pay for the trip himself.

ON DEAN'S LIST

Five Pitt and Martin County students were named to the dean's list at Livingston College in Salisbury for the first semester.

They were Michael Grimes Staton of Greenville; and Michael Williams, Clifton E. Little, Abram Manning, and Leamon Peele, all of Williamston.

Americans In A-Bomb Blasts Being Hunted

By ALICE Z. CUNEO

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Japanese survey taker Hiroski Yamada is traveling through the United States in search of American citizens who were exposed to the atomic bombing of Japan in World War II.

There are an estimated 800 American citizens who survived the atomic blasts. They include Americans who were in Japan during the war and were unable to leave for its duration, Japanese who since the war married American citizens, and a small number of war orphans adopted by American couples.

Armed with old U.S. Air Force spy photos of Hiroshima, a 1945 telephone directory, and detailed street maps listing the name of every person living in every house at the time of the bombings, Yamada is spending a year collecting health and other data for the Atomic Energy Commission. His work could lead to legislation to help bomb survivors with their medical needs, and provide scientific data useful in the event of contamination from a nuclear power plant accident.

San Francisco's health director Francis Curry said the survivors range in age from 28 to 78. About 80 per cent of the American bomb survivors are women between the ages of 40 and 45, according to Yamada's estimates. Some were directly exposed to the bomb, others were in a peripheral area, and some are the children of pregnant women exposed to the bomb.

The biggest concentration of bomb survivors lives on the West Coast, Yamada said, with about 125 known survivors in the Los Angeles area, 99 in San Francisco, some in California's San Joaquin Valley and Sacramento, and a sprinkling in Denver, Salt Lake City, Chicago, Florida and Michigan.

The Committee for Atomic Bomb Survivors, based in Alameda, Calif., believes there are about 400 survivors living in Hawaii, but Yamada said Hawaiian medical officials told the AEC no survivors live there.

"Being a bomb victim generates a great deal of psychological tension, such as fear of cancer and 'being known,'" Yamada said. "They think of it as a sickness and fear their employers or insurance companies will discriminate against them.

"And they don't want to remember. One woman came in and started to tell how she and her family were having breakfast when there was a sudden flash. She remembers trying to free her leg from a roof timber and fire starting to break out. She remembers her mother telling her to run and not try to save the family because she would only be killed with them.

"Often, I find tears rolling from my eyes."

Yamada said one Sacramento woman, a bomb survivor who gave birth to a mentally retarded child, was "bitter" about her experience and blamed the bomb for the child's difficulty.

In Japan, bomb survivors are protected through legislation which provides them with extensive free health benefits. The Atomic Bomb Survivors Committee is pushing programs in both the California legislature and in Washington which would provide similar medical aid, bilingual medical personnel, and doctors familiar with the medical problems of bomb survivors.

Many American bomb survivors are strapped with huge medical bills, often totaling thousands of dollars a year, stemming from treatment of bomb-caused diseases, Yamada said, and even those who have access to government medical services are frustrated at their inability to obtain satisfactory medical care.

Greatest American Concern? Energy!

CHICAGO (UPI) — What were people most concerned about in 1974 ... Watergate, President Ford's full and absolute pardon of Nixon, the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst, inflation, recessions and depressions, the fuel shortage?

Well, all of these certainly. But surprisingly enough, according to Virginia Stenberg, who heads the Library Research Service for Encyclopaedia Britannica, the greatest concern for thousands of Americans was energy: specifically solar energy and how to convert and heat their homes by a solar system.

Last year more than 50 per cent asked for more facts on energy related topics, not only solar energy but wind power, geothermal energy, future of nuclear energy and even methane gas, Miss Stenberg said. It was apparent that many people were looking for solutions to current problems, she added.

The information most frequently sought through the years, according to Miss Stenberg, has been tips on buying a house and advice on how to start a small business. However, in 1974, perhaps because of soaring housing costs and interest rates, requests for housing data were negligible. But, as unemployment began to increase, more people than ever before asked for help on how to start their own businesses, Miss Stenberg said.

Many people were concerned about Watergate. It was the seventh most asked about subject, Miss Stenberg said.

Two new subjects at the top of the list for 1974: the food crisis and information on solid waste disposal. In the last quarter of 1974 a real surge of questions came in on how to prepare a job resume, and from the younger generation, questions on the great depression. They wanted to know what happened in the early 1930s and how it happened. The "depression mystique" for the young was suddenly becoming a cold hard reality.

THE PHARAOH HOUND, a 5,000-year-old breed once found in ancient Egyptian tombs, is suddenly finding new popularity. (UPI Photo)

Ancient Hound Again Popular

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — You can see them pictured in ancient Egyptian tombs—sleek, grey-hound-like dogs with curled tails and pointed ears. These days you might also see them in your neighborhood park.

They are called pharoah hounds, a breed of dog that's been around for some 5,000 years but suddenly finds its popularity spreading far and wide.

Malta has named the pharaoh its national dog. Queen Margrethe of Denmark has one. In four years 125 have been registered in the United States. A Canadian pharaoh hound club has been organized.

Britain's pharaoh club, whose patron is Princess Antoinette of Monaco, met not long ago to discuss the approval by the British Kennel Club of championship class "standards" for the pharaoh.

"Without question the pharaoh hound is the oldest domesticated dog in recorded history," club secretary Monica Still told the meeting.

She described statues and paintings on tombs dating to 2300 B.C., and beyond, by which scholars came to know the dog of ancient Egypt's kings. None of them dreamed that the dog still lived.

"But this dog is the same today as it was then," Miss Still said. They certainly look alike, those ancient Egyptian depictions and the 300-odd pharaohs now in Britain.

They have the same grey-hound-like deep chest, pinched waist and long slender legs. Both ancient and modern dogs are stockier than a greyhound, with a blunter face and towering, pointed ears.

The modern pharaoh comes in only one color—a rich reddish chestnut, splashed with white on chest and toes. An ancient letter dating from Egypt's 19th dynasty talks of "the red long-tailed dog" in terms every modern pharaoh owner recognizes.

The dog of the pharaohs owes its preservation not to Egypt, but to Malta.

Phoenician traders, so the theory runs, brought the pharaoh to the isolated Maltese islands before the time of Christ. It has been known on Malta for 2,000 years.

The Maltese call it the "kelb tal fenek," or rabbit dog. So skillfully has the pharaoh hunted rabbits on Malta, and especially on the sister island of Gozo, that the Maltese carefully kept its breed pure.

"That's what attracted me," said Mrs. Rita Sacks of Huntington, N.Y., who founded the American Pharaoh club in 1970.

"I've been in dobermans for 25 years, and I've seen what too much show breeding can do," Mrs. Sacks said. "Here was a breed that was pure and unsullied."

Mrs. Sacks is now the enthusiastic owner of "about 10" pharaohs. At the British club meeting she took part in a panel discussing a pharaoh owner's "great responsibility to keep faith with 5,000 years of true breeding."

Pharaoh owners stress their dogs' antiquity by naming them for ancient Egyptian kings and queens.

"We have Ramses and Seti and Nefertiti and Cleopatra," Miss Still said, "and we have Fred"—Fred of Safi, brought from Malta by the pharaoh club treasurer.

Mrs. Sacks said the pharaoh's new popularity was not entirely because of its lithe beauty and distinctive individuality.

"There's something magic about them," she said. "It's an overworked word, but a pharaoh has charisma. They're just simply marvellous dogs."

Travel By Horse MoreDangerous

NEW YORK (UPI) — Horse travel in 1901 was nearly eight times more dangerous than travel by auto today reports The National Enquirer.

According to Capt. Paul Latoures of the California Highway Patrol, accidents involving horse-drawn vehicles killed 3,150 travelers nationwide in 1901.

That year, some 26 million horses traveled about 12 billion miles. This is a death rate of 32.0 per 100 million miles traveled.

Today, the death rate nationwide from auto accidents per 100 million miles traveled is 4.27, Capt. Latoures said.

Rebates Push Auto Sales But Makers Take Loss

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Cash rebate plans pushed late January car sales dramatically above improved mid-month levels, but deliveries for the entire month are still expected to hit a 14-year low.

Sales from Jan. 21 through Jan. 31, the first period measuring the full effect of $200 to $600 rebates the auto makers are offering on some new models, were estimated at 232,000. They were up 42 per cent from mid-January, but down 10 per cent from the same period in 1974.

The total includes figures reported Tuesday by three of the four major car companies and an estimate for Ford Motor Co., which was to release its results today.

Financial analysts said the auto makers are taking a loss on every car covered by the rebate program in order to clear out record inventories of unsold cars.

"This whole thing is a life-jacket type of operation," said Arvid Jouppi, a financial analyst in Detroit. "Had there been no rebates, sales would have been even more disastrous in January."

The latest figures marked the second straight gain in 10-day sales. Deliveries in mid-January, when the rebates started, were up 41 per cent from early January, when sales were the lowest for the period on record.

While auto executives attributed the sharp sales gains in the last two January periods to the rebate plans, they conceded the industry had not snapped out of its worst slump since World War II.

Total January sales were estimated at 457,000 cars, off 17 per cent from a low 550,907 in January 1974, when fuel shortages sent sales tumbling.

The January estimate would put sales of U.S. cars at their lowest level for a January since 1961 and mark the 16th consecutive month that deliveries have lagged behind year-earlier totals.

Analysts say sales will improve gradually during the remainder of the year, even after the rebate plans end March 1. The companies are expected to replace the rebates with a barrage of dealer contests to boost sales this spring.

Despite the sales promotions, analysts say the traditional spring upturn will bypass Detroit this year and the auto makers will wind up with either sharp profit drops or losses in the first quarter.

Meanwhile, tentative production schedules indicate auto output this month will be the lowest in 14 years. Some 254,000 of the industry's 684,000 blue collar workers are on layoff this week.

GM showed the strongest performance in late January, with sales of 123,900, a 51 per cent gain over midmonth and a 6 per cent increase over the same period in 1974. It was the first time GM sales were ahead of the year-before period since last September.

For the month, however, GM sales were 231,982, a 5.5 per cent drop from the year before to its lowest January level since 1961.

Chrysler sales of 34,543 were up 17 per cent from mid-January but trailed the same 1974 period by 32 per cent. For the month, Chrysler sales were 70,619, off 30 per cent from last year and its poorest January in 11 years.

American Motors had sales of 10,804 in the latest period, up 58 per cent from midmonth but off 23 per cent from a year ago. AMC sales for the month were 20,309, down 37 per cent from last year.

Ford sales were estimated at 63,000 for the period, a 38 per cent gain from mid-January but an 18 per cent drop from a year ago. Estimated Ford deliveries of 134,000 in January would be off 23 per cent from last year.

Non-Prescribed Pills A Waste?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nonprescription sleeping pills —the kind advertised widely on TV — have no more medical effect than a peppermint, says Dr. Arthur Raines, an expert on the effects of drugs on the nerves.

"Most of the sleeping pills you can buy over the counter in a drugstore are a waste of money," Dr. Raines said. "They usually contain an antihistamine as the sleep-inducing drug," he explained.

New Guidelines For The Labels

NEW YORK (UPI) — Under a new Food & Drug Administration rule, a manufacturer who adds vitamins, minerals or protein to a product must now list those nutrients and their amounts on the label.

John W. Gage, food nutrition marketing manager for Hoffmann-La Roche Inc., says the reason for these new guidelines is that women asked for more nutritional information.

HEARING PROBLEMS

DETROIT (UPI) — An estimated five million American youngsters suffer hearing problems that are not detected, according to Dr. A. Bruce Graham of the Henry Ford Hospital. Children who seem stupid or retarded at school may simply be unable to hear properly, Dr. Graham said.

Question Re-Raised Of TV 'Inspiring' Killers

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Are killers inspired to murder because of television shows and movies?

The long-debated question arose again when the Los Angeles Slasher murders began after a "Police Story" drama about a killer of skid row derelicts.

The Los Angeles Police Department says there is no connection between the TV show and the actual murders.

So does the show's producer. Joseph Wambaugh, the ex-cop and novelist who is consultant on "Police Story," agrees, but he says he has seen criminals imitate TV and movies "dozens of times."

It was the story of a policeman's wife, played by Michael Learned, who turned to drink. Her husband, William Shatner, was investigating murders of three skid row winos.

On Nov. 30, a skid row inhabitant was beaten almost to death. On Dec. 1, another was discovered with his throat slashed. It was the first of nine similar murders — seven in skid row and the last two in Hollywood.

"We cooperated completely with the police department, setting up a screening for them to review," said Stanley Kallis, executive producer of "Police Story."

"We were completely exonerated of any connection with the Slasher murders; in fact, we received a commendation for the excellent handling of the subject."

Kallis said the TV killer was a wino who was killing others as punishment to himself — "murders leading to suicide."

The script, written by Jerry Ludwig, was based on an actual case, but details were altered.

"The show was really about the problem of a neglected wife of a policeman," said Kallis. "There was only a suggestion of violence, and that came at the first. We showed a bottle raised over a man's head, but didn't show the impact."

Asked if he thought there was a connection between the show and the Slasher murders, Wambaugh replied, "I hope not — my God. I doubt it, really.

"The Slasher started on skid row, but he has now moved out of there, probably because it got too hot.

"TV thrives on shooting, fights and violence to which the network applies the euphemism 'action.'" said the one-time police detective and author of "The New Centurions" and "The Blue Knight."

Wambaugh said he had seen TV and movie crimes repeated in real life "dozens of times.

Magnate Plans Race In 1976

RALEIGH (AP)—One hat is in the ring for the race for Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1976—drugstore magnate Edward O'Herron of Charlotte said he will "take the plunge."

The 59-year-old chairman of the board for Eckerd Drugs told friends of his plans in a letter last week. The Associated Press obtained a copy of the letter.

The letter said his candidacy was unofficial and O'Herron didn't say when he would make a public announcement. He served three terms in the state House, from 1951-55, but hasn't held public office since.

Big Drop In Textile Jobs

RALEIGH (AP)—Employment in the textile industry in North Carolina in December was almost 10 per cent below a year earlier.

It was 263,300, a drop of 9.8 from the previous December. It also was a drop of 2.1 per cent from November.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

There are many reasons why it might not be advisable to draw trumps at the first opportunity. At times, the trump suit constitutes the only means of transportation between declarer's hand and dummy. Consider this hand from a regional tournament in Florida.

It was dealt in a team match, and at both tables South became declarer at a contract of four spades. Despite the fact that the high cards were evenly divided between the two sides, South's distributional assets made the spade game a reasonable undertaking.

At both tables, West led the king of diamonds, ruffed by declarer. At one table, declarer drew three rounds of trumps, then led a club. West won the king and played another diamond, forcing declarer again. South was now down to only one trump. He led another club, but East, Mrs. Edith Kemp, one of the country's great woman players, refused to take her ace! Declarer was helpless. He could get back to his hand only by ruffing a diamond or a heart, but that would run him out of trumps. So declarer reluctantly had to settle for nine tricks—six spades, one club, and the ace and king of hearts.

William Seamon was the declarer at the other table. After ruffing the opening diamond lead, he immediately led a club. Now, it was the defenders who were helpless. West won the king of clubs and played a second diamond, but it was to no avail. Declarer ruffed and continued another club. East had to win the ace or lose it (declarer could come to his hand with a spade and ruff a club with the king of spades), and not even a third diamond could embarrass declarer. He simply ruffed in his hand, drew three rounds of trumps, running everybody out of spades, and then had four clubs to cash for an overtrick.

Last Fall's Flu Vaccinations Said Helping

Persons who took flu vaccine last fall are, for the most part, avoiding the disease now, family physician Dr. Jack Wilkerson said yesterday.

The vaccine used last fall does seem to be quite effective for the Port Chalmers strain going around now, he said. "Tests show it's more than 80 per cent effective," he said, "and in medical terms, that's very good, because hardly anything works all the time."

He said rest and measures to prevent complications are about all that can be done medically to fight influenza once it's contracted. "There nothing we have that will touch the virus itself," he explained.

They've Spent Error By Bank

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. David Tomasino thought they finally had enough of a nest egg to fix up their home and have a baby when $2,000 showed up in their bank account a year ago.

Thinking the money had been deposited by an elderly aunt shortly before she died, they spent it over the next eight months.

Then the Mid-America Bank told them it had inadvertently deposited someone else's money in their account and demanded that the couple return the $2,000.

"We don't have it. We spent it. We fixed up the house, my wife quit work and we had a baby," said Tomasino, a fireman. "It wasn't our mistake, and we shouldn't have to pay for it."

He said he and his wife honestly thought the aunt, his godmother, had deposited the $2,000 as a gift to them.

"We asked her about it, and she just smiled. That's the way she was. She was always doing things like that, so we didn't think anything of it," Tomasino said.

Late last year, when officials at the bank discovered the error, they quickly pulled the last $500 from the Tomasino account.

That triggered the current legal battle between Tomasino and the bank. Tomasino is suing to recover his $500, and the bank is suing to recover the full $2,000.

Both claim the other was wrong — the bank for negligently putting the money in the wrong account and Tomasino for spending money that was not his.

"But I thought it was mine," said Tomasino, who said the bank is responsible for his current debts.

The bank, however, sees it differently.

"The bank is not the father of the child," Mid-America attorney Morton Schmidt said.

"It wasn't like we were trying to cheat the bank," said Tomasino. "We never tried to hide the money or anything. We left it in the account. It's not like I was stealing. It was an honest mistake, but I don't think I should have to pay for it."

Farmville Bd....

once again for some kind of preventive efforts to give the young people alternatives to drugs. Mrs. Don Wrought commented that recreational programs will not work, that the local churches should be involved in any efforts in this direction.

James Taylor, a member of the local Senior Citizens group, presented a petition from older citizens of South Farmville who would like to see the town purchase the Second Christian Church property, so both the church and parsonage buildings could be used as community gathering places. The Commissioners' said they are working on the matter.

The group also pointed out the need for a swimming pool in the southern part of town, "when other funds are available."

Water and Light Department Director J. A. Wooten said the Commissioners are invited to a meeting to be held in Greenville soon for the utility situation to be discussed with our legislators. Among matters to be discussed is whether small towns will go to the 60-day cutoff system recommended by the State Utilities Commission to private electric companies. Now a Farmville resident's power is cut off 20 days after his bill is not paid.

The Rev. Parvin spoke on behalf of the Farmville Ministerial Association in favor of the extension to 60 days. He suggested that water and electric bills be separated, so one may have running water in his home if he is able to pay the water bill, even if his electricity is cut off for non-payment. He also suggested that the Commissioners institute a study on the feasibility of revamping Farmville's tax structure, so so much of the revenue does not come from utilities. He said he understands about 50 per cent of the town's revenue now comes from utilities profits and that this appears to be a regressive tax, one that makes it so poor people pay higher "tax" in proportion to their incomes than do more well off householders.

A public hearing was conducted on the paving of Perry Street from the Railroad right of way to Wright Drive and also Cotton Street from George to Field Streets. With no opposition, both projects were approved.

The Commissioners accepted a matching grant from the Land and Water Conservation Fund for the purchase of the Farmville High School Athletic Field and authorized the town administrator to apply and sign documents involved in the purchase.

Tiling of two ditches which carry town water was approved. These are a ditch on the properties of Janie Johnston and Lucy Johnston Rumley and one on the line between the homes of Bobby Everett and Bill Thomas.

Martin reported he has given the MidEast Commission a list of possible projects that could be carried out for the improvement of Farmville if moneys were received through the job-creating Emergency Jobs and Public Assistance Act. Most of these have to do with improvements to the public parks and cemeteries in town.

The Commissioners gave the go-ahead to the Building Inspector and the Town Attorney to do whatever is necessary to see that buildings condemned in Farmville are either demolished or repaired quickly after condemnation has been completed. Specific mention was made of a house across the street from H. B. Sugg School which has been condemned and considered a hazard for several months now.

Seventh Store Of Harris Chain Opens

TARBORO—The seventh store in the Greenville-based Harris Super Markets Inc. chain was officially opened here today with ribbon cutting ceremonies involving store representatives and Tarboro officials.

Participating in the grand opening at 2 p.m. were owners Durward and Ed Harris and overall meat supervisor Andrew Humphrey, all of Greenville, and Tarboro city personnel including the mayor and city manager.

The new facility, located at the corner of Trade and Church Streets here, is the largest of the Harris stores with some 24,000 square feet of sales area, according to Durward Harris.

Harris said that the Tarboro store, which will be managed by Kenneth Wainwright of Farmville, offers an improved sales layout that is more convenient for the shopper and in addition to the normal range of merchandise, will carry a full line of gourmet foods.

Allen Cale of Tarboro will serve as assistant manager while Bill Phillips will manage the meat market and John C. Lewis will head the produce department. Both Phillips and Lewis are from Tarboro. Donnie Waters, produce manager from the Tenth Street store in Greenville, will be in Tarboro for several days to assist in the produce section, it was noted.

Parking spaces for 132 customers will be offered at the Tarboro store, Harris said.

Harris Super Markets Inc. operates four stores in Greenville, one in Ayden, and one in Bethel. Durward Harris serves as president while Ed Harris is vice president of the company.

Red, White And Blue For Bicentennial

By BROOKE W. KROEGER

And, to the relief of many who attended the January display of home furnishings, it showed itself in more than bright red, white and blue.

True, manufacturers at the market touted what consumers might expect in the year before the nation's 200th birthday: red, white and blue vinyl and plastic kitchen groupings, liberty bell and spread eagle lamp bases, "star-spangled furniture sales" and bean bags bearing Holly Hobby decals.

"I'm afraid by July the American people will be so sick of red, white and blue that they'll want to vomit when they see it," one furniture manufacturer's advertising representative said.

Some manufacturers and designers, however, managed to win with Americana themes. Their designs seemed to beat the cynicism which may accompany efforts to celebrate America's revolution in a post-Watergate era.

Two Chicago interior designers, Kirkman Fischer and Don Kastelyn, created Bicentennial-style spaces in a special mart display of room groupings prepared by the American Society of Interior Designers.

Fischer's room, a library, combined mahogany side chairs and a matching sofa, a pier chest, tea table, writing table, Pembroke table, cigarette table and lowboy in a room decorated in deep blue wallpaper with wine-red accents. A Colonial-style portrait hung over the white mantle.

"That period happens to be the period I like best," Fischer said. "It has some formality but an informal formality. I certainly am 'gung-ho' for the Bicentennial theme as long as it isn't made commercial.

"Those (colonial) designs are still good. They are among the very few things to come along over the years that have endured. They aren't gimmicked up or fragile.

"I hate quaint American junk. When they try to adapt great American designs, they come up with abortions," Fischer said.

Kastelyn designed an apartment-scaled Queen Anne master bedroom, using a muted rose red carpeting and a coordinated print canopy, document-blue wallpaper and white accents.

"I think the Bicentennial will stimulate sales," Kastelyn said. "Certainly we have much to be proud of in classical American designs. So many are coming out brashly—(trying to approximate) the flag and stars and stripes forever. I think its kind of a spoof on our country — rather than something rich and traditional."

Kroehler Manufacturing said it would probably introduce a "limited edition" for its Bicentennial contribution, with a specially designed fabric.

Kincaid, a longtime maker of early American furniture, showed its "Pilgrim '76 line," a heavy, country-style rendition of colonial-type furnishings.

"Stores have never properly displayed colonial furniture," Leo Kahn, Kincaid sales' vice president said. "They always show it with cheap frills which young America can't relate to."

Kincaid displayed the new line with vivid red or royal blue bedspreads in bright red or royal blue, accented by ginger jar lamps with white pleated shades.

Reagan Papers To Be Donated

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Ronald Reagan will give about 25 tons of gubernatorial and personal papers to the Hoover Institution, the largest private archive in the United States.

Hoover Director W. Glenn Campbell also said that Reagan, twice governor of California, will become an honorary fellow on its staff.

Campbell said 1,700 boxes, including minutes of cabinet meetings, correspondence, speech drafts, personal notes, legislative drafts and campaign documents, will be moved later this month from Sacramento to Stanford University, where the institution is located.

Cardiac Survivor Has Another Hurdle To Cross

EDITOR'S NOTE — Death is the first symptom of heart arrhythmia. One of every four coronary survivors dies within a year because of it. A survivor, AP Writer Leif Erickson, tells how a unique research project at Stanford University saved his life.

By LEIF ERICKSON
Associated Press Writer

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — I had survived two heart attacks in seven years, and here I was again, flat on my back in the coronary care unit.

This time I wondered why — because I felt fine. No chest pain, no symptom, anywhere.

I didn't know it then. But I was close to sudden cardiac death.

My heart's pumping beat control had gone haywire with what is called ventricular arrhythmia.

I couldn't feel it.

But by blessed luck I am alive today because I was among the first 45 heart attack survivors recruited in a pioneering cardiac research study at Stanford University.

Seven weeks after I suffered my second coronary last Aug. 20 — at age 64 — a treadmill electrocardiogram (EKG) test detected a dangerously abnormal extra beating in my heart — the arrhythmia.

In the Stanford Cardiac Rehabilitation Program, directed by Dr. Robert F. DeBusk, I first had gone on the treadmill only three weeks after my heart attack.

The Stanford project is one of the first major U.S. research studies using exercise EKGs so soon after a heart attack. Dr. DeBusk, 36, a 1964 Stanford Medical School graduate, returned as an assistant professor in 1973 with a grant-winning proposal to establish the cardiac rehabilitation program.

That same year, the first treadmill EKG follow-up study on coronary survivors was reported by a team of Swedish doctors. Dr. DeBusk said the Swedish study inspired him to conduct his.

Similar U.S. studies are in progress at Emory University in Atlanta, George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and at Case-Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

Most cardiologists do not risk a treadmill EKG for their patients until six weeks or more after a coronary.

I had sailed through the tests of pulse rate, blood pressure and EKG patterns at three weeks and five weeks after my coronary.

The test at seven weeks was my third on the treadmill, checking my heart's recovery and capacity to withstand walking-type stress.

Until that day I was hiking a prescribed mile each day in 20 minutes. That's a brisk three-mile-an-hour pace.

I felt great. I expected to go back to my job the next week.

Instead I was hauled in an ambulance to the Stanford Medical Center's coronary care unit, about five blocks from the research treadmill.

And I became a walking, working, surviving statistic supporting the Stanford research study's important finding: 20 of the 45 heart attack survivors developed significant heart arrhythmias from three to 11 weeks after their attacks. Most occurred between seven and 11 weeks.

Arrhythmias are sneaky.

The only symptom is death.

The American Heart Association reports that 600,000 of one million heart attacks are fatal in the United States each year. Of the 400,000 coronary survivors, one of four dies suddenly within a year because of ventricular arrhythmia.

Dr. DeBusk said arrhythmias develop in coronary attack survivors because scar tissue in the heart muscle fouls up the electric induction circuits controlling the heart's precisely synchronized pumping action.

The fatal effect is called ventricular fibrillation. The left ventricle — pumping oxygen-enriched blood to the brain and the body — collapses into fluttering jelly.

Blood flow stops. And so does life.

Once discovered, most arrhythmias can be abolished and normal heart rhythm maintained by medication.

Quinidine sulphate does it for me. Like a diabetic relying on insulin, I swallow 300 milligrams of quinidine every six hours. My last treadmill EKG showed a steady, normal pumping beat and improving heart strength.

I'm back at work. My doctor's prescription — beyond the quinidine pills — now calls for a daily mile-and-a-half walk in 30 minutes. He forbids second helpings at any of my low cholesterol meals.

"People recovering from coronaries constitute the largest known group of people who are at high risk of sudden cardiac death," Dr. DeBusk adds. "But there is a far larger group with unrecognized heart disease who also die of fatal arrhythmias where the first symptom is death."

Dr. DeBusk said the best way to detect coronary disease and arrhythmia symptoms in the vulnerable population of American males over 35 to 40 is with treadmill EKG checkups every six months.

On my first two ambulance trips to the coronary care unit — after my coronaries in 1957 and 1974 — excruciating pain had flooded my entire chest and flowed down my left arm to my finger tips.

This third time I was alert, curious and bewildered — because there was no pain at all.

Doctors and nurses clustered around my bed.

All their eyes were aimed at the portable TV-sized monitor screen behind my head. My heart beat pattern was bouncing there from electrodes fixed on my chest.

The chief nurse poked an intravenous needle into the crook of my left elbow and pumped in a shot of lidocaine, a heart stabilizing drug.

Within seconds, the monitor screen showed a steady, regular heart-pumping beat.

The coronary unit crisis crew of doctors and nurses drifted away.

Dr. DeBusk smiled and said, "I think maybe we saved your life."

I reached out to shake his hand.

I squeezed it very hard.

Mandalay Isn't Kipling's City

By KENNETH F. ENGLADE

MANDALAY, Burma (UPI) — Anyone who visits this delightful, quaint city in north central Burma better just put down to poetic license Rudyard Kipling's playful flying fish and the sun coming up like thunder out of China 'cross the bay.

Fact: there isn't a flying fish within 600 miles of Mandalay. Fact: there isn't a bay at Mandalay either. Fact: the sun does rise out of China, more or less, but it comes up over a range of jade colored mountains that many people consider prettier than a bay.

But even if Kipling mistook the Irrawaddy River for a bay and a flash of sunlight on the water for a flying fish, Mandalay is still a great place to see.

It's the former Burmese imperial capital and the religious center of the country and it literally is studded with golden pagodas, bronzed Buddhas and hundreds and hundreds of little temples.

There are only a half dozen Qesterners resident in Mandalay, including two Americans. There aren't many motor vehicles except for World War II surplus Jeeps that are kept scrupulously clean.

The main mode of travel is by horsecart, the owner of which delicately hangs a strip of burlap behind the horse to catch droppings before they fall on the blacktopped streets.

The city, which has about half of a million people, smells like animal dung and woodsmoke—a not unpleasant odor compared to the fume-clogged cities of much of the rest of the world.

Rising out of the gentle plain on which the city is built is a range of mountains, which fades into another range, which fades into another range, and so forth—all the way up into China.

Mandalay is only 500 miles north of Rangoon, the country's capital, but it is much farther in every way but distance.

The ancient Burmese believed Mandalay was the center of the universe. There are tens of thousands of orange-robed monks in Mundalay, living in austere monasteries in the hills around the city.

There is one rise just on the edge of the city known as Mandalay Hill where Buddha is believed to have actually walked. There are no roads up the hill and anyone who wants to visit the numerous temples and pagodas must be prepared to climb the 1,000 feet or so.

Scattered throughout the city are small neighborhoods where craftsmen ply their trades as they have for hundreds of years.

In one group of bamboo and thatch huts, a group of men fashion bronze Buddhas, working from clay molds following the "lost wax" method.

In another, youths crouch over large sheets of sweet smelling teak wood carving murals for a new state-run hotel.

In another neighborhood young girls operate looms weaving two-foot-long sarongs (called longees) with Japanese silk. It takes a girl 20 working days to complete one longee.

There's another area where workers make the gold leaf that the faithful plaster on the pagodas.

And, right near the center of town, there is the mile-square former royal palace. Where the palace used to be is surrounded by a 20-foot-tall red brick wall, broken at regular intervals by shining white gates. The whole thing is itself surrounded by a 50-yard-wide moat.

The only problem is, the palace isn't there any more. The buildings were wood and most of them were destroyed by British and American bombing toward the end of World War II.

Water Corp. To Receive FHA Check

Officials of the Eastern Pines Water Corp.—a non-profit group—will receive a $150,000 check from the Farmers Home Administration Friday at a loan closing ceremony here.

The $150,000 is a 100 per cent loan for construction of a 100,000 elevated water storage tank for the Eastern Pines water system.

Construction on the tank, to be located at Portertown, has already begun. Foundations for the tank have already been installed and erection of the tank itself should begin next week. Completion of the tank should take about 30 days.

The five-per cent, 40-year loan—the fourth loan made to the corporation by FHA—will be paid from revenue of the corporation.

The Eastern Pines Water Corp, serves a large area East and South of Greenville.

Rivers and Associates are engineers for the project.

Some Costly Valentines

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Valentine's Day is usually marked these days by the exchange of relatively simple gifts such as cards, flowers or candy. But at one time or other, reports Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins, some pretty expensive presents have been passed out on Feb. 14.

Records show, for instance, that in February 1537, England's Princess Mary (known better as "Bloody Mary" when she later became Queen) gave her Valentine, George Mountejoy, a brooch of gold and rubies. Diarist Samuel Pepys (1633-1703) noted that the Duke of York gave his Valentine, Arabella Stuart, a jewel costing 800 pounds.

In February 1661, Pepys complained that he had to pay out 40 shillings for seven pairs of fancy gloves for his Valentine, Martha Batten. On a later Valentine's Day, Pepys grumbled at the cost of giving his wife a turkey-stone set with diamonds but added "... it is fit that the wretch should have something to content herself with."

Hard Drug Use Up In Small, Medium-Size Cities

EDITOR'S NOTE — Federal officials say hard drug use is rising in small and medium-sized cities. In Jackson, Miss., one of the problem cities, the average drug defendant is 22, white, and often college-educated.

By BILL WINTER
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Karen was 22 when she stopped wearing a bra.

"My dad just really blew his cool," she said, smiling weakly and disengaging a brunette curl from her wire-rimmed glasses.

Karen's father had been furious over her abandonment of the bra but had been unaware of her deepening involvement in hard drugs.

Karen — not her real name — is among thousands of men and women who have been arrested on drug charges in recent years in towns and cities of less than 250,000 population.

Beginning at age 16 with pills stolen by a friend from his physician-father's medical bag, Karen became a human sponge, soaking up every drug she could buy or trade sex for, from crystal methadrine (speed) to heroin, morphine, dilaudid and LSD.

Her middle-class, suburban family remained oblivious to her problem although Karen, now 20, says she literally "floated through my last two years of high school.

"I used to have a little kit with a syringe and spoon and needle and shoot stuff in the bathroom at school," she said. "We had to wear long-sleeved shirts even in the middle of summer because of the bumps on our arms."

Karen's drug involvement grew through her association with a group of young couples, in their middle or late twenties, most of the men clean-cut businessmen, the women mostly homemakers with children.

City officials fumed when the federal Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention published a report recently which said the city of 154,000 population was suffering an epidemic of heroin use.

That study, conducted in 10 test cities across the nation, concluded that use of hard drugs has radiated from the nation's major population centers into dozens of middle-sized cities such as Jackson.

The test cities, besides Jackson, were Boulder, Colo.; Austin, Tex.; Des Moines, Iowa; Eugene, Ore.; Greensboro, N.C.; Macon, Ga.; Omaha, Neb.; Pensacola, Fla., and Racine, Wis.

In Jackson, as in the other cities, the drug problem is reflected in a skyrocketing rate of arrests. State drug enforcement statistics show there were only 26 drug arrests in the city from 1964 through 1968, but there were 150 cases in 1971 and more than 500 in 1973.

Last year there were 574 arrests.

Fairly and other drug enforcement officials felt the federal study overstated the heroin problem. However, most agree that widespread use of other opiate drugs — some as physically devastating as heroin — has, in fact, permeated the nation's medium-sized cities and is moving into rural areas.

"There has been an increase in hard drugs, as well as marijuana, throughout the United States," said James R. Bland, federal Drug Enforcement Administration regional director in New Orleans.

"It is not only spreading to cities of 250,000 or more. It's spreading to the small communities throughout the United States. Where five years ago there were relatively no drugs available in small communities ... there are drugs available now."

Lounging on a couch at Jackson's Crossroads Services, Inc., the 14-month-old, federally funded drug treatment center which helped her shake her drug habit, Karen told her story.

Through the summer and fall of 1972, after the first of her two arrests for possession of drugs and drug paraphernalia, she had shot heroin regularly. Getting it, even in Jackson, was not difficult.

"These two guys had an apartment in Jackson ... they were dope dealers," she said. "They had plenty of heroin. I don't know where they got it or how, but they had a lot of it."

It was the apparent availability of heroin which, in part, led to the Office of Drug Prevention's conclusion that Jackson was in an epidemic of heroin use.

Critics of the federal finding said it rested heavily on seizure of 30 pounds of street-grade heroin in Mississippi during the past two years. That's enough for 810,000 individual doses worth $16 million.

Dick Boyles, federal Drug Enforcement Administration director in Jackson, said those seizures were indicative of a trend toward use of smaller cities as relay points for heroin because of stiffer enforcement pressures in large cities.

Despite the statistics, Fairly and Charlene Andrews, director of Crossroads Services, spoke of the reluctance of officials in small cities to admit that a drug problem exists.

"You're not going to get many local officials to admit their cities have a heroin problem, because the chamber of commerce would be all over their backs," Fairly said.

Mrs. Andrews echoes that feeling.

"We had a girl brought in by her minister and mother ... an eighth grader who said only a few in her class had not tried drugs.

"We had a meeting with parents and left it open for follow-up ... but we found the parents simply could not believe that this was happening ... they just let it alone and think it will go away."

Camping Out In Winter Has Its Advantages

By ALAN FREEMAN

OTTAWA (AP) — By limiting camping activities to the summer months, people are not taking full advantage of the environment around them, says Stewart Guy.

The 23-year-old Quebec City native has been camping during the winter for four years, hiking through the woods, sleeping out and cooking food over wood fires at temperatures often below zero.

"I prefer it to summer camping. You don't have the bugs. I like the crisp mornings and you don't have to go so far to be in the middle of nowhere."

Guy said provincial and national parks tend to be crowded in the summer but have few visitors in the winter.

Mastering the challenges of winter camping provides considerable satisfaction, he said. A keen sense of unity develops among the people camping together.

"You depend on each other for companionship and for getting through the experience."

Winter camping demands considerable preparation and knowledge of basic camping skills and he recommended that first-timers go with someone already experienced in winter camping trips.

Guy prefers cross-country skis to take him through the woods, but said snowshoes are sometimes more useful. While skis allow a hiker to cover longer distances faster, snowshoes are better for crossing terrain with thick bush cover.

Proper clothing is essential to avoid frostbite, Guy said. Several layers of light clothing provide more warmth than heavy clothing because they trap air that provides needed insulation.

"And you can take off one layer easily and put it back on when the temperature changes."

He suggests a heavy, down-filled nylon parka, worn over a number of interior nylon vests and sweaters. Nylon warmup pants are best for the legs.

The camper should look for a winter campsite sheltered from the wind, "an area where you're well-protected and where you can reflect heat," generally near the base of a cliff or a large rock.

The camper digs a hole in the soft snow until he reaches a hard base. He then lines the hole with spruce boughs from trees in the area.

The experienced camper spreads a camper mat of foam rubber on top of the spruce. Using trees, he erects a lean-to which can be covered with more spruce or with polyethylene sheeting.

Guy said he learned how to prepare a winter camp from Indians in the Mistassini reserve of northwestern Quebec last winter.

He and his friends carry most of their food on their backs in metal frame packs. The Indians taught him to use bannock — a combination of flour, baking powder, salt and lard.

There are edible plants in the winter forest. Rock tripe and certain mosses can be eaten after they are boiled twice as can the buds on yellow birch trees.

With a simple snare of branches and a short length of wire, rabbits and other small game can be caught.

Of course, there are dangers. Frostbite can affect exposed parts of the skin and there is a danger of getting lost. But with maps and compasses the winter hiker should not encounter trouble, Guy says.

Promise Kept: Built Chapel

By J. FRED THOMPSON
Portales News-Tribune

DORA, N.M. (AP) — During World War II Mrs. Antonia Chavez made a vow that she would build a chapel and dedicate it to the Virgin Mary if her five sons, who marched off to the military, returned safely.

Now this promise has been carried out with the dedication of the St. Mary's Church of Dora.

Mrs. Chavez is the mother of 13 children, and when her five eldest were called for military duty, she had no objection to their serving their country. She only prayed that they would not have to kill, or be killed.

And then it was that she made her vow, and her prayers were answered.

In order to carry out the full terms of the vow, the chapel was to be built by the hands and with the financial help of members of the immediate family, and this has been done. It has taken 30 years to realize the dream.

Mrs. Chavez was born at Santa Rosa, N.M., in 1887. Although she is 87 years old she is active and helps with housework in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Johnny Paiz here, where she has lived for the past five years.

Mrs. Chavez has, in addition to the 13 children who have all married, 50 grandchildren, 113 great-grandchildren and 10 great-great-grandchildren.

Every member of the family with the exception of the tiniest tots has contributed in some way to the building and furnishing of the church.

The children, the grandchildren and even a few of the great-grandchildren worked on it, and Johnny Paiz donated the land.

Many brought lava rock for the altar in small quantities from Mrs. Chavez' birthplace near Santa Rosa; one son brought a door; another brought carpeting; others supplied the skills to build the beautiful small chapel.

The religious objects and symbols came from Clovis, some from relatives there and some from keepsake collections that are very old and meaningful. California relatives sent money.

Mrs. Chavez herself bought the statue of the Virgin Mary by squirreling away a few cents at a time over a 30-year period.

The church will be the setting for mass once a week when a priest from Portales visits. At other times it may be used for meetings of religious groups.

Mrs. Chavez speaks no English, but through her daughter made the statement that she selected Dora as a site for the church because she feels it had the greatest need for such a structure.

She said, "The church will be for the use of the community. Any meeting of a religious nature may be held there by any group. The door will never be locked.

Elephant Daily Drinks Scotch

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Samorn, an elephant in the local zoo, drinks more than a bottle of Scotch whisky every day as a health precaution.

"When the weather is bad, elephants can catch chills and this is serious," said elephant keeper Hero Nuus. Apparently the Scotch gives Samorn's circulation a kick and helps keep the pachyderm warm.

New Oil Riches Bring Wealth, Inflation To Iran

EDITOR'S NOTE — Oil-rich Iran is pouring its profits into new roads, schools and power plants. Yet AP Special Correspondent Hugh Mulligan found its economy plagued by inflation. His reporter's notebook records ups and downs in Iranian life.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

TEHRAN (AP) — "Beard ... moustache ... special," Reza, my taxi driver, kept saying over and over. He was learning English at the rate of three words a day to get a better job in the oil fields. Those were his words for the day.

"My father," he said over the blaring horns of a noon traffic jam, "has retired as a night watchman on a 9,000-rail-($135)-a-month pension. This is twice what he made when he worked. Iran is now rich, like America. My older brother makes 1,500 rails ($223) a month driving a forklift truck. He left school in the sixth grade to care for my uncle's camels."

Iran is rich, all right. Like Reza, the whole country is hellbent on hurling itself into the 21st century. With oil pumping $2 billion a month into the Shah of Iran's treasury, schools, roads, hospitals, air bases, ports, steel mills and nuclear power plants are going up all over the country, which is roughly the size of the United States east of the Mississippi.

Everyday life gets a little less primitive for Iran's 32 million people, still 60 per cent illiterate, but changes often come so fast the police have to use force to make villagers abandon their palm-frond shacks and move into the 300,000 new electrified and centrally heated homes going up each year.

Tehran, population 3.3 million, is building a subway, an airport for the supersonic Concordes and block after block of high rise banks and office buildings. It remains, perhaps, the largest city in the world without a sewage system — its open-ditch drainage canals are used illegally to carry off garbage.

Its pollution, mostly from the rickety old buses, and its traffic congestion are the worst in the Middle East. In a land pumping six million barrels of oil a day, gasoline sells for 25 cents a gallon.

But a new Chevrolet, made in Iran, costs $11,000, and there is a five-year wait for delivery. A Mercedes-Benz or a Cadillac, both dear to the image of Iranian bureaucrats, costs $62,000, which includes 500 per cent import duties.

Since helping to increase world oil prices fourfold, the Shah of Iran has had his own problems with inflation at home, now running 20 to 25 per cent annually.

Iranians, fanatical TV watchers, receive both the government channel and U.S. Armed Forces Network. By summer, they will have color TV. A color set costs $2,000; black and white, $600; "Naked City" and "Perry Mason" top the popularity charts, but right behind is "Norad, the Electrician," a locally produced comedy show.

Helicopters are a daily, almost hourly sight in Tehran, ferrying off heads of state to see the Shah. But camels still come to town, especially near March 21, Iranian New Year's Iran is one of the few countries in the world where income taxes are going down — about $100 a month less for most workers and none at all for professional military personnel.

After Saudi Arabia, Iran is the world's second largest oil exporter, yet its crown jewels, which include one half of the world's cut diamonds, serve as backing for 75 per cent of the national currency. When Empress Farah Diba wants to dazzle with a bauble, like the egg-sized Star of Light diamond, she sends off an order form to the Central Bank, where the jewels are kept along with the Peacock Throne, set with 26,733 emeralds and rubies.

"Iran's agriculture," says an American agronomist, "is absolutely stagnant and food consumption is rising 10 per cent a year. People want more and can afford more but the Shah has got to do something to get the farm economy going." Since decreeing his "white revolution" from the throne, land reform has broken up old estates, which sometimes were as big as Switzerland.

But big agricultural cooperatives have left the small farmer, who still produces 90 per cent of Iran's agricultural products, little better off than before. Many are abandoning their farms in the 60,000 villages for better jobs in the oil fields.

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are rug dealers all in a row in Tehran's busiest of Persian markets near the British Embassy. All are prominent and prosperous members of Iran's old and large community of 250,000 Jews.

"Thank God for the Shah of Iran," says Abraham Cohen, one of six brothers in the rug trade. "He gives Israel its oil; he gives us the freedom to live in peace."

Iran also has a quarter-million Christians and large regions of Kurds, Baluchis, Turks, Azerbaijanis and Armenians, most of whom do not speak Farsi, the native language, but give meaning to George S. Kaufman's famous quip: "One man's Mede is another man's Persian."

Now, amid the oil bonanza, all are seeking a corner of paradise, a Persian word meaning "the King's domain."

Food No Longer Big Enticement

KLADOVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Once the main attraction of a resort used to be the quantity of food offered to guests. Some provided as many as five generous meals per day on a board and lodging basis.

Times change, however. Tourist settlement "Gorjak" on the banks of Danube is now offering facilities in which one could lose up to one kilo (two pounds) daily under the supervision of doctors.

There are more than 1,000 students enrolled in graduate classes on the St. Louis campus of the University of Missouri.

How to get more meat for your meat dollar

Price per portion, not price per pound

No matter what cuts of meat you buy, here's an important rule to follow. It's the price per serving that counts, not the price per pound. If boneless round is $1.49 per pound it's a better buy than short ribs at 98¢ per pound. Because you can get 4 servings out of the boneless round at about 38¢ apiece. Whereas you might only get two servings out of the short ribs at about 49¢ apiece.

Of course the size of a serving really depends on your family's individual needs. But three ounces of cooked lean meat is the most common definition of a serving. And two is a satisfactory amount for small children, or older people with small appetites.

In planning your shopping list, the following guides to portions per pound can help.

Purchase	Yield:
1 lb. boneless low-fat meat, such as lean meat cubes or roast.	3-4 portions
1 lb. boneless fatty meat	2-4 portions
1 lb. small-bone meat, such as blade roast or chops.	2 portions
¾ to one pound bony meat, such as spareribs.	1 portion

Tips from the A&P Butcher.

Meat you buy at special prices is an investment that pays off when you use some and store the rest in your home freezer for future use. To make the most of this opportunity to save, here are some freezer tips.

1. Wrap meats in single meal, or single portion quantities.

2. Put two sheets of paper between pairs of shaped patties or steaks, so that they can easily be separated while still frozen.

3. Wrap the meat tightly in moisture and vapor-proof paper. Lay the meat in the center of the wrap, bring the long edges together, fold over and over, butcher's style flat against the meat, fold ends of the wrap over and over to make a tight seal. Tie firmly or seal with freezer tape.

4. Label each package with contents and date of storage. Be sure to use the meat before the recommended storage time is up.

5. Freezer storage times are 6-8 months for beef and poultry, 6-7 months for lamb, 3-4 months for pork and veal, 1-3 months for ground meat and cooked meat and 1 month for sausage.

Students Whale-Watch Along California's Coast

By JOHN M. LEIGHTY

"Whales at three o'clock," shouted husky Jake Houck from his vantage point on the pilot deck of the worn fishing vessel.

About 30 students, ranging in age from their early 20s to late 50s, focused binoculars and cameras on a passing pair of migrating gray whales off Point Pinos.

Dozens of whales were spotted during the five-hour cruise sponsored by the University of California Extension. One of them surfaced within 30 feet of the boat for a spectacular closeup. It then flipped its flukes into the air and disappeared into the depths.

"They stay close to the coast, probably because they're used to feeding in shallow water," said Houck, an authority on marine mammals. "It's also possible that they obtain navigational aids from the bottom."

Watchers from ship or shore can spot the southward bound gray whales along the Central California coast from January through March, and some stragglers can be seen almost any time of the year.

Once a whale is spotted, it will usually surface three or four times for air within a short period before making a deep dive. When its flukes, or flippers, fly up for the dive, it usually means the whale is submerging for a lengthy period—about eight minutes.

Travelling at speeds of 5 to 10 miles per hour, the 40-foot adult gray whale can average about 120 miles a day. Knowledge of its habits at sea is hazy, but biologists believe it feeds little while migrating to its Baja California breeding grounds. It does mate en route, however, and probably takes time to rest.

Pregnant females lead the southward migration from the Bering Sea and give birth to their calves in the warm waters of the Baja lagoons. Adult males come next followed by immature females and then immature males.

The northward migration follows virtually the same pattern after the calves are born in Baja, with newly pregnant females leading the herd back to the feeding grounds off Alaska.

The gray whale, protected from commercial whaling since 1946, feeds on little creatures known as aphipods, a shrimp-like bottom dweller about 1-2 inches long.

"We don't know exactly how they get this food," Houck admitted. "But it appears they disturb the bottom enough to scare them up and then suck them in like a vacuum cleaner."

He said this was the way the stranded baby whale Gigi seemed to eat. Gigi, fed in captivity by San Diego biologists, would lie on her side and suck squid in the left side of her mouth while jetting water out the other, Houck said.

"They finally had to free her because she was eating them out of house and home," he said. "She was eating a ton of squid a day and putting on 150 pounds a day near the end. Her grocery bill was something fantastic."

Although some species of whales are near extinction, the gray whale numbers about 11,000 along the West Coast and the population has been essentially stable since 1967. It wus once also abundant around Korea but has been virtually wiped out there.

"The gray whales, given protection, have been able to make a fabulous comeback," Houck said.

There were distant spouts from whales seen as the boat moved slowly past the sea otters basking in the seaweed off Monterey's Cannery Row at the end of the day's outing.

Visitors to the area can catch several different cruises from Fisherman's Wharf to watch the annual migration for as little as $3. However, dress warm, carry extra clothing and remember that seasickness can occur.

Sen. Jackson Has Funds To Begin Big Campaign

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relying mainly on donations of between $1,000 and $3,000, Sen. Henry M. Jackson has built a $1-million campaign chest to finance the start of his drive for the White House.

Jackson is scheduled to announce his candidacy officially Thursday night during five minutes of television time following the CBS movie.

The Washington State Democrat then plans to begin a mass mailing of 400,000 computer-addressed letters to ask for the hundreds of small donations he needs to qualify for a federal subsidy next year.

Under the new campaign finance law, the government will provide federal matching money to presidential primary candidates who have shown they can raise, in donations of no more than $250 each, a total of $5,000 from each of at least 20 states.

Jackson's year-end campaign finance report shows he raised $1.1 million last year, and had more than $900,000 left in cash after paying his staff of 10 and travel and office expenses. A spokesman said he grossed another bundle a few days ago at a $250-per-person dinner attended by some 1,200 persons.

Most of the money Jackson raised last year would have been illegal if it had been given after Jan. 1, when a new federal law took effect limiting the size of individual campaign donations to no more than $1,000.

Another member of the $1-million club is Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen of Texas, who has said he will announce officially in a month or two whether he will run for the Democratic nomination.

Bentsen's committee took in more than $600,000 in the last three months of 1974, which was added to a leftover $400,000. He had about $650,000 left at the end of the year after heavy expenses.

Most of Bentsen's money came from Texas, in contrast to Jackson's money which came from donors in many states. But Bentsen also relied heavily on large donors, receiving 128 gifts exceeding $1,000 each.

The largest single donor to any possible presidential campaign last year was William Clay Ford, president of the Detroit Lions. He gave $21,000 to former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy's third-party committee, and canceled a $9,000 outstanding loan the day after Christmas for a total of $30,000.

McCarthy had $38,600 cash on hand at the end of the year. Another dark-horse Democratic hopeful, former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, reported raising $49,000 in the last three months of 1974, for a total of $62,000 during the year. He had $28,430 left as of Dec. 31.

Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, who announced his Democratic candidacy recently, reported raising $41,208 in late November and December, and ended the year owing more money than he had on hand. Carter owed $26,486 and had $16,377 in cash at the end of December.

FBLA Unit Sets Drive

The Future Business Leaders of America Club at D. H. Conley High School is sponsoring Project HELP this week in an effort to raise money for the March of Dimes.

Activities include collections made by the homerooms each morning, a jail being set up during Tuesday night's ball game for students to pay to have their friends put in jail and others paying to get them out, and films being shown in the school auditorium Wednesday by Capt. Gerald Fabish of the East Carolina University Air Force ROTC.

Project HELP means "Health Education Leads to Progress."

"We as FBLA members look forward to the day when birth defects can be erased and maybe through out efforts that day might be a little closer," stated Miss Tyson.

Old Highways To Be Safer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major effort is under way to make old highways safer for travel, according to Donald B. Stabler, president of The Road Information Program.

The Federal Highway Administration has obligated $121 million under a new program for specific safety-oriented projects such as installing left-turn lanes, improving rail-highway grade crossings and widening and rebuilding existing roads, Stabler said.

A Nationwide Shortage Of Good Chefs Prevails

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Unemployment may be on the increase, but not for anyone who can cook expertly, preferably in several languages.

Even the old saw that women may be good cooks but men make great chefs appears to be going the way of the ten-course meal.

The want ads in the student newspaper of the Culinary Institute of America reflect the nationwide shortage of skilled restaurant personnel at every level from executive chef to breakfast cooks, salad makers, waiters and waitresses.

Many potential employers are "tablecloth restaurants" threatened both by fast food franchisers and by inflation that makes eating out for many Americans a choice between hamburgers, pizza or chicken-in-a-basket, instead of a leisurely, well planned and prepared meal.

Hospitals and other institutions, country clubs and hotels also face personnel problems.

A survey of last May's graduating class showed an average of four job offers per graduate at an average salary of $700 per month. The highest number of offers per graduate was eight, and the highest salary, $1,500 per month.

To meet the demand the institute, the only private, nonprofit post-high school institution in the United States that specifically trains chefs, currently offers both morning and afternoon-evening courses all year 'round.

The students' average age is 19, but some are older and about 18-20 per cent attend school under the G.I. Bill of Rights.

One student is a Westchester County, N.Y., aerospace engineer, divorced and in his 40s, who requested anonymity. Laid off from his job after 20 years, his training was too specialized to qualify him for other engineering jobs.

"I'd cooked for myself all my life and I enjoy cooking," he said. He hopes to become a restaurant manager.

Only 14 per cent of the 1,300 students are women, but they keep up with their male classmates.

"It's hard (physically) but there's nothing I can't do," said Nancy Immel, of Newtown Square, Pa. "Anything a guy would need help with, I would, too. I have to learn to compete with guys for jobs. I think most of these people are used to the fact we're here. They're even used to the fact we don't want help."

But another woman student, who didn't want to be named, said some male classmates and instructors ask why she does not give up career aspirations for marriage and motherhood.

"It has been an apparent man's world for generations. But women have been very important in this industry," Barbour said, citing Mrs. Roth and Mrs. James Rowland Angell (wife of the president of Yale in the 1940s), who was instrumental in taking the first mortgage on property occupied by the school in its original headquarters in New Haven, Conn.

He also ticked off a list of other women who founded and-or run famous wineries and restaurants and added that women for some years have held jobs as hotel catering managers.

Student Gail Cantor, 18, of Montreal, who graduates in May, says she might establish her own catering service.

First year student Dianne Stokke, 31, a native of St. Paul, Minn., and owner of a company that sells window display materials, has another idea:

"The display company pretty much runs itself—and for years and years I have had these marvelous fantasies about having my own restaurant," she said, adding that she gets up around 3 a.m. five days a week to commute to classes from her Manhattan apartment.

Chef-instructors are equally dedicated. C. Arthur Jones, who once worked at New York's famous Ritz-Carlton hotel, drives 60 miles round trip daily to his job.

Clement Grangier, 70, executive chef at New York's famous Le Pavillon restaurant from 1959 to 1966, says he is semi-retired, but teaches four or five days a week, from 8 a.m. until 2 or 3 p.m.—"because I like to teach. At Pavillon, I worked 15 to 16 hours a day."

While liberal arts colleges face declining enrollments, the institute remains confident.

"We in vocational education aren't going to have the troubles in attracting students to this field and this school that liberal arts schools do," said William Primavera, director of development.

"One of last year's graduates walked out of here and went to La Grenouille (a fashionable French restaurant in New York City) at $16,000 a year.

Nassau To Host Royal Visitors

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip will arrive here Feb. 20 to begin a Caribbean cruise aboard the royal yacht Britannia, The Bahamas Information Service reported.

The yacht will leave Feb. 21 on the voyage which will include calls at Mexico and Jamaica.

LONGEST ROUTE

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Amtrak's longest route is the 2,431-mile San Francisco Zephyr services from and to Chicago. The shortest run is the 37-mile Diesel Car service between Hartford and New Haven, Conn.
