

Kissinger Sounding Out Peace Outlook In Israel

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Israel today to sound out his prospects for arranging another disengagement between the Israelis and Egyptians.

Hours before he flew in from a refueling stop in Frankfurt, Israel's main opposition bloc demanded that the government of Premier Yitzhak Rabin hold new elections before offering to surrender strategic Sinai territory in talks with Kissinger.

Opposition leader Menahem Begin said if Kissinger asked Rabin's government to trade the Gidi and Mitla passes and the Abu Rudeis oilfields for an interim agreement with Egypt, then Rabin should tell Kissinger: "We must go to the people and hold another general election."

Kissinger will be in the Middle East for 10 days, and unless he concludes that the situation is completely hopeless, he plans to return to the area about March 10 to work out details of an Israeli-Egyptian agreement, officials said.

The alternative to his step-bystep diplomacy is resumption of the Geneva peace conference in a crisis atmosphere, the officials continued. This would pose the thorny question of representation for the Palestinians and other explosive issues.

President Ford, Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and Cabinet members went out to Andrews Air Force Base in freezing weather Sunday night to see Kissinger off. Ford said goodbye with a warm endorsement obviously intended to counter recent congressional criticism of his foreign policy mainstay.

At Andrews, Ford clasped Kissinger's hand and said, "You have my strong support and the blessings of 213 million Americans. We look forward to the kind of success you have achieved in the past."

Ford characterized Kissinger's journey as an "extremely delicate and extremely important mission" and said they would be in daily communication. He and Rockefeller walked Kissinger to his jet and Ford said, "Henry, good luck, God bless you."

The display of support from the administration follows recent congressional criticism of Kissinger's authority and methods of negotiations. Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., said Kissinger has too much power and should relinquish one of his posts as secretary of state and head of the National Security Council.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., criticized Kissinger for not keeping Congress informed of his diplomatic maneuvers.

On the current round of talks the hard bargaining will begin Wednesday in Cairo when Kissinger confers at length with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Diplomatic sources say Sadat has not even begun to specify the concessions he is prepared to make for another Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai.

State Department officials said a follow-up trip would probably be made in March. They also said that if Kissinger were unable to narrow the gap between Egypt and Israel, this would be his "last run" at a step-by-step approach to a Middle East settlement.

In sequence, Kissinger will visit Israel, Egypt, Syria, Israel again, Jordan and Saudi Arabia, then fly to Bonn and on to Geneva for two days of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

After additional stops in London and Paris and probably in Zurich to see the Shah of Iran, his current plan is to return home on Feb. 19.

Former CIA Director Admits He Failed Tell Senators All He Knew

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA Director Richard M. Helms admits he intentionally failed to tell Senate committees all he knew about CIA work in Chile and withheld information about the Nixon administration's desire to have the Marxist government of Salvador Allende overthrown.

Helms' admission was made in secret testimony last month before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. A censored version of his statements was released Sunday.

Meanwhile, the Rockefeller commission investigating domestic spying by the CIA planned to resume hearings today with testimony from James J. Angleton, former CIA counterintelligence chief, and Retired Vice Adm. William F. Raborn Jr., another former CIA director.

Angleton retired from the CIA late last year after allegations the agency kept secret files on 10,000 Americans. Ra-born left the agency in 1966.

Helms appeared before the Foreign Relations Committee Jan. 22 to explain various apparent discrepancies in previously sworn statements regarding CIA operations abroad and at home.

"I felt obliged to keep some of this stuff, in other words, not volunteer a good deal of information," Helms said of his testimony in 1973 before the Foreign Relations panel and a subcommittee on multinational corporations.

Helms denied he ever knowingly lied to a congressional committee, but said, "If I have been guilty in the past of not having gone the whole way, all right."

Testifying two years ago on his nomination to be ambassador to Iran, Helms was asked if the CIA tried "to overthrow the government of Chile." Allende headed the government and died when the military staged a successful coup in 1973.

"No sir," Helms replied without elaboration.

"Did you have any money passed to the opponents of Allende," Helms was asked.

"No sir," said Helms.

"So the stories you were involved in that are wrong entirely?" Helms was asked.

"Yes sir," Helms replied.

He told the Foreign Relations panel last month he should have answered the 1973 questions "in a much more extensive way."

"I think I made one mistake in that testimony, maybe a serious mistake, but I should have probably asked either to go off the record or to have asked to discuss this matter in some other forum..." Helms said. He said disclosure of CIA operations against the Allende government could have further damaged relations between the United States and Chile.

"As far as the earlier statement is concerned, whether the agency tried to overthrow the government of Chile, I answered 'no.' I believe that is true..." Helms said.

Cosmonauts View Apollo Spacecraft

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Fresh from a heart-stopping, make-believe space voyage at Disney World, two Russian cosmonauts take their first look today at the American space ship they all meet in space next July.

Alexei Leonov and Valerie Kubasov will observe the Apollo craft during an electronic test in an altitude chamber here. And they plan to inspect the Saturn IB booster, more powerful than any Soviet rocket.

With them will be the three Americans who will fly the joint mission — Thomas Stafford, Donald Slayton and Vance Brand — and several backup astronauts and cosmonauts.

A news conference is scheduled before the spacemen fly to the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Tex., for three weeks of training for the July 15 lift-off.

The Russians flew here Saturday for their first visit to Cape Canaveral.

Stafford, Slayton and Brand will visit the Soviet launching base at Baikonur in May to view the Soyuz spacecraft and rocket to be used in the flight.

Astronauts and cosmonauts spent Sunday at nearby Disney World visiting several Magic Kingdom attractions. The highlight was a simulated space flight past planets and star fields in the darkened Space Mountain.

After the three minute rollercoaster-like ride, Leonov joked, "It was the greatest simulation. We now have had training for our joint flight."

Kubasov said: "I was very excited. I was also a little scared."

Oil Producers Call 'Summit'

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait announced today that oil producing nations will convene a summit conference in Algeria March 4-6 to consider their position at a later meeting with the Western industrialized nations on energy issues.

A summit of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has been expected, but this was the first announcement setting the date.

OPEC members account for 80 per cent of the world's oil exports.

New Student Center At ECU Dedicated Sunday

A portrait of the late Cynthia Anne Mendenhall was unveiled Sunday in ceremonies dedicating the new $2.7 million Student Center at East Carolina University in her honor.

Miss Mendenhall's service was cited by dedication speaker C. Shaw Smith as evidence that "in life there is more good than bad, more that is beautiful than ugly" and that lasting truth and ideals will endure.

Smith, now of Davidson, N.C., is president of the Association of College Unions-International. He was introduced by Dr. James H. Tucker, Dean of Student Affairs at ECU.

The portrait which will hang in the foyer of the main entrance to the 66,000 square foot building was unveiled by Miss Mendenhall's sister, Martha Mendenhall of Alexandria, Va. It was accepted on behalf of ECU by Ashley B. Futrell, Washington, N.C., vice chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

Futrell told the audience of more than 300, many from out of state, that the students, faculty, staff and trustees take pride in honoring the memory of Miss Mendenhall and that "for many yet born" the center will give a true and lasting dedication.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECU Chancellor, welcomed the family of Miss Mendenhall, her friends and other guests. Student government and student union officials also made remarks and a dedicatory anthem was sung by the choir of St. James United Methodist Church.

Miss Mendenhall, a native of Winston-Salem, served 18 years as director of the first college union on the campus. She served on a committee which planned for the new Student Center which has been open since last September. Miss Mendenhall died in February, 1972.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Henry M. Jackson and Hubert H. Humphrey have called for a congressional investigation of the Defense Department's contract with a private corporation to train Saudi Arabian troops to protect oil wells in the Persian Gulf.

Jackson, D-Wash., said he would ask Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, to conduct hearings.

Jackson, who last Thursday announced his candidacy for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, said he was "completely baffled" by the contract.

"Only a short time ago the President and secretary of state indicated the option of U.S. military action might be considered under certain circumstances in the Middle East," he said in a telephone interview Sunday.

He said the contract to train Saudi troops was "confusing," since "we're the only ones who've raised an inference of a threat."

Humphrey, D-Minn., in calling for an investigation of the contract, said, "The possibility of having American forces training another country's troops in the Mideast is fraught with danger ...

"I think the armed services committees of the House and Senate should promptly look into it and see what it involves," Humphrey said in a telephone interview Sunday.

The Defense Department's $77 million contract with the Vinnell Corp. of Los Angeles was disclosed Sunday by The Associated Press.

Vinnell is hiring former U.S. special forces soldiers and other war veterans to send to Saudi Arabia on a job usually handled by the U.S. government — training a foreign army to fire its weapons and fight wars.

There apparently is no shortage of experienced recruits for the 1,000-man force Vinnell is assembling to train Saudi Arabia's 26,000-man internal security force, which is responsible for protecting the rich Saudi oil fields and providing body guards for the Saudi Arabian royal family.

The president of Vinnell,

John F. Hamill, told The AP he received 10 applications for every available job after he placed two modest advertisements in newspapers serving two U.S. military bases.

The contract was awarded last month. The Vinnell force is to assemble in Saudi Arabia in July to start the training sessions.

An incentive to former military men to join Vinnell is the pay: from $1,500 to $1,800 a month on an 18-month contract, with a $2,400 bonus at the end. In addition, most of them have healthy military pensions ranging from $10,000 to $14,000 a year.

The Vinnell mission is to train three newly mechanized infantry battalions of 1,000 men each and a 105-mm howitzer artillery battalion of similar size.

Counterattack Critics Social Security Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five former secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare and three former Social Security commissioners joined today in an unprecedented counterattack against critics of the Social Security system.

The officials issued a 10-page statement described as a rebuttal to recent articles questioning the financial stability and fairness of the system, which pays benefits to 32 million Americans.

The paper also challenged claims that workers could get a better return on their investment through savings or stocks.

Signing the statement were former secretaries Elliot L. Richardson, Robert Finch, Wilbur Cohen, John W. Gardner and Arthur Flemming, and former commissioners Robert M. Ball, William L. Mitchell and Charles I. Schottland. They said short-term and long-range financing problems facing Social Security are being addressed by a 13-member advisory council, which is expected to report to Congress within a month.

The officials said there are two financial problems facing Social Security, one caused by the current high inflationary rate which will require 10 to 15 per cent more income for Social Security during the next 25 years, and the other looming in the next century because declining birth rates threaten to result in fewer workers proportionately to support more retirees.

"The size of the problem over the next 25 years is easily manageable and does not constitute a financial crisis," the statement said. The longer range financing problem will affect not only Social Security but the whole economy, and will be offset by lower costs for supporting and educating children and more women joining the work force, it said.

ON DISPLAY... Firefighting and rescue units from the Greenville Fire Department were displayed Friday night at the opening of Irwin Allen's film "The Towering Inferno" at the Plaza Cinema. The tension-packed film relates what happens in a 138-story building in San Francisco when an overloaded electrical circuit causes a fire on the 81st floor of the skyscraper, and of the attempts made to rescue 300 persons celebrating the building's dedication who are trapped on the 135th floor.

A Review

Special Effects Steal Limelight

The last time out, Irwin Allen, rapidly becoming the new mastermind of suspense, kept audiences on the edge of their seats with "The Poseidon Adventure."

Now, he has topped that with his latest, "The Towering Inferno." Adapted from two different books on the same subject, a fire high in a skyscraper, the movie combines the talent of two studies in the first venture of its kind.

The special effects are awesome, and certainly are destined for an Academy Award nomination. The tension built up in the film will leave many viewers physically exhausted at the end.

Fortunately, just enough light moments are included to break the tension from time to time.

The film tells the story of what happens in a 138-story building in San Francisco when an overloaded circuit, using materials below the architect's specifications, but passable by inspectors, sets a fire in an 81st floor storage room.

By the time it's discovered, it is ready to burst out of control, and quickly spreads to other floors, claiming victims who didn't get first warning. Meanwhile, on the 135th floor, the dedication of the building is being celebrated by some 300 dignitaries, who soon find that they are trapped.

Various ways are attempted to rescue them. Stairways become blocked by fire and explosion. A helicopter attempt proves futile when winds are too tricky. A breeches' buoy across the gulf between the tower and another building works for a while. A scenic elevator outside the building provides seeming safety for some, but leads to a harrowing experience when it is nearly blown off the side of the building.

While the film is loaded with star talent, the real star of the movie must be the unsung special effects personnel and stunt men. They are the ones who carry the theme to its fullest effect.

It is a fine story—a scary one which could easily come true. The continual tension might not be good for the faint-hearted, but for the rest, it is an outstanding three hours of suspense.

"The Towering Inferno" is currently playing at the Plaza Cinema.

Thirty Die In Collision

TULTEPEC, Mexico (AP) — A line of gray wooden coffins in the auditorium between Tultepec's town hall and the 16th century church held the bodies today of 30 townspeople killed when a freight train smashed into their bus.

Twenty-seven persons were injured, some critically, in the collision Saturday night 30 miles north of Mexico City.

"The driver obviously tried to beat the train to the crossing and failed," a police officer at the scene said.

The driver, 47-year-old Jose Casamiro, was among the dead.

Three American soldiers and a Mexican were killed in another collision Saturday night between the soldiers' car and a bus in northern Mexico on the highway between Monterrey and Nuevo Laredo.

The Red Cross in Nuevo Laredo said there were five soldiers from Ft. Sam Houston in San Antonio, Tex., in the car.

It said Ricky A. Hagin, Lindsey Raymond Tscheter and Mike Bean were killed and Stephen Louis, the driver, and Gody Mark were seriously injured.

One passenger in the bus was killed and 10 were injured, the Red Cross said.

Production Workers At Aircraft Plants Strike

By The Associated Press
About 19,000 production workers have struck McDonnell Douglas Corp. facilities in Missouri and California, including a St. Louis plant which builds F4 Phantom jets and the new F15 fighters.

About 12,000 workers represented by Machinists Union District 837 walked out at midnight Sunday in St. Louis, saying their demands for increased wages and benefits were not met.

Company officials said a strike would force production to slow and then cease. A few planes ready for final assembly and flight testing would be completed but the rest would remain unfinished, said George Graff, president of the subsidiary McDonnell Aircraft Co.

About 7,000 workers walked out in California. Picketing was reported at facilities in Santa Monica, Huntington Beach, Torrance, Vandenberg Air Force Base and Palmdale.

Company spokesman Charles Chappell said production of the A4 fighter would be affected. But he said most work would continue because a majority of the 11,000 workers at the Long Beach production facility were members of the nonstriking United Auto Workers.

It was not immediately known if workers at the company's Cape Canaveral Fla., facility had joined the walkout. Negotiations broke off Friday after union negotiators rejected the company's latest offer. It called for a wage increase in addition to changes in a cost-of-living formula and in medical benefits.

District 837 members now average $5.82 per hour in wages, plus $1.61 in hourly benefits. Under the company proposal, they would receive $6.34 per hour plus benefits in the third year.

Troia claimed the wage offer would be wiped out by deficiencies in the proposed cost of living increase. The union is seeking raises in wages and benefits of $7.66, bringing the hourly wage and benefit total to $15.09.

Sudan Tries Cease-Fire

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Sudan's foreign minister has come to Addis Ababa to try to negotiate a cease-fire in the war between Ethiopia's military government and rebel guerrillas in Eritrea province.

Foreign Minister Gamal Mohammed Ahmed reportedly brought cease-fire proposals with him, but no details were revealed. However, the Ethiopian government has said repeatedly that it would never agree to the secession of Eritrea, a former Italian colony which Emperor Haile Selassie annexed 13 years ago.

The Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) has been waging a sporadic guerrilla campaign for independence ever since, but the fighting intensified with attacks Jan. 31 on government military installations in Asmara the Eritrean province.

Government forces drove the rebels out of Asmara that first weekend, but the city of 200,000 people has been virtually besieged ever since and there has been hard fighting in the countryside. Reliable sources estimate casualties in the past 10 days at more than 1,000 dead and another 1,000 wounded.

Evacuees from Asmara reported the city was ringed by about 20,000 government troops who are in turn surrounded by 6,000 insurgents.

High-Rise Fire

A pre-dawn fire in a high-rise dwelling here Sunday—a tree house—heavily damaged the structure and resulted in one of its four occupants being burned.

Fire Department officers were called to the tree house—located in a pecan tree near the intersection of Evans and Ninth Streets (behind Pitt Auto Parts on Washington St.)—at 3:05 a.m.

Investigators said Terry Skinner, 12, of 119 West 12th St.; Michael Robinson, 13, of 113 West Ninth St.; Johnny Brady, 11, of Ayden; and Jarvis Campbell, 14, of 1305 South Washington St., had been spending the night in the dwelling, when a metal pot containing a small fire to heat their high house was knocked over.

Campbell, according to officers, received burns to both of his hands when he attempted to beat the fire out and stop it from spreading. He was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of his injuries.

The other three occupants of the tree-top dwelling were not injured.

Use This Method To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, TEXAS — If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss... grow more hair.

Have you faced the fact that you have a hair loss problem? Hair loss occurs so gradually that men and women often ignore it. Until it's too late. Even though you see yourself in a mirror every day, many of you won't admit to abnormal hair fall.

If you think, honestly, that you might be in this category, look at a picture taken a year ago — three years ago. Notice a difference? If so, now's the time to stop your hair loss. You could be going bald.

If it appears that you are already losing hair, whatever your daily hair routine is, if you continue to follow it, your hair will probably gradually thin away to nothing.

But it doesn't have to happen. Often hair fall is NOT normal. Now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment that not only stops hair loss, but actually grows hair! And you don't even have to take their word for it. You can try their treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself. Naturally they wouldn't offer this opportunity unless it worked. But it's impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness seems to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

If you have thinning hair, the Loesch treatment may be the answer for you. If you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop hair loss and grow more hair, do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days — at their risk — if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially by mail. Adv.

Singer Millie Jackson Says Women Are Too Chic To Be Funny

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There are more comedians than comedienne and singer Millie Jackson, who'd like to be a comedienne, thinks it's because most women who have an urge to go on stage want to be beautiful and glamorous.

"If you talk down somebody else, the audience will think you're ego tripping. And you can't very well down yourself if you're standing there looking like a million bucks.

"Women try to look their best. That's probably why they don't go into comedy. Look at the ones who do. Totie Fields is fat. Martha Raye has a big mouth. Phyllis Diller is funny looking. Joan Rivers is nice

looking but she talks about her past when she was fat. Carol Burnett is about the nicest looking comedienne. She has a very good voice, too."

Miss Jackson is pleased that when she started performing, some people called her "Carol," telling her she reminded them of Carol Burnett.

"I had two front buck teeth then. I looked like a nice little rabbit. My comedy career wasn't doing too well, though, so I had a dentist file them off," Miss Jackson says with a laugh that maybe now, if she becomes a comedienne, she'll have to get him to give her caps to give her "rabbit teeth" again.

Miss Jackson, now 30, is divorced, with daughters 8 and 10, and has just bought a house in New Jersey. She signed with Spring Records in 1972, having previously made only one single, in 1969, for MGM. It was "A Little Bit of Something." She laughs at its lack of sales, "That's just what it did — a little bit. But I keep thinking someday I'm going to turn on the radio and hear the song I did on the other side of it, 'My Heart Took a Licking but It Kept on Ticking.'"

Miss Jackson's fourth LP for Spring, "Caught Up," is her first gold record, having sold $1 million in manufacturer's sales. Her singing of a song from it, "If Loving You Is Wrong," is one of seven nominees for the best female rhythm 'n' blues vocal performance Grammy Award, for 1974.

"Caught Up" has Miss Jackson on one side being a girl who's having an affair with a married man. On side two, she's the man's wife.

So what are her views of that kind of triangle? "As scarce as men are these days, somebody is bound to be going around with a married man. Women are just like men. They need companionship.

"A girl has to study the man and find out whether he is just having a fling or whether he is really searching for something because home isn't correct.

"I don't think the girlfriend should tell the wife, like I did in the record, though.

"Say, I'm not an authority on this. I just came up with an idea to do a story musically.

"I wanted to do 'If Loving You Is Wrong.' That's a Luther Ingram song. It sold almost two million for him about three years ago. I thought it would be a good album cut; it had been popular in my nightclub act and I follow it with some talking, which I call 'The Rap.'"

Soon Miss Jackson will make a sequel album to "Caught Up," telling further developments of the same three people.

Gladys Knight was always her idol as a singer, Miss Jackson says.

"At first I tried to sound like her. I used to sing all her songs. I only tried to get away from her sound after I started recording. I've locked her up in my back closet now."

Miss Jackson says she does more comedy for predominantly white audiences than for predominantly black ones. "I just be me and they seem to think it's funny." Black audiences, she says, know her records better and come to a show by her largely to hear her sing songs from them.

"My kids are my biggest fans. But you like your kids to be your kids rather than your audience. I'm not spending enough time with them now, and I've got to."

Does she want to remarry? "No. That's not saying I won't if the right man came around and convinced me. But he's going to have to do a whole awful lot of convincing."

"Clothes communicate," says Joan Raines, a vice-president at her mother's firm, Adele Simpson. "They tell who she is, what she does, her taste, her flair."

Traveling Food Editor Gives Food Budget Suggestions

By SANDRA GITTENS

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "We seriously need to consider breakfast as an important meal again. Really, if you don't have breakfast, by the time lunch-time comes, possibly 18 hours have gone by and you've gone through the most important part of the day underfed."

"If people would make breakfast at least the second most important meal of the day, I think we would all be better off," adds Margaret Happel, author and food editor.

Currently traveling around the country as a nutrition spokeswoman for Quaker Oats, Mrs. Happel in an interview here gave suggestions, clarified trends and explained nutrition for those who are concerned with getting the most out of their food budget.

She stressed the importance of eating breakfast because of its nutritional value and for a more efficient use of food. A wholesome breakfast, she notes, would allow cutting down on lunch and dinner, while at the same time providing an effective use of food.

"I'm not so much of a missionary that I think the world is going to have the best possible breakfast and then maybe less lunch and less dinner," she says. "But I do think that people should at least consider it the second most important meal. For one thing," she says, pointing to current high prices, "if you look at eggs in relationship to the foods you consume at dinner — a pound of hamburger, let's say, can cost you anywhere between 89 cents to $1.29 — whereas, if you look at eggs, the large jumbo size, they are 32 ounces of edible protein selling for 89 cents a dozen. Now I don't think, doing a comparison shopping here, eggs are expensive. I think you have to know that when you say prime protein, compared to other sources of protein, it's a bargain."

On stretching the budget with meats, Mrs. Happel suggests buying a minimum quantity and extending it with whole grains, fortified enriched carbohydrates, or vegetable proteins such as split peas, lentils, and beans. "And," she adds, "there's nothing wrong with the old traditional dishes. So many of the common ethnic dishes that we have been eating without realizing or knowing why we're eating them have some of the soundest nutritional elements we could have."

Particularly at this time, she says, traditional dishes are gain."

Mrs. Happel similarly feels that cereal with milk is an excellently balanced breakfast. And, when breakfast is considered a real meal, one can plan on how to cut down on other meals.

At a time when health foods, natural foods and organic foods are becoming popular, Mrs. Happel wants to stress that "all foods are healthy. It's what we do to them that makes them unhealthy."

She claims that what people generally mean by "health foods" are those foods which are organically grown. These particular foods, she says, are grown in soil which has not been scientifically treated. They have not been sprayed with pesticides, or packaged with artificial preservatives, additives and flavorings.

"You pay premium dollar for these foods," she says of those grown organically. "But my concern is that if your ground isn't treated scientifically, you are going to have less yield coming off that ground at a time when the world food shortage is of major concern and we should be getting the maximum yield out of our land. But natural foods are found, not only in health food stores, but more importantly in supermarkets. And, while they have been grown scientifically, technology has enabled many of these foods to be packaged without the use of artificial flavors, preservatives or colorings."

During the business session conducted by Mrs. Ashton, reports were given by the Sunshine and Membership Committees. Mrs. Edith F. Williams was named a new member and Mrs. Nunn of the Kinston Auxiliary was a guest. Mrs. Frances Strawn will be the chairman for the CCA project. Mrs. Eric Whichard contributed to the Mattie Tucker Scholarship Fund in memory of her mother, Mrs. Alberta Taylor.

The treasurer reported that the auxiliary's obligations to the State Department have been made.

very important when it comes to budgeting. Most take expensive meats and extend them with other sources of proteins like cheese and beans, cereals or pasta.

Mrs. Happel says that food is now of prime concern to everyone. During her cross-country tour, she found great consumer awareness in buying foods. She also pointed out that there is a trend towards vegetarianism. "It's interesting," she notes, "that people who cut red meat out of the diet then look to raisins, watercress, or spinach to bolster their iron intake. Another interesting point is that the Food and Drug Administration reports that vegetable consumption is up, particularly in the areas of tomatoes and peas, and meat consumption is down."

Mrs. Jones Gives Program

Mrs. Dora Jones presented the program at the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary held Thursday night at the Legion Building.

As Americanism Chairman, Mrs. Jones spoke on the U.S. flag and also read a poem.

Mrs. Sarah J. Ashton, president, and Mrs. Lois Dail will attend the Spring Conference in Greensboro Feb. 21-23.

A Message Of Goodwill And Common Sense

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: For the last few months, I have been reading and hearing about the riots and demonstrating at the Boston schools. I wish some of them would visit my school for one week.

I am a white, senior girl at a totally integrated high school. This is our fifth year of total integration, and I guess this is the reason I cannot understand the people of Boston.

The president of our student body is black, and he chose me as his secretary. Working together, we forget the color of our skin and concentrate on the common goal of the students—to have the best school ever.

In my high school years, I have gone through many changes along with my classmates. I have learned to love according to character, not color. I have learned about life other than as an upper-middle-class white. I have made many black friends that I wouldn't trade for anything or anybody. I feel that our school has made a great step forward for our country. It's only a start, but it's an improvement.

I am asking the people of Boston to please give desegregation a chance. We live in this country together, yet you are afraid to reach out to a fellow American. Please open your eyes! This is America, and we are all free. Why can't we love each other without prejudice? Won't you help me say it, Abby? Just sign me —

STUDENT: HENRY COUNTY SR. HIGH
MC DONOUGH, GA.

DEAR STUDENT: You've said it well. And I'm willing to give your message of goodwill and common sense wider circulation.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the wife who had a fit when she caught her husband using her toothbrush (he couldn't find his) brought back memories.

Several years ago, when I was a young divorcee, I fell in love with a divorced man. We wanted to be married in a church by a minister, but finding one who would marry two divorced people wasn't easy in those days.

We finally found a minister who said he might perform the ceremony if we would answer some questions first. After a few minutes of chitchat, he hit us with the big question. "If you had no other choice, would you use your mate's toothbrush?"

At the time we both thought that was about the dumbest question we'd ever heard, but we thought for a few minutes and both said: "Yes."

Sen. Morgan On Solid Ground

Sen. Robert Morgan, new to Washington, has staked out a pretty good position on the proposed tax cut.

He says he won't vote for the tax cut unless there is a reduction in federal spending. Morgan recognized that there is no hope of a balanced budget; however, the $50 billion project budget strikes him as "highly inflationary". Sen. Morgan sees inflation as still the prime economic problem of the nation.

Everybody welcomes a cut in taxes and it is difficult to oppose such a cut which would put money in everyone's pockets. Still the kind of deficit President Ford is talking about is almost intolerable for the nation.

We got into our present economic mess because government has been overspending its income for so many years. It might hurt to get out of the mess but somewhere along the way there is going to have to be a reckoning.

It is time everyone in Congress began looking for ways to reduce expenditures. This must be done if we are to get the long term inflation that still hangs over us under control.

Virtually Assured Of Keeping Present State

Announcement of a $37,500 grant from the state to aid in purchase of a tract of wilderness land on the north bank of the Tar River virtually assures that this land will be preserved in its present state.

The grant was announced by James E. Harrington, Secretary of the N. C. Department of Natural and Economic Resources. It provides half the purchase cost of the land with the city to provide the other half. The land is being purchased from ECU Foundation which received it as a donation from Barrus Construction Co.

The land is to be used for park and recreational purposes and its acquisition will help keep the flood plain area in its natural state.

THIS AFTERNOON

N.C. As An 'Armed Camp'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—"WARNING: This Premise Protected By Armed Citizen."

Those words—emblazoned in red, white, and black and dramatized by a picture of a snub-nosed handgun—highlight a new kind of sticker Tar Heels may soon be using on their homes, campers, and cars.

"North Carolina is an armed camp," says State Rep. Carl J. Stewart Jr., D-Gaston, and his assessment is echoed by law enforcement officials and citizens themselves.

Pistol permit figures in every county on the upswing; but that doesn't tell the whole story, as many pistols in a largely rural state such as ours change hands from private owner to private owner without a permit required, and even larger numbers are routinely imported from neighboring South Carolina or Virginia where governmental red tape is at a minimum in the purchase of a handgun, requiring only identification.

Permit Required
In this state, character

witnesses are required, and the purchase permit must be obtained from the sheriff's offices, with the prospective buyer subject to a delay for background investigation.

Still, whatever the source, North Carolinians are latching onto pistols for their own protection in the fact of statistics which show what residents already know: crime is growing by leaps and bounds.

How many North Carolinians are toting pistols in their cars or keeping them hid away at home in case of intrusion? Nobody knows.

Salesmen in recent conversations confirm that most of that brotherhood—some guess as high as 75 per cent—are armed when on the road; law officers confirm they encounter more and more armed motorists, especially men or women traveling alone.

North Carolina law is fairly simple on the matter: you can own and carry a pistol for your own protection on your own property, whether the gun is concealed or not concealed. Off your own property, you must not have the gun concealed. If it is exposed to view, you can carry it anywhere you wish.

In a car, for instance, you may not put it in a pocket or under the seat or the glove box. A number of drivers use a holster slung on the steering column; some simply lay the gun on the seat while driving. Some sources speculate that if people get more alarmed, they may sling their pistols in a holster fastened to the rear view mirror so it can be seen front and rear.

State and national pressures are mounting for restriction of handgun ownership, but Stewart and a number of other legislative leaders do not see such a step in the near future.

No Control
"Effective gun control is not going to work; not until we first insure swift justice for the criminal," Stewart said.

"The General Assembly could pass no gun control legislation that would be enforceable at this time... people would simply violate it.

"The enforcement of any laws depends largely on the degree of willingness of the people to obey that law, and right now you couldn't get the people of Gaston County to give up their guns for anything. They truly believe that self-protection is their only recourse."

Gaston County of late has been the scene of several murders and robberies which have pushed it to the top in statistics logging violent crimes in the state, with 30 homicides in 1974.

Stewart, a lawyer, recalls that as he grew up, Gastonia was a "tranquil textile town of 15,000. Today it is an armed camp of 50,000... There is probably some type of weapon in every Gaston County household that can afford it."

Chairman last year of the House Appropriations Committee, and currently in a contest for the speakership in the 1977 session, and with ambition perhaps aimed at the governor's office beyond that, Stewart has outlined a series of proposals to make the criminal justice system more effective.

The INSIDE REPORT

Kissinger's Blue Monday

By ROWLANDE EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—When bipartisan congressional leaders gathered at the White House for breakfast Monday morning, they were braced for bad news about the budget from President Ford but got something still more melancholy: official Washington's apocalyptic view of the declining Western world.

The meeting was called to brief the leaders on the budget being released that noon. But before Mr. Ford revealed the horrendous $52 billion deficit, this frightening picture was painted—mostly by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger: the imminent collapse of, first, Cambodia and then South Vietnam; the danger of Portugal and Turkey leaving the North Atlantic Alliance (ANTO); a United States unable to deliver on its commitments and, therefore, unable to negotiate with foreign powers, great or small. Moreover, Kissinger clearly implied that the overwhelmingly Democratic Congress, seeking all powers of government including diplomacy, is largely responsible for this state of affairs. The inference: the Secretary of State, undercut by Congress, had lost his credibility among fellow diplomats and, consequently, his ability to negotiate effectively.

Some congressional leaders present felt Kissinger, a consummate actor, was laying it on a bit thick in a bid for support. But the debased value of a Kissinger commitment has become a deadly serious national problem. With the lopsided Democratic majority in the new Congress oblivious to such problems, it oppresses the White House far worse than the highly publicized confrontation over energy policy.

The blue Monday breakfast started on the apparently hopeless request by Mr. Ford for $300 million in emergency arms aid to save Indochina. Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said flatly what previously had been whispered at the Pentagon: without additional arms, Cambodia will fall quickly. The situation in South Vietnam is better, Brown added, but extremely critical in view of ammunition and fuel shortages.

Kissinger moved on to Europe. The congressional cutoff of military aid to Turkey because of its Cyprus invasion, effective at midnight Tuesday, was described as an absolute disaster. Those present believed Kissinger saw Turkey disengaging from NATO, a greater danger to U.S. interests than the collapse of the Saigon regime.

What makes the possible Turkish disaffection in the east induced by Congress all the worse, Kissinger went on, is the imminent Communist takeover of Portugal in the west—depriving the U.S. and NATO of the vital Azores bases. Here, too, congressional hands are unclear, Kissinger implied. The CIA can scarcely protect American interests in Portugal while under congressional scrutiny.

Kissinger even related the dead hand of congressional diplomacy to relations between the super-powers. Contending that the Turkish aid cutoff endangers cooperation with China in the intricate three-cushioned relationship with the Soviet Union, Kissinger said Peking wonders how it can deal with a nation irrational enough to consciously alienate an ally so valuable as Turkey.

Dr. Kissinger's lecture, delivered in his mild tone without vituperation, generated few protests or affirmations from the Congressmen. The plea for Indochinese aid was greeted only by ominous silence. When President Ford revealed he is contemplating a bipartisan commission to visit Vietnam to report back on the desperate need for aid, the room was filled with oppressive silence. "I was just hoping the President wouldn't pick me to go," one Republican told us.

One Democrat—Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee—did seem disturbed by Kissinger's portrait of twilight in the West. Muskie asked: could what Kissinger said be repeated publicly? Of course, Kissinger replied. At this writing, however, Muskie has said nothing. (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

DAVID AND JONATHAN
We are told that when Jonathan and David met for the last time, Jonathan strengthened David's hand in God.

The friendship of David and Jonathan has been famous throughout the ages. How Jonathan strengthened David's hand in God on this last occasion we do not know. But evidently he said things by way of encouragement which strengthened the faith of the man who later in the Twenty-third Psalm wrote that the Lord was his shepherd.

There are many different circumstances which create friendship, but certainly the finest type of friendship comes into being when one person strengthens another's faith in God. At the other end of the scale, we have all seen or experienced companionships which have done just the opposite. They serve to bring out the worst in both persons involved. Thus friendship, as it stands, is not necessarily good or bad. It is good only when it arouses good impulses, and the best of these is to strengthen faith in God.

N.C. Political Notes

Samuel Spencer, president of Davidson College and the chairman of the North Carolina Association of Independent College and Universities, says state aid to independent schools is of vital importance.

"Such aid is important," Dr. Spencer said, "because it costs the taxpayer much less than the approximately $2,000 needed to educate each student at a state institution, and because it helps lower and middle income families who have sons or daughters at independent colleges."

The Legislature is being asked to increase aid to private colleges to $600 per North Carolina student enrolled. The state now gives $200, and the Advisory Budget Commission has recommended that the new figure be $400 per North Carolina student at private colleges in the state.

Secretary of State Thad Eure is working with his 25th Tar Heel General Assembly. He listened to Gov. Jim Holshouser's talk to the Assembly a couple of weeks ago. "It was more of a political speech than anything else," Eure says of the Governor's remarks to the lawmakers.

The veteran Eure had these other observations:

"Gov. Holshouser won't promulgate much new legislation this time. He doesn't have enough Republicans in the General Assembly to help him."

—On the food tax, Eure says: "I don't look for it to be abolished. If they do abolish it, they'll have to find the money some place else. This is where the opposition would come in."

—On the number of lawyers in this Assembly: "I think we have fewer attorneys in the Legislature than we did last time. I'm not sure if it's significantly lower, but it's lower. We're compiling final figures on that now."

—This being his 25th Legislature to work with, what kind of Assembly does he think it will be? "It's too early to go out on a limb and make predictions," Eure said. "But I believe this will be an excellent General Assembly."

I asked State Senator Herman Moore what kind of Governor Jim Holshouser had made.

"The first Republican Governor in 75 years," Democrat Moore answered. "That wasn't my question," I pressed. "I asked what kind of Governor you feel Holshouser has been."

"The last Republican Governor in 75 years," Moore replied.

Other Editors Say Blind To Dangers

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

A strong anti-military mood pervades the new Congress. Congressman Edwin Hebert of Louisiana, veteran chairman of the Armed Services Committee, has been deposed. Few men in the Congress have been more supportive of a strong military than has Mr. Hebert.

He regards his ouster from the chairmanship as culmination of a drive by anti-military forces to gain control of Congress. With the economic situation as it is, the military will have to take its lumps with the rest of us. Our armed forces are prepared to do so. The military leadership accepts the facts of life.

But with a Congress in an anti-military mood and facing increased demands for programs of social spending and economic stimulation, the potential defense posture of this nation could be in serious jeopardy.

There has been a calculated effort in recent years to discredit the military, to build opposition to proposals by our armed services chiefs to maintain a position of superiority or, at least, parity.

Our national defense posture was maintained because of the presence and influence of strong men like Congressman Hebert. Today a new breed of politician has moved to center stage.

We are seeing a stepped up assault on military spending. We see in positions of strong influence people who have laudable visions of great social progress, but who tend to be blind to the grave dangers of military weakness.

The people of this country must watch closely developments in the Congress this difficult year.

We are in a time in which our armed forces need a coming together of those of us in the civilian community and in government who recognize their importance to our survival as a nation.

Unemployment Of Ten Per Cent?

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — As Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, was predicting Friday that the jobless rate would peak at 8.5 per cent later this year, it probably already had reached that figure.

An AFL-CIO spokesman estimates that while January unemployment was 8.2 per cent, the continued layoffs throughout the country has pushed the rate to around 8.5 or 8.6 per cent by now.

Is America afraid to face the facts? For their clients only, some private economists are forecasting a 10 per cent rate later this year. Already that percentage has been exceeded in certain industries and in certain areas.

And the jobless statistics don't tell all the story either. There are countless thousands underemployed.

Asked what the sharp rise in unemployment means, consumer pollsters say: A further loss of confidence.

Lower confidence means lower economic activity. Despair begets more. A sinking economy feeds on itself, devours itself.

Albert Sindlinger, the consumer marketing authority and pollster, had been forecasting 10 per cent unemployment by October. Now he's sticking to an estimate of "at least 10 per cent," but moving it up several months.

Unemployment is bad news even for the employed. It endangers jobs in sales, housing, finance, travel. Even stocks.

At the New York Stock Exchange, William Freund, chief economist, sees the "startling" unemployment rate as a further manifestation of weakness, "and it shows the dimensions of the problems we as a nation now face."

Freund said he had expected a high rate, as did most everyone, but he had not expected a surge of unemployment to come on so suddenly and sharply.

Pierre Rinfret, an adviser to President Nixon, recalls being criticized for speaking his mind when he began talking about such high jobless rates.

At a White House meeting, Rinfret said, he once told the President that the jobless rate would rise to dangerous heights if the economy were permitted to drag along. Shocked, Nixon turned to

It Was Easier To Talk

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

Associated Press Writer RALEIGH (AP) — It has not been very long since President Ford stepped out of "The Spirit of '76" at Greensboro and polished his "WIN" button for North Carolinians to see.

Elect Republicans to help me balance the budget and fight inflation, he said.

Nor has it been very many weeks since Gov. James E. Holshouser toured the state in the Republican "Victory Caravan" with unsuccessful Senate candidate William E. Stevens.

Send Bill Stevens to Washington to help Gerry Ford balance the budget and fight the big spenders, he said.

Nor has it been too long since both men spoke gravely about the need to restore faith in the credibility of politicians.

Yet, last week, both gave a demonstration of the practical value of campaign rhetoric. Ford proposed to Congress a $50 billion budget deficit on Monday. That evening, he flew to Atlanta for dinner with a group of governors, including Holshouser.

The budget deficit, Holshouser said, was not a topic of conversation. Like the "WIN" button, balance the federal budget has been forgotten, at least for the time being.

Holshouser pointed out recently that both he and Ford have maintained their firm belief in a balanced budget and expressed hope that the deficit is only temporary.

Conditions have changed, the governor said, since the campaign. Unemployment has gotten worse; inflation has begun to slow down a little bit.

"It would be a violation of the president's public trust if he did not take note of changing conditions and take steps to deal with it," the governor said.

Perhaps it would. But millions of people voted for candidates who promised to fight inflation by balancing the budget. It seems that conditions often change between the campaign and the capitol.

"If all the people who talked in their campaigns about balancing the budget followed through on it, we'd have a balanced budget," Sen. Robert Morgan said last week.

Morgan is learning first hand right now that it is much easier to talk about balancing the budget in a campaign than it is to do anything about it in Washington. His devotion to the concept remains strong, he said.

But he "really hasn't has enough time" to find out exactly where the budget can be cut and expects that his duties with the select committee investigating domestic surveillance will take most of his time for the next nine months.

It may be that Ford is right and Morgan is wrong when he calls the Administration budget "highly inflationary." It may be that deficit spending is just what the economy needs right now, or at least the best alternative available.

But there is another problem facing the country now, the problem of faith in the system. It starts with the credibility of political leaders. And their credibility starts with the value they place on campaign promises.

Dehydrated Food, A Hedge Against Future Disaster

By DONALD H. DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — If you're fearful that famine or depression are around the corner or that rising food prices will leave you hungry, Ron Whipple has an offer for you.

For $395 he'll sell you 11 small cartons of dehydrated food which he says can be stored for 15 years or more and will provide one person with three balanced meals a day for a year.

Whipple, president of Beehive Specialty Foods, says there are three reasons to buy his food package.

"First, it's a hedge against personal or natural disaster," he says. "If pop gets run over by a truck, the family still eats. "Second, it's a hedge against inflation. If anything goes wrong, you still eat.

"Third, many of these foods are economical on a day-to-day basis."

Beehive is one of several firms across the nation offering these packages, coupling the appeal of inexpensive food with the assurance that, as one ad said, "If worse comes to worse you'll always know where your next meal is coming from."

The idea of dehydrated food is not new. Schools, prisons and other institutions have been serving dehydrated potatoes and vegetables for years to save the waste and shipping costs of fresh produce.

But suddenly these dehydrated foods have become a $30 million-a-year business. Beehive is one of six major companies and a score of smaller ones riding a wave of concern over possible food shortages. Their national advertisements tout their products as a way to beat inflation and avoid starvation if recession turns into depression.

Beehive's food comes in cans which look much like gallon paint cans. A new process has been added — vacuum sealing with gases which prevent spoilage — to insure long shelf life. To prepare it, you scoop out as much of the shriveled foodstuff as you want, add water and heat.

The results look like food and taste to some like real food, while to others they're something like Army K-rations.

Whipple's $395 food plan includes fruits such as apples, prunes and bananas as well as vegetables such as potatoes, carrots, celery and various kinds of beans. It also includes nonfat dry milk, bouillon, peanut butter powder, spaghetti, several kinds of cereal and 53 three-ounce servings of popcorn.

There is no meat, although Whipple does sell dehydrated meat in his retail stores. It's expensive. The food package contains a cheaper soybean substitute variously flavored like beef, chicken, pork or ham.

As for nutrition, Whipple says his dehydrated food is better than canned products because it is not heated to high temperatures before packing. Heating robs vegetables of many of their minerals and vitamins.

Whipple, a 31-year-old businessman who also cleans and repairs shopping carts for super markets, got his start in dehydrated foods in 1972 selling mostly to his fellow Mormons, who are required by their religion to keep a one-year supply of food on hand.

Whipple is not alone. The Mormons' precept about stored food got the national dehydrated food industry going. Now only about 5 per cent of all such foods are bought by Mormons. The great majority of purchasers are upper-middle class Easterners, industry officials say.

Whipple recently opened two stores, for a total of three, and has started an advertising campaign in national publications. Whipple is reluctant to reveal precise sales figures.

"The response has been tremendous," said Fred Teicher, one of Whipple's associates.

Each meal in the one-year food package costs about 40 cents and provides three-ounce servings of four items.

"And that doesn't count what you save or waste," said Teicher. "It's basically zero waste."

Whipple's ads say that, in times of crisis, "You Can't Eat Gold." And Teicher says, "There's going to be a major food crisis in this country. All you've got to do is read the headlines."

Claim Douglas May Not Walk

NEW YORK (AP) — Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas has not recovered the use of his left leg following a stroke and his doctors fear he may never be able to walk again, Time magazine says.

Douglas's intellect was not impaired and his vision, temporarily affected by the New Year's Eve stroke, is back to normal, Time said Sunday.

The magazine said Douglas, who is 76, is working for a few hours each day on cases heard before his stroke but will not be back on the bench full time until at least March.

A spokesman at Walter Reed Army Hospital, where Douglas is listed in satisfactory condition, refused to comment on the Time report.

Alan Ladd's Son In The Movies; He's No Actor

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The executive earthquake shaking the film industry has landed a famous name in the production boss's chair at 20th Century-Fox: Alan Ladd Jr.

Nearly every major studio has undergone top echelon changes during the past year, and 20th-Fox joined the list a month ago. Board chairman Dennis C. Stanfill appointed Ladd vice president for worldwide production.

With his shy, informal manner, Ladd, 37, seems miscast in the post once held by the legendary Darryl F. Zanuck. But Ladd is part of a new breed of production chief — the quiet man of action who gets movies made without getting his name in the newspapers.

Ladd, gazing at a desk laden with scripts and memos, remarked: "It has been numbing, taking over so quickly."

Although he occupies the same position as the elder Zanuck, it is a whole new ball game for Ladd.

"It was a lot simpler for Darryl to make pictures, because everyone was under contract," said the young executive.

"He could assign Lamar Trotti to write a script, Henry King to direct it, Tyrone Power to star. The studio needed all those people under contract because it was making 52 pictures a year.

"Now it's a different kind of situation. We release about 15 pictures a year. The studios are all vying for individual situations, all scrambling for the same stars.

"You spend a lot of time trying to acquire things."

It was Ladd's knack of acquiring things that impressed board chairman Stanfill. Ladd helped develop such films as "Young Frankenstein," "Dirty Mary, Crazy Larry" and "Harry and Tonto," which relieved Fox's long drought of hits.

He also oversaw the forthcoming "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings" with Burt Reynolds and "At Long Last Love," the Cole Porter musical.

Ladd was the son of his father's early marriage, and the boy lived with his mother, visiting the senior Ladd and wife, Sue Carol, on weekends and during the summer. He fondly remembers Paramount, where his father starred from "This Gun for Hire" (1942) to "Botany Bay" (1953).

"I was a total movie nut," young Ladd confessed. "I used to take the streetcar to Hollywood Boulevard and go from one theater to another, seeing pictures all day and into the night."

Despite his passion for films, he never aspired to be an actor. His only performing was stunt work, which he did to earn money.

He studied business at the University of Southern California, quitting just nine units short of graduation. He married, got called up in the Air Force Reserve during the Berlin crisis and served a year before returning to Hollywood.

Unable to find work in the studios, Ladd offered his services to Freddie Fields, who ran a small agency with big clients — Judy Garland, Paul Newman, Henry Fonda and Phil Silvers, among others.

Fields hired him to run errands at $65 a week. After the

Eight Killed In Accidents

By The Associated Press

Eight persons were killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend. Included were an infant and two women who were in a car that overturned and burned after a rear-end collision with another in Burke County.

The three were passengers in a car the patrol said was making a left turn on U.S. 64-70E at Hildebran when it was in collision with a car coming up from behind. They were identified John David Briscoe, 2 months old; Lulu Geraldine Briscoe, 22, and Lillie Mae Powell, 56, all of Connelly Springs, near Hildebran and Hickory.

Traffic deaths for the year rose to 106, 60 fewer than at the similar time last year.

A pedestrian, 50-year-old Forrest Lynwood Joiner of Weaverville, was struck and killed by a car near Asheville.

Victims of other accidents were:

Ricky Lee Thornton, 18, of Wendell in Wake County.

Douglas Lee Avery, 38, of Jacksonville, N.C.

Douglas Bernard Gibbs, 20, of Asheville.

Jimmy Leon Williams, 19, of Dunn.

In addition, a North Carolina woman, 24-year-old Donna Marie Arender of Dobson in Surry County, was killed in the collision of two cars near Galax, Va.

of Lattimore estimates that in the last 13 months wild dogs have cost him $6,000 in beef cattle killed and maimed. He says they have killed 26 cows and 56 yearlings. And another cow was killed when it crashed into a fence as it fled from a dog pack.

Nor is much help expected from Capitol Hill. In an overwhelmingly Democratic Congress intent on forging its own way internationally without regard to old-fashioned bipartisanship, foreign policy is increasingly subject to constituent pressures.

An energetically mobilized Greek-American community was largely responsible for the Turkish aid cutoff. Constituent pressure guarantees warm congressional support for Israel. In contrast, there are no significant blocs of voters to lobby for Cambodia, South Vietnam, Turkey or the Arab states. Congress has refused to redeem Kissinger's promises of aid to the Arabs during his shuttle diplomacy a year ago (with Democrats on the House Appropriations Committee this week assailing proposed aid for Syria).

"I had never seen Henry so down," one congressional leader told us after the blue Monday breakfast. Indeed, melancholia is scarcely avoidable when this question is pondered: in a dangerous world with Western power declining and Soviet power gaining, how can the United States deal with the Soviet Union at the same time a leaderless Congress is running wild with its own foreign policy dictated by the pressures of domestic politics?

What is Blue Cross and Blue Shield doing about the rising cost of health care?

Well, for one thing, we have just published a 60-page book on the subject and personally delivered a copy to every hospital administrator in the state.

"Cost Containment Programs for Hospitals" discusses 12 specific ways hospitals can hold down costs for the benefit of all. Things like Pre-Admission Testing and Outpatient Surgery for ambulatory patients.. to save that expensive hospital bed for someone who needs it more.

We're also supporting comprehensive areawide health care planning by giving financial assistance to approved planning agencies. So when a hospital plans a new service or expansion, the planning council makes sure the new facilities are needed before approval is given. This eliminates the excessive cost of unnecessary duplication of services.

These are some examples of the many cost containment activities in which we are continuously engaged. We watch our money like it was your money. Because it is.

SHELBY, N.C. (AP)—Cleveland County is in the final week of a month long quarantine on loose dogs following a rise in dog bites and cattle killings.

Hundreds of dog have been rounded up and brought to the county animal shelter.

The county health director, Richard Steeves, says 82 dog bites were recorded in the last half of 1974, more than double the number of persons bitten in all of 1974.

In addition, the number of complaints of cattle being killed by wild dogs has been rising.

Muskie Undecided Over Political Plans For '75

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie says he is in "a state of suspended animation" about a 1976 race for the presidency and is laying plans to run for re-election to the Senate next year while leaving open "the possibility that might change."

In an hour-long, often philosophical interview in his office, the lanky Maine Democrat said he plans to spend 1975 as "a full-time senator," looking ahead to the 1976 Senate race in Maine.

But he conceded the lure of the presidency remains after his 1972 bid, noting that "having been reasonably close to it once, there's some chemistry about the whole thing that keeps you drawn to it."

"I can think of all sorts of personal and political and other reasons why my life would be complete without it," the 60-year-old Senator said. "Life isn't going to begin and end by whether I become a candidate for president or get the nomination or become president. It simply isn't."

The rambling conversation made it clear that Muskie realizes that many Democrats look to him as a possible compromise candidate for 1976 and that, according to public opinion polls, he runs stronger against President Ford than any other Democratic possibility.

Those same polls, however, made Muskie the front-runner in the months before the 1972 presidential primaries, but his showing soon faded.

Muskie indicated he would be more inclined to an active 1976 candidacy than to play a waiting game in hopes of a convention deadlock.

"I find it hard to believe that at that point, anybody who has made no effort at all could come in and get it," he said, though he conceded that perhaps Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., could.

Because of what happened in 1972 — which Muskie calls "a little bit of a shock to my psyche" — he said, "When I'm asked to look into evidence that maybe Muskie is marketable again, I look at it with perhaps a more realistic eye than I might have before."

He said, "What really got under my skin was the criticism that I didn't have the fire in my belly, the overriding desire to be president."

"Well, if that was the case then, it's true now," he said. He added: "I don't know why the hell I have to."

"I'm not sure the country is at ease with candidates who have fire in their belly. The country's had one," he said, making clear he referred to former President Richard M. Nixon."

Editor's Note — The outcome of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's approaching Mideast peace talks may be determined by two defense positions in the Sinai Desert, which Israel occupies and Egypt wants back. Here's a report on their significance.

By DAVID LANCASHIRE
Associated Press Writer
MITLA PASS, Israeli-Occupied Sinai (AP) — "We'll head them off at the pass" isn't just a line from a cowboy movie. In the Middle East, heading them off at the pass is the key to Israeli strategy if war resumes with Egypt.

"The pass" refers to two vital openings in a chain of sandstone hills east of the Suez Canal, the Mitla Pass and the Gidi Pass.

They are the main basis for negotiations in Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's next peace mission to the Middle East.

The desert passes command the approach to the southern Suez Canal, block Egypt's entry to Israel, control the road to the Abu Rudeis oilfields, and guard Israel's main forward air and supply base at Refidim.

Israel has centered its main Sinai defenses on the two strategic defiles.

Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, however, has demanded that Israel return both passes, plus the Abu Rudeis oil installations, in return for the second-stage agreement Kissinger is seeking in the Sinai.

Premier Yitzhak Rabin of Israel has repeatedly offered to trade most of the Sinai Peninsula for a full peace pact with Egypt, but Information Minister Aharon Yariv, since resigned, added that the two passes would not be bargained away for a partial agreement.

"This chain of mountains is the most important line between the Suez Canal and Israel," said an officer at the Mitla Pass.

"For us, these passes are the best point to defend Israel. But for Egypt, the best place to defend the Suez Canal is these same mountains, these same passes," he said.

The zigzag Mitla Pass is lined with trenches, studded with secret fortifications, and littered with rusty wreckage from the 1967 Mideast war, when Israel won the Sinai Peninsula from Egypt and routed Egyptian forces. A few sunbleached bones lie among the twisted steel.

The Mitla Pass is about 18 miles east of the Suez Canal where it flows into the Gulf of Suez. The Gidi defile is 15 miles to the north.

Israeli officers explain that the passes form natural bottlenecks where small forces can hold off major attacks.

Israeli officers say that if they withdrew from Mitla and Gidi, they would need far larger forces to hold the approaches to Israel against the Egyptians.

"Our front is now 140 kilometers (84 miles) long," said one officer. "If we pull back from here, the front widens to 400 kilometers (240 miles)."

The Israelis withdrew to their present lines east of the canal following the Kissinger disengagement 13 months ago.

Radio Israel reported recently that $66 million had been spent on fortifying the new lines and another $160 million would go for minefields, antitank ditches, wire barricades, roads and outposts.

Moving back from the passes would presumably mean abandoning much of the investment.

North of the Mitla and outside the front line zone where arms are limited by the disengagement pact, Israeli forces can be seen at the ready, determined not to be caught off guard as they were in the 1973 October war.

"All our units are on constant alert," said an area commander as armored corpsmen sprinted to their tanks on exercise.

Radar scanners turned on top of sand dunes and new wire fences and mine fields stretched for miles.

Like racing drivers running for a Le Mans start, artillery troops dashed to four M109 guns and moved into the desert on a mock firing exercise.

On the edge of the United Nations Emergency Force buffer zone facing the canal, the Israelis have erected a series of orange and white observation towers, each 125 feet high, to watch Egyptian movements.

"These towers are our eyes now that the Suez Canal is no longer in our hands," the officer said.

Seven Died In Flaming Home

ATHOL, Mass. (AP) — Fourteen-year-old Raymond Abram, his hair singed and his hands and back burned, banged on a neighbor's door to report a fire at his house.

The blaze killed seven persons, including his mother and four of her children.

Irene Cameron, who was awakened by young Abram early Sunday, recalled: "He had no shoes or coat on and he was crying. He said he wanted to soak his hands and wrap a towel around them."

Raymond's 12-year-old brother John and Robert T. Peterson Jr., 37, owner of the house, also escaped. Both were injured.

The dead included Charlene Graneau, 32; four of her children, David Graneau, 6, Edward Graneau Jr., 10, Stephen Abram, 11, and Jacqueline Abram, 15. All died of smoke inhalation, authorities said.

The other two victims were Susan Peterson, 15, and Robert Peterson, 17, children of the owner.

Police said Mrs. Garneau had been sharing the house with Peterson, whose wife died a year ago. She was separated from her husband and police said the Abrams were her children by a previous marriage.

Peterson was in satisfactory condition with cuts and burns. John was in fair condition and Raymond was in good condition suffering burns.

Fire Chief Armand J. Dugas said the house near the outskirts of this western Massachusetts town was wrapped in flames when firemen arrived at 2:10 a.m. Cause of the blaze was under investigation.

Claim A&P Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the nation's largest food chains, A&P, has been ordered to stop advertising goods at a stated price unless the company ensures it has the advertised products to sell, the Federal Trade Commission said today.

An FTC administrative law judge ruled that A&P has violated federal trade laws by failing in many cases to have advertised goods available.

In other cases the goods were available but were priced higher than the advertised figure, said Daniel H. Hanscom, the official who heard the FTC case against the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., Inc.

The decision was preliminary and is subject to appeal by the food chain or to review by the commission itself, the FTC said.

The FTC issued its original complaint against A&P on March 1, 1973, alleging false, misleading and deceptive advertising. A&P operates between 3,600 and 3,700 food stores in 36 states and it is one of the two largest food chains in the nation.

A&P argued that the FTC was seeking to impose a stricter standard against it than is provided in food trade regulations, and that the FTC failed to consider circumstances beyond the food chain's control, such as delivery problems.

While rejecting the A&P arguments, Judge Hanscom acknowledged that other food chains had the same problems of overpricing and unavailability of advertised items, some even to a greater degree.

DOLDRUMS REGION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The doldrums region of the Pacific Ocean is generally known for light winds, calm seas and clear skies, National Geographic says. At times, however, the northeast and southeast trade winds strongly converge there, ascend and cause squalls with heavy rain and thunderstorms.

Move To Save Old Showhouse

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A group of Kansas City civic leaders has raised more than $350,000 to keep the city's most historic showhouse from becoming another center-city parking lot.

For more than a year the future of the Folly Theater, a downtown Kansas City landmark since it opened in 1900 with a burlesque-type play known as "The Jolly Grass Widow," was uncertain.

In 74 years the Folly's elegant halls have been graced by the varied talents of Jeanne Eagles, Al Jolson, Eddie Foy, Fanny Brice, boxers Jack Johnson and Jack Dempsey, Gypsy Rose Lee and numerous nameless "pink ladies" who made "everything up-to-date in Kansas City" in the Broadway hit "Oklahoma!"

Kansas City historian James Ryan says that Frank James, Jesse's brother, is reported to have been a ticket-taker at the slightly faded but stately theater, designed in 1890 along renaissance lines by Louis Curtiss, one of the city's most noted architects. The classic song, "Melancholy Baby," was composed at a hotel that was once attached to the Folly, Ryan says.

Mrs. Joan Dillon, wife of a prominent Kansas City business executive, led the fight to save the building after Annbar Associates and Elk Realty of New York, the Folly's current owners, announced they would demolish the Folly if it wasn't sold by the end of the year. Annbar Associates purchased the Folly ten years ago.

Working under the aegis of the nonprofit "Performing Arts Foundation," Mrs. Dillon and a group of Kansas City businessmen and attorneys raised $350,000 through public donations.

According to businessman David Stickleber, president of the foundation, Annbar Associates donated $600,000 of the $950,000 purchase price in negotiations completed at the end of 1974. "The last legitimate theater in Kansas City has been saved — and a bit of ourselves," he said.

Mrs. Dillon, Stickleber, attorney James Grier and real estate executive James Bruening, plan to turn the Folly into a downtown theater for the performing arts — to bring jazz back to Kansas City's 12th Street where it wailed with Charlie Parker and Count Basie in the 1920s.

The 1,200-seat Folly, Mrs. Dillon says, is structurally sound and has "almost perfect acoustics and lines of sight" to its now dilapidated stage. It's also just across the street from Kansas City's $30-million convention center now under construction.

The "Save the Folly" group has succeeded in having the theater designated a national historic site in the national register — perhaps the first former burlesque house to be honored with such federal rating.

Mrs. Dillon sees the Folly as the tie between the city's historic past and the glamour of the new skyscrapers and stadiums being built as part of its current $5.3-billion urban renaissance.

"The Folly, and old buildings like it, are a necessity if Kansas City is going to hold onto its true personality," she explained.

Substituting Tobacco Tax For Food Tax Is Raised

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A freshman state Senator is laying plans to repeal North Carolina's sales tax on food by replacing the revenue in part with increased taxes on the state's "sacrosanct" cash crop—tobacco.

Sen. William G. Smith, D-New Hanover, wants to raise the tax on a pack of cigarettes from the current level of two cents to six cents and eventually to nine cents.

His proposal, however, faces strong opposition from the tobacco industry, which stretches across the state and is particularly strong in the east, where the agricultural economy depends heavily on tobacco.

The Senate's special revenue commission recently reported three areas in which North Carolinians are taxed less than citizens of any other state.

The state currently allows income from dividends paid by North Carolina corporations to be tax free. It also has a unique sales tax ceiling of $120 for cars, boats and airplanes.

The commission recommended eliminating both exemptions, and the recommendation appears likely to pass. But it ignored the third area of light taxation, tobacco.

North Carolina's two cent tax is the lowest in the nation. Many states tax cigarettes at rates of up to 18 cents and allow their local governments to levy additional taxes. The states closest to North Carolina are also tobacco producers—Virginia at 2.5 cents and Kentucky at three cents.

The low tax rate, coupled with rising taxes in northern states, has created a growing smuggling industry in North Carolina. In border areas on major highways, particularly Interstate 95, cigarettes are sold wholesale. Investigations by several law enforcement agencies have established that organized crime figures are financing the purchases, particularly for resale in New York City.

The trade is lucrative for North Carolina. According to the state Department of Revenue, the two cent tax produces $20 million per year in revenues; but only $12 million comes from cigarettes smoked in North Carolina. The rest, or $8 million, comes from what revenue officials politely term "sales for out-of-state consumption."

If North Carolina raised its tax past Virginia's, it would probably lose the smuggling trade, and the extra revenue. An increase to three cents, for example, would actually cost the state $2 million.

Smith's proposal for a six cent tax in 1975-76 would raise the state's revenues from $20 million to about $36 million. The nine cent tax in 1976-77 would raise the revenues to $54 million.

The smuggling trade indirectly influences another argument used by tobacco-conscious legislators in opposing the tax.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, for example, says an increase in North Carolina's tax would spur other states to raise their taxes a commensurate amount. Eventually, he said, prices would rise high enough to cause smokers to cut down or quit. That would hurt the tobacco farmer.

Why would other states raise their taxes to follow North Carolina's lead?

As the major source of smuggled cigarettes, Hunt said, North Carolina is watched closely by other states which are being victimized by the smuggling or fear they might become victims if the difference between their tax and North Carolina's becomes too large.

If North Carolina raised its tax, Hunt said, other states would be encouraged to do the same without fear that smuggling would result.

Hunt said he also opposes raising the tax because it is regressive. The poor, he said, are hurt by it more than the rich.

The tobacco viewpoint will be difficult to overcome for a freshman like Smith. Hunt presides over the Senate, and he will send Smith's bill to the Finance Committee, chaired by Sen. Russell Kirby, D-Wilson.

Kirby's district is heavily dependent on tobacco and he strongly opposes an increase in the tax. In the House, Speaker

James C. Green is the owner of a tobacco warehouse.

Smith's tax package would replace the estimated $78 million lost by repeal of the food tax with a combination of income tax increases in upper brackets, the cigarette tax increase, and elimination of the corporate dividend and sales tax loopholes.

He thinks it is the right thing whether or not it is politically viable. "I would as soon tax air or water as tax food," he said, puffing on one of the 20 or so cigarettes he smokes per day.

"Cigarettes," he said, "are not a necessity."

$62,341 To Candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Contributions totaling $62,341 were made to former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford's campaign for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination last year, according to reports filed with the General Accounting Office.

The Citizens Committee to Nominate Terry Sanford reported that $33,910 was spent during 1974, mostly for workers' expenses, lawyers' fees and supplies.

Most of the contributions to Sanford, now president of Duke University, were from North Carolinians, although there were a few donations from other states.

The list of contributors included former North Carolina Gov. and Mrs. Robert Scott, who gave $250. Charlotte banker Luther Hodges Jr., son of former Gov. Luther Hodges, gave $1,000.

State Sen. and Mrs. Ralph Scott of Alamance County contributed $250 to Sanford's campaign and state Rep. Charles Holt of Fayetteville contributed $100.

Out-of-state contributions included composer-producer Richard Adler of New York, $250. J.B. Fuqua of Atlanta, chairman of the board of Fuqua Industries, gave $1,000. Tennessee newspaper publisher John Seigenthaler contributed $500 as did former West Virginia Gov. Hulett C. Smith.

Federal law requires that all contributions of more than $100 be made public.

No Deficit Now Likely

RALEIGH (AP) — Thanks partly to the recession, North Carolina's highway program probably will have enough money so that none of the planned projects need be scrapped.

That's the word from state Transportation Secretary Troy Doby. At a news conference Friday, Doby said the feared $50-million deficit in the two-year road budget apparently will not occur.

There were two primary reasons for Doby's change in predictions, lower construction costs and higher gasoline tax revenues. The recession has made bidding for road contracts "more competitive," Doby said, adding that bids on projects are lower than anticipated.

Last fall, Doby said there would be a need to cut back some programs because of rising construction costs and declining gasoline tax revenues.

But, Friday the picture had changed. Doby said the eight cents a gallon tax showed a 9 per cent revenue increase in November, less than half a per cent increase in December and a 2.7 increase per cent in January. The tax brings in a little under $21 million a month.

On the negative side, Doby said President Ford's proposed $3 a barrel tax on imported crude oil would raise gasoline prices and result in a decline in consumption and in the state's gas tax revenues.

PLAYING CARDS
PROHIBITION ASKED
PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — A congress of women's associations called on the House of Assembly to revoke the law allowing playing cards to be used and sold. The women said their husbands were causing family problems by gambling, and said that if the house failed to act they would stage a protest march.

Johnny Miller Captures Third Win In 4 Starts

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Now, perhaps more than anyone ever has before, Johnny Miller has thrown down the challenge to Jack Nicklaus.

man said after scoring his third victory in four starts this season.

This one came by a comfortable three strokes in the $160,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic, and put Miller ahead of last season's pace when he scored eight victories, acquired Player of the Year honors and collected a record $353,021 in prize winnings.

Nicklaus, the famed and feared Golden Bear who has dominated pro golf for the past decade, did not compete in this unique, five-day 90-hole grind that is spread over four desert courses.

"Jack has been No. 1 so long, people are wanting someone to challenge him," Miller said after posting a last round, four-under-par 68, for a 339 total, a distant 21-under-par.

"I think just because they want to see somebody else up there, they're beginning to say I'm No. 1," Miller said. "Right now I might be."

"But Jack has the ability to be better," said Miller who has been, quite possibly, the outstanding player in the game since his record triumph in the 1973 U.S. Open.

"He has the potential," Miller said. "He's stronger than I am and more experienced. But he's not playing up to his potential, and I am."

"Maybe I'm better right now, but he could be."

Nicklaus has played only twice this year. He tied Miller for sixth in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, the only time Miller has played and failed to win this year. Nicklaus was a distant 14th in the Hawaiian Open. Miller didn't play there. And Jack isn't playing in this week's San Diego Open.

He's sticking to his usual schedule, all aimed toward putting his game at a peak at the Masters in Augusta, Ga., the first week in April. That schedule calls for no more than than two tournaments in a row and probably only three or four more appearances before the Masters.

Miller now has won 11 American tournaments in the last 14 months.

The $32,000 he collected from this tournament pushed his winnings for the year to $108,343. That compares with $100,943 at this stage a year ago — when he set a record — and he's planning on playing a little more this year.

"I played good enough to win most tournaments," said Jerry Heard, second to Miller in Phoenix and third in this one.

"The way he's playing, he's making the rest of us look like monkeys," Heard said.

Chunky, red-haired Bob Murphy came on to take second with a 66 and a 342 total, 18-under-par and three back. Heard was at 343 after a last-round 69.

Chicod, Jasper Split 2 Games

Chicod and Jasper split a pair of games over the weekend with Jasper gaining a 30-29 win in the boys' game and Chicod winning 23-20 in the girls' contest.

Felix Bryant paced the Jasper attack in the first game with ten points while James Carter led Chicod with 12.

In the girls' game, Melissa Bailey collected 11 points for Chicod to lead their scoring and Sandra Becton topped the Jasper effort with 12.

It was supposed to be "Showdown North," the second big—and the decisive—battle between the two leaders of the Southern Conference, East Carolina and Furman.

But tonight's meeting of the two teams in Minges Coliseum, at 8 p.m., doesn't quite carry the impact it would have had it not been for an upset by Appalachian State last week over the Bucs.

Now, even a Pirate victory couldn't knock the Paladins off their lofty perch atop the league. But it could do a number of other things. It could prove that the Paladins are vulnerable to a Southern Conference team. It could stop their unbeaten streak. It could maintain the Pirates' home court advantage the Bucs are enjoying this year.

For the Pirates, the most important factor would be that a victory would insure them of being one of the host teams for the first round of the tournament, March 1.

Under this year's tournament plan, each of the top four teams will host a lower seeded team in the first round, with the winners meeting for the semifinals and finals the following Wednesday and Thursday in Greenville, S.C. East Carolina comes into the game with an 8-2 Southern record, and after a 101-91 victory over Davidson Saturday night. Furman will be coming in following two straight losses to North Carolina and N.C. State in the North-South doubleheader in Charlotte Friday and Saturday.

"The victory over Davidson gave us something we needed badly—a victory," said East Carolina Coach Dave Patton. "We responded to the challenge quite well, and I was pleased with our showing. It showed that the Appalachian game had no after affects. We played well except for an early stretch in the second half."

Patton felt that his Bucs got a little loose after building up a halftime lead of 15 points. "We knew that we had run them out on their home court and we only had a six point halftime lead there. But this is a much better Davidson team than the one we met the first time."

During the early part of the half, Davidson put on a rally, coming back to within four points before the Bucs pulled away for as much as a 17-point lead with two minutes left.

Patton felt the play of senior forward Robert Geter was a big factor when the going got close. "His shooting percentage dipped because so many of his shots went in and then came back out. But he stayed after it and usually put it back in." Geter was the game's leading rebounder with 14.

"We needed this to restore our confidence," Patton added. "We needed to start thinking positive after that Appalachian nightmare."

Patton wasn't surprised by the good play of Furman against State and Carolina. "In fact, I really thought they would beat one of them."

Patton said that their freshman guard, Ronnie Smith, had been a big improvement for Furman. "Of course, they have Clyde Mayes, who was Player of the Year last season, and he'll certainly go high in the pro draft. And Fessor Leonard (7-1) is a great one too."

But the man who killed the Bucs in the first meeting was Craig Lynch, the other front-court man. "We've got to contain him and the other guard, Michael Hall, to be successful."

"Of course, we're going to have to play every one of them as a very dangerous opponent," Patton said.

"We'll have to have an effort as good or better than any we've had this year to beat them," the coach said.

"One thing that will help us will be the crowd. Furman's crowd gave them a lot of support, and I'm sure that our fans will be just as hard on them. We're looking for close to a full house, and I hope they'll be just as noisy for us."

ECU Wrestlers Win In Quadrangle Meet

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. — The East Carolina University wrestling team won all the marbles in a quadrangle meet here Saturday, slipping by host William & Mary 17-14, and outclassing Old Dominion 31-10 and the Quantico Marines 36-9.

ECU gained decisions in five out of the ten weight classes and earned a draw in the sixth to edge by William & Mary as the Indians failed in their bid to upset the nationally-ranked Pirates.

The Pirates dominated Old Dominion, winning nine of the ten classes and losing the heavyweight division by a forfeit. Old Dominion also gave ECU a forfeit win and the Bucs registered five decisions, one pin, and two draws in winning going away. Quantico won three decisions over the Pirates but fell by a decisive margin as East Carolina recorded five pins among their seven mat victories.

The triple win improved the Pirate wrestling record to 10-0 for the year.

Time For Work At Daytona Beach For Younger Allison

By F.T. MacFEELEY
Associated Press Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison will be the busiest man in the driver's seat as Speed Weeks roars to a climax in the coming six days, but his brother Donnie got a head start with the pole position for Sunday's $187,000 Daytona 500.

Donnie, younger of the successful racing brothers at 35, is spending his extra hours in his new garage at Daytona Beach.

"If hard work can get us to the top, we'll be there," Donnie said after driving his Chevrolet at 185.827 miles an hour Sunday. "Our crew has been getting this car ready 24 hours a day for the past two weeks."

His speed was the fastest of 33 late model stock car drivers who went after the pole. It paid off with an immediate $5,000 plus pole position in one of two qualifying races Thursday and inside pole in Sunday's richest stock car race ever run.

David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., captured the outside front row spot for Sunday and the pole in Thursday's other qualifier with second fastest time of 184.411 m.p. h. in a Mercury.

"I ran better than I thought I would," Pearson said. "But we'll have to get better yet. Those Chevrolets improved a lot with their new cylinder heads and streamlined front end."

Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N.C., was third fastest at 184.022 in a Ford and declared he's "real happy because we can't expect much more than that."

Richard Petty of Randleman, N.C., qualified fourth best at 183.165 in a Dodge.

Bobby Allison, 37, of Hueytown, Ala., was fifth best with 182.215 in a Matador. He is one of stock car racing's three millionaires with $1,051,296 prize money in NASCAR's Grand National division alone.

Donnie, who started driving Grand National late models five years later than his brother in 1966, has won $412,688.

In addition to the Grand National races Thursday and Sunday, Bobby Allison will compete in the International Race of Champions and NASCAR modified races, both Friday, and the Permatex 300 for late model sportsmen cars Saturday.

Pole position qualifying for the Daytona 500 shared attention Sunday with Ron Hutcherson's victory in the Automobile Racing Club of America's 200-mile winter spectacular.

Hutcherson, 31, a wall paper salesman from Keokuk, Iowa, led 167 miles in his Plymouth and beat out pole starter Terry Ryan of Davenport, Iowa with a Chevrolet, by seven seconds.

Gene Taylor of Huntington, W.Va. was third in a Dodge; Lennie Pond of Petersburg, Va., fourth in a Chevrolet; Herk Harbour of Proctorville, Ohio, fifth in a Dodge; James Hylton of Inman, S.C., sixth in a Chevrolet, and Alton Jones of Pleasant Grove, Ala., seventh in a Chevrolet.

"It's what we set out to do, and it worked out as we planned," said Hutcherson. "I hope to get in a car in NASCAR, but there's nothing definite."

Thieves Took Hockey Gear

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An estimated $20,000 in hockey equipment owned by the Philadelphia Firebirds of the North American Hockey League was stolen early Sunday.

The burglary was reported to police by team trainer Paul Granchukoff. Granchukoff said skates, sticks, pads, gloves and team shirts were taken from each player's dressing stall.

Police said the robbers used a crowbar to enter through two large garage doors, then crawled to the locker room through a heating duct.

David Thompson of North Carolina State should become the all-time leading basketball scorer in the Atlantic Coast Conference before these final three weeks of the regular season are out.

He has scored 2,077 points in 77 games during his three years as a varsity player, an average of 27 a game.

The league brochure says the conference scoring champion is Len Chappel of Wake Forest, who made 2,165 points in 1960-1962. Thompson may surpass that figure next week, in the home game against Duke on Wednesday, Feb. 19.

Two others, Dickie Hemric of Wake Forest and Buzzy Wilkinson of Virginia, scored more than Chappel, but some of their playing was before the ACC was formed in 1953. Wilkinson had 2,233 points in his career, 1,712 as an ACC player. Hemric scored 2,587 points in four seasons, two of which came before formation of the league.

Thompson would have to average almost 37 points a game, and his team to reach the country's final four again, for him to surpass Hemric. But if the freshmen eligibility rule had come one year earlier, Thompson, might already be the all-time conference leader.

Thompson, scored 35 points, a little over one more than his average for the season, as the N.C. State Wolfpack defeated Furman 102-87 Saturday night.

In the other concluding game of the annual North-South Doubleheaders at Charlotte, N.C., North Carolina made its most points of the season in defeating Georgia Tech, 111-81. While The Wolfpack and the Tar Heels were playing out-siders, Maryland added to its ACC lead by routing Duke 104-80.

Maryland is 7-2 in the conference. N.C. State and North Carolina are 5-2.

Then come Clemson 5-3, Virginia 3-6, Duke 2-6 and Wake Forest 2-8.

Virginia beat Wake Forest 71-58 at home in the only other game involving ACC teams Saturday.

It's important to lead at the end of the regular season because that means a bye in the first round of the championship tournament which starts March 6 in the Greensboro, N.C. Coliseum.

North Carolina will play three of its remaining five conference games at home, and Clemson two of its four.

N.C. State plays four of five away from home, at Virginia, Wake Forest, Clemson and North Carolina.

Maryland plays road games at Duke, North Carolina and Virginia, and meets only Clemson at home.

North Carolina has won all seven of its games this season in its Carmichael Auditorium. Last Friday afternoon, 48 hours before tickets were to be distributed for the game with Maryland on Saturday, Feb. 15, which was then more than a week away, North Carolina students began lining up outside the auditorium. The game will be televised nationally, beginning at 6 p.m.

Duke is the only ACC team playing tonight, home to Duquesne.

Deadline Near For Baseballers

NEW YORK (AP) — Midnight tonight is the deadline for major league baseball players, dissatisfied with their 1975 contract offers, to file for arbitration hearings.

In this second year of having an impartial arbitrator settle contract disputes, more than 20 players have submitted their contracts for arbitration, according to the latest word from Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Today is the day pitchers Clay Carroll and Don Gullett of the Cincinnati Reds will decide whether they will file for arbitration. Their attorney, Jerry Kapstein, planned to meet again today with the Reds' management after failing to reach agreement Sunday. However, he said, "We're confident we can work it out. Everything was very positive."

Meanwhile, Miller has refused to name the players who have submitted their contracts to arbitration but he did say there are "quite a few from Oakland again." Nine members of the A's, world champions for three straight seasons, went to arbitration last year.

Many more of owner Charles

O. Finley's players reportedly are unhappy with their 1975 contracts and apparently are headed for arbitration. They include such standouts as slugger Reggie Jackson, who won a $35,000 raise in arbitration last year, Joe Rudi, Gene Tenace, Bert Campaneris, Ken Holtzman and Vida Blue. Five A's won at the arbitration table last year and four lost.

At least three members of the Atlanta Braves — National League batting champion Ralph Garr and pitchers Buzz Capra and Tom House — reportedly are set for arbitration.

Minnesota's Rod Carew, the American League batting king, pitcher Pat Dobson of the New York Yankees and pitcher Ray Sadecki of the St. Louis have filed for arbitration.

Others reportedly set for arbitration include second baseman Bobby Grich of Baltimore, outfielder Johnny Briggs and pitcher Tom Murphy of Milwaukee and pitcher Don Carriethers of Montreal.

The hearings are set for New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco starting Wednesday with the arbitrator choosing either the player's or the owner's figures. There is no compromise.

ACC lead by routing Duke 104-80. Maryland is 7-2 in the conference. N.C. State and North Carolina are 5-2. Then come Clemson 5-3, Virginia 3-6, Duke 2-6 and Wake Forest 2-8. Virginia beat Wake Forest 71-58 at home in the only other game involving ACC teams Saturday.

Then there will be action only on Wednesday and Saturday of this week.

On Wednesday, North Carolina State will be at Virginia, Clemson at Wake Forest and Duke at North Carolina in a game which will be televised regionally.

On Saturday, beside the Maryland at North Carolina game, N.C. State will be at Wake Forest in a 3 p.m. regionally televised game, and Duke will be at Clemson and Virginia at Pittsburgh at night.

Two Jumpers Injured In Meet

The indoor track team of East Carolina University suffered two key personnel losses Saturday during a four-team meet at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Pirates' top two long jumpers, Willie Harvey and Joe Durham, tore hamstring muscles during the meet and according to ECU track officials, both will be out for the season.

ECU participated in the meet with UNC, Duke and North Carolina State University.

The Pirates' next indoor meet will be Thursday at Ohio State.

Hall Of Fame Honor Declined By Bill Russell

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Bill Russell, All-American, pro basketball superstar, the first black coach in major league sports and an apparent fun-loving guy on television commercials, continues as a maverick when it comes to personal honors.

In his first year of eligibility, Russell was named during the weekend to the National Basketball Hall of Fame, a shrine near the founding of basketball in Springfield, Mass.

man, Tommy Heinsohn, Frank Ramsey and many others dangle.

However Russell wanted nothing to do with a public show. He finally agreed to attend the flag-raising — before the Garden doors were opened for the game. Only a handful of people were on hand. The general public, the paying fans, came in later to see No. 6 hanging from the rafters.

Now Russell is planning to give a cold shoulder to the Hall of Fame, which currently has only 94 individual members and four teams.

"You can't refuse induction, but as far as going through with initiation, that is a different thing," Russell said.

Voted into the Hall of Fame with Russell were three old timers, Joseph Brennan, a pro star from 1919-36 and St. Francis of Brooklyn coach from 1941-48; the late Emil S. Liston of Baker (Kan.) University, coach and founder of the National Association of Intercollegiate basketball, and Indiana legend Robert "Fuzzy" Vandiver.

All four are scheduled for induction into the Hall of Fame at a ceremony April 28. And, despite Russell's statements, Hall executive director Lee Williams expects him to be there.

"All I know is what I've heard," Williams said. "I talked to him in January and then I talked to him twice during the NBA All-Star Game in Phoenix. I asked if we could expect him and he said he'd be here. I sent him a confirming letter, but I have not had man-to-man contact with him since."

Russell refused to take part in a public ceremony which included raising a flag with his old number to the rafters of Boston Garden. The retired numbers of such former Boston greats as Bob Cousy, Bill Shar-

When asked his feelings about the honor, Russell, now general manager and coach of the Seattle SuperSonics in the National Basketball Association, said Saturday night he would refuse induction.

"For my own personal reasons, which I don't want to discuss, I don't want to be a part of it," Russell said.

The reaction of the 6-foot-9 former Boston Celtics star, who revolutionized pro basketball with his defensive wizardry, caught few observers in his old pro hometown by surprise.

Russell quit as player-coach of the Celtics in 1969 after leading the team to its 11th NBA title in his 13 years with the club. Later, when he was doing commentary on national telecasts, the Celtics decided to retire his No. 6 during one of his visits to Boston, a Sunday afternoon game.

Marathon Win For Colombian

COAMO, P.R. (AP) — Colombian Victor Mora, who only the day before had to be treated for an old leg injury, took first place Sunday in the 13th running of the San Blas Illescas Marathon.

Mora's victory, coupled with the fourth-place finish by countryman Luis Pinzon, gave Colombia the team championship for the 21.6-kilometer event. Mora's time was 1 hour, 5 minutes, 15 seconds.

Crossing the finish line in order behind Mora were Sepu Cuominen, Finland; Paave Navinska, Finland; Pinzon; Tom Fleming, United States, and Jose De Jesus, Puerto Rico.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

North Carolina farmers will need to adopt fertilizer-stretching practices again this year due to the tight supply situation.

Reports indicate that total supplies may be some larger than the short supplies available in 1974, but expansion of acreages of some crops will increase total demand. Nitrogen is expected still to be one of the most critical elements.

N. C. State University specialists and county extension agents are suggesting a number of alternatives or adjustments to help farmers stretch fertilizer—especially nitrogen—supplies.

One way is to cut back where excessive amounts of nitrogen have been used on corn in the past. Dr. Jack Baird, Extension soils specialist, said nitrogen has been relatively inexpensive and plentiful until recently, encouraging farmers to apply more than was needed.

"Nitrogen on much of the North Carolina corn grown for grain could be reduced to 125 to 150 pounds per acre with careful timing and close attention to plant populations suggested by plant breeders," Baird said.

He said these suggestions are offered particularly to farmers who are expanding corn acreage. "They should use soil tests to identify other nutrient needs that may limit the crop's response to nitrogen," the specialist suggested.

Baird pointed out that many farmers could save nitrogen by splitting applications. He suggested using a fourth to a third of the nitrogen with the herbicide at planting time and delaying the remainder until layby time. This minimizes risks of losing fertilizer by leaching.

Another alternative is the use of sources of nitrogen other than solution. These include calcium nitrate, sodium nitrate, amonia, ammonium sulfate, urea or other less commonly used sources of nitrogen for corn, cotton or grain sorghum.

These may be more expensive than nitrogen solution but could be a means of salvaging a crop and producing a good yield, Baird commented.

The use of animal manure is another consideration. It not only provides from 10 to 50 pounds of nitrogen per ton but also supplies phosphorus and potash. An analysis may be needed to determine the nutrient content of the manure.

Switching crops can help avoid a fertilizer problem. Planting soybeans for part of the corn acreage could reduce the need for nitrogen since soybeans do not require nitrogen.

Any residues of soybeans and peanut vines will

Kennedy Wants Cuba Harmony

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says the drive to isolate Communist Cuba from the Americas was a mistake and ineffective.

In an interview from Washington with the Mexican television network on Sunday, the Massachusetts Democrat called on the United States and Latin America to normalize relations with Fidel Castro's government.

Sen. Kennedy said isolation "was an error and a return to the cold war and confrontation with regimes opposing the United States and other democratic societies. Frankly, all of that has been ineffective. What ever may have been the reasons and justifications at that moment have no more validity."

supply about 20 to 30 pounds, or 30 to 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre, respectively, for the following crop.

Over the long haul, Baird said farmers may want to consider the planting of winter legumes or other legumes for the production of supplemental nitrogen. The feasibility of this practice would largely depend on whether the shortage situation continues.

During the fall of 1974, the average price was $28.44 per cent as compared to $53.93 in 1973 at the North Carolina Feeder Calf sales. This resulted in an average of $129.58 per head, a decrease of $118.65 from the previous year. However, cattle marketed through these state graded sales averaged from three to six cents per pound more than cattle sold through other channels.

If your calves did not bring this much in 1973 or '74, there are several management practices that you may not have followed that can help you in 1975.

Right now lice are one of the major reasons your cattle may not be looking too well. In studies of weight loss, cattle free of lice averaged a loss of 26 pounds while those infested with cattle lice lost an average of 108 pounds per animal. Clodrin, Coral, Malathion or Methoxychlor are very effective in controlling lice when used routinely over the entire herd.

Internal parasites cause the same economic losses as do February parasites. There is no better time than early spring and fall to worm cattle to help control internal parasites. There are several products available. Two of the most effective are levamisole (Tramisol) and thiabendazole (Thibenazole).

There are many other simple management practices you can follow to increase your income from cattle. Your County Agricultural Extension Service can help you implement these practices.

Let's not forget the N. C. Cattleman's Conference, February 17-18, in Raleigh. This year's program will be placing a lot of emphasis on forage and pasture utilization.

Accommodations Pressure Eases

MANILA (UPI) — Tourism officials announced that the pressure on room accommodations in Manila due to heavy tourist traffic in the Philippines has been eased with the advance opening of the El Grande-Manila hotel.

El Grande, a $7.5 million complex consisting of a main pavilion and fully furnished luxury bungalows has 400 rooms initially available but expects to expand to a total of 2,000 rooms by 1976. It is located in Paranaque, about 15 miles south of Manila.

Bath Gardens, Kingston, Jamaica, is the second oldest botanic garden in the Western Hemisphere. It has a variety of naturalized exotica from all over the world.

CHAIRMAN—Television and film star Peter Falk has been named National Chairman for the Eastern Seal Society's 1975 campaign. This is the second consecutive year the popular actor has spearheaded the Society's annual drive for funds to support some 2,000 Easter Seal facilities and programs for handicapped children and adults. The campaign will run from Feb. 24 through March 30, Eastern Sunday.

D.H. Conley HIGHLIGHTS

The normally fast pace of life at Conley was quickened even further this week by a variety of events. On Tuesday, Vikings rallied together in spirit against the North Pitt Panthers at a pep rally. The pep rally was highlighted by skits, chants and a special Spirit Ladder. The ladder was climbed by Clennel Streeter, a star basketball player, and Mrs. Helen McClanahan, a teacher at Conley. They were helped up the ladder by the volume of the students' voices.

The first one to reach the top got a treat—a whipped cream pie in the face. Of course, we couldn't do that to one of our best players, but Mrs. McClanahan was another matter. The seniors remembered the composition assigned in English by Mrs. Mac, and helped her get her "just" reward. It made our day! Also the Drum and Bugle Corps provided musical entertainment. Guys, you were great! Many thanks go to all the students and faculty who helped make the pep rally a success.

IPS Students-of-the-Week are Angelo House, second period; Walter Clark, third period; Charles Hanson, fourth period; and Louie Dixon, fifth period. The over-all best student is Walter Clark.

Currently organized by Ron Braxton, an IPS teacher at Conley, is the Science Honor Seminars. These seminars are for the IPS students who have the highest grade averages and keen interests in science.

Students enrolled in these seminars are Jimmy Hines (chairman), Bertha Carter, Walter Clark, Wayne Coward, Jimmy Dixon, Louie Dixon, Jeffery Haddock, Darlene Hines, Robby Hudson, Tim McClanahan, and Donald Ribeiro.

These students will visit the science departments of various colleges and different industries located in the area. They will study and discuss current scientific issues, also.

The JROTC at Conley is on the move as usual. The Girls' and Boys' Drill Teams and the Drum and Bugle Corps performed at A.G. Cox Grammar School on Tuesday. They plan to travel to Chicod and G.R. Whitfield Elementary Schools soon.

The Annual Military Ball is coming up on February 15. It's going to be held at the American Legion Building in Greenville this year. The Dave Bart Five will perform. Planning of the decorations and menu have already begun. This year the JROTC will see a fine ball.

The Cadets of the Month have been chosen. They are Cheryl Patrick, MT I; Kenneth Avery, MT II; and Mike Clendenen, MT III. Frank Nelson has been promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant.

Several cadets have received the National Honor Society Ribbon. They are Kenneth Avery, Mark Berg, Bill Byrd, Mike Clendenen, Gregory Daniels, Trent Knight, and Robert Padgett. Congratulations to these outstanding students.

On February 27, at the Kinston National Guard Armory, a Health Career Day will be held. All seniors interested in going should sign up with their counselor. Every medical field will be represented here.

Felton Bess has been nominated for the Most Valuable Student Award given by the Elks. Many congratulations are in order for that nomination.

Richard Williams is currently a student intern in the guidance department at Conley. Williams attends East Carolina University.

Excitement abounded Wednesday morning as students and wrestlers prepared for the Conference Wrestling Tournament held at Conley. The tournament began at 12:00 with the final matches starting at 8:00 p.m. Farmville took first place honors, but the Conley Vikings ran a close second.

What a week! See you next time for more D.H. Conley highlights!

Cat May Try Return Trip

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The governor's mansion has a cat. It belongs to no one in particular. It has served the mansion for several years and under at least two different governors.

The question is whether the unnamed cat will find its way back to Santa Fe from outgoing Gov. Bruce King's ranch near Stanley, about 40 miles southeast of Santa Fe.

The cat once belonged to Gov. David F. Cargo. When he left office Jan. 1, 1971, he took it with him to Nambe.

The cat found its way back the nearly 15 miles to Santa Fe and joined the Kings. Cargo was a Republican, King a Democrat.

When King left office Jan. 1, 1975, he took the aging cat with him.

Will the cat adjust to ranch life? Or will it come back to the mansion occupied by Democrat Jerry Apodaca and his family?

2 ♥ 2 ♦ ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Four hearts. There is no need to place any further strain on partner. His free heart raise shows a hand that is better than minimum, and the auction has marked him with at most a singleton spade. The two hands should fit well, so game must be odds-on.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J865 ♥A9642 ♦J7 ♦Q8
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Dble. ?
What action do you take?

A.—We suggest an immediate bid of one heart. If you elect to pass now, hoping to come into the auction later, aggressive opponents could have the bidding at too high a level for you to take any later action with any degree of safety.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1065 ♥92 ♦KQJ7 ♦A83
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—With 14 points opposite at least 19 in partner's hand, there is no question about bidding a slam—it is simply a matter of which is the best slam. We suggest that, for the moment, a bid of three diamonds is adequate. If partner raises diamonds, showing four-card support, six diamonds should be your best bet. If partner returns to three no trump, raise to six.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠764 ♥AJ93 ♦J2 ♦AQ87
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
3 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—With a conservative partner who will always have at least 21 points for the bid, six no trump seems reasonable. However, if partner is aggressive and might make the bid with fewer high-card values but with a long diamond suit, a slam invitation raise to four no trump would be adequate.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J73 ♦A92 ♦AKQJ762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?
What do you open?

A.—Four diamonds. Despite the fact that partner passed originally, slam prospects are excellent. If partner cue-bids the ace of hearts next, you must sign off in four spades. But if he raises diamonds, you should try six clubs, which should be a better slam than six spades because your suit is solid.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as dealer with 80 on score you hold:
♠83 ♥AJ10976532 ♦J7
What do you open?

A.—Four hearts. With a nine-card suit, it is most unlikely that you will be able to buy the contract at a lower level, so you might as well bid the full value of your hand at the start in order to make it difficult for the opponents to get in.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8753 ♥KQ8 ♦AJ109 ♦Q5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass Pass Dble. Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Pass. As a general rule, it is unwise to play for penalties at the one-level when you have only four trumps and partner is balancing. Still, it is unlikely that your side can make a game and your defensive prospects are excellent.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠82 ♥AQ762 ♦Q982 ♦85
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Pass. You are reluctant to sell out to an opening bid of one diamond, but no other action appeals to us. Partner could not enter the auction (over one diamond, so chances are that the opponents have a better contract, possibly even a game, in one of the black suits).

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1975

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day and p.m. to get in tune with up-to-date thinking and action. Show those of whom you are fond that you are truly devoted both romantically and practically.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have clever ideas that you would do well to keep to yourself instead of spreading about for others to steal. Unexpected good time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Join with fine associates and work on those mutual goals with a vengeance. Make a good friend of that admirer who interests you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you contact that bigwig, you find you can rise to greater heights in your career. Take part in some civic matter.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have just the right inspiration now to get those new ideas working. A plan to travel is good, but discuss with bigwig.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Follow hunches now to gain your objectives. An idea or two from your mate can also be of help to you now. Avoid an ego-deflator.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to get partner to okay your plan, but describe it in full, accurately. Don't hesitate about getting into civic venture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study newspaper for ideas for home improvement. A fellow worker can be helpful to you, but you have to state your thoughts clearly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact congenials for recreational activity. Show more devotion to mate and come to a better understanding. Spend within means.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen carefully to what family expects of you since you have been too busy to pay much attention of late. Entertain.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day to have those appointments you've been postponing and get good results. Communications and travel affairs favored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Now you know exactly how to handle practical affairs most intelligently. Listen to expert's suggestions. A happy social p.m.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Gain personal aims early. The social side of life is good later in day, since others are in a fine mood to be helpful.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will require moral and religious training early and will need while young to be among intelligent persons in order to mature well. It is important that the wrong people are not around your promising progeny, for they could appeal to the darker side of this nature. Ideal chart here for the investigator, the artist, the big business man or woman, the laboratory worker, etc. Bring out musical talent through lessons.

Records 24 Hours In Free-Fall Time

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. Army Special Forces sergeant major stationed at this sprawling paratrooper base has become the nation's first person to record 24 hours of free-fall parachute time, according to military authorities.

He is Sgt. Maj. George A. Zacher, chief instructor of the military free-fall division of the Special Forces school.

In recognition of his achievement, Zacher has been awarded the U.S. Parachute Associations first diamond free-fall badge.

Zacher qualified for the award a year ago, but the diamond badge had not yet been manufactured.

Zacher is a paratrooper veteran of more than 23 years. He began his free-fall jumping in 1952 and became actively engaged in sport parachuting in 1959 while stationed at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

With more than 2,400 free-fall parachute jumps to his credit, Zacher has added 2½ more hours during the past year to bring his total free-fall time to 26½ hours.

Zacher figures this is the equivalent of about 3,300 miles or the distance falling and floating through the air from Washington, D.C., to Seattle, Wash.

The 43-year-old soldier, a native of Eagle Butte, S.D., joined the Army in 1951 and served four tours in Vietnam.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back slightly in profit taking today, with activity tapering off from the unprecedented pace of the past two weeks.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 3.13 at 708.78, and losers held a slight edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers said it appeared a good many traders had stepped back to wait for indications of new market trends after the sharp rally of January began to level off last week.

Trading volume lagged noticeably behind the heavy levels that set several NYSE records over the past two weeks. What activity there was seemed largely to reflect cashing in of profits from recent gains.

Occidental Petroleum, the most active issue on the Big Board, rose 3/4 to 15 in trading marked by a series of 10,000 to 15,000 share blocks at 14 1/2 and 15.

F.W. Woolworth picked up 3/4 to 13 1/4 in active trading. Barron's magazine noted signs of a potential improvement in the company's outlook.

Diebold dropped 1 1/2 to 17 on lower fourth quarter earnings.

At the American Stock Exchange, Brad Ragan jumped 1 1/2 to 15 1/2.

The company announced plans to set up a tire retreading operation in Saudi Arabia in a joint venture with Saudi Research and Development Corp.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index as down .10 at 41.71.

The Amex market value index was unchanged at 75.08 after the first hour.

Symposium Sponsored

The Greenville Alumnae Chapter of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority sponsored its first Black Awareness Hour Symposium for the Miss College Bound participants, who are seniors in the high schools in Greenville and Pitt County Friday, afternoon at Carver Library.

The panelists were Kenneth Hammond, assistant director of the Student Union at ECU; Ernest Adams, manager of Norcott's Greenville Funeral Home; and John W. Maye, Jr. Hammond stated that Blacks feature three attitudes—optimism, pessimism and realism. It is his contention that Blacks have progressed from quite a long way; yet, Blacks have many obstacles to overcome. Adams discussed blacks and their contribution in business stating that business operators must be courteous and respectful, honest and cooperative while Maye appealed to the audience to analyze situations around about them, to not permit themselves to become captives, slaves of the mind.

Participating were Pearlle Holliday, Wanda Carmon, Natalie Fleming and Jessica Carney.

Carolyn Dixon was the guests and sorors present were Doris Lee, Rebecca Norcott, Selina Davenport Forbes, Edna Graves, Pattie Leary, Mary Murrell and Beatrice Maye.
