An Optimistic Sec. Kissinger Flies To Syria

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger concluded "very positive" talks today with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on an Israeli withdrawal in Sinai and flew here seeking Syria's support.

"We are still in business," Kissinger told newsmen before meeting with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Privately, U.S. officials said Syria was not opposed to a second-stage agreement between Egypt and Israel and might actually favor another Golan Heights accord.

Significantly, an editorial in the official Syrian government newspaper Al Thawra called for militancy "whether the political endeavors go to Geneva or stay here." Until now Syria has consistently demanded an immediate resumption of the Geneva peace conference.

Kissinger takes his "exploratory" mission to Israel tonight. A senior American diplomat said further significant progress was unlikely before Kissinger returns to the region around March 10. Stopping first in Cairo, he plans to work out the details then of a sizable Israeli pullback in exchange for moves by Egypt toward acceptance of the Jewish state.

U.S. Officials said an agreement would involve a document signed by both Egypt and Israel. But these officials would not go into detail except to hint that one element of the settlement would involve replacing the oil Israel would lose by giving up the Israeli-occupied Abu Rudeis oil fields.

Kissinger is scheduled to confer with the Shah of Iran in Zurich, Switzerland next Tuesday. Iran, which has been Israel's only foreign supplier, apparently would guarantee to make up the losses, with the United States the backup source in the event of an emergency.

Turkish Cypriots Underline Partition

Proclaim Separate State Offshore Oil Plan Faces Long Delay

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Leaders of the Turkish Cypriot community proclaimed a separate Turkish Cypriot state in northern Cyprus today but said they wanted to federate it with a Greek Cypriot state.

The proclamation was made jointly by the council of ministers and the legislative assembly of the "Autonomous, Turkish Cypriot Administration," meeting in joint session in the Turkish Cypriot quarter of Nicosia.

The proclamation came seven months after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus. It ended in Turkish occupation of the northern 40 per cent of the island and the de facto partition of Cyprus.

Hundreds of Turkish Cypriots in the main square of their sector of the divided capital cheered as the proclamation was read over loudspeakers.

Rauf Denkash, the leader of the Turkish Cypriot community and the vice president in the long-defunct Greek-Turkish island government, was unanimously chosen head of the new state by the joint session, the loudspeakers said.

The proclamation made it clear that the new state was envisaged as a partner with a similar Greek Cypriot state, provided the Greek Cypriots went along with such a settlement of the Cyprus problem.

In Ankara, Premier Said Imrak said today's proclamation was not a move against the independence of Cyprus. "There is no question of partitioning the island or realizing Enosis" — the union of each sector with Turkey or Greece, he said. "This point was reached because of the historical developments in Cyprus."

Turkish Cypriot leaders released a statement saying they issued the proclamation because the Turkish Cypriot community had been "continuously obstructed by the Greek Cypriots from exercising its rights under the constitution."

Assistant Interior Secretary Royston C. Hughes said the delay could even be longer if the Supreme Court fails to rule before the summer recess on a suit over ownership of the oil resources in the Mid-Atlantic.

Hughes commented Wednesday after announcing that the department had been "premature" in asking oil companies Tuesday to submit nominations for offshore areas they would like opened for leasing.

The reversal came only a day after New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne threatened to sue if the request for nominations were not postponed. Byrne said that under a 1971 agreement with New Jersey the government promised not to seek nominations until the oil ownership suit is settled by the Supreme Court.

The court has scheduled a Feb. 24 hearing, and the Justice Department has requested a prompt ruling — at least before the court recesses for the summer June 30.

The government filed the suit in 1969 against Maine and 11 other coastal states to settle the issue of whether the federal government or the states own oil and gas resources beyond the three-mile offshore limit.

In a statement issued through Hughes, Interior Department Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said that when he requested nominations he was "unaware that representation had been made by the federal government to the Supreme Court that the Department of Interior would not call for nominations before the court's determination in the case ..."

Morton had said two weeks earlier that the nation's pressing need for oil compelled him to disregard the agreement, which was made before a time of serious oil shortages.

Meanwhile, two Ford administration officials said Wednesday that unless the United States becomes more independent of foreign oil, a future Arab oil embargo could "strangle" the United States.

Commerce Secretary Frederick B. Dent said, "An oil embargo like the one in 1973 would strangle us, because we would have become even more dependent on Mideast oil than we were in 1973."

Brezhnev Appears

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev made his first official appearance today in 51 days as he received British Prime Minister Harold Wilson in the Kremlin.

Newsman who saw the 68-year-old leader in a Kremlin reception hall said from outward appearances Brezhnev looked healthy. Rumors have abounded since Brezhnev disappeared from public view Dec. 24 that the party chief was ailing.

Brezhnev did not go to the airport earlier with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to meet the visiting British prime minister.

Tass said Brezhnev, Kosygin and Gromyko later held talks with Wilson and British Defense Minister James Callaghan.

Something New For Fire-Fighting

NEW FIRE ENGINE—A new fire truck for the Pactolus Fire Department has recently been placed in service. The new truck is manufactured by Howe Fire Apparatus Co., and is a 500 gallon per minute pumper, with a storage capability of 750 gallons. The truck cost approximately $27,000, and according to Pitt County Fire

Marshall Bobby Joyner, the Pactolus Fire Department is now trying to raise money to help fund the new truck. This brings the total to four trucks in operation for the Pactolus area. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Jones Plans Run In 1976

WASHINGTON, D.C. — First District Congressman Walter Jones announced today that he will be a candidate for reelection to Congress in 1976.

Jones said this morning, "I am happy to announce that I will be a candidate."

He said "I make this announcement at this time in order to dispel all rumors regarding the state of my health. I want to assure my friends that I have completely recovered from a foot infection."

"Since returning to Congress January 14, I have pursued my normal duties in the same manner in which I have for the past nine years."

The Congressman has been plagued with a foot infection for the past several months, and was a patient in Bethesda Naval Medical Center near Washington late last year for treatment of the foot infection. Jones became a Congressman February 10, 1966, after being elected to a special term following the death of Congressman Herbert C. Bonner. He was elected to his first full term in November, 1968.

A graduate of N.C. State University, Jones has served as Mayor of Farmville, served three terms in the State House of Representatives and one term in the State Senate.

While a member of the North Carolina General Assembly, the legislator introduced bills to establish a nursing school at East Carolina University and alcoholic rehabilitation centers in the east and west.

He also introduced the first bill passed by the Legislature to study the formation of a medical school at ECU.

VIEW BLOCKED

At the intersection of the Post Office and Porter's Supply Store here, in Simpson, many vehicles park on the side of the building and block the view so anyone going out has to take a chance. This has been going on for years, but it's very dangerous. J. G.

Parking ordinances would be up to the newly organized Simpson town government. State Department of Transportation Engineer C. W. Snell said he understands a new Post Office for the Simpson community will be finished within 90 days. "It will be set back from the street and there will be adequate parking," he said, "so perhaps this will solve at least a portion of the problem."

Combining Library And Recreation Needs Raised

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Discussions and actions on proposed plans and programs marked the February monthly meeting of the Greenville Recreation Commission meeting Wednesday night.

Commission members voted a recommendation for approval of the idea of a joint facility that could serve both the city's recreation and library needs. Recreation Department Director Boyd Lee outlined such a concept, noting he had had discussions with Library Board Chairman Larry Graham, Librarian Miss Elizabeth Copeland and others.

Under the proposed idea, one building in an eastern Greenville area could serve jointly as a recreation arts and crafts center and as a branch library. With this approval, the idea of a joint facility can be presented to the City Council for consideration as one of the projects to be taken under advisement in a final public hearing on Thursday, February 20. At that time, suggestions will be accepted (in the second of two public hearings) by the council in firming up proposed projects to be submitted in March for Community Development Plan funding.

Lee also gave a report on the department's recommendations previously submitted to the City Council for Recreation Department items that are eligible to meet the criteria set forth for Community Development Plan funding requirements.

Under the title "Recreation and Open Space," eight proposals have been submitted, at a total estimated cost of $274,500.

The eight items are: (1) purchase of the old Epps High School property for a recreation and community center, $85,000; (2) renovation of South Greenville Recreation Center, $35,000; (3) renovation of existing recreation facilities for use by the elderly and the handicapped, $20,000; (4) expansion of the park facilities in east Greenville, $50,000; (5) relighting the activity field at South Greenville Center, $12,000; (6) payment of the city's share of the purchase price of 338 acres of ECU Foundation property along the Tar River, $10,000; (7) purchase of reversed recreational land in new subdivisions, $10,000; and (8) landscaping and beautification, $25,000.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For years I have held down two jobs while my husband sat back and watched like it was a replay of the Dust Bowl.

That is about to change. The International Labor Organization has called on husbands to shoulder a bigger share of the household chores as one way to ease the burden carried by married women who work.

"I think they are absolutely right," said my husband. "Women are overworked trying to balance two jobs. Huffing and puffing, eyes on the clock, picking up kids, ironing at night, shopping for food on their day off. Why don't you try and find some husband to come in and help a couple days a week."

"You don't understand, Jr.," I said. "They're talking about you!"

"I don't do floors or windows," he said quickly.

"That's no problem. I assume you drive."

"Yes, but I bowl on Tuesdays, watch 86 hours of sports a week on TV and sleep in."

"We can work something out."

"I'm not finished yet. I don't mend, scrub, scour, bake, plumb, or dunk diapers up and down in the johns. I don't defrost, wax, move furniture, paint woodwork or take empties back to the store."

"Are you finished?"

"I haven't even started. I don't cut bubble gum out of hair, pack lunches, pick up cleaning, fix the electric garage door, fertilize the grass, iron, compress garbage, wash the dog, do dishes, replace toilet tissue spindles, or clean up after a sick child at three in the morning."

"I don't take telephone messages, mend broken shoestrings, kiss a bloody knee, dust, water plants, work weekends, holidays and on my birthday, or fiddle with checks."

"That's perfectly all right," I smiled. "You can start by picking up the boys' bedroom."

An hour and a half later, I pushed open the door. "How are you making out?"

"Terrific!" he said. "I've read 15 comic books, put together 8 miles of track for my car . . . it's the little red one . . . found my flashlight under the bed I've been looking for for two years, and haven't had anyone bug me for an hour and a half. You know, I don't know what you women have to complain about."

Homemakers Plan Work

Twenty-five Pitt County Extension Homemakers met in a workshop to plan their program of work for the current year.

Objectives were established and a plan of action determined in each of the following nine areas: Citizenship; Cultural Arts; Health; Education; Safety; Family Life; International; Public Information; and Home Economics.

Following the program planning session, the first business meeting of the year was held with Mrs. Nina Phillips, president, presiding. Other officers of the county-wide organization include Mrs. John Condon, Mrs. Bill Goin, Mrs. Wiley Waters, Mrs. McDaniel Wynn and Mrs. Sam Alexander.

Activities and events that local women will participate in during the year include a district "Food Festival—Heritage and Horizons" to be held April 29-30 in Edenton. Mrs. Lyles Russell will represent the county at a Cultural Arts Seminal in Winston-Salem March 12-13. Special emphasis will be placed on activities for older Americans during the month of May.

Plans are already being made for an International Day in connection with the spring council according to Mrs. Sue B. May, home economics extension agent.

Sorority Plans Scholarship

Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa held it's business meeting recently at the Ramada Inn.

Mrs. Frances Gold, chairman of the Scholarship Committee, presented tentative plans for the first annual Alpha Nu Scholarship to be given to an outstanding high school senior with a desire to be trained as a teacher's aide. The scholarship will be given on a rotating basis among the four Pitt County Consolidated High Schools.

Mrs. Peggy Congleton gave a report on the District V workshop held recently in Morehead City. Mrs. Byrd announced that Alpha Nu will be represented at the Alpha Delta Kappa International Convention to be held in Los Angeles, Calif., July 13-19. Mrs. Byrd also announced that the ADK State Convention will be held in Asheville April 25-27. There will be a bus going from eastern North Carolina.

A short presentation on The Greek Alphabet and the proper etiquette of wearing the Alpha Delta Kappa official pin and the recognition pin was given by Mrs. Faye Dempsy, vice president.

Mrs. Ann Byrd conducted the meeting and the devotional was given by Jean Wilson.

Shouting Match Accomplishes Nothing For Him

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a very intelligent, well-read, informed man, but whenever we are out socially and the conversation turns to politics, he always gets into a fight with somebody.

We are on the verge of losing all our friends because most of the people we know are on the other side of the fence. I have told my husband time and again to please stay off politics, but he doesn't pay any attention to me. He gets so worked up in these political arguments that before long he's in a shouting match.

How can I get him to stay off politics?

LOSING FRIENDS

DEAR LOSING: It won't be easy for a man who's as passionate about his political persuasion as your husband seems to be. A lively political debate can be healthy (and fun), but a shouting match accomplishes nothing. Tell your hubby to cool it, and try to practice the art of disagreeing without becoming disagreeable.

DEAR ABBY: Last month, my boyfriend's best friend got married. As weddings go, not one rule of etiquette was followed. For example, I received my wedding invitation the day before the wedding, and many others said they were invited by phone because there weren't enough invitations to go around.

About three weeks after the wedding, the groom had the wedding annulled on the grounds that his wife was mentally unbalanced. (I think they both are!) The groom said that he wanted an annulment instead of a divorce because with an annulment, it is as if the wedding never happened, and he preferred this because he didn't want to be labeled a divorced man. He said it looked bad on job applications, etc.

My boyfriend and I had pooled our money and bought a very expensive wedding gift for this couple. Now we're told that if they had been DIVORCED, the gifts would have been returned. However, since the marriage was ANNULLED, the wedding never happened, so they don't have to return the wedding gifts!

Are there any rules of etiquette to cover this situation?

STUCK IN BOULDER

DEAR STUCK: Yes, the wedding gifts should be returned. But since your friends don't believe in observing the rules of etiquette, I suspect it probably won't faze them.

DEAR ABBY: We are the proud and fortunate parents of two healthy daughters. We thank God for their whole and healthy bodies, and their normal, wholesome minds.

This letter is for people who think that the only perfect family is the one that is comprised of an equal number of each sex. I have actually had people say to me, "Oh, isn't it a pity you have two daughters? It would have been nice if you had one of each!"

Others, upon hearing that we have two daughters, have said, "Oh, I'm one of the lucky ones. I have one of each."

Yes, they are lucky. And so are we.

BLESSED IN PORT ARTHUR

DEAR BLESSED: Those who make such thoughtless remarks don't mean to be cutting. They are simply assuming that given a choice, most parents would prefer a boy and a girl, which I think is a fairly good assumption.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.B.: To paraphrase Voltaire's words in his Essay of Tolerance—"Think for yourself, and let others enjoy the privilege to do so, too."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "PUBLIC SPEAKER IN PORTLAND": Sorry, but I don't have a collection of "jokes and funny stories." Why not take George B. Shaw's suggestion? He said: "My way of joking is to tell the truth. It's the funniest joke in the world."

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Symposium To Focus On Male View Of Women's Changed Role

GREENSBORO—A one-day symposium on "The Changing Roles of Women: The Male Perspective" will be held at the University of North Carolina here Saturday, Feb. 22.

The program, sponsored by the UNC-G Committee on Women's Studies, will be open to the public without charge and will convene in Cone Ballroom of Elliott University Center at 9:30 a.m. It will continue until 12:30 p.m. The afternoon session will run from 2:43 p.m.

Dr. Jane D. Mathews, co-chairman of the Committee on Women's Studies at UNC-G, will present an introduction to the symposium.

Featured speakers will include Dr. Peter Filene, of the history faculty at UNC-CH, who will discuss "How To Be a Man: A Century of Images," using a multi-media slide and sound show, and Dr. Florence Denmark, professor of psychology at City University of New York, who will discuss "Growing Up Male."

Also among the featured speakers will be Dr. Joseph H. Pleck, editor of "Men and Masculinity" and a member of the clinical psychology faculty at the University of Michigan, who will begin the afternoon session discussing "Men's Reactions to the Changing Consciousness of Women."

Another featured speaker will be Dr. William Chafe, who teaches history at Duke University. He will discuss the topic, "Where Do We Go From Here."

All portions of the program will be in Cone Ballroom of Elliott University Center, except lunch, which will be served in North Dining Hall.

The symposium is financed through a grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

Each of the speakers is well-qualified to address the symposium.

Dr. Filene's first book, "Him, Her, Self: Sex Roles in Modern America," recreates the experience of middle-class Americans as they performed their male and female roles between the Victorian era and the 1970s.

Dr. Denmark is an authority on the psychology of women and is the editor of "Women:

Dependent or Independent Variable," and "Women 1974."

Dr. Pleck, who received his Ph.D. degree in clinical psychology from Harvard University, has published numerous articles dealing with sex roles and family relationships.

Dr. Chafe is the author of "The American Woman: Her Changing Social, Economic, Political Role 1920-70."

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler

Pitt Home Agent

According to the latest census, over 10,000 families in Pitt County are renters. The Consumer Protection Division has many complaints from renters, most of which are not covered under North Carolina laws. Of those cases which the CPD could mediate, 65 percent involved complaints about security deposits and 27 percent concerned repair problems.

Members of the CPD staff have been working with other interested parties in drafting a bill which will, hopefully, spell out the respective rights and responsibilities of tenants and landlords.

The primary goals of the 1975 Residential Safety and Responsibility Act are to:

- (1) Establish uniform minimum standards of safety and habitability in rental housing;
- (2) Spell out responsibilities of tenants for maintaining the quality of their housing units;
- (3) Equalize the bargaining positions of landlords and tenants by making continued occupancy and payment of rent dependent upon fulfilling responsibilities under the Act;
- (4) State guidelines for landlord-tenant problems in modern contract terms, not possible under the old common law.

The Act deals specifically with security deposits by imposing a ceiling on amount and requiring a prompt accounting by the landlord at the end of the term.

In the repair and maintenance area it establishes minimum standards consistent with existing building and health codes and defines these as non-delegable responsibilities of the landlord.

The law will also require tenants to keep the premises safe and clean, use the property reasonably and follow rules and regulations imposed by the landlord so long as they are related to maintenance, health and safety.

It will require the landlord to disclose his identity or appoint an agent for service of process and will outline specific remedies for both landlords and tenants where the Act is violated, including costs and attorney fees for wilful violations.

The bill will also make it unlawful for landlords to retaliate by cutting off services or evicting tenants who complain about violations to the landlord or to governmental agencies or who join tenant organizations for purposes of collective bargaining.

The CPD has tried for several years to enact a modern landlord-tenant law in North Carolina. But many legislators contend that they have had no interest expressed by their constituencies. If you have an opinion on this matter, write to your General Assembly representatives, Sam D. Bundy, H. Horton Roundtree, or Senator Vernon E. White, Legislative Building, Raleigh, 27601. The CPD would like to have copies of your letters—P. O. Box 629, Raleigh, 27602.

Sound Move For Pitt Tech

The Pitt Technical Institute Board of Trustees has approved a change in function of the institution and name change to Pitt Community College.

The action came at a Monday meeting and on a motion by board member A. B. Whitley, Jr., who was one of the strongest opponents of a change in a referendum back in 1970.

Whitley said that at that time he feared that community college status might jeopardize what he considers the prime role of PTI, which is vocational and technical education.

But, he said, PTI is now "performing many of the functions of a community college without having the name, the prestige and the additional funds that community college would afford it." The board unanimously approved Whitley's motion to bring about the change.

The action now requires a resolution by the Pitt Board of Commissioners, and finally action by the General Assembly.

We heartily endorse the Pitt Tech board's action and we are particularly appreciative of Board member Whitley's offering the motion. The Daily Reflector supported the movement in 1970 to expand PTI's functions to community college status. At that time, though, we felt that nothing should ever be done to downgrade the technical and vocational programs. We still feel that way.

At the same time we feel that institutions such as Pitt Tech should offer as broad a range of programs as possible. This is true because they are serving students who are searching for the training that will be best suited to them for making a living.

We would urge that special ways be devised by the PTI board to make certain that vocational training is never slighted in a community college atmosphere. But while this is being done the young person taking a college freshman English course will have credits he can transfer to a senior college if the student eventually chooses this route.

We hope that the County Commissioners will act favorably on the resolution and Pitt Community College can go on to offer ever broader service to the people of our county.

THIS AFTERNOON

New Language In Reform

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—There is unfamiliar language in the recommendations drawn up by a prison reform group headed by former State Senator Eddie Knox of Charlotte.

A report to the General Assembly from that reform group which included representatives of the Legislature, the governor's office, and the state's organization of lawyers calls for sweeping revision of the present method of sentencing in the courts, and treatment in the prison system for both adult and juvenile offender.

Philosophically, the commission took an approach to criminal punishment and rehabilitation which puts emphasis on keeping people out of prison, or else putting them in for the shortest amount of time.

During months of deliberation, and in the report itself delivered last week to legislators, a sharp line is drawn between steps which the commission itself labeled "innovative in their approach," and the posture of the state's Department of Corrections which the commission finds committed to the proposition of building more new prisons.

Reform Steps

Thus, from the commission study, emerge a host of recommendations which will lead to bills for introduction to the General Assembly for consideration this year, and in future sessions, which will bring into focus the basic conflict between those philosophies.

Those proposals will be couched in legal language and technical phraseology, much debated and revised, and some enacted and some delayed for future study.

Here, in simple language, is a rundown on those controversial recommendations:

—Pre-trial Diversion: Let district attorneys decide that a first offender or juvenile can be placed in a community training or counseling program rather than going to court and being sentenced. No plea or trial would be necessary.

—Split Sentencing: After conviction, a severe sentence to prison with the understanding that the offender will only stay a few months, then be released on probation. The "quick dip" is supposed to scare the criminal and commit him to work hard at staying out of prison.

—Mandatory Parole: When a felony convict finishes his term to the day, he is currently free without strings to go and do as he pleases. Mandatory Parole would require at least 90 days of parole supervision on the outside before a prison term ends.

—Parole at One-Third: All misdemeanor prisoners would automatically be freed on parole after serving one-third of the sentence. Currently, prisoners serving 12 months or less are never considered for parole because of the workload on the Paroles Board and the shortness of time involved.

—Conditional Release: Permit prison administrators to release youthful offenders serving five years of less without the red tape of the Parole Commission.

Status Offenders: In the juvenile system, those youngsters making up about one-half of the 928 training school inmates who have committed no criminal act, but are there as a result of discipline problems at home, truancy, running away, etc. Effective in 1977, such youngsters would not be allowed in the training schools.

—Classification of Felonies: The commission found that judges have too much choice in giving out sentences for various crimes; that some crimes not as serious as others carry stiffer penalties; that many laws spelling out sentences are antiquated and put too much emphasis on victim-less crimes, and recommends complete revision of laws on sentencing.

On the question of sentences and alternatives to prison, the commission is calling for judges to "impose the minimum amount of custody . . ." and for communities to work on programs to ensure that "no individual who does not absolutely require (prison) for the protection of others is confined; and . . . no individual be subjected to more supervision or control than he requires."

Too Much For The Fed

WASHINGTON — One always hesitates, especially this early in a session, to say that such-and-such a bill in Congress will be the worst bill of the year. The congressional capacity for devising bad bills is enormous. But it will take a kind of perverse political genius to draft a worse bill than H. R. 212, the "Lower Interest Rate Act of 1975."

Treasury Secretary William Simon describes this measure bluntly as a bill to establish "a national credit police state," and Simon has it just about right. The bill would direct the Federal Reserve Board to do certain things the Fed probably could not do, and it would order the board to do other things the Fed positively does not want to do. If enacted, the bill would leave our economy in handcuffs and leg irons.

Yet because of its sponsorship, the horrifying prospect is that the bill may be passed. This bill is the particular baby of Congressman Henry Reuss, the new chairman of House Banking and Currency. It is a fair assumption that Reuss would not have introduced this measure, or scheduled it for top-priority hearings, if he could not count the votes in committee to get it approved. At the start of a session, with many favors yet to be dispensed, it takes a brash member to slap his chairman in the face.

The bill would undertake to lay two requirements on the Federal Reserve Board.

First, the Fed would be instructed to maintain an increase in the money supply (checking accounts and currency outside banks) of no less than 6 percent a year, over each three-month period. This is folly. The nation's total money supply is a composite not of two

A Stake In U.S. Industry

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The likely approval by the White House of Iran's plan to provide loans to financially ailing Pan American World Airways would make the arrangement the most dramatic instance of an oil-rich nation taking a stake in U.S. industry.

Ironically, the surge in oil prices that has enriched Iran also has contributed substantially to Pan Am's staggering financial losses. The carrier last week blamed a 133 percent increase in foreign fuel costs for most of its $81 million loss last year.

An agreement for Iran to infuse new funds into Pan Am probably will be given presidential approval within the next few days, a White House source said Wednesday.

President Ford's decision could be announced later this week. "I would not expect it to be unfavorable," the White House source said.

If the agreement wins Ford's approval, Pan Am would join several small-and medium-sized U.S. banks, a shopping center in Atlanta, Ga., and an island resort off the Carolina coast as symbols of investments by foreign oil producers in American business.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon has estimated that the oil-rich nations such as Iran poured $11.5 billion into U.S. investments last year. However, only about $750 million has found its way into tangible business enterprises while the bulk of the funds went into short-term securities.

U.S. businessmen have been quoted as saying that Simon's estimate is low and that oil-country investments in the United States this year could range up to $30 billion.

The question of whether oil-producing countries should be allowed to invest heavily in U.S. corporations has been troubling the Ford administration in recent months. The President said last week in Atlanta.

Record Family Food Costs

(Copyright 1975, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Republication in whole or part strictly prohibited except with the written consent of the copyright holders.)

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, J.J.—The American family spends $47 per week for food, on the average. This is a record high amount, up $5 from last year's figure and more than four times the sum recorded in the first survey on food costs in 1942. The median amount specified in that survey was only $11.

The median amount being spent for food is highest ($50) in the East. The comparable figures for the three other regions are $45 for the Midwest, $42 for the South, and $47 for the West.

The sum specified differs sharply by income groups. Among those whose yearly household income is $15,000 and over, the figure is $51—$4 higher than the national finding. The amount declines by income level down to $36, the amount spent by families whose annual household income is under $5,000 per year.

As might be expected, the amounts differ on the number of persons in a household. In single person households, for example, the figure is $25, while in households with five persons or more the figure is $65.

This question was asked, as it has been on a continuous basis since 1942:

"On the average, about how much does your family spend on food, including milk, each week?"

Following are the medians for the national non-farm population by region, showing the change over the last four years:

Amount Spent On Food Per Week (Non-farm families)
	1971	Medians 1975
NATIONAL	$34	$47
East	39	50
Midwest	31	45
South	33	42
West	34	47
Following are the latest results by income group:
Annual Family Income:		Medians
$15,000 and over		$51
$10,000-$14,999		48
$5,000-$9,999		41
Under $5,000		36
Size of Household:		Medians
Single-person household		$25
Two-person household		36
Household with three, four or five persons		49
Household with six persons or more		65

Gallup surveys during more than a third of a century show that the public's estimates of food costs have increased in the U.S. to a lesser extent than have non-food costs.

In 1947, estimates of food costs represented about one-half of the total minimum amount that the public said was needed to make ends meet. More recent surveys have shown that food costs represent a smaller proportion—between one-third and one-fourth in the latest survey.

Analysis of the results by income groups shows that families in the lowest income bracket spend proportionately about twice as much of their gross income for food as do families in the highest income group.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As was stated in an article written in The News and Observer dated February 6, 1974 on pages 43 and 45 there was a clear and distinct list of some 25 to 40 percent of North Carolina's electric customers who will not receive the recent State Utilities Commission ruling. This, as was stated, is because the rates are set by the Federal Power Commission-VEPCO. I wonder, as do many other persons who have to pay to GUCO, does the Federal Power Commission really set the rates, or is this another Watergate Affair between VEPCO, GUCO and the Federal Power Commission.

I noted in the mentioned article that the city of Tarboro, N.C. who purchases power from VEPCO, announced that they will roll back rates to its customers 25 percent even though it pays full wholesale rates to VEPCO. I ask, can our own GUCO not be as honest with its customers as the town of Tarboro, or is there a Watergate situation in the Greenville Utilities Commission? Many of the customers of the aforementioned GUCO feel that Mr. Horne and others concerned need to take a closer look at this matter and act in behalf of their customers.

Strength For Today

HEAVEN

What is your idea of heaven?

Probably most people think of heaven as a place where all activity will cease. We are told that we will have perfect rest in the life beyond, and this is often interpreted to mean that there will be no activity.

The Bible declares that in heaven God's servants will serve him day and night (Rev. 7:15), which means continually. They are to have perfect rest, to be sure, but rest from the troubles and burdens and anxieties and temptations that buffeted them on earth. They are to be eternally active with bodies that never need replenishing and spirits from which every power of evil has been removed.

The idea of heaven as a place of inactivity finds no confirmation in the Bible. It will be a place where the faithful, amid perfect circumstances, will have an opportunity throughout eternity perfectly to serve their Lord.

FRB Policy A Target For All

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur F. Burns, the Federal Reserve Board chairman, maintains that allocation of credit by the Fed could wreck the economy. Some critics maintain that the failure to allocate already has.

Burns long has been in the position of protecting what he considers to be the purity of the Fed, the nation's central bank, from political taint. The Fed, he feels, must be above such considerations.

His critics insist that social desirability should be a criterion in granting credit. Without such a guideline, they say, credit simply goes to the highest bidder—often for an inflationary, speculative or nonessential use.

A challenge to the existing technique of dispensing credit to whoever bids the highest is now being made in Congress, by Democrats mainly, who feel credit over the past few years has been channeled in the wrong direction.

Housing, they say, is the most obvious illustration. Whereas potential homebuyers couldn't afford the high rates of interest in the past few years—and in many states usury laws prevented loans from being made at all—business could, albeit reluctantly.

With homebuyers lacking the ability to compete with various types of businesses that can afford 10 per cent or more, wouldn't it have been better to allocate?

It would be impossible, Burns told a House Banking subcommittee, to devise a leak-proof program of controls. "The ones who would probably suffer most are small businesses and homebuyers," he said.

Burns and others opposed to allocations, which would seem to mean most of the banking community, might have some points on their side, but the subject is bound to be thrashed about if not out, in Congress, in banking conventions, in public forums.

While the arguments over allocation are loaded with pros and cons from whichever direction viewed, that of proponents or opponents, they could also disguise what amounts to a challenge to the Fed's independence.

The Fed has unusual power in the American system. It has a degree of independence sufficient, in fact, literally to challenge an administration economic program. Its cooperation is sought, not demanded, by the White House.

For many years academic and political figures have challenged that power with words, but the Fed has shrugged them off. There still remain many who would like the Fed to be more submissive to their wishes.

But for congressional advocates of allocation, Burns has a devastating and under the circumstances, ironic reply: to delegate allocation powers to the Fed would be to put into its hand "enormous and virtually dictatorial power," the very thing the Fed allegedly has too much of.

'Dream Car' Project Sinks In A Sea Of Troubles

DALLAS (AP) — It looked for a time like the Great American Dream: a car which would do 70 miles to the gallon and sell for only $2,000. But the dream turned into a nightmare for hopeful investors when the law stepped in.

A tough-talking widow from California turned up in Dallas to announce she had the answer to the energy problem with a two-cylinder, three-wheeled auto which would start rolling off the assembly lines by summer.

Just one week later, Elizabeth Carmichael and her 20th Century Motor Car Corp. found themselves banned from doing further business.

When criminal charges rapidly followed, Mrs. Carmichael disappeared along with seven of her accused fellow company officials.

Two other company officials surrendered to authorities immediately and five of the seven who fled surrendered in Los Angeles on Monday. Mrs. Carmichael was still being sought. The men who surrendered Monday appeared at police headquarters in connection with grand theft charges filed in Dallas. The five also were served with a summons to appear Feb. 20 in Los Angeles Superior Court to show cause why they should not be permanently enjoined from further sale of stock options and dealerships in the company.

Legal actions against the company have piled up since the fatal shooting Jan. 22 in 20th Century's Encino, Calif., offices of the firm's publicity man, William Dale Miller, a 37-year-old ex-convict from San Francisco.

Elizabeth Carmichael, a 42-year-old, 6-footer with red hair, said she was ready to throw down the gauntlet against the Big Three of Detroit. She said they had not given the American public a free choice in cars since Henry Ford introduced his Model-T.

She said her efforts already had been met with sabotage, threats to her employees and harassment from state officials she said she believed to be on Detroit's payroll.

"But we can handle it," she said. "We're going to knock the hell out of them."

She said dealers were being appointed for 30 states and that deposits on orders for the first cars were coming in at such a rate that she expected the first year's production of 88,000 to be sold in advance.

"Frankly, I never would have thought people would buy a car without driving it first," Mrs. Carmichael said. "But apparently they will."

Dealers were required to pay $35,000 to $75,000 for a franchise. She said Pan-Marine Products of Tokyo bought the Japanese distribution rights for $1,085,000. She said the company was negotiating with a subsidiary of Caravan International of Alberta for the Canadian market.

When 20th Century first began operating in California last year, news of its wonder car, the Revette (then called the Dale), spread quickly across America.

The National Observer carried a front-page story of 2,500 words. The Atlanta Constitution ended its article with "Good luck, Mrs. Carmichael." There were articles in U.S. World News and Report, the Washington Star-News, the Boston Globe.

A sign that all was not well with 20th Century came at the middle of last week.

A judge's restraining order halted the firm's operations and appointed a court attorney to keep the company records and assets intact pending further action.

It was said that the sales pitch for the Revette — and for two larger models to follow later — made no mention that two similar restraining orders had already been issued against the company in California. Instead of remaining to fight them, the business had been largely moved to Texas.

It was further claimed that neither the car's efficiency nor its performance had been proved. Purchase options and dealerships had been sold when, in fact, necessary financing and parts did not exist, it was charged. A postal inspector who visited the location of the company's California plant at Burbank said he found the buildings vacant.

In Dallas, Mrs. Carmichael operated from rented offices on LBJ Freeway and said she was negotiating for the unused Ford plant in the city and hoped to give employment to 9,000 workers. A spokesman for a firm occupying part of that plant said no negotiations were in progress.

Mrs. Carmichael said six prototypes of her three-wheel Revette are in existence and have been displayed at auto shows in Chicago and Los Angeles.

She also said she had driven one of them into a brick wall at 60 m.p.h. to test its super-tough plastic body. She said the body was made from a material developed to protect the nose cones of American space vehicles during re-entry.

A newsman found the only prototype in Dallas, hidden away in what she claimed was the company's research and development laboratory: an empty warehouse. Two mechanics were working on the transmission, which she said had been damaged when a plane flying it in from California struck turbulence.

The two-passenger, streamlined prototype, 14 feet, 8 inches long, resembled a small Ferrari or Corvette. The engine was in back and the 10-gallon gas tank in front.

One engineer who saw the car described it as "a load of junk," cannibalized from an engine of a type usually used for portable generators, with two lawnmower carburetors and a borrowed transmission.

He said he doubted it would either attain the top speed of 85 m.p.h. claimed for it or get 70 miles to the gallon. As for hitting a brick wall at 60 m.p.h., it would just disintegrate, he said.

First Lady Campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford has reminded Sen. Barry Goldwater that he has two daughters in urging him to support ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment in his home state of Arizona.

Mrs. Ford told reporters Wednesday that she telephoned the Republican senator to express her views on the proposed amendment which the Arizona House of Representatives debates today. Goldwater has opposed the amendment to guarantee equal rights to women.

The First Lady also called Arizona Republican state Sen. Jay Prizlaff, who has been a firm backer of ERA.

The amendment has been ratified in 34 states and needs approval by four more to become effective.

Mrs. Ford has been contacting legislators in several states as votes on ERA came near and plans to continue doing so.

More Than 2,000 In Education Transfers

RALEIGH—More than 2,000 students transferred from the state's technical institutes and community colleges to senior institutions at the beginning of the 1974-75 school year, according to B. L. Anderson, director of the College Transfer Division, Department of Community Colleges.

Anderson says that 2,420 students transferred to public and private four-year institutions last fall, which is a 15 percent increase over the fall of 1973.

At the same time, 1,574 students who had previously attended public or private four-year institutions transferred to one of the state's community colleges or technical institutes.

In the fall of 1974, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Appalachian State University and East Carolina University were front runners in receiving transfers from the community college system. University of North Carolina at Charlotte received 399 students, Appalachian State University received 357 and East Carolina University received 293. North Carolina Wesleyan, Atlantic Christian College, Campbell College and Gardner-Webb College were the private four-year institutions accepting the largest number of community college system students.

In addition to accepting college transfer credits, East Carolina University has a Bachelor of Science Degree Program in Business Education with options in Technical Education, Office Administration and secondary education in which they accept graduates of technical programs from the system of community colleges.

lanta that the State Department and the National Security Council are examining the possible impact of such investment.

Details of the proposal submitted to the White House are not yet known. However, the Wall Street Journal reported two weeks ago that a tentative agreement being considered by Pan Am and Iran would allow Pan Am to survive as a separate entity with its own management.

Plaque For S.H. Shearin

Sidney H. Shearin Jr. of Greenville received a plaque recently from the North Carolina Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers for his contributions during the year to rural appraising.

The NCSFMRA honors one of its members each year for outstanding contributions to farm management or rural appraising.

Shearin received the award during the recent winter meeting of the organization at the Faculty Club at N. C. State University in Raleigh.

An engineering graduate of N. C. State, Shearin joined the N. C. State Highway Public Works Commission following graduation and worked this way up through the commission ranks. In 1959, he was promoted to area supervisor in charge of the Greenville appraisal office and he remains in that office today.

The appraiser is married to the former Nannie Ree Fisher of Nash County and they have three children.

Singspiration On Saturday

A Singspiration will be held at the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The guest singers will be the Victory Singers from Garner. Local singers will also be included in the event.

Refreshments will be served by the women's auxiliary of the church. The pastor, Rev. G. A. Caster, invites the public to attend.

Kilpatrick. . .

(Continued from page 4) questions: Could a businessman get a loan for a plant expansion that would employ a dozen more workers, or would he have to stand in line behind low-income housing, even though the tenants might be looking for a job? Could an elderly couple buy a piece of land for ultimate retirement, without satisfying a lender that they had a "well-defined plan for useful development"?

Under this bill, every loan for a new car, kitchen appliance, the remodeling of a home, the building of public schools — every conceivable extension of credit — would be subject to the priority list. It would be up to the Fed to determine what is "essential" or "non-essential" in the whole of a complex society. It is too much. The Fed's chairman, Arthur F. Burns, wants no such "enormous and vitriolously dictatorial power." Only the most reckless apostles of Big Government would want his board to have it.

Britain's Nobility Bewitched, Bothered, Beheaded

By ROBERT MUSEL
UPI Senior Editor
LONDON (UPI) — King Henry VIII could be bloody sinister as he went about making the British throne secure and the Dukes of Leinster are not about to let anyone who reads Debrett's Peerage forget it.

For, say the Leinsters of an incident that still rankles across 450 years, he imprisoned one of their ancestors, Gerald, the ninth Earl of Kildare, along with his five half-brothers in the dreaded dungeons of the Tower of London as traitors. The Leinsters of today tell their story in the bible of British aristocracy, Debrett's Peerage, which lets the living members of the nobility append to the details about themselves a section titled "predecessors."

For many families the present, alas, is only a remote echo of the past. Some of the castles and palaces and broad acres have dwindled to suburban cottages, rooming houses and back gardens. In Debrett's they get a chance to enshrine what used to be.

The 1976 edition is now in preparation, and the stories it tells are heady indeed.

The Leinsters are among those who have fallen on less affluent times. But they remember there is a monkey on their crest because in the 13th Century a pet ape saved the infant Earl of Kildare from a fire.

And in the 16th Century when ancestor Gerald died in the cold and damp of the Tower his son, Thomas, accepted a promise of a full pardon from Henry VIII, forgetting not to put his trust in princes.

"That promise was violated," the entry in Debrett's reads, "and in 1537 together with his five uncles he (Thomas) was hanged, drawn (disembowelled, generally while still alive) and quartered (chopped into four pieces) at Tyburn"—the public scaffold.

It did not pay to lose one's head in love or politics in the days when knighthood was in flower because that could lead to the actual loss of a head on the chopping block. Any really old family without a beheading hardly rates. The record appears to be held by the Earls of Devon who lost four heads of the family, literally, by the axe between 1456 and 1556, had another killed in a revolt against the throne and four others imprisoned in the Tower of London.

The Devon family motto is, fittingly, "Where Have I Fallen, What Have I Done?"

But ardor flamed despite the perils. Simon, the 11th Lord Lovat, wasted no time when he became enamored of his cousin by marriage but then the family motto is: "I Am Ready." According to Debrett's he was outlawed in 1701 for "having seized the widow of the 9th Lord, getting the marriage ceremony performed and forcibly consummating the nuptials." He fought his way back to royal favor on the battlefield only to join the rebellion of Bonnie Prince Charlie in 1745 and get the chop for treason on Tower Hill.

His valorous present day descendant, the 17th Lord Lovat, commanded Britain's World War II commandos.

Women were even more the misfortune of the Dukes of Somerset. The first Duke, Protector of the Realm for his nephew King Edward V, was beheaded in 1552. His son secretly married Lady Katherine Grey, greatniece of King Henry VIII and sister of the Lady Jane Grey whose brief claim to the throne ended with her own beheading. The Duke's son was charged with "seducing a virgin of the blood royal" and he and Lady Katherine were thrown into the Tower.

Another Somerset secretly married Lady Arabella Stuart, first cousin of King James I, and for this impudence they also were imprisoned in the Tower. The 5th Duke, aged 20, "was shot at the door of his inn at Lerice in Italy by Horatio Botti, a Genoese nobleman who alleged his wife had been insulted by the Duke's companions."

The older and more renowned the family the bloodier its chronicles in Debrett. The Dukes of Norfolk are hereditary Earl Marshals of England since 1483 (they preside at royal ceremonies) as well as the premier Catholic family of the realm. The first of the "modern" line was killed in 1485 fighting alongside King Richard III at Bosworth Field.

His son, captured in the same battle, spent three years in the Tower then restored the family fortunes on the battlefield. But the 3rd Duke spent seven years in the Tower and the 4th Duke, found guilty of communicating with Catholic Mary Queen of Scots, lost his head.

The Earls of Strathmore, kinfolk of the present Queen Elizabeth, live in Glamis Castle in Scotland where Shakespeare set Macbeth. The family reports: "The 7th Lord Glamis, his widow, a kinsman and an old priest were indicted for designs against the life of James V by poison or witchcraft. Lady Glamis was condemned to the flames and suffered on Castle Hill at Edinburgh June 17, 1537." Lord Glamis also was sentenced to death but "the accuser having confessed that the whole story was a fabrication his lordship was released."

The Earls of Airlie, the family of Sir Winston Churchill's widow, had a dashing ancestor named James who in 1644 "being taken prisoner at the Battle of Philippsburg was sentenced to death but escaped by exchanging clothes with his sister the night before the intended execution."

Everywhere in Debrett's there are other tantalizingly brief references to adventures worth a volume. Leafing through the "predecessors" one finds that:

The 4th Earl Ferrers "having in a paroxysm of rage killed Mr. Johnson, his land steward, was tried and condemned for murder and executed at Tyburn May 5, 1760." He was, incidentally, hanged with a noose of silk—one of the privileges of the nobility.

Earl St. Albans notes that his line descends from the "natural son" of King Charles II and Eleanor Gwynn (Nell Gwynn who used to sell oranges at the Drury Lane theater).

Baron Audley was born in 1298, sat in Parliament and got married at 14. By 15 he was father of a son. With few worlds left to conquer he died at 18. Sarah Churchill, daughter of Sir Winston, is the widow of the 23rd Baron Audley.

What of Queen Elizabeth and the Royal House?

William who Conquered in 1066 was illegitimate. His Son, William Rufus, was killed by an arrow while hunting, and not everyone considers it an accident. King Edward II was murdered at Berkeley Castle with a red hot poker.

King Richard II was murdered in Pontefract Castle in 1400. King Henry VI was murdered in the Tower of London in 1471. King Edward V and his only brother, the Duke of York, were murdered in the Tower of London in 1483 at the instigation of their uncle who became Richard III and was killed at Bosworth. King Henry VIII had six wives and beheaded two of them. Queen Elizabeth I executed her rival Mary Queen of Scots. King Charles I was beheaded for treason.

No wonder Shakespeare needed to look no further than the chronicles of the royal family and its noble henchmen for some of his plays.

HALFWAY THERE—It's hard to tell whether 3-year-old Todd Hester is coming or going as he struggles with the "monkey bars" at Cleveland Park in Greenville, S. C. But whichever way he's headed, he's halfway there. And judging from the determined look on his face, he won't let a few obstacles stand in his way. (AP Wirephoto)

Deliveries Facing 14-Year Low

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Despite cash rebates and other buying incentives launched to spur the car market, early February auto deliveries will be at a 14-year low, industry analysts predict.

The analysts estimate that Feb. 1-10 sales by the four major auto makers, who report their figures later today, at 130,000 to 134,000 cars. The total would be off about 10 per cent from 145,594 a year ago and down a third from the period record set in 1973. The expected daily selling rate of 16,300 would be the worst for the period since 1961, when the companies sold 13,187 cars a day.

GM indicated Wednesday it might extend its cash rebates for new car buyers beyond the current Feb. 28 deadline if auto sales remain depressed.

Ford said it had no plans to extend its rebates beyond Feb. 28, but Vice President John B. Naughton revealed that Ford this week began a new program offering potential buyers up to $3,000 for viewing 1975 models.

Naughton said Ford mailed certificates ranging in value from nothing to $3,000 to 2.3 million car owners. To redeem a certificate, an owner must take his car, regardless of make, to a Ford dealer, who will check the code and appraise the auto's trade-in value.

The certificates are worth either 5, 50 or 100 per cent of the trade-in value — up to $150, $1,500 or $3,000. A Ford spokesman said the mailing would cost Ford at least $2 million if all the certificates are redeemed.

GM said it will shut seven plants next week — two more than this week — and increase by 100 the number of workers on temporarily layoff. Some 121,000 other GM workers will be on indefinite layoff.

Industrywide, 208,000 of 684,000 hourly auto workers are on indefinite layoff this week, the most since the industry's severe sales slump began 16 months ago. In addition, some 45,000 workers are on temporary layoff at 14 car and truck plants idled this week.

American Motors will have three plants shut and 8,500 of its 22,000 hourly workers on temporary layoff next week, when it halts production of Gremlin, Hornet and Matador models. The firm also has 450 workers on open-ended furlough.

Ford and Chrysler have not announced production changes for next week.

NFO Plans Cheese Sale

The North Carolina branch of the National Farmers Organization will hold a cheese sale here this Friday in support of NFO cheese producers in Wisconsin.

According to Carlton Hyman of Tarboro, a member of the state NFO board of directors, some 7,500 pounds of cheddar cheese shipped directly from NFO farmers in Wisconsin will be offered for sale, beginning at 7:30 a.m., at Parkers Barbecue.

Hyman reported that the United States Department of Agriculture approved cheddar was produced in Wisconsin and farmers there, he said, were unable to get a reasonable market for it. Instead of farmers losing the cheese, the North Carolina NFO agreed to help sell the product.

The 7,500 pounds is part of a Fayetteville shipment, it was noted, that the state NFO agreed to sell.

Four men were arrested by Greenville police here yesterday in connection with an armed robbery in Wilson Tuesday night.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the four as Ronnie Lee Matthews, 18, William Earl Matthews, 20, and Lawrence Matthews, 20, all of 1404 Chestnut St. and Victor Foust, 28, of 1302 South Pitt St.

According to Cannon, the four were arrested for the Wilson Police Department about 2:45 a.m. Wednesday and charged with armed robbery.

The charges, the chief said, stemmed from an armed robbery in Wilson in which one man was shot.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market took off on a sharp advance today in a new surge of record-breaking activity.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 12.95 at 727.08, climbing above its previous closing high for the rally of the past two months.

Gainers swamped losers by a 5-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume for the first hour totaled 10.20 million shares, breaking the opening-hour record of 9.88 million set a little more than two weeks ago, on Jan. 28.

Analysts could find little in the news to account for the new explosion of buying.

"There may be anticipation of something big from President Ford in his meeting with securities analysts later today and his speech here tonight," said Robert Stovall at Reynolds Securities.

Stovall noted that investing institutions which missed the market's sharp rise in January appeared to be "playing catch-up ball".

Support for that view was provided by the conspicuous gains in the glamor stocks favored by many institutional money managers.

IBM, for example, was up 4 1/2 at 214 3/4; Burroughs gained 2 1/4 to 87 1/4, and McDonald's 1 1/2 to 41 1/4.

Walt Disney Productions jumped 3 to 37 1/2. The company reported strong attendance at its Disney World and Disneyland amusement parks during the annual meeting of shareholders Wednesday.

Masonite, the Big Board volume leader, rose 3/4 to 17 1/4 in trading that included a 232,800-share block at 17.

The NYSE's 11 a.m. composite index was up .68 at 43.13. On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index gained .79 to 76.26.

Recreation...

Lee noted that various proposals for the development of a recreation area for senior citizens have been recommended for inclusion in a separate category — housing and renewal. "Proposals call for $125,000 for the first year development of a housing plan for senior citizens that would have the ground floor as a recreation center," Lee said.

Vice-chairman Thomas Foreman, Sr., acting in the absence of Mrs. Camelle Gaylord, named a committee to make a study of the pros and cons of attitudes on the possibility of holding regular teen-age dances.

Those named to the committee are: Miss Judy Clark and Walter Stasavich, Recreation Department; Mrs. John East and Rufus Huggins, Recreation Commission; Felicia Streeter, Richard Gray and Debbie Goodson, Greenville Youth Council; and Mrs. Terry Shank, Greenville City Board of Education.

Foreman said the majority of requests for regularly scheduled teen-age dances had been received since the recent Radio WOOW sponsored Soc-Hop-Bop dance. "These requests have asked that the Recreation Department furnish a facility for a teen-age dance every Saturday night," Foreman said. "I'd like for the committee to get to work on a study of this right away as we'll need recommendations prior to the March budget preparations."

Lee announced the hiring of a new employee, Miss Judy Clark with funds made available by the Emergency Employment Act. Miss Clark, a graduate of East Carolina University, a major in Parks and Recreation Administration, has been assigned to the area of special programs and activities.

The hiring of Miss Clark, Lee pointed out, makes it possible to assign Walter Stasavich as Assistant Director of Parks, to take care of park designing, maintenance, etc., and to assign Charles Vincent as Assistant Director of Programs. "The funding for Miss Clark's position is only for six months," Lee said. "If this assignment of personnel works out as we hope, we will recommend to the City Council that this arrangement be put on a permanent basis."

Approval was given to a request made by Alan Murrell to waive the rental fee of a facility for the purpose of a benefit dance to raise money for a Omega Psi Phi fraternity scholarship. Waiver of hours was also given, which will permit the affair to be held from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. (Recreation facilities normally close at 11 p.m.)

Three Rose High students — Richard Gray, Cassie Dayton and Mary Charles Stevens, gave reports on a recent trip to Raleigh. The three were part of a 12 member Greenville Youth Council group attending the statewide Youth Council convention.

Richard, selected as "youth" secretary of state, was the guest of Secretary of State Thad Eure. "Mr. Eure has been in office for 38 years, and has got some nice secretaries," he stated in concluding his remarks.

All three spoke of various activities in which they were involved. A number of resolutions were passed by the statewide youth group and will be provided to members of the General Assembly for their study.

Here Friday

Billy Ross, Pitt Blood chairman, reminded are citizens that the Bloodmobile will be at the Moose Lodge here Friday for a 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. visit.

Ross, who urged local residents to make an effort to give blood tomorrow in support of the blood program, said that the visit is sponsored by Pitt County Insurance Women's Association.

The Bloodmobile was at D. H. Conley High School today.

There are some 5,225 public and private museums in the United States and Canada.

Rural Store Was Robbed

A break-in and larceny Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning at Branch's General Store, Rt. 3, Greenville, is under investigation by the Pitt Sheriff's Department.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, at least $300 in assorted merchandise was reported stolen from the business, located east of Greenville about one mile from Simpson.

Sheriff Tyson said that the merchandise was recovered behind a storage building at the rear of the business, owned by Jack Branch of Kinston. The merchandise had been damaged by rain when discovered, it was noted.

Entrance to the store was gained after a hole was cut in a rear wall, the sheriff said, and damage to the facility was estimated at some $200.

The break-in was reported Wednesday at 8:16 a.m.

WOTM Holding Chapter Night

The hospital committee will present the Chapter Night program for the Women of the Moose, Greenville Chapter No. 1308, tonight at eight o'clock at the Moose Temple.

Plans for a Chapter Rally Day in Washington, March 2, will be discussed at tonight's meeting, according to Mrs. Peggy Jamieson, senior regent, who said that members of the Greenville WOTM will participate in ritual ceremonies at the rally.

Mrs. Jamieson said that the Greenville chapter will serve as hostess chapter for a state-wide Mid-Year Conference being held in Greenville, March 21-23. Miss Ada Jones, deputy grand regent for North Carolina and a member of the Greenville Chapter, will preside during the three-day conference.

Following tonight's meeting, Mrs. Martha Jackson, chairman of the chapter's Hospital committee, will serve refreshments.

Women in the United States face an average of over seven years of living as a widow.

Unaware Of Request On Channelization Effort

Frank Wooten, attorney for sponsors of the Chicod Creek Watershed project, and Roy Beck, Soil Conservation Service district conservationist, said this morning they were not aware of a request from the Soil Conservation Service that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers investigate whether or not recent additions to the environmental law might require a corps permit for the Chicod Creek channelization project. Wooten said his latest correspondence with the Corps of Engineers stated the Chicod Creek project and was not subject to a permit and that he had no idea what the request is referring to.

Charles Hollis, head of the Corps' district office in Wilmington, said the engineers were trying to determine whether the Chicod Creek project is within their jurisdiction.

If the Corps has jurisdiction, a permit will have to be issued before any work can be done and a public hearing will have to be held.

The Chicod Creek project, including 66 miles of dredging and straightening of the creek in Pitt and Beaufort Counties for drainage improvements, has been halted since an injunction was granted by Judge John Larkins in U.S. Eastern District Court in February, 1973.

Environmental groups opposing the channelization project include the Natural Resources Defense Council, the North Carolina Wildlife Federation, the Pamlico-Tar Conservation Coalition, the National Wildlife Federation and the Friends of the Earth.

Named as defendants in the case are officials of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Soil Conservation Service, Farmers Home Administration and the Pitt County Drainage District No. Nine.

State Tankers Top Pirates

RALEIGH—North Carolina State's nationally ranked swimming team romped to a 72-41 victory over the East Carolina University Pirates last night.

The Pirates got an early lead, downing State in the opening relay. But the Wolfpack came to life after that, pushing ahead, after the third event to take the lead for good. After that, they piled up the points to push out into a 72-34 margin prior to the final relay, also won by the Pirates.

In the individual events, State took first place in seven events, while Pirates won three. Individual winners for the Bucs were John McCauley in the 50-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle, and Gary Pabst in the 200-yard backstroke. Frank Dufficy won both of the diving events for State, and was their only double winner.

WASHINGTON—Jamesville High School pulled off a minor upset in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Tournament last night, downing Aurora, 66-61. Jamesville had one into the tournament as the fifth seeded team, while Aurora was fourth-seeded.

In the other game, the Bath girls nipped Pantego, 40-37. Tonight, Jamesville meets regular season champ Belhaven in the boys' game, while Chocowinity, the girls' champion, meets Bath. Friday's semifinals will have Bear Grass and Bath in the boys' game, while Aurora and Belhaven meet in the girls'. The finals are set for Saturday night.

Jamesville inched out a 16-12 lead in the first period of the game. They continued to hold onto the lead during the second half, outthumping Aurora, 12-11. That gave the Bulls a 28-23 lead at intermission.

In the third period, Aurora padded its lead a little more, 19-16, and boosted the lead to 47-39. Aurora came back with a 22-19 margin in the final period, but it wasn't enough.

Jerry Ange led Jamesville with 25 points, while Eric Davis added 21. William Bell had 19 and Steve Moore had 18 for Aurora.

Pirates Set Heavy Slate For Baseball

East Carolina University will play a 35-game baseball schedule in 1975, Athletic Department officials have announced. Aside from the 14-game Southern Conference slate, the defending conference champion Pirates will play the Atlantic Coast Conference champion N.C. State Wolfpack a four-game set and other ACC members Maryland, Duke and UNC.

"We always like to play the best competition we can find," Pirate baseball coach George Williams said. "Our 1975 schedule will present a true challenge."

Williamston Girls Romp

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston's girls' basketball team moved into the finals of the Northeastern Conference tournament last night as the Lady Tigers demolished Northern Nash, 52-27.

Williamston moved in front in the first quarter with a seven point margin, 11-4. Northern Nash began to warm up in the second quarter but could not catch Williamston as the Tigers took the frame, 14-11, for a 25-15 halftime lead.

Northern Nash equalled their first period output in the third quarter while the Tigers added

The Pirates will basically have to rebuild from last year's team that finished 17-13 overall and 12-2 in conference play. Williams' team has been taking advantage of some recent warm weather to get in much needed batting practice, but that was curtailed this past week due to colder weather.

"We will be showing a lot of new faces," said Williams, who will have to replace six starters and two pitchers from last year's club. "And with our schedule, we hope they can mature in a hurry."

Williams also noted that, along with the ACC schools, the Pirates will be facing Pem-12 increasing the gap to 37-10. Williamston took the final frame as well, 15-8. Minnie White led the losers with 12. Sissy Taylor led Williamston with 22, Bet Brandon had 11 and Fran Hardison had nine.

In the other semi-final game last night, boys' champ Washington gained a 52-30 win over Roanoke Rapids to move into the finals. Tonight's semifinals have Edenton and Ahoskie meeting in a boys' game and Plymouth and Bertie colliding in a girls' game.

The finals will be Friday night.

Farmville Advances; Ayden-Grifton Beaten

SPRING HOPE—Farmville Central's regular season champions moved into the finals of the Eastern Carolina Conference Tournament last night, demolishing North Lenoir, 54-38.

Ayden-Grifton's girls, out to pull off an upset, nearly did it before bowing to Eastern Wayne in overtime, 42-38. North Pitt's junior varsity slipped past Greene Central, 34-31.

Tonight, three semifinal games will wrap up that portion of the tournament. Two junior varsity games are set, with Southern Wayne meeting North Pitt in the opener, and North Lenoir taking on Southern Nash in the final game. In between, the Southern Nash girls meet the Eastern Wayne lassies. The winners move into the Friday night finals.

Ayden-Grifton and Eastern Wayne battled neck-and-neck most of the game. Both teams pushed through 10 points in the first period, but the Warriors came back with a 14-10 edge in the second period. That left A-G trailing 24-20 at halftime.

Ayden-Grifton cut a little off that in the third period, 7-6, but was still down 30-27. They pushed ahead in the final period, however, and looked like they might pull off the win.

With less than 10 seconds left in the game, Eastern Wayne got the ball, two points down, and a shot with two seconds left missed. Jaky Williams got the rebound for Eastern, however, and her buzzer shot was good, tying it at 36-36.

Eastern then outhit Ayden-

Grifton, 6-2, in the extra period to take the win.

Miss Williams led Eastern with 16 points, while Gwen Scott added 11. Tena Smith paced the Chargerettes with 16, while Audrey McCarter had 12.

The loss closed out the year for Ayden-Grifton.

Farmville's Lady Jaguars continued to roll along, however. They built up a 16-11 lead in the first period of the game, and were never in any trouble after that. In the second quarter, Farmville hit 12 points, while limiting the Lady Hawks to only a pair of points. That made it 28-13 at halftime.

North Lenoir made a comeback in the foul-filled game in the third period. They outhit Farmville, 16-9, and cut the lead back to 37-29. But Farmville outscored them in the last frame, 17-9, to wrap up the victory and move into the championship game.

Regardless of how it comes out, Farmville will hold a berth in the district tournament next week.

Julia Moye led Farmville with 19 points, while Kathy Suggs had 14 and Darlene Joyner hit 13. Kathy Merritt led North Lenoir with 12 points.

North Carolina, Clemson Claim Wins

By The Associated Press
"Intensity" is a word North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith uses. He says his team had intensity only for a while in a victory over Duke Wednesday night, but will have to have it all the way if it is to win its home game against Maryland on Saturday.

"We started with great intensity, but it slacked off somewhere near the end of the first half," he said after the Tar Heels beat the Duke Blue Devils 78-70 at home. "We played smart tonight, but we have to have that great intensity Saturday."

The visiting teams won in the other two games involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams. Third-ranked North Carolina State defeated Virginia 59-46 although David Thompson, the national scoring leader with an average of almost 32 points, was held to 19. He didn't score a field goal in the second half.

The Clemson Tigers, who had won only two away ACC games in almost five seasons, were successful 71-54 at Wake Forest as a pair of substitutes, Colon Abraham and Charlie Rogers, combined for 24 points.

ACC teams now will be idle until Saturday, when Maryland will be at North Carolina, North Carolina State at Wake Forest in a televised game, Duke at Clemson and Virginia at Pitt.

The North Carolina coach, Dean Smith, continuing his reflections, said, "Walter Davis continues to rebound well at the third forward spot, which is so important for use to win. It will be essential for Walter to do it in the Maryland game."

"Of course we're pleased with the win, but we simply can't blow anyone out. To blow someone out, you have to have somebody come down and make a few spinning moves and hit four straight."

The victory was revenge for the Tar Heel's 99-96 overtime loss to Duke in the Big Four Tournament in Greensboro early in January.

Mitch Kupchak and freshman Phil Ford had 18 points apiece and Walter Davis 17 for the Tar Heels. Ford acted as the point man in North Carolina's four-corner freeze in the last six minutes.

Duke's big men suffered foul trouble. Willie Hodge fouled out and Bob Fleischer and Mark Crow played much of the game with four personals. Pete Kramer led Duke's scoring with 14 points.

North Carolina is 6-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference and 15-5 in all games. Duke is 2-7 and 12-9.

"It seems the same old story. We can't seem to get the loose balls," said Duke coach Bill Foster.

We don't seem to have the instinct and quickness to get the ball back. I thought we defended the four corners well, but we couldn't get back shots we blocked. When Hodge and "Fly" Fleischer are in foul trouble, let's face it, we're in trouble. We've got a little of a problem with the bench. We have to get as much out of Fly as possible.

Mo Rivers' jumper midway in the second half gave fifth-ranked North Carolina State an 11-point lead, and the Wolfpack survived a cold-shooting second half.

N.C. State went to a third-guard offense and led by only 31-26 at the half.

Virginia had won seven of its eight home games while holding opponents to an average of the same 59 points N.C. State made.

State had been averaging 98. However, Virginia shot only 29 per cent from the floor and missed many opportunities to go ahead.

Virginia lost Wally Waker to fouls with nine minutes left to play. And the Wolfpack's Phil Spence and Kenny Carr rebounded well as the Cavaliers faded.

Freshman Marc Iavaroni led Virginia with 17 points.

N.C. State is 6-2 in the league and 17-3 in all games. Virginia is 3-7 and 10-9.

Clemson, 18th nationally, was held to 29-29 at the half, but moved to a 37-31 lead in the first three minutes of the second half.

Wake Forest rallied briefly, but Clemson out scored the Deacons 15-6 to take a 56-42 lead with 7:40 remaining.

Skip Wise of Clemson led all scoring with 19 points. Rod Griffin was high for Wake Forest with 15.

Thompson Not Up To Par, But State Tops Virginia Anyway

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

It's not how David Thompson plays the game, it's whether North Carolina State wins or loses.

Thompson didn't play up to his usual standard Wednesday night. The 6-foot-4 All-American converted only five of 15 shots — he was 0-for-7 in the second half — and was held to 19 points, well below his nation-leading average of more than 31 a game, as fifth-ranked N.C. State turned back Virginia 59-46.

"He doesn't care how we win, just as long as we do win," Coach Norm Sloan said after the Wolfpack recorded their 17th triumph in 20 games.

Only three other members of The Associated Press Top Twenty were in action. North Carolina, rated 11th, defeated Duke 78-70; No. 12 La Salle needed Joe Bryant's short baseline jumper with 24 seconds left in overtime to edge Villanova 74-73 and 18th-ranked Clemson trounced Wake Forest 71-54.

Fortunately for N.C. State, Virginia had an even worse shooting night than Thompson. The Cavaliers connected on a mere 29 per cent of their shots.

Sloan, substituting freely, made considerable use of freshmen Bobo Jackson and Craig Davis while Thompson spent nearly eight minutes of the first half on the bench.

Kenny Carr had 13 points for State. Virginia was led by freshman center Marc Iavaroni, who scored 17 points, and Wally Walker, who had 13 before fouling out.

In another Atlantic Coast Conference game, freshman Phil Ford and junior Mitch Kupchak scored 18 points apiece and Walter Davis added 17 to lead North Carolina over Duke, enabling the Tar Heels to keep pace with Maryland in the ACC race.

Duke's big men ran into foul trouble. Willie Hodge fouled out midway through the second half and Bob Fleischer and Mark Crow played much of the game with four personals. Pete Kramer led the Blue Devils with 14 points.

La Salle's hard-fought victory over Villanova gave the 19-3 Explorers the Philadelphia city series championship. Villanova, 8-14, had a chance to win at the buzzer but Larry Herron's 18-footer bounced off the rim.

The underdog Wildcats tied the game for the 11th time at the end of regulation when Herron scored two of his 22 points on a drive down the lane. Villanova had a 61-56 margin with 4:07 to play but Bryant, who scored a game-high 28 points, sparked a seven-point run to put the Explorers on top.

Substitutes Colon Abraham and Charlie Rogers combined for 24 points to help 18th-ranked Clemson to a 71-54 victory over Wake Forest in an ACC game. Clemson freshman Skip Wise led all scorers with 19 points.

In the Big Eight, Kansas State maintained its one-game lead by defeating Colorado 80-66 while Kansas kept pace with a 76-62 triumph over Iowa State. Elsewhere, Missouri overtook Oklahoma State 76-66 and Oklahoma downed Nebraska 65-57 in overtime.

Kansas State came alive in the second half behind the hot shooting of freshman Mike Evans. The Wildcats trailed by as many as nine points in the early going but the second half was a different story as Evans had 12 of his 19 points and KState ran off bursts of 14-4 and 11-2 to open a comfortable lead. Chuckie Williams, Evans' running mate at guard, scored a game-high 24 points while Tony Lawrence led the Buffs with 23.

Kansas slowed down Iowa State's hot offense and got a 22-point performance from Roger Morningstar to take sole possession of second place. The Jayhawks finally broke away with 10 minutes left when Iowa State's big gun, Hercie Ivy, drew his fourth personal foul. Ivy was the game's scoring leader with 23 points.

Missouri overcame a five-point halftime deficit with a 15-4 spree late in the game and toppled Oklahoma State. A balanced effort put four Missouri starters in double figures, led by Willie Smith's 20 points.

Oklahoma ran off six consecutive overtime points against Nebraska for a 59-53 lead. Jerry Fort scored 32 points for the losers, a season high, and his 15 field goals tied a school record. Alvan Adams led Oklahoma with 19 points.

In other action, Pitt won its 23rd straight at home, beating West Virginia 83-77; Rudy Hackett's 24 points led Syracuse over Colgate 85-63; Gary Kamstra's five late baskets helped Cincinnati beat Dayton 79-68 and South Carolina knocked off Georgia Southern 98-72 behind Tom Boswell's season-high 33 points.

Eastern Plains

WILSON—The two top teams in the Eastern Plains Conference's regular season standings advanced to the finals of the league's tournament with wins last night.

Elm City's boys gained a 56-51 hard-fought victory over Saratoga Central. Elm City will meet the winner of tonight's South Edgecombe-North Edgecombe game for the championship.

In the girls' division, Saratoga downed North Johnston, 54-40 to move into the finals. They will meet the winner of the Elm City-South Edgecombe game, being played tonight.

The championship games will be Friday night.

Rose Seeking Wrestling Title

The Northeastern Sectional Wrestling Tournament will be held at Rose High School Friday and Saturday, with the hosting Rampants vying for the title.

Rose, which walked away with the Division I 4-A title last week, will be seeking to win the sectional which is attracting teams from Raleigh to the coast.

A total of 21 teams will be in competition for the title, as well as berths in next week's state tournament, to be held in Winston-Salem.

Friday, weigh-ins will be held in the Elm Street Gym, next to the high school from 8 to 10 a.m. Preliminary competition will get underway in the Rose gym at 12 noon, with quarterfinals scheduled for 6:30 p.m.

Weigh-ins on Saturday will be held from noon until 1:30 p.m., with the semifinals at 2 p.m. Consolations will be held at 6 p.m. with the finals at 7:30 p.m.

This year, wrestle-backs will be used where needed to establish the two who will advance into the state tournament. The winner in each of the 13 weight classes will automatically move up. Third place winners who did not lose to the second place finisher in preliminary matches, will be given the opportunity for a wrestle-back following championship matches. Third place finishers winning such matches will take over the second state tournament berth. When a second place winner defeated the third place finisher, no wrestle-back will be held.

Team points will not be affected by wrestle-backs.

Among those in competition will be Ahoskie, Ayden-Grifton, Raleigh Broughton, D.H. Conley, Raleigh Enloe, Farmville Central, Wilson Pike, Governor Morehead, Edenton Holmes, North Pitt, Northeastern, Northern Nash, Plymouth, Rocky Mount, Rose, Raleigh Sanderson, Southern Nash, Tarboro, Vaiden-Whitley, Washington and Williamston.

Vt.-American Is Nearing Title

Vermont-American cut its magic number to two in Division I of the Industrial Basketball League last night, downing the only team with a chance to catch it, Greenville Utilities.

The victory came in the second game of the evening, as V-A took a 75-50 victory. The win boosted Vermont-American's record to 12-1. By halftime, they had inched out to a 38-30 lead. GUCo came back in the second half, outscoring V-A, 40-37, but it wasn't enough to take the win.

Moses Joyner and Eddie Chance led Vermont-American with 24 points each, while Charlie Jenkins had 16. Thomas Mullins led GUCo with 22 points, with Ted Gray hitting 18 and Charles Jordan, 12.

In the first game, Proctor & Gamble took a 60-41 win over Daniel Construction. P&G picked up a 27-15 first half lead. They came back with a 33-26 margin in the final period.

Phil Rockman led P&G with 21 points, while Jim Scott had 12. Lester Wells led Daniel with 17, with Mike Lepors picking up 12.

In the final game, State Highway took a 76-68 win over Grady-

Azalea Comes Back For Win

Azalea Mobile Homes, after two straight forfeit losses, came back to action last night in the City Basketball League and knocked off Division I leader Happy Store.

In the opening game, Book Exchange nipped Buccaneer, 63-62. The Exchange inched out into a 37-34 lead. The Buc came back with a 28-26 margin in the second half, but it wasn't enough to pull off the victory. Linwood Moore led the Exchange with 22 points, while Phil Duffy had 12 and Allan Jackson had 11 and Adonis Grant had 10. Ray Edwards led the Buc with 28, with Dennis Wilkerson hitting 20.

Art & Camera gained a 56-48 win over Oakmont Square in the second game. A&C built up a 30-21 lead in the first half of play. Oakmont outthit them, 27-26, in the second half, but couldn't catch up.

Mike Harrington led A&C with 29 points, while Don Edwards had 10. Craig Stevenson had 26 for Oakmont.

In the final game, Azalea took a 97-86 win over Happy Store. Azalea trailed at the half, 47-41, but came back with a 56-39 advantage in the second half enough to pull ahead and take the win.

Lenny Blockley led Azalea with 28 points, while Robert Kear had 27. Tommy Williams had 13, John Lutz had 12 and Ed Johnson had 11. Charlie Harris led Happy Store with 30, while Robert Joyner added 21 and Linwood Staten, 11.

Bucs Run In Ohio

East Carolina University's track team heads north for a dual meet with Ohio State Friday, and then two of its premier sprinters will take part in the Knights of Columbus games in Cleveland on Saturday.

The Bucs will take part in a dual meet with the Buckeyes on Saturday and then travel to Cleveland for the big meet.

Invited to participate in this prestigious meet are Carter Suggs and Larry Austin, both of whom have run 6.1-second 60-yard dashes this winter.

"We'll be going all out to clock a :6.0 time during these two meets," Coach Bill Carson said. "This will give them a much better seeding for the NCAA Nationals later in the year."

Charity Sentence Has An Approving Response

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — "We call him our fairy godfather," says a charity director in describing one of five Arizona dairy firm executives ordered to work off sentences for price-fixing.

U.S. District Court Judge Carl Muecke deferred sentencing of the five executives and four firms last week. He ordered the executives to perform charity work for six months and the firms to make charitable contributions of food, equipment and services equal to the fines they face.

Muecke said traditional sentences for the executives and their firms would be akin to "spitting in a blast furnace."

He said any fine money would just go to the government and "I would far rather see this money be utilized within this community."

"It has simply struck people as a novel, constructive idea," Muecke said Wednesday of reaction to his idea, presented by the five executives.

"The nicest thing about this is that responses to my decisions are usually negative. People don't ordinarily write to say anything favorable. They write to criticize."

One of the executives, James Graves, former Arizona general manager for Borden Inc., was ordered to work with the West-side Food Bank.

"He's reorganizing the place and setting it up properly," Leona Johnson, manager of the food bank, said of Graves, whom she called a fairy godfather.

"He put in a hot water heater that we didn't have. The place was badly wired and he's contacted three people to get Muecke delayed sentencing of the five until Sept. 15, when he will determine whether the men and their firms lived up to terms of his order. If so, he said they will escape fines and jail.

The other executives involved in the order are Jack DeCordova, also a former state general manager for Borden, who is working for the Salvation

Closely Watch Nuclear Safety

By WILLIAM STOCKTON
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's nuclear power plants experienced more than 1,400 "abnormal occurrences" last year that related to safe operation or potential release of radiation, Nuclear Regulatory Commission reports show.

However, only four of the events in 1974 were "directly significant" to safe reactor operation or release of radiation to the environment and no injuries or property damage resulted.

The four events all occurred at nuclear power plants in Illinois operated by Commonwealth Edison Co., a Chicago-based utility that leads the nation in generation of electricity with nuclear power.

The analysis of the reports found that 888 of the occurrences were insignificant. They had no real or potential adverse effect on a nuclear power plant's operation but constituted a violation of government-prescribed technical standards.

The analysis found that 524 abnormal occurrences were "potentially significant." These are violations of a plant's technical specifications caused by problems intermediate in severity.

Vast Amount Of Work After Med School Launched

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

When the University of North Carolina Board of Governors last November authorized the establishment of a four-year degree granting School of Medicine at East Carolina University, it ended a decade of political activity between those who wanted to see a medical training facility in the East, and opponents of such a program.

But at the same time, the Board of Governors' action set in motion a vast amount of work for those involved in planning for the expansion of the medical school.

The General Assembly in 1971 funded a one-year medical program at ECU and the first students began their studies on the campus in 1972.

Then in 1974, the Legislature approved expansion of the school to a two-year program and instructed the UNC Board of Governors to return to the 1975 General Assembly with plans to implement the school. Instead, the Board of Governors chose to authorize the four-year degree granting program, saying the benefits from a two-year school would not justify the expenditures required.

The 1975 General Assembly is expected to fund construction of a basic medical science building and clinical teaching facilities. If it does, ECU should receive accreditation for its medical school in time to enroll its first four-year class in 1976.

Planning now the name of the game. And it is all-important in developing a strong, new medical school.

A search committee is presently hunting for a Dean, and over 50 applications have been received. They are being screened to find the best man for the job.

"We all are impressed with the caliber of people (applicants) who have visited here," Dr. Wallace Woolees said. "Each one is a highly qualified, distinguished medical educator."

Until a permanent Dean can be recruited, Dr. Harold C. Wiggers, named in December as senior consultant to assist in the development of the school, has been named as acting Dean.

A tall, quiet man in his early 60's, Wiggers was, for more than 20 years, Dean of Albany Medical College at Union University, Albany, N.Y.

An Ann Arbor, Mich., native, Wiggers has served as consultant to the National Institutes of Health for proposed medical school construction. Coming out of retirement to accept the temporary post at ECU, Wiggers is extremely committed to doing whatever he can to help the ECU program.

"Sound, careful planning" and progress has already been made, he said. "There is a solid basis on which to build. It is a very exciting and challenging prospect."

Woolees, an athletic looking man of 43, with graying hair, is now Assistant Vice-Chancellor for Health Affairs. He came to ECU from the Medical College of Virginia in 1970 as Dean of the one-year program, because "setting up anything new is a challenge and opportunity that doesn't come up very often."

The Massachusetts native considers this a "plus" in efforts to recruit an outstanding man to head the four-year school. "We can give a medical educator the opportunity to shape and mold a program. It's a very strong selling point."

Woolees emphasized, "We're off to a good start." And he feels, "The political process . . . the scrutiny" involved in establishing the school has been good.

This is, he said, "perhaps the single most important thing in Eastern North Carolina . . . perhaps the single largest investment North Carolina has ever made in the East. Perhaps no one thing the state has done will do more to meet the present needs of the people . . . the need for more and better medical care."

Planning for the curriculum is moving ahead too.

Plans already have been completed for a two-year program—hour by hour, topic by topic. This can be modified and improved, but it's already done. So ECU is ready to go at any time with the first two years. And work is under way now on the second two years.

Clinical training facilities—always a problem—are being studied and plans are developing in this area. And detail work is nearing completion on plans to renovate a dormitory—Ragsdale Hall—to serve as a temporary basic medical science facility.

It will include office and laboratory space for faculty, classrooms, limited clinical facilities for out-patient treatment, as well as teaching labs for physiology, pharmacology, histology, pathology and neural science.

The search is also underway at present for chairmen of various departments that do not already have chairmen . . . such as pathology, microbiology, biochemistry . . . and the school is starting to recruit faculty members.

These search committees are composed of full-time faculty members and practicing physicians in the Greenville area.

What are the prospects for the few months?

A permanent Dean will be chosen; there will be a fantastic amount of work on detail planning and architectural planning for clinical teaching facilities as well as for the new basic medical science building; and planning will continue for outpatient and library facilities.

"What we're trying to do," Dr. Edwin Monroe, ECU's Vice-Chancellor for Health Affairs said, "is proceed with the planning and development of a medical school that will be an integral part of the medical community and health care delivery system in this region."

According to the Laurinburg, N.C. native, "It's our hope that very close ties will exist between the medical school, the Eastern AHEC (Area Health Education Center), and the community hospitals."

Citing the fact that both the ECU medical school and a new hospital for Pitt County will be located in Greenville, "it will be beneficial to both to have them closely related." And, according to Monroe, "We're meeting regularly . . . frequently . . . with the staff and trustees of the county hospital to work out the best possible working relationship and accommodation, keeping in mind that the mission of the medical school is education, and the mission of the Pitt County hospital, or any other hospital, is patient care." Yet, he said, "these two missions are not exclusive of each other."

Monroe, who received his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania after attending the two-year medical school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, came to Greenville in 1956. He left a prospering private medical practice in 1968 to join the ECU staff because, "I wanted to help Eastern North Carolina and the state as a whole in the solution of it's health manpower problems."

The 47-year-old physician said his "first task was to get an Allied Health school established, and then help implement the . . . medical school."

Speaking with an intense feeling in his voice, Monroe said, "When I stop and look . . . from a detached viewpoint . . . I feel extremely optimistic."

It's easy to get preoccupied in the series of problems that have to be dealt with. But with the kind of faculty we have here as a nucleus, and the very supportive feeling that exists not only here but around the state . . . there's just no earthly way this four year school is not going to come into being."

Has he had any regrets about leaving private practice to work for a medical education facility at ECU?

"No, I haven't had time!" he commented.

N.C. Farmers Are 5th In Conservation Plans

North Carolina farmers ranked fifth in the nation in number of new farm conservation plans between individual farm operators and the state's 92 soil and water conservation districts, according to newly-compiled statistics of the Soil Conservation Service.

With 2,337 individual conservation plans on large and small farms during the past fiscal year, North Carolina ranks only behind Texas, Iowa, Arkansas and Kentucky.

"This shows that the farmer in North Carolina continues his keen and demonstrated interest in conservation farming and in protecting our vital natural resources," said State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, who heads the Soil Conservation Service in North Carolina.

The federal conservation agency works closely with the 92 soil and water conservation districts which serve all 100 counties in North Carolina. Other federal and state agencies also support the district supervisors in their conservation objectives.

The new conservation plans bring North Carolina's cumulative total of district cooperators to 73,927 farms covering more than 10 million acres. Active conservation plans total more than 60 thousand with 7,317,278 acres.

A total of 3,141 new district cooperators were reported in conjunction with the new statistics on conservation plans.

A conservation plan is prepared with the individual farmer to accomplish conservation goals that fit his farming operation. After considering resources of land, water, equipment and other factors, a plan is prepared using an aerial photograph of the farm, and a program of activities that may cover several years is planned.

Decisions to be made include those on land use—cropland, pasture, woodland, ponds and other waterways—and agricultural goals are considered. Some farmers may want beef or dairy animals on pasture; others may wish to concentrate on corn, soybeans, tobacco or other crops.

Conservation work is emphasized in every plan.

Popular practices in North Carolina include conservation cropping, with 98,980 acres; tree planting, with 23,296; contour farming, with 18,193, and stripcropping with 4,316 acres. With too-abundant water a problem in many areas of North Carolina, especially in the Coastal Plain, drainage is also a major consideration. Some 335 miles of tile drainage (placed underground) was installed during the year, while 533 miles of open drains were installed on farmland.

Irrigation, in contrast, was a rather small practice in North Carolina, in relation to some arid areas in the Western United States.

Most agricultural counties in the entire nation are served by conservation districts. With a total of 3,141 counties in the nation—some completely urbanized—2,931 soil and water conservation districts have been organized to serve them.

North Carolina's 92 districts serve all hundred Tar Heel counties.

Justice Marshall Is On Court Sick List

By W. DALE NELSON

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illness has struck the Supreme Court for the second time in six weeks, raising the possibility that only seven of the justices will be on the bench when the court reconvenes next Tuesday.

A court spokesman disclosed Wednesday that Justice Thurgood Marshall was hospitalized Tuesday night with a respiratory infection. Marshall, 66, was reported in satisfactory condition at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Meanwhile, Walter Reed Army Medical Center reported no change in the condition of Justice William O. Douglas, who suffered a stroke on Dec. 31. His condition is listed as satisfactory.

Barrett McGurn, information officer for the court, said the naval hospital expected to have no word for a day or two on when Marshall might be released.

He said Marshall had a slight fever when he and his wife returned Tuesday from a trip to the West Coast. The court has been in a three-week recess.

Marshall was in the same hospital for about a month in 1970 after being admitted with a respiratory infection and developing pneumonia.

Marshall, the first black justice, was named to the high court in 1967 by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson. He is a former U.S. solicitor general, judge of the Second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, and civil rights lawyer.

There has been no word on when Douglas, 76, might be released from Walter Reed.

Athletic Field World Begun

GRIFTON—Construction has begun on a new concession stand and rest rooms at the Grifton School athletic field.

Ground-breaking, pouring of concrete floor and footings and installation of a sewer line have been completed by the Grifton Utility Department, under the supervision of Gene Coley, Ralph Thaxton, town building inspector, designed the building and drew plans for the project.

The building will include locked storage space for equipment and will eventually be furnished with a refrigerator, popcorn and hot dog machines.

The project is being funded from money received in a fried chicken dinner sponsored by various groups last fall.

The unemployment rate in Alaska remains high and the availability of resident workers indicates little employment opportunity for job seekers from other states, according to Jim Hannan, manager of the local Employment Security Commission.

Persons planning an Alaska job hunt are advised to contact the State Employment Service Office nearest their home to obtain job supply and demand information. If they have any union ties, they should contact their business agent as well.

The trans-Alaskan pipeline haul road is virtually complete. The actual building of the pipeline will begin within the next few months. All construction is being performed by firms awarded contracts by the Alyeska Pipeline Service Company, administrator of the design, construction and operation of the pipeline. Pipeline hiring in Alaska is covered by union collective bargaining agreements; consequently, pipeline workers are dispatched from the particular craft union of which they are members. On all employment, preference will be given to those with an established employment history in Alaska.

"Construction activity throughout the State has slowed down for the winter, but should increase as spring approaches. At this time, no shortage of workers in the highly unionized construction trades is anticipated," Hannan said.

"Most logging camps are closed for the winter, but the season should begin to pick up in March. Because of a lumber surplus in Japan (Alaska's primary foreign buyer), there may be minor slowdowns in the logging industry. It is anticipated that sawmill operations in Southeast Alaska will be somewhat curtailed throughout the summer," Hannan explained.

It is projected that the commercial salmon fishing season will be poor again this year, possibly even worse than in 1974. With regulations on fishing becoming increasingly restrictive, opportunities are limited in the commercial fishing and fish processing industries.

"Shellfish continue to be a good resource. However, a poor market has left the major processors with large inventories on hand, so few shellfish will probably be taken commercially this year," Hannan said.

Opportunities are generally available Statewide for certain highly skilled professional, clerical and waitress occupations.

Persons desiring Federal jobs should contact their nearest U.S. Civil Service Commission branch office.

Information on the purchase or lease of State land may be obtained from the State Division of Lands, 323 East Fourth Avenue, Anchorage, Alaska 99501. Federal lands in Alaska are no longer open to homesteading. It is possible, however, that sometime in the future, some areas of the State will again be opened up to homesteaders.

Details may be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Land Management, 555 Cordova Street, Anchorage, Alaska 99502. The Alaska Travel Division,

An Uncommonly Sensitive Show

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A freshly widowed, middle-aged grandmother from the Bronx tries to cure her acute case of the lonelines. She meets a stout, middle-aged man at the ballroom and they fall in love.

Soap opera? Kind of. But don't let that stop you from watching Maureen Stapleton in "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom" tonight on CBS. It's an uncommonly sensitive show with an unconventional approach.

It includes six songs, the themes ranging from lonely anguish to the joys of dancing, which Miss Stapleton or her lover (excellently portrayed by Charles Durning) sing during the two-hour show.

"Queen" isn't a musical by any means, but rather a well-acted, well-written TV drama which happens to feature musical soliloquies by the two lead characters as part of the story development.

It starts at a hospital, where Bea Asher (Miss Stapleton) is told an operation to save the life of her husband has failed. From there, it follows her through the first lonely months of a widow's life — an empty house, grocery-shopping for one, the efforts of well-meaning relatives to ease the pain of her loss.

She opens a pop antique store to keep busy, having rejected an offer to live with her married daughter's family and having learned her married son is moving to Los Angeles to teach at UCLA.

But her sadness doesn't wane until a middle-age waitress friend, also a widow, persuades her to join the folks at the Stardust Ballroom, describing it as a "terrific place for old girls like us who are young at heart."

And off she goes to a poignant world of middle-age practitioners of the cha-cha, waltz, foxtrot and tango, a world of lonely, smiling souls who annually elect their own queen of the Stardust Ballroom.

After a hesitant start, she hooks up with Al Green (Durning), a shy, uncertain mailman who in succeeding weeks of courting becomes her lover — only to tell her after the initial love-making he's married. "I don't want to talk about it — ever," she says, startled but willing to accept the situation and even discuss it candidly before her shocked daughter and her tolerant son.

To the horror of her daughter, she changes her widow's weeds, ditches her hair color from dull natural grey to artificial red and generally blossoms amid her gentle romance with the postman.

Their happiness peaks during the ballroom's annual crown-queen contest, but unexpectedly ends on a tragic note.

So much for the grief news. Now for the cheers, which go to the show in general and in particular for the music composed and arranged by Billy Goldenberg (with lyrics by Alan and Marilyn Bergman).

The music doesn't overpower the show, but instead gives it a powerful assist which rarely intrudes. Goldenberg should get an Emmy for his effort and, if there's any justice, probably will.

Fights Pool As 'Indecent'

BELTON, S.C. (AP)—The Rev. Wayne Dobson, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, said Tuesday night, "God is against indecent exposure" as he led an attack on a proposal to seek federal funds for a public swimming pool.

The Rev. Mr. Dobson and another minister told a public hearing on the issue that persons of the opposite sex in swim suits may lust after one another.

A young mother replied, "A man can lust after a woman with a long dress on just as well."

Belton officials have not whether to apply for $125,000 under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The money would also pay for two tennis courts. All facilities would be built in a city park.

Four area churches oppose the pool. The Pentecostal Holiness Church objects to the location because it would be too near its building and would disrupt services; the Church of God says it would be too near a facility for senior citizens; the East View Baptist Church is allied with Calvary Baptist in opposing mixed swimming.

The Rev. Mr. Dobson said earlier, "We interpret the Scripture to mean that indecent exposure is immoral. Women and men should be modest and decent. I know the government advocated equality in everything but when public bathing is involved we would only approve of men bathing one day and women another day."
