Kissinger Promotes New American Oil Strategy

By WILBUR G. LANDREY
UPI FOREIGN EDITOR

BONN (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived here from the Middle East Saturday night to promote a new American oil strategy aimed at breaking Western dependence on oil imports and lowering prices.

American officials said the strategy was aimed at avoiding the choice between surrender or war in the event of a new oil embargo four or five years hence.

After explaining the strategy with King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, the top Arab oil producer, Kissinger came here to discuss it with West German leaders.

In reply to a question upon arrival in Bonn, Kissinger said Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmad Zaki Yamani said his government "supports the approach we are taking."

Kissinger ended a five-day tour of the Middle East which laid the groundwork for another trip in March to try and bring about agreement between Israel and Egypt on a new Israeli pullback east of Suez.

Saudi Arabian oil Minister Zaki Yamani did not mention Kissinger's oil plans in a farewell statement in Riyadh, but implied support for his Middle East peace efforts.

The oil policy included a floor on oil prices in consuming countries to make alternative sources of energy profitable. It also included offers of long-term contracts to producers tc stabilize prices below the current $11 per barrel.

Sunday Kissinger meets German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

Sunday night, Kissinger flies on to Geneva to meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko about Middle East peace. A senior official aboard Kissinger's plane said he expected the meeting to be "starchy."

Soviet Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev has denounced Kissinger's Middle East diplomacy in such thinly veiled terms that the competition there could become more open, detente or no detente.

At the end of his Saudi visit, Kissinger said, "I was enlightened by the valuable views of His Majesty. We also discussed questions related to our two countries as well as some international questions."

CABIN FOR MEN ONLY—Thirty men, authentically uniformed and equipped, will live in the huts at Valley Forge, Pa. this weekend, as part of the re-enactment of George Washington's Revolutionary War winter encampment. However, it may not be so authentic as park rules ban women from staying overnight with their men in the park. Julie Liedman, a visitor to the park, takes a look at one of the log cabins at the park. Valley Forge Reenactment

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — A re-enactment of George Washington's winter encampment at Valley Forge will be followed as closely as possible this weekend as the nation celebrates the birthday of its first president.

The only exception is that women will not be allowed to spend the night with the troops here. It's against park rules.

"Sure we'll have our camp followers," said a spokesman for the Second Pennsylvania Regiment of the Continental Line which will relive history in spartan log cabins used by the Colonials in the bitter winter of 1777-78.

"We're trying to come as close as we possibly can to the way it was 200 years ago," he said. "The followers will act as wives, girl friends, maybe even ladies of the night. But they're not going to be in the huts."

Rep. Jerry Pettis Killed

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Jerry Pettis, killed when his single-engine plane crashed near here, excelled in many fields and brought his knowledge to Congress, President Ford says.

The five-term congressman and veteran pilot died Friday when his plane went down in the San Bernardino Mountains. He was alone in the craft.

The President said Pettis "excelled as a rancher, teacher, aviator, religious leader and businessman. Jerry brought the insights he gained in these various fields to Congress and his position of leadership among House Republicans."

The California congressman was the third-ranking Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee and deputy Republican whip.

South Koreans Sink Ship

SEOUL (UPI) — A South Korean Navy patrol ship Saturday sank a 50-ton vessel believed to be a North Korean spyboat off the country's eastern coast near the truce border between the two Koreas, the Defense Ministry said.

The ministry said that "children were killed and wounded" by bullets fired from the North Korean boat during an exchange of gunfire but did not give further details.

Argentine Clash

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An Army search party exchanged shots with a band of leftist guerrillas in Tucuman province Friday night and an officer and three guerrillas were killed, the army reported today.

Two other officers and an enlisted man were wounded in the clash in the town of Pueblo Viejo. An army source said the leftists belonged to the outlawed People's Revolutionary Army — or ERP.

About 5,000 troops have combed the province since Sunday looking for an estimated 400 members of the Marxist guerrilla army in the mountainous forests of Tucuman, 900 miles north of Buenos Aires.

Withdraws Bond Issue

KUWAIT (UPI) — The Kuwait International Investment Company Saturday confirmed it had withdrawn from two multi-million dollar bond issues managed by Merrill-Lynch of New York because one of the other underwriters is a Jewish owned bank on the Arab boycott list.

In Beirut, a spokesman for Merrill-Lynch said that KIIC had "requested to be withdrawn from the issues" but said he did not know whether they had already done so.

Maiden Test For AlO

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (UPI) — The first of six pre-production models of the A10, a lightweight fighter known as the "footsoldier's friend," made its maiden test flight Saturday over this desert air base.

A base spokesman said the twin-engine craft flew for one hour and five minutes, reaching a maximum altitude of 15,000 feet and top speed of about 210 miles per hour.

The A10, designed and built by Fairchild Republic, of Farmington, N.Y., is designed to fly low to the ground to give support to infantry units.

Kidnapping Plans Revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Weathermen in 1970 considered kidnapping, and possibly assassinating, Spiro T. Agnew and Melvin Laird, according to an FBI informant who penetrated the radical organization.

The congressional testimony, published Saturday, revealed that in addition to the then vice president and defense secretary the group also singled out Henry Kissinger and former White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler as possible targets.

Gold Prices Climb

LONDON (AP) — Gold dealers say a prediction that Arab oil producers are about to start buying more gold fueled the two-day climb in gold prices which are at a high for the year.

The price rose $5 in London on Thursday and another $5 Friday to close at $184.25 an ounce. In Zurich, Europe's biggest market, the price was up $6 Friday and closed at the London level.

Walter Frey, general manager of the Swiss Bank Corp. of Zurich, told a London symposium Wednesday a wave of inflation would soon send investors including Arabs scurrying for the safety of gold.

More Amtrak Passengers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government railroad corporation, Amtrak, reported today that it carried more passengers and had higher earned revenues in 1974 than during any year since its founding in 1971.

It was spurred especially "during the more acute phases of the energy crisis when demand often exceeded our capacity," Amtrak said.

No Sprinklers

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'd sleep a lot better at night if the World Trade Center had sprinklers," Fire Commissioner John O'Hagan said last week.

Automatic sprinkler systems are not mandatory under the city fire codes. When flames broke out in the center's 110-story north tower at midnight Thursday, there were no sprinklers to help contain the blaze. It spread to parts of six floors, but no one was seriously injured.

104 Nations Debate Action

By RICHARD C. LONGWORTH

ALGIERS (UPI) — Representatives of 104 developing nations Saturday began a four-day debate on how to use their control over raw materials as a springboard to industrial power.

"We find ourselves now in a situation where we can impose the rules of the game," Algerian President Houari Boumedienne told ministers and ambassadors gathered in an elegant hall beside the Mediterranean Sea. "The industrialized countries today appeal to us to solve world economic problems."

Boumedienne sounded what Algeria hopes will be the meeting's keynote —the need to take over control of the U.N. Industrial Development Organization and turn it into an instrument for rapid industrialization of the third world.

The meeting was both a followup to a conference in Senegal last week which called for solidarity to keep raw material prices up and preparation for a big UNIDO conference in Peru next month.

UNIDO currently is a low-keyed organization, based in Vienna, which funds a development projects around the world. Until now, it has been one of the least vigorous U.N. bodies.

The developing nations claim UNIDO is controlled by industrialized nations and say it must be restructured before it can act independently.

Boumedienne urged developing countries to tighten control over their basic commodities and launch all-out industrialization programs as the only guarantee of a speedy increase in their living standards.

Raw material prices soared from 1972 to 1974, with copper going up 80 per cent, rubber 150 per cent, zinc 270 per cent and sugar 500 per cent. But markets in almost all raw materials — except oil —have softened since then, with prices falling an average 30 per cent.

State Of Emergency

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The Ethiopian government Saturday night declared a state of emergency in Eritrea province where troops and Moslem secessionists have been fighting for more than two weeks.

"The measure was taken to assure public security and maintain law and order," a government statement said.

It was the most explicit public acknowledgement the government has made to date that the situation in Eritrea was serious.

Although heavy fighting has been in progress for 16 days with thousands of casualties reported, the government until now has described the situation as a police action against local bandits.

They described the government announcement as a belated public recognition of the seriousness of the situation.

In a separate statement, the government lashed out at Syria and other Arab states for their open support for secessionist guerrillas in the continuing fighting with government forces in Eritrea.

The declaration of a state of emergency will have little immediate impact on the situation, diplomats said, since a dusk-to-dawn curfew was already in effect in the provincial capital of Asmara and in other sectors of the province troops and rebels were engaged in a full-scale shooting war.

Gap Persists Between Israel And Egypt

By THOMAS ACKERMAN

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said Saturday a deep gap persists between Israel and Egypt on terms of a second-stage Sinai peace agreement despite the latest Middle East mission by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Calling himself an "optimistic pessimist," Allon said in a radio interview, "The more I listen to statements by President (Anwur) Sadat (of Egypt) and other Arab leaders, the less I am hopeful."

But he said the same impression prevailed before the successful conclusion of last year's military disengagement accords with Egypt and Syria.

"The gap is very wide and very deep," Allon said. "Nevertheless, I do hope that once the process of negotiations begins, new vistas will be discovered."

Allon said Kissinger and his Egyptian and Israeli hosts "refrained from entering into the actual details" of a Sinai formula involving another Israeli pullback. Kissinger will take up the hard bargaining when he returns to the region in the first half of March, Allon said.

"The gap exists and he will have to work hard at reducing it in this coming tour," he said.

Americans Urged To Leave Cambodia

By VENG ENG

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. officials Suturday urged Americans in non-essential jobs to peave Cambodia for their own safety. It was the first time in almost five years of fighting they indicated a lack of confidence in the Phnom Penh government to withstand rebel attacks.

"Those Americans visiting here on tourist visas or who have no essential reason for being here at this time should make plans to leave as soon as possible," said U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean.

Last week he ordered families of American officials to leave the city.

The ambassador cited fighting close to Phnom Penh, continuing rocket attacks, the closing of the city airport to all but the government airline, and shortages of food and fuel in urging Americans to leave.

He said the critical situation in the Cambodian capital is "liable to continue for some time."

A U.S. Embassy official said contract airlines Air America and Continental Air Services would be put at the disposal of Americans and dependents of other foreign nationals.

"This should not be taken as an American evacuation plan at this time," the official said.

"We just want to reduce the number of people who we are responsible for in Phnom Penh."

Meanwhile, the United States began stepping up its airlift to Phnom Penh and it appeared a massive, Berlin-style airlift might become necessary.

U.S. officials are keeping alive a contingency plan for a 100-plane airlift to supply Phnom Penh with the approximately 1,700 tons of food, fuel and ammunition it needs daily.

No supplies have reached Phnom Penh via the Mekong River since Jan. 31 and at least nine commercial ships and tugs have been sunk on the waterway.

Hearing Set

WILMINGTON, N.C.(AP)— The Army Corps of Engineers has received an application from First Colony Farms Inc., for a permit for excavation work on drainage canals in six areas of the 372,000-acre farm

First Colony, with headquarters in Creswell, sought permission to maintain and expand drainage canals on its property in Hyde, Dare, Tyrrell and Washington counties.

The company said its proposed work would have an "insignificant effect" on groundwater tables and on total annual runoff.

Corps officials said Friday that a lengthy review of the request by federal, state and local agencies and the public would now begin. A public hearing on the proposal is scheduled for 7 p.m. April 10 in Washington, N.C.

Abu Dhabi Decides To Lower Price Of Oil

BEIRUT (UPI) — Abu Dhabi has decided to lower the prices of its crude exports by between 10 and 40 cents a barrel because of a 40 per cent decline in its oil output, an authoritative oil journal said Saturday.

The Middle East Economic Survey said production in the Persian Gulf state has been cut because the low-sulphur premium incorporated into the posted prices has made Abu Dhabi crude overpriced in comparison with other Gulf producers.

The Abu Dhabi output declined to around 700,000 barrels per day last month, compared to 1.2 million barrels per day in the last quarter of 1974, which is a drop of over 40 per cent, it said.

The government reacted by cutting the sulphur premium, which was incorporated into the posted prices in October 1973 and which ranges between 25 and 70 cents per barrel.

The cuts range between 10 cents per barrel for crude produced from the Umm Shaif oil fields and 40 cents for crude extracted from the oil fields of Murban and Zakum, the journal said.

"It is assumed that the Abu Dhabi move will now result in a corresponding price readjustment for other Gulf crudes with low-sulphur premia," such as Qatar, Oman, and certain varieties of Iranian and Saudi Arabian crude, the publication said.

N.C. Legislators Seeking Ways To Trim State Budget

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's legislators are digging into the proposed state budget like eager gold hunters to eliminate so-called fat that has built up over the years of plenty.

"Never before have we had so many people digging into and studying the budget to cut out things that are absolutely not necessary," Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, said Saturday. Scott is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"Many unnecessary things have been there all the time. We just haven't opened our eyes and looked," said Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Base Budget Committee.

They and other legislative leaders say the chance of tax repeal in the next biennium has diminished sharply.

However, Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser said Saturday he has no plans now to drop his drive to roll back the sales tax on food as of July 1, 1976.

Scott and Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, also a Democrat, told a news conference last week that estimates of revenue for the next two years have been lowered considerably. The legislative leaders contend the proposed $6.8 billion budget for the next two fiscal years would lead to deficit spending, which is prohibited by the state constitution.

Watkins said Saturday that "we're going to get tough" in eliminating unnecessary items from the budget.

"In my opinion any chance of a food tax reduction is out the window. This is not the time for any major tax change," Watkins said.

Holshouser told the Associated Press, however, that "there is nothing today in the revenue picture that would justify a total prophecy of gloom and doom."

Scott, who is in his 10th term as a legislator, said "it's going to take a lot of digging" to balance the 1975-77 budget.

He said he was hopeful that more than $100 million can be trimmed from the two-year budget proposed by Holshouser and the Advisory Budget Committee.

"If we can't, we're going to have to take out some things," Scott warned.

Watkins, a fourth-term legislator, said, "There's a tremendous amount of money in the base budget that can be saved on travel, communications, supplies, printing and binding. Many millions can be saved by trimming this and it does not eliminate any jobs or services."

Watkins, a member of the budget commission, said he thought "we were being unrealistic in proposing the budget we did. I felt it would be much wiser to set it low and then have a reserve."

The base budget covers present state programs and services. The expansion budget, which covers new programs and expanded services, also is scheduled for thorough examination. Trimming also is likely in this area.

Referring to legislative estimates of projected revenue, Holshouser said:

"Some people are already saying these figures are politically motivated as an effort to cloud the issue on the food tax. I'm not prepared to say that, but we still believe that we can repeal the food tax within the next budget period."

"It's much too early for this kind of panic," Holshouser said.

Holshouser's projections are based on a predicted upturn in the economy in the last quarter of this calendar year. The legislature projections do not foresee an economic improvement for another year.

Either way, reversions—money that has been appropriated but was not spent—would be used to offset any decline in revenue. State budget forecasts call for a cushion of $160 million in reversions during the two-year period.

A Holshouser spokesman says less than half of that amount would be needed to offset the loss of the food tax revenue. Legislative spokesmen, however, say the reversions will be needed, along with the food tax revenue, to balance the new budget.

Hardee's Board Chairman Resigns

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C. (AP)—Hardee's Food Systems Inc. said today Leonard Rawls, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, has resigned as chief executive officer of the quick-order hamburger chain.

The company also announced the resignation of James R. Trotter as a director, releasing a statement in which Trotter said he was leaving the board because he could not "be responsible" for Hardee's annual 1974 stockholders' report and financial report to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A company spokesman said Rawls and Trotters' resignations were accepted Friday.

No reason was given for Rawls' resignation. He will continue as presiding officer at board meetings.

Jack A. Laughery, president and chief operating officer, was elected to succeed Rawls as chief executive officer.

In the statement released by Hardee's, Trotter said he was resigning because 'I do not feel that my views of a director's duties and responsibilities are in accord with a majority of the board."

"I am prompted to resign now instead of simply not standing for re-election because the 1974 annual report was mailed to the stockholders and the 10-K was filed before the board met as a group with the company's officers and independent accountants to review and approve the same," Trotter said.

The 10-K report is a document required by the SEC.

"For the same reason," Trotter's statement continued, "I also feel that I should and do decline to be responsible for the company's 1974 annual report and the 10-K."

Ayden Anticipation Bonds Sold Last Week

Some $90,000 in bond anticipation notes were sold by the Local Government Commission Tuesday for the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District.

Ayden town manager Don Russell, acting secretary-treasurer of the district—which includes the municipalities of Winterville, Ayden and Grifton—said the funds will be used to defray the cost of underground television inspection of main outfall lines in the three communities. He said the survey is designed to detect infiltration into the main sewer lines so rehabilitation of the lines can be accomplished where needed.

Russell noted that the survey, which has already begun in Grifton, will take about three months, and include smoke and rain simulation tests as well as television inspection of the lines.

According to Russell, 87½ per cent of the cost of the project will be paid for with state and federal grants when the work is completed, but he noted, the $90,000 from the bond anticipation notes will fund the project until the state and federal grants are received.

Net interest cost on the notes, with a 176-day average maturity, is 6.23 per cent. Southern Bank and Trust Co. of Mount Olive was low bidder for the notes.

Residents of the three communities approved a $2 million bond issue last year to fund construction of a joint waste treatment plant on Contentnea Creek near Grifton.

The communities formed the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District and will construct one treatment facility to serve all three because of the cost factor involved. One large treatment facility is more economical to construct than three smaller facilities to serve the communities individually would be.

Wants Husband To Join Her

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kathy Donins made a Valentine's Day appeal for the return of her husband, Janis, a star athlete who has been unable to get permission to leave the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Donins, 25, of Palos Verdes, Calif., appealed in an interview Friday that her 28-year-old husband be allowed his freedom to join her and daughter Nicole, who will be 2 years old Tuesday.

The 6-foot-1, 185-pound Donins is no ordinary Soviet citizen. He was a top javelin thrower and would have been a favorite in the 1972 Olympic Games had it not been for his marriage to Kathleen Keefe.

The couple originally planned to wed in the late summer of 1972, but the Soviets told her that if Janis intended to compete in the Olympics, they would have to wed before the competition, she said.

They married on Jan. 12, 1972, in the province of Latvia, but Janis suddenly discovered he was no longer an athlete and his relatives were harassed, Mrs. Donins said.

"They forced us to get married before we wanted to," said Mrs. Donins, 25. "Then, for no reason, he was not on the Soviet Olympic team. He certainly would have won a medal if he had gone, but they took away his foreign travel permit."

Kathy, then a college art student, met Donins at a party she threw for Russian athletes before a track meet in Los Angeles in 1969. A year later she visited his home in Riga, Latvia.

The next summer he competed with the Soviet team in Berkeley, Calif., and beat world record holder Janis Lusis with a throw of 293 feet 1 inch. That earned him No. 2 ranking among javelin throwers, only 11 months before the Olympic games.

"One day after my marriage I was called into a government office and told I had to fill out a citizenship application," she said.

Author Huxley Dies

LONDON (AP) — Sir Julian Huxley, distinguished British biologist and author, died Friday night at his London home at the age of 87.

The family announced his death today.

Sir Julian was the older brother of novelist Aldous Huxley, who died in 1963.

Grandson of the Victorian biologist Thomas Huxley, a champion of Darwinism, Sir Julian was born June 22, 1887. He was the eldest son of schoolmaster and editor Leonard Huxley.

Sir Julian grew up in an atmosphere of science and culture and his later writings reflected an enormous range of interests from poetry, religion and philosophy to zoology and cancer research.

He was often described as Britain's "public scientist No. 1" for his books and broadcasts trying to explain the achievements of science in plain terms.

Accuses Holshouser Of "Ruin"

RALEIGH (AP)—In a letter to political allies, former state Republican Chairman Frank A. Rouse said that Gov. Jim Holshouser has brought the GOP party to "ruin, financially and philosophically."

Rouse's strongly worded letter sent 1,000 friends and political associates said the governor and Gene Anderson, the governor's aide, "have used us and our party for personal gain."

The letter indicated a bitter party split remains unhealed. It has festered since Rouse was ousted in November 1973 by Thomas Bennett, Holshouser's candidate for state GOP chairman.

Rouse laid the blame for the 1974 GOP election defeat on Holshouser, his appointees and policies.

Holshouser called the letter "trash." He said it "doesn't deserve any response at all."

Wants U. S. 17 Improved

RALEIGH (AP)—Jack Hawke, federal co-chairman of the Coastal Plains Regional Commission, wants highway U.S. 17 through coastal North and South Carolina and Georgia improved.

Hawke told a news conference Friday he had written Acting Transportation Secretary John Barnum urging him to give special consideration to improving the highway.

Hawke urged that funds from the $2 billion in federal highway funds ordered released by President Ford be used for the project.

Calls For Minority Office

DURHAM (AP)—Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt has called for the creation of a state Office of Minority Business Enterprise aimed at increasing the number of enterprises owned and operated by minorities.

In a talk prepared for the Durham Business and Professional Chain Friday night, Hunt pointed out that creation of an office of minority business enterprise had been recommended by the Council on State Goals and Policy. He said that as vice chairman of the council he fully supported the recommendation.

Jury Rules No Violation

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A federal jury has ruled that Yancey County sheriff Kermit Banks and four law officers did not violate the constitutional rights of 15 Floridians during a 1972 raid on a campground.

On Friday, the jury also absolved the officers of wrongful or negligent conduct in the death of Stanley Altland, 20, of Clearwater, Fla., who was fatally shot during the July 3, 1972 raid.

Seventeen Florida young persons had sued Banks and seven other officers for $2.35 million, claiming they were illegally arrested and that the raid resulted in Altland's death.

The 17 were acquitted in 1972 of all charges filed in connection with the raid.

Petitions For Roll Back

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina Electricities will petition the Federal Power Commission to roll back fuel adjustment clauses on wholesale electric power by 25 per cent, Marshall Lancaster, executive director of Electricities, said Friday.

Lancaster said that Electricities which represents 72 North Carolina municipal power systems will file a petition with FPC within the next three weeks.

"We will argue that it is improper for a utility to collect 100 per cent of all increases in fuel costs through the device of a fuel adjustment clause," Lancaster said.

Helms Calls For Formation Of Third Political Party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has called on conservatives to lay the foundation for a third political party in case the two major parties ignore them in 1976.

In a speech Friday to a national conference of the American Conservative Union, Helms said conservatives should call a platform drafting committee and begin selecting candidates.

"We must be prepared long before the filing dates have passed, long before it is too late for us to get on the ballot in each state, to have acceptable candidates ready and able to run for office, not excluding the presidency itself, in the event that the major parties continue in the direction they are now going," Helms said.

"This structure and organization should be prepared to become a new political party if necessary," he added. "It is time for conservatives to band together in a concrete political structure and with a political platform of their own."

Helms' remarks and those of other conservative speakers at the convention were seen as a signal to the White House that a conservative revolt within the Republican party was a possibility.

"People are unhappy with high taxes, inflation, intrusion into their personal lives, welfare and busing," said M. Stanton Evans, chairman of the American Conservative Union. "The American people are becoming increasingly conservative."

Evans said he believes the Ford-Rockefeller administration is drifting leftward.

In North Carolina, state GOP chairman Thomas Bennett said he was shocked at Helms' suggestion.

Bennett said he thought a conservative revolt would lead to splinter groups which would weaken both the party and the government. He said he hoped the 1976 Republican platform would reflect conservative views.

Helms also attacked President Ford's economic program as "so bad that even Republicans have difficulty supporting it."

Cypriot Case Taken To United Nations

By JOHN RIGOS

ATHENS (UPI) — Greek Cypriot leaders Saturday completed strategy talks with the Greek government before leaving for New York to present to the United Nations their case against the unilateral proclamation of an autonomous Turkish Cypriot state in Cyprus.

Glafkos Clerides, speaker of the Cypriot House of Representatives and leader of the Cypriot delegation, told newsmen, "The talks were very constructive and we reached common conclusions."

The talks were aimed particularly at coordinating a joint Athens-Nicosia position before the U.N. Security Council where Cyprus will protest the Turkish action, Clerides said.

The delegation met for five hours Friday with premier Constantine Caramanlis. A two-hour meeting followed Saturday with Foreign Minister Dimitrios Bitsios.

Clerides said his delegation would fly to New York Sunday.

Greece and Cyprus decided to refer the Cyprus problem to the Security Council only hours after Turkish Cypriot leaders Thursday unilaterally announced the formation of an automonous state on the northern tier of the island.

Turkish troops have occupied that sector since invading Cyprus in July.

The proclamation was seen by the Greek and Cypriot governments as a rejection of proposals by Clerides to create eight self-governing Turkish cantons on Cyprus proportionate in size to the 20 per cent Turkish share of Cyprus population. The Turkish Cypriot state now covers 40 per cent of the island.

Restraining Order Issued

RALEIGH (AP)—Federal Judge Franklin Dupree has granted a temporary restraining order to commercial fishermen fighting a regulation that would keep them from fishing during weekends in waters of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

The order suspends the regulation enacted by the U.S. Department of the Interior which would forbid commercial fishermen from fishing Saturdays and Sundays in the seashore from Oct. 1 through April 30 of each year. The regulation went into effect Wednesday and would have been enforced for the first time Saturday by park personnel.

The Department of the Interior has 70 days in which to answer the complaint. No hearing date has been set.

The order was requested in a complaint filed by Leonard G. Logan Jr., Manteo attorney who represents several commercial fishermen.

In the complaint, Logan said there was no real need for the ban of commercial fishemen from the seashore. He also said it is unfair since it gives preferential treatment to sports fishermen.

Traffic Lights In Operation

The new traffic signals at the intersections of Fifth and Reade Circle and at Cotanche Sreet and Reade Circle have been activated, according to City Engineer Charles Holliday.

Holliday said the lights were set into action about 10 a.m. Friday. "They're permanently set on a 60-second cycle, but we may have to adjust the timing to take care of the traffic flow," Holliday said.

New Wildlife President

Wilfong, a wholesale chrysanthemum grower, defeated Prof. James C. Wallace of Chapel Hill, one of the state's best known conservationists, at the federation convention.

Classifieds Tell Valentine Tales

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Susie asked Bobby to be her tootsy-wootsy. Mert told his little bride, Sally, "I luv you, Huggy Wuggy." And Jhn told Barbi her love blisters his heart.

These tender little messages weren't exchanged in some private, romantic moment on Valentine's Day. They were advertised.

In a city known more for its political views than its romantic ones, hundreds of people took out classified ads in the two Washington newspapers to express their valentine messages, some mushy and sentimental, others tender and traditional, some painful, some cryptic, some sour.

Husbands, wives, lovers, parents and children paid between $3 and $5 for a few lines of personal thoughts about love.

Murial told Bob: "My savage, neurotic, misfit, sex maniac. I love you."

Dawn Allen's ad read: "I want my parents to know I love Mike Colonna. You'll never separate us. We're one in a million and we're gonna make it."

Lowell Steele, classified advertising manager for the Washington Star-News, said the paper has run "Love note" ads for four years. He said the newspaper this year had about 600 responses, "some which, frankly, we couldn't run because they were in obvious bad taste. But we had fewer of them this year than in the past few."

Steele said he thinks people were prompted to answer the paper's promotional campaign for the classified section because it offers them a chance to be creative.

The Washington Post, which ran its valentine ads for the first time this year, received about 300 messages.

Perhaps Action For Our Area

It is not entirely clear just how much federal money is going to come to North Carolina for highway construction, but it is likely that considerable additional funds will be available.

President Ford announced last week that he would release $2 billion in highway funds as a means of fighting the recession. The money—and more—had been impounded during inflationary periods.

State highway officials could see up to $220 million coming to the state, and this at a time when state highway revenues are declining.

All that could mean some speed-up of projects in our area. The prime one awaiting action right now is the dual laning of U.S. 13 (Memorial Drive) from the Tar River bridge on the west side of the city north to N.C. 903. Property acquisition is underway in this area and a number of structures have been moved to provide right-of-way.

We hope this project will get underway soon. It is obviously needed now. With industrial development north of the river and construction of the new hospital and medical school west of the city, there is going to be an ever increasing traffic load on this important artery.

Then we can hope that release of the funds will speed up the dual laning project on N.C. 30-33 between Greenville and Washington.

Also of benefit to local travelers will be the dual laning of U.S. 264 from I-95 at Wilson to the U.S. 64 bypass now under construction around Zebulon. Hopefully the funds release can move up this project.

It might be too much to hope that the state will take another look at its priorities and begin planning for a new dual lane road between Greenville and Wilson; nevertheless this should be done and the people of this area are going to have to make the need known to Raleigh if this project is ever to get underway.

Roads are going to continue to be important to an area of dispersed population such as we have here in the East. The release of federal highway funds can be important to us if some of the money is allocated to Eastern North Carolina highway projects.

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—A special legislative commission which dug into governmental waste, uncovering millions of dollars in abuses, should continue in operation—and be made even stronger.

State Sen. I. C. Crawford of Asheville, chairman of the special study commission which uncovered such frills as the "million-dollar rest stops" along interstate highways and forced highway officials to build fewer of them less elaborately, is calling for establishment of a permanent budget watchdog group.

The experience of recent months in questioning state employes and agency heads prompted Crawford to include a stern measure in his proposal: the commission would be given authority to subpoena witnesses, demanding their presence, and the right to put witnesses under oath before taking testimony.

It is not so much that some agency chiefs misrepresented facts to the commission previously, members insist, but some failed to show up when asked to, and in some cases the commission would get four different answers to the same question put to four different people . . . and none of them were lying, simply giving the answer from their own perspective.

Zoo Is Troubled

The recession may do more than cause belt-tightening in North Carolina homes. It may mean delay in construction and animal purchasing plans at the N.C. State Zoo near Asheboro.

Zoo backers are seeking a $4 million appropriation from the General Assembly to match $4 million in private donations already pledged by a private solicitation campaign.

But those close to the effort say legislators are frightened by the economic realities and apt to be tight fisted. "Since the Zoo does not have a high-powered lobby working for it, it is essential that individual citizens communicate with their legislators urging them to give strong support," says Archibald McMillan, a member of the statewide organization of zoo supporters.

Personnel Study

Wrestling with the immensity of looking at the state's $3 billion-plus annual budget in minute detail, one phase of that probe has been split off and given to another committee by State Rep. Billy Watkins. Watkins is chairman of the Base Budget Committee which will attempt to go through the budget item by item in an effort to justify existing programs and trim costs.

Watkins and Rep. Claude DeBruhl, chairman of the House Committee on State Personnel, decided to let the personnel committee carry out a thorough study of numbers of state employes, salaries, staffing patterns, and general needs throughout state government.

The action was taken in order to remove the personnel questions—which cut across every state agency and operation—from the work of the base budget group. DeBruhl will have 90 days to complete his investigation.

A Newcomer

There is a newcomer in the House of Representatives whose name and hometown should ring some memory bells: he is State Rep. John Jordan of Saxapahaw, son of the late B. Everett Jordan, longtime U.S. Senator from North Carolina.

This is Jordan's first entry into politics, although the interest and ambition have been present for some time. He and his father agreed that family business pressures should rule out both of them being active in public office at the same time, and when his father died about a year ago, Jordan, 39, launched his career.

INSIDE REPORT

Baghdad, Moscow And Us

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

BASRA, Iraq—The fact that Saddam Hussein, the leader of Iraq's revolutionary Ba'ath government, personally lifted the secrecy veil so that we could visit the "Soviet naval base" at Um Qasr on the Persian Gulf tells much about the subtleties of Iraq's nationalistic foreign policy.

Despite the Iraqi-Soviet treaty of 1972, the force of Arab nationalism which gave the Ba'ath party dictatorial power in the 1968 revolution acts as a brake on Soviet or any other foreign influence.

That helps explain Saddam Hussein's response when we asked about alleged Soviet base rights to Um Qasr.

Um Qasr is, indeed, a mini-naval base. However, the Iraqi patrol and torpedo boat navy base we saw, along with fishing and small cargo ships, seemed far removed from the "Soviet naval base" the Pentagon listed last year as one of three major Soviet bases in the Persian Gulf-Indian Ocean regions, chips in super-power rivalry for control of strategic oil lanes.

Um Qasr lies on a shallow, narrow estuary at the northwest edge of the Persian Gulf. It consists of half a dozen jetties or piers built out into the estuary from naked sand, three of which are incomplete, plus housing for 1,200 officers and men of the miniscule Iraqi navy.

In late November, after President Ford asked for funds for a new U.S. Navy installation on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia, the Pentagon listed Um Qasr along with two other Soviet bases—Aden, in South Yemen, and Berbera in African Somalia—as the reasons. Aden and Berbera do indeed quarter and service Soviet naval vessels. Even if they did not, the proposed American installation at Diego Garcia to counter the muscular Soviet presence in South Asian waters has more than ample justification.

But as of today, U.S. fears that the mini-port of Um Qasr is also a Soviet naval base seem grossly inflated.

We flew there from Basra in a French-built Alouette III helicopter across perhaps 50 miles of flat, empty sand, barren of any habitation, until we reached the cluster of sheds, housing and headquarters buildings of the Iraqi navy at Um Qasr. Riding at anchor in a slow current of the narrow estuary were a couple of small freighters. We saw no sign of heavy naval stores, ammunition, spare parts, guns and other accoutrements of a Soviet naval base.

Before embarking on our tour, the Iraqi naval commander, Adm. Abdu al-Dairy, told us in Basra with heavy sarcasm that it was "important to know the truth about our Soviet naval base at Um Qasr."

"Warships have to be on water," he said. "They cannot hide. If the Soviet navy is bringing its warships to Um Qasr, they must go through the Strait of Hormuz (at the entrance to the Persian Gulf). The Iranians see every ship that goes through the strait."

The admiral claimed that the Soviet flag has been seen in waters around Um Qasr only when Iraq took delivery of a Soviet-made patrol or minesweeping vessel. Indeed, he said, the northern edge of the Persian Gulf is dangerously shallow, suited only for the small-bore vessels the Iraqi navy services at Um Qasr: minesweepers, coastal patrol, torpedo boats and small Soviet-built rocket ships.

Western European specialists in Baghdad, who have never been permitted to inspect the Um Qasr port facilities, told us that although destroyer-size vessels can navigate the estuary up to Um Qasr, the port's confinement and vulnerability to channel obstruction make it highly undesirable as a "naval base" for Moscow or anyone else.

The significance of opening Um Qasr to Western view, however, transcends its dubious utility, present or future, as a "Soviet naval base." Rather, it underlines this ambiguity: despite its Moscow treaty, the singlemost nationalistic, anti-Western Arab state now courts Western help to achieve rapid economic growth financed by vast oil riches.

Its capital city, the legendary Baghdad, was reduced to ashes by Mongol invaders in 1258, ending its glory as one of the world's richest centers of learning

BELIEF IN MIRACLES

The reason we find it so hard to believe in miracles is because they are so common. The whole of life about us is miraculous, but we have so lost the sense of the miraculousness of the commonplace that we find it very hard to believe in the unusual type of miracles.

Yet there is no greater miracle in all the world than the miracle of birth. That two cells should carry within them centuries of inherited characteristics is miraculous beyond description. How the decision to raise one's arm is transmitted into the muscular action involved in raising it is a miracle which no physiologist can explain.

As soon as we appreciate the miracles of everyday life, the mircles recorded in the Bible become much more credible. That the son of God should have been able to do the things the New Testament tells us he did is not a circumstance contrary to the trend of nature, but thoroughly consistent with it. We live in an order in which the unseen impinges upon the seen.

Insects Adapt Better

By H.J. HELLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Projected on a screen at the insect exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History is a message calculated to do little for mankind's self-esteem.

It says, "The last creature on earth may be a bug."

But Miss Alice E. Gray who planned the current exhibit is not trying to frighten anyone. She is only saying what many entomologists believe — that when the last person on earth dies the world still will be populated with a variety of insects.

In an interview Miss Gray, who is the scientific assistant in the museum's department of entomology, presented the case for bugs.

"They can live on less," she said, "and in smaller spaces and under stronger radiation and have methods of surviving over a long period of time when their physiological processes are virtually suspended.

"They are altogether hardier than we are and therefore will likely survive after conditions have become intolerable for humans."

Miss Gray said that sheer numbers of species would help insects overcome problems unendurable to man.

"After all," she said, "there about a million kinds of insects and each has its special adaptations. Where one can't survive another will."

Miss Gray was critical about the indiscriminate use of insecticides to control even medically dangerous species.

She recalled a case in the Far East where attempts were

Sunday Morning Notes

Mel Lang, formerly of Pitt County and now news editor in the Charlotte Associated Press office, called The Daily Reflector last week.

Susan Price, who works parttime in the news room and was an AP summer intern, answered the phone.

"My schedule says The Daily Reflector has an enterprise story due here today," Mel said, "and I haven't seen it."

Susan said she didn't know about it, but she would check with the managing editor.

ALVIN TAYLOR

There was a pause. Then, from Mel, "Hold everything. Forget I called. Somebody just put it on my desk. Why do they wait until I get on the phone to come up with these things?"

Why, indeed.

A group of kids were bike riding on a street at Tar River Estates. Suddenly one of them crashed to the ground.

It seems the youngster had been so engrossed in the scenery he hadn't seen a car parked directly in his path and he bumped into it headon.

He collected himself in silence and mounted his bike.

By then his companions had come back and someone said, "You can't see a big car?"

The tears flowed. "It's not funny!" the boy wailed, apparently with more hurt feelings than physical injuries.

Well, it really ain't funny.

The pretty girl was trying to figure out how to peel the backing off one of the new city windshield decals, which are replacing metal tags.

She read the instructions and peered at the decal. She began peeling—and off came a green strip.

Other Editors Say

(Wilson Daily Times)

Regardless of the cause, now needed or the number served, there is one point you know will be present. This is the high cost, and in this instance, North Carolina's training school program for juveniles. It is costing the taxpayers nearly $10,000 per year for each child in training school.

Those in the training schools are there, not for committing a crime, but because they have been declared unmanageable by their parents or guardians, or for truancy at school—status offenders, not criminals.

The state is operating seven training schools and has 676 employes on the payroll in the juvenile offenders division of the Department of Corrections. The budget for the current fiscal year is $10.3 million. The new budget provides $9 million for each of the coming new years.

The present population in the juvenile training school system is 928, and that number divided into $9,078,480 equals $9,782. Taking into consideration the way the schools have been equipped, you can educate a child at Harvard and have enough left over for a European vacation.

The juvenile system furnishes everything the child needs, and the juvenile system operates its own schools. The cost in the present fiscal year is $2.8 million, including a new building. The cost next year will be $1.2 million. Vocational education adds another $500,000 for a total of $1.7 million.

Housing and other facilities are available for more than 3,000 inmates. The system operates seven schools and the population is declining, so consideration is being given to using some of the surplus space for the overcrowded conditions in adult prisons. Wilson needs a new jail or prison.

There is now needed room for 2,000 more prisoners than can be comfortably accommodated. This will help the prison situation.

There is also the effort to have the General Assembly rule that, effective in 1977, no juvenile may be committed to a training school for a status offense, truancy or misbehavior as opposed to criminal acts. This will reduce the juvenile population to 200 or 300 tough cases which could be housed in one training school and the others converted into prison system units for adults.

40 Years Ago Today

February 16, 1935

A new signup of flue-cured tobacco growers may be the answer to protests from North Carolina that the acreage allotment for 1935 is too large. Protestors say the allotment will result in prices so low as to wreck the control law.

The suggestion for the new signup came yesterday after J.B. Hutson, the Farm Administration tobacco chief, and a delegation of North Carolina growers had debated for hours on the 1935 acreage.

Hutson said contracts for producers to grow 85 per cent of their base acreage in 1935 instead of the 70 per cent as in 1934 already had become binding.

Boy Scout activities of this community held the spotlight at the regular meeting of the Kiwanis club last night as the organization observed annual, "Boy's Night."

Several Scout executives and committeemen, in addition to three Scouts and one would-be Scout, combined to provide the clubmen with considerable information on Boy Scout activities in the community.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann entered the New Jersey State Prison today and said "I am innocent," as he entered the gates.

'Floating Rates' Pose Warning

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The future is risky.

That's not what the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said about its proposal to allow federal savings and loan associations to issue home mortgages on which the repayment would vary with economic conditions.

But that and other instances of floating rates illustrate a declining faith in a stable economic future.

Insurers, banks, unions, businesses and others have experimented with variable rates for contracts that extend into a future that might be a matter of months to 10 to 20 years away.

Few institutions believed in variable rates just a couple of decades ago. Contracts then were for fixed amounts, with each party assuming the future wouldn't be that much different from the present.

Monetary and fiscal upheavals, surging interest rates, rising prices and other instances of instability now have undermined that faith. More and more it is assumed that if the economy changes, so should contract terms.

Well over a million Americans now own life insurance company variable annuities, receiving payments that vary according to the stock market indices or the cost of living level.

In the life insurance industry the word variable once was considered unspeakable. The fixed rate was the bedrock on which the industry built itself — a specific sum at a certain time, as per contract.

As the value of the dollar erodes, escalator clauses increasingly are written into labor contracts in an attempt to maintain buying power. Most likely they have become a permanent fixture in labor agreements.

Social Security benefit payments now float, belated recognition that those on so-called fixed incomes cannot hold their own in an economy seeming to have an inherent tendency toward inflation.

In the past two years many business borrowers learned the consequences of the instability.

As the prime lending rate rose in quarter-point steps, corporate treasurers received form letters advising them that their loan repayments were rising by the same percentage.

Many businessmen had signed for such loans without thinking the matter through, a failing of contract signers for $100 personal loans or $10 million business loans. For years they had been accustomed to signing notes for fixed rates of interest. They learned a lesson — too late.

Nobody knows how far the variable or floating terms will go, but there is speculation among some businessmen and academicians that there's a lot more to come.

One reason for such thinking is that the removal of rigid terms in itself promotes a certain amount of instability. It removes much of the risk in loans, for example — loans that otherwise might not be made.

Some idea of how far the American people are willing to go with variable rates will come later this year when, if Congress doesn't object, the variable mortgage rates are scheduled to go into existence.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Hand-In-Hand In Gaston

Highway fatalities and slayings in Gaston County ran a neck-and-neck race last year. There were 30 murders and 32 highway deaths.

The race goes on.

At the time of this writing, there were four each. Four people had died on the highways so far this year, and four people had died at the hands of somebody else, violently.

We must live under a curse. There is no other county in the state, apparently, that offers the violence-per-capita that Gaston does.

Who knows what strange power might be working its influence on Gaston County? Could it be that we just happen to sit somewhat askew of Crowders Mountain and that makes us wobble? Maybe le grande Catawba is perturbed over the fact that its water is so red and is casting a spell in a pout.

The great ribbons of I-85 seem flat enough and safe enough as it sends traffic hurtling from South Carolina to Mecklenburg Co., and vice versa. It is a short distance in miles, but it is large in chance. No where on the interstate, from Birmingham to Richmond, it seems, is there another stretch of — 85 equal to Gaston's in lives claimed.

If you travel I-85, be careful.

And, uh, if you are not passing through—just living here—it might be a good idea to be just as careful. Maybe even more so.

Good Judgment Needed

The wisdom of high speed responses in emergency situations naturally comes under question any time a tragedy or near tragedy results from such a response.

This is certainly the case in the Thursday incident when a police car was forced out of control by a car that entered its path while the officers were responding to a holdup alarm.

Although stories seldom note how fast the police vehicles are moving, this one was being operated at a very high speed, according to some witnesses along Main Street. The result was when another car unexpectedly appeared, the police car went out of control and hit a pole. It was just by sheer good fortune that neither of the officers was seriously hurt nor that any other vehicles on normally busy Main Street were involved.

There never has been, to our knowledge, a policy on the speed of ambulances, fire trucks or police cars in emergency situations. Nor is there likely to be a satisfactory policy since each situation calls for an individual reaction. It is solely a matter of good judgment.

But we trust that the young officers are advised that the risks of excessive speed are often greater than the benefits to be derived. There is little point in risking life and limb in the generally vain hope of catching the robber on the scene at a minor holdup.

No Way

The kind of thing that adds to the lack of faith in some public employes is the size of the budget that Dr. Craig Phillips and the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction is proposing for the public schools during the next term.

Supt. Phillips has spoken in determined tones about the big need for $565 million more money from the state legislature than was granted at the last term.

All sane and responsible citizens recognize the need for growth and betterment in the schools. But they also recognize the economic realities of the times. Hardly any objective North Carolinians can visualize how the General Assembly could possibly agree to such a proposal. The absurdity seen in the asking for this much more money and the way in which it has been presented hardly reflect too well on the judgment of those who seek such outlays.

Good Judgment Needed In Emergency Responses

Sweet Defeat

Heaven for a congressman defeated for re-election is a rent-free mansion, complete with staff, servants, a limousine and a $45,000 a year salary, on an island in the South Pacific.

That paradise beckons for Earl Ruth, for three terms the Republican congressman from North Carolina's Eighth District. Defeated in his bid for election last November to a fourth term, Ruth, a close personal friend of President Ford, has been appointed governor of American Samoa, a cluster of seven islands in the South Pacific with a population of 20,000.

Who said defeat was such a bitter pill to swallow?

A Conservative View

The FCC Hands Down Its Own Death Sentence

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission entered an order a couple of weeks ago, denying license renewals to five radio stations under the common ownership of Star Stations, Inc. Whether just or unjust, the order dramatically revives old questions of the status of broadcasting under the First Amendment.

The FCC's decree is aimed directly at Don Burden, board chairman and president of the parent coropration that has operated WIFE and Wife-FM in Indianapolis, KOIL and LOIL-FM in Omaha, and KISN-AM in Vancouver. Last month's order wipes him out.

Commissioner Robert E. Lee, dissenting, called it a "death sentence." To deny Burden his license renewals struck Lee as "an unprecedented example of an overdose of justice." In Lee's view, "we are effectively bankrupting the licensee and probably denying him a livelihood in his field of expertise."

A majority of the commission, disagreeing with Lee, found a pattern of "serious misconduct" in the operation of the Star stations, and held that Burden "was intimately involved in and had knowledge of the misconduct."

The charges of greatest concern, in terms of the First Amendment issue, had to do with Burden's activities in support of the political campaigns of Vance Hartke in Indiana in 1964 and Mark Hatfield in Oregon in 1966.

The commission found, as to Indiana, that Burden was "privy to a scheme" by which WIFE furnished favorable publicity and free advertising for the Hartke campaign. As part of the scheme, the station's news staff was directed "to provide favorable news coverage for the candidate during regular news broadcasts." Following the campaign, said the FCC majority, Burden made false representations to the commission about his knowledge of these allegations.

The commission further found, as to Oregon, that in 1966 Burden instructed KISN's staff "to use regular newscasts to favor Mark Hatfield over his opponent." The publicity that Burden's station gave Hatfield was broadcast "not as an exercise of news judgment, but as a deception of the public and to further his private interests." This was an attempt "to use broadcast facilities to subvert the political process," and such misconduct could not be ignored or condoned. For these and for other reasons, the renewal applications were denied.

One effect of the FCC's order is to emphasize the night-and-day difference between the print media and the broadcast media in terms of "freedom of the press." In theory, the broadcasters have the same First Amendment freedom enjoyed by the press; in fact, the broadcasters' freedom is as nebulous as the air on which they rely. So long as the FCC can issue life-or-death decrees, for the reasons spelled out in the Burden case, the theory has no substance.

Suppose a newspaper publisher had done what Burden was charged with doing. Suppose a publisher had directed his editors deliberately to favor one candidate over another in the news columns. Sad to say, it has been known to happen. Such corruption of the news is a terrible disservice to the press as a whole. It is wrong, unethical, contemptible — pick your adjective. But it is not unlawful. No federal commission can shut down a newspaper. No publisher has to make representations under oath to any agency of government. If it ever were seriously proposed to license newspapers, the proposal would be shouted down as intolerable.

Yet we tolerate the judgments of the FCC. Radio frequencies and TV channels must be allocated by some agency, it is reasonably argued, or we would have chaos on the air. Congress has charged the FCC, by law, with making these allocations. The Constitution says that Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of the press. This takes us back to square one. Broadcasters may believe that as part of the press, they have First Amendment rights. What the Burden case says is simply this: They have them not.

Govm't Borrowing Can Very Well Reverse The Trend To Lower Interest

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

The current downtrend in interest rates may reverse, once federal government borrowing demands for the next 18-months come into better focus.

In fact, there were a few tremors in the money market this week, which may be the advance signal of a shift in direction. They showed in softer demand for both Treasury and coroprate securities.

It has taken a while for the full implications of the Ford budget and general economic program to sink in. While Ford projected a budget deficit of $34.7 billion for the fiscal year ending June 30 and a whopping $51.9-billion for the next 12-months, the aggregate of $86.6-billion doesn't tell the whole story.

To this figure should be added an estimated $24-billion which will be borrowed by a host of government agencies — Home Loan Bank, Federal Land Bank, Export-Import Bank, to name a few. That shoots the overall figure to $110.6-billion.

And there is a lot more to it than that. The Ford deficit assumes that Congress will save some $24-billion from social programs, including social security and food stamps. Early signs are that no such restraint will be shown by the liberal Congress. So, put this figure in and the likely total shoots up to $134.6-billion.

One other thing Ford was counting on when he worked out the budget numbers was an energy program which would add enough to treasury receipts to just about offset the proposed tax cuts. The mood of Congress seems to be to vote the tax cuts and then "study" the energy conservation program. It has been estimated that this sort of trade could add another $20-billion plus to the deficit.

Look at it this way, the total borrowing demand of the federal government could run in excess of $150-billion for the period ending June 30, 1976. And that's without Congress voting any new spending programs.

It seems unlikely that the total will ever reach this unreasonable figure. The Democratic Congress and the Ford Administration no doubt will reach a compromise somewhere along the line.

But the possibility that government borrowing demand might get completely out of hand probably gives Treasury Secretary William Simon and Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns sleepless nights. It should be remembered that neither Simon nor Burns has given Congress any assurance that there will be no rise in interest rates.

We see the top fiscal and monetary men in government keeping a sharp eye on the inflationary danger which goes with the big deficit approach to halting the recession. Both see inflation as the greater danger — the real threat to the American system.

In testimony before Congressional committees, the two have cautioned against what might be called a printing press attack to bring a quick end to the recession.

The real trick is going to be managing the government demand for money in such a way that it neither crowds private demand out of the market when recovery gets started non underwrites another inflationary boom.

made to control malaria by eliminating mosquitoes.

"So they applied something, perhaps DDT, over a large area," she said.

"What happened? They killed mosquitoes. They poisoned but not quite killed cockroaches. Cockroaches were the favorite food of housecats. The housecats ate the semipoisoned cockroaches and died. The mice which the housecats were keeping under control increased and multiplied. They ate up all the crops."

It was this sort of chain, Miss Gray continued, which people often break in their insect control operations without fully comprehending the chain as whole.

"The result is, of course, that it backfires," she said. "It does harm where you expect it to do good. I think ignorance is the chief stumbling block."

Miss Gray's view of insects is one of understanding and even sympathy for them as co-inhabitants of our planet.

"If you can learn to think of the insect as an animal," she advised, "as a fellow creature with its needs and adaptations, with its ways of getting what it wants, the better you will know them and like them.

"And if you are interested in them they are everywhere. You will have something to study and occupy your time. You need never be bored."

The posters explaining various segments of the current exhibit are very models of succinctness and provocative information.

and culture. Then came provincialism under centuries of the Ottoman Empire and, after World War I, British rule. Against that background, the "revolutionary transformation" of Iraq under the iron rule of Ba'athist socialism does in fact scorn any semblance of foreign control. Iraq makes Washington the devil in its noisy propaganda, but it is quietly hunting commercial contracts with the U.S. worth hundreds of millions of dollars, a subject for another column.

You've torn off part of the decal," someone said.

"I thought that was the backing," she cried.

Finally the real backing was peeled off, the decal attached to the windshield, and the torn-off section was fitted in as best as could be done.

"You fellows are a long way from base, aren't you?" he asked.

The man somehow had the look of an old marine. "Were you ever at PI (Parris Island)?" one of them asked.

"Yeah," the man replied. "Of course that was back in World War II."

But it's still the Marines.

STAKING OUT HIS CLAIM!

Persevere And You Can Find Lenten Sacrifice

It's always interesting to find out what people are giving up for Lent. My girlfriend, who's allergic to chocolate, is giving up candybars. Her husband is giving up TV commercials. My neighbor, who's ten pounds overweight, is giving up her diet.

The other day Phillip asked me what I was giving up for Lent.

"I think I'll give up studying," I said, brushing aside the term paper I was working on.

"You can't give up studying," he said. You've got to make a sacrifice—give up something you really enjoy."

"Well, then, how about cooking."

"If, by cooking, you mean the art of preparing palatable meals, you gave that up a long time before I ever met you," he grinned.

"If you're going to be ugly," I snapped, "You can quit badgering me. Besides, I'm writing two term papers, and I've already given up every pleasure I have so that I can finish on time. I don't see my friends, and I had to give up bridge club. I've become a hermit," I moaned, hugging myself in self-pity. "The only reason I'm not wearing a hairshirt is that I was too busy to go to Dollar Day to buy one."

"You didn't go to Dollar Day because I hid the checkbook," Phillip interjected.

"A petty observation," I sneered. I flung back my head and assumed the pose of a tragic heroine. "The point is that I have nothing left to give up except brushing my teeth and talking."

GAIL MICHAELS

"I don't suppose you'd consider giving up the latter," he asked hopefully.

"If I had intended to give that up, I'd have joined a religious order," I retorted. "No, I've given up all the necessities of life that I intend to give up. I've even given up sleeping."

"That's not so! You went to bed last night at ten jabbering something about how writing term papers would never get you into Heaven unless you could stack them up and climb them, and how you wish that Moby Dick had been eaten by a shark at birth."

"I didn't say I didn't go to bed. I said I didn't sleep," I repeated, shuffling my notecards and dealing myself a hand of solitaire.

"Well, if you didn't sleep," he asked, "Why were you snoring so loud this morning? Why, the cat had her paw down your throat, playing with your tonsils."

"I don't snore," I said defensively. "I was probably groaning. I think trying to read The Bear and Moby Dick at the same time did something to me. When I finally fell asleep, I dreamed I was on a bear hunt in a forest of trees shaped like "F's", with pygmy professors sitting in each one, when all of a sudden a white whale jumped out from behind a bush and bit my leg off. And that was why I was groaning."

"You're too much," Phillip sighed. "I can see I won't be able to convince you to give anything up, so I'm going to work. Give me a kiss before I go."

Click went the lightswitch of my mind. "I'm sorry, dear. I can't kiss you."

"Why not?" he asked.

"I'm giving it up for Lent."

Automobile May Not Be As Essential As Public Once Thought

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—The automobile, which comsumes a large share of the nation's petroleum, may be less essential to the American way of life than many social observers believe.

The latest nationwide Gallup survey shows the proportion of Americans who commute to work by car, while remaining stable between 1971 and 1974, has declined slightly.

Additional findings reveal the extent to which Americans, by their own testimony, could reduce the use of the automobile:

*Six of 10 driving commuters say they could find other means of getting to work if they had no car. In fact, as many as one-quarter of this group say they would walk to work if they did no have a car at their disposal.

*Fully four of 10 Americans say they would find it "not at all difficult" to reduce the number of miles they drive by one-fourth. It has been estimated that if Americans drove 20 per cent fewer miles, the resulting savings would amount to about one million barrels of oil per day. This, in turn, would decrease U.S. dependence on foreign oil—a goal a large majority of Americans (74 per cent) think is desirable.

Here is the question:

"If you travel to work, what means do you use to get to work—by car, train, bus, walk, or how?"

Here are the national results:

Means Of Getting To Work —	1975
Car	74%
Bus	7
Walk	5
Train	2
Other	5
No answer	7*

(*Bicycle, motor bike, etc.)

The following table shows the trend in the proportion who drive to work:

Those Who Commute To Work By Car (Based upon those who travel to work)
1974	79
1975	74

All persons who drive to work were then asked this question:

"Suppose you had no automobile, how would you then get to work—by train, bus, walk, or how?"

Here are the results:

How Drivers Would Get To Work If No Car Available
Bus	26%
Walk	25
Bicycle	9
Train	2
Other	5*
No answer-Could not get to work	33

(*Move closer to job, change jobs, etc.)

This question was asked next:

"Supppose you had to reduce the number of miles you drive by one-fourth. How difficult would it be for you to meet this requirement—very difficult, fairly difficult, or not at all difficult?"

Here are the results:

How Difficult To Reduce Driving By One-Fourth?
Very difficult	31%
Fairly difficult	23
Not at all	40
Don't know	6

Finally, this question was asked:

"Do you think the United States should or should not try to reduce the amount of oil it buys from foreign nations?"

Here are the national results:

Should U.S. Reduce Oil Purchases From Abroad?
Should	74%
Should not	16
No opinion	10

For the current survey, a total of 1,031 persons were interviewed by telephone in more than 100 localities across the nation during the period Jan. 10-15.

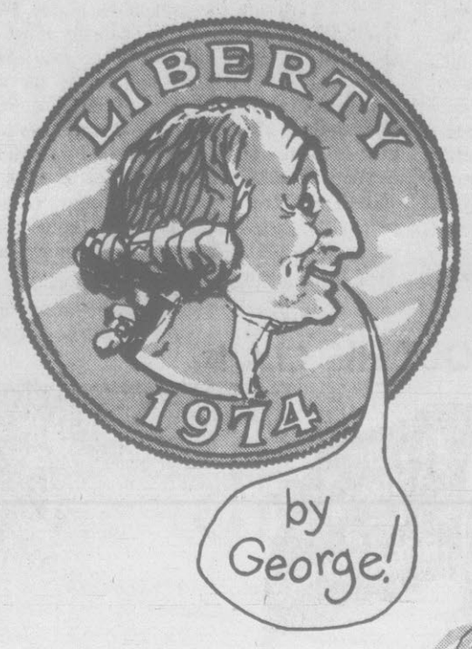

34% WALKED TO WORK IN 1942

Dramatic evidence of how commuting habits have changed is seen in a comparison of the latest results with those from a similar Gallup survey in 1942, which showed about one-third of Americans walked to work.

Here are the findings, based upon those working outside the home:

Means Of Getting To Work —	1942
Walking	34%
Driving	45
Public transportation	18
Bicycle-live on premises	3

Verdict Of Guilty In Abortion Case

By RICHARD GAINES

BOSTON (UPI) — Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin was found guilty Saturday of manslaughter in the death of a fetus in a legal abortion.

A wail went up from the Suffolk Superior Courtroom as jury foreman Vincent Shea announced the verdict which Edelin said afterwards would certainly discourage other doctors from performing abortions.

Judge James P. McGuire ordered the 36-year-old physician released on $100 bond pending an unspecified sentencing date. The maximum sentence is 20 years in jail.

Edelin, dressed in a tan suit and brown tie, took the verdict calmly. His attorney, William Homans, said the decision would be appealed.

As court was dismissed, the bailiff called the traditional "God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

"Damn sure needs it!" cried a supporter of Edelin's in the audience.

Later at a news conference, as friends and family wept openly, Edelin said he "did nothing...illegal, immoral...."

The nine-man, three-woman jury returned the guilty verdict in the second day of deliberations, ending a six-week trial. The state charged Edelin killed a "baby" during an elective abortion he performed Oct. 3, 1973 at Boston City Hospital where he was chief resident obstetrician.

Hunger Strikers Taken To Intensive Care Unit

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

DUBLIN (UPI) — The Irish government Saturday moved the most seriously ill of the Irish Republican Army hunger strikers to an intensive care unit in a Dublin hospital. Officials stood by in case the IRA wanted to resume stalled talks on ending the 44-day fast.

Patrick Ward, a 27-year-old Donegal fisherman, was taken under heavy police guard from the Curragh Military Hospital to Jervis Street Hospital where he was reported critically ill.

Justice Minister Patrick Cooney canceled public engagements and stood by in case spokesmen for the 13 other fasting prisoners in Portlaoise jail wanted to reopen talks which broke down over a series of minor demands by the prisoners.

Cooney had already conceded the hunger strikers' main demand—to be separated from non-IRA prisoners in the jail—but the provisional IRA then put forward a series of new demands.

"It seems now that the lives of the men depend on such things as writing paper, dust covers for suits, the design of cell furniture and handicrafts," a government source said.

Behind the scenes efforts to end the fast broke down Thursday after both sides reported they were near agreement.

A spokesman at Jervis Street Hospital said no medical bulletins would be issued on Ward's condition unless there was a sudden serious deterioration.

Captured In Manhunt

CHICAGO (UPI) — The object of a two-day manhunt, Timothy Johnson was under heavy guard in the trauma unit of Cook County hospital Saturday with bullet wounds in his left hip and knee and a possible broken ankle. Minutes before his capture Friday night, Johnson shot and wounded his sixth policeman in two days.

"I just wanted one more copper," Johnson, 36, shouted as police drove him to a hospital after he tried to shoot his way to freedom for the third time since Thursday morning.

Johnson had managed to elude more than 100 officers on Chicago's South Side until a tip from a black newspaper publisher led police to the third floor apartment of Diane Hill, identified as Johnson's girl friend.

With an estimated 40 officers in the vicinity, Johnson went out a bedroom window onto a porch and down a drain pipe, a carbine and a pistol tucked into his trousers. Police Sgt. York Anderson said at least 10 shots were fired into the porch and in the backyard where Johnson was finally subdued. Gang Intelligence Investigator Terry Hillard, 31, was wounded in the right elbow in the shooting.

A Cook County Hospital spokesman said Johnson was in "fair condition" and had undergone surgery.

Police said Johnson, described as a 6-foot-3 "junkie" with a record of narcotics and gun violations, came out shooting when stopped for a traffic violation early Thursday in suburban Harvey, abouut 15 miles south of where he was finally captured.

German Women Demonstrate

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — Police using night sticks and tear gas Saturday dispersed about 1,500 demonstrators, mainly women, demanding legalization of abortion.

Officers arrested a young man who had daubed the slogan, "free abortion," in red letters on a house wall.

Humorist Wodehouse Dies At Age 93

By STANLEY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

REMSENBERG, N.Y. (AP) — Humorist P.G. Wodehouse, smilingly at work on what would have been his 97th book, said "cheerio" to his wife of 62 years and then died at nearby Southampton Hospital after she went home.

He had entered the hospital Tuesday for treatment of an irritating skin rash. He was 93.

His sister-in-law, Nella Wodehouse, said that otherwise all had appeared well with the man who practically invented the butler when he created Jeeves.

"We saw him at 7:30, and he was fine ... laughing," she said after Wodehouse's death Friday night. "Everything happened a little while after that. We were home when the doctor phoned and said he had died peacefully sitting in a chair in his room. It must have been his heart."

Plum, as Wodehouse was known to friends, had been in an even more than usual euphoric mood since New Year's Day when he was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II, although he became an American citizen in 1955.

"This is the great thing," he told friends who gathered to help him celebrate in his sprawling ranch house in this quiet community on the south shore of Long Island.

"This is a graceful act on her part. It closes out the whole thing."

Wodehouse, who delighted in but could not legally use within the United States his new name, Sir Pelham, was referring to unofficial charges made in England of treason during World War II.

He and his wife, Ethel, were trapped in occupied France by the Nazi invaders, and he made several broadcasts making light of his plight.

The Wodehouses were caught at Le Touquet in a plot twist he might have invented for one of his novels or one of the 33 musical comedies he wrote — often with Jerome Kern doing the music.

When they tried to flee France, rescue craft refused to take their dogs across the channel to England so the Wodehouses stayed with their pets.

"We wouldn't leave them to face something we wouldn't face ourselves," Lady Wodehouse said.

They were held under house arrest until 1944. Lady Wodehouse pawned her jewels, one by one, to pay their expenses.

After the Allied triumph, the couple returned to the United States and have been here ever since with nary a return to England.

For years they led a hectic Park Avenue life, but retired here some 20 years ago and, while enjoying the quiet, complained:

"No one ever comes to see us any more — except when we're news."

Moves To New Office

Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association is now located in its new office building at the corner of First and Evans Street.

The association, formerly located at 216 Washington Street, moved into the recently-completed two-story structure Jan. 30 and 31.

The new building, of Colonial Williamsburg style, features blue and gold carpeting on the interior as well as Early American furniture.

Construction of the facility, which offers some 3,400 square feet of office space on the first floor and 1,800 square feet on the second, began in February of 1974 and was completed in late January.

The building is situated, according to a PCA spokesman, so that continuous shade is offered on the north or front side, a feature designed to produce cooler interior temperatures in the hot summer months.

The Greenville facility serves as the home office of the association while a branch office is located in Snow Hill. Eleven staff members work at the local office, it was noted, and all have farm-related backgrounds.

F.L. Little is president of the association while J.R. Dilda serves as vice president and C.M. Joyner and Roland E. Smith hold asistant secretary-treasurer posts.

Pitt-Greene PCA is a farmer owned and operated credit cooperative serving the credit needs of farmers and their families in Pitt and Greene Counties.

FINANCIAL CRISIS ONCE AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera Guild celebrated its 40th birthday at a luncheon here, with a message from its founder, Mrs. August Belmont, 91.

She said, "The one millionth pupil has now attended live opera under Guild sponsorship. The Guild has raised close to $4 million through its dues and donations." Mrs. Belmont founded the Guild as a money-raising organization during the Depression, when it looked as though the Met might have to close

Woodley Named Director Of Bertie's Hope House

John E. Tyler, President of the Historic Hope Foundation, Inc., has announced the recent appointment of Glenn W. Woodley as executive director of the Foundation.

The Historic Hope Foundation is a non-profit organization chartered to preserve and restore Hope Plantation, the Bertie County home of former North Carolina Governor David Stone. It was opened to the public in October 1972.

Woodley is a native of Tyrrell County and is a graduate of North Carolina State University at Raleigh. He holds a masters degree from Michigan State University in East Lansing and has done additional graduate studies at Purdue University in Lafayette, Indiana. He served a tour with the U.S. Army, stationed in France. Afterwards he was associated with the Research Triangle Regional Planning Commission in Research Triangle Park, North Carolina.

Novels By Roth, Pierce Are Compared

The work of two contemporary American writers, Philip Roth, whose writing focuses on his Jewish heritage; and Ovid Pierce, chronicler of historical and contemporary life and events in eastern North Carolina, have been used to compare two American viewpoints.

Janice Hardison Faulkner, professor of English at East Carolina University, in a recent speech at the Third Annual Johnston County Forum, spoke on the subject "Literature: Its Impact on the Human Spirit and the Exercise of Citizenship."

A portion of her speech dealing with the work of Roth and Pierce follows:

"Roth is angry at the limitations imposed upon him by his Jewish heritage. In Portnoy's Complaint, he says that Portnoy's sexual frustrations are caused by his Jewish mother, that his behavior is a working out of anger at her, and that his problem is compounded by the guilt attending that defiance. Roth suggests a way to live, but he concedes that few have the courage to live that way.

"Not all writers share that view. One such writer is Ovid Williams Pierce. His work has treated the disintegration of a southern society brought about by the Civil War and reconstruction. His latest novel, 'The Wedding Guest, chronicles the effect of the mass migration, during the 1950's, of southern blacks to the north, of those left behind, both black and white. Like Roth, he recognizes the vice-like grip that heritage has on his characters, and he too believes that the past can restrain and inhibit us, that it imposes burdens from which we struggle to be free.

"The difference in the work of these writers, Roth about the Jewish experience and Pierce about the southern experience, is not as great as one would imagine. Both concede that the past is stern parent of the present, that mankind, whether he likes it or not, is a product of the history which he has inherited, geographical, cultural, and ethical. The difference is in the attitude of each writer toward that fact. Roth is angry that he is Jewish and angry that the grip of his Jewish experience is too strong for him to break the hold. He sees respect for tradition and obedience to it as a sign of weaknesses, and he despises that weakness in mankind.

"Mr. Pierce, on the other hand, treats that dilemma in the southerner with great compassion. He concedes that the burdens of heritage are heavy, but he would measure the worth of a man by his capacity to respect that heritage, and to set himself free from it as he is able to put it into perspective. The life worth living is, by his fictional delineation, that which regards the expectations of family or church or community and tempers its behavior, denies itself out of regard for them, until such time as better understanding or natural change makes possible a harmonious co-extistence between instinct and sensitivity to external considerations.

"Roth would judge a man's worth by his ability to ignore his heritage. Pierce would judge a man's worth by his willingness to accommodate it in the living of his own life."

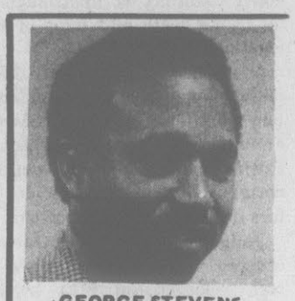

T/Sgt Wagner Wins Award

Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. F.L. Wagner of Route 2, Greenville, is a veteran of 15 years service in the Air Force and is now stationed in Okinawa. He is married to a Japanese girl, Sugi, and they are the parents of two boys. Before joining the Air Force, he was a student at Chicod School.

Wagner's entry, winner of a Valley Forge Honor Certificate for Armed Forces Letter, is on the subject "Human Goals: The Advancement of Human Dignity."

In addition to Wagner, seven of the other twelve individual winners from North Carolina are members of the armed forces. Other Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge Award winners include a student at Altamahaw-Ossinee School, Elon College; a student of Williams High School Burlington; a Raleigh TV man; a woman from Shelby; and a doctor, also from Shelby.

Bess Truman Is 90, Now, And Still Her Own Person

EDITOR'S NOTE — Bess Truman is 90 now, and more than ever a private person, refusing interviews and other intrusions on her privacy. But she keeps up with family and friends through visits, telephone calls and letters.

By HUELL E. WARREN
Associated Press Writer

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — In her very old age, it has been easier for Mrs. Harry S. Truman to live by her conviction that to attract public attention is undignified.

The former mistress of the White House was 90 on Thursday (Feb. 13) and she is finally managing a life without fanfare in the big old Victorian house she had shared with her husband.

Traffic through the front door at 219 N. Delaware has slowed since President Truman died on Dec. 26, 1972. Bess Truman is pleased. Public attention was something she endured.

Mrs. Truman lives alone now, tended only by Secret Service guards and by servants who clean the house and prepare meals, but don't live there. She is still strong enough to shop for groceries once a week, to have her hair done at a nearby beauty parlor, and to dine with family or close friends.

The people she does business with — Mrs. Doris A. Miller, her hairdresser, the clerks at the supermarket, and others — refuse to discuss their famous client.

"I must respect her sense of privacy," says Mrs. Miller. "She is a very great lady." And Pat Ragusa, assistant manager at the supermarket where Mrs. Truman shops, agrees.

"She has always insisted that we give her no special treatment. She takes her turn in the checkout line. Sometimes someone she knows will see her and they will visit. Many times she comes and goes without anyone recognizing her."

A Secret Service agent, usually Robert Lockwood, head of the detail which protects her, drives Mrs. Truman the 10 blocks to the supermarket, and helps with the shopping, pushing the cart slowly down the aisles while she makes her selections.

Arthritis in the right knee causes Mrs. Truman considerable pain, so she walks slowly, using a cane, and has a tendency to stoop.

Whenever she leaves the house, an agent ushers her through a side door to the limousine she owns. He drives. An escort car accompanies them, driven by a second agent. The third member of the detail maintains the 24-hour surveillance of the premises from a brick bungalow across the street.

It is a mark of her lifestyle that she and the Secret Service have worked out ways to get her about unobtrusively. Errands they can do for her are at least a relief from the tedium of their assignment. The essence of their feeling: Great Lady. Dull duty.

When the Trumans returned to Independence in 1953 after he had been U.S. senator for 10 years and President for almost eight, they wanted to live as if they had never been away. They wanted no Secret Service agents.

Instead, Mike Westwood, a longtime friend on the Independence police force, was with them most of the time. Secret Service agents stayed mostly in the Truman Library eight blocks away.

But after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1963, President Johnson insisted on more protection for the Trumans. The Secret Service first moved into a shed beside the carriage house-turned garage, then to the bungalow across the street.

Lockwood is on his second tour of duty in Independence after an interlude with the Johnsons in Texas. He is often at the wheel of her car.

He occasionally recharges the inside fire extinguishers, but the only other Secret Service presence inside the house is an agent posted on overnight duty in a room on the first floor.

The understanding among those who know the story is that this is at the insistence of Margaret Truman Daniel, the Trumans' only child, and that her mother strenuously objected.

The obvious concern is that Mrs. Truman, with the aggravation of arthritis in her knee, might fall while in the house alone. There is no elevator, and she must negotiate the long stairway to the second floor. Upstairs, there are some ups and downs between the original structure and sections added later.

Mrs. Truman knows them all. Except for the time in Washington, she has lived in the house — built by her grandfather in 1865 — for nearly all of this century's 75 years.

Mrs. Truman reads a lot, mostly mystery stories and occasionally a historical novel. Public Library employes will not disclose the books she selects.

Today, Mrs. Truman does much of her visiting by telephone. She handles considerable correspondence through Miss Rose Conway, who was her husband's longtime secretary.

Some of it is at the prompting of Eddie Meisburger. He was the sergeant in command of the Number One gun in Captain Truman's artillery battery in France on Armistice Day. He is secretary-treasurer for the organization of 45 men who survive from the outfit. It once numbered 275.

"Now Mrs. Truman sends the letters the captain always did when one of the Battery D boys was sick or died," Meisburger says.

Mrs. Truman's happiest times are when her daughter comes to visit or when she goes to Washington to visit the Clifton Daniels and their four sons.

Old friends who saw her during Christmas at a Washington luncheon said she seemed in better health than a year earlier and was as bright and witty as ever.

Mrs. Truman has appeared at one public function since her husband's death. She braved the January cold last year to attend the funeral of Miss Vietta Garr, the family's maid and cook for 36 years.

When artist Thomas Hart Benton died last month, Mrs. Truman was called by a reporter for a comment, since she knew the Bentons well. She told reporters she had no public statement. If and when she did say something, she added, it would be to Mrs. Benton, thank you.

Bucs Nip Indians In Double Overtime

WILLIAMSBURG, Va.—Larry Hunt hit a 25-foot jump shot as the horn went off—for the third time—and East Carolina University finally escaped from William & Mary Hall with a 68-66 victory.

It took two overtimes for the Pirates to finally get their ninth Southern Conference victory of the year—clinching a home berth for the first round of the league tournament on Saturday, March 1.

It also meant that the Bucs would finish no lower than a tie for third place—even if they lose their remaining two conference games with Richmond and The Citadel.

Hunt's shot came after the Bucs had blown chance after chance, both in the regulation and in the first overtime to put the game away at the foul line. The problems that started on Monday against Furman (0 for 8) continued—although not with complete failure.

The Pirates connected on 18 of 34 shots from the line for a poor 52.9 percentage.

Not that William & Mary did that much better. They too had their chances. They held as much as a seven point lead midway through the second half of play, and were ahead by two points with four seconds left—missing on the second shot of a one-and-one that would have iced it.

Even then, it took a 45-foot heave by Gregg Ashorn for a miracle shot for the Pirates to even force the first overtime.

Then, with the Bucs leading by two, Ron Satterthwaite hit off a jump ball at the W&M end of the court at the buzzer to tie it at the end of the first overtime.

East Carolina and William & Mary scrimmaged through the opening minutes before a hook shot by Dennis Vail put the Indians into an 8-6 lead that they held until Donnie Owens hit a jumper to make it 11-10.

The Indians regained the lead on Matt Courage's drive, 14-12, and held to it until Al Edwards gave the Bucs an 18-16 edge with 7:55 left in the first half.

The Indians twice tied it before Mike Enoch hit two in a row to put William & Mary into a 22-20 lead—one they held until the final two minutes of regulation time.

Satterthwaite hit a jumper and after Owens made a free throw, he scored again. Hunt got another free throw, but then Satterthwaite hit and extended the Indians to a 28-22 lead, their largest of the half. The Bucs did cut it down to 30-26 at the end of the period.

East Carolina hit first in the second half to trim the lead to two, 30-28, but the Indians inched back away. Satterthwaite hit a free throw, then got two baskets during a 7 minute cold spell by the Bucs, extending the lead to seven points—its biggest margin—at 40-33.

But East Carolina struggled back, despite William & Mary's attempt to put the ball on ice with a four-corner offense. Ashorn hit two free throws, then Buzzy Braman tossed in three in a row. That cut the lead to 42-40.

After an exchange of baskets, Braman hit again, just prior to fouling out, to make it 44-44. The Indians went back out on Vail's free throws, but Hunt hit off a rebound to tie it again. Satterthwaite hit one at the line, then missed another, and Vail missed on a pair before Marsh got two to put the Pirates into a 48-47 lead. Satterthwaite returned the lead to the Indians, then both teams had chances at the line.

The Indians hit one of three to up their lead to 50-48, while the Bucs missed both ends of a two-shot foul. Then, with the horn sounding, Ashorn's desperation shot swished through, 50-50, bringing on the first overtime.

Lowenhaupt hit two at the line for an Indian lead, but a free throw and a basket by Marsh put the Bucs up. Vail returned the lead to the Indians, 54-53.

After one free throw was missed, Hunt hit and put the Bucs back up, 55-54. He missed at the line, but Marsh was fouled with 1:45 left, making the first shot. Owens then missed with 44 seconds left on a chance to ice it, and Satterthwaite's horn shot tied it, 56-56, bringing on another overtime.

Ashorn put the Bucs out by two, then Reggie Lee hit for a four-point lead. But Courage and Vail hit to tie it again, 60-60. Hunt hit one free throw, and Lee got another jumper for a 63-60 lead.

Satterthwaite hit two shots to put the Indians back up, 64-63 with just 38 seconds left. Hunt was fouled with 35 seconds to go, and made both of them, putting the Bucs back up by one. After an Indian miss, Owens was fouled with 21 seconds left, hitting the first of two for a 66-64 lead.

Satterthwaite got one more jumper with less than 10 seconds to go tieing it for one last time. The Bucs called time out with six seconds to go, still in backcourt.

They got the ball in and across the line, and Hunt took the shot—a long jumper for him—hitting it to finally end the game and let the Bucs go home with the win.

The Pirates hit 54.3 per cent from the floor, while the Indians got only 46.5 per cent. The Indians just outrebounded the Bucs, 41-39. Marsh led the Bucs on the boards with nine, while Geter and Hunt each got eight. Satterthwaite, Lowenhaupt and Vail each had seven for the Indians.

Hunt led the Buc scoring with 16, while Ashorn had 14. Satterthwaite had 26, Lowenhaupt, 15, and Vail, 12, for the Indians.

The Pirates will play host to Richmond on Wednesday.

Sugg Fifth In 60-Yard Dash

CLEVELAND, O.—Fate got in the way of the East Carolina University indoor track team Friday. Really, head coach Bill Carson doesn't know what the name of the young man is, but all the same, he put the clincher on the Pirates.

"Going into the mile relay, we had a one-point lead," said Carson, reflecting after the Pirates fell in a four-way meet respectively to Ohio State but stopped Miami (O.) and W. Va. with 28 and 22 points, "We were 15 yards ahead of Ohio State, and just needed a second-place finish to wrap up the win.

"But a kid from Miami of Ohio tripped and fell, knocking our runner down. Ohio State's man simply outran us from there, and though I can't say for sure who would have won anyway, that definitely cost us needed points."

All wasn't so gloomy for the Pirate trackmen, though. Carter Sugg, the freshman sensation from Tarboro, won three of the six events won by the team. Sugg and Larry Austin, a Jacksonville native, ran last night in the Knights of Columbus meet in Cleveland. Sugg finished fifth in the finals, which included a very fine sprint field.

"I used Carter too much Friday," said Carson. "He just had dead legs here Saturday.

"But he also was running against some fine competition and overall I am pleased with the performance."

Sugg ran a 6.1 in the trials and a 6.3 in the finals of the 60-yard dash.

At Columbus, East Carolina finishers and their events included: Jerry Klas, third in the mile run, 4:13.6; Jim Willett, second in the 880 run, 1:57.3; Sugg, won the 60-yard dash, 6.1; Ben Duckenfield won the 440 run, 50.3; Maurice Huntley, fourth in the 440, 50.9; Sam Phillips, second in the 70 high hurdles, 8.5, for a school record and only one-tenth second away from national qualifying times; Mel Duckenfield, 600 run, second with 1:14.1; Jim Green, third in the 600 run, with 1:14.6; Suggs, 300-yard dash, won with a 31.2 for a school record; Larry Austin, 300-yard dash, 32.1 for third; Jerry Klas won the 1000-yard run, 2:15.1; Tom Watson, shot put, second with 50-5¼; Al McCrimmon, high jump, winner with 6-8½ for a school record; Suggs, long jump, with 22 ft. and Jesse Brown, triple jump, 43-11.

"I was very happy to see Carter and Larry get a chance to run in Cleveland," said Carson, "Fate stepped in in the four-way meet, but I was proud of our team performance."

Free Throws Win For State

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — David Thompson, who scored 22 points, hit two free throws in the last five seconds for the final cushion that carried fifth ranked North Carolina State to an 89-87 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Wake Forest Saturday afternoon.

The regionally televised game was tied at 81-81 with 4:06 remaining and the N. C. State Wolfpack was carried to the buzzer before pulling it out for its seventh victory against two losses in the conference and an 18-3 overall record.

Wake Forest, which snapped N. C. State's winning streak at 37 games in early January, led several times through the game, holding a 43-37 margin at halftime.

But the Wolfpack outscored the Deacons on a 14-3 burst starting the second period to take command at 51-46. However, N. C. State never stretched its margin beyond six points and Wake Forest again pulled into a tie at 67-67 with 9:02 remaining.

Kenny Carr, N. C. State's 6-8 freshman forward, matched Thompson with 22 points of his own and Mo Rivers added 16.

Jerry Schellenberg led Wake Forest with 25 points, hitting 12 of 15 from the floor, and freshman Rod Griffin added 20, followed by Skip Brown with 19.

At the 4:06 mark, and the score at 81-81, the Wolfpack went into its "tease" offense, holding the ball for more than a minute. Thompson hit a jumper to make it 83-81 and at 2:07 he hit the first of a one-and-one to give N. C. State a three-point margin and enough cushion to hold out until the buzzer.

Jaguars Second, Rose Third In Mat Event

Holmes High School made a late surge Saturday to pass both Farmville Central and Rose, the first round leaders, and take the Northeastern Sectional Wrestling Tournament held this weekend at Rose High.

Holmes took three first places and two seconds in the final round of competition rolling up 77 points, 17 better than Farmville Central's second place Jaguars' 60 and 26 better than Rose's 51. The rest of the top six saw Conley fourth with 46, Rocky Mount with 40 in fifth and Northeastern 38.

Qualifying for the state tournament from area schools were Farmville Central's Nate Fields at 101; Matthew Ward of Rose at 107; Horace Williams of Farmville Central 114; Gary Locust, FC, at 147; Ray Hardy FC at 169; Jeff Hagans of Rose at 197. All six wrestlers finished second in their respective weight classes.

Taking firsts were Conley's Ricky Phillips, 121, Donnie Cox, 140, and Barry Purser, 187, and Ayden-Grifton's Earl Harris, 128, and Early Gardner, 157.

Three wrestlers had a chance to make it to the state tournament despite finishing third. Winning their consolation match were Aubrey Wynn, North Pitt, 147; Aaron Gorham, Farmville Central, 157; and Ronnie Goodall, Rose, 187. If these three had not met the second place finisher coming up the ladders in their weight classes, they could wrestle them in a special match. If the second place man lost, the winner, who finished third would go to the state.

Clemson Rolls By Duke, 100-66

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—The Clemson Tigers Saturday night romped to a convincing 100-66 victory over the Duke Blue Devils to move into third place in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings.

In winning their seventh game in the last eight starts, the nationally 18th-ranked Tigers upped their season record to 13-8 overall and 7-3 in the conference, while Duke is now 12-10 and 2-8.

Duke scored the first basket, but Clemson came back with six points in a row and turned the game into a rout in the first ten minutes of play.

Scoring 14 points in a row, the Tigers went from an 8-2 lead, to a 22-6 advantage with 9:47 left in the first half.

With Wayne "Tree" Rollins and Skip Wise leading the way, Clemson increased its lead to 22 points in the first half and held a 44-26 halftime lead.

Duke came within 15 points in the second half, 56-41, but Clemson then outscored the Blue Devils 11-2 to take a 24-point lead with ten minutes remaining.

With reserves seeing most of the action in the second half, Clemson padded its lead with the help of 24 free throws in 28 attempts.

Clemson outrebounded Duke 64-30 with 13 Tigers grabbing at least one rebound, while all 14 Clemson players scored at least two points, with five of them getting into double figures.

Wise led all scorers with 21, while Charlie Rogers added 12 and Stan Rome, Colin Abraham and Rollins each had 10, as all saw less than 20 minutes of action.

Spiders Down Citadel, 99-90

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Bob McCurdy scored 37 points and Kevin Eastman added 20, leading Richmond past the Citadel 99-90 in Charleston Saturday night.

McCurdy, the nation's number two scorer, hit 14 of 19 shots from the field and nine of ten from the free throw line in leading the Spiders to their sixth Southern Conference victory.

As a team, Richmond shot 68.8 per cent from the field and had little difficulty in handing the Bulldogs their eighth consecutive defeat.

The Spiders led 30-15 midway in the first half, 49-34 at halftime and 80-65, before the Bulldogs made a late charge.

The closest The Citadel came thereafter was 95-88 then John Trimble hit a basket with 35 seconds remaining.

Richard Johnson scored 33 points for the Bulldogs before fouling out with two minutes remaining. McCurdy departed moments later in a game that saw 59 personal and four technical fouls called.

Richmond is now 6-5 in the conference and 8-13 overall. Citadel fell to 2-9 and 5-11.

Mounties Win Third

BOONE, N. C. (AP)—Junior guard Ed Kane hit four clutch free throws in the final two minutes and Appalachian State staved off a closing rally to overcome Lenoir Rhyne, 88-80, in a basketball game Saturday night.

Kane finished with 31 points to lead all scoring for the night.

The Mountaineers led throughout the game but allowed a 16-point lead to dwindle in the last 11 minnutes after their center, John Vukasovich, was ejected following a fight with Lenoir Rhyne center Mark Carter.

Appalachian held a 68-52 lead at the time, but the Bears came back to within four points at 78-74 with 2:18 remaining.

Kane sank two free throws with 2:05 left, center Donnie Stringfellow hit a field goal, and then Kane went back to the line and sank two more with 1:14 remaining to move Appalachian State in front 84-76.

The victory gave Appalachian State a 3-19 record against Lenoir Rhyne's 6-20 mark.

Guard Randy Anernathy had 22 points to lead Lenoir Rhyne scoring.

Pirate Swimmers Gain Win Over Catholic U.

East Carolina University's swimming team rolled to a 69-42 victory over Catholic University at Minges Natatorium Saturday afternoon.

The Pirates took the lead on the opening relay and held it the rest of the way. The Bucs won both of the relay events, and captured five of the individual events. Catholic won six individual events, but couldn't offset the points piled up in the relays by the Bucs.

In the final relay, the Bucs set a new freshman record, swiming one entry unofficially. The team of John McCauley, Gary Pabst, Alan Clancy and Billy Thorne swam home in 3:18.61, well ahead of the official winners who carded a 3:25.59.

Catholic had two double winners. Bob Mega won both the 1- and 3-meter diving events. Steve Sommer took the 200-yard individual medley and the 200-yard breastroke.

The victory boosted the Pirate record to 9-3 in dual competition. The Pirates will travel to Boone on Thursday as the Southern Conference championship meet opens then. It will run through Saturday. Funseth Win Would Keep It Near Johnny

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP — Veteran Rod Funseth, whose major claim to fame is that he's Johnny Miller's next-door neighbor, struggled to a three-under-par 69 and took sole control of the third-round lead in the $170,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

The 41-year-old Funseth, winner of two titles in 15 long years on the pro tour, broke out of a three-way tie for the top with a 10-under-par total of 206 for 54 holes.

Miller, winner of three of his last four starts and the outstanding player on the tour in the last 14 months, managed a 70 despite a heavy cold, but appeared to be out of title contention with a 216 total, 10 off the pace.

Ray Floyd, threatening for his first title since the 1969 PGA National Championship, moved into second with a strong 68 on the 7,047-yard South Course at Torrey Pines Park and was one stroke back at 207.

Defending champion Bobby Nichols also shot at 68 in the mild, sunny breezy weather on the oceanside layout and was only two off the lead at 208.

Bill Casper, who shared the 36-hole lead with Funseth, could do no better than 72 and headed a group of four at 209. Also at that figure were Leonard Thompson and Bob Wynnn, each with 68s, and Australian veteran Bruce Devlin, who shot a 69.

John Lister of New Zealand, also tied for the 36-hole lead, fell back to 211 after a scrambling 74.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player are not competing.

Funseth, who lives next door to Miller in Napa, Calif., started out as if he was going to run away with the tournament—then backed off quickly. His nine's were 31-38.

"I played the last seven holes like a 12-handicapper," Funseth said. "I got a little quick with my driver and started hitting it to the right." He made eagle three on the sixth hole, played the first nine five-under-par and had a three-stroke advantage when the leaders made the turn into the back nine.

But he drove into the right rough and bogeyed the 12th, then made a costly bogey six on the 13th. He got his drive in a fairway bunker, played out then bunkered a nine-iron third shot. And he had to chip close to save par on two other holes.

Floyd, who collected over $100,000 without winning a tournament last year, caught Funseth with an eight-foot birdie put on the 15th, but dropped one stroke back with a bogey on No. 17. He missed the green with a six-iron second shot, chipped to eight feet and missed the putt.

Funseth made two putts in the 12-15-foot range, rifled a three-wood second shot only 10 feet from the flag and made the putt for the eagle, and punched a short iron only seven feet from the cup for his big front nine.

Floyd highlighted his round by holing a 30-yard chip shot for a birdie on the first hole.

Augusta May Be Fateful Site

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Augusta, Ga., could be the killing ground.

There's been one minor, inconclusive skirmish between Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller, the young man challenging him for world golfing supremacy. And there'll be another one or in the next six weeks.

But the test will come on the manicured, carefully-tended greens and rolling southern hills of the Augusta National Golf course April 10-13.

That's the Masters.

Their schedules are taking them surely, steadily, inevitably to that meeting.

It will be a classic confrontation. On one hand is the acknowledged master, Nicklaus, acclaimed as the greatest player the game has known. Challenging him is Miller, who may be even better than that right now, the young, fast, golden gun from the west.

It will be the meeting that has been gathering interest since Miller's emergence as the game's top player over the last 14 months.

They met once this year, in the Crosby. It proved nothing. They tied for sixth and neither really challenged for the lead.

They'll go head to head next week in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open. There's a possibility, but nothing more than a possibility, they'll meet in the Heritage Classic in South Carolina a month later.

Regardless of the developments, or lack of developments, in those events, the big confrontation will come in the Masters. Both are pointing for it. Both want it badly.

"My goals are the same as always," said Nicklaus, the famed and feared Golden Bear who has reigned as professional golf's premier performer for more than a decade.

"My first goal is Augusta. It's the first major championship. I build my schedule around the majors. Those are the ones I point for. It's the victories in those, the titles you collect in the major championships, that you'll be remembered for.

"After Augusta, my next goal will be the U.S. Open. That's the way it's been before, that's the way it is this year. Nothing has changed."

But Miller has changed. From another good, young player on the tour he has developed into the game's most spectacular performer.

It started with his record-setting victory in the 1973 U.S. Open. He followed that with a triumph in the World Cup in Spain. He won eight American tournaments—the most in a season since 1950—and set a money-winning record of $353,000 in 1974.

He's been even more sensational this year. He's won three of four starts. Twice he's shot 61, within a single stroke of the lowest competitive round on record. At Phoenix he had a 72-hole total of 260, the lowest in 20 years. He's been spectacular.

Ingram Takes Daytona Preper

By F.T. MacFEELEY
AP Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — National sportsman champion Jack Ingram of Asheville, N.C. survived two minor crashes Saturday and drove to a comfortable victory in a 300-mile Sportsman's race at Daytona International Speedway.

Ingram's windshield was severely cracked in one skirmish and his car was nudged in an eight-car spectacular wreck on the 31-degree west banking of the 2.5-mile oval.

But he avoided more serious accidents that sent former winner Red Farmer of Hueytown, Ala. to a hospital and caused minor injuries to three other drivers in a wild race in which only 15 of 40 starters finished. Farmer sustained severe bruises to his left arm and leg and a spokesman said there was no feeling in his left side. The spokesman said it would be about three days before the feeling began to return.

Ingram whipped his Chevrolet across the finish line 2.5 seconds ahead of rookie Joe Millikan of Randleman, N.C., a member of Richard Petty's pit crew, who drove a Dodge.

Ingram collected $9,700 for his victory, averaging 138.107 miles per hour in a race that was slowed six times by caution flags. Eight drivers exchanged the lead 14 times in a thrilling race run before an estimated crowd of 70,000, who paid $15 for an infield perch.

"A piece of rubber from a tire punched a hole in the right side of my windshield but we taped it up and I could see okay," Ingram said. "In the wreck, I scrubbed the wall to get clear of another car. I think keeping cool and my experience pulled me through."

Harry Gant of Taylorsville, N.C. was third in a Chevrolet, Ivan Baldwin of Highland, Calif. finished fourth in a Chevrolet and Paul Radford of Ferrum, Va. was fifth in a Chevrolet.

Bobby Allison, who has had nothing but trouble since winning the first of five races he entered this week here, led throughout much of the early going, but was the victim of a freak accident midway through the race. Morgan Shephard skidded while heading for the pits and clipped the front of Allison's Chevrolet. Major disaster in the pit area was narrowly avoided as Shephard spun wildly toward the pit wall where there were scores of people.

The hood of Allison's car was bent and he pitted four times for repairs. His crew eventually removed the hood and Allison went on to finish ninth, two laps behind the leader.

"At the time, I felt like punching him in the nose," Allison said of Shephard.

Four cars were mangled and three drivers injured in a pair of spectacular wrecks in the first 40 miles.

Farmer, 42, and Terry Mock, 24, of Jacksonville, Fla., came together when Mock's car spun out into Farmer's as they roared past the grandstand at 175 miles per hour.

Farmer's Ford rolled and tumbled end-over-end 16 times—once landing on top of Mock's tumbling car—while Mock's Ford vaulted over a safety guard rail in a similar series of spectacular flips and cartwheels.

Farmer was hospitalized with apparent broken bones in his left arm and left leg. Mock, who somehow walked away from the accident, was taken to a hospital, complaining of a headache. He was not admitted.

In the second smashup, the car of Phil Finney of Merrit Island, Fla. went into a spin on the 31-degree west bank. His Chevrolet skidded for 300 feet in circles to the bottom of the asphalt and then back to the top against the outer wall, where Charlie Blanton of Gaffney, S.C. smashed his Mercury into Finney's car.

Finney was reported glassy eyed, although he walked away from the wreck. Neither driver was hurt.

At 220 miles into the race, eight cars played a spectacular game of dodge 'em on the same west banking. Bobby Jones of Greenville, S.C. got into a spin and the tightly bunched field, which had just come out from under a caution flag, went in all directions trying to miss him. Some did, seven didn't and three of those which did, were able to finish the race.

Pitt trailed by as many as five points in the overtime, but pulled within 69-68 with 39 seconds left on a basket by Kirk Bruce, who scored 16 of his 20 points after intermission.

Virginia's Bill Langloh hit on one of two foul shots, stretching the Cavaliers' lead to 70-68. But Pitt's Lew Hill was fouled. He had two shots, but he made only one.

Indiana Wins

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana's Hoosiers, extending the nation's longest unbeaten college basketball string to 27 games, thrashed helpless Northwestern 82-58 Saturday behind center Kent Benson's 14 points and 12 apiece by guards Quinn Buckner and Bobby Wilkerson.

Indiana built leads of up to 35 points and Coach Bobby Knight substituted freely as the top-ranked Hoosiers raised their Big Ten Conference record to 13-0 and their over-all mark to 24-0.

Irish Rip LaSalle

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 36 points, including six in a crucial second-half burst, and 16th-ranked Notre Dame crushed 12th-ranked La Salle 91-75 Saturday.

Notre Dame led the nationally televised college basketball contest 42-35 after a seesaw first half. La Salle pulled within one at 63-62 with 8:05 remaining in the game.

But the Irish connected for six straight points, La Salle got a free throw and Notre Dame added six more quick points, running the lead to 75-63 with just 5:24 left. Dantley, a muscular 6-foot-5 sophomore, was the key man in that explosion.

The Irish raised their season record to 15-7, while the Explorers slipped to 19-4 as they suffered their worst defeat of the season. Their biggest previous losing margin this season was four points.

CHICAGO (AP) — Methodical Margaret Court, using a powerful overhead volley and deep baseline shots, overcame youthful Martina Navratilova in the third set Saturday to win the $75,000 Chicago Women's Tennis Tournament.

The stately Mrs. Court, who recently returned to the circuit after having her second child, won 6-3, 3-6, 6-2. Her 18-year-old Czechoslovakian-born opponent who had beaten Mrs. Court a month ago in the Australian Open, consistently lost her poise, throwing her racquet and kicking the ball in frustration.

Miss Navratilova, who had upset top-seeded Chris Evert Friday night, lost three service breaks in the final set.

Mrs. Court, 32, broke Martina's service in the sixth game of the first set to grab a 4-2 advantage. With the score 5-3, Miss Navratilova couldn't cope with Mrs. Court's passing shots and lost the first set.

Mrs. Court lost some of her sting in the second set and trailed 5-1 before breaking Martina's service in the seventh game. Mrs. Court rallied for one more game but at the fifth try for set point, Miss Navratilova scored her only ace of the day and won the set.

In the final set, Mrs. Court won three straight games with her powerful overhead volley before Martina could win a game. With Mrs. Court leading 5-2, the final game went to the eighth point and Miss Navratilova lost when her deep baseline shot missed its mark.

Mrs. Court's victory was worth $16,000.

In the doubles competition, Miss Evert and Miss Navratilova will face Mrs. Court and Olga Morozova.

District Tourneys This Week

District Tournaments will get underway throughout the area, with action slated for area teams on at least three levels.

The Division I 4-A playoffs acutally got underway last night with two games, Wilson hosting Bertie and Northern Nash at home to Rocky Mount.

Tuesday, Northeastern, the regular season champion, will play host to the Wilson-Bertie winner, while Rose High School will entertain the Northern Nash-Rocky Mount survivor. That game will be played in the Rose gym at 7:30 p.m.

The finals of the tournament will be played on the court of the higher surviving team on Wednesday night.

The conference will send two teams into the state tournament, which has first round games on Saturday night. Northeastern has already clinched one of the two berths. The tournament winner will play host to Division IV's second place team Saturday night. Northeastern, or the tournament runner-up (should Northeastern win the tournament) will meet Division V's champion. Winners in these two games advance to Greensboro the following week for the last three rounds of the tournament.

The Eastern Carolina Conference's boys' tournament will be played as the District 2, 3-A Tournament at D. H. Conley High School.

Tuesday night at 7 p.m., regular season champ Conley will meet Ayden-Grifton, while North Pitt and Eastern Wayne meet in the second game. Wednesday, Southern Wayne takes on Farmville Central at 7 p.m., with Greene Central and North Lenoir colliding in the second contest.

The semi-finals will be held on Thursday, with the finals on Friday. The winner goes into next week's state tournament at Durham.

Williamston's unbeated girls (22-0) will be in action in the District One Girls Tournament at Robersonville, starting Tuesday. Pairings for the field are to be decided today. It will involve teams from the Albemarle, the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin, the East Tidewater and the Northeastern Conference.

Farmville Central's girls move into the District Two field at Southern Wayne. This tournament involves the East Carolina Conference, the Carolina 1-A East, the Coastal, 3-A, the Coastal Plains and the East Central.

While final pairings were to be set this weekend, it is believed the Farmville will meet Eastern Wayne in the first round Tuesday at 8:30 p.m.

The District One, 1-A Tournament is slated for Williamston, starting Tuesday. Pairings were to be set this afternoon. The format calls for three Tidewater teams and five Beaufort-Hyde-Martin teams. Bear Grass, Jamesville and Oak City were all in the running for one of the final berths.

Farmville Is Tourney Champ

SPRING HOPE—Farmville Central's regular season champions added the Eastern Carolina Conference's tournament championship trophy to their growing collection of hardware Friday night. They downed Eastern Wayne, 54-35 to take the crown.

Southern Wayne's junior varsity downed Southern Nash for the JV title.

Farmville Central inched out into a 12-9 lead over the Lady Warriors in the first period of the game. Farmville then extended its lead by doubling its second in the second quarter, while Eastern got only eight points. That sent the Lady Jaguars into the dressing room with a 24-17 lead at the half.

The third period of the game put the contest on ice for the Lady Jags. They pushed through 16 of their own and held Eastern to just one free throw. That rushed the lead out to 40-18. Eastern came back with a 17-14 margin in the final period, to no avail.

Julia Moye led Farmville with 22 points while Darlene Joyner picked up 15. Inky Williams led Eastern with 14 points.

Farmville will take the next step Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. when they again meet Eastern Wayne. This time it will be in the first round of the District Two girls tournament, to be played at Southern Wayne High School. The winner of that tournament moves into the State Tournament the following week in High Point.

Williamston Takes Title

WASHINGTON—Williamston's girls basketball team had four players in double figures as the Lady Tigers rolled to their 22nd straight win and the championship of the Northeastern Conference tournament beating Plymouth, 70-50, Friday night.

The Lady Tigers will go on to the district level tournament which will begin this week, although a date has not been set for it to begin.

Williamston wasted little time in moving towards the win. The girls pumped in 21 first quarter points to to take a 21-6 lead. The Lady Tigers built it to 39-17 by halftime.

Williamston put up another 21 in the third period while holding Plymouth to 10. Plymouth got the hot hand in the final frame hitting 23 while Williamston fell off with 10 but the Plymouth burst did not change the outcome.

Nancy Williams led the Lady Tigers with 17, Bet Brandon had 13, Fran Hardison had 11 and Sissy Taylor 10.

Bath Nips Bear Grass

WASHINGTON—Bear Grass High School came within one game of pulling off another upset victory in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference Tournament Friday night, but bowed to Bath, 53-52.

Bath went on to meet Belhaven in the finals of boys' bracket Saturday night. In the girls' game, Aurora downed Belhaven to gain a meeting with Chocowinity.

The Bears, who had upset second-ranked Chocowinity earlier in the week, had their sights set on another victory and a hoped for berth in the District Tournament next week.

Bath, however, managed to slip into a 12-11 lead after the first hard-fought period. Bear Grass came back with a 10-8 margin in the second frame, edging ahead, 21-20 at halftime.

Bath began to find some breathing room in the third period, pushing through 18 while the Bears got 11 more. That put Bath into a 38-32 lead. But the Bears came back in the final period to make it right again. They pushed through their 20th point as compared to 15 for Bath to cut the lead to one point, then got the ball back in the closing seconds. However, a turnover gave the ball back to Bath and they were able to run out the clock and hold onto their one-point lead.

Donald Gibbs led Bath with 22 points, while Ronnie Parker had 14 and Gary Randall had 11. For Bear Grass, Randy Stokes had 21 and Mark Gardner had 10.

In the junior varsity game, Nash Central also claimed the victory, outhitting Aycock, 36-20. Aycock had led 10-0 after the first period, but managed only 10 more points the rest of the game, and were behind by 16-12 at halftime.

Aycock closes out its season Tuesday, hosting Bertie.

Elmhurst II In Win

Elmhurst II downed Elmhurst I, 27-20, in an Elementary Basketball League game Friday.

The two teams were tied at 4-4 following the first period, but Elmhurst II pushed into a 13-11 lead at the half. They built that to 21-13 after three periods and went on to record the victory.

Billy Dough led Elmhurst II with 10 points, while Mark Douglas had five for Elmhurst I.

In the junior varsity game, Elmhurst II took a 19-11 win. Marshall Rand led Elmhurst II with six points, while Bernie Carraway had three to pace Elmhurst I.

Immanuel Wins One

Immanuel Baptist held onto a two-game lead in the Church Basketball League with a 56-54 victory over Presbyterian Friday night.

Immanuel eased out into a 26-23 lead in the first half of the game, then fought off a Presbyterian rally. Presbyterian outhit Immanuel, 31-30, but it wasn't quite enough.

Cliff McNeil led Immanuel with 19, while L.G. Catlett had 14 and Drew Rumbley had 10. Richard Holloman led Presbyterian with 16, while Joe Jenkins and Larry Graham had 10 each.

St. James snapped its losing streak with a 71-35 romp over Trinity in the second game. St. James built up a 35-24 lead at halftime, and outscored Trinity, 36-11 in the second half.

Mike Board and Chuck Mohn each had 14 to lead St. James, while Bubby Leggett added 10. Ricky Langley led Trinity with 15, with Jimmy Smith adding 13.

San Diego Finally Beats Nets In Fourth Overtime By 176-166

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The usual objective of a basketball game is to win, but sometimes it is just to get the thing over with.

Especially when the game runs 68 minutes playing time...3 hours 10 minutes from tipoff to buzzer...72 personal fouls...128 rebounds...and 342 points.

Friday night's 176-166 American Basketball Association victory by the San Diego Conquistadors over the New York Nets went through four overtimes. It was less basketball than it was a marathon race with the best conditioned team coming out the winner.

"The score sounds like they're playing half-court," said one sportswriter.

When the Nets-Q's game ended at 11:10 p.m. PST, seven players had accumulated six personal fouls, which in the National Basketball Association would have meant departure from the game. Unmercifully, the ABA allows them to run to exhaustion.

Julius Erving scored a career-high 63 points, hitting 25 of 46 shot attempts, but Julius scored just one basket in the last 12 minutes of play. Said losing Coach Kevin Loughery: "If Dr. J. didn't get tired he wouldn't be human."

One reason the 6-foot-7 Erving failed to score in the final minutes was the defensive job done by 6-foot-2 guard Warren Jabali.

"I put Warren on Dr. J. and he did a heck of a job on Erving," said Q's Coach Beryl Shipley. "I never even put (Travis) Grant in there in the fourth overtime because Grant on Erving is a defensive mismatch."

"I've never been in a game like this one," said Erving, "and I hope I'm never in one like this again...unless we win. It's just so disheartening to lose when you put so much into it."

Erving admitted, however, that he played the last three overtime periods with a slightly twisted left ankle which limited his scope. He managed to haul down 23 of his team's 57 rebounds.

The Q's Bo Lamar, playing for his former college coach at Southwestern Louisiana, had a career-high 45 points as he hit 18 of 30 shots from the field and it was his six free throws plus a basket in the final five-minute extra session that sank the Nets.

Squires 96, Sounds 82

Playing before their largest home crowd in two seasons, 8,323, the Memphis Sounds fell behind 37-13 in the first period and never caught up. Reserve forward George Irvine scored 10 points in the first quarter for Virginia.

"Everything went wrong," said Memphis Coach Joe Mullaney. "We never played well."

No Telling Who Is Going To Be Odd Man Out In NBA Midwest

By The Associated Press

In the National Basketball Association, it's the wild, wild Midwest.

Only three of the four teams in the NBA's Midwest Division can make the playoffs, and after two-thirds of the regular season, there's still no telling who's going to be the odd man out.

The Chicago Bulls have won 11 of their last 13 games, including a 105-87 decision over the Golden State Warriors Friday night, and lead the Midwest by four games.

The Kansas City-Omaha Kings, whose 132-112 triumph over the Buffalo Braves was their eighth victory in nine starts, are now in second place by one percentage point over the Detroit Pistons, 103-101 losers to the Philadelphia 76ers.

And the Milwaukee Bucks, who got off to a woeful start because of the injuries to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, have their center back in top form and are just one game below .500 and 2½ games behind KC-Omaha after beating the Cleveland Cavaliers 112-105.

Chicago Coach Dick Motta, who is confident his team will win the division, assesses the rest of the race this way:

"Over-all, you have to figure KC-Omaha will make it to the playoffs because they are just playing great right now. I'm also sure that Milwaukee will come on strong. I'm afraid that a good team from our division will miss the playoffs."

Elsewhere in the NBA Friday night, the New Orleans Jazz beat the Houston Rockets 124-112, the Boston Celtics defeated the Phoenix Suns 112-106, the Los Angeles Lakers topped the Atlanta Hawks 108-100 and the Portland Trail Blazers edged the Seattle SuperSonics 90-88.

Bulls 105, Warriors 87

Bob Love poured in 30 points and center Nate Thurmond hauled down 23 rebounds for the Bulls.

Kings 132, Braves 112

Jimmy Walker scored 32 points and backcourtmate Nate Archibald added 30 points and 16 assists for KC-Omaha.

76ers 103, Pistons 101

Bucks 112, Cavs 105

Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and grabbed 17 rebounds to lead the Bucks.

Jazz 124, Rockets 112

Celtics 112, Suns 106

John Havlicek scored 13 of his 19 points in a 36-point Boston blitz in the third quarter that broke the game open.

Blazers 90, Sonics 88

John Johnson scored 20 points to lead Portland.

Sports Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A qualifying school for aspiring pro golf tour players will be held June 9-14 at North Myrtle Beach, S.C., the PGA Tournament Players Division announced Friday.

A second competition will be held in the fall. The exact dates and site have not been announced. This will be the first time since 1969 that there will be two schools in the same year.

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Cincinnati boxing club reached agreement Friday with the Cincinnati Convention Center to stage four professional boxing programs in the next three months.

A spokesman for the Ringmasters Boxing Club said the group has signed for a series of boxing cards on Feb. 27, March 20, April 8 and May 22.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Tony Pawlik, Rutgers' 1974 football co-captain and starting safety for the past three season signed a free agent contract Friday with the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound Pawlik tied teammate Ed Jones in career interceptions in 1974 with 14. Jones was drafted in the ninth round by the Dallas Cowboys.

Can Marichal Make 'Em Forget Catfish?

By The Associated Press

Can Juan Marichal make them forget Catfish Hunter in Oakland and help keep the A's numero uno?

The 36-year-old right-hander, who spent 13 full seasons with the San Francisco Giants, has moved across the bay, where the world champion Oakland A's hold forth.

Owner Charles O. Finley said Friday that Marichal, 243 victories trails only Bob Gibson's 247 among active pitchers, has agreed to terms and will formally sign a contract when he returns from a visit to his native Dominican Republic.

Marichal was released by the Boston Red Sox following the 1974 campaign. He compiled a 5-1 record but his earned-run average was 4.89 and a back ailment limited him to 11 appearances. He failed to complete any of his nine starts and hurled only 57 innings. The Red Sox purchased him from the Giants in December 1973.

In an effort to replace Hunter, the 25-game winner who was declared a free agent when Finley failed to live up to the terms of the pitcher's contract and who subsequently signed with the New York Yankees, Oakland also signed right-hander Lew Krausse, a former A's pitcher recently released by the Atlanta Braves. Krausse had a 4-3 record and 4.16 ERA in 29 games for the Braves last season.

Meanwhile, Finley, who won an arbitration case with starting pitcher Ken Holtzman earlier in the week, went into another salary showdown Friday with reliever Rollie Fingers.

The tall pitcher with the famous handlebar mustache appeared in all four games the A's won in the 1974 World Series and was named the outstanding player in the Series. He reportedly is seeking $89,00 while Finley has offered $75,000.

Fingers won a $65,000 salary through arbitration last winter and went on to record a 9-5 record plus 18 saves. Finley contends that salary should be based on regular-season performance.

"The players are rewarded handsomely for winning the World Series—more than $67,000 the last three years," he said.

Elsewhere, the Baltimore Orioles came to terms with eight players, including pitcher Mike Cuellar and outfielder Al Bumbry. Cuellar had previously filed for arbitration.

Unser Captures IROC Title By Inches

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — They took away the outside factors which so heavily affect the outcome of most races and had one that was pure sport. The result was organized mayhem.

Nine world-class drivers, in cars identically prepared, strained their machines beyond their ultimate Friday in the final 100-mile sprint of the four-race, $200,000 International Race of Champions.

"You had to squeeze out every second you could get," said Bobby Unser, who won $41,400 in the series after nosing out A.J. Foyt by scant inches.

Scarcely 20 feet separated the first four cars, 20 feet at the end of 100 miles in which the cars raced along sometimes in single file, inches separating them, or three to four abreast as if they were in military formation.

"It had to be one of the wildest rides I've every experienced," said Ronnie Peterson of Sweden, one of six drivers who at one time or another held the lead and who left the race after spinning wildly out of control of the 29th of the 40 laps around the Daytona International Speedway oval.

This series was designed to find the world's best driver by matching them in equal cars in short races. There is no chance for strategy because the driver does not have his own pit crew and laps under the caution flag do not count. It is flat-out racing, a true test of speed.

And veteran observers of auto racing agreed that Friday's mad dash here was perhaps the most exciting, most demanding, most daring test of driving they had ever witnessed.

Foyt, who like Unser is 40 years old, made a valiant try to nudge his long-time Indianapolis rival at the wire, whipping out from behind the front-running Unser to make a last-ditch lunge. Race officials said he fell two feet short of Unser who averaged 167.516 miles an hour.

Immediately behind them, side by side at 180 m.p.h., were third-place Cale Yarborough and fourth-place Bobby Allison. David Pearson was fifth and two-time world driving champion Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil was sixth.

The two wild spins, which sent three cars crashing into the outer wall along the backstretch and forced other drivers into hair-raising maneuvers to avoid disaster, sent Paterson, George Follmer and 1974 Indy winner Johnny Rutherford to the sidelines.

"I'm very happy about the money," said Unser, whose elder brother, Al, and top driver Mario Andretti were not invited because they use one brand of tire and this series was sponsored by another tire company.

"But more than that," he said, "I'm happy to have survived."

At times, these $15,000 Camaros passed the grandstand and it was not possible to see light between them. They raced door handle to door handle in what had to be the ultimate test of raw nerve and talent.

So closely matched were these men and machines that on one lap, the 21st, Bobby Allison fell from first to seventh when he lost the vacuum of the draft and saw six drivers slingshot past him.

So flat out was this race run that at times the cars were going 180 m.p.h., 14 miles an hour faster than they are supposed to be capable of going.

They did it by slipping into the vacuum created by the cars in front of them, feeding on the draft which is created by that technique and pushing the machines beyond what was thought possible.

The lead changed constantly. On every lap, one driver or another would challenge on the inside, shooting out of the vacuum, and another would do the same and shoot to the outside. Foyt went from first to fourth to second to fifth on four successive laps.

It was a game of falling dominoes played out at incredible speed and such an intensity that it seemed a single mistake would be catastrophic.

Follmer and Rutherford went out on the fourth lap when they moved simultaneously for an opening on the outside. Follmer's car tapped Rutherford's and both went into wild spins, smacking the outer wall. Four drivers behind them somehow avoided the mess.

Twenty-five laps later Peterson was running second, the seven cars were in single file, only a precious few feet separating any two. Peterson nudged front-runner Foyt and spun out of control. Yet the five cars behind him avoided collision although the maneuvering did damage Fittipaldi's machine and cost him any chance of victory.

"I know if I backed off there at the last, Foyt would get me at the end," Unser said. "Actually I was afraid of being in front down the stretch. But through the mirror it looked like a snake following me and I couldn't let up."

Foyt was paid $27,600 from the $200,000 prize fund, with $22,000 going to Yarborough, $19,900 to Allison, $18,300 to Fittipaldi, $16,500 to Pearson, $15,000 to Follmer, $12,300 to Peterson and $9,000 to Rutherford.

Richard Petty, Jody Scheckter of South Africa and Graham Hill of England were entered in the series but were eliminated from the final race by their poor finishes in the first three races, last July in Michigan and two last October at Riverside, Calif.

Bobby Hull Ties Mark Of 50 Goals; 50 Games

By The Associated Press

Bobby Hull, the man who gave the World Hockey Association major league status by jumping from the National Hockey League, has tied one of hockey's most distinguished records—50 goals in 50 games.

The 37-year-old Hull, one of the NHL's all-time greats, accomplished the feat Friday night by scoring once in each period to lead the Winnipeg Jets to a 5-3 triumph over the Houston Aeros. Playing for Houston, ironically, was hockey's all-time leading scorer, Gordie Howe.

"This has to rank as one of my greatest satisfactions," Hull said after he tied the famed 50-50 record set by the legendary Maurice "Rocket" Richard of the Montreal Canadiens in 1944-45 when the NHL played a 50-game schedule.

In other action, the New England Whalers nipped the Indianapolis Racers 4-3 in overtime, the Quebec Nordiques trounced the Minnesota Fighting Saints 7-3, the Cleveland Crusaders edged the San Diego Mariners 3-2 and the Edmonton Oilers whipped the Toronto Toros 8-4.

Referee Gets Unkind Words

VANCOUVER (AP) — Both the winner and the loser had unkind words for referee Ron Wicks after the Vancouver Canucks edged the Detroit Red Wings 5-4 in the only National Hockey League game played Friday night.

Vancouver forward Andre Boudrias, assessed a 10-minute misconduct for arguing with Wicks, said after the game that while Wicks is not a bad referee, incidents do happen when he's on the ice.

The Canucks played the last 51 seconds two men short when Vancouver's Bob Dailey picked up a minor and Wicks added a bench minor after Paulin Bordeleau threw his glove in the direction of the referee.

Boudrias then asked Wicks to measure the stick of Detroit forward Danny Grant, but Wicks instead checked another player's stick, turned over from the Detroit bench. When Boudrias and Bordeleau protested, Wicks assessed the misconducts.

"The only thing Wicks had to do was to tell the Detroit bench to give him a stick with the name of Danny Grant on it and measure it," said Boudrias. "That's all I wanted him to do and he gave me a 10-minute penalty for that."

Detroit Coach Alex Delvecchio said Wicks should not have called a delaying-the game penalty in the second period against goalie Jim Rutherford. Boudrias scored on the power play during that penalty.

Delvecchio said Wicks saw Rutherford cover the puck and then briefly let it go without acknowledging the gesture. When Rutherford recovered the puck, Wicks called the penalty.

Compensation Blocked Trade

By JOHN LUNDQUIST
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Compensation demanded by the Chicago Bears for wide receiver Dick Gordon was a major obstacle in trying to negotiate a trade for Gordon, his former agent testified Friday.

Charles DeKeado, Los Angeles, said the Cincinnati Bengals were interested in Gordon but mentioned three roadblocks. Among them were the $65,000-a year salary DeKeado was asking for a three-year pact, the compensation Chicago was asking and the question of whether Gordon would be able to give the Bengals the strength they needed.

DeKeado testified at the U.S. District Court trial in which 16 present or former players are bringing suit against the National Football League, Commissioner Pete Rozelle and the 26 club owners.

Supported by the NFL Players Association, the plaintiffs seek to overturn the Rozelle Rule, which they call restrictive for players trying to deal as free agents, and a violation of federal antitrust laws.

The rule provides that the NFL commissioner can decide the compensation a team must supply another when a player from the second team is signed by the first.

Defense attorneys have tried to show that players have made excessive salary demands.

The players say the Bears were insisting on too much from other teams and that Gordon or his father, Richard Gordon Sr., were told that by those club officials in earlier dealings.

Gordon's best salary at Chicago was $36,000 in 1970 when he played out his option. He was traded to Los Angeles for the Rams' first round draft choice and drew a three-year pact at $50,000, $55,000 and $60,000.

The trial recessed Friday and will resume April 21, said Judge Earl Larson, who will be handling other cases in the meantime.

SAVE $270 to $540 MORE with each POWELL BARN

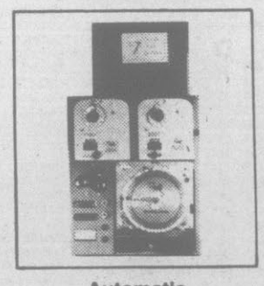

Reports from many growers and fuel dealers confirm it. Powell bulk barns have saved many owners from $270 to $540 more per barn per year than other barns, based on actual costs of gas or oil and electricity per pound of leaf cured. Ask us to prove it! These savings, from records on file, show Powell barns use less gas (or oil) and less electricity to cure a given amount of leaf.

These Powell Features Make the Difference!

- Most advanced furnace available. Uses squirrel-cage fan, the most efficient and gentlest means of moving air.
- The burner and fan are matched to the capacity of the entire system.

IN A FEW MONTHS WE'LL TEACH YOU A SKILL, PAY YOU A SALARY, THEN SEND YOU HOME

Here's the deal. First you pay a quick visit to the Army Reserve nearest you. They show you a list of different job-training courses. They level with you, too, that not every unit can offer you every job.

After you've picked a career you'd like to try, they check to make sure there's an opening for it in the unit. Then you're on your way.

Eight weeks of basic training gets your body in great shape. Then comes a few months of job training. How many depends on the job you want to learn.

Now you take off for home. If your big on saving, you've probably got close to $1,000 stashed away in your pocket. Don't forget, your living expenses are on us. Once you're home, you're all set to go after a fulltime job using the skill you just learned. Meanwhile, you're sharpening that skill one weekend a month with the Army Reserve. That one weekend a month will also put about $52.00 more in your wallet. In the summer, you'll get two weeks of the same at summer camp. All you have to do now is figure out which career you'd like to try.

New Postmaster General Says Rate Hike Needed

By ED ROGERS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new postmaster general took office Sunday, all but convinced that another postal rate increase is unavoidable. But he expects to give the public a lot more service for its money.

Benjamin F. Bailar, 40, an easy-going executive with an easy smile, succeeds Elmer T. Klassen, 65, who responded with a blunt manner and outbursts of anger to the problems and criticism that besieged him for three years.

Both came to Washington from American Can Co., where Klassen was president. Bailar, who was Klassen's chief administrator at the Postal Service, faces some nagging old problems in his new, $60,000-a-year job that will take more than a sunny disposition to solve.

Among them:

—The independent, government-owned Postal Service, created in 1971 to replace the politics-ridden Post Office Department, has a congressional deadline of 1984 to become financially self-sufficient, something that has never happened in U.S. postal history.

—Costs are rising, and six unions will begin joint bargaining in April for new labor contracts amid hints the letter carriers might attempt an illegal strike. Wages and salaries account for 85 per cent of Postal Service expenses.

—The recession has slashed postal revenues and inflation has pushed costs higher, mainly for fuel.

"I think there is no question there will be great pressure for a rate increase this fall. The amount will be colored in large part by the contract settlement this summer," Bailar said in an interview.

He indicated agreement with Klassen's recent prediction that the price of a first class postage stamp, now 10 cents, might have to rise to 12 or 13 cents by next fall.

Klassen, feeling the heat of public and congressional dissatisfaction over slow mail deliveries, said last year he forestalled a rate increase by cutting his work force. But, he told UPI, "I would never do that again. I would put it in because you never get a damn bit of thanks for it anyway—for deferring it."

The last increase, from 8 cents to a dime, went into effect in March, 1974.

Bailar said he wants to stress public service beyond the goal of moving faster the 90 billion pieces of mail it handles annually.

"I want to see us get into the areas of courtesy, office locations, hours which lobbies are open, to make sure there are enough lock boxes for our customers, make sure snork boxes (curbside mail slots) are properly located," he said.

"If I can see that service definition broadened, I'll figure I've made a worthwhile contribution."

Bailar also wants to make sure all postal employes do their part, and therein lies the prospect of future labor strife.

The letter carriers union, representing about one-third of the 600,000 unionized postal employes, vowed last fall to call a strike if the Postal Service adopts a nationwide cost-efficiency program called the Kokomo Plan.

In Kokomo, Ind., Portland, Ore., and sometime later in Providence, R.I., the service is studying all carrier routes in detail to determine if work loads are shared equally and deliveries are as efficient as possible.

"Frankly the carriers, I think, see it as a speed-up, an inhuman putting of all this in computers," Bailar said. "They think we are spying on letter carriers on the streets."

Bailar denies this. But he says the test surveys have been helpful in pinpointing some routes that should be lengthened or curtailed.

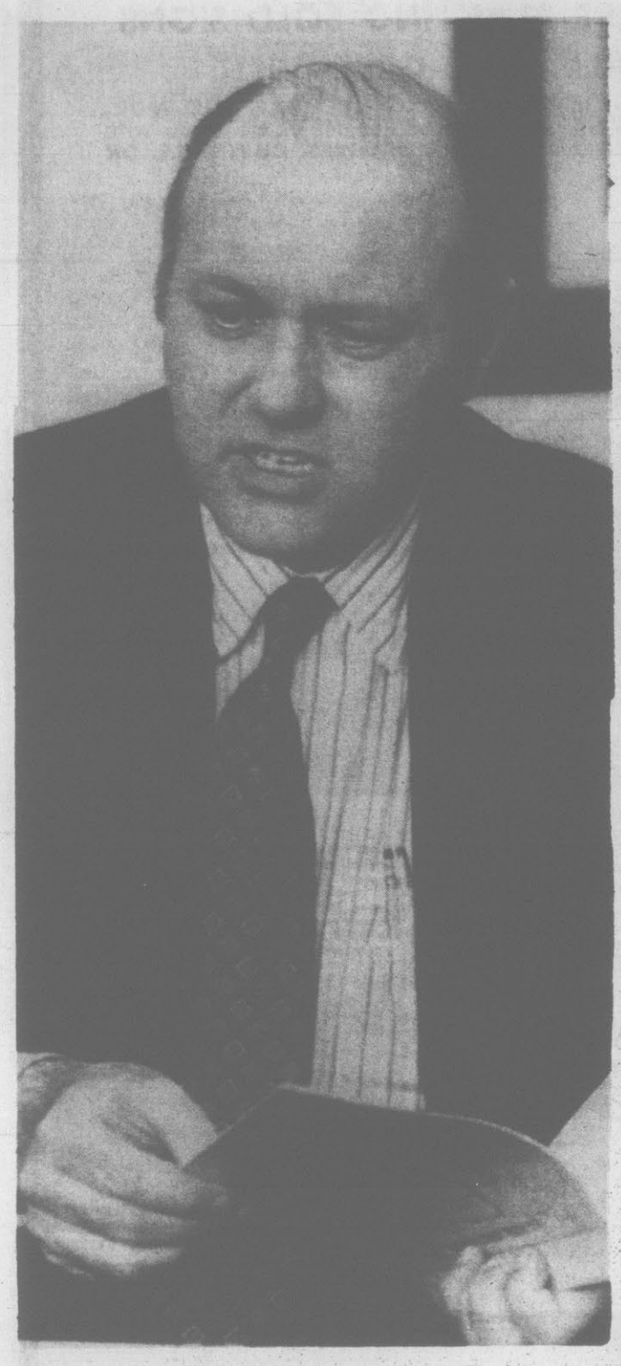

"We have quite an obligation to the public to run the Postal Service as efficiently as we can," Bailar said. "At the same time we have an obligation to our employes not to give them any inhuman work loads. This basically is what the issue is."

As for the "spying" charge, Bailar said carriers on the streets should be subject to the same supervision as mail sorters who work fulltime inside.

Bailar believes his employes have jobs that many American workers would find "highly desirable"—up to $14,000 a year with fringe benefits and a no-layoff guarantee.

And he thinks the public gets good postal service at a bargain. "What can you buy in this country for 10 cents?" he asked.

Bailar said the average American works 1 minute, 9 seconds to earn the cost of mailing a letter. By contrast, it takes 1 minute, 31 seconds in Switzerland, 1 minute, 49 seconds in Australia, 2 minutes, 10 seconds in France, and 3 minutes, 4 seconds in Britain.

Sightless, But This Student Is Not Blind

BEGINNING BRAILLE. . .was learned by Miss Butler when she began attending the Governor Morehead School as a kindergartener. Here, she checks a word spelling in her dictionary.

ENROUTE TO CLASS. . .Linda Butler, left, and Barbara Matthews leave their rooms which are on the ninth floor of Tyler Dormitory.

"So you're blind, what else is new?" is often the reaction of friends of Linda Butler, an East Carolina University junior.

"At first, they might be afraid they will say or do something wrong or hurt my feelings. Later they accept me for myself. There have been times when we have gone shopping and I have been forgotten and left standing. Very shortly my friends return to get me, apologetic," said Miss Butler.

Living on the ninth floor of Tyler Dormitory doesn't prove to be a hardship for Miss Butler. Occasionally if she is by herself getting on the elevator, she might get off on the wrong floor, but she has learned by checking the up and down buttons if she is on the right floor.

In catching the student bus for her classes at the Allied Health Building, Linda and her guide from the class to the bus stop leave a few minutes early before the halls and stairs are crowded.

"I have pretty good luck in taking notes in class in braille. If I see that the professor is going too fast, I ask permission to tape the session and then transcribe my notes later," she said.

She has several students who read various assignments to her. "The professors have been very helpful and thoughtful," she added.

Miss Butler's college major is social work with emphasis on child welfare. She likes people and wants to be of service to them when she graduates and starts working.

"Being blind didn't interfere with my childhood. I started to school when I was six and attended the Governor Morehead School for 11 years, kindergarten through the 10th grade. I attended the 11th grade at Mount Tabor High School and graduated from Reynolds, Winston-Salem.

"The year of kindergarten is for adjusting to leaving home and to begin learning braille. I don't remember too much about the beginning other than we played a lot and had music classes. By learning braille, I can do a lot of reading which I enjoy very much especially in the summertime," she said.

"On the whole, the school is a great place but somewhat sheltered. It has improved quite a bit since I started there. Because it shelters, a blind person might sometimes have problems if they have not learned to live within the sighted world.

"I think going to school in Raleigh and at home was very advantageous plus it made me a better person and more appreciative," Miss Butler continued.

"My family has always told me that being blind didn't have to stop me from anything I wanted to do—they have always had a lot of confidence in me, in turn making me more confident. I do my share of the work around the house in helping mother like the other kids.

"Again, my family, has encouraged me to look my best. When Cynthia (my sister), mother and I go shopping, they always tell me how the clothing looks. Mother helps me match certain ensembles by sewing a little braille tag in the neckline or I can tell by the way the fabric feels," she pointed out.

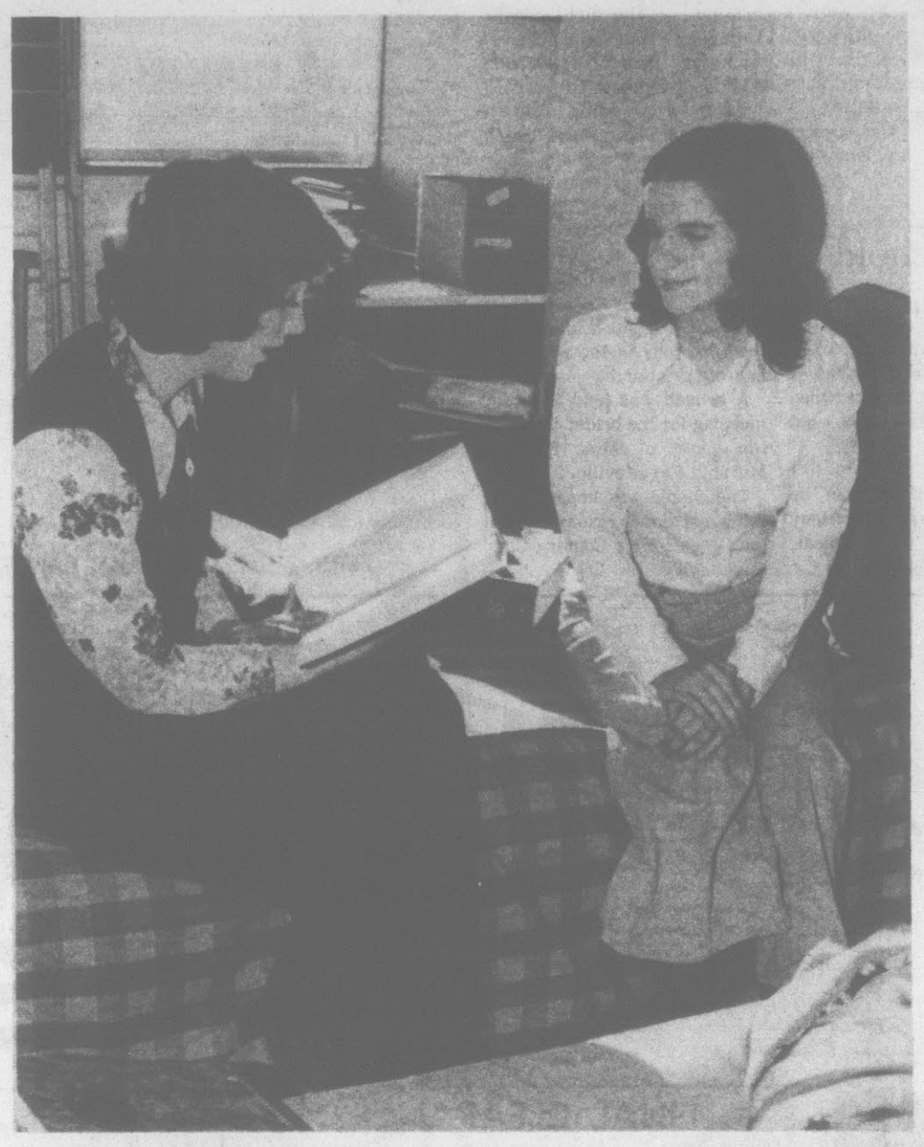

Her younger sister and three brothers have normal vision. Miss Butler's blindness was caused by being placed in an incubator, after her premature birth, where the oxygen destroyed the retina of her eyes.

People often ask me how I keep my money straight. I do so by folding certain bills particular ways and keeping denominations folded together. I bank with Wachovia and my checkbook has a metal check writer and I write on top of the check in braille the amount and purpose of writing the check. A friend then fills out the print for me. I also receive braille bank statements," Miss Butler said.

She enjoys presenting programs and speaking to interested groups or organizations. "Often there are misconceptions about the way blind people live and function daily. I tell them what my life is like and about me," she added.

Reading heads the list of favorite activities of Miss Butler. She also likes to knit, swim, travel, sit around and talk to friends and take long walks.

Work, find a husband and travel are some of the things she would like to do in the future.

READING ASSISTANCE. . .for Miss Butler is provided by Miss Matthews, who reads various assignments daily.

Long List Of Women Pioneers In Male Fields

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The drunk looked up at the mounted police officer and asked: "What are you doing sitting up there?"

And she answered: "Making $13,000 a year, that's what."

She is Alice Sherman, 31, one of New York City's first women mounted cops and one of the many women who now have jobs that were restricted to men just a few years ago.

The women who became the first truck driver, the first airline pilot, the first Wall Street broker, or whatever, generally have cracked the male-only barriers for one compelling reason: money. Precisely the same reason a man takes on a risky or unpleasant job.

They are not, generally speaking, your rhetoric-spouting, bra-burning women's libbers.

Many of the pioneers continue in their new fields because they don't figure the salaries of clerical workers, pool typists and receptionists are where it's at. Especially if there are children to support.

Sandy Moser, 35, believes she's the first woman to drive a gasoline tanker truck, those 65-foot-long cylindrical vehicles with the big printed warning on the side: FLAMMABLE. She works nights, hauling 8,500 gallons of gasoline over the often rain-slicked roads in the state of Washington.

She's able to change a 200-pound tire by herself, although she sure doesn't mind a little help. She's had help on six of eight flats during her year as a driver.

She never had been in a truck before she decided she needed a way to support her three children. Her husband had left her, and the Atlantic Richfield Corp., her employer, was looking for a woman driver.

Four nights a week Sandy puts in a 10-to 12-hour shift behind the wheel of the big truck, which she says moves like a sled when it's empty.

"I'd be delighted to work in an office instead," she admits, "if I got the same pay ... Women aren't so concerned about taking men's jobs but about getting their pay."

Emily Howell, 34, the first woman pilot on a scheduled U.S. air carrier, says the other pilots at Frontier Airlines generally accept her now.

"There are three or four captains I wouldn't bid a trip with," says Ms. Howell, who is a co-pilot today flying routes in the West. "At the beginning (January 1973), a lot sat back to see what was happening. It took a year to see the change from just a novelty to just one of the pilots."

Whereas some women in unusual jobs were perhaps less qualified than male applicants, Ms. Howell was extremely well-qualified. She had taught flying since 1961, when she became the first woman instructor in Colorado, and she was one of 40 women in the country qualified as an FAA examiner. She had over 7,000 hours logged as a pilot, while the requirement for consideration as an airline pilot is only 1,500 hours.

"I just happened to be in the right place at the right time," she says. "Now there are other women pilots as well. I'm just old hat."

She is divorced and lives in Denver with her young son.

Perhaps the most celebrated of the women firsts were the athletes — the first jockey, the first baseball umpire, the first woman to play on a man's professional football team.

Since 1970, women have cracked the male barrier to become generals, admirals, FBI agents, sky marshals, IRS undercover agents, and one woman — Sally Priesand — has become a rabbi.

"I decided when I was in the 10th grade that I wanted to become a rabbi," she says. "My family supported me. They said that was fine if that's what I wanted to do."

Her first problem after graduation from rabbinical school was to find a congregation that would accept a woman as a spiritual leader. She found one at the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue in New York City, a Reform congregation known for its progressive stands on social issues.

"I've been very warmly received," she says. "They have hestitated a little bit at the time of funerals. But part of that is because Rabbi Klein has been here 35 years. He was Rabbi Wise's hand-picked assistant."

As an assistant rabbi, she works without a contract because she prefers it that way. "It gives freedom to both me and the congregation," she says.

The world of high finance is also no stranger to women. The first, and at present, the only woman to hold a seat on the New York Stock Exchange is Muriel "Micky" Siebert, a college dropout who left her native Cleveland to look over Manhattan for two or three months. She took a job as a trainee in research for $65 a week, fibbing about the existence of a sheepskin.

She bought her seat for $445,000 back in 1967 and had her floor pads printed pink as a joke. Then came some sensational years. And then came a falling Dow Jones average. The last seat sold on the NYSE went for a mere $72,000.

Miss Sheibert, polish and president of her own firm, says there was very little prejudice when she first entered the financial world.

"There weren't too many women on the street at the time," she says. "I was very lucky."

She worked her way up and was a partner in three firms before she decided to go it alone. From her office in the Wall Street district, Miss Seibert has a commanding view of the Manhattan skyline. She

Family Contracts Keep Many Runaways At Home

By LIDIA LESZCZYNSKI

Studies indicate that the contract approach to juvenile delinquency is twice as effective as more traditional methods.

The contracts are part of a "short-term behavioral family systems intervention" program which works on the theory juvenile delinquents do not represent the problem "but are part of maladaptive family systems," says project director Dr. James Alexander, of the University of Utah.

In other words delinquency is only part of an over-all family problem.

The program aims at teaching family members to negotiate changes in each other's behavior. For example, the son or daughter will agree not to run away from home in return for the parents' promise not to meddle in the child's social life.

"This is much more powerful than threats or punishment," Alexander said.

Studies show the three-to five-week program has a failure rate of only 26 per cent, well below the 50 to 70 per cent figures recorded by comparison groups involved in traditional "offender-oriented" programs.

It involves bringing the family together within a day after such "soft" crimes as running away, smoking pot, shoplifting, etc., and getting the conflicts out into the open, working toward a compromise.

Alexander got the idea for the program six years ago while doing research on delinquency for a juvenile court system in Utah.

"We only try to get them to do what normal, well adjusted families do in their interaction," the psychologist said.

His research has shown normal families tend to be more supportive of their relatives, and to give and take information during a conversation.

On the other hand, Alexander said, delinquent families resort to game playing, sarcasm, defensiveness, dogmatism, superiority and indifference.

They also phrases such as "Not in this house, you don't," or "Because I'm your father, that's why"—more often than do normal families.

To pinpoint major conflicts within delinquent families, program participants are asked "pointed" but seemingly impersonal questions during their first session: "Should a young man serve in the Army?" or "Who should make decisions on curfew?"

From there, videotaped sessions are then compared to those of normal families, and analyzed for the most effective means to bring about changes in relationships.

"First we slow down the sequence of events, so each family member can grasp his

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

STEDMAN—The Cokesbury United Methodist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Doris Marie Teel and William Blake Langley Saturday at 2:00 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Smith Teel of Farmville, and the late Mr. Robert Carlton Teel. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Thomas Langley of Stedman.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. John Roberts. A program of nuptial music was presented by Barbara Lang, organist, and Kathryn Finklea, soloist, both of Farmville.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Carlton Teel Jr. She wore a formal gown of miramist fashioned with a V-neckline with lace trim and an A-line skirt which ended in a ruffle.

Her Camelot cap was covered in imported French illusion. The bride carried a bouquet of daisies, baby's breath and pink sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Willie Jean Teel of Clinton, sister-in-law of the bride, was the honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Miss Paula Batts of Wilson, Miss Becky Perkins of Chapel Hill, and Mrs. Deborah Marie Langley of Charlotte.

The attendants wore gowns of wine rose crepe designed with a V-neckline trimmed in candlelight brocade and long lace sleeves. They carried bouquets of red, pink and off white camellias.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were L. Thomas Langley of Charlotte, brother of the bridegroom, Dorson White and Steven Anderson, both of Greenville, and Joe Jenkins of Greensboro.

After a wedding trip to Gatlinburg, Tenn., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride graduated from Lenoir Community College and attended ECU. The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU and is employed by Wachovia Bank, Greenville.

The couple was honored at a rehearsal dinner Friday night at the Green Valley Country Club, Fayetteville.

MISS MATTIE MOYE KING . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Holton King of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Charles L. Bridgers, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Wilson Bridgers of Conway. The wedding will take place April 5.

Engagements Announced

MISS TRUDY LYNN PORTER . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Porter of Rt. 7, Greenville, who announce her engagement to Charles Douglas Andrews, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Andrews Sr. of Greenville. The wedding will take place June 15.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

A recent trip to Finland and Russia attracted seven people from Greenville—Beth Moore, Pat and John Guyette, Artemis Kares, Mary Frances Morris, Judy Moore and Nancy Patterson.

Sponsored by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Greensboro, the tour group included 250.

The group left from the Greensboro Airport and flew to Bangor, Me., and from there to Helsinki, Finland. Their stay of several days in Helsinki included a tour of the city.

Traveling by sleeper train to Leningrad, the group attended a Russian ice ballet, toured the Leningrad School of Music for children and attended a meeting of the Russian-American Friendship Society, which gave the group members an opportunity to meet some Russian students.

"An impromptu basketball game was held—rumor had been spread that our tour group was really the North Carolina State Basketball Team coming over to play. According to reports that we received from some of the participants, which included some of the Russian olympic basketball players, about 2,000 people showed up to see the game," said Beth.

She pointed out that a highlight of the stay in Leningrad was a tour of the Hermitage Museum, which is a part of the winter palace of the czars.

The group then traveled by train to Moscow. "Our hotel was located on Red Square and we saw Lenin's Tomb and the changing of the guard there, St. Basil's Cathedral, Moscow University, Lenin's Museum and the Kremlin. I think the most memorable thing there was the reverance the people showed for Lenin," Beth recalled.

They also saw the Kremlin Armory that houses the czars' jewels, crowns, carriages, costumes, ambassadorial gifts and the famous Faberge Easter Eggs.

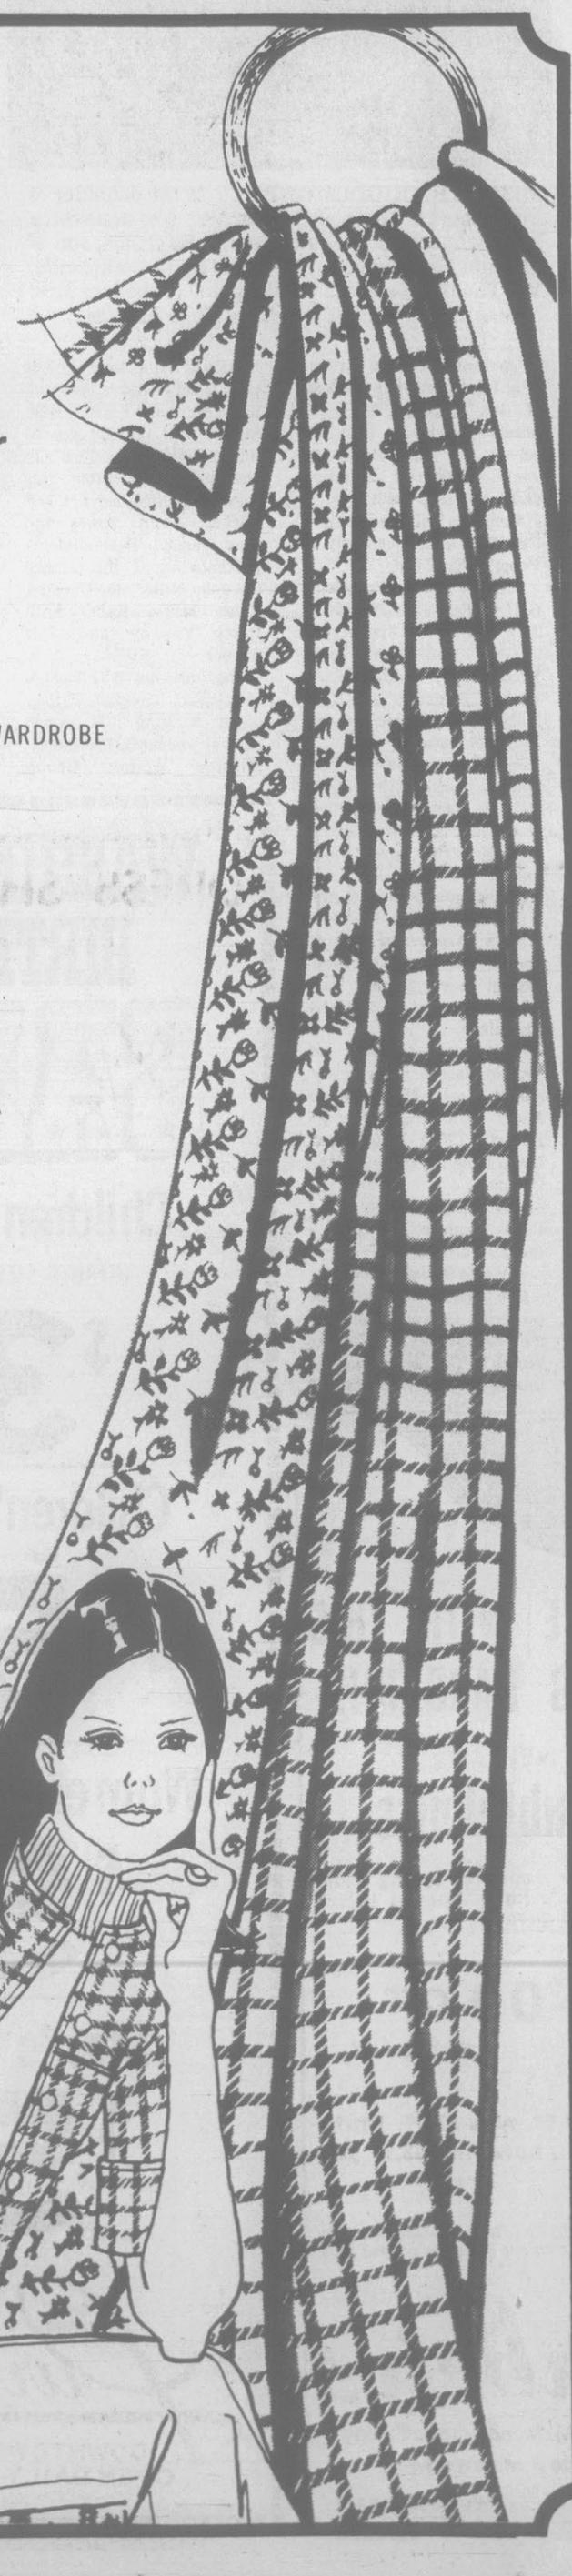

"The Russian people were really friendly and if we had known a little of the language, we could really have made some friends. We felt very welcome and didn't feel the antipathy towards Americans that you get in some of the European countries," she continued.

After spending four days in Moscow, the group traveled back to Helsinki for another day and a half and then home.

Household Hints

Refrigerate candles for 24 hours before using. This retards dripping.

Recycle empty oatmeal and cornmeal containers as yarn or string holders. Cut the cylinders down to fit the ball of yarn or string, cover with self-adhesive paper or fabric scraps glued on, and punch a hole in the lid large enough for a single strand.

You can reduce the amount of sugar in many recipes by one fourth cup if you substitute drained, canned fruit syrup boiled down to about one fourth cup.

Would she be better off without him?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Is it too late to leave a husband after 36 years of marriage? Through the years, I have put up with plenty of abuse, both verbal and physical, but I always forgave him.

Last night was the last straw. At supper, my husband had taken second helpings of everything on the table. We were just about finished when I noticed a little more stew in the bowl, so I put it on his plate.

He flew into a rage, saying he wasn't a garbage can, then he picked up his plate and shoved it into my face, all over my glasses and in my hair! This happened last night and I am still so infuriated I can hardly control myself.

He didn't apologize. (He never does.) He just said: "Well, you asked for it when you tried to force the leftovers on me!"

I suppose it's too late to leave him, but if you were in my place, what would you have done? Or better yet, what would YOU do now? HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: What I would do and what YOU should do are probably two different things. If you have put up with his abuse for 36 years, you either must have liked it, or felt that you had no choice. Now, you should ask yourself the question, "Would I be better off without him—or with him?" There's your answer.

DEAR ABBY: I'm the mother of a 15-year-old daughter and a 14-year-old son. They're good kids as far as behavior goes, but they are a pair of lazy slobs when it comes to keeping their rooms picked up.

I have pleaded with them, yelled at them, and threatened them with the worst kind of punishment, but nothing works.

We live in a lovely new home, and each has a beautiful room, but you would never know it.

Abby, I am not a fanatic, nor am I unreasonable. I just what them to hang up their clothes and keep their rooms presentable. I don't even ask them to make their own beds.

When guests come over and want to see the house, I have to keep these two rooms closed off because I'm ashamed of the way they look most of the time.

Can you help me? GIVING UP

DEAR GIVING: You are fighting a losing battle, Mother. Say no more to them, keep their doors closed, and enter their rooms only to change the beds, and rake it once a week. When they get tired of living in that mess, they'll clean it up. Until then, don't let it aggravate you. It's not worth it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl whose best features are my legs. Believe me, I don't have much else, but I've been told I could make a fortune modeling hosiery. Naturally I show them off every chance I get.

Here is one girl you will never catch in pants. I always wear a dress or shorts, which brings me to my question: Are hot pants still in style for summer? And even if they aren't, should I wear them when shorts are appropriate? Thank you. GOOD LEGS

DEAR GOOD: The "styles" today are so flexible that anything goes. Go ahead and wear hot pants. And if they catch fire, you can put them out with your pantyhose. (Get it? Panty hose!)

DEAR ABBY: My wife cannot bear children because of surgery; she has one child from a previous marriage. I am willing to adopt but I would like very much to have at least one of my one.

We understand that some young ladies will conceive a child for a barren couple through artificial insemination. We are not rich, but we can afford to pay someone well to do this for us; we are neither insensitive nor vulgar, and would take good care of the girl during her pregnancy.

We are concerned, however, about the legal aspects of this arrangement.

Our friends and relatives are equally divided about such an idea. We would appreciate your opinion and advice and any information you can provide to help us locate such a girl. NAMELESS IF PRINTED

DEAR NAMELESS: First, consult with a lawyer about the legalities of such an arrangement. I have never heard of any girl or woman who has (or would) consider such a proposition.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

role in a problematic event," Alexander said.

For example, in one case a juvenile with a nine-year court record was belted by his mother when he annoyed her. He kicked her back, and she broke a broom over his back.

"Instead of laying blame on either the son's or the mother's behavior, the therapist tried to find the 'theme' of what could have prevented the confrontation," Alexander said. "Where was the father during the incident, for example? If he were there or if the son were with him, would the argument still have occurred?"

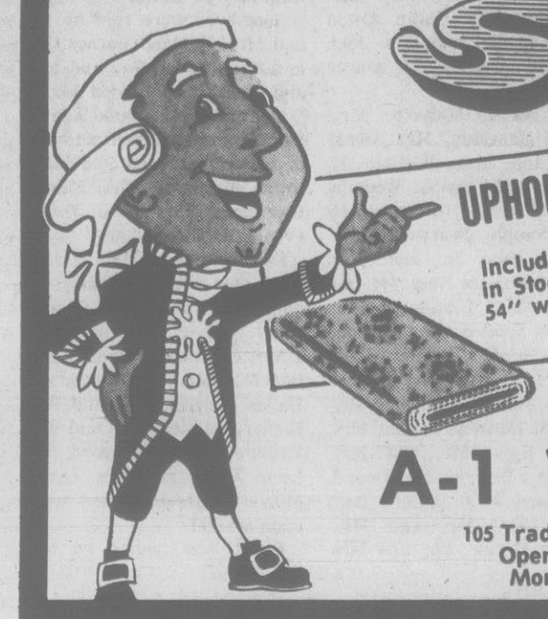

This particular incident served to relieve the son's boredom and the mother's frustration, he said. The therapist suggested the father try to spend more time with his family to avoid such incidents.

In suggesting terms of the family contract, Alexander said, therapists should focus on removing the circumstances that provoked bad behavior, replacing them with conditions leading to acceptable beahvior.

Alexander claims his program chalks up long-term successes, not only through the low rate of repeat offenses by the original juvenile delinquents but also through its effect on the offenders' brothers and sisters.

Studies show only 20 per cent of younger brothers and sisters of program participants became involved in delinquent behavior within three years after therapy, compared to a 40 to 60 per cent rate for other therapy groups.

By Erma Bombeck

I hate to dwell on poor Elvis Presley's 40th birthday, but a headline the other day grabbed me. It read, "TWO COEDS POSE AS DOGS IN ATTEMPT TO SEE ELVIS."

At first I thought there had been a mistake in the headline and that Two Dogs Posed As Coeds, but that was not the case. It seems two girls from Mississippi had themselves crated, labeled "Russian Wolfhounds" and mailed themselves to Elvis to cheer him up on his 40th birthday.

What a fool thing to do! Do you realize if they had stamped "FRAGILE" on the crate, they could have been crushed to death in the post office?

We're a mobile society—everything, that is, but the postal department. They could stop a war already in progress.

I base this on a couple of packages I received at Christmas, namely five pounds of cookie crumbs from my sister-in-law in Orlando and a 185-piece glass set from the Libby people. (It's not easy to get that many pieces out of an 8-glass set of tumblers.)

I have never been beyond the counter of a post office, but in my mind I have visualized a whole operation beyond those swinging doors.

Once a package leaves your hand it is put on a cart and transferred to an adjustment conveyer belt. This is where all the packages with messages like "THIS SIDE UP," "FRAGILE," "HANDLE WITH CARE" and "PLEASE USE HAND STAMP" are turned upside down so the directions cannot be read.

From here, the packages go to a little machine affectionately called the Place, Punt, and Kick. It's a boot-shaped anvil that comes down on a package with 50 pounds of metal and boots it into its next cycle called the Fuzzer Wash.

The Fuzzer Wash is a wet sponge that bathes the package making the ink on the address run together so that it is completely illegible.

There are exceptions, of course. One mother I know who had had it with her kids mailed both of them to a non-existent post office box in Fargo, North Dakota.

Even without a return address, she got them back the same day stamped "Insufficient Postage."

Every time I am critical of a human condition, I get mail.

I'll probably get mail on this column—but not in my lifetime.

The lists of women firsts include the first woman to complete a solo flight around the world, the first woman president of a 500,000-member explorer's division of the Boy Scouts of America, and on and on.

Wife-Beating Convictions Rare In U.S. Courts

By CATHY L. TROST

She was six months pregnant but her assailant slammed his fists into her stomach, again and again.

He kicked a chair onto her stomach and she blacked out. When she came to, he was still beating her.

The woman's assailant was not a stranger. He was her husband. He began beating her, she said, when she misplaced his cigarettes.

Assault reports like this can be found in police departments files in almost every city in the nation.

Yet the phenomenon known as wife beating remains fogged by social prejudices and arbitrary laws. Arrests and convictions are rare.

Two University of Michigan law students recently completed an extensive study on wife assaults. The results are statistically imperfect but the impact is staggering.

Sue Eisenberg, 24, and Pat Micklow, 37, both third-year law students, titled their research study "The Assaulted Wife: 'Catch 22' Revisited."

"Wife beating is a misunderstood and tacitly accepted custom," they wrote. "It is burdened by societal humor, thoughtless tolerance and arbitrary applications of the law.

"It is an index of the devaluation of women in our society."

The pair said wife assaults are treated as a social problem, not a crime. Cases are buried in divorce, assault and homicide statistics, making it difficult to pinpoint the scope and frequency.

Starting in April, 1973, the researchers interviewed 20 women in two Michigan counties who had been beaten by their husbands. They also talked to police officers, prosecutors, judges and emergency room doctors.

The victims, identified only by age and occupation, revealed a startling string of horror stories.

"He used to kick me when I was down like a dog," one woman said "If my clothes were ripped during the fight, he would make me sit and sew them right after the beating."

The wives ranged in age from 19 to 35. The researchers admitted the sample was heavily weighted to persons in the lower economic classes because of lack of access to women in the upper strata.

They emphasized wife beating straddles all occupations, levels of education, duration of marriage and family size.

Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Sue Borman said the middle or upper class woman is less likely to bring charges against her husband because of embarrassment.

"She has the ability to get away from the man, too," Judge Borman said, "more economic ability."

Miss Eisenberg and Mrs. Micklow said most cases of wife beatings probably are not reported to police because of three factors—humiliation, fear of reprisal, and the stumbling blocks women face along the legal path.

"The woman runs into barriers wherever she goes, the police, courts, prosecutors," Mrs. Micklow said. "There is an emphasis in this society on preserving the marriage at all costs."

The researchers said they were convinced from interviews with police officials that most officers are trained to view wife-beating as a family problem, better handled by a social worker or counselor, and to avoid making arrests.

Of the 20 women interviewed, 16 called the police. Officers responded with a house call in only half of those complaints. In only one case was an arrest made.

The victims insisted they did nothing to provoke the assaults, and most said when they tried to defend themselves, the beatings increased in intensity.

Miss Eisenberg and Mrs. Micklow said there is no way to estimate accurately how many wives are beaten by their husbands, but offered these indications:

A 1974 Detroit Police Department study showed 85 per cent of 144 assault complaints were filed by women, half of whom were married.

A Wayne County assistant prosecutor said wife assault is one of the most frequent crimes he encounters. The police chief of a small Washtenaw County town of 6,000 said family assault calls come in every day.

A doctor at a Detroit hospital emergency room said he sees five or six wife assault cases each week.

And 57 cases of alleged wife assault were reported to the Washtenaw County sheriff's department during a five-month period in 1974, accounting for almost half of all assault and battery complaints.

"I could name you three or four addresses where every weekend, year after year, we'll have calls on family disturbances, on a family fight," Detective Lt. Harold Owings said. "The husband...automatically beats up his wife everytime he gets drunk."

The majority of wife assaults occur during certain peak periods of the week, the researchers said, especially on Friday nights, late Sunday afternoons and Sunday nights.

The most common form of attack, the study showed, is with the fists. But most often the assailant also resorted to kicking, throwing across the room or down the stairs, slapping, choking, burning or smothering.

The "more innovative weapons used" included a broom, leather belt, brush, pillow, hot iron, lighted cigarettes and a piece of railroad track.

Areas of the body most frequently attacked were the head and the face. Some wives said their husbands "always went for the face first" in a desire to humiliate them.

Injuries included four women with miscarriages, four had concussions, one woman had her hair ripped out, one suffered a fractured jaw, and one sustained cracked ribs.

Miss Eisenberg and Mrs. Micklow said those wives who decided to take legal action against their husbands were trapped in a shuttle between the criminal and civil courts—the "Catch 22" situation.

If the woman requests an assault and battery warrant, they said, she must prove to the prosecuting attorney that she is a worthy victim. The researchers said most prosecutors want proof the woman is filing for divorce before they will issue a warrant.

But when the woman arrives in court, judges often fail to punish the husband in the hope that reconciliation will occur, they said.

Miss Eisenberg and Mrs. Micklow pointed to the need for the legal system to recognize wife beating as a crime, offering immediate protection as well as long term solutions.

Classroom Rental Idea Needs Legislative Step

BELMONT, Calif. (AP) — A school district faced with declining enrollment wants to rent empty classrooms to pediatricians, dentists or hairdressers to avert the need of closing schools.

The idea flashed in his mind last month like a cartoon light bulb, said Superintendent Claude Turner, chief administrator for the seven-school, 3,400-pupil Belmont system 20 miles south of San Francisco.

He said he knows of nó precedent for renting rooms in operating schools to private enterprise.

Falling enrollment confronts many school boards in California and in other parts of the nation. With it comes divisive decisions on which schools to close.

"My thought is that instead of having to decide what schools to close, why not, for instance, rent an empty classroom to a beauty parlor where mothers could have their hair done," Turner said.

He explained his idea to his school board, and the response was, "Bravo. Let's see what we can do."

But state law bars commercial use of school property and also restricts its use by other public agencies.

Turner has submitted proposals to educational foundations for a study to determine what legislative action would be necessary in developing a plan that could be tried in Belmont and perhaps become a model for other school systems.

"They are interested, but we have nothing nailed down yet," Turner said.

He said the Belmont district, serving a community of about 25,000, is two years away from a school closing decision.

Abandoned Palace Becomes Museum For Picasso

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — An abandoned 17th Century palace in eastern Paris will become France's Picasso Museum next year, with more than 300 works of the late Pablo Picasso on display.

It will be the first national museum to open in Paris since the Museum of Modern Art 39 years ago.

The museum will be the second Picasso museum in the world, larger than the one in Barcelona, Spain. It marks only the second time France has devoted a museum to one artist. A national museum for Marc Chagall opened in Nice in 1973.

Michel Guy, France's secretary of state for cultural affairs, announced Jan. 21 he had made a deal with Picasso's widow. She agreed to give 300 of the artist's hitherto unexhibited sculptures, drawings, lithographs and paintings for a new Picasso museum rather than pay a whopping inheritance tax.

Guy's assistant, Francoise Belliegue, said a commission appointed by the directors of French museums will select the works from the more than 1,000 Picasso left when he died without a will in 1973.

For a museum, authorities chose one of the unsung gems of Paris, the Hotel Aubert de Fontenay, a mansion abandoned in the 19th Century and bought by the city of Paris 10 years ago.

The mini-chateau stands on Rue Thorigny in the Marais, which was a wealthy residential district of Paris in the 17th Century. The Marais deteriorated into a factory and slum district in the 20th Century and only since 1960 has begun to be restored to its former glory.

The Hotel was built in 1656 by architect Jean Boullier de Bourges for De Fontenay, a salt tax collector. At that time citizens were taxed according to how much salt they owned. Parisians thus call it the Palace Hotel Sale (Salt Mansion).

Walls curve around the paved courtyard graced by two huge stone sphinxes. Off the marble-floored entry hall stretches a staircase with a wrought iron bannister. The ceiling above it drips with sculptured stone figures. The staircase alone is worth one star in the Michelin guide book.

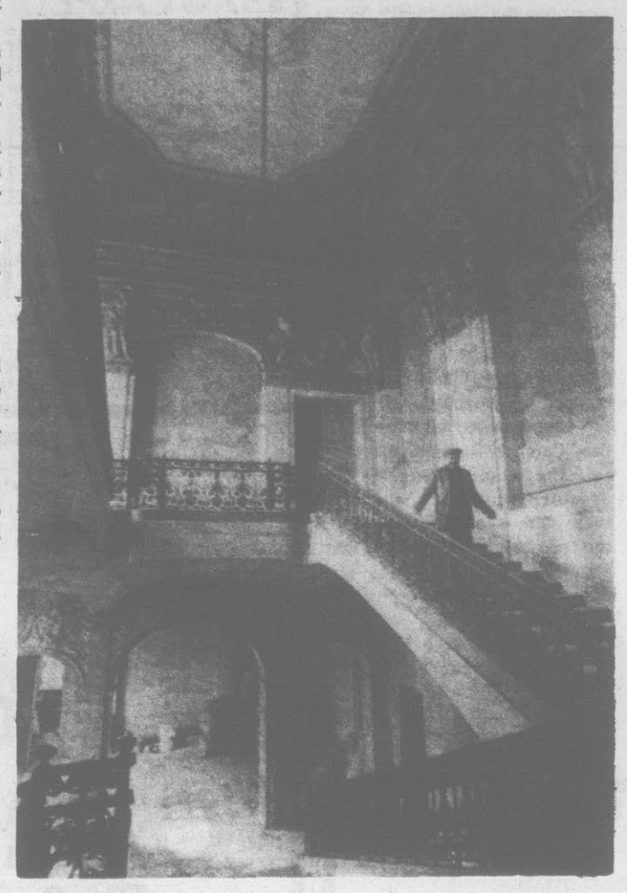

Today the sculpted ceilings and massive doors are gray with grime. The garden is a handball stadium and across the street clangs ring out from a junkyard.

Bernard Vitry, government architect and inspector for the monuments of France, has launched the rescue of the Palace by building a new roof.

"It should be one of the great tourist attractions of Paris," Vitry said, poring over architect's drawings hung on the stained walls.

The collection of Picasso's works is the second windfall France has gained since the painter's death. The widow earlier gave the Louvre Museum Picasso's private collection of about 40 works by other painters.

Louvre officials said they hoped to open the collection to the public this year in a special room. Paris newspapers say the dubious quality of some of the work has held up the exposition.

To Organize Scuba Class

A non-credit evening course in scuba diving will be offered by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education March 13-April 15.

Consisting of nine three-hour sessions, the course meets Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7-10 p.m. in Minges Coliseum on the ECU campus.

The course is designed after the Los Angeles County Basic Scuba Certification course. Students must pass a swimming test to be given at the first meeting.

Final session will consist of a deep dive test off Radio Island near Morehead City or at another suitable location.

Course instructor is Robert Eastep, who has taught the Los Angeles County Program for several years.

Further information and registration forms are available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, ECU Division of Continuing Education, Box 2727, Greenville, telephone 758-6148.

As class size will be limited to 20 persons, early registration is advised.

Lib Rejected On Farm Front

CHICAGO (UPI) — Women's Lib apparently has a long way to go before it reaches the farm community, if one can judge by the results of a recent poll in Prairie Farmer magazine.

The poll, conducted among 488 women by the University of Illinois, in the state's rural and urban areas, asked whether it's all right for women to hold jobs that are traditionally held by men. The result: Sixty-six per cent of the urban women answered yes and 20 per cent of them answered no. Forty-two per cent of the farm women answered yes, while 35 per cent answered no.

Alternative To The Dormitory

AMHERST, Mass. (UPI) — The University of Massachusetts Amherst is studying alternatives to dormitory residency requirements, according to Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery.

Bromery has proposed a universal student resource fee, to replace the current fee paid by dormitory residents only, to meet, as required by law, the debt service on the dorma, campus center, and stadium.

Weapons, uniforms, flags, insignia of Spanish American War and World War I featured in current show.

Two Wars Recalled In Museum Of History Exhibit

Text By Peggy Howe,
N.C. Department of Cutural Resources

From the use of the Gatling gun invented by a North Carolinian, to trench warfare in Europe, the Tar Heel state was actively involved in the Spanish-American War and World War I.

"Call to Arms" a new exhibit to be on view through April 30 at the Museum of History shows aspects of these two wars — both at home and overseas — and North Carolina's participation in each. Weapons, uniforms and insignia, flags and ensigns, equipment of all kinds, photomurals and posters will give visitors a glimpse into two wars of several generations ago.

The Spanish-American War, called "the splendid little war," found the United States Army ill-prepared by the Navy in first-rate condition. Americans were uninformed about the war, and did not understand that the liberation of Cuba, the stated objective, would involve fighting in the Philippines and Puerto Roco, as well as the annexation of foreign territory.

Each state was responsible for its own volunteer contingent for military duty, and official reaction varied. For example, North Carolina Gov. Daniel L. Russell declared that he would not spend the price of a telegram to support the state's volunteers.

Because of such attitudes, Americans were haphazardly and inadequately armed, mostly with an obsolete rifle called the "trapdoor" Springfield. A Raleigh newspaper noted that the "slow-loading, smoke-discharging Springfield did little more than make excellent targets of our troops." In contrast, the modern 7 mm repeater Mauser used by Spanish troops was for superior.

A three-minute automated slide program compares the two weapons for exhibit visitors. Also on view are diagrammed comparisons of the inadequate .38 caliber Colt which was later replaced with the more efficient .45 caliber Browning automatic.

America's excellent Navy gave her a decided advantage. A uniform worn by Ensign Worth Bagley, the first naval officer killed in the Spanish-American war, is on display. He died aboard the "Winslow" during an attack on Spanish batteries at Cardenas, Cuba, May 11, 1898.

Also on display is the carved coat of arms from the "Raleigh," the ship that received the surrender of all defenses at the entrance to Manila Bay. The light curiser was named for the city of Raleigh.

The Gatling gun, designed by Dr. Richard J. Gatling of Hertford County, the first successful mechanical machine gun, is represented in the exhibit by a shiny brass specimen. During the famous charge up San Juan Hill on July 1, 1898, Gatling guns provided the U. S. Army's first ground attack with machine guns, and were instrumental in securing the American victory.

As in all wars, the Spanish-American veterans returned home with Spanish, Cuban and Philippine souveniers. Businessmen found a lucrative market in war memento reproductions, but many of the originals are brought out for visitors to the new exhibit.

During the Spanish-American War, North Carolina was one of only three states to honor the appeal of the black volunteers for their own officers. The first all-black regiment, the Third, under the command of Major James H. Young of Raleigh served with distinction. One of the uniforms from that regiment and the regimental flag are shown.

A few years later, World War I found Americans more understanding of their country's position — German submarines had continued to sink American ships, and military retaliation was necessary. America "relunctantly, then with increasing enthusiasm, took on the war mantle."

More than 86,000 North Carolinians entered military service, and wer represented heavily in several famous divisions, among them the 30th "Old Hickory" Division, the 81st "Wildcat" Division and the 42nd "Rainbow" Division, where they compiled enviable records.

The black response was considerably heavier in World War I than in the Spanish-American War, and the 371st regiment was composed entirely of blacks from North and South Carolina.

They served both as enlisted men and in the officer ranks, were in the Council of Defense at home, and were active in war bond and savings stamp drives, and Red Cross branches.

Uniforms of the soldiers in the trenches and of the nurse who ministered unto them are displayed. Machine guns mounted behind sandbag barricades and manned by grimy, mud-spattered doughboys lend authenticity to the exhibit. At their feet are captured weapons and assorted shells.

Barbed wire is strung along the background "no-man's land" and gas warfare is remembered with gas masks and gas alarm ratches. A "trench periscope" represents some of the combat equipment developed for World War I.

Pigeon cases hang along the walls, in memory of the useful carrier pigeons. Some of these birds were decorated for bravery.

At home, civilians rasied victory gardens, while others joined the Red Cross and sewed hospital linens and clothing, collected food and surgical supplies and operated canteens for the traveling service men.

And presiding over all are wartime photomural displays and propaganda posters. These feature scenes from the home front as well as from the battlefield. Also pictured will be several North Carolinians who served prominently in the war effort, including Josephus Daniels, secretary of the Navy; Walter Hines Page, ambassador to England; Angus W. McLean, director of the War Finance Corporation; and Walter Clark, arbitrator of the War Labor Board.

Brochures on the two wars will be available in the area. As the pamphlet states, "unlike the Spanish-American soldier who returned home to indifference and sometimes hostility, the Warld War I veteran came home a hero. Both the civilian and soldier marched in their numerous victory parades, secure in the belief that they had fought for what was right and had won."

And the Museum of History exhibit, remembers both wars in the "Call to Arms" exhibit.

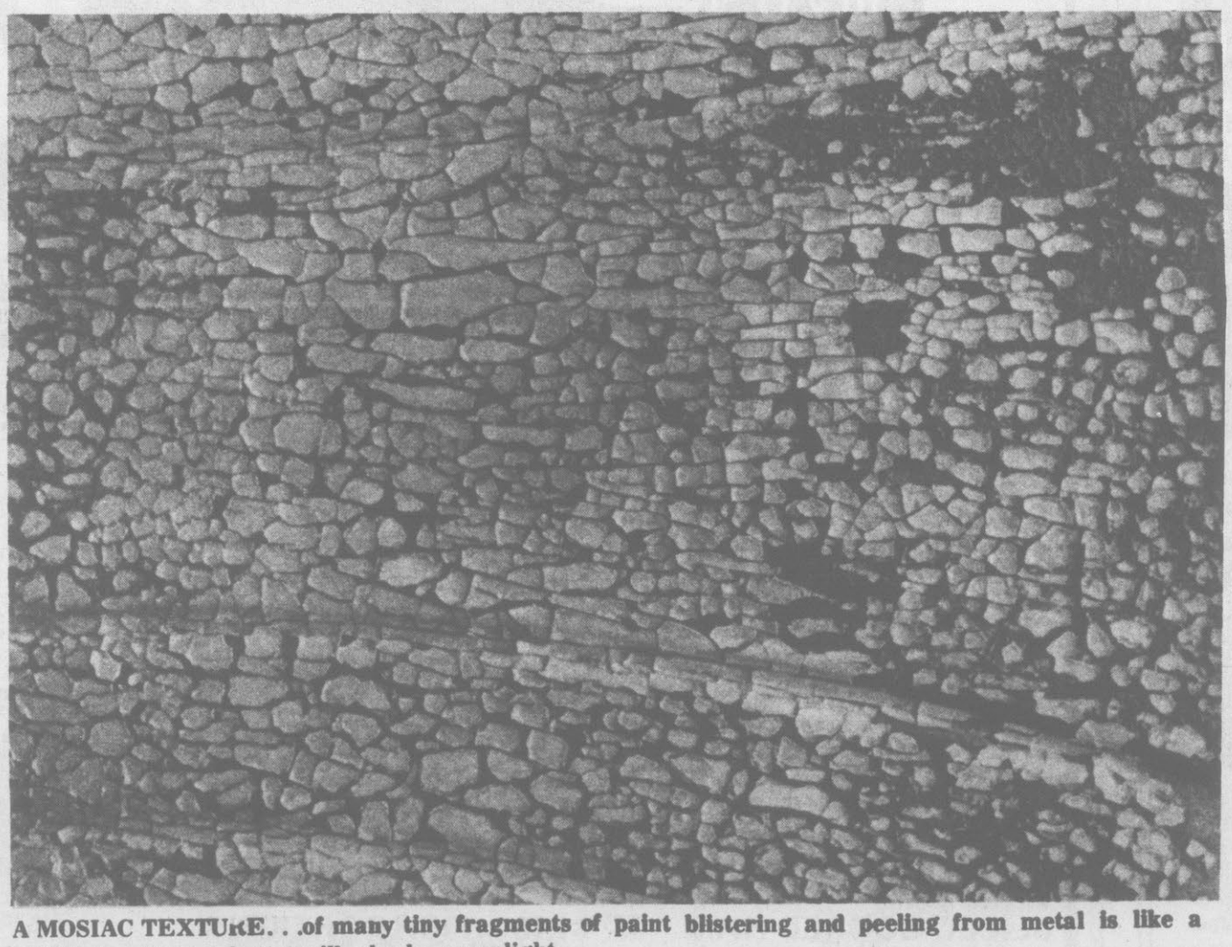

The Museum is located in the Archives and History-State Library Building, 109 East Jones St., Raleigh. Museum hours are 8:30 to 5:30, Monday through Saturday, and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Marine Warrant Officer Is Black Belt "Sensei"

Text By MSgt. Ed Evans, USMC, Cherry Point MCAS

MCAS, CHERRY POINT—Knife-like arms slash at the air, legs kicking out unbelievably high above the head in a small room full of white-clad, sweating bodies.

His students call him "sensei".

Warrant Officer Bill Hayes holds a fourth degree black belt in karate. For the Marine Corps, Hayes is the administrative legal officer in the air station Staff Judge Advocate Office at Cherry Point.

The spare-looking Hayes stands six feet, weight 177 pounds and moves like a spring-wound cat.

Warrant Officer Hayes has a dark bronze skin complexion—he's "black" in the current terminology—which his students soon forget if they follow him deep into karate.

"I may be a black teacher when a man first comes to work out with us," Hayes notes, "but I quickly become "sensei", which is Japanese for teacher."

What WO Hayes has to teach his students encompasses much more physical conditioning and a spectacular way to break boards and smash bricks. "Providing alternatives" is the way Hayes terms his lessons, which he gives at no cost.

It was a search for alternatives that first brought Hayes into Oriental martial arts when he was a teen-ager in Queens, New York City.

"By the time I went into Marine Corps boot camp in August 1964, I was a brown belt. When I went home on my first boot camp leave I was promoted to my first black belt rank."

In 1968, Hayes was transferred to Okinawa and there met Eizo Shimabuku, 10th degree Red Belt in karate. By this time Hayes was a second degree black belt in Taw Kwon Do, but he was so impressed with Shimabuku's teaching techniques that he soon became his instructor's senior American student.

Today Hayes is president of Shimabuku's Karate League in the United States, with 55 schools throughout all the American states except Alaska. In 1970, the U.S. Karate Association, the largest American-based karate group, named Hayes National Director of Military Affairs.

Hayes is now "semi-retired" from competition, directing his interest toward developing the art and refining his own techniques. When he dropped out of competition, Hayes gave up five championship titles. He has earned 108 awards.

At Hayes' karate classes, which he teaches for two hours, three nights a week, the instruction is rigorous but free.

"I guarantee," Hayes says sternly, "that a beginner will not be taught kicking and board-breaking techniques right away. We're interested in the whole man and in teaching the whole art. The karate beginner is taught advanced techniques only when his attitude is right for them.

"A word that's heard a lot around our dojo (place of instruction), Hayes says, "is 'gambate', which means 'hang on'. We do a lot of that. Everyone is a student, and the only way to stay in the class is through determination."

But Hayes says his main interest is still karate. He's so convincing that even his wife has become one of his students. Hayes and his wife, the former Regina Ann Johnson, met in 1972 while she was Miss Havelock of 1971-72 and Hayes was teaching karate at the base gym.

At the time she was living aboard Cherry Point as the dependent daughter of Sergeant Major Erastus Johnson, presently the sergeant major of Marine Combat Crew Readiness Training Group-20.

For Hayes, the increasing interest in karate is part of the broadening interest in the Eastern religions and philosophies which many Americans see as providing alternatives to the problems besetting the country today.

While many people perhaps consider karate a violent sport, Hayes points out that violence is not its purpose.

"Karate is self-defense first," he says, "then the offensive techniques are used if necessary. Actually, karate is mainly a defense against more than one person, and against weapons. Almost every movement begins with a blocking action."

Hayes adds that when a person first begins karate, he sees a lot of contemplation, a lot of physical exercise, and a lot of sweat, but not one karate technique. If there's anyone out there who's interested in that, he says, rather than in breaking boards, they should come see him.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Forget about spending so much time on a particular problem. Go on to other things and come back to it later.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those idealistic young people who should be given a course of education that will include engineering for best results throughout lifetime. There is much humanitarianism in this nature. Be sure to give ethical training early.

A Free Performance At The Recital Hall

"Elixir Of Love" On Board For Wednesday

North Carolina's own opera company, The National Opera Company of Raleigh, will again be performing in Greenville for a one-time only performance of The Elixir of Love in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on Wednesday, February 19 at 8:15 p.m.

Gaetano Donizetti's opera of romance and intrigue moves quickly, with a full measure of suspense about whether the boy will win the heart of the girl of his dreams against all obstacles. It's all melodramatic fun, with comic touches abounding.

A composer who lived during the first half of the 19th century, Donizetti's operas are memorable for their flowing, lyric music of lasting appeal. The aria "Who Can Deceive A Loving Heart?" in The Elixir of Love is one of the great love songs in opera.

The Elixir of Love has five major characters—Nemori, a young peasant man; Adina, a wealthy village girl; Belcore, a sergeant; Giannetta, a peasant girl; and Dulcamara, an itinerant quack doctor.

There is no admission charge for this production and the public is invited to attend.

HOPING IT'S TRUE. . .Italian villagers gather around Dr. Dulcamara (in plaid trousers) as he declaims on the power of his magic elixir, in Donizetti's "The Elixir of Love". There will be one performance on Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Another Free Event For The Public

Liverpool Concert Monday

With the rock revival of the fifties dominating much of today's music scene, a new revival is being brought to Greenville by the four member band, Liverpool.

The band has been together almost a year and has been recreating Beatle Mania right down to the very last note of I Want to Hold Your Hand. Liverpool's music starts with early Beatle and moves on to Sergent Pepper, complete with costumes. Just recently Liverpool was the back up band for the internationally acclaimed group, Stories. They left some people thinking that they really sounded like the Beatles, turning out song after song from Beatle Mania. The bands members, Laurie Currie, Brian Miessner, Dave Moyles, and Rick Pearson feel they all know the Beatles' music as well as the Beatles do and are trying to get one of the ex-Beatles, perhaps John Lennon to produce their upcoming album.

The group will be performing on Monday, February 17 at 8:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public.

LIVERPOOL. . .a quartet with a sound like the famed Beatles, will be in a free concert in Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m. Monday night.

Benefit Performances At Ayden-Grifton High School

Big Country Music Show Friday

Four country music personalities will be singing in two evening appearances on Friday, Feb. 21 at Ayden-Grifton High School between Greenville and Kinston, on Highway N.C. 11 south of Ayden.

Conway Twitty and the Twitty Birds and Loretta Lynn and the Coal Miners will highlight the bill, with with special guests Cal Smith and Kenny Starr to be on hand to round out the two shows.

The appearance of these country music stars — the 13th of a Country Spotlight Series — is being sponsored jointly by the Kinston Police Department and the Greenville Rescue Squad. Proceeds from the show will be used by the Kinston Police Department for training facilities funds; and proceeds for the Greenville Rescue Squad will go to a training program.

Tickets for reserved seats are now available at $6.00, $5.00 and $4.00 from any member of the Kinston police force or the Greenville Rescue Squad, or at — Music Arts, Greenville; the Mall Record Shop, Kinston; Jowdy's in Washington; Farmville Toy Land, Farmville; Clark's Drug Store, New Bern; and Bob's TV (Ayden office only).

Conway Twitty (real name Harold Floyd Jenkins) is a Mississippi native, son of a river boat captain. At ten he put together his first group, a band called "The Phillips County Ramblers," in Arkansas. After serving a tour in the Army, he took the name Conway Twitty and Twitty began his professional singing career — with It's Only Make Believe, a song he wrote himself, taking him to the top in both pop and country music charts. For the past three years he has been among the five finalists considered for Country Music Awards.

In 1971 Twitty and Loretta Lynn were winners of the Grammy Award as Duo of the Year; and in 1972 the two won the Country Music Duo Award.

Female star Loretta Lynn — who has recently been voted among the top 20 in the list of the world's most admired women — is a hill-born singer who married early and was a grandmother by the time she was 32. I'm A Honky Tonk Girl is the record that put her in the Top Ten record sellers and brought her wide public notice. Since that first hit a dozen years ago, the songs of Loretta Lynn have been filling the airways — songs like Don't Come Home A Drinking (With Loving On Your Mind); You Ain't Woman Enough to Take My Man; and Coal Miner's Daughter.

She has twice been awarded the top female vocalist award by the Country Music Association, and is a regular guest on TV shows — the "Dean Martin" show, Jack Paar's "Tonight" show; "Kraft Music Hall," and many others.

Ollahoma native Cal Smith, winner of the most recent Song of the Year Award (for Country Bumpkin) was at one time a featured vocalist for Ernest Tubb and his band. He was proclaimed the most promising male vocalist for 1968, and his since been busy turning out hit songs.

Young Kenny Starr made his first appearance in 1971 at the age of 17 on the Loretta Lynn show. A songwriter as well as performer, he has had his songs recorded by big name artists, and is best known for his big hit That's A Whole Lotta Lovin'.

COUNTRY STARS . . . Loretta Lynn and Conway Twitty head the cast of singing talent coming to Ayden Grifton High School on Friday, February 21 for two performances; at 7 and 10 p.m. Theirs is a benefit appearance sponsored jointly by the Kinston Police Department and the Greenville Rescue Squad.

"Streetcar" On Tuesday

Tuesday is the performance date for Tennessee Williams' prize winning play of the south—A Streetcar Named Desire. Only one performance will be given, at 8 p.m. Tuesday evening at McGinnis Auditorium

The play is being presented by the Continental Theater of Kansas. Tickets are available at $3.00 each either through the Central Ticket Office or at the door prior to performance time.

Welded Steel By John Mizell And Jack Gresko

Two Sculpture Students Show At Mendenhall

Two East Carolina University School of Art student sculptors, graduate student John Mizell of Plymouth and senior John (Jack) Gresko of Spartanburg, S.C., each have four pieces of sculpture on view in the gallery around the top floor of Mendenhall Student Center on campus.

The two are students of Norman Keller and Bob Edmiston and both are majoring in sculpture. This small exhibit was installed as part of the official dedication ceremony of the building on Sunday, February 9. The two were asked to bring in a few pieces each.

John and Jack are now sculpturing in welded steel. Basically, the two men work in simplified forms, stripped of decorative elements or elaborate textural treatment of surfaces. They paint their sculpture in single flat colors—red, yellow, blue, black.

Though there are similarities in technique, their structural treatments are different. John's forms are more varied, a combination of curves, circles and flat areas.

The four pieces by Jack lean more toward straight lines with balanced half circles. These project into space, inclined to a left or right angle rather than to an upright position. John's sculptures, on the other hand, are constructed on a vertical pattern.

These eight pieces would look much better in an outdoor or large patio setting. However, they are a welcome note of clean form and bright color in the space where they are being shown.

The Mizell-Gresko exhibit will continue on view at Mendenhall for the coming week.

Don Bass' Ceramics And Textiles At The Mushroom

A Senior's Valentine Show

Last week the senior show of ECU School of Art student Don Bass opened at the Mushroom Gallery in the Georgetown Shopping Center downtom. It continues through the coming week.

Don, a native of Newton Grove, has made this exhibit appropriate for the Valentine season—in fact, he devotes his major piece to a heart theme; a wall quilt with detachable stuffed cotton hearts. "The quilt is not the result of a quilting bee," Don answered to a question about his method of quilting the full size piece. "I did it on a sewing machine. It wasn't easy. With the attachments, it has a 3-D effect."

Textiles and ceramics comprise the major portion of this senior show, with one large self portrait added for variety. He also has included a bird cage with small clay and feather birds which he calls doo dads.

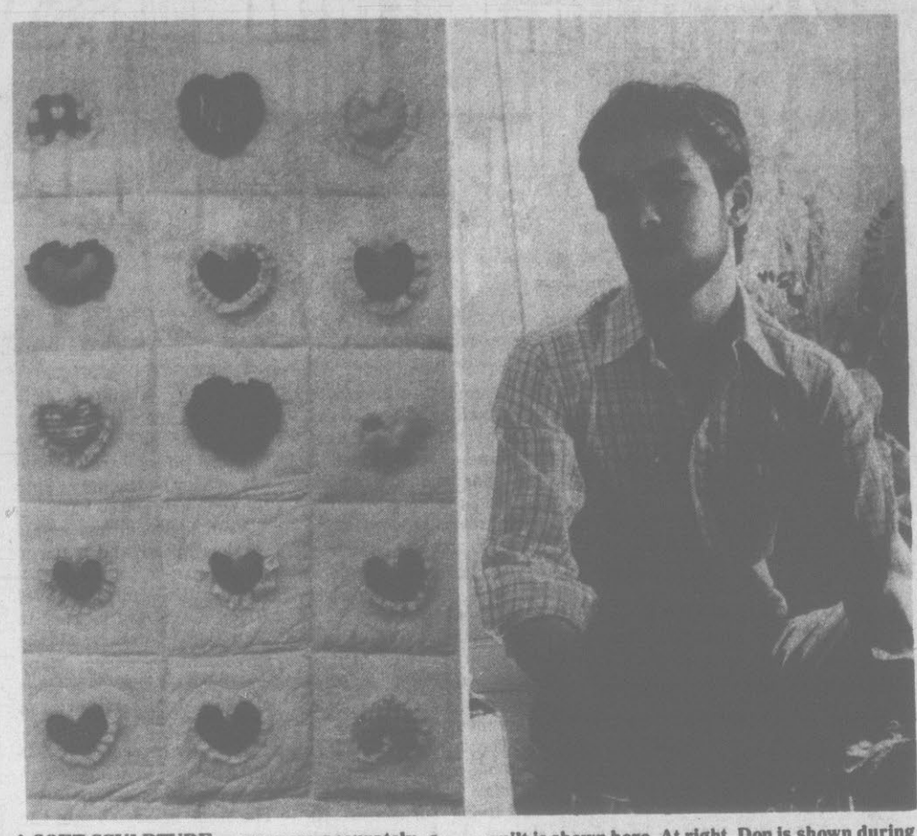

"I'm a doo dad freak, a flamingo freak and a white flower freak," Don remarked, explaining his inclusion in the show of small, playful clay objects; of pink flamingos in several ceramic designs; and a liberal use of potted white hyacinths

Don's pottery is mostly functional, bowls, vases, heavy tiles. There's also a few pieces, like his long-stemmed, off-balance tulip drinking cups that are functional but at first glance wouldn't seem to be.

"In most of my work, I control the use of glazes." Control is an apt word to describe the designs he's used in a number of pieces, a remarkable sureness of hand in placing bands of color both insde and outside a number of these pieces.

Textile Company Announces Student Design Competition

An Americana Textile Design Competition among art students from more than 500 nationwide colleges and art schools as part of the celebration of the Bicentennial Year has been announced by Robert E. Coleman, chairman of Riegel Textile Corporation of Greenville, S.C.

The competition, which will be open to nonprofessional students only, will run until May 1, 1975.

"Our company is offering this competition as a stimulant to good textile design by the young designers of the future and in recognition of the textile industry, which is one of our nation's oldest and was a forerunner of the 19th century industrialization of the country.

"Our theme will be Americana—its past, present, or future. To broaden the competition as much as possible, entrants are not limited to the 1776 era, but to any design which reflects the American spirit. Additionally, students need not know textile printing or Jacquard weaving processes in detail. Designs, however, must be generally adaptable to textile production. Entries will be judged for concept, imagination, and appropriateness to the theme, rather than on technical knowledge or rendering ability," Coleman noted.

Serving on the jury to judge the competition will be Bill Blass, fashion designer; Jack Lenor Larsen, textile designer specializing in upholstery and similar fabrics; and Christian Rohlfing, administrator and curator of collections of the Cooper-Hewitt Design Museum of the Smithsonian Institution.,

Competition will be held in three categories: sports apparel—fabrics for shirts, blouses, skirts, or jeans; home furnishings—upholstery or drapery fabrics; and kitchen and dining textiles—dish towels or tablecloth and napkin sets for home or restaurant use. An entrant may submit one design in each category.

In each category, 10 honor awards of $100 and a $1,000 prize for first will be awarded, and a grand prize of an additional $1,000 to further the student's art studies will be given for the best design submitted in the overall competition.

Arts Council Seeks Artists, Musicians

For the fifth consecutive year the North Carolina Arts Council and the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges will provide nine-month visiting residencies for artists in communities throughout the state.

Currently 37 visiting artists involved with music, the visual arts and theater are employed by 37 community colleges and technical institutes in the state.

Applications are now being taken at the Arts Council office in Raleigh for people interested in residencies during the coming year.

Activities of the residencies include but are not limited to concerts, productions, lecture demonstrations, master classes, workshops, exhibitions, visits to elementary and secondary schools, exchange programs with other artists in the program and activities for churches and clubs.

The artists are not asked to teach formal classes at the colleges or institutes as the idea of the program is to expose the art form of the visitor to the citizens of the counties taking part in the program.

Qualifications are a master's degree or equivalent training in the field.

The deadline for applications is March 1. Application forms and formation can be obtained from Alan Butler, North Carolina Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

"SKYLINE" REQUIRES BEAUTIFUL VIEW

Skyline

By Jerry Bishop

The "Skyline" is probably one of the most convertible, adjustable homes ever designed. The second level, a complete two-bedroom unit, can function as an entire home, or it can expand to include the lower level for extra bedroom space, utility area and family room. If your family is small, the lower level can function as a shop, an office or other home business. If your family, however, is large, the lower level is perfectly designed to incorporate into the living space of the upper level.

A massive carport--14' by 26'--doubles as a patio and includes an out-door built-in barbecue to add to the pleasure of outdoor living. A staircase provides access to sundeck and balcony of the upper level.

On the lower leve, the foyer, complete with closet, directs traffic into one of two rooms--perhaps a bedroom and a family room--or into a compartmented bath. At the rear of this level is a utility area and second and third closet. A inside stairway leads to the second level, or one can exit to the patio-carport.

The living room spans more than 25 feet of the second level and is surrounded on two sides by a wide sundeck and balcony. A woodburning fireplace further enhances the design of the home.

The living turns into an L-shaped room when the dining area is added. The dining area is lighted by four windows spilling natural sunlight into the room.

The kitchen is open to the dining area and is built in a U-shape, which provides maximum convenience and step-saving. A built-in dishwasher is included, as well as a pantry area. The hallway directs traffic into one of two bedrooms or into the compartmented bath.

Each bedroom has ample window space and a large closet.

Thus the upper level active rooms are located to take full advantage of the surrounding scenery. Many window and door openings provide natural light and access to the out-of-doors. The lower level exterior is particularly inviting, with stone as the major element. The stone is carried into the upper level with the chimney and combines with vertical siding to create a natural appearance commensurate with lovely settings.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We had a painter in a year or so ago. Before he painted two of our rooms, he patched the plaster walls in a few places. I watched while he did it and saw that he used plaster of paris for the patching. I now have some plaster patching of my own to do. The instructions I read in a magazine said to use spackling compound. Why didn't the article recommend plaster of paris if that's what the professionals use?

A. — Plaster of paris is used by many painters because it dries very quickly. Most non-professionals consider this a handicap. Some persons delay the drying of plaster of paris by mixing it with spackling compound or one of the other types of plaster patching material. I have found no difficulty with any type or brand of patching compound. The important thing is to follow the directions on the container, since they apply specifically to that product. In all cases, it is vital to wet down the plaster opening before doing the patching.

Q. — How can the old paint be removed from the oustide of a brick house? Someone painted the brickwork years ago long before we owned the house. A neighbor's house, exactly the same as the one we have, looks much prettier than ours. It still has the original brick, unpainted and without a covering of any kind.

A. — Removing the paint from an all-brick house is too difficult a job for the average person. It should be done professionally, preferably by sandblasting.

THE IMPACT OF EXTERNAL APPEAL

The external appearance of your home has an important impact on potential buyers. You will never get a prospect interested unless he stops to look. Don't rely on the inside of your home "selling" it. Your prospect may be "turned off" before he reaches the front door. So look at the exterior with a critical eye.

Give the house a fresh coat of paint if needed. Replace any broken or cracked windows. Replace loose shingles. Fix the fence. Keep the lawn mowed and the shrubs trimmed to give your house that "well-cared-for" look. Make sure your screen or storm door is in top shape and your wooden door is inviting with a fresh coat of paint or varnish. It is not uncommon to see a hundred dollars worth of improvements and some elbow grease increase the value of a house over a thousand dollars.

Put yourself in the buyer's shoes. He is looking for charm, comfort, location and a bargain. Give him the best show for the money.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Squeaks in wooden stairs can be eliminated without any prior knowledge of carpentry.

So there won't be any misunderstandings, the three basic parts of a stair are the treads, risers and stringers. The treads are the horizontal parts on which you walk. The risers are the vertical boards under the treads. Stringers are the heavy wooden members on the sides, to which both treads and risers are attached.

Since the squeaks almost always occur when a partly loosened tread rubs against the top of a riser, the solution is simply to tighten the joint. Assuming that the underside of the stairway is not accessible, the first step is to determine whether the joint in the squeaky area is of the simple butt variety or is a groove-and-rabbet joint. To make this determination, look at the top of the riser at the point where it joins the tread resting on it. Sometimes there may be a piece of molding there. Pry it off carefully.

You may be able to tell immediately what kind of joint is there. If not, insert a knife blade upward along the riser into the tread. If the blade slides upward, there is a groove-and-rabbet joint. If it meets solid wood, it is a butt joint.

With a butt joint, you merely nail it back into place. Have someone stand on the tread while you drive two 8 or 10-penny finishing nails through the tread into the riser. Hammer the nails into place at angles so that they enter the wood in the shape of a V. If necessary, do this with two sets of nails.

With a groove-and-rabbet joint, drive wooden wedges upward into the loose joint where your knife blade had been inserted. Use as small wedges as possible, but if they do not go upward all the way, trim off the part that sticks out.

The same general procedure of tightening the riser-tread joint is followed when the stairway is open underneath, as would be the case in stairs leading to a basement. Have someone walk up and down while you inspect the underside. Using a flashlight and a piece of chalk, mark the points at which there are squeaks. You'll find that, in each case, one piece of wood has come loose from another and that a well-placed nail, screw or wedge will correct the trouble. Common sense will be your guide here, since you will be able to see immediately how the stairway is constructed and what part of it is loose.

A dry lubricant is sometimes recommended as a solution. While it sometimes will silence a squeak when used in a joint, it will be only a question of time before the squeak returns.

Those Arab Oil Billions Go For Variety Of Items

BY MICHAEL KEATS

BEIRUT (UPI) — Saudi Arabia's King Faisal recently bought $756 million worth of American warplanes.

About the same time, Mustafa Mahmoud, who lives in a cave in southern Oman, learned his humble home would soon be within receiving range of a new color television station being built at Salalah on the Urabian Sea.

So the race continued: to make use of the staggering flow of cash into the Middle East and other oil-producing countries resulting from the quadruple increase in oil prices.

Petroleum producers had a surplus last year of more than $60 billion and, by current calculations, are earning $164 million per day more than they can spend.

In the Middle East, which provides two-thirds of all petroleum exports, the accumulation of foreign money produced such mind-boggling figures as an estimated gross national product per capita of $23,000 for Abu Dhabi, $14,000 for Qatar and $13,000 for Kuwait. That would give Abu Dhabi the highest per capita gross national product in the world. The U.S. per capita gross national product for 1974 is estimated at $6,738.

Saudi Arabia has become the third richest country in the world, according to the International Monetary Fund, edging out Japan in international reserves. It is surpassed only by the United States and West Germany.

The oil profits have not filtered down to the likes of Mustafa Mahmoud, but they are on the way.

In Oman and elsewhere in the Middle East housing schemes are mushrooming along with schools, hospitals and road networks. Color television is found everywhere along the Persian Gulf.

Kuwait now provides free education from kindergarten to university. Students get free meals, books and transport.

All medical services are free in Kuwait and, if treatment is not available locally, a patient is sent to London—all expenses paid.

The Middle East rulers also have not stinted in buying arms.

In addition to his latest deal for U.S. jet fighters, King Faisal contracted to buy $860 million worth of arms from France. He has spent a total of $2 billion equipping his armed forces with the most modern military weapons within the past two years.

Kuwait bought a modest $30 million worth of U.S. arms, but Oman, plagued by guerrilla wars for more than a decade, allocated 40 per cent of its budget for defense.

The Shah of Iran poured billions of dollars into contracts for the latest and most sophisticated weapons in his drive to become the protector of the Persian Gulf.

Iran budgeted $38 billion this year for an impressive program of oil and gas exploitation, harbor construction, nuclear and thermal power plants, hydroelectric projects, expanded railway services and new shipyards and airports.

The government announced subsidies for food, clothing, health, education and agriculture, and lavish expansion schemes created jobs at the rate of 1,000 a day, lowering unemployment in Iran to around 1 per cent.

In Algeria, thousands of persons are engaged in planting a green belt of trees across the southern wastelands to halt the northward advance of the Sahara Desert.

Algeria is expanding its natural gas riches by building a large pipeline across the Sahara under the Mediterranean to Italy. Another outlet may link Algeria to Spain and France.

But the Middle East nations share two problems: a lack of facilities and a shortage of trained manpower.

The oil producers invested about $45 billion overseas in the first 10 months of 1974, according to latest figures from the Executive Commission of the European Common Market.

The Commission said $16 billion to $17 billion went into the Eurodollar market, with other investments mainly in Western Europe and the United States.

French officials said oil-producing nations apparently bought considerable stock on the Paris stock market, boosting share values by a sudden 20 per cent.

France, however, is firmly opposed to the sale of large blocks of industrial stock to foreign investors. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said he would not allow such dealings in French companies as the Iranian purchase of a minority interest in the Krupp steelworks of Germany.

The French did make an exception for the Shah in allowing Iran to become the first oil nation to gain access to its nuclear technology.

Iran agreed to put up $1 billion and bought a minority share in the Eurodif consortium, which is building a $1.7 billion uranium enrichment plant at Tricastin in southeast France.

While banks and investment houses are hungry for loose petrodollars, no country has laid down specific policy on Arab investments.

Kuwait bought 14 per cent of Germany's Daimler-Benz car firm in December, but when the sale of a further block of shares would have given the Middle East 51 per cent of the company, the German government moved to halt the deal.

The Middle East invested an estimated $11 billion in the United States last year, according to the European Economic Community commission. But when Kuwait and Iran offered to finance the Lockheed and Grumman aircraft firms to get preferential access to military planes, they met U.S. government opposition.

In England, the giant Lonrho company sold Kuwait a 15 per cent stake in the firm and earmarked most of this investment for projects in the Moslem world.

The oil producers themselves moved cautiously into the loan market to get rid of some of their cash.

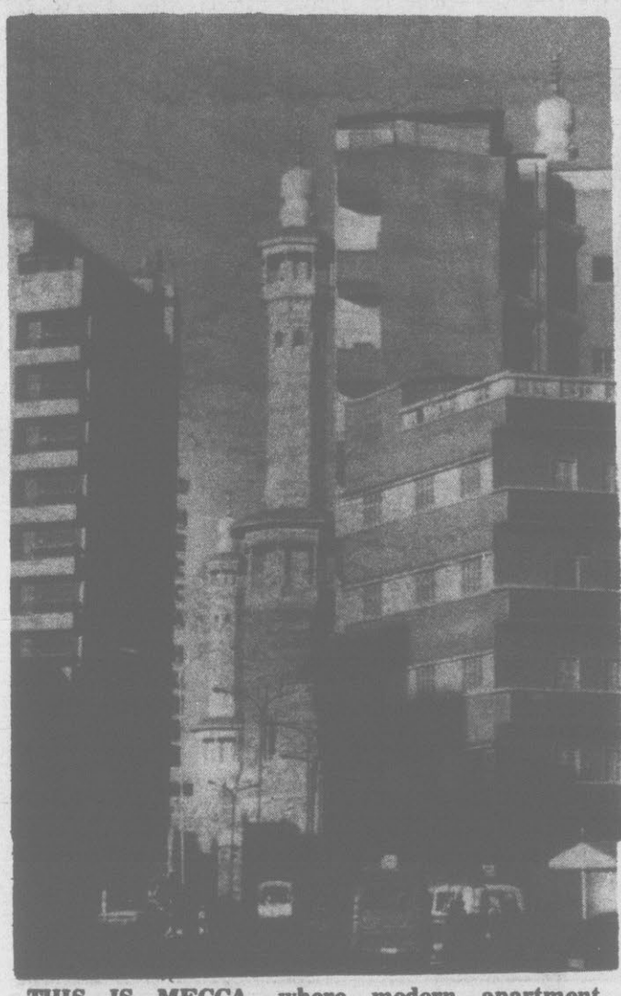

Nigeria granted its first loan to the World Bank recently for $240 miplion, repayable in 10 installments beginning in 1980 at an interest rate of 8 per cent.

Most Middle East funds are channeled through agencies such as the Kuwait Fund for Arab Development, the Islamic Bank of Saudi Arabia, and the multinational Arab Fund for Social and Economic Development.

The Kuwaiti fund, with a working capital of $3.4 billion, is the best established. Its recent deals have included loans to build a power station in Jordan, an irrigation scheme in the Sudan, and a fishing port in Tunisia. It has helped Egypt in reconstruction work on the Suez Canal and expansion of the Abu Qir gas fields.

Some experts believe that Arab wealth, despite its use in huge arms purchases, might lead to stabilization of the Middle East because of a reluctance on the part of the Arabs to relinquish through war their newly acquired economic "have" status.

"Time," said a Lebanese newspaper, "is on the side of the Arab."

Politics Is Portugal's New Participation Sport

By NAT GIBSON

LISBON (UPI) — Customs officials stopped a Portuguese driving across the border recently and found the trunk of his car stuffed with escudos. They carted him off to jail as a "Fascist."

In Lisbon, the foreign manager of an international hotel was refused entry to his office by workers who accused him of being a Fascist and told him he must leave the country within five days.

"You're nothing but one of those new Communists," she told him in the argument that ensued.

These incidents reflect an essential element of social and political life in this country searching for a philosophy. If a taxi driver overcharges a Portuguese today, he is branded a Fascist. If he is impolite to the next passenger, he is called a Communist.

There are also good restaurants and Fascist restaurants, pro-revolution shops and Fascist shops.

For a visitor, recognizing a Fascist restaurant is easy. It's empty and the prices are reasonable because the owner is afraid to raise them, lest he draw public attention and condemnation to himself.

The ideologically pure restaurants are under no such compunction. Under Portugal's 30 per cent inflation rate, their prices have been skyrocketing with hardly a murmur from their clientele.

"Prices don't just go up 10 per cent here any more," one businessman said. "They double or triple, but it's the price we must pay for the revolution."

The name-calling and labeling spills into the formal political arena.

The Maoists accuse the Communists of being Fascists. Communists say the Socialists are Fascists. Socialists charge the Maoists are Fascists, and the left-of-center Portuguese Democratic party says everyone is either a Communist or a Fascist unless he belongs to the PPD.

Politics have become the biggest participation sport since the April 25 coup toppled the right-wing government that ruled Portugal for 48 years.

In the first heady days, 53 parties sprouted on the political scene.

Since then, this figure has been pruned, but new groups are constantly surfacing and disappearing.

Indicative of this ebb and flow was the national convention held by one party a few weeks ago.

It plastered Lisbon's walls with posters announcing the event, but drew such a small crowd that the only official business was a motion to disband the party. It passed unanimously.

To an outsider, some of the political machinations seem slightly ludicrous, but the Portuguese take them seriously. Any new poster or pronouncement appearing on the capital's walls quickly draws crowds of readers and politics is on everyone's lips.

"We have a lot of lost time to catch up with and very little time to do it," one PPD leader said. "We have to break out of the vacuum of the past 50 years."

Daytona 500 Live On TV

Last year, 85,000 spectators witnessed Richard Petty of Randleman, N. C. zoom to his record fifth Daytona 500 victory. This year's running of the 17th annual Daytona classic will be witnessed by millions as national television invades the world of NASCAR (National Association for Stock Car Racing), to televise live for the first time a stock car race.

Auto racing is as old as the automobile itself, and through the years, it has evolved into various specialized types: stock car racing, road racing (on a course that simulates a country road), drag racing and Indianapolis style. Approximately 40 million spectators pay to attend motor racing in the United States and stock car racing accounts for more than half of that figure. More unusual is the fact that the appeal for stock-car racing has been virtually concentrated in the southeastern part of the country. This is rapidly changing, however, as the rest of the country and even some foreign countries find stock car racing increasing in popularity. Yet, it is in Dixie that the heartbeat of stock-car racing is loudest.

The origins of stock-car racing go back, somewhat, to moonshining, a very profitable business founded upon the envasion of alcohol taxes. The delivery of moonshine (corn whiskey) from clandestine stills to various city outlets provided a type of training ground for future race drivers. They became quite proficient in high speed envasion during police chase by learning and refining their skills as drivers and understanding the aspects of road-holding, stability, endurance, and acceleration. Most important, they developed a sense for split-second timing and decision making, because their errors were occupational hazards that either put them in jail or in a grave.

Soon each hill and valley had its own hero driver and master mechanic. As parochial bragging increased, the informal race of the local boys evolved.

Moonshining, certainly, was not the only souce of stock-car racing. During the nineteen thirties and forties an automobile became the most prized possession of many a Southern family. With a lack of things to do and money to do them with, a young man could at least tinker with his car or hang around watching others doing it. Soon, stock-car racing developed on country roads. No prizes were awarded, maybe a small wager and a large amount of pride and satisfaction.

In time, more formal races were instituted at county fairs with paid attendance and cash purses. There were no garages or pits. A mechanic would simply hang a block and tackle on a sturdy tree limb to lift an engine. Thus evolved the expression "shade-tree mechanic".

During the forties, stock car racing was a shoddy sport that had promoters cheating drivers by running off with gate receipts and lying to fans about what drivers would appear. Cheating was abundant and rules chaotic.

Not until 1948 did a race driver and promoter named William Henry Getty (Big Bill) France introduce order, honesty, respectability, consistent rules, and business management into the sport by founding NASCAR, which he based on Daytona Beach. This company is now the dominant figure in stock-car racing and is even stronger than the National Football League in its domian.

PETTY'S NO. 43 — In stock car racing circles, Number 43 can't mean anything but Richard Petty, five-time Grand National Champion and one of the finest drivers ever to sit behind a wheel. He'll be trying for an unprecedented third straight victory (he's won five times already) in the 1975 Daytona "500" which will be televised live and exclusively by ABC Sports Sunday, February 16 (3-4:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

The very expression "stock car" is brilliant merchandising and yet an apparent mislable. It implies that the automobile on the track is the same as the one you purchase from your local dealers' showroom and drive to work.

"Stock-appearing" would provide a more accurate description for the only similarity between the race car and the passenger car are brand names and body contours. The racing stock car is a specialized hand built masterpiece costing about $25,000 and more if you are planning on winning.

Stock-car racing is the most prosperous and most popular form of automobile racing because it offers the fan vivid identification factors. There is interest in the cars because the brand names are the same as those of their own automobile. There is interest in the drivers because they are folk heroes and first name neighbors.

When fans speak of "Richard" or "Bobby" or "David", they are referring to Richard Petty, Bobby Allison and David Pearson, the sport's three million dollar winners.

In North Carolina, everyone knows the Petty family from Level Cross just outside of Randleman, N. C. between High Point and Asheboro. Although Petty, a true super-star with four national championships to his credit, has achieved national fame and fortune, he is still Richard the country boy who sticks to his business enterprises and has a smile for everyone. Success hasn't ruined Richard, and the fact that he is so loved by his neighbors and fellow Carolinians says it best.

Stock car drivers are not glamorous world travelers like the Grand Prix jet set. They are family men in their 30's and late 20's. They bring their families to the races around the circuit when school and circumstances permit.

Most attend Protestant churches regularly and many are quite active in church and community work. They support a tiny mobile chapel that travels from one race to the next. Its minister known as Brother Bill, also leads the quiet prayer that concludes the private driver's meeting just before a race.

As the Daytona 500 is broadcast live to living rooms throughout the United States via the magic box, a new era of stock-car racing fans will be born as they marvel at the driving skills and the excitement that has enchanted Southerners for several decades. As for the people in the South — heck — we're all going to Daytona this year but few will leave the house.

Week's Top RatedShows

NBC's "Police Woman" series was the nation's most popular evening television show last week according to A. C. Nielsen ratings figures.

A new NBC series, "Archer" didn't fare well in its premiere last Thursday.

It was watched by 27 per cent of the viewing audience. Networks generally consider 30 per cent indicative of success.

The ratings said the 20 most-watched programs Jan. 27 - Feb. 2 were: "Police Woman," NBC; "All in the Family," CBS; "Sanford and Son" and "Chico and the Man," both NBC; "The Jeffersons" and "Kojak", both CBS; "Rockford Files," NBC; "The Waltons" and "Mannix," both CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC; "Mary Tyler Moore," "Rhoda," "Hawaii Five-O," "Cannon" and "The Sullivan Years," all CBS; "Emergency," NBC; "Maude," CBS; "Police Story," NBC; "Bob Newhart" and a "Charlie Brown" special, both CBS.

College Fans Of 'Howdy Doody'

"The college students of today are the Howdy Doody fans of yesterday," according to Robert E. (Buffalo Bob) Smith who hosted the popular television program from 1947 through 1960 and guest stars in "The Howdy Show" episode to air on ABC-TV's "Happy Days," Tuesday, Feb. 18.

Present Story Of 'Authentic Genius'

The play, written by Jerome Alden and produced for the Broadcasting & Film Commission of the National Council of Churches by the NBC Television Religious Programs Unit, centers on the climactic moment in Edward's life when, as pastor of his church in Northhampton, Mass., in 1750, his congregation votes to expel him from his pulpit. The charge: his requirements of a committed Christian were too embracing; requiring that each moment of a Christian's life be a reflection of his commitment, rather than simple attendance at church services.

Edwards is said by some contemporary theologians to be the first, authentic genius to be produced in the Colonies.

Featured in the cast are Lee Richardson as Jonathan Edwards; Rita Gam as his wife, Sarah; and Roy Poole as McKenzie, friend and defender of Edwards in his confrontation with his congregation. Others in the company of players are Clarence Felder as Joseph Hawley; and Addison Powell as Major Seth Pomeroy.

DECORAMA

By

R.H. McLawhorn, Jr. Ray Rouse

BEDROOM COMFORT

Whether you are decorating a bedroom for the first time as a new bride, or simply redoing one you have used for ages, a sound decorating plan is invaluable. This means a plan that includes all those hidden comfort elements, as well as a room's first-glance good looks. Of course, a serene and pleasant decorative scheme is important, but don't overlook some of the less obvious ingredients. Lighting should underscore the decor, yet provide total comfort of vision. Textures such as those underfoot should be pleasing to the touch, and window shades should insure darkening effects.

For true bedroom comfort and beauty, consider the luxury of wall to wall carpeting. We have the color and type for your decor. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

CREDENTIALS

Charles Strouse and Lee Adams, writers of the TV "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman" score, are the composers of such Broadway musicals as "Bye Bye Birdie," "Golden Boy" and "Applause."

'Oliver' On Home Screen As Sunday Night Special

"Oliver!," the smash-hit movie musical that earned five Academy Awards — including Best Picture of the Year — comes to television for the first time as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie Special" on the ABC Television Network, Feb. 16, 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Judith Crist called the new version of the all-family Dickens classic "big and bright and right out of never-never land, with some sparkle and some wit nowhere an insult to your intelligence. And that combo, let me tell you, is all too hard to get these days."

The leading Dickens denizens of slum and salon are played by Ron Moody as Fagin (Time magazine said he "makes the beaky, sneaky old vulture a tragicomic creature whose greatest thievery is that of the film"), Oliver Reed as Bill Sikes, Mark Lister as Oliver, Shani Wallis as Nancy, Harry Secombe as Mr. bumble and Jack Wild as The Artful Dodger (Wild and Moody were both nominated for Oscars).

Director Carol Reed won an Oscar as Best Director for his screen translation of this story of a poor but honest boy who falls into the palpably dishonest hands of a professional thief. Fagin, who turns boys into menaces, teaches young Oliver Twist to pick a pocket or two, but a gentle-hearted gentleman catches the lad, has him arrested, and then decides to rehabilitate the boy.

The wretched Bill Sikes, as venomous a vallain as ever there was, cannot allow this — Oliver knows too much about the boy bandits, and just might be rehabilitated into telling all — so Bill sets out to drag the lad back to the gutter.

MUSICAL'S STARS — Jack Wild is the Artful Dodger (l), instructing Mark Lester — Oliver — in the wily ways of street-life in "Oliver!" the Oscar-winning movie version of Dickens' classic full-family tale making its television premiere as "A Sunday Night Movie Special" on Channel 3-5-12.

'Caribe' Series Will Premiere

"Caribe," an action-adventure television series to be filmed for the most part outside the continental U.S.A., premieres Monday evening, Feb. 17, from 10 to 11 on ABC-TV and seen on Ch. 3-5-12. Although the base of operation for "Caribe" is Miami, Florida, about 75 per cent of the filming is centered on such West Indies locations as Puerto Rico, Nassau, the Virgin Islands and other Caribbean locales.

In addition to new backgrounds, there's also a new team of TV stars — Stacy Keach and Carl Franklin — who will function as a Caribbean Force to fight crime from Florida all the way south to Venezuela. It's a big job for both men.

Cher Bows In Her New Series Sunday

Cher bows in her new weekly music-and-comedy series, "Cher," with the premiere guest-starring Tatum O'Neal in her television debut, Wayne Rogers of 'M a s h ," and special guest star Raquel Welch, Sunday, Feb. 16, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS and seen on Channel 9-11.

From a big music-and-dance production number of "Top Hat" – complete with white tie and tails for Cher, Miss O'Neal, Rogers and Miss Welch – to the introduction of a new comedy character, the less-than-sympathetic complaint-department lady who fends off Rogers when he tries to return a broken toaster – the premiere of the "Chere" series showcases the varied talents of the glamorous singer-comedienne as she makes her solo series bow.

Musically, Cher performs "You're Nobody 'Till Somebody Loves You," "Long Train Runnin' " and "Love the One You're With," sings "Let Me Be There" in a duet with Rogers, and agrees in a song with Miss O'Neal that "Girls Are Smarter."

In a comedy sketch, Cher appears as Donna Jean Brodine, the pitch lady (a character she originates in her special), with another once-in-a-lifetime-mail-order offer.

Miss O'Neal, who won an Academy Award for her performance with her father, Ryan O'Neal, in the motion picture "Paper Moon," consults a divorce lawyer (Rogers) about her short-lived young marriage. Miss Welch, who starred in her own special, "Really Raquel," last season on the Network, causes a commotion when she drops in at Kenny's (Rogers Coffee Shop and meets the ever-tasteful Laverne (Cher). Miss Welch also sings a solo, "Feel Like Makin' Love."

PERRY'S GUESTS — Joining Perry Como in his third special of the season, "Como Country . . . Perry and His Nashville Friends," at the new Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tenn., to be broadcast Monday, February 17 (8:30-9:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV, are country-music stars (top, l.-r.) Chet Atkins, Loretta Lynn and Donna Fargo; and (bottom) Danny Davis, Charley Pride and Charlie Rich.

Perry Como To Blend Voice With Nashville

Perry Como goes "down home" for the first time to blend his voice with the Nashville Sound in his third special of the season, "Como Country. . Perry and His Nashville Friends," a concert of country music at the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tenn., on Monday, Feb. 17, 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., on CBS and seen on Channel 9-11.

The "Nashville friends" joining Como for the hour of music are Chet Atkins, Donna Fargo, Loretta Lynn, Charley Pride, Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass and special guest star Charlie Rich, all all-stars in the country music field.

Grammy Award Winner Atkins, who is also a member of the Country Music Hall of Fame, has recorded 48 successful albums and has appeared in concert with numerous groups from Mother Maybelle Carter at the Grand Ole Opry to Arthur Fiedler's Boston Pops, in addition to doing concert tours all over the world. On the special, he will be accompanied by Floyd Cramer on piano and Boots Randolph on sax, both of them also top country music stars.

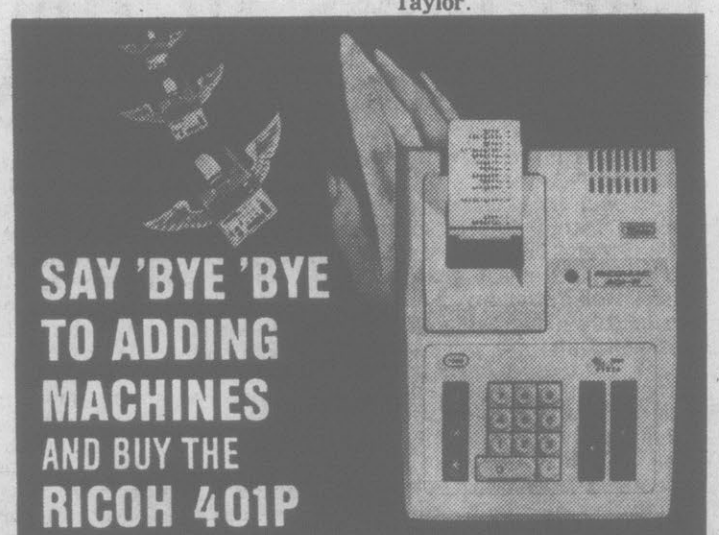

Donna Fargo, a former English teacher, made the grade as a singer by composing and recording the "gold" — or million-selling — record "Happiest Girl in the Whole U.S.A." This winner of the 1973 Grammy Award as the year's best female country vocalist is also known for such other songs as "Funny Face," another million-seller which she wrote and sang to fame.

Loretta Lynn is the first woman ever selected Entertainer of the Year by the Country Music Association. A native Kentuckian, she has cut more than 20 albums that have appeared on numerous network television programs and gives approximately 200 concerts a year.

Charley Price, the first black singer to perform as a headliner at the Grand Ole Opry (January 1967), is a three-time Grammy Award winner whose recordings include 12 gold albums.

Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass, a Grammy Award-winning group which received a Country Music Association Award four years in succession, was the first country music act to be featured in a major supper room in Las Vegas. The Brass has also appeared on television with such headliners as Johnny Cash and Glen Campbell.

Charlie Rich is another Grammy Award winner who was voted Entertiner of the Year in 1974 by the CMA, which also presented him with the Best Album of the Year Award for "A Very Special Love Song."

Jimmy Walker Is Enjoying Success

Jimmie Walker says he's making up for lost time, meaning the years when he was just another tall, skinny, frustrated college kid, bowling over his fellow students with his comedy stuff and longing futilely for the big applause and money he thought professional recognition would bring him.

Whether he's performing as J.J. On "Good Times," broadcast Tuesdays, 8:00 to 8:30 p.m., of CBS-TV, or doing his stand up comedy routines in nightclubs and on television variety shows and college campuses, he feels he can't move fast enough to make up for that 'lost' time. He hopes eventually to establish himself as the number-one stand-up comic in the country.

"I'm a comedian," he says, "but I've never considered myself to be an actor." Nonetheless, since "Good Times" premiered on the Network, Walker has become the 'Sleeper' hit of the show and a skilled comic actor, as well.

Walker admits he wasn't the funniest kid on his bock in New York City's South Bronx, but the funnier kids just didn't have his ambition to make it big. His first goal was to be a disc jockey. He was for a time, then he went back to school.

At City College of New York, he took every opportunity to try out his own comedy material before his classmates. Each time he was asked by his professors to answer a question, he came up with an instant comedy routine. And all his essays, oral and written, were about comedians. His performances were a success with his fellow students but duds with his professors, who resented his using the classroom as a comedy showcase.

Filmed Story Of 'The Unadoptable'

Helen Doss' life has been crowded with children and with love. And, recently, she spent a month watching a significant and inspiring part of that full life pass before her eyes as she served as technical advisor for a motion picture made for television.

The film, "The Family Nobody Wanted," an ABC Televsion Network "Wednesday Movie of the Week" airing Feb. 19, 8:30 to 10:00 p.m., on Ch. 3-5-12, stars Shirley Jones as Helen Doss, who with her husband Carl (played by James Olson), adopted 12 racially-mixed children in the years immediately following World War II.

"The Family Nobody Wanted" has received a National Education Association endorsement, the first time a made-for-TV prime time movie has been so honored.

"We were one of the first couples to adopt children of various races," recalled Helen, a pleasant-looking, middle-aged woman. "These children were considered unadoptable. Carl and I always felt we had hearts with a surplus of love and what better way to give this love than to children who had really never known affection."

After the 12th child was added to the family, Helen wrote a book, "The Family Nobody Wanted," in 1954. It was an immediate best-seller and today is in its 24th printing and is required reading in many schools around the country. The film is adapted from this book and producer William Kayden asked Helen to oversee her own story.

"This story is mainly a quiet drama of love," pointed out Helen, who today lives in Tucson, Arizona. "It covers a period of several months in our lives in 1947 when bigotry and misunderstanding nearly drove us away from a small town where Carl had come to take over the ministry in a local church."

At the time, some called the Doss' adoption efforts an "experiment."

ADOPTIVE FAMILY — Shirley Jones and James Olson play a couple who think they have trouble as the parents of nine adopted children — but their real troubles begin when they adopt three more in "The Family Nobody Wanted," a true story on ABC-TV's "Wednesday Movie of the Week" Wednesday, February 19 (8:30-10 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

"Not to us it wasn't," said Helen emphatically. "It was rather an experience. It was really our family. We wanted children and I couldn't have them. So we adopted and I feel we paved the way for other couples."

One day Shirley Jones asked Helen if she felt it was all worth it.

"I honestly never gave that a thought," she replied.

Doris Day Appearing In Rare TV Spcial

By CHARLE PIKE
PFA staff Writer
Los Angeles

Doris Day stars in her first television special in four years Wednesday, Feb. 19, in the hour-long "Doris Day Today," airing on CBS-TV from 9:00 to 10:00 p.m. and seen on Ch. 9-11.

Miss Day appears in dances, comedy sketches and songs with her guests John Denver, Tim Conway, Rich Little and The Lockers.

"We have a lot of fun," Doris says in discussing the special. "I do 'Day By Day' with John and then he does 'Follow Me.' In his recording a girl sings the counter melody and he said, 'I'd like to do that with you.' We thought he was going to do 'Country Road,' but he asked me to sing 'Follow Me' with him and I said fine.

"Then I do a comedy sketch with Tim, and let me tell you, that was unbelievable trying to do. Tim's such a funny man and just a darling. I really had to keep him out of the rehearsal hall because he's so funny and the more I laughed the worse my voice got and I had to sing.

"When he appeared on the set I was constantly laughing from this crazy nut.

"Rich of course is probably the foremost impersonator around these days, and we do a sketch from the motion pictures I've done with such leading men as Frank Sinatra, Clark Gable, James Cagney and Jack Lemmon. And Rich does his impersonataions of each one of them.

"I hadn't realized that it had been so long since I'd done a special. I don't keep track of years too well, and all of a sudden there I was rehearsing for this one.

"It was fun and it showed me how much I enjoy singing, and as a result I think I'll be recording an album sometime this year. My son Terry works at RCA now and he's urged me to record so I probably will."

'Trapper John' In FBI Agent's Role

By CHARLES PIKE
PFA Staff Writer
Los Angeles

Wayne Rogers sheds his "M-A-S-H" fatigues for the suit and tie of an FBI agent in CBS-TV's "Attack on Terror," the second in a series of special films entitled "The FBI Story" airing as a two-parter Feb. 20 and 21.

Rogers portrays the special FBI agent who investigated the killing of three civil rights workers in Mississippi on June 21, 1964.

"This film is not only based on an actual incident, but a lot of it was taken right from the court records," Wayne explains. "The testimony at the trial and the information obtained from informant's stories and their participation is absolutely accurate."

The investigation by the FBI ultimately led to the victim of seven Ku Klux Klansmen. Also starring with Rogers is Dabney Coleman, Ed Flanders and Andrew Duggan.

Rogers admits that he as hesitant in accepting the role primarily because, "From an actor's point of view, you think of the FBI guys as having little or no personality. For a long time they all wore white shirts, they dressed in a certain way with dark gray suits and so forth, and their personalities are totally submerged.

"So as an actor that sort of takes away any of the juice you might want to try and pump into him. That's where my reluctance was, but after going down there and meeting with the guys I felt much better.

"The secret is adapting to the personality they really do have. For instance," Wayne explains, "one of the things these guys always do is tug at their trousers at the waistline. I never knew why, and I found out it's because they've got their gun there and so it's a very specific characteristic. So I used that in doing the role."

Lily will be seen in her highly regarded and popular characterizations of Ernestine, the telephone operator, and the 5½ year old Edith Anne, and will introduce new characters as well.

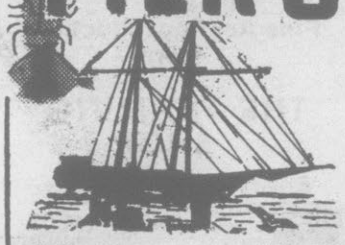

The Lily Tomlin Repertory Company — Dr. Demento, Valri Bromfield, Bill Zuckert and Lady Rowlands — will also join in the inventive fun. Dr. Demento is the colorful Los Angeles disc jockey, whose offbeat programs are now syndicated nationally.

Man Of Steel Spoofed

Who is faster than a speeding bullet? Who is more powerful than a locomotive? Who can leap tall buildings at a single bound?

It's Superman, man of steel and alter ego of Clark Kent, mild-mannered reporter for the Daily Planet, who falls victim to the nefarious scheme of a mad scientist in "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman," a book musical starring David Wilson in the title role and also starring Lesley Warren, David Wayne, Kenneth Mars, Loretta Swit and Allen Ludden of "Password All Stars."

The broadly played spoof, based on the 1966 Broadway musical, "It's Superman," will be telecast as the first two-hour "Wide World: Special" on the ABC Television Network, Friday, Feb. 21, 11:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Norman Twain, who produced Nicol Williamson's "Hamlet," and Williamson's "Late Show," among numerous other Broadway plays, is the executive producer of "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman," which was produced by Elliot Alexander and directed by Jack Regas. The adaptation for television was written by Romeo Muller based on the musical show by David Newman and Robert Benton.

Original music for the Broadway show is by composer Charles Strouse and lyricist Lee Adams, who have augmented their score with a new song for the telecast — "It's a Swell Country." They also wrote the music for the Broadway hits, "Bye, Bye Birdie" and "Applause."

In "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman," Our Hero incurs the jealousy of Max Mencken (Kenneth Mars), columnist for the Daily Planet, and the envy of Dr. Abner Sedgwick (David Wayne), who ferrets out Superman's only weakness. Lois Lane (Lesley Warren), girl reporter, who is romantically interested in Superman, is also victimized by Sedgwick.

When the City Hall is blown up by Sedgwick's hoodlums, Superman is blamed for not preventing the explosion. He becomes so depressed, he's unable to prevent the kidnapping of Lois who is brought to Sedgwick's lab. There, Sedgwick double-crosses Mencken, with whom he had plotted Superman's demise.

LORETTA SWIT, as Sydney Carlton, discovers the charms of mild-mannered reporter Clark Kent—portrayed by David Wilson—singing "Possibilities" in this scene from "Superman", the television adaptation of the Broadway musical which will be presented as a two-hour "Wide World Special" on ABC-TV Friday, Feb. 21 (11:30-1:30 a.m.)

When Robert Blake had to do a brief imitation of the late Humphrey Bogart for an upcoming episode of his "Baretta" series, he didn't have to screen old Bogart movies to learn how to do it. Blake, who began in show biz at the age of two, had worked with Bogart often, beginning with a bit part as a newsboy who sells a paper to Bogart in "The Treasure of Sierra Madre."

"Paganini Strikes Again," an adventure film from England, will be broadcast on "The CBS Children's Film Festival" Saturday, Feb. 22, 1 to 2 p.m., in color on the CBS Television Network.

When Bill (Philip Bliss) and Mike (Andrew Bowen), two young English schoolboy musicians, are riding in a lift on their way to a music lesson, they hear a gunshot and see two feet in yellow work boots running up the adjoining stairs. They inform the police, learn that a jewelry store has been robbed, and decide to play detective themselves.

They notice that the window cleaner at their school, a man named Raddings (Dudley Sutton), wears yellow boots. Meanwhile, their friend Pitmore (Simon Thompson), Raddings' nephew, finds a hoard of stolen silver at his house and is forced by his uncle to help dispose of it. When Pitmore fails to attend a concert rehearsal, Bill and Mike go to his house and see him carrying some heavy - looking bags. Suspicious, they follow him and a merry chase ensues, ending up at a freight yard where Raddings and his accomplices are loading the silver into a freight car.

The quality has always come through.

Teenage Canoe-Paddler Knew Chatooga's Thrills

Kathy Kennedy, 17, of Bryson City, N. C., was one of several people chosen to paddle the treacherous Chatooga River in Georgia for the "GO" show, to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network Saturday, Feb. 22, 12:30 to 1 p.m. Kathy recounts the experiences she had while making the program.

"'Sure Dad, I'd like to do it.' That was my first reaction when my father asked me if I wanted to be in a TV show. About all he could tell me was, it was an NBC show about kayaking and canoeing and would be filmed on the Vanthala and Chatooga Rivers. The name of the show is "GO." There were six of us in it and I was to paddle a canoe with Butch Terry, a member of the Explorer Post I had been a member of and a longtime paddling friend.

I have been paddling in either a canoe or a kayak for about nine years. Both the Vanthala and Chatooga Rivers are longtime favorites of mine. The Chatooga River was seen by many in the movie "Deliverance." It is located on the Georgia - South Carolina border. The Chatooga is the more difficult of the two rivers and should not be attempted by the inexperienced except as part of a guided raft tour.

The biggest difference I could see in paddling a river for fun and paddling for a camera was that we ran the same rapids two and three times in a row.

On Saturday, the whole crew and everyone working on the show didn't get to the Vanthala until almost noon. When everyone got there we went upriver to what we always call "the first rapid." It took three tries before Butch and I got even a half-good run in the canoe. We had never paddled in a canoe together before. Phil (Miller), director of the show, seemed to be pleased with the tape he was getting of us.

The water level on the Chatooga was about six or eight inches above its normal level. This high water level made a large part of the river unreasonable for an open canoe. We used the canoe on Sunday and again on Tuesday for filming on the rapids we call "Boll Sluice" and "Woodall Shoals." The rest of the time Butch and I helped paddle a raft with a camera mounted in the front for point-of-view shots of the river and the four kayaks also in the show.

The hardest thing I did for the "GO" show was to paddle the rapid we call the "Boll Sluice." At high water levels we ran it down a smooth tongue almost at the bottom. This means the water is circulating around from the top to bottom constantly. If a person or a boat is caught in a hydraulic it can be circulated several times along with the water before being turned loose downstream.

I had decided to run "Boll Sluice" solo because in a canoe with two people the bow tends to dive under water. I paddled it from just behind its centerpoint, because this position gives me the best control for solo paddling.

As I paddled down the entrance to "Boll Sluice" the biggest part of the hydraulic just to the right of where I wanted to run was the thing uppermost in my mind. I oversteered and got stuck on a rock to the left side of the tongue where I wanted to be for the big part of the drop. I had to get out and pull the canoe off the rock and paddle down the drop from there. I came out the bottom of the rapid in good shape except for a canoe half full of water.

The director asked jokingly if I'd do it one more time. My reply was definite: 'I couldn't repeat that one if I wanted to!'"

HOSTS 'GO' — Jon Voight will be narrator for the NBC-TV's "GO" when the program takes viewers to the treacherous Chattooga River in Georgia, Saturday, February 22 (12:30-1 p.m.). Voight will explain the training needed to shoot the rapids of the river where the film "Deliverance" was made.

Old Hotel Runs Into Rock Band

A girl inherits an old rundown hotel, and with the help of her brother and their rock band, strives to return it to its former elegance, in "The Imperial Grand Band," an hour comedy special airing on the ABC Television Network, Saturday, Feb. 22.

Short of cash, but rich in enthusiasm, Sue, her brother, Gary, and the band set out to restore the Imperial Grand Hotel to the luxury establishment it once was. One of their first attempts is to update the entertainment with rock music. But their obstacles are many, including the eccentric, rock music-hating hotel manager and his wife, who have been inherited along with the hotel, and a pressing bank note threatening foreclosure.

SHELLEY SHAKEN

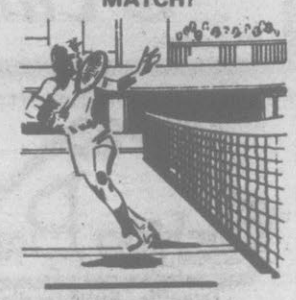

Shelley Winters, who guest - starred on a recent segment of NBC-TV's "Chico and the Man," noted that this was her "first live tape show and it's frightening." She compared it to "doing a play on Broadway complete with butterflies.

Kupchak One To Watch

When the University of North Carolina plays VPI Feb. 17, Monday night, at 8 on Channel 7-9-11, a Tar Heel to watch closely is Mitch Kupchak. This native of Brentwood, N.Y. played on the victorious United States team which won the basketball championship in the World University Games at Moscow two summers ago.

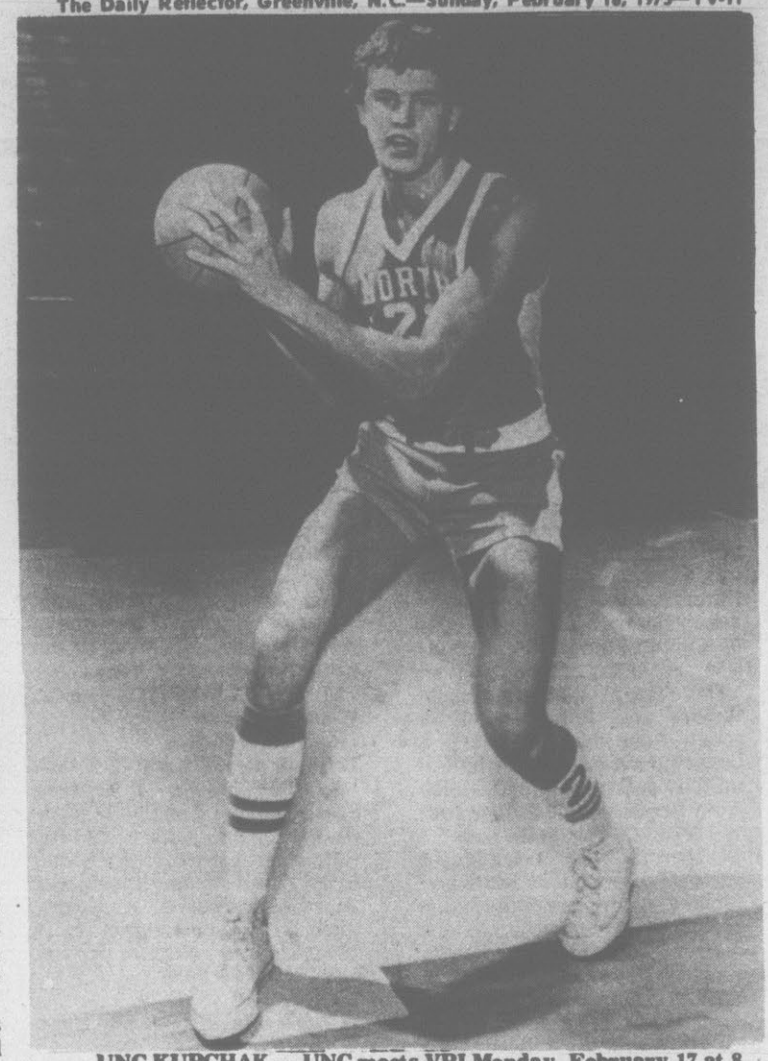

Mitch, who's missed only one varsity game since his freshman year at Carolina, could well become one of the top forecourt players in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

This tough rebounder averaged 10.7 points per game last year and also pulled down 191 rebounds. Thus far, his season-high was 20 points in a victorious trip to Charlottesville, and his career high was 24 as a freshman against Wake Forest.

One of his best individual performances came in the finals of the Rainbow Classic as a freshman when he came off the bench to score 16 points and sparked the victory over Louisville.

Regional Pro Basketball Play Feb. 16

The Chicago Bulls play host to the Buffalo Braves, and the Los Angeles Lakers take the court against the Seattle Supersonics in Regional Basketball Association action to be broadcast on the CBS Television Network, Sunday, Feb. 16, from 3:00 to 5:30 p.m.

Brent Mushburger, play by play, and Oscar Robertson, analyst, go court-side for the Bulls-Braves clash from Chicago (Ill.) Stadium. Don Criqui, play by play, and Jerry West, analyst, describe the action between the Lakers and Supersonics from Seattle (Wash.) Center Coliseum.

Steady Jim McMillian, the most accurate shooter on the most accurate-shooting team in the NBA, the Buffalo Braves, is now No. 1 in field goal percentage with .517. The Braves are shooting a torrid .480 from the floor for the season after 51 games. Teammate Bob McAdoo remains the NBA's leading scorer with an average of 33.7 points per game and over two shots a game, fifth best in the league. McAdoo is also blocking over two shots a game, fifth best in that department.

TV's "Cannon" has become internationally famous. Bill Conrad, the series star, recently went to Germany to accept a Bambi Award, and is now in Australia to pick up a Loggia. Both are comparable to our Emmy Award.

Patrick Cassidy, 12-year-old son of Shirley Jones and soon to be ex-husband Jack Cassidy, underwent emergency abdominal surgery recently and is reportedly doing well.

The report that the Jim Brolins and Lee Majors had split apparently was the creation of someone's imagination, and even with solid evidence that there's been no marital split, the source continues to spread the rumor.

"The Thin Man" pilot starring Craig Stevens has been retitled "Nick and Nora."

Robert Fuller, star of NBC's "Emergency," became the father of a son when Patrick Daniel arrived Jan. 14.

Mary Tyler Moore has agreed to do her first TV special since 1969 for CBS.

Mac Davis and his wife, Sarah, took advantage of a week's vacation and drove to the Southern California mountains to ski.

This is the time of the year when the networks began making changes for next Fall, and be prepared for some-shockers.

Gene Kelly To Host Awards

Gene Kelly, long famous as motion picture actor, singer, dancer, choreographer, director and producer, will host the 1975 Entertainment Hall of Fame Awards, to be colorcast live from the Hollywood Palladium Saturday, Feb. 22, on NBC-TV from 10 to 12 midnight, and seen on Ch. 6-7.

The awards will honor those 20th century creators and performers whose lifetime contributions to the lively arts have entertained American audiences and enriched the nation's culture.

The telecast will feature the induction into the Hall of Fame of 10 individuals, voted by the nation's newspaper entertainment editors from among 73 nominees determined by the Entertainment Hall of Fame Foundation's select committee. The concept and objectives of the committee are stated in their motto: "Honoring creators and performers not for what they last did, but for what they did that will last."

Lee Remick Couldn't Resist A Good Script

Lee Remick flew 6,000 miles from her home in London to star in "Hustling," airing as an ABC Television Network "Special Motion Picture Presentation," Saturday, Feb. 22, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

"I didn't want to work in anything," said Lee upon her arrival in the United States. "I was all set for a vacation, but the script was too good to pass up. It really is about something."

The 'something' that caused Lee to return to Hollywood (temporarily) is an uncompromising drama about New York's multimillion - dollar business of prostitution. The screenplay by Fay Kanin was inspired by Gail Sheehy's non fiction book, "Hustling."

Lee, who plays a reporter for a news magazine in the two-hour film, explained, "It is about a situation that exists in our lives today. It isn't a pretty one, but it's there.

"The role I play is a woman with a sense of commitment and her struggle on behalf of a group of used, sad girls who, for one reason or another, have decided to do this thing with their lives."

As a reporter looking for facts, Lee meets a young prostitute, played by Jill Clayburgh.

"She is hostile at first, but as we got to know each other better a mutual respect builds into a friendship that changes both our lives," said Lee.

Four years ago Lee married Kkp Gowans, an assistant director in England's film industry, and with their two children they make their home in a 145-year-old house in St. John's Wood in London. "That's not old by England's standards," said Lee, but it certainly is by Hollywood's."

Nominated for an Oscar some years back for her role in the motion picture, "Days of Wine and - Roses," Lee also was nominated for an Emmy last year for her appearance with William Holden in "The Blue Knight," for which she received a Golden Globe Award.

Prior to her recent trip to this country for "Hustling," Lee starred in the title role of "Jennie," a six-episode series about Winston Churchill's mother which she thinks will air in this country soon.

SPECIAL DUO — Lee Remick (l.) stars as a reporter who becomes friendly with a prostitute, played by Jill Clayburgh (r.) in order to do a definitive investigation of the world of the street-walker, in "Hustling," a searing drama on the "ABC Saturday Night Movie," February 22 at 9 p.m. on Channel 3-5-12.

John Wayne's Mission: Catch Train Robbers

John Wayne stars as a free-wheeling adventurer who travels to Mexico in search of gold in "The Train Robbers," on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Feb. 22, 8:00 to 10:00, on Channel 6-7. Ann-Margaret and Rod Taylor also star.

With a $50,000 Wells Fargo reward as the inducement, Lane (Layne) agrees to help widowed Mrs. Lowe (Ann-Margret) recover a half-million dollars in gold stolen from a train by her late husband.

50-YEAR CLOWN

Lou Jacobs, who performs in "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, has been a circus clown 50 years and has two teen-age daughters who are showgirls with The Greatest Show on Earth.

Racing Drivers On Fear:

"Every driver that's good has to scare himself—constantly, over and over again. You never drive the thing 100 percent. You drive it 105 percent. If you drive it at 115 percent, you're going to crash."—Bobby Unser

"I've been scared many times. When a guy says he doesn't get scared, I say he's either a liar or a complete idiot. Usually that type's never a winner anyway. They can't run fast enough to get in a wreck. They just want to be a hero in the public's eye and act brave."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JAN STERLING, actress*

What was your relationship with Humphrey Bogart?—Mary Moore, Canton, Ohio

● I can't say I knew him well, but he was involved in a very important day in my life. I'd been dating Paul Douglas and we were invited to spend an afternoon on the Bogarts' boat. Bogey liked to wander around and talk to people in other boats that were tied up at the dock. While he was gone that afternoon, Paul and I decided to become engaged. When we broke the news to Bogey, he shrugged and said, "Don't blame me." Paul and I were married soon after.

FOR JOHNNY MATHIS

What do your brothers and sisters do, and how do they regard your huge success?—L. Thimmesch, Racine, Wis.

● My three brothers and three sisters are very happy husbands or wives. Two of my brothers are with sales companies. The other brother, Ralph Mathis, is an entertainer and is gathering fans in California. My family has coped with my "success" and all lead very normal lives in spite of it! I'm glad to say, though, that they're all fans.

FOR PETE ROZELLE,
commissioner of the National Football League

There have been rumors that the World Football League will give up trying to make it as a league and that the franchises will be absorbed into the National Football League. True?—Richard Ryan, North Tonawanda, N.Y.

● No. There will be no complete or partial mergers with any World Football team. Our league has never considered such a plan. The World Football League will have to make it on its own without help from us.

FOR RODDY McDOWALL

Did your life as a child actor differ from that of non-acting kids?—B. G., Vancouver, Wash.

● I started in movies when I was eight, and I think I did all the things other kids did. But when I went out to play, I was told never to get hurt, since it would delay whatever film I was working on. That kept me out of a lot of fights, believe me!

FOR MARILYN McCOO of "The Fifth Dimension"*

Why aren't black women more active in Women's Lib?—F. Lorre, Ogden, Utah

● Black women have had to work and scuffle for survival ever since they came to this country. Few of us have known what it's like to just stay home and take care of our children and work at looking pretty for our husbands. Black women are just getting to this economic position, and they're ready to be pampered. It takes a certain amount of affluence before you begin to worry about being "fulfilled."

FOR DINA MERRILL, actress*

You seem to have the figure for mini-skirts, but I don't remember ever seeing you in one. How come?—Mrs. Donald Johnson, Canton, Ohio

● I never wore mini-skirts because I felt they were for the very young and not for me. I'm not a no-bra type, either. In fact, I think youngsters who are going bra-less now will be really sorry in 20 years.

FOR BILL CHADWICK, former hockey referee*

Will American youngsters ever play hockey better than Canadians?—S. G., Anchorage, Alaska

● Yes. Americans are the hockey stars of the future simply because we now have as much "ice" as the Canadians do. When I was a lad, there were relatively few ice rinks in this country. Today there are hundreds.

FOR RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN

What was the worst experience you ever had onstage?—S. T. T., Stockton, Calif.

● Opening night of "Hamlet" in England. It was a terribly important night to me, and right at the beginning of the play I simply couldn't remember my lines. Nothing! Everyone tried to cue me and their words crossed so I couldn't understand a thing. It was devastating! Fortunately, everyone was most kind about it afterward.

FOR KAREN VALENTINE

I hear you wear staples or pins in your ears to curb your appetite. I'm interested, and would appreciate some advice.—Herbert Nolte, Las Cruces, N.M.

● I find it very beneficial, but of course, what's good for one person may not be good for another. All I can suggest is that if you're really concerned about your weight, you may want to explore the method, which is a form of acupuncture. But check with your doctor first.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I want to help my husband learn to relax. Can you tell me what male celebrities do when they want to get rid of tension?—A. N. S., Savannah, Ga.

● Here's what several of them told us: Irving Wallace goes on a shopping spree for gadgets or wanders through the gourmet section of food markets; Frank Gifford says he just likes to be where he doesn't have to stand on ceremony and can be himself; actor Leo Fuchs prefers a Turkish bath, then a massage; hair stylist Vidal Sassoon goes to a health spa (for ten days at a time, he says); movie producer Joseph E. Levine plays with his granddaughter; Truman Capote gets in a car and just keeps going; couturier Lew Prince of Aldrich stitches away at needlepoint; actor Jimmy Coco cooks lasagna; and Jim Brown, the football-star-turned-actor, goes dancing!

The Most Interesting Women I've Ever Met

By Sheilah Graham
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

For many years, Sheilah Graham wrote a syndicated column on the Hollywood scene. She has also written many magazine articles and several books. Perhaps the best-known of them is "Beloved Infidel," about F. Scott Fitzgerald. Her latest book is "How to Marry Super Rich" (Grosset & Dunlap, $7.95).

On Germaine Greer—

"I almost didn't recognize her, she looked so feminine and pretty. Was this the face and voice that had sunk a thousand male chauvinist pigs?"

"What a tough woman!" I thought, listening to Germaine Greer on television. It was a talk show, British style, which means no holds barred. Ms. Greer was more than holding her own. The Australian-born, Cambridge-educated intellectual was annihilating her opponent, who had written a book on what fun it was to be feminine and to spend all your time looking after the man you loved.

Pictorial Parade

Ms. Greer, seething at the nostrils (there were red sparks in her eyes, but it could have been a cold), called her opponent a traitor to her sex—a sex that she and a handful of strong-minded and (I thought) mostly masculine women were endeavoring to liberate.

The author of "The Female Eunuch" was so intellectual on the subject she was sometimes hard to follow, but it was clear that she despised men. I had heard that Bill Buckley—isn't he divinely handsome!—had gored Germaine almost fatally on their televised fight of the sexes. When I saw it later I thought she had held her own. But she was still seething about it when I met her for lunch at Drones, the "in" place and the most expensive in London.

I almost didn't recognize her, she looked so feminine and pretty. Was this the face and voice that had sunk a thousand male chauvinist pigs? "This is where the celebrities come," she told me. Then—"Oh look, there's the man from —," naming a popular British TV series. He was the second lead, not even the star. The 35-year-old brainy lady sounded like an 11-year-old girl who had just spotted Donny Osmond.

Settling down, her conversation was fascinating: How she had learned from men to fight for what she wanted, for what she believed in, of how she was in love with a popular singer—was it the virile Tom Jones?—that she was searching for the perfect lover, that she might marry again, although she had recently divorced Paul DuFeu, who then wrote a book about her—"Let's Hear It for the Long-Legged Women"—and that she wanted a child. All this interpolated with stanzas from 16th-century European poetry. When I recited a 20th-century prose-poet, F. Scott Fitzgerald—she put her face in an attentive position, but her eyes became somewhat glazed. She's bored, I thought. Not a bit. She was getting tiddly. She had downed four glasses of champagne, and interrupted me to ask, "Is it all right if I have a fifth glass?" "Of course," I replied, and realized that I, who am so femininely soft and helpless when it comes to bill time, was paying for the lunch. In all my career as a columnist and authoress, I have never paid for a lunch!

Outside in the cool air, she stroked my mink coat—she was wearing an imitation something. "So soft," she cooed. Jumping daintily into a taxi, she shouted back, "I'm late for my hair appointment!"

Women's Liberation indeed! She had forced me into the man's role, while she had been clinging (but not helpless) and female.

On Dorothy Parker—

" 'I'm so sorry to disappoint you,' she said apologetically, 'but the tattoo is on my arm.' "

Dorothy Parker was one of my first assignments in America. I had heard of her, of course, and knew all her famous bon mots like "Men seldom make passes at girls who wear glasses," etc. Knowing she was, as they say, a "real character," I was rather nervous as I rang the bell of her suite at the Lowell Hotel in New York. I had expected to find her alone, and was somewhat discomfited to find her with John O'Hara, who had recently been acclaimed for his best-selling novel "Appointment in Samarra," and Alan Campbell, a young writer she would shortly marry.

Wide World

I timidly asked my questions. She had been tattooed in the Bowery two evenings before, and The New York Daily Mirror, for which I was a reporter, wanted to know where and why. I expected to be murdered verbally. Instead Miss Parker looked at me sweetly from the black smudges that were her eyes. Her face, which always reminded me of a tired Renoir, creased into a gracious smile.

"I'm so sorry to disappoint you," she said apologetically, "but the tattoo is on my arm," and she showed me a tiny and utterly unremarkable tattoo.

They returned to the discussion I had interrupted: How could she exit from the Lowell, to which she owed several months' rent, without being seen by the management? It was decided that she would pretend to be seriously ill and the ambulance men would carry the dying debtor through the lobby to freedom.

When I left, she told me to be sure to call on her again, "anytime." I phoned, but she was never in. (The ambulance plan, I understand, was abandoned.)

It was different in Hollywood. I was a friend of her friends at the Garden of Allah. These included Robert Benchley—whom she always called Mr. Benchley—O'Hara, Fitzgerald, Marc Connolly, Eddie Mayer, Alan Campbell (now her husband) and various writers working on scripts at the studios. They all despised the producers they worked for, but all pocketed enormous salaries. It was fun listening to them, although Dorothy would immediately blast the person who had just left.

Most of her witticisms were directed against her eager entourage. Her barbs were cruel, but sometimes she was very funny. Like the time Scott and I dined with her and she talked in whispers, afraid of being overheard. She had planned to go to New York and had given a farewell party the night before. "We said goodbye to everyone, then found we had to stay." She and her husband were in hiding, going out only at night in disguise to walk the dog.

On Scottie Fitzgerald—

"Leaving a studio telephone booth after a conversation with her father, she once hissed in my ear, 'I'll kill him!' "

You may have seen photographs of her with her parents—Christmas in Paris, the three of them in front of the tree, her leg raised in a dancing pose. A chubby child, a mother with madness in her staring eyes, a father who drank to excess. The little girl was Scottie Fitzgerald Lanahan Grove-Smith, daughter of F. Scott Fitzgerald and his wife Zelda, and she grew up to become one of the important political hostesses in Washington. And, I think, one of the miracles of our time. Her mother once tried to kill her. Her father could be terrifying when he was on a bender—she was 12 when he tore her dress off in a rage over something or other. But even as a child, Scottie, who now has four grown-up children from her marriage to Jack Lanahan, was a survivor.

I met her in Hollywood when she was 15. Scottie was still a bit overweight, but very pretty, with her father's broad forehead, wide-apart green-gray eyes—and his charm. She was eager to see everything and everyone—especially Errol Flynn!

Scott was a demanding father. He criticized Scottie constantly, and, like any normal teenager, she resented it. They were always quarreling. He loved her but he alienated her with his overanxious supervision. Leaving a studio telephone booth after a conversation with her father, she once hissed in my ear, "I'll kill him!" I once became the buffer between daughter and father when he stopped her meager allowance after some real or fancied misdemeanor.

When Scott died in 1940, a few days before Christmas, Scottie wrote me a beautiful letter. "It must be some consolation to you to know how much you helped him when no one else would," she said, adding a postscript—"Is his blue Ford around and his typewriter? I could use them both."

That postscript, I always thought, is a clue to Scottie's survival. She is a practical person who accepts friends and enemies, triumphs and disasters as they come. She did not cancel the party for Adlai Stevenson on the night he was defeated for the Presidency. It was a great success, and everyone, including Scottie and Adlai, had a great time. I've met the most interesting people in Washington at Scottie's house—from Arthur Schlesinger to Newbold Noyes, one of the owners of The Washington Star. Authors, painters, politicians and publishers come at the drop of an invitation. They have to write down the date, and so does Scottie, because she is liable to forget. To be a whole person, she had to block out the anguish of her growing-up years, caused by the two people who loved her the most, her parents. But the vagueness and the mixing up of plans is a small inconvenience to pay for the delightful person into which she evolved.

On Marilyn Monroe—

"Before leaving she was asked to sign the guest book. Under 'Address,' she wrote, 'Nowhere.' "

A national magazine was giving a cocktail party at the Beverly Hills Hotel to announce its annual awards for the best this and that in the film industry. They were all there—Clark, Gregory, Van, and hundreds of male and female starlets who one day might or might not be famous.

"Who's that?" my date, an important magazine editor from New York, demanded. Following the direction of his pointed finger, I recognized a blonde newcomer to the Hollywood scene. She was surrounded by admiring men. "Oh her," I said without too much interest. "That's Marilyn Monroe. She's just played a bit for John Huston at MGM in 'The Asphalt Jungle.' "

He wanted to meet her.

Looking deeply into those marvelous eyes, he told Marilyn, "You're going to be a big star."

She never forgot his prophecy. Every time I saw her she asked after him and sent her regards. That was Marilyn. She made every man feel he had a special place in her heart.

Poor lost lady. She tried so hard to cope with

A Little-Discussed Problem Of Drinkers

For women whose husbands are heavy drinkers, the marriage breaking point often occurs when the men lose interest in marital relations. Many people realize that temporary alcoholic overindulgence may produce temporary male impotence. But few realize that the male alcoholic can develop sexual maladies that may continue even if he stops drinking. As psychologists Dennis Donovan and Ronald Kleinknecht reported to the 52nd Annual Meeting of The Western Psychological Association, "Even after he is no longer drinking, the chronic male alcoholic appears to be relatively indifferent to sexual activity. . . . This may be due to physiological damage or to deterioration of those brain regions whose functions influence sexual behavior." And it's not just older men who may be affected. The U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare reports that in the past four years teenage drinking has risen so sharply that "one out of 20 teenagers is battling a drinking problem." Because of these new facts, young people who have been drinking too much may want to rethink their habits.—By Shirley Sloan Fader

the worldwide adoration—an adoration that included President John Kennedy and his brother Bobby, Marlon Brando, Frank Sinatra, Joe DiMaggio, Arthur Miller and Yves Montand. She longed to be accepted, yet was afraid of people.

Away from the cameras and the publicity, Marilyn was merely a cute brown-haired girl who might still be alive if she had not been discovered for film stardom. The paint, the powder, the blonde dye could not eliminate her fearful insecurity. She tried, heaven knows how she tried, to believe in the image forced on her by the studio bosses.

"I drive around for hours in the morning because I can't face the people in the studio," she told me. She was continually breaking out in hives caused by her fears and nervousness. It took her six hours to prepare for the Hollywood premiere of her film, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." She wanted so much to improve as an actress and greedy hangers-on took advantage of her vulnerability.

The night before she died—of a combination of liquor and pills—she was dining at a restaurant at Malibu Beach. Before leaving she was asked to sign the guest book. Under "Address," she wrote, "Nowhere." She would be glad to know that she is not forgotten.

BARRY NEWMAN—
TV's "PETROCELLI":

Why All This Interest in Astrology and Satanism?

"We are moving out of the age of reason and into an age of sensationalism," asserts Barry Newman, star of TV's "Petrocelli." "Our difficulties have become so great that we are looking for quick, easy solutions. Events like Watergate, oil shortages and mass starvation are so overwhelming that people have trouble facing the problems with reasoning. That's why you see such an increase of faith in astrology, satanism and approaches like scientology. People give up on reasoning and look for answers that work within six weeks. Mysticism becomes more attractive than thought. I don't know where all of this will lead, but it is an evasion. We have to return to the age of reason to make progress."—Interviewed by William Wolf

Jobmanship

Why Supervisors and Managers Don't Understand Each Other

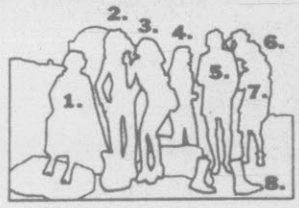

It is no secret that first-line supervisors—those who direct the work of employees—and managers—who direct a group of supervisors—often have trouble understanding each other. Various psychological studies, including a recent one by the General Services Administration, explain it this way: Because supervisors and managers see their own job futures differently, they react in opposite ways to ideas such as "Promotions are based on ability and talent" or "People who do good jobs are rewarded." Managers tend to believe these ideas; supervisors don't. As first-line supervisors see it, they live in a kind of no-man's land. Supervisors aren't workers, yet they're not allowed the planning or decision-making freedom that managers have. Because supervisors feel their own promotion chances are restricted and that their talents never will be fully evaluated, they tend to regard management pep talks as unrealistic. As a result, say the experts, performance suffers when supervisors concentrate not on the manager's goals but on their own definition of attainable success: "security, respect and happiness." And since managers do have broad future opportunities, they tend to believe their own pep talks and mistakenly think that their supervisors also believe them. According to the psychologists, until management introduces new policies that allow supervisors to agree that "high performances will pay off for me," all those pep talks about extra effort and improved efficiency are not going to have much effect.—By S. R. Redford

Your Exterior— What Does It Say?

True or False: A tall person is more approachable than a short one. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Whether you come across as warmhearted or cold depends more on one thing than anything else.

2. The better you like a person, the taller he looks.

3. A beard makes all the difference in what people think of a man.

4. A tall person is more approachable than a short one.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at Yale University show that the most important thing in determining whether you impress others as warmhearted is how often you smile. Nothing else carries as much weight.

2. True—if the person is a man. Status has also been found to have a marked effect on how tall we think a person is. One study showed that "as the ascribed academic status of a man was increased from student through professor, the man's perceived height increased a full five inches."

3. True. In a study at Memphis State University, investigators projected a picture onto a screen in such a manner that half the students in the audience saw a picture of a bearded man; the other half saw a picture of the same person clean-shaven. The bearded man was perceived more favorably in almost every respect, being judged as "more sincere, enthusiastic, generous, extroverted, masculine, inquisitive and stronger." But not all age groups share this enthusiasm. Many people take the view of one human-behavioral specialist who observes that beards seem to indicate that a man needs an artificial aid to win esteem: "They hide their inferiority feelings instead of compensating for them by useful and productive activity."

4. False. In studies at Virginia Commonwealth University, investigators conducted a test to determine literally who was most approachable, a short person or a tall one. Two psychology students were selected—one short and one tall. Eighty-four undergraduates were then instructed to approach each person, but to stop when they felt "uncomfortable." Results showed a dramatic difference: "Males and females maintained twice as much distance between themselves and the tall person than between themselves and the short person."

The Goodness of Pork Roast–Without the Expense

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen builds a delicious dinner around pork shoulder. "When most people think of pork roast," says Marilyn, "they think of loin of pork. Try pork shoulder instead. It's less expensive and tastes just as good."

BAKED CARROTS JULIENNE

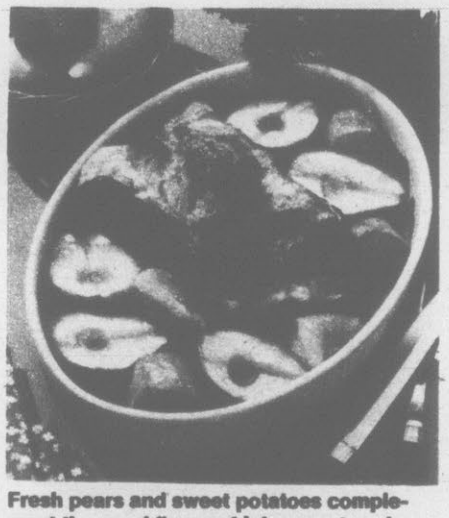

- ¼ cup margarine
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 6 medium carrots, peeled and cut julienne style
- ¼ cup water
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley

1. Melt margarine; stir in lemon juice and salt.
2. Arrange carrots in layers in small baking dish, pouring some margarine mixture over each layer and all remaining mixture over top. Add water. Cover. Bake in 350°F. oven until carrots are tender, 50 to 60 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley.

Makes 4 servings

Baked Carrots and Onion Rings: Follow recipe for Baked Carrots Julienne, arranging thin onion rings (1 medium onion) in layers with carrots and adding ½ teaspoon sugar to margarine mixture.

Makes 4 servings

Fresh pears and sweet potatoes complement the good flavor of juicy roast pork.

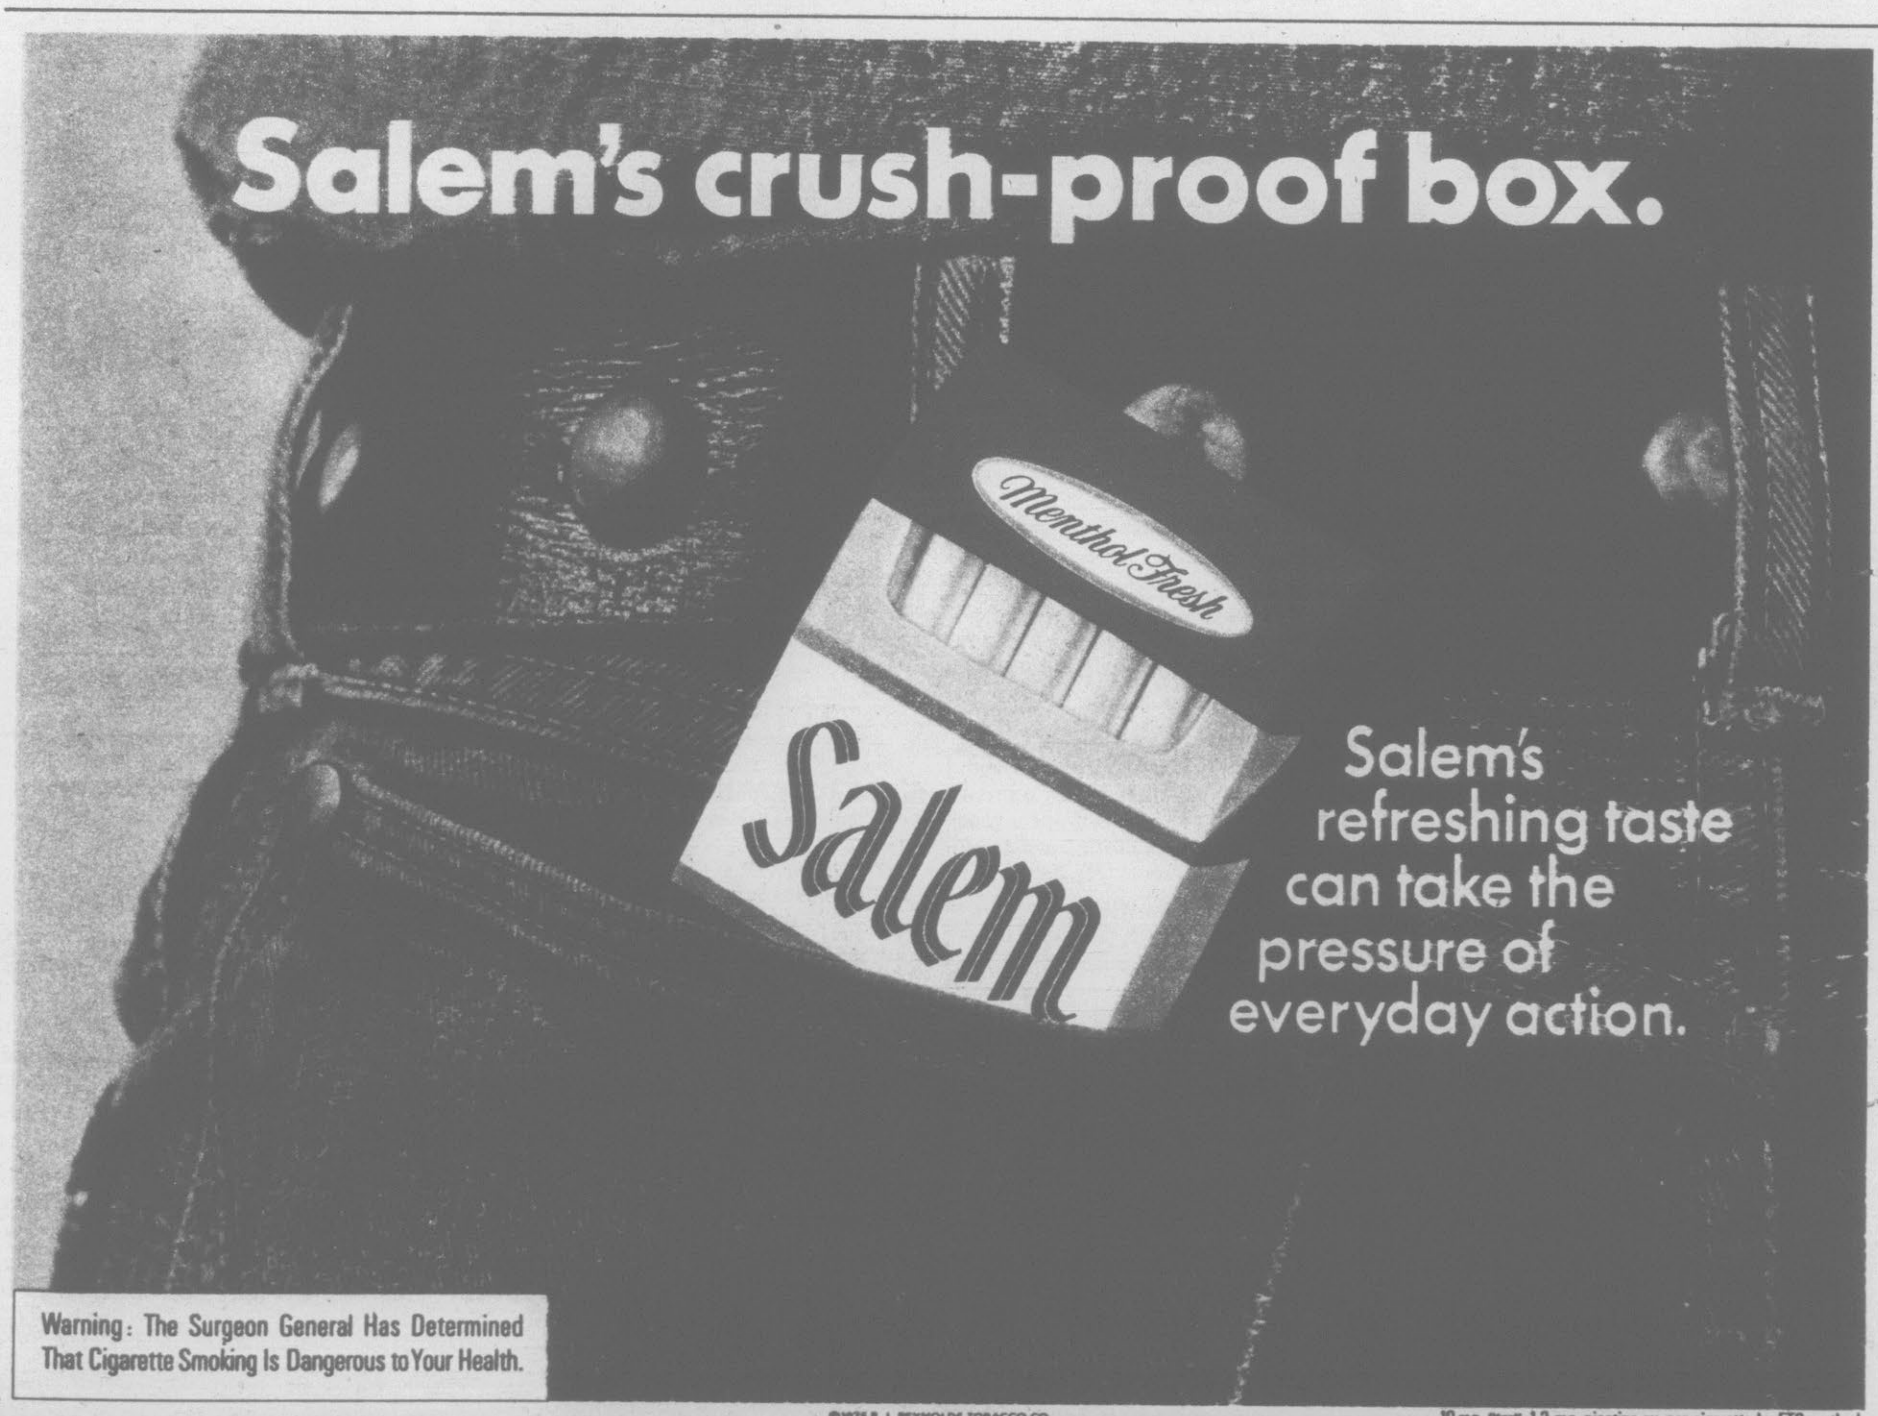

PORK ROAST WITH GLAZED PEARS AND SWEETS

- 1 pork shoulder roast (4-5-lb. fresh Boston butt)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 3 Anjou or Bosc pears (1 lb.), peeled and halved
- 2 lbs. sweet potatoes or yams, peeled and quartered
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ¼ cup firmly packed light- or dark-brown sugar
- ½ cup maple-blended syrup
- ⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
- ⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons water

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Sprinkle roast with salt, pepper and cinnamon. Rub into meat.
2. Place roast on rack in baking pan, fat side up. Bake about 3 to 3½ hours, allowing 25 minutes per pound.
3. Place pears and sweet potatoes around meat, continue baking. Spoon off fat.
4. In small saucepan, melt butter. Add brown sugar, syrup, cloves and nutmeg; blend. Combine cornstarch and water. Stir smoothly into sugar mixture. Heat to boiling, stirring.
5. Pour hot syrup over pears and sweet potatoes to glaze. Continue baking 30-60 minutes, until potatoes are tender.

Makes 6 servings

Editor's note: Either the all-purpose Anjou or Bosc fresh winter pear is ideal for baking. You'll easily identify the distinctive Bosc by its rich russet coloring and elongated neck. The popular Anjou has an oval shape and tender skin that is greenish-yellow even when ripe.

We Asked These Top Speedsters:

"Do You Get Scared Racing?"

By Bob Thomas

How true is the commonly held notion that automobile racing drivers are fearless daredevils?

Some of the world's top contemporary drivers cast a far different image of themselves by their own descriptions of fear and racing. In fact, most of them admit they scare themselves all the time. And one of the things they fear the most, they confess, are drivers who say they aren't afraid.

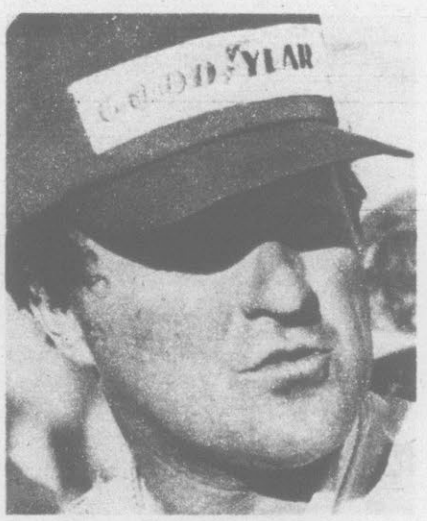

The men were selected worldwide to match driving skills in the unique International Race of Champions series for ABC-TV's "Wide World of Sports." Three of them—Graham Hill, Richard Petty and Jody Scheckter—have since been disqualified, but the others were scheduled to compete this weekend in the finals at Daytona International Speedway.

BOBBY UNSER, 1974 U.S. Auto Club national champion and 1968 Indianapolis 500 winner:

"Sure I get scared. You've gotta hang it all out if you're any good at all. And that's when it can be scary."

A. J. FOYT, three-time Indianapolis 500 winner:

"I've been scared many times. . . . The worst moments are when you pop a tire or something breaks, or when someone crashes or spins in front of you. I think I'm more scared about killing someone else."

CALE YARBOROUGH, 1968 Daytona stock-car winner:

"I can't say I do get scared any more. When I was coming up, hell yes. Courage is nothing more than controlled fear. Learning how to control it was the turning point in my career. At first when something would happen in front of me, I'd get scared and start figuring out what to do. By the time I figured it out, I'd be right in the middle of it. Now, I just go right on—and later think back: 'Now how'd I get through that, you reckon?' "

GRAHAM HILL of England, two-time world champion and 1966 Indianapolis 500 winner:

"If a driver doesn't know fear, he doesn't know common sense. He's going to be a menace to himself and everyone else. If a driver really is fearless—and I rather doubt that, no matter what one might say—he's not going to last anyway. The most frightening time of all for me is when something goes a bit wrong with the car, something I have no control over."

"Do You Get Scared Racing?"

Continued

GEORGE FOLLMER, 1972 Can-Am and Trans-Am road-racing champion:

"Would you want to be out there with a guy who says he doesn't scare or won't admit it? No, because there's something wrong with him. He isn't going to be too concerned whether he takes someone with him or not. The fact is that it's a dangerous situation you're in all the time. You've got to scare yourself. You can't help it."

JOHNNY RUTHERFORD, 1974 Indianapolis 500 winner:

"You can't allow yourself the luxury of being scared. You're going so fast out there on the track, you don't have time. You have to have total concentration. Usually, fear is just an afterthought. When something happens and you get through, you say to yourself, 'Wow, man, if this or that happened, it would have been something.' Most people think fire is our greatest fear. It isn't. More than anything, you dread having something break on you."

EMERSON FITTIPALDI of Brazil, 1974 world champion:

"The greatest scare in my life came in a recent Dutch Grand Prix. During practice a wheel broke as I entered a corner at about 150 mph. From the time the wheel broke to the time I hit the wall was maybe two-tenths of a second. In that two-tenths I realized I was out of control and that I was going to hit the wall very hard. I was very, very scared [he was trapped in the car for seven minutes]. I was petrified with fear that the car would catch fire [it didn't and he walked away uninjured]. During the time you're trying to control your car you are not scared. It is the moment you realize you have lost control that you become scared."

DAVID PEARSON, 1966, '68, '69 NASCAR champion and 1973 Driver of the Year:

"I don't think I get scared. And I don't get butterflies. Maybe it's because I'm too busy even to think about it. Except—do you think that because I have to go to the bathroom right quick before every race it could mean I'm scared or nervous? I dunno. I never thought about that before. I guess I've just thought it was because I knew that I had a long race and it's the last chance for me to go."

JODY SCHECKTER of South Africa, 1973 Formula 5000 champion and Formula One driver for Team Tyrrell:

"Generally, no. You don't have time to be scared. In Formula One racing we're constantly on the ragged edge. You have to be competitive. You couldn't stay scared all the time. Or even think about it."

"Anytime I've made it through an accident, I say, 'Well, it's over and I made it.' I don't really think about it, the danger, that is, at other times. You know that hazards are there, but you're busy with things like the heat, the car, the competition."

RICHARD PETTY, five-time winner of the Daytona 500:

"I can't really say I've never been scared in a car. I guess you have anxious moments about anything. On the racetrack things happen so quick you don't have time to be scared. After you've rolled around the track a few times and are just lying there, then there ain't no reason to be scared because it's all over. After a bad accident I don't remember anything anyway. My mind is just blank. I think this is a God-given thing that keeps people from waking up in the middle of the night and just going berserk."

THE 1975 HAMILTON MINT

St. Patrick's Day Medal

Shown larger to clearly show detail. Actual size of medal is 1½" in diameter.

A PROOF FINISH LIMITED EDITION IN .999 FINE SILVER AND 24KT GOLD ON SILVER

ST. PATRICK'S DAY is traditionally observed in America's great cities with colorful parades and marching bands. But the real spirit of St. Patrick's Day is much more than just festivity – it is a unique commemoration of the faith, hope, belief and inspiration of the Irish people and their patron saint.

The Hamilton Mint is thus proud to present a tribute to both St. Patrick and the Irish with an exceptionally beautiful medallic masterpiece, a work of art you will be proud to own and display.

THE 1975 ST. PATRICK'S DAY MEDAL

Each beautiful medal will be struck from a full ounce of solid .999 fine silver, the finest and purest available, and each will contain 480 grains of this increasingly valuable metal, and each will measure a full 1½ inches in diameter. The medal is designed by H. Alvin Sharpe, master of the intricate intaglio method of engraving, that pre-dates the birth of Christ.

The medal bears a superbly-executed likeness of St. Patrick, which is set against a gleaming proof finish; the reverse side faithfully depicts Ireland's legendary Muckross Abbey.

AVAILABLE IN SOLID SILVER OR 24 KT GOLD ON SILVER

You may purchase this uncommonly fine art medal in .999 fine silver for just $12.50 each. Or you can order the medal in lovely 24 Kt gold on .999 silver for only $17.50. Each medal will be accompanied by a registered Certificate of Authenticity attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of the issue. The 1975 St. Patrick's Day Medal is certain to become a treasured family heirloom and a valuable addition to your personal collection.

A STRICTLY LIMITED EDITION

Only one edition of this beautiful medal will ever be struck and because rarity can add substantially to a potential increase in value, The Hamilton Mint has set a strict deadline of March 30, 1975 for all orders. Any Applications postmarked after that date will be regretfully returned.

We anticipate the demand for this issue to be quite great, so it is essential that you complete and return your Collector's Application without delay.

Free Display Stand

You will receive, with our compliments, a handsome stand to protect and display your medal.

IMPORTANT: ORDERS MUST BE POSTMARKED BY MARCH 30, 1975

BABY BINAR AND MOM
Apes are easier than kids

A study in tranquillity: Binar, a tiny Sumatran orangutan who's barely more than a few weeks old, has proved much easier to care for than a human baby of the same age, according to Mrs. Yoka Leeflang, wife of the Perth Zoo manager in Australia. Mrs. Leeflang has often wanted a baby ape as a pet and destiny brought Binar into her life when the real mother abandoned her. Just like her human counterparts, Binar needs to be fed every four hours during the day, and must have her diapers changed. But the advantage is that baby apes sleep all through the night. Once they go to sleep, that's it. They don't wake up till morning.

ALFRED BROWNING PARKER
A builder of words too

Leading architect Alfred Browning Parker is famous chiefly for what he says in concrete. But he has a pretty good way with words too. Recently he chatted with FAMILY WEEKLY and came forth with the following notions:

- Seek in the problem for the answers, not in your ego.
- Courage is when you do something you are afraid to do.
- Quality is expensive–and priceless.
- The question is often asked, "Are you an architect?" And I reply, "Sometimes."
- Do not adapt too perfectly to your environment. You must be able to change.

Elton John as Peck's Bad (Very Bad) Boy: When pop singer Elton went before Queen Elizabeth in October, 1972, for the first time, his performance was a real royal shocker. Following Liberace, "Elton finally went onstage before the Queen and the audience–the ultimate in stuffed shirts. He had two numbers to do, and the crowd kept calling stiffly: 'Do "Your Song,"' or 'Do "Rocket Man."' But the mischievous piano man brought out Legs Larry to tap dance to 'I Think I'm Gonna Kill Myself,' and the band released balloons that actually made obscene noises. The entire effect was lost on TV, but the audience . . . was shocked and infuriated as the balloons whizzed around their tiaraed heads while they murmured, 'Oooooooo! Oooooooo!' Backstage the rowdies and friends were rolling on the floor in uncontrollable belly laughter." From "Elton John," by Cathi Stein (Popular Library, $1.50).

THREE CHEERS FOR INSOMNIA!

Insomnia? I wouldn't end it.
It has a great deal to commend it.
I watch the late late TV show,
I listen to the radio,
I read the books that others miss,
I think of that and think of this,
I plan, I scheme, and need not hurry,
I've hours and hours in which to worry.
What if my eyes have purplish bags?
What if each eyelid slightly sags?
What if all day I'm barely creeping?
At least I don't waste nights by sleeping.

A fellow, asked why he walked so cautiously on the icy sidewalk, replied, "Yesterday I took one small step for man and one bone-crushing fall for Blue Cross." —Dorothea Kent

Our six-year-old son came home from school with his first report card. I looked it over and read all the comments the teacher had written. I said, "Oh, Brent, this is a good report card—you really did well." My son quickly replied, "Mom, I didn't make it—my teacher did!"

Prince Valiant

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT SETS SAIL FOR THESSALRIGA TO SEEK THE AID OF KING LEOFRIC IN THE COMING CONFLICT WITH BELLA GROSSI'S PIRATE FLEET.

IT IS NO WONDER THESSALRIGA HAS TURNED BACK ALL INVADERS. HUGE TOWERS AT THE END OF EACH MOLE GUARD THE HARBOR.

VAL WASTES NO TIME IN TELLING LEOFRIC OF THE APPROACHING MENACE OF BELLA'S FLEET. TRUMPETS SOUND AND WITHIN MINUTES THE WAR-CAPTAINS GATHER.

AND WITHIN THE HOUR PREPARATIONS FOR WAR ARE UNDER WAY. LEOFRIC TURNS TO VAL: "BECAUSE OUR ISLAND IS SMALL AND OUR WEALTH GREAT, MANY A WAR LORD HAS TRIED TO CONQUER US. ALL HAVE FAILED."

BY DAY'S END THE DEFENSES ARE COMPLETE. THERE IS NO PLACE ON THIS ROCKY ISLAND WHERE A SHIP COULD LAND SAVE THE HARBOR, AND WHEN THE GREAT CHAIN ACROSS THE CHANNEL IS RAISED, THESSALRIGA IS SAFE.

A MAID OF NOBLE BEARING STOPS HIM. "SIR VALIANT, YOU HAVE WON FAME WITH SWORD AND SHIELD. WILL YOU INSTRUCT CROWN PRINCE ODO IN THE ART OF COMBAT?"

ONE GLANCE AT ODO AND IT IS PLAIN HE WILL NEVER BE A WARRIOR. THE MIGHTY KING OF THESSALRIGA HAS SPAWNED AN INCOMPETENT.
