Protest Israelis Presence

By JOHN F. BARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special 10-member House committee opens its investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency next week with internal dispute already brewing in the heavily-Democratic group.

The seven Democrats and three Republicans were named Thursday amid GOP charges the committee was stacked to limit its probe to CIA activities during the Nixon administration only.

Several members have been outspoken critics of the CIA — and the early bickering has not been limited to party vs. party. Democrat Michael Harrington of Massachusetts, an outspoken CIA critic, has already attacked Chairman Lucien Nedzi of Michigan, a fellow Democrat.

"In his selection as chairman, we have perhaps fatally flawed the likelihood of the Select Committee's success," said Harrington.

Nedzi has been chairman of the chief CIA oversight subcommittee in the House since 1972.

"While I do not doubt Chairman Nedzi's sincerity or good intentions, the record of failure of his oversight subcommittee in dealing with both foreign and domestic covert operations speaks for itself," Harrington said.

Nedzi, who has been Chairman of the House armed services subcommittee on intelligence, earlier presided over a hearing concerning leaks by Harrington of classified information pertaining to CIA operations in Chile and its role in the downfall of the Allende government.

Robert McClory of Illinois, David C. Treen of Louisiana and freshman Robert W. Kasten Jr. of Wisconsin.

McClory supported a vain GOP attempt to get equal representation on the Committee with Democrats.

Expressing fears that a Committee lopsided with Democrats would limit the CIA probe to activities during the Nixon Administration, McClory said he favors broadening the investigation at least to include the Johnson administration.

In addition to Nedzi and Harrington, Democratic members include three strong critics of the U.S. role in Vietnam: Californians Donald Edwards and Donald Dellums, and Robert Giaimo of Connecticut.

The other two Democrats on the panel are Morgan Murphy of Illinois and James V. Stanton of Ohio.

Israelis Talk About Striking Oil Fields

By THOMAS CHEATHAM LONDON (UPI) — Israeli officials are beginning to talk publicly about the possibility of air strikes against Arab oil fields in any new Middle East war.

They believe the threat of such raids gives them not only a military deterrent against Arab attack but also a position of strength in settlement negotiations.

For it would be in the interests of neither the oil-producing Arab states nor the oil-thirsty Western world to have petroleum production curtailed or cut off.

Under what circumstances the Israelis would consider carrying out such a blitz, if at all, is not clear.

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres has said twice in the past month that Israel will retaliate against the Arab heartland — specifically Libya, Abu Dhabi, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia—in event of a new war. He said those countries that give the Arab confrontation states support cannot expect to see their cities, air fields and—most important—oil fields go untouched.

What he is saying, in effect, is that Israel can hold the fields hostage.

Thanks to what Israeli officials are describing an unlimited flow of weaponry from the United States, the Israeli air force has the range and ability to hit at the oil fields.

Backbone of the air force is the U.S.-made F4 Phantom, with a combat radius of 600 miles. It can reach the Arabian Gulf, for example, with the help of U.S.-built A4 Skyhawks refitted as aerial tankers.

Among the weaponry recently delivered to Israel from the United States are so-called "smart bombs," guided by television and laser beams, and unmanned decoy drones that confuse ground radar and draw away anti-aircraft missiles.

Israel, too, is pressing Washington for the delivery of the new F15 fighter-bomber as part of a $2 billion arms request.

The possibility of strikes against the oil fields is thought to have come up in discussions during the recent Middle East tour of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

"I would be very surprised if Kissinger did not caution the Arabs to be careful about what those 'crazy' Israelis might do in another war," an Israeli source said.

Implicit in this is the belief that the threat to the fields should invoke not only Arab military hesitance but also Western pressure on the Arabs to soften their peace demands.

The possibility of the United States denying the Israelis the equipment for carrying out such raids is not a factor in this line of reasoning.

Rockets Hit Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Rebel forces fired 17 rockets into Phnom Penh and its airport Saturday, wounding 12 persons, military sources said. In two other Cambodian cities, police battled food rioters.

The 40-pound rockets hit in three barrages at dawn, noon, and late afternoon with the final six rounds hitting around Pochentong airport and causing all the casualties, the sources said.

Pochentong is the capital's only link with the outside world because of a three-week rebel blockade of the Mekong River.

The 71-mile stretch between South Vietnam and the Cambodian capital remains mostly under Communist control.

The last food convoy arrived in Phnom Penh Jan. 31. A U.S. airlift with 22 flights a day of C130 and DC8 cargo planes has been providing the capital with about 450 tons of ammunition.

Food scarcity and high prices sparked riots Friday in Battambang city, 156 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, and Kompong Som, 120 miles southwest of the capital, causing millions of dollars in damages, government officials said.

Several Are Arrested In County Break-Ins

Pitt County deputies have arrested several persons in connection with a series of break-ins throughout the county, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Sheriff Tyson said that deputies arrested a 15-year-old juvenile on charges of breaking into the Hidaway Club on N.C. 102 near Ayden on Feb. 14 and taking $77 in cash from the premises.

The sheriff said that James Moore, 45, Annie Ruth Moore, 55, and Henry Moore, 55, all of Rt. 2, Ayden, were arrested and charged with receiving stolen property in connection with the Hidaway Club theft.

Bond was set at $500 for each of the adults, he said, and hearings scheduled for March 5 in District Court here.

James R. Baker, 21, of Rt. 2, Vanceboro, was arrested and charged with the larceny of a notary seal from Mayo's Used Cars in Grimesland on Feb. 15. Baker was placed under $200 bond and a hearing scheduled for March 5 in District Court.

The sheriff said that James Fletcher Outlaw, 24, of 813 Englewood Place, Ayden, was arrested and charged with breaking into the residence of Clifton Beacham of Rt. 3, Washington, last Saturday night and the theft of television sets from the home. Outlaw was jailed under $2,000 bond and a hearing set for March 5 in District Court here.

Charged with receiving stolen property in the Beacham case were John Lacy Pearson, 39, of Mill Street, Greenville, and Roy Little, 62, of P.O. Box 507, Greenville. Both were placed under $1,000 bond, according to Sheriff Tyson, who noted that two television sets were recovered.

Outlaw is also charged with breaking into the home of Les Turnage Sr. on Rt. 2, Farmville last week and taking a color television set. Bond for Outlaw was set at $2,500 on the Turnage case, it was noted. A color television was recovered.

Bobby Ray Carlton, 20, of 194 Wright Road, Farmville, and James Thomas Bunch, 22, of 201 Crestwood Drive, Farmville, were charged with receiving stolen property in the Turnage break-in. Bond was set at $500 each for Carlton and Bunch with hearings set for March 5.

Outlaw is charged with a third break-in, according to the sheriff, which occurred at the mobile home of Glenn Manning of Rt. 6, Greenville on Feb. 12

Manning reported the theft of a rifle and stereo, valued at $750. Bond for Outlaw on the Manning incident was set at $2,500.

Also charged with breaking and entering and larceny in connection with the Manning incident was Larry James Stokes, 21, of 302 Darden Avenue, Greenville. Sheriff Tyson said that Stokes is being sought in the break-in.

Charged with receiving stolen property in connection with the Manning break-in were Bunch, and Joe Daniels, 54, of Box 296, Winterville. Bond for Bunch on the Manning break-in was set at $500 while Daniels' bond was at $1,000.

Sheriff Tyson said that officers recovered a rifle and stereo.

Michael Hardy, 22, of 905-A, Bancroft Avenue, Greenville, was arrested and charged with breaking into the Belvoir School on Rt. 6, Greenville on Feb. 8. The sheriff said that a record player, three sets of earphones and a jackbox was reported stolen.

Sheriff Tyson, who reported that Hardy is under $500 bond with a hearing scheduled for Feb. 26 in District Court, said that deputies recovered a record player, three sets of earphones and a jackbox.

Plane Hijacker Killed

By ANTONIO PRAXEDES BRASILIA (UPI) —

A man armed with a pistol hijacked a Brazilian Boeing 737 with 80 persons aboard, forced it to land at the national capital of Brasilia Saturday and held it for eight hours before military police rushed the aircraft and killed him.

The police acted only minutes after the hijacker let all the women and children leave the aircraft. Police said one crewman was wounded in the attack.

The long-haired, bearded hijacker was still holding the craft, its eight-man crew and 41 male passengers for a demanded $1.3 million ransom plus freedom for political prisoners, when the police assault came.

Spokesmen at the airport said 200 security men from police and air force rushed the plane. They had surrounded the aircraft since it landed just before noon and waited eight hours before getting the word to move in. Police, playing a waiting game and hoping to wear down the hijacker, several times agreed to cooperate with his demands and at one point placed pistols and parachutes aboard the plane, firing one shot each from two of them to prove they were loaded.

Police sources said the shots fired were the only ones in the guns and that they were empty when placed aboard the aircraft.

The officials said that the $1.3 million the hijacker demanded had been brought to the airport by the president of the airline, Viacao Aerea Sao Paulo.

The hijacker, described by officials who listened to his conversations with the ground as "well spoken and cultured" let the women and children leave shortly before police charged.

He had been holding out for the ransom money, the release of political prisoners and the broadcast of a rambling communique calling for change in Brazil and citing Jesus Christ, Leonardo da Vinci and other historical figures.

Move Up The Clock

The one hour time loss comes earlier than usual this year.

At 2 a.m. this morning, Americans were to move their clocks ahead one hour to the 3 a.m. mark as Daylight Saving Time 1975 officially got underway.

For those wondering when the lost hour will be regained, that will take place presumably next fall when the nation returns to Standard Time.

Bill Introduced On Power Generating Construction

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector Managing Editor

A bill was introduced in the Legislature Friday which would give municipalities the authority to join together for construction of power generating facilities.

Louis Meyer, attorney of Wilson, told of the bill at a meeting of Pitt municipally-owned electric facilities representatives at the Ramada Inn Friday night.

Sen. Vernon White, Sen. Julian Allsbrook, Rep. Horton Rountree and Rep. Sam Bunday attended the meeting.

Fountain, Farmville, Ayden, Winterville and Greenville own their utilities systems among Pitt County towns and they are members of Electricities, which is asking for the changes in the law which the bill would provide.

Meyer said there are 72 cities in the state which operate their own utilities, representing 1,000,000 people and 20 percent of the total electric load. The cities have had the right for many years to generate their own electricity individually, and many did until it became cheaper to purchase power from private companies.

The law did not provide for several cities to go together and construct a joint generating facility, and this is an avenue which the bill now before the Legislature would provide.

Meyer said it was felt that by joining together the cities could produce electricity cheaper than the private companies, but also in the future we "may not have power we need at any price," he said. Thus the cities would be assuring themselves of an adequate power source and this overrides even the cost problem.

He said passage of the bill would be permissive legislation and would allow the cities to issue revenue bonds to pay the cost of constructing a generating facility. Only utilities revenues would be pledged for paying off the bonds and the debt would not involve a municipality's general revenues.

If there were an excess of electricity, it could be sold first to other municipalities, then to cooperatives and finally to private electric companies.

The law would prohibit financing facilities which would ultimately be owned by private companies.

Meyer said it was felt that cities could build generating facilities cheaper because municipalities can raise capital better at present than can the private companies. "The revenue bonds would appeal to a different type investor," he said. The venture would also be non-profit and tax exempt.

The idea is not a new concept and 19 other states have similar laws. Co-ops already have such authority in North Carolina.

Greenville Mayor Eugene West welcomed the group and Utilities Director Charles Horne presided.

GREENVILLE, N.C.

POOR MAIL SERVICE NOT THE FAULT OF THE LETTER CARRIER

The members of Branch 1729, National Association of Letter Carriers, Greenville, N.C. apologize to the Postal Customers for the deterioration in service given by the U.S. Postal Service since the birth of Postal Re-organization in 1971. However, we ask that you understand that the decisions being made are out of our hands and that you, the public, must demand the service you deserve. We sincerely hope that you will voice dissatisfaction with the Postal Service to your Congressman. You will find their names and addresses elsewhere in this article.

Carriers are constantly asked why it takes so long for a letter to go across the city or from one city to another. It's embarrassing not to have intelligent answers to these questions.

POSTAL RE-ORGANIZATION

Local Postal managers have been quoted as saying, "Service is all we have to sell," if this is true, and we feel it is, someone must be trying to bankrupt us! Little has been done to improve our service, but much has been done to eliminate it. How has the postal reorganization affected the public? Some effects that come to mind are curtailment of mail, elimination of collection service, elimination of Saturday business delivery, pressure tactics and experimental programs that are costly and are not working.

THE CENTRAL MARK-UP SYSTEM

This program automatically delays mail and in its first year operated in the red. Under our old system, your carrier re-addressed mail to your new address each morning before leaving for his route. By forwarding this mail at the beginning of the day it enabled this mail to be delivered the same day.

Under the present system, your carrier no longer forwards any mail. He doesn't even retain a record of your new address. The new system requires that all mail to be forwarded to a new street address or post office box be sent to a central unit.

Here, one or more central mark-up clerks attach pre-addressed gum labels to each letter or magazine. Under this system the mail is delayed 24 hours or more. And if the pre-addressed gum labels are printed wrong as some are, you may never receive your forwarded mail. This is a loss in service to you.

COLLECTION SERVICE

Can you imagine a piece of First Class Mail taking two and one half days to go five miles! It's quite possible under our present system. If on Saturday morning Ms. Jones mails a letter to someone and she happens to place it in the neighborhood collection box at 11:15 a.m. and the pick up time is 11:00 a.m., Ms. Jones you have our sympathy. Many of the neighborhood collection boxes are no longer served on weekends, therefore your letter will be in storage until Monday morning at 11:00 a.m. However, it will not get to the Post Office until the carrier returns in the afternoon. Ms. Jones, we all hope that Monday isn't a Holiday, if so Tuesday is the earliest collection. This is a loss of service to you.

EXPEDITED PREFERENTIAL MAIL

Under this system, First Class Mail and Second Class preferential mail is prepared for the day's delivery. The carrier theoretically returns to the office earlier and is required to case the remaining Second and Third Class matter and re-address all forwardable. This system is not working because of the erratic flow of mail. Thus causing most third class matter to be delayed 24 hours. Expedited Preferential Mail, E.P.M. has several other meanings: "Extremely Poor Management" and "End of Postal Morale."

KOKOMO PLAN

The Kokomo Plan, though still in its test stages has become one of the most controversial plans implemented by the U.S. Postal Service. The Kokomo test involves routes adjustment by the use of a computer from which an eight-hour route adjustment is programmed. This will cause an older employee (55 and up) to work at the same pace as a much younger person. This pace is virtually impossible for the older employee to keep up, thus forcing him into early retirement.

Please address all complaints to your Congressman. Some are listed below.

As 29 year old Birendra Bir Bikram Shah Dev becomes 10th ruler of Nepal's Shah dynasty

Mud, Honey, Pomp In King's Coronation Rites

By SYLVANA FOA
KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Princes and yak herders, lamas and lords trekked to Katmandu Saturday for Monday's coronation of their God King, 29-year-old Birendra Bir Bikram Shah Dev, the only Hindu monarch in the world.

Police stepped up security in the Nepalese capital to protect visiting dignitaries and to cut off any disruptions by political groups opposed to Birendra's absolute rule.

Joining the thousands of minstrels, folk dancers, and mountain people from the remote villages around Mt. Everest were Prince Charles and Lord Mountbatten of Britain, Prince Henrik of Denmark, Crown Prince Vong Savang of Laos, High Prince Bhanubandhu Yugala of Thailand and Princess Ashi Wangchuk of Bhutan.

More than 300 foreign dignitaries have been invited to witness the crowning of Birendra before a glittering assembly of royalty and statesmen at precisely 8:35 a.m.—the auspicious hour decreed by royal astrologers.

President Ford's legal counsel, Philip Buchen, headed the American delegation. From China came Vice Premier Chen Hsi-lian and Deputy Foreign Minister Han Nien-lung.

Brahmin priests will anoint the young king with clay, dust and mud from 12 locations, including a mountaintop, an-thill, harlot's door, elephant, horse and cow stables, the wheels of a chariot and the confluence of two rivers.

The chunky king will be bathed by representatives of the four major castes with honey from an earthen jar, curd from a copper jug and milk and butter from silver and gold vessels.

As Hindu priests chant ancient mantras, the king receives a final anointing with 16 holy waters and is sprinkled with flowers.

The king, who studied at Eton and Tokyo University and spent a year at Harvard, will ascend a golden throne and don a $2 million crown of diamonds, pearls and rubies, making him the 10th ruler of the Shah dynasty.

HIS CORONATION COMING IN NEPAL—King Birendra Bir Bikram Shah Dev, 29-year-old ruler of Nepal, will receive his jeweled and feathered crown Monday in a sacred rite in Katmandu, Nepal. He has ruled the tiny kingdom since 1972 but delayed the official coronation to await the moment appointed by the royal astrologers. (AP Wirephoto)

Ethiopian Junta Claims Over 2300 Rebels Killed

By RAYMOND WILKINSON
ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The military junta said Saturday its troops had killed more than 2,300 Eritrean rebels in three weeks of fighting in Ethiopia's northern province while its own army suffered only light casualties.

It was the first official statement on either government or rebel casualties since the fighting erupted Jan. 31. Independent military observers said the government's figures were difficult to believe.

An official statement on Ethiopia radio said 2,321 rebels had been killed and another 324 captured or wounded. Government forces casualties were given as 87 killed, 188 wounded and one missing. The statement said 124 civilians were also killed.

Independent military observers said the announced number of rebels killed represented more than one-third of the guerrilla's frontline fighting strength of 6,000 and, if true, meant the government had smashed the three-week old rebellion.

They noted the guerrillas were still encircling the Eritrean capital of Asmara in strength and that heavy fighting was continuing.

Casualty reports thus far have been very sketchy. Placed together from military, diplomatic, hospital and civilian sources, they showed several hundred government troops killed or wounded, perhaps as many as 1,500 civilians and an unknown number of guerrillas killed.

Sporadic firing was reported around Asmara Saturday as the military government staged a public show of strength in the province.

Trains Collide

By SVEIN ROHNE
OSLO (UPI) — Two express trains loaded with vacationing skiers crashed head-on Saturday, pinning more than a dozen bodies beneath mangled cars and sending survivors scampering for safety in northern Norway's snow-covered landscape.

Norwegian railway officials placed the official death toll at 12 but said "in all likelihood it will go quite a bit higher, possibly up to more than 20 when we pry the last wagon apart."

"We have brought in a portable crane to help us pry open one of the cars, but we will not start work on it until when it gets light on Sunday," a railway spokesman said.

Twenty-six others were injured, 15 of them critically. Railway officials said most of the passengers were Scandinavians either going to or returning from skiing vacations, but added there could have been foreigners among victims, some of whom were not immediately identified.

The collision occurred at Tretten, 20 miles north of the ski resort of Lillehammer and 100 miles north of Oslo. The dead and injured were taken to a hospital in Lillehammer.

"The whole scene looked terrible," said 22-year-old Erlend Rasmussen. "One car was standing on the top of another. I did not realize at once that there had been a crash. First I believed the driver suddenly pulled all the brakes. Nobody in my car was seriously injured. There was some panic, but after a while everybody calmed down."

A police official said in a radio report from the scene that rescue work was hampered by snow.

"We have managed to get all the injured out, but there are still several dead inside one of the cars which is badly crushed," he said.

The state-owned railway commission began an investigation.

Mondale Calls For Oil Tax Changes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The time has come to change the system by which oil companies can legitimately use foreign tax credits as "an enormous tax eraser," Sen. Walter F. Mondale said Saturday.

The Minnesota Democrat also said in a statement that American oil companies are being driven overseas to seek the tax shelter.

"The tax bill passed by the House Ways and Means Committee last year made a modest start on limiting abuse of the foreign tax credit by the big multinational oil companies," Mondale said.

"Unfortunately, the bill died at the end of the year. Its revival must be one of the first orders of business in the new Congress."

Mondale said the tax technique is legal, but deplorable.

11.4 Unemployment Rate

RALEIGH (AP)—"Just when we thought it was leveling off—zip, it goes right back up again."

That was the reaction Friday of a spokesman for the North Carolina Employment Security Commission to the latest insured unemployment figure for the state.

The ESC said that North Carolina's rate jumped to a record-tying 11.4 per cent in the week ending February 8. The figure means that 197,000 North Carolina workers are jobless. ESC officials blamed layoffs in the furniture and textile industries for the increase.

The unemployment rate matches the standard set in mid-January. Since that time, the rate had been declining slightly, leading ESC officials to say that the problem had leveled off.

By way of comparison, they noted that the comparable 1973 unemployment figure was 1.9 per cent.

Winter Crisis Over

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's natural gas crisis is over for the this winter, at least, according to State Energy Director Fowler Martin.

Martin's assessment was made Friday after Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Corp. of Houston announced it was restoring another 1.383 billion cubic feet of gas to the state for the rest of the winter.

It was the fifth Transco restoration since the gas supplier announced a drastic cutback on December 27. It means that the state's total winter supply is up to 78 per cent of the expected allocation.

However, since the largest restorations have come with the winter half over, their effect on the actual gas supply until April 15 is doubled.

Abernathy Visits Miss Little

RALEIGH (UPI) — Rev. Ralph Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), met Saturday with Joan Little, who the civil rights group says acted in self defense in killing a Beaufort County jailer last year.

Abernathy, on a three-day visit to North Carolina, talked for 10 minutes with Miss Little at the women's prison where she has been confined since last September.

Miss Little goes to trial April 14 on a charge of murdering Clarence Alligood, jailer at the Beaufort County jail in Washington, N.C., last Aug. 27.

Endorses Tax Package

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Common Cause of North Carolina, a public interest group, has endorsed a tax reform package introduced by Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford.

Gerry Hancock, chairman of Common Cause called the North Carolina tax system "significantly regressive" and urged support of Smith's measures.

Smith's package would hike income tax on higher incomes, repeal the deduction for North Carolina corporate dividends, repeal the ceiling on the amount of sales tax that can be collected on certain transactions, place higher taxes on luxuries and repeal the sales tax on food.

Workers To Be Laid Off

RALEIGH (UPI) — Some 568 contract workers for Carolina Power and Light Co. will be laid off as the company cuts back on some of its routine line maintenance work, according to a CP&L official.

Edgar Geddie, CP&L vice president for division operations, said the firm decided to suspend the maintenance work following an order of the state utilities commission that rolls back fuel escalator rates by 25 per cent.

Holshouser Is Representative

RALEIGH (UPI) — Gov. James E. Holshouser will represent the 50 state governors Tuesday at a national bicentennial program in Washington.

Also on the program with Holshouser will be President Ford and San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto.

Police Strike Over

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — A 22-hour strike by the Cherokee Indian police force is over.

The eight officers returned to work at the reservation Friday after officials agreed to discuss their wage demands with the tribal council.

Officials have refused to reinstate officer Paul Price, whose firing early this week touched off the walkout. A tribal spokesman said Price's firing had nothing to do with the fact that he was the only non-Indian on the force.

ABA Considering Resolution On Reform Of Rape Laws

By JOSEPH R. TYBOR
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The American Bar Association is considering a resolution recommending reform of rape laws to protect women victims and take into account homosexual attacks.

The proposed resolution asks that state statutes cover homosexual and bisexual rapes, both of which an accompanying ABA report says are on the increase along with rape of the opposite sex.

"Men, in almost all states, cannot be the victims of rape by statutory definition," says Connie Borkenhagen, author of the resolution.

Ms. Borkenhagen, as she prefers to be known, said in an interview Friday at the ABA's midannual business session that her two-year research showed homosexual rapes are common in prisons.

Also, her resolution states, "There seems to be an emerging class of rapists who are not particular about whom they rape — men or women or both. And male victims are usually more reluctant than women to press charges if they have been sexually assaulted."

Ms. Borkenhagen is a final year law student at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, and an ABA spokesman said her resolution, which comes through the ABA's Student Law Committee, has a favorable chance of passage when it is considered by the House of Delegates next week.

Ms. Borkenhagen's interest in rape laws was sparked by a close friend who was victimized while a gun was put to her head and her baby slept in the next room. The defendant was acquitted.

"Rape is a crime of violence, whether it is perpetrated in its traditional form or whether penetration is accomplished in any of dozens of other perverse ways," she said. "The effect is always humiliation, and usually physical and mental anguish to the victim — whether that victim be young or old, rich or poor, black, white, brown or red, female or male."

She said in most states, male rape can be prosecuted only under sodomy statutes, which usually are misdemeanors.

Reforms she recommends include:

- Treating rape and other forms of sexual assault as crimes of violence rather than of sexual passion;

- Eliminate usual requirements that the victim resist to the utmost;

- Eliminate the requirement

Student Arrested

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — High School senior Danny Alstadt was arrested on suspicion of murder Saturday when firemen found the bodies of his parents and sister in their burning house.

His brother, Gary, 15, a sophomore, was taken to Alvarado hospital for treatment of severe head wounds. His condition was critical.

The dead were William Alstadt, an electronic engineer in his mid-forties, his wife, Maxine, 41, and their daughter, Nancy, 19, a department store employe and college student.

Hearing Set On Vet School Bill

A bill introduced in the State Legislature to establish a School of Veterinary Medicine at N.C. State is set for a hearing before the Senate Agricultural Committee Tuesday at noon.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Vernon White of Pitt County. He is also chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

The bill provides for an appropriation of $4 million over the 1975-77 biennium. This would provide planning funds, the hiring of a dean and faculty members, renovation of a building to be used for interim facilities and excavation and running of utilities lines to the site for a permanent building.

It is anticipated that the school would actually begin operations in 1977.

Leash Law A Logical Solution

A few days back one of our editors was driving on Memorial Drive. Suddenly he hit the brakes and brought his auto to a virtual halt. Standing in the middle of one of the lanes was a dog, completely oblivious to the traffic which hurdles by on the busy highway.

The dog could have easily been killed, and it may be in the future if it is allowed by its owners to continue roaming about the city. Dogs can be spotted almost everyday that have been struck and killed by vehicles, usually through no fault of the driver.

As more people move to Greenville the dog problem seems to be proliferating.

Dogs on the streets is not the only problem, however. Dogs are at times a menace to pedestrians and bicyclists. We recently saw a motorcyclist having to virtually stop his bike to avoid running over a dog which was nipping at the front tire.

The dog problem has become a major one for the city schools. So much so that the Board of Education adopted a resolution last week calling for a 24-hour leash law for dogs. There were verified reports of children being bitten by dogs, or frightened by dogs roaming on the school grounds. Of course, the number of dogs which hang around the ECU campus is almost beyond belief.

So it is obvious to us that the problem of dogs roaming freely about the city has become one where definite action is needed.

Not all dogs cause trouble, of course and we love dogs individually as much as anyone. Still it should be every citizen's right not to have to be bothered by somebody else's pet.

We think a leash law is the logical solution to the problem. It will merely require those who want to own dogs to keep them under control and that is not too much to ask. The only other solution we can see would be some sort of financial responsibility law such as we have for automobiles, so that owners would be responsible for damage their pets do. That does not seem a likely possibility at present; thus we would urge the City Council to approve laws requiring dog owners to keep their pets under control.

THIS AFTERNOON Fights Confusing Wordage

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—State Senator Mary H. Odom is a lady of few words—or at least, clear words.

She is declaring war on confusing and misleading words in contracts, written as they are by people who "love words in many syllables and wandering complex sentences."

To make her declaration of independence from small print more complete, Mrs. Odom proposed that effective July 4, 1976 (that would give everybody time to use up all the old contracts) all contracts signed in North Carolina must be understandable to all parties—buyer and seller.

Seller, who normally produce the contracts, would "take into account the educational, occupational, and age levels of those to whom a sale is made," the senator says.

Thus, a deed, sales contract, or insurance policy would not be legal if signed by a citizen with minimal education and legal knowledge to the degree that he did not understand it.

To the contrary, Mrs. Odom says, "if two Philadelphia—or North Carolina—lawyers wish to develop and sign a highly complex contract and both understand what they are talking about, then that would be legal."

The proposal is now up for consideration by the General Assembly—dominated by lawyers who made a great deal of money figuring out how to write, and interpret, contracts.

Gas-Guzzlers Beware

Another measure which hits right at home in the General Assembly is one put forth by State Senator McNeill Smith recently.

In a building whose parking lot is cluttered as it is with Cadillacs, Chryslers, and Continentals, Smith has introduced a bill which he labels succinctly: "Gas Guzzlers Surcharge."

It would, effective with 1976 cars, set up a yearly fee to be paid into a special state mass transit fund by owners of cars which get bad gas mileage. Based on federal figures, a car which gets below 11 miles per gallon would cost the owner $150 a year, payable at the time of license renewal.

For a car getting between 12 and 16 miles per gallon, the fee would be $50; for 17 to 20 miles per gallon it would be $10; and for those getting over 21 miles per gallon, no charge.

The license plate fee itself would remain the same under Smith's proposal, which he designed to encourage people to get more economical cars to help conserve energy.

Wide Distribution

A crowd of legislators almost mobbed a staff research economist after a recent meeting at which the economist predicted a lengthy recession, reaching lower than previously indicated and lasting longer, and effectively spurred General Assembly consideration of even further economy measures.

It looked like an autograph party surrounding the young man, as lawmakers scurried to get additional copies of his projections.

Turns out the copies were not needed for committee deliberations: "I need them for my wife and children," grunted more than one solon as he snatched up the pessimistic sheets for use as ammunition in fighting the homefront battle of the budget.

Those projections by Staff Economist Lloyd T. O'Carroll say that if the proposed budget of Gov. James E. Holshouser is adopted as is, the state will end up $33 million in the red next fiscal year, and go in the hole another $63 million the following fiscal year.

State law prohibits deficit spending such as that, and the governor's budget is based on projections by other economists which take a more optimistic view of the economy in coming years.

It will be months before the General Assembly resolves the obvious conflict.

Sunday Morning Notes

The British Broadcasting Corporation is filming a documentary on Edward R. Murrow. As a part of the program the BBC sent a team to Greenville for interviews with local people concerning their recollections of Murrow.

Murrow was a frequent visitor here when he was head of the U.S. Information Service, which includes Voice of America.

One of those interviewed was Mayor Eugene West.

The mayor was congratulated by one of the BBC teams when the interview was concluded.

"The Town of Greenville will be seen all over the

"City of Greenville..."

ALVIN TAYLOR

Mayor West quickly corrected. Oh, well. Town, city, it still could be Martinborough, named after that British governor.

After who knows how many days of rain, a sign appeared in the window of Willard and Webb on E. Fifth Street. "Into each life some rain must fall... but this is ridiculous," it read. How true.

Chamber of Commerce-Merchants Association Manager Harold Creech has a changeable sign mounted above the entrance to the association office on Evans Street.

A new message is put up every week or so. Last week the message read, "Did you know Greenville is the center of the world? See our window."

Naturally such a message as that sent most curious people, including your columnist, scurrying to the Chamber office window.

Sure enough there was official map there. It was a Voice of America world map with Greenville at its very center. Circles radiated out to cover the entire world with the appropriate distances from our very own city.

Sadat Bets On Kissinger

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CAIRO—The end of the long, thin limb on which Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is now perched may break off if Henry Kissinger fails to arrange a second-stage Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai, but the fact he hasn't fallen already is a certifiable miracle.

Sadat today is Egypt's one-man show, making all decisions himself in a manner never attempted by the late Gamal Abdel Nasser. Consider, for example, the grave risk Sadat has taken in refusing to salaam to Moscow despite the Kremlin's control over Egypt's military capability.

In Moscow last October Egyptian defense minister Abdel Ghani el-Gamassi was gloatingly shown an array of sophisticated weaponry. All these goodies, he was told, would be made available to his army and air force, whose fearful losses in the October 1973 war have never been replaced by the Russians, immediately following Leonid Brezhnev's planned visit to Cairo in January—if.

The if was Egyptian knuckling under to Soviet demands that Sadat break his intimate Kissinger connection and agree to reconvene the Geneva conference. Moscow, as conference co-chairman with the U.S., would then have its passee back to a prominent pro-Arab role in the Middle East and the dominant U.S. role would end.

Gamassi, facing an Israel militarily far stronger than ever before, carried the message back to Sadat—where it was immediately dropped into the presidential wastebasket. That was a major factor in Brezhnev's decision to cancel his Cairo trip.

But the Russians play hard ball. Two weeks ago, when Brezhnev sent his foreign minister Andrei Gromyko to Cairo, the earlier scene was reenacted. Once again, refusing to weaken his Kissinger connection, Sadat humiliated the Kremlin by vetoing Gromyko's appeal for a Cairo-Moscow communique setting a March deadline for resumption of the Geneva conference. The cost to Sadat: Soviet arms to replace his huge 1973 losses (only two squadrons of late-model MIGs have been cleared for shipment to Cairo and they were promised the Egyptians in March 1973, long before the October war).

But the risk to Sadat in refusing to weaken the Kissinger connection goes far beyond Moscow. Israel's overwhelming military superiority is recognized by all Arabs today as the direct result of U.S. taxpayers. Anti-Sadat-U.S. propaganda by the fanatical Libyan regime and the Palestinian Organization (PLO) is routine, but Sadat's clinging to "my friend Henry" is now beginning to turn more responsible and influential Arab states against him, including Algeria.

Sadat, whose polished appearance is that of a bourgeois businessman far more than a political strategist, seems impervious. Indeed, he is trying hard to exploit his anti-Soviet posture with the hordes of visiting American Congressmen now filling hotel rooms here. His hope: by personal lobbying, to convince the U.S. Congress of his peaceful intentions toward Israel—he has few arms to fight with—and thereby gain long overdue sympathy in the U.S. One convert was the liberal Republican, Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois. Another was conservative Republican Sen. James McClure of Idaho.

"Gromyko sat right there in that chair and said he did not like my close relations with Kissinger," Sadat told McClure 10 days ago. McClure got the point.

But if Sadat loses his bet on Kissinger, which is quite possible, and war again breaks out, starting on the Syrian front, Sadat would not even be able to hold his defensive positions in the Sinai. One day at the most is the informed military guess here as to how long it would take if the Israelis chose to move back to the east bank of the Suez Canal.

Even if he wins his bet and Israel returns the strategic Sinai passes and the oil fields to Egypt, but the deal fails to include hard assurances of Israeli withdrawals from Syria and the Palestinian West Bank, Sadat then faces Arab world isolation for having sold out his brother Arabs.

Yet with all these trials, Sadat may be able to survive on the end of his precarious limb. He retains much popular support, despite (Continued on Page A-5)

Other Editors Say Over-Regulated

(Jacksonville Daily News)

When the first U.S. regulatory commission—the Interstate Commerce Commission—was established in 1887 to regulate railroads, Congress was optimistic about its value to the growing nation. It believed that an independent regulatory agency would provide an important transportation industry with continuity, expert advice, impartiality and isolation from political whirlwinds.

Today, nearly a century later, it does not take an expert to realize that the ICC has failed to achieve its goal. Dr. Paul McCracken, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, says that federal regulation has produced "sick and arthritic" industries, and that ICC in particular is guilty of "social irresponsibility of cosmic proportions." He is not overstating the case.

The National Council on Productivity estimates, as one example, that ICC regulations which force trucks to return home empty cost consumers $250 million a year. Eliminating the regulation also could save a quarter of a billion gallons of truck fuel. Because of ICC regulations, citizens also pay $400 million in excessive railway freight rates, according to the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

ICC is not by any means the only culprit. For example, partly because of Civil Aeronautics Board regulations U.S. airline fares across the North Atlantic are three times those offered by a British airway. A buyer of a 1975 automobile pays $500 extra because of federal pollution regulations of dubious usefulness. Government requirements for pollution controls in industry cost American consumers the staggering sum of $10.4 billion last year, and not all of the controls are necessary. Moreover, the Bureau of Domestic Commerce says that unnecessary National Labor Relations Board regulations that lead to feather-bedding are costing Americans up to $3 billion extra in construction costs, $1.2 billion in railway shipping costs, $400 million more at the supermarket and more than $275 million in truck shipping costs.

Even these mammoth sums are insignificant to the economic damage that federal regulations do by interfering with the free competitive American marketplace—by interfering with the laws of supply and demand.

Housing Faces Old Problems

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Americans like to boast that theirs is the best-housed nation in the world, seemingly oblivious to the slums, the vast number of homes in disrepair, the poorly planned or fragmented services.

And they either forget or fail to appreciate how housing in the United States is almost always the industry to feel the economic pinch the first and worst, and sometimes is the last to recover.

Legislators have talked about it, industry and social service representatives have complained about it, and families seeking homes have been forced to tolerate it, but nothing substantial is done about it.

Housing now is near the depths of its collapse, having been undermined by high interest rates that siphoned off money to Uncle Sam and industry, both of which could pay the higher rates.

Homebuyers couldn't afford such rates, and neither could most homebuilders, the nature of the industry being that a goodly percentage of the work be done by relatively small, poorly financed businessmen.

Now, with interest rates falling and people returning their funds to the savings and loan associations, the biggest mortgage lenders, the outlook is beginning to show signs of improving.

For the first time in four months, housing starts rose in January. Nevertheless, the annual rate for that month was only 987,000 units, less than one-half the rate most officials feel is needed.

Ironically, one of the things that may hold back the recovery is a big inventory of unsold apartments and single-family houses. About 410,000 units remain unsold, largely because customers could not obtain mortgages.

It is probably for this reason that the bright news, the first in months, was partially eclipsed by a shadow of old problems. Housing permits issued, an indication of future activity,

Paying Their Taxes

By ROBERT H. REID

Associated Press Writer

Even with recession, North Carolinians are still paying their property taxes.

However, some are taking a little longer this year.

The rate of collection for real and personal property tax has slowed down in several North Carolina counties and officials believe the economy is to blame.

However, those contacted by The Associated Press said they expected no major problem in collecting enough money for local government budgets.

"People seem to understand that taxes are an obligation even if times are hard," said Ernest Martin of the Guilford County tax office. Since North Carolina does not have a municipal income tax system, property taxes make up a large share of the revenue with which local governments operate.

"I think that probably the economy had a lot to do with it," said a tax official in Buncombe County, where collections are lagging. "Plants have closed, people laid off and there are shorter work weeks. I guess people just think their food and utilities come first."

In Buncombe County, 86.75 per cent of the 1974 tax levy of $19.9 million had been collected by Jan. 31, the official said. By that date a year ago, 88.9 per cent of the taxes had been paid.

Mecklenburg County officials blamed an increase in bankruptcies for part of their problem in collecting the 1974 city-county levy of $87 million.

"Of course, we're collecting much more money than we did last year, but by percentage, we're still behind," said asst. tax collector Fred A. Griffith.

Griffith said the percentage of collections for the city of Charlotte as of Jan. 31 was about 2 per cent below the per-

40 Years Ago Today

February 22, 1935

A former defense investigator said today that counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann had ignored evidence that the body in the murder case could not have been that of the Lindbergh baby.

Seven autopsy experts were ready to show, declared George Foster, that the body found five miles from Hopewell, N.J. and identified by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh as his son in reality was:

1. More than four inches taller than the Lindbergh child.

2. Decomposed more than would have been possible in the mild weather after the kidnapping.

3. Embalmed. The assertion came today as the present counsel prepared to go to Trenton late today for a conference on the disagreement over the appeal procedure.

Robbers entered the Citizen's Ice Company here last night and escaped with $30 that had been left in a desk drawer by one of the employees.

Entrance to the building was made through a brick door by removing of a staple from the latch.

TO HAVE MORE FAITH

How can I have more religious faith? This question is easily answered—use the faith you have and the faith you need will be added into it. Jesus described this situation once by saying that faith in some cases is like a mustard seed, and he went on to say that if men would use that faith to its fullest they could move mountains. No one would think, to look at a mustard seed, that it would ever grow into a large plant. Yet it does so when it is planted, that is, when it is used. Jesus was always more interested in the faith men used than in whatever faith they theoretically had. He intimated that it is better to have a little faith and use it rather than to have much faith and not use it.

Start with what you believe, put into operation whatever principles you cherish, and you will be surprised to find that within a short time the mustard seed has sprouted into something the magnitude of which you could never have foreseen. —by Elisha Douglass

Observations From Editorial Columns

Voters Should Decide

(Ayden News-Leader)

As we stated last week, we are most skeptical of the efforts of the Board of Trustees of Pitt Technical Institute to turn that fine job-training school into a community college.

For the rather simple reason that this county doesn't need another college, but it does need a vocational school for technical training. And the citizens of this county don't need another project into which more tax dollars must eventually be funneled.

Not only that, but we certainly resent efforts of the PTI Board to circumvent the will of the voters of this county by going to the North Carolina Legislature for approval rather than call for a referendum to give the citizens a chance to approve or disapprove of this change.

An identical effort five years ago by Pitt Tech was turned down by the voters in a special referendum. At that time, a county-wide move to halt the change, complete with an advertising budget, originated in our office. So, at least five years ago, our arguments were agreed upon by a majority of the voting public. What has changed at this time? If there are valid arguments for the change, why shouldn't the voters be made aware of them and be given an opportunity to approve them?

Pitt Technical Institute has a brief but very commendable history. We believe it deserves much of the credit for the industrial growth which has been experienced in this county during the past 12 years. But we still are apprehensive, as we were five years ago, that the Institute, should it acquire community college status, will lose sight of its main function—to provide technical training for the thousands of young people whose primary interest, for a variety of reasons, lies in being able to qualify for and prosper in a skilled profession.

This is a most important undertaking. We see the fruits of this labor all around us every day—as evident perhaps as the benefits derived from graduation from the ever-growing and nationally recognized East Carolina University, within "hollering distance" of PTI.

But, in spite of our fears and apprehensions, we concede that we could be wrong, and the benefits of a change to community college status could outweigh the possible disadvantages. In that case, what would be the harm of another referendum as in 1970? What would be the harm in explaining these advantages to the people, and trusting in their good judgment and sense of fairness for a favorable vote. Once the voters have approved it, we would have no complaints.

But until then, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners would be wise not to attempt to disenfranchise the voters of this county in this matter!

Independent Voice

(New York Times) . . . For decades the Voice of America has struggled to attain a clear sense of mission and of corporate identity. Founded at the beginning of the cold war with the Soviet Union, it has labored under a misleading motto, "telling America's story to the world." That motto invites interference by White House and State Department policymakers who, in every Administration, are naturally eager to see to it that "America's story" coincides with their current policy line.

Bureaucratic practice has institutionalized this interference. Although V.O.A. is part of the autonomous United States Information Agency, it is integrated with the State Department's Foreign Service. Its news editors receive "policy guidance" from Foreign Service officers who serve tours with the Voice in the normal progress of their careers. The relationship is all one-sided, since V.O.A. reporters and editors never become Ambassadors.

The V.O.A. has been in existence for thirty years, but none of its own career people has ever risen to the top of the U.S.I.A., even though the Voice is by far the largest constituent agency in that organization. A few of its directors have been outstanding professional newsmen, such as John Chancellor, who served for a year during the Johnson Administration, and the late Edward R. Murrow, who served during the Kennedy Administration. But far more often, Presidents have selected directors with less attention to their distinction as journalists than to their political or ideological conformity.

A study commission headed by Dr. Frank Stanton is now reviewing the V.O.A.'s status as part of a larger study of the Federal Government's overseas cultural and information activities. Since culture and information are concepts that cannot be easily distinguished, either in theory or day-to-day practice, the commission may well recommend a merger. Such a reorganization would provide an excellent opportunity for establishing the Voice of America as what it should have been from the first—an entirely separate entity under its own board, having no relationship with the State Department.

If run solely as a straight news organization, as in its best periods it has been, the Voice can tell the truth as objectively and factually as possible to listeners around the world whose own newspapers and news broadcasts are heavily censored by authoritarian governments. Regardless of the turns of official American diplomacy, this nation's interests are best served by the truth.

A Conservative View Not Quite 'Fort Sumter' For Conservatives

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Several hundred of the country's most devoted conservatives came to Washington a few days ago for a Political Action Conference. They arrived full of conviction, yet troubled by doubt. They left the same way. It was a productive conference, but not a decisive one.

The conservatives' dilemma will be understood by every husband or wife who ever has thought seriously of separation or divorce. To stay, or to go? Looking at their relationship with the Republican party, many conservatives find the union intolerable. They are restless, dissatisfied, unhappy. Surely, they say, there must be more to a happy marriage than this.

Yet, precisely because they are conservatives, their political instincts are at war with anything so dramatic as divorce. It is part of the conservative nature to defend the status quo against precipitous change, to bear the ills we have rather than fly to others that we know not of. Idealism says go; tradition and pragmatism cry stay.

Let me state my own position clearly and without equivocation: I waffle. Part of me—usually the dominant part of me—is pure Southern. Like-minded conservatives will understand. Politically, we still stand up for "Dixie." We thrill to cries of secession. Few things are more appealing than to fight gallantly, even though the cause be lost, for virtue, for principle, and for honor. The bugle's call is music to our ears.

Alas, we hear other voices also. These are the cool voices that say to the hothead, "Don't, without the most compelling necessity, make a fool of yourself." Third parties are exercises in futility; they tend to attract young amateurs and old prima donnas; they exhaust themselves in wordy rhetoric; they invite self-immolation in the flame of their passionate zeal. Conservatives, we are told, can accomplish far more by working within the Republican party than by rumping off on their own.

Most of the participants in last week's conference came to the Hotel Mayflower in the hope they were coming to Fort Sumter. They hungered for a call to political arms. Their grievances with the Republican party were palpably painful: Nixon, Watergate, Rockefeller, inflation, recession, deficit spending. The wounds of November were still bleeding. Ronald Reagan had only to raise his arm—he had only to cry "Follow me!"—to ignite a rebel cause.

It was not to be. Reagan said everything they wanted to hear—except for the one thing they wanted most to hear. Sen. James L. Buckley did not introduce Reagan as a Lee, or Jackson, or Beauregard. Buckley described Reagan as the conservatives' "Rembrandt," an allusion that left them deflated. Clifton White, the old pro with the Goldwater battle ribbon, argued against secession. Columnist Kevin Phillips warned the participants against the perils of "overidealism." In the end, they appointed a committee to make a report.

Perhaps this was all that could have been done, or should have been done. Plainly, the hostile conservative presence was not lost on President Ford. In an interview with the Washington Star-News, Ford did his best to defend his own conservative image. He candidly acknowledged that without conservative support, the Republican ticket would have little chance in 1976. He urged the disgruntled right to stay with the party.

For the time being, that may be the sensible course. I am far from certain. It seems plausible that 122 years ago, Millard Fillmore was saying to his disgruntled friends: Stay with the Whigs. But the Whigs were bankrupt. They had compromised themselves out of existence. The party no longer was an effective mechanism for electing candidates or promoting ideas. In the elections of 1854, the newborn Republicans elected 108 congressmen and 15 senators. Advocates of a new Republican party had leadership then. Advocates of a new Conservative party have none today.

NEVER LAID A HAND ON ME!

Investigative Press Is Focusing On Congress And Uncovering Abuses

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Increasingly, the Washington press is bringing Congress, and its individual members, within the range of its microscope, which for so many years has been trained on the White House. And, what's more, it is turning to the computer for analysis of who does what and why.

This should be welcomed, from a public interest point of view. It's a natural follow-up of critical attitudes toward the White House which began with Johnson's escalation of the Vietnam war and climaxed with Nixon's Watergate. The press is extending its "adversary" role, under the broad banner of "the people's right to know."

One evidence of the trend has been the increasing willingness of the media to write and say what it knows about the "private lives" of public figures—the playing around, drinking, acceptance of "freebies" and abuses of office.

This has given substance to much that has been gossip. It's easy to sell—the lowdown on the hiphops. But the digging goes much deeper. It is beginning to examine Congress's responsibility for the problems of the times. Already, it has produced evidence of irresponsibility on major legislation. Some actions of widely known Senators are questioned.

Congress can be expected to have no liking for what is going on. It's inclined to see itself as national board of directors, voting broad policies and approving funds. Then, if difficulties develop, it blames the President, the chief executive officer. It's similar to the corporate system.

It's a fact that most members of Congress do not understand the ramifications of legislation they vote. Their prime interest is to hold seats, often won by out-flaming the opponent.

Take an example uncovered by the Associated Press. In 1969, Congress voted a little formula to adjust pensions of some two million retired civilian and military personnel for living costs increases. What the legislators failed to notice was a "sleeper", which the AP said will cost taxpayers an extra $100-billion by 1990. That's not peanuts.

This probably threw a little light on the ease with which Congress voted the Johnson "Great Society" social benefits without stopping to figure they would, over the years, gobble up the economy. It didn't know what it was doing. It's eyes were on the quick political benefits.

This kind of reporting can bring into popular focus the way endless deficits OK'd by the House and Senate set the stage for much of the wild inflation which has produced today's spreading recession, accompanied by chilling unemployment rates.

A Washington Post endeavor now is sending out wide ripples on Capitol Hill. Months ago, The Post set out to examine the activities of so-called Senate leaders—Democratic Chairmen of the many Committees and the host of subcommittees and "ranking" Republicans. The project was beyond the scope of a reporter with only legs, a pad and pencil. The computer was brought in play. What came out was revealing.

Many of these "leaders" have abused their positions to build their own political machines to win reelection and even push bids for higher office, meaning the presidency. A common practice uncovered has been the diversion of committee staff from authorized activities to the political use of the Chairmen. The Post said a lot of this violated law, meaning a misuse of authorized funds.

Among prominent Senators whose activities have been detailed in The Post series is Ted Kennedy. He casts an image of a broad gauge man, with great expertise on issues of the day. He is a member of the Judiciary Committee and heads two subcommittees, Administrative Practices and Procedures and Refugees and Escapees.

What the computer came forth with on Kennedy was no way flattering. It pictured him as a crafty politician, with an end-justifies-the-means approach. The Post noted that "one of the practices the printouts pointed to was Kennedy's routine diversion of staff members from his two subcommittees of the Judiciary."

All Senators get staff allotments, although amounts differ, depending largely on state population. Kennedy's was reported at $496,904 for 1974. The Post found that by "diverting these dozen people from his two subcommittees" he added the tidy sum of $169,794.

And included in those diverted were "experts" on foreign affairs, energy, gun control, all outside the intended scopes of the subcommittees. This helps explain the Kennedy expertise and the same can be said for others in the Senate.

And the same can be said for others in the Senate.

A 1946 law says "professional staff members shall not engage in any work other than committee business and no other duties may be assigned to them."

The computer approach to Congress just might tell voters and taxpayers why so much legislation to do them good winds up on the other side of the ledger.

By Gail Michaels Examination Pressure Requires Outlet, So--

The intense mental pressure that builds up during examination periods does funny things to me. By the end of this week, I had put my slacks on over my head once, returned the cereal to the refrigerator twice, and let Phillip eat all my Valentine candy without stomping on his instep. So it's no wonder that I try to relax after exams are over by doing something physically creative.

Of course, choosing the right creative outlet can be difficult. For instance, I found that painting one's finger nails fluorescent pink is not a good outlet because it attracts bugs. Neither is cleaning windows a good outlet because it attracts birds. But at the end of last quarter I found the perfect outlet—redecorating the house.

The most obvious place to begin redecorating was the kitchen. Actually, I decided to begin there after my neighbor told me that the history of our house could be determined from our kitchen walls. She was right. After much somber meditation, I figured one of the former residents had been a short order cook. The walls were freckled brown—the exact shade being a cross between a hamburger and a fried chicken.

Fortunately, Phillip was willing to help, that is, after I threatened to dye all his underwear purple. So, early one Saturday morning we rented a steamer and proceeded to steam the wallpaper off the wall. Now you're probably wondering where the wallpaper that comes off the wall goes. The answer is easy—it goes on the floor, it goes on the furniture, and it goes on you. After an hour of steaming Phillip and I looked like two rejects from a Mexican pinata factory. And after two hours of trying to clean ourselves up, we decided to donate our bodies to a recycling plant.

GAIL MICHAELS

However, after a day of hard cleaning, there was not a trace of wallpaper in the house. Not only that, there was not a trace of Phillip in the house. I think he left somewhere in the middle of my debate between "Ravishing Red," "Yummy Yellow," and "Green Gumbo" paint colors. I finally decided on "Yummy Yellow," and, confident in my own abilities, I set to work.

Because the man at the paint store told me that rollers put the most amount of paint on the wall in the least time, I bought a roller. What he didn't tell me about rollers was that while the roller is rolling paint out one side, it's spraying paint out the other. By the time I finished one wall my avocado appliances were absolutely jaundiced with "Yummy Yellow," and I strongly resembled a mangy Chihuahua. At this point I decided to test the paint store's claim that all their paints washed off with soap and water. Unfortunately, the paint may wash off the walls, but it doesn't wash off human beings. In fact, I think it permanently reacted with the chemicals in my skin. And, I assure you, "Yummy Yellow" is not one of the more becoming cosmetics with which a girl can adorn herself.

After much scrubbing, I dejaundiced the appliances and managed to tone down my splashes to the point that they began to look less like mange and more like liver spots. Then, just as I finished cleaning the roller, Phillip walked in the door. He stared at me; he stared at the walls. Then he passed judgment. "Gee, this looks great! Which room are we going to paint next?"

Majority Pessimistic But Economic Outlook Is Brightening

The shape of the economy in the months ahead will depend to a considerable extent on the attitudes and behavior of the nation's consumers. Today's report is part of the Gallup Poll's continuing and comprehensive coverage of the economic scene.

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—A majority of Americans continue to believe the economy will get worse during the next six months, with as many as a third describing the nation's current economic situation as either a "mild" or "serious" depression.

At the same time, however, the proportion who say the economic situation will get worse during the next six months has declined sharply since November—from 71 per cent to 56 per cent.

A decline is also recorded in the percentage of Americans who believe the economy is heading toward a depression such as the one experienced in the 1930s—from 57 per cent who held this view last October to 43 per cent in the latest nationwide survey.

The downtrend in pessimism since last fall's measurements has been most pronounced among "upscale" groups, that is, those with a college background and persons in higher income brackets.

Third Say U.S. Is In A Depression

When survey respondents were asked to choose (from a card) the term they feel best describes the current economic situation, a total of 63 per cent say a recession, with 19 per cent using the term "mild" and the balance, 44 per cent, saying the U.S. is in a "serious" recession.

One third (33 per cent) of those interviewed, however, believe the U.S. is currently in a "depression," with 21 per cent saying it's a "mild" depression and 12 per cent calling it a "serious" depression.

Most inclined to believe the U.S. is in a "serious" depression are non-whites and persons in the lower income brackets. As many as 55 per cent of non-whites feel the nation is in at least a "mild" depression.

Here is the first question asked: "Do you think the economic situation in the United States during the next six months will get better or will get worse?"

Here is the trend since August:

Economic Expectations

| November '74 | 16 | 71 | 10 | 3 |
| September | 15 | 69 | 11 | 5 |
| August | 13 | 68 | 15 | 4 |

The following table shows the change since last November in the proportion of those saying the economic situation will get "worse":

| | Nov. 1974 | Today | Point Change |
|---------------------------|-----------|-------|--------------|
| NATIONAL | 71% | 56% | -15 |

| 30-49 years | 73 | 55 | -18 |
| 50 and older | 64 | 50 | -14 |

This question was asked next: "Some economists think the U.S. economy is heading toward a depression, such as the one the nation experienced in the 1930s. Do you agree or disagree? Here is the trend:

| | Agree | Disagree | No Opinion |

Following is a comparison between the latest survey and last October in the proportion who agree that the economy is headed toward a depression:

Storms Kill Four, Injures Others In Texas, Oklahoma

By United Press International
Tornadoes made sudden, destructive swoops on mobile home parks in western Oklahoma and northern Texas Saturday.

At least four persons were killed and nearly 100 were reported injured.

The tornadoes were followed by rain, sleet, hail and, in the Texas Panhandle, heavy snow.

Tornado watches were posted for parts of Arkansas, northeastern Texas, southeastern Oklahoma, northwestern Louisiana and south central Missouri as the storm system moved eastward.

Arizona desert winds whipping at more than 60 miles per hour were blamed for a fiery 13-car collision in which two persons died and 11 were injured.

In the western Oklahoma communities of Altus, Duncan and Mountain Park, four persons were killed and at least 63 others were injured, two critically, by tornadoes which overturned more than 100 trailer homes.

"It was pretty sudden," said Jimmy Brooks, assistant administrator at the Jackson County Memorial Hospital, where six persons were admitted. "We had a tornado or disaster drill that was back in October or November and that probably helped us tremendously."

Two persons were killed in Altus, one in Duncan, and one in Mountain Park.

J.C. Lowell, owner of a funeral home in Altus, said his crews took an hour to rescue a 9-year-old girl whose arms were pinned in the wreckage of a mobile home in a rural area. A 4-month-old baby was found safe and sound nearby, cradled by a soft, overstuffed chair.

The twisters downed power lines, blocked roads and blew at nearly every window at homes on the west side of Duncan.

An apparent tornado struck east of Wichita Falls, Tex., destroying five trailer homes and causing minor injuries to at least 12 persons. On a road near Quanah, Tex., southerly winds were so strong that they turned all the mailboxes around to face north. Directly overhead, all the signpoles were turned south by northerly winds.

According To John Dean III

Jail Could Be Death Sentence For Mitchell

MILLERSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Former White House counsel John Dean III says that if John Mitchell ever goes to jail for his Watergate convictions, it could be the death sentence for Mitchell.

Dean said Friday that the former attorney general, as the nation's top law enforcement official, made many enemies who are now in jail, and prison could prove to be a dangerous place for him.

"Many men I met in prison said the reason they were there was because of the former attorney general and they'd wait for him," Dean said in a speech at Millersville State College. "This is not to say for sure an execution, but a high probability. If he goes to prison he could be killed by another prisoner."

He also said there's a possibility that Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Robert Mardian will never go to prison.

The four former Nixon aides were sentenced earlier Friday in connection with the Watergate case. All are appealing and the appeals are expected to take up to two years.

Dean said Mitchell, Halde- man and Ehrlichman are still "powerful men with powerful friends and are not without their voice in government."

"But if they do go to prison, it will be tough for them. I couldn't wish any man to go to jail. It is not pleasant. You know immediately when you have lost your freedom."

Disappears From London

LONDON (AP) — The former chief South Vietnamese government spokesman in Saigon has abandoned his embassy post here and taken $50,000 with him, an embassy spokesman said today.

Bui Bao Truc, transferred from Saigon to the embassy in London in August 1974, left "earlier this month," the spokesman said.

A spokesman at the North Vietnamese embassy said he could not confirm a rumor in Saigon that Truc sought asylum at his embassy.

Begins Killing Sick Coots

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)—The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, foiled Friday by high winds, today began killing off some 7,000 coots in the Back Bay area believed suffering from a highly infectious disease.

By early morning an estimated 2,000 of the birds had been sprayed with a chemical detergent by a crop-dusting plane whose mission of extermination had been called off Friday because of high winds.

Authorities said the coots at Pocahontas Trojan State Waterfowl Refuge, if permitted to live, could cause a deadly epidemic of avian cholera among other waterfowl along the entire Eastern seaboard.

Urges Overhaul

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO Executive Council is urging Congress to overhaul the Federal Reserve System, saying its tight-money policies are a major cause of the recession.

The labor leaders called for a seven-point plan on Friday, including appointment of representatives of labor and consumer groups to the central bank's governing board to make it more responsive to the people.

In a harsh attack on the Federal Reserve Board and its chairman, Arthur F. Burns, the council said that for the second time since 1969 the bank has brought recession to the economy and unemployment to millions of workers.

The council said that the bank discriminated against extending credit for home building, small businesses, state and local governments and public utilities while providing large amounts of credit for speculation in land and commodity markets, inventory hoarding and foreign loans.

The labor leaders also said that while the bank's decisions affect the economic welfare of all Americans, it operates "in relative secrecy and with little accountability" to Congress.

Fair Trial

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dr. Daniel Ellsberg, who made the Pentagon Papers public, says he's not anxious to see four former Nixon administration officials go to jail.

"They seem to have had a fair trial and I'm glad the system worked that way," Ellsberg told newsmen Friday. "I'm not anxious, though to see any person go to jail."

Nixon aides John N. Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman were given 2½-to 8-year sentences for the Watergate cover-up conspiracy. Robert C. Mardian, former assistant attorney general, received a 10-month to 3-year sentence.

$19,000 Grant By Foundation

Contributions to the East Carolina University Foundation have made possible a grant of $19,000 to the University Research Council to stimulate research and publication at ECU.

ECU Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins presented the latest Foundation grant to Dr. Joseph G. Boyette, chairman of the Research Council, in ceremonies. Jenkins is president of the ECU Foundation.

The latest grant brings Foundation contributions to the Research Council over the past five years to $60,500.

Boyette expressed appreciation for the Foundation's support and special thanks to all contributors.

To date Foundation funds have underwritten nearly 100 projects. In the past year four recipients have received additional funding beyond that of the Foundation. Twenty-three are writing for publication, and one has presented a scholarly paper at a professional meeting.

New funds will make possible several additional projects, and the Research Council is already screening proposals. Twenty-four proposals totaling more than $25,000 have been submitted to date, and new ones are being developed almost daily.

FOUR-PLEX COMBINES VARIETY OF APARTMENT UNITS

Collegiate

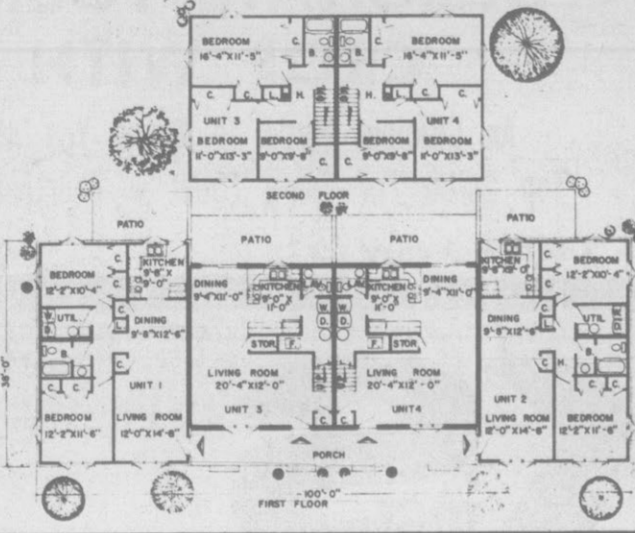

By Jerry Bishop
 This attractive four-plex design provides both a two bedroom-one story and three bedroom-two story apartment units.
 Unit one is entered either from the rear patio or through the living room. The living area extends almost 15 feet and is open to a dining area which stretches another 12 feet, giving a feeling of space and openness usual to the apartment house dweller. The dining area is adjacent to the kitchen, an L-shaped design.
 Two bedroom, a utility area, a bath and separate linen storage space opens off the hallway. Closets also are provided in the living room and the dining room to increase storage area.
 Unit two, a mirror image of unit one, also provides two bedrooms with utility space on the same level, housed near the bath and bedrooms.
 Unit three and four are two-story units, featuring three bedrooms and a larger living room, as well as a larger kitchen. A half bath also is added.
 Entrance to these units is through sliding glass doors from the patio into the dining room or from the front door into the living room.
 The living room, 12' by more than 20' long, is connected in an L-shaped pattern to the dining area. A large storage closet helps to divide the living room from the dining area and combines with a coat closet in the living room to increase the usually small storage areas of apartment living. The kitchen is quite large, with a modified U-shaped design. The half bath is close to the utility area, housing washer and dryer.

 On the second floors of the third and fourth units, three bedrooms are conveniently arranged. The master bedroom is more than 16 feet long and contains two closets. Each of the other bedrooms has its own closet and, again, a linen closet is placed in the hall for extra space. A full bath serves the three rooms.

 Shake shingle and brick exterior are practically maintenance free and provide an attractive building. The patio areas provided for each unit are separated by masonry walls to provide privacy. Each unit has two separate entrances, both from out-of-doors, eliminating any maintenance of hallways and ensuring more privacy.

 Units 1 & 2 - 988 sq. ft. each

 If you sold your house at a profit during 1974, you will not have to pay any federal income tax on the gain this year if you meet two principal conditions.
 The first condition is that you purchase another house which costs as much as or more than the house you sold. You must buy and move into the second house within one year after you sold the first. Should you have a house built to order, the time limit is extended to 18 months.
 The second condition is that the house you sold and the one you buy are principal residences, not vacation or part-time houses.
 Actually, the tax break is a deferral rather than a forgiveness. But you can keep on postponing the tax no matter how many transactions you make so long as you meet the qualifications. Continue this procedure until you are 65 and your tax commitment will drop drastically. In that event—and providing you have lived in the house five of the eight years preceding the date of sale—you avoid the tax on the profit attributed to the first $20,000 of the sales price.
 Here is IMPORTANT AD-

VICE to the elderly: you can make an arrangement to sell your house before your 65th birthday, but if you want the tax break, do not give possession or title to the new owner until or after you reach that birthday!
 All these tax regulations apply to houses, condominiums and to cooperative apartments which are tied to stock ownership.
 It must be understood that, in figuring the difference between the price you get for your old house and the price you pay for your new house, you do not use the simple sale and purchase figures. Thus, if you sell your house for $30,000 and buy one for $32,000, the difference is not $2,000. That's because for tax you use the sales price MINUS such things as commissions, deed preparation costs, title searches, legal fees, etc., as well as any money you spent for fixing up the house to make it more salable provided the work was done within 90 days preceding the sale. And, also for tax purposes, you use the purchase price PLUS commissions, legal fees and other expenses necessary to complete the sale. The selling price, therefore, might be figured as only $28,000, and the purchase price as $34,000.
 There are a number of variations of the conditions necessary to get the deferral of tax. Some of them involve a residence acquired by gift or inheritance, the divorce of a couple after the sale of the house, the condemnation of a house, the sale and purchase of houses among parents and children, etc. Don't try to be your own expert. Have a tax accountant or someone at your local Internal Revenue Service office help you.
 I'm sure you guessed that, when you sell your house at a loss, you can't deduct it.
 (Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Make Roof Inspection A Habit

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
 United Press International
 "Don't wait for the roof to fall, before you do something about it."
 This advice, while something of an overstatement, should serve as a timely reminder to homeowners who tend to overlook this important part of home maintenance. It's usually out of sight, out of mind with roofs, unlike siding, windows or doorways, lawns and walks, which shout their deficiencies each time you walk by.
 Roof inspection should be a part of household routine and need not even mean climbing a ladder. A pair of binoculars will let you do the job from the ground.
 The roofing experts at the Certain-teed Home Institute offer the following suggestions for preventive roof care:
 Make sure there are adequate downspouts to provide sufficient water drainage. Never allow water to cascade from one roof level directly onto another because this will damage shingles on the lower roof;
 Keep downspouts and gutters clear of debris, by flushing them with a hose at least twice each year—more frequently if your home is in a wooded area. Clogged gutters may cause water to back up under the shingles, which in time can produce leaks;
 Annually inspect the flashings around chimneys, vent pipes, valleys and any portions of roof that butt up against siding (as on a garage which is attached to a two-story home). If the asphalt roofing cement around these areas appears blistered or cracked, apply a generous coating of cement to the area; Every spring and fall look at the shingles through binoculars. If they appear curled or blistered or discolored, especially in areas exposed to sunlight, begin planning for a reroofing job. Any missing shingles should be replaced as soon as possible;

 Ceramic granules in the downspout drainage areas usually indicate shingles are deteriorating. These minute granules are applied during the manufacture of asphalt shingles to protect them from the elements. Their gradual loss often goes undetected, yet it speeds deterioration, particularly on roof areas exposed to sunlight;
 Make sure your chimney has a wire screen over it, to prevent cinders or other burning debris from landing on the roof. With an asphalt roof, particularly one with the UL Class A fire rating, there isn't much fire hazard, but on a wood roof, a burning ember the size of a match head can cause ignition;
 Avoid walking on roofs unless absolutely necessary. In addition to the hazards, it could cause damage to shingles. Old, brittle shingles are particularly vulnerable, as are flashing areas in the valleys where two roof planes meet. Make sure workmen installing or repairing television antennas or attic exhaust fans walk on the roof as little as possible;
 Have a qualified roofer inspect the roof every two to three years; more frequently if you live in the sunnier, more humid areas of the South and Southwest, where the hot rays from the sun can be especially damaging;
 Even with the best of care, a roof with lightweight shingles has a life expectancy usually no longer than 15 years. Most homes built in the 1950s and 1960s have lightweight shingles and should be closely watched;
 In reroofing, consider investing in a heavyweight shingle which is guaranteed for 25 years. These heavyweights (265 lb.-square to 380 lb.-square) come in a variety of colors and textures, even resembling wood shakes, and cost little more per year over the life of the roof; In choosing a roofing contractor, check with friends, Better Business Bureau or other consumer reference services. Get at least three competitive bids, and insist that all estimates and contracts be in writing.

Here's the Answer

 Q.—I spilled some motor oil on the concrete floor of our basement. Can it be removed with white gasoline, as someone told me?
 A.—Possibly. But it's also a good way to blow up or burn down your house. Don't do it. There's no simple way to remove the stain, especially since you have waited so long before doing something about it. Try scrubbing with a solution of trisodium phosphate according to the directions on the container. If some of the stain remains, cover it with whitening or fuller's earth or dry portland cement. Wait a few days, then sweep up the covering and apply more of it. It might take three, four or more applications.
 Q.—When the flush in our bathroom is used, it works fine. But later, there is a constant trickling of water into the bowl. What causes this and how can it be fixed?
 A.—Carefully remove the cover at the top of the tank. Stick your hand into the tank and hold down the ball valve. This usually will stop the trickling immediately. If so, it means that the valve is not falling into position properly.
 Be sure the rod that raises and lowers the ball valve is straight and that it permits the valve to drop right down. You can test this by flushing the tank and allowing it to refill. Another possible cause is that the valve seat, into which the ball valve falls, is roughened by corrosion. Smooth it with emery cloth or fine aluminum oxide cloth. Also, check the ball valve itself. If the rubber has lost its shape and resilience, buy another. It is inexpensive

Q. What type strawberry plants do best in our area? Also, would appreciate your comments on Ozark Beauty and Blakemore. (Mrs. F. W., Statesville)
 A. Apollo and Atlas are two of the very best varieties for Piedmont and Eastern North Carolina. Blakemore is a very old variety that has not done well for us since it became "diseased" with Blakemore yellows. Ozark Beauty is an "everbearing" strawberry that does pretty well in the mountains but not so well east of North Wilkesboro and Asheville. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)
 Q. When is the best time to prune camellias—also gardenias? (Mrs. E. R., Ash)
 A. Prune both plants when they are in flower. If the shrubs have been allowed to grow much too large for their landscape positions, cut a long stem with each bloom. Otherwise, a stem of a few inches will help control future growth, size and shape. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)
 Q. When I first light my fireplace, the smoke doesn't seem to know where to go. It puffs out into my den. (B. C., Clayton)
 A. Before lighting the fire, put a piece of newspaper into the chimney opening and light it. You'll start a column of heating rising which should draw the smoke in the right direction. If this doesn't work, your problem may be a chimney that is too low or a fireplace opening that is too big. (W. T. Huxster, extension forester)

HOME-OFFICE DEDUCTION
 If you use one room of your home as an office, make sure that you are taking advantage of the tax break that is entitled to you. How much of your home office expenses can be taken as a business expense depends on the size of the room in relation to the rest of the house and how much time the room is used for business purposes.
 That assumes that the room is set aside completely for an office. If the family uses it half the time, you would have to reduce the deduction accordingly. Of course, in order to qualify for any deduction, the office must be a real aid to your work and not merely a convenience.
 If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at LOUIS CLARK AGENCY, IBM Bldg., 100 Reade St., Greenville. Phone: 752-4173. We're here to help!
 For example, if the house has 1,400 square feet of space and the office measures 10 x 16 feet (or 160 square feet), you are allowed 10 per cent of the total running costs of the house's light, heat, repairs, painting, and other maintenance, depreciation, taxes and so on.

Desert Training For Army's Elite; Just In Case

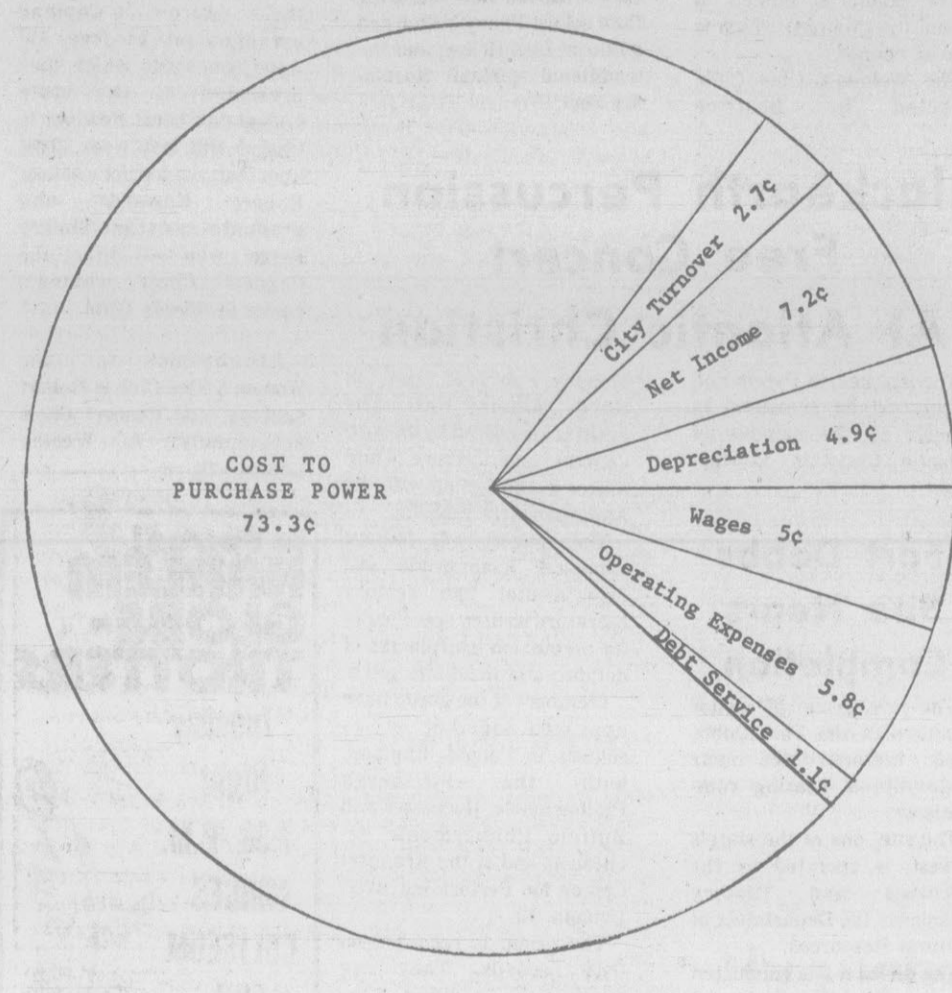

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Green Berets have lost the prestige and glamor they enjoyed in the '60s. But they remain one of the Army's elite forces, training for behind-the-lines action during wartime, and wondering if their next assignment might be the Middle East.

By JOHN T. WHEELER
Associated Press Writer
FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP)
The high-tailed U.S. Air Force jet screamed through the wintry sky. Aboard, heavily armed Green Berets waited in boredom for the silver transport to bring them over their desert rendezvous. As the drop zone neared, the men made final adjustments in their parachute harnesses and checked the straps and fittings that tied them to rifles, machine guns, radios and bulging rucksacks. The drop signal flashed, and they were gone — sky diving their way toward earth.

On the ground the teams regrouped for their military-political exercise. Their orders: Join with a make-believe sheik and his band, arm them and then lead the combined force in the capture of a mock oil field and pipeline held by two "enemy sheiks."

The officers and NCOs drove their men hard. Not only is that the Special Forces way, but today's exercise in the American Southwest could become tomorrow's headline in the Middle East.

American desert? "It would be foolish to think we do not," one officer said. The Green Berets have been scaled down from their Vietnam War peak of 12,500 men to the 5,500 men today. They are divided into three groups roughly the size of streamlined regiments. Some are stationed in Germany; others in Panama. General Healy, with headquarters here, commands two of the three groups.

NOTE: All Net Income & Depreciation dollars are spent on system improvements and extensions. Distribution of income is based on estimated annual revenue from new rates and new power costs beginning March 1, 1975.

Where Utility Revenues Go

As the wholesale purchase cost of electric power, including fossil fuel charges, continues to increase it means that a larger share of the revenue from electric sales is being spent on paying this part of Greenville Utilities electric system operating costs.

The breakdown of where revenue goes, which is received from customers electric bills, is shown in the above chart, prepared by Greenville Utilities. Some 73.3 cents of every dollar received from electric bills will go toward paying VEPCO's charge for electric power. The expenditure for some expenses are fixed and, therefore, become a smaller part of the total operating costs.

Net income from electric system operations declined in fiscal year 1973-74 from the previous year and are estimated to be down again this year. VEPCO's fossil fuel charge must be paid on distribution system losses, about 5 to 7 percent of total purchases, and this has reduced net income considerably.

The net result of higher wholesale power cost, plus increasing costs of labor, material, and services to operate the electric system, is a lowering of net income needed to improve and extend electric service facilities to existing and new customers.

Brig. Gen. Michael D. Healy, a combat veteran of two wars and commander of most of the 5,500 men in Special Forces, says such desert training is part of a preparedness plan that goes back years. The issue of using force in the Mideast stems from Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent statement that "actual strangulation" of the West by the Arab oil countries could prompt the United States to respond with force. President Ford endorsed Kissinger's statement.

A creature of the late President John F. Kennedy, the Green Berets gained fame in Vietnam where they and the Vietnamese units they helped to form fought numerous battles together, often against larger enemy forces.

While all U.S. military units left Vietnam officially two years ago, AP Correspondent George Esper reports from Saigon that some Green Berets remained to work with graves registration teams in Communist-controlled areas. Besides trying to trace dead and missing Americans, Esper reports, the Special Forces men gathered intelligence.

In the Pentagon office of the Army's assistant chief of staff for operations, the Special Forces are listed as an adjunct of the regular forces, with the role of staging guerrilla raids and organizing resistance movements behind enemy lines during wartime. Nothing is said about similar operations carried out secretly against some countries during peacetime. The euphemism among military people for such missions is "destabilization."

Asked about the Green Berets' role as destabilizers, General Healy said that to his knowledge the Special Forces never have carried out such operations in peace time. The watchword is preparedness rather than action, the general said, and added in an interview: "The Special Forces operates somewhat like SAC in several respects, including access to nuclear weapons — 'A very, very sensitive subject,'" General Healy said, without elaboration.

The peacetime Green Berets have had trouble drawing the top flight officers such as a loosely structured force demands. Officials say the demands of the Special Forces in terms of physical strength and endurance, and long training exercises away from home, discourage many young officers who consider life even in paratroop battalions easy by comparison.

Those who do make it with the Special Forces consider themselves the senior professionals of the Army. Despite the post Vietnam force cutbacks and an image some would say was tarnished during the conflict, the Green Berets have maintained an elan and self-confidence bordering on religious fervor. The Special Forces even have their own version of the 23d Psalm, one coined in Vietnam. In part it goes:

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I shall fear no evil. For I am the meekest man in the valley."

The Vietnam experience of training and supporting allied forces is a third-level mission proper birth of offspring.

Fort Dobbs Site Nears Completion

The first group of visitor facilities at the Fort Dobbs state historic site near Statesville is nearing completion.

The site, one of the state's newest, is operated by the Archives and History Division of the Department of Cultural Resources.

The division has conducted the initial historical and archaeological investigations at the fort, built during the French and Indian War and destroyed in the 1770s.

A log house restored by the Daughters of the American Revolution serves as a temporary visitor center where a slide presentation showing the work done at the site is shown.

Exhibits of archaeological artifacts recovered from the fort are being prepared. Further archaeological work is planned for this spring.

Bill Holman, site manager, said new developments have included relocating part of a secondary road and the underground placement of all utility lines. A group of family picnic sites and a half-mile history trail have been established.

A "Love Song To Black Men"

Valentine's Day holds a special meaning to Mrs. Linda B. Bragg, a poet who teaches in the Residential College at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

That is the official release date of her first collection of poems—A Love Song to Black Men. One thousand copies of the slim volume have been published by Broadside Press, a publishing company in Detroit, Mich.

The mother of two small children, Mrs. Bragg regards herself as a black poet not only because she is black herself but also because her poems are "usually addressed to black people about black people."

"Sometimes they're about things that I think need saying and sometimes they're just descriptions of the black experience—little pictures or renditions of things that happen to black people."

In March of 1974 an article about her and other black women poets appeared in "Ebony Magazine," and some of her poems about children have been published in "Encore Magazine."

She has since signed a contract to complete an illustrated book of children's poetry. "Some are experiences that all children might have," she explained. "Some relate just to the black experience. Many are autobiographical in that they come out of my childhood."

Exhibition Of Frieseke's Paintings At The NCMA

An exhibition devoted to the work of the American Impressionist painter, Frederick Frieseke, opened on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh.

The Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences, Savannah, Ga., organized the exhibition with the cooperation of the North Carolina Museum of Art; Hirschl and Alder Galleries, New York City; the Museum of Fine Arts, St. Petersburg, Fla.; and the Columbia, S.C. Museum of Art.

The museum last year acquired his "Garden Parol," a work that proved a major point of attention in its American Impressionism show.

Frieseke was born in Owosso, Mich., in 1874. After studying at the Chicago Art Institute and the Art Students League, he went to France, where he remained until his death in 1939.

Frieseke's preference was for painting "sunshine, flowers in sunshine; girls in sunshine; the nude in sunshine."

He reached the high point of his fame during the pre-World War I period through 1919. His reputation had been well established through an impressive series of honors which came early and steadily.

From the first years of the 1900s his pictures had been exhibited at the Paris salons and had received favorable critical attention. In addition to honors abroad, his work had been included in major exhibitions at the Corcoran Gallery, the Pennsylvania Academy, the National Academy of Design and the Carnegie Institute. He exhibited at the Venice Biennales and the International Society shows in London.

After World War I his popularity began to wane as people turned to the hard realism of a new generation of artists whose presence was heralded by the Armory Show of 1913.

The exhibition will be on view through March 5 when it will travel to St. Petersburg and Columbia.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By KAY TAYLOR,
Children's Librarian

The children's library needs the eggs from L'eggs Panty Hose for an Easter egg hunt. Anyone who has any of these eggs is urged to donate them to the library. They may be left at the children's library (Sheppard Memorial) or one of the branches. Please give us your eggs by March 15.

The library has just received many new children's books. Among those sure to be favorites are two new Dr. Seuss books, THERE'S A WOCKET IN MY POCKET! and GREAT DAY FOR UP; two new Alfred Hitchcock mysteries; and a new LeSieg book, WACKY WEDNESDAY. The other books reviewed below are also new.

Children often find themselves in situations where they feel that life would be much more fun if they could be the opposite sex. Such is the case with Jackie. Moving to a new school, she encounters a teacher who has definite opinions about what nice little girls do. Jackie feels that the things the boys get to do are much more interesting. She faces the disapproval of the teacher and the ridicule of her classmates when she tries to do the things she wants to do, but with the help of understanding parents, she makes the best of the situation. The humorous illustrations in NICE LITTLE GIRLS by Elizabeth Levy help make a delightful story of a serious problem.

Maria loves art. The high point in each week is her Saturday morning art lesson at the art museum. At least it is until the week her art teacher gives a homework assignment for each pupil to draw his own house. Maria lives in a tenement. She feels sure all the other students live in fine houses in the suburbs. Ashamed of her poor home, she draws a fine house. Her mother, however, tells her art must be true; so Maria reluctantly and even angrily draws her tenement house. Anyone who has ever felt ashamed of his house can empathize with Maria as she struggles with her embarrassment in MARIA'S HOUSE by Jean Merrill.

What is it like for a child to be different from all other children? Jane Yolen captures the loneliness and pathos of difference in a moving fantasy, THE BOY WHO HAD WINGS. Born long ago in a small Greek village, Aetos caused his parents much fear and worry. Were his wings a blessing or a curse from the gods? Haunted by their fears, they covered his wings with a black goat hair cape. His father stayed away from home more and more tending his herd of horses. Aetos was practically forgotten even in his own family. Only through one glorious flight can he free his soul from its lonely prison.

Book Review

A Young Poet With Some Fresh Ideas

The Depressions Of Reality. By William Dean Gillenwater. Philadelphia. Dorrance and Company. 1974. 30 pps, $2.95.

Jacksonville's William Gillenwater is a very young poet—in his early 20s. This slim volume of 28 poems, many of them only four, five or six lines in length, is not so much a book of finished poems as a jutting down of ideas, some fresh, that could be used as springboards for better poems later on.

Take one of the brief untitled poems, for example: "I once heard a man giving a little early advice to his newborn son. He said, 'Son, life is a trap and you just stepped into it. Now you've got to start figuring a way out before the hunter gets back.'"

Despite the freedom today's poets have in the absence of obligations to follow traditional poetic frameworks of meter, rhyme or verse, poems such as the one quoted above really register only as a thought, a foundation on which to build a complete poetic statement. Perhaps with the passing of time and the leavening experience of more living and writing, Gillenwater will find a truer means to give germs of thought expressed in this small group of poems a fuller understanding.

It would not be surprising if Gillenwater finds that prose writing is his more natural talent. Whatever direction the young writer takes he will be worth watching to see what he does with his talent in the years ahead.

Writers Meeting

The second meeting of the Greenville Writers Club for the month of February will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Raynor, 2106 Pendleton Street.

Pleasure's Intimate Photographs Of Nature

FISSURED ROCK . . . in shades of browns, golds and bronzes is one of Fred Pleasant's color photographs in his show at Kate Lewis Gallery on campus at ECU.

"The subject gives everything, and the artist accepts the gift. The subject, whatever it may be, is there for the use of any creator who may care to commune or visit with it."

The quote is from a statement accompanying the current exhibit of photographer Fred Pleasure, now at the Kate Lewis Gallery in Whichard Building on the East Carolina University campus.

In this small show of about 30 color photographs,

Pleasure has accepted from nature a gift of rocks, of places of bent and waving dark gold grasses and mounds of drifting, granular sand.

Pleasure moves close in, focusing his lens on intimate close ups, the sensuous curves of wind formed sand and water weathered pebbles; the exposed inner patterns of fissured rock; and the musical movement of grasses.

It is the rocks that predominate in this show—in rock colors of grays, slates, greens, tawny browns; rocks dry or glistening with water. In some late-in-the-day photographs, light is sprinkled like shattered starlight above the contour of rocks.

Pleasure's photographs convey more of the poetry and music of nature seen closely than of the stirring power of dramatic landscapes. These are restful photographs inviting the viewer to linger over muted or accentuated curve and crevice.

Pleasure, a New Yorker, has contributed to Time-Life photographic books, to national photographic magazines and numerous other pictorial publications.

His photographs at Kate Lewis are certain to please not only photographers, but all who love nature or things beautiful. Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, Monday thru Friday.

The four paintings from the Tryon Palace are: Glass painting in original hawwood frame of Queen Carolina;

It is done by coating a sheet of glass with gold leaf, using scrapers to draw a design (thus making a line engraving) and then coating the open lines with black and colors. The term is now loosely applied to all ush work appearing on mirrors, clocks, picture frames and other items.

Chinese Cloisonne Discussed In "Arts Of Asia" Issue

CHINESE CLOISONNE . . . an art of enamel on metal, is receiving considerable attention in the western world. Two examples, both illustrations

Chinese cloisonne, an art form about which comparatively little authentic research has been accomplished, is the subject of two informative articles in the January-February 1975 issue of Arts of Asia.

The longer of the two articles is based on the Robert and Marian Clague Collection of Chinese cloisonne, now on loan to the Milwaukee Public Museum. The article is lavishly illustrated with 29 photographs, nine of them in full color.

R.H. Leary authors the second article, "Cloisonne: The Ching T'ai Myth." In this fairly brief paper, also illustrated with photographs, Leary stresses that documentation and research in this art has generally been neglected.

Basically an art involving the placing of decorative layers of colored enamels on metal (brass, bronze, copper), cloisonne has not been as highly esteemed among Chinese connoisseurs as are other traditional Chinese arts.

"... intellectuals of China have always tended to look down on work in enamel, lacquer, ivory and so on as being handcraft, on which Confucian theory placed no value," Leary writes. "Thus no one bothered to make any systematic studies of these subjects, so that we have today extremely few contemporary documents dealing with them. They are still to a great extent neglected among the Chinese, though western scholars take more interest and are gradually extending knowledge in these fields."

Both articles emphasize the growing Western interest in cloisonne, and indicate that study being done now promises new information that will make dating and classification of cloisonne more certain.

Arts of Asia, a magazine of arts of the East, is available by subscription from Metropole Building, 57 Peking Road, Kowloon, Hong Kong, at $12.50 a year for six issues.

Police Power Filling School Discipline 'Vacuum'

By RAY HUBBARD
High Point Enterprise Writer
Written for The AP
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — In loco parentis. That phrase, meaning "in place of a parent," has been the legal and philosophical doctrine upon which discipline, security and orderliness for this nation's schools have always been based.

From it, teachers and administrators have derived authority to provide guardianship for pupils, to protect them for others and from themselves and to provide parenthood from the time pupils leave home until they return from schools.

But the doctrine has been eroded in the past decade by court decisions, by legislative acts and by an upsurge in pupil demands for greater freedom. This has created a vacuum into which the police power of government is moving with ever-increasing speed.

The change is being accomplished in a rush, largely without debate, without direction and without careful consideration on the consequences to the educational process.

These conclusions seem justified by the findings of Dr. James E. Surratt, assistant superintendent of High Point's public schools, in a doctoral dissertation entitled, "A Survey and Analysis of Special Police Services in Large Public School Districts of the United States."

Completed last year, Surratt's national survey was conducted at Duke University with the cooperation and support of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. It was limited to school districts with an enrollment of 10,000 pupils or more and included the law enforcement agencies serving those districts.

There were 771 such districts when the survey was initiated. The response was high, with 63 per cent of the school districts and 69 per cent of the law enforcement agencies replying. Responses came from each state except Vermont.

The survey showed that: —More than 80 per cent of the districts use police regularly at athletic events and more than 75 per cent use police at school dances.

—More than 20 per cent use regular police for building and ground protection after school hours, and 8 per cent have used watchdogs.

—More than 65 per cent use police as crossing guards, and 11 per cent have officers assigned to patrol halls and grounds during the school day.

—30 per cent use police officers on an assigned basis for instruction and counseling.

The survey also showed that undercover agents have been used in 28 per cent of the districts. Some districts have used bugging devices, television monitors and other electronic detection devices.

School superintendents and police chiefs polled by Surratt agreed that loss of respect for the law, lack of pupil self-discipline and racial unrest were major factors in school disorders during the past decade.

"We have little in history to guide us as police involvement in schools increases. We have a situation in which there is a general attitude that schools are something apart from civil authority," Surratt said in an interview.

Surratt pointed out that some contend school officials lose their private or parental status when they work with police.

"I think you ought to take this into consideration when you bring police into the halls during the school days," he said.

"As police and school authorities begin to collaborate and work closely together on these things, the school officials could very well be interpreted by the courts to have lost their private status. Are you really working as a parent in a private situation or are you acting as an agent of government?"

"Does the principal, for instance, when the going gets hot, turn to the policeman and say, 'you take over now,' or what?"

"I really believe that if the doctrine of 'in loco parentis' continues to diminish...that this type of relationship may come to exist, where a school official would have little involvement in that type of problem and would turn it over to civil authorities with the view that this is not my problem at all."

Surratt continued, "This requires a whole new way of thinking and I'm not ready for that and I don't think that many people are."

"But I can certainly see the possibility of this happening. When you look at how many of the so-called rights of the parents, once looked upon as also the rights of school personnel...that no longer exist, the seriousness of the matter becomes clear. I'm afraid school personnel will come to recognize they no longer have that role (of parent) and will relinquish the whole role of guardianship," Surratt said.

Surratt also expressed concern about the role of policemen as instructors and counselors.

"I think police counseling can be very important in specific areas where they have particular expertise, but certainly not in a role, as in some of the cities, where they actually have an office in the school building, and are a part of the regular school staff," he said. "I have misgivings about that."

The involvement of police in school affairs is not without controversy. The American Civil Liberties Union brought suit against the Tucson, Ariz., school district to prevent police officer-counselors from working in the schools. The case was thrown out of court because of a legal technicality, but demands have been growing in other systems that officers not be allowed to instruct or counsel pupils unless they have been certified.

Florida already requires such certification.

The Macon (Bibb County), Ga., school administrator complained in answering Surratt's questionnaire that police had been placed on duty on his schools without consultation with school authorities.

There also is an ongoing dispute in Detroit, Mich., over the placement of policemen in school during the class day.

Dr. Dean L. Pruette, superintendent of the High Point school system for more than 20 years, is among those who view with dismay the trend toward controlling pupils with armed policemen.

"When you reach that point where you can only teach under a gun, then we have some basic problems in our whole society that need attention," he said.

A majority of the survey respondents said racial unrest was a major factor in tighter school security. But in the South, where the greatest degree of school desegregation has occurred, the involvement of police during the regular school day is at the lowest level.

The most police involvement was noted in the Northeast and north-central regions of the country, where there are larger, more concentrated urban areas, and in large schools with a high percentage of minority pupils.

This pattern applies to North Carolina.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg County system and the Winston-Salem - Forsyth County system have fulltime policemen on duty in some secondary schools during the regular school day. Greensboro has "unarmed counselors" on duty at four senior high schools. A school spokesman said the counselors do not have arrest powers, but their main function is to maintain peace on the campuses.

Nearly one-third of the districts responding to Surratt's survey have similar arrangements, employing their own security personnel.

The survey indicated sharp disagreement among superintendents and police chiefs over who would have supervisory and fiscal responsibility for police services in schools.

Police chiefs, for the most part, were adamant in maintaining supervision of their officers, no matter who pays for their services.

Congress has appropriated funds for a "Safe School Study" by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, to be completed by June of 1976. This study may provide national guidelines on how to deal with the police-school problems.

Indians Win On Free Shots

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—William and Mary's Indians blew a 12-point lead, then rode a string of 11 free throws in the last 2:58 to a 72-60 victory Saturday night over Richmond's Spiders that clinched a seeded spot in the Southern Conference basketball tournament.

Mike Enoch hit four of the foul shots, including two with less than three minutes left to offset Dave Williams' layup that pulled Richmond to within a point at 61-60 after a layup by Dennis Vail had sent the Indians ahead for good.

The Indians, closing out their conference season with a 7-6 record and boosting their overall mark to 14-10, held a 12-point lead with 12:07 left before Richmond ran off 10 straight points to pull within two.

After that, the lead changed hands several times before Vail put the Indians back in front and their accuracy at the foul line kept them there.

John Lowenhaupt had 24 points, Vail 12 and Enoch and Ronnie Satterthwaite 11 each for the Indians.

National scoring leader Bob McCurdy had 29 points for the Spiders, who fell to 6-7 in the conference with one game left. Richmond is 9-15 over-all.

Virginia Shocks North Carolina

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP)—Freshman Dave Kooesters hit three free throws in the last 15 seconds that protected a slim Virginia lead as the Cavaliers shocked North Carolina's 12th-ranked Tar Heels 65-62 in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The Cavaliers took the lead for good on a rebound follow shot by Wally Walker with 1:17 left that made the score 62-60. After Andy Boninti missed a Virginia free throw and the Tar Heels missed two shots at the basket, Kooesters hit a foul shot with 15 seconds left.

Phil Ford pulled the Tar

Heels to within a point at 63-62 with a layup with seven seconds remaining, but Kooesters hit two free throws with just three seconds left to wrap it up.

The Tar Heels' final lead was at 58-57 with 2:34 left on two free throws by Walter Davis, but Billy Langloh's foul shot tied it at the 2:18 mark and Virginia never trailed again.

Walker finished with 15 points and Boninti and Dan Bonner with 12 each for the Cavaliers, now 4-8 in the ACC and 11-11 over-all.

The Tar Heels, who fell to 6-4 in the conference and 16-7 overall, were led by Davis and Mitch Kupchak with 66 points each. Kupchak also had a game-high 17 rebounds.

Wildcats Defeated

CINCINNATI (AP)—Junior forward Brian Williams had 20 points and freshman guard Steve Collier added 18 to lead Cincinnati to an easy 96-81 college basketball victory over Davidson Saturday night.

The victory was the 12th in a row for Cincinnati, increasing its season record to 18-5. Davidson sank to 7-18.

Cincinnati, scoring almost at will, led at halftime 42-31 and kept an 11-point lead through most of the contest.

Larry Horowitz, a 6-foot-7 senior center, led Davidson with 19 points and eight rebounds. Greg Dunn had 18 points for the Wildcats.

Furman Wins

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP)—Furman's two-time champion Paladins all but ruined Virginia Military's hopes for a seeded berth in the Southern Conference basketball tournament with an 80-68 victory Saturday night over the Keydets behind Craig Lynch and Clyde Mayes.

The Keydets, who fell to 6-6 in their final league game and can win the No. 4 spot only if Richmond loses to last-place Appalachian State next Wednesday night, hung tight for more than half the game, trailing by only 50-48 with 12:48 left.

But the Paladins, who closed out a perfect 12-0 conference season and ran their over-all record to 19-6 with their fifth straight victory, ran over the next eight points for a 58-48 bulge.

Lynch scored 19 points and Mayes 18. Lynch had eight rebounds and Mayes had six.

Long Island trailed 80-70 with 6:30 to play but reeled off 10 points to Wake Forest's one to bring the score to 81-80 at 3:10. Wake Forest went into a stall and Brown connected on two free throws after being fouled at 2:10.

Ruben Rodrigues hit a 20-foot jumper to bring the score to 83-82 at 1:39 but Long Island wasn't able to strike again.

Following Brown in Wake Forest scoring was center Cal Stamp with 14 points and guard Jerry Schellenberg with 11. Wake Forest improved its season mark to 12-12 and Long Island dropped to an identical season record.

Long Island was paced by Rodrigues with 21 points followed by forward Nate Revels with 16 and forward Ernie Douse with 15.

Palmgren Leads Bucs To Ninth Tank Title

BOONE — Tomas Palmgren, East Carolina's Finnish import, swam to his third championship in as many days as he led the Bucs to their ninth straight Southern Conference Swimming and Diving Championship at Appalachian State University.

The Pirates, plainly coasting through the meet to prepare for the upcoming Eastern Regional Championships, had little trouble in defending the title while he never lost since joining the Southern Conference.

Palmgren, for his three wins, was named the Outstanding Swimmer of the Meet, while Pirate Coach Ray Scharf was voted the Coach of the Year honors.

The Pirates rolled up 617 points in easily outdistancing their closest rival, the University of Richmond. The Spiders finished second with 377 points. William & Mary was third with 291, followed by Virginia Military, 192; Appalachian State with 173, Furman with 139 and Davidson. The order of finish was the same as last year, except for ASU moving past Furman, as predicted prior to the meet by Scharf.

Palmgren's Saturday win came in the 1,650-yard freestyle, where he won in 17:26.2. That title was added to those he had already won in the 500-yard freestyle and the 400-yard individual medley.

Ron Schnell finished second in the event in 18:09.0, while

Conley In 5th Place

WINSTON-SALEM—Three area wrestlers finished in the top four places in their respective weight classes in the state wrestling tournament held this weekend. The trio was from D.H. Conley.

Ricky Phillips placed third in the 121 weight class and Ronnie Cox finished fourth at 140. Barry Purser took a third at 187.

In addition to them, six other area wrestlers made it to the state level. Jeff Hagans of Rose was eliminated in the second round at 197 and Ayden-Grifton's Burley Gardner lost in the second round wrestling at 157. Rose High's Matthew Ward, 107, Horace Williams of Farmville Central, 114, Gary Locust, 147 also of Farmville Central and A-G's Earl Harris, 128, were all beaten in the first round.

Conley finished the tourney with 19½ points, good enough for fifth place. A-G, Rose and Farmville Central each had two points. The winning team was Southern Alamance which came away with two state champs. New Bern was second with 33 points.

Clemson Mauls State, 92-70

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Clemson Coach Tates Locke had an easy explanation of his sixteenth-ranked basketball team's resounding 92-70 victory Saturday over fourth-ranked North Carolina State.

"Without a doubt the difference in this game was David Thompson," who fouled out early in the second half, said Locke.

"Needless to say, when you take 30 points out of the lineup, it's not the same. I guess that was the fewest number of minutes he has played in his career. I'm not saying he's a one-man team, but when he's in there, he makes things happen," Locke declared.

The victory moved Clemson into a second-place tie in the Atlantic Coast Conference with N.C. State.

Wolfpack Coach Norman Sloan said, "I don't have much to say. We just got an old-fashioned fanny kicking. We just got a good beating. Coach Locke said before this game that without David Thompson we would be a second division ball club. And that's about what we were today."

Locke denied after the game that he had made the statement.

Sloan continued, "I think our team has done a super job winning without the inside game. Obviously, we don't have an in-

Deacons Get Win

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI)—Center Skip Brown hit for 29 points, including two free-throws which put the game away, as Wake Forest edged Long Island University 83-82 Saturday night.

Long Island trailed 80-70 with 6:30 to play but reeled off 10 points to Wake Forest's one to bring the score to 81-80 at 3:10. Wake Forest went into a stall and Brown connected on two free throws after being fouled at 2:10.

Ruben Rodrigues hit a 20-foot jumper to bring the score to 83-82 at 1:39 but Long Island wasn't able to strike again.

Following Brown in Wake Forest scoring was center Cal Stamp with 14 points and guard Jerry Schellenberg with 11. Wake Forest improved its season mark to 12-12 and Long Island dropped to an identical season record.

Long Island was paced by Rodrigues with 21 points followed by forward Nate Revels with 16 and forward Ernie Douse with 15.

more, but a shot by McKeever at the horn let The Citadel take a 42-40 lead at halftime.

Morrison ran the lead out to four, hitting the opening basket of the second half, but baskets by Geter, and two by Owens put the Bucs back up, 46-44.

The Citadel regained the lead on a baseline jumper by Morrison at 50-48, but the Bucs stayed right with them, regaining it at 56-54 on Geter's shot. McKeever made two free throws, and Trimble hit from the side to return The Citadel to the lead, 58-56. It was their last lead.

Ashorn tied it, and Reggie Lee put the Pirates ahead, 60-58. Ange tied it again, but Ashorn hit for a 62-60 lead, and it was never tied again.

Owens hit two jumpers to run the lead out to 66-60, but Ricky Day and Ange both hit cutting it back to two with 7:40 left. Ashorn's two straight ran it back out to six, but again The Citadel trimmed it to two, 70-68.

Earl Garner got a three-pointer, and after a Citadel basket, Ashorn got two at the line, then hit from the floor for a 77-70 margin. After another Citadel shot, Garner hit from underneath and Owens made two free throws for a 81-72 lead with 2:02 to go.

It fell back to six, but Marsh got a free throw, then Lee made a three-point play to up the lead to 85-75 with just over a minute left. The Citadel outthrew the Bucs, 9-2, in the final minute to come within three, but never really had a chance at the win after the 10-point edge.

Besides the total for Ashorn and Owens, Geter hit 12. McKeever led The Citadel with 26, while Trimble had 16, Morrison had 15 and Ange had 10.

The Pirates close out the regular season on Monday, playing host to Western Carolina, a strong independent, at 8 p.m. They will then host a first round Southern Conference tournament game on Saturday at 8 p.m., more than likely again meeting The Citadel.

Unknown Takes Campbell Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Obscure Pat FitzSimmons shaved seven strokes off par on as many holes to bolt out of the pack with a course-record seven-under-par 64 Saturday and storm into the third-round lead in the $150,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

FitzSimmons, 24, a nonwinner in his third season on the tour, started the day's play four strokes back but put on an incredible display through the middle of his round and finished with a 205 total, eight-under-par for 54 holes and six strokes in front of the field.

His third-round effort broke by one shot the previous record of 65 on the demanding, 7,028-yard, par-71 Riviera Country Club course, one of the toughest layouts the touring pros play all season.

The curly-haired FitzSimmons, a University of Oregon product, was just another face in the crowd, didn't come close to winning a tournament and didn't make expenses in his first two seasons on the tour.

But he put on fast finishes for placings of fifth and ninth in the last two tournaments, the Bob Hope Desert Classic and the San Diego Open. Those two rank as his career best performances.

He made his lightning move Saturday with a string, starting on the sixth hole in which he had four birdies, then a par, an eagle, and another birdie.

Tom Weiskopf, who held the previous course record, shot 72 for 214. Jack Nicklaus was another stroke back at 215 after a 71. Lee Trevino had 74-218. Arnold Palmer rallied for a 73 and was far, far back at 221.

The red-haired FitzSimmons bogeyed his second hole when he took two to get out of a trap, had to one-putt for par on the next hole and then started his heroics on the sixth.

Independents Await NCAA

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American, the team with the best record among independents in the country can't go to the NCAA's post-season university division basketball tournament this season.

But the NCAA selection committee won't have any trouble finding teams instead of the Broncos, who are on probation because of NCAA violations and had a 21-2 record last week.

Because of one of the most competitive seasons in recent history, a rash of good independents would seem to rate a shot at the coveted, 17-at-large berths for the NCAA tournament.

Marquette and Memphis State, two perennial tournament teams, boast two of the best records in the country. Both have won more than 80 per cent of their games and are among the front-runners as the college basketball season heads into the homestretch.

North Carolina—Charlotte, Stetson, Creighton, Nevada-Las Vegas, Utah State and Holy Cross, are other leading contenders. All these teams have won at least 80 per cent of their games so far.

Others with a chance are Portland State, Rutgers, Cincinnati, Oral Roberts, South Alabama, Florida State, South Carolina, Southern Illinois, Tulane and Virginia Commonwealth. These teams have won 70 per cent of their games this year.

There are other clubs with solid records who could be under consideration. Notre Dame might make the field. So might Canisius, Seton Hall, Boston College, UC-Santa Barbara and Virginia Tech.

Indiana is the only team in the country with a tight grip on a conference. The No. 1 club from the Big Ten will be the first official team in the playoffs. The rest of the races are still far from over.

The NCAA field has been expanded from 25 to 32 this season, allowing some runners-up from conferences to be invited to the playoffs for the first time.

Also, a unique selection procedure will take place among independents under the Eastern College Athletic Conference's jurisdiction. Four top teams in each of four regions (New England, metropolitan New York, upstate New York and Southern) will compete in tournaments with the winners qualifying for NCAA berths.

Marquette Tops South Carolina

COLUMBIA (AP)—Marquette used all-court pressure and a 19-point performance from lanky Bo Ellis to run its basketball record to the magical 20-victory mark Saturday afternoon, defeating unranked South Carolina 68-65.

It's 20-3 season showing moved Marquette closer to an expected invitation to post-season NCAA play.

Marquette was in control all the way in the close, low-scoring game that was nationally televised. Even when South Carolina took a two-point lead with nine minutes left, there seemed no doubt that the visitors would go on to win.

The all-court press caused frequent South Carolina turnovers. The Gamecocks compensated to some extent by out-rebounding the Midwest independents, 37-23. Marquette had the shooting edge 56 per cent to 48 per cent.

Marquette, although winning by only three points and leading by only two at the half, established six-point margins in the first and second halves and led by seven with less than three minutes to go.

That was when South Carolina shifted from a zone defense to an all-court press in a last-gasp effort that fell short of completely closing the gap.

Kentucky Gets Win Over Bama

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Kevin Grevey led a second-half charge that gave Kentucky an 84-79 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Alabama Saturday, throwing the two into a deadlock for the SEC lead.

The victory, despite a stellar performance by Alabama's Leon Douglas, was the seventh-ranked Wildcats' second over the fifth-rated Crimson Tide and ended a nine-game winning streak.

Both teams now are 13-2 in the conference and 20-3 overall, with three games each left to play in the season, all conference contests.

Alabama led 40-35 at the half and opened up a 12-point lead with less than two minutes gone after the intermission, but Grevey, Jack Givens and Bob Guyette led a comeback that gradually whittled the margin before Guyette's goal tied it at 69-69 with 5:20 left. Givens followed that with another goal, but Alabama tied it at 73-73 two minutes later on a shot by Charles Russell.

Bucettes Are Second

East Carolina University's gymnastics team went down to the wire Saturday before finally bowing to Duke University by eight-tenths of a point.

The Lady Pirates had only two competitors in the balance beam, the final event of the afternoon, and since three could have scored, it may have cost them the meet.

Duke finished in first place with 59.22 points, while East Carolina had 58.48. South Carolina was right behind them with 55.05, with Longwood finishing a distant fourth, 28.73.

See Lundahl of Duke captured the overall championship, winning the uneven bars, the floor exercise and the balance beam.

The top East Carolina performer was Gail Phillips, who was second in the vaulting and in the uneven bars and finished third overall. Kim Deck won the vaulting and was third in both the floor exercises and the balance beam to take fourth overall.

Patti Morris of South Carolina won second overall.

Robinson Isn't Going To Worry About Year

By RICHARD BILOTTI AP Sports Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — When the Cleveland Indians open spring training at Tuscon, Ariz., Wednesday, Frank Robinson will be calling the shots as baseball's first black manager.

Facing a racial situation much like the one Jackie Robinson was up against when he broke baseball's color line in 1946, the new Indian manager is not the least bit worried about the prospect.

"I think pressure comes from within a person," said Frank Robinson. "You put the pressure on yourself, and I don't do that to myself. I never have as a ballplayer and I'm not going to start now."

Robinson recognizes that his role will spotlight his managerial strategy. He'll be open to the second guess, perhaps even more than other managers for whom that problem has become an occupational hazard.

"I realize there is added pressure because I'm the first black manager," Robinson continued. "I know people are going to be watching my every move and questioning me a lot more than other managers, but that's reasonable and I can cope with it. I know that there is a lot of pressure from the outside and that as the season goes on, it will build up. But I've been under that pressure all my life."

Robinson has prepared for this major league chance with six seasons of managing winter baseball in Surtance, Puerto Rico. There were times when he thought the opportunity to manage in the big leagues would never come.

"People are always asking me who will be the next black manager," he said. "I don't know. I didn't know who the first one would be. I was hoping I would be considered, and I feel fortunate to be the first one. Someone has to be the first one and I enjoy being first."

Robinson feels his appointment will have a beneficial effect on black communities across the country.

"I hope that my being the first black manager will create some excitement and some participation in the black community," he said. "I hope they can point to me with pride and say, 'He is black and one of us and we're happy for him.'"

"But I don't want them to come out to see me because I'm a black manager. I want them to come out because they want to see a ball game and they want to see the Cleveland Indians as a team do well, not just to see me do well."

"If the ball club does well, it will reflect on me," Robinson continued. "And if it does poorly, it will reflect on me. But I also look at it the other way. If the ball club doesn't do well, it doesn't mean that a black man can't be a manager in the major leagues."

Robinson will be a player-manager for the Indians and has set goals of 100 hits and 26 home runs, which would give him 3,000 hits and 600 home runs for his career.

He plans to play first base and also serve as the Indians' designated hitter.

RALEIGH—Rose High School's Rampants have been a slow-starting team all year long, and Friday night, that proved to be the fatal flaw for them as Raleigh's Enloe High School rocked them, 74-54, in the first round of the 4-A State Tournament.

The Rampants were making their first appearance in the 4-A basketball tournament ever, and their first state venture since a 3-A appearance in 1962.

But Enloe's Eagles, who had earlier upset Raleigh Broughton's favored Caps, shot away quickly, and Rose was in the position of playing catch up all night. And Raleigh's height on the backboards didn't let the Rampants get many second chances.

Rose also hit a poor percentage, making just 22 of 75 shots at the nets. Raleigh didn't do a lot better, making 29 of 69, but it was good enough. They hit their first five, and seven of their first eight, and that made the big difference.

Turnovers played less of a role, with Rose having 23 and Enloe 24. But rebounding was perhaps the real key after Rose got cranked up and playing with the Eagles. Enloe pulled off 60 loose balls, while Rose got only 45.

"We didn't play in the first quarter," Coach Wilson McDowell said afterwards. "We just couldn't handle them and by the time we could it was too late."

"We were very nervous," the coach said. "The players admitted that at halftime. I guess it's just one of those things. The state tournament was too much for us."

McDowell agreed that the taller Eagles control of the boards was a factor in the later play. "We started getting back at them after the first period and had a lot of chances to come back. But if we didn't hit, we didn't get another shot."

Enloe came out gunning and shot through their first five points, with Claudius Jones hitting the first two in the opening minutes. Tony Warren and Tom Stevens each scored off a steal, and Jim Mills got a jumper before Mike Brewington finally broke the ice for Rose with 5:01 left.

But Warren hit a three-pointer, and after Lindberg Morris hit for Rose, Warren hit again. Morris got another basket, but it was the last the Rampants were to get in the period, as they hit just three of 19 shots.

With Warren leading the way, Enloe continued to pull away, pushing through 10 more points before the period ended. Warren put in six of those 10 as it climbed to 26-5 at the horn.

Raleigh got the opening points of the second period to stretch their lead to 21, 27-6, before Rose finally began to inch back. The Rampants hit five straight points to cut the lead to 16, then later added two to bring it down to 14.

With 1:51 left to go, a basket by Joe Godette cut the lead to 13, the smallest it got in the half, 35-22, but Enloe pulled away again to a 15-point spread at the half, 39-24.

Rose came out with good defense in the third period, cutting the lead back to 12 at 39-27, and they had six opportunities to add more to that, and really get back in the game, but each time they failed, missing three shots and having three turnovers. Enloe then got six straight points, and after a basket by Ronnie Barrett, Enloe added three more buckets to up the lead to 51-29. Rose cut seven off that in the final two minutes, but still trailed, 53-36 at the end of the frame.

The Rampants made no headway in the early minutes of the final quarter, and with 5:33 left, Warren hit to up the lead to 23, and Jeff Gorman followed with 3:37 showing to make it 67-42, the widest lead of the night, 25 points. Enloe coasted in after that as both teams went to their benches.

The loss dropped the Rampants to 14-10 on the year and closed out their season—the best in recent years. Enloe which moves on to the final eight in the state, is now 20-4.

Warren led the Enloe scoring with 17 points, while Jones had 12, and Mills and Gorman each had 10.

Barrett led Rose with 13, while Morris had 11 and Brewington hit 10.

Garr A Winner; Jackson Loser

By The Associated Press
Ralph Garr, a singles hitter, and Reggie Jackson, a home run slugger, got opposite results Saturday in their baseball arbitration salary hassles.

Garr, who said he was unappreciated by the Atlanta Braves, will be making almost $60,000 more than last year, while Jackson, who was seeking a $33,000 salary increase, will have to settle for Oakland owner Charles O. Finley's offer of a $5,000 raise.

Garr will be paid $114,500 by the Braves. Jackson will get $140,000 from the A's.

"We won, man, we won," Garr shouted into the telephone from his lawyer's office in Houston. "Everything is beautiful."

Garr's journey to New York for the arbitration hearing Friday paid off when arbitrator Eric Schmetz announced his decision. Garr, the National League batting champion, will be making $114,500 in 1975. The Braves were offering $85,000.

"It was black and white," Garr said Saturday. "I had great statistics, my lawyer presented them perfectly and the arbitrator knew baseball and made a fair decision."

The 29-year-old Garr, who made $55,000 in 1974, had said Friday that the Braves didn't appreciate him. "I was the best hitter in the National League last year," he said. "Why can't they treat me like the best?"

But Garr was singing a much happier tune Saturday.

"It's all over," he said. "Now I'm going to go out and have the best season ever for the Atlanta Braves."

Eddie Robinson, vice president of the Braves, also wanted to leave the past behind.

"Whenever you have a difference of opinion, it's always best to let an arbitrator decide," Robinson said from the Braves training camp at West Palm Beach, Fla. "We have done that and accept the opinion as final."

Garr and his lawyers, Thomas A. Vaughn and Bill Kohlhausen, did a lot of sweating and worrying before that opinion became final.

"You can't argue with statistics and we had them all on our side," Vaughn said. "But I've got to tell you that there was a tendency to be pessimistic because of the way some of these arbitration cases were turning out."

Vaughn said that the size of the increase Garr was asking "gave us an uphill climb but the decision proves Ralph deserved it. He truly belongs in that salary bracket. He had a great year."

"And the raise will give him the incentive to have an even better one."

The Garr decision gave the players six victories won at the arbitration table. With Jackson's loss, management has the upper hand with eight winners.

Another big winner Saturday was Los Angeles' relief ace Mike Marshall, who signed the first known two-year contract the Dodgers have given. It was worth $130,000 a year.

Manager Walter Alton has received 22 one-year contracts with the Dodgers.

Walton Is In Cast

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Center Bill Walton of the Portland Trail Blazers, bothered by a bone spur in his left foot, was placed in a walking cast Saturday.

The National Basketball Association team's physician, Dr. Frank Smith, ordered complete rest and said it is doubtful Walton will play again this season.

Walton, a 6-foot-11 UCLA All-America center, was the No. 1 draft choice in the NBA last year.

He signed a five-year contract with Portland for an estimated $2 million.

Walton has missed 25 of the team's 60 games so far this season because of the painful bone spur.

Dr. Smith said there would be no surgery.

Conley Nips Panthers For State Berth

WHAT A LEAP!—D.H. Conley's Calvin Hawkins lofts a shot over the outstretched hand of North Pitt's Abram Hardy (23) during the championship game of the District tournament Friday night. Getting set for the rebound on Hawkins' shot which

HOLLYWOOD—Gerry Mobley sank a jumper from the corner with 1:59 left to play and the D.H. Conley Vikings held on to the one point lead to take their first District Tournament title ever beating North Pitt, 58-57, in the championship game of the tourney, Friday night.

The Panthers had led through the first half but gave up the lead in the third period as the Vikings fought back from a 11-point difference, 18-7. Once the lead changed hands it did not stop flopping as the teams exchanged the advantage eight times in the third quarter. The lead changed hands another six times in the fourth quarter with the Vikings getting it with just under two minutes to play. North Pitt had the ball with eight seconds to go but Panther Jesse Harris's shot with two seconds left missed the mark.

Mobley's shot got the win for Conley but it was a free shot that made the difference. Both teams sank 25 field goals. North Pitt shot 61 times during the game for 41 percent while the Vikings hit 25 of 64 for 39 percent.

The Panthers and the Vikings had met three times before Friday night with the Vikings winning twice. North Pitt fell in the opening game of the season to Conley but upset them in the Pitt County Invitational during Christmas. Conley won the third meeting on their way to an unblemished conference record.

North Pitt put the Vikings into an unfamiliar position in the first half as the Panthers took and held the lead. Donnie Perkins put up the first Panther points scoring on the third North Pitt shot of the game. Jesse Harris made it 4-0 but Charlie Keyes cut it to 4-2 for Conley on a drive.

North Pitt made it a six point difference on buckets by Charlie Lewis and Harris and a field goal by Perkins put the lead at 12-4. The Vikings scored again on a fast break by Clennel Streeter but six Panther points ran the spread to 18-7.

The Vikings began to get their offense working in the final two minutes of the period and on baskets by Gerry Mobley and Rick Mobley and a three-point play by Melvin Williams cut it to 20-14 at the end of the frame.

Perkins sent the lead back to eight, 22-14, on the first bucket of the second quarter but Conley got help on three straight three-point plays that proved to be a turning point. In the first 2:33, Conley outscored North Pitt 9-6 narrowing the margin to 26-23. Vincent Barnhill canned a jumper but Conley's Gerry Mobley made it a three-point difference again with a tap-in.

Perkins lifted the Panthers up by six, 31-25, with four charity shots. The Vikings, however, countered with field goals from Williams and Calvin Hawkins to trim it to 31-29 with 2:48 left in the half. Abram Hardy looped in a long jumper for North Pitt but the lead fell back to two as Williams sank two free shots with 1:28 in the half. The 33-31 margin stood at halftime.

Hardy hit two more free throws to give the Panthers a four-point advantage once again, 35-31 but buckets from the corner by Keyes and Streeter tied the game, 35-35 with 7:00 to go on the period.

North Pitt got the lead back three times on buckets by Barnhill twice and Lewis once, 41-39, as Conley matched the Panthers and tied it again at 41-41 on a jumper from the stripe by Gerry Mobley. Keyes put the Vikings on top for the first time at 43-41 with 5:06 to go.

Harris and Hardy got the lead back for the Panthers, 45-43, but Williams hit two straight as the Vikings scooted back in front, 47-45. A basket by Harris with :03 to go knotted the score once again, 49-49.

Although neither team scored much in the last quarter, they shot almost the same number of times. North Pitt sank four of 13 and Conley four of 12 in the period.

The Panthers regained control of the lead as Lewis scored at the stripe, 51-49 only to see baskets by Rick Mobley and Streeter put Conley back up, 53-51 with 5:53 left. Harris tied it for North Pitt, 53-53 and James Carr came off the bench to send the Panthers ahead, 55-53, hitting from the corner.

Robert Harris reknotted the score, 55-55 and then added the point that made the difference as he hit the second of two free throws after drawing the fifth foul on Hardy with 3:15 to play. North Pitt's last bucket came just under the three-minute mark, 57-56.

Gerry Mobley put the Vikings on top, 58-57, with 1:56 left play and after that it was a defensive struggle. North Pitt shot four times in the final two minutes but failed to hit. The Vikings were working for a last shot when Keyes lost the ball with 22 seconds to go. The Panthers stalled for 14 seconds and called a time out.

They could not get inside and Harris was forced to take the outside shot. Rick Mobley pulled down the rebound for the Vikings with two seconds left.

The Vikings were trying to go inside on Barnhill in the late stages of the game. "Barnhill had three fouls and we thought this would slow him down," said Conley Coach Shelly Marsh. "I told them to get inside."

"We did what we wanted on the very last play. We got Harris going to his left," he and Perkins weren't hitting going left, said Marsh.

North Pitt's Cobby Deans said that fouls almost hurt his team. "We knew we were getting in foul trouble and we knew it could hurt us but (as it turned out), it didn't. We tried to set up Perkins but we couldn't get the ball to him. We defended them real well."

The Vikings were led in scoring by Gerry Mobley with 17 points. Williams had 13 and Streeter 11. Williams also had 15 rebounds, a statistic that the Panthers dominated, 34-30. Perkins had 10 of them and Barnhill had seven for the Panthers. Harris led the Panthers in scoring with 16 and Lewis and Hardy each added 10.

D.H. Conley led the selections for the All-Conference team selected by the coaches with three. Streeter, Williams and Rick Mobley represented the Vikings. North Pitt placed Vincent Barnhill and Donnie Perkins on the squad and Farmville Central had Mike Corbett. Willie Williams of Ayden-Grifton, Keith Naylor of Eastern Wayne, Clarence Wiggins of North Lenoir and Anthony Williams of Southern Wayne rounded out the selections.

On the All-tournament team, the Vikings had four players, Streeter, Mobley, Williams and Gerry Mobley. Perkins and Barnhill of the Panthers were selected along with Tim Butts, Greene Central; Joseph Pearsall, North Lenoir; and Michael Oliver and Williams of Southern Wayne.

The Coach of the Year in the Eastern Carolina Conference was Conley's Marsh winning the honor for the second year in a row. After Thursday night's game, Marsh noted that some people said Conley could not win the big game. "Some people don't even get to the big one," he said. After three years of finishing second in the tourney, the Vikings have finally won it.

Pirates Stretch Lead In Southern Swimming

BOONE—East Carolina continued to dominate the Southern Conference Swimming and Diving Championships—as usual—at Appalachian State University Friday.

Going into Saturday afternoon's finals, the Bucs held a 153-point lead over Richmond's runner-up Spiders, and virtually had a strangle-hold on their ninth straight Southern title.

However, the Bucs lost out in two of the swimming events, ending their hopes of a sweep in the non-diving events.

New records were set in four of the six events held Friday, with two defending champions recording victories.

In the team totals, East Carolina had piled up 375 points, while Richmond was a distant second with 222. William & Mary was third with 192, followed by Virginia Military Institute with 120, Appalachian State with 105, Furman with 90 and Davidson, 44. The Citadel does not field a swimming team.

Tomas Palmgren became the first double winner of the meet, adding the 400-yard individual medley to his Thursday win in the 500-yard freestyle. Palmgren swam to victory in 4:27.7, while defending champion Paul Schiffel finished second for the Pirates in 4:31.1.

Ross Bohlsen successfully defended his title in the 200-yard freestyle event, which saw the Bucs take four of the six places in the championship race.

Bohlsen's winning time of 1:47.4 broke the first record of the day, snapping Jim Griffin's 1970 mark of 1:49.08. Griffin is a former Pirate.

Other Pirates placing in the 200 freestyle were Billy Thorne, second in 1:48.6, Bobby Vail, third in 1:49.3, and Tom McKenna, fifth in 1:51.3.

Mike Bretting also successfully defended his title in the 100-yard butterfly, winning in :53.7. Ron Schnell was second for the Bucs in :54.73, while Alan Clancy finished fifth with a time of :56.82.

The 100-yard backstroke event saw the Pirate string of victories come to an end as William & Mary's Paul Benning took the event in :55.7. East Carolina's Gary Pabst took second with :57.2. Benning's time broke the oldest record in the book, snapping former ECU swimmer Mike Tomberlin's 1968 mark of :56.38.

William & Mary also captured the 100-yard breaststroke as Bob Hartzler took first in 1:02.45. That broke the mark of ECU's Charles Kemp set last year of 1:02.51. East Carolina's David Kirkman finished a close second in 1:03.21.

East Carolina got back on the winning track, capturing the 800-yard freestyle relay. The Bucs broke their own record, set last year, of 7:17.97, winning the event in 7:16.24. Richmond was a distant second in 7:29.05.

Williamston Girls Move Into Finals

ROBERSONVILLE—Williamston's girls stretched their winning streak to 24 as they rolled to a 67-27 victory over Aurora High School Friday night.

The victory put the unbeaten Tigerettes into the finals of the District One Girls Tournament against Northampton, a 23-19 winner over Chowan in the other semifinal game. The finals were played Saturday night, with the winner gaining a berth in the state tournament field next week at Union Pines High School near Cameron.

Williamston had little trouble in disposing of Aurora, practically putting the game away in the first period of the game. The Tigerettes shot through 22 points in that period, while holding Aurora to a mere four. Aurora managed to score nine points in the second period, but Williamston was pushing in 25 more of their own, running their lead out to an overwhelming 47-13 lead.

Williamston at that point needed to only show up for the second half, and didn't even have to score again. But they added 17 more to their score, holding Aurora to six. That gave the Tigerettes a 64-19 lead. Williamston let Aurora outhit them, 8-3, in the final period. Sissy Taylor led Williamston with 16 points, while Fran Hardison and Bet Brandon both tossed in 15 points. No one hit double figures for Aurora.

Elmhurst Is Champ

Elmhurst II captured the Elementary Basketball League's post-season tournament championship, but it took two overtimes to do it. Elmhurst downed South Greenville, 33-30.

Elmhurst picked up an 8-6 lead after one period and held to that margin, 12-10 at the end of the half. They extended it to 20-16 at the end of the third period, but South Greenville fought back to tie it at 26-26 at the end of regulation time. Both teams put in four points in the first overtime, but South Greenville failed to score in the second. Billy Dough hit three points for Elmhurst, giving them the victory.

Dough led the scoring with 15 points, while Scott Johnson added 12. Paul Taylor had 12 to lead South Greenville.

In the junior varsity championship, Wahi-Coates took a 19-17 victory over Elmhurst II. Dickie Heller and Ryner Bullock each had six to lead Wahi-Coates, while Mike Tucker had six for Elmhurst.

Former Athlete Aids In Olympic Planning

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Jim Worrall, a husky lawyer who once carried the Canadian flag at the Olympics, is the man who has helped to bring Olympic planners together during the crisis that has threatened the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal. "I don't know what we would have done without him," said Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee. "He has provided something that has been lacking from the start—a personal link between us and Montreal."

Worrall, 60, is the IOC member for Canada and automatically serves on the Montreal Organizing Committee. Last October, for the first time, he was elected to the IOC executive committee, the inner cabinet responsible for Olympic policy. Almost immediately Montreal ran into trouble. Strikes held up the building of the stadium and the budget rocketed from $310 million to $650 million in four months. "Jim has done a wonderful job," Killanin said. "I have been deeply worried about the situation in Montreal, chiefly because I just didn't know what was happening. He has helped to bridge the gap and has traveled back and forth across the Atlantic."

"In fact he has done so well we have decided to make this a permanent feature of Olympic planning. From now on, there will always be an IOC member serving both on the executive and the local organizing committee of the next Games." Worrall went to school in Montreal and is now a partner in a Toronto law firm. He is white-haired but still looks like a hurdler—the sport that took him into the Olympics 39 years ago. He carried the Canadian flag at the opening ceremony of the Berlin Games in 1936. "We paraded past all the Nazi hierarchy—Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, the lot," Worrall said. "My flag pole had a pointed end, and I was so busy looking at the Nazi leaders I almost ran it into a Japanese who was marching in front of me."

Bucks Moving; But Backwards

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Milwaukee Bucks, who forced the Boston Celtics to a seventh game before losing the National Basketball Association championship last year, know what they have to do.

"The fact that we are 8½ games behind the Bulls does not put us out of the playoffs," said Milwaukee Coach Larry Costello. "We've still got nearly 10 games with members of our Midwest Division, and if we can't win those games then we can only blame ourselves."

But the Bucks took another step backwards Friday night, losing to the Chicago Bulls 96-85. It was the first time the Bulls, Midwest Division leaders, had topped Milwaukee this season after four losses.

"This means we should win our division," Chicago Coach Dick Motta said. "I realize Milwaukee has to play rookies in its back court, but they still have the greatest player in the game and can go to him any time they want to, so they're still a threat."

The Bucks went to their big center, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, but he could only score 20 points against Chicago's Nate Thurmond.

Reserve forward Rowland Garrett scored nine points in the final quarter and guard Jerry Sloan made some key plays to preserve Chicago's sixth straight victory. It was played before the largest crowd ever to see the Bulls play at home, 19,549.

Bob Love pumped in 29 points to lead Chicago, while Gary Brokaw matched Abdul-Jabbar's 20-point output for Milwaukee.

In other NBA games Friday, New Orleans edged Phoenix 98-96, Washington crushed Detroit 121-96, Buffalo stopped Portland 116-106, Houston clobbered Philadelphia 103-85, Golden State defeated Los Angeles 105-93 and Seattle edged Atlanta 110-108.

In the only American Basketball Association game on tap, San Diego squeezed by Kentucky 110-108.

Jazz 98, Suns 96
Center Mel Counts' two free throws with six seconds left in the game lifted New Orleans to its victory.

Bullets 121, Pistons 96
Phil Chenier scored 30 points to lead Washington.

Braves 116, Trail Blazers 106
A 35-point performance by Bob McAdoo paced Buffalo's win.

Rockets 103, 76ers 85
Houston pulled within one-half game of Cleveland in the battle for second place in the Central Division.

Warriors 105, Lakers 93
Rick Barry pumped in 25 points to lead Golden State past the Lakers.

SuperSonics 110, Hawks 108
Fred Brown sank a reverse lay-up with 1:29 remaining in the game to give the Seattle SuperSonics a victory over Atlanta.

Conquistadors 110, Colonels 108
Down by 31 points midway in the third period, the San Diego Conquistadors stormed back to nip Kentucky and capture their fourth victory in a row.

Petty Grabs Richmond Poll

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Richard Petty says "you just don't come out one day and all of a sudden jump up by a half a second a lap. It just doesn't happen, especially on a short track where we're already running so fast anyway."

But the Dodge-driving Petty from Randleman, N. C., did just that Friday as he won the pole position for Sunday's Richmond 500 Grand National stock car race with a qualifying record speed of 93.340 miles per hour.

Petty, seeking his 13th victory over the .542-mile Fairgrounds Raceway track, was just one of six drivers who bettered the previous record of 90.952 m.p.h. set in qualifying Friday. Twenty more were due to qualify in trials today for the $46,000 race, which starts at 1 p. m., EDT.

Others who qualified Friday were James Hylton of Gramling, S. C., 88.840 m.p.h. in a Dodge; Cecil Gordon of Horse-shoe, N. C., 88.711 m.p.h. in a Ford; and Buddy Arrington of Martinsville, Va., 85.175 m.p.h. in a Plymouth.

It was Arrington's first start since he recovered from injuries received in a crash at Talladega, Ala., last August.

Right behind them were Len-nie Pond of Petersburg, Va., 92.971 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet; Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., 92.936 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet; Dick Brooks of Spartanburg, S. C., 92.724 m.p.h. in a Ford; and Dave Marcis of Skyland, N. C., 92.693 m.p.h. in a Dodge.

"If it were just one guy running faster, you could say he's just got his stuff together. But everybody's running faster and it's got to be a combination of everything, especially these new tires and the new asphalt on the race track," Petty said.

"I don't think either one of those things could make that big a difference by itself, but together it's really making the track stick real good."

There were only 17 cars on hand to bid for 10 starting positions Friday. Twenty more were due to qualify in trials today for the $46,000 race, which starts at 1 p. m., EDT.

Others who qualified Friday were James Hylton of Gramling, S. C., 88.840 m.p.h. in a Dodge; Cecil Gordon of Horse-shoe, N. C., 88.711 m.p.h. in a Ford; and Buddy Arrington of Martinsville, Va., 85.175 m.p.h. in a Plymouth.

It was Arrington's first start since he recovered from injuries received in a crash at Talladega, Ala., last August.

Right behind them were Len-nie Pond of Petersburg, Va., 92.971 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet; Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., 92.936 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet; Dick Brooks of Spartanburg, S. C., 92.724 m.p.h. in a Ford; and Dave Marcis of Skyland, N. C., 92.693 m.p.h. in a Dodge.

"If it were just one guy running faster, you could say he's just got his stuff together. But everybody's running faster and it's got to be a combination of everything, especially these new tires and the new asphalt on the race track," Petty said.

"I don't think either one of those things could make that big a difference by itself, but together it's really making the track stick real good."

times Friday night and missed only once, on his first effort at 7-5¼.

Why not try for 7-7? "Why price my world records out of the market?" he said afterwards. "It's much more exciting to break the record by one-quarter inch every week. The fans like it and I like it."

"I've broken the record on both coasts. I've broken it in different tee shirts. What else can I do?"

Stones, named the meet's outstanding performer, encouraged officials to place the high jump pit in the middle of the track, giving him a more direct approach than it had been put off to the side as originally planned.

Stones, of the Pacific Coast Track Club, has won 10 of 11 outings during the indoor campaign. His closest competition Friday night, Pat Matzdorf of the Chicago Track Club, finished at 7-2. The other top names in the field—Tanzania's Filbert Bayi, Chicago Track Club star Rick Wohluter and UCLA distance queen Francie Larrieu—all won handily.

Bayi took the lead on the first lap and captured the 1,500 meters in 3:41.2, nine seconds off his own world record.

Wohluter took the 1,000 meters in meet record time of 2:22.2. The ex-Notre Damer, the AAU's outstanding amateur athlete of 1974, has lost only once in the past year and one-half, and that was a week ago when Bayi beat him in the mile run in San Diego.

Miss Larrieu breezed to victory in the Ms. metric mile, 1,500 meters, in 4:17.4—seven seconds slower than her world record time in Toronto last week.

Because of the lower rolling resistance of Michelin "X" radials over conventional bias-ply tires, you might get as much as 10% savings over your present gas consumption. This means more miles per gallon of gas. It means extra dollars in your pocket.

A Night Spent In Prince Dracula's Ancient Castle

My trip to Rumania was made for several purposes, one of them being a desire to spend the night in Dracula's castle. I had read about the discovery of the castle two years before and at that time had intended to visit with a friend. But he had gone off on travels on his own, and I had run out of money.

of the Shenandoah Valley foothills, with the castle built on top of one of the largest hills. When I first saw the castle ruins, they were in shadow. I felt a challenge as I stopped and looked at the object of my trip.

Dracula's History

Dracula was a real person, though he was not of course a vampire. He was a prince of Wallachia and parts of Transylvania around the 1450's. His real name was Vlad Sepes and his title was Dracula.

Dracula, or son of the devil or dragon, was a military order given him by the Pope because of Sepes' effectiveness in keeping out the Turks in their constant attempts to invade deeper into Europe.

Vlad Sepes is translated as "John the Impaler" from his favorite form of execution—which was impalement of people on large stakes. By the time of Prince Dracula's death, it is thought that he had executed over 100,000 humans, as the Rumanians count it, and possibly twice that number of Turks, who weren't counted at all.

Sadist

Dracula was an insane sadist, though like Hitler, there was a method to his madness. He is known today to the Rumanians as a great lawgiver who forced the people to be good. Reportedly, in one village he had placed a drinking cup of solid gold as tall as two hands high. As long as he lived, this cup remained at the village well, because the people knew that the penalty for stealing the cup would be the burning of the village and the death of everyone in it.

Another story of Prince Dracula was that a Turkish ambassador had come to his court. The ambassador did not take off his cap when meeting Dracula, saying that it was not a Turkish custom. To remind the Sultan that he was not a servant of Turkey, Dracula had the ambassador's hat nailed to his head and sent the body back.

Labor Of Nobles

On discovering that his brother had been buried alive by rebelling noble Boyars in the capital city of Tirgoviste, Prince Dracula invited them to an Easter party of reconciliation. Then, after they were all quite drunk, his army rounded them up and marched them over seventy-five miles through the mountains. They were told to build a castle or die. They worked until the clothes fell apart from their backs. Then they worked in the nude, resting long enough only to restore energy to work another day, and eating only enough to live.

When the castle was finished, nine-tenths of the nobles had died. The survivors were marched back, still naked, to the capital. There was not another rebellion as long as Dracula lived.

This castle, literally built on blood labor, is located far out in the wilderness. This is where I chose to spend a night. Aside from the supposed danger of vampires, there were very real dangers at the castle. Wolves still are a menace there. In driving around the area, I had seen several. There were also bats, Capartian vipers, and the structural danger of a castle in ruins.

The Rumanian government has taken measures to save the castle, but these are fairly ineffective. A total of 1,400 steps replace the almost vertical climb up the mountain. A watchman keeps an eye on the place. The government has also tried to shore up the sides and walls with concrete, but the repair work already is cracking and crumbling.

Summit View

From the summit I could see the Arges river. Legend has it the wife of Prince Dracula had jumped from where I was standing over one thousand feet to her death. I could see the camp of the nobles where they lived and died building the castle.

It was easy to understand why only a paranoid mind would choose such an eerie—desolate and in a wilderness area. The site of the castle is solitary and melancholy, its history marked by tragedy and cruelty. Perhaps this is what the natives feel and why they consider it haunted.

Site Selected

I planned to spend the night in the bottom of a square room which was once the base of a watch tower. In such a small castle, it also served as the dungeon. As night came on, I wrapped myself in a blanket and settled down for the night, realizing I was committed for the night, that I'd never be able to find my way to the watchman's house in the dark. It would be difficult, to say the least, to climb out of the room since I would be unable to see handholds and breaks in the walls.

Also, there would be no one around to understand, much less hear, any calls for help. Fortunately, there was a full moon, although the light was watery, and only made the shadows seem darker. It was a beautiful night. Far away I could hear the waters of the Arges River flowing. The stars were stunning in their brightness and clarity.

The strongest impression of the night, however, was of the coldness. The walls soon lost what heat they had held from the sun, and became chilly a few minutes after sundown. Insects which had been buzzing in the afternoon sun left after sun down. A light breeze started and sighed through the trees. In the distance, a wolf sang to the moon.

When I touched the weatherbeaten bricks of the castle, I found them dusty. I was soon coated with dust. In the far corner of the room a puddle of water had formed. Every now and again a drop of moisture would fall and disturb the slimy top. It was about midnight that I discovered I had a roommate. I thought it was a rabbit, so I was surprised when it ran up the wall. It was a very large rat. A friend had jokingly given me a piece of garlic before I left for the trip. This was the only thing I had to throw at the intruder. All I can say is the rat did not disturb me again.

Vigil Ends

Dawn came slowly. The sun was a bright red. Relaxing in the early hours, I wrote quite a few letters to friends, before I climbed down the mountain. Then, refreshed, I drove back to Bucharest. I had stayed the night, and had the satisfaction of realizing that for one night at least, I had been a guest in the home of Prince Dracula, the son of the Devil.

OLD RUINS . . . with sections of sturdy walls holding out against time and the assault of man, provide a melancholy atmosphere. In Rumania, as in other European countries, ruins of once strategic forts, castles, or monasteries are often perched on hilltops.

Cypress Knees --- Nature's Fantastically Fashioned Roots

A BABY ANIMAL? . . . A close up view of this protuberance looks like a small animal running along a log.

In the wetlands and swamps of the South, nature has fashioned a tree unlike that found anywhere else on earth . . . one that sends up oddly shaped roots above ground in a wide circle around the tree.

When the tough outer bark of bald cypress knees is boiled and peeled away, a beautifully textured grain is revealed. Sometimes, too, the knees possess fanciful shapes, such as those pictured on this page.

A WOODS MONSTER . . . could hardly be more fearsome than the expression on this scowling, twisted cypress knee that seems to have three eyes.

TWO PROJECTIONS . . . that have been scarred and healed have the appearance of carved rosettes.

COLD DAYS AHEAD

ON THESE COLD DAYS it's no fun to be out in the weather so your carrier is taking special care to have your newspaper delivered in good condition.

THE MOST DISCOURAGING part of a newspaper carrier's job is not bad weather. It's having to come back two or three times to collect for the newspaper.

NEXT TIME YOUR CARRIER comes to collect, won't you remember those cold days when it was so nice to have your paper home-delivered? Your carrier tries to collect on schedule.

THANK YOU.

D.H. Conley HIGHLIGHTS

Nightlife at D. H. Conley was at its peak as the Eastern Carolina Tournament was played here this week. With two games each night, the action began at 7:00, Tuesday through Friday.

Ricky Phillips, Barry Purser and Donnie Cox will represent Conley at the State Wrestling Tournament on Friday and Saturday that will be held in Winston-Salem. They are eligible for this competition because of the first place position that each captured at the Sectional Tournament Friday.

Tickets are still on sale for the SCA barbecue on February 25. The tickets are $2 each. Tickets can be obtained from any SCA representative and the public is invited to participate. Plates can be picked up at the school cafeteria from 11:00 until 2:00.

Homemade cake will be sold for 25 cents a slice.

Proceeds from the barbecue will go to purchase an illuminated marquee with changeable letters. The sign, to be placed on the front campus, will be 12 feet by 44 feet and will be used for promotional features.

The Science Club visited Farmville Central Friday and attended the District Science Fair there. Forty-two students represented Conley. They heard Eugene Upchurch speak on the topic "What the North Carolina Academy of Science Can Do For You".

Students-of-the-Week in IPS are as follows: second period, Queenie Green; third period, Donald Ribeiro; fourth period, Jimmy Dixon; and fifth period, Greg Stokes. Congratulations and keep up the good work!

New and exciting things are happening in Conley's art classes. Some classes are working on needlecrafts while others are printing on textiles. The needlecrafts will be converted into pillows or wall hangings. Carol Helmkamp, the new art teacher at Conley, also guides others while they work on ceramics. These ceramics are handmade pottery and will be on display in the Conley Media Center soon.

Patrolman Took 5-Week Course

Highway Patrol Sgt. Claude S. Harrison has successfully completed a five-week police administration course in traffic management.

According to Troop A Commander Capt. John T. Jekins, Harrison attended the course, sponsored by the North Carolina Governor's Highway Safety Program in Charlotte.

Instructors for the school were from the Traffic Institute of Northwestern University.

Subjects were taught on a supervisory level and were designed to help students implement sound traffic supervision in the areas where they are stationed.

MORE POACHERS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI)—The Missouri Conservation Commission says poaching has been on the increase for several years, with a 131 per cent gain in 1972 and more than a 100 per cent increase in 1973.

A SAUCER IN YOUR FUTURE? — Paul Moller, 38, inventor of an eight-engine flying saucer, sits in a prototype of the "Discojet" which he hopes will revolutionize modern transportation. The $500,000 prototype is equipped with a control stick for ascending and descending and a throttle. It is also gyroscopically stabilized to control pitch and roll. The craft, built of fiberglass and aluminum, will retail for $10,000 says Moller. (AP Wirephoto)

The Income Tax Still Debatable

CHICAGO (AP)—The federal income tax was once ruled unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. Unfortunately, that was in 1894 and doesn't help today's taxpayers.

Taxing the income of citizens and corporations is perfectly constitutional today as outlined in the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution, enacted in 1913. But, the fairness and practicality of the tax has been debated by American economists, historians, legislators and citizens since the mid-1600s, according to researchers for The World Book Encyclopedia.

Each session of Congress sees bills introducing a new ceiling on tax rates. And, as recently as 1956, a presidential candidate campaigned for the abolition of a progressive income tax. The debate has been raging for years.

Income taxes have been a part of American life since the Colonial period in New England. One of the first income taxes was called a "faculty tax." It was levied to equalize the tax burden of landholders and nonlandholders. Each man's estate was assessed and he was taxed accordingly.

The colonists were vehemently opposed to this tax, thinking they received too little in return. Payment tended to be a "hit-or-miss" affair since the payment of any tax was often a hardship for the colonists. Tax evasion seemed the rule, not the exception.

The first official income tax imposed by the U.S. government after the Revolution, which itself was prompted in part by tax disputes, was not collected until 1862. Congress passed the individual tax law to help the Union government pay for the cost of the Civil War. The tax ended in 1872, but in the 20 years following, 66 separate bills were introduced to establish a peacetime federal income tax of one sort or another.

Finally, in 1894, Congress passed another income tax law patterned after the Civil War tax legislation. Although the Supreme Court had declared this legislation constitutional in 1880, the new tax proposal was declared unconstitutional in 1894.

The Court decision was based on a statement in the Constitution requiring that any tax levied directly on individuals must be levied in proportion to a state's population, according to World Book researchers. In other words, people in more populated states had to pay more than those from states with fewer people.

Finding it difficult to levy an income tax that was constitutional, legislators began to talk about amending the Constitution as a way to eliminate the problem.

Thus, in 1913, the Sixteenth Amendment gave Congress the authority "... to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census for enumeration."

While the income tax laws have changed many times since 1913, as have the tax rates, the debates remain constant.

Finding an equitable and fair manner to tax citizens seems to be an unending job, and one that consumes a growing portion of the taxes being collected. In the 1974 fiscal year, the Internal Revenue Service budget exceeded $1.5 billion.

License For Handicapped

FRESNO, Calif. (AP)—A special license plate issued upon request to physically handicapped automobile owners can do more than permit the owner to park in places marked for the disabled, according to the Fresno Architectural Barriers Committee.

The committee said the holder of these special plates may park without limit in limited zones and may park in metered spaces without feeding the meter a thin dime.

Committee chairman Anita Daughtrey is urging the disabled to apply for the plates because so many motorists are using the spaces marked for the disabled.

"The distinctive plates," said Chairman Daughtrey, "can be of help in identifying the rightful users of the spaces."

There are no extra charges for the special plates. They are recognizable by the letters DP or in the case of disabled veterans, VT, in front of the third letter.

May Register Young Pupils

WINTERVILLE — W. H. Robinson Primary School here is starting now to gather information about potential students for kindergarten and first grade for the 1975-76 school years.

Parents may call or go by the school to register a child, if he or she will be five or six years old before Oct. 16, 1975. They are reminded to bring immunization records and birth certificates of the children to be registered.

Super Tankers A Major Fear In Oil Spill Concern

By H.J. HELLER
 United Press International
 Every hour of every day man spills about 200,000 gallons of oil into the ocean, much of it from supertankers, the largest movable man-made objects. Some of the spill is accidental, some deliberate. Some occurs from small leaks; often oil is dumped into the sea to clean out tanker bottoms. Sometimes it gushes into the sea in tremendous quantities, the result of dramatic disasters such as the March, 1967 wreck of the tanker Torrey Canyon 20 miles off the Cornish coast at the southwestern tip of England. The Torrey Canyon disgorged 36 million gallons of crude oil into the Atlantic from a gash in its side. No human lives were lost but the accident, attributed to negligence by an admiralty court, was a calamity for birds, fish and shellfish. More recently on Jan. 10, 1975 the Gulf tanker African Zodian spilled 113,000 gallons of bunker oil into Bantry Bay, Ireland, following collision with a tug. Three days earlier the Japanese supertanker Showa Maru ran aground in the shallow, congested Malacca strait leaking more than a million gallons of crude oil into the seawaters bordering Singapore, Malaysia and Indonesia. The National Academy of Sciences estimated the rate of oil spillage into the oceans at 200,000 gallons per hour. Testifying before a Senate committee Jan. 29, Robert Citron, director of the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena, indicated that was a conservative figure. Supertankers—referred to by shippers as "very large crude carriers" or VLCCs—are being built that can carry a half-million tons, and "several large supertanker spills each year could result in major revisions of the estimates of petroleum introduced into the oceans from accidents during the next decade," Citron said. Naval engineering experts such as T. Francis Ogilvie, chairman of the University of Michigan Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, claim that the development of supertankers is an important factor in the increased danger of ship collisions. Oil spills are comparatively tiny compared to the volume of the earth's oceans which contain 320,750,000 cubic miles, or about 360 quintillion gallons (the number 36 followed by 19 zeros), but a relatively small spill can have a devastating effect. Scientists say that about a third of the spilled oil evaporates or is dissipated by chemical reactions. The remainder forms lumps of tar that circulate among the ocean's currents, often ending up as gummy masses on beaches. Dr. John M. Hunt testified to the Senate National Ocean Policy Study Committee on Commerce on the effects of oils spills.

Hunt, of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, said that one effect was "the oiling and tarring of beaches...from an esthetic and economic standpoint, this has probably been the most damaging effect on man worldwide." Hunt minimized the possible damage to human health because crude oil contains traces of cancer inducing materials known as carcinogens. "Our calculations," Hunt said, "showed that carcinogens ingested from a diet exclusively of contaminated fish was about the same as a diet exclusively of such foods as lettuce, mushrooms, potatoes and smoked meats. These are some of the many foods that contain carcinogens at levels comparable to oil contaminated fish." Hunt pointed out that a considerable quantity of oil is transported in tankers under foreign flags not under American control "and if they spill oil on the open sea and it washes up on our shores, there is very little we can do about it."

Critics of the VLCCs say there is no great need to build the huge ships and level a variety of complaints against them. Among them are: —Their size—some are a fifth of a mile long with the navigator's post at the rear, impeding maneuverability. Their depth, running 65 feet or more, requires deep channels. Because of lack of ports capable of handling them a disabled supertanker could conceivably have to be towed thousands of miles leaking oil all the way. —Large passenger ships have up to four propellers and twin rudders while supertankers carry one of each with resulting replacement difficulties. —Passenger ships with a fraction of the tonnage of a modern supertanker have many boilers while the tankers have only one. —Many supertankers fly flags of nations with minimal sailing standards resulting in unqualified crews and low manning levels. —VLCCs lack double bottoms needed for environmental protection in the event of grounding.

—It takes half an hour to stop a supertanker. Industry spokesmen reply that their concern with crew safety and the millions of dollars involved give them the greatest incentive to reduce risks. Publications issued by Standard Oil of California, Exxon and Texaco (and concurred in by most other petroleum shippers) say: —As the dependence of the world on oil increases larger tankers are needed to transport petroleum products in greater quantities more economically. —Use of VLCCs could reduce tanker stops at American ports by as much as 80 per cent, thereby decreasing harbor congestion while increasing environmental protection. —Prefabrication permits tanker sections to be built in well-protected areas rather than in drydocks resulting in better welding qualities. New large tankers have not shown a high rate of structural failure. —Twin propellers and twin rudders may be needed in some high speed ships but "the operating reliability of single rudder, single screw vessels has been amply proven during many years of commercial marine experience." —VLCCs built with single boilers also have a smaller boiler which could provide enough steam to maintain one-third to one-half speed in cases of main boiler malfunction. —Double bottoms could prevent some oil spillage from minor grounding accidents but offer no protection in serious incidents which account for 60 per cent of the spills. In some circumstances double bottoms could cause greater pollution because of the necessity of removing the cargo in grounding accidents to prevent the vessel from settling deeper and causing more damage. —Standard said many of its tankers operate under flags of convenience but there is no important difference in accident rates. "Ship owners are hard-headed men of commerce whose success or failure depends on the safety of their ships." —Maneuvering skills are the same on VLCCs as on smaller vessels although all ships have different handling characteristics. The U.S. Coast Guard has suggested federal legislation along the following lines, which might prove the basis for some sort of international agreement: —Definitive traffic rules on aids to navigation, vessel traffic management, restriction on size and draft of vessels. —Controllability of vessels, particularly relating to improved training and qualifications of operating personnel, improved on-board navigation equipment, and control of vessel movements under hazardous conditions such as low visibility and congested traffic areas. —A national policy to deal with the transfer ashore and treatment of oil discharged from vessels.

Study Pamlico River Ecology

The Department of Biology at East Carolina University has been awarded a grant by the National Science Foundation to support student research on the Pamlico River estuary this summer. Five undergraduate students will study the relative importance of various food sources supporting animal life in the estuary as well as the pathways food follows in the food chains. The Foundation program this year is emphasizing energy-related research which includes food production and utilization in ecosystems such as the Pamlico River estuary.

Across Desert To Ghana And Greenville

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Out of all the world they've seen and experienced since their marriage in 1972, Donna Whitley and Kacem Sebi have chosen a big house on Dickinson Avenue here as their home.

"We've learned by our own feelings and by observing various cultures that the extended family is very important to one's happiness and well-being," Donna said. "We have decided we want to live and rear our children near our relatives. But, of course, we have to choose, because Kacem's and mine are so far apart. We've decided to make Pitt County our home, but we'll visit Kacem's family as often as we can."

Kacem is from Casablanca, Morocco and it was there that he and Greenville native, Donna Whitley met in 1969. A University of North Carolina at Greensboro graduate, she was working in Berkeley, Calif., when she began studying Arabic dance. "I loved it from the start," she said, "and soon decided I wanted to go where it originated and learn as much as I could about it. So I saved my money, and soon I was on my way, via Europe, to Morocco."

For a while she lived in Casablanca and studied under a teacher who specialized in polishing up young girls who came in from the villages to dance in the night clubs of the city. "I noticed from the start that every girl had her own technique. Clearly each village had its own style. Soon I knew I had to go live in a village and learn as completely as possible about the dance of that village," Donna said.

Part Of Culture

"Dance, you must understand, is an integral part of the culture of the people there, and in many areas of the world. In the village of Ouedlaou in the North of Morocco, I lived with an old woman. She was a very good drummer and, through her, I was invited to all the weddings and other gatherings in the village. I loved living there, although I sympathized with the women, who were completely controlled by their husbands. The marriages were arranged, and they have so many children because the number of children a man has determined the prestige he enjoys."

Kacem was born in Casablanca, where his family is in the textile business. However, they claim to be from Fes, because this is the city of their forebearers. He went to school in New York and Ohio.

After her stay in Morocco, Donna came back to Greenville to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Whitley, and then returned to California, where she taught history and dance to high school students in an innovative course she and a friend developed themselves. Kacem followed her there and they were married in March, 1972.

They honeymooned on the way back to Morocco, where they lived among Kacem's family for several months. He made another attempt to work in the business of his family, but still did not enjoy it since he loves sculpture as much as Donna loves dance.

While living with his family, Kacem and Donna began to plan a trip across the Sahara, an adventure dreamed of by many, but undertaken by few because of the extreme hardship and risk involved.

"For anyone planning such a trip, we heartily recommend a book called, The Sahara Is Yours by John Stevens," Kacem said. "We talked to several people who had made or at least started the trip, but the information from each was so contradictory to the others' we found we could best make our plans relying on Stevens' advice. I was working at the time, so Donna went to London to get a landrover and drove it back."

"Imagine that," Donna said, "in a country where many of the women still cover their faces in public."

"One thing Stevens emphasized, which we endorse, is 'Stay on the dirt track,'" Kacem went on. "People who get lost and perish in the desert are those who think they can get off the track for a while and then get back on."

"Besides the adventure we hoped to enjoy, we had another reason for our trip across the desert," Donna said. "It was the shortest, least expensive way to reach Ghana. I wanted to join the Ghana Dance Ensemble at the University of Ghana, and Kacem wanted to study West African sculpture."

"The beauty of the desert is indescribable," she said. "And to dispel all the movie-set ideas you might have, we saw very little sand during our 6,000-mile trip. We saw some fascinating rock formations, but few sandy areas. It's just as oppressively hot as they say, though. We'd rest during the heat of the day, having arisen before daybreak, and drive again in the late afternoons.

"We felt sadness for the Tuarega, the people on the rim of the Sahara who are dying along with their flocks because the drought has been so severe for so many years now. We saw a small group of them occasionally, and also a number of their burial sites.

"Living in Ghana was a marvelous experience. Here, as in Arabia, dance is a part of the people's lives. And they're such kindly people. Though we were strangers and so different-looking from them, we were always welcomed to take part in their festivities.

"Americans need to realize that the culture from which the Black people of America came was a highly developed one, with nothing 'primitive' about it. They had a democratic government that insured individual rights and yet insured the welfare of the group long before we did. Can you imagine the havoc and the heartbreak that must have been caused in their homes and villages when their people were captured and carried off as slaves into an entirely foreign culture?"

Donna is now teaching ethnic dance in her home and may be reached at 752-0928. Kacem is preparing for an exhibition of his sculpting at the Mushroom here in April.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know if I can put into words the condition of my house in February, but I'll try.

If John Wayne and his horse fell down in the living room shag, no one would find them unless one of them gave birth.

"What's a nice girl like me doing in a dump like this?" I asked my husband.

"You weren't getting any younger and you panicked," he said dryly.

"If I could just buy something new it might motivate me to clean," I offered.

"Forget it."
"I know. I could move things around. A lot of people rearrange furniture to relieve the boredom."

"Not the plumbing in the bathroom again," he cautioned. Yesterday, I ushered him into the living room and said proudly, "Does this look like a different room?"

He gasped, "Incredible. What did you do?"

"Well, I saw this article in a magazine that said if you made just two little throw cushions, it would brighten up your entire room."

"Actually, I used a couple of cushions I had around the house, bought some remnants of bright ribbon and made a basket weave design out of them. The whole thing cost... are you ready? (he nodded numbly.) $3.46."

"It doesn't even look like the same sofa," he said.

"It isn't," I said. "The ribbon only came in pink which didn't do a thing for our royal blue sofa. I had it covered."

"And the chairs? You had them covered too?"

"You're teasing. Have those chairs covered? They weren't the style of chairs you'd put with satin-ribboned cushions. That's like wearing a WIN button on your original Dior gown. These are new."

He paled.

"Watch the walls," I said. "They may still be a little wet. Actually they'll dry a little darker and will match the new carpet perfectly."

"Who would have thought two little pillows could have made such a difference," he said weakly.

"Now that you mention it," I said cocking my head critically, "the pillows do look a little tacky in this elegant room. They look like something I made out of remnants. Would it be all right with you if I bought two little ole pillows to brighten up this room?"

Planning for a SGA workshop are members of the Rose High Student Government, led by the project co-chairmen Hank Dunbar and Felice Streeter.

The workshop will take place at Immanuel Baptist Church next Friday from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Seventeen schools are invited from Division Four of the Eastern District of the North Carolina Association of Student Councils.

Workshop delegates will be divided up into five discussion groups. Don Sullivan and Richard Gray are in charge of the elections group. Leaders of the School Spirit group are Felice Streeter and Debbie Goodson. Student Involvement group leaders are Mike Williams and Sharon Serva. Cassie Deyton and Art Klose are chairmen of the group concerning the Place of Physical Education in the School, and Tommy Joe Payne is leader of the group discussing Student Rights.

Wanda Carmon is in charge of all correspondence. Official delegates from Rose are Clay Shugart, Rosalyn Taylor, Harry Pair, Anna Marie Payne, and Tommy Joe Payne.

Key note speaker is Dr. Joe Pou. Lisa Barnes, president of the NCASC, EDNCASC and of Havelock High School, will report on the present undertakings of the Eastern District of the North Carolina Association of Student Councils (EDNCASC).

Demonstration

Twelve Rose Spanish II students went to ECU Thursday to participate in a demonstration group for foreign language student teachers. The class was filmed and taped so the students enjoyed watching themselves on the screen after it was over.

Participating were Lynn Tucker, Don Tucker, Selene Wheelless, Mike Dixon, Sid Ashby, Web Spillman, Ann Marie Raper, Anna Marie Payne, Stephanie Hall, Gwen Maye, Hubert Evans and Rita Ross.

Debbie Lambeth and Brenda Peterson traveled to Chapel Hill last Friday to participate in the piano workshop held at UNC. The purpose of the workshop was to give instructions to interested students on how to improve playing techniques. Debbie and Brenda also enjoyed a concert given by UNC piano majors.

Jeff Hagans and Matthew Ward left Thursday for Winston-Salem to participate in the state wrestling finals. They were chosen to go as the top two wrestlers in the division.

In a recent carpentry skills contest held at North Pitt High School, Gorham Clark was awarded with first place and Ricky Meeks with third. Contestants were required to take a 45-minute written state test as well as build a previously unnamed project in an hour and a half. After the two grades were combined the highest scorers were chosen as winners. Gorham will travel to Winston-Salem in April to contest in state competition.

Sociologist Publishes 'Marital Exercise' Book

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau
Married couples who want practical, straightforward suggestions for dealing with the inevitable problems in marriage may find what they are looking for in "Dr. Knox's Marital Exercise Book," a recently published guide by East Carolina University sociologist David Knox.

The 300-page book, published by the New York firm of David McKay Co., Inc., is designed to enable spouses "to function as marriage counselors to themselves," says the author.

Chapters on communication, sex, money, in-laws, religion, children, recreation, alcohol abuse and other problem areas give specific guidelines in coping with recurring difficulties in each area.

Dr. Knox, whose special field is marriage and family counseling, explains in the "Marital Exercise Book" how couples can diagnose and treat their own marriages by following marriage counseling procedures based on behavior modification principles.

According to the behavior modification theory of psychology, undesirable behaviors are identified and replaced by new, more positive behaviors.

The book advises that after new behaviors are suggested by each marriage partner, written "contracts" or agreements detailing the desired behavior should be used as reinforcement, until the more pleasant behavior is fully developed and greater marital harmony is achieved.

In his introduction, Dr. Knox refers to the German philosopher Schopenhauer's story of two porcupines who, while huddling together for warmth on a cold night, moved closer and closer together as the temperature fell, and inevitably were pricked by each other's sharp quills.

"Finally," he continues, "with much shifting and shuffling and changing of position, they managed to work out an equilibrium whereby each got maximum warmth with a minimum of painful pricking from the other.

"Many husbands and wives have something in common with the huddling porcupines. They want to achieve and maintain a kind of equilibrium: warmth and closeness on the one hand, but without the unpleasant, sometimes agonizingly painful 'pricking' that can be the result of continuous intimate interaction with another human being."

"This book was written as an attempt to present practical, workable guidelines for coping with the 'prickly' aspects of marriage."

Dr. Knox is the author of other publications in the field of marriage counseling and is a clinical member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors.

He is associate professor of sociology at ECU.

Ask Telephone Operator For Number

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I got into a terrible fight with a telephone operator. I couldn't get my party, so I dialed the operator and asked her to help me get the number. She was very rude, and said: "Why don't you learn how to speak English?"

I know how to speak English, Abby. I was born in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and lived there until eight months ago, when I moved to California.

When this operator insulted me I asked her what her name was because I was so angry I wanted to report her to her supervisor. She said she wasn't allowed to give out her name, and before I could say another word, she disconnected me.

How can a person report a discourteous telephone operator if she refuses to give you her name?
INSULTED IN CALIF.

DEAR INSULTED: Ask the telephone operator for her "number." (Each operator has one.) If she refuses to give it to you and hangs up, call back and ask for the supervisor. You may not be able to identify the operator against whom you have the complaint, but it's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a 13-year-old boy to father a child? Our neighbor claims that Leroy, our 13-year-old son, got Laurie, their 15-year-old daughter, pregnant.

Leroy has always been big for his age, but he never was a run-around, and he hardly ever looked at a girl. He has never been in any kind of trouble. He's a good student and an altar boy at church.

Leroy said he fooled around with Laurie "some," but he wasn't the only one. Laurie says she is sure Leroy is the one, but she admitted to having given in to three other boys.

Laurie refuses to have an abortion because it's against her religion. She is a very religious girl and always said she wanted to be a nun.

We don't know where to turn, Abby. If it's our son's baby, we want to do the right thing, but if it isn't, we don't see why we should be stuck with the responsibility, expense and so on.

Can you help us?

MISSISSIPPI MESS

DEAR MESS: First, you need some expert legal advice. If you can't afford a lawyer, consult your local Legal Aid Society. Then get some counseling from your clergyman, Family Service and/or Planned Parenthood office. It is obvious that both Leroy and Laurie need to know a lot more about the birds and the bees and PEOPLE than they know. What kids don't know CAN hurt them.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is 17. Her father (from whom I am divorced) bought her a car of her own, and ever since she's had that car her grades have gone down, and she has gotten so disrespectful and independent I can't handle her.

She drives off to school in the morning and sometimes I don't see her until 10 P.M. When I ask her where she's been, she says, "Oh, just goofing around."

How can I get her back in line? The car is hers so I can't take it away from her.
HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The key to the situation fits the car. As long as your daughter is under legal age, you are responsible for her. Ground her until her grades come up. And YOU set the rules about when she's expected home.

DEAR ABBY: When a woman complained because her husband wanted her affectionate attentions at odd times, you said: "Shoot the ducks when they are flying." Wonderful advice!

My wife is 62 and so am I. She is full of pep and still works fulltime, and she shoots the ducks while they are flying. And if they aren't flying, she hunts them out!
Sign me... THE HAPPIEST MAN IN THE WORLD

P.S. The only time she gets angry with me is when I tickle the bottom of her feet. She is a little overweight, so there are plenty of other places to tickle her. I hope you don't think we are crazy.

DEAR HAPPY: If you're crazy, what this world needs is more crazy people.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

MONEY SAVER

DENVER (UPI) — A Michigan community school district is saving energy, money and material by recycling aluminum lunch trays to use for sand castings by metal shop pupils.

An article in the School Foodservice Journal here says the recycling was started after general metals teacher Raymond H. Durant of the Lake Fenton Community School District said more energy is needed to extract aluminum from bauxite and melt down ingots than would be used to remelt aluminum.

A 10-ounce package of fine dry toasted bread crumbs yields about 3 cups.

For the 12th year, the Woman's Club of Raleigh is sponsoring the Greater Raleigh Antiques Show and Sale. This year, the show will be held at the Governor W. Kerr Scott Building at the N.C. State Fairgrounds.

Opening ceremonies will take place Tuesday, March 4, at 10:30 a.m. with former Gov. Robert W. Scott cutting the ribbons. In attendance will be a color guard from the Perishing Rifle Unit at N.C. State University, wearing uniforms ordered for Bicentennial celebrations. The Bicentennial theme will be carried out through the entire three-day show.

Catering of the daily buffet luncheons and dinners by the Woman's Club will be another first this year. Lunch will be served from noon until 2 p.m. and dinner from 5-7 p.m.

The hours of the show are 10:30 to 10 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday and 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday.

The show chairman is Mrs. A. C. Broughton Jr. and co-chairmen are Mrs. Henry L. Brown and Mrs. Lawrence E. Crabtree.

Local dealers scheduled to participate in the show are Woodside Antiques and Singletary's.

Raleigh will also be the scene of a needlework seminar scheduled March 5-6 at the historic Moredecai House.

During the event, experts will be sharing their special techniques while offering instruction in popular needlecrafts of today.

"We feel like we're offering a unique experience for men and women in North Carolina interested in learning techniques of different needlecrafts and developing greater skills in forms they already know," said Mrs. William J. Allen Jr., chairman of the seminar.

"And because we're having it to raise money for Mordecai Square Historical Society Inc., we thought having it at the Mordecai House, which has recently been refurbished, would add a new dimension to the event. The house provides charm for needlework that you would not find in a modern classroom setting," she added.

Four instructors will be present to teach bargello, cross-stitch, Deerfield blue embroidery, patchwork, quilting and finishing techniques. The two-day workshop will be divided into morning, afternoon and evening sessions.

The instructors will be Mrs. Jo Bucher of Boonton, N. J., Mrs. Avis Gallagher of Greensboro, Mrs. Bets Ramsey of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mrs. Ginie Thompson of Pawleys Island, S. C.

Further information can be obtained by writing or calling the Mordecai Square Historical Society Inc.

Grammy MC Is A Winner

That handsome, personable fellow who will be emceeing the 16th annual Grammy Awards ceremonies on Channel 9-11, is, himself, no slouch at picking up 'hardware' (awards) for excellence in many fields of endeavor.

On Saturday, March 1, (10 to 11:30 p.m.) when the Grammy Awards — which are presented by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences for outstanding achievement in the recording field — are passed out at the Palladium in Hollywood, singer Andy Williams will be directing traffic at the podium for the fifth consecutive year.

In 1963 Williams recorded an album for Columbia Records called "Days of Wine and Roses," which racked up over $1 million in sales and earned him his first gold record. Williams has since won 15 more gold records, receiving his most recent one in 1971.

For his television performances over the years, Williams holds three Emmy Awards. His prowess at amassing gleaming bric-a-brac also extends into the realm of amateur golf and tennis. A sport's patron, as well as an ace participant, he sponsors the Andy Williams San Diego Open Golf Tournament, a major professional Golf Association-sanctioned event that annually attracts virtually every big-name golf pro.

Among the presenters on the special will be, in alphabetical order, Herb Alpert, The Carpenters, Alice Cooper, David Essex, Aretha Franklin, Marvin Hamlisch, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Randy Newman, Ray Stevens, Barry White and Stevie Wonder.

The Grammy represents the highest honor that the recording field can bestow: recognition of outstanding creativity by one's peers. Grammys span more than 50 different categories that include all forms of recordings — pop, rock, classical, jazz, rhythm and blues, country, documentary, comedy and children's records — as well as crafts involving composing, arranging, engineering and producing.

BIOGRAPHICS

NBC-TV will present three 90-minute biographical specials in daytime air-time as part of the Bicentennial Celebration, under the title of "First Ladies' Diaries."

GRAMMY HOST — Andy Williams will host "The Grammy Awards Show," the annual broadcast honoring outstanding achievements in the recording industry, to be presented live from the Uris Theatre in New York City, Saturday, March 1 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

MUCH OF THE CHARM of professional tennis as it is played on the World Championship Tennis Tour is its unpredictability, a situation which is emphasized by emergency of youthful performers as budding stars. Jimmy Connors, pictured above, is becoming one of the most popular and successful of the new young players.

Celebrities Add 'Spice' To World Tennis Tourney

Celebrities who can swing a tennis racquet with authority and effectiveness will spice the start of the fourth season of World Championship Tennis competition on the NBC Television Network Sunday, Feb. 23, from La Costa, California.

Unlike the remaining 10 WCT tourneys to be telecast on NBC-TV in 1975, the La Costa event will devote half of its two-hour air time to the celebrity competition. And all of the personalities have the competitive spark on the tennis court to match their box office luster.

The celebrity line-up will include Clint Eastwood, Rod Steiger, David Hartman, George Peppard, Merv Griffin, Lloyd Bridges, Richard Crenna, Burt Bacharach, Robert Duval and Jim Nabors.

The celebrity competition will be an apertif to the professional play, which will constitute the second hour of the colorcast. The singles final will climax the play of a line-up of WCT stars including Rod Laver, Australia; Ismail El Shafei, Egypt; Roy Emerson, Australia; Brian Fairlie, New Zealand; Jeff Borowiak, United States; Alex Matreveli, U.S.S.R.; and Charlie Passarell, United States.

Don Meredith, heretofore a football commentator and an actor in dramatic roles on NBC-TV, will team with Bud Collins, the dean of American tennis broadcasters, in doing the commentary of selected WCT events this winter and spring.

Meredith, a former quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys, is a self-admitted "tennis buff from way back. I love the game and I think I play it pretty good."

Purses for the televised WCT events will be $60,000, with winners collecting $12,000.

Sammy Davis Fan Of Long-Run Show

There's a soap opera called "Love of Life" that's been around for 23 years now, and it's given its many viewers about 6,000 daily crises to suffer through.

One of the viewers who never misses an episode of the 'soaper,' seen each weekday on CBS-TV, is entertainer Sammy Davis, Jr. In fact, this versatile entertainer is so fond of "Love of Life" that he uses each day's plot line in the opening monologue of his night club act.

The general theme of the daytime serial centers around Vanessa and Bruce Sterling and a town called Rosehill. Portrayed by Audrey Peters and Ron Tomme, the Sterlings are in their middle years and are childless. Bruce publishes the local paper and Vanessa busies herself with her duties as a housewife and, when time permits, sells real estate.

The show's writers project ahead as much as two years with the overall plot, and they have a 13-week cycle that's broken down into weekly situations.

A particular crisis can be resolved in a time span of 2 weeks or painfully stretched to a year. The more complex the plot, the happier the viewers seem to be.

When "Love of Life" began its long tenure on TV, life was quite simple, and many situations which are common place today were a definite 'no! no!' back in the early '50s. Nowadays, lesbianism, abortion and adultery are dealt with in a forthright manner and considered 'relevant' to the lives of the viewers.

When asked about all the strife and despair of a soap opera, Ron Tomme comments, "There's nothing duller than two people happily married, sipping tea and kissing and hugging. You need dramatic tension on a 'soap'." Ron's been responsible for plenty of that in his years as Bruce Sterling. He and Van have been married and divorced and remarried on the show. And they are still of great interest to the "Love of Life" fans because through all the fights, tears and loving embraces, they are very sympathetic and human characters.

And warm and human they are ... as are the other members of the cast.

Ben Vereen In His TV Debut

Tony Award-Winner Ben Vereen will make his dramatic television debut in the title role of "Louis Armstrong; Chicago Style," an ABC Television Network "Movie of the Week," now in production.

Vereen, who won Broadway's Tony as Best Actor in a Musical in 1973 for his performance in "Pippin," also recently completed a major role with Red Buttons who also stars as Armstrong's one-time manager.

Color Spotlight

Every color we have ever loved has been with us since the world began. Yet as our response shifts from one to another we are periodically delighted by what we call "new" colors. Even these are not new in basic hue but rather, in shade, intensity, clarity. Each specific shade or tint is one of significance today. Some are recently established favorites and still riding high. Others are newcomers pointing toward the future. You will always find colors to go with what you already have.

The spotlight is on your floor covering. Beautiful wall to wall carpeting is available here for every room in your home. Every shade is represented. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

Walt Disney Movie Is Of Pioneering Family

ARRIVAL IN SEARCH OF A DREAM — The Tanner family, leaving the comforts of a settled big city back east, arrive in Wyoming to take possession of their new ranch, little realizing that they face the most difficult time of their lives when nature and man combine to test them almost beyond endurance in "The Wild Country," a major motion picture being televised for the first time beginning Sunday evening, February 23 and concluding Sunday evening, March 2 on "The Wonderful World of Disney," on Channel 6-7.

"Any good film, I think, makes a single, simple, clear-cut statement," says Robert Totten, the director of Walt Disney Productions frontier adventure drama, "The Wild Country." "And this picture states it in strong terms for America and the family."

The motion picture will be seen for the first time on television when it airs as a two-part showing Sunday evenings, Feb. 23 and March 2, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on "The Wonderful World of Disney," and seen on Channel 6-7.

"It states, 'Here it is folks, this is now it began. These are the kind of people who were your forefathers and this is something that you can cherish and be proud of. It shows you the strength of the human being and what he can really do when he has nothing to work with and doesn't know what to expect. Look what this raw American human being can do with something. He can actually carve a whole out of nothing. he can endure.' So, the strength of the American is the statement to be made," he emphasized.

"We aren't talking about Frenchmen, Englishmen, Orientals, Mexicans or Canadians in the picture. We are talking about Americans. We don't have a lot of clever dialogue written down for the actors to eloquently mouth.

"We just tried to photograph as real as possible a family's story of the late 1880's and in the very roughest country in which they had to exist, and it came off that way.

"With all the social, civil and political upheaval around us in our daily lives today, why not see something that is about the country and the way it began — on the family level. And I'll bet we'll come away from it and say, 'Doggone it, this American thing is all right, isn't it? Just right there we had an example of it.' So it's a reminder. It's a reminder as to what we are because of what we were," Totten summed up.

"The Wild Country" stars Steve Forrest, Vera Miles, Jack Elan and Ronny and Clint Howard.

Cher Hosting Varied Guests

Jerry Lewis, the popular singing group, The Osmond Brothers and Nancy Walker, who co-stars as Rhoda's mother Ida in "Rhoda," are Cher's guests on the second show of her new music-and-comedy series "Cher," Sunday, Feb. 23, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS and Ch. 3N-9-11.

Cher solos with "Got to Get You Into My Life" and "Ain't Nobody's Business If I Do," then sings "He Ain't Heavy, He's My Brother," while Lewis employs his pantomime talents as a hapless clown.

The Osmonds sing "I'm Still Gonna Need You," portray a leather-jacket-eted motorcycle gang as they sing "Law and Order," and then join Cher in a medley of Steve Wonder's hit songs.

In comedy sketches, Cher as "Mable the Fable Lady" lets us in on the 'truth' behind some favorite fairy tales, and visits Sleeping Beauty (Miss Walker), who has just awakened from a 500-year nap; and the ever-tasteful Laverne (Cher) is visited by her equally glamorous mother (Miss Walker).

The Osmond are led (and misled) by Lewis in an untraditional rendering of "Danny Boy," and Lewis plays a tough criminal who meets his match when he's interrogated by his mother.

'FAMILY PORTRAIT' — Members of a crack police unit skilled in the use of special weapons and tactics (S.W.A.T.) pose for a "family portrait," between assignments in "S.W.A.T." new ABC-TV action-adventure series that will premiere with the episode, "The Killing Ground," on Monday, February 24 (9-10 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

S.W.A.T. Makes Debut This Week

The hard-hitting action of S.W.A.T., the Special Weapons And Tactics law enforcement unit, comes to television! This exciting show premieres on ABC-TV Monday, Feb. 24, 9 to 10 p.m., and will be seen on Ch. 3-5-12.

Across America, new ways are being sought to combat an ever-increasing type of crime — dangerous life-or-death situations such as riots, kidnappings, hijackings, potential assassination attempts, and other actions that could lead to violence if not carefully controlled.

The formation of S.W.A.T. teams is one answer.

The series takes an in-depth look at the courageous exploits of one S.W.A.T. team. Each member of the unit has his own special responsibilities and weaponry, but all share four main objectives: contain the adversary by cutting off every escape outlet; determine the type of criminal or terrorist being dealt with; negotiate the release of any hostage and protect innocent bystanders; and, finally, attempt to capture the criminal.

Control of fire power is absolute, but if S.W.A.T. does decide to fire, it does so to save lives — those of innocent hostages or bystanders.

S.W.A.T. promises to be an action-filled series providing viewers with an inside look into one of the most sophisticated law enforcement units in existence.

Steve Forrest, star of S.W.A.T., has been a full-time actor ever since signing with MGM to co-star with Anne Baxter in "Bedeviled." He has also appeared in "The Bad and the Beautiful."

Goldie In Monday's TV Movie

Academy Award winner Goldie Hawn stars as a would-be actress, whose friendship with her next-door neighbor turns into romance which leads to increased self-awareness for both, in "Butterflies Are Free," a warm comedy to have its premiere television presentation on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Feb. 24, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7. Eileen Heckart and Edward Albert also star.

Hawn was named Best Supporting Actress of 1963 for her performance in "Cactus Flowers" and Heckart received the Best Supporting Actress Oscar in 1972 for her portrayal of the domineering mother in "Butterflies."

The 1972 Columbia release is based on the long-running Broadway play (1,128 performances) of the same name.

Well received by critics, the film was praised by the San Francisco Chronicle as: "... a funny, harsh, moving, smart, tender and memorable picture"; New York Daily News: "... irresistible charmer — an exceptional love story"; Saturday Review: "... a touching and valid experience"; Cue magazine: "... a gentle, genial and entertaining movie."

In the film, young aspiring actress Jill Tanner (Hawn) befriends her next-door neighbor, Don Baker (Albert), who is 20 years old and blind. Impressed by Don's lack of self-pity and sense of humor, Jill offers him moral support when he tells her that he has finally gotten away from his domineering mother and he now hopes to establish a songwriting career.

The rapport between the two is all but shattered when Mrs. Baker (Heckart), breaking a sworn vow not to interfere during Don's first month of independence, invades the apartment and insists that her son return home.

Happy Being An Actor

A wag once described the scene in Hollywood as a dog chasing its own tail. It seems that after a modicum of success, the actor wants to become a director, the director wants to be a producer and the producer wants to become an actor.

There is an exception to this round robin in actor Don Galloway, who can't understand why most actors see themselves as directors. Galloway stars with Barbara Anderson, Angel Tompkins and Walter Pidgeon in the ABC Television Network's "Tuesday Movie of the Week" presentation, "You Lie So Deep, My Love," Feb. 25, 8:30 to 10:00 p.m., on Ch. 3W-12.

"I suppose," says Don, "an actor believes that his training and experience make him sensitive to what a writer is trying to convey. An actor may be qualified to interpret the creative side of a production, but it's the technical elements that demonstrate to me that I would not be a good director. A director doesn't just see things like other people. He goes through life absorbing scenes as if he were a camera. He also must have extensive knowledge of lighting, makeup, wardrobe and props which he translates in his mind as to how they will look on film. He's got to possess a mind that keeps everything in perspective while jumping from the back of the script to the front, to the middle and to the back again. He then must bring together the thousands of feet of film in the editing room.

On top of that, a director must be a U.N. diplomat to keep everyone happy."

Don paused while producer-director David Lowell Rich set a scene and said: "Now there's a man who can do it all. He's got the kind of a mind that brings it all together. He's incredible."

"Hec Ramsey: Mystery of the Green Feather" Richard Boone and Rick Lenz. Hec Ramsey suspects that a medicine bag left at the scene of a family massacre was placed there to blame the Indians. Further investigation points to a plot to scare away settlers. (repeat, 2 hrs)

First TV Film For Festival

The Los Angeles International Film Exposition, FILMEX, has notified the ABC Television Network that the two-hour motion picture, "Love Among the Ruins," starring Katherine Hepburn and Laurence Olivier, will be the first film made for television to be included in the film festival.

"Love Among the Ruins marks the first joint appearance by Miss Hepburn and Olivier as well as the television directorial debut of George Cukor. ABC will telecast the film in early March.

PERSONAL TRIUMPH—Marc Singer stars as a blind student who scores a personal triumph when his efforts to enter medical school are successful and Kay Lenz portrays his wife, in "Journey From Darkness" on "NBC Premiere Movie" Tuesday, February 25 (8-10 p.m.) on Channel 7.

A Blind Student's Story A Struggle

In 1872, Robert H. Babcock, a blind student, was accepted by Chicago Medical College and eventually earned a medical degree.

A hundred years later, Temple University School of Medicine in Philadelphia received David Hartman's application, and decided to take a chance.

He was the first blind student since Babcock to be accepted by a United States medical school.

Hartman returned Temple's trust by finishing his first two years in the top quarter of his class. He is now in his third year.

David's incredible struggle to gain entrance into medical school (he was turned down by nine other leading medical schools) is dramatized in "Journey From Darkness," an "NBC World Premiere Movie" to be colorcast Tuesday, Feb. 25, 8 to 10 p.m., on Channel 7.

Hartman is portrayed by Marc Singer. Kay Lenz co-stars as the fellow student he falls in love with and later marries.

Singer spent a week with Hartman in December in Los Angeles, just before filming began.

"He was a tremendous help," says Singer. "He showed me how to use a cane, how to pour liquids into a glass and hold my finger at the top so I'd know when it was about to overflow... things like that."

As an actor the most difficult thing for Singer to do in the role was to be direct with another actor in a scene without succumbing to the natural tendency to look in his eyes.

"It was a great experience for me meeting David. What a remarkable human being!" says Singer. "During that week I studied him but I don't imitate him in the film. I just hope I have captured his great spirit."

Lives Changed By Guilt Of Disease

When venereal disease infects a young woman and an expectant mother and her husband, they are forced to change their attitudes about the 'shame' of the disease and the 'guilt' of those who carry it, in "Someone I Touched," an ABC Television Network "Wednesday Movie of the Week," airing Feb. 26, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Young and pretty Terry Warner is informed by Fred Brolin of the Health Department that she has venereal disease and that she must tell the names of those she's 'touched.' One is Sam Hyatt, happily married to Laura, who works for Paul Livermore, publisher of children's books. Sam and Laura are expecting their first child after years of waiting.

When Sam is informed he has venereal disease, he pleads with Laura's doctor not to tell his wife because of the baby and Laura's own mental health. The doctor insists otherwise and Sam tells Laura, who is emotionally drained by the news.

Sam has moved out of the house and the shattered futures of Sam, Laura and Terry are suddenly and dramatically changed when Berlin makes a surprise call on Laura.

"Someone I Touched" stars Cloris Leachman, James Olson, Kenneth Mars and Glynnis O'Connor.

Scene Had Full Share Of Impact And Slaps

JAMES OLSON and Cloris Leachman are a married couple overjoyed by her pregnancy until they discover that he has probably infected her with a deadly venereal disease in "Someone I Touched", a frank modern drama on ABC-TV's "Wednesday Movie of the Week", February 26 (8:30-10 p.m.) on channels 3W-5-12.

The movie set is in silence. Standing in the living room are a woman and a teenage girl. The girl admits to the woman that she has contracted venereal disease. The woman reacts and slaps the girl. It sounds like a pistol shot. More slaps follow. The director yells, "Cut!"

The woman is crying and so is the girl. They are portraying mother and daughter. Significantly, they are mother and daughter in real life — Lenka Peterson and Glynnis O'Connor, respectively. They have just completed a physically and emotionally demanding scene for "Someone I touched," an ABC Television Network "Wednesday Movie of the Week," airing Feb. 26, 8:30 to 10:00 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

"What no one on the set knew was that my mother had never slapped me before," revealed Glynnis, who stars in the film with Cloris Leachman, James Olson and Kenneth Mars. "The scene was very hard for us. We stayed up most of the night discussing it and decided, in my mother's words, 'to go all out.'"

And "all out" they did go. The slaps hurt Glynnis, but she said nothing during the rehearsals and first three takes. It was a hard-hitting scene and the phrase is fitting for the film, too, which is a searching look at venereal disease and the shattering impact it has on several families. Neither Glynnis nor her mother had any compunction about taking her role in the story which delves into the taboos about VD.

"Like everyone else connected with the film," continued Glynnis, referring to director Lou Antonio, the stars, producer Wayne Weisbart and executive producer Dick Berg, "we felt it was a subject that should be brought before the public in story form, rather than documentary."

seconds in this country.

"In the scrip I've been acting rather strange and my mother thinks I'm pregnant," pointed out Glynnis. "She's ready to accept the fact that her daughter is having an illegitimate child. But when I tell her what the real problem is, revulsion, disgust and shame take over and wham, she belts me."

The scene is bound to have an impact on audiences. It did on the crew. And especially on Glynnis. After the third take, director Lou Antonio knew he had the scene down perfectly — a fact he realized when Glynnis, through her real tears, merely said to her mother: "Mom, it really did hurt me that time."

Special Filmed At Abbey

Diana Rigg stars as a sophisticated London widow who renounces a successful business career to become a cloistered Benedictine nun in the dramatic special "In This House of Brede," to be presented on the CBS

Television Network Thursday, Feb. 27, 9:00 to 11:00 p.m., on Ch. 3N-9-11. The special, which is James Costigan's version of Rumer Godden's best-selling novel of the same title, also includes Judi Bowker and Pamela Brown in the cast. The special was filmed on location in England at St. Mary's Abbey in the Mill Hill area of London's outskirts and at Drishane Convent outside the small village of Millstreet in County Cork, Ireland, both locales suited to the original story in setting and architecture. Additional scenes were shot against the authentic background of present-day London.

"In This House of Brede" concerns the struggle of Philippa Talbot (Miss Rigg) to put aside a self she has come to dislike—even though she must alleviate the tormenting memory of a past tragedy that retains its haunting grip on her even after she becomes a nun.

Nine years of Philippa's life are covered; the time during which she joins the Benedictine nuns as a novitiate and stays to become the foundress of a new abbey. Viewers seeing Diana Rigg in this role may have some difficulty believing that she is the karate-chopping Emma Peel of "The Avengers," or the glamorous Mrs. James Bond of "On Her Majesty's Secret Service." Just before she donned her habit for "In This House of Brede," she played Eliza Doolittle in "Pygmalion" on the London stage, and will soon be seen on Broadway in "The Misanthrope."

RECEIVES BLESSING — Diana Rigg, as a Successful London Businesswoman who becomes a cloistered Benedictine nun, receives the blessing of the Archbishop (Brian Hawkesley), in a scene from "In This House of Brede," dramatic special to be presented on "GE Theatre" Thursday, February 27 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Humor Viewed As A Weapon

Another Swiss Family Robinson

"Humor will always be the major weapon against bigotry, hatred, smallness and other such evils," says Jackie Gleason, who will be honored as roasteer on NBC Television Network's "Dean Martin Celebrity Roast" special Thursday, Feb. 27, 10 to 11:00 p.m., on Ch. 6-7.

"Ever since I was a kid in Brooklyn," Gleason said recently during a break in taping of the Martin special at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, "I observed human nature. Let's say I was overly curious. I was always interested in people. I once studied theology and the saints and the miracles and began wondering about the how and why of mortals."

It's to this curiosity, this systematic study of human nature that Gleason attributes whatever success he has had as an entertainer, particularly the part of him dedicated to making people laugh.

GUEST ROLES

Jack Kruschen and Louise Sorel have been signed by producer Don Brinkley for guest-starring roles in the "Aftershock" segment of "Medical Center" starring Chad Everett and James Daly.

Filming has been completed on Irwin Allen's production of "Swiss Family Robinson," a special world premiere movie presentation for the ABC Television Network.

The film depicts the further adventures of the Robinson family, chronicled in the classic story known to millions of readers.

Heading the cast as the father is Martin Milnew, with Pat Delaney appearing as the mother.

ultimately merge into a polished script. A former newspaperman, CBS News Correspondent, television dramatist, feature-film writer and author, Eismann also teaches undergraduate and graduate-level American history at New York's New School for Social Research.

American history is one of Eismann's lifelong passions. So is drama — which accounts for his dictum that each "Minute" be constructed as "a three-act dramatic play, a show, in 47 seconds of copy."

"The 'Minute' is as valid as a 90-minute drama if the elements are the same," says Eismann. "The premise has to be valid, the information has to be engaging, and the story must have a beginning, middle and end."

Each 'Minute' A Real Show

"I treat every 'Minute' as a show. It's not a sport, it's not a 'Minute,' but a show."

Speaking is Bernard Eismann, story editor of a series unique in the annals of television. It's the "Bicentennial Minutes" series, which since July 4, 1974, is presenting — each evening on the CBS Television Network — one-minute insights into the events, both major and minor, that culminated in the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The "Minutes" are to be broadcast on the Network until our nation's bicentennial, July 4, 1976.

The 42-year-old Eismann is eminently qualified for a job requiring the talent to marshal the many elements which

'Golden Needles' Suspense

Joe Don Baker and Elizabeth Ashley star in the suspense tale of a priceless ancient Chinese statue, pursued halfway across the globe from Hong Kong to California, that promises the owner health and incredible vigor — but can also deliver painful death — in "Golden Needles," to be seen for the first time on television on "The CBS Friday Night Movies" Friday, Feb. 28, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Also appearing in the film are Ann Southern and Burgess Meredith.

The pursued statue holds the secret locations of seven acupuncture points that stimulate a man to be irresistible — but the misplacement of a sole needle can result in an agonizing death. Despite that risk, Felicity, an American girl, wants Don, another American and a soldier-of-fortune, to help her smuggle the statue out of Hong Kong and in the U.S. for a multi-millionaire.

The 1974 American International release was produced by Fred Weintraub and Paul Heller, directed by Robert Clouse, and written by S. Lee Pogostin and Sylvia Schneble.

Saga Of Welk's Diamond

"Everyone should wear a diamond ring! It means you're a success!"

Young Lawrence Welk took the advice of George T. Kelley, his first close friend in show business and his mentor, and saved enough money to duplicate his sparkling ring.

But now, it was gone! He's lost it in a Wisconsin pond after a hot day of driving from one engagement to another with his small band of five men. It had been hot and humid, and the pond looked inviting. They parked, and in a trice, all of them were cavorting wildly in the cool water.

Thirty minutes later, driving on to their hotel booking, Welk noticed his ring was missing! He must have lost it in the water! He helped his anguish and back they went! A painstaking search by all of them, swimming carefully so as not to muddy the clear water, was to no avail, and, broken hearted, Welk clambored back into the car and drove on.

The next morning, ready to drive on to their next booking town, he insisted they go back for one more look, a hopeless effort, he knew!

Leaning over the banks, one of the boys spotted a shining object. He reached down, and withdrew his arm, a huge smile on his face! The ring indeed had slipped off Welk's finger as he dove, and was speared by a small tree branch a foot below the surface!

Since that day, the ring has always been with him, unless it was in pawn to tide him over on a poor month I which was often in those salad days! You'll recognize it when you see it—it's on the ring finger of his left hand!

HOSTS 'GO' — Wolfman Jack will be host and narrator for the "GO" show to be colorcast on NBC-TV Saturday, March 1 (12:30-1 p.m.). He will explain to young viewers how cartoon programs are made, using NBC-TV's "The Pink Panther Show" as the example.

Acclaimed Czech Film On Saturday

"Three Nuts for Cinderella," a much-acclaimed film from Czechoslovakia, will be broadcast on "The CBS Children's Film Festival" Saturday, March 1, in color on the CBS Television Network.

The film — an updated version of the classic fairy tale — shows Cinderella as an independent and energetic young girl who had a happy childhood until the death of her father, when her stepmother is preparing her estate for a visit from the royal family. Cinderella (Libuse Safrankova) is kept out of sight doing chores, but she and the Prince (Pavel Travnicek) meet accidentally in the woods. A sympathetic servant, feeling sorry for Cinderella because she cannot go to the royal ball, brings her three hazelnuts with magical propensities, the last of which produces a beautiful wedding dress that Cinderella wears when the Prince comes for her.

Filmed Entirely In N.Y. City

"Strike Force," starring Tony Award winner Cliff Gorman in a 90-minute NBC Television Network development project, is to be filmed entirely in New York City.

The action-packed drama will depict the work of the strike force unit — an elite law enforcement task force comprised of Federal, state and New York City police agents — set up to investigate intricate activities of organized crime. It is a pilot for a prospective series for the 1975-76 season.

Gorman starred in the title role in the Broadway hit, "Lenny," based on the life of the late controversial comedian Lenny Bruce, for which he won a Tony Award and the Fiorello LaGuardia Award. He also had a leading role in "Boys in the Band," both on Broadway and in the film version, and starred in the recent motion picture, "Cops and Robbers."

DISTRIBUTED

"Let's Call It Quits," a half hour TV comedy treatment on the dangers of smoking starring Tom Bosley and Marion Ross of ABC-TV's "Happy Days," is now being distributed nationally by the American Cancer Society.

Wolfman Explains Cartooning Work

Wolfman Jack, well-known radio and TV personality, is host of NBC Television Network's "GO" as the PCP cameras show how a cartoon program is made Saturday, March 1, from 12:30 to 1 p.m.

Visiting the animation studios where NBC-TV's "The Pink Panther" is made, the "GO" show moves with the Panther's creator, Friz Freleng, from the original sketches to the final cartoon program.

The cartoon, which won an Academy Award in the category of the Best Animated Short Subject of 1964, illustrates the Panther's ability to get himself in and out of some hair-raising situations. 'Involved' also are those two loveable characters, the Ant and the Aardvark.

The producers of "The Pink Panther Show," Freleng and David DePatie, originally created the character to illustrate the titles for the motion picture of the same name.

Henry Mancini, another Oscar winner, created the theme music for the NBC-TV series.

Stages shown and explained by Wolfman Jack include the storyboard, the layout, inking and painting, backgrounds, photography, music and sound effects, editing and the final product.

Plan Nightly 'News Update'

"NBC News Update," one minute of prime-time news, will be presented seven nights a week at approximately 9 p.m. on the NBC Television Network beginning this summer, Herbert S. Schlosser, President of NBC, recently announced.

Pro Golf Once A Singer's Ambition

Glen Campbell might have been playing in his own tournament for real instead of just hosting the upcoming Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open and playing in the Pro-Am competition of the event. At one time, Glen thought seriously of becoming a pro golfer.

The talented musical entertainer revealed what might have been while working on plans for the event. The golf tournament runs February 19-23 at Riviera Country Club in Pacific Palisades and airs on ABC-TV (5:15-7 PM) Sunday, February 23, with Frank Gifford, Chris Schrenkel, Bill Flemming, Dave Marr and Bob Rosburg doing the commentary. This is the 49th renewal of the Los Angeles Open tourney ($150,000 in prize money) and Campbell's fifth year as host.

"I began playing golf in 1960 when I moved to California," Glen stated. "I wanted something to do during the day while I was singing at night. I got my handicap down to two and was encouraged to turn pro. In the end, I realized it would have to be one career or the other, and I didn't want to give up singing."

Glen, now with a nine handicap, is one of the top five celebrities playing the game, and he was the only personality to make the cut and play in the final round of the recent Bing Crosby, Pro-AM.

At 16, Glen Campbell wanted to be a pro bowler. While working at night, he played in a scratch league during the day and carries a 205 average for two years.

"I'm a better bowler than a golfer, really, and I still roll a few lines once in a while. Tennis, golf or bowling—you're on your own. It's not a popularity contest. You rely strictly on your talent."

Movie Based On 'Sounder'

Filming has begun in Baton-Rouge, La., for a two-hour ABC-TV movie based on the characters introduced in "Sounder," the highly acclaimed motion picture which earned three major Academy Award nominations.

Jerry Is New Analyst

Jerry West, one of the most prolific scorers in pro basketball history and one of the finest all-around players in the annals of the game, has joined the staff of CBS Television Sports as an expert analyst on NBA basketball broadcasts.

In making the announcement, Robert Wussler, Vice President of CBS Sports, noted that the former Los Angeles Laker star's primary role in the immediate future will be to serve as analyst on coverage of NBA regionalized games on the Network. West will work with play-by-play announcer Don Criqui on the regional NBA games.

Under the regionalized format, on certain dates more than one game will be broadcast, with different sections of the country viewing the game of greatest competitive interest in their areas. Brent Musburger and NBA analyst Oscar Robertson will continue to broadcast the weekly "NBA on CBS" game, with Criqui and West covering regionalized games on selected dates, and national game broadcasts on playoff weekends when CBS Sports covers two or more games in as many days.

Live coverage of the NBA games will continue to be augmented by pre-game, half-time and post-game analyses from CBS Sports Control in New York, featuring basketball editor Sonny Hill.

The 36-year-old West spent 14 years in the NBA, during which time he became one of the league's most legendary performers. He is professional basketball's third leading all-time scorer, having scored 25,192 points in a career which saw him make 12 appearances as an NBA All-Star team member.

Ali Will Be Commentator

Muhammad Ali, the world heavyweight champion, will be the expert commentator when "CBS Sports Spectacular" presents the international boxing competition between the United States and Hungary Sunday, Feb. 23, on the CBS Television Network.

The boxing championships will feature Gyorgy Gedo of Hungary meeting Claudell Atkins of St. Louis, Mo., in the light-flyweight division; Hungarian Tibor Badari and Howard Davis Jr. of Glen Cove, N. Y., squaring off in featherweight competition; lightweights Janos Kovacs, Hungary, and Aaron Pryor, Cincinnati, Ohio; and Laszlo Juhasz, Hungary, and Dean Kromarek, Great Falls, Mont., in light-welterweight action.

O.J. IN NEW ROLE—Buffalo Bill's star running back O. J. Simpson will be shucking his helmet and pads for tennis whites and a track suit Sunday (Feb. 23) from 2-4 p.m. when he joins a field of the world's greatest professional athletes in search of big prize money and the 1975 championship in ABC Sports "The Superstars" series.

"Walking Tall," the 'sleeper' film about the crime-busting crusade of Southern sheriff Buford Pusser, which earned a theatrical gross of more than $50 million and became one of the top 15 movies of all times, comes to television as the ABC Television Network's "The ABC Saturday Night Movie," March 1, 9:00 to 11:15 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Joe Don Baker stars as the now-deceased lawman, whose refusal to surrender to the system first brought him to national attention in 1969, when a television news report recounted the true story of his fight against corruption, a fight that led him to an ambush in which his face was almost destroyed and his wife murdered.

Elizabeth Hartman is also starred, as pusser's wife, and Rosemary Murphy is starred as Callie Hacker, a vicious woman operating a crooked gambling den. Washington Post critic Gary Arnold said, "You'll never forget it ... a powerhouse ... emotionally charged from beginning to end," and Newsweek called the movie "a fast-paced slick piece of action entertainment."

The story follows Pusser from the day he returns to his Tennessee home after a tour as a wrestler. When he spots a crooked dice thrower at a syndicate-owned gambling joint he breaks up the place and winds up broken himself — left to die in a ravine.

After 200 stitches piece him back together, Pusser wrecks the gambling operation, wins a jury trial when he is charged with assault, and starts a successful campaign for sheriff.

After his election, his incorruptible policies as law enforcer lead to a confrontation his principles would not allow him to dodge.

Mort Briskin wrote and produced "Walking Tall." Phil Karlson directed the film, which was distributed by Cinerama Releasing.

(This film deals with mature subject matter. Although this film has been edited for television, parental judgment and discretion are advised.)

Lucille Ball Is A Believer In Hard Work

Lucille Ball takes issue with the oft-quoted comment that theatrical beginners "don't have any place to be bad anymore." "I don't buy that," said the outspoken Miss Ball during rehearsals for her second special of the season, "A Lucille Ball Special Starring Lucille Ball and Dean Martin," which will be presented Saturday, March 1, from 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV and Ch. 9-11.

She was discussing today's challenges to young talent — a group which includes both her children, Lucie and Desi Arnaz Jr. "It's simply not true that there are no tryout spots," she said. "There are a great many places to exercise one's talent. Theater groups have popped up all over the country — there are supper clubs and tent shows and workshops everywhere. Even radio drama is staging a comeback.

Elizabeth Hartman and Joe Don Baker live constantly in the shadow of sudden death when they star in the true story of Sheriff Buford Pusser, "Walking Tall," a television premiere on ABC-TV's "ABC Saturday Night Movie" Saturday, March 1 (9-11) PM on Channel 3W-5-12.

Pike's Peeks

By CHARLIE PIKE
 PFA Staff Writer
 Los Angeles, California

Valerie Harper, through her attorney in Beverly Hills, has notified at least six 'fan' magazine publishers that she will sue if they don't stop printing untruthful stories about her. The magazines have all agreed to cooperate, though they insist it'd be easier if she'd agree to interviews.

Cher Bono meanwhile, personally telephoned some of the same magazines to ask them to take it easy on her in the upcoming months, or until she at least resolves her legal differences with estranged husband Sonny Bono. Sonny recently filed a $24 million suit against Cher, claiming she conspired with her steady boy friend, David Geffen, to defraud Sonny of monies he says he's entitled to.

Rock Hudson says five years is enough and has notified NBC that he will not return next season for "McMillan and Wife."

David Groh, "Rhoda's" TV husband, undergoes extensive oral surgery at season's end, for the extraction of a wisdom tooth that threatens to decay other adjoining teeth.

Mac Davis was deeply hurt by a recent comment of a reviewer who said Mac's habit of writing songs about his wife, Sarah, "is probably the most unkind thing we've ever heard him say about her." T'was a bit below the belt, Mr. Amory.

Tony Orlando meanwhile, took advantage of a two-week hiatus from his CBS variety show and with his wife Elaine took off for Hawaii.

There's feverish negotiations going on in the islands, trying to find "Hawaii Five-O" a studio to work in for the upcoming season. The lease with the studio of last year expired, and neighbors have pressured it's owner not to renew the contract, saying the show causes too much noise and traffic.

Movie Based On True Case

Efrem Zimbalist Jr. stars as a detective in the true story of a Los Angeles homicide case in "Who is the Black Dahlia?", a made-for-television drama to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" March 1, 9-11 p.m., on Ch. 6-7.

Zimbalist portrays Sgt. Harry Hansen, a Los Angeles detective assigned to unravel the mystery of who killed 22-year-old Elizabeth Short, whose body was found in a vacant lot in 1947.

A Tribute To Fred Astaire

Sammy Davis Jr. will pay special tribute to Fred Astaire on the 47th annual awards presentation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in April.

Davis, one of the show's emcees, will be featured in a production number titled "Salute to Fred Astaire."

FOR ANN-MARGRET

How often do you visit your home in Sweden?—N. S., Long Branch, N.J.

● I was very young when I came here, so I don't remember much about Sweden. But the first time I visited Valsjobyn (my home) was in December, 1963. The entire population of about 200—wrapped in thick blankets, and on horseback and in sleighs—met me. My childhood friends spoke as though I'd never been away. In 1962, the town's first movie theater had opened and "Pocketful of Miracles," in which I made my debut, played there. I had been billed as the star, even though my role was so small you'd miss me if you blinked. Oh, yes, and everyone was fascinated by my mink coat. No one else in town had one.

FOR THE MOST REVEREND FULTON J. SHEEN

If life is ever discovered on other planets, how would theology reconcile it to the Bible?—Stanley J. Tkacz, Manchester, N.H.

● In my opinion theology has no problem now—or later. The Bible is primarily a religious book, not a scientific one. It does not mention other planets, hence it says nothing about intelligent beings on them. Therefore, it does not deny the possibility of such inhabited planets.

FOR RODNEY DANGERFIELD

How did your gimmick, "I don't get no respect," originate?—R. B., Troy, N.Y.

● Very early in life I found out that no matter how rich or important, young or old, shrewd or slow you are, respect is something that is hard to find and hard to keep. We all like it, but don't always get it. That's why most people identify with my catchphrase.

FOR MRS. HENRY AARON

Was there a great deal of pressure on you when your husband was going after Babe Ruth's record last spring?—H. M. Mason, Jr., San Antonio, Texas

● I wasn't aware of how bad the pressure was until it was over. Suddenly I realized how uptight we both had been. The whole thing was a strange mixture of pain and pleasure, but Henry carried it so well I didn't realize how much it had affected him until later.

FOR RAQUEL WELCH

Are you for or against Women's Lib?—J. C., Lynchburg, Va.

● For it, as long as women don't lose their femininity or become hostile toward men. I'm against discrimination to women, but I don't believe they can do everything a man can. But I do get annoyed when women are put down because they're attractive. I happen to have a good business head and resent it when I'm not taken seriously. Some businesswomen try to disguise their charms, which I find alarming. Having sex appeal doesn't make us dumbbells.

FOR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN, "Dear Abby"

How did your column get started?—S. Wise, Portland, Ore.

● I read that type of column before I wrote it. After a while, I knew I could do a better job than the person who was writing it for our local paper. I had the gall to phone the editor and say he needed me more than I needed him. Instead of hanging up, he interviewed me—and I got the job.

FOR ROBERT BLAKE, star of "Baretta"

On more than one occasion you have said that you would never do a television series. What changed your mind?—Donald Brown, Sacramento, Calif.

● If you play Monopoly you'll understand when I say that they changed my mind when they offered me "Park Place" and "Boardwalk."

FOR MICHAEL DOUGLAS, star of "The Streets of San Francisco"

Are there any drawbacks to being the son of Kirk Douglas?—P. C., Casper, Wyo.

● Yes—when I'm prejudged. Before people meet me, they know everything about me. There's no aura of mystery, and I've never had the delicious experience of being asked, "What do you do?" My life is an open book. And I've never known what it's like to indulge in small talk—no one has ever said, "What does your father do?"

FOR MUHAMMAD ALI

One of your weapons seems to be the ability to get your opponents riled up and mentally off balance. Do you ever get angry in the ring?—Richard Raymond, Utica, N.Y.

● No. In fact, I have to keep from laughing when I hear some cat in a $250 seat say that he is there to see me get a lesson for being such a big mouth. If I didn't play the part of the big mouth, that seat wouldn't be worth $250 to him. And I wouldn't have such a big purse!

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is it true there's a major movie producer who's only 19? If so, how'd he get started? I'd like to do the same.—S. P., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● Yes, there is. But the young man had certain advantages that you probably don't. He's Edgar Bronfman, Jr., the 19-year-old son of the president of Joseph E. Seagram & Sons Inc., a fellow who also happens to own almost a million shares of MGM stock, was the board chairman of MGM and headed Sagittarius Productions. Young Bronfman never went to college. He was always a moviegoer, and his dad encouraged him. At 18, he co-produced "Blockhouse" with Peter Sellers and Charles Aznavour; and his third movie venture will be "Harlequin," Morris West's new best seller. Bronfman does have talent: He wrote the lyrics for "Sunshine" for Diana Trask and "I Need You" for Peggy Lee.

By the Authors of "The Guinness Book":

The World's Records We Recall Most Vividly

By Norris and Ross McWhirter

We stood, not long ago, at the top of the tallest building in the world—the Sears Tower in Chicago—pointing out the panorama of four separate states to our companion, the tallest living man in the world. Don Koehler, who measures eight feet, two inches, did not seem to be enjoying the view. "I don't have much of a head for heights," he explained.

For us, it was a unique opportunity to combine two superlatives, man and building. Ever since we were schoolboys, flipping through the newspapers, books and magazines with which our editor-father cluttered our London house, we have been intrigued with the idea of the tallest, the fastest, the strongest, the greatest.

What began as a hobby eventually became "The Guinness Book of World Records" and may, in a year or two, turn into a world record itself. A great many people seem to share our hobby, and we expect that our collection of facts and figures on human and inhuman endeavors, natural and unnatural achievements, may soon break the record for sales of a copyright book. We are now second only to Dr. Spock. (The Bible, that all-time best seller, is not a copyright book and thus doesn't count in this particular record.)

We have traveled to 63 countries, measuring the objects and meeting the people who hold the world's records. We find the phenomena constantly changing. The tallest tree (the Howard Libbey tree in Humboldt County, Calif.) may grow another foot or the fastest jet plane (currently the Russian MIG-25) may add another mile-per-hour. Records are made to be broken, and so our book is made to be rewritten each year.

We find the people endlessly fascinating. Whether it's the 12-year-old boy who can rattle off pi, the mathematical formula, to an incredible 1,200 places, or the grown-up parachutist who dares to free-fall for 16 miles, record holders have a common streak of stubbornness. To do anything faster, longer or better than anyone else in the world takes a singleness of purpose, an intense dedication to one's own thing, and a firm resistance to the boredom of doing that thing over and over. The championship swimmer, for instance, is seen in his minutes of glory, but there are no cheering crowds during the 28 or more hours a week that he must practice in the pool.

"The world's most divorced woman... can't remember all the names of all her husbands, but she does recall that five of them busted her nose."

"Ever since we were schoolboys," say the McWhirters, "we have been intrigued with the idea of the tallest, the fastest, the strongest, the greatest."

We are ourselves a small footnote in sports—as the only twins ever to win a national track title in Great Britain. It came during a relay race and is too modest and minor a record to go into our book. Here, though, are some of our favorite people, places and things.

Male vs. Female: Some male chauvinists were crushed when Billie Jean King beat Bobby Riggs. They might take comfort in what happened when two active champions—rather than a woman in her prime and a man past his—met on a tennis court. In the 1920's, Bill Tilden, still considered by some experts to be the greatest tennis player of all time, played against Suzanne Lenglen, "The Great Suzanne," as the six-time Wimbledon winner was called. With no ballyhoo, and before a small audience, Bill took every game. First, though, he toyed with Suzanne, allowing her to get to 40-love in each game before smashing back to win.

Females may have the advantage over males in other sports. Perhaps because of their natural insulation, women hold many of the records for swimming across the hazardous English Channel. Then, too, a petite, glowing woman, Mrs. Beryl Burton, has proved that, for certain distances, she can cycle faster than any man in Britain.

The Worst Is the Best: Often, the most interesting records are set by people who are bad, rather than good, at what they do. In championship golf, the record number of strokes for one hole was set by a woman golfer during the Shawnee Invitational for Ladies in 1912. This good woman teed off, then got into difficulties when she hit the ball into a river. In those days, the golf ball floated, so she put out in a boat, with her husband rowing. She stood in the stern, whacking away at the ball while her husband dutifully counted the strokes. Finally, she beached the ball, only to run into further trouble in a woods. Eventually she got back onto the green and sank the ball on the 166th stroke. This happened 62 years ago but, interestingly, we had a letter only recently from an eyewitness.

In Deep Danger: The most perilous trip we ever made to check on a world record was to descend more than two miles into the world's deepest mine, a gold mine in Transvaal, South Africa. As we put on coveralls and safety helmets in the dressing room, we noticed a certificate announcing that the mine had had a fatality-free year. The date was disconcerting: a distant 1954. We couldn't help thinking how long ago that was as we began our descent in a steel elevator cage. We plummeted so long and so far that, when we finally bumped to a stop, we were certain we'd reached bottom. But, no, there was more. The next stage of the descent was made hunched in a small tramway, going down, down, down, along a steep incline on what seemed the world's longest roller-coaster ride—only made in total darkness. The temperature gets hotter and hotter—at bottom, it's 126° F.—and along the way there's always the chance of man-killing rock bursts. We had three of those in the first 30 minutes, narrowly missing us each time. Men take that descent every day, all in the name of digging up gold, which is then buried again, in somewhat neater form, in bank vaults.

Wild Blue Yonder: Orville Wright made history at Kitty Hawk as the first man in powered flight. But he was not, despite what most people think, the first man to fly. That man is less well-known and his story takes place in Yorkshire, England, where an eccentric old baronet, Sir George Cayley, spent his time inventing all manner of contraptions, including man-carrying gliders. In the summer of 1853, Sir George ordered his coachman into one of those gliders, which then took off across a valley for a flight of more than a quarter of a mile. The coachman flew into history anonymously until we searched out his name, John Appleby, in census records that had been sealed for 100 years. Like any good servant of his day, Appleby did as he was told, but he doesn't seem to have enjoyed the flight. Shortly after it, he gave his notice.

Love and Marriage: Records on romance often have amusing postscripts. Take the most-married man in the monogamous world, Glynn de Moss Wolfe an American who's answered "I do" 19 times. Now in his sixties, he says, "I don't need television. I come home in the evening, sit down, slip off my shoes, close my eyes and reminisce." The world's most divorced woman, Beverly Nina Avery of Los Angeles, looks at her 16 "I don'ts" from a different perspective. She can't remember all the names of all her husbands, but she does recall that five of them busted her nose. Why? "I guess because I'm so provocative."

Waiting for Baby: One of the questions we're most often asked is: What's the longest gestation period in the animal kingdom? Most people think it's the elephant. But they'd be wrong. It's recently been discovered that, in high altitudes, the black Alpine salamander carries its young for a period of three years and two months. The salamander has been doing this for centuries, of course, but the knowledge is so new the record is appearing for the first time in this year's edition.

Weight Watching: Some records that seem to be easy turn out to be the most difficult to prove. Our book lists Flora Mae Jackson of Mississippi, who weighed 840 pounds, as the world's heaviest woman. We now have a report, though, about Ida Maitland of the same state, who may have tipped the scales at 911 pounds.

What kind of proof do we look for on a record like that? We'd most prefer a medical record. Second choice would be newspaper reports or a reliable relative. The evidence we're least likely to believe would come from a circus or carnival, since those people have a vested interest in exaggeration. Did you know that circus giants and midgets usually have a clause in their contract forbidding them to be measured?

New American Record: The highest sea cliffs now recorded are in Greenland and Canada, but we're on the track of some that may be a new record. According to preliminary maps and photographs, there are sea cliffs on one of the Hawaiian Islands that may measure more than 3,500 sheer feet into the sea. That's the equivalent of three World Trade Centers stacked one atop the other. A waterfall plummets from these cliffs, too, and may prove to be the highest in the world. Only an expedition can make this record as absolute as we like them to be. Still, it would be extraordinary if the world's highest sea cliffs and the world's highest waterfall turned out to be on United States territory and, in this year of 1975, hadn't yet been pinpointed!

Onward and Upward: Discoveries are being made constantly. For example, we cite a village "To do anything faster, longer or better than anyone else in the world takes a singleness of purpose, an intense dedication to one's own thing, and a firm resistance to the boredom of doing that thing over and over."

in the Andes as the highest point in the world where man lives. The altitude is so rare that, for some not-yet-understood medical reason, the villagers can produce only daughters, unless they move down from the mountain temporarily to have their children. Now, though, NASA satellites have photographed what looks like an even higher village in Tibet.

Is man climbing ever upward? From the letters we get from many readers, one of the fascinations with records seems to be in learning what the boundaries of life are, what the limits are on how fast, how far, how high man can go. Yet man keeps breaking his own records—in everything from racing to tap dancing to welfare cheating—and it may be that the glory of the human race is that we keep reaching beyond the limits.

Rediscovering natural food fiber, America's forgotten nutritional element.

Recent observations suggest food fiber may be more important than previously thought.

NEW STUDIES ON FOOD FIBER.

There has been a great deal of interest recently on the subject of dietary fiber. Articles and columns in major newspapers and national magazines have reported new scientific observations on food fiber and its possible effect on health.

Basically, they're saying what we've been saying for years: natural food fiber is important to help your digestive system regulate itself. But in addition, they suggest that fiber may play an even greater role in our diet than previously believed.

CHANGES IN DIETARY HABITS.

These observations suggest that, with the change in eating habits in recent years, many Americans may not be getting the food fiber they need. This, in spite of the fact that one of the best sources of food fiber is also the most common.

TWO BREAKFAST SUGGESTIONS.

Which brings us to Kellogg's All-Bran and Kellogg's Bran Buds. Not only are both these cereals rich in natural food fiber, they're also an important source of vitamins and iron. Crisp and crunchy even in milk, they offer two delicious ways to get the food fiber you need in your diet.

FOOD FIBER AND HEALTH.

If you're concerned about fiber and its relation to health, think about including Kellogg's.

ALL-BRAN®/BRAN BUDS®
THE NUMBER ONE NATURAL FOOD FIBER CEREALS.

SOURCE OF FIBER: THE WHEAT BRAN.

these two bran cereals as part of your diet. Kellogg's All-Bran, in shredded form, and Kellogg's Bran Buds, in bud form, with a slightly different taste. Two excellent sources of natural food fiber.

for newspapers consumes the equivalent of well over 100 million such trees every year.

This sounds shocking. Where are so many trees to come from? But there is a significant fact that makes all the difference. For every tree that is cut down, a new one is planted in its place. The truth is, America now grows about eight percent more wood each year than it harvests. Roughly the same figure applies to Canada.

Paper companies are highly sensitive to public worries about the environment and have been eager to let reporters see with their own eyes what goes on in a managed forest tract. Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd., a big Canadian company, recently established an Environmental Affairs Group whose main job is to see that none of the company's far-flung divisions violates sound ecological principles.

They say that all the current talk about "desecration" of our forests and the futuristic visions of a land "laid bare" are probably exaggerated. As a matter of fact, Crown Zellerbach Corp. estimates that, despite the enormous growth of our population and the sprawling of farms, suburbs and industry since the nation was founded, there is still about three-quarters as much forest land here now as there was when Columbus landed. What's more, because a lot of marginal farmland and semi-desert has been reclaimed and planted with trees, there is actually more forest now than there was in 1900. There are some 759 million acres of forest in the country today—slightly over 30 percent of the nation's total land and water area of 2.3 billion acres.

The idea that a forest tract can be made to renew itself eternally may be only an example of good business. "In the first place," says a spokesman of NIC, "it would be the height of lunacy for a paper company to invest $100 million in a mill, then mow down all the surrounding forest. You can't move a paper mill from one place to another. The only approach that makes economic sense is to manage the forest around the mill so that it is continually self-renewing."

There are two basic ways of doing this. Forestry specialists call the two approaches "even-aged" and "uneven-aged" management.

Even-aged management means, in effect, dividing a forest into separate tracts and clear-cutting each tract when the trees on it mature. Imagine a forest divided into 64 square tracts like a checkerboard, and imagine — for simplicity — that you are dealing with a type of tree that matures in 64 years. In Year 1 you cut down all the trees on Tract 1, and you reseed that tract with new trees. In Year 2 you do the same on Tract 2, and so on until Year 64, when you clear-cut the last tract. The following year you go back to Tract 1, whose trees are now 64 years old, and you start the same process all over again.

Uneven-aged management means selectively thinning an entire forest area year after year. There are some kinds of trees that, when young, flourish best if there are bigger trees around to give them partial shade. Uneven-aged management is designed for them. Each year, foresters take down the biggest trees in an area and plant seedlings in the shade of other mature trees that remain uncut. The result is a self-renewing forest whose trees are of different ages.

Forestry research over the years has constantly improved the health of trees, their growth rate, their resistance to diseases and insects. Weyerhaeuser, Georgia Kraft and other big paper companies have begun using a new process, in which an entire tree—leaves and all—is processed into paper, rather than just the main trunk. Improvements now being developed, says Crown Zellerbach's president C. R. Dahl, "will enable us to double and even triple the volume of wood fiber per acre."

A college President and want to tell you about a new plan and start college a

“About eighteen months ago, the Army began to develop a bold, new concept in cooperative education. Project Ahead.

“The program began at one university in the Midwest. Interest was so great the Army decided to expand it across the country. Today, the program involves over “Secondly, the Army provides financial aid. College courses are available to you while you’re in the Army. And the Army will pay up to 800 colleges and universities. And it’s still growing.

“Project Ahead’s structure is basically simple. But its benefits to young people and their parents are enormous.

“First of all, it is a unique individualized education plan. One that allows you to choose, if you qualify, an “alma mater” before you enlist. (Normally a participating school in your home area.) So no matter which college or colleges you

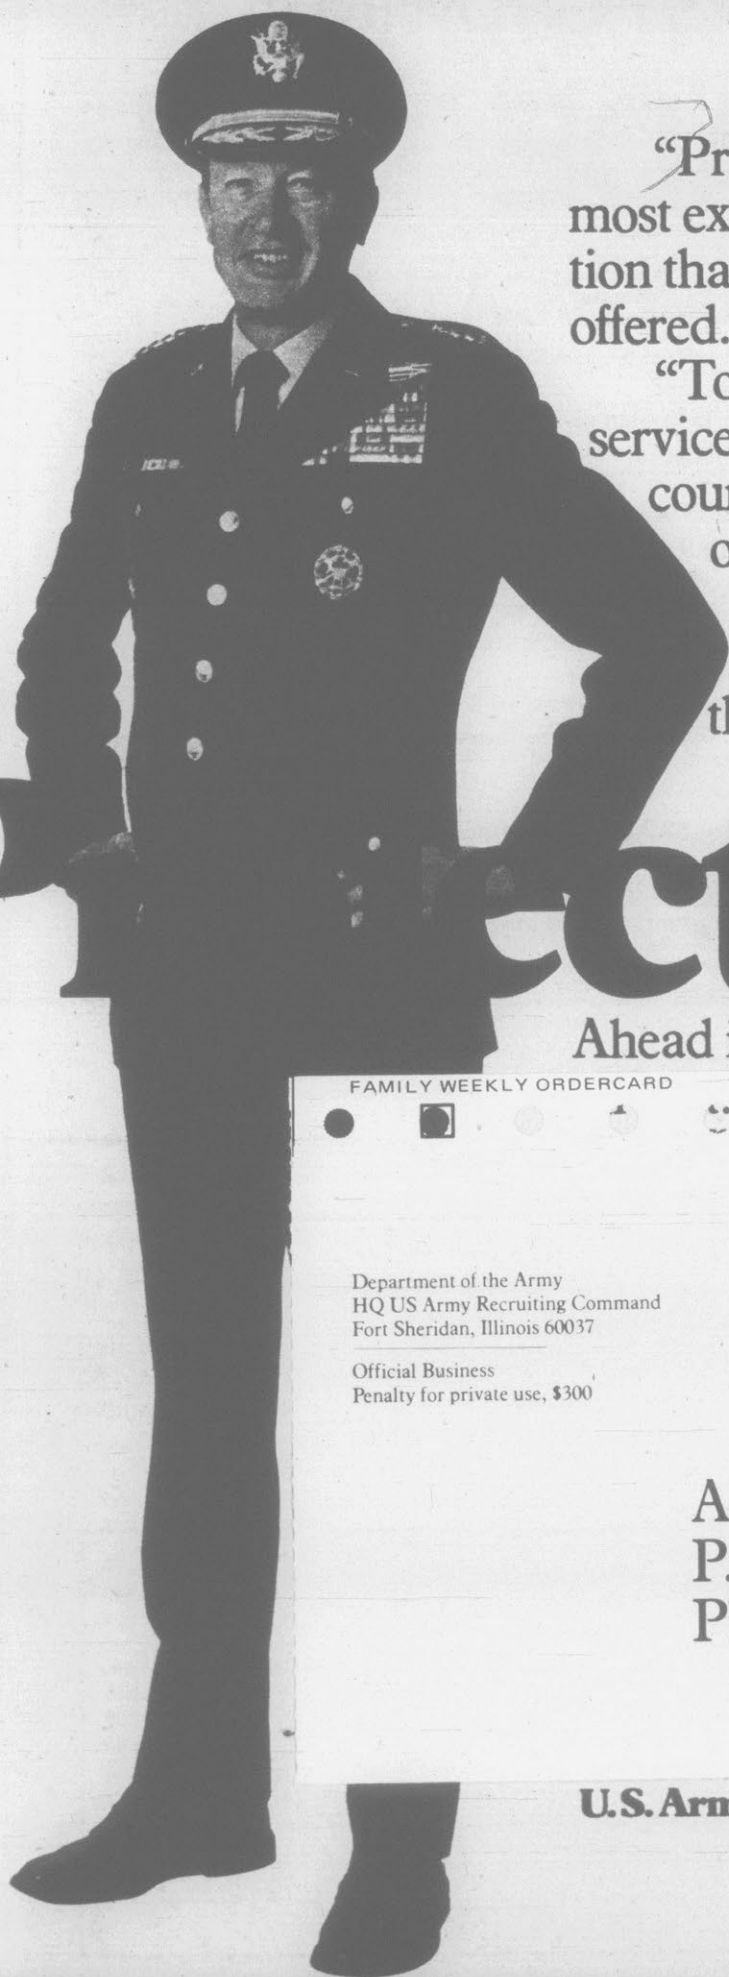

75% of the tuition for these courses. (After your enlistment’s over, you’ll be eligible for 36 months of financial assistance under the G.I. Bill.)

“We, in the educational community, are enthusiastic about this new plan. In fact, many of us believe Project Ahead will be as important to young people entering the Army as the G.I. Bill has been to veterans.”

Dr. Arthur G. Hansen
President, and an Army General that lets you enlist in the Army at the same time.

"Project Ahead is the most exciting idea in education that the Army has ever offered.

"Too often people in the service have taken college courses from one school, only to learn later those courses would not apply toward their degrees. Project college courses you take in the Army. And now you can make sure you get credit for the college courses you successfully complete.

"Project Ahead is by no means a free ride. Because while you're working toward a college degree, you'll be serving your country. You'll be a soldier full time.

Rachel Ames—shown here with her daughter Chris—is known to millions of viewers as Audrey Baldwin on ABC's "General Hospital." In real life she is a mother and family woman whose greatest challenge has been to raise two different daughters a full generation apart.

What It's Like to Raise Daughters Nearly 18 Years Apart

This I could understand. I am 11 years older than my own sister, and I can remember how jealous I was when she was born. Actually, in comparison, Susan didn't do too badly. She resorted to such things as playing the radio very loudly while the baby was trying to sleep, having friends over who would keep us all up very late, and so on.

There was another problem. I'd been married before, but this was Barry's [her husband, Barry Cahill] first marriage, and Christine is his only child. He had some major adjustments to make, not only in getting to know Sue but in meeting a brand-new baby.

It was quite natural that before long, after Christine was born, Barry found it hard not to show favoritism. To compensate, I paid extra attention to

"I was aware almost from the beginning that there could be a problem. Susan was at an age where she was very embarrassed about the whole thing...."

Sue. I sensed what she was going through, and made a point of praising her whenever she did something around the house, and did it well. I'd remember to tell her how lovely she looked. I showed her her own baby pictures so she could see how much she looked like Christine, hoping she'd see a close kinship between them. I never allowed her to baby-sit for Christine, or do anything for her unless she asked first. I didn't want Sue to feel that Christine was an imposition.

I am happy to say that Sue now adores Christine and spoils her at every opportunity.

The change in Sue is due to several things. First of all, she married a marvelous man, George Pilling. He's a little older, a lawyer, and a very gentle man. He's helped Sue grow up in many ways, and I feel he's greatly responsible for Sue's maturity. It's lovely to be a happy family. And now that she's the mother of a beautiful baby girl of her own, we have a great deal in common.

Looking back, I think the biggest problem in raising two children of such different ages was trying to split attention between them. I kept trying to please each one, which is terribly difficult, and so I wasn't always successful.

I am proud of my girls. I adore both of them. They are forcing me to stay in tune with two generations and to keep young. I learned from raising Sue. I think I am stricter with Chris. And I know I want to give Chris some kind of religious training, even if she rejects it later. With Susan I was negligent in that area. I didn't give her anything to hang on to. I want Chris to have some kind of formal religious training.

I've often been asked if my work is unfair to Chris. My answer is no, I think not. It's true I work 50 out of 52 weeks a year, and have to plan and ask months in advance to get those two weeks off. But Chris used to play my son on the show, so she understands what my work is about. I'd stop if I didn't feel it was right. If I found work difficult, I'd come home disgruntled and that would make it more difficult on Chris. Children can tell instinctively if their mother's work is a drag.

And I enjoyed having Chris on the show. I haven't the vaguest idea why the producers decided to cast her as my son. She was already born when the writers decided I should have a child on the show, so they knew Chris was a girl. Finally, of course, they had to take her off and replace her with a boy because she was beginning to look too much like a girl.

I don't profess to have all the answers. I know there will be new problems in raising Chris that I didn't encounter with Sue. And I hope I can still be helpful to Sue in her new role as a mother.

By Rachel Ames, Star of ABC's "General Hospital"

I have two children — both girls — who are almost 18 years apart. Susan is 21 and Christine is three. Sometimes I've felt like two separate mothers. And to complicate matters, each girl has a different father.

It hasn't always been easy to understand and cope with such divergent ages while trying to blend them into a family that involves a husband who is father only to Christine. It has been a marvelous challenge.

I was aware almost from the beginning of my second pregnancy that there could be a problem. Susan was at an age where she was very embarrassed about the whole thing. It was difficult for her to face her friends at school because she was worried about what they'd say.

I remember she used to pretend she didn't know me when we went shopping. She'd drop back behind me and look the other way. And as I got bigger, she'd say, "Mother, you're getting so fat!" I was worried about her reaction until the last three months of my pregnancy, when I was forced to stay in bed because of a complication. Susan couldn't have been more concerned for my health and the well-being of her unborn sister.

However, once Christine arrived, and after Sue got over being afraid of her because she was so tiny, there was a bit of jealousy.

People Quiz
By John E. Gibson

Do Your Neighbors Consider You a Good Neighbor?

True or False: People who have children are the most neighborly. (See number 2)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most people agree on what constitutes a good neighbor.
2. People who have children are the most neighborly.
3. It doesn't matter much what neighborhood you live in if you don't have good neighbors.
4. Women are more neighborly than men.
5. A good neighbor is not a good neighbor unless you are the same kind of good neighbor.
6. It's much easier to get acquainted with your neighbors in a poor neighborhood than in an affluent one.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to the findings of an urban-neighborhood survey conducted by sociology professor Peter McGahan, which showed that the majority of respondents "defined a good neighbor as someone who is friendly, but not a friend, someone willing to chat with you, but at the same time someone who does not intrude on your privacy. A small proportion defined a good neighbor as a close friend." And the survey revealed a similarly small (though quite vocal) minority who very emphatically defined a good neighbor as someone who leaves you completely alone.
2. True. Sociological studies have shown that people who make the most friendly and congenial neighbors are those whose life-style is oriented to child-rearing and family living. At the other end of the pole, the least neighborly tend to be those to whom children and family life are not predominant but are replaced by other concerns and interests, such as a career, etc. And although people with children are the most neighborly, if the children are too obstreperous, it goes without saying that in many cases their neighbors wish they weren't so friendly!
3. True. Bad next-door neighbors can do more to make a good neighborhood into one you'd like to move out of than any other single factor. Far better to live in a less-advantaged neighborhood surrounded by good neighbors. Recently the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research attempted to measure the "quality of life" nationwide. It concluded that without neighbors who at least warranted neutral responses, an individual's feelings of satisfaction would be relatively low—even in environments that offered good housing and other amenities.

4. False. Contrary to what might be expected, the findings of a leading study on this question "did not show any differences between the sexes with respect to neighborliness." Two other investigations have yielded similar findings.

5. True. Studies show that three types of "good neighbors" predominate, and each functions as a completely different type from the other. There is the generous, heart-of-gold, borrow-a-cup-of-sugar kind who believes in the mutual assistance and helpful exchange of household needs and commodities. He or she is a blessing if you're the same type, but can be a pest if you're not. The second type of good neighbor is careful not to intrude on a neighbor's privacy, is more than willing to help whenever the need arises, but would not think of calling upon a neighbor for aid except in an emergency. This type makes a fine neighbor, but might be considered by the first type as somewhat reserved or standoffish. Type three is described by one sociologist as the "independents," who pride themselves on their self-sufficiency, do not believe in borrowing—or as they term it, leaning on people—and "define a good neighbor as someone from whom you do not expect any help at all."

6. False. Sociological studies show that people's "socioeconomic status"—whether they're rich, poor, or travel with high, low or middle-class society—bears no relation to their inclination to be neighborly. Evidence would seem to indicate that good neighbors are where you find them—irrespective of social class or income bracket.

Lakeland proudly presents this lovely new vision of living color roses, a recently developed rose form that is sure to bring "OOH'S 'n AH'S" of wonder from all who see it. So beautiful in full bloom that when first exhibited a few years back, it left visitors literally spellbound. Never before had any gardener seen fountains of exquisitely formed roses in three different colors splash out from the crown of one eye-level tree to come cascading down in freshets of colorful blossoms!

- BUDDED AT EYE LEVEL!
- WINTER HARDY

LAKELAND'S DOUBLE GUARANTEE
(1) All plants must arrive in perfect condition and (2) thrive after planting or you may return for replacement or refund of purchase price any time within 3 months.

THESE CASCADES GIVE YOU THE GREATEST ROSE SPECTACLE EVER SEEN IN A GARDEN!

INSPIRED LANDSCAPING IDEAS!

Now you can grow the most talked about roses in town! Just wait 'til you behold a deluge of roses . . . in brilliant reds, delicate pinks, sparkling yellows all cascading from the crown of one graceful eye-level tree to become a rainbow-splashed fountain of breathtaking color! A stunning picture in your garden . . . graceful "hanging sprays" as cut flowers!

Stunning drama for lawn!

Fairytale "avenues" of roses!

PLANT NOW . . . ENJOY COLORFUL "BLOOMING FOUNTAINS" ALL SEASON LONG!

If you plant Cascade-of-Roses Trees now, they'll erupt into bloom in about 10 weeks . . . and keep right on blooming all summer long 'til snow starts to fly. You'll be rewarded with ever-increasing beauty on tree trunks that grow even thicker, sturdier . . . but never taller . . . year after year!

A TRIUMPH IN ROSE BREEDING HISTORY!

WE GUARANTEE each tree to be triple or quadruple budded! In effect, you get 3 to 4 cascading tree roses on a single sturdy trunk. This is the ultimate in the rose breeder's art. Enjoy torrents of colorful blooms for months on end to turn your grounds into the showplace of your community!

Lakeland's newly developed "3-in-1" Cascade Rose has the same basic form as the coveted Tree Rose but with this exciting difference — instead of eye-level mounds borne aloft, it forms arching bowers of roses that bush out and interlace to create a perfect "waterfall effect." The very long-tapering hybrid tea buds are larger, more long-lasting and full-textured than roses on regular bushes.

What in the World!

JACKIE ONASSIS
What is her public appeal?

The definitive last word on Jackie: Now banned from being within 25 feet of Jackie Onassis, photographer Ron Galella muses about the woman who has, inadvertently, made him famous: "There are four kinds of wealth that make up glamour and the beautiful people. They are social, monetary, physical and psychological. Jackie Kennedy has all four and that is why she is the most glamorous woman in the world. The social wealth she attained by marrying the charismatic John F. Kennedy when he was an up-and-coming politician with the Presidency in mind; the monetary wealth she attained by marrying Onassis . . . ; and the physical beauty she inherited. She has a big-boned athletic body, yet is as graceful as a fashion model. She has large, beautiful eyes, set far apart. She keeps her physical beauty by jogging, riding horses, which she loves, and through other sports, such as swimming and water-skiing. Last, but not least, the psychological wealth. Jackie has a quiet, intellectual, extraordinary, mysterious beauty. She is sensitive, poetic and independent." From "Jacqueline," by Ron Galella (Sheed and Ward Inc., $12.95).

Just plain pain: "Chronic pain is our most serious disabling disease. Its cost in human suffering is incalculable. Its cost in medical-expense dollars has been estimated at $25 billion a year. The average doctor does not even think of pain as a specific entity, but only as part of another problem, a symptom. We have learned better. There is pain which exists of and for itself. As a result, a new specialty is emerging in medical practice: the therapy of pain. It is a specialty not practiced on an individual basis, like cardiology or obstetrics, but rather in a team approach that brings together the skills of a number of medical specialists in a combined attack upon a condition whose underlying causes may be very obscure." From "The Conquest of Pain," by Samuel Mines (Grosset & Dunlap, $7.95).

C. ALPHONSO SMITH
One ahead of Bobby Riggs

Surprising champion of champions C. Alphonso Smith speaking: "I have often said to my wife that I want to die on a tennis court. She says that if I keep playing singles at age 65, I should reach my goal." Smith, from Charlottesville, Va., holds an amazing 30 national titles, and in 1924 he won both the National Boys Singles and Doubles championships. Last fall, he won the national 65-and-over Doubles Championship on all four surfaces—hard court, indoor, grass and clay. Between these two victories, Smith managed to put together a string of titles that places him one ahead of Bobby Riggs and one behind Bill Tilden in total championships. Even more amazing, many of his matches have been won since 1962, when Smith lost three toes on his right foot in a lawn-mower accident.

Quips & Quotes

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY By Richard Armour

WHAT'S WATT?

When I'd replace a hundred watt
A sixty watt is all I've got,
Or when a sixty's what I need
A hundred's all I have, indeed.

And so it goes with twenty-five
And forty watters. How I strive
To keep replacements on the shelf—
It makes me think about myself.

If in my job or with my spouse,
Around the office or the house,
I am replaced, I really ache
To know what wattage it would take.

I saw a vocalist on TV who came out wearing a wig, false eyelashes, caps on her teeth and a half inch of pancake makeup. Her opening number was "I Gotta Be Me."
—Conrad Fiorello

Most people would rather defend to the death your right to say it than listen to it.
—Robert Brault

Classified ad in Indiana weekly: "For Sale: One set of golf clubs. Used only by a little old college professor who never drove over 150 yards."
—Hern Albright

Panhandler: "Actually, I'm an author. I once wrote a book entitled 'One Hundred Ways to Earn Money.'"

Businessman: "Then why are you begging?"

Panhandler: "It's one of the ways."
—Conrad Fiorello

Teenage girl thoughtfully to friend: "Of course, I could go out with Herbie until something better comes along." Friend: "But what if something better came along—and saw you out with Herbie?"
—Lane Olinghouse

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Kids see life differently. Send contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

An English professor at the university where I work told this story about his son: It seems the boy was just learning to dress himself, and he usually came up with some very mismatched combinations. Then one day he came downstairs wearing a pair of beige pants and a paisley shirt with a brown sweater to match. He even had on coordinating socks. The little boy beamed as he walked into the kitchen and said, "Look, Daddy, I rhyme!"
—Donna Faye Wallingsford
Austin, Texas

Overheard: "I don't like these smog-free days. I like to see what I'm breathing."
—Lucille S. Harper

Our Story: AT THE REQUEST OF PRINCESS GRANIA, PRINCE VALIANT TRIES TO INSTRUCT THE CROWN PRINCE ODO IN THE WARRIOR ARTS. ODO'S FEEBLE EFFORTS BRING A LOOK OF CONTEMPT INTO GRANIA'S EYES.

WITH AN ANGRY SNARL, ODO THROWS DOWN HIS BLADE. "I AM NO BEEFY WARRIOR! I AM A PHILOSOPHER, A SCIENTIST, A POET! WHEN MY TIME COMES I'LL RULE THESSALRIGA WITH BRAINS, NOT BRAIN!"

"YOU ARE A LITTLE SHY OF BOTH," MUTTERS VAL AS HE LEAVES THE ROOM. GRANIA IS STANDING IN THE HALL. TEARS OF SHAME GLISTEN ON HER CHEEKS. "SHE LOVES HIM! HOW CAN SUCH A PROUD BEAUTY LOVE A CLOD LIKE ODO?" VAL MUSES.

MORE IMPORTANT EVENTS ARE TAKING SHAPE. VAL'S SHIP RETURNS AND REPORTS: "WE COULD NOT RETURN TO THULE, FOR THE DREAD FLEET OF BELLA GROSSI FILLS THE STRAIT BETWEEN DANELAND AND THULE. THEY CAN ONLY BE A FEW DAYS BEHIND US."

AND YET ANOTHER SHIP ARRIVES BRINGING A GREAT PERSONAGE, EARL DUPUY, LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR TO KING LEOFRIC OF THESSALRIGA, NOW RETURNING TO REPORT ON HIS EFFORTS TO ENLIST THE HELP OF THE DANES.

IN THE THRONE ROOM HE GIVES HIS REPORT: "NO, THE DANES WILL NOT SEND HELP. IN FACT, THEY HOPE TO TURN BACK BELLA GROSSI AND HIS WHOLE FLEET." AND THE FLEET? "OH, WORKING ITS WAY NEARER, PLUNDERING AS IT GOES. IT MIGHT NEVER GET HERE!"

DUPUY IS SECOND IN COMMAND UNDER KING LEOFRIC, HIS LOYALTY BEYOND QUESTION. YET, HIS REPORT DIFFERS FROM THAT OF VAL'S SAILORS. PERHAPS THE SAILORS HAVE EXAGGERATED.

GASOLINE ALLEY

Hi, Fracas. When did you get in?

Just this minute, Pal. I haven't even unpacked yet.

I got your letter. Too bad about all the lousy weather.

Actually, that wasn't the problem, Wallet. We were lonesome.

Lonesome? How come?

The guys I usually see down there didn't show this year.

Business conditions, I guess. Anyway, we were glad to knock it off and head for home.

Right. And speaking of friendly faces, I see the kids have honored me again this year

How's that?

He's beautiful!

Like it, Mr. Fracas?
