Ullman Says 60 Days Not Enough For Energy Bill

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional committees are pushing ahead with their own energy and tax proposals in the face of President Ford's temporary retreat on key parts of his energy-conservation program.

Saying that he was striving to avoid a "time-wasting test of strength" with Congress, Ford backed off part of his program for the time being on Tuesday. Among other steps, he agreed to delay for 60 days the last two steps of a $3-a-barrel special tariff on imported oil.

At the same time, the President vetoed a Democratic-sponsored bill that would have delayed for 90 days all three steps of the special tariff.

Meantime, the Senate Finance Committee was to hold hearings today on the House-passed, $21.3-billion tax cut bill.

And the House Ways and Means Committee continued work today on energy conservation proposals, with particular emphasis on the committee's own plan to reduce energy consumption through quotas on imported oil and an eventual 40-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase. The tax is now four cents a gallon.

Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., indicated that Congress would not be able to complete work on an energy program within the 60 days that Ford agreed to delay his program.

Ullman said he hoped for House floor action on a program at the end of April, about the time the 60-day delay expires. But Ullman said he hoped Ford then would "accommodate us by giving us additional time to work it through the Senate."

An immediate impact of Ford's announcement was to raise serious doubts about the prospects of any congressional override of his veto. The Senate leadership shelved for the time being any effort to override.

To give Congress and the administration time to hammer out an energy compromise, the President took these steps Tuesday:

—Postponed for 60 days the second and third portions of the tariff increase. The $1-a-barrel increase that went into effect on Feb. 1 will remain.

—Agreed to postpone at least until May 1 his plan to remove federal price controls from domestic oil.

Pitt School Bd. Denies Request Supporting Tenure

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Board of Education yesterday denied a request from the Pitt County Principals Association that the school board adopt a resolution in support of principals and full-time assistant principals to remain under the tenure law.

Ike Baldrée, principal of Grifton School and president of the Pitt County Principals Association, asked that the board of education adopt a resolution supporting tenure because the North Carolina School Boards Association has taken a position of opposition to the granting of tenure to principals and assistant principals.

Baldrée said the local principal's organization, as well as the State Association of Principals, will voice opposition to the matter in the 1975 legislature.

Baldrée explained the legislation to remove principals and assistant principals from under the tenure law had not been introduced but that it would be. He added that the same request was introduced in the last session of the legislature but the matter was defeated.

"The principals like being a part of the tenure law and would like to remain under the tenure law," Baldrée said. "The N.C. School Boards Association wants to put administrative staffs in the same category with superintendents—that of signing contracts. At the end of the contract, the principal may no longer have his job and no reason has to be given why the contract is not renewed."

"Under the tenure law, the principal is given the due process of law. He must be given a reason why he no longer has a job."

"This is an effort by the State School Boards Association to separate teachers and principals. We need to stay together and not be divided," Baldrée emphasized.

Board member Dr. Doug Jones said he felt the school board should support tenure for principals and assistant principals. He added he did not understand why the School Boards Association has taken a stand opposing tenure for them.

"I feel it would be discrimination to penalize principals by not approving tenure to be continued for them... the teachers have it... so why shouldn't the principals?"

Several board members said they felt the tenure law protected the weak teachers and that strong teachers and principals did not need the tenure law.

The motion was defeated by a vote of 5-4.

Roy Beck and Ralph Tucker of the Soil Conservation Service and Wilson Spencer of Resources Conservation and Development, appeared before the board to discuss cost-sharing projects that would provide much needed campus improvement on several of the county school sites.

Beck said he had studied the schools in the area and had noticed some erosion. He explained the SCS will help solve the problems on a cost-sharing basis (probably 50-50 between board of education and SCS).

Beck said SCS could provide fertilizer, lime and seed for the projects if the board of education agreed to provide the labor and equipment needed.

Iran Planning Buy 8 Nuclear Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil-rich Iran will buy eight nuclear power plants from the United States over the next five years as part of a $15-billion trade agreement that was described as the largest ever.

Iran's purchases from the United States will include materials for factories, apartment buildings and hospitals.

The trade agreement signed Tuesday is "the largest agreement of this kind that has been signed between any two countries," Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a news conference.

Kissinger said the nuclear reactors will be subject to "the safeguards that are appropriate" under the Nuclear NonProliferation Treaty, which Iran has signed.

The trade agreement, which does not involve oil, is the most important in a series of moves by the Shah of Iran to use petrodollars to develop his country.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlévi has repeatedly said that he wants his country to produce nuclear energy before its oil reserves are exhausted. Iran is the No. 2 oil exporter in the world.

A joint communique said the two nations agree to cooperate "in the establishment of Iran as a financial center for the region."

Hushang Ansary, Iran's minister of finance and economic affairs, pointed out at the news conference that Iran is "the first oil-producing country to go nuclear in a major way." He said Iran also has ordered two nuclear power plants from France and two from West Germany.

Kissinger and Ansary answered questions about the pact after it was signed and soon became entangled in the dollar amounts involved. The two ministers finally huddled with their experts to clarify what the figures meant.

After the session, experts gave the following breakdown:

The projected $15 billion will include about $5 billion in normal trade items, other than oil. This would amount to about a 20 per cent increase over present U.S.-Iran trade.

Iran's military purchases from the United States will represent another $5 billion. Iran has been making massive U.S. arms purchases after oil prices quadrupled following the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

The final $5 billion will come in disbursements on the various projects to be carried out in Iran with U.S. help.

CIA Files Unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William E. Colby today outlined for Congress a long list of files that the agency keeps on U.S. citizens and acknowledged that some material in them "may not be appropriate."

Testifying before a House subcommittee, Colby described in detail for the first time files on Americans ranging from suspected foreign intelligence agents to workers in a plant performing work for the CIA.

He provided no figures on the total number of files, but his 22-page statement left little doubt that the names of hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of Americans must appear in Agency files.

In addition, Colby said CIA files contain "information on several million foreign political, military, scientific, economic, technical, and cultural personalities."

Among the files on Americans described by Colby in prepared testimony before a House Government Operations subcommittee were records of CIA contacts with members of Congress and their staffs; records of agency briefings and other contacts with journalists; records of individuals and firms who cooperate with the agency in the collection of foreign intelligence; and personnel records on agency employees.

The agency is required by law to publish a complete list of all its records later this year.

He made no specific reference to previously acknowledged files on 10,000 Americans collected in the course of investigating whether there were foreign links to the U.S. anti-war movement, or to reports of files kept on newsmen who have gained access to classified documents.

Colby denied that the agency maintains a blacklist of individuals thought to be unwilling to cooperate with the agency.

Colby said the agency had begun to destroy files that were not related to legitimate intelligence or security needs but said the destruction has been suspended as a result of the various investigations now under way. However, he added that the process of separating the questionable files from the rest of the agency's records would continue and that "after the investigations are completed, the best disposition of these materials is destruction."

Fraud Warrant Issued Against MVD Director

DURHAM (AP)—Durham County Chief Deputy W. A. Allen says a warrant charging fraud has been issued against Roy McCampbell, who resigned Monday as director of the state Motor Vehicles Enforcement and Theft Bureau.

Allen said the charge grew out of a reported break-in at the home of McCampbell last Thanksgiving Day.

McCampbell, a former highway patrolman stationed in Durham, had not been served with the warrant early today, the deputy said.

Allen added that McCampbell is accused of making a false insurance claim in the amount of $9,230.58 for items reported stolen in the break-in. The items included 25 pistols, five shotguns, four rifles, a gun case, a television, a stereo and $250 in cash.

State Transportation Secretary Troy Doby said Tuesday the abrupt resignation was "strange" and that the State Bureau of Investigation was being given access to McCampbell's investigative files.

McCampbell's bureau is responsible for operating truck weigh stations and investigating motor vehicle violations, mostly concerning theft and registrations.

McCampbell replaced Nicholas Smith in the job last spring after Smith resigned under pressure.

A Highway Patrol official confirmed Tuesday night that a trooper was stationed at the Motor Vehicles office.

"When somebody ups and quits like this with no warning at all, it's kind of strange," Doby said.

The secretary said McCampbell didn't report for work Monday but dictated a letter of resignation to his secretary by telephone later in the day. The resignation didn't reach McCampbell's superior, Motor Vehicles Commissioner Jake Alexander, until late Tuesday morning, Doby said.

The Enforcement and Theft Bureau was embroiled in controversy in 1973 and 1974 after it was charged that the Republican administration of Gov. Jim Holshouser was using the agency's police powers to investigate political rivals.

Kuwait Seizing Control

ALGIERS (AP) — Kuwait has decided to take over 100 per cent of all the foreign oil companies operating its huge oilfields, the official Algerian news agency said today, quoting Kuwait's oil minister, Abdelmoutaleb Kazimi.

Kazimi told the agency the companies have been summoned to open negotiations next week "on the details of the transfer of ownership of the petroleum and gas to the Kuwaiti state and people."

Kazimi is attending the current summit conference of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and could not be immediately reached to confirm the report.

Kuwait is the world's fourth largest petroleum exporter and a founding member of OPEC. It previously took over 60 per cent of the holding of British Petroleum and the Gulf Oil Co., whose Kuwait production peaked at 2,925,000 barrels a day in 1972.

National leaders of most of the OPEC states were meeting today to complete a "solemn declaration of principles" they think should govern long-term relations with their customers. They may include in the declaration some of the points made by Algeria's President Houari Boumediene in a speech opening the conference on Tuesday.

Expensive Antiques Still Sell

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In these times why are people buying expensive antiques for their homes?

In accounting for their ebullience at this year's East Side House Settlement winter antiques show, dealers from many states indicated they had feared the worst during this period of inflation, "but so far, so good."

Alastair Stair, who claims to have "the biggest stock in the world" of English furniture, said that "in the last two months business has increased incredibly."

And he had something to compare it with — as a young boy he had begun in the antiques business in the "aftermath of the Depression" in 1932, "when it was very difficult to sell a drum table at $300. Now we can get $5,000 for one."

Only that morning he had sold some things to two London dealers that he had bought two days before in New Jersey. Few good things were gathering dust.

"I think people are putting money into antiques instead of making other investments, which indicates that antiques can give capital appreciation."

A long-time dealer in pewter, Thomas D. Williams of Litchfield, Conn., concurred with Stair's remarks.

"In fact 1974 was the biggest year we ever had in pewter, which surprised me. I think more people are intellectually involved in pewter because it fits the necessary qualifications of an antique — artistically and historically important and rare — but it can be acquired even if you can't afford some other antiques." A "significant piece of pewter" may be bought "for a few dollars," Williams says.

At the show he had more than 500 pieces — beakers, flacons, plates, platters — ranging in price from $40 to thousands.

"We have had a very orderly market in pewter which helps, too. You don't have people bidding it way up and then knocking it down as you do in art."

In accounting for her own good business, popular long-time textile expert Elinor Merrell said the current good market seems to indicate that "people are buying things of value that can be enjoyed."

Miss Merrell fairly danced about her booth as she set in place a collection of mercury glass she had recently acquired and some of her rare textiles including handpainted East Indian tree of life panels, "the source of all our chintzes," she remarked.

Even though he is in the automobile area, "which is highly affected by the economy," Bernard Plomb of Richland, Mich., has been finding business very good. "Good things have been selling very well. I am really surprised," he said. A chest, circa 1675, reflected his optimism. It wore a price tag of $22,000, and an enormous punchbowl "would hopefully go for $2,800," he said.

John Hart of Middletown Springs, Vt., has found that "shoppers are cautious, but if you have something good they will not quibble." One prize piece in his booth was an American Salem chest with its original beehive and lotus hardware.

Folk art was holding up "because there is such a demand with collectors, museums and even speculators," said James Abbe Jr. of Oyster Bay, N.Y. In his display were some unique pieces. One weathervane was a hunter with a bow made out of his gun ($1,500). Another was a whirlwind — a blacksmith, three men, a horse, furnace and bellows. Abbe also showed a handsome Indian he had seen at Annapolis, he said. It was wearing a peace medal and "may have been a figurehead instead of a cigar store Indian," Abbe was saying, making the judgment by the posture.

Virginian Walter Angel had brought all sorts of interesting things to the show from Fredericksburg, including a curly maple John Townsend highboy, which his partner, Bill Dennis, proudly pointed out had detachable legs "and the distinguished cutout on the apron typical of Rhode Island pieces." They expected to get $18,000 for it.

At Alfred Bullard's of Philadelphia, William Bartolet remarked that "good things were definitely holding up." Choice pieces they would exhibit included a Hepplewhite sofa ($4,800) and two Hepplewhite chairs ($6,000).

Former Florida dealer J.J. Thompson mostly travels the shows now, he says, and he always brings with him hundreds of pieces of rare Chinese export porcelain.

At Houston, Philadelphia and the Lake Forest and Grosse Pointe shows it has been the same — good business.

"It is like anything else, a good car is more desirable and more in demand than a cheap one, and so are the good antiques." Among his rare porcelains, which included orange and iron-red Fitzhugh, was an enormous 22-inch Famille Rose punch bowl, circa 1760.

Better To Sleep On Idea Than Sheets

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on your answer: "Send me a sample, and I'll sleep on it," in regards to the letter from a reader who suggested printing the Ten Commandments on bed sheets and pillowcases.

Speaking only of the Jewish faith, one is not permitted to sleep, lie, or even sit on the same bench with holy books unless the books are placed on something which is a handbreadth in height. It is also forbidden to place sacred books on the ground. SAMUEL A. FRIEDMAN: RABBI ASHEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR RABBI: My intentions were to sleep on the "idea" — not the sheets.

DEAR ABBY: To "GREAT IDEA," the woman who wants to save the world by putting The Ten Commandments on sheets and pillow slips: There is a Commandment: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. I have loved my neighbor for 20 years, and we haven't been caught yet. I am just keeping a Commandment. LOVING MY NEIGHBOR IN MO.

DEAR LOVING: Your kind of neighbor loving is BREAKING a Commandment, not keeping one. Besides, you'd better review the Commandments. Although there are many references in the Bible to "loving one's neighbor," it is not one of the Ten Commandments.

DEAR ABBY: So "Great Idea in Washington" thinks we should have the Ten Commandments printed on bed sheets and pillow cases?

I am a Christian, and firmly believe in honoring God's law but sheets and pillowcases are the wrong place. The Psalmist David said, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee." (Psalm 119:11.) I prefer God's law in the heart rather than on bedclothes. Besides, no criminal would buy The Commandments sheets anyway.

My advice to criminals and to "Mrs. Great Idea" is found in Romans 10:10 & 13. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation... For whosoever shall call upon the name of Lord shall be saved."

BETTER IDEA IN ARKANSAS

DEAR ABBY: I think that person who wrote in with the suggestion of having the Ten Commandments printed on bed sheets and pillowcases had a great idea. I can't understand why her idea was rejected by two manufacturers. I am glad you printed that letter because it has given me an idea for my daughter's hope chest. I am going to MAKE her a hand embroidered set! CICERO, ILLINOIS

Walnut Cookies Have A Chocolate Glaze

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The best cookie recipe we've come on this year is delightfully crunchy because finely chopped walnuts go into the dough. At our house, layered between sheets of wax paper in a tightly closed tin box, the cookies stayed crisp and fresh tasting for weeks. Their chocolate glaze held up well. Though the cookies are deliciously sweet, only half a cup of brown sugar is called for.

wide metal spatula and place on wire rack set over a sheet of wax paper. While cookies are still warm, spread with Chocolate Glaze, but do not cover nut garnish. Let stand until Glaze is thoroughly dry before serving or storing. Makes 21 large cookies.

Chocolate Glaze: Melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine; stir in 1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa, 2 teaspoons boiling water and 2 tablespoons light corn syrup; blend in ¼ cup sifted confectioners' sugar until smooth.

WALNUT CANDYBAR COOKIES

¾ cup walnuts
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
½ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1¼ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Chocolate Glaze, see below

Set aside 21 halves or large pieces of walnuts; finely chop the remaining nuts. Blend the butter, sugar, flour, salt and vanilla to make a stiff dough; stir in the chopped walnuts. Shape into a rectangle and, if necessary to have dough firm enough for rolling out, chill. On a prepared pastry cloth with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out dough to a 12½ by 9¾ inch rectangle. Cut in thirds on 9¾-inch side (each third 3¼ inches wide) and in 7 slices (each 1¾ inches wide) along 12½-inch side. With a wide metal spatula, lift onto ungreased cookie sheet, placing about 1 inch apart. Press a walnut half or piece on center of each. Bake on rack above center in a preheated 350-degree oven until very lightly browned — about 15 minutes. Let stand on cookie sheet for 3 or 4 minutes, then remove with

National Nutrition Week Is Being Observed In North Carolina

TOO MANY SWEETS. This is National Nutrition Week and the American Dietetic Association reminds you that good nutrition is a daily lifetime habit. They recommend that persons cut down on those empty-calorie junk foods and eat wisely.

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

This week has been designated as National Nutrition Week in North Carolina by Governor James Holshouser because he feels good, sound nutrition is the basis for health and productivity, for personal achievement and the ability to contribute to our communities.

Dr. Alice Scott, chairman of the Department of Food, Nutrition and Institution Management at East Carolina University, says nutrition education is a preventive health measure.

"If we can modify or improve the eating habits of the vulnerable population, especially pregnant and lactating mothers, preschoolers and school age children, many of the health problems such as obesity, anemia, dental caries and heart disease, would be overcome," Dr. Scott explained.

"The trend of the eating habits that are developed early in life tend to be perpetual throughout life and adulthood," Dr. Scott said. "If children begin to snack on certain foods early in development, they will continue to select these same snack foods as they get older. This increases their health problems."

According to Dr. Scott, when studying children from birth through adolescence, adolescence is probably the time when the most unsound nutrition practices are seen.

"Poor eating is also seen in university settings," Dr. Scott said. "Students have to either purchase their meals or cook their own food. They don't have mother to prepare their meals for them or to encourage good nutrition."

Dr. Scott added, "In a university setting students are frequently exposed to even more bizarre food habits or food fads than in high school."

"College students frequently find it exciting or unusual to try out these fads, which may be hazardous to their health as well as a waste of money."

Dr. Scott said she feels nutrition education should be a component in the curriculum of elementary and secondary education majors in schools of medicine and allied health and social professions.

Working with Dr. Scott in the Department of Food, Nutrition, and Institution Management are: Marilyn Steele, meal management and nutrition; Dr. Lewis Forrest, food service management; and John Cox, graduate assistant who teaches food labs.

The department has a bachelor of science degree in institution management in general dietetics which qualifies individuals for job opportunities in clinical nutrition and food service management in health related settings such as hospitals, health departments, nursing homes and rehabilitation centers. Individuals may also seek jobs in non-health related food service operations such as school food services, industrial and commercial feeding.

The bachelor of science program is approved by the American Dietetic Association and graduates of the program meet minimum academic requirements for membership in the ADA.

There is also a masters program called college teaching option in foods and nutrition.

"Our department is presently developing the curriculum for a coordinated undergraduate program in dietetics (CUPD) which expands the clinical experience component of the B.S. program."

"Upon completion of the CUPD a student is eligible for membership in the ADA and upon completion of registration examinations may become a registered dietitian," Dr. Scott said.

The American Dietetic Association has issued a warning that certain diets and food fads can be dangerous to health, if followed for long periods. "Food fads always make big promises, such as fantastic health, long life, instant slenderness, magical cures for illnesses," Dr. Scott said, "But remember that fad diets can fool you, waste money and endanger your health. Eat a balanced diet every day of a wide variety of foods."

The American Dietetic Association stresses the idea that good nutrition is a daily lifetime habit. Dietitians recommend eating a wide variety of foods each day and cutting down on those empty-calorie junk foods. Persons should eat wisely because their good health is at stake.

Activities planned for Nutrition Week include an all day film carnival on Saturday, March 15, from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. in the VanLandingham Room of the Home Economics Building, ECU campus. The films on food service topics are designed primarily for students and interested professionals but everyone is invited to attend. Sponsored by the Student Dietetic Association, the films are from the National Education Media.

Other activities for the observance of Nutrition Week include displays, bulletin boards and various activities to promote nutrition education.

NOTICE: DOG-OWNERS OF GREENVILLE

IS A 24-HOUR LEASH LAW NECESSARY? THE CITY COUNCIL IS CONSIDERING THE FOLLOWING AMENDMENT TO ORDINANCE NO. 441:

"Every person owning or having possession, charge, care, custody or control of any dog shall keep such dog exclusively upon his own premises; provided, however, that such dog may be off such premises if it be under the control of a competent person and restrained by a chain or leash or other means of adequate physical control."

WHY SHOULD THE CITY NOT SIMPLY ENFORCE THE PRESENT Sec. 3-24:

"It shall be unlawful for any dog owner to keep or have within the city a dog that habitually or repeatedly chases, snaps at, attacks, or barks at pedestrians, bicyclists or vehicles, or turns over garbage pails, or damages gardens, flowers or vegetables, or conducts itself so as to be a public nuisance. . . ."

WE FEEL THE PROPOSED LEASH LAW IS POTENTIALLY CRUEL TO ANIMALS AND IMPOSES A HARDSHIP UPON OWNERS OF DOGS WHO ARE UNABLE TO CONSTRUCT FENCES AROUND THEIR PROPERTY. THE CITY IS ALSO CONSIDERING RAISING THE REDEMPTION FEE FROM $5 TO $10 PER IMPOUNDED DOG, AND INCREASING THE DAILY FOOD AND CARE FEE FROM $1 TO $2.

WE URGE YOU TO ATTEND THE CITY COUNCIL MEETING THURSDAY, MARCH 6, AT 8 P.M. AT CITY HALL AND SPEAK AGAINST THE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO GREENVILLE'S ANIMAL ORDINANCE.

Planning National Bicentennial

Many local leaders met last week to begin planning for Pitt County's portion of the American Revolution Bicentennial celebration.

If it seems that we just ended a bicentennial celebration, that is correct. Last year we celebrated the 200th anniversary of the founding of Greenville very successfully.

The 1976 celebration is much broader, however. It will be nationwide and it commemorates the very founding of our nation. After the cynicism of the 1960s concerning what our nation has to offer, there can be no better time to regain an appreciation of the suffering that our forefathers endured to found the country. It will also be a time to reappraise what a great and promising nation we have.

The group last week organized a Bicentennial Community Council. Dr. Herbert R. Paschal, chairman of the Department of History and member of the N.C. Bicentennial Commission said

$3,000 has been appropriated by the Pitt Commissions to help finance the celebration. The Pitt County Historical Society will help develop an organization. The Society will sponsor a county history to be published in 1976 as a part of the celebration.

We are fortunate that area civic leaders and the Pitt Historical Society are active in making plans for celebrating the nation's bicentennial.

Our area is rich in history and that is something that we do not always fully appreciate. Eastern North Carolina was settled early by Europeans seeking a life in the New World.

Celebrating the 200th anniversary of our nation's birth is going to be a thrilling time for every American citizen, who truly believes he lives in the greatest nation on earth. Pitt County is going to be very much a part of this celebration and, already local leaders are making plans to assure its success.

SUMMER'S DREAMS BECOMING A NIGHTMARE!

$2,500 Car Is Possible

WASHINGTON—The automobile companies, who have had a tough time selling cars this year, have blamed everybody for bad business but themselves.

There has been an airlift of Detroit executives coming to Washington and testifying that the reason they've had such a bad year was because of antipollution devices, stronger bumpers and safety features that raised the price of the car to a point where Americans couldn't afford it. They have assured Washington that if they can just do away with all the safety equipment on their cars Americans would rush out to the showrooms and buy up everything they made.

Horace Zinkel, who developed the Accordion Hatchback (it looks like an accordion when it hits another car) is one of the strongest advocates of easing up on government safety regulations.

After testifying in front of Congress he granted me an interview.

"Heaven knows, Accordion Motors is for safety," he said. "But we have to think of other things, too, like weight and mileage. We can give the American people the best car that money can buy for $2,500 if Washington would just get off our backs."

"You could produce a car for $2,500?" I asked.

"Right. Here's a sketch of it."

I studied the sketch. "Why, there are no bumpers on it."

"That's correct. You eliminate bumpers from a car and you save 150 pounds. The only time you need bumpers is when you hit something like another car or a building. Our surveys show that only 10 per cent of all automobiles ever hit something else. There is no reason for everybody to pay extra money just because a few people are going to get in an accident."

I looked at the sketch again. "Where are the windshield wipers?"

"We've eliminated them. Windshield wipers add $35 to the cost of the car, and they use up energy. In the early days we put them on the models as optional equipment because a few of our customers complained it was hard to drive when it was raining or snowing outside. Then the government insisted they had to be on all cars. Why should people who don't want windshield wipers have to pay for them?"

"There don't seem to be any windows."

"You don't need windows on a good car. Our engineers discovered they could save 100 pounds by doing away with windows. Actually, if you eliminate windows from a car you don't need doors, which allows you a bonus in weight reduction of 500 pounds. Translated into gasoline consumption, a doorless automobile will give you 1.5 more miles to the gallon."

"You still have seats," I said.

Other Editors Say Where Is Justice?

(Washington Daily News)

Can true justice be realized in any case where the state offers to accept a guilty plea on second degree rape, the offer is rejected, and then the jury brings in a verdict of first degree rape and the judge sentences the defendant to death in the gas chamber?

Now had that defendant agreed to enter a plea of guilty to second degree rape, the maximum sentence he could have faced was life in prison.

This sums up part of the story of what happened recently in Durham county. The newspaper there says that the District Attorney Robert Farb agreed to accept the second degree rape plea.

A man's life is at stake. We do not know the color, the creed, the religion, or the economic state of the defendant in this case. We only know that he was tried on a charge of first degree rape, found guilty, and sentenced to die in the gas chamber. He is now on Death Row while the case is being appealed. And when the death sentence is given appeal is automatic.

A man's life is not a matter of a cold and analytical picture presented in a court room. It is not something which ought to hinge on some small technicality. Yet in this case and in many others in the criminal history of North Carolina, because a defendant did not choose to submit to a lesser plea, he finds himself sentenced to die.

Let us not forget that men have died in North Carolina under similar circumstances. We do not know what the future holds, but the emphasis right now must be centered around the question of life or death.

We do not contend that the defendant in this case had an unfair trial. We were not there for the trial and we do not know. But we do say that once the state agrees to accept a plea which would save a man's life, then under our court procedures, that willingness ought to serve throughout to save his life regardless of all else.

Today, we have a man from Raleigh county on Death Row in Raleigh under very similar circumstances. If the state is willing to let him live one minute and then unwilling the next, we have a right to ask where is justice.

Perhaps we should also ask "what is justice?"

Somehow the human side tells us that it is cruel and heartless to bargain for a man's life and then see the man lose this way.

Our search for justice may never be complete. At least until we as living humanity know what it is, how can we mete it out?

Willis A. Talton

To the editor:

Once again I am asking for your support in trying to enact a twenty-four hour leash law on dogs in the city limits of Greenville. I feel that this is needed for their protection as well as for the safety and welfare of our citizens. By dogs being allowed to run freely many of them are hit by cars, stolen, lost, poisoned, shot, beaten, and subjected to sickness from other dogs. Is this really being fair to one's dog?

Many people who do not own dogs as well as those who do are having to suffer because of dogs being allowed to run freely. Children and adults are being bitten and attacked while walking public streets and around their homes, riding bikes, jogging, and in their own yards. Elderly people who are being encouraged to walk for their health are either afraid to walk or are forced to carry sticks because of dogs running at large. What protection does a blind or otherwise handicapped person have against

Leash Law, Pro And Con Letters To The Editor

To the editor:

About four months ago I wrote a somewhat facetious letter advocating tighter controls for dogs in Greenville. Until recently my major complaint was against the feces on my yard and the overturned trash cans. I was fortunate (if that is the appropriate word) until now.

Last week my six-year-old son was bitten on the arm by a neighbor's dog. Fortunately, the dog did belong to a neighbor and, fortunately, it had had a rabies shot. But the dog was running free and unrestrained. Out of a wish to preserve harmony, I did not complain. How often does this happen in Greenville? Some children, as evidenced in the Hotline column, have not been so fortunate. The dogs have been unidentified and have escaped. Must this continue?

I have in the past months received or heard several caustic comments from dog owners. The comments have ranged from calling me asinine to statements that they would rather destroy their dog than abide by a leash law—you can tell these people really love their pets. What would their reaction be if I personally dug holes in their yards, relieved my bowels on their yards, scattered their garbage over a three yard area, and viciously bit their children? Would they just say "How nice" or "How cute"? Without question, they would be complaining and have me locked up. Why should the dogs be allowed to do these things unrestrained when I am forbidden to do so? I am also fed up with emotional pleas that the dogs are like children. My heart really bleeds. Would they also let their children run and play on heavily traveled streets and allow their children to roam freely about the town destroying property at all hours of the night? If so, then the Child Welfare Office must be kept pretty busy.

Finally, several people have noted that sterilization would relieve the problem. I agree, but that would not solve the problem until about four or five years from now. Greenville needs immediate and punitive action.

Lee Roger Taylor, Jr.

To the editor:

I agree that some type of moderate leash law is necessary. There is a City in Massachusetts that has one that works well. All dogs are confined from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. This protects City employees, school children, postmen and even joggers but allows the pets the daily exercise that is so necessary to their well being.

The following questions should be considered by our Council and interested citizens before they jump into a 24 hour leash law.

1. What do you plan to do with hundreds of pets that your Control Officer will pick up the first days of your new law?
2. Will he go in yards where pets are untied but in their own yards and pick them up? Knowing your officer as many do you may rest assured he will do just that.
3. Do you expect dog owners to continue to purchase City Dog Tags when they can't let their animal off a chain? The Tag was supposed to be identification in the event the pet was picked up for some reason or lost.
4. Why not charge a license fee for $25.00 for every unspayed female dog? This would cause owners to use a spaying program and cut down on so many unwanted dogs.

I know several elderly people living alone with a pet and with a 24 hour leash law will sadly have to have their dog put to sleep for they are unable to go for a walk. Please think about all of the people not just a few.

THIS AFTERNOON Big School Policy Shifts?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Rigid control by the General Assembly over purse strings, and a host of restrictive laws passed over a period of years, tend to work at cross purposes in operation of public schools in North Carolina—both locally and at the State Department of Public Instruction.

Far better, concludes a top-to-bottom investigation of public schools, that, "Legislative intent should be clearly spelled out in terms of the educational results desired. The state Board of Education, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the Local Education Agencies should be allowed maximum flexibility in efforts to implement that intent.

"There should also be a system of periodic public reporting whereby they give an accounting of the education results achieved

The overall thrust of the various recommendations work in the direction of establishing policy and standards for public schools at the state level, while providing wide flexibility for local schools to meet local needs.

Here are key provisions contained in the report resulting from an investigation by staff aides to

Strength For Today

CONTENTMENT

Contentment is sometimes a curse. If it arises from a complete satisfaction with the world as it is, then it is an evil thing. If a man's contentment is pure animal contentment, then every power of his soul atrophies under such a condition.

Where contentment arises from great faith, deep love for one's fellows, and the memory of an untroubled conscience, it is a blessing. But it is the opposite when it is an emotional response stemming from a lack of a sense of responsibility and the satisfaction of all the appetites.

The world's great souls have seldom been contented. All reformers, almost by definition, must be dissatisfied with conditions as they find them in order to gain the incentive to mount their reform campaigns. In religion this is particularly true. The saints always agonized over their sinful lives. It was this agony, plus striving for the good, that drove them on to sainthood.

A Strength In The Consumers

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "The strongest and most positive force in America is the innate common sense that resides within the nation's consumers," according to a man who has surveyed consumer attitudes and actions for years.

But, Albert Sindinger wonders, does public and private leadership also possess that quality.

"It is a basic fundamental trait that traditionally has allowed the consumer to out-think and out-manuever his and her own political and business leadership in the ceaseless game of self-preservation," says Sindinger.

Sindinger's market research and consumer polling firm, which operates out of Swarthmore, Pa., says it has logged more than four million telephone interviews with households over an 18-year period. It interviews every day about political, economic and marketing opinions, among others.

His organization has what amounts to a stethoscope on the grass roots. Sindinger was asked his opinion on what constitutes America's strength in the midst of economic adversity.

In responding, he commented upon the uncanny ability of consumers to perceive the truth and the inability of leaders to understand this.

"The consumers represent 90 per cent of the national public, the leadership only 10 per cent. Unfortunately, the minority tends to be rather inbred and gets its ideas from itself rather than from those impacted by its decisions," he stated.

In his opinion, the present economic disruptions are better understood by affected households than by the nation's leaders, who are mainly observers, and perhaps not very acutely aware or as well informed.

"The consumer, we have learned, is willing to listen as well as to talk, especially when he and she are being leveled with," he said.

"Getting it straight is so important that consumers have developed, literally, into walking antennae that field information from all sources. They get the word from their leadership through the news media, and at more basic levels from friends, fellow workers and relatives."

Sindinger maintains that "friends perennially beat the leadership when it comes to credibility. The consumer has trust in friends; otherwise they wouldn't remain as friends."

This sensitivity to information, Sindinger continued, "has allowed consumers to hone an uncanny knack for seeing through con jobs and balloons. Their survival is at stake if they don't."

"As a result, we find them to be far more perceptive and foresighted than their own bosses and political leaders in taking practical actions to cushion themselves against the hard times they perceive."

Rescue Unit Is Ready

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The use of a small force of Marines and helicopters is among contingency plans prepared by the Pentagon in case Americans need to be evacuated from the besieged Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

The Marines are aboard a helicopter carrier near the Gulf of Thailand and are said to number less than a battalion, which has about 800 men.

Another force of several hundred Marines was reported standing by on Okinawa in case it might be needed to help in any evacuation of an estimated 400 Americans now in Phnom Penh.

Pentagon sources stressed that the contingency plans are merely a precautionary measure and that there has been no order to prepare for an imminent evacuation.

The sources also said that any evacuation would probably first be attempted with commercial jetliners. Another plan reportedly calls for flying in U.S. Air Force C130 transports.

Meanwhile, the House Foreign Affairs Committee was examining how to proceed on President Ford's request for $222 million in emergency military aid to Cambodia.

Ford's request was suddenly thrust into the panel's domain Tuesday after the House foreign operations appropriations subcommittee dropped its plans to approve an appropriation and, at the same time, to vote an authorization of the funds.

Normal congressional procedure for spending money involves two laws. First, a bill is approved to authorize the expenditure. Later, a second bill approves the actual spending, known as an appropriation.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, which is empowered to authorize funds, has not yet acted on the emergency request for Cambodian aid. The appropriations subcommittee was prepared to take over that function and simultaneously appropriate the money, but Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., decided to wait until the Foreign Affairs Committee considered the request first.

The sewer question was turned down during the last presentation to the alderman, but property owners in the area are determined.

"The gas tank looks kind of funny," I commented. "It's made of Saranwrap, a specially treated cellophane that can hold twice the amount of fuel as a metal gas tank. By doing away with costly gas tanks we can save the consumer $75." "Where's the hood for the motor?" I asked. "It's optional. Some people like hoods; some people don't. There is no reason on earth why a hood should be made standard equipment." "It's a beautiful car," I had to admit. "Are you sure you can bring it in for $2,500?" "I'm certain of it," he said. Commission: FUNDING — The present system should be changed to provide more local flexibility in use of funds, relate to needs of students as well as numbers of students, and take into account local ability to pay and local tax effort. Two major blocks of money are involved: categorical funds voted by the General Assembly to meet a specific program need, and the system of per-student allocation of money. Categorical funding statewide ignores the fact that some local schools are "already spending adequately in a specific area," and are often "too small to have much effect in the small units and may be unneeded in larger units with adequate local budgets." Sometimes such grants do force local schools to meet a need, but when used to meet a need in only a few units, the system "imposes specific burdens statewide on all (local units)." Also, state funds are now distributed on a per-capita basis equally, while the needs of students vary and flexibility is needed locally.

Textbooks — The state selects those to be used locally. About $9 million a year is spent for textbooks, which largely determine the school curricula and programs. However, other funds are spent on supplemental materials (paperbacks, films, etc.) for a total of $30 million a year. The report finds that the State Department of Public Instruction has tried to increase the responsibilities of local schools in curriculum decisions, but having a Textbook Commission picking books to be used throughout the state "limits local responsibility." The solution, it is suggested, would be a Textbook Commission structured to "reject those materials not suitable for North Carolina (hopefully, a small number) thereby allowing local educators a much wider choice of materials."

STATE ACCREDITATION — State officials should continue to move into a role of service over regulation of local schools, and to accomplish that, local schools should meet accreditation standards denoting "a school that is purposefully, systematically and continuously striving to serve maximally the collective and individual needs of its students."

STATE STANDARDS — Overall policy and minimum standards should be spelled out at the state level, and communicated regularly and effectively to local school units to provide a "basic commonality of knowledge, skills and understanding and still allow for flexibility and choice on the part of local educators."

He Buys And Sells Govm't 'Leftovers'

By POHLA SMITH
GROVE CITY, Pa. (UPI) —

Fred Langner is the federal government's junkman. He also is a savior of sorts for persons trying to make ends meet in the nation's depressed economy.

Langner, 32, buys articles the government no longer wants—whether it be bulls, typewriters, coal, sports cars or nuts and bolts.

After his employes make any necessary repairs, the enterprising Vietnam veteran then sells the surplus at prices he says are "pretty cheap"—with a 30-day guarantee often included.

"I've set up a supermarket," Langner said. "You can walk through and it's just like a supermarket—anything you can imagine is on the shelves, and some things you can't imagine."

"One thing about the government surplus thing, it's really booming because of the economy, because I can sell everything pretty cheap."

Lining the bulging shelves of Langner's "Surplus Supermarket" are aerial cameras, calculators, latches, electrical equipment and hospital beds.

Outside you can find a wide assortment of heavy equipment, and trucks. And if you get there soon enough you also might be able to purchase two one-of-a-kind government rejects Langner recently obtained: a rebuilt-for-speed Corvette Stingray and a 1972 International Scout with only 36,000 miles and a brand-new transmission.

Many of the items Langner buys from the General Services Administration and the military need the special touch of the repairmen Langner employs. But many others, particularly items such as nuts and bolts, latches, and springs, are brand new, unloaded by the government because someone ordered too many of them.

Langner buys much of his stock sight unseen. A government catalogue might say "10,000 pounds of electronic equipment." It's up to him and his employes to sort out and salvage anything worth selling.

"They sell a lot of junk," Langner said. For instance he made the mistake of buying unseen 24,000 one-foot-long boat paddles—too small to be used by anyone except maybe a precocious six-month-old seaman.

But, Langner said, "On the whole, they have a pretty good program."

The Stingray, confiscated by the government because the owner carried narcotics in it, is "in pretty good shape," he said.

"The only thing, it was made to run—it has straight pipes and all—and it's not legal for Pennsylvania use."

The Scout also was a good buy. "The woman at the office, the Bureau of Mines down in Virginia someplace, she told my man it was misplaced," Langner said. "They didn't know who owned the vehicle, and they knew it needed a transmission, so they called Washington and they said to sell it."

Once Langner was able to buy up about 5,000 tons of coal at $4 per ton when a government building was being converted to gas heat. Since the purchase was made at the start of the energy crisis, he had no trouble selling the stock.

There's only one major item Langner may have trouble reselling: a 2,000 pound registered Devon bull donated by the late Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon to build up the herd at George Washington's Virginia birthplace.

"I don't know what I'm going to do with it," Langner said. "I'm trying to find a home for it."

Langner, who said he learned never to buy a surplus helicopter while piloting them in the Army, says he sometimes wonders why the government sells some of the still usable items it used taxpayers' money to buy.

"It's probably cheaper for them to sell some of the stuff than sort it out," he said. But, he added, "I think their program could be looked into a little bit."

Diet Of Finns Is 'Too Sweet'

By PHILIP M. STONE
HELSINKI (UPI) — Health officials have warned Finns that sugar is so dangerous they would ban it as a food additive if it were newly discovered. That's a bitter pill for some of the world's largest per capita sugar eaters.

Health officials have launched a campaign to cut in half the 97 pounds of sugar each Finn eats yearly on the average. Dentists say tooth decay is the country's most common physical complaint. The government also wants to reduce its sugar industry subsidy which cost taxpayers $55 million last year.

With the aid of health officials, the state-run television network produced two successive films condemning excess sugar use. The films, each shown nightly in prime time after the news, warned there was a direct relationship between excess sugar consumption and tooth decay and weight problems.

"If sugar at this moment were just discovered and all the currently known harmful effects were known, this kind of substance would not be approved as an added ingredient for food," said Dr. Heikki Tala, assistant dental director of the National Board of Health.

As the films ended their run, the government gave a $145,000 grant to the board of health for a campaign to reduce sugar use.

"It would be nice to think they gave us the money because of the health problem, but I'm afraid they did it to cut down on the subsidy," Tala said.

A sales manager for a large Finnish sugar company who asked he not be named explained the industry each year receives a government subsidy to remain competitive with world prices. He said the government wants to cut sugar use to save subsidy money.

"The government is politically reluctant to change the price of sugar," he said. "But if it doesn't, then the subsidy costs too much. So they began a campaign to stop consumption. It was a very nice solution. If they can say sugar is dangerous then they save money."

Tala and Seppo Vihtonen, the producer of the television films, denied the government had any part in suggesting or making the films.

"Already every third 2-year-old has cavities, more than 70 per cent of four-year-olds, and nearly every 10-year-old," Tala said in the films.

Dr. Tero Kangas, a specialist in diabetes, said, "As a result of sugar use there is overweight and because of that diabetes, high blood pressure, coronary artery diseases and wearing away of bones. Sugar is not necessary in food."

The films did not please the sugar industry. The food industry association complained the film was "biased, misleading, untrue, and made one-sided statements."

But the sugar industry itself may have made the greatest contribution to help cut sugar consumption when it raised retail prices recently by 14 per cent.

Asthma Relief

Is Being Tested

CHICAGO (UPI) — A new aerosol spray medication for relief of asthma is now being tested in the United States and shows great promise of offering substantial help to sufferers, says a report in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The U.S. product is known as triamcinolone acetonide. It will not be a cure-all for asthmatic patients but will be an important tool in coping with the attacks, an AMA official pointed out.

Little Alarm In Nobility Over Giscard's Edict

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's edict that French aristocrats may no longer use their titles at government parties has been greeted with more humor than hauteur.

France's nobility responded more with amusement than alarm at the latest presidential attempt to "democratize" tradition-bound, formal France. The new rule says nobility may have only "monsieur, madame or mademoiselle" on invitations for social affairs at the Elysee Palace, France's equivalent of the White House.

Only one member of the chateau and heirloom set, Marquis Michel de St. Pierre, denounced the ruling with any show of ire. He likened it to the Aug. 4, 1789 decree abolishing nobility titles.

"Our families received titles as the price of their blood spilled for the nation, which should cause the current regime to continue to respect us," he said.

But Gentry Marie-Blanche de Broglie laughed and said, "I'm indifferent."

Baroness Guy de Rothschild, a frequent palace guest, said, "We never use our titles in our work or officially at the Elysee anyway. But when we go to dinner in town with friends we are Baron and Baroness. It's like not kissing a lady's hand on the street. You use a title only socially, in privacy."

At the Jockey Club, elegant hangout for Parisians with pedigrees, the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudraye said, "I've just been talking to the club chairman, a duke, about this. The president's rule is amusing. Nobody can stop me from being a marquis, it's my blood and to hell with them."

"The other members think it's amusing, too, especially as Giscard is close to us," he added. "His uncles are titled members," a point disputed by some genealogists who say Giscard is a fake aristocrat.

The Countess de Naleche, at her central France manor house in Vouzeron, said, "We laugh so much about his new rule. It only affects a small number of people invited to the Elysee. At all other parties we still are Count and Countess."

There are a surprising number of aristocratic titles in use in the republic of "liberty, equality and fraternity."

Count Maurice de Puymege, head of Les Vieilles Noms de France, (old names of France), says France has 3,603 families of "authentic nobility," including 3,092 whose titles were granted by kings before the 1789 French revolution did away with them.

Napoleon reinstated those titles and added 234. Later monarchs added more. In addition there are about 15,000 fake titles that grace calling cards, Puymege says.

A foreigner living in Paris may discover his neighbor is a count and his landlady a countess. Nearly every page in the Paris telephone directory lists a title. Aristocrats can pay fees to have their titles on their passports.

The 1,674-page Bottin' Mondain directory of nobility lists aristocrats with their chateaux, race horses, medals or professions. It also informs the titled gentry about resorts, hunting and polo clubs, dancing schools, florists, tapestry makers, antique and jewelry dealers and the best years for wine.

Many aristocrats long ago lost their inherited wealth and hold ordinary jobs. The government is riddled with nobility, including Prince Michel Poniatowski, minister of interior.

To many nobles, Giscard's act was "political demagoguery." The president also refused to wear formal clothes and medals at his inauguration, dined at the home of an ordinary family, invited his garbage collectors to breakfast, sits in public seats in theaters and put the July 14 Revolution Day parade back on Bastille Square in the working class district where the revolution began.

Encouraged Inventors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Jefferson, first supervisor of the U.S. Patent Office when he was Secretary of State, was an inventor of note although he never applied for a patent.

Among his inventions was an improvement in the mold board of the plow, an important contribution to U.S. agricultural development. He also invented a folding chair or stool that could be used as a walking stick, and he developed many other ideas.

"Certainly an inventor ought to be allowed a right to the benefit of this invention for some certain time," he wrote. "Nobody wishes more than I do that ingenuity should receive liberal encouragement."

The cotton gin, invented by Eli Whitney, was first put to use in Washington, Ga., in 1783.

An Opera For Bicentennial

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Opera has commissioned a new opera for its American bicentennial celebration.

The opera will be composed by Andrew Imbrie, professor of music at the University of California in Berkeley, and librettist Oakley M. Hall. They will collaborate on a setting of Wallace Stegner's Pulitzer Prize novel, "Angel of Repose." The opera will be premiered during the 1976 season.

Pro-Death Penalty View Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP)—North Carolina's pro-death penalty position was supported Tuesday in a brief filed with the U.S. Supreme Court by the U.S. Justice Department.

The brief was filed in the pending appeal of Jesse Thurman Fowler who is on death row at Central Prison in Raleigh. Sixty-five persons are awaiting execution in North Carolina. Nationally, there are 185 persons on death row in 17 states.

The Justice Department argued that the 31 states and Congress that have reinstated capital punishment is evidence that society doesn't believe the death penalty is cruel and unusual punishment. Also, the federal agency argued that 185 persons waiting to die shows that juries find that punishment acceptable.

"We submit that it is utterly implausible that so many legislatures can, time and again, fail to reflect the will of the people concerning capital punishment," the Justice Department brief said.

The death penalty was ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 1972. The laws then on the books gave juries too much discretion in choosing who was to die, the court said.

Laws allowing capital punishment enacted since then mostly make the death penalty mandatory or require a review each time the penalty is assessed.

Fowler was sentenced to death for killing a companion after a quarrel over a $10 bill during a dice game. The North Carolina Supreme Court had allowed the state's old death penalty law to be continued until a new one was enacted. Fowler was sentenced under the old law.

Supreme Court sources say it is unlikely that Fowler's case will be heard unless Justice William O. Douglas recovers from his Dec. 31 stroke. The case may not be heard until the court's next term.

Attorneys representing Fowler are trying to have the death penalty outlawed under all circumstances. They argued that society has decided "that the penalty of death is both excessive and unacceptable."

As to the public, the department's brief said, "If there were overwhelming rejection of the death penalty in the community, juries would fail to reach verdicts condemning men to death."

N.Y. Court Fines Union

NEW YORK (AP) — The Newspaper and Mail Deliverers Union has been fined $100,000 for refusing to obey a court order to halt a wildcat strike against the Daily News. Revenue losses because of the strike have forced the paper to lay off about half its 5,000 employees.

State Supreme Court Justice Hyman Korn ordered the fine late Tuesday night after a last-ditch arbitration effort failed and the News' 900 truck drivers declared they would stay off the job for the third day.

Korn dismissed contempt charges against union president Carl Levy, who carried out court orders and read to the union membership a restraining order prohibiting the strike.

The deliverymen are protesting proposed schedule changes which threaten to cut built-in overtime, estimated by News and union officials to comprise about one-third the drivers' pay.

W.H. James, president and publisher of The News, said of the lay-offs, "We have no choice but to act as we are. In the present depressed business climate, we cannot tolerate heavy revenue losses without damaging the company on which all our livelihoods depend."

In a statement to the employees about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, James said, "In just the first two days of the strike, we have lost nearly $800,000 in advertising and circulation revenue."

James said the paper was ceasing publication at 3:30 p.m. today until further notice.

One Lawmaker Saved Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Manuel Lujan Jr. of New Mexico did a chore recently like so many other amateurs.

He and his staff painted his Washington offices.

The Republican was told by an architect that it would cost $9,100 to paint the three-room office complex.

Lujan bought paint for $48 and joined with his staff in spending eight hours on a Saturday painting the offices.

Co-Ops, Municipalities Reject VEPCO Offer

WARSAW, Va. (AP)—Nineteen Virginia and North Carolina electric cooperatives rejected as inequitable Tuesday the Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s latest proposed settlement of a dispute over higher wholesale electric power rates.

The co-ops and 21 municipalities in the two states are faced with increases of more than 30 per cent in the price they pay Veeco for power that they resell.

Negotiations have been under way since November, when the utility filed a rate increase request with the Federal Power Commission for a $21 million increase in wholesale power rates.

The FPC is to hold hearings in the matter May 13.

The wholesale power issue is not related to Veeco's $137 million rate increase request filed Monday with Virginia's State Corporation Commission.

Veeco officials said that because the cooperatives rejected its offer, the utility will begin billing its wholesale customers at the increased rates pending before the FPC.

Veeco has had permission since Feb. 22 to raise rates prior to the FPC decision. But E. B. Crutchfield, a Veeco vice president, said the utility had held off until the latest settlement offer could be made.

Crutchfield had said recently that prospects for a settlement were good and that agreement was expected shortly.

As a result of the increase, more than 500,000 farmers, homeowners and businessmen in Virginia and North Carolina can expect their electric bills to go up $3 to $6 for every 1,000 kilowatt hours used.

Neither Veeco nor the co-ops would disclose details of the proposed settlement. But Charles Jones, director of the Old Dominion Electric Cooperative, which had been handling the negotiations, called it a setback.

"We thought we were close to a settlement, but the latest offer from Veeco showed that we are a greater distance apart than we thought," he said.

The proposed rate increase "would, if approved, give Veeco a 15 per cent rate of return on its equity, more than any other class of consumers now pay for electricity," Jones said.

He said the FPC is not expected to approve the rate hike since it has never granted an electric utility that kind of return on equity before.

"We hope to continue to negotiate and to reach agreement before the FPC hearings open," he said. "But we are ready to fight Veeco's request if agreement cannot be reached."

Moose Join In Welcome

Greenville Moose lodge officers and members attended the Eastern North Carolina official visit by the Supreme Governor of the fraternity, in Goldsboro, Monday evening.

A chartered bus carried the delegation to the affair, marked by presence of representatives from a score or more lodges in the area as well as State Association officers and district officers.

Supreme Governor Armand Chiapori welcomed a large class of newly-enrolled members into the fraternity, describing for them the privileges they shared and the centers of Mooseheart and Moosehaven developed and maintained for the very young and for the elderly.

The Goldsboro lodge hosted the turnout at a dinner following the formal meeting.

Greenville lodge 885 was one of three lodges in the eastern area which cancelled their regular Monday night meeting in order to participate in the regional event.

Next Monday night's meeting of the Greenville lodge is expected to see final arrangements being made for the Mid-Year Conference of the State Moose Association in Greenville, March 14, 15 and 16.

ERA Effort In Illinois Stalled

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Efforts to win approval of the Equal Rights Amendment in Illinois have stalled in the state Senate.

A vote scheduled Tuesday on a resolution ratifying an Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was postponed by the sponsor, who said she didn't have enough votes on the floor to pass it.

Sen. Esther Saperstein, a Chicago Democrat, said she did not know when she would call the resolution for a vote.

The proposed amendment would ban discrimination on the basis of sex. It has failed to win approval in three previous sessions of the Illinois General Assembly.

Thirty-four states have ratified the proposed amendment, with ratification by 38 needed before March 1979 for it to become part of the Constitution.

Charge Another

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP)—A second young man was charged Tuesday in a fire which destroyed seven downtown businesses on Feb. 22.

Police identified him as William Earl Green, 23. They said he was charged with unlawful burning of buildings and with breaking and entering a hardware store.

Earlier, William Jerome Alexander, 16, was charged with the same offenses.

Police Chief John Worsham theorized that the fire started while they tried to burn a lock off the rear of a television store with a butane torch they had stolen from a hardware store.

NAMED FOR HER—Channelview (Texas) is planning to name a new $3.5 million junior high school for Alice Johnson, above, a cleaning woman who has worked for the school district 18 years. "Imagine them naming a school after a broom pusher," she said. "It makes me real proud." (AP Wirephoto)

Martin County Board Selects New Principal

WILLIAMSTON—The Martin County Board of Education on Monday took action to name a principal for the new high school scheduled to open in September.

N.C. Hyman, now principal of Oak City High School, was chosen as the first principal to serve in Roanoke High School near Gold Point, which will be a consolidated high school serving the western portion of Martin County now served by the Robersonville and Oak City High Schools.

In connection with Roanoke High School, architect Leslie Boney of Wilmington gave the board a status report and assured that based on current progress, the school would be ready for occupancy by the scheduled date of August.

Following a rejection by the Jamesville Town Board of an offer to sue the Jamesville Township School as a recreation center on a lease basis, the Martin County Board voted to place the school and the site up for sale. The site and building will be advertised at a future date for sale purposes.

In another action, the board voted to offer an unused building as an office building for the Northeastern Regional Education Center. Currently, the center, which covers a 17 county area, is located in Grifton. The Williamston site would serve to place the education office in a more central location within the 17 county areas.

The bill to add a seventh board member to the Martin County Board of Education, is expected to receive final legislative approval within a short time. Once approved, the board will meet in a special session to name a person to fill the newly created board position.

Board members heard a report on the possibility of special insurance to cover use of school activity buses by groups other than school groups. An attempt is being made to work out an insurance plan that would give adequate coverage for groups using the buses and at the same time provide protection for board members.

In a final action, several new staff members for the county's school system were approved to fill vacancies.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — It costs $32 a day to keep a man in a minimum-security federal prison. It costs $15 a day to send him to a state university and hopefully keep him from returning behind bars.

It was these figures that led to a rehabilitation project in which federal prisoners attend the University of California at Santa Barbara and live adjacent to the campus.

"This program has a lot of potential," said Willie Gavin, one of convicts. "I hope it can be extended to every state university and every prison in the country."

"They have been average to superior students," said Marilyn Frantz, director of the year-old program. "Many of them have been model students."

Fred Dickson Jr., western regional administrator of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, said it normally takes three to five years to determine if a program is working, but he believes this one is a success so far.

"They (convict-students) are not radicals or revolutionaries," said Gavin, 41, whose ambition on graduation is to get a public service job. "All they want is a chance to get an education or learn a vocation so that when they come out they have something to do and won't have to return to prison."

The 15 men and five women in the Residential Study Release Program (RSRP) have been convicted of so-called victimless crimes — mainly narcotics offenses — and are within a year of parole or mandatory release.

While several thousand federal prisoners across the country are attending colleges, Karl Borgstrom, an assistant UCSB dean, said the program here is the only one in which the prisoners don't return to their cells at night.

The university is carrying out the pilot project on contract for the Bureau of Prisons.

Since the program began last March, 15 "residents," as they are called, have gone through it and continued their education after release.

One is working in marine biology in Hawaii, two others are working elsewhere, one is attending the University of California at Los Angeles and the others are continuing studies at UCSB.

Mrs. Frantz said it has helped ease the pains of adjustment and transition from incarceration to civilian life through a community-based program. The convict-students have to meet the same academic admission standards as all regular applicants.

"But many of them are older than normal university students with their ages ranging from 23 to 40," said Borgstrom. "Also they must be juniors or seniors and they must have a specific education goal in mind before they can be accepted here."

Although they enjoy the same regular privileges and rights as all students, the residents must meet a curfew that doesn't apply to other students.

On weekdays they must be in their apartments by 11:30 p.m. and on weekends by 1 a.m. To leave the campus they must obtain permission and specify where they are going and when they will return.

"We do not treat them like children but we have to have to know where they are and what they are doing," said Mrs. Frantz.

She said that there has been very little negative reaction against them from other students or the community.

"Generally they have done a very good job of holding each other accountable for their actions," said Borgstrom. "Basically the aim is to allow them to do anything that other students do so long as they behave in a manner that is appropriate to the university."

"To my knowledge none of them has done anything that has created a problem."

Church Property Purchase Closed

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—The Farmville Commissioners Monday afternoon closed the purchase of the Second Christian Church property at the corner of S. George Street and Acton Place here for recreational purposes.

The price for the land, church building, and parsonage was $30,000.

A letter of appreciation was read at last night's regular Board meeting. Signers were members of the Senior Citizens'

Club, who plan to meet in one of the buildings.

Town Administrator W. A. Martin was given the go-ahead to look into the acquisition of an additional police car, to be purchased with 50 per cent matching funds from the Governor's Highway Safety Committee.

The Rev. Denmark Sugg was appointed to the Grievance Committee of the Farmville Housing Authority.

It was announced that the Mayors' Day Conference will be held March 18.

A request by Helen Tugwell for the tiling of a ditch adjacent to Bynum Drive was discussed. The Commissioners agreed the town should be responsible for installing the 220 feet of tile, as soon as the money is available.

A committee composed of J. A. Wooten, Jack Lewis, Louis Williams, and Andy Martin was asked to investigate the cost of Christmas decorations for the town. Last year's decorations cost $720 to rent.

An estimated $3,875 property damage resulted from a series of five collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage reported resulted from a 7:40 p.m. mishap on Gum Road, 66 feet West of the Washington Street intersection and involved a parked car owned by Gerald Wayne Buck of 1311 North Washington St. and a car driven by Grover Lee Smith of 108 South Jarvis St.

Investigators, who charged Smith with driving under the influence and driving after his license had been permanently revoked, estimated damage at $1,250 to the Buck car and $900 to the Smith vehicle.

Smith was reported injured in the mishap.

Robert Joseph Lucas Jr. of 308 Crown Point Rd. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 1:52 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 15 feet East of the Kirkland Drive intersection.

Officers reported the Lucas car collided with a vehicle driven by Terry Johnson Dixon of 103 Cherry Ct., resulting in an estimated $250 damage to the Dixon auto and $200 damage to the Lucas vehicle.

Hardy Williams of 100A Cox St. was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a 9:18 p.m. collision on Vanderbilt Lane, 100 feet East of the Bancroft Ave. intersection.

Officers said the Williams vehicle collided with a parked car owned by Christopher Fleming of 1304 Colonial Ave. Damage was estimated at $200 to each of the two autos.

Investigation of two other collisions is continuing.

Police reported cars driven by Lana Swanson Shelton of Slay-Dorm and William Thomas Edwards of Kinston collided about 3:35 p.m. in the 2200 Block of Dickinson Ave. causing an estimated $300 damage to the Shelton vehicle and $200 damage to the Edwards car.

The other mishap occurred about 2:40 p.m. at the intersection of Evans Street and Greenville Boulevard and involved vehicles driven by Julius Linwood Stoneham of 1311 North Overlook Dr. and Alberta P. Cargile of Robersonville.

Damage was estimated at $175 to the Stoneham van and $200 to the Cargile auto.

Six Walked Out Of Jail

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Police said six prisoners, led by a man clad in a deputy sheriff's uniform and carrying a gun, escaped from the Portsmouth city jail early today.

Three of the escapees were reported recaptured in the area of the Civic Center shortly after the jailbreak. Police said one of the three still at large apparently was armed.

Police from Portsmouth, Norfolk and Chesapeake joined forces in setting up roadblocks throughout the area in an effort to apprehend the escapees.

Details of the jailbreak, which took place just before 7 a.m., were not immediately available, but the prisoners who escaped reportedly were on the sixth floor of the lockup.

There was no immediate explanation of how the prisoner had obtained the deputy's uniform and the gun.

Portsmouth Police Officer R. B. Massey identified those recaptured as Michael Thomas, Philip High and Michael Lancaster.

Still at large, Massey said, were Warren Ketchum, Lon Cahoon and William "Choo-Choo" Potts.

In early reports on the jailbreak, police had reported that between 20 and 30 prisoners broke from the jail.

Driver Jailed After Chase

Ben Allen Jones, 33, of Route 1, Vanceboro was jailed here early today following a chase that led Greenville Police into the edge of Craven County before the Jones car ran into a roadside ditch and wrecked.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Jones was charged with careless and reckless driving, failure to stop for a blue light and siren and failing to stop for a red light.

He noted that Pitt County Sheriff's Deputies assisted in the chase that began at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Charles Street, about 3:30 a.m.

Humane Society Meets Tonight

The Pitt County Humane Society will meet tonight at eight o'clock at Planters Bank downtown.

The election of officers for the new year will be held during the business meeting.

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Dr. Tom L. Linton has resigned as director of the North Carolina Office of Marine Affairs to become director of environmental studies for the state of Victoria at Melbourne, Australia.

Linton, an advocate of environmental protection laws, was a key figure in the passage of North Carolina's Coastal Area Land-Management Act last year.

The 39-year-old native of Carlisle, Tex., was assistant professor of zoology and forestry at the University of Georgia before going to work for the North Carolina state government. His resignation is effective April 30.

ERA Proponents Speak At Hearing

By CATHY STEELE ROCHE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lobbyist for the Equal Rights Amendment told the North Carolina House Constitutional Amendments Committee on Tuesday that without ERA it would take 50 years to eliminate discrimination against women under law.

Former legislator Howard Twiggs was among ERA proponents who addressed the first public hearing on the federal amendment. Opponents are scheduled to present their views to the committee next Tuesday.
Gladys Tillett of Charlotte, a grandmother of 10 and veteran of the battle for women's suffrage, said, "The intent of the amendment is to write women into the Constitution of the United States."

She said the amendment is needed to define women's legal status as free and equal. Mrs. Tillett said the Constitution does not define women's legal status and under English common law women are inferior.

Grace Rohrer, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, said women are taught that they are inferior and have been made to fear any diversion from traditional roles.

Mrs. Rohrer said women who oppose ERA are afraid that the amendment will threaten their safe position. "Basically all women resent the implication that they are inferior, but it is so ingrained in them that they can't cope that they are fearful of being put to the test," she said.

The defeat of ERA will reinforce the concept that women are inferior, not able to cope with life," Mrs. Rohrer said. She added, "Our country cannot afford any longer to waste 53 per cent of its resources."

Betty Barber, executive director of the state Commission on Education and Employment of Women, said women face discrimination in job recruitment, hiring, salaries and promotions.

"Men make more money in every occupational category, and at every educational level," she said. She said the median income for working women in North Carolina is $3,500 a year, while the median income for men is $5,723.

Twiggs told the hearing that the amendment deals with the status of women under the law and does not legislate social relationships. "The amendment refers to equality of rights under the law and not to private relationships between husband and wife," he said.

Twiggs said the amendment is no broader than others that have become part of the U.S. Constitution and said interpretation would be based on congressional intent, as recorded in the debate on ERA.

He said the debate in Congress made it clear that a parent of either sex would be exempt from the draft, if conscription were reinstated. Twiggs said the military would use sex neutral physical standards that would nevertheless be likely to exclude women from combat and other heavy jobs.

Twiggs said the legislature should not be concerned that the federal government will interfere with North Carolina laws. He said the state would have two years to make any necessary changes in its statutes after the amendment is ratified and before it takes effect.

Addressing himself to opponents' contentions that ERA would require men and women to share public toilet facilities, Twiggs said the right to privacy could coexist in the constitution with ERA. He said a 1955 U.S. Supreme Court decision established privacy as a constitutional right and the Equal Rights Amendment would not supercede that.

Twiggs said that the congressional record on ERA indicates clearly that separate bathrooms were intended.

Revamped Utility Law Okayed By Senate, Now Before House

Rockingham, sponsor of the measure was joined by other senators in warning that there was no assurance the bill would lower power rates.

"We have never said this bill gave assurance of lower rates," Webster said. He added that "this bill is what the people of North Carolina wanted."

Several senators emphasized during discussion of the measure that they did not want to take any action to jeopardize the economic viability of North Carolina's private power companies.

"I do not want to be a part of the destruction of private ownership of power in this or any other state," said Sen. Cy Bahakel, D-Mecklenburg. Bahakel told the Senate Duke Power Co. had contributed much to his district.

Bahakel and other senators agreed, however, that the bill would do no harm to the power companies.

The bill would replace the fuel clause with a provision under which utility firm could get speedy hearings to compensate for increased fuel costs. The bill says decisions in such cases should be made within 90 days.

The Senate approved an amendment to the portion of the bill repealing the forward test period to permit new information to be introduced in a rate case until the conclusion of a Utilities Commission hearing.

The amendment brought the section of the Senate bill into conformity with a House-passed measure that requires utilities to base rate requests on an historical test period.

Winterville Bd. Sets Hearing On Annexation

WINTERVILLE—The Winterville Board of Aldermen Monday night set Monday, March 24, as the date for a public hearing to discuss the annexation of Shamrock Terrace Section Three into the town limits.

Owners of the property, located adjacent to the southside of East Main Street, and the westside of Tar Road, have asked that the subdivision be annexed.

The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal building.

The board approved the recommendations from the Special House Numbering Committee and the Winterville Planning Board for the numbering of houses and streets within the town limits. The recommendations are now being studied and an ordinance will be adopted at the next board meeting.

It is hoped the numbering will be completed within the next two months.

The committee was commended for the fine job they did in preparing the house numbering report. The study was done with the assistance of the North Carolina Economic and Natural Resources.

Edward Stanfield of the Department of Economic and Natural Resources, appeared before the board to discuss the need for a flood control program in the Winterville area. The town board agreed to file the necessary applications so the town would be eligible for the flood control program.

William Little of the Reedy Branch Community petitioned the town seeking the expansion of town water lines in the Reedy Branch area. Mayor Walter Dail asked Little to find out how many people in his neighborhood would be willing to tap on the water lines and report back to the board at their April meeting.

If the proposed water line extension is approved, the line would be tapped on at Pitt Technical Institute, down the Renston Road and into the Town of Winterville.

The board approved payment to Taylor Iron Works and Supplies for estimate three and McDavid and Associates for inspection fees.

The money, paid from the construction account, totaled $54,997.52 to Taylor Iron Works for the elevation tank and $1,222.17 for McDavid.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles explained the town has received a partial payment grant totaling $30,000 from the Clean Water Act. It is expected the Town of Winterville will receive a total of $90,000 from the Clean Water Act to help finance their expansion program which is currently being carried out.

Fire Chief Seth Cayton told the board that he had received a letter from the North Carolina Fire Insurance Rating Bureau that the fire department must secure a new fire truck to replace an old truck that is now being used by the department. A new fire truck would be used by both the town and rural fire departments.

Subway Toll Set At 41

LONDON (AP) — Recovery crews dragged the mutilated body of the engineer from his crushed driver's cab during the night, bringing the final death toll in London's worst subway disaster to 41, London Transport officials said.

Fifteen other bodies were removed from the train earlier Tuesday. The first three coaches of the train were telescoped when it ran past a station in the financial district last Friday and slammed into a stone wall. Eighty other passengers were injured, five of them seriously.

Forensic experts began examining the body of 55-year-old Leslie Newson, who was driving the train packed with commuters. One theory was that he suffered a heart attack. But if he did, "the train should have been stopped by the 'dead man's handle,' which is mounted on a spring and snaps into the braking position if the driver takes his hand from it.

Transport officials said drivers could neutralize this spring action to avoid the strain of constantly holding the handle in position. But they said there was no evidence Newson did this.

Workers took photographs of the driving controls and other equipment to be used in the investigation into the cause of the crash.

Clinic Entered And Robbed

Two tape recorders, valued at $270, were reported stolen from the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic at 1827 West Sixth St. in a break-in.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said the break-in was reported at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. Entrance to the building was gained by forcing open a window, he explained.

The Amazon River has 1,100 tributaries.

Friends Of Animals Appoint 2nd Agent

Friends of Animals, Inc. has appointed Nicole Aronx of 107 South Harding St. as its second agent in Greenville.

Dr. Aronson will join Liz Whalen in the local FoA Reduced-Fee spaying and neutering program for pet animals. A non-profit voluntary organization, Friends of Animals promotes the welfare of acts and dogs in American by helping to curtail excess breeding.

According to FoA surveys, homes exist for only eight million of the 33 million puppies and kittens born each year in the U. S. Between four and six million unwanted and stray animals are destroyed annually by pounds and shelters, leaving as many as 20 million dogs and cats to abandonment, starvation or death on the highway.

FoA recommends that pet owners have their animals spayed or neutered, simple surgical procedures which render dogs and cats sterile, and end all mating urges.

Not only are neutered animals unable to reproduce but they are usually better-behaved and more content pets.

Pet owners in the Greenville area who cannot afford the complete veterinarian's fee for the spaying or neutering operation may seek help from the FoA by telephoning Dr. Aronson at 752-2895 or Ms. Whalen at 758-5617.

Ask Report On State Funding Of 'Soul City'

RALEIGH (AP)—A North Carolina legislative committee wants to find out "just what the state has put into Soul City," a project in Warren County.

The request from the House Base Budget Committee was prompted by Rep. John Ed Davenport, D-Nash, and Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

The committee directed Tuesday that Secretary of Administration Bruce Lentz produce records of state funding in the project for the new town.

The News and Observer reported over the weekend that the federal government has pledged more than $19 million to the Soul City project, but that, six years after the announcement, "there is no industry there, no shops, no houses—no Soul City."

Davenport said he wanted "a list of just what the state has put into Soul City."

30,000 Signed Gas Petition

RALEIGH (AP)—The executive director of the North Carolina Service Stations Association says a petition will be presented to the Tar Heel congressional delegation opposing gasoline rationing and a federal gas tax.

Avery C. Upchurch said more than 30,000 North Carolina motorists have signed the petition which he plans to present at a luncheon in Washington Thursday.

Evidence Of Another Ice Age?

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the last decade, the Arctic ice and snow cap has expanded 12 per cent, and for the first time in this century, ships making for Iceland ports have been impeded by drifting ice.

In England, the average growing season is a week shorter than in 1950, and in the United States the armadillo is retreating from the Midwest to the South.

In Africa, the Sahara desert is creeping southward and six years of drought in the Sahel region have only recently been interrupted by rain.

In the United States, corn crops fell off last year because of a freakish combination of excess spring rains and summer drought; great floods ruined the Bangladesh harvest; drought ravaged large parts of India.

Many climatologists see these signs as evidence that a significant shift in climate is taking place — a shift that could be the forerunner of an Ice Age like that which gripped much of the Northern Hemisphere before retreating 10,000 years ago.

During that period, massive ice sheets half a mile thick spread down from the Arctic burying what is now Canada and the Northern part of the United States. In Europe and Asia, ice covered Scandinavia and reached to present-day France, Germany, Austria and central Russia.

Equatorial regions became extremely dry because of the upset in weather balance and changing patterns of wind which create climate around the globe.

No scientist is forecasting a full-scale Ice Age soon, but some predict that in a few decades there might be little ice ages like the ones which plagued Europe with severe winters from 1430 to 1850.

At the very least, some experts foresee troublesome changes in global temperatures and rainfall patterns that could seriously jeopardize the earth's ability to feed itself.

One statistic stands out: a study of temperatures around the globe shows the atmosphere has been growing gradually cooler for 30 years. The total drop is less than one degree, but in terms of meteorology, that is significant.

Scientists disagree sharply about the cause of the earth's cooling. A wealth of observations from weather satellites and other new instruments show its major effect, however: a gradual expansion in recent years of the so-called circumpolar vortex — the great icy winds that sweep from west to east around the top and bottom of the planet.

Widening of this vortex has been the prime cause of Africa's drought, blocking moisture-bearing equatorial winds from dumping rainfall on the parched soil. The drought which hit the Corn Belt last summer resulted when moist westerly winds from the Pacific were deflected north over Canada and moist winds from the Gulf of Mexico failed to reach the Midwest.

A group of prominent scientists last month finished a two-year study which concludes that changes in the earth's climate are inevitable and that mankind must learn to predict these variations.

"Change of climate, even if sustained for only a few years' time, could seriously disrupt" the way we use our resources, the scientists said in the report, released by the National Academy of Sciences. "We simply cannot afford to arrive unprepared at the doorstep of a natural or man-made climatic catastrophe."

The panel reported that without doubt, colder climate will come, but there was no consensus about the magnitude or rapidity of the transition from warmth to cold.

The scientists also expressed concern over the increasing importance of man's effects on climate. They said it is unclear whether the increased levels of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, caused by burning fuel, dust or other pollutants, will alter temperature.

Reid Bryson of the Institute for Environmental Studies at the University of Wisconsin is a leading climatologist who believes dust of various kinds blocks some of the sun's energy from reaching earth. A major cause is volcanic dust, but man also plays a role, he says.

Bryson and others feel the increase of carbon dioxide from burning fossil fuels contribute to the warming trend early in this century through what is called the "greenhouse effect." The carbon helped to trap the sun's energy after it had entered the atmosphere, and this increased the planet's heat.

Bryson believes that sometime after 1930 the cooling effect of more dust in the atmosphere began to overtake the heating effect of carbon dioxide.

Bryson has many supporters. Others aren't convinced.

Donald Gilman, chief of the long-range prediction group of the National Weather Service, says: "I tend to be skeptical on the whole about the changing climate and some of the things that are being speculated upon."

As for the recent Corn Belt drought, he leans to a theory that such dry spells occur approximately every 20 years for unknown reasons.

The National Academy of Sciences panel recommended a federally-funded research program starting at $18 million a year and increasing gradually to $67 million a year by 1980.

Meanwhile, the United States, Russia and scores of other nations will cooperate in a major effort to decipher the physical basis of the world's climate. This international get-together is called GARP — Global Atmospheric Research Program.

The ultimate goal is to understand the physical basis of climate in order to increase the accuracy of forecasting from a day to several weeks ahead.

Eventually, the computer might be able to predict weather on a year-to-year basis, making it possible to plan ahead for drought, flood, cyclone or hurricane.

ENERGY FROM SPACE—This artist's conception, released by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, shows a solar satellite power station which is being studied under a contract to NASA's Lewis Research Center in Cleveland, Ohio. The Satellite would convert the sun's radiation into electricity which would be transformed to microwaves and transmitted to Earth. A receiving station would reconver the incoming microwaves into direct current electricity. (AP Wirephoto)

Tokyo Children Appear Losing Old Conscience

By ARNOLD DIBBLE
TOKYO (UPI) — Tokyo is a city where parents generally need not worry, although many probably do, if their children are not home by dark.

This, the largest city in the world, is probably the safest city in the world. Crime in some categories is actually decreasing.

But some shadows, if not deep clouds, lie ahead.

Many Japanese parents were shocked and perhaps hurt to learn that one in three of every Japanese male school students is a shoplifter — either a one-time offender or a habitual lightfinger.

The report was made public by the Metropolitan Police Department, which was clearly more interested in the portents for the future than in the enormity of the crime.

The MPD said shoplifting by juveniles shows that today's youngsters are losing their "crime consciousness," their sense of right and wrong. A noted critic on educational problems warned that the trend probably would spread.

The department said 8,331 minors were picked up for stealing goods from stores last year. This reflects an increase of nearly 200 per cent in the past five years, and it is nationwide.

One band of 10 junior high school boys stole merchandise worth more than $1,700 in one month alone. Shoplifting accounted for half the juvenile cases police handled last year, and there has been a marked increase among primary school pupils.

According to a questionnaire, most students seemed to look upon this pilfering as a sport or a game.

The situation has become so serious that the MPD has asked the Department of Education to take urgent steps. With the start of the new school year in April, the department promises to distribute a new manual on the students' responsibility in ending shoplifting.

Compared with the United States, Japan's crime figures are impressive even though its population is half of America's.

For the latest year's reporting period, Japan had 2,048 cases of manslaughter, 4,179 rapes and 2,000 cases of armed robbery; the U.S., 19,509 cases of manslaughter, 51,002 rapes and 382,683 cases of armed robbery.

Police and social observers say the main reasons for the crime rate are Japan's total ban on hand guns and the "cold turkey" approach to narcotics, which makes it an almost unknown problem here. (One foreigner spent a year in jail because just a few crumbs of marijuana were found in his coat pocket.)

Add to this one of the best trained police forces in the world where recruits must attend training school for six to 12 months. They learn the traditional Japanese martial arts, including judo, kendo and karate.

But this shoplifting is a troubling thing for the future. The MPD, in effect warned: Parents, if you wonder what your boy children are doing today, the odds are one in three they're out shoplifting.

Viet Vets' Benefit Laws Are Bolstered

Congress recently amended and strengthened the Vietnam-Era Veteran Readjustment Assistance Act to include persons who had not been given veterans preference. This new law improves and expands the veterans employment service and provides other veterans benefits.

Kendrick Taylor, Veteran Employment Representative with the Greenville Employment Security Commission, stated that this extension of employment preference and priority should have a significant effect on the families of some servicemen.

Preferential job counseling, training and placement services provided to eligible veterans will now be extended to three groups. First, spouses of veterans who die of a service-connected disability will now receive veterans preference. Also to receive preferential treatment are the spouses of the active duty members of the Armed Forces who, at the time of spouses application for unemployment assistance have been listed for more than 90 days as either missing in action or captured in line of duty. Finally, spouses of veterans who are totally disabled or who died from service-connected disability will be treated as veterans for employment purposes.

Any person who is qualified to receive these services or anybody that has any employment question is invited to visit the local Employment Security office at 1002 South Evans St. and discuss them with the Veterans Employment Representative or Placement Supervisor.

Could See New 25-Year-High

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — In this year of increased demand for coal, Pennsylvania could produce 100 million tons — highest in a quarter century — according to the Keystone Bituminous Coal Association.

The association says adequate transportation facilities and increased productivity are the keys to reaching the figure.

Reviewers Urge Continuing 'Operation Reach Out'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"The philosophy of this program shows that these are people who really care and who have a concern for what happens to people who have been led to believe that society really does not care what happens to them."

The statement above is a comment from the report of one of four reviewers from a Management Review Team evaluating the "Operation Reach Out" project in the Greenville City Schools. The team came from the office of the State Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh.

The reviewers were recently in Greenville to assess the total program, one that has been funded under Title III ESEA federal funds.

With federal funding at an end for this program, one of the unanimous recommendations made by each of the four reviewers is that "Operation Reach Out" be continued with local funding sources.

Recommendations also included the desirability of not only continuing the program, but expanding it to cover more needy students.

Federal funds were allocated for a three-year period, with an understanding at the time of initial allocation that federal assistance would terminate, and that any continuation or further development would have to be from sources other than federal funds.

Under the overall direction of Mrs. Ann Harrison, Director of Pupil Personnel and Exceptional Children for the Greenville City Schools, the first phase of the project was the establishment of the P-Vac (Pre-Vocational Activities Center) at Aycock Junior High School. Later, the Optional Program, an outgrowth of P-VAC, was added at Third Street Elementary School. The Optional Program is designed to provide continued education to drop outs from junior and senior high school. The title "Operation Reach Out" covers both the P-Vac and the Optional Programs.

Some of the tangible results evident over the three-year period are provided in statistics maintained. For example, 89.3 per cent of the students participating in the program are still in school compared to 55.7 per cent of students not receiving Operation Reach Out services.

Other significant figures show that for grades 8-12 there were 34 expulsions during the 1971-72 school year; 18 in 1972-73; down to 13 in 1973-74; and only two expulsions took place in the first semester of the 1974-75 school year.

A reading of the total reports made by the Management Review team shows that the basic goals which such programs or projects are intended to achieve have been more than fully met in the Greenville program.

This includes objectives such as: keeping students in school; improving attitudes and the behavior pattern of students with particular problems; developing pre-vocational skills; and receiving community support.

Community support, primarily in the form of providing part time work to older students in the Optional Program, was cited favorably by the reviewers as one of the more positive developments adding to the effectiveness of "Operation Reach Out."

Currently, the two staff groups working under Mrs. Harrison in the two programs are: P-VAC (at Aycock Junior High) — Nancy Walters, Joe Daversa and Sheila Wilson, instructors; and Harold White and Pat Daniels, para-professionals. The Optional Program staff at Third Street School includes Jerry Miller, director of the Learning Lab, Mavis Williams, instructor, Tony Gray, School Social Worker-Coordinator, and Cathy Powell, Guidance Aide.

In addition, guidance counselor personnel in the junior and senior high school system give assistance to students involved in P-Vac and the Optional Program.

One reviewer looks at the Greenville "Operation Reach Out" program with this hopeful attitude: "The P-Vac program, the optional school, the learning labs have the potential of becoming a model for other units of the area and of the State."

Paul Rasberry, principal of Aycock Junior High, said about the P-Vac program: "This program meets the need of a certain type of student which regular academic courses do not meet. The students involved in this program do need a special program, and in P-Vac they have an opportunity to study in a situation which meets their need much better than a regular program."

Grownups Fear Dealing With Death, Dying

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD
BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A University of California psychologist thinks children are one of his most valuable allies in fighting to end the stereotype of death as "a threatening Grim Reaper."

Dr. Charles Garfield, whose lectures draw an overflow enrollment, says his research shows that in Western cultures fear is the overriding attitude toward death and the dying.

"A perfect example of this is the differing way children and adults in our society approach a terminally ill person," he said.

Garfield said he and his wife, Linda, an elementary school teacher, joined forces and brought children to a local veterans hospital.

"The therapeutic value of these kids was incredible," Garfield said.

He said that adults usually are "frozen" in their dealings with those approaching death.

"They say, 'I don't know how to deal with him,'" Garfield added. "But kids aren't subject to these conventions. They'll go right in and play with the ill person and treat them as if nothing is wrong."

The last thing a terminally ill person needs, he said, is for people to hide behind a facade.

Garfield hopes to someday establish a "center for dying, a hospital that has only terminally ill patients." He is currently working at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco.

Garfield also has established a free phone-in service for those seeking help in facing death.

The service draws on counseling resources in psychology, psychiatry, social work, the clergy, nursing or medicine.

All this is aimed at turning the traditional concept of death "as a threatening Grim Reaper figure to an inevitable stage of existence that can often be approached without fear, confusion and denial."

Traditional Eastern cultures are much more open in dealing with the final phase of life, he said, even to having "dying places" where one can die in peace with others.

"Picking the place to die can be very important. Often I've seen a person want to go home to die but the doctor wouldn't let him."

Garfield recalled a terminally ill cancer patient who wanted to return to his birthplace in the East and die there.

"He kept pointing to the guy in the bed next to him who had tubes hanging out all over him, and telling the doctor: 'I don't want to be like that. My time has come. Let me die in peace.'"

Doctors still insisted that the man not be allowed to return home to die.

Garfield says more professionals, and particularly physicians, should be trained and sensitized in the psychological needs of dying patients.

"Right now most of my students are nurses and clergymen," he said.

Religion, Garfield feels, can play a very important part in helping an individual in the final moments.

"However, it can't be a sudden thing. You can't just pick up the Bible and expect results."

Garfield said that in order for religion to play an important part it has "to be the result of a firm, almost life-long belief."

Elderly Roman Catholic women, he said, face death far better than most groups he has studied. In fact, women in general accept their fate more peacefully than men.

"Women have a general willingness to confront the facts of dying and not regard death as a failure of personal power."

Men in their prime years between 20 and 40 have the most trouble.

"The young man has been culturally conditioned to feel that to be successful he must act and manipulate his world. When he is forced to confront death, he realizes that personal control is an illusion and the result is a tremendous ego conflict."

Stamp Craze In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One of the latest crazes to get started here is the rubber stamp rage.

It is a crazy-cocky decorative art form that has aficionados stamping envelopes, walls, themselves and you name it, while stores are increasing inventories as fast as they can. One executive said:

"People are using them for letterheads, to make collages, even to produce 'life-like photographs' with dots. Customers go absolutely bonkers once they start stamping.

"The catalogs have thousands of metal and woodcut designs which can be made into stamps for just a few dollars. People start scanning the pages, order one or two and then can't stop; it's like eating peanuts."

Venezuela To Teach Safety

CARACAS (UPI) — The Venezuelan government says traffic regulations will soon be taught in all public and private schools in the country.

Venezuela has one of the highest rates of traffic fatalities in Latin America.

School Board...

The board agreed to work with Beck in solving the erosion problems.

John McKnight, director of testing and research for the Pitt County Schools, was given permission to implement the new testing program he has been working on for the past several months.

McKnight said the new testing program would cut testing in the county schools by 50 percent.

Tests selected to be given include the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills (achievement) and Short Form Test of Academic Aptitude.

The achievement tests would be administered to students in grades one, three, six, eight and ten. Aptitude tests would be given to students in the sixth grade and tenth grade.

Various reports of test results would be given to the teachers, students, parents, guidance counselors, principals and central school office.

Along with the testing program, McKnight said a teachers handbook for testing has been developed. He explained that someone would visit each county school to explain the new tests and how they should be administered.

Superintendent Ott Alford said he had received a study from the Greenville City Schools concerning the merger of the city and county school units. Alford shared the information with the board of education members and asked that they review what information for discussion at the April board meeting.

Quality points for classes for the exceptionally talented students at Ayden-Grifton High School were increased by the board. Students will receive seven quality points for an "A", six for a "B", five for a "C", and four for a "D".

It was pointed out that students in level one classes receive higher quality points for grades than students in level two and that level two students receive higher grade points than students in level three.

Assistant Superintendent Tom Craft said the county schools would receive an increase in reimbursements due to the new lunchroom reimbursement rates approved in January. The change in reimbursement was adopted by the federal government and state officials due to the increase in costs of food and supplies needed in the lunchroom program.

The Recreation Department of Grifton was given permission to construct a concession-rest room facility on the campus of the Grifton School. Approval was given, subject to an agreement between the Town of Grifton and the Grifton Advisory Council concerning matters such as use, maintenance and other related areas.

Alford suggested that a school calendar committee be named to draw up a schedule for the next school year.

The following new employees were approved: Kathleen Marie Jennings, music; Carol Potter, seventh and eighth grade math; Cheryl Clark, EMR; and Lynn Hunsucker, language arts. A substitute teachers list was also approved.

M. C. New and Sons Construction Company, Rocky Mount, was named low bidder for paving work to be done at the Farmville Central School. The portion of the contract which was let totaled $13,000 and will include paving in front of the school.

Bids will be open on March 19 at the Ayden-Grifton High School for paving at that school.

The old Bethel Elementary school site, including about 2.4 acres of land, will be sold in front of the Pitt County Courthouse on March 21 at 11 a.m. The property will be sold to the highest bidder for cash.

Arrest 2 In Theft Case

Two men have been arrested by the Pitt Sheriff's Department on charges stemming from a Dec. 15 break-in and larceny at a Rt. 1, Ayden gun shop.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Jimmy Lee Stokesberry, 30, of Rt. 4, Box 24-F, Washington, was charged with breaking, entering and larceny at the gunsmith shop of Glenn Bowen Jr. on Rt. 1, Ayden. Stokesberry was also charged by Pitt deputies with receiving stolen property in connection with the incident.

Robert Linwood Smith of P.O. Box 73, Chocowinity was charged with receiving stolen property from the Bowen break-in, the sheriff reported.

Bond for Stokesberry was set at $10,000 while a $1,000 bond was set for Smith. Both will have hearings in District Court here.

According to the sheriff, Bowen reported the break-in of his shop, located at his home, and the theft of 16 shotguns and rifles, including several antique items. Total value of the missing guns was estimated at $2,960.

Three guns, valued at approximately $800, were recovered by Pitt deputies, it was added.

Okay Water System Plan

WILLIAMSTON—Plans for a water system for the town of Everetts were approved by the Martin County Commissioners for a system comprising an eight inch line through the town with branch lines of six and four inches covering areas to be served outside the town.

The action took place at the March meeting of the county commissioners on Monday.

In a report made by Director of Social Services Jean Biggs, commissioners were informed that the food stamp program has seen a 50 percent increase in anticipation since August of 1974. Figures were cited showing that in July 1974 there were 2,668 persons receiving $88,085 in coupons plus $49,983 in bonus stamps. Following the July figures, a slump was reported in August, but swung upward after that. The February 1975 figures show 3,786 persons receiving $126,324 in coupons with $75,479.75 in bonus coupons.

The paving of State Road 125 was approved. This is for a section on the Bear Grass Road to the Ryner Road.

Mrs. Peggy Griffin made a brief appearance to ask commissioners to give their assistance in defeating the Equal Rights Amendment now being considered on a state level.

In another, commissioners agreed to suggest that the Martin County Hospital Board of Trustees add a member of the Robersonville Township Hospital as a member of the county hospital board.

Sen. Glenn Jernigan, D-Cumberland, sponsor of the measure, said it would be a deterrent to armed robbery. Jernigan said under current law armed robbers can be eligible for parole after serving 15 months of an active sentence.

The bill was approved by a vote of 7-1. Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, voted against it after telling the committee he planned to introduce a bill providing for life imprisonment for armed robbery.

Jernigan's measure originally called for an active sentence of five years of one quarter of the total sentence. The committee substituted one third of the sentence at the request of Sen. Tom Suddarth, D-Davidson.

Williamston's Bd. Has Meet

WILLIAMSTON—In a long Monday evening session, the Williamston Board of Commissioners considered agenda items covering funds, streets, rides and bingo games, community development funds and other items.

In response to a request presented by a group of 25 interested persons, board members reported that the request of $12,000 in community development funds for construction of a ball park at Kehukee Park would likely not be available until the third year of the program. Board members told the group a search would be made for possible funds from other sources for assistance in constructing the ball park.

The president of the Williamston Lions Club, Raymond Ashe, appeared before the board seeking a resolution to present to the General Assembly that would permit a civic club or charitable organization to conduct bingo games in town. The request will be forwarded to the General Assembly through Rep. George P. Cullipher.

Permission was granted the Williamston Jaycees to operate kiddie rides between March 10 and 15 during afternoon and evening hours.

An ordinance was approved making it unlawful to obtain intangible or professional services of any business in town without intent to pay for such services. Such action will be considered prima facie evidence for fraudulent intent.

A resolution to close Jones Street from North Haines for a distance of 120 feet was approved, with a public hearing scheduled for April 7. Also approved was allowing two-way traffic on Jackson Street from Liberty to Vance and on Vance from Jackson to Lee Streets.

Town commissioners also approved a lease with Seaboard Coastline Railroad Company at an annual rate of $25, an increase of $5 over last year's lease fee.

Three Arrested In Theft Probe

Three persons were arrested here yesterday in connection with the theft of an estimated $730 worth of property and money from an apartment at 104 Oak St. Feb. 25.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Kenneth Leroy Nalley, 28, of Route 4, Greenville has been charged with receiving stolen property, while Donald Earl Whitehurst, 19, of Route 4, Greenville and Steven W. Bazemore, 20, of 209 Mumford Rd. have been charged with breaking and entering and larceny in connection with the case.

According to Cannon, a television, stereo, radio, tape recorder, typewriter and $80 in money were reported taken from the dwelling. He noted that the television set, stereo, typewriter and radio have been recovered.

State Prison Inmate Stabbed

RALEIGH (AP)—Central Prison officials said a 30-year-old inmate was in satisfactory condition Tuesday night after suffering numerous stab wounds.

Officials identified the victim as Michael Cardillo who was serving a sentence of 14 to 20 years from Mecklenburg County for second degree murder. Officials said the stabbing occurred at a West Wing recreation area about 7:15 p.m.

The incident was still under investigation, officials said.

LAYOFFS PLANNED

ROANOKE, Va. (AP)—Appalachian Power Co. said Tuesday it will furlough 104 Virginia operating employees in areas not yet determined and about 100 contract right-of-way maintenance personnel will be released.

Mayors Favor Funds To Cities

WASHINGTON (AP)—A cross-section of the nation's mayors says the best way to help the faltering economy is to pump $5 billion in federal funds into the cities.

The request for emergency federal aid was repeated throughout a two-day meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors which concluded here Tuesday. They also called for $706 million to provide summer jobs for young people.

Several mayors said they could put federal funds to quicker and better use to help the economy than any other plans suggested.

"The cities can do it faster," Mayor Abraham Beame of New York said. "The cities know where the needs for the money are."

"We have the kind of public service needs in our own communities to best use these kinds of money," said Mayor Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles. "We have the capacity to use it quickly and to use it well."

Mayor Paul Soglin of Madison, Wis., said the cities already have programs and machinery to carry them out. "The only thing lacking is the money," he added.

The mayors also repeated their familiar complaint that Ford's proposed budget puts an economic strain on cities which must pick up social programs being cut by the federal government.

Mayor Raph Perk of Cleveland, the largest city with a Republican mayor, said he believes President Ford will give some aid to the cities.

"The President is flexible in my estimation," Perk said. "I believe the President, once he's aware of the plight of the cities, will cor promise."

Hospital Fire Kills 5 Patients

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—Five patients died early today in a fire at a municipal hospital and another 20 were injured, police said.

About 100 patients were transferred to other hospitals. The fire broke out about 4 a.m. in the medical care unit of St. Erik's Hospital, one of the city's older institutions. Forty firemen extinguished the blaze in an hour, and more than 50 policemen joined in the search of the damaged hospital wing.

Negotiating To Buy TV Station

RALEIGH (AP)—The president of the Durham Life Broadcasting Service, which owns radio stations WPTF and WQDR in Raleigh, says the company is negotiating to purchase television station WRDU.

Carl Venters Jr. said that if the transaction is completed, steps will be taken to provide better reception of WRDU's programming in the Raleigh area where its signal is weak.

Pirates Win Home, Season Opener, 4-2

Staggs mashed a 330-foot home run in the bottom of the eighth inning to break a 2-2 tie and East Carolina picked up another tally in the inning as the Pirates won their season opener beating Campbell, 4-2, yesterday.

The defending Southern conference champion Pirates did a lot of things well despite the 40-degree weather. Coach George Williams said he was "pleased with the hitting" as well as the Pirates' defense which Williams said would be one of the team's strong points. He was also pleased with freshman Robert Brinkley's offensive play. Brinkley led both teams with three hits and drove in a run.

Both teams put men on early but it was not until the third when the first run came in. Campbell pushed over one but the Pirates forged in front in the last of the third 2-1. Campbell tied it, 2-2, in the fifth on a double but Staggs' homer and a run-scoring sacrifice fly won it for ECU.

Five pitchers were used; three by the Bucans and two by the Camels. Wayne Bland led off the game and went three innings giving up an earned run, three hits, two walks and struck out one. Steve Herring came on in the fourth giving up the other run, two hits, four walks and fanned three. Dean Revis finished the game coming on in the seventh. He got the win, striking out one, giving up a hit, and hitting a batter. Bert Cayson started for Campbell. He went five frames giving up two earned runs, two hits, two walks and struck out five. Mark Percifield ended the game getting the loss. He struck out one, walked none and gave up three hits. Campbell surprised the Pirates in the first inning as Frank Floyd led off with a double and went to third on a ground out. He was nailed trying to score on a grounder.

Elkins flew out to right scoring Lee. Brinkley was thrown out going to third. The only other player to have more than one hit was Campbell's Johnson with two.

The Pirates travel to Durham Thursday for a doubleheader with Duke then return home Saturday for a pair with State.

Not Bothered By Pressure

By The Associated Press
Sometimes the truths are most self-evident.

"Pressure? It didn't bother me," said Sam Lacey. "Why should it? There's nobody on you."

Honest Sam was talking about something most National Basketball Association players do best—shoot without any opposition, commonly called taking foul shots.

And Lacey disposed of those two free throws with 13 seconds left as easily as he answered the question about pressure. The two free throws snapped a tie and sent the Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 103-99 victory over the Phoenix Suns Tuesday night.

Around the rest of the NBA, the ball bounced this way: Milwaukee 101, Detroit 83; Buffalo 104, Seattle 97; Boston 126, New York 111; Atlanta 109, Los Angeles 97; Golden State 117, Chicago 102; and Portland 117, Cleveland 98.

Bucks 101, Pistons 83
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 27 points and Bob Dandridge chipped in with 26 to lead the rout and improve Milwaukee's playoff chances. The Bucks are now 1 1/2 games behind the Pistons in the battle for third place in the Midwest Division and a possible wild-card playoff berth.

Blazers 117, Cavaliers 98
Sidney Wicks' 24 points led a balanced attack and helped Portland to its fourth victory in a row.

All five Portland starters scored in double figures as the Blazers moved within 2 1/2 games of second-place Seattle and one game of third-place Phoenix in the Pacific Division. Celtics 126, Knicks 111

The Celtics continued their domination of the Knicks, chalking up their fifth straight victory over their longtime rivals. In those five victories, the Celtics have beaten the Knicks by an average of almost 19 points.

The Knicks now trail Cleveland by two games and Houston by five in the race for the Eastern Conference wildcard playoff spot.

Braves 104, SuperSonics 97
Bob McAdoo scored the Braves' last seven points on free throws as Buffalo held off Seattle's late rally. McAdoo topped all scorers with 39 points while rookie Leonard Gray had a career-high of 33 points for Seattle.

Hawks 109, Lakers 97
Rookie John Drew tossed in 17 of his game-high 27 points in the second half to rally the Hawks to victory.

Warriors 117, Bulls 102
Charles Johnson, who had two points at the half, led the Warriors from a seven-point deficit at halftime to a 15-point lead after three quarters with 19 points in the third period.

Scheduling May Mean Closing Of Hialeah

MIAMI (AP) — The state Board of Business Regulation's awarding in May of the 1976 thoroughbred racing dates in South Florida may mean the death of Hialeah Park, which has ended its season deep in debt. The track, which has hosted almost all of the nation's top 3-year-old horses down through the years, has virtually no chance of regaining the prime tourist season dates until 1977. Hialeah President Lynn Stone indicated at the track's closing session Tuesday that 1977 may be a year too late. "I'm pretty well convinced we just have to have the middle dates to have a successful operation," said Stone. "I think if the middle dates go to Hialeah, we can certainly continue. If not, it will be very difficult for us ... I'm not saying we won't continue, but I say it would be difficult." A Florida Supreme Court ruling ended Hialeah's monopoly on the prime mid-January through mid-March dates in 1972. Since then, the Board of Business Regulation has alternated the dates between Hialeah and Gulfstream. Hialeah's handle went from $76.3 million with the 1971 prime dates to $51.7 million in 1972. It went back to $69.7 million with 1973's prime dates then plummeted to $46.3 million with 1974's March-April meeting. The handle this year was only $66.7 million compared to Gulfstream's $70.7 million last year, but attendance for 40 days was 620,000 and Stone said the economy was the only logical explanation for the handle. The attendance bettered Gulfstream's 1974 and Hialeah's 1973 showings. Stone estimated a $1.9 million loss for the company this year, with profits offset by $1.6 million in interest expense and $1.1 million in capital improvements.

Terp Coach Nets Honor

RALEIGH (AP)—Aside from the sweet taste of so much winning, Maryland basketball Coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell has another reward for his team's performance this season—Atlantic Coast Conference coach of the year.

Driesell was named the ACC's best coach by the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association. The Terrapin coach received 66 of the 148 votes to edge Clemson Coach Tates Locke by seven votes. Driesell's Terps had their winningest season, 22-3, and are going into the ACC playoffs this week with their first regular season conference title and their best league record, 10-2.

Adding to Driesell's standing is the No. 2 ranking of Maryland nationally. The Terps stand a good chance of seeing action against No. 1 Indiana because no matter what happens in the ACC tournament, Maryland will be one of the two ACC teams to go to the NCAA playoffs.

Driesell, a Norfolk, Va., native, coached high schools then Davidson before being hired by Maryland. In nine seasons at the two colleges he compiled a 292-110 record.

Three Teams Still Battling In S. West

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Arkansas are still alive in the Southwest Conference basketball race. Well, actually, Texas A&M looks in the best of health while Texas Tech and Arkansas are holding on for dear life. Texas Tech and Arkansas were put on the sick list after Texas A&M's 100-77 victory over SMU Tuesday night. Coupled with Baylor's 60-55 upset over Texas Tech, the victory gave the Aggies undisputed possession of the Southwest lead with one game to go in the regular season. They can win the title by beating Texas this Saturday.

kept their slim hopes alive by beating Texas 68-56. "There's no chance we'll get caught looking ahead to the NCAA playoffs this Saturday," said Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf. "Texas is very capable of beating us if they play well. If they beat us, it will be because they outplay us, not because we are looking ahead or choke." Gerald Myers, the Texas Tech coach, was not resigned to failure, despite his team's tenuous position. "We've still got a mathematical chance and all we can do Saturday is beat TCU and hope A&M gets beat," he said. In other games Tuesday night, La Salle beat Bucknell 85-74 and Rider trimmed Temple 70-65 in the opening round of the East Coast Conference playoffs. Cincinnati whipped Duquesne 72-70, knocking the Dukes out of the running for the NCAA playoffs. Because Duquesne lost, West Virginia was given a berth in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference's regional tournament at Morgantown, W. Va.

Trevino Is Closing In

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino is closing in on "em." "I kind of got it together in that last round last week," said Trevino, whose final round 66 brought him a tie for fifth in last week's Jackie Gleason Classic. That performance, his best of the season, stamped the flamboyant Trevino as a prime candidate for the title in the $200,000 Florida Citrus Open, a 72-hole test that begins Thursday on the 6,929-yard Rio Pinar Country Club course. "It's getting better all the time," Trevino said. "I didn't play much out west, and the weather was too bad to practice when I was home. "I have to play a lot to play good. Now I've got two tournaments behind me, two in a row. I've got to have that much work to do any good. I started to play pretty good last week.

"I've got it going now. "I'm sneaking up on 'em." But Trevino, who usually plays very well in the Florida portion of the tour, will have plenty of opposition in the chase for the $40,000 first prize. Among the leading contenders in the field of 153 will be Arnold Palmer, defending champion Jerry Heard, U.S. Open titleholder Hale Irwin and Bob Murphy, who scored a dramatic victory in the Gleason tournament. Some other standouts include young stars Hubert Green, Tom Watson, Lanny Wadkins, Forrest Fezler and Eddie Pearce, a runner-up last week, along with veterans Gene Littler, Australian Bruce Crampton, Bobby Nichols and former Citrus champion Buddy Allin. Miller, a three-time winner this season, and Jack Nicklaus are not competing.

Indians, Pirates Meet In Opener

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — "Movement on offense and pressure on defense" is what first-year Coach Dave Patton likes for his second-seeded East Carolina team that meets third-place William and Mary in the first game of tonight's Southern Conference Basketball tournament doubleheader.

rage and Dennis Vail head the cast of players that has given W & M a 15-11 season compared with a 9-18 showing last year. Balanis' team is one of the best-disciplined in the league. It survived its quarterfinal test against Davidson by bucketing 18 consecutive free throws in the final seven minutes.

Furman, regular season champion with a 20-6 record, meets upstart Virginia Military Institute in the nightcap. Furman is seeking its third consecutive conference title and bid to the NCAA playoffs.

VHI matches a 13-12 record against Furman, which goes into the game with superior size and heft in the likes of 7-1 Fessor Leonard, 6-6 Craig Lynch and 6-9 Clyde Mayes, a 230-pound senior.

While Greg Ashorn, Robert Geter and Larry Hunt lead Patton's movement on offense and scoring, he feels he has good bench strength. We're a complete team as far as shooting is concerned, with every man contributing," Patton contends. East Carolina's team applies pressure all over the court, and with nine lettermen on the squad, it has the experience to make the pressure pay off in turnovers, and in fouls committed in attempts to recover the turnovers. The biggest thing W & M and Coach George Balanis have going for them is the fact they upset East Carolina in the tournament's opening round last season. Balanis was finishing out the season as head coach. John Lowenhaupt, Matt Co-

The latest man VMI can pit against Furman is 7-6. But it has some ace marksmen in Ron Carter and John Krovic, each 6-3, and 6-6 Will Bynum. Furman clearly will have the defensive edge, and VMI's best chance is to outshoot the defending champions and avoid turnovers. Splitting the opening round into games at four sites brought attendance at them alone to $5,393, well ahead of the three-day figure at previous one-site tournaments. Tonight's crowds on Furman's home court and the Thursday final, if Furman makes, are expected to be sellouts, giving the tournament its best attendance since the present Atlantic Coast Conference members split off more than a decade ago.

Businessmen Fight For More Money, Beards

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Today's lesson in business administration comes to you courtesy of Ken Holtzman, Bill Russell and Bill Campbell.

As it happens, Holtzman majored in business at the University of Illinois before turning to pitching major league baseballs for the Chicago Cubs and later the Oakland A's. In his years with Oakland and owner Charles O. Finley, Holtzman's business schooling has continued with almost yearly salary squabbles, and the left-hander isn't sure he can stand that type of education much longer.

"If a business opportunity I have works and everything is conducive to leaving at midseason, I'd quit baseball then," the 29-year-old Holtzman said Tuesday.

"If the general condition of the economy was better, I probably wouldn't be here right now," he added at Oakland's Mesa, Ariz. training base.

"I'd like to let him (Finley) him go out and find another 19-game winner."

Considering the fact that Finley already has lost a certain 24-game winner named Catfish Hunter, the fiery A's owner may not be pleased with the prospect. But a good businessman never tips his hand.

Russell, the Los Angeles Dodgers shortstop, got his business learning while holding out for $75,000 this season. He signed his contract Monday — for less money than he had wanted — but admitted no feelings of malice for club vice president Al Campanis, who did the negotiating.

When it was over, Russell said, "Campanis and I shook hands, knowing business is business."

But all businesses have their eccentricities. Minnesota Twins hurler Campbell found that out.

Twins' owner Calvin Griffith set a club rule against beards, so Campbell's carefully cultivated shrunken beard had to go by workout time Tuesday. The 26-year-old right-hander, Minnesota's top reliever last season with an 8-7 record and a 2.63 earned run average, appeared despondent with the loss.

"I am disappointed," he said at the Twins' training base in Orlando, Fla. "But the ball club's policy says I can't have the beard, and this is one of those times when you can't fight city hall."

Meanwhile, the number of unsigned players was reduced further when Baltimore inked outfielder Don Baylor; the New York Yankees signed outfielder Walt Williams and first baseman Otto Velez; the Cleveland Indians signed outfielder Oscar Gamble; infielder Mario Guerrero ended the first Boston Red Sox holdout in 18 years and the Dodgers agreed to terms with outfielder Bill Buckner.

The Dodgers also invited free-agent pitcher Juan Marichal to their camp. Marichal, cut at the end of last season by the Boston Red Sox, did not sign with the A's as had been reported.

Washington Loses, ACC Tourney Tickets Draws Big Crowds Getting Expensive

By The Associated Press

There haven't been many reasons to cheer the Washington Capitals this season. The team has won six of 66 games, given up 359 goals — nearly six per game — and managed to score only 145 times.

Few positive things could be said for their 8-0 loss to the Boston Bruins Tuesday night, except that 13,273 people showed up to cheer their hapless heroes.

And that really impressed Bruins Coach Don Cherry.

"This is going to be a good franchise some day. When a team gets support like that, they've got to get better," said Cherry. "It's something. The people stick with these guys even when they're losing 6-0 or 7-0. They aren't getting on the players, and that's a heckuva sign for the future."

Despite the shutout, the cheers remained loud and clear at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. It has been that way all year. The Capitals, losingest team in pro hockey, are outdrawing the National Basketball Association Washington Bullets, with whom they share their home arena. And the Bullets are the winningest team in the NBA.

One of the high points in a dismal opening National Hockey League season was the expansion Capitals' 3-3 tie with the Bruins the last time Boston visited.

"We outshot them 48-15 last time," Cherry recalled. "But this time the puck went in."

It went in eight times. Ken Hodge scored twice, Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr scored as usual, while Don Marcotte, Dave Forbes, Bobby Schumatz and Hank Nowak had the other allies for Boston.

A loss by shutout is nothing, new to the Capitals, who suffered that fate for the 11th time this season.

Elsewhere, the Minnesota North Stars tripped the Vancouver Canucks 6-4 and the Los Angeles Kings dropped the Kansas City Scouts 7-4.

North Stars 6, Canucks 4

Minnesota blew a three-goal lead, then came back on a second-period goal by Dennis Hextall to top Vancouver and hand the Canucks their fifth loss in a seven-game road trip.

Vancouver Coach Phil Maloney yanked starting goalie Gary Smith in favor of Ken Lockett because Smith "looked tired and disgusted. He's played 60 games this season and I guess he's beginning to show some wear and tear."

The North Stars breezed to a 3-0 lead on goals by Norm Gratton, Craig Cameron and Bill Goldsworthy, saw Vancouver tie it behind Garry Monahan, Andre Boudrias and Gerry O'Flaherty, then pulled in front on Hextall's goal.

Henry Boucha made it 5-3, Boudrias cut it to 5-4 with his second goal, but Goldsworthy iced it with his second of the game into an empty net.

Kings 7, Scouts 4

Juha Widing scored three goals and Mike Murphy chipped in four assists to pace the Los Angeles triumph which brought the Kings within two points of the idle Montreal Canadiens, who lead Division 3.

Bob Murdoch, Terry Harper, Mike Corrigan and Butch Goring also scored for the Kings. Wilf Paiement had two goals while Norm Dube and Ed Gilbert scored one each for the Scouts.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — $500 may seem like a lot of money to pay to see 10 teenagers in short pants try to throw a round ball through a hoop.

But that's what many of the spectators at this week's Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament had to cough up to be able to buy two $30 tickets to the tourney's six games.

With four conference teams in the Top 20, ACC schools find themselves in a seller's market when they begin to dispose of the 2,150 tickets allotted to each conference school from the Greensboro Coliseum's capacity of slightly less than 15,500.

Each school, after saving a few tickets for players, students, coaches and officials, sells the rest to members of its athletic booster club. At some schools, $500 may not be enough.

Williamson said he finds people willing to pay the lump sum immediately to become eligible for tickets. "We had one man contribute $25,000," he said.

At N.C. State, Wolfpack Club director Warren Carroll said the scarcity creates problems for him. "It's become an impossible situation; we literally die a little every time we turn someone down."

Carroll said a few club members of longstanding can buy tournament tickets with a donation of as little as $25. The Wolfpack Club uses a priority point system that gives credit for years of membership, working in fund drives, etc.

It takes 64 points to make a member eligible for two tickets, he said. A donation of $1,000 is worth 40 points.

At Duke, Clemson, Wake Forest, and Maryland, spokesmen said a minimum donation of $500 assured the donor of being able to buy two tickets.

At Virginia, the minimum donation was $300 this year. Next year it will be $500, Sports Information Director Barney Cooke said.

Williamson said he estimated the tournament schools could sell 75,000 tickets if they had them. "It's become a social event. It has snob appeal," he said.

Being seen at the ACC tournament with friends is quite important. A source in North Carolina Gov. Jim Holshouser's office said Tuesday that South Carolina Gov. James Edwards had called recently in an unsuccessful attempt to add to the two tickets Clemson gave him.

One member of the North Carolina legislature, a Wake Forest alumnus, brandished his tickets Tuesday and said, "It's an ego trip. I probably wouldn't go if I couldn't show everyone here the tickets and stand around in the coliseum and see everyone."

Next year, the tournament moves to Largo, Md. But Williamson does not think the switch will decrease demand. "I think our cut-off point (for Rams Club members wanting tickets) will be $4,000 next year," he said.

Wake, Tacy To Battle Carolina's Tar Heels

By KEN ALYTA
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "If we get in a tight game, we've had the experience," says Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy as his Deacons prepare to meet North Carolina Thursday afternoon in the first of three opening-round games in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship basketball tournament.

Wake Forest, Duke and Virginia have been more or less overlooked in pretournament speculation. They finished in the lower regions of the ACC regular-season play and have virtually identical overall records.

Virginia was fifth in the league standings at 4-8, six games back of leader Maryland, and 12-12 for the year. Duke and Wake Forest tied for sixth at 2-10 and 13-12 for all games.

Tacy and his team have had experience in tight games, most of it bad. Seven of their games were decided by from one to three points, and the Deacons lost four.

In skirmishes with nationally ranked teams, Wake Forest is 2-8. But took a closer look.

They've beaten 13th-ranked Creighton and it was the Deacons who snapped the 36-game winning streak of defending national champion North Carolina State in the opening round of the North Carolina Big Four tournament in Greensboro two months ago.

Hard-to-take losses were by two points at North Carolina, by three at Clemson and by two at home against N.C. State.

But confidence has been restored by three season-ending victories against outside teams.

Of particular encouragement has been the finish by slender sophomore all-conference basketball star Skip Brown. After 11 games in a row of 20 or more points, he was held under 20 three times in a row.

But in his last three outings Brown scored 72 points, raising his average to 22.6, second in the ACC only to N.C. State's David Thompson and his 30.2.

Brown also has dished out 173 assists, is hitting 53 per cent from the floor and 81 per cent from the foul line.

He's an exciting player who makes things happen and the Deacons need his all-around skills to help make up for their lack of height and rebounding shortcomings.

Tacy says, "He has had a brilliant season and we are going to need him playing at his very best if we are to have a shot at winning the tournament. I honestly don't think there is a better guard in the country when Skip is right."

In two regular-season meetings, North Carolina, currently ranked No. 12, defeated Wake Forest 80-78 and 101-91. Brown scored 22 points in the first game and 32 in the second.

Two years ago, also in the tourney first round, Wake Forest tied North Carolina in the final second of regulation, then won in the final second of overtime.

The winner of their 1:30 p.m. game will play the survivor of the 3:30 Clemson-Duke contest in Friday night's second semifinal game.

N.C. State plays Virginia in the only Thursday night game for the right to play top-seeded, second-ranked Maryland in the Friday night opener.

Maryland, first place winner over the regular season, earned a first-round bye.

Saturday night's championship game winner moves into NCAA Easter Regional first round play at Charlotte, N.C., March 15. The NCAA is expected to select another ACC team for its tournament under a format change permitting two teams from a conference in the national event.

Jones May Be Best Sixth Man In ABA

By The Associated Press

Utah games begin with Wali Jones sitting on the bench. It seems the Stars are saving their best for last.

"Wali is really amazing," said Utah Coach Tom Nissalke. "He has to be one of the best, if not the best, sixth man in the league right now."

Nissalke was singing his "Sixth-man Theme" because Jones fired in seven long-range field goals and dished out three assists in the second period, leading Utah to a 118-99 victory over the San Diego Conquistadors in the American Basketball Association Tuesday night.

Elsewhere in the ABA, the New York Nets trimmed the Spirits of St. Louis 110-106 and the Denver Nuggets crushed the Memphis Sounds 133-116.

Nets 110, Spirits 106

The Nets weren't surprised that they beat the Spirits for the ninth straight time. Only they thought it should have been easier.

"We were thinking about something other than what we were doing, that's for sure," said the Nets Julius Erving, whose 23 points in the second half led a New York comeback. "We can't afford to slack up at all."

"The last two times we've played this team they've been tough."

Which isn't how Nets center Billy Paultz assessed his team when asked if New York had taken St. Louis for granted.

"Unfortunately we did," Paultz said. "But there's no reason for it because we want to stay in first place."

Erving totaled 36 points for the night as the Nets improved their first-place lead over Kentucky in the Eastern Division to 1 1/2 games.

Paultz contributed 24 points for the Nets and Gus Gerard had 26 for St. Louis.

Nuggets 133, Sounds 116

Ralph Simpson tossed in 28 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Denver past Memphis. The Sounds trailed by five, 60-55, going into the third period, but Simpson, Bobby Jones and Mack Calvin combined to give Denver a 10-point lead at the end of the quarter.

Jones scored 23 points while George Carter had 22 and Chuck Williams 21 for Memphis.

New Coaching Job Has Mays Lost, Lonely

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The New York Mets, in spic-and-span uniforms, stood stiffly in front of the camera — like a high school graduating class — when there was a sudden interruption in the official picture-taking ceremony.

"Hey, where's Willie?" someone yelled. "Willie Mays is not in the picture."

From the sidelines shuffled a familiar figure, cap ajar and his jaws working gingerly on a mouthful of gum. Sheepishly, almost apologetically, he took a position at the end of the front row.

"Come on," yelled Manager Yogi Berra. "Get down in front."

He's a lonely, lost individual, this once dynamic, scintillating giant of the game. The Mets don't know what to do with him. Willie doesn't know what to do with himself.

"It's not as bad as last year," Mays said as he moved self-consciously around the Mets' training quarters Tuesday. "Last year, my first year not playing, I was very nervous. I had to be careful not to get too involved."

"I've overcome that a little bit, but not entirely. I have to be careful not to get in Yogi's way. I've got to keep away

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Tax revenue from horse racing in 1974 climbed to $28.3 million, highest level in the 12 years tracks have operated in Pennsylvania, a state official says.

Revenue Secretary George J. Mowod said Tuesday the state also expected to receive an additional $479,000 from uncashed winning tickets at the six tracks. The money from last year's unclaimed tickets will accrue to the state after March 31.

Bettors wagered a total of $483 million last year, up from $466 million in 1973, Mowod said.

Mowod said the horse racing industry in Pennsylvania now provides 2,637 jobs with a total payroll of $13.1 million annually.

MIAMI (AP) — Three members of the Baltimore Orioles remain unsigned, now that outfielder Don Baylor has agreed to terms for the 1975 baseball season.

Still holding out are catchers Earl Williams and Andy Etchebarren, and second baseman Bobby Grich.

"I'm far apart with all three," General Manager Frank Cashen said after Baylor signed Tuesday, "and you could flip a coin as to which one would be the last to sign."

Knight Has Led Hoosiers To No. 1 Ranking

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana University's last national championship in basketball came in the days when Branch McCracken's Hurryin' Hoosiers were coining their nickname.

Today, under 34-year-old Bobby Knight, Indiana has regained the glory of the 1950s when McCracken's teams won four Big Ten Conference titles and the 1953 national crown.

But Knight's clubs aren't in quite the rush the late McCracken's 23 squads were.

When Knight came to Bloomington in 1971, the Hoosiers were generally regarded as a run-and-gun team. That was part and parcel of the legend that year-round shooting by Indiana farm boys on dirt courts made them great shooters but poor defensive players.

On the other hand, in six years at West Point, Knight fashioned a series of deliberate offense teams ranked among the top 10 in defense.

His current squad epitomizes the best of both worlds.

The Hoosiers are ranked No. 1, unbeaten in 28 games, holders of a nation-leading 31-game winning string, leading the country in average margin of victory and possessors of their third straight Big Ten title and tournament berth. They also lead the Big Ten in offensive average and were second in defensive average.

"We're always trying to play essentially the same way defensively," Knight said. "But, on offense, we've gotten away from the patterns that we had to play at Army. We're working our offense around movements and screening and we're trying to incorporate quickness in our offense."

"We want to get down the floor quickly and effectively," he added. "What it amounts to is that offense is always dictated by personnel."

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 20 through Feb. 26.

House
Office Space—Rejected, 170 for and 236 against, an amendment to kill a $15 million appropriation for opening one more House of Representatives office building. The money will be used for converting a former FBI storage building, located at the foot of Capitol Hill, into the fourth House office building.

The amendment was proposed to HJ Res 210, a measure appropriating funds for the current fiscal year, including money for Penn Central and other bankrupt railroads. The resolution was passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Edward Roush (D-Ind.) sponsored the amendment. While acknowledging a "pressing need" for more space, he said the former FBI warehouse was awkwardly located, lacked adequate parking, and was so inferior to existing office buildings that "I doubt" any House members would want to move in.

Opponents of the amendment said more space is urgently needed because, in the words of Rep. George Danielson (D-Calif.), existing facilities are "crowded with computers and clerks and files and staff and what have you, and there is scarcely enough room for members to do their legislative work." Added Rep. Bob Casey (D-Tex.): "I admit this is not a prime building, but it is all that is available and it is a close as we can get."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), Stephen Neal (D-5), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-8), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "yea."

Reps. David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Richardson Preyer (D-6) and Charles Rose (D-7) voted "nay."

Rep. L. H. Fountain (D-2) did not vote.

F-111 Funding—Passed, 230 for and 164 against, an amendment to prohibit the spending of $122.9 million previously appropriated for the purchase of 12 additional F-111 aircraft by the Air Force.

The amendment was attached to a "budget rescission bill" (HR 3260), which, in effect, recalls certain appropriations already embodied in law but not yet spent. HR 3260 originally contained 27 rescissions recommended by President Ford. The House, after agreeing with some of Ford's requests and disagreeing with others, passed the bill and sent it to the Senate.

Rep. Silvio Conte (R-Mass.), sponsor of the F-111 amendment, said it was pointless for Congress to fund the purchase of unwanted aircraft. "The Defense Department does not want any more of them, the Air Force does not want any more of them, and the Administration does not want any more of them," Conte said.

One opponent, Rep. Jack Edwards (R-Ala.) called it "penny-wise and pound-foolish" to cease buying F-111's after so many millions have been invested in the aircraft. Rep. Sam Stratton (D-N.Y.), said the Air Force professes to not want the F-111 because it favors the proposed B-1 bomber. He said continued production of the F-111 is necessary to provide "an alternative to the B-1."

Neal, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Jones, Henderson, Andrews, Preyer, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."

Fountain did not vote.

Budget Cut—Rejected, 127 for and 288 against, an amendment to support virtually all of the budget rescissions requested by President Ford in HR 3260 (above). Ford had asked for rescissions totalling about $949 million spread over 27 federal programs. The defeated amendment would have rescinded all but $284 million of that amount. After its rejection, the House approved rescissions amounting to about one-fourth of the sum requested cut by Ford.

Supporters said the recently passed Congressional Budget Act, which makes possible the rescission of already appropriated money, behooves Congress to reduce federal spending in order to ease the current economic crisis. Opponents said the money Ford had wanted to rescind is needed for urgent domestic priorities.

Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Taylor voted "nay."

Fountain did not vote.

Senate
Catch 22—Voted, 48 for and 40 against, to stop debating a motion to stop floor debate. The vote upheld a parliamentary ruling by Vice President Rockefeller, the president of the Senate, that the Senate can cut off debate by a simple majority while changing its procedural rules at the start of a new session of Congress.

The effect of the vote was to push the Senate closer to a final vote in its squabble over Rule 22, the rule governing filibusters. Liberals generally want to make it easier to kill filibusters and conservatives generally want to preserve the present two-thirds majority vote necessary to stop filibusters.

Those voting "yea" generally wanted to expedite debate so the Senate could turn to other business, such as emergency railroad aid. Sen. Walter Mondale (D-Minn.) said the conservatives wanted to "hold the Penn Central Railroad and thousands of its employees... hostage to their demands that we drop our attempts to change Rule 22."

Sen. James Allen (D-Ala.), leader of the filibuster, said the ruling by Rockefeller unjustly undercuts the right to debate

"ad infinitum" in the absence of a cloture vote. "When in the world does the beginning of a session end?" Allen asked.

Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

Rail Aid—Passed, 62 for and 30 against, a bill (S 281) authorizing $347 million in government grants and loan guarantees to keep Penn Central, Erie Lackawanna and other bankrupt railroads operating. In a follow-up vote, the Senate appropriated part of the authorization and sent the legislation back to the House for final congressional approval.

The Senate action came coincidentally on the same day the U.S. Railway Association presented its plan for reorganizing the bankrupt northeast and midwest rail network. The emergency aid is expected to keep freight moving until the reorganization plan receives final action by Congress later this year.

Supporters said federal aid is needed to prevent the nationwide industrial collapse which, they said, would occur if Penn Central and other lines stopped operating. Opponents argued against the principle of government bailing out private companies. Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) said, "If we can advance money to Penn Central and to Lockheed, why can't any corner store family come in and ask for money?"

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

CHURCH ATTENDANCE
NEW YORK (UPI)—Only four out of every 10 Americans attend church regularly, according to a nationwide Roper poll taken exclusively for The National Enquirer. And 24 per cent "almost never attend."

There's a higher percentage of churchgoers in the South and more Catholics than Protestants.

CREW PATCH—This is the American crew patch for the joint U.S.-Soviet Apollo-Soyuz Test project scheduled to take place in July. The circular design is outlined in red, with the names of the five crewmen and the words Apollo in English and Soyuz in Russian on a gold background. The white stars at left on a field of blue represent American Astronauts Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald K. Slayton. The two white stars at right on a field of red represent Soviet Cosmonauts Alexey A. Leonov and Valeriy N. Kubasov. (AP Wirephoto)

By DEIRDRE McNAMER
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Friendly, tired and chain-smoking, Barbara could be any harassed young mother you chat with at the laundromat. Except that the court has twice taken her two small boys away from her for their own safety.

She is one of hundreds of thousands of parents in the country who have seriously injured or neglected their children. And she is one of the very few who have sought help through an organization called Parents Anonymous.

Each Tuesday, Barbara—not her real name—meets with 10 to 15 other parents in an old building in Southeast Portland. Some, like Barbara, have had their battered children taken away by court order and placed in foster homes. Others, who live with their offspring, fight a daily battle against their own destructive impulses.

Statistics hint at the grisly tale of those who lose the battle.

For example, Oregon's Children's Services Division processed 353 reports of child abuse in 1973, and 350 reports through

His Inventions Worth Billions

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Thomas Alva Edison required one new invention every 10 days from himself and his staff, says the Intellectual Property Owners, Inc., a nonprofit group devoted to preserving a strong patent system. And by the time he died, he held 1,093 patents that included the phonograph, the electric light and the motion picture projector. In 1923, it was reported the cash value of his inventions was $15 billion.

November of 1974. Well over half the children involved were under 6 years old, and the most serious injuries were inflicted on infants.

More than half the injured children suffered bruises and welts, but other common injuries were cuts, bone fractures, sexual abuse, neglect and burns or scaldings.

The CSD says reported cases are just the tip of the iceberg.

State law requires doctors, dentists, school personnel, public health nurses and social workers to report suspected child abuse to a law enforcement agency, which investigates. However, a recent CSD report says the majority of child abuse cases go unreported because people don't want to involve the police.

Parents Anonymous is voluntary, free and confidential. It's an opportunity for troubled parents to spill out frustrations, compare notes and do some mutual bolstering.

"These folks are not monsters," said Dr. Richard Lazire, the clinical psychologist who sits in on the meetings.

With the help of "Jolly" Kaye, Portland native and national founder of Parents Anonymous, Lazire and leaders of several social agencies in the Portland area put together Ore-gon's first Parents Anonymous group in June 1973. Since then, a dozen other chapters have sprung up in the state.

Lazire said most parents who abuse their children have gaping holes in their own education. The majority were themselves abused as children so they never learned the art of "parenting," or how to handle strong emotions constructively.

Many abusive parents expect their children to give them all the love and respect they themselves never had, and the child who fails gets the painful brunt of the parent's disappointment, Lazire said.

Lazire said Parent Anonymous is one prong of the attack on child abuse, but society must shoulder some of the responsibility for preventing abuse in the first place.

Schools would be a good place to start. "We teach people how to make a living, but not how to live," he said.

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Tokihide Ichinose of San Francisco has an unusual business. He hires divers, Caucasians, because they can stand the cold bay water, once a year (usually in January) to collect herring eggs and seaweed, from the rocks near here.

The eggs and seaweed are placed in large barrels and salted down, then shipped to Japan where they are considered a delicacy. Ichinose has the only commercial license for taking unlimited quantities of eggs from the bay. However, other divers can hunt for 25 pounds a day on sport fishing licenses. When received in Japan the product is called komochi konbu and is a favorite snack. "It isn't bad, if you put enough soy sauce on it," a fish and game official said.

Mission Dolores, founded in 1776, is San Francisco's oldest landmark.

Wines Enter Computer Age

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — California's wine industry is in the computer age.

"We use our IBM computer to keep track of the age of our bottles of wine, to help us make sure that quantities on hand will meet expected demands in the future," says Brother Timothy, cellar-master in charge of all wine production at the Christian Brothers Winery.

Icy Water Swim Made A Champion

By Rudy Cernkovic
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — How'd you like to be the icy water swimming champion of the world?

Gus Brickner is and he won the title on Jan. 24, 1963, when it was 18 degrees below zero in nearby Dunlevy. The temperature in the Monongahela River was 32 degrees.

Brickner cleared away snow and ice, then plunged into the river shouting "ya-hoo" and cavorted in the icy waters for six minutes.

The dip of 12 years ago has now been recorded in the latest edition of Guinness Book of Records which acknowledges Brickner as the icy water swimming champion of the world.

"I just made the book," he said proudly, referring to Guinness. Brickner was 52 when he made that record plunge. For 42 years he took winter plunges into the Mon. regardless of temperatures.

"But I'm through with that now," said the 63-year-old Brickner. "I don't want to break any ice anymore. I must have shoveled tons of it. Besides, I have nothing more to prove, now that I'm in Guinness."

After he retired from a steel mill, Brickner was hired as the custodian of an elementary school near his home in North Charleroi.

Brickner was 15 in 1927 when he made his first long distance swim — eight miles along the Mon.

"Then I kept increasing my distance to 10 miles, then 12, then 15 — all in the Mon. In 1953 I swam in the 15-mile event at Lake Ontario in the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto," he said. "I had a reason for these distances — I always wanted to make the Big Swim."

In 1957 Brickner started on his "Big Swim" when he dove into the English Channel at Calais.

"I was 45 at the time," Brickner said. "I was four-and-a-half miles from Dover" when they had to pull me out because I was paralyzed. It was a disappointment. They told me that for the distance I covered, I was an hour and nine minutes ahead of the world record."

Three years later Gus made another try at conquering the English Channel.

"A storm blew down from the North Sea," he said. "I swam the last three-and-a-half hours against very large waves, but I gained very little. I collapsed just 400 feet from the shore of Dover after covering 34-and-a-half miles. I had swum continuously for 14 hours and 55 minutes."

There are still scars on his body from cuts from ice when he swam across the ice-clogged Youghiogheny River at West Newton, Pa., Jan. 29, 1955. Brickner recalled it was four degrees below zero.

For 20 consecutive years Brickner would swim on New Year's Day in the Allegheny River in Pittsburgh.

Campbell Moses, M.D., said Brickner during his entire swimming career of long distance swimming covered a distance of 28,400 miles, which is 3,000 miles more than the distance around the world.

Gus attributed his fine physical condition to vitamins and minerals supplemented with his daily meals.

"My health foods include all vegetables, leafy greens, plenty of fish, wild mushrooms, rye bread, soybean oils, fruits, beef bouillon, tea and postum," he said.

Invited Serve On Committee

Mrs. Kay Whitehurst has been invited by the State Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh to serve on an 11-member ad hoc committee which will develop by-laws for the establishment of a state advisory committee for the Field Support Section of the Division of Occupational Education. The group will meet March 12 in Raleigh.

Mrs. Whitehurst is Director of Secondary Education, Greenville City Schools.

The Field Support Section has the responsibility of working with local administrators in developing occupational education programs. This section is concerned with fiscal management in such areas as specifications for the design and equipping of occupational education facilities, securing instructional equipment, budget control, and compiling and disseminating program information.

Jobs Await Physicians' Assistants

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — College students worried about finding jobs at the end of their school years have a new course to consider at Lake Erie College in Painesville.

It is a Primary Care Physician's Assistant program leading to a bachelor's degree. The program starts up in the fall as a cooperative venture between Lake Erie College and the Cleveland Clinic Foundation.

Lake Erie College, a private liberal arts women's college with a history of innovative programs, becomes the first women's college to offer this course.

There are about 20 similar programs in the country, but this will be one of the few offered to applicants with no previous health care experience.

Dr. Paul Weaver, president of Lake Erie College and Dr. William Michener, director of education at Cleveland Clinic told of the new program.

"From a career viewpoint graduating physician's assistants have been readily able to find positions in both urban and rural areas," Dr. Weaver said.

"According to the U.S. Department of Labor, salaries for beginners are good — up to $15,000 a year."

Dr. Michener said studies conducted by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and others have demonstrated the need for additional health care personnel, particularly in the field of primary care.

"The American Medical Association has endorsed the physician's assistant concept as one method of providing much-needed primary health care."

"National statistics show that 90 to 90 per cent of the physician's assistants trained to date are serving in small communities and in inner-city areas."

"Often these areas do not have an adequate number of physicians. An assistant can work under the direct supervision of a physician in the area and extend that doctor's ability to render prompt and competent primary care in the area's communities."

Graduates of Lake Erie's physician's assistant program will receive both a Bachelor of Arts degree from the college and appropriate certification from Cleveland Clinic.

The academic program at Lake Erie will provide the first three years education. The student will be given a background in the life sciences, including training in psychology, sociology and social services.

Students also will serve in three field assignments in health-related social service agencies and in a doctor's office.

The program also includes a junior year academic term abroad, part of Lake Erie's regular curriculum.

The fourth year will be spent at Cleveland clinic and other medical institutions to gain practical experience in related fields. These include medical history interviewing, physical examinations, treatment plan proposals, emergency room procedures, counseling, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics and geriatrics.

Sales Tax Revenue Up

Collections of the one per cent local sales taxes in Pitt for the month of January were more than $25,000 higher than collections for the month of January 1974. Pitt County Auditor Reginald Gray told the Board of County Commissioners.

According to Gray, collections for January, 1974 totaled $176,172.46, according to figures supplied by the state revenue department, while collections for January 1975 amounted to $201,218.89—an increase of $25,046.43 over the previous year.

State-wide, there was an increase of more than $80,400 in local sales tax revenue during January.

According to Gray, 1975 collections totaled $11,630,522.84, while 1974 collections totaled $11,050,121.16.

Some Items Cost Less Than They Did In '67

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Bargain hunters take note: statistics show that almost 2 per cent of the items on the government's Consumer Price Index actually cost less today than they did eight years ago.

Seamless nylon hose, multiple vitamin compounds, portable tape recorders, super 8 movie cameras and two types of drugs were cheaper last month than during the 1967 base period used by the government.

Another five items, including television sets, portable radios and golf balls, have increased less than 10 per cent in eight years.

Before you cheer too loudly, however, you might want to note that the same statistics show 19 items — about 5 per cent of the total — have more than doubled in price since 1967. Sugar leads the way, costing almost five times what it did eight years ago, with more than half the increase occurring in 1974.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles the Consumer Price Index, also provides a detailed breakdown of what is happening to the price of 301 of the 396 products checked.

For the purpose of comparison, the price in the 1967 base period is used to represent 100 per cent. A January 1975 index of 110, therefore, means something costs 10 per cent more than it did in 1967; an index reading of 90 shows a 10 per cent decrease.

Over-all, without adjustment for seasonal variations, the Consumer Price Index for January stood at 156.1. That means prices have risen 56.1 per cent since 1967 or, put another way, it costs $156.10 to buy the goods and services you could have purchased for $100 eight years ago.

Most of the price decreases have occurred because of improved manufacturing techniques that cut production costs, such as in the electronics industry. Increased competition also has forced price cuts in some areas, like women's nylon hose.

Model Soldiers Hobby Captures Piece Of Past

By FRANK E. GRIFFIS
DALLAS (UPI) — Peering through a large magnifying glass, John F. Stuart Arthur squinted at the tiny, colorful figure in his hand, then set it down as if it were made of crystal.

"They're not toys—I don't play with them," Arthur said, gingerly replacing the model soldier beside other similarly-garbed miniature warriors on the glass shelf. "I just look them."

Arthur, 83, a retired accountant who was an officer in the British army in World War I, insists on accuracy of detail of his miniature armies.

"They are all exactly 54 mm (2 1/4 inches) high," Arthur said, "but don't ask me why."

The ancient Egyptians used to make two dimensional miniature soldiers, he said, and the German general staff re-created the U.S. Civil War with three dimensional model armies.

"When the British defeated the French at Blenheim (18th Century), the leaders imposed their own reparations on the defeated army, of course," Arthur said, chuckling. "Part of the reparations imposed on the French was to make miniature soldiers—all 54 mm tall."

His apartment is one big battlefield, with troops marching and fighting across no man's land and horses pulling supply wagons or wheeling cannons into position on glass shelves. To lend realism to the mock battles, landscape scenes — complete with shattered trees, bomb craters and exploding shells—are painted behind the armies.

"I suppose I got into this hobby more or less by accident. In Europe we always had toy soldiers and I had them as a boy," he said, pointing to what was left of his childhood soldiers on a shelf.

"After the war, though, I began collecting model soldiers without any real purpose, then continued to build up this collection of troops and units from World War I."

Arthur's soldiers were made in England by the Britain Co. The firm was destroyed during World War II, he said, but another company now is making the reproductions.

Arthur is a parson's son who was reared in Haworth, West Riding County of Yorkshire, the home of the Bronte sisters.

In 1915 he was commissioned in the Royal Field Artillery, and he saw action at Bullecourt in Northern France in 1917. Wounded in the first battle of Cambrai, he returned to a hospital in England.

He became an accountant, married, and in 1919 moved to Dallas, where he joined the firm of Cooper & Lybrand. He added to his collection of model soldiers during visits to Britain.

Arthur's collection of 700 fighting men, insured for $10,000, is complete except for the Turkish army.

"And those Turks in WW I gave us a lot of trouble in Italy and Turkey itself," Arthur said.

Arthur said he receives newsletters from British and American organizations interested in mock wars with model soldiers, but he does not participate in the hobby.

"They play by long distance telephone and telegraph and a lot of people play with 33 mm soldiers because they're smaller and can be moved around on a smaller area," Arthur said.

"But I just look at mine."

Israel To Get New Missile

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department says Israeli soldiers are in the United States to learn how to use the Lance battlefield missile, one of the U.S. Army's newest weapons.

This marks the first official confirmation that the United States will sell the Lance to the Israelis. There have been reports that Israel will get more than 100 of the missiles.

In response to an inquiry, the Pentagon said 80 to 90 Israelis will get 15 weeks of Lance training at Ft. Sill, Okla., the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland, and the Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala.

The U.S. Army has six Lance battalions in Europe and plans to send another six battalions there later.

The Lance, with a range of about 70 miles, is designed for both nuclear and high-explosive warheads. U.S. Lances now in the field carry only nuclear warheads.

The Army has developed a conventional warhead for the Lance and the Pentagon said recently a production contract was awarded to Honeywell

Corp. last December "in response to firm foreign military sales requests for the non-nuclear Lance warheads."

The Israelis have been pressing for the Lance for several years but the Pentagon appeared reluctant to supply it to them until recently, perhaps because the U.S. Army did not complete development and testing of the conventional warhead until last July.

Since the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, U.S. intelligence has reported the Russians have sent 160-mile-range SCUD bombardment missiles to both Egypt and Syria.

The Israelis are believed capable of making nuclear weapons, but there is no evidence they have done so.

Pentagon sources have indicated the Israeli version of the Lance may be armed with warheads containing clusters of small, high-explosive bomblets which spread destruction over wide areas after bursting.

Patty Hearst's Sister Charged In Drug Arrest

By TIMOTHY J. MADDEN
Associated Press Writer
BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Anne Randolph Hearst, a younger sister of fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, has pleaded innocent to a misdemeanor drug charge after her arrest at the U.S.-Canadian border.

Miss Hearst, 19, was arrested Tuesday at Niagara Falls, N.Y., along with one of two passengers in the car she was driving when the trio entered the United States at the Rainbow Bridge, U.S. Customs said.

U.S. Atty. Richard J. Arcara said that in a routine search of the car and its occupants a Customs agent found 1.2 grams of crystallized amphetamine, popularly known as "speed," in a sock worn by Donald R. Moffett, 21, of Denver, Colo.

Both Miss Hearst and Moffett were charged with misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance.

In an affidavit filed in connection with the arrest, the Customs agent who made the search and a Drug Enforcement Administration agent who was present said both Moffett and Miss Hearst told them the amphetamine belonged to her.

The affidavit also said the substance found in a plastic bag in Moffett's sock was proved by tests to be an amphetamine.

The third person in the car, George C. Boomer, 21, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., was not charged.

Moffett and Miss Hearst were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Edmund F. Maxwell in Buffalo within four hours of their arrest. Both pleaded innocent. Maxwell released them on $1,000 recognizance bond each.

He scheduled a preliminary hearing for March 19, and both

Miss Hearst and Moffett said they would be available for it. Miss Hearst's arrest followed recent unconfirmed rumors that her sister Patricia would soon attempt to cross the border from Canada into the United States in the Buffalo area.

Officials declined to comment on where Anne Hearst had been while in Canada. Arcara said he had "no way of knowing" if she had intended to contact her fugitive sister.

Arcara also said he did not know what brought the trio to this part of the country. He also said he did not know where they had been or what their destination was.

FBI officials said they had no indication that Anne's arrest was in any way connected with their search for Patricia, but they declined comment when asked if they planned to question Anne about Patricia. Anne reportedly spent the night in Buffalo.

Miss Hearst told authorities here she was a student at Regis College in Denver, but Dr. Miles Anderson, the dean of campus life at the college, said no one by the name of Anne Hearst was registered at the college. Her parents, Randolph A. and Catherine Hearst, recently said one of their five daughters was attending college under an assumed name.

Puts Stress On Self Interest

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — America should stress its own national self-interest in any foreign aid as well as expressing its humanitarian concerns when assistance is given to drought-stricken areas, says a Stanford University professor.

Associate Prof. David Abernethy, a political scientist, said instead of allowing people to point out hidden elements of self-interest as "part of an evil capitalist plot, the government should openly and candidly stress self-interest."

Foreclosure Law Upset

CHARLOTTE (AP) - A three-judge federal court has ruled North Carolina's foreclosure law is unconstitutional in a case involving a Charlotte widow whose home was sold at public auction without her knowledge.

Mrs. Stella A. Turner, 47, brought suit two years ago to save her home, and the panel, ruling in the case, held that the law violated the due process clause of the 14th Amendment because she had not been informed of the sale or given the right to appeal it.

Mrs. Turner said she learned her house had been sold when a real estate agent showed up one weekend in March, 1973 and announced he had bought the house at public auction.

It had been legally sold at a public auction because Mrs. Turner had fallen behind on her home improvement loan and the lender, the Dixie Acceptance Corp., had foreclosed.

It was brought out before the panel that only two notices of the sale had been given - one in the Mecklenburg Times, a weekly newspaper, and the other posted on the courthouse bulletin board.

Under the court's ruling handed down Feb. 12, a homeowner must receive personal notice of any action to sell his property and he may request a court hearing before any sale can be held.

The ruling "is addressed to the situation where the seller is sloppy and doesn't tell what is happening, and where the person who owns the house doesn't understand what is happening," said Terry Roche, head of the Legal Aid Society in Charlotte. Also under the ruling, Mrs.

Turner got her house back and resumed payments on the improvements.
