

May Also Abandon Old Capital Of Hue Fourth S. Viet Province Is Abandoned

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam is abandoning a fourth province, Quang Tri, to the fast encroaching North Vietnamese and is considering giving up Thua Thien, which includes the old imperial capital of Hue, government officials disclosed today.

About 100,000 panicky civilians were reported fleeing southward toward Da Nang from the cities of Quang Tri and Hue. The area is on the northern coast below the demilitarized zone, where heavy fighting has been under way for two weeks.

Field reports from Hue said residents were servants were ordered to remain on duty. Orders were sent to the government radio station in Hue to be prepared to destroy all equipment should the situation become critical.

The move follows the abandonment Monday of the three western provinces in the Central Highlands — Kontum, Pleiku and Barlac. The government said it could not hold those provinces, which cover 11,000 square miles and have more than half a million people, after North Vietnamese forces cut all overland supply routes.

Since the cease-fire agreement was signed more than two years ago, the Saigon government has lost or abandoned 24 of its 244 district capitals. Of the provinces, five out of 44 have fallen or been abandoned. District capitals are the equivalent of county seats, while provincial capitals are the equivalent of state capitals.

Western and Vietnamese analysts said the decision to pull out of Quang Tri was made for strategic reasons and approved by President Nguyen Van Thieu. North Vietnam reportedly has four infantry divisions and two anti-aircraft divisions in the region, its 30,000 troops outnumbering South Vietnamese regulars two-to-one.

The North Vietnamese already control most of Quang

Tri province except for the provincial capital by the same name. They seized the province during the 1972 Easter offensive, but South Vietnamese forces won back Quang Tri City four months later.

Virtually all of western Thua Thien is also controlled by the North Vietnamese or is a noman's land. The only government controlled areas are mainly along the coastal strip of Highway 1.

Quang Tri province has a population of nearly 300,000, about one-fourth of it concentrated in the city. Thua Thien has 750,000 people, including 200,000 in Hue.

In explaining the strategy of withdrawal, one analyst said: "You have to look at your most secure defense perimeter. Where is the best defensive perimeter? You look at the territory and determine where you can best use your troops." The current North Vietnamese offensive has consolidated their positions since they already controlled South Vietnam's northern border.

Neither Codes Nor Missiles Found CIA Raised Part Of Soviet Submarine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said today the Central Intelligence Agency raised part of a Soviet nuclear submarine that sank in the Pacific Ocean.

Mansfield said the sub was old and that its military value was not very significant, but "what it contained might have been of some value." He did not elaborate.

However, government officials who asked not to be named, said the operation was designed to recover secret Soviet codes. Neither the codes nor any missiles were discovered, they said.

These sources also described the submarine as a nuclear-powered, older sub of the so-called H-class. While no missiles were found, they said an analysis of the recovered section indicated the submarine was armed with three missiles that normally would carry nuclear warheads.

The CIA, working with industrialist Howard Hughes, brought the section of the sub to the surface in about 17,000 feet of water about 750 miles northwest of Oahu, Hawaii, the sources said.

It sunk in 1968 following a series of explosions, they said. The bodies of about 70 Soviet officers and seamen were recovered in the operation.

There was no immediate White House reaction to the report.

The CIA refused to comment.

But Mansfield said he felt sure that the episode would be investigated by a Senate subcommittee.

Earlier, the Los Angeles Times, the Washington Post and the New York Times carried accounts of the July 1974 operation in their editions today.

The Los Angeles Times said the recovered portion of the Soviet sub yielded "secrets with profound national security implications."

The Times also quoted CIA director William E. Colby, "We blew. I have no comment on this. I did my best."

Pressed for comment on the report Tuesday night, the paper said he replied, "Let me wait and see what it looks like tomorrow. There are a lot of diplomatic aspects of it and I can't talk about it now."

The stories were published after columnist Jack Anderson reported on the Mutual Broadcasting System Tuesday night a similar version of the attempt to retrieve the Russian sub intact. It went down after a series of explosions.

The CIA made efforts to have accounts of the operation withheld.

There was no immediate Soviet reaction to the stories, and it was not known what impact the operation might have on Washington-Moscow relations.

In general, this is what the three newspapers and Anderson reported:

The United States initiated the highly secret salvage operation only after determining that the Soviet Union had not fixed the location of the sunken submersible, even after an extensive search monitored by the U.S. Navy.

The Navy apparently had determined the exact location through detection of the sound of underwater explosions, although not in time to rescue any of the Soviet crewmen.

Hughes was approached as a cover for the "Project Jennifer" operation because of his penchant for secrecy, his known interest in marine mining and his patriotism.

The government financed the construction by Hughes' Summa Corp. of a 618-foot recovery vessel named the Glomar Explorer. It was equipped with a huge claw which could be lowered to the sea bottom, grasp the submarine and bring it to the surface.

Also constructed was a huge covered barge that could be used to bring the recovered submarine to port, safe from the prying cameras of Soviet spy satellites.

Big Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation closed last year with the biggest three-month deficit on record for its basic balance of payments, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department reported that the balance was in deficit by $5.9 billion in the last quarter of the year, a deterioration from $3.9 billion for the previous quarter.

Over the year, the balance ran a $10.6 billion deficit for the second worst annual performance since Commerce began keeping a check in 1960.

The annual total compared to a $11.2 billion deficit in 1972, just before two successive devaluations of the dollar. The quarterly figure surpassed a previous record of $3.9 billion in the first three months of 1972.

The balance of payments reflects the flow of money across the nation's borders. The deficit meant more dollars were being sent abroad for investment or purchase of imported goods than were being brought into the United States.

'Need' Tax

RALEIGH (AP)—City and county officials urged the North Carolina General Assembly today not to compound their revenue problems by removing the sales tax on food.

"We need the sales tax," said Waverly Aikens of Fuquay-Varina, representing the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners. "If it is going to be removed, give us an alternative to make up the revenue."

The state tax is 3 per cent, and 95 of the state's 100 counties have a 1 per cent tax on food which is shared with the cities.

Winston-Salem Mayor Franklin R. Shirley and Rocky Mount Mayor Fred Turnage urged that the legislature not reduce any state taxes shared by the cities. They specifically mentioned the sales tax and franchise tax.

Officers Are Elected; Med School Affiliation Voted By Hospital Bd.

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Memorial Hospital Board last night approved the affiliation of the hospital with ECU Medical School.

The vote culminated months of work done by a liaison committee between the hospital and medical school to draft an agreement. The agreement, adopted last week, calls for the county hospital by the medical school as a teaching hospital, but keeps the bulk of the hospital with the county. The state is expected to add extra beds for the new Memorial now under construction as a result of the agreement. Patients from Pitt county will have priority for admission in accordance with the agreement.

All costs related to the affiliation program will be assumed by the medical school.

Eric Fearrington, who has been the liaison representative, the agreement for the fit of any Board members may not have seen it. A vote of appreciation for the agreement was rendered by the Board and the people of Pitt County.

The agreement was given Dr. Fearrington, Board representative Kenneth Dews, and County Commissioner representative

Charles Gaskins. Also approved was an agreement with Pitt Technical Institute for PTI to take over the Radiology Technology Teaching Program the hospital has had for a number of years. Graduation from the Pitt Tech program would lead to an associate degree in radiologic technology, which would be transferrable to another college if the graduate wished.

J. B. Kittrell Jr., Mrs. Helen Moseley, and Dr. John L. Wooten, all of Greenville; Mark W. Phillips of Grifton; and Dan K. Wooten of the Falkland township were new members introduced to the Board. W. R. Duke of Farmville was elected chairman.

Kittrell fills a vacancy left when Ed. N. Warren became a County Commissioner. Mrs. Moseley fills a 19th slot on the Board. Dr. Wooten replaces Dr. Donald Tucker as the medical staff representative. Phillips replaces Richard Johnson. And Wooten replaces his brother, outgoing chairman Woodrow Wooten.

Duke, who was vice-chairman last year, accepted the chairmanship from Wooten, who has been on the Board almost continuously since the 1940's when the present Pitt Memorial was being planned. This was his last year of eligibility, having served 12 years in succession. Appointments are made by the Board of Commissioners. Other officers are Kenneth Dews of Winterville, vice chairman; Glenn Hardee of Grimesland, secretary; J. H. Moye of Greenville, treasurer; and Delton Perry of Bethel, assistant treasurer.

Duke, Dews, and Hardee are automatic members of the executive committee and W. F. Tyson of Stokes, Mack Edwards Jr. of Ayden, Eugene James of Belvoir, and Ed Switzer of Pactolus were elected to serve with them.

On the finance committee are Duke Moye, Edwards, Glenn Strickland of Bell Arthur, and Otis Stokes of Swift Creek. On the auditing committee are Ephraim Smith of Chicod, Roscoe Bell of Fountain, and Eugene James.

Duke appointed Dews, Dan Wooten, and Dr. John Wooten to a standing ECU Liaison Committee; Perry and Phillips to the Ambulance Committee; and Kittrell, Moye, and Mrs. Moseley to a Retirement Committee.

A motion to see that notices of all meetings pertaining to the hospital be sent to the Board. (Continued on page 14)

MAY I APPEAL?

If the Social Security Commission turns down a person's claim for disability benefits, what recourse does he have? E. C.

Cy Adcock, manager of the local Social Security office, explained the appeals route one may take if he wishes.

First he may file a request for reconsideration, entering any new information or further evidence about his condition. The Disability Determination Unit will then go over the case once again and respond.

If this finding is negative, the person then may call for a hearing before a hearing examiner. This is an administrative law judge, a "circuit rider" who visits here whenever there are several cases for him to hear. If he does not find in favor of the person, the case may be taken to an Appeals Council in Washington, D. C.

Adcock said each of these steps must be initiated through the local Social Security office.

I'VE GOTTA QUIT

Can you tell me where to get some information to help people quit or cut down on smoking? The time has come—I've got to do something. L. J.

The Eastern Lung Association, located across Pitt Street from the Main Post Office, has pamphlets that may help you. And the Lung Association and the Seventh Day Adventist Church here cooperate to hold stop-smoking clinics several times a year. He said the next one is tentatively scheduled for the week of April 13. If you need bolstering in the meantime, though, he said he would be glad to start you on the five-day program early, though he feels you will benefit from the group situation afforded by the regular five-evening course. You may call Mr. Frye at 758-5717. Good luck.

'Powder' In Wrecked Airplane Proves Cocaine

WILSON, N.C. (AP)—A man under indictment for conspiracy to distribute cocaine was in a plane which crashed Tuesday and spilled an estimated 1 1/4 pounds of the narcotic, authorities said. He and a companion were killed and the third occupant was seriously injured.

He was James William Mealey, 23, of Greenville, N.C., 50 miles east of the crash scene in Wilson County of eastern North Carolina.

The director of the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation (SBI), Charles Dunn, said laboratory tests showed the white powder found in the plane was cocaine and a cutting agent. He valued the narcotic at between $250,000 and $300,000.

Also killed was Mario Patacco, 26, of Forest Hill, Md., believed to be the pilot. Authorities said the Grumman American was owned by a Washington, D.C., rental firm, Professional Flying Services.

Joseph Michael Seybert, 23, of San Clemente, Calif., was hospitalized with a head injury after the predawn crash into a farm field.

A spokesman for the federal Bureau of Narcotics said Mealey had been charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine in an indictment handed down Feb. 20 by a federal grand jury in Baltimore, Md.

Police records show that Mealey and four other men were arrested Feb. 26 in Greenville on one count of conspiracy to violate the Controlled Substances Act.

A newspaper clipping of the arrests was found in the plane wreckage, Sheriff W. R. Pridden of Wilson County said.

Dunn said the SBI is working with federal and local authorities on the investigation of the crash. "We're interested in where the drugs were coming from and where they were going to in North Carolina," he said.

Deputy Sheriff Gene Pearson said $2,500 was found on one of the victims. He did not say which one.

Authorities said there was no gasoline in the tank or on the ground. They speculated that the pilot was trying to land in the field, or on U. S. 301 about 200 yards away.

Couple Speaks Vows In Double Ring Ceremony

WINTERVILLE—In a double ring ceremony Sunday at 3:00 p.m., Miss Sandra Louise Harris became the bride of David Lawrence Shirley in the Bethany Free Will Baptist Church.

The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. A. B. Chandler. A program of wedding music was presented by Mitzie Corbett of Ayden, organist, and Addie Taylor of Ayden, vocalist.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Harris of Rt. 1, Winterville, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Shirley of Rt. 2, Grifton. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of bridal satin fashioned with a V-neckline, empire waist, which was trimmed in white daisies. She carried a basket of mums and carnations.

The ring bearer was Kenneth Dail of Rt. 1, Snow Hill, cousin of the bride. J. B. Beaman of Grifton was best man. Ushers were Ray Harris of Rt. 1, Winterville, and Jimmy Harris of Winterville, both cousins of the bride, Harry Lee Shirley of Hookerton, uncle of the bridegroom, and Stan Edwards of Grifton.

The mother of the bride selected a formal gown of mint green polyester crepe with nylon sheer sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of polyester knit with a waist of kelly green and white sleeves. Both wore corsages of carnations.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Warren Moyer. Mrs. Kenneth Dail, aunt of the bride, presided at the register.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will reside in Ayden.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of Ayden-Grifton High School and he is employed by U.S.I. Division, Ayden.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church community building.

The bride's table was covered with a satin cloth and centered with an arrangement of mums, gladioli and greenery. Mrs. Jimmy Harris poured punch and Mrs. Ray Harris served wedding cake.

The bride's parents entertained the bride and her attendants at a dinner party at the Three Steers Restaurant Friday night.

Rich Tramp Rises Above Ribbing

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a little out of the ordinary. I've been a Tramp for 60 years, and I enjoy it. People think I'm putting them on when I tell them my name, but it doesn't bother me because I have my health and a beautiful family, and what more does a man need?

I did have a little trouble getting a girl to marry me because of lots of girls weren't too crazy about having the name "Tramp" but I finally snagged one, and she is super. She got used to being a Tramp, and now it doesn't bother her one bit. (The kids got teased when they were little Tramps, but now that they're grown, they're used to it, too.)

That's not all. My first name is Richard, which makes me a "Rich Tramp." I hope you print this so some of my old Army buddies who have lost track of me will know they can find me in Banks, Oregon. Thanks, Abby.

RICH TRAMP

DEAR RICH: Which only proves that if you have a sense of humor, you can rise above anything. What this world needs is more Rich Tramps!

DEAR ABBY: Someone once asked you what could be done about retrieving gold teeth, crowns, inlays, etc. from one who has died instead of just burying them, because gold is so valuable these days. Your answer was that few people have sufficient gold in their mouths to justify leaving it to heirs.

Well, I have a friend who has a pawn shop, and he says that some morticians in town bring him gold inlays, crowns, fillings, etc. that add up to quite a bit.

I am not interested in the money being lost by my family from the gold in my teeth (of which I have a considerable amount), but what can be done to protect the dead?

When a body is in the coffin, it's unlikely that a member of the family would check to see if the teeth are intact.

It is not a pleasant thought that when one is dead and helpless, a mercenary person might take advantage of the situation.

Can anything be done to prevent this from happening?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: The only protection against such an unthinkable bit of petty thievery would be to select a reputable mortician. (Of all the morticians I queried—and there were many—none had ever heard of anyone who had been guilty of such a ghoulish deed.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for five years and have just moved into a home of our own.

Well, here's the problem. When my husband is working in the backyard and he has to go to the bathroom, he thinks it's too much trouble to come in the house, so he just "goes" in the bushes instead.

When I object to this, he says he always did it as a boy, and nowadays it's old-fashioned to object to things like that.

Abby, the other day, the neighbor lady from next door was visiting me, and my husband turned his back toward a bush while she was there. I'm sure she saw him, and now I'm so mortified that I haven't been able to look her in the face since.

We've agreed to let you settle the argument. Am I old-fashioned? Or should my husband learn some manners?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Your husband should learn some manners.

Changing Times In Restaurants

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

Dessert-sharing, bill-splitting by dating couples, lunch-skipping and more doggie bag carriers are signs of changing times on the restaurant scene.

Even some upper crust, luxury restaurants are offering early evening specials at reduced prices in an effort to make up in volume what they are losing to higher costs of food and overhead such as labor, rent and energy for heating and cooking.

As an alternative to price increases, some restaurants are cutting out menu items, switching from beef to less expensive meats and/or reducing portion sizes, says Henry W. Bolling, president of the National Restaurant Association, Chicago.

Bolling, himself a restaurateur with both service and self-service operations in downtown Chicago, said in an interview that he thought the customer count nationally had not decreased last year, but that many customers are trading down in their choice of food and the number of courses they order.

"I have the impression that many people are coming in on their coffee break, buying breakfast and skipping lunch. They order (such things as) eggs, bacon, wheatcakes. We've seen an increase in the average check at that hour."

"There are more coffee pots in offices nowadays, and people buying bakery sweet rolls."

A spot check of eleven table service NRA-member restaurants in widely scattered cities showed business up in some, down in others, or holding steady.

In Dallas, Michael Glynn estimated that about 25 per cent fewer customers were coming into the restaurant he manages. Glynn said wine sales in particular have dipped but that more customers are ordering full dinners instead of a la carte items.

In a popular Cincinnati restaurant, co-owner Michael Comisar reported wine sales up, heavy volume on fresh fish items and business in general sensational.

Martin Wetten, district manager for the restaurant atop the John Hancock Building in Chicago was also optimistic. He said his customer count was up, dollar volume had increased by 10 to 20 per cent and buying habits appear unchanged.

Victor Gotti, owner of a famous San Francisco restaurant whose entrees range upward from $6.75, said sales were up 22 per cent for 1974.

"The West Coast does not seem to feel the current pinch that we read about in other sections of the country," he added.

But in Boston, Louis Amirsakis, owner of a landmark seafood restaurant, said his marginal customers have declined in number although regulars were coming in as usual. Marginals are people who drop in between 6:15 and 7 p.m. for a drink and a piece of fish or appetizer.

To Paul Shank, who operates the dining room and coffee shop in a Scottsdale, Ariz., hotel, the inflation-recession situation is a mixed blessing. He said sales volume dropped 15 per cent in January, compared with the same month in 1974. Customers still ate in the hotel, he said, but they were trading down from the dining room to the coffee shop.

In Atlanta, restaurateur A.J. Anthony said his dollar volume and customer count had dropped about 10 per cent, but attributed part of the decrease to the season, noted for its absence of conventions, which represent a large part of the restaurant's business. To offset the decline, Anthony laid off only one waiter but cut his work week from six to five days.

Movie Star Maureen O'Hara Writes About Trip With Pilot Husband

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Maureen O'Hara Blair, the vivacious red-haired movie star, recently accompanied her pilot-husband, Capt. Charles Blair, to Australia to pick up a new seaplane for his expanding Caribbean airline, Antilles Airways. At the suggestion of Jerry Dreyer, editor of the St. Croix Avis who accompanied the Blairs on the last leg of the trip from Boston to St. Croix where the Blairs live, she wrote this account of the trip for The Associated Press.)

By MAUREEN O'HARA BLAIR
Written For The Associated Press

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, USVI (AP) — The first time I ever flew in a plane was from

Los Angeles to St. Louis in 1941 in a twin engine DC3 with my mother and Lucille Ball. The trip was rough and very bumpy and I was deadly ill, in fact so ill that an emergency landing was considered. I have never forgotten it, and the memory still goes with me on every plane trip.

How strange then that I should marry a pilot, and one of the most renowned pilots in the world at that. In March of 1968, I married Charles F. Blair, Pan American World Airways. I spent two years flying all of Pan Am's routes with Charlie as pilot.

One of these trips in 1968 was to Sydney, Australia. I had spent five months in Australia in 1950, making "Kangaroo," the first Hollywood picture to be shot in that country, so it was a happy reunion for me with old friends. For Charlie, too, it was a reunion. He saw the flying boats in the Sydney Harbor.

We lost no time in finding our way to the flying boat base of Ansett Airlines of New South Wales at Rose Bay. With his deep love of seaplanes so obvious it did not take Charlie long to meet everyone at the base and to make friends, and to learn that only two of these four-engine flying boats remained in service. They were originally part of a fleet that flew from Australia to many islands in the Pacific. These routes were gradually taken over by the less romantic land planes leaving only the Sydney-Lord Howe Island daily service to these venerable four-engine flying boats.

We saw and inspected the two flying boats. They were beautiful inside and out, and maintained in the best condition.

I learned that one of the flying boats had served as a patrol plane with the New Zealand Air Force and was converted into a passenger plane at Rose Bay in 1964. The second flying boat had served with England's Royal Air Force, coastal command, as a war-time patrol plane. It was later converted for commercial use and originally flew the long run between England and Sydney, Australia, via the Middle East.

On the 4th of July 1968, Ansett Airline took us for a courtesy flight in the Sydney Harbor area, making several takeoffs and landings.

When I saw that far-away look in Charlie's eye as he climbed out of the cockpit I knew he had lost his heart again to another seaplane.

Over dinner that night we heard that Ansett Airlines were planning to phase out the flying boats because of the planned construction of an airstrip on Lord Howe Island. They expected that this would occur within two or three years, but it actually took more than six years.

For days I listened to Charlie dream of buying the flying boats and bringing them to the Caribbean to join Antilles Air Boats, his busy commuter airline. All these years he has never given up that dream, and finally the dream became a fact when we took off from Rose Bay, Sydney, Australia.

The sadness of the Australian people to see their beloved flying boat leave was very touching. Some refused to look; women cried openly; the men waved glumly.

The beautiful flying boat soared over the Sydney Harbor proudly wearing her new name "Excalibur VIII," and her new company name and wearing the Virgin Islands flag on her nose which she vainly and stubbornly stuck into the evening sky.

Charlie always talked about my going on the trip. I never said no, but ... I never said yes. Somehow, in spite of myself, I got caught up in the fever of the excitement and started planning not only to be on the trip, but to photograph it in 16 mm movie color and stills. I carried my cameras and my film with me night and day, and added a notebook.

Our route took us 1,750 miles and 15½ flying hours to Pago Pago, American Samoa, 1,650 miles and 17 hours to Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, 2,650 miles and 1,705 hours to Long Beach, Calif., 1,200 miles and 7½ hours to Eagle Mountain Lake, Fort Worth, Tex., 1,200 miles and 7 hours to downtown Washington, D.C., on the Potomac River, 255 miles and 1½ hours by the coastal route to New York Harbor landing downtown at the Battery, 220 miles and 1½ hours by the coastal route to downtown Boston, and finally 1,800 miles and 10¾ hours to St. Croix, which included a detour by Air Traffic Control.

All the way I talked with everyone, photographed everything and everybody. I have a mountain of photographs, thousands of feet of film, books full of notes, sad notes, funny notes, heart-warming notes, all unforgettable. Now I have the monumental task of editing the film and deciphering all my notes, so I can share my magnificent experience, and unlock all the wonders of earth and sky that are recorded in my eye, my memory and my heart for ever and ever. I think I'll write a book.

Midwifery May Make Comeback

By ROSE P.V. YOUNG
Bridgeport Telegram Writer
BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — "Boil some water! Rip up some sheets!"

These cries, supposedly shouted by a midwife about to deliver a baby, are all most people know about midwifery. And, as in most legends, myth rather than truth dominates the picture.

Julia Marcoux of Putnam, Conn., who says she's the only registered midwife in the state, can testify to that.

While she has not practiced in this country, Mrs. Marcoux trained and worked for several years in her native England before coming to the United States in 1955.

"In England, we practiced in the hospitals and were more common baby deliverers than doctors were," she said.

"Very seldom did we deliver in the home, but many movies portray the dramatic portion of work such as ours, and I guess that's how that impression of midwives was started."

She said, "The first month of study usually weeds out would-be actresses."

"After that we have three years of training similar to that of a nurse and one year of intense study and practice in obstetrics, nutrition and total care for mother and baby."

Yale-New Haven Hospital has begun a midwifery course, Mrs. Marcoux predicts that the demand for them will increase.

"The trend toward 'getting back to the natural life' may contribute to the increasing popularity of midwives," she said.

Mrs. Marcoux is the mother of eight children ranging in age from 7 to 18 and is a part-time nurse at a local hospital. She says she's too busy to be a midwife at present.

"It's not an easy profession, because you have to reassure the woman, calm her and concentrate on the delivery all at once," Mrs. Marcoux said.

But she says that "looking at a new life you helped to bring into the world" makes it worthwhile.

WELCOME HOME—Maureen O'Hara Blair and her husband, Capt. Charles Blair, are greeted on their return home to St. Croix after flying a huge four-engine airboat 12,700 miles there from Sydney, Australia. Greeting them are Mrs. Melvin Evans, wife of the U.S. Virgin Islands governor, and Lt. Gov. Athiel Otley. Blair hopes to start service with two 40-seat sea planes between New York and Boston.

WEEKDAY SUPPER

- Sausage Beans
Salad Bowl BreadTray
Swedish Apple Pudding Beverage
SAUSAGE BEANS
Hearty rangetop main dish.
1 pound small link pork sausages
1 cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
Two 16-ounce cans barbecue-style beans
2 tablespoons dry red wine or vermouth

Into a large skillet pour 1 cup water and add sausages; simmer uncovered for 5 minutes; drain off water. Over moderate heat, cook sausages, turning as necessary with a spoon so as not to prick, until cooked through and brown on all sides; remove and keep warm. Pour off all but a generous film of fat from skillet; add onion and green pepper; cook gently until wilted. Add beans and wine; heat, stirring often. Add sausages. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Depending On Nuclear Energy

While there are still problems to be worked out, it more and more appears that nuclear power will be the long range answer to our electric needs.

Virginia Electric and Power Co. reports that it expects about 30 percent of its 1975 generation to come from nuclear power. In 1974, the company's annual report says the Surry nuclear project's 20 percent of total generation saved customers over $40 million, compared to generation from fossil fuel sources. Since nuclear fuel costs only one-fifth that of coal and oil it is not difficult to see where the savings could be realized.

What is more, Veeco says that by 1977 over 50 percent of the firm's power generation will be from nuclear sources. The industry generally doesn't expect to reach this level until well into the 1990s.

Obviously Veeco is doing better than the nuclear age and we think that speaks well of Veeco. But it brings us to another serious problem which is plaguing the electric customer, and that is the fossil fuel charge which is tacked on to the individual electric bill each month. The fuel charge was authorized because of the rapidly rising cost of fossil fuel, since obviously the power companies must have additional revenue to off-set the higher fuel cost.

The problem is, though, that the fuel charge makes it easy for the companies to pass on higher cost of fuel without making efforts to hold the costs down.

Obviously a power company has little incentive to invest in new nuclear power generating facilities with its corresponding savings in fuel costs, if it can continue to buy fossil fuel and pass the cost on to the customer.

We have already seen many companies cancelling nuclear projects and in some cases work has ceased on projects already underway.

The fuel charge allowance should go and Utilities companies should go back to justifying their need for additional revenues before the regulatory agencies.

THIS AFTERNOON

Let Them Pay Their Costs

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There are dozens of specialized services performed by a variety of state agencies for special interest groups each year, while the cost is largely paid by the average taxpayer.

David T. Flaherty, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, has taken the lead in what may turn out to be a move by numerous state agencies to have the people who use the services pay the bills, rather than taking money from the general fund.

Flaherty has turned over to members of the General Assembly a rundown on the special services in his agency, along with a suggested revision of the law which states simply that he would "have the power to establish . . . rates for services provided by the agencies and fees for licensure, inspection, and certification not to exceed the cost of the services provided."

It's difficult to put a price tag on the numerous services which would fall in the category of special interest programs, but knowledgeable people put the annual savings from increased charges at more than $2 million throughout state government.

Many Agencies
Flaherty's agency is not the only one involved; a long list of specialized services are offered by the Department of Agriculture, and other state agencies provide similar services, but fewer in numbers.

Neither is the idea of state fees being high enough to cover the total program alien to state government. Several examples of agencies operating in that way are located in the Department of Commerce where hefty fees are collected to cover the cost of administering inspection programs for banks, savings and loan institutions, mutual burial associations, and rural electric membership corporations, among others.

Flaherty said his aim is an effort to "reduce the cost of government to the average taxpayer, by charging people whom we deliver services to, rather than having the general public paying the bills."

The present rate for services process does include charges for some services, seldom enough to cover the whole cost, and in many cases provides no charge. The system grew up randomly over the years, Flaherty explained, and there is "little relationship or uniformity . . . as to why a fee is charged for one service and not for another."

The idea behind Flaherty's proposal is to have the cost borne directly by the facility affected, and indirectly by the clients receiving that service rather than placing the cost on taxpayers.

Debatz Seen
The trend toward charging for special services is likely to produce some spirited debate in the General Assembly, however, as the idea develops that many of the state inspection and laboratory services are really designed to protect the general public, not necessarily benefitting just the user of the particular service.

Still, the Governor's Efficiency Study Commission two years ago called for strong state action to recover such costs from the users.

In the case of Human Resources services, many of the fees would be charged in such areas as blood tests, analysis of drinking water, inspection of water treatment facilities, mass-gathering permits, medical examiner or pathological autopsies, licensing of nursing homes and public solicitation activities, inspection of X-ray and other radiation devices, etc.

Even though individual costs might fall on private citizens in many cases, Flaherty noted that medical insurance, Medicare coverage or other funds would be available to cover the cost.

Officials at the Department of Agriculture say that agency is not likely to move in the direction of privately collected fees, even though over half a million dollars yearly is involved.

That agency provides free soil sample analysis, charges low fees for dairy inspections, inspects feed, seed, and fertilizer processors, and inspects numerous weighing and measuring devices—often devices not serving the general public.

On example shows a $25 annual fee to inspect firms dealing in garbage to feed hogs, while the cost of that service runs well above $40,000 per year and could be covered by a $100 annual fee.

The INSIDE REPORT

Strange Demo Bedfellows

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Gov. George C. Wallace is working backstage for the reelection of Alabama state Democratic chairman Robert Vance, a Southern liberal and Wallace's longtime enemy, as chairman of the National Democratic State Chairmen's Assn.—an unexpected intervention causing wide-ranging ripples in the party's internal politics.

The election Thursday (March 20) in Washington had been considered a test of strength for Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss; state chairman Donald Fowler of South Carolina was the moderate pro-Strauss challenger against Vance, the liberal, anti-Strauss incumbent.

But Wallace's decision to join Northern liberals, including Sen. George McGovern, in backing Vance makes his forthcoming presidential campaign a factor in Thursday's vote. If Vance is reelected, Wallace operatives would try to collect a due bill, exploiting him as their best friend in the national Democratic power structure for Wallace's fourth presidential campaign. How Vance would pay off that political debt considering his McGovernite base on the national scene could prove a formidable problem.

The old Wallace-Vance feud began cooling last spring when Wallace lieutenants pulled their punches in a move to oust Vance as state chairman. Their relationship grew positively cozy last fall, in forming Alabama's delegation to the Kansas City convention. After Wallace moved to name Vance delegation chairman by acclamation, Vance privately promised to reciprocate.

Courthouse politicians in Wallace's Alabama organization warn that Bob Vance is a sharpshooter in Birmingham not to be trusted. Nevertheless, Wallace insiders expect benevolent neutrality as a bare minimum. As a member of the powerful Compliance Review Commission, Vance will be expected to protect Wallace delegates from challenges. If reelected head of the state chairmen, Vance would be expected to serve as a pro-Wallace counterforce to Strauss's soft-voiced hostility.

Evidence of the new alliance appeared when Sen. James Allen, the Alabama conservative and Wallace ally, sent pro-Vance letters out to all state chairmen and began recruiting other Senators. The Arkansas vice-chairman received a call in Vance's behalf from conservative Sen. John B. McClellan of Arkansas, acting at Jim Allen's request. Allen and Vance claim this has no connection to Wallace. Buy Wallace himself placed calls for Vance, including one to another Southern governor. At Wallace's national headquarters in Montgomery, there is no disguising the belief that Bob Vance is now their boy.

Simultaneously, the party's most liberal forces are pumping the telephones for Vance under the command of tireless liberal activist Alan Baron, working out of McGovern's office. Left-of-center unions who finance Baron's Democratic Planning Group are applying pressure for Vance. Both McGovern and his 1972 running-mate, Sargent Shriver, have made calls for Vance.

Vance is renowned as a sly and wily party tactician. But how can he keep Wallaceites and McGovernites happy at the same time?

Viewing Vance as an unadorned Southern liberal who will end up backing Duke University President Terry Sanford in 1976, Northern liberal friends know him as a courageous foe of Wallace on his homefront and cannot (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

A REVEALED GOD
Every statement in the Bible rests upon the comforting fact that our God is a self-revealing God. There are many divine secrets—things which are hidden from us because they are beyond the comprehension of our sense. There are many things in our Religion which will probably never be revealed to us, on this side of the veil at least, simply because the limitations of our humanity would make it impossible for us to understand these things. Nevertheless, the oustandingly inspiring fact of our faith is that our God is a self-revealing God. He wants us to know about Him to the extent that we can comprehend His significance. We can be sure that there is available to us at all times anything and everything which we need to know about God for our welfare and salvation. In the Bible, in personal experiences, and above all in the Word made flesh who dwelt among us, we can find an answer to every question we need to ask about God and life.

Recession Almost Over

WASHINGTON—I have good news to report today. The recession is not going to last as long as everyone, including the President of the United States, predicts.

My source for this information is Prof. Heinrich Applebaum of the Flatbush School of Economics. Prof. Applebaum told me the reason he believed the economic downturn wouldn't last was that "Americans just don't have the stamina to go through a long recession."

"They did during the Thirties," I reminded him. "Ah yes, but we're dealing with a different breed of American cat now. He's much softer; he's had it too good. No one wants to stand in soup lines anymore or sell apples on the street as we did when I was a boy. It takes tough moral fiber to have a long recession. We don't have the determination we used to have. Sure you hear a lot of talk about recessions, but how many people you know are willing to fight for one?"

"Not many," I admitted. "Since television, the attention span in this country on anything has been exactly 20 minutes. Right now we're in a recession because everyone says we're in it. People whisper to each other, 'Don't buy anything because things are bad.' They go to parties and tell everyone how lousy business is. Americans are not in a spending mood. But give it a few months and suddenly they'll get tired of the recession just like they got tired of Watergate."

"Then they'll be whistling a different tune. They'll say to the media, 'We don't want to hear no more about a recession. Give us something else to talk about. If you don't stop talking about the bad economy, we'll turn off your

Public Forum

To the editor:
Miss Beasley's letter a short time ago painted a dramatic and emotional picture of God's blessed four-footed martyred dogs crucified upon a cross of leashes and chainlink fence. According to her, those persons who stood in favor of the leash law are cruel, heartless, demonic denizens who plot to subvert the idyllic paradise of Greenville's dog-citizens. Come, come, Miss Beasley, are you really serious?

In the first place, all the citizens of Greenville who really cared one way or the other about the leash law had ample warning and opportunity to stand up and be represented at the Council Meeting. Obviously, the majority will prevailed. Must the majority yield to an insufferable and to a large extend irresponsible minority? What a way to run a government?

In the second place, how many people must be bitten or mauled by house pets running free on the streets of Greenville before you will realize that something must be done? Must you be attacked and mauled before you to cry out for action? You fail to realize that there are senior citizens and children in this city who are not as capable of defending themselves as you are. I am not now addressing myself to the prevalent damage to property committed by the dogs but the real and potentially greater threat to life and limb. I grant you that a large part of the problem stems from irresponsible owners; however, you still prefer their side against those who have been victimized by dogs. And, please, do not overgeneralize. Of course, a lot of people had some strong suggestions for dealing with the dogs as you pointed out. These comments were made in the heat of anger and frustration from the assaults on their dignity, person, and property by dogs. You are no less guilty than they are if you likewise condescend to name calling.

Let's use a little reason and sanity: if we are to live in a civilized society, it would serve self purpose to fence in the people while the dogs run free.

Opines Dividends Are Answer

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The way to get people back to work, help corporations raise capital and restore stock market values is remarkably simple, said the speaker, a professor, economist, author and investor.

For stock market prices to rise, stocks have to return appreciably more than bonds, commercial paper or certificates of deposit. But in recent years such debt instruments have returned more than stocks, partly because of more favorable tax treatment.

Leo Barnes, professor of finance and investments at Hofstra University, and originator of the immensely popular annual volume, "Your Investments," responds with his solution: "Make all cash dividends tax deductible as a business expense for the corporations that pay them. Lastly, it makes no sense to treat the interest paid on bonds and other debt capital as a deductible business expense, but no the dividends paid on equity capital."

He continued: "It's irrational. All the cash costs of capital should be tax deductible." Otherwise, he maintains, the tax system gives an unfair break to one form of capital raising over another.

"With dividends tax deductible, companies would be eager not only to pay dividends as large as possible but also, as the prices of their stocks recovered, to finance their capital needs once again through stock."

Relating the situation to jobs, Barnes said: "Jobs just don't happen. It is capital that makes jobs — approximately $60,000 per job—while jobs provide the customers for what capital and labor produce."

It is this point, the interrelationship of jobs and capital, and corporate and labor interests, that people find difficult to understand, Barnes continued.

One example: "A healthy stock market is surely important to workers retiring or contemplating retirement on the benefits received from unionnegotiated pension and profit-sharing plans whose assets are heavily in equities."

Barnes finds, however, that there exists a strong prejudice against the stock market and capital. It is time, he believes, for practical thinking devoid of old emotions.

Benefit Ruling Hailed

By CATHY STEELE ROCHE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty said the state would quit paying welfare benefits to mothers for their unborn children in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that such payments were not required.

The state has been under court order to make the payments since last June and had an appeal of the order pending in the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond. The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday in an Iowa case that the Social Security Act did not require Aid to Families With Dependent Children to be made for unborn children.

Flaherty expressed pleasure over the ruling and said the payments would be discontinued when formal court proceedings are completed in the North Carolina case. He said the payments were never authorized by the legislature, so the Social Services Department could not continue making them even if it wished to.

Richard Hart of the Legal Aid Society of Mecklenburg County filed the class action suit on behalf of needy pregnant women in U.S. District Court in Charlotte last May. Following earlier opinions handed down by the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge James McMillan ordered the state to start making the payments.

Asst. Atty. Gen. W.W. Webb, who represented the state in the case, said the federal appeals court had stayed the North Carolina case pending a Supreme Court decision. Webb said Tuesday that he expected that the Supreme Court had addressed itself to all of the issues raised in the North Carolina case.

He predicted, "That will be the end of it judicially. Presumably the state could still opt for it, though I doubt seriously they would."

The Supreme Court did not rule on the Department of Health Education and Welfare regulations that allow the states the option of granting AFDC for unborn children.

Flaherty said, however, that he could not imagine the legislature choosing to authorize funds for payments to pregnant mothers. He said other needs took a higher priority.

Hart said the payments for pregnant mothers were sought because medical evidence indicates malnutrition before birth often damages a child's health and makes him less able to achieve. He said the situation often results in an adult who needs assistance from the state.

Flaherty said pregnant women could get prenatal care in programs offered by county health departments, although he said often help came too late.

"North Carolina has high damage to babies at birth because people don't get care," Flaherty said.

Family Counseling In Alcoholism

By PAUL BARWICK

Not knowing how to cope with an alcoholic person or persons within an immediate family causes frustrations and problems within the total family which often brings the family unit to the point of destruction.

With the philosophy of providing assistance to families where there is an alcoholic person, Pitt County Mental Health Center has established a Family Enrichment Program which provides assistance and counseling to members of the family, in addition to the alcoholic person.

The Family Enrichment Program is one of three such pilot programs within the Eastern Mental Health Region and is financed through unim-pounded Hughes Funds, according to Robert Hufford, Alcoholism Program Coordinator.

Since the program was initiated in August, 1974, contact has been made with over 100 families, according to Frank Kidd, Director, Family Enrichment Program. "Some of the referrals made to us did not qualify for this program," Kidd said, "but currently we have 61 families in Pitt County with whom we are working. Since we started this program, we have been in every precinct in the county delivering services."

Referrals to the Family Enrichment Program come from the Walter B. Jones alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, Cherry Hospital, Social Services, Public Health Services, public and private school units, ministers and other community or county agencies.

"After a referral is received," Kidd said, "we make a contact with the family in their home and see what is the total problem. All mental health services are offered, in particular to members of the alcoholic person's family. The families with whom we are working are seen in their home on a regular basis."

Hufford and Kidd pointed out that the problems they are finding are many and are often centered in financial mismanagement and lack of knowledge in knowing what to do to enable the family to cope with the problems created by the alcoholic person.

"Our reception by the families we are assisting has been very good," Kidd said. "We are finding deep frustrations and that the assistance we are giving is welcomed."

Kidd said helping families cut across "red tape" and knowing what services are available to help the family through numerous difficulties are high on the list of "cause factors" in family frustrations.

Helping the family reach financial responsibility with such things as budget counselling, securing employment and furnishing advice on what community resources are available are important.

Where children are involved, assistance is rendered in helping them adjust to school and behavioral problems caused by a parent's abusive use of alcohol.

"Some of the initial work," Kidd said, "is spent in alcohol education. We want the spouse and children to have a thorough understanding about alcohol and the alcoholic person."

He added, "We try to remove some of the resentment the spouse and children may have toward the alcoholic person in their family. We find that children will try to cover up for their father or mother if they are abusing the use of alcohol and also find some young children who turn to the use of alcohol themselves because of their frustrations created by an alcoholic parent."

"When referrals are made, and if the alcoholic person within the family is not already in treatment, we make an effort to get that person in treatment as soon as possible," Kidd added.

"We are having good results from this Family Enrichment Program," Hufford said. "The attitude of the families with whom we are working is very positive. We are making plans to continue it and hope to serve more families. We are limited in staff but are hoping the staff will be enlarged."

At the present time, working in the program, are Kidd, Curtis Best and one full-time and three part-time students from East Carolina University. The senior students are working with the program as their field placement through the Social Work and Corrections Department.

Robert Spence, an Alcohol Counselor Trainee at Pitt County Mental Health Center and Harvey Baggett, Alcoholism Worker, are assisting with the program and making referrals to the program when appropriate.

The Pitt County Family Enrichment Program has established a close working relationship with the Alcohol Training Program of North Carolina (ATPNC), based at ECU. In addition to assisting with the training of the staff, ATPNC has helped establish an evaluation system whereby the value of the program to families can be factually determined.

THREE STAFF MEMBERS . . . of the Alcoholism Program of the Pitt County Mental Health Center are (left to right) Robert Hufford, program coordinator; Frank Kidd, director of the Family Enrichment Program, and Curtis Best, an alcoholism worker.

Publicly, Vance does not flaunt his new Wallace ties. When asked directly whether he would support Wallace, Vance sidesteps. "I'm not going to say what will happen two years from now," he told us. That's far short of what Wallaceans are expecting.

Audacious Hanoi
The long-held Washington illusion that Hanoi was concerned enough about world opinion never to assault a South Vietnamese town containing international truce supervisors was shattered last week with the surprise attack on the provincial capital of Ban Me Thuot in the central highlands.

In the town were two non-Communist members—one Iranian and one Indonesian—of the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) set up by the 1973 Paris agreement. They were overrun when North Vietnamese troops captured Ban Me Thuot Thursday, symbolizing Hanoi's contempt for the treaty. Their whereabouts are unknown at this writing.

The presence of ICCS inspectors certainly does not excuse South Vietnamese forces for being surprised at Ban Me Thuot. Sir Robert Thompson, the British Asian expert, was in Washington recently predicting an assault on Ban Me Thuot. It has now become the third provincial capital to fall during the entire war (and the second in recent months) thanks partly to insufficient defense preparations.

Buchwald . . .

"Of course they will. They don't want to antagonize their viewers or their readers. The editors will say, 'Take all recession stories off the front page and put them back in the financial sections where they belong.' The broadcasters will stop sending out camera crews to depressed areas. Pretty soon everyone will say, 'Hey, the recession is over! It's okay to go out and spend money again.'

"This will mean that orders to the factories will start coming in, people will have to be hired, unemployment will go down, sales will go up, and the Avon lady will once again be ringing your doorbell."

"It sounds too good to be true," I said. "It's going to happen," Applebaum assured me. "The best thing about it is that Congress and the Administration have been so slow in doing anything about the recession that it will be over before they get any bills passed. Once the American people get the message that Washington can't help them they'll figure a recession isn't worth all the bother."

Applebaum continued: "This generation just doesn't have the 'Spirit of '32.' I asked my class the other day how many of them would be willing to go out and panhandle for a couple of years, and not one student raised his hand."

"It's not like the old days," I said.

"The thing about our generation is that we could always say to our kids, 'You never had it so good. When I was your age I was lucky to have enough to eat.' If I'm right that this recession isn't going to last, the young people today won't have a damn thing to say to their kids about how they suffered."

"That's sad," I said. "Let me give you some facts about this recession," Applebaum said.

"I don't want to hear them," I said angrily. "I'm sick and tired of talking about it all the time."

Applebaum smiled. "You see. What did I tell you? If even the opinion makers get sick of talking about a recession, can prosperity be very far behind?"

Only Ten Items Await City Council Attention

Only ten items are scheduled for consideration at Thursday's 4 p.m. City Council session, the board's second March meeting, at city hall.

Items under old business on the brief agenda include: appointments to boards and commissions; a public hearing on an order authorizing $170,000 parking bonds; consideration of a resolution rescinding Resolution No. 206 requesting advance Community Development funding; and

Acceptance of Trent Circle in North River Estates to be added to the city maintained street system; consideration for bids for a motorcycle unit for the Police Department; presentation of the annual report of the Joint City-County Board of Adjustments; and

Administration for a short-range transit development program; New business items include: scheduling of a public hearing on a request for rezoning property at Clark and 13th Streets from R-6 (residential) to Unoffensive Industry; scheduling of a public hearing on a request for rezoning property on Elizabeth Street between Ward and Fourth from R-6 to Downtown Commercial Fringe;

Consideration of a resolution which would allow the Greenville Utilities Commission, subject to verification by the mayor, to institute civil actions in order to collect damages to property under the care and custody of the commission up to $5,000.

Series Of Six Collisions In City Tuesday

More than $6,400 property damage resulted from a series of six traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 7 p.m. collision at the intersection of Elm Street and Brookgreen Drive involving cars operated by Karen Berge Grieb of Winterville and Pamela Sue Singleton of 310 South Sylvan Dr.

Officers, who charged Miss Singleton with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety estimated damage at $3,000 to the Grieb car and $200 to the Singleton vehicle.

William W. Ward III of Falkland was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 1:50 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 500 feet South of the Trade Street intersection.

Investigators, who identified the driver of the second car involved as Rudolph Earl Manning of Williamston, set damage at $500 to the Manning car and $1,200 to the Ward vehicle.

A passenger in the Ward car was reported injured.

Cars driven by Thomas Clifton Oakes of Route 8, Greenville and John Barky Cox of Route 1, Greenville collided about 6:57 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 500 feet North of the Chestnut Street intersection, according to investigators.

Oaks was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety by police who estimated damage at $100 to the Oakes car and $400 to the Cox vehicle.

An estimated $450 damage resulted to a car operated by Johnny Wayne Carmon of Route 4, Greenville after the vehicle struck the curbing and rolled over an embankment on Greene Street a half-mile North of the First Street intersection about 2:43 p.m.

No charges were made.

Ernestine Keel Sermons of 114 North Harding St. was charged with driving under the influence, public drunkenness, leaving the scene of an accident and failing to stop for a red light following investigation of a 5:25 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Streets.

Officers said the Sermons car collided with a vehicle driven by Robin Smith of 1903 Brook Rd. causing an estimated $125 damage to the Smith car and $275 damage to the Sermons auto.

Two passengers in a car driven by Robert Donald Krieger of Rarmville were reported injured when the Krieger car and a vehicle operated by June Dolly Carson of 2503 Madison Cir. collided about 4 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Washington Streets.

Officers estimated damage at $20 to the Krieger vehicle and $200 to the Carson car.

Carson was charged with failing to stop for a stop light.

Cambodia Stonewalled

By SPENCER DAVIS
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States tried unsuccessfully last fall to persuade China to help get peace negotiations going in Cambodia, according to high State Department sources.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during his visit to Peking last November strongly urged Premier Chou En-lai to take a hand in restoring peace to the area, it was learned.

But Chou turned down Kissinger's plea with a doctrinaire dissertation on the evils of imperialism that could have been excerpted from an editorial in the Communist Party Journal Red Flag, the sources said.

Kissinger could not understand why the Chinese were so emotionally "up-tight" about Cambodia, the sources said. The best estimate here is that Cambodia relates to a super-sensitive Chinese internal political issue involving a high personality.

"If the U.S. thought it would get help from the Chinese on a Cambodian settlement, you can forget it," said one official. "We have been stonewalled."

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the exiled Cambodian leader, lives in Peking. But it is not clear that he would receive Peking's blessings to head a new government in Phnom Penh if the Lon Nol government falls.

Chinese officials have been warm toward Khieu Samphan, the 44-year-old leader of the Khmer Rouge who serves as a member of the Khmer Communist Party's Central Committee, deputy prime minister and defense minister of the Royal Government of National Union. Intelligence sources here say the North Vietnamese regard Samphan as a foe rather than a friend, although Hanoi supplies Samphan's 60,000 troops with supplies and some 2,000 military advisers.

According to Asian experts here, the Cambodians and the Vietnamese continue to maintain ill-feelings toward each other. There is a fear and hatred of the Vietnamese by the Cambodians and a kind of contempt and disdain by the Vietnamese for Cambodia that applies even at the leadership level of the Khmer Rouge and the North Vietnamese.

More Cards Than Irishmen

KANSAS CITY (AP) — St. Patrick's Day cards sent this year by Americans outnumber the people in Ireland by more than three-to-one, according to industry sources.

Dennis Burns of Hallmark estimates the green paper blizzard at some 11 million cards, propelled through the mails by the 30 million Irish-Americans in the U.S.

Ireland itself has only three million inhabitants.

NURSES NEEDED

NEW YORK (UPI) — A trained nurse shortage has struck the United States, reports the National Enquirer.

Today about 800,000 nursing positions exist in America with only 659,000 trained professionals to fill them.

According to Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, this shortage of 141,000 nurses is expected to reach 184,000 by 1975.

Survey Damage In Friday Storm

According to James T. Johnson, State Director of Farmers Home Administration, county supervisors made a survey Monday of damages to farm property in the areas affected by the storm in eastern North Carolina Friday.

Counties hardest hit appear to be Beaufort, Martin, Pitt, and Lenoir. The county supervisors will report this damage to the Board of County Commissioners in each of the counties. The Commissioners will make recommendations to the Governor based on the information the FmHA supervisors provide and other facts they may have regarding the storm damage. The Governor makes his request to either the Secretary of Agriculture or the President.

If the area is designated as an Emergency area, then farmers will be eligible for FmHA credit at 5 percent interest to replace damaged property. If the loss is for personal property and household furnishings, they will qualify for credit for the actual loss up to $10,000. These loans to replace home furnishings or home equipment are repayable up to 7 years.

Loans for restoration of real estate except housing will be repayable over a period of 20 years. These would be to clear debris from ditches and canals, to replace fencing, and similar purposes.

Loans can be extended for housing restoration for 33 years and have a limit of $50,000.

In the meantime, farmers who have suffered losses and are interested in obtaining a loan should immediately get in touch with the FmHA office in the county in which the damage occurred. The agency will attempt to meet the applicants' needs with either existing programs or the Emergency Loan credit program when the area is designated for such Emergency credit.

How N.C. Congressmen Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes March 6 through March 12.

HOUSE
JOBS — Passed, 313 for and 113 against, a bill (HR 4481) appropriating $5.9 billion to create as many as 900,000 jobs. The appropriation in part would fund 200,000 additional "public service" jobs in municipalities and counties.

The bill would also create jobs through government spending such as the purchase of 121,000 automobiles by the General Services Administration, funding of water and sewage plant construction, and funding of projects to repair public buildings. In addition, the bill would fund an estimated 768,000 summer jobs for youths.

Supporters acknowledged that HR 4481 offers no permanent solution to the recession. They urged passage, however, as a crucial step to stimulate the U.S. economy. Rep. John Conyers, (D-Mich.) stressed the "human considerations" which demand action, citing an unemployment rate as high as 35 percent in parts of Detroit.

Opponents said legislation cutting income taxes, now in the Senate, should be given a chance to work before Congress hastily passes more "emergency" legislation. Rep. Bill Alexander (D-Ark.) opposed funding for "public service jobs that are all too likely to end when the federal spigot is turned off." He added: "What happens then? A new round of rising unemployment because our private enterprise section has not expanded enough to provide jobs for the unemployed?"

Reps. Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6) and Charles Rose (D-7) voted "yea." Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

ENERGY — Voted, 364 for and 57 against, to return to the Ways and Means Committee the recently-vetoed bill (HR 1767) by which Congress sought to prevent President Ford from imposing higher taxes on imported oil. This pre-empted a direct vote on whether to sustain or override President Ford's veto.

Since Ford has voluntarily suspended his tariff plan the legislation is not presently needed. So the House sent it to the committee, where it will be kept in reverse while Congress and the President continue in quest of solutions to the energy-economy crisis.

Supporters said Ford's compromise made a veto override vote unnecessary. Rep. Al Ullman (D-Ore.) said, "The people of this nation want an energy program . . . not a political confrontation."

One opponent, Rep. Thomas Downey (D-N.Y.), said the tariff would unfairly affect consumers of home heating fuel. "We need energy conservation in this country but there are other and better ways to achieve it," he said. Other members opposed any form of energy taxation because the effects would severely hamper other segments of the economy, such as the automobile industry.

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea." Andrews did not vote.

BUDGET CUTS — Rejected, 132 for and 252 against, an amendment to pare $259.4 million from fiscal 1975 funds already appropriated for Department of Health, Education and Welfare programs such as nutrition for the elderly, lead-poisoning prevention, bilingual education and education of the handicapped.

It was proposed to a bill (HR 4075) which incorporated some of President Ford's requests for rescissions in the FY 1975 budget.

Supporters said Congress was obligated to cut federal spending using tools provided in the 1974 Budget Control Act. Rep. William Frenzel (R-Minn.) said passage of the amendment "would be a tiny step forward toward fiscal responsibility."

Opponents objected to placing health programs at the top of the budget rescission list. Health needs are "magnified daily" during the current economic crisis, said Rep. Daniel Flood (D-Pa.).

Fountain, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Jones, Neal, Preyer, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."

Henderson, Andrews and Martin did not vote.

SENATE
RULE 22 — Adopted, 56 for and 27 against, a resolution (S Res 4) to make filibusters more difficult to conduct. As a result, Rule 22 now sets 60 senators — three-fifths of the membership — as the majority necessary to cut off debate. The 60 standard applies regardless of how many senators are present and voting.

The vote eased the rule setting two-thirds of the senators present and voting as the minimum number needed to end filibusters.

One supporter, Sen. Walter Mondale (D-Minn.), said the reform would allow the State to act "even when a small intrasigent minority seeks to frustrate action."

Opponents said the change would weaken the Senate's role as a forum for debate, and, as Sen. Clifford Hansen (R-Wyo.) put it, would encourage "an impassioned majority to ride roughshod over the minority."

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay." Sen. Robert Morgan (D) did not vote.

STRIP MINING — Passed, 84 for and 13 against, a bill (S7) setting the stiffest federal controls to date on the strip mining of coal. It closely resembles legislation passed by Congress last December but pocket-vetoed by President Ford. S7 would establish minimum federal standards which each state would have to enforce, and would require strip miners to assure land to approximately its original condition.

Supporters said the environment must not be sacrificed in the search for energy. Birch Bayh (D-Ind.) said, "This country has more than 500 years of coal reserves. Simply stated, the problem is not the abundance of coal, but how to get it out of the ground" without destroying surrounding land and water.

Opponents said S7 would retard the mining of much-needed coal, and would impose costly standards which the consumer would eventually pay for. Sen. Dewey Bartlett (R-Okla.) said the bill "actually is a ban on coal production."

Morgan voted "yea." Helms voted "nay."

Digger Found Buried Treasure

LRAGUE (AP) — A Slovak bricklayer was digging a well at his newly built house in Salka, Nove Zamsky, eastern Czechoslovakia, when at the depth of 2 meters he discovered an earthenware vessel containing 85 silver coins.

Experts say they have been in the ground since the 16th century; the earliest is dated 1471 and the newest 1588. The collection is of considerable numismatic value, experts say.

Shocked By Her Hubby's Wiring

PRAGUE (AP) — Anna H., 53, of Liberec, northern Czechoslovakia, was cleaning the bath when she touched a metal soapholder and got an electrical shock, and a short circuit put out the lights in the whole apartment. She inspected the holder and found a wire connected to it from an electric cooker.

Anna called in the police, who found the wiring had been done a fortnight earlier by her husband, Anton H., 61, who claimed he wanted to frighten his wife.

Symposium On Tobacco History Here Thursday

Historian Richard K. MacMaster and tobacco researcher Orman E. Street will head a group of speakers at the third annual tobacco history symposium slated for East Carolina University Thursday. The conference will be devoted to the history of tobacco, especially the tobacco export trade and its impact upon North Carolina and Virginia.

"Whitehaven and the Tobacco Trade" will be the title of Dr. MacMaster's presentation. Dr. Street will address himself to "Far Eastern Tobacco Leaf Production and the Tobacco Trade."

Other principal speakers include: Professor Fred Siegel, Empire State College of the State University of New York, Westbury, N.Y.; Professor William S. Humphries, former farm editor of the Raleigh News and Observer and now agriculture information specialist, North Carolina State University; and B. G. Andrews, tobacco specialist with the Tobacco Division of the Foreign Agricultural Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Andrews will deliver the luncheon address, "Flue-Cured Tobacco Export Prospects for the 1970s." Professor Siegel will address himself to "Economic Aspects of Tobacco Marketing and Trade in the Nineteenth Century Danville, Virginia Area."

East Carolina University personnel slated to participate on the conference program include: Leo W. Jenkins, Chancellor; and historians, Drs. Herbert R. Paschal, Don Lennon, John C. Ellen, Charles L. Price, and William N. Still.

The symposium is presented by the Institute for Historical Research in Tobacco and the Department of History of East Carolina University.

Sponsors of the meeting are the North Carolina Humanities Committee and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Probing Assault And Robbery

Greenville Police are continuing their investigation into the reported assault and robbery of a Charlotte man here last week.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Clyde Weldon McDaniel, 62, reported to police that he had been assaulted and robbed of $1,200 in cash by two men near his room at the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive.

Cannon quoted McDaniel as saying two men jumped him from the rear, beat him, searched his pockets and took the cash after he left his room to get some ice from a near-by ice-making machine.

The incident occurred about 9:25 p.m. March 12.

Someday, Land Use Curbs Will Be A Salvation

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Each year for more than a decade, 350,000 acres of farmland — roughly the land area of half of Rhode Island — is lost to urban development.

And each year an additional 1.9 million acres — about the size of Delaware — is removed from the "rural" or food production category and used for highways, airports, flood control, recreation and preservation of wilderness.

Nevertheless, the nation's total cropland, about 470 million acres, has remained unchanged for the last two decades, because each year about 2.2 million acres of unused land is converted to farming.

Can this method of replacing lost farmland acre for acre continue?

Yes, the U.S. Agriculture Department says — at least for the rest of this century. There is in the United States, the USDA says, 396 million unused acres, mostly in the Great Plains states, available for development into farmland.

But the initial cost of irrigation and fertilization for new cropland is high — more than $1,000 an acre, says the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. And the world food shortage has created a new land-use situation.

For the first time since 1949, there is no farmland set aside to limit food production. Last year, nearly all of the 470 million farm acres were used for crops, the USDA's Economic Research Service says. Just five years ago only 333 million acres were cultivated and a rest were held in reserve; a reserve which dwindled away as demand skyrocketed for American grain. If production is to be increased to rebuild the millions of tons of grain reserves the nation had in the '50s and '60s, then more than 470 million farm acres will be needed in the coming years.

Can this additional cropland be acquired at reasonable cost? The USDA's Soil Conservation Service is skeptical. Its experts explain that it might be easy to convert to cropland in a matter of months 100 million acres of prairies, now used for grazing sheep and cattle. But the conversion might add sharply to the cost of farming and perhaps to the supermarket price of food.

This is one of the indications of an as-yet-unpublished report prepared for the Senate Agriculture Committee by the Council on Agricultural Science and Technology, a private academic group.

The Council says that land lost to urbanization is often high quality. But a third of the 396 million acres available to replace this good farmland is marginal or poor for farming. That means a higher cost, especially in fertilizers, to bring this marginal land up to the quality of the land that is lost.

"Urban sprawl, skip development and breaking farms into five-to-50-acre parcels (because of the urbanization) has (detrimental) effects on agricultural production," the council adds, indicating that this process, too, pushes up the cost of food production. So does highway construction because it divides up farms and reduces efficiency, the council says.

$48 Million For A School For Bureaucrats

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—The government wants to spend $48 million for a school for executive bureaucrats. The campus would have a swimming pool and gym for the students, who would number 225 at a time. The plan calls for spending $2.4 million a year to lease facilities for a school to teach top-level federal officials to be better executives. The school would be constructed by the University of Virginia at its Charlottesville, Va., campus and would include 18 classrooms, a 400-seat auditorium, a 40,000-volume library, a swimming pool and an indoor gymnasium. Details of the plan were outlined Tuesday by the General Services Administration to a Senate public works subcommittee, where it met with skepticism. The GSA is seeking congressional approval for a 20-year lease with the university for the project. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., the subcommittee chairman, noted that the proposal would cost some $48 million over the 20-year period for a school that would house, at most, 225 "students" at any one time. Morgan said he couldn't comprehend such expenditures "for what strikes me as very elaborate facilities. Even U.S. senators don't have such luxurious facilities." "Aren't we just building a country club out there?" he asked officials of GSA and the Civil Service Commission's Federal Executive Institute. The institute is a school where the government conducts modern management seminars and training programs, lasting from several days to several weeks. It now is housed in a former hotel in Charlottesville.

prime office space in Manhattan and San Francisco. Newland said the expenditure was needed to provide better-trained government executives.

He defended the swimming pool by saying that most of the officials enrolled in the programs are between ages 45 and 55 and that swimming would give them exercise after classes. There are currently managerial training centers for junior government executives at Berkeley, Calif.; Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Kings Point, N.Y. And the Agriculture Department has long run what it calls a "graduate school" on a wide range of subjects in Washington for anyone in government. Employees are encouraged to attend this school to improve their work skills, Agriculture Department spokesmen say.

Transfer Of Trial Asked

RALEIGH (AP)—Lawyers for former Green Beret doctor Jeffrey MacDonald, charged with murdering his wife and two daughters at Ft. Bragg five years ago, have asked that his trial be transferred from Raleigh to Los Angeles. In a motion filed in U.S. District Court Tuesday, the attorneys claimed that a trial in Raleigh would pose an intolerable financial burden on MacDonald who has been practicing medicine in the Los Angeles area for several years. The U.S. attorney's office is scheduled to reply to the request by the end of April. The government is expected to oppose any request to move the trial out of North Carolina. MacDonald's attorneys said if the trial were held in Los Angeles, MacDonald could continue his work as director of emergency medical services at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach, Calif. California attorney Bernard L. Segal, who represents MacDonald, said the trial could last four months. Government estimates have ranged about six weeks.

Sue Over Open Meetings Law

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Newsmen for Charlotte's two daily newspapers and for a television station claim the Mecklenburg County Board of Commissioners has violated the state's open meetings law. The newsmen filed suit in Superior Court Tuesday for an injunction to prohibit such alleged practices. They claimed the commissioners have held two illegal private meetings. The suit is being financed by the Mid-Carolinas Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Hopes For Early End To Housing Slump 'Dashed'

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

The interest rate on home loans has gone down. But, in a blow to economists' hopes for an early end to the housing slump, so have the number of homes being built.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that housing units started in February were 1.9 per cent below January and 50 per cent below a year earlier. And housing permits, which usually anticipate actual construction starts by three months, were the lowest on record.

Some economists had predicted a turnaround in the depressed housing industry this spring as a first step in recovery from the nation's economic slump. Housing industries had gained on the stock market.

But the housing stocks fell Tuesday amid a market decline blamed mostly on profit taking. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.12 to 779.41 in a hectic day of trading on the New York Stock Exchange that was the ninth largest in exchange history.

And Michael Sumichrast, economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said he now sees no possible recovery in the housing industry before summer. "I never thought the permit rate would go that low, but it did," he said.

At the same time, the Federal Home Loan Board reported interest on home loans took its steepest decline since 1971 in February. And some banks lowered prime rates, the interest to the biggest corporations.

Theoretically lower loan interest should encourage home buying and the continuing fall in prime rates should spur business expansion. But it doesn't seem to be working that way.

Also on Tuesday, the tax cut and energy bills continued their way through the legislative process. Senators opened debate on a tax cut bill designed to pump money into the economy and defeated a motion to lower the Senate's $29.2 billion in cuts to about the $20 billion level passed by the House. President Ford sought a $16.2 billion cut.

The Senate also accepted a compromise on the oil depletion allowance and left it tied to the tax cut bill. The depletion allowance permits oil and natural gas firms to write off 22 per cent of their gross income. The compromise would continue the tax break for independents but eliminate it for big firms. The House voted to end it altogether and a Senate-House panel will have to work out the differences.

The House Ways and Means

Committee met on an energy bill that could hike federal gasoline taxes, now four cents a gallon, up to 37 cents a gallon on gas used over nine gallons a week. The Federal Energy Administration proposed rules that would raise gas prices more than other fuel prices under President Ford's tariff plans. Republicans on the Joint Economic Committee, meanwhile, called for passage of a tax cut in "a fight against depression" but warned against increasing energy costs. And Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, while again predicting a turn-around in recession by the fourth quarter, called inflation a chronic problem and said more government spending would worsen economic troubles.

Prisoners' Union Sues

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Prisoners Union has charged in a suit filed Tuesday in U.S. Eastern District Court that the state Department of Correction has interfered with it by tampering with mail and forbidding union activities.

The union which has been incorporated with the secretary of state's office, but is not recognized by the Department of Corrections, claims a membership of about 2,000 prisoners.

Deborah G. Mailman of Raleigh, attorney for the union, said the suit was filed because the department "has set out a policy to harass and disrupt the operations of the organization...in violation of the first amendment right to the freedom of association."

A hearing in the suit has been set for April 17 before U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree.

Arrested In Break-In Case

Levi Green, 43, of 508 Raleigh Ave. was arrested yesterday by Greenville Police on charges of breaking, entering and larceny.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the charges stemmed from a March 16 break-in at B and B Foodland on Bancroft Ave.

Green was placed under a $500 bond pending hearing of the case in District Court.

NEW YORK (AP)—Several negative political and economic developments combined to give the stock market an excuse for some long-awaited profit-taking today.

The Dow Jones average at 11:30 a.m. was down 9.46 at 769.95. Trading on the New York Stock Exchange was moderate.

Losers broadly led gainers, however, 945 to 204 among the 1,484 issues traded.

"The market's bending under the weight of financial and political problems," said Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities. "They provide an excuse for profit taking, nothing more."

In the past three months, the Dow has risen over 200 points.

Among the negative developments, Stovall said, were the recent developments in Cambodia and South Vietnam, the weakening of the dollar overseas, indications the housing industry is still in a slump, and government figures which showed the nation posted its single largest quarterly balance of payment deficit on record during the final three months of 1974.

General Electric, off 1 1/2 at 46 1/2, and Union Carbide, down 1 1/4 at 53 1/4, were the most active Big Board issues. General Motors slumped 1 to 43.

Among the oils, Exxon fell 1 1/4 to 71 1/4, Getty Oil lost 1 1/4 to 140 1/4, and Standard Oil of California fell 1 1/4 to 25 1/4. A tax change repealing the oil depletion allowance for major oil companies won tentative Senate approval Tuesday.

Oil service issues also fell, with Halliburton down 1 1/4 to 136 3/4 and Hughes Tool off 1 1/2 to 73 1/2.

The Big Board's broad-based index was down .46 at 44.64 at 11 a.m. while the American Stock Exchange's market-value index dropped .34 to 80.71. The most active Amex stock, Syn- tex, gained 7/8 to 38.

Storm Alert

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The National Severe Storms Forecast Center said today the possibility of tornadoes will exist for extreme northeast North Carolina, portions of eastern Virginia, a small portion of eastern Maryland and adjacent coastal areas, adding "The threat of tornadoes and severe thunderstorms with large hail and damaging winds will exist in these areas from 12 noon EDT until 4 p.m. EDT, this Wednesday afternoon."

"The watch area is along and 50 miles either side of a line from 60 miles south, southwest of Elizabeth City, N.C. to 25 miles west of Salisbury, Md."

REAL Speaker Is Heard By Sorority

Ms. Marjorie A. Bane, representing the REAL Crisis Intervention Inc. center, Greenville, was the guest speaker for the business meeting Thursday evening of Alpha Nu Sorority at the Ramada Inn.

She spoke on the history of the center, qualifications of full-time employees and volunteers. She listed the services and functions available to people in need, 24 hours per day.

Ms. Ann Byrd conducted the business meeting. Devotion was given by Chaplain Sarah Perkins. An open house invitation was extended to all Alpha Nu sisters and invited guests for Thursday evening, at the home of Mrs. Jeanette Clapp, 1208 Oakmont St.

Mrs. Byrd, Mrs. Perkins, and Miss Alya Taylor made definite plans to attend the International Convention of Alpha Delta Kappa in California in July. The state convention of ADK will be held in Asheville April 25-27. All members are urged to attend.

Ms. Arlene Hoot will represent Alpha Nu at a breakfast hosted by the Greensboro Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa at the state convention of the North Carolina Association of Educators on

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

The 1974-75 basketball season has come to a close, and for this area, it has certainly proven an outstanding one.

East Carolina University, with new coach Dave Patton, won 19 games, finishing second in the Southern Conference, and putting on a fine performance in the National Commissioners' Invitational Tournament, despite the final score. It marked the most victories by a Pirate team since the university moved from the college division ranks.

And with recruiting off to such a fine start, with two members of the All-State team already headed for a purple Pirate uniform, things can only be looking up.

Coach Patton, who earned Coach of the Year honors in the Southern Conference, is to be commended for the year, and those who allowed him the opportunity, over the protest of some who wanted a "name" coach, are also due a commendation.

It is expected that the university will shortly announce that Patton has been awarded a multi-year contract.

At the same time, congratulations are due Coach Wilson McDowell and his Rose High School Rampants. Rose went from the doormat of the conference to the number two team this year.

Two seasons ago, the Rampants won only one game, and the next year, they won just two. This year it was a complete turnaround, and we hope that the success of this season will also be continued.

Also we would not want to forget the outstanding performance by Coach Shelly Marsh's team at D.H. Conley. The Vikings finally broke the jinx that plagued them in the district tournament, moving into state play.

They finished in third place, and while we are sure that they would have rather kept the title in the Eastern Carolina Conference, they should be quite proud of their achievements.

Another team that deserves praise is Williamston's girls, who went undefeated before losing in the first round of the State Tournament to the eventual titlewinners.

Also Conley's wrestlers, on finishing high in the State tournament, along with the matmen from East Carolina, and the university's swimmers, who picked up Southern titles.

And we've probably missed someone (who'll certainly let us know about it), but we do feel that sports in this area has had an outstanding winter.

Spring is now here, with baseball, track, tennis, and the others, and it should be just as great a season for the fans.

The success of the Pirate basketball program, along with the problems some groups are having getting a large hall for the productions of shows brings up the need for a large center in Greenville, capable of being used as a basketball arena, an auditorium, and a convention center.

A building such as that currently in Greenville, S. C., would be a good plan to follow—on an enlarged version. It could handle just about anything anyone wanted to bring in, and the construction of such a building should be looked into.

Pasadena Is Awarded Super Bowl For 1977

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — Pasadena's whirlwind courtship with the National Football League brought a surprising acceptance for the Super Bowl of 1977.

Never before had a city without a pro football team of its own been voted the championship game, but the Southern California city had 104,701 seats in a world-renowned stadium working for it. In accepting Pasadena's Rose Bowl bid, the NFL turned down Los Angeles, Dallas, Houston, New Orleans and Montreal.

So Super Bowl XI will visit the big bowl on Jan. 9, eight days after the Pacific-8 and Big Ten collegiate champions battle in the annual Rose Bowl game at the Arroyo Seco.

Don Yokaitis, former mayor and current councilman in Pasadena, declared, "We made the decision to go after the Super Bowl about a month ago. We came to Honolulu thinking our chances were excellent for two basic reasons. First, we feel we have the finest stadium for players and for fans. Second, it is the stadium with the largest capacity and most prestige."

Pasadena had enough confidence in its bid that it had even planned how to freshen the turf after the Rose Bowl game so that all would be ready for the pros.

City Manager Jim Crain told the owners, "In the middle of December, we will start germinating seed in silica sand with heat on it. By the time the Rose Bowl game is over, we'll cut the grass on the field short and sow the germinated seed and cover it with urethane sheets. Three days before the Super Bowl, we'll uncover it."

Pasadena decided early this year that further use must be made of the city-owned stadium because of increasing maintenance costs.

"We want to have selective events," Yokaitis explained, "and the Super Bowl must be one of the best."

So Pasadena offered its Rose Bowl for $60,000 rental plus a 5 per cent seat tax that should bring another $50,000 plus concession and parking rights. The NFL gets the ticket, television and program rights.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle said that cities which have held the Super Bowl in the past estimate the added income to their areas might be as high as $50 million, counting travel and food.

Pasadena, about 12 miles east of Los Angeles, will have to share the hotel revenue with their larger neighbor.

A spokesman for Los Angeles, which lost its bid, said the Coliseum offered a package which would have cost the NFL less. But the Coliseum capacity cannot match that of the Rose Bowl. However, the largest crowd to ever watch a pro game was 102,368 for the Rams-San Francisco 49ers game at the Coliseum in 1957 and the largest Super Bowl crowd was 90,183 there when Miami beat Washington 14-7 in 1973.

St. John's, Providence Capture NIT Victories

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A funny thing happened to Mel Utley on the way to the basket. He slipped.

A not-so-funny thing happened to the Manhattan basketball team on the play. The Jaspers got called for a foul.

Utley got up and with the game on the line, threw in two free throws in the last eight seconds to give St. John's a tinging 57-56 victory in the quarter-finals of the National Invitation Tournament Tuesday night.

"It was ice," said Utley, one of St. John's best foul shooters. "I knew I'd make those free throws. I went inside to draw the foul and got it."

The victory, one of the most exciting in this 38th annual post-season classic, shot the Redmen into Saturday's semifinals against Providence, a 101-80 victor over Pittsburgh in Tuesday night's first game.

South Carolina meets Princeton and Oral Roberts takes on Oregon Thursday night in another quarter-final doubleheader to determine the other two berths in Saturday's semis at Madison Square Garden.

Utley's winning free throws came in the face of rowdy Manhattan fans, who waved their arms wildly behind the St. John's basket in an effort to distract the Redmen's player.

The Jaspers appeared to have the game won with a 56-55 lead and the ball in their possession with 25 seconds remaining. But on an inbounds play, Tom Lockhart went in for an unneeded shot and missed, and the ball bounced to a St. John's player.

Manhattan's Mike Young committed a foul and St. John's set up a play with 19 seconds left. The ball was passed to Utley, and he drove for a shot with eight seconds remaining. That's when he was fouled by Charley Mahoney. At least the referee thought so.

"You want to know what happened?" Utley explained. "I slipped and banged into Charley. I was wearing someone else's sneakers and my feet didn't feel right."

The first game wasn't half as exciting, but Providence gave evidence of its tremendous scoring power. Joe Hassett and Bill Eason each scored 18 points as six Friars hit double figures against a supposedly tough defensive club. The game was over at the half, when Providence took a 57-38 lead after taking charge of the backboards.

Area Activities Are Rained Out

Continuing rains in the area washed out all local outdoor sports activity yesterday, and put a doubtful status on activities for today.

Among baseball games lost yesterday were Southern Wayne at Conley, Rock Ridge at Robersonville, Ayden-Grifton at C.B. Aycock; North Pitt at Farmville Central, Jamesville at Chocowinity, Western Carolina at East Carolina; Aurora at Bear Grass; Washington at Rose and Greene Central at North Lenoir. Also postponed were tennis matches between Williamston and Roanoke Rapids, and Rose and Farmville Central.

Southern Wayne-Conley, Jamesville, at Conley, and the East Carolina-Western Carolina games were set for today, with the latter being played as part of a 1:30 p.m. doubleheader.

North Pitt and Farmville Central, Aurora and Bear Grass, and Washington and Rose reset their games for Thursday.

Delayed until Friday, March 28 were the tennis match between Williamston and Roanoke Rapids and the Greene Central-North Lenoir baseball game.

No new dates were set for Rock Ridge-Robersonville and Ayden-Grifton-Aycock baseball, and the Farmville Central-Rose tennis match.

Driesell: We're Not Scared

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Most of the horn tooting in the NCAA college basketball tournament seems to be happening before the games.

The coaches of the 16 teams remaining in the tourney spent part of Tuesday beating their own chests, then doing a paraphrase on the old "the only thing to fear is fear itself" number.

It's part of the psychological buildup, and hardly anyone does it better than Maryland's Lefty Driesell.

"We're not scared of anybody," Driesell said. "And if we put it all together, people had better be scared of us."

The fourth-ranked Terps, 23-4, overcame pesky Creighton 83-79 last Saturday to earn a date with No. 9 Notre Dame, 19-8, for a second-round Midwest Regional game Thursday night at Las Cruces, N.M. The other Midwest Regional game pits No. 12 Cincinnati, 22-5, against No. 3 Louisville, 25-2.

"This is a challenge to our ball club and they've fooled a lot of people all year long," Driesell said. "People counted us out all year and then again after we lost two straight games to Clemson and North Carolina.

"Now they're counting us out again. They'd better not do that if they're smart. We're one of the best teams in the country and our record proves it."

Besides the Midwest battles Thursday night, there will be the East Regional at Providence, R.I., which has Syracuse, 21-7 against North Carolina, 22-7, and Boston College, 21-7, against Kansas State, 19-8. Then, there's the Midwest Regional, matching Kentucky, 23-4, against Central Michigan, 21-5, and Indiana, 30-0, against Oregon State, 19-10. And in the West Regional at Portland, Ore., Arizona State, 24-3, plays Nevada-Las Vegas, 23-4, and Montana, 21-6, meets UCLA, 24-3.

Maryland beat Notre Dame 90-82 in an earlier meeting this season and the Terps again will have to contend with All-American Adrian Dantley, who scored 29 points in that game. "Dantley is a great offensive player," Driesell said. "In the last game, just about everybody guarded him. We'll stick a lot of different people on him this time, unless one person does a good job."

But Driesell isn't scared of Dantley or any combination of Dantley and four others. "We're going into this tournament with a positive attitude," Driesell said. "We realize that all it takes is four (more) games to win the national championship, and we think we can do it."

"At this point, a lot of people would have had reason to be skeptical of us," he said. "But they'd better look out for us now."

"We're not afraid of Notre Dame, UCLA, North Carolina or anybody that's in this tournament."

UCLA, the giant of college basketball over the past 12 years with 10 NCAA titles, has an awesome reputation. Only Montana isn't shaking with fright.

"Our kids are excited and practice has reflected that attitude," said Jud Heathcote, coach of unranked Montana. "The boys recognize we're definitely out-talented and we're playing what is a living legend. We're going in a little apprehensive but not scared, if there is a difference." Second-ranked UCLA advanced to Portland with a 103-91 overtime struggle with Michigan, while Montana scored a 69-63 victory over Utah State.

Indiana's No. 1 ranked Hoosiers raced into their second-round game with a 78-53 victory over Texas-El Paso, and although no team scares Bobby Knight's boys, the Indiana coach is apprehensive about 13th-rated Oregon State.

"Oregon State is capable of beating any team in the country," Knight said. "They beat UCLA this year and they beat 'em last year, too. That shows you what kind of team they are."

North Carolina, ranked sixth, has been proving itself all season, but it's gripping now because no one seems to have noticed.

"We are ACC champions," said 6-foot-9 Mitch Kupchak. "We beat North Carolina State. We proved that already. The only thing I sense now on this team is that we want to keep proving to ourselves we're a great basketball team."

Black Jack Is Upset Victim

One upset marked the opening night of the Church Basketball League's post-season tournament as Jarvis ousted third-seeded Black Jack Presbyterian and St. James advanced with wins.

In the opening game, Presbyterian took a 59-44 win over Oakmont. Presbyterian eased out in to a 22-15 lead at the end of the half, then outthit Oakmont, 37-29, in the second to win going away.

Albert Holloman led Presbyterian with 20 points, while Paul Andrews had 16 and Richard Holloman had 13. Bobby Hall had 13 to pace Oakmont.

St. James romped to a 62-32 win over Trinity in the second contest. St. James held a 31-14 lead at halftime, and easily outdistanced Trinity, 31-18, in the second.

Chuck Mohn led St. James with 22, while Mike Board had 14 and Guy Howell had 12. Donnie Bowman had 14 to lead Trinity.

The upset came in the final game, as Jarvis took a 58-54 win over Black Jack. Jarvis inched to a 24-23 lead at the half, then outthit Black Jack, 34-31, in the second half to win it.

Bill Kuykendall led Jarvis with 23, while Bill Landreth added 11. Tal Adams led Black Jack with 18, while Danny Edwards had 12.

Tonight, Immanuel meets Presbyterian, while Jarvis takes on St. James. From this point on, the field will use a double elimination format.

McGraw, Ready For Knife, Still Believes

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Relief pitcher Tug McGraw still believes.

When he was a member of the New York Mets, McGraw's remark "You gotta believe!" became the rallying cry of the fans as the Mets went on to win the 1973 National League pennant.

Tuesday, the left-hander, now with the Philadelphia Phillies, checked into a Philadelphia hospital for tests prior to the removal of a lump near the lower tip of his left shoulder blade.

"I'm leaving this up to the doctors," the 30-year-old McGraw said. "They say there's nothing seriously wrong with me. When the doctors say it, well, you gotta believe, right?"

In Tuesday's exhibition games, it was the hitters who were doing the believing.

Baltimore stopped Texas 11-8, the Chicago White Sox edged Cincinnati 7-5, Detroit nipped Montreal 11-10, Milwaukee stopped Oakland 8-7, California defeated Cleveland 5-4, Houston beat Kansas City 5-2, the Chicago Cubs downed San Francisco 4-1, the New York Mets beat Boston 5-4, Minnesota knocked over Atlanta 5-3, St. Louis crushed Philadelphia 12-3, and New York Yankees topped Pittsburgh 3-2.

Don Baylor's two home runs—giving him four in the last two games—powered the Baltimore Orioles over the Texas Rangers. The outfielder also drove in a first-inning run on a fielder's choice as the two teams rapped out a total of 26 hits.

Two homers by Buddy Bradford lifted the Chicago White Sox over the Cincinnati Reds. Ed Herrmann also homered for the Pale Hose while Tony Perez slammed a roundtripper for Cincinnati.

Milwaukee's Bob Coluccio

drove in five runs—four of them on two home runs—including the go-ahead marker in the ninth against Oakland. Joe Rudi homered for the A's and Tom Bianco hit a two-run homer for the Brewers.

A lead-off triple by Detroit's Ron LeFlore and a wild pitch ended Montreal's eight-game winning streak. LeFlore also had a home run while Bill Freehan hit a two-run triple and rookie left fielder Dan Meyer slammed a two-run homer.

Reggie Smith drove in two runs with a homer and a triple as the Cards routed the Phillies.

The Mets erupted for seven hits to score four runs in the seventh inning against the Red Sox. Tony Conigliaro, who has been out of baseball for 3½ years after being hit in the face by a pitch, slammed two doubles and a single in five at-bats for the Red Sox.

Houston pitcher James Rodney Richard allowed only three hits through six innings as the Astros ended a six-game losing streak.

NCS Stars To Appear

LITTLEFIELD—Three members of the 1974-75 N.C. State Basketball team will be making appearances at a benefit basketball game to be held Tuesday at the Ayden-Grifton High School.

The game, sponsored by the A-G Charger Club, will benefit the school's athletic program.

Among those taking part will be State seniors David Thompson, Monte Towse and Moe Rivers. They will be playing against such former players as Tommy Mattocks of State, and Jim Hudock and Ray Respass of the University of North Carolina.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in the Charger gym, with all tickets on sale at $2.

Among other construction that may be coming—or in some cases has come or is on the way—we would mention the following: we are grateful to ECU's Assistant Athletic Director Bill Cain for his work in getting those covering baseball at Harrington Field working conditions in a new press box that are outstanding. The old cramped quarters that could not begin to handle those covering the game are finally gone.

East Carolina is also planning a new scoreboard for Ficklen Stadium, to be ready for this fall's campaign. That, coupled with the new lighting system, will be a bonus for fans.

And there is also talk of continued expansion of Ficklen. To complete the stands to the back of the end zones would increase the seating to almost 300,000, a 50-per cent increase.

Balance Carries Heels Into Regionals

By KEN ALYTA
AP Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — A balanced team that thrives on togetherness carries the University of North Carolina blue and white into the East Regional semifinals against Syracuse Thursday night in Providence, R. I.

Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels, overshadowed most of the season by higher national ranking of last year's national champions, North Carolina State and Maryland, have been coming fast after a sluggish start.

They started the season minus last year's two top scorers, Booby Jones and Darrell Elston. Further problems arose when veteran backcourter Ray Harrison had to sit out the season due to illness and husky frontcourter Donald Washington dropped out of school because of academic difficulties.

After opening with three victories the Tar Heels blew a big lead at Kentucky and lost by 12. The record dropped to 5-3 after holiday tournament losses at Greensboro, N.C., to Duke, in overtime, and N.C. State, by 15 points in the consolation game.

Since then the team has gone 17-1 for an overall 22-7 record and sixth place in the national poll.

The losses to N.C. State and Duke were avenged in the last two games of the regular Atlantic Coast Conference season and then Smith's team won the ACC championship tournament by a total spread of 10 points in three victories, two in overtime.

They made up eight points in the last 45 seconds to tie Wake Forest, then beat the Deacons 101-100 in overtime to start the tournament sweep. Clemson was the next victim, 76-71, again in overtime, a 70-66 victory over N.C. State nailed down the title and the automatic NCAA berth.

Four of the five starters are scoring in double figures. Mitch Kupchak, 6-foot-9 junior center is No. 1 with an 18.2 average. Sophomore forward Walter Davis is next at 16.6, followed by freshman backcourter Phil Ford at 16 and senior guard Brad Hoffman at 10.2.

Tommy LaGrade, 6-foot-10 sophomore, has drawn the other starting assignment and has been coming along in recent games. He scored 11 points before fouling out after playing 19 minutes in last Saturday's 93-69 rout of New Mexico State in the first NCAA test. It was achieved without resorting to the Tar Heel "four-corner" spread offense.

Traditionally, Smith substitutes frequently. He used 11 or 12 players in each ACC tournament game and 14 in the New Mexico romp.

In that game eight players saw at least 12 minutes of action.

This divide rests starts and gives the others a sense of belonging to the team.

Mickey Bell, senior member of the so-called "Scramblers" reserve unit, says, "This is a close team. The sophomores and the freshmen have come along. Everybody encourages everyone else, tries to help, give tips, anything to win. Every starter would give up his job if it meant helping the team win."

Freshman Ford notes, "It's a passing game that we play. We like to make as many passes as necessary to get the high percentage shot. If we do it right, we're going to shoot for a high percentage and we're going to break down the defense a lot because, after a while, they are going to get tired of chasing us around. Once we break them down, we start getting a lot of layups."

Smith teams shot better than 52 per cent in each of the last four years to rank among national leaders. After hitting 37 of 61 against New Mexico State, North Carolina currently is at 53.2. Ten of the 14 players are 50 per cent or higher.

Since 1967 Smith teams have been in four other NCAA tournaments and won the East Regional each time.

McAdoo Did Lot But Not Enough

By The Associated Press
What did Bob McAdoo do? Plenty...but not enough.

Buffalo's 6-foot-10 center pumped in an overwhelming 51 points Tuesday night...but Rudy Tomjanovich and Calvin Murphy combined for 64, carrying the Houston Rockets to a 122-115 victory over the Braves.

Tomjanovich got 34 points and Murphy 30 to help the Rockets snap a five-game National Basketball Association losing streak and maintain their 1 1/2-game edge over third-place Cleveland in the Central Division.

The Cavaliers, battling with the New York Knicks for the wild-card playoff berth that goes to the best third-place team in the Eastern Conference, upended Washington 112-98 while the Knicks beat Los Angeles 109-100 to stay within half a game of Cleveland in the conference standings.

In other NBA games, Chicago beat Philadelphia 111-96, Boston whipped Detroit 116-90, Kansas City-Omaha edged Atlanta 105-101; Golden State walloped Phoenix 133-103 and Portland defeated Milwaukee 95-89.

Houston took the lead to stay in the second period, led 59-52 at the half and steadily pulled out to an insurmountable 14-point margin midway in the third period.

"That man is fantastic," Tomjanovich said of McAdoo. "He should be bronzed."

Cavaliers 112, Bullets 98
Bobby Smith and Dick Snyder each connected for 23 points to lead Cleveland.

Knicks 109, Lakers 100
New York, led by Walt Frazier's 27 points plus 23 by John Gianelli and 21 by Earl Monroe, outscored the Lakers 21-4 in the final seven minutes to stay in the thick of the playoff skirmish.

Bulls 111, 76ers 96
Chet Walker's 30 points led Chicago past Philadelphia.

Celtics 116, Pistons 90
Boston ran away from Detroit with a 43-point fourth quarter, taking advantage of the absence of the Pistons' big man, Bob Lanier, out with a knee injury.

Kings 105, Hawks 101
With Kansas City-Omaha nursing a 99-97 lead in the final minute, Larry McNeill tapped in a rebound and seconds later hit two free throws to make it 103-97 and finish off the Hawks.

Warriors 133, Suns 103
Rick Barry returned from two games on the injury list with a neck muscle spasm to score 28 points in 29 minutes and lead Golden State past the Suns.

Trail Blazers 95, Bucks 89
John Johnson pumped in 18 points to lead Portland to a come-from-behind victory over Milwaukee.

S. Africa Omitted

MONTREAL (AP) — The organizing committee for the 1976 Summer Olympics has announced South Africa would not be invited to participate in pre-Olympic competition in Montreal this summer.

Roger Rousseau, the committee director-general, issued the statement Tuesday following a report that the Quebec Track and Field Association had written to the South Africans about their possible participation.

Rousseau said the committee would respect the boycott of South Africa by the various sports federations and the International Olympic Committee.

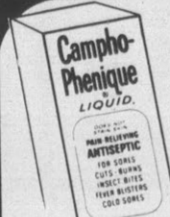

"The Canadian government does not encourage the exchange of athletes between Canada and South Africa," Rousseau noted, adding all organizing committees involved in the 1975 competition will be asked "to respect" that policy."

Certified In Specialty

Dr. William Wayne Sutton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Sutton of Greenville, has been named a graduate of the American Board of Family Practice. Sutton, of the Wallace area, was named a diplomate of ABFP by passing a certification examination offered by the ABFP. He is now certified in the specialty of family practice.

DR. WM. W. SUTTON

The two day examination is designed to prove ability in internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics, gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatry and community medicine.

To qualify for the examination a physician must have completed either a three-year family practice residency or have been in family practice a minimum of six years and successfully completed 300 hours of continuing medical education approved by the American Academy of Family Physicians. ABFP diplomates must also be recertified each six years.

A FIRST ANNUAL STUDENT SHOW . . . and auction is being planned for a one day event in the Gritton Town Lot beginning at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday. The show will feature art work of approximately ten students from the School of Art, East Carolina University. A wide variety of media—paintings, graphics, mixed media and craft in different styles—realism, abstraction and fantasy will be included in the Gritton show. In the event of rain, the art show-auction will be held at Gower Porch on Dupont St. Two examples of student work, a painting and a print, are shown here.

Asks Increase In Reward Offer

RALEIGH (AP)—State Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten says he is asking Gov. Jim Holshouser to increase the state reward from $2,500 to $7,500 in a three-year-old triple slaying case at Boone.

Edmisten also announced that the state Bureau of Investigation has stepped up its probe in the case. The victims were Baxter Bryce Durham, 51; his wife, Virginia, 46, and their 19-year-old son, Bobby Joe. They had been strangled at the family home in Boone on Feb. 3, 1972.

Modesty Is A Gambler's Life Style

NYACK, N.Y. (UPI) — Harry Crayton is a modest man. In his line of work modesty pays. Judging by the diamond rings, Rolls-Royce and mink trimmed leather coats, it pays well.

Harry Crayton is a professional gambler, a legal one he insists. By his own estimate, he plays cards 24 hours a week and averages $2,000 in winnings.

With the winnings he formed Crayton Enterprises Ltd., and through the Rockland County Athletic Association he sponsors community softball, football and bowling teams that proudly wear the "Crayton Enterprises" name on the back of their green uniforms.

Crayton Enterprises Ltd., also owns two record and clothing stores in Nyack and Spring Valley, N.Y. A buzzer system allows store employees to screen customers before allowing admittance.

Sitting on a high stool in his Nyack store, Crayton says that despite his material possessions he cherishes most his reputation of "never cheating a man in my life."

He also is the proud owner of a 1933 Buick, a 1941 Packard, and two Lincoln Continentals, as well as the $25,000 Rolls Silver Cloud. In a soft-spoken manner, he says the ring on one hand is worth only $400 while the ring on the other cost about $800.

By not taking a house cut of the card games, Crayton does not "promote" gambling and, therefore, technically does not break New York State's gambling laws.

"If they arrest me for card playing they'll have to raid every firehouse and Saturday night card party in the state," he said. "There is evil in gambling, just as there is evil in drinking—too much and it can get out of hand."

Crayton says he pays some $8,000 a year in federal income taxes on his winnings, which is listed as "other income" and represents about 80 per cent of the total declared earnings—a figure in the neighborhood of "$35,000 to $40,000" a year.

As he spoke, about a half-dozen men and women engaged in a "friendly" blackjack game in the back of the store. Every once in a while, the cash register rang up a sale.

Harry Frederick Crayton Jr., 37, was born in Newport News, Va., and graduated from high school in the upper third of his class. He attended Virginia State College for two years, studying business administration.

He taught basic math and typing in the Army, and after his discharge he says he applied for a job as a mathematician with a company in Haverstraw, N.Y.

After being put off several times, Crayton said, the personnel man told him someone else was hired "because they didn't think I'd be happy working there. It was the only time in my life I felt I was discriminated against because I'm black...I guess I got discouraged."

Moving from job to job, Crayton learned to gamble while working as an orderly at Rockland State Hospital.

"It was stupid. I'd lose my paycheck five minutes after I'd get it," he said, "but I was young; I studied the odds and learned from my mistakes."

One of his possible "mistakes" was running a flourishing numbers operation. When authorities raided Crayton's "bank" in 1970, they said the business netted $500,000 a year.

Crayton insisted that was all a thing of the past. But law enforcement officials refer to him as "The Duke" and believe he's responsible for one of the shrewdest policy operations in the state.

In fact, Crayton was indicted on felony gambling charges last May involving a numbers operation believed to net $100,000 a year, police say.

"He's unique all right," said Charles Purcell, senior investigator of the New York State Police. "The Duke's been one of our targets for years."

According to Purcell, Harry Crayton may be the first man to use a cash register to keep coded records of individual policy numbers bet, the amount of each bet, the type of combination played, the time the bet was made and whether the game involved New York or New Jersey numbers.

"All the receipts are on a roll of water soluble paper next to the cash register," Purcell said. "When we come through the door, the roll is dropped into a bucket of water and all we come up with is a bunch of glob."

Either Way, Indians Lose

By STAN LEHMAN
RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — The government's determination to develop the vast Amazon rain forest has left Brazil's surviving Indians with a choice between assimilation into the white man's culture or isolation on reservations.

Antonio Cortim Neto, a disillusioned expert who quit FUNAI in 1972, said, "We are forcing the Indians to take the first step towards hunger, disease and disintegration. The primary goal of our mission is to pacify the Indian so that the white man can have free access to Indian territory."

Either way they lose. A recent attack by 200 warriors underscored the Indians' rejection, often voiced by tribal leaders, of any attempts to incorporate them into the mainstream of Brazilian life.

About 180,000 Indians are left of the approximately three million who occupied Brazil when it was first discovered by Europeans less than 500 years ago.

Aware of their rapidly diminishing numbers and wary of government promises to protect them, several tribes recently have reacted violently against the white man, the perpetrator of their extinction.

On Feb. 10, 200 Mairumuna warriors attacked a government outpost in the Amazon manned by 16 agents of the National Indian Foundation, known as FUNAI by its Portuguese initials.

None of the agents, who were trying to establish contact with the Mairumunas, were injured and FUNAI experts in Brasilia said the Indians probably were showing their anger over recent expeditions into their territory by white men looking for mahogany, rubber and other jungle products.

On Dec. 29, a group of Waimiri-Atoaris, angered by construction of a new road through their territory, attacked and killed three FUNAI men 124 miles north of Manaus, also in the Amazon.

In a rare show of unity, chiefs of 18 different tribes from the Xingu Reservation in the Mato Grosso jungle met Nov. 10 to discuss ways to defend their communities against "the white exploiters and adventurers."

The chiefs, who represent about 2,000 Indians, threatened to go to war against the white man if encroachments on their land continue.

Orlando and Claudio Vilas Boas, the white directors of the Xingu reservation, warned that the Indian's way of life is "seriously threatened by the new offensive of Brazilian society to occupy the Amazon."

The Indians also are dying out in a more subtle way, a controversial process of assimilation called "acculturation" by the experts at FUNAI. Critical anthropologists say it is nothing more than disguised extinction.

Once contact is made with an isolated tribe, FUNAI begins the "acculturation" by showing the Indians the ways of the white man, including modern farming and fishing techniques, and classes in Portuguese.

Orlando Vilas Boas says the process has a negative effect:

"For the Indian, acculturation means the absorption of most of the white man's vices such as prostitution and alcoholism. It also means contact with civilized diseases against which the Indian is mostly defenseless. What we in FUNAI are doing is a crime."

Sets Class For Dog Owners

TARBORO—Barry Littleton of Greenville will conduct an eight-class course in dog showing and handling for dog owners who wish to enter their pets in American Kennel Club shows.

The class will meet each Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the National Guard Armory on Walnut Street here. Sponsored by the Greater Rocky Mount Kennel Club, the class is open to owners of all breeds at a cost of $10 per person.

Littleton is a handler in East Coast AKC shows and is a breeder of English setters and Doberman Pinschers. Interested persons may call him at 756-6285.

Although the government has created reservations and guarantees the Indians permanent possession of the land, it has reserved the right to appropriate those lands if they become "important for the nation's development."

Even the 9,000-square-mile Xingu National Park has fallen prey to "the nation's development." A branch of the Trans-Amazon road cut through its northern third and the government dislodged tribes living there.

Engineers working on a road from Manaus to Caracari have suggested moving the hostile Waimiri-Atoaris tribe so that construction can proceed without interference.

The government plans to build 15 agro-industrial and mining complexes in the Amazon, some in areas now occupied by Indians.

FUNAI President Gen. Ismar de Araujo Oliveira says Brazil "must occupy all of its territory to reach its objectives of national integration."

"Faced with this historical reality, we must do all we can to protect the Indian and his way of life. But in no way can we isolate him from the process of integration and much less force him to live on the margins of society."

But the chief of the Pataxos Indians, commenting on his people's forced removal from their ancestral lands, said he wants no part of "progress."

"We are like plants which die or cease to grow when they are transplanted," he said. "We lived here many years before all this progress began. Whether the land is good or bad, it is ours because our fathers and grandfathers were born and raised here, died and were buried here."

Rare Shells In Stomachs

GREENVILLE, Del. (AP) — Some of the world's rarest sea shells come from the bellies of fish.

Enterprising collectors are finding the most-prized specimens by catching and opening shell-eating fish in South Africa, the Philippines and Brazil, according to Dr. R. Tucker Abbott, a conchologist — shell scientist — at the new Delaware Museum of Natural History here.

A report on ex pisces (out of fish) mollusks appears in "Kingdom of the Seashell," a book written by Dr. Abbott.

It reveals that shells removed from the stomachs of fish have brought an estimated $20,000 from collectors over a four-year period. Many of these ex pisces specimens are obtainable only from fish predators because they live in inaccessible shallow-water places.

Rare cone shells are often eaten by fish. These specimens include Glory-of-India, the Glory-of-Bengal and, perhaps the rarest of all ex pisces shells, the Du Savel Cone. It is known from only one specimen; it came from a fish caught off Mauritius in 1871 in 180 feet of water.

The armistice that ended the Korean conflict was signed at Panmunjom July 27, 1953, almost three years to the day after North Korean troops invaded South Korea.

TVA Planning Is Locked To Nuclear Power

By CARL A. VINES
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Mrs. Young told UPI that she and her group, Concerned Citizens of Tennessee, are dedicated to halting all nuclear power plant construction despite President Ford's call for 200 new nuclear plants by 1995. TVA has not tried to hide its nuclear commitment. On the contrary, TVA has detailed the program every step of the way, its costs and the reasons behind it.

The program started in 1966 with Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant in northern Alabama, an $815 million project already two-thirds complete. It continued with the $675 million Sequoyah plant near Chattanooga, started in 1970, the $805 million Watts Bar plant in Rhea County begun in 1973, and the $1 billion Bellefonte plant in Alabama begun last fall.

In addition, TVA has $25,677,000 invested in uranium properties in Wyoming, Texas, South Dakota, Utah and New Mexico. This program began four years ago to assure future supplies of nuclear fuel. The agency is pretty well locked into nuclear power. "In the future," says TVA board chairman Aubrey J. Wagner, "90 per cent of our new plant construction will be nuclear."

"That's what makes us mad," said Mrs. Dolph MacNulty of Nashville, another leader of the fight against the Hartsville plant. "You've already decided to go nuclear without giving the people a chance to play a role in the decision."

Bob Allen, a Knoxville Sierra Club leader, joins the Hartsville opposition in calling on TVA to halt its nuclear program and start rethinking the whole business—what he calls "grass-roots democracy."

From the Sierra Club standpoint, the major issue in Tennessee centers around the Liquid Metal Fast Breeder Reactor project at Oak Ridge. This $1.8 billion project by TVA, the new Energy Research and Development Administration, and Commonwealth Edison of Chicago has even brought state officials into the controversy over nuclear power.

Through the years, the track record of conservationists against TVA has not been impressive. Even with support such as given by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas in the battle against the $69 million Tellico Dam project on the Little Tennessee River in East Tennessee, the environmentalists have almost invariably lost.

Even TVA leadership, more and more, is conceding that the era of cheap power is past.

Airline To Discontinue Goldsboro Service Flights

Piedmont Airlines will discontinue flights at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base at Goldsboro and expand service at Kinston's Stallings Field to handle the Goldsboro-Wayne County traffic, effective May 1. Piedmont official R. L. McAlphin said today that the airlines' four Goldsboro flights will be dropped, and one additional departure added to the Kinston schedule.

McAlphin said at present there are nine daily departures from the Kinston airport. The flight to be added May 1 will bring the number of Kinston flights to 10. He noted that most of the flights now stopping at Goldsboro also stop at Kinston.

Goldsboro-Wayne County Airport Authority chairman John C. Jensen said the change in Piedmont scheduling will result in increased service and improved schedules for the area.

The termination of Piedmont flights to Goldsboro was approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington on April 30. Piedmont—with the approval of the Goldsboro-Wayne County Airport Authority—had applied for the change several months ago, and there had been no formal objection filed with the CAB.

McAlphin said Piedmont will "take a closer look at the Kinston schedule," in the future, indicating that other changes might occur to provide still better service. He explained that scheduling has to be done 40 to 45 days in advance and said the April 30, CAB approval in the change failed to allow enough time to make any other changes, have them published and distributed to other airlines, travel agencies and the general public by May 1.

The Goldsboro-Wayne County Airport Authority last October

recommended that Wayne County and Goldsboro join Kinston and Lenoir County in promoting a regional airport at the Kinston facility. Jensen said at that time at the board's action followed two years of study, and was spurred by a long period of declining service offered by Piedmont and use of that service by Goldsboro-area residents.

Frinks Said Planning Sue Over Little Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—An attorney for Southern Christian Leadership Conference field coordinator Golden Frinks says he plans to file suit today to block further spending of funds collected for the defense of Joanne Little.

Reginald Frazier of New Bern said he would file the suit on behalf of Frinks in a North Carolina district court, either in Washington, N.C., or in Durham.

Frazier said he would seek an accounting of all funds raised in behalf of Miss Little, who is charged with first degree murder in the slaying of a Beaufort County jailer in Washington, N.C., last August. Frazier said he would ask for an injunction blocking further spending of funds until a "proper accounting" is made.

Dr. Ralph Abernathy, SCLC director, reached at his home in Atlanta, said the SCLC was not involved in the suit and Frinks was acting as an individual. Abernathy said he had not heard about Frinks' plans, and would attempt to contact him and talk him out of filing the suit.

Frinks contends he had a verbal agreement with Miss Little's defense attorney, Jerry Paul, of Durham, to receive 30 per cent of the funds collected in Miss Little's behalf. The civil rights leader said he was to receive the money to conduct protest activities to raise the visibility of the celebrated murder case.

Reached by telephone Tuesday night, Paul reiterated previous denials that any such agreement existed.

Paul also said earlier that the only legitimate fund raising organizations for Miss Little's defense were the Joanne Little Defense Fund Inc., initiated by the defense attorneys, and the Southern Poverty Law Center of Montgomery, Ala., which has raised nearly $200,000 for support of the Little case.

Joe Levin, general counsel of the Southern Poverty Law Center, said in Montgomery, "We have never discussed with Golden Frinks any aspect of the defense of Joanne Little." As for money being raised for demonstrations, Levin said the center is "opposed to the idea and has been totally against the use of funds for such purposes."

Miss Little contends she acted in self defense as jailer Clarence Alligood, 62, tried to rape her.

Joanne Little Defense committees have been established in Boston, Washington, Atlanta and Pittsburgh in addition to Durham and Chapel Hill and fund raising has been conducted nationwide. In Montgomery, Joe Levin, general counsel of the Southern Poverty Law Center said, "We have never discussed with Golden Frinks any aspect of the defense of Joanne Little." As for money being raised for demonstrations, Levin said the center is "opposed to the idea and has been totally against the use of funds for such purposes."

Agree To Pay $204,000 Fee

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Charlotte and Mecklenburg County Board of Education voted Tuesday night not to contest the $204,000 a court has ordered it to pay a lawyer for six years of work.

Julius Chambers will get the money for fees and expenses as counsel for the plaintiffs in the school desegregation case against the board.

Will Co-Sponsor Several Courses

Tips On Cheese
When you're planning your food budget, remember to put cheese on your list. It can be the start of many delicious but inexpensive meals.
The delicious natural flavor of cheese is best maintained when the cheese is kept refrigerated and wrapped, either in the original polyfilm covering or in a plastic wrap. Should portions dry out, they can be frozen, but when thawed will often be mealy and therefore more suitable in cooking recipes.
Always remove cheese from refrigeration about one-half hour before serving to fully enjoy the delightful flavor, aroma and texture.

'The Law' Has 3 New Chances

By JAY SHARBUTT
 AP Television Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Last October, NBC aired "The Law," an excellent two-hour TV movie about a feisty, compassionate public defender and the behind-the-scenes wheelings and dealings in criminal court cases.

Intended as the basis for a possible series, the show drew critical cheers but low ratings. Thankfully, NBC hasn't give up on it yet.

It is giving "The Law" three more chances — tonight, next Wednesday and April 16 — to see if the show can draw better audiences as a one-hour program in a better time slot than that given Show No. 1.

Those who saw the initial "Law" will find changes in tonight's model. For one thing, the public defender (excellently portrayed again by Judd Hirsch) no longer has a wife. The show doesn't say why.

But it does make clear he has quit his public defender's job to work for an establishment law firm which belatedly developed a social conscience and hired him to defend accused felons who have little or no money.

Tonight's show, while not as crisp as the first one, still maintains its old standard of true grittiness for most of the show.

It starts with the arrest of a young black woman — the surly arresting officer has to be reminded to read her "rights" — on a charge of stabbing her ex-husband at a friend's birthday party.

The ex, suffering minor wounds, is carted away, still growling at her from his stretcher. She's booked for assault with a deadly weapon.

Hirsch is hired by her parents for $300. He soon finds the charge kicked up to assault with intent to kill. And, after some realistic preliminary court jousting, he sets out to reduce the charge.

He cons a lady friend (Doris Brenner) in the public defender's office into informally helping him, hoping to use her medical expertise to prove the victim's wounds gave no evidence of murderous intent.

When it turns out the victim has died, the charge becomes homicide.

Hirsch must find out what caused the death of a guy with minor stab wounds as well as get his client off the homicide hook in a way that serves both justice and society.

The way he does it is interesting enough. But the real lies in the all-too-brief scenes with Hirsch and Miss Brenner, a fine actress we haven't had the pleasure of seeing work on TV before.

NBC deserves cheers for giving it three more tries. If the ratings aren't high this time, NBC should keep the show on and cancel the audience.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 3 ♠ 3 NT Pass
 Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

Making a brilliant play at the bridge table is not good enough in itself. On occasion, you must give your opponent credit for being a first-class player capable of accepting your play at its face value. Consider this hand.

By American standards, the North hand might not quite measure up to an opening bid, but it is quite acceptable as such in Europe, and this hand is from a major British team championship. East tried to disrupt the opponents' bidding by preempting with three spades, but South was strong enough to contract for three notrump.

Sitting West was the late Maurice Harrison-Gray, a prime candidate both as a player and as a writer-theoretician for an international bridge hall of fame. He led his top spade, and declarer made a slight error when he held up the ace of spades till the third round of the suit. For on the third spade Harrison-Gray discarded the ace of diamonds!

Now South was an international player, and it was quite clear to him what West was up to. By discarding the ace of diamonds, Harrison-Gray was obviously trying to create an entry to East's spades via the queen of diamonds. Therefore, declarer decided to abandon any idea of looking for tricks in diamonds, and shifted his attention to the club suit.

He crossed to the queen of hearts and led a club to the ten, losing to West's jack. West completed his subtle trap by returning his low diamond. Convinced that East had the queen, declarer gave up on the diamond finesse. He rose with the king and led another club, and East's failure to follow suit was the death knell. No matter what declarer did, he could no longer avoid losing a second club and the queen of diamonds. In all, the defenders won two spades, one diamond and two clubs.

Note that without the imaginative discard of the ace of diamonds, declarer would have had an easy road. After winning the third spade, he would have led a diamond, and even had he lost two tricks in the suit, he would have made his contract. And notice that the average declarer would not have realized the implications of the ace of diamonds discard, and would have tackled the suit anyway!

Willingham On His 10th Novel

By PHIL THOMAS
 AP Books Editor
 NEW YORK (AP) — Calder Willingham wrote his first novel when he was 22, recently published his ninth at 52, and currently is working on his 10th.

He also has turned out a book of short stories and a batch of screenplays over the years. It's no surprise to find he loves to write, calls it "a marvelous experience, very satisfying," but also is quick to observe that it's "pretty hard work as you get older — a novel can be a very exhausting thing."

Especially if, as Willingham does, a writer "works obsessively, writing on and on and just stopping to sleep. In a burst of work I'll lose anywhere from 8 to 16 pounds because I don't eat when I'm writing. I live on coffee and cigarettes. It's almost like a madness that comes upon you. But then there's the great satisfaction, the time when I have reached a point where I can read my stuff and say 'that's not bad.'"

Willingham, who lives in a small New Hampshire village — he'd rather not give its name because "I get funny letters sometimes" — with his wife and five children, doesn't care to discuss his novel-in-progress, because, "as Hemingway says, 'The book you talk about, you never write.'"

However, his latest novel, "The Big Nickel," he will talk about, observing that "it's about success and what it can do to you. Success can be a dangerous thing, a terrible problem. For a lot of writers, having a great success in early youth can make it very difficult to go on."

"The Big Nickel" deals with a writer whose first novel has scored big and now is having difficulty getting on to a second book.

"I had a successful first book, 'End as a Man' (for which he wrote the screenplay), and it was difficult for me to get on and write my second book, 'Geraldine Bradshaw.' For a writer to convey what he feels to other people is terribly hard to do. So you've got to decide to do what you think you ought to do and not what others think you ought to do. You can't write like that."

The red-haired Willingham, wearing a tweed suit he finds just right for New Hampshire but too heavy for New York, probably is best known for his first book and for "Eternal Fire."

"Eternal Fire" is my best novel," he says in a southern accent that hints at his Georgia boyhood although "I haven't lived there since I was a child. If I have a masterwork that's it. I worked three years on it, and that's a lot of work. It sold over a million copies in paperback and it made it possible for me to get good money for my books. It made it possible for me to make a basic living as a novelist."

"Before it, my books didn't make enough money for me to support my family and I wrote screenplays for money. I still do screenplays but now it's for

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Poor judgment and lack of obedient support from those in authority are the main aspects of the morning. You are able to have a happy time in the late afternoon and early evening with the one you love. Your intuition is very accurate now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The morning could be tense and uncertain but the afternoon then becomes calm and very productive. Consult a financial expert.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make the right arrangements with associates to have greater abundance in the future. Utilize your greatest potentials.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Financial affairs are difficult in the morning but later you can get fine results. Find a new outlet to add to your income.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Wait until the afternoon before making new plans. Be sure to keep a promise you have made. Avoid the social tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make long-range plans for the future with associates. Steer clear of an opponent who is jealous of your success. Be poised.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't take any risks where your career work is concerned during the day. Try to be more cooperative with associates.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you gain the support of a higher-up, you can reach your objective instead of feeling stalemated. Try to save more money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you change your methods now you can become a more effective individual. Attend the social tonight and express happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Morning could be disappointing where an associate is concerned but later all works out fine. Don't lose your temper.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Discuss new ideas with associates. Don't renege on any promises you have made. Take time to improve your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Little progress can be expected in the morning but conditions improve later in the day. Don't neglect health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get away from tense conditions at home and engage in some activity that is interesting and profitable. Think constructively.

Historic Spa's Music Festival

BATH, England (UPI) — Springtime visitors to this historic spa town 104 miles west of London can choose their entertainment from a crowded calendar of musical events in the last week in May during the city's renowned music festival. Those who miss the festival can still be serenaded as they drink tea or take the town's health-giving mineral water in the 18th century Pump Room. A chamber music trio play selections of classical music there throughout the year.

Big Jobless Benefit Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Employment Security

Commission paid more benefits in the first two months of this year than was paid in all of 1974, a commission spokesman said Tuesday.

At the end of February, insured unemployment was above the 10 per cent mark for eight consecutive weeks. February payments amounted to $37.9 million, the highest ever paid in a single month, the ESC said.

The commission said the there was an average of 187,840 jobless workers in February in the Tar Heel state. Workers were paid an average of $58 per week, compared to $43 a week a year ago, the ESC said.

Manufacturers were hardest hit by the recession. The ESC said textiles, apparel, hosiery and furniture industries recorded insured unemployment rates of higher than 20 per cent each.

The lowest unemployment was in 293 per cent in retail and wholesale trade workers.

Despite the record payments in unemployment benefits, the ESC reported a trust fund balance of $510.1 million. North Carolina is among the four most solvent funds in the nation, the ESC said.

Mission Bay Park in San Diego, Calif., has seven official swimming areas.

We have a new listing and are ever happy because this is an extraordinarily well kept and pretty house on a nicely landscaped corner lot in College Court. Three bedrooms, two baths, foyer, living room, dining room, family room with fireplace, well arranged kitchen, central air, patio, double carport. Call for an appointment because homes in this area are in great demand.

Are you looking for a river cottage? Well, don't look any further because we have one with 3 bedrooms and it's on the water. Lot is 90' x 110', electric heat, in excellent condition, leaving some furniture, large family room with dining area and kitchen, utility room for freezer and washer and dryer. Porch surrounding cottage.
