High Waters Create Problems In Several Areas Of Town

Tar River Due To Crest At 19 Feet This Morning

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Many local residents probably spent a fitful night last night, wondering how high the waters of the Tar River would rise.

The National Weather Service in Raleigh predicted late yesterday that the flood waters that have swelled the river to overflowing, would crest at "near 19 feet" sometime this morning.

According to the weather service, the river, which stood at 17.5 feet Friday morning, had risen to 18.4 feet by 8 a.m. Saturday.

The flood waters started surrounding homes in an area north of the river, between Greene Street and Memorial Drive, Friday. By late Friday night, the waters were surrounding a number of trailers at Shady Knoll Trailer Park off Mumford Road, and threatening apartments such as Riverfront Apartments off Summit Street and units closest to the river at Tar River Estates.

Yesterday afternoon, officials at Tar River Estates said water there had risen about three inches in the party house at the apartment complex, and the pool there had been "overrun" by the river.

River Drive, which parallels the Tar at the northern end of the complex was completely covered with water, and the ends of Elm, Oak, Ash and Warren Streets were blocked off due to the rising river. Several apartments in the area were isolated by the rising water, but none seemed to be in danger of being flooded.

At Shady Knoll, water covered roads there in a half-dozen low areas and surrounded more than a score of trailers. None of the mobile homes seemed in danger of being flooded, although the rising water made access to many of the residences there difficult.

In the low-lying West Meadowbrook area north of the river, between Greene Street and Memorial Drive water had risen into several homes.

Burley Spain of 901 Taylor St. said water had risen into his home Friday morning. "We saw it coming and got out," he explained. By yesterday, there was about six inches of water in his house.

Jack Smith of 905 North Railroad St. said Saturday that water had not come into his house, but that it was surrounded. He was using a boat to transport neighbor Josh Chapman of 903 North Railroad St. to dry land. Chapman's home was also surrounded by water.

Several persons expressed concern about rain—which began falling late yesterday afternoon—and what effect that might have on the flooding river.

Spokesmen for the Weather Service said the scattered showers and thunder showers predicted for Saturday afternoon and evening should have "no appreciable effect" on the flooding.

In addition to the few flooded homes and some stranded cars in the areas of high water, scores of vehicles at Crisp Auto Salvage Co. off North Greene Street were nearly covered by the high water.

Fishing Vessel Sinking

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — The 95-foot fishing vessel Sherri D radioed Saturday that it was sinking and its crew of 12 men was abandoning ship 70 miles off the coast of Baja California.

Coast Guard and Navy aircraft were searching the area about 500 miles south of San Diego.

The Coast Guard at Long Beach, Calif., said it received a "Mayday" distress message from the San Diego-based craft at 3 a.m. PDT saying it was sinking 70 miles off Cabo San Lazaro.

The radio man on the Sherri D said: "We're taking water fast. I've got to get out of here." Then the radio went dead.

The vessel's survival equipment included a large skiff and two 16-foot outboard motor boats.

The Coast Guard said two of its HC130 long range search aircraft from San Francisco, an HH3F helicopter from San Diego and a Navy T3 long range aircraft from Moffett Naval Air Station near San Francisco were searching a 3,000 square mile area.

Railroad Shutdown Postponed

CHICAGO (AP) — The scheduled shutdown of the Rock Island Railroad has been postponed from March 31 to April 12 in hope of last-minute aid.

Girl Seriously Burned

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 5-year-old Charlotte girl was seriously burned Friday when she touched a 14,000-volt electrical cable in an unlocked transformer box on the ground near her home, police said.

Precautionary Actions Taken By Utilities, Police Depts.

The Greenville Utilities Commission and the Greenville Police Department are both taking some special measures this weekend due to the local flood conditions.

The utilities commission reported they were having to remove electric meters in houses in some low-lying areas. This is a precautionary measure, the commission reported, due to the threat of water reaching electric receptacles in the homes. Receptacles will short out if water reaches them, a spokesman said.

Greenville police reported they were strictly enforcing road blocks in the area of Ash Street and Tar River Apartments. Cars driving through the water cause a wake which can splash water over doorsteps and into houses, police said. Barricades are up forming blockades in this area.

Blood Quota Short, Two Collections Set

Two important Bloodmobile visits are scheduled in Pitt County this week, according to Pitt Blood chairman Billy Ross.

On Tuesday, Farmville Central High School will sponsor a visit at the school gymnasium from 10:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

Although the visit is at the school, Ross encouraged all citizens in the Farmville, Fountain and Falkland areas to go out and donate blood in support of the school effort.

The Bloodmobile will be at Ayden-Grifton High School on Wednesday under the sponsorship of the school Task Force, the chairman said. Again, the residents of Ayden and Grifton and surrounding areas were encouraged to join the high school students in giving blood.

The Ayden-Grifton visit will be from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the school auditorium, it was noted.

Ross emphasized that 17-year-old citizens can now give blood as long as they have parental consent and he urged students in this age group to consider donating.

The Pitt blood quota, according to Ross, is far behind and successful visits are needed in order to bring the local quota up to par.

Hopefully, he added, the flu bug that apparently cut down on the number of donors at recent visits has passed and more people will be able to give blood at the upcoming visits.

With Action Expected Monday On A House-Senate Compromise

Senate's $33.1 Billion Tax Cut Bill Said To Be "Out Of Hand"

By DON PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate "got out of hand" in voting to pump $33.1 billion into American pockets and cash registers through tax cuts and bonuses, House leaders said Saturday, and the final bill must be chopped back into line.

The Senate's bill provides a 1975 tax break of $40 to $400 for every taxpayer in the nation—and for some too poor to pay taxes—with the largest amounts going to middle and lower wage-earners. In addition, it calls for one-time 1974 tax rebates up to $240 per taxpayer.

House and Senate negotiators meet Monday morning to seek a compromise between the House's $19.9 bill and the Senate's much larger measure. The Senate finished work on its bill at 1:52 a.m. Saturday after an 18-hour marathon session.

"I expect there will be a big whack taken out of the Senate bill," said House Democratic leader Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

House Ways and Means chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., who will lead the House negotiators, said: "I think we can say things got out of hand."

House leaders did not object to the tax cut and rebate provisions of the Senate bill, which were similar to the ones in the House bill, but to the numerous special interest amendments approved by the Senate.

Dozens of special interest amendments were added by the Senate, all of which will be in serious trouble in the conference. They include a one-time $100 payment to all Social Security recipients, tax credits up to $2,000 for new home buyers, a $500 million tax break for Chrysler and other money-losing companies, huge new tax deductions for child care for working parents, and tax credits for home insulation.

At the White House, a high-ranking source said President Ford is waiting to see what the conference committee decides to do with a number of the Senate amendments.

"Congress is making a mistake if it thinks a tax cut bill is veto-proof," said the source, a presidential aide who declined to be identified.

The aide indicated Ford objects most to the Senate provisions eliminating the foreign tax credit for oil companies and to those providing almost unlimited deductions for child care and tax credits for purchasers of newly constructed homes.

Although most senators had planned to start their Easter recess Friday, faw left the charged atmosphere of the Senate chamber during the long session which saw billion-dollar amendments tossed about one after another. There were 21 roll call votes, a one-day total second only to that compiled during a single day of the 1964 civil rights debate, Senate staff members said.

The House followed the Senate action with an unusual Saturday session, voting 281-18 to go into conference with the Senate. Leaders on both sides hope to send a bill to Ford by Wednesday, beginning the flow of rebate checks in mid-May.

Whatever happens in conference, the final bill definitely will contain these provisions, which are similar in both bills:

—A tax rebate, either the House's maximum $200.00 or the Senate's maximum $240.

—Direct federal payments up to $400 to the working poor, even if they paid no taxes.

Caution On Easter Grass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Artificial grass used to line Easter baskets poses a possible fire hazard and should be kept away from flames, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission cautions.

Most manufacturers have turned to slow-burning polypropylene for the synthetic grass, but consumers may not be able to tell whether the grass is made of highly flammable shredded cellophane and waxed paper instead, the commission said Friday.

Refugees Form "A Convoy Of Tears"

Another SVN City Falls

By JOSEPH GALLOWAY

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist tanks and troops captured another district capital Saturday in their drive to swallow all of Vietnam. South Vietnamese troops destroyed a provincial capital 110 miles north of Saigon, then abandoned the whole province.

The battle losses sent more ragged refugees, by the tens of thousands, into a pitiful stream that has swollen close to 1½ million persons in flight for their lives. Heavy fighting kept villagers fleeing the Central Highlands from reaching the safety of a coastal enclave.

Saigon newspaperman Nguyen Tu, traveling with refugees from the Central Highlands in what he called "the convoy of tears," reported rebel Montagnard mountain tribesmen opened fire on the convoy with rockets and rifles while Communist artillery struck from all directions.

Janice Buck Named Citizen Of The Year

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR . . . Mrs. Janice Buck, center, was named Greenville Citizen of The Year and presented an award on Friday night. Janice Buck was named Greenville's Citizen Of The Year at the quarterly membership meeting of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchant's Association held Friday night at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

The award, one for outstanding leadership and achievement, was presented by Etsil Gordon. In presenting the award, Mrs. Gordon cited Mrs. Buck's involvement in many local and area projects. She referred to her work as overall chairman of the 1974 Greenville Bicentennial, and as a board member of the Pitt County United Fund.

"She approaches everything with a positive attitude," Mrs. Gordon remarked, "one that says 'I can do it—I'm going to try.' That's what makes her so vibrant, so alive, so much fun to be with, and I might add, so successful"

Active in many fields, Mrs. Buck is a commissioner on the Greenville Redevelopment Commission, Secretary of the Pitt County Mental Health Society, Pitt County Coordinator of the North Carolina Beautification Program, and District Chairman of the National Federation of Independent Businesses.

The widow of the late Marvin C. Buck, Sr., Mrs. Buck is an active businesswoman, serving as president and treasurer of Buck Supply Comapny. She has three sons, Marvin C. Jr., Kenneth M. (Mike), and James, and five grandchildren.

A member of Immanuel Baptist Church, Mrs. Buck has been a generous contributor in time and money to a number of community activities, particularly those involving young people, such as the Boys' Club. Recently, she endowed the Greenville Boys' Chorus with funds to get the group established.

Also at the meeting, Curtis Hendrix was named new president of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchant's Association. He succeeds William E. (Bill) McDonald. Hendrix is executive vice-president of First State Bank.

Plans were discussed at the meeting for "Operation A.T.P". A.T.P., or Accentuate The Positive, is a program designed to work through the communications media to counter bad news about the economy which the Chamber does not believe applies to Greenville. "Wise spending creates more jobs" is the program's slogan.

The evening's speaker, Doug Guthrie of the Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce in Columbia, South Carolina, told of his Chamber's success with a similar program, "Operation Dispell Gloom."

Guthrie is a native of Engelhard, N.C. and graduated from Greenville High School in 1947. He attended East Carolina Teacher's College for two years and graduated from Wofford College with a B.A. in psychology. He had worked with Chambers of Commerce for 18 years.

In outlining the Columbia Chamber's program and successes, Guthrie emphasized to the Greenville Chamber that commitment was the key to success. "You can do whatever you commit yourself to do," Guthrie said.

Rockets Halt Airlift In Beseiged Phonm Penh

By ROBERT KAYLOR

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist rockets damaged two U.S. cargo planes at Phnom Penh's airport Saturday, temporarily halting the American airlift to Cambodia. Exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk rejected the latest government offer for negotiations and vowed the rebels will fight to the finish.

Shrapnel from the rockets wounded 14 Cambodian airport workers and ripped through an Air Force C130 transport plane and a chartered DC8 cargoliner. Repair crews were flown in from Thailand but U.S. officials said they did not know if the airlift could be resumed Sunday.

The DC8, which had flown in rice, was hit in the left wing and the C130 in the front landing gear.

At a reception in Peking on the fifth anniversary of his National United Front exile government, Sihanouk said he is "firmly, totally and irrevocably" opposed to negotiations, compromises or coalitions with the "traitors" in Phnom Penh.

"The national independence which we defend in the name of Cambodian people is not negotiable with any person," Sihanouk said. "The patriots shall never accept a compromise with imperialism and neo-colonialism."

Sihanouk said a coalition was "a poisoned dish cooked up by imperialist and neo-colonialist devils to serve the needs of their ignoble cause."

Commenting on the new cabinet of Prime Minister Long Boret which took office in Phnom Penh Friday with a promise to seek negotiations, Sihanouk said, "the ultrareactionary traitors and archcorrupt men and their contemptible and false republic are being condemned by the people of Cambodia.

"The day will come when the Royal Government of National Union, with Samech Penn Nouth as prime minister and Khieu Samphan as deputy prime minister, will be installed in Phnom Penh, but not at the invitation of these traitors," Sihanouk boasted.

The prince also condemned the United States for interference in Cambodian affairs and said the U.S. government is trying to turn Cambodia into a colony.

"The war is not a civil war," Sihanouk said. "It is a war between the U.S. imperialist aggressor and the Cambodian people subjected to aggression."

..."A Convoy of Tears"

"Many trucks were hit by shells and burst into flames and exploded," Tu wrote.

"The trucks were crammed with soldiers, children, old people. They fell evecywhere.

"Those who walked, fell to machine gun bullets. Their blood flowed in tiny streams.

"The roaring artillery, crackling small arms, screams of the dying and crying of children combined into a single voice from help."

Two hundred of the refugees were separated from the main Central Highlands convoy and forced to seek safety in the jungle near Cheo Reo, 210 miles north of Saigon. Government helicopters finally flew them to a protected enclave at the end of the "bloody road," Tu said.

The Viet Cong ordered a nationwide general offensive, and Saigon government figures showed staggering government reversals have left Communist forces in complete control of about one-third of the nation.

An estimated 15 tanks helped Communist forces seize the district capital of Khanh Duong, 225 miles north of Saigon. The district chief and about 25 soldiers escaped and were picked up by helicopters.

Military sources said government defenders destroyed Gia Nghia, capital of Quang Duc province 110 miles northeast of Saigon, and fled. With 7,000 population, Quang Duc is the smallest provincial capital in South Vietnam.

Government troops also pulled out of Duc Xuyen district capital, 20 miles northeast of Gia Nghia.

The two towns had been the only remaining Saigon government positions within the lightly populated province—the eighth province to fall to the Communists this year.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces control parts of seven other provinces and government figures showed they hold more than 22,000 square miles of South Vietnam's total area of 67,000 square miles, spread over 44 provinces.

In Tay Ninh province 50 miles northwest of Saigon, Communist troops cut a highway between the provincial capital and Khiem Hanh distrct town to the south.

Twenty miles to the northwest, near the Cambodian border in Phuoc Ninh district, the Communists forced government militiamen to evacuate two posts and fall back to a third, Fatima. The attackers soon overran that post too.

The huge convoy of refugees who fled Pleiku and Kontum in the Central Highlands this week was still stranded about 15 miles west of Tuy Hoa, 240 miles northeast of Saigon.

Reporters who flew over the convoy reported intense fighting in the area separating the leading elements of the refugee column and Tuy Hoa, the coastal town they hope will shelter them.

Groups of 200 to 300 refugees were camped along the road and the river banks, strung out over 60 miles of country.

Bodies could be seen along the route, and some officials said the refugee death toll from Communist attacks and shelling, heat, thirst and sheer exhaustion could run into the thousands.

Kissinger's Middle East Mission Fails

By WILBUR G. LANDREY
UPI Foreign Editor

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's current Middle East peace mission failed Saturday night and he prepared to go home.

Egypt and Israel blamed each other for collapse of Kissinger's two-week shuttle negotiations. Egypt called for immediate reconvening of the Mideast peace conference in Geneva, Switzerland.

Egypt said Kissinger's step-by-step approach to peace "is dead."

The Geneva conference, at which the Soviet Union would be co-chairman with the United States, would consider all aspects of a peace agreement. However, Egypt demanded that the Palestine Liberation Organization also be at Geneva, which Israel adamantly opposes.

Kissinger's efforts were wrecked by failure to get agreement on how far Israeli troops would pull back from Arab territory they captured in the Sinai Desert in the 1967 war.

Israel was willing to give up the key Gidi and Mitli mountain passes and the Abu Rudeis oil fields but demanded in exchange Egypt make a statement renouncing the state of war with Israel.

Egypt retorted that such a statement was out of place in a purely "military" agreement and accused Israel of negotiating "in bad faith" by bringing it up.

In Washington, President Ford expressed regret at the failure but said the United States would continue its efforts to assist in achieving a "just and lasting peace" in the Middle East.

Kissinger's announcement said, "Both sides have made a serious effort to reach a successful outcome. Unfortunately, the differences on a number of key issues have proved irreconcilable.

"We, therefore, believe a period of reassessment is needed so that all concerned can consider how best to proceed toward a just and lasting peace."

Kissinger said he had informed the parties he is suspending his present efforts and returning to Washington to report to President Ford and Congress. He said he will "remain in close touch with the parties and the co-chairman of the Geneva conference (the Soviet Union) during the period ahead."

The announcement was read by U.S. spokesman Robert Anderson after Kissinger met Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and the Israeli negotiators Saturday evening.

The announcement came after Kissinger had shuttled back and forth between Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Aswan, Egypt, and Rabin in Jerusalem four times. He also had made side trips to Geneva, Amman and Riyadh to keep Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Jordan's King Hussein and Saudi Arabian King, Faisal informed on the talks.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said President Ford "regrets the suspension of the talks." He said Ford "reaffirms the commitment of the United States to continue its efforts to assist the parties in reaching a just and lasting peace.

"The President also wishes to express his deep gratitude and personal admiration for Secretary Kissinger's skill and tireless dedication in these latest negotiations. He looks forward to meeting with him upon his return to review the situation," Nessen said.

It was the first time Kissinger failed in a Middle East mission.

In January, 1974, he successfully mediated a first-stage disengagement in the Sinai between Egypt and Israel, returning both banks of the Suez Canal to Egypt.

In June, Kissinger again pulled off a major feat by getting Israel and Syria to agree to a limited Israeli pullback from the Golan Heights, also occupied by Israeli troops since the 1967 Middle East war.

In an interview for publication in Egypt Sunday, Sadat had said he had not been over-anxious anyway to reach agreement with Israel this time around because he thinks Egypt has the upper hand.

"Our situation now is better than last year and Israel is in a corner," Sadat said in the interview with the weekly magazine Rose El Yussef. "I am negotiating this time but I am not over-anxious to reach an agreement."

Asked what Egypt would do next, Sadat said, "as long as we have the upper hand, then we can make a variety of initiatives. We have the Geneva conference. We have the U.N. Security Council.

3,000 Year Old Monarchy Ends

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The leftist military government has abolished Ethiopia's 3,000-year-old monarchy, which began with the Queen of Sheba and ended with 82-year-old Emperor Haile Selassie.

Selassie was deposed Sept. 12 and his eldest son, Asfa Wossen, 58, was named crown prince.

But the government said in a brief statement broadcast Friday that Wossen's appointment has been annulled and all royal ranks abolished.

The ruling military advisory council promised Ethiopians they will soon be given the opportunity to select their own form of government and to elect a new head of state, but the council provided no details.

Selassie, who reigned for 50 years, has been under house guard in the royal palace since the coup. He apparently is in good health but experiences mental confusion at times, Western sources report.

Once an old-fashioned, absolute ruler of a backward, obscure African nation, Selassie fell to young military officers who toppled him in a slow-motion coup that took about six months.

As they drove him from his splendid palace to a military barracks, subjects who had grown up worshipping him lined the streets to jeer, shout curses and throw stones.

Selassie's decline in popular esteem has been attributed in part to his public indifference to widespread suffering by his subjects. His land was bypassed by the modernization that spread through the rest of Africa.

In early 1974, after several years of drought killed at least 100,000 Ethiopians, military leaders trained in the United States began agitating for better pay, and later for a new government.

They arrested many of Selassie's court and held mass executions of former officials.

Investigating Holshouser's Staff

RALEIGH (AP)—Phil Kirk, Gov. Jim Holshouser's administrative assistant, said Saturday he plans to appear before a Senate subcommittee Tuesday and "correct all the misinformation" about the governor's staff.

Some members of the Senate appropriations subcommittee were irked over Kirk's failure to appear before the panel Friday.

Kirk said in a telephone interview he did not think it was "urgent enough to cancell my previous commitments."

Sen. Harold W. Hardison, D-Lenoir, subcommittee chairman, said "it appears the governor has overloaded his staff" with borrowed employes on the payroll of other agencies.

Sen. Bobby Lee Combs, D-Catawba, offered a motion Friday to cut the governor's office budget $200,000 for the next fiscal year. The subcommittee decided to wait until Tuesday to vote on it.

Kirk, without calling any names, said, "One or two members of the subcommittee are using this as political harrassment of the governor."

He added that being a former legislator, "I have enough sense not to snub a legislative committee, and I really resent that some of them think I ignored them."

Hardison said in an interview Friday the subcommittee discovered in a line-by-line study of the budgets of other agencies that at least seven employes were on the staff of the governor's office. He said the panel has information that there may be more.

"I think they will find," Kirk said, "that there has not been more than four or five at any one time and they were all temporary employes."

He added, "I wish they would put as much emphasis on other budgets. We've got a small budget compared to most agencies."

Kirk said a news story covering Thursday's subcommittee meeting quoted a member as saying he understands there were persons on the governor's staff "who don't do anything but clip newspapers."

"That, of course, is not true," Kirk said."That is the type of thing that I call political harrassment. I think the majority of the subcommittee members are interested in getting the facts and are fair."

Some subcommittee members accused Kirk of misleading them when he appeared before them earlier. Hardison said Kirk made no mention of seven borrowed employes from other agencies.

"We don't want to create any hardship, but we don't want anyone to thumb his nose at us," Hardsion said. "We're not going to tolerate that."

8 Die In Argentine Attack

By SALLY GLASS

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Fifteen gunmen looking for a left-wing politician Saturday raided the homes of presumed leftists in suburban Temperley and killed eight persons with machineguns and bombs, including their intended victim.

Police said the mass killings, part of the worst surge of political violence in Argentina since 1973, was the work of right-wing terrorists.

Seven bullet-riddled bodies, which also were blasted with explosives, were left strewn across two vacant lots in Temperley, 12 miles south of Buenos Aires. The wife of one of the victims was found shot to death in her home about a mile away.

The 15 gunmen —two of them hooded — drove up to a Temperley bar in eight cars late Friday looking for left-wing city councilman Hector Lencinas, who lived in back of the building.

When they failed to find him, they held up the bar owner and a waiter, shot up the interior of Lencinas' apartment and the bar and roared off in their cars.

Police said the terrorist fleet then drove to different homes in and around Temperley, kidnaping six young men. Two were reportedly in their 20's and four were teenagers.

Police, checking on reports of two deafening explosions, discovered the seven bodies. Police said Lencinas was among the victims but they did not know how the assassins caught up with him.

Neighbors said the gunmen had machinegunned the victims and then blasted the bodies with explosives.

The killers left a scrawled message, "We were Montoneros, we belonged to the ERP," apparently indicating the victims were suspected of belonging to two leftist guerrilla groups.

Lencinas represented the left-wing Regional Peronist Youth organization on the Temperley city council.

Police sources have reported 27 slayings since Thursday, raising the death toll from political violence this year to 107.

The new killings followed a bloody raid Friday in the seaside resort city of Mar del Plata, where a band of presumed right-wing commandos shot and killed a retired army lieutenant, his two sons and his nephew.

Police sources said, meanwhile, that federal authorities sweeping Argentina's major industrial belt had arrested 100 persons in connection with a government-announced terrorist plot to paralyze heavy industry.

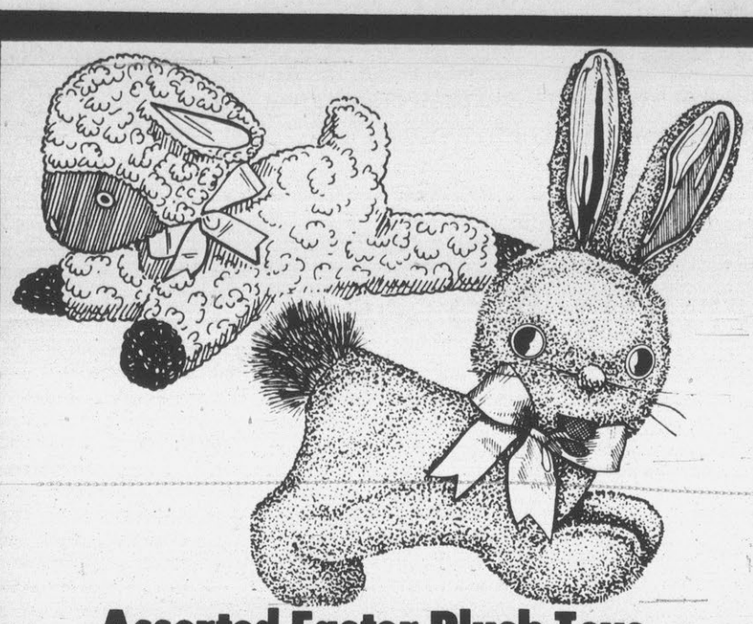

Police have detained at least 150 suspects, releasing scores of them, the sources said.

Moving Toward An Old Goal

Through necessity Eastern North Carolina seems to be moving toward what should have been done years ago—that is, the development of a central regional airport which will furnish first class commercial air service to our developing area.

It was announced last week that Piedmont Goldsboro service will be discontinued effective May 1, and that service will be consolidated at Stallings Field at Kinston. The consolidation will mean one additional departure daily at Stallings, bringing the total departures to ten. However, Piedmont officials say they will take a closer look at the Stallings service with the possibility of providing better service.

Then last week The Kinston Daily Free Press reported that it had learned Kinston would be chosen as the site of a regional airport. The designation would mean a grant of $1 million from the State Department of Transportation for a new terminal building.

New Bern is strongly objecting to the designation of Stallings as a regional airport, and it remains to be seen if this will have any effect on the designation for Stallings.

Regardless, Stallings now has the strongest air service in the east and could become the regional airport simply because it has the base to build upon.

As is well known, Pitt leaders fought before the Civil Aeronautics Board for years for one regional airport in the East. The battle was lost by one vote when the CAB finally ruled on the plan.

Local leaders were not all that concerned with the specific location then, and there is no reason to be concerned about a specific location now. We would have to say, though, that Stallings was designated to serve the Greenville area by the CAB. Since then, a dual lane road has been constructed to Kinston from Greenville so that access to Stallings is good from the Greenville area. Therefore if consolidated service can be developed at Stallings it should serve Greenville—and now Goldsboro—very well.

Regional service to one central airport is all-important to Eastern North Carolina's development. We fought for this concept in the 1960s and we still firmly believe in it. It appears that regional service is going to develop — probably at Stallings — simply because the need is there.

"Him? Why, he's here to protect our great American system of free enterprise!"

Minor Changes 'Helpful'

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — "Now isn't it only fair that you ought to pay as much for your driving license as it costs the state, instead of letting the taxpayers pick up the difference," mused State Rep. John Ed Davenport, D-Nash County, as he mulled over a stack of complicated charts and reports which show a big gap between the amount collected for services by the Division of Motor Vehicles, and the amount spent.

The end result is likely to be a minor slap to the average motorist's pocketbook—but a whopping increase of nearly $11 million per year in state income.

That is one way, legislator's figure, for the state to pay increased cost of state services without having to hike taxes.

Davenport is working on a legislative proposal which would make the adjustments in a variety of fees charged vehicle owners.

The regular driver's license is a good example. The present fee is $3.25 for a license which lasts four years. But it costs the state in salaries, equipment, overhead, etc., $4.63 for each license.

A Loss

Each year the state collects $2.7 million; spends $3.9 million on driver licenses. Learners' permits are free. Carried through all the driver license fee schedule, the state loss is over $2 million.

Davenport's proposal would hike the cost to $5 every four years for a regular license or chauffeurs' license, $1 for a learning permit, and $15 to have a revoked license re-instated.

Annual vehicle safety inspection is another example: the current fee is $3, of which the state gets 25 cents. A 10-cent hike, with the state receiving 35 cents would produce nearly $400,000 per year in additional revenue.

Another place where fees would be increased is in the various titling operations—issuing a new title, changing ownership, recording a lien, etc. The state now charges $1, and it costs $1.79 for each transaction. A $2 fee would produce over $2 million per year increased revenue.

License Plates?

North Carolina ranks among the lowest in the nation in charges for vehicle license plates—a matter not covered in Davenport's proposals for increased fees.

The license plate fund is "big money" and is being studied as a source for increased income to offset some of the state loss on gasoline tax collections.

The N.C. plate costs $13 per year. Most states have a sliding scale based on weight or horsepower, with the national average maximum being $34.78 per year.

Two state base their plates on retail price, with the top fee on a new, expensive auto running over $150 per year.

Slow Pace?.

Introduction of bills in the General Assembly, a fair guage of legislative activity, remains far below previous levels: just over 800 introductions in house and senate this year compared to 1,200-plus in 1974 and 1,065 in 1973, at this time in the session.

But as House Speaker James C. Green notes, legislative activity can't be measured in bill introductions alone; many committees are wrestling with extremely knotty subjects such as penal reform, services to children, power bills, milk prices, and Equal Rights for Women—subjects all which do not lend themselves to quick, easy solutions.

Watchdog Continues

A proposal is making the rounds for study by legislative leaders to make a governmental spending watchdog committee a permanent activity in state government.

The tentative proposal would set up a joint house-senate committee with a budget for staff and research to operate full-time monitoring state agencies; complete with statutory power to summons witnesses and gain access to all reports, documents, and budget information in any agency.

This move is an outgrowth of the Governmental Spending Commission chaired by State Senator I. C. Crawford of Asheville.

Energy Study Result

By R.M. SORGE

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — There may be an energy crisis, but the world still commands huge untapped resources of oil, coal, hydropower and a vast reserve in nuclear energy, the latest U.N. survey reveals.

But it will require large investments to release them.

Petroleum prospecting, for example, costs between $156 and $830 for a barrel of oil per day capacity. Even the four-fold oil price increase is not sufficient incentive for investors to go all-out for the precious reserves.

Many of the poorest countries, now breaking their economic backs importing high-priced oil, have their own oil supply potential. But it would cost at least $10 billion to discover and develop the 5 million barrels per day the developing countries now import at inflated prices, according to the survey.

Seven of these countries, it says, "have a range of oil reserves of 10,000 to 100,000 million barrels each, there are 30 countries with a range of 1,000 to 10,000 million barrels and 16 countries with range of 100 to 1,000 million barrels."

The oil industry outside socialist economies has spent relatively little on exploration of additional oil supplies, the survey says.

"In 1972, for example, a total of $24.9 billion was invested on development drilling and ancillary production facilities, pipelines, tankers, refineries, chemical plants and marketing, but only $1.5 billion on exploration", about half of it in the United States.

The world's largest coal reserves, the survey notes, are held by the Soviet Union, the United States and China. But sizeable reserves are also available in Australia, Canada, West Germany, India, Poland, South Africa and Britain.

Because of high oil prices, it says, "coal has in many cases won back its competitive advantage." Undeveloped coal deposits exist in some 40 poor countries, but were left untouched during the period of cheap oil. The report indicates that some of them may be tapped in the future.

Developing countries also have used only a small fraction —8.6 per cent—of their hydropower capacity, the survey

INSIDE REPORT

The $100 Billion Nightmare

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A calamitous byproduct of the new rule by caucus on Capitol Hill is the high possibility of a $100 billion budget deficit, starting a new wave of Republican domplaints about President Ford.

Mr. Ford never has fully appreciated that the triumph of liberal reformers in the House makes old-fashioned compromise with Democratic leaders next to impossible. With the caucus supreme, Congress seems intent on cutting taxes and raising spending enough to warrant the bleakest forecasts by the Ford cabinet's Cassandra: William Simon, the beleaguered Secretary of the Treasury.

Accordingly, senior Republicans in Congress this week quietly pressed Mr. Ford to forgo laudable efforts at compromise and conciliation and take a much harder line in public. But White House strategy still is against confrontation just yet — strengthening even more the strong congressional base of Bill Simon, the one cabinet member openly critical of administration policy.

Growing apprehension of conservative Republicans in Congress turned to anxiety the last two weeks because of two developments: first, the Senate Finance Committee adopted a $30 billion tax cut, doubling what is acceptable to Mr. Ford; second, the failure of chairman George Mahon, the esteemed conservative Texas Democrat, to control — or even try to control — his House Appropriations Committee.

Hopes of conciliation between Republican President and Democratic Congress have been based on George Mahon's collaborating with his Republican counterparts to restrain liberal Democrats. But Mahon and other committee chairmen have neither collaborated nor restrained. Republicans were stunned when Mahon recently adjourned the full committee to convene a caucus of committee Democrats, who promptly recommended an unbudgeted $6 billion jobs program.

Why is Mahon no longer the pillar of fiscal conservatism? The answer: the new dominance of the House Democratic caucus. Mahon must either conform to what the liberal caucus majority wants or prepare to be purged by the caucus. One senior Republican on the committee, in private, recently belabored Mahon, his friend of years' standing, for sacrificing principle to keep his chairmanship.

But even by not conforming, and thereby losing his chairmanship, Mahon could scarcely prevent the inevitable: a series of congressional actions doubling and tripling Ford proposals. Although the next fiscal year does not start until July 1, Congress has already pushed the monstrous $51.9 billion deficit estimated by Mr. Ford to $55.5 billion. If the Senate tax cut stands, the deficit may exceed $100 billion; even if it does not, the figure will be over $90 billion.

This means unprecedented federal borrowing — $200 billion during the 18 months between Jan. 1, 1975, and June 30, 1976, according to economist Eliot Janeway. That strain puts intolerable pressure on Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, to monetize the debt by expanding the money supply.

What's more, this overpowering inflationary pressure comes when even the most skeptical economic forecasters finally see an economic upturn in the last quarter of 1975. Thus, history's greatest deficit may take effect only when no longer needed to rev up the economy but when it predictably will feed destructive inflation.

This is precisely the Cassandra prophecy by

An Era Of Probes

(Henderson Dispatch)

Powers that be are rarely so elated as when they can look around and find something to be investigated. We are living in an era of probes and inquiries.

Business, big and little, goes overboard at times in liberties that are assumed in their operations. They move at the expense of patrons, either in prices or other restraints or impositions. Perhaps the public needs some protection from these inroads. Agencies have sprung up, nationally and statewise, which presume to protect the consumer. They are not always successful, but they are capable of harassment of the individual and legitmate enterprise.

Almost every activity is subject to bureaucratic barging in to order this done or to remove what it holds is a hazard, or at least does not meet with approval where "papa knows best."

Many probes and investigations are, directly or indirectly, political in character, Somebody along the line hopes to profit by gestures designed to be beneficial to the individual.

When all is said and done, who is better off? Sometimes more harm than good results. Laws may be enacted which impose restrictions that in varying degree cripple legitimate business. But the instigators hope to become heroes in the public imagination.

Somebody hatches a theory and then sets out to sell the idea to associates or the public. Congress relishes the idea of investigating something or other much of the time. Inquiries always have expense funds attached, and that also is costly to the public which is supposed to be helped. In the long run who wins? It's anybody's guess.

Strength For Today

A SHORT AND HAPPY LIFE

On his deathbed David Brainerd said, "Had I a thousand souls, if they were worth anything I would give them all to God . . . I see nothing in the world that can yield any lasting satisfaction beside living to God, pleasing Him, and doing His whole will." Brainerd was a missionary to the Indians of New England during the eighteenth century about fifty years before our nation obtained its independence from England.

What is most striking about Brainerd's life is that he died before reaching his thirtieth birthday. His name will be remembered throughout the history of the Christian Church as one of its noblest souls.

When a man gives everything he has and is to God, he does not have to live a hundred years in order to perform a service for his Lord. His very consecration is service in itself. When a man has a heart like that of David Brainerd, he can change a whole section of the world in a brief lifetime.

Transfer Payments Tell Much

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A term called "transfer payments" tells a lot about the recessed condition of the U.S. economy, as well as the increasing role being played by public enterprise.

Transfer payments are probably what you think they are — transfers of public money to persons or groups for which no goods or services are received in return. They're increasing swiftly.

Last month these transfer payments rose $6.7 billion, reaching an adjusted annual rate of $165.3 billion. Social Security is the big factor, of course, but jobless benefits now are accounting for much of the rise.

Last month unemployment benefits rose $2.7 billion. Life insurance dividend payments to veterans were speeded up, adding another $1.9 billion. And a cost-of-living increase to retired federal employes tacked on $500 million.

Meanwhile, private enterprise payrolls were falling, reflecting the deepening recession.

Nevertheless, because of transfer payments the statistical category called personal income actually rose. Rose, that is, even though the goods to pay for those incomes were never made or sold.

In all, transfer payments have risen close to 30 per cent in one year, simultaneously with the decline in production and prospects for the biggest federal budget deficits ever.

The trend need not be viewed as entirely negative, although many people, mainly those who feel the money is being transfered from their paychecks, are understandably inclined to that perspective.

What it demonstrates clearly, among other things, is that the American economic system is resilient — that it can respond to social need and shifts of fortune, and do so almost automatically.

What free enterprisers especially fear, however, is that whenever private industry weakens, government enterprise is strengthened. They fear that too much transfering is going on at the expense of production.

The argument isn't nearly that simple. In fact, production increases might in fact depend upon transfers of money to consumers, who then presumably will be in a better position to go out and buy the goods of production.

For this and other reasons, transfer payments are also called automatic stabilizers that temporarily can make up for deficiencies in incomes and even geographical imbalances, as in farm price supports.

While the philosophical arguments over transfer payments might never be put to rest, there is an immediate, practical and important question that can be asked: Are transfer payments mere stabilizers, or something more?

Based on experience, they seem destined to continue growing. Temporary measures always have a tendency to perpetuate themselves, if only because a bureaucracy and constituency builds up to support them.

Eventually, however, transfer payments cannot continue to exist without productive work to support them.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Selective Price Control

The volume of new bills introduced in the General Assembly is so large that the task of reporting them in any detail to the unsuspecting public becomes an impossible task.

For instance, we'll bet not a tenth of the grocers in North Carolina were aware of a little gem tossed in the hopper last week by Rep. Fred Dorsey of East Flat Rock up in Henderson County. His bill, labeled HB 291, gets this brief description from the Institute of Government's daily composite of legislative action.

"Prohibiting stores from raising the retail price of any food item until its inventory supply of that particular food item has been fully depleted."

To the harried grocery shopper, that might sound like a fine arrangement.

But we can't help pondering how much government-ordered price controlling would fit in with that other proposal to require teaching of the free enterprise system in the public schools.

—The High Point Enterprise

What Good In Licensing?

Mecklenburg County legislator Craig Lawing is sponsoring a bill in the General Assembly calling for the licensing of television repairmen in North Carolina.

There must be merit to this proposed legislation but we aren't overwhelmed by it, whatever it is. A spokesman for TV technicians argues in favor of it saying that the public, if dissatisfied by the work of their TV repairmen, can always complain to the licensing board in Raleigh.

Somehow this leaves us absolutely cool. Human nature is such that people will complain to a licensing board only as a last resort.

Certainly television dealers and repair shops should use trained and skilled people, but it doesn't appear necessary for an act of licensure to attest to their skill. Even the most skillful can fail to find the ailment, and if they are smart they will inform the owner that the ailment escapes them, rather than to try to bluff their way through a shoddy, unsatisfactory repair job.

Would the presence of a framed license hanging on the wall be a real protection to the Tar Heel public? Or could it be expected to be used as an excuse for higher and still higher service and repair charges?

Any reputable dealer and service shop operator is willing to stand behind and guarantee the work of his employees. There's no assurance that a slip of paper for every repairman will make the employer himself any more responsible for the good work of his men and women to make sure that his customers—the public—are properly served.

Susan Ford Is For Real

Susan Ford, the 17-year-old daughter of the President of the United States and Mrs. Ford, sounded like almost any normal high school senior in a recent interview with the Associated Press.

She gets an allowance. She occasionally babysits. She teases her dad. She puts her feet on his desk in the Oval Office and her mother rebuked her. She wears blue jeans around the White House.

And she doesn't like to read newspapers, didn't follow the Watergate scandal or the trial in Washington. But she has a steady boyfriend, a blind date she met a year ago.

We don't have the complete picture, though. The story didn't say if she had a stereo outfit that is stuck on full blast, or a drawer full of bubblegum, or whether she picks up her clothes and hangs on the telephone by the hour.

But then, what teen-age girl wants to discuss those topics with a strange news reporter, much less parents?

Junior Speaks

We have not been able to derive any moral, political or sociological lesson from the following information, but we pass it along to you just as a favor:

Junior Samples, the rotund country comedian (on "Hee Haw") is fighting his own battle of the bulge, under doctor's orders. So far the 5' 8" Mr. Samples has lost 55 pounds—down to 281. His goal is 200.

The Atlanta Constitution reports that Mr. Samples is unhappy about his diet—no grease, no sugar, no eggs, no salt, everything boiled. But he has not considered having his jaw wired shut. "If I got in a fight now, all I could do would be bite," Mr. Samples explained. "If I couldn't bite, I'd be helpless.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, March 23, the 82nd day of 1975. There are 283 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1775, Patrick Henry made a plea for American freedom in a speech before the Virginia provincial convention in Richmond. He declared: "Give me liberty or give me death."

On this date—

In 1534, Pope Clement VII declared valid the marriage of King Henry VIII of England to Catherine of Aragon.

In 1868, the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson began in Washington.

In 1909, former President Theodore Roosevelt sailed from New York on an expedition to Africa.

In 1919, Benito Mussolini founded a new political movement in Italy.

In 1942, during World War II, the program of moving Japanese-Americans from their homes on the West Coast to inland camps was begun.

In 1956, Pakistan became a republic but retained membership in the British Commonwealth.

Ten years ago: The first manned spacecraft in the U.S. Gemini series was set aloft from Cape Kennedy, Fla., manned by Virgil Grissom and John Young.

President Richard Nixon sent troops to New York to handle mail that was piling up due to a strike by deliverymen.

A Conservative View

Burke On This Character Of The Americans

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va.—Permit me, if you will, an anniversary piece. The dateline is London, March 22, 1775. The occasion: Edmund Burke's speech on conciliation with the American colonies.

Two hundred years have passed since Burke moved the adoption of his resolutions in Commons. His desperate, eleventh-hour purpose was to prevent a war that he knew England could not win, and toward that end he marshaled a brilliant argument of reason, sentiment, and fact. His resolutions failed, of course, and less than a month later, on April 19, came the hostilities of Lexington and Concord.

Burke was 46 that spring. He had been re-elected to Commons a few months earlier as a member from Bristol. As an acknowledged leader of the opposition, he was just growing into those magnificent powers of thought and speech that would serve him to his death in 1797. It is Burke to whom American conservatives look today as the fountainhead of their philosophy. His insights, like good wine, grow better with the years.

"The proposition is peace," said Burke. "Not peace through the medium of war; not peace to be hunted through the labyrinth of intricate and endless negotiations; not peace to arise out of universal discord, fomented from principle, in all parts of the empire . . . It is simple peace, sought in its natural course and in its ordinary haunts."

Burke pleaded with the King's Burke pleaded with the King's ministers to consider both the advantages of peaceful trade and the uncertainties of distant war. But there was a third consideration as to America: "I mean its temper and character."

"In this character of the Americans a love of freedom is the predominating feature which marks and distinguishes the whole . . . This fierce spirit of liberty is stronger in the English colonies, probably, than in any other people of the earth, and this from a variety of powerful causes."

Burke went on to define six influences that contributed to the Americans' love of freedom. First, of course, was their inheritance as Englishmen. This included certain convictions as to government and taxation. Religion and manners figured in the growth of an American spirit. Education, especially in law, had rendered the colonists "acute, inquisitive, desterous, prompt in attack, ready in defense, full of resources." Finally, "three thousand miles of ocean lie between you and them" and this factor of distance necessarily weakened the Crown's authority.

As one consequence of this "fierce spirit of liberty," said Burke, Americans "augur misgovernment at a distance and snuff the approach of tyranny in every tainted breeze." The rebellious colonists would not abandon their love of freedom; they scarcely could be prosecuted individually on criminal charges: "I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against an whole people." The best of all courses was to yield to the American spirit, and to make just concessions toward self-government and peace.

It does an injustice to Burke's speech thus to cut off its arms and legs for purposes of condensation. The great Whig was a great stylist; he played upon the English language like some virtuoso at a bell tower. Few statesmen have matched his ability to capture ideas in phrases that ring and echo.

These echoes should give us pause goday. What has become of that "love of freedom" that 200 years ago marked the American character? Is it still strong, still lively? Does our temper still embrace "a fierce spirit of liberty"? The melancholy answer is, no. As a people, we are less independent, less self-reliant, less passionately dedicated to personal responsibility than we were two centuries ago.

Burke could not make his speech today. The American character has softened, weakened, grown feeble with age. As we enter the Bicentennial period, surely we ought to reflect soberly on why that spirit has been diminished, and how it may yet be regained.

Reckless Congress Has Overlooked The Likely Future Consequences

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Hard times have a way of enriching the vocabulary with new and descriptive terms labeling misfortune.

Just say "Hoover cart" and the immediate mental flash-back is to The Great Depression which got rolling some 45-years ago.

The term "austerity" became commonplace in Europe during the long period of self-denial which marked recovery years after World War II. Europe gave us "double digit" as a measure of inflation completely out of control.

Now, we are being introduced to "crowding out". Use of this term is still confined largely to economists, money managers and others who keep a close eye on the deficit spending upsurge in Congress. But it may well become a part of our everyday conversation.

This latest addition to the language recognizes the danger that Congress, by huge tax cuts and spending additions,may set up a budget deficit too big for the nations' monetary system to handle. In other words, financing the federal deficit would make such a drain on credit that it would result in "crowding out" private needs.If this should take place, there could be some severe and unwanted results. It is imperative that the needs of private investment—industry, businesss of all kinds, housing, agriculture, etc.—be met, or there can be no real recovery. Deficit excesses which cut into these needs would be self-defeating.

And what's more, excessive government demand upon the nation's credit resources could only be met by what amounts to printing press money. And this would set the stage for a new and steeper round of price-wage inflation, followed in the not distant future by more and probably worse inflation.

In the program for economic recovery, the Ford Administration proposed some pretty big deficits—$34.7 billion for this fiscal year and $51.9 billion for fiscal 1976, which begins July 1. This was to result from tax rebates and tax cuts. And it was coupled with a request that Congress limit some spending programs and enact no new ones.

President Ford justified these huge deficits as necessary to stimulate the economy—prime the pump—and thus limit the decline and lay the groundwork for later recovery.

But Congress, controlled by a near leaderless majority in both the House and Senate, seems bent on making Ford's deficits look like the work of a piker. The House jumped the Ford request for a $16-billion tax cut to more than $20-billion and the Senate upped this to nearly $30-billion. And both the Houses seem bent on adding billions to the spending side.

The result is that the prospective deficit has been blown sky high. In the past two weeks, the estimated deficits for this year and next have been revised upwards to $45-billion and $80-billion.

In taking these actions, Members of Congress have given very little thought to what the consequences might be. The preoccupation has been with simply out-doing the White House and for strictly political reasons.

It would be a relatively simple matter for Congress to put through a sizeable tax cut now and, if time proved it inadequate, to expand it before the year is out. That way it might avoid a mistake for which the nation will pay for years.

Treasury Secretary William Simon has given warning of what irresponsible deficits threaten. They can put a brake on the private side of the economy at the same time they build up a tremendous inflationary base.

A major disruption of the money markets would mean a return to high interest rates. In fact, there is some question as to whether the Ford proposed deficits can be handled without up-pressure on rates.

Congress has an opportunity to move in a way which will help limit the decline and bring about the sort of recovery that is necessary to create jobs. The political game it is playing may prove short sighted.

Evans-Novak. .

Simon at the Treasury three months ago when he unsuccessfully fought for a tighter budget to give Mr. Ford a firmer base for confronting — not conciliating — the new Congress. Even those government economists who then derided Simon as antediluvian now concede his accuracy (while still deploring his style).

That accuracy has not warmed the White House mood toward Simon but has deepened his stregth among congressional Republicans — an inherently unstable and unhealthy situation. "I think Bill Simon is in better shape up here than he's ever been," said one influential House Republican, a Ford loyalist rather than a public critic. "We feel somebody has got to stand up for something."

Such Ford loyalists are now urging the President to appreciate the new order on Capitol Hill, forget compromise and go all out to blame Congress for the newest economic crisis. Essentially what was urged weeks ago by Simon and rejected, this advice was repeated this week by one of the President's old cronies from Michigan: conservative Rep. Elford Cederberg, senior Republican on the Appropriations Committee.

But unless the President abruptly changes course, he will make one last try for compromise despite caucus rule in the House. So, the looming $100 billion deficit becomes a double nightmare for President Ford threatening both the shaky economy and his diminishing base of Republican support.

says, although they command two-thirds of the world's hydropower resources.

"Many large rivers flow through the developing regions of the world and they give rise to sites where immense power stations could be constructed. However, in many instances, the demand for electricity within economic transmission distance of these sites is not large enough to support these projects," the study reports.

Another large energy reserve, oil shales and tar sands, hardly has been touched because of the high cost of exploitation. The survey lists France, Britain, South Africa and Sweden as countries that have closed down commercial oil shale industries in the past 20 years because of competition from cheap petroleum.

A Temporary Solution To Early-Rising Issue

Phillip and I both despise getting up, so mornings are not particularly enjoyable at our house. The first one who lands on the floor, either voluntarily or forcibly, is the one who gets breakfast ready, feeds the cat, and practices Chinese water torture on the still-sleeping mate.

The fight over who gets out of bed first can get pretty vicious. In fact, it got so bad that, after I managed for three mornings straight to jab Phillip in the ribs with my elbow before he managed to scrape my legs with his double-edge toenails, he proposed a compromise.

"I think we ought to discuss this problem intelligently," he yawned. "And my intelligence says that, since you're a woman, you ought to get up first."

"No way," I objected. "If a woman needs 50 percent more iron, she needs at least ten minutes more sleep. Do you want to condemn me to a whole day of lackluster hair, verbal incoherence, and sagging eyelids just because I didn't get those few extra minutes of beauty sleep?"

"But etiquette commands that ladies go first," he argued.

"Don't give me that stuff. I read Ms. Magazine. 'Ladies first' is what Adam told Eve when he foisted that apple off on her. And look where THAT got us," I sighed, pulling the covers up over my head. "Your solution is nothing more than a Napoleonic compromise."

GAIL MICHAELS

He snatched the covers away. "I never heard of a Napoleonic compromise," he growled in his normal good-morning voice.

"See, that's what I mean," I shivered. I pinched his kneecap and took advantage of his pain to grab back some of the covers. "I think that whoever has the best reason for sleeping should stay in bed."

"You just gave me the best reason," he groaned. "I can't walk."

"You can hobble," I leered sweetly, recovering my equanimity. "And if you don't hobble into the kitchen before I do, I'm going to pour orange juice on your cereal and sprinkle paprika on your cinnamon toast."

"But I can't get up," Phillip mumbled from beneath his pillow. "I have morning sickness."

"That's because you're remembering that the last three mornings I cooked breakfast, I accidently put sugar on your eggs instead of salt."

"I'm getting tired of this. I'm bigger than you are," he glared sleepily, his pillow balanced rakishly over one ear. "Usually I don't believe in physical force as a solution to problems, but under these unusual circumstances, I might be convinced to throw you bodily out of bed."

"Resisting an impulse to stab him with my always-handy hatpin, I crawled out of bed and headed for the kitchen. Ten minutes later I crawled back into bed.

"Did you make breakfast?" Phillip asked.

"Nope."

"Did you feed the cat?"

"Nope."

"Well, what did you do?" he asked, pounding the bedclothes in exasperation.

"I turned on the radio, and I heard something that could be at least a temporary solution to all our problems."

"What's that?"

"It's Saturday."

Congressional Popularity Slumps Lower Than President Ford's

By GEORGE GALLUP

(Copyright 1975 Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Republication in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.)

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Ford's policy of attacking the Democratic-controlled Congress may be paying off in the same manner as President Harry Truman's campaign against the "do-nothing" Republican Congress in 1948.

While Ford has a relatively low popularity rating, 39 per cent, it's significantly higher than the rating the public presently accords the Congress.

In the latest nationwide survey, only 32 per cent of Americans say they approve of the way the Congress is doing its job, 50 per cent disapprove, and 18 per cent are undecided.

Ford's criticism of Congress has been aimed mainly at the failure of the legislative branch to act on his suggestions to spur a faltering economy.

Current Rating Back To Early 1974 Level

The current rating given Congress by the American public is back to the level recorded one year ago. At that time, 30 per cent expressed approval of the way the Congress was conducting its business.

Confidence in Congress increased dramatically later in 1974 with 47 per cent approving in an August survey completed after the televised impeachment hearings.

The public's low confidence in the Democratic Congress could provide the GOP with a vote-getting issue in the 1976 presidential campaign.

Understandably, a majority of Republicans disapprove of the way congress is handling its job as do a majority of independents. Even among rank-and-file Democrats, the legislators rate no more than an even split.

Criticism, Praise For Congress

A common criticism of Congress is its inability to act or offer alternative policies.

A 29-year-old salesman in South Charleston, W. Va., said, "There is too much criticism and not enough action on important issues like energy, tax cuts, and aid to Indochina. Rather than criticize, the Congress should be offering more positive solutions to the nation's problems."

Among those approving congressional efforts is a 68-year-old engineer in Fayetteville, Ark. "It (Congress) seems to be giving hard and fairly speedy consideration to the country's major problems while trying to preserve our better institutions," he said.

Here is the question asked to determine the public's rating of Congress and the results nationally and by political affiliation:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way the U. S. Congress is handling its job?"

| | Approve | Disapprove | No Opinion |
|---|---|---|---|
| NATIONAL | 32% | 50% | 18% |
| Republicans | 25 | 58 | 17 |
| Democrats | 40 | 40 | 20 |
| Independents | 28 | 60 | 12 |

A comparison of the trend in the job approval ratings of Fred and the Congress is shown below:

Ford-Congress Popularity Rating
(Per Cent Approving)

| | Ford | Congress |
|---|---|---|
| LATEST | 39% | 32% |
| August '74 | 71 | 48 |

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,576 adults, 18 and older, in more than 300 sampling locations across the nation during the period Feb. 28-March 3.

Thai Gov't Asks End Of Arms Lift

By FREDERICK H. MARKS

BANGKOK (UPI) — Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj said Saturday the United States will be asked soon to end its airlift of arms, which has been averaging over 600 tons a day, from Thailand to Cambodia.

But the head of Thailand's second civilian government since World War II, who assumed office this week, said he would allow the airlift of food and fuel to continue.

"We agreed in the national security council meeting yesterday (Friday) that the airlift from Utapao to Cambodia will carry only food and other humanitarian supplies," Kukrit said.

"We agreed that the Foreign Ministry will do whatever is required to reach this goal because our policy is not to interfere with any other country's internal affairs."

The United States is currently carrying out an airlift to isolated Phnom Penh from both Saigon and Utapao air base, about 100 miles south of Bangkok. Most of the arms are from the Thai end of the airlift. Rice is being flown in from Saigon.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman here refused to comment on Kukrit's latest remarks, although sources indicated embassy officials are confused over the policy of the new Thai government. The sources said that, so far, the Thai government has not approached the embassy on the subject of the airlift.

One source suggested that the new Thai government would prefer to see the shipment of arms shifted from Thailand to Saigon.

Girl Notified She Will Serve As Pagette

Seeks Anti-Trust Suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Freshman Rep. Ronald M. Mottl, D-Ohio, asked Attorney General Edward H. Levi Saturday to file an antitrust suit to break up the eight largest oil companies.

"I am very hopeful that you will have the courage and determination to strike a powerful blow to protect the American people from perhaps the most powerful, vicious and harmful monopolistic combination in our two centuries of national existence," Mottl wrote Levi.

He said two years ago a Federal Trade Commission study charged that Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Mobil, Standard Oil of California, Standard Oil of Indiana, Shell and Atlantic Richfield had conspired to monopolize the petroleum industry.

Mottl said the FTC complaint "bogged down in slow moving procedural maneuvers" and probably would not go to trial for 10 years. He urged Levi to "institute immediate action" to compel the firms to break up, creating 10 to 12 new competing companies.

Wins Prize In Program

Dr. Carolyn H. Hampton, associate professor of science education at East Carolina University, has been awarded a $500 prize in the Gustav Ohaus-NSTA award program.

Evaluators from the co-sponsors, the National Science Teachers Association and the Ohaus Scale Corporation, selected Dr. Hampton's "Field Biology for Elementary Education Majors" from papers submitted by science teachers across the nation.

The Awards Program recognizes ideas to improve the effectiveness of science education. Seven papers were selected for awards in the college science teaching category and nine were chosen from the field of elementary and secondary science education.

The NSTA presented the awards at its 23rd annual convention in Los Angeles.

Missionaries Missing

NYACK, N.Y. (UPI) — The Christian and Missionary Alliance said Saturday that seven missionaries — including the wife of a man missing in Vietnam for 14 years—have been missing 11 days in the latest Communist ofensive in Southeast Asia.

CMA President Nathan Bailey said the missionaries were at Ban Me Thuot, South Vietnam, a provincial capital where the denomination has had two large mission stations. He said they were at an American Embassy official's home when last contacted by radio on March 11.

Bailey identified them as:

—Mrs. Archie Mitchell, of Bly, Ore., whose husband was taken captive in 1962 and has not been heard from since.

—Rev. and Mrs. Norman Johnson, of Hamilton, Ont., missionaries in Vietnam since 1971.

—Dr. and Mrs. Richard Phillips, linguists, also missionaries there since 1971. Phillips is from Albany, Ore., and his wife, Lillian, is from Minneapolis.

—Mr. and Mrs. Kohn Miller and their 5-year-old child, hometowns not announced. The Millers are affiliated with the Wycliffe Bible translaters; the others are CMA missionaries.

Bailey said a South Vietnamese Ranger force reached the official's house a day or two after the last radio contact and found no one. A helicopter was turned back by gunfire.

The CMA is a small evangelical denomination in the United States but has one of the largest foreign missionary forces with about 1,000 abroad. It pioneered Protestant missions in Vietnam in the early 1900s and still has 57 there.

Mitchell, Dan Gerber and Dr. Ardell Vieti were seized in 1962 with no word of them since. The State Department still lists them as missing without information. During the Tet offensive in 1968, six CMA missionaries were killed, also at Ban Me Thuot, and seven died in captivity.

Youth Sentenced

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years ago the chief of the War Gods youth gang convened a street corner "kangaroo court" and decided to punish gang member Bernard Hayes by setting fire to his tenement home. The blaze killed Hayes and five members of his family.

Andrew Williams, 20, was sentenced Friday in Brooklyn Supreme Court to 15 years to life for the six revenge arson-murders. "This is one of the most tragic and stupid crimes that I have ever had before me in court."

16 Presumed Dead In Crash

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — Rescue teams, working under the threat of avalanches, reached the wreckage of a C141 Air Force Starlift jet Saturday high upon the side of jagged Warrior Peak in the Olympic Mountains.

There was no sign life. It was presumed that the 10 crewmen and 6 passengers aboard the cargo jet perished in its crash late Thursday while returning to McChord AFB near Tacoma after a routine flight from Yokota AFB near Tokyo.

The wreckage was described by Army W. O. Edward G. Cleve, a helicopter commander, as "all rolled up in a huge snowball at the base of a cliff."

The wreckage, first spotted by Cleve and his crew just before dark Friday, lay at the 5,900-foot level of the 7,300-foot mountain. Because of high winds and snowstorms, the site was not reached by rescue workers until mid-Saturday. The rescue party landed by helicopter.

Ken Wite, a U.S. Forest Service snow ranger who inspected the area from the air, said there were heavy fractures in the snow above the wreckage which indicated avalanche peril was prevalent.

If further snowslides occur, he said the wreckage might be buried until the summer thaw.

Youth Helping In Hearst Case

CHICAGO (UPI) — A key informant described as a young "athletic type" with ties to basketball star Bill Walton was reported Saturday to be cooperating with the FBI in their search for fugitive Patricia Hearst.

The Chicago Sun-Times, in its Sunday edition, quoted Justice Department sources as saying the FBI had won the cooperation of the informant and thereby penetrated the "inner circle of the subculture" believed sheltering Miss Hearst and fellow fugitives Emily and William Harris.

Disclosure by the informant "may ultimately lead to the apprehension of Patricia Hearst," Justice Department sources were quoted as saying.

The information was reported to have led FBI agents to the Pennsylvania farmhouse where Miss Hearst and the Harrises were believed to have hidden last fall.

"His identity is a closely kept secret," the newspaper reported. "But the Sun-Times has learned that the informant is a young 'athletic type' with ties to sports activist Jack Scott and basketball player Bill Walton of the Portland Trail Blazers."

The man was said to be a contemporary of Walton but not a sports celebrity.

Government sources said the informant is believed to be the "somebody else" referred to in a statement by Jay Weiner, a Temple University student identified as a close friend of Jack Scott and his wife, who testified before a Harrisburg, Pa. grand jury on March 13.

Afterwards, Weiner told a news conference, "Somebody else snitched," and then in an apparent message to Symbionese Liberation Army members and supporters he said, "To Tania, Teko, Yolanda and all my sisters and brothers underground or in prison, I hope you are safe and alert. To my Comrade Jack and my dearest sister Micki, I am with you. Please try to understand the terrible pressure my family, friends and I have been under these past two weeks."

The Sun-Times said the informant originally was uncooperative—"if not downright hostile"—when first contacted by the FBI.

"It was only after a series of interviews and discussions that FBI agents convinced the young man, on pragmatic grounds, that his help would be in the long-run best interest of Miss Hearst and the Harrises."

. . . Tax Bill

—Repeal of the oil depletion allowance for major oil companies.

—Some form of 1975 tax reduction, resulting in lower withholding rates later this year.

Ullman, who with Senate Finance chairman russell Long, D-La., will play the key role in the conference, noted there were 15 items in disagreement between the House and Senate bills.

"There are just so many items that are going to be troublesome," he said. "They are just not well thought out."

The Senate bill contains $9.7 billion in tax rebates, $16 billion in individual 1975 tax cuts and $7.4 billion in business tax cuts—a total cut of $33.1 billion. At the same time, it increases taxes on oil companies and multinational corporations by $3.8 billion, resulting in a net tax cut bill of $29.3 billion.

At 102, Still Busy Sewing

CREAL SPRINGS, Ill. (UPI) — "It makes me nervous when I'm not doing anything," says Mrs. Anna G. Powell.

So Mrs. Powell, who will observe her 102nd birthday Sunday, turns out crocheted rugs and makes quilt tops by the dozens.

She sells some of them and gives some away to family and friends. She's a veteran of 88 years at making quilt tops.

"I can make my bed, dust and dry dishes, too," she said.

Mrs. Powell still lives in the same farm home with a son and daughter-in-law where she and her husband settled 73 years ago. He died in 1929.

The home has no electricity, is heated by a large coal stove in the living room, has no indoor plumbing and the refrigerator operates on kerosene.

"I could live in town with my daughter, but I feel at home here," said Mrs. Powell.

She frowns on the short dresses some women wear today. "It's none of my business, but I wouldn't want to wear them," she said.

Mrs. Powell doesn't have any explanation for her longevity.

"I have had my ups and downs, and the heartaches of giving up many loved ones, and I thank God for letting me live and watching over me for 102 years," she said.

"I just take the days one at a time."

Pope Asks For Peace

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI Saturday urged Roman Catholics to preach love and justice and work for peace in Indochina, Ethiopia, Cyprus and the Middle East.

In an address to a Vatican Study Committee for Peace, the pontiff said, "you know... with what pain we are watching the many conflicts under way in the world.

"There is first of all the anguishing tragedy endured these days by the populations of Vietnam, where fighting has flared again with intensity in contempt of existing accords."

Master Copies Of Bible Are Kept In 5 Centers

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Cape Town, on the southern tip of Africa, expects to escape the holocaust should a major nuclear war ever break out.

That is why it is one of only five cities in the world which safeguards a collection of all existing translations of the Bible.

The Bible is now available in 1,526 languages spoken by 97 per cent of the world's population.

In the 1960s, when the threat of nuclear war seemed greatest, the question arose:

What would happen if an area of the world was blotted out by a nuclear Armageddon or some natural disaster causing the total destruction of the Bible in any particular language or group of languages?

The United Bible Societies, a federation of independent Bible societies throughout the world, decided in 1967 to select a number of centers at which master copies of the Bible would be stored for safekeeping.

In case of a world disaster, copies in any particular language could be reprinted from these master copies.

So master collections were stockpiled in Stuttgart, Germany; London, England; New York; Canberra, Australia and Cape Town.

The Cape Town collection is housed in a fireproof strongroom behind locked doors and cared for by the Bible Society of South Africa.

Shelves are lined with huge Bibles, carefully bound and gilded, some with brass clasps.

Many are obviously Bibles but hundreds in foreign languages mystify visitors.

There are, for example, Bibles with such labels as Dawan Bila, Ujszovetseg, Nelautaijut Aglangit and Gotena Epe Agaa whose names alone give no indictions of their content or origin.

The Rev. J. R. Minaar, assistant general secretary for communication and research, says the five collections are invaluable.

Each translation, he says, may represent a lifetime of work and research.

Making a translation for a nomadic people, for example, may entail living with the nomads, learning their language and customs so that the translation is meaningful to them, he said.

"It is not sufficient just to translate the Bible word for word," he said. "In one instance Christ asked whether a man would give his son a snake to eat — yet among some people of North Africa snakes are eaten so that the direct translation would distort the meaning of this passage."

Father Of Psychological Anthropology

By JERRY RAYNOR
Sunday Editor

Chinese born Dr. Francis L.K. Hsu, long time chairman of the Department of Anthropology at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, is a man who has developed several theories on human conditions today that are giving educators, philosophers and lay people pause for consideration in the science of evaluating human behavior.

Dr. Hsu is considered the father of psychological anthropology, a social science that brings new concepts and approaches to the traditionally separate fields of culture and anthropology. One of his books, Americans and Chinese was one of three recommended for reading by former President Nixon before his trip to China. "I've no idea whether or not Mr. Nixon read it," Dr. Hsu commented.

On Friday morning, March 21, Dr. Hsu was on campus at East Carolina University to give a lecture on "China Today," based on travels he and his family made in China during the summer of 1972. Although this subject is understandably popular with the general public at this point in time, it is Dr. Hsu's numerous books and articles written during long years of formulating and expressing his theories that will most likely have a lasting and significant impact on society.

Following his arrival in Greenville On Thursday evening, Dr. Hsu talked about his experiences and life work to date, and also touched briefly on future plans, which include a year long trip beginning in September. "I will be based in Hong Kong and from there will do intensified research in Southeast Asia, Indonesia, Thailand and other countries," he said.

Two theories that Dr. Hsu feels "are very important" are presented in his writings. "One of these," he said, "is outlined in my book, The Study Of Literate Civilizations. This has to do with the study of theoretical developments along two lines. One is what the family does to the individual in a psychological orientation to society. This is a non-Freudian approach.

"The other line, a theory being developed and already in article form, is on the subject of psychosocial homeostasis, or in short PSH, about the human body trying to maintain its interpersonal relations.

"Both these lines of thought," Dr. Hsu explained, "are designed to find a theoretical link between the individual and society in cultures. It is not true that only society shapes the individual. The individual also shapes society.

"In this line of thought," Dr. Hsu said, "I'm trying to be specific, to take a look at China, at Japan, the United States." (These are geographical areas that have been the scene of many of Dr. Hsu's travels and research).

Dr. Hsu's concern for the social conditions of modern man is many faceted, with new roads opening as he continues to explore this field. "Right now I'm developing a theory on human relations, something I intend to finish before leaving again for the Far East. This is on the loneliness of Americans. I feel Americans don't relate to each other in doing things together. I don't mean all our organized activity, I'm talking about the comforting relationship of people simply being together. I plan to publish my works in a book to be called People Who Have Each Other."

Asked if his theories and publications had gained recognition or acceptance in China, Dr. Hsu said "Mainland China is not interested in our psychological sciences. The same is true for Taiwan. Both countries have a practical bent."

Previous writings by Dr. Hsu include books that have become well known in their field, with translations made into several languages. Among these are Under The Ancestors' Shadow; Americans and Chinese; and Clan, Caste, and Club. With a few exceptions, the author pointed out, "my main approach has been to study one culture in comparison with another or with two others. For instance, American and Chinese, or American, Chinese and Indian cultures."

Born in a village of Chuang Ho District in the southern part of Manchuria near the Korean border, Dr. Hsu spent his early years in China. His is another instance of the circumstances of history altering an individual life pattern.

At the time Japan invaded Manchuria in 1931, Dr. Hsu was in Shanghai. There he attended the University of Shanghai and later lived in Hankow (now known as Wuchu) in Central China on the Yangtze River. During the war he met a young Chinese lady, Yi-Nan (English name Vera) and married her in 1943.

In 1937, the year Japan attacked mainland China, Dr. Hsu went to London on a scholarship. He studied there for three and one-half years before returning to China and a teaching assignment at Yunnan University.

Even as a young scholar, his early researches and writings attracted considerable attention. In 1944 he was invited to become a faculty at Columbia University. After Columbia, he was on the Cornell University staff, then went to Northwestern in 1949.

In the past 25 years, his research travels have taken him to India, Europe, Hawaii, Japan and China.

The 1972 trip to China combined visiting relatives and compiling material for China Today. He was accompanied by his wife, his two daughters, Eileen and Penny, and Eileen's husband, Richard Balger. "Richard is a Jewish boy and is a graduate of Yale Law School," Dr. Hsu noted. "Eileen is currently completing doctorate work in anthropology, and Penny has her master's degree in educational psychology from Northwestern."

This first visit to Greenville, Dr. Hsu explained, particularly appealed to him. It gave him another opportunity to visit Dr. Blanche Watrous. "We have been friends for many years," he smiled, "and it's always a pleasure to see Blanche again. Our families have developed a special relationship that has lasted for more than 25 years."

EXPOSED BEAMS ACCENT CEILING OF LIVING ROOM

By Jerry Bishop

A variety of living space for rest and comfort, as well as for activity, creates a home appropriately named "Siesta." The peacefulness of the Spanish siesta is found in this brick and stucco design, marked by a stark simplicity and distinctive arches.

The gracious foyer provides an unusual direction of traffic, as it moves into a hall surrounding the sunken living room, creating a noise buffer on all sides of the room.

The central living room is designed with exposed beams which contrast with the natural wood-burning fireplace. Windows on each side of the fireplace provide a view of the terrace.

The extra comfort and warmth a fireplace provides is extended to the family room, where the second fireplace appears. Here also is access to the terrace through sliding glass doors. Although there is eating space in the adjacent kitchen, part of the family room can be used as a dining area, either for casual entertaining or more formal dining.

The kitchen has added storage space in closet and pantry, eating space, built-in appliances and is directly behind the half bath which is entered from the foyer-hall.

A double garage completes the right wing of the home.

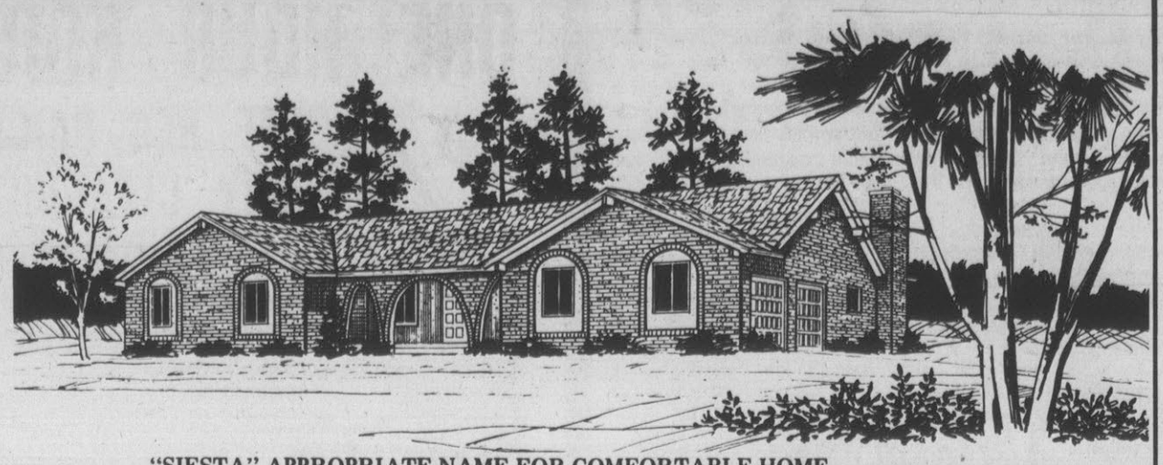

The sleeping area, to the left of the living room and entrance, contains four bedrooms. The master bedroom, surely a luxurious retreat, enjoys a separate dressing room where two closets are situated and a full bath, with built-in vanity, shower and separate tub. The room itself, without the extras, spans more than 17 feet.

The other bedrooms are also large, with extra closets, utility space close by, special linen and coat closets providing much extra storage. A second full bath also is provided.

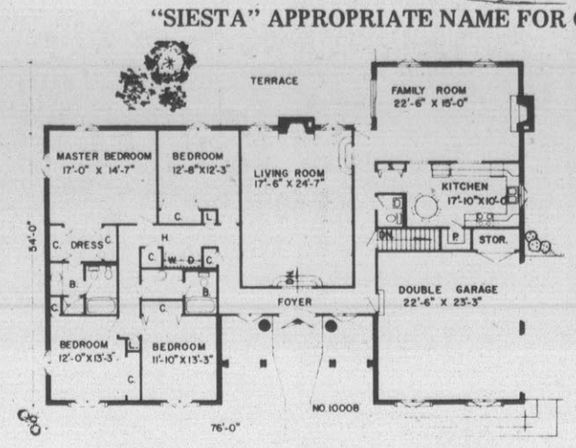

The well-designed "Siesta" is constructed to provide a total noise buffer between the sleeping area of the home and the family room, where more activity might be expected. The living room, placed conveniently between these two areas, provides the quiet, spacious area for entertaining. Because it opens to the family room, many guests can be entertained simultaneously.

The exterior of the home is a tribute to a master craftsman, who has combined simplicity with Spanish arches to produce a trim, yet inviting home. The garage doors are designed to disappear into the side of the home, rather than disrupting the smooth lines of the front of the "Siesta." Brick and stucco, natural materials, create solidarity.

The "Siesta" also is designed with a full basement, providing even more room for hobbies, crafts, woodworking or storage.

Billions of gallons of water are going down the drain literally and figuratively every day.

The considerable percentage of it that is wasted adds to the worries of conservation experts — who point out that the supply of potable water is not inexhaustible — and raises water bills everywhere.

There are many ways to save water. Most of them we know, but too often we overlook them simply because we don't make the mental effort necessary to take action. And sometimes we take what we think is a water-saving step, but really isn't. Placing a brick in a toilet tank is a much-discussed method of using less water when flushing, but it really isn't very practical. Most conventional toilet units require a certain amount of water (five gallons or more) for proper flushing. Reduce that amount and you reduce efficiency, sometimes resulting in a second flushing and the use of more water rather than less. There are some new toilet units that work well with only three and a half gallons of water.

What are some of the techniques for conserving water? I directed that question to James Sledge, president of a major plumbing products company (Borg-Warner). He came up with this list:

1. Repair or replace dripping faucets, leaking toilets.
2. Don't run drinking water until it gets very cold. Keep a container in the refrigerator.
3. Water lawns and gardens only when really necessary.
4. Use a glass of water instead of running the faucet when brushing your teeth.
5. Reduce showering time; lower tub bath water level by one inch.
6. Wash dishes or laundry only when you have accumulated a full load.
7. Wash your car in the shade with the water turned low, and shut the hose off when you're not using it.
8. When possible or necessary, install up-to-date water-saver toilets.
9. Don't shave with running water.
10. Rinse dishes in the sink compartment, not under the faucet.
11. Sweep, rather than hose down, driveways.
12. Cover children's out-of-ground swimming pools when not in use and you won't have to change the water so often.

(For around-the-house do-it-yourselfers, Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," can be obtained by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — When I went up in the attic the other day for the first time in a few weeks, I discovered several places where the vapor barrier of the wall insulation was torn. I have no idea how this happened, but I would like to know how to patch it.

A. — The usual procedure is to strip a piece of vapor barrier from a scrap section of the insulation left over when the installation was made. If you have no such left-over pieces, use polyethylene to cover the broken area. Tape the patch to keep it securely in place. While you are at it, check to see whether there are any other breaks. Even a small opening in a vapor barrier is enough to permit the entrance of moisture.

Q. — I bought some mineral wool insulation recently, but haven't put it up yet. It's for our attic. I notice the packages are marked with R numbers. What do they mean?

A. — The letter R stands for resistance to winter heat loss or summer heat gain. R-22 and R-19 mineral wool batts are 5 to 7 inches thick; R-13 blankets, 3½ to 3⅝ inches; R-11, 3 to 4 inches. One brand of insulation might be slightly thinner or thicker than another, but if they are marked with the same R-number, they will resist heat flow equally well.

Q. — I'm having an insulation job done in our house. It's the kind where they blow in the insulation. I have gotten three estimates. They're pretty much the same. But a neighbor tells me it's better to hire a contractor who pays his installers by the hour. He says he doesn't know why this is so, but he heard it from someone years ago. Can you enlighten me?

A. — The theory is that if an insulation installer is paid by the square footage rather than by the hour, he will hurry the job just to get it done. However, if an installer has integrity and pride in his work, he will do good work no matter how he is paid.

(A brand new Andy Lang booklet is "Saving Money in Insulating." It can be obtained by sending 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743.)

Affluent Housing Last To Fade

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
United Press International

At a time when most potential homebuyers are gearing themselves to accept simpler, more basic houses in order to afford a home at all, it's still fun browsing out of class —daydreaming, if you will.

The trade publication, Professional Builder, provides the opportunity to consider how the other half lives in an issue featuring "Housing for the Affluent."

Actually, it's more like the other 12 per cent. That's about the portion of the housing market devoted to luxury homes.

It's a market, Builder says, that "traditionally has been the last to decline, the first to recover and the least to suffer in any slowdown..." Custom builders are reporting strong demand and are continuing to build and to generate innovations in design, styling and product selection.

Builder's editors say the kind of ideas expressed in their sampling of recently completed homes can be expected to appear in modified form in less expensive homes later this year.

What is a luxury home in these days when inflation has made the $50,000 house a commonplace? The Builder's study samples homes in the $100,000 and up (up to as much as $500,000) class, for the most part exclusive of land, design fees and extras such as furnishings and landscaping. Another measure is space. The smallest had 2,800 square feet; the largest and most expensive 7,306 square feet of living area.

The custom builder, of course, caters to individual taste; is able to employ innovative design, take full advantage of an interesting site. Striking examples of this flexibility: A Spring Green, Wis., house, built around a live oak tree which passes through all three floors, with one branch, 16 feet in diameter, extending through a floor-to-ceiling glass wall, gasketed to allow for future growth. A "greenhouse" home on Lake Sammamish in Redmond, Wash. The 3,000-square-foot house has sloping walls of one-quarter inch solar plate glass that admits enough light so plants thrive. Fourteen separate planters make the interior of the home seem like a continuation of the heavily wooded, hillside site. There is a 10 x 30-foot "tree house" room above the kitchen for the owner's specialized gardening hobby and a 25-foot high prefabricated fireplace.

A big brick and wood country kitchen and an adjacent craft room are highlights of a Santa Barbara, Calif., home, designed around existing trees. The kitchen features a big fireplace, open also to the dining room. Much of the superstructure on the interior of this home was crafted from telephone poles. They are used for railing supports and decorative purposes.

In a Los Altos, Calif., house built into a steep hillside (the back of the house actually is a concrete retaining wall) two atrium gardens substitute for a rear view. They also add light and the in-house greenery which is one of the growing trends in interior design today.

In its Design Lab section immediately following the lush display of luxury homes, Professional Builder comes back to earth with advice on "How to Make Small Space Live Big." Planning is the key to providing livability, visual impact and privacy in the smaller houses that are becoming necessary to provide housing at a valuable price in the face of soaring land, money and construction costs.

Today's buyers, a Builder marketing survey showed, are willing to accept a simpler, more basic home package, and are just as practical regarding lot size, and housing style. More than three out of four potential buyers reported a willingness to accept a smaller home; six out of 10 buyers felt 50 to 100-foot frontage adequate and three out of 10 said they would opt for economical one-and-a-half or two-story homes, rather than ranch models.

As prices escalate, the Builder's editors concluded, more and more buyers will seek a housing product that satisfies their needs without wasting space. They will demand a home that has realistic operating and maintenance costs. Space is not as important as it once was. Housing design has improved and space works harder.

All This With The Marianas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Islanders in grass skirts, the birthplace of atomic warfare, Japanese honeymooners, paradise beaches, poisonous toads, rusting World War II tanks, and a whisper of Amelia Earhart.

That's what comes with the Mariana Islands if, as expected soon, they become part of the United States. Island and American representatives signed the basic agreement in February.

Do-It-Yourself Saved Money

FORT EUSTIS, Va. (UPI) — S-Sgt. James S. Dyrek, from Chicago, is an instructor in the stevedore classes at the Army Transportation School. Using $4 worth of eye screws and used lumber that he gathered around the post, Dyrek took two months of his spare time to build a model of a cargo ship's deck for classroom instruction.

According to the sergeant, a similar model built through government sources would cost about $1,000.

The earliest known record of salt was written in Chinese.

The Garden Clinic

Q. We have noticed very few, if any, worms in our garden. We have a booklet that has an ad in it where we can order redworms. Would you recommend ordering redworms and getting them started in our garden? Would appreciate any other comments you may have on this subject. (Mrs. F.W., Statesville)

A. The lack of worms is probably a result of your soil. It most likely has a clay hardpan. Break it up and mix in sawdust, compost or manure. Then worms will be attracted and gradually populate the garden. I'd rather let native worms infiltrate the garden than spend money on worms that may not be suited to North Carolina soils. (David S. deCalesta, extension wildlife specialist)

Q. We are anxious to move some dogwood, redbud and bush honeysuckle from the woods. Can this be done now? (Mrs. E.G., Carthage)

A. It is safest to transplate native plants such as wild bush honeysuckle, redbud and dogwood during the dormant season—November, December and January. (Henry J. Smith, extension horticulturist)

Q. I have been digging in my garden and found what has been identified as white grubs. How do I get rid of them? (L.M., Clinton)

A. These insects can be controlled by applying material to the soil before planting. Broadcast and work in Dyfonate, Chlordane or Diazinon. Be sure to check the label to see if you can legally plant the crops you desire in the soil treated with the insecticide selected. Carrots, beets, Irish potatoes and some other root crops may have to be thoroughly washed after being grown in treated soil. (H.E. Scott, extension entomologist)

Q. I have in my woody ornamentals a perennial plant with underground white tubers. What is it and how do I control it? (J.P., Laurinburg)

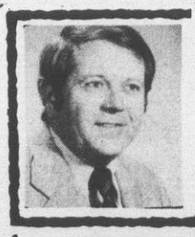

A. Your weed is Florida betony. In woody ornamentals use Casoron for conrol. This is available as a granular material which makes it easier to apply. Casoron can be used on azaleas, boxwoods, gardenias, some hollys, pyracantha, and many others. Examine a Casoron label to determine if it can be used safely on any of your woody ornamental plants. (Bill Lewis, extension agronomist)

THE PRE-OWNED HOME

"Pre-owned" is a euphemism for a home you acquire second-hand or fifth (or even tenth — in the case of a heritage house). According to the National Association of Realtors, Americans purchase approximately 3 million homes annually. Of these, some 2½ million are pre-owned homes. What accounts for their popularity?

Beyond the very practical advantages offered by older homes, they exert an emotional appeal as well. Charm is a major factor; so too are individuality, and privacy resulting from hedges and full grown trees.

In addition to these intangibles, the older home offers a wider choice of selection — there are approximately two to three times as many existing dwellings as new homes on the market today. However, you should take a careful look at basic systems, such as plumbing, heating and electricity to be sure they are up to current standards.

Bernadette Back With Fresh Beliefs

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST (AP) — Bernadette McAliskey is back in politics with a new struggle and a new set of beliefs.

Six years ago, as Bernadette Devlin, she became the youngest woman ever to sit in the British Parliament, elected after leading Catholic civil rights marchers to the barricades against the Ulster government.

She lost her seat in 1974, and since then she has been reorganizing her political beliefs, and raising her 3-year-old daughter, born before her marriage to schoolteacher Michael McAliskey.

Fifteen weeks ago she formed the Irish Republican Socialist Party with Seamus Costello, who had been expelled from the "Official," Marxist Irish Republican Army. Now Mrs. McAliskey's new party and the "Officials" are in hot dispute over the future course of troubled Northern Ireland.

Mrs. McAliskey said she fears that she might be harmed.

Despite these fears, she cheerfully brewed coffee during an interview in the kitchen of her cottage home at Derryloughan, a sprawling County Tyrone village of the kind the Irish call a townland.

The house stands at the end of a dirt road composed largely of potholes. Concrete blocks form stepping stones to the door.

Mrs. McAliskey is 26 now but physically the same pocket dynamo who emerged from student politics to international headlines. Only her ideas have changed, she explained.

The blazing row with the "Officials" is basically a row between Stalinism and Trotskyism, she said. Her Irish Republican Socialist Party is on the Trotskyite side.

This is the first time she has totally identified herself with one political group. Previously she was a political freelance, speaking on the political platforms of both the "Official" leftist and the "Provisional" nationalist versions of the IRA. She ran for Parliament as an independent.

She said she supports the "anti-imperialist" struggle of the "Provisionals" against the British Army — a struggle in abeyance since the Feb. 10 ceasefire.

But the Provos, she insisted, are politically bankrupt and devoid of ideas as to what to do once the British leave Northern Ireland.

The "Officials" she accused of abandoning all struggle. They have observed a ceasefire since May 1972, believing that armed anti-British action is counter productive.

Four years ago she was calling herself a Marxist while admitting she had never read Marx. The deficiency has been remedied with surprising results.

"Karl Marx as an individual," she said, "was a bad-mannered pig. I can't stand self-styled Marxists who think they have to accept not just his ideas but imitate his arrogance and lack of patience.

"Marx is not God. Intellectuals who preach his theses have never tried them out on the ground or at the factory gate. The task is to relate his analysis to what's happening now."

Flexibility is her new watchword.

"I started out from a liberal position, demonstrating and agitating for reform," she said.

"But I discovered the system was incapable of reform. I had to look elsewhere, to read and learn. I may change again. People who never change their politics are either fools or some kind of robot."

She has a similar attitude toward her religion.

She would no longer call herself a good Roman Catholic — "But traditions are born in us and given us by history, and religious presecution is part of our history.

"Overall I am not an atheist. I'm not prepared to say there is no God. But I do say that the Church propagates a lot of nonsense, like the sacred nature of property, in its acquiescence in law and order, its opposition to the struggle of the present generation."

Some estimates have put the strength of Mrs. McAliskey's new party at around 700. She believes 300 would be nearer the mark but says she's not worried by numbers. Discipline and political awareness are more important than size, she said.

She looked back over six years to the idealism of the civil rights movement and its fight against the now officially admitted injustices against Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland.

With more than 1,150 dead, has it been worth it?

"Yes," she said. "Some people accused the civil rights movement of moving too fast. Some said it went too slow.

"But the injustices were there. The side effects, the shootings and bombings, would have been the same whichever way we played it.

"The idealism is still there, too. People talk about war weariness. But that's a concept I don't believe in. Some will go on fighting."

Her instructions for returning by car to Belfast had an Irish flavor: "Get back to the bottom of the road and there's a signpost for Portadown. That's the road to Belfast. The signpost points the wrong way."

Some Robins Don't Go South

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first robin of spring may be a stay-at-home that never left town.

Tough robins, undaunted by the cold, often winter in the north in sheltered woodland seclusion. New Jersey reported a large number flitting around the state in January. Abundant food and a mild winter apparently convinced the birds to stay put.

Most robins wing to warmer southern climes along with other migratory birds. Some go as far south as Guatemala, the National Geographic Society says.

America's Wild Flowers Can't Run Away From Us

EDITOR'S NOTE — Twenty species of orchid, and large numbers of cacti are the most prominent of the plants on the list of endangered American plant life — a list that grows because of nature's inroads and man's.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Now, man's shadow falls upon the wild flowers.

In the 50 states, nearly 3,200 kinds of native higher plants are endangered, threatened or recently extinct, over 14 per cent of the nation's floral heritage.

That's the sum of a report to Congress by the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History.

About a third of the plants on the critical or dead list are on the islands of Hawaii — nearly 30 per cent of that state's native flora.

The rest are isolated in small inland islands of the continental United States, locked in by quirks of nature, while man's heavy feet and his penchant for precious blooms are not locked out.

One such island is southern Illinois, short of where the glaciers that wiped out thousands of plants stopped their southern invasion. They call it "the other Illinois" because it is more like the southern coastal states than it is the cornbelt and industry to the north. They grow cotton there. And the bald cypress endures.

There is a flower that grows in southern Illinois, called French's shooting star. It is a small plant, nestling under sandstone ledges, pretty little pink flowers looping out of the green heart, accustomed over the centuries to the shadows of crack and crevice. Its existence is threatened.

The common shooting star, a larger cousin, grows nearby, in the sunlight, sometimes only feet away from its fragile relative. It grows in many places and in proliferation.

Yet the delicate flowers of French's are seen only in the cave-like recesses of this part of Illinois and similar habitats in Arkansas and Kentucky. Something happened to it long ago to limit its living capabilities to these conditions. It even has a different number of chromosomes from the common shooting star.

"It's in the primrose family," explains Dr. Robert A. DeFillips, coordinator of the Smithsonian study. "It has a nice little pink flower and people collect it."

The road to extinction is paved with ignorance, avarice, and sometimes only the conflict between man's domesticated useful world and the not-so-useful world of the wild flower. A field is plowed to grow tomatoes in Florida and wild plants die. Collectors dig up delicate orchids and bizarre cacti and the world of the wild is diminished.

The Smithsonian is recommending that these special areas where plants live in the wild be preserved, and urging that the thriving business of hunting and selling orchids and cacti be curtailed.

It is hard to believe, but some people are willing to pay up to $300 for some rare species of cactus. A more common price is $25, and they are dug up and shipped by the truckloads, threatening their survival. The very people who treasure these remarkable creations of nature are helping decimate them.

To aid efforts of preservation, the Smithsonian intends to back up its list with maps, locating the small islands of living plants. It even does that with some trepidation. "We hesitate to publish maps," explains DeFillips, "because while it alerts people to the fact that plants are endangered in a given area, it also flags them to certain other people who might hunt them out. Many plants die, even when they are uprooted with care. Roots are broken and in some permit the entry of fungal infections."

In Great Britain where conservationists have long ago sought out endangered species of plant life and earmarked them for protection, location maps are actually locked away in a safe.

The Smithsonian study, aided by state studies, shows a number of things about green America. For instance, California, Texas, Florida and to some extent the Appalachian Mountains have the greatest number of native plants of the restricted and rare variety. Also, in four states — Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana — DeFillips says very little is known about local flora and there is much survey work to be done.

Yet those four states have some of the richest vegetation in the United States. Georgia was home for the Franklinia alatamaha, which was first recorded in 1790, and was last seen in the wild in 1803. It grew along the Altamaha River, a member of the Camellia family, with fragrant white flowers and dark green leaves. Extinct in the wild, it is preserved by horticulturists. In fact, three of the shrubs grow in front of the Smithsonian's natural history building on Constitution Avenue in Washington.

Again, its own beauty was the reason for its demise. It was overcollected to grace the gardens of early America as far north as Philadelphia. Today it graces a U.S. postage stamp.

It is only one of the some 355 plant species listed as extinct.

The Smithsonian lists contain the names of 20 species of orchid and large numbers of cacti. These are the most prominent of the plants falling before the shovels of collectors. They are more than an American heritage. They are a world heritage.

Cacti, for instance, grow only on this hemisphere, in the deserts of the West, Mexico and South America. There are other deserts of the world. But no other cacti. In Africa, nature mimicked the cactus, creating succulent plants that look just like them. But they are members of the spurge family, descended oddly from the same line that brought forth the poinsettia.

It is not an idle concern either. Each plant, like each living creature, represents a certain collection of genes, devised by evolution in an attempt to answer the severe questions asked by nature. In a sense, every living thing is an on-going experiment.

All together, they represent the pool of genes that belong to earth.

As S. Dillon Ripley, secretary of the Smithsonian, observes: "All animals are dependent on plants for food and survival. Once a species of plant is extinct, the potential contained in that germ or gene pool is lost forever."

But beyond, there are esthetic considerations, for beauty, too, can also be lost forever. And as the world fills up with men and the works of men, there are few havens left where "full many a flower is born to blush unseen, and waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Man must be careful where he walks.

Kentucky Stuns Top-Ranked Indiana

UCLA Again Is In Final Four

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sophomore Marques Johnson tossed in 20 of his game-high 35 points in the first half Saturday, leading UCLA to an 89-75 romp over Arizona State in the West Regional playoffs and giving the Bruins a berth in the NCAA basketball tournament's semifinal round for the ninth consecutive year.

UCLA, which had its record string of seven straight NCAA crowns snapped by North Carolina State in last year's semifinals, will meet Midwest regional-winner Louisville next Saturday at San Diego in half of the semifinal doubleheader. East champion Syracuse faces Kentucky, the Mideast winner, in the other semifinal matchup.

Johnson, a slick 6-foot-6¼ forward, was all over the court in the first half, as UCLA cooly handled Arizona State's pressing defense and jumped to an early lead.

With All-American Dave Meyers battling a variety of leg injuries, Johnson handled the bulk of the Bruins' offense. He repeatedly converted steals and rebounds into baskets as UCLA rushed to a 14-point bulge at 46-32.

Johnson, who had averaged 10.6 points during the regular season and had never scored more than 22 points in his two varsity seasons, stung Arizona State early and often. He had 13 points in the game's first 10 minutes, as the Bruins shrugged off State's press to take charge.

His 35 points was the second highest total ever by a UCLA forward. Meyers holds the school record for that position with a 39-point game.

Once UCLA moved in front, Arizona State seemed to get rattled and began committing turnovers. UCLA quickly built a slim early lead into its comfortable 46-36 halftime, dominating the backboards with 6-9¼ Rich Washington and 7-1¼ Ralph Dollinger helping the Bruins to a wide first-half rebounding edge.

Arizona State managed to convert only two of its eight first-half free throws.

Johnson continued to blister the Sun Devils as the second half started and with Washington blocking shots and grabbing rebounds, UCLA broke the game wide open. Soon the lead was 20 points, at 64-44, and the Bruins were thinking about San Diego.

State, led by Lionel Hollins and James Holliman, tried to stay with the Bruins and at one point, the Sun Devils sliced the lead to 13 at 70-57. But Drollinger came off the bench to sink two quick baskets and with Meyers helping Washington on the backboards, the Bruins soon had restored their big margin.

Then with less than 10 minutes left to play, Arizona State made one more run at UCLA. The Sun Devils shaved the lead to nine points at 78-69 and Coach John Wooden rushed Johnson back into the game.

Johnson quickly scored a basket and then soared high over the defensive rim to grab a rebound. Washington spun off two straight layups and the Bruins were home free after that.

Washington finished with 16 points for the game.

The victory ran UCLA's record to 26-3. Arizona State finished at 25-4.

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Rick Robey and Mike Phillips, Kentucky's two freshmen centers, avenged an earlier drubbing by Indiana, and the Wildcats broke the Hoosiers' 34-game winning streak with a 92-90 basketball victory over the nation's top-ranked team Saturday in the NCAA Mideast Regional championship.

The victory advances fifth-ranked Kentucky, 25-4, to the NCAA finals in San Diego where the Wildcats will play Syracuse in a semifinal game next Saturday.

Mike Flynn, with 22 points, and Jimmy Dan Conner, with 17, provided the Kentucky firepower. But it was the imposing physical presence of Robey and Phillips, both of them 6-foot-10, that was largely responsible for Kentucky's avenging an early season 98-74 loss to Indiana.

The Wildcats had pointed for this game since then, and they made the most of their opportunity by snapping the nation's longest winning streak.

The last Indiana loss came last season in the Big 10 playoffs against Michigan before the Hoosiers won their last three games and their first 31 this year. That was until the Hoosiers met Kentucky Saturday.

Kent Benson, with a game-high 33 points, made a valiant effort to bring his team back. But he was unable to totally overshadow Robey and Phillips and a third 6-10 freshman center, Dan Hall, which Kentucky used against him.

The Wildcats blew the game open with a 16-4 surge in 4½ minutes midway through the final half. Phillips and Kevin Grevey each had two baskets in that stretch, and Robey also had four points as Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall effectively alternated his centers.

Indiana, seeking the inspiration to send the Hoosiers toward a national title, started 6-7 forward Scott May for the first time since the All-American suffered a broken left arm on Feb. 22 against Purdue. May, who scored 25 points in the December victory over Kentucky, made only one of four shots in 7½ minutes of play before leaving the game.

The lead changed hands 10 times in the first half, with both teams constructing individual offensive spurts. Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight, becoming infuriated over a foul to forward John Laskowski, collected a technical foul midway through the first half.

The outburst resulted in four Kentucky points, giving the Wildcats a lead. Indiana soon regained the lead on two baskets by Benson and Bobby Wilkerson. That sent the Hoosiers ahead 36-31.

Kentucky then returned with nine points of its own to pull into a 40-38 lead. Benson scored to tie the game at 40-40 and it was tied at 44-all at the half.

Kentucky, on three baskets by Conner, opened a 55-50 lead with about 16½ minutes remaining. But then Steve Green and Benson brought Indiana back into a 58-57 lead.

With the Hoosiers leading 62-61, the Wildcats took the lead for good on two baskets by Flynn and one by Conner, a 6-4 senior who is the team's captain.

The Wildcats stretched their lead to nine points at 79-70 with 5½ minutes remaining before Benson, who was becoming a one-man show, slowly began closing the gap for the Hoosiers, who frantically pressed in an effort to catch up.

Benson's tip-in with 24 seconds remaining closed the gap to 90-88. But then Grevey, a second team All-American, sank two free throws to give Kentucky a four-point lead.

Laskowski scored for Indiana with 14 seconds remaining to close the Kentucky lead to 92-90. But Indiana was unable to get the ball back, and their unbeaten streak disappeared.

Kentucky Coach Hall, winning for the first time over Indiana in five attempts, credited his bench and a newly designed defense with ending the Hoosiers' strength.

"Our bench wore them down," Hall said. "And we changed defenses for this game. We went from a 1-3-1 to a man-to-man and it seemed to work.

Grevey, who scored 22 points to lead the Wildcats in their loss to Indiana, scored 17 points Saturday. But eleven of those came in the first half when he made only four of his 14 field goal attempts.

Robey and Phillips each finished with 10 points for Kentucky. But they made their presence felt in many other ways as well.

Green, who had 34 points in Indiana's victory over Oregon State Thursday, had 21 against Kentucky.

The Wildcats shot 49 per cent from the field for the game. Indiana hit 46 per cent of its field goal attempts.

High-Flying Cardinals Dump Maryland, 96-82

By MIKE LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Third-ranked Louisville conquered Maryland's press and rode the hot hand of guard Phillip Bond to a 96-82 victory Saturday in the finals of the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball playoffs.

The Cardinals will be making their third appearance in the NCAA championship tournament at San Diego when they meet the West Regional champion in the semifinals.

The Cardinals, representing the Missouri Valley Conference, beat the Terps at their own shooting game. Maryland, the top-shooting team in the nation with a 55 per cent average, got off to a cold start while Bond ignited Louisville into an early lead.

Bond, who finished with 23 points, picked up the scoring slack for Louisville's top scorer, Junior Bridgeman, who hit only one point in the first half and picked up his fourth foul after five minutes of the second half.

Maryland, which never has made the Final Four of the national championship tournament, never led in the game but twice tied the score in the first half.

Louisville, which played in the NCAA championship tournament in 1959 and 1972, led 42-37 at halftime, but it wasn't until midway through the second half that the Cardinals took complete charge.

Louisville, now 27-2, blew to its biggest bulge of the game after eight minutes of the second half when the Cards took a 71-55 lead on a bucket by sophomore Danny Brown.

Maryland made one more charge, cutting Louisville's lead to an 82-78 margin with 4:20 left in the game. But Louisville, with baskets by William Bunton and Bond, pulled back ahead and stalled out the final 2½ minutes.

Allen Murphy supported Bond in the scoring with 20 points for Louisville. Bridgeman and Bunton finished with 13 each.

Wesley Cox, recovering from a hamstring injury, was a big addition to Louisville's lineup. Cox played briefly Thursday night against Notre Dame, scoring three points and getting two rebounds. Against Maryland, Cox finished with 15 points.

The Terps were led by John Lucas, who hit 27 points, and Owen Brown, who scored 19. Tom Roy scored 16 and Steve Sheppard 10.

Cincinnati beat Notre Dame 95-87 in the Midwest consolation.

Syracuse Comes Back For Win

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Rudy Hackett hit a left-handed shot over his head at the buzzer, sending the game into overtime and Syracuse went on to defeat Kansas State 95-87 to win the NCAA East Regional championship and a spot in next week's national semifinals.

Hackett, who finished with 28 points, four of them in overtime, was a prime force as Syracuse came back from a second half shooting slump that had allowed Kansas State, the runnerup in the Big Eight Conference, to lead most of the second half.

The final five minutes of regulation was an incredible see-saw battle, with Chuckie Williams, who had a game-high 35 points, seemingly giving Kansas State a victory when he hit a 20-foot shot from the corner. The Wildcats led 76-74 and there were only five seconds left.

But Syracuse, which upset North Carolina on Thursday with a last-second shot by Jim Lee, pulled off another set of heroics. Small guard Jim Williams dribbled the length of the floor and fed Hackett underneath the basket.

The 6-foot-9 senior turned and as the buzzer sounded let go a five-foot, left-handed shot that split the nets and sent the game into overtime at 76-76.

Hackett sent Syracuse ahead 78-76 at the outset of overtime, but Chuckie Williams tied it at 78-78, the last time Kansas State was to see a portion of the lead. The Orangemen then rattled off six straight points to open a 84-78 lead with two and a half minutes to play.

The clincher came when the 6-3 Lee drove and scored a layup with 1:43 remaining and was fouled on the play. He completed the three-point play and Syracuse, 23-7, had an insurmountable 87-80 lead.

Tar Heels Take Third

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Mitch Kupchak, North Carolina's 6-foot-9 center, scored nine points in less than two minutes late in the second half to lead the Tar Heels to a 110-90 rout of Boston College Saturday in the NCAA East regional consolation game.

Syracuse and Kansas State played in the second game for the East title.

After leading by as many as 20 points in the first half, North Carolina had to stage a second-half burst behind Kupchak and guard Brad Hoffman to beat back a Boston College rally.

The sixth-ranked Tar Heels, 23-8, outscored the Eagles 16-3 in a 3½-minute stretch in the first half to push their lead from 37-30 to 53-33.

Triple Bogey Knocks Palmer From The Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer was blasted out of the lead by a triple bogey and obscure Mike Morley emerged as the pacesetter after Saturday's third round of the $150,000 Greater Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament.

Palmer, the 45-year-old living legend of the fairways, had come from three strokes off the pace and held the lead all alone until he hit his tee shot out of bounds on the par-three 11th hole. He wound up with a horrendous six.

It dropped Palmer out of the top spot, and threw the tournament into a multiple-man scramble which was finally solved by the skinny Morley.

Morley, never a winner and never even an exempt player in five years of tour activity, matched the record on the 7,143-yard Deerwood Country Club course with a brilliant, seven-under-par 65.

His 54-hole total was 208, eight under par.

Palmer, grimly determined to break the longest victory famine of his fabled career, was one shot back after a struggling 73.

He was tied at 209 with Tom Shaw, Jerry McGee and surprising Jerry Pate. Pate, a 21-year-old Alabama native and current U.S. amateur champion who is competing against touring pros for the first time, had a 71. McGee shot the same score in the mild, hazy weather. Shaw was tied for the lead until he bogeyed the final hole for a 72.

The bulky group at 210—just two shots back—included Ben Crenshaw, hometown hero Steve Melnyk, Mac McLendon, Bob Dickson, Larry Hinson, Wally Armstrong and big Barney Thompson.

Thompson, a non-winning tour sophomore who held the second-round lead, blew to a 77. Armstrong had a 66, Melnyk, Crenshaw and Hinson shot their 69s, Dickson and McLendon had 71s.

That left 11 players locked within two strokes of each other at the top going into Sunday's final round of this chase for a $30,000 first prize.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin could do no better than a 72 and was well back at 217.

Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino are not competing.

Palmer, although a non-winner for two long seasons, still ranks as golf's greatest drawing card and he was trailed by a massive, enthusiastic gallery when he began the day's play three strokes back.

Their happy shouts and yells of pure joy increased almost every hole as Thompson began his collapse and Palmer moved toward the top.

He holed a 20-foot birdie putt on the eighth and took sole control of the lead with a chip to five feet and another birdie on the ninth.

First Year Was Gem For Patton, Bucs

By WOODY PEELE

To some it came as somewhat of a surprise. To others, it was the fruition of something that they knew had been on the way.

But nobody was unhappy about the way it all turned out.

What? Why, the 1974-75 basketball season at East Carolina University.

Last spring, the university decided to end the Tom Quinn era and, despite a year remaining on the contract of the coach, he was fired. In his place, Dave Patton, a Kentucky-born man who had spent much of his life in Georgia, was moved up from an assistantship—and although no one officially will admit it, a great burden was put on him.

"I never really thought of myself as an interim coach," Patton said this week. "I wanted to go out and do the job just like I would do it regardless of the situation. I know there were some people who would have preferred East Carolina go out and get a 'name' coach, but it didn't worry me. I'm thankful for the opportunity."

And if Patton was thought of by some as an interim coach, those thoughts have now been dispelled. It is certain that the university will offer him a multi-year contract shortly.

Another burden Patton had to carry was not having the staff that Quinn had been able to work with. George Estes remained as Patton's chief assistant, but the vacancy in the assistantship caused by the head coach moving up was not filled. Two graduate assistants worked with the program, and Patton feels that his staff did an excellent job.

"The fact that we have signed two All-Staters already, and that we may sign several more is a tribute to this staff," he said. "We only have two full-time coaches (Patton and Estes) and both are teaching. Without the help of Billy Taylor and Chuch Mohn (the graduate assistants), we couldn't have had the success we've had. It's very tough to operate under these conditions, but we've done it, and it's come off well. These two young men took a load off Coach Estes and myself, and you can see what Coach Estes has been able to accomplish because of it."

Estes was the key man in the recruitment of All-Staters Louis Crosby of Shelby and Tyrone Edwards of Pittsboro, two widely sought-after players.

Patton is due to hire another assistant this summer, bringing to three the full-time staff.

The year proved to be a banner one as the Bucs went 19-9, finishing second in the Southern Conference, and gaining a berth in the National Commissioners Invitational Tournament. Three of their losses came to teams nationally ranked, and one of the others, a two-pointer, came to an NIT team. Two others were to Furman, the Southern champ and NCAA entrant.

"I'm very proud of this team. They gave us something that will never be repaid. They made our program a success. And I have to give a lot of that credit to our four seniors, Robert Geter, Gregg Ashorn, Donnie Owens and Tom Marsh," Patton said. "They not only gave us great leadership and fine basketball ability, but showed great character throughout the year. This team was a credit to East Carolina wherever it went."

Patton also expressed his thanks to the fans of the area. "They gave us great support, and I'm hopeful that we will be able to do something next year to warrant bigger and better interest by the people of this area. They are great fans."

The coach felt that the Bues did an outstanding job in posting the record they did, the best ever by a Pirate team since moving into Division I ranks. "We were never embarrassed," he said. "We played several teams that were glad to get away alive after playing us, and we were certainly in an elite field in the NCIT. If we had not had a late breakdown in our game there, we might well have upset Arizona, so this shows that our program is headed in the right direction, and with a little help . . . Well, we are very close."

Patton felt at the start of the season that the Bucs were capable of winning. "But you can be a good team and still not have a good record. We had an overload of road games. Good teams have to win on the road, and we did. I never doubted that we could be good and we could win. I just didn't know how many we would win."

The highlight of the season, in Patton's mind came during the seven-game winning streak the Bucs posted in January. "During that time, we beat Davidson and Richmond and VMI, all on the road, in the same week, and I think that was quite an accomplishment. Two other high points had to be our wins over William & Mary (in double overtime) and St. Peter's (an NIT entry) on the road. And, especially, our win over Old Dominion in Norfolk. They went East Carolina University snapped its four-match losing streak and finally captured its first tennis victory of the year Saturday. The Bucs made the Seahawks of UNC-Wilmington an 8-0 victim in the match.

The win raised the Pirate record to 1-4 overall. They stand 0-3 in Southern Conference play following a 9-0 defeat at the hands of the University of Richmond on Friday.

The number one doubles match was rained out, but would not have affected the outcome of the match as the Pirates had already clinched the victory.

The Pirates travel to Pembroke on Tuesday for their next outing.

Providence, Princeton Advance To NIT Finals

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Armond Hill's two free throws with 1:21 left gave Princeton a tense 58-57 victory over Oregon Saturday and advanced the Tigers into the final of the 38th National Invitation basketball tournament.

The Tigers earned a spot in Sunday's championship game against surprising Providence, which earlier beat St. John's 85-72 as Gary Bello drilled in seven straight shots and led a second-half rally.

The red-hot Ivy Leaguers won their 12th game in a row in the nightcap of the nationally televised doubleheader at Madison Square Garden, but not before some tense moments at the end.

The teams never were more than five points apart during any time in the game. The Ducks had a 55-52 advantage after a foul shot by Mark Barwig with 6:37 remaining before the Tigers shot ahead 56-55 on a pair of field goals by Mickey Steuerer and Hill.

Greg Willard connected for Oregon with 2:09 left, giving the Pac-8 team a 57-56 lead, but that was the last time the Ducks were able to score.

Hill, driving for a basket, then was fouled by Ron Lee. The Tigers' 6-foot-4 guard converted two free throws for the game's final points.

Princeton's tough defense then did the rest of the job. The Ducks had several opportunities to score in the last 25 seconds, but were unable to get off a good shot.

With 13 seconds to go, Princeton's Ilan Ramati missed the first half of a one-on-one foul shot situation, giving the ball to Oregon. The Ducks called time out twice in the last 13 seconds, trying to set up a play, but were unable to get a clear shot. Lee, who scored a game-high 24 points, fired a desperation shot with one second to go, but it was far off the mark.

Barnes Hauptfuhrer scored 15 points and Ramati had 13 for Princeton, 21-8. Greg Willard added 11 points for Oregon, 20-9.

Oregon and St. John's will meet in Sunday's consolation game.

Before Bello took charge of the opener, Glen Williams of St. John's had been the game's most dominating figure. The 6-foot-5 forward scored 22 of his 28 points in the first half, leading the favored Redmen to a 40-39 lead at the intermission.

Providence then took over the rhythm of the game right after halftime, rushing to a 45-40 lead with three straight field goals, the last one by Bello.

The Friars, who had lost to St. John's by 18 and 12 points earlier in the season, then put the nationally televised game away behind the 6-foot guard. Bello struck for 10 points as Providence outscored St. John's 16-6 and pulled into their biggest lead of the day, 67-56, with less than seven minutes remaining.

The Redmen never got nearer than four points the rest of the way. And when they made things interesting, closing to 73-69 with 3:19 left in the game, Bello got into the act again. After a layup by Bruce Campbell gave Providence a 75-69 lead, Bello made a key steal to set up a basket by Joe Hassett that gave the Friars a commanding 77-69 lead with 2:27 showing on the clock.

No Answer To Pearson's Question

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP)— "That ain't bad, but what was my first one?" asked David Pearson after being told he had qualified his Mercury at 158.285 miles per hour on his second lap of time trials for Sunday's Atlanta 500 stock car race.

Pearson, a veteran ace from Spartanburg, S. C., never got an answer to his question—that is, officially.

The Atlanta International Raceway timing device malfunctioned on Pearson's first tour of the 1.52-mile asphalt ogal Friday and cost him the pole position in the $121,000 race, set for a 12:30 p.m. EDT start Sunday.

Instead, Pearson dropped back to the fourth position in the starting lineup as all-time stock car racing king Richard Petty steered his Dodge to the pole, while Bobby Allison and Buddy Baker nudged a Matador and Ford, respectively, ahead of Pearson.

Petty, agreeing that Pearson's missed lap was faster, won the pole at 159.029 m.p.h. and said that his own clock gave Pearson the edge.

Allison and his brother' Donnie, both caught Pearson at at 159.836 mp.h.

Bill Gazaway, technical director the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, told Pearson that "the clock didn't print on that first lap." He allowed Pearson's crew to change tires for another try, but it did little good, since Pearson was unable to better his 158.285 speed.

"That's my luck here," Pearson groaned, recalling the same thing happened to him here at the Dixie 500 last summer. "I know they let me get new tires but how was it equal? We had already picked out the best set we had for that first lap."

"It's a good thing he (timer) nissed Pearson, isn't it?" said Petty, who has 170 stock car victories but none in the Atlanta 500.

Bobby Allison qualified at 158.932 and Baker came in at 158.808, pleased, in a way, that he had missed sitting on the pole, which he did in two previous races this year, only to watch cars fly past him once the race got under way.

"At least I shook that pole," Baker said. "That thing's been eating me alive the last two weeks. But, I have to say, I'd like to have that $1,000 that goes with it."

Other qualifying speeds Friday were Lennie Pond, Chevrolet, 158.102; Johnny Rutherford, Chevrolet, 157.652; Donnie Allison, Chevrolet, 157.253; Jody Ridley, Ford, 156.826; Benny Parsons, Chevrolet, 156.755; Jackie Rogers, driving A. J. Foyt's Chevrolet, 156.504; Joe Mihalic, Chevrolet, 156.218; Cale Yarborough, Chevrolet, 156.183.

Dave Marcis, Dodge, 155.712; Dick Brooks, Ford, 155.571; Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet, 155.095; Coo Coo Marlin, Chevrolet, 154.828; David Sisco, Chevrolet, 154.426; Cecil Gordon, Chevrolet, 153.638; Harry Jefferson, Ford, 153.161 and Richie Panch, Chevrolet, 152.871.

on to win the NCAA Division II National Championship."

As far as disappointments went, Patton ranked the Furman loss in Minges as the biggest. "We played well enough to win there," he said, "But somehow we managed to come out on the losing end. The loss to Appalachian was a disappoinment too, but we really didn't play well enough to win that one."

Next year, things may be brighter for the Bucs, but Patton warns not to expect miracles. "We have the talent on hand for a winning season. Add this to our recruiting so far and things look better. Now whether these people have the makeup inside to replace those we lose is another question. They are going to have to bite the bullet and dedicate themselves to following the tradition of selflessness the four seniors have established."

For this reason, Patton feels the Bucs will be hard put to win as many games next year. "We caught a lot of people by surprise this year. Next year, we won't. They'll be waiting for us. We have a rougher schedule (opening with Maryland, N.C. State and Duke—all on the road), and we don't know what the other teams will have. Injuries and the lucky bounces also will play a big role as always."

"We could be better—I think we will, but the record is another thing. I do want to accomplish what we did this year, however. We want all our players to play to their full ability. If they do that, just like I've said all this year, winning and losing will take care of itself."

One thing is almost certain, next fall, when the Southern Conference coaches gather to meet with the press and talk about the coming season, the predicted finish won't be like it was this year. The coaches predicted a fourth place finish for East Carolina. Next year, well, we'll see.

Kinston Halts Rampant Win Streak, 9-6

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Kinston's Vikings took advantage of Rose High School mistakes, coupled with some power hitting to gain a 9-6 victory over the Rampants Friday afternoon. It was the first loss of the year for the Rose nine, dropping their record to 2-1.

Kinston, by claiming the win, boosted their mark to 2-1 also. The two teams also decided not to reschedule a game in Kinston which had been rained out several times.

The Vikings got only four earned runs out of their total, while Rose came up with five. But Rose failed to really challenge them until it was too late, trailing at one point in the game, 9-0.

Rose was able to put the men on base, but they couldn't get them around at the proper times. They left 12 stranded, while Kinston left only half that many. Kinston got one less hit, but two of their blasts were solo home runs, the first hit during a scheduled game in the newly fenced-in Guy Smith Stadium.

Jerry Baker went all the way to get the victory, walking nine and striking out just three. Rose started Wesley Deal, who was tagged with the loss. He allowed four hits in five innings, walking four and striking out as many. He gave up four runs, two of them earned. Jimmy Averette hurled in relief briefly, but was tagged for two hits and two walks, giving up four runs, two of them earned. Kelly Heath finished up, allowing one run on no hits, three walks, and four strikeouts.

Rose got off a threat in the first inning, but it came to naught. Griff Garner singled to center, then was safe at second when Kelly Heath's infield grounder between the mound and first was played to late to the keystone bag. But two fly balls ended the frame with nothing across.

Kinston broke the ice in the second inning, getting the first run off the Rampants this year. Sotello Long led off with a walk and Karren Rhem's bunt back to the mound found no one covering first, giving him a base hit. Rose catcher Eddie Connolly then tried to pick Long off second, but his throw was off target, going into center, and Long raced home with an unearned run.

Kinston added two to that in the fourth. With one down, Long crashed a pitch out of the park to left, giving the Vikings a 2-0 lead. Rhem walked and came around to score another unearned run when Clarence Hardison's single to right was errored and rolled all the way to the fence.

The Vikings added another in the fifth on their second home run of the day. Bruce Reese got that one, also to left with no one on board. That boosted the lead to 4-0.

But the trouble really began for Rose in the sixth, as they gave up five more runs. With two away, Hardison singled to center and took second on a wild pitch. Ed Dupree and Bud Sano both walked, loading the bases. Reese singled into center, scoring Hardison. A wild pitch let Dupree score, and a walk to Greg Novicki loaded the bases again. Baker reached on an error, letting both Sano and Reese score. Novicki came over with the ninth Viking run on a wild pitch.

Then, down 9-0 Rose began to go to work. They had passed up several earlier opportunities, however. In the second, Keith Jones led off with a walk, moved to second on an out and took third on a wild pitch, only to die there. In the fourth, Mike Brewington singled, then stole both second and third, while Connolly walked and courtsey runner David Dixon stole second. Jack Jenkins reached second in the fifth on a walk and Garner's infield hit.

But it was the sixth before the Rampants finally got a run over. Jones led off with a single off the third baseman's glove. He moved up on an out, and Connolly walked, with Dixon running for him. Wright Hooks reached on an error, allowing Jones to score the first Rose run. Jenkins followed with a single, scoring Dixon, and Garner walked. Heath's sacrifice fly brought in Hooks, and a walk to Macon Moye loaded the bases, but Kinston then got out of trouble.

In the seventh, Rose came up with three more. Brewington walked with one down, as did Mike Belton. Hooks singled to center, scoring Brewington, and Dixon came on a pinch runner. Both advanced on an out, and Garner singled to right, scoring both runners to close the gap to 9-6. But Kinston got the final out on a fly, ending the game and preserving the victory.

Rose enters Division I play on Tuesday, playing host to Bertie at 4 p.m.

Old Dominion Coach Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Allen, whose fast-break tactics triggered Old Dominion to a national basketball championship, was named The Associated Press College Division Coach of the Year today.

Allen's Runnin' Monarchs won the NCAA's College Division II title and finished the 1974-75 season ranked No. 1 in The AP's College Division poll—both first-time accomplishments for the Virginia school which has been playing basketball since 1930.

Allen's team had a 25-6 record this season en route to the 76-74 title-winner over the University of New Orleans at Evansville, Ind., but only one of the losses was to a College Division II team. The Monarchs lost a 71-69 decision at the buzzer on the road to Florida Southern and posted a 6-5 record over major schools.

Allen's victory in the Coach of the Year voting was as close as the winning game at Evansville. A nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters gave the Old Dominion coach a hair's-breadth margin over Lucius Mitchell of Kentucky State. The margin was roughly five to four.

Others getting votes for College Division Coach of the Year included Joe Retten of Fairmount State; Ed Sparling, Gannon; Paul Covington, Jackson State; Paul Webb, Randolph Macon; Ben Lindsey, Grand Canyon; Joseph O'Brien, Assumption; Al Shields, Bentley; Jay Bowerman, Malone; Ed Martin, Tennessee State; Dave Gunther, North Dakota; Bob Hamilton, UC-Davis.

Greene Central Nips Jaguars

SNOW HILL — Greene Central finally pushed a run over in the sixth inning Friday to hand Farmville Central a 1-0 setback in Eastern Carolina Conference baseball play.

The loss was the first in three outings for the Jaguars, and cut their Eastern Carolina record down to 1-1. Greene Central upped its mark to 2-0 overall and 1-0 within the league.

The contest was a pitching duel, although at times, it wasn't a pretty one. Tony Oakley went all the way for the Jaguars, allowing only two hits, but both contributed to the Ram run. He struck out only two and walked eight.

Lindy Pridgen got the win, scattering four hits, fanning six and walking none.

Farmville Central had several threats, but was unable to make them pay off. Mike Jenkins opened the game with a double, but tried to stretch it into a triple and was thrown out there.

Then, in the third, David Winborn singled and Mike Joyner followed with another hit, with none out. But Greene Central retired the next three without an advance, ending the threat.

Only two more Jaguars reached base, both on errors, and one of those was called out at third on an interference play.

Greene Central threatened in the second when, with two outs, two batters walked and another was hit by a pitch to load them up. Otherwise, except for the first, the Rams had runners on base by walks in each inning, but couldn't get a real threat going.

Finally, in the sixth, William Brown led off with a single and Pat Harris came on to run for him. Ronnie Whitley walked and Pridgen reached on a fielder's choice. Donnie Blizzard got the only other Ram hit, a run-scoring single, plating Harris with the game's only run.

Farmville will travel to Conley on Tuesday, while Greene Central goes to C. B. Aycock.

Vikings Open Season With Romp By Panthers

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL—D.H. Conley opened their '75 baseball season with a resounding bang Friday as the Vikings used some faulty North Pitt pitching to roll to a 17-4 victory.

North Pitt used three pitchers during the game. They gave up 15 earned runs on 18 hits. Starter Aubrey Wynne walked the first three batters he faced as the Vikings pushed over seven in the first. The Panthers got on the boards in the third but Conley added two in the fourth, two in the fifth and five in the sixth including a home run by Clennel Streeter.

Wynne lasted only through five batters, walking three, giving up one hit and five earned runs. Rick Harrell came in to face the sixth batter in the first, gave up two more runs but retired the side. He walked one and gave up three hits. Jay Bedsworth went to the mound in the third and lasted until the sixth. Bedsworth held the Vikings to just four more runs on nine hits.

Conley's Keith Gould went the distance for the Vikings. He scattered seven hits, walked two and struck out eight.

After the first three Vikings walked, Gene Forrest grounded to third but the relay to home was late leaving everyone safe and Conley up by one. Gould lined a hit into center to drive in two runs and move Forrest to third. Joey Baggett drew a pass to reload the bases and a hit by Ricky Phillips scored Forrest. An error on the play scored Gould as well.

Donnie Cox drove in the final two runs of the frame with a liner to right.

The Vikings added another in the second as Gould helped himself out. Forrest singled and Gould smashed a triple to right to drive in Forrest.

North Pitt's first run came over as Bedsworth singled, moved around on a walk and a hit and scored on a single by Wynne. The Vikings got it back in the fourth as both Byron Tyson and Randy Adams led off with singles. Tyson tried to steal third but the throw rolled into left letting Tyson score. Adams moved to second and successfully stole third. He scored on a hit by Baggett.

Tyson doubled in the fifth to drive in Streeter who had slapped a one-out single. A hit by Adams brought Tyson around.

North Pitt got a mild rally going in the bottom of the fifth coming up with three runs. Craig Stallings singled with one out and Nole Whitley walked. J. D. Vernelson hit a slow roller back to the mound which was played to third. Gould threw the ball into left field, however, letting both Stallings and Whitley score. Vernelson scored on a single by Harrel..

The Vikings added five more in the sixth with three come over on a homer by Streeter.

Vernelson led the Panthers with two hits while Streeter, Tyson, and Phillips had three each for Conley. Gould, Forrest, and Adams all had two.

Conley host Farmville Central and North Pitt travels to Southern Nash Tuesday.

Southern Wayne Nails Chargers

LITTLEFIELD—Ron Pelletier's three hits and his two-hit pitching led the Southern Wayne Saints to a 12-0 blanking of the Ayden-Grifton Chargers, Friday.

Pelletier scored twice and helped push over another run. Tim Robbins, James Garnette and Jeff Rose all had two hits to help the Saint cause.

Southern Wayne put up four in the first inning. Garnette walked and Robbins singled. Pelletier got a hit and an error on the play let Garnette score. Craig Clark singled driving in Robbins and Pelletier and an error let Clark take second. Brad Hood singled in Clark.

Garnette singled in the second and after moving to second on a hit, moved to third on a fielder's choice. Clark reached on an error scoring Garnette.

Keith Neal got a hit in the third for the Saints and Garnette singled him in. The Saints added another in the fourth and five in the seventh.

SARATOGA—Monte DeRatt pitched and hit the Saratoga Cougars to a 16-0 rout of Robersonville, Friday. DeRatt drove in five runs on two homers and threw a two-hitter at the Eagles.

DeRatt's first home run came in the first inning. Ted Rodgers led off with a walk and John Whitley also walked. DeRatt brought them both in.

40,000 MILE WARRANTY

*Michelin's Warranty for X Radial Highway Passenger Tire shown here covers tread life, normal road hazards (excluding repairable punctures) and defects in workmanship and materials for 40,000 miles, when tire is used on passenger vehicles in normal service in continental United States, except Alaska. Credit or refund (at Michelin's option) is equal to current actual selling price multiplied by percentage of warranted mileage not run on tire.

What Are You Waiting For?

★★ BUYING A HOME IS THE BEST WAY TO BEAT INFLATION

Between 1967-74 the cost of buying a home rose 70 per cent. If the 10 per cent annual rise continues the home that cost $33,000 today will cost $39,900 in 1977, just two years from now! With the value of your home and the cost of buying both rising 10 per cent or more a year, buying a home is the best way to beat inflation.

★★ BUYING A HOME IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT TODAY

The Dow Jones Industrial Average of Blue Chip stocks has declined 37 per cent in the past two years and even the returns on safe and guaranteed investments have not kept pace with inflation. When buying a home you are steadily increasing your equity while making mortgage payments. And on top of that you can get rising appreciation value!

★★ BUYING A HOME GIVES YOUR FAMILY FINANCIAL SECURITY

It establishes immediate credit and borrowing power for emergencies. A $30,000 home today could earn you over $33,600 in equity and appreciation over the next 10 years while you would only be paying for the original loan!

★★ BUYING A HOME IS A GREAT TAX SHELTER

Home ownership provides one of the few tax shelters available to a middle income family. For example: A $30,000 mortgage at 9 per cent for 30 years would give you a $2,691.90 tax deduction in the first year if you are in a 25 per cent tax bracket, for a real savings to you of $672.90. In addition property taxes are deductible.

LET'S FACE IT, YOU'RE PAYING FOR WHERE YOU LIVE, WHETHER YOU RENT OR OWN. AND RENTING WILL NOT GIVE YOU THE ABOVE ADVANTAGES.

BUY NEXT YEARS $35,000 HOME FOR $30,000 TODAY AND INSURE YOUR FAMILY OF A BETTER TOMORROW!

Call us today! We can show you that buying IS CHEAPER than renting!

UNIVERSITY CONDOMINIUMS

Are 6 years old and that means several things. It means that they were built before the inflationary-squeeze market that made the building industry cut corners in materials and techniques.

For example, we have brick firewalls every 4 units and you don't see that much today which is why our insurance costs are amazingly low, around $50 per year. But mostly it means that because they were built before building costs skyrocketed, we can sell them for an amazing $19,500, which is rather far below what we could build them for on comparable land today. By comparable land, we mean — across from a fine elementary school, lovely tennis courts, and very simply near everything. It also means that at that price, the bright boys down at Home Savings & Loan, Greenville's oldest Financial Institution (They have to be bright to weather this economy) feel that University Condominiums is such a good investment they are making available 95 per cent financing (which means low down payments) over 25 years (which means a low monthly payment).

The condominiums themselves: Well they are simply the most space and convenience for your money anywhere in Greenville.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Friday Afternoon

SHALLOTTE—The marriage of Sharon Lou Moffitt and James Perry Brewer Jr. was solemnized Friday at 3:00 p.m. in the Camp Methodist Church.

The Rev. Epperson of Shallotte performed the double ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by Mrs. Edward Redwine of Shallotte.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of peau de soie designed with lace insets. The long sleeves of peau de soie had pointed cuffs accented by a row of buttons and lace insets. The lace insets covered the empire bodice and the front of the A-line gown. The detachable train was designed with lace insets.

Her formal length illusion mantilla was attached to a profile headpiece featuring matching lace. The bride carried a nosegay of white pom pons, sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. T. V. Stanley of Wilmington, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a formal length gown of yellow and rose floral print with a V-neckline accented with a tailored collar. She wore pink pom pons in her hair and carried a nosegay of matching pink mums.

Bridesmaids were Judy Soronen of Charlotte, Bonnie Rettgers of Washington, D. C., Terry Carraway and Lori Brown of Greenville. Their dresses were like that of the matron of honor and each wore pink pom pons in their hair and carried matching mum nosegays.

James Brown of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Graham Moffitt and Edward Moffitt of Shallotte, R. D. Roberson and Ronnie Carraway, of Greenville.

MRS. JAMES PERRY BREWER JR.

The mother of the bride selected a street length blue polyester dress with a matching coat. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The sister of the bridegroom selected a street length navy and white polyester dress, matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Mrs. Pat Monroe, sister of the bride, presided at the guest register. Mrs. Judy Hillburn of Chadborn directed the wedding.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a knit dress and wore her mother's corsage.

The couple will reside at Rt. 6, Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Shallotte High School and East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Belvoir-Falkland High School and is attending Pitt Technical Institute. He is employed with Daniel Construction Co., Greenville.

Model Finds Acting More To Her Taste

By LEE SCHREIBER

NEW YORK (AP) — Blond, blue-eyed Susan Blakely used to smile for a living. Now, after seven years as a top TV and fashion model, the star of "The Towering Inferno" and the more recent "Report to the Commissioner" admits her "inventory of great smiles" is momentarily depleted.

"I spent some time with narcotics detectives in Greenwich Village, going out on a few small assignments," she says of her preparation for the role of undercover cop in "Report."

"Nothing really dangerous. The first time out was really exciting — Washington Square in the spring, the people were all singing and laughing. I forgot what I was there for. Then the cops I was with arrested this one guy for selling some heroin. He was a young kid carrying a puppy, and when they grabbed him the dog ran off. The reality really hit me. I couldn't stop crying."

After that glimpse of reality the 25-year-old actress has formed definite opinions on what she calls "victimless crimes."

"I think that the laws should be changed. Making crimes of homosexuality and smoking marijuana is wrong. These people really aren't hurting anyone."

Sounding unlike the daughter of a retired Army colonel, Miss Blakely says her politics don't exactly jibe with those of her parents. An avowed activist, who doesn't think actors should stay out of politics, she has campaigned for George McGovern, and for Ramsey Clark in his unsuccessful bid for the Senate in New York.

Born in Germany, where her father was stationed, she traveled with her family throughout the world, living in Korea and Hawaii before settling in Texas. After one year at the University of Texas, she came to New York to be a model. On her first day here she was hired for a TV commercial. The initial rush of excitement, she says, soon gave way to boredom.

"After the glamor wears off — which takes about a month — it's just a lot of very tiring work. There's mental strain in doing something over and over again.

"Modeling," says the tall, long-haired Miss Blakely, "is still the best job in the world — for independence, money, meeting interesting people — but the job itself is not terribly fulfilling. That's why I turned to acting."

She debuted in "Savages," then played a teen-ager in "The Lords of Flatbush." After that came some bit parts and finally the starring roles in "The Towering Inferno" and "Report to the Commissioner," which, according to one West Coast critic, "destroys all those condescending myths about the supposed inability of 'beautiful but blank-faced models' to act."

"I really like character, rather than 'ingenue' parts," she explains, sipping some white wine in a hotel suite overlooking Central Park as she stretches out her bare feet. "I love action parts. I did a movie with Ben Gazzara called 'Big Al,' in which I played Capone's girlfriend. The part was perfect for me; I died really well. Westerns appeal to me, shooting guns and all. But most of all, I'd like to do comedy.

"I'd especially love to do musical comedy," she says, "but I'm about five years away with my voice lessons.

"I want to be about to do everything," declares Miss Blakely, who is studying mime, dance and Shakespeare in addition to taking singing lessons and attending acting classes.

A hint of a smile appearing on her face, Miss Blakely says that there are occasional drawbacks to her acting career.

"I used to be able to get my way whenever I cried. Then one day my husband watched me doing a tearful scene in acting class. When the scene ended I was laughing as if nothing had happened. Now, whenever I cry, he says, 'Forget it, I've seen you turn it on and off.'"

She and husband Todd Merer have little to cry about these days, she admits. A former boutique-owner and lawyer, he has just sold his first screenplay. The two of them are currently collaborating on a "1940s murder mystery with a woman reporter." Smiling strictly for pleasure, Susan Blakely says, "That'll be me."

Returning to school all smiles this week after receiving two superior ratings in last Saturday's district choral festival in New Bern, were the Rose concert choir and girl's glee club.

Only three superiors were given the entire day with the Rose choirs capturing two of them. The girl's glee club was especially pleased as this was their first year their group has participated in the yearly festival. The choruses performed under the able direction of Steve Koch, while former student teacher Mrs. Rhonda Riley accompanied on the piano.

Last weekend seven Rose students traveled to Havelock to participate in the fourth annual Eastern District of the North Carolina Association of Student Councils Convention. Hank Dunbar was included in the program, reporting on the SGA workshop recently held at Rose. Felice Streeter was elected as the Eastern District Special Representative. Her duties include representing the district on the NCSAS Executive Committee and encouraging EDNCASC member schools to participate in NCASC activities.

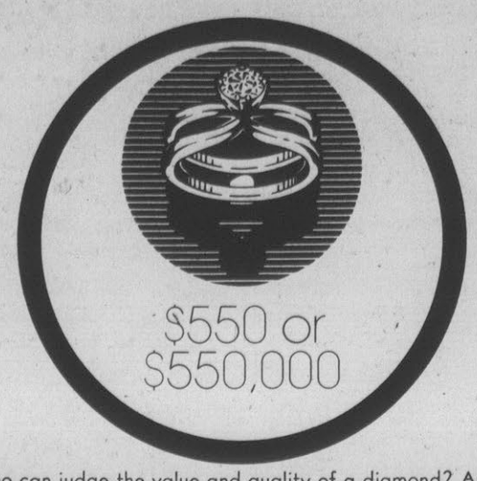

Other students participating were Donna Goodson, Lynn Gantt, Yetta Harper and John Miller, Also attending was Shirley Murphy who acted as Felice's campaign manager.

Attend Meet

Science-Ecology Club members attended the NCSAS meeting at ECU last Friday. New officers were elected and several clubs presented projects for competition at the district level. Attending were Beth Heath, Liz Branch, Del Hunt, Mary Ann Burnette, Mike Jeffreys, Jamie Leshansky, Peggy Shea, Pat Hernan, Gail Molic, Gail Shaw, and Sherry Ledbetter. Ellis Banks, faculty advisor, also attended.

Miss Deborah Hill Weds In Saturday Ceremony

AYDEN—The First Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Miss Deborah Dare Hill and Gary Horton Bostic Saturday at 3:00 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Gilbert Mister. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Glenn Swanson. Miss Diane Brown sang "It Seems I Have Always Loved You" and "Wedding Prayer."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Simmons Hill of Ayden, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal length gown of white knit designed with a high neckline encircled with white floral Venise lace centered with pearls. Appliques of Venise lace roses and daisies beaded with pearls centered the bodice front. A border of Venise lace daisies accentuated the empire waistline and edged the long fitted sleeves. The flared skirt extended into an attached chapel train.

She wore a formal length illusion veil attached to a profile headpiece of Venise lace flowers centered with pearls. The bride carried a cascade nosegay of daisies, miniature carnations, baby's breath and ivy.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Quinn Bostic Sr. of Greenville.

The bride is a gruaduate of Pitt Technical Institute and is employed there as the graphic arts technician. The bridegroom is a junior at East Carolina University.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 5, Greenville.

The matron of honor was Patricia Hill Stokes of Greenville, twin sister of the bride. She selected a two-piece full length dress of baby blue silk chiffon over angle cloth fashioned with a ruffled shaw style collar extending down the ruffled blouse front. The skirt was flowing eight gores of silk chiffon over angel cloth.

Miss Dave Joan Stocks of Ayden was bridesmaid and was dressed identical to the honor attendant. They carried cascades of daisies and baby's breath.

Honorary bridesmaids were Mrs. Bryant Kittrell, Judy Pollard, Debbie Worthington and Anita Holley, all of Greenville.

The flower girl was Angie Hill of Ayden, niece of the bride. She wore a full length dress of silk chiffon over angel cloth fashioned with a round collar and cape style sleeves with lace trim. A sash accented the waistline. She carried a basket of daisies.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Lancer Landmark of Ayden, nephew of the bride, Alfred Quinn Bostic of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, and Lloyd Rodney Hill of Ayden, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony, the bride, bridegroom and members of the wedding party received guests in the church vestibule. Mr. and Mrs. William L. Byrd Jr. presided at the guest register.

The mother of the bride wore a full length green polyester crepe gown with long sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a pink knit with a ruffled V-neckline. The mothers and the grandmothers wore carnation corsages.

An after-rehearsal cake cutting party for the bridal couple and wedding party was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Odell McLawhorn, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cannon, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Patrick, Mr. and Mrs. James Owens, Mr. and Mrs. James Wagstaff, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Manning and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dobbs.

A color scheme of green and yellow was used throughout the house.

Bride-Elect Entertained

Miss Jean Gaskins Flanagan was entertained at a bridal shower Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Smith Jr. Hostess was Mrs. Carl Crawford Jr.

The bride-elect, who will wed William Bennett Flanner III on April 12, was presented a corsage of yellow roses.

The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of yellow carnations, daisies and baby's breath. Miss Barbara Jamieson poured punch.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Janet, a bride of several months, said to me the other night, "You had your children during the awkward age, didn't you?"

"What age is that?" I asked.

"Too late for prudence and too early for the pill."

"Look Janet, if I've said it once, I've said it a thousand times, the pill is grossly overrated. Statistics will show there are some situations where the pill is totally ineffective and there is nothing in this world that will change it. A woman is flirting with imminent motherhood if she:

1. Lets her Blue Cross lapse
2. Buys one water ski
3. Converts her maternity clothes into a camper
4. Is named executive director of Zero Population
5. Reaches her insurance chart weight
6. Buys a cement mixer."

"Hold it!" said Janet. "What does a cement mixer have to do with conceiving a child?"

"You little naive fool," I said, "I got a letter just last week from a woman in Scandia, Minn., who had been childless for several years when they decided to buy some land and build their own home. They acquired a cement mixer from a bachelor uncle and started to lay the blocks. The footers weren't even finished when she delivered her first child.

"Their next project was a barn. Again she grabbed the shovel and started to run the mixer when another child arrived. Tempting the gods once more, she resumed her mixing to pour the floor when once again she bore a child.

"They began to suspect the mixer was just that but had to be sure. They loaned it to neighbors, childless for seven years, who needed a sidewalk around their house. She became pregnant before the concrete dried. In fact, the neighbor on the next farm also became pregnant with her eigth child which they blamed on southerly winds.

"The following January when their garage burned to the ground, they again got out the cement mixer and she again became an expectant mother."

"Then you are telling me that the pill is useless against something like a cement mixer?"

"I am telling you after six children they did what they had to do."

"Got rid of the cement mixer?" said Janet excitedly.

"No, had its electrical cord tied. Doesn't your generation know anything?"

A Dozen Rules For The Ladies In Schools

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old school teacher. (Female.) I teach tenth grade students in a public school. I love my work and wouldn't want to do anything else.

I also feel that I am entitled to live the kind of lifestyle I feel is right for me.

Now, my problem: I have fallen in love with a man, and we want to live together. Neither one of us wants to get married right now—or maybe ever.

I dislike lying but I doubt that I could continue my teaching job in this city while living with a man who is not my husband.

Do you know of any community that is sufficiently sophisticated to permit their school teachers the freedom to live as they wish?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: No. But that doesn't mean there isn't one. We have come a long way in the last 60 years. As proof, I submit a piece from Quote magazine. I hope you are able to read it without cracking up. I couldn't:

"Truly, the life style of a school teacher has changed radically in the last fifty or sixty years. For example, a 1915 teachers' magazine listed the following rules of conduct for teachers of that day:

1. You will not marry during the term of your contract.
2. You are not to keep company with men.
3. You must be home between the hours of 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. unless attending a school function.
4. You may not loiter downtown in ice cream stores.
5. You may not travel beyond the city limits unless you have the permission of the chairman of the board.
6. You may not ride in a carriage or automobile with any man unless he is your father or brother.
7. You may not smoke cigarettes.
8. You may not dress in bright colors.
9. You may under no circumstances dye your hair.
10. You must wear at least two petticoats.
11. Your dresses must not be any shorter than two inch above the ankle.
12. To keep the school room neat and clean, you must: sweep the floor at least once daily; scrub the floor at least once a week with hot, soapy water; clean the blackboards at least once a day; and start the fire at 7 a.m. so the room will be warm by 8 a.m."

DEAR ABBY: This is for "G" in Long Beach, who allowed herself to be photographed in various stages of undress by a total stranger, who subsequently disappeared with all the pictures and some of her money.

The chances are that the photographer was some kook who got his kicks from just watching the girl pose; or he may be keeping the pictures for his own use. It's doubtful that her picture will ever be published in any important girlie magazine, but it might be sold to a cheap underground publication that will print anything.

Unless "G" signed a model's release, authorizing the photographer to use those pictures, he cannot make any commercial use of them. And if he does, and "G" finds out about it, she can sue the pants off him.

P.R. IN L.A.

DEAR P.R.: "G" was not a professional model, and from her description of the photographer, he wasn't a professional either. The moral of that story was plainly: "Girls who pose without any clothes have their brains in their nose."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "P": I would certainly not be in any hurry to marry a man who positively refused to take a blood test. Instead of trying to find out where a couple can be married without a blood test, find out why he is so opposed to taking one.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Highway Death Toll Fell In '74

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 1974 death toll on the nation's highways dropped almost 18 per cent to 45,400 fatalities from 55,100 in 1973 because of slower speeds, safer automobiles, and better engineered roads, according to the Automotive Information Council. The 55-mile-per-hour speed limit was the most important factor in reducing highway deaths per 100 million miles traveled from 4.2 in 1973 to 3.5 in 1974, the Council says. Highway fatalities per 100 million miles have dropped in each of the past nine years, the Council notes, reflecting the improved design of automobiles, highways and traffic patterns.

Egg Hunt Will Be Held On Tuesday

Children of East Carolina University faculty, staff and students are invited to participate in the second annual Easter Egg Hunt sponsored by the Junior Panhellenic Council Tuesday.

Children aged one through eight may search for eggs in a roped-off area in front of Fleming and Jarvis dormitories. The egg hunt will begin at 5:30 p.m.

This year the hunt will be divided into two sections of children, 1-4 years of age, and 5-8 years of age. Prizes will be awarded to the children who find the "golden eggs." The Easter Bunny will be on hand to help all children find eggs.

Kathy Myslinski, Junior Panhellenic president, said ECU personnel and students who do not have children of their own should feel welcome to bring friends in the designated age groups.

COTTAGE HOTEL

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (UPI) — A Canadian couple, Peter and Nan Nicolls, have completed construction of a new 10-cottage hotel on a beachfront hill on this Windward island. The hotel is named Ra-Wa-Cou.

"OCEAN AND SUMMER . . . and the free feeling that the two combines gives make this one of my photographs that I like," Stuart Savage explains. "The mystical nature of the ocean is a good setting for photographs with figures." Stuart notes he strived to make this look more like a drawing than a photograph, by copying the regular black and white photo on photomechanical film to give a sharp contrast with no middle tones.

A FIRE HYDRANT . . . photographed by Tommy Forrest. "This fire hydrant, which is near my door, is something I've meant for a long time to get a shot of," Tommy explained. "One morning when I started to work, I saw that the light was just where I wanted it for accent. The single strand of grass gives a good contrast in textures."

HERRINGBONE PATTERN . . . bisected by a rail, photographed by Craig Faulkner. "I was taking an aerial view of Harrington Field from the top of the press box," Craig commented, "when I looked down and saw this interesting geometric pattern beneath me. The white on the wood actually is frost, not sun and shadow."

Five Photographers Make Personal Choices

On this page, five photographers have each contributed one photograph that for one or another reason appeals to them personally. The photographs chosen are not necessarily ones the contributors feel constitute their best photographic effort. Rather, the pictures represent more a pictorial presentation of moods---an individual response to an isolated scene or object that calls forth a personal satisfaction with the finished picture.

SOLITUDE . . . is the word Steve Hemric uses to describe his primary response to this beautiful scene, a waterfall in a mountain stream near Elkin in Surry County. "It's an enclosed area," Steve said, "one that gives me a feeling of peacefulness and quiet, a good feeling of being away from all the everyday pressures." Taken at mid-day, the light falls directly on the splashing, cascading waters of the stream.

WEATHERED WOOD . . . of a farm gate repeated in a nearby building was photographed in Martin County by Jerry Raynor. "The natural beauty of weathered wood appeals strongly to me," Jerry said. "The fact this particular gate always stands open adds a dimension of friendliness—a gate to ask people in, not designed to shut them out.

Japan's Atomic-Powered Ship Is Without A Port

By TEIJI SHIMIZU

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's first atomic-powered vessel, named Mutsu, lies idle in a remote fishing port, her fate undetermined. Government officials are wondering whether to scrap her or sell her to anyone wishing to buy.

Built at a cost of $23.3 million, the 8,214-ton ship has been in trouble all her life.

When she was completed in September, 1972, the government hailed her and took great pride in Japan's becoming the fourth nation to have such a ship. The others are the United States, the Soviet Union and West Germany.

Opposition parties and unionists, well aware of the "nuclear allergy" prevalent in Japan because of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, carried out a concerted campaign against the Mutsu.

The ship is named for the fishing port of Mutsu, 375 miles north of Tokyo. She had not been able to set out on her maiden voyage until August of 1974. Fishermen in Mutsu thought it was a fine idea to make their town the vessel's home port because that would make the place more than a simple fishermen's town.

Also, the local residents needed income from other than raising scallops. They believed that Japan's first atomic-powered vessel would draw tourists, who would increase the town's revenue.

By the time the Mutsu was ready to make her maiden voyage last year, however, scallop-raising earnings had increased. The fishermen reversed their previous attitude. They held that the presence of the ship would be a menace because if anything went wrong with the atomic reactor Mutsu harbor would be contaminated.

The Mutsu left on her first test run over strong protests from the fishermen. Soon after she was out of the harbor, a radioactive leak in the reactor was reported. That gave the fishermen strong ammunition to oppose the Mutsu's return to her home port.

After weeks of negotiation between government officials and representatives of the fishermen's association, the Mutsu went home on condition that she would be taken to some other place.

Although the leak did not actually cause any damage to the scallops raised in the harbor, the government agreed to give the fishermen's association $4 million in "compensation."

Since her return to home port last autumn, the Mutsu has been lying idle. Her 55-man crew has been doing nothing but painting her hull or attending to regular maintenance.

The Japan Nuclear Ship Development Agency, owner of the Mutsu, says the government has not made a decision on a new home port.

No one has offered a place for the Mutsu. There had been reports that the government was looking for someone willing to buy her. Development agency officials said the reports were false.

"We'll have to find a new home port for the Mutsu before the end of spring," one agency official said.

Under terms of the agreement with the fishermen's association, the vessel would have to leave the northern Japanese port before April 13.

No one, apparently, knew for sure whether the Mutsu's new home port could be found by then.

Small Town Bureaucrat

By CRAIG SMITH
Associated Press Writer

ELMA, Wash. (AP) — In the days of rough and tumble law and order there was the circuit-riding judge. In today's world of red tape, forms in triplicate and instruction booklets four inches deep, there's a new breed: the circuit-riding bureaucrat.

Meet Murrey Fuller, 57-year-old city manager of five southwestern Washington towns whose combined population comes to 8,280 souls.

His problems are not exactly Kissingeresque. He helps the small towns figure out ways to get money from county, state and federal governments. He listens to the Montesano City Council debate whether or not teen-agers should be permitted to dance around the juke box at the town pool hall. And, perhaps most important, he tries to stay out of small town politics.

It's a recent Monday evening in Elma — population 2,300 — and Fuller is on the slightly elevated platform with the City Council members. The white room, adorned with three American flags, large pictures of four American presidents and smaller photos of the town's mayors since 1890, is the kind of place Norman Rockwell would have liked.

Fuller gets up to make his announcements: application forms for federal grants under the Community Development Act haven't arrived; the state doesn't know if it can fund the town for comprehensive planning, and a grant application for a new tennis court will be submitted soon.

Not exactly heady stuff, but necessary.

Fuller was hired in an 18-month experimental program, serving the Grays Harbor County towns of Elma, Montesano, Oakville, McCleary and Westport. It is hoped he will tangle through the increasing maze of state and federal regulations and paperwork and snare more grants for civic improvements.

"Here you have part-time people as mayors and council members and they get stuff this thick (gesturing four inches of paper) from the state that they are supposed to read and understand," he says.

Fuller has helped some of the cities write master plans to comply with the new state Shorelines Management Act. Westport is a fishing city on the Pacific. The other towns are located on rivers.

"You couldn't build a chicken coup without a permit under the act," he says. He is also trying to get Oakville — the tiniest of the five communities with a population of 500 — exempted.

The next day begins with telephone calls to find out how to fill out federal flood insurance for Oakville. One call produces the exact number of a state law, another turns up the name of a state flood official needed for yet another form, and another call to the Corps of Engineers produces information that it has no studies of the Oakville area of the Chihalis River.

Again, not heady, just necessary in a world with more forms than people.

Fuller jumps into his 1963 sedan and heads for Oakville. There the problems of small town politics await him. The city's manual labor force — he's Al Brant — is thinking of resigning. It seems the big, pleasant, aw-shucks fellow has been stung by an allegation he's incompetent. Nobody made such a charge before in the 19 years that Brant has been town marshall and has handled street and water maintenance.

But Brant is caught up in a recall movement to sack the mayor and council members. Brant's wife, Vera, the interim town clerk, is hopping mad.

"He's just tired of getting dumped on," she tells Fuller.

They talk in an old one-room building that is the town hall, the library and the courtroom. During a recent council meeting, they had to turn the furnace off. It was making too much noise.

Rather than discuss the politics afoot, Fuller gets Brant into an innocuous conversation about the number of people living in a certain section of town.

"Let me see, McDouglas have four ..." and Brant goes on, identifying every household's progeny. Fuller smiles. He knew Brant would know.

Fuller says he tries to stay out of politics.

"These little towns sure get emotional sometimes," he says. He sees his job as an adviser and feels immersion in local political or day-to-day operation of the cities would reduce his effectiveness.

Next stop: McCleary, 17 miles away and scene of another recall effort.

Fuller first stops by the city hall, perhaps the only city hall in the country with a statue of a black bear perched atop it. That's because the town's annual shindig is the Black Bear Festival featuring bear stew.

Fuller is conducting a power rate study for the town, but finds the figures haven't arrived yet, so he heads back to Montesano. There he picks up the legal description of property being eyed as an industrial park.

After dinner, Fuller is to brief the Montesano Planning Commission on the Community Development Act and the work the commission will have to do to get the federal grants. Fuller is a bit of an evangelist about the Act and is excited about the meeting.

Alas. No one shows up. Rival basketball teams are battling each other on this night.

Fuller's circuit-riding program started in mid-July and seems to be well received.

Rare Bamboo Organ To Be Reinstalled

By ROON LEWALD
Associated Press Writer

BONN, Germany (AP) — One of the world's rarest musical instruments, the 150-year-old bamboo organ of Las Pinas, will be reinstalled in a church in the Philippines after costly restoration by a German organ-builder.

Hans Gerd Klais, the Bonn expert who realized a boyhood dream by repairing the massive, 3.5-ton instrument, believes its native church of Las Pinas near Manila may soon become a pilgrimage site for noted European organists in love with its mellow tones.

Its history dates back to the early 19th century, when Spanish missionary priest Diego Cera built a stone church for his Las Pinas congregation near Manila.

The church had no organ. So the Augustine priest, a remarkable man whose interests ranged from music to architecture, natural science and agricultural research, decided to become an organ-builder in a tropical climate where imported organs rot in as little as 20 years.

With no formal training in the craft, he selected indigenous hard woods for the frame, painstakingly pegging it together with dowels instead of nails to resist the heat and humidity.

Because iron would quickly rust in the moist air and organ-building alloys of lead, copper and zinc were hard to obtain, he carved the 1,000 flute pipes by hand from sturdy bamboo

An earthquake in 1880, several inexpert repairs, a revolution, typhoons and rain leaking through the roof of Father Diego's church left the organ of Las Pinas in sad need of repair, though basically sound.

International All-Star Circus To Perform Here Friday

The International All-Star Circus, a 90 minute live "indoor circus", will appear at the Moose Auditorium on Friday, March 28th. There will be one performance scheduled for 7:30 p.m. The Fire Fighters Association is sponsoring the circus as a project to raise money for its local activities.

The show will feature Rucker's Uncaged Leopard. Targa, the leopard, jumps through a flaming hoop, walks a "tightwire", and performs many other feats, all at the command from his trainer, Hines Rucker.

Also appearing in the Greenville performance will be the youngest pair of chimpanzees working anywhere at this time. The chimps, Raisin, 14 months old, and Siri, 10 months old, are trained and presented by Randon. Randon also presents her "Canine All-Star Review" later in the program.

In addition to these and other animal acts are Craig Carlson, a recent collegiate "big ten" record holder; jugglers, tumbling, acrobatics, a magic act, wire-walking, and a number of other acts all backed up by a traditional live circus band.

Tickets are available now from any member of the Fire-Fighters Association. Tickets will also be on sale at the door on circus day. The price is $1.50 for children and $2.50 for adults.

HINES AND TARGA. . .Trainer Hines Rucker lets Targa the leopard nuzzle his face with an affectionate kiss. The trainer and his sleek animal are one of several acts to be seen in the International All-Star Circus performance at the Moose Lodge at 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 28. Tickets for the circus performance, a benefit one for Greenville Fire Fighters, are now available.

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By JUDITH M. THOMPSON

Benjamin Franklin, who played a vital role in this country's earliest years, is the subject of a new book now available at Sheppard Library. The Most Dangerous Man In America by Catherine Drinker Bowen is a selective narrative which begins with scenes of Franklin's boyhood in Boston and ends just before the Revolution. Franklin is viewed in Philadelphia, where he makes his fortune publishing "Poor Richard's Almanac," and conducts his experiments in the detection of electricity—in Albany, where he and other delegates meet to make peace with the Iroquois—and soon thereafter, on the frontier where he and his son, William, lead a military expedition against the French. Lastly, Franklin is seen in London in 1774 when neither the Prime Minister or the King heeded his appeals and he began to realize that the differences between England and her colonies could no longer by reconciled by diplomacy.

The Most Dangerous Man In America emphasizes Fanklin's diversified brilliance, his talent for happiness and his "unperturbed self-possession in the midst of critical events," a man tempered at all times by the discipline of his passions. Yet, it illustrates why, two hundred years ago, the person feared by the leaders of England and other parts of Europe as the most dangerous man in American was Benjamin Franklin.

A later figure in American history who has won much acclaim is Dolley Madison, wife of the fourth President of the United States, James Madison. Mlst widely known for her bravery when the nation's capital was captured and burned by the British during the War of 1812, she was also a dazzling hostess to Washington society and an enthusiastic patron of literature and the arts. However, it has been only through six years of recent careful research in primary source materials that the entire life of Dolley has become known.

Using Dolley's own letters, her diaries, and letters of her family and friends as source material, Ethel Stephens Arnett has written Mrs. James Madison: The Incomparable Dolley. The book presented Dolley as a woman of many faces as she reacts to the events that take place in a new and struggling nation. She is seen as an everyday housewife, a competent hostess, a skillful arbitrator of political disagreements and as the woman entrusted the task of completing the preparation and publication of the invaluable historical papers of President Madison. For anyone who enjoys history, Dolley will emerge as an entertaining companion with the reading of Mrs. James Madison: The Incomparable Dolley.

Museum Announces Short Story Contest

The Lincoln Museum of Art has announced a statewide short story contest for residents and college students in North Carolina.

An award of $100 will be made for the story adjudged to be the top story, with the winner to be notified in June. To be eligible, the story must be original, unpublished and never before awarded a first place in any contest.

Art Notes

Handicapped Art Contest

The United Arts Council of Greensboro has announced its First Annual North Carolina Handicapped Artists and Craftsman Show.

The event is open to amateur and professional artists and craftsmen with physical or mental disabilities, and will take place April 12 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Four Seasons Mall in Greensboro.

Interested persons are to write to: Ms. Ronda Kornfeld, 106-F Yester Oaks way East, Greensboro, 27408 for entry details and other information, or phone her at 288-9638.

NCMA Paintings On Loan

On March 11 more than 50 works of art from the North Carolina Museum of Art went on view at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. The show will be up through April 13.

The loan represents the largest of the many the North Carolina museum has made to other museums all over the world since it opened in 1956.

Included in the loan are some of the museum's finest and most popular paintings: "Young Man With A Sword" by Rembrandt; "The Topers" by Goya; "St. Jerome in His Study" by Lochner; "Weaning of the Calf" by Homer; and "Young Shepherd With Flower" by Kirchner.

The show is intended not only to call attention to the wealth of art in the North Carolina Museum of Art, but also to relate its history and function as a state museum to that of the Virginia Museum.

One Way To Get Hung

PARIS (UPI) — Italian artist Giuseppe Margutti bet one million lire ($1,600) that one of his paintings would hang in the Louvre. He won.

"Inspiration," Margutti's brightly colored work of modern art representing a piano, hung directly below a masterpiece by Impressionist artist Claude Monet in the Jeu de Paume section of the Louvre Museum/ Museum for 1½ days "While chatting with a friend, I bet him that I could exhibit one of my paintings in the Louvre."

Margutti left for Paris, first reconnoitered the Jeu de Paume and then with a friend smuggled his painting into the building underneath his coat.

Works By Faculty Members Ray Elmore, Art Haney And Henry Stindt

3-In-One Exhibit At Kate Lewis Gallery

A shiny large replica of the familiar little can of the 3-In-One trade brand lubricating oil is the symbol adopted by three East Carolina School of Art faculty members for their exhibit currently on view at the Kate Lewis Art Gallery in Whichard Building.

Ray Elmore, Arthur (Art) Haney and Henry Stindt are the three faculty artists who have contributed their talents to this eye-opening different exhibit.

Elmore's part in the show is a number of crisp, beautifully rendered drawings, mostly in pencil. Whether working in realistic or non-figurative subjects, his drawings have a finely realized interplay of light and shadow, and a tensile line that ties together poetic elements.

Haney's ceramics are imaginative, often playful, with titles that make an amusing byplay on people, real and imagined. There's for instance, a small box with lips impressed on the top—titled "Ed Reep's mouth box with a spare mouth inside." Dark chocolate and gold are the colors he uses in these highly glazed pieces. Other, more serious pieces are in muted colors in a variety of glazes and surface textures.

Stindt, working in what he terms new concepts, has come up with things that will baffle some viewers, and delight others. Stindt's craftsmanship is meticulous in conceptual pieces such as a series of gleaming new tools—can opener, hammer, stapler, etc, encased in precisely tailored see-through laminated sheets hung on wires seven feet above the floor.

Each tool is reproduced photographically and shown on a wall, hung on a straight line. There's also a group of shrubs and small trees with small photographs and notes attached to the limbs, and some photographic blow ups of dictionary words sandwiched between what appears to be sheets of plexiglass. These are placed on wooden chairs scattered around the gallery.

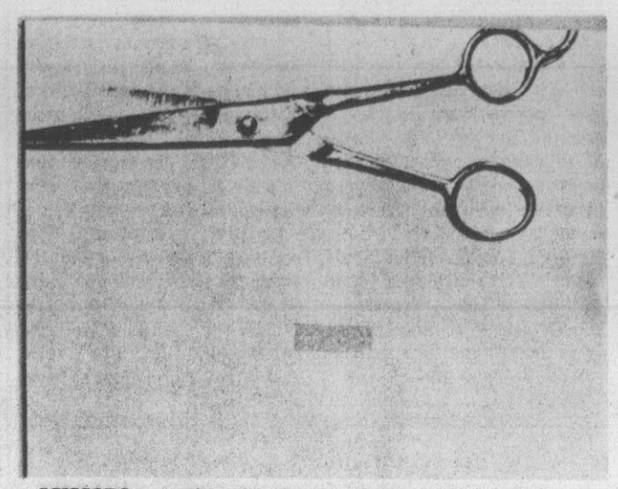

This 3-In-One Show is actually three separate shows, each on its own level, that have by circumstance been placed together. Though this proximity of such diverse works does not jeopardize the best in each, it does not at the same time advance whatever goal may have been in mind for this particular combination.

The attempt is an interesting one, and should arouse considerable pro and con response on the part of viewers. The show will remain on view through March.

An Optimist Club-WNCT Radio Benefit Event To Raise Funds For Youth Programs

Week Long Boat Show Coming To Greenville

In an effort to raise needed funds for support of youth programs, the Optimist Club for Greenville has scheduled a week long Boat Show festival to be held beginning Monday, March 31 and continuing through Saturday, April 5.

The show, sponsored jointly by the Optimist Club and WNCT Radio, is being co-chaired by Billy Ross and Ron Dail, with Larry Good, Optmisit president, and Danny Singleton of Radio WGNL assisting in programming. In addition, volunteers of the Optimist Club and the ladies equivalent, the Optimistesses, will be working on plans and helping out in the physical arrangements for the big show to be held at Nichols Discount City on Greenville Boulevard.

The kickoff will take place Monday with a parade to begin at 1 p.m. This will consist of approximately 40 units, with Mayor S. Eugene West to be riding in the lead unit. Plans are for form downtown in the area adjacent to Evans Street and Reade Circle for a brief downtown parade. Following that, the motorcade portion of the parade will proceed down Evans to Memorial Drive and tence to Nichols.

Larry Good notes there is still space available for late comers who may wish to be a part of the parade. Arrangements can be made by calling him at 758-0298.

The Greenville Police Cadts Color Guard is to form the color guard for the parade.

At Nichols, approximately 115 different boats will be on view, representing showings from dealers in all parts of eastern North Carolina—from Morehead City, New Bern, Belhaven, Washington, Kinston, Greenville and other towns.

Live entertainment is to be part of the week's activities during early evening hours, beginning at approximately 8 p.m. each night. Among those signed up to date are Glenn Eure, who will do ice sculpture on Monday night; an appearance by boat racing champion Reggie Fountain on Wednesday night; and a beauty queen contest on Wednesday night.

Also on Wednesday night, the ECU Jazz Band will perform, and on Friday night the Flatland Family Band will be on hand to entertain.

Other attractions are being lined up and will be announced at a later date.

In addition, there will be displays by the Flottila Commanders of varous nearby Coast Guard units and a display coordinated by Lester Craft, director of the Boys' Home at Lake Waccamaw.

Concession stands will be in operation during the week.

All benefits realized from the week long event will be used by the Optimists to support a number of youth work programs to which the Optimist members traditionally furnish annual assistance. These include the Boys' Home at Lake Waccamaw; Operation Sunshine; the Little League baseball team; and a local scholarship for tuition for a child in need of remedial education.

The Optimist Boat Show will end at 10 p.m. on Saturday, April 5.

Annual Horse Show To Be Biggest Yet

WILMINGTON — The biggest free horse show on the East Coast—the annual Azalea Festival Horse Show—expects the largest number of entries in its history when the 1975 event is held April 12 and 13.

The two-day event is a traditional part of the annual North Carolina Azalea Festival at Wilmington, which is set for April 10-13, with four days of festivities and entertainment. The event will be reigned over by the 28th Azalea Queen.

This year's horse show will draw well over 500 entries for the two days, predicts Lewis Tartt of Wilmington, chairman of the Azalea Festival Horse Show Committee. "We had about 514 entries for the two days last year," Tartt says, "and we'll have more than that this year."

The horse show will be held at Hugh MacRae Park, with the Saturday, April 12, program starting at 1 p.m., and calling for 31 events. These will include halter classes for Quarter Horses, Appaloosa, Arabian, and Half Arabian. There will also be game, Western pleasure, Rackins, Costume, and Lead Line classes.

The Sunday, April 13, program will start at 12-noon, and will include Saddle Seat Equitation, English pleasure, and Hunter classes, with a total of 23 events. Each day's program will award trophies and ribbons in all events, plus cash awards in certain specified events.

In Bangladesh: 'They Brought Us Here To Kill Us'

By VIC VANZI

CHONPARA CAMP, Bangladesh (UPI) — About 30,000 penniless and ragged persons go hungry, suffer from disease and wallow in filth daily in Chonpara, one of four camps set up on the outskirts of Dacca to clear the capital of an estimated 200,000 slum dwellers.

On the festering river island camp, hunger and disease claim eight lives a day and home for an average family of five consists of tattered rags drooped over tiny bamboo frames.

"They brought us here to kill us," said Sekander Hawladar, 30, a rickshaw driver who for two years had managed to eke out a meager existence for himself, his wife and two daughters in Dacca.

Then, on Jan. 13, army and police trucks carted them and thousands of others off to Chonpara. Like so many others, the move cost Hawladar his job. Camp officials estimate that only 15 per cent of Chonpara's inmates are employed.

Bitterness reflected in his sunken eyes, Hawladar recalled the words of his employer the day he was fired: "How do I know you won't steal my rickshaw now that you live in that far-off land?"

Chonpara is on an island in the Sitalakhya river five miles east of Dacca, a vast distance for an unemployed man who can't afford the 6-cent bus ride to the city and is too weak to walk. Even the one-cent row-boat trip across the river is prohibitive to the penniless.

Like the other three camps, Chonpara was planned as a haven for the destitute. There would be government housing, schools, sanitary facilities, a hospital, small industries and ample food.

But it became a nightmare of squalor, sickness and death without any of the promised facilities. About the only thing functioning properly is the graveyard, where there is daily activity.

Camp officials estimate as many as 180 persons, mostly old women and children, died of hunger and illness in little more than a month. Dysentery and skin diseases are common and 50 cases of smallpox have been reported.

Listless children with scrawny frames and bloated stomachs — unmistakable signs of starvation—are everywhere. Emaciated young mothers, half-dressed in filthy rags, squat on dirt floors, dying infants cradled in their bony arms.

"Did the sheikh send us here to kill us?" asked a young woman as a pockmarked child sucked futilely at her milkless breast. Sprawled at her side were two grotesquely bloated youngsters, half-asleep or half-dead.

The Dacca administration headed by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, who declared himself president Jan. 25 in a power-consolidation move, insists the slum clearance was necessary to eradicate pockets of crime and disease in the city of 1.6 million.

But if slum life in the city was hard, in Chonpara it is unbearable.

In the city, precious pennies a day could be made begging, doing housework or hauling garbage. The gutter was a toilet and a sheltered doorway or makeshift stall could be home.

In Chonpara, there is no work. Rickety toilets of bamboo and thatch on the edges of camp are too far for many of the undernourished and hundreds of fly-ridden open sewers send up an unbearable stench under the mid-day sun.

Vegetable oil, baby food, milk and canned food are for sale at subsidized rates at Red Cross and government ration shops, but most inmates have no money at all and depend on free ration shops.

There, hundreds of men, women and children, ration cards in hand, queue up under a baking sun, getting deliriously excited at the prospect of something to eat as they inch closer.

Women scratch each other to be next in line, fistfights break out among the men and children are trampled. Uniformed police standing behind a wire fence jab bamboo poles into the ribs of the squabbling inmates to restore order.

The weak or small fall or run away, screaming in pain. The strong collect tiny jute sacks holding the few morsels of wheat that must feed their families for two weeks.

An estimated $2 billion in foreign aid has been pumped into Bangladesh since independence in 1971, more than $520 million from the United States. A hefty slice is known to have been siphoned off by corrupt officials and the inmates of Chonpara know it.

"The aid your country is giving us is going to the wrong people," a toothless old woman screamed at an American reporter. "We don't need more aid. But we do need what is being supplied. Tell that to your government."

Gunmen Are Out On Bail

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Seattle's new FBI chief says "too many police officers are being killed because too many gunmen are out on bail."

Philip T. Basher, 52, who became special agent in charge of the Seattle FBI office in February, has spent much of his life in the FBI, having been appointed an agent in 1948.

"I believe strongly in the rights of the individual and in the equal rights of society to demand protection," he told UPI. "But that delicate balance is upset when frequent violators get out on bail as readily as first offenders.

"Nationally, in a 10-year period, 858 police officers were killed in line of duty. Seventy-seven per cent of the police killings were by criminals with previous arrest records."

He pointed out that crime in the United States increased 16 per cent during the first nine months of 1974, compared to the same period of 1973.

"Frankly," he said, "I believe there has been too much sentiment lately directed toward cracking down on law enforcement instead of cracking down on criminals."

Computerized Tax Appraisals

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new computer-assisted system for appraising real estate taxes should reduce inequities in more than 42 per cent of the nation's taxing jurisdications where property owners pay substantially more or less than their fair share. The system, designed by CBM, Inc., of Cleveland, first went into operation in Arizona two years ago. The CBM method in Arizona's largest county accurately appraised 73 per cent of the parcels within about 12 per cent of their market value compared with 19 per cent of the properties under the old manual system.

A Record Year For Aluminum

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — An aluminum industry spokesman says when the final figures are in, 1974 will turn out to be a record year for the aluminum packaging industry. Paul Murphy, vice president of Reynolds Metals Co., says estimates are that aluminum packaging sales totaled around 2.25 billion pounds for the year, a 10 per cent rise from the year before.

Soviet No. 1 In Steel Output

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet Union has regained the No. 1 spot among the world's steel producing countries, according to Iron Age Magazine. Figures from the International Iron and Steel Institute show that Russia's output last year was around 137.6 million metric tons, compared to U.S. production of 132 million.

RECORD GROWTH

BARRINGTON, Ill. (UPI) — Some $35.4 billion will be spent this year on research and development, according to Research-Development Magazine. A survey by the magazine found that most industrial firms plan to boost this area of their corporate spending despite falling sales and production.

Accidents Due Attention Gap

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A study conducted for the Consumer Product Safety Commission shows that lack of attention is a more likely cause of stairway accidents than an object left in the area causing a person to stumble. The study, made by researchers for the National Bureau of Standards, found that "the biggest stairway hazard" is "distraction — people looking at other people, or reading the graffiti, or running to catch the subway."

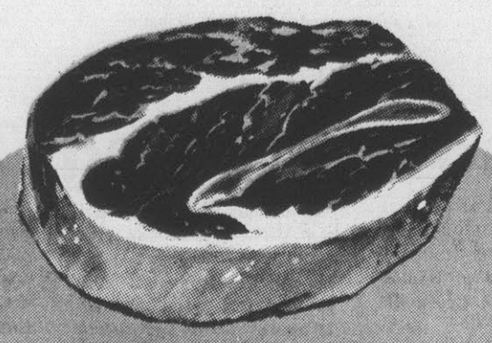

SALES UP

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Del Monte Corp., one of the nation's largest canners of fruits and vegetables, reports its sales of U.S. grocery products increased 28 per cent during the year ending Nov. 30, 1974.

FAVORED ONE — As the young and favored son of Jacob, Joseph (above, Tony Lo Bianco) is hated by his brothers and sold into slavery. He ends in Egypt and becomes the second-hand to Pharaoh, saving the country from starvation, in "The Story of Jacob and Joseph," to air as a special on PALM SUNDAY, March 23 (8:30-10:30 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

An Encore For Biblical Drama

"The Story of Jacob and Joseph," the popular and widely praised human drama of the Biblical Patriarchs which stars Keith Mitchell, Tony Lo Bianco, Colleen Dewhurst and Herschel Bernardi, will have an encore presentation on the on the ABC Television Network, Sunday, March 23, 8:30 to 10:30 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

The program, which also stars Harry Andrews and Julian Glover, was produced by multi-award-winner Mildred Freed Alberg and directed by Academy Award-winner Michael Cacoyannis with the script by Earnest Kinoy.

When the program originally aired on April 7, 1974, critics hailed it as an "engrossing production (with) superb performances" (New York Daily News), "an absorbing two hours...a realistic down-to-earth story about believable people" (Philadelphia Bulletin) and "strong TV fare, well performed" (Variety).

The drama was filmed entirely on location in Israel. Hostilities in the Middle East temporarily halted production last year when many Israelites who were part of the cast and production crew, were called away to fight in the Yom Kippur War. Locations for the film were often in areas where tradition indicates the events actually occured, most particularly in the hill country of Canaan where the Bible says Patriarchs lived in the tent encampments.

Mysteries Lurk In Hope Diamond

All great diamonds, inspiring a passion for their possession, have an aura of mystery about them, but none is considered as unlucky as the Hope diamond. From the time this magnificent deep-blue stone was brought from India by French diamond merchant Jean-Baptiste Tavernier, many of its owners have suffered ruined reputations, fallen fortunes or mysterious deaths.

A dramatized history of this fabulous diamond, starring Samantha Eggar and Bradford Dillman, will be presented in "The Legendary Curse of the Hope Diamond," an hour-long Smithsonian special, Thursday, March 27, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV and Channel 9-11.

Legend has it that Tavernier stole the diamond from the eye of an idol, Rama-Sita, and that the curse is the god's revenge. The mystery of the Hope Diamond began when it was falsely reported that Tavernier had lost his entire fortune and was devoured by wolves on the steppes of Russia.

Louis XIV had the diamond cut and gave it to his mistress. She was later accused of satanism and was expelled from court. Within a year after Louis had bought the diamond, two of his sons died inexplicably. The king later suffering an agonizing death from smallpox.

Eventually the diamond passed on to Louis XVI and his queen, Marie-Antionette. After both were beheaded, during the Revolution, the diamond disappeared, presumably stolen by the mob.

Nothing more was heard of it until in 1830, when a diamond of the same deep-blue color came on the market in London. It was bought by Henry Philip Hope, a London banker, for $90,000. A couple of generations later the family went bankrupt and the stone was sold.

It changed hands frequently in the next few years, and the curse seemed to follow it: Lorens Laduc, a star of the Folies Bergere, was stabbed to death by her lover; Simon Montharides, a Greek merchant, drove off a cliff with his entire family; Selim Habib, a Turkish sultan, was drowned off Gibralter. Another ownere was stabbed to death; still another committed suicide.

Finally, the stone was acquired by Pierre Cartier, the Parisian jewelry, who sold it in 1911 for $180,000 to Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLean, a wealthy American couple who are portrayed in "The Legendary Curse of the Hope Diamond" by Samantha Eggar and Bradford Dillma. Over the years, personal tragedy was to strike the McLean family again and again—accidental death, suicide, insanity.

In 1947, the diamond was bought by the New York jeweler, Harry Winston, as part of the McLean estate. Winston donated it to the Smithsonian Institution, where it is today.

Is this diamond's legend curse or coincidence? History pays close attention to the lives and deaths of the wealthy and famous—those who would possess diamonds. Foreshortened by time, coincidental misfortune can come to seem like a curse. Still, if it is only coincidence, there has been an abundance of it in the history of the Hope Diamond.

TEAMED UP

Tennessee Ernie Ford and Glen Campbell will team for a Caputol album.

SAMANTHA EGGAR and Bradford Dillman star as Edward and Evalyn Walsh McLean, an American couple who were owners of the fabulous Hope Diamond from 1911 to 1947 in "The Legendary Curse of the Hope Diamond" to be presented Thursday, March 27 (10-11 p.m.) on channels 3N-9-11.

Second TV Drama Goes To Full Hour

"Days of Our Lives," NBC Television Network's popular afternoon drama, will become television's second one-hour daytime drama series when it is expanded to a full-hour format beginning Monday, April 21.

NBC-TV brought the one-hour form in daytime drama to network television in January when "Another World" was extended to the 3 to 4 p.m. time period.

"For almost 10 years, 'Days of Our Lives' was the opening show of an extremely strong afternoon block of drama on NBC," said Lin Bolen, Vice President, Daytime Programs for NBC-TV. "This latest move will enable us to return to that successful scheduling format and continue NBC's pioneering effort of bringing the long-form to daytime television.

"Results from the bold move we made with 'Another World,'" Bolen added, "now show us that our aggressive approach was the right move. Our audience from 3:30 to 4:00 p.m. has increased substantially.

"Along with that," she said, "we made some additions to our schedule and some time period changes which have increased the audience of our morning line-up."

Macdonald Carey heads an outstanding "Days of Our Lives" cast of performers in the role of Dr. Tom Horton, who is director of University Hospital in the midwestern town of Salem.

HONOR FOR LEE

Lee Meriwether, co-star of CBS-TV's "Barnaby Jones," will be the 1975 honorary crusade chairman of the California American Cancer Society.

COLOR BLIND

Being separated from his family while on location has great disadvantages for Claude Akins, star of NBC-TV's "Movin' On." Admitting that he's not too good on color coordination, he misses daughter Wendy's critiques of his daily attire.

CLOSER CALL

NBC-TV star Bob Hope says one of the college students assigned to meet him on a recent public appearance greeted him by saying: "Gee Mr. Hope, this is some difference from seeing you in Korea. They had me about 20 sandbags back, and here I am close enough to shake your hand."

Ray Milland A Man Of Strong Opinions

English-born Ray Millard is a man in the tradition of the old time Redcoats.

Those British soldiers of a bygone century would stand in a straight line and fire — and then stand pat as the enemy fired back. They didn't run and they didn't dodge.

That's the way Oscar-winner Milland deals with his opinions.

"This women's lib thing will never get to first base." Bam!

"Italy is a cesspool." Bam!!

"France's national theatre, the comedie Francaise, is the home of all the impossible action in the world." BAM!!!

The 66-year-old former British calvalry officer, who has become one of the most respected actors in Hollywood (he won an Academy Award for his performance in "The Lost Weekend"), will be seen in "Ellery Queen," a two-hour motion picture for television which is to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network Sunday, March 23, 8:30 to 10:30 p.m., in the "NBC Sunday mystery Movie" time period on Channel 6-7.

In off-stage comments during the filming of the show, Milland laughed at the idea that "Women's Lib" will change the world during the next 50 years.

"It isn't going to change anything," he said. "They haven't changed anything in 10,000 years and they aren't going to do it in 50. If the strong women's lib people did win it would be the end of society because there would be no more offspring. They don't want children — they want to drive trucks!"

He said he wasn't particularly worried about the problem anyway, "because there is just too much feminine instinct to make a nest."

Milland, who now makes his home in the south of France, said he'll always love California but can't stand the smog. So he moved to Europe.

"There's no smog where I live now," he said, "but we do have a serious water pollution problem because of what is coming down from Italy. That country has become a cesspool, and they have done nothing about it."

Haldeman In TV Interview Show

"Haldeman: The Nixon Years - Conversations with Mike Wallace," two hour-long interviews with the former chief of staff for President Nixon, will be broadcast as CBS News Specials Sunday, March 23, and Sunday, March 30, on the CBS Television Network.

Haldeman was interviewed by CBS News Correspondent Mike Wallace early in March in Los Angeles.

Bill Leonard, CBS News Senior Vice President and Director of Public Affairs Broadcasts, said, "We think these broadcasts will add new knowledge and a very personal perspective to what has been revealed about the Nixon White House, its attitudes, actions and people."

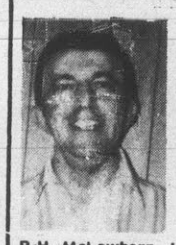

CBS News earlier announced that it compensated Haldeman for his services and for rights to televise Super 8mm. "home movies" that Haldeman took of the former President and his associates during trips overseas and in intimate moments in the United States.

Leonard said, "The Haldeman interviews have, before air, become controversial. But we feel they will contribute to the still-untold full story of the historic period that ended last August with the resignation of former President Nixon."

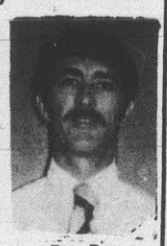

The Haldeman interviews are produced by Gordon Manning and Marion Goldin. Perry Wolff is Executive Producer.

Mitzi's Career Hits New Apex On Monday

Havelock Ellis, the late psychologist, once wrote that "The art of dancing stands at the source of all the arts that express themselves first in the human person...dancing is the loftiest, the most moving, the most beautiful of the arts, because it is no mere translation of abstraction from life, it is life itself."

Mitzi Gaynor, a current high-priestess of the dance, disagrees with Ellis — to a point.

"Dancing hasn't been my life," she explains, "it has made my life."

Miss Gaynor's professional life reaches a new apex on Monday, March 24, 9:00 to 10:00 p.m., when she stars in "Mitzi and a Hundred Guys" on the CBS Television Network and seen on Channel 9-11. The special variety show has her surrounded by a mob of the screen's top leading men — a situation which could turn a woman's head but is for her all in a day's work.

The guest stars on "Mitzi and a Hundred Guys" are Michael Landon and Jack Albertson. But there is also that bunch of guys that gives the special its name, a singing and dancing chorus made up of such luminaries as Bob Hope, Mike Connors, Carl Betz, Ed Asner, Bob Crane, Marty Allen, Andy Griffith, Monte Hall, Christopher George, Ted Knight, Louis Nye, Jim Nabors and Lyle Waggoner, to name just a few of "the million-dollar (two left feet, but oh how we try) charity chorus."

And it all started because Mitzi Gaynor could dance. Actually, she's been dancing since the age of 4, when her dancing teacher in Detroit, who happened to be Cyd Charisse's sister-in-law, told Mitzi's mother that the youngster could become a star.

Eight years later, young Mitzi was in Hollywood, knocking on studio gates. Eventually, 20th Century-Fox signed her to a contract, and she danced, and sang, her way to musical-comedy stardom.

Miss Gaynor has not forgotten it was dancing that put her on the road to fame, and she recommends it for any would-be entertainer.

"Dance training gives you confidence and poise, it makes you graceful and secure in the way you move," she says. "This is as important for a singer or an actor as it is for a dancer. With this security it's easier to devote yourself to other things, to become a better singer or actor."

MITZI GAYNOR stars in "Mitzi and a Hundred Guys", special featuring a "million dollar chorus" of top male stars, to be broadcast March 24 (9-10 p.m.) on channels 3N-9-11)

Horton Again Hears A Who

That heroic, couplet-spouting elephant, Horton, whose actions in support of his philosophy that "a person no matter how small" have won him much acclaim — and also won a Peabody Award for his creator, Theodore (Dr. Seuss) Geisel — repeats his heroism in "Dr. Seuss' Horton Hears a Who," animated special to be rebroadcast on the CBS Television Network Monday, March 24, 8:30 to 9:00 p.m., on channel 9-11.

Hans Conreid narrates the Seussian classic, which was cited at the 1971 Peabody Awards ceremonies as "a superb example of how an inspired children's book can be translated into an equally entrancing television show."

RON HOWARD (right) and Donny Most of ABC's "Happy Days" find adventure on the river as Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer, respectively, in the ABC-TV special adaptation of "Huckleberry Finn" to be seen Tuesday, March 25 (8-9:30 p.m.)

Spent 'Happy Days' In Playing Huckleberry

The lure has been close to irresistible for American boys. Rafts, rivers, the retreat from responsibilities and the dash toward adventure have triggered the yearning to be Huckleberry Finn. And for those who have not ventured forth, the vicarious pleasures and perils of the voyage on the Mississippi have been captured in motion picture versions of the Mark Twain classic starring Lewis Sargent, Junior Durkin, Jeff East, Eddie Hodges and Mickey Rooney.

And now, Ron Howard of ABC's "Happy Days" will relive those halcyon days in Mid-America in the title role of "Huckleberry Finn," the first television production of the ever-appealing story, which airs on the ABC Television Network, Tuesday, March 25, 8 to 9:30 p.m., and seen on Ch. 3-5-12.

The first lucky boy to portray Huck on film was Lewis Sargent back in 1919.

In 1931, Junior Durkin played the role for Paramount with Jackie Coogan as Tom Sawyer and Jane Darwell as the Widow Douglas in the Norman Taurog-directed production. One of the best remembered portrayals of Huck was Mickey Rooney's in 1939. The MGM film was directed by Richard Thorpe, father of Jerry Thorpe, who is executive producer of ABC's "Kung Fu" and "Harry O" series.

In 1960, MGM tried again with Eddie Hodges in the title role. Former boxing champion Archie Moore starred as Jim. Others in the cast were Tony Randall as The King, Mickey Shaughnessy as The Duke, Neville Brand as Pap Finn and Royal Dano as the sheriff (Dano portrays Mark Twain in the ABC special).

Michael Curtiz directed for producer Samuel Goldwyn, Jr.

The latest "Huckleberry Finn" for theatrical release starred Jeff East in 1974 for United Artists. Paul Winfield, Harvey Korman, David Wayne, Gary Merrill and Lucille Benson were in the cast. J. Lee Thompson directed and Arthur P. Jacobs produced.

In the ABC presentation, Ron Howard is joined by his family with father Rance playing Pap Finn, mother Jean also appearing as the Widow Douglas and brother Clint playing Arch.

Also starring are Jack Elam as The King and country music singer Merle Haggard as The Duke.

This special television adaptation of the classic was filmed on location on the Sacramento River near Marysville, California, and in and around the Los Angeles area.

The producer is Steven North and Bob Totten is the director.

UFOs In Movie Plot

Are UFOs for real?

Many people think so, including pilots, policemen and other presumably reliable witnesses who claim to have seen them.

Whether they exist or not the United States military for the past 25 years has taken the position that they do not.

And that's the point made in "The Disappeaance of Flight 412," an "NBC World Premiere Movie" to be rebroadcast Tuesday, March 28, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

Glenn Ford stars as an Air Force colonel trying to prove the UFOs might have caused two Marine Jets to mysterously disappear in flight.

Celebrities On Game Show

Anson Williams of ABC's "Happy Days" and Adrienne Barbeau are the celebrity contestants on the popular game show, "The $10,000 Pyramid" this week.

Dick Clark is host of the "The $10,000 Pyramid," on which team members race against the clock to communicate categories to their partners through item clues, with the high scoring team getting a chance to win $10,000 in cash in 60 seconds.

Double Feature Night On Tuesday

Tim Matheson, Bo Hopkins and Jim Davis star as three men trying to earn a simple living as modern-day boatmen on the Mississippi River, and James Farentino portrays a policeman who allows fellow officers to think he's a thief, in two 90-minute films, "The Runaway Barge" and "Crossfire," to be colorcast on "NBC Double Feature Night at the Movies" Monday, March 24, 8 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

In "The Runaway Barge," starting at 8 p.m., Danny Worth (Matheson) and Ezel Owens (Hopkins) are crewmen aboard the River King, owned by Capt. Buckshot Bates (Davis). Filmed entirely on location in various states along the Mississippi River, the adventure-drama details the fast-paced action involved in a kidnapping and a hijacking.

In "Crossfire," starting at 9:30 p.m., James Farentino portrays officer Vince Rossi, who volunteers to 'steal' drugs and to be caught in the act by fellow officers, in order to infiltrate an underworld mob.

Ramon Bieri stars as Capt. Frank McCardle, the only member of the police department who knows the true story of Rossi's' arrest.'

Reporting to McCardle, Rossi reveals that a mob headed by Dave Ambrose (John Saxon) is using businessman Lane Fielding (Patrick O'Neal) to launder money being used to corrupt city officials.

ACTING TORTURE

Despite winning an oscar and gaining international renown as an actor, Ray Milland, who stars in "Ellery Queen" on the "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie" March 23, says he often wishes he had picked another career. "ACting tome is torture," Ray says. "I get terribly, terribly worked up and nervous about acting. It is caused by a lack of confidence in myself which never stops."

Family Saga Continues In 'Easter Promise'

"The Easter Promise," a 90-minute drama special starring Jason Robards, Mildred Natwick, Lisa Lucas and guest star Jean Simmons, will be presented Wednesday, March 26, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on CBS and Ch. 9-11.

The television play was produced by the same principals who created "The House Without a Christmas Tree" and "The Thanksgiving Treasure," both highly acclaimed holiday dramas, and continues the saga of the Mills family — 12-year-old Addie (Miss Lucas), her devoted grandmother (Miss Natwick) and her dour widowed father (Robards) — and their life in a small Nebraska town in the 1940s.

Miss Simmons stars as Constance Payne, a Broadway actress who returns to her Nebraska birthplace to dispose of the family home after the death of her mother. Addie and her young friends are in a dither over the visit of this local celebrity. They call on the reclusive Miss Payne to get her autograph, then to commission her to give them acting lessons and, finally, to ask her to award the prizes to winners of a community fashion show. Constance tries to discourage all the attention but is trapped in a masquerade by the girls' enthusiasm.

Addie, with a wisdom beyond her years, realizes that all is not well with Constance and determines to help her. The little girl's kindness and concern help Constance to a promise of better days as she joins the family in an Easter celebration.

Miss Simmons has just completed a highly successful national tour as star of the Broadway musical "A Little Night Music," and is appearing in the London production. Her many motion-picture credits include Ophelia in "Hamlet," "Great Expectations," "The Robe," "Guys and Dolls" and "Elmer Gantry."

Jason Robards' distinguished theatrical career ranges from "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and "Any Wednesday" to his triumphs in "A Thousand Clowns" and "A Moon for the Misbegotten."

Mildred Natwick has given many notable performances on the stage, in films and television during her 40 years in the theater.

PORTRAIT — Young Lisa Lucas, as Addie Mills, shares the joy of her latest achievement with her father (Jason Robards) and grandmother (Mildred Natwick) in "The Easter Promise," drama special to be seen Wednesday, March 26 (8:30-10 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Charlie Brown Easter Show

Whether it's Snoopy, the dogged Peanut beagle buff, or a magical legendary holiday hero, Linus insists "It's the Easter Beagle, Charlie Brown," in the animated special of that title to be rebroadcast on the CBS Television Network Wednesday evening, March 26, 8:00 to 8:30, on Channel 9-11.

As the other Peanuts prepare for Easter, Linus insists they need not bother coloring eggs because the Easter Beagle distributes them "to all the good little kids." Lucy, perhaps because she may not be certain she is a "good little kid," rejects the whole idea and continues to hide Easter eggs in places where only she can find them.

COMO CROONS — Perry Como plays host to Bob Newhart, Olivia Newton-John and the Pat Boone family on his fourth special of the season "Perry Como's Springtime Special," to be broadcast Thursday, March 27 (9-10 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Spring Greeted By Como

Perry Como ushers in spring and celebrates the Easter season with his guests Bob Newhart, Olivia Newton-John and the Pat Boone family, on "Perry Como's Springtime Special," a one-hour music and comedy special to be presented Thursday evening, March 27, from 9 to 10:00 on CBS TV and Channel 3N-9-11.

"Perry Como's Springtime Special" takes place in a busy springtime park, where Como and his guests participate in an Easter parade and egg hunt and where Como and popular singer Olivia Newton-John provide a bandshell concert. Pat Boone, his wife Shirley, and their daughters Laury, Debby, Lindy and Cherry, portray several popular singing groups, and Bob Newhart, star of "The Bob Newhart Show" on the Network, will make his premiere appearance as the legendary Easter Bunny.

In the park boutique, the men encounter some humorous problems in trying to select spring bonnets for their spouses, and the entire cast assembles for the launching of a "Hot-Air Balloon."

Bob Finkel is producer of "Perry Como's Springtime Special" and Jack Regis directs from a script by Herbert Baker.

Mac Davis Rolls With The Flow

By RAY BENSON
The Columbia Record

Mac Davis is not completely satisfied with his television show, but some of the things that have happened since it came on the air have made him pleased.

The genial Southerner, asked if he had accomplished what he set out to do, replied: "No, I'll never accomplish all that I set out to do . . . not by a long shot. "I think it's certainly improved over the summer show we had, but there are also certain things that haven't turned out too well, and it disappoints me. There is a lot of difference, the main thing being I have creative control, now. This year the sketches are shorter, and 100 per cent funnier. We have the best writers in the business and what we're trying to do is entertain people for an hour."

There's a new Mac Davis album out, with all new songs, except one ("Rock and Roll, I gave you the Best Years of My Life"), and "I think it's the best album I've ever cut." (Mac sings selections from this album each Thursday night on "The Mac Davis Show" at 9:00 p.m. on NBC.)

On the average, how long does it take him to write a song?

"I really couldn't give you an average. Some, it took 11 years, some 45 minutes. I never know from the time of being inspired to the time I sit down and write it. And, that's a straight fact."

The audience seems to enjoy the songs you make up from sayings they give you, so can viewers expect more of it?

Crises In Platt Family

The family crises present the Platt family with major decisions and adjustments—first when George (Paul Sorvino) is offered the job of his dreams and the family faces the prospect of a move, and then when Mother Liz (Mitzi Hoag) decides to complete her education—on a double-bill presentation of episodes of "We'll Get By," Friday, March 28, 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., on CBS and Channel 3N,9,11.

In the first episode, George Platt is faced with the dilemma of either relocating his family for the sake of his job or succombing to his family's desire to stay in New Jersey.

The second episode presents the family with another possible loss—their mother. Liz Platt decides to complete her schooling, and the shock of not having her around the house brings the family to the brink of disorganization.

According to the series' creator, Alan Alda (who also stars in M-A-S-H on the network), these problems are very real to family living. "We've opted for realistic comedy and have discarded unreality altogether," he says. "What we've got is a comedy of adjustment and of recognition—of what goes on in the ordinary course of things. There's an enormous wealth of humor in reality."

"We'll Get By' is a victorious show," Alda continues. "This family sticks together; they make it through. Our title is a positive statement. People who can get by, people who can make it together through the day, the week, the year, and who laugh at the end of the day—that's a great victory."

CHRIST STORY — Max Von Sydow portrays Jesus in "The Greatest Story Ever Told", a dramatic presentation of the Christ story to have a repeat colorcast on NBC-TV in two parts, Friday and Saturday, March 28 and 29 (9-11 p.m.) both nights on channels 6-7.

SPEAKS SERBIAN

Karl Malden, starring as Detective Lt. Mike Stone on ABC-TV's "The Streets of San Francisco," speaks fluent Serbian. His father came from Serbia and his mother from Bohemia. The Academy Award-winning star did not learn how to speak English until he attended kindergarten in Gary, Indiana.

New Premise In 'Force Five'

Lieutenant Roy Kessler has a problem. He's been given orders by the police commissioner to assemble a special force to take on cases too difficult for the regular police to handle. There's one hitch however . . . the men who make up this force must be ex-convicts.

One by one, Kessler rounds up the other four members; they are an ex-police sergeant who's been kicked off the force for accepting bribes, a convicted confidence man, car thief and burglar . . . all out on parole.

This is the premise for "Force Five!", a 90-minute motion picture and basis for a projected new series on CBS-TV, airing Friday, March 28, 9:30 to 11 p.m., on Channel 9-11.

NIT Semifinals And Finals On CBS TV

The 37th edition of the National Invitation Tournament, the nation's oldest post-season collegiate basketball tournament, will be presented on "CBS Sports Spectacular" Saturday and Sunday on the CBS Television Network. (Saturday, March. 22, 2:00 to 6:00 p.m., and Sunday, March 23, 1:00 to 3:00 p.m.)

Don Cruqui, play-by-play, and Sonny Hill, analyst, will be courtside at Madison Square Garden in New York City for the broadcasts.

On Saturday, an NIT semi-final doubleheader to be presented by CBS Television Sports features collegians from a 16-team field that includes, among other, Memphis State University, the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Connecticut, Lafayette, Providence, Manhattan and St. Peter's Colleges.

St. John's will be making its 22nd appearance (and 30th overall) in a post-season tournament—a collegiate record. Also, the Redmen will be seeking their fifth NIT championship, in an imposing field that also has such former winners as Providence (twice) and Holy Cross (once) vying for the big bauble.

At halftime and between games of the Saturday broadcast, CBS Sports will present highlight of the North American Soccer League championship indoor finals. Frank Gleiber and NASL star Kyle Rote Jr. will be the commentators from the Cow Palace in San Francisco, Calf.

The Sunday broadcast will pit the two winners in Saturday's semi-finals in the tip-off for the NIT championship.

Tom O'Neill will be the producer for the CBS Television Sports presentations, and Tony Verna will direct.

KNOWS THE CITY

One man who really knows "The Streets of San Francisco" is location manager Tom Fitzpatrick. He walked a beat for many years as a policeman with the San Francisco Police Department.

Acclaimed Czech Film To Be Seen

"The Children's Film Festival" on Saturday, March 28, 1 to 2 p.m., will rebroadcast "Jumping Over Puddles," a much acclaimed motion picture from Czecholovakia.

Burr Tillstrom's Kukla, Fran and Ollie with Fran Allison are hosts of the series, which has won many prestigious honors during its seven seasons on the Network.

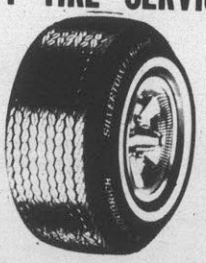

"Jumping Over Puddles" is a winner of the Silver Shell Award of the San Sebastian International Film Festival and of the Grand Prix and Golden Statuette at the International Film Festival in Teheran.

The film, directed by Karel Kachyna and adapted from a book by Australian writer Alan Marshall, tells of a 10-year-old boy who becomes involved in innocent mischief with tragic consequences. Dared by friends, he shoots at a blacksmith with a slingshot, is chased, jumps into a pond to hide all day, and then contracts a fever which develops into crippling polio.

Undaunted, he is determined to overcome his misfortune, and, with the aid of friends, who lend him a horse, the tenacious young man achieves his miracle.

A 1970 release, "Jumping Over Puddles" illustrates the film quality which has made this series one of the most popular Saturday afternoon children's television programs.

David Pearson Will Be In Atlanta 500

(The Atlanta 500 will be televised on Channel 3-5-12 at 3:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 23.)

Now in his fifteenth year of an illustrious career David Pearson's achievements on the track are making him a living legend.

The son of honest, hard working, God-fearing parents, Pearson selected auto racing as a means to escape a life in the mills. Despite his success and the fact that he is a million dollar winner, he has never forgotten who he is or where he was born. He has a deep appreciation for the help, blessings, and encouragement given him by thousands without which the dream of reaching the top would have never become a reality.

A few years ago when some sports writers would tag Pearson "The Silver Fox" the curly headed driver with the salt and pepper hair would go wild.

"Silver Fox!" David would exclaim. "I'm not that old, and I'll tell you what, I'm in a heck of a lot better shape than any of you guys pounding your typewriters."

The handle "Silver Fox" was actually given to Pearson out of respect. For, since joining the famed Wood Brothers' team in 1972, the 40-year-old Pearson has amassed a winning percentage never enjoyed by any other driver in the 27-year-old history of the National Association for Stock Car Racing.

Pearson, who won the 1973 Martini and Rossi Driver of the Year Award when he won 11 out of 18 starts in his red and white Purolator Mercury, has finally learned to accept the tag "Silver Fox" but only to get ribbed again in another way.

The new Pearson irk-getter is, "How's the kid, David?"

That really gets him.

The reason being, several months ago his daughter-in-law gave birth to a bouncing baby boy. And it doesn't take a TV detective to figure out that makes Pearson a grandfather. The baby was born with a lead right foot, so out of necessity they named him — what else — David Pearson.

"Well, I'm not getting any younger," admits the proud grandfather, "but I feel that I'm just reaching my peak as a driver and have a lot of years left.

"I have had such great seasons in 1973 and 1974 that I'm scared to quit. I've always said I would quit on top. I figure if I can win half as many races next year, it will still be a good season."

Cover Closing Rounds

Johnny Miller, defending champion and first player to win eight times in one season since Arnold Palmer in 1960, leads the professional golfers teeing it up in the $200,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic, to be broadcast on the CBS Television Network Saturday, March 29, 5 to 6 p.m., and Sunday, March 30, 4:30 to 6 p.m., from the Sea Pines Harbour Town Links, Hilton Head Island, S. C.

Vin Scully, Jack Whitaker, Pat Summerall, Frank Glieber, Ben Wright and former U. S. Open champion Ken Venturi, will be the commentators.

The broadcasts of the golf tournament, covering the finishing holes on the final two days of the four - day, 72-hole competition, will include the green at the par-3, 152-yard 14th hole; the 562-yard, par-5 15th hole; the par-4, 378-yard 16th hole; the par-3, 188-yard 17th hole; and the demanding par-4, 458-yard 18th hole.

The broadcasts will be produced by Frank Chirkinian. Bob Daily and Chirkinian will direct.

WCT Play Covered Mar. 30

Comedian Dan Rowan and former quarterback-turned-sportscaster-actor Don Meredith will be Bud Collin's commentary partners on NBC Television Network colorcasts of World Championship Tennis: Rowan on March 23; Meredith on March 30 (all from 2-4 p.m.).

Rowan is slated to team with Collins on a total of four WCT events. He made his debut March 16 on the colorcast of the final of the WCT Tennis Classic from Washington, D. C., and continues Sunday, March 23, with the 1975 Memphis (Tenn.) Tennis Classic. His two final assignments will be on April 20 and 27.

Both the Washington and Memphis events feature players from WCT's Red Group—such performers as 1973 World Championship of Tennis winner Stan Smith; the brothers Amritraj (Anand and Vijay) of India; Australian John Alexander and Cliff Drysdale of South Africa.

Meredith, who teamed with Collins February 23 for the first event on NBC's tennis coverage card, will be in the principality of Monaco for his second appearance, March 30. Competing in the WCT Classic at Monte Carlo will be players from the Green Group, the "globetrotters" among WCT's three color-designated groups (the third is Blue).

JOHNNY MILLER will be in action in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic from Sea Pines Harbour Town Links, Hilton Head Island, S.C. on Saturday March 29 (5-6 p.m.) and Sunday March 30 (4:30-6 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Again Will Play G-Man

Dale Robertson has been signed as the famed G-Man, Melvin Purvis, in "The Kansas City Massacre," a special two-hour motion picture which will have its world premiere on the ABC Television Network.

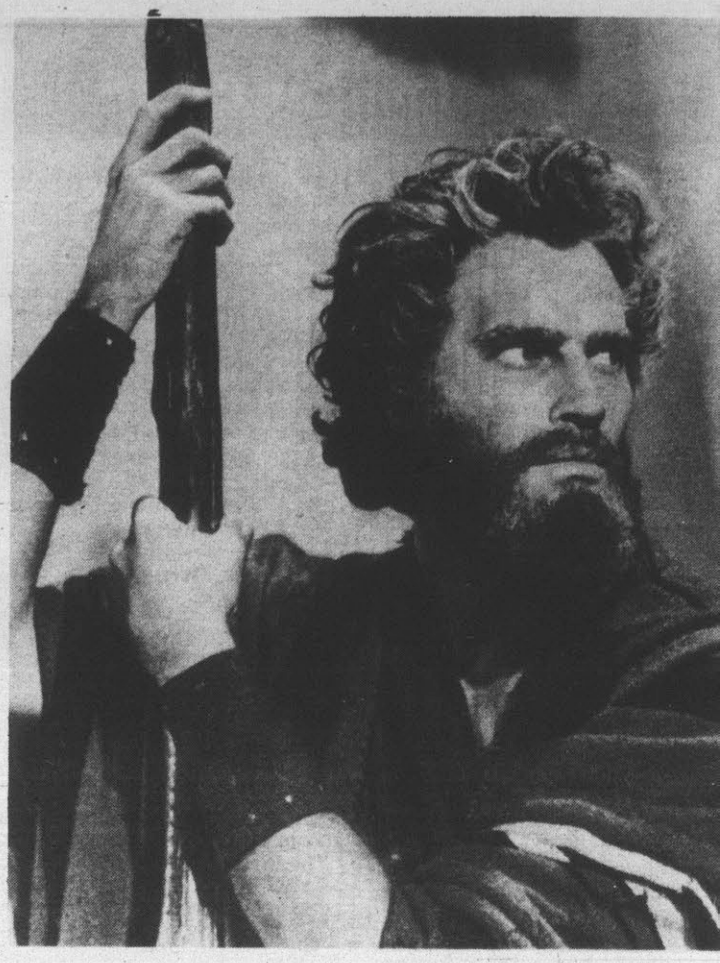

"The Kansas City Massacre" marks the second movie about Purvis in which Robertson plays the title role and Dan Curtis is producer-director. The first was "Melvin Purvis, G-Man," one of the highest rated ABC "Movie of the Week" presentations in 1974.

When gangsters Frank Nash is captures by Purvis, the colorful agent in charge of the FBI's midwest bureau during the early 1930s, it is necessary to transport him by train to Kansas City and then by car to Leavenworth prison in Kansas. The transfer at Kansas City's Union Station is the signal for an ambush in which rival gangsters try to kidnap Nash from the FBI and police.

Also starring is Bo Hopkins as Pretty Boy Floyd, long thought to be one of the triggar men at the infamous ambush on June 17, 1933. "The Kansas City Massacre" was written by Ric Hardman and William F. Nolan.

A GRAND MARSHAL

Carol Channing will be the Grand Marshal of the annual Atlanta Dogwood Festival Parade, to be held April 5.

CHARLTON HESTON stars as Moses in one of the great motion pictures of all time, "Ten Commandments". This epic film will be seen in two parts starting as "ABC Saturday Night Movie" March 29 and concluding on the "ABC Sunday Night Movie" March 30 on Channels 3W-5-12.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR POLLY BERGEN

Did you start off as a singer?—B.B., Lowell, Mass.

● Correct. When I was 16, I got a job singing on a Pasadena radio station. I was soon fired because of a flood of complaints from listeners. This is what happened: I sang a country-western lullaby ("Go to Sleep My Little Buckaroo"), and all the ladies were furious because instead of their children going to sleep, their husbands became very "interested" in me. It seems my voice—which was always low and husky—was too sexy and suggestive.

FOR BART STARR, head coach of the Green Bay Packers

How do you feel about the football tradition that says ex-quarterbacks don't make good head coaches in the National Football League?—Roger Davidson, Durham, N.C.

● I intend to bury that next to the one that said a black man couldn't play quarterback in the National Football League.

FOR KITTY CARLISLE, panelist on "To Tell the Truth"

Are the gowns you wear on the show your own?—Cecilia Borowicz, Stephen, Minn.

● Yes. The reason I have so many is because I never throw any of them away. You see, I haven't gained an inch or an ounce in 30 years, so all my clothes still fit. I don't get rid of anything because I know if you wait long enough, everything eventually comes back into fashion again.

FOR JASON MILLER, star of "The Nickel Ride"

Do you think most actors come to admire the characters they're playing?—J.N., Ogden, Utah

● "Understand" might be the better word. When I played the priest in "The Exorcist," I was one jump ahead, because I was strictly raised as an Irish-Catholic. Many actors portray murderers and criminals, and I'm sure they don't "admire" them. But if they research the character, they get to "understand" what makes the character tick, and so are able to give the role much more realism.

FOR RON NESSEN, presidential press secretary

Could a woman do your job?—Robert Barney, San Antonio, Texas

● Definitely. As a matter of fact, President Ford has just appointed Mrs. Margita White, formerly of the Nixon press team, to be an assistant press secretary.

FOR HARRY KEMELMAN,
author of "Tuesday the Rabbi Saw Red" and other books

I'm surprised that your "Rabbi" series hasn't been filmed yet. Why?—Kathy Ryan, E. Freetown, Maine

● So am I! What's even more surprising is that the series was purchased way back in 1965. A number of scripts have been written—and rejected—and various actors proposed for the lead. The film, if it ever gets off the ground, is based on the first book, "Friday the Rabbi Slept Late." There is also some TV interest. Keep your fingers crossed.

FOR SUSAN FORD

Why do you always wear blue jeans? Do your friends treat you differently now that you're the daughter of the President?—L.A., Durham, N.C.

● I wear blue jeans because I really do like them. And I still have the same friends I had before we moved to the White House. We still have the same kind of fun together.

FOR TRISH VAN DEVERE

Did you ever regret becoming an actress?—L.E., Asbury Park, N.J.

● Only once, when I was 16 and in summer stock. I had always wanted to go to Europe and that was the year my friends decided to go. I couldn't join them because of my stage commitment. My only consolation was that they didn't send me glowing postcards from exotic places. When they got back, they told me, "We had a dreadful time, and you didn't miss a thing by not coming with us."

FOR HOWARD K. SMITH, "ABC Evening News"

Were you angered by the "protesters" who interrupted your program last October?—Terry Davis, Alma, Ark.

● I was certainly angry that supporters of a fanatical terrorist movement used our news program to propagate their bloody cause. However, since one was a priest, I asked the police to release them. I suggested to the priest that his conscience should punish him for helping create a hell on earth for the children of Northern Ireland. If he had no conscience, he would look on arrest as martyrdom, which would serve no purpose but to reinforce his fanaticism.

Woody Allen

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is Woody Allen ever serious?—M.P., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● He's always serious when he's working or doing something that's important to him—like acting, writing or playing the clarinet. When he's relaxed he likes to clown around. Not too well known is that Woody Allen's second love is sports. He plays in New York's Broadway Softball League in the summer and keeps in shape during the winter by playing tennis. Actor Tony Roberts, now starring on Broadway in "Absurd Person Singular," is a good friend of Woody's. He says Woody's strongest points in tennis are his outfit and serve—both of which are designed to cripple his opponent with laughter. His usual garb on the courts is a multicolored T-shirt, oversized boxer shorts reaching to his knees, unmatched Argyle socks and dirty brown sneakers with white laces.

THE HAMILTON MINT TREASURY OF AMERICAN FOLKLORE

Actual size of each ingot is 1¾" x 1¾"

Edition is limited to only 10,000 proof finish solid silver ingot sets—when these are gone, there'll be no more!

A Strictly Limited First Edition
Series of 24 Ingots in .999 Fine Silver
Only $13.75 per Ingot

For more than two centuries we Americans have passed along in songs and stories, the fantastic feats of our folk heroes—men, bigger than life, who could "kill a bar" with bare hands, shoot the eye out of a hawk in flight or fell an oak with one stroke of a double-bitted ax.

The most famous figures of American folklore, real and fictional, are in this new fine art series. Included are: Paul Bunyan; Davey Crockett; Johnny Appleseed; Rip Van Winkle; Wyatt Earp and Casey Jones—plus the other great characters who have been loved and immortalized by Americans for 200 years by the telling and retelling of their stories.

OUR RICH FOLK HERITAGE PRESERVED IN SOLID SILVER

To commemorate our famous American Folk Heroes, The Hamilton Mint will issue a first edition series of twenty four ingots—each will be a glorious example of the engraver's art and each will contain 480 grains of .999 fine silver, the finest and purest available. All will be gleaming proof finish ingots. The 24 superbly crafted ingots will be issued at the rate of two a month for 12 months. At the end of that time subscribers will have amassed over 11,000 grains of silver—more than the average person accumulates in a lifetime.

A STRICTLY LIMITED FIRST EDITION

Only 10,000 first edition sets in proof finish pure silver will ever be minted. And, only one complete proof set will be issued to each subscriber. Once the edition limits have been reached, the dies for these ingots will be destroyed . . . thus establishing forever the rarity and integrity of this fine collection.

YOUR OWN PERSONAL SERIAL NUMBER

Each proof-finish ingot in your collection will be minted expressly for you. Each will carry your exclusive matching serial number along with the hallmark of The Hamilton Mint, an acknowledged mark of excellence for fine medallic art.

You will also receive a signed Certificate of Authenticity attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of your collection.

INVESTMENT POTENTIAL WITH GUARANTEED PRICE PROTECTION

When your application is accepted by The Hamilton Mint, your original purchase price of $13.75 for each pure silver ingot is guaranteed for the entire series—even though the price of Silver and Gold may climb in the international metals market. This guarantee is particularly significant because it comes at a time when leading economists are predicting continued increases in the price of precious metals in the years ahead.

The Hamilton Mint does reserve the right to limit the edition below the published maximums but once your application is accepted, your subscription is guaranteed.

Presentation Case Included Free!

Each subscriber to the series will receive a specially designed presentation case that combines the luxurious appearance of finely crafted wood with lucite. Sturdy construction permits you to display as well as protect your valuable collection.

A Writer, A Lawyer, A Doctor, An Athlete, An Actor:

Family Weekly Takes a New Look At the Agony of Divorce

By Helen Dorsey

Barbara Howar, Washington author who hit the best-seller lists with her "Laughing All the Way," scoffs at the usual agonies of divorce, "especially in a time when divorce is as common as it is! Why should people feel they have failed? I think people would rather say they made a mistake! Frankly, the worst thing about divorce are our archaic divorce laws. Get rid of them and we'll have much less trouble!

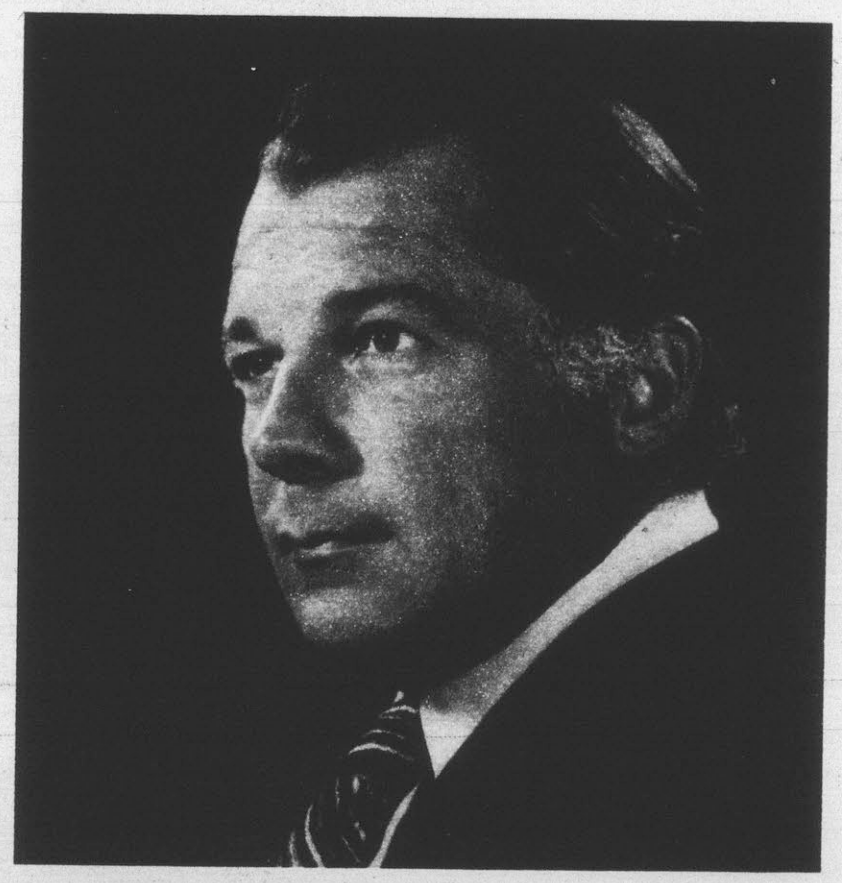

"My husband and I had an 'amicable divorce.' By the time his lawyer said, 'Are you going to let her get away with that?' and my lawyer said, 'You've got to grab this,' then it became an expensive negotiation. We could have worked it out ourselves.

"God knows I went through the worst guilt: thinking I was depriving the children of their father. But you go about your business and you do the best you can." Barbara strongly believes in Margaret Mead's theory that children can be happy and normal being raised by several people as long as they feel loved and get quantities of the right kind of attention. "These children get a lot of attention and love from their father. When they're with me, they get my undivided attention. They also get a lot of love and attention from their stepmother, in-laws, cousins and friends. It's almost like a commune. They get affection and direction from several responsible people rather than just two.

"Above all, children need to know you care about them and love them. You have only to work a little harder and not take them for granted." Barbara has lived through the agony of almost having her children taken away from her. "I value them and never take them for granted. I don't say I treat them like crown jewels! I don't take them out and polish them and tell them how great they are all the time, only when they deserve it. They are not pandered to."

Barbara says that she and her ex-husband have "no power struggle. When my daughter complains about the way her father disciplines her, I say, 'That's your daddy's way of thinking. You're going to have to deal with him on his own terms.' In fact, I think shifting children back and forth between two parents—if it's properly done—can help to prepare them for the topsy-turvy world in which they live. Their preparation is better than that of the child who comes out of the neat nest where everything is firm and happy! That's the trap of middle-America marriages. Luckily, I happen to have very resourceful children. My 12-year-old says, 'We've been divorced since I was six.' "

"The problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?' "—*F. Lee Bailey

F. Lee Bailey, the famous criminal lawyer, says he finds handling divorce cases "agonizing and frustrating. My office very rarely takes on divorce cases and only if it's a favor for someone," says Bailey. "First of all, I don't think lawyers belong anywhere near divorce cases. They don't do their clients much good. In fact, they can do them a great deal of harm.

"Lawyers will get two parties together who could probably sit down together and settle their differences and instead get them to reach a separation. In their anxiety to appear to have done a good deal for their clients, they just cause a wider breach between them. But the problem with most divorce cases is that one day you may be confronted by a client who wants every rough measure that the law permits immediately put into force. And the same client will come back the next week saying, 'Why are you picking on my husband?'

"Uncertainty is the greatest problem for people seeking a divorce. So often they don't really know what they want. They come to us not to solve a legal problem but to make a decision as to what it is they want." Bailey feels that "psychological counseling may be the answer. Everyone who is wrapped up in a divorce case wants all the friends he can get for reassurance. So often the lawyer is supposed to fulfill that role as well."

Dr. David Reuben, author of "Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Sex . . . ," says of psychotherapy: "Quite honestly, psychiatric treatment should not be the treatment or the approach or first resort in divorce or potential divorce. It's far more sensible for the average person to try to come to grips with

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER! ORDER NOW AND GET UP TO 200 PLUGS FREE!

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

By Mike Senkiw Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn—nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

These represent but 2 of thousands of happy Zoysia owners. Their experiences show that you, too, can have a lawn that stays green and beautiful thru blistering heat, water bans—even drought!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring—a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

If slopes are a problem, just plug in Amazoy. When established, it will end erosion—also plug it into hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas, etc.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Your established turf provides you with Zoysia plugs for other areas as you may desire.

WEAR RESISTANT

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cook-outs, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

Do not mistake Amazoy pre-cut plugs for sod or seed of any type of grass. There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed—such as weed, diseases, frequent mowing, burning out, etc.

Order now for Bonus Plugs and earliest delivery at planting time in your area. Orders are shipped the same day taken from soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Government; released in co-operation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS

Now's the time to order your Zoysia plugs—to get started on a lawn that will choke out crabgrass and weeds all summer long and year after year.

Plug it into an entire lawn or limited "problem areas". Plug it into poor soil, "builder's soil", clay or sandy soils—even salty, beach areas, and I guarantee it to grow!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style. Every plug 3 sq. inches.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, includng weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

FREE PATENTED STEP ON PLUGGER. SENT FREE WITH LARGER ORDERS — 600 PLUGS OR MORE.

his own problems. It's very much like the mother who rushes her child to the doctor at the first sign of a runny nose. That does not help the child develop immunity to disease or to deal realistically with his problems.

"Divorced people who take themselves off like basket cases to the psychiatrist are copping out. They are simply shifting the responsibility to somebody else. There's really no substitute for being honest with yourself."

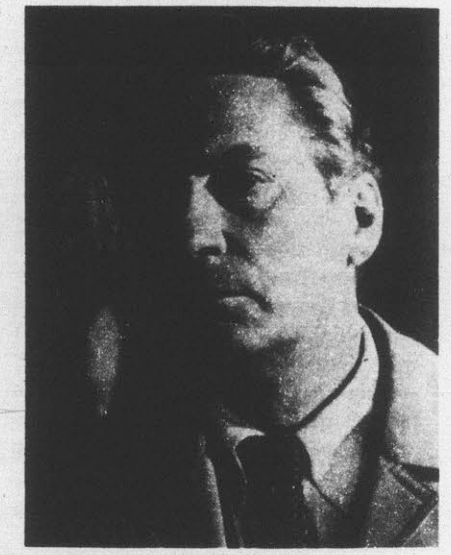

The greatest agony of the psychiatrist is "constantly being on guard against becoming emotionally involved with the patient's problems. Once you identify with the patient's agonies, you're trapped." He finds the whole concept of "no-fault divorce" is often greatly distorted. "The responsibility is easily 50-50, or maybe 60-40, but seldom goes beyond that. Seldom is there a situation where a psychiatrist can honestly say, 'I've got a poor patient who is the victim of a scheming wife, or this lady has a cruel brute for a husband.' In very subtle, very unconscious ways, everyone contributes to the mutual destruction of a marriage.

"The psychiatrist must avoid the pitfall of thinking his patient is the innocent one, because it's never that way. And for you to think that way and convince your patient to think that way (it doesn't take much coaxing) can only do a great deal of harm."

Tennis pro Bobby Riggs enjoys being a swinging bachelor, shies away from marrying again. Yet at first, he says, "I felt so terribly lonely, I was almost beside myself. I felt I had to have somebody who needed me just to prove to myself somebody still wanted me. I cut out an interesting piece from the newspaper and sent it to my son, asking him to send it to his mother. It was about the pangs and readjustments a man has to make, especially when the woman initiated the divorce, which was what happened in my case.

"The first couple of years I had several very nice lady friends. Each relationship lasted about six months. I'm over the real rough spots now. I've even come around to the place where I like the companionship of many women. All in all, I've been married for 33 years—13 years for one marriage and 20 years for the second. But, believe it or not, now I'm beginning to think I'm not the marrying kind. Maybe I was meant to be a bachelor all along!"

Peter Finch feels the degree of agony in divorce has a great deal to do with the age at which one gets the divorce. "It's much more agonizing for a woman than a man, and the older she is, the more desperate she feels. Whereas, if she's a young woman, she says, 'Well, I'll suffer, but I can make it again!'

"My greatest agony is the sense of failure. I suppose that's true with both parties. Then there's the period where you miss the habit of being with someone more than you miss the person." The twice-divorced actor says that he often wonders what happened to his marriages. "There's always a kind of self-incrimination if you're really honest, because it's always two people's fault, not just the other one."

He remains "good friends" with his first wife, Tamara, who has never remarried. But he says that "in neither case—maybe because of the sort of women I married—did I go through the terrible emotional business so many other people do. I guess in that way maybe I'm lucky."

JOHNNY RUTHERFORD:
The Race-Car Driver Who Proved Leo Durocher Wrong

This May 25, Johnny Rutherford will be shooting for his second straight Indianapolis 500 win. For years, Rutherford was an also-ran in auto racing—a man who never seemed to be able to win the big race. He never complained, however, and his cheerful good nature made him one of the most popular personalities in U.S. Auto Club racing competition. Leo Durocher's line—"Nice guys finish last"—was continually applied to Rutherford until he broke through last year to win the Indy. He quickly followed that victory by winning the Milwaukee 150 and the Pocono 500. The high regard in which he is held in his sport was vividly demonstrated at the finale of the Pocono race when crewmen for opposing drivers cheered and applauded him as he rolled into the Victory Circle. . . . The 37-year-old Rutherford learned his driving from his father, who raced motorcycles and midget cars. Rutherford's wife Betty was also a source of inspiration. . . . Unlike most of his peers in racing, Rutherford is a culture buff. He loves classical and operatic music and paints portraits as a hobby. He and his wife suffered the tragedy of losing their first three children but now have a six-year-old boy and three-year-old daughter. . . . Johnny's new wealth hasn't changed him. "I'm trying to be the same guy I always was, and I sure don't want to change," he tells you. "Now I'm suddenly in demand for autographs all over the place and to appear here, there and everywhere, and I try to oblige everybody who asks. I don't want anybody to think I've become a snob."

The Town That Saws Women In Half

Driving west on State Route 86 in Southern Michigan, you come to an ordinary-looking small town called Colon. You stop for a light. A man steps in front of your car and starts waving at you with his cane. Suddenly the cane becomes a white handkerchief. He draws the handkerchief slowly through his hand—and a white dove appears.

Is this a dream? No. What it is is Colon's annual four-day festival called Abbott's Get-Together – the greatest convention of magicians in the world.

Colon is the home of the Abbott Magic Company, producer of such props as "Sawing Through a Woman" and steel rings that mysteriously link and unlink. For 361 days, Colon is just like any other Midwestern town with a population of slightly over a thousand. But for the other four days, usually late in August, the town is an exotic festival, where magicians can swap tricks, lecture each other on all phases of magic and give performances at local school gymnasiums.

For more than 35 years, the magicians have been gathering here. Harry Blackstone, the great illusionist, came to Colon in 1925 and bought a piece of property at the edge of town. Here he worked out many of his illusions, and each year used the local Opera House as the opening for his tour.

In the cemetery outside Colon are the final resting places of Harry Blackstone, Percy Abbott, Blackstone's brother, Pete Bouton, and Ted Banks, all famous magic personalities. Each of them would have been proud that this—their own little village—has now become known as "The Magic Capital of the World."

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

City or Country: Is One Better Than the Other?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People who were raised in the country have the happiest childhood memories.
2. There are two sides to the much-argued question of whether small-town or big-city life is most conducive to psychological well-being and peace of mind.
3. Whether children do better in school in an urban or in a rural area depends to a large extent on what part of the nation they live in.
4. If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city.
5. Country life is better for people of retirement age.
6. Country people have more friends than city people.

True or False: If a country boy wants to make a name for himself, his best bet is to move to a big city. (See number 4)

ANSWERS

1. True—according to a Social Science Research study in which 100 persons ranging in age from 65 to 92 were interviewed by researchers "who encouraged them to reminisce about childhood and to assess their childhood as predominantly happy or unhappy." The findings: The people with a happy childhood tended to be those who had been reared in a rural setting. Washington University studies have also shown that happy childhood memories and a country upbringing seem to go hand in hand.

2. True. As one university study evaluating the results of leading investigations shows, "A comparison of mental illness in rural and urban areas indicates a greater incidence in areas with a high population density." And it's pointed out that individuals in big cities are exposed to more situations involving fear, anger and other stress-producing stimuli that frequently have ill effects on mental and emotional well-being. But there is also another side of the coin. An extensive study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Foundations Fund for Psychiatric Research indicates that many people find the small town's "prying eyes and clacking tongues" oppressive, and that for them the city's more tolerant and accepting attitude provides marked psychological benefits. The study says that the metropolis, for all of its failings, offers "a greater range in self-fulfilling movement than all other kinds of places."

3. True. Sociological studies show that in some areas "only 40 percent of the rural students are performing academically to capacity compared to over 50 percent of urban students . . . and that grade averages were consistently lower for the rural subjects." However, similar studies of rural and urban schools conducted in the Midwest showed that the rural students not only averaged better grades than city children but had better attitudes toward education in general.

4. False—as evidenced by sociological studies at Michigan State University over a ten-year period, which evaluated the progress of young men from rural areas. Results: "Those who migrated to small cities exhibited the highest occupational attainment, followed by migrants to large cities; migrants to other rural areas ranked third."

5. True—in a great many respects. As one team of investigators has observed, rural life offers more healthful living for older people than urban environments simply because of the fresh air, sunshine, lack of congestion and the simplicity of life. However, many rural areas do have disadvantages, such as inadequate medical facilities. And this may account for the fact that the findings of studies of some rural areas have indicated a higher incidence of ailments and afflictions in older persons than for the same age bracket among city dwellers.

6. True—at least so far as young people are concerned, as shown by Kansas State University studies, in which men and women students (both married and single) were interviewed as to the number of persons they considered to be close friends. Results: Students from rural areas averaged appreciably more friends than students from metropolitan areas. This was believed due to the fact that "they feel more an intimate part of their total home community than do urban youth."

Jobmanship

Where Your Hidden Office Enemies Come From

When you're promoted to a new position or move on to a new company, you may be astonished to discover you have some ready-made enemies. The better you understand what produces such behavior, the more easily you can locate your secret opponents, anticipate their actions and cope. In his American Management Associations' books on business life, Elton T. Reeves points out that ambush hatreds are usually caused by: 1) Jealousy. Your enemy would shoot at anyone holding your job. He, himself, isn't qualified to do the work, yet he'd like to be in your position. Fortunately, this type of jealousy usually leads the attacker into indiscriminate criticism that is clearly untrue. 2) Revenge. This kind of enemy is qualified for your job but was unable to obtain it. By discrediting you, he hopes to push you out and make another try for it. 3) Pride. There's the possibility that someone who has a say voted against your getting the job. Now his pride is involved and he's determined to see you fail so that his original judgment will be vindicated. Add to Reeves' list: 4) That's not the way I did it. Your work style is different from that of someone who once held your job or a similar one. Therefore, you must be "wrong" and "incompetent." 5) You're not going to show me up. You're obviously competent and a threat to the status quo. How to handle these enemies: Where you can, turn your enemy into an ally by proving to him that your success will benefit his job future. The more smoothly you can disarm your opponent, the better. Most bosses don't value the employee who churns up the work scene as the center of a personality battle.

Toddlers and Psychotherapy: What's Being Done–And Why

By Alan D. Haas

The records show that Lee Harvey Oswald exhibited signs of emotional disturbance at age two and a half, frequently running away from the homes of a baby-sitter and an aunt. Would the assassination of President Kennedy have taken place if Oswald had been sent to a psychiatrist as a child? "No one can say for sure," asserts Dr. Gilbert Kliman, director of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry at White Plains, N.Y. "But Oswald was a child who should have been given preventive help."

Psychic wounds, Freud said, most often begin in childhood. Psychiatrists and psychotherapists still believe this. Yet, oddly enough, mental-health professionals have been reluctant to treat young children who have been subjected to traumatic events and bad environments. Perhaps part of the blame also goes to parents who excuse their children's unstable behavior by saying things like: "Oh, it's a phase Johnny's going through. He'll outgrow it."

But what if Johnny doesn't outgrow it–or worse, if his neuroses outgrow Johnny and overwhelm him? More and more therapists are coming to believe that treating tots, even at age three, may prevent years of suffering later. "There is no sure way to immunize against mental illness," says Dr. Kliman, "but at least some of the risks are preventable through early psychotherapy."

Certain experiences in the life of any small child are a high risk to his mental health. High on the danger list, says Dr. Kliman, are these:

- The death of a parent
- Divorce
- Abandonment
- Alcoholic or drug-addicted fathers or mothers
- Any kind of severe mental, physical or even sexual abuse

Here are the symptoms Dr. Kliman looks for:

- Repeated nightmares
- Bad eating habits
- Overly aggressive traits
- Failure to develop normal social or language patterns

Frederic Lewis

"Children cannot tolerate painful emotions very long or well without reliable support," Dr. Kliman says. "But therapy can be more successful with young children. Their problems are lesser and the children offer less resistance to treatment."

The Center for Preventive Psychiatry sends therapists into surrounding communities to tell parents and teachers how to recognize potentially troublesome behavior in the very young, and it seeks out children who manifest such disturbances. In some cases, parents also receive treatment at the center. One father and his three children—ages three, seven and ten—received several months of therapy to help them adjust to the fact that the mother was dying of cancer. "As a result," Dr. Kliman says, "they learned there was no need to pretend that everything was fine. The mother's death, after that, did not come as so much of a shock."

One of the most alarming responses to tragedy, according to the doctor, is no response at all. "If a child is absolutely unflapped by the death of a parent," he says, "it means a pathologically powerful defensive reaction has been set in motion."

One child who is being treated at the Center for Preventive Psychiatry is four-year-old Jimmy, a class clown who incited other children to beat him up and provoked his teachers. He would sometimes run into the street, dangerously near automobiles, although he was thought by his family not to know that his mother had killed herself with an automobile. In therapy, he revealed intense rage at his mother for dying and depriving him of the good, loving care she had given him. Following much treatment he can now play and learn in a regular school.

Dr. Kliman is particularly interested in orphaned children. Youngsters who lose one or both parents at any early age run a risk several times greater than normal of suffering some form of mental depression as adults. He cites the case of Richard, eight, whose father had died and whose brother had married. Richard's sister had left for college, and his mother took a job that required some travel. All this loss and separation left the lad overwhelmed, and it was not surprising he was failing in school, was immature for his age, restless—and suffered many related symptoms.

One of the most alarming responses to tragedy is no response at all. If a child is absolutely unflapped by the death of a parent, it means a powerful defensive reaction has been set in motion.

"The personality is very vulnerable at an early age," says Dr. Kliman. He believes that too many parents as well as mental-health professionals have tended to gloss over this vulnerability and to ignore antisocial symptoms. When the antisocial behavior persists, Dr. Kliman feels, and normal adjustments are impeded, then treatment is indicated. "Nevertheless," he says, "we still lack proof that mental illness can be prevented."

The work of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry may help gather some of that missing evidence. One thing seems clear already: A lot of preschool children who need help aren't getting it. The country needs more professionals like Dr. Kliman.

HERE'S WINSTON
The mystery dog

According to local folklore, the reason that Winston, a shy Labrador, lives at this particular crossroad in England is because he lost his master in a car crash at the same spot three years ago. Since then, he has become something of a mythological mascot for the local townspeople. Sometimes he trots off to the local hospital, wanders around the grounds, then returns to the crossroad. People in the neighborhood have been puzzled for years. Nobody knows who built him a fiber-glass doghouse (just out of sight, to the left). For that matter, nobody knows why he answers to the name Winston. "We see no reason to move him on," says a local policeman. "He's not a danger to traffic. I see the dog a lot and he's got more road sense than most humans."

QUOTE: "Jacob Franks, the father of little Bobby Franks, who was brutally murdered by Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb in Chicago, carried his bitterness against his son's murderers to the grave. His will set aside money for a lawyer to protest, if ever the murderers came up for parole. Said the Franks will: 'A lenient governor, a shrewd lawyer—there are many ways they could be put at liberty.' But Loeb was murdered in prison by another inmate. Leopold, who was always considered to have been a tool in Loeb's hands, became a model prisoner, and became such an expert on the handling and reading of X rays he was considered invaluable by the prison, and was much respected. Even Jacob Franks probably would not have objected when Leopold was finally released from prison, after 30-odd years, and moved to Puerto Rico, where he died." From "Wills: A Dead Giveaway," by Millie Considine and Ruth Pool (Doubleday, $6.95). UNQUOTE.

BOB BARKER
His favorite "consequence"

Bob Barker, who makes a living putting people through funny paces, recalls with relish his favorite happening on the "Truth or Consequences" show: "Once we had it fixed so a contestant had to park a convertible in an area where he'd touch the bumper of a small car ahead of him. That car, which was small enough to slip completely under the rear chute of a cement truck in front of it, triggered the cement to spill down into the open car. The man, of course, got out, but you can imagine his reaction! But even funnier, to me, was the actor we hired to play the owner of the car the man was parking. He came out and ad-libbed, 'What are you going to do? My car is full of cement and my lunch is in there!'"

We were giving ourselves a family treat by eating in a rather ritzy restaurant. As we sat waiting for our order, I was quite proud of how nicely our three children were behaving. Then our meal arrived and five-year-old Debbi's eyes fairly popped at seeing all the goodies. "Better than anything," she cried, very loudly, "I like eating in this rest room!" —Margaret Shauers
