

U.S. Abandons Cambodia; Emergency Aid Ordered

By RICHARD E. LERNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying he evacuated Americans from Cambodia "with a heavy heart," President Ford Saturday ordered U.S. aircraft to parachute food, ammunition and medicine into besieged Phnom Penh in a last-ditch effort to help an abandoned ally.

Ford, apparently surprised and moved by the decision of Cambodia's leaders to shun evacuation and stay at their posts, also renewed his request that Congress give Cambodia emergency military aid.

Pentagon spokesmen said the mercy airdrops could not begin before daylight Sunday in Cambodia at the earliest. Because Cambodia is 12 hours ahead of American time, that meant the operation might start by late Saturday or early Sunday EDT.

"The details are still being worked out," a spokesman said Saturday afternoon.

When the "go" signal is given, Air Force C130 cargo planes —flown by civilian charter airline crews —will roar toward Phnom Penh and the encircling anti-aircraft guns of Communist-backed rebel forces.

Ford's order to parachute supplies into Phnom Penh represented a major shift from previous Cambodian supply strategy and underscored the besieged nature of the city.

An airlift of supplies to Phnom Penh was halted Friday because rebel gunners had made it too dangerous for planes to land at the city's airfield.

"If the city is endangered to the extent that we have to evacuate our embassy, you're sure as hell not going to ask aircraft to land at an airport which may or may not be in the hands of the enemy," a Pentagon spokesman said.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen disclosed plans for resuming the airlift in the form of parachute drops during a briefing for reporters Saturday, hours after the last Americans had been airlifted out of Phnom Penh under U.S. Marine guard.

Nessen said details of the airdrop would have to come from the Pentagon.

The Pentagon spokesman said he had few precise details on the size or scope of the airdrop because the regular command post for the mercy flights —the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh —was no longer functioning and the operation was still being organized, apparently at another U.S. command post in Southeast Asia.

He said the flights would be "strictly a daylight operation" and stressed that "there will not be any American military personnel involved."

The spokesman said although military transport planes were involved they would be flown by the same civilian charter airline crews that had been making the earlier flights to Phnom Penh's airfield from South Vietnam and Thailand.

DC8 aircraft used in the earlier airlift can not be used for the airdrop, the spokesman said, because they do not have parachute drop capability. He said all the new flights would be made by Air Force C130s flown by civilians out of Thailand.

"The main cargo, I expect, will be rice, ammunition and medical supplies," he said.

Asked whether any weapons might be included in the drop, he said, "I doubt it."

At the White House, Nessen said Cambodia needs "primarily food and ammunition" and there are enough authorized U.S. funds left to provide these supplies for perhaps two more weeks.

On that subject, he renewed Ford's request for emergency military aid to Cambodia and said the President had never withdrawn it, despite widespread public impression to the contrary.

Long-range 85mm artillery also struck Xuan Loc, 38 miles northeast of Saigon on Highway 1, but the city remained in government hands. Saigon television showed films of heavy street fighting with commentators saying they were taken Saturday and that the Communists later were driven out.

Xuan Loc is considered a major test of the South Vietnamese military's ability to survive after the disastrous defeats sustained last month when the Communists overran the northern and central regions of the country and began driving toward Saigon.

Field officers said a 3,000-man brigade of elite paratroopers was trapped Saturday morning three miles south of Xuan Loc in a French-owned rubber plantation which had been the major employer in Long Khanh province.

The paratroopers were air-dropped behind enemy lines Friday stripping Saigon of half its defensive troops, in a desperate move to stop the Communist drive on the capital.

A second government unit was stalled by heavy fire nine miles east of Xuan Loc and unable to fight its way through entrenched Communist forces, field reports said. The Russian-made 85mm artillery pounding Xuan Loc itself was of the type used in the 1954 defeat of the French at Dien Bien Phu.

Southwest of Saigon, Communist troops Saturday overran the main training base of the government's 9th division across the Bassac River from Can Tho, a city of 170,000, in the vital Mekong Delta, on whose rice supplies Saigon largely depends.

Loss of the Cai Von training center put Can Tho, South Vietnam's seventh largest city, within range of Communist mortar fire.

Col. Vo Dong Giang, deputy leader of the Viet Cong military delegation in Saigon, told his weekly news conference Saturday he could not rule out a direct Communist attack on the capital.

"I would like to reiterate that

VC Minister Offers Aid
DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — The Viet Cong's foreign minister, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, says her government would help evacuate American personnel from South Vietnam if asked.

She told a reporter in an interview Friday that there was no need for American warships and Marines to stand off the Vietnam coast to remove Americans.

She said: "If the United States wants to bring the 25,000 American military advisers out of Vietnam then the U.S. need only discuss it with us and then we shall be willing to help them do so."

Korean Students Arrested
SEOUL (UPI) — South Korean police arrested 100 high school students Saturday in the latest outbreak of a wave of anti-government demonstrations.

A total of 117 college youths have been sentenced to five to 15 days in jail in summary trials in recent days. Another 62 students have been expelled from school or suspended.

Eight universities and 12 colleges have been closed.

FDR 30th Death Anniversary
HYDE PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Wreaths of flowers quietly marked the 30th anniversary Saturday of the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who overcame polio to hold the U.S. presidency longer than any other man in the nation's history.

Members of the two federal agencies which now operate the estate placed wreaths at the graves of the 32nd President and his wife, Eleanor. They are buried in the family rose garden.

To Make Acquittal Motion
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney Edward Bennett Williams will attempt this week to show that former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally Jr.'s chief accuser, Jake Jacobsen, is a liar, embezzler, and ingrate.

The famed defense lawyer will make a routine motion for a directed verdict of acquittal at Connally's bribery trial in U.S. District Court Monday, and begin his defense if it is refused as expected.

Haylift Too Late
HELENA, Mont. (AP) — An emergency haylift to snow-stranded cattle in north-central Montana may have come too late for as many as 33,000 newborn calves trapped by a raging three-day blizzard.

"There's no doubt there's going to be heavy losses," said Leo Kolstad, regional chairman of U.S. Department of Agriculture's emergency board.

To Attend Funeral
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford named Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller Saturday to head a nine-member U.S. delegation to the funeral of Chiang Kai-shek in Taiwan, Republic of China.

Ingenuity With Stamps
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Six persons have been charged with fraud and six others were being sought in an investigation of alleged use of federal food stamps to buy narcotics and pay prostitutes for their services, authorities said Saturday.

The office of State Attorney T. Edward Austin said $5,200 worth of food stamps were used improperly and at least 30 law violations were involved.

Construction Nude Wins
WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI) — This city awarded the grand prize of $1,000 to Glen Eden of Atlanta, Ga., for his pen and ink portrait of a wrestler-size woman construction worker at Winter Park's sidewalk art fair, but it won't follow the usual practice of displaying the winning work of art in the city hall.

The subject of the Eden portrait was nude and Mayor James Driver said, "It is basically not the kind of picture you would want to hang in city hall or I would hang in my living room."

Red Cross Appeal Made For Relief To SE Asia

The Pitt County Red Cross chapter has joined the American Red Cross in issuing an urgent appeal for contributions to the International Red Cross relief operation in Southeast Asia.

ARC president George M. Elsey commented, "The tragic developments in South Vietnam and Cambodia, including the extensive movement of civilian populations causing immense suffering to an estimated eight million persons, resulted in the IRC increasing its original appeal to national Red Cross societies and governments from $5 million to $35 million."

The American Red Cross, he noted, sent $100,000 to the IRC late last week as an emergency response, but it is now clear that much more is needed to help support refugee operations in

Fighting Continues In Xuan Loc City

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist troops pinned down two government relief forces outside the embattled province capital of Xuan Loc Saturday and street fighting raged inside the city on Saigon's defense perimeter.

Questions Raised

By WARREN L. NELSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — America could find itself fighting again in Indochina—possibly against both the communists and the South Vietnamese—if President Ford sends U.S. troops to evacuate Saigon after the city starts to fall, U.S. officials said Saturday.

That concern appeared chief among those raised by Ford's request to Congress for absolute power to use U.S. military forces in an evacuation, by his delay in ordering Americans out of Saigon and by his plan to evacuate Vietnamese as well as U.S. citizens.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield indicated in an interview the question of using U.S. military personnel in future Southeast Asian evacuations will be a major topic when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee meets Monday.

Pentagon officials said a last minute exodus of thousands from Saigon could go far less smoothly than the evacuation of Phnom Penh Saturday—carried out by U.S. troops without prior Congressional approval —which removed 82 Americans, 159 Cambodians, and 35 citizens of other nations.

"The Phnom Penh evacuation was child's play compared to what we could face in Saigon," one defense official said.

Community Ambassadors Named

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor
For one or two lucky juniors at Rose High School each year, spring means the excitement of receiving news about being chosen a community ambassador to represent Greenville in a foreign country.

This year, the two fortunate candidates are both girls—Kathryn Haynes and Rosalyn Taylor. Kathryn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Haynes, and is going to be Greenville's ambassador to Austria. Rosalyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Taylor, will be representing Greenville in Switzerland. Both girls expressed delight in being selected to make the summer trips to the two small mountainous European countries. They will leave in early June.

"I had first thought about going to Spain," Rosalyn said, "but I was a little afraid that my Spanish was not quite up to par, so I decided on Switzerland instead."

"Austria has always appealed to me," Kathryn said, "So I'm really excited about the thought of being there this summer."

Locally, sponsorship of students as community ambassadors is through the United Christian Youth Movement (UCYM), a non-denominational group involving different churches in Greenville. Clay Shugart is currently president of UCYM.

Arrangements for students to be placed in a foreign home during their ambassadorship is handled through Experiment in International Living, with headquarters in Brattleboro, Vermont.

the People's Revolutionary Committee of the Saigon-Gia Dinh (province) area has issued an appeal for the people to launch uprisings," Giang told about 120 reporters and cameramen jammed into a conference room at the Viet Cong compound on Tan Son Nhut Air Base.

Officials charged with the possible evacuation of Americans from Saigon were working Saturday with a helicopter codenamed "Papa Whiskey" in setting up landing zones around the capital. The U.S. Embassy, however, maintained that no evacuation of the 5,500 Americans here was in the works.

Choctawhatchee River Floods The Florida Panhandle Area

BONIFAY, Fla. (UPI) — The rain-bloated Choctawhatchee River, on its worst rampage since 1929, swept through two towns Saturday, swelled to two miles wide and left 1,500 Florida Panhandle residents homeless.

The rampaging river reached 18 feet deep and kept rising toward what officials estimated will be a crest sometime Sunday of 22 feet, three feet over the record crest set by the flood of 1929. Flood stage on the river is 12 feet.

The river, normally 100 yards wide, swept over a two-mile wide swath along the border between Washington and Holmes Counties Saturday night, after sparing the levee at nearby Geneva, Ala.

Mrs. Lois Gandy, a Holmes County Civil Defense volunteer, said the flood along the Choctawhatchee, fed by a three-day, 17-inch rain in Alabama, could be the worst ever in the two counties.

Mrs. Gandy said up to 1,200 persons were removed from rural homes in the towns of Caryville and Westville.

Coordinator Named For Sanford 76 Campaign

DURHAM, N. C. (UPI) — Former Vermont Gov. Philip Hoff Saturday was named national coordinator of the planned campaign by Duke University President Terry Sanford for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination.

Sanford, a former North Carolina governor and chairman of the Democratic National Charter Commission, said in announcing Hoff's position "we are putting this campaign together slowly, precisely because we are looking for his kind of leadership."

Sanford has not formally announced as a candidate for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination but has made no secret of the fact that he plans to do so. He unsuccessfully sought the nomination in 1972.

"No one associated with this effort is under any illusion about the difficulty of a national campaign," Sanford said in his statement Saturday. "I've been out of politics too long to start with a broad political base."

"But politics, as conducted over the past decade, are not the kind of credentials that would help anyway," he said.

Jockeys Ridge Dunes Purchased By State

RALEIGH (AP)—Jockeys Ridge, the tallest sand dunes on the East Coast, was saved from commercial development Friday when the North Carolina Council of State decided to buy nearly 200 acres there.

The price for the Outer Banks land was set at $1.2 million.

The action clears the way for a state park. The Jockeys Ridge twin dunes are 140 feet tall.

In February the council rejected a plan to buy the land because it would require condemnation of about 60 acres. Since then, a plan was worked out so that the dunes could be purchased without condemnation.

In addition to the new purchase, another 60 acres will be part of the park. The Nature Conservancy, an environmental group in Washington, bought that land for $420,000 and will donate it to the state.

A citizens group is trying to raise $500,000 to buy another 100 acres for the park. A spokesman for the People to Preserve Jockeys Ridge said that group hopes to have the money in another two months. The group already has options on the land.

NRC Seeks Earthquake Studies 329 War Orphans Arrive In L.A.

At Southport Nuclear Site

WASHINGTON (AP)—Staff geologists for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) have recommended that further studies be conducted at Carolina Power and Light's Southport nuclear power plant to determine whether the plant is sitting atop a potential earthquake.

The NRC staff ordered CP&L to state why the studies shouldn't be carried out. The utility has 30 days to respond and it has the right to request a hearing on the matter. A CP&L spokesman said the company hadn't decided whether it will ask for a hearing.

Scientists have predicted that a nuclear power plant damaged by an earthquake could release radioactive gases that could kill hundreds of thousands of persons.

A petition calling for the studies was filed with the commission in February by three North Carolina geologists and several environmental groups. Though CP&L's geologists have disputed the claim, the scientists said there is evidence that an earthquake could occur within 10 years.

After reading the report from the North Carolina scientists, NRC geologists agreed that further studies should be required. The NRC geologists said CP&L should be ordered to set up monitoring equipment in the area to determine whether earthquake activity is increasing.

An NRC spokesman said such monitoring equipment would have to be on the site for at least two years and would be paid for by CP&L.

The Southport plant has two nuclear units, each capable of delivering 821 megawatts of electricity. The first unit was licensed for operation last December and now is in a startup testing program. The second unit is scheduled to begin operation in September.

The site is about 20 miles south of Wilmington, N.C., on the Cape Fear River.

The geologists who sounded the alarm in February were David Stewart, director of the geophysics laboratory at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; S. Duncan Heron, chairman of the Geology Department at Duke University; and David E. Dunn, an earthquake prediction expert from UNC.

The scientists said an earthquake at Southport could be as strong as the earthquake that nearly destroyed Charleston, S.C., 89 years ago.

A strong earthquake at a nuclear power plant could rupture the reactors and spread deadly radioactive material along the Eastern Seaboard, they said. Wind currents would determine how far the poison is spread, they said.

As evidence of a possible earthquake buildup, the scientists cited: an unusual uplift of the ground in the area over the last 20 years; higher temperatures of ground water from deep wells; and increased salt water pressure on the ground water.

An NRC spokesman said one activity that would be measured is "microearthquakes" that cannot be detected except by sensitive measuring equipment.

Joining the scientists in asking for further studies were the Conservation Council of North Carolina, the League of Women Voters of North Carolina and the Southeastern Confederation for Safe Power.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A World Airways 747 jet jammed with 329 Vietnamese and Cambodian war orphans, one dead and many ill, arrived at Los Angeles International Airport Saturday in the first of several weekend Operation Babylift flights.

Thirty one of the orphans, suffering from illnesses including chicken pox, measles, pneumonia and dehydration, were rushed to eight local hospitals. Six of the more seriously ill youngsters, including three in critical condition, were flown by helicopter to County-USC Medical Center.

Some of the children were transferred to another jet for a flight to Fort Benning, Ga., and another group of 22 awaited a flight to Norway as soon as medical authorities gave them clearance.

A 3-month-old boy died aboard the plane on its 12½ hour flight from Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines.

The orphan's death, attributed to shock, brought to three the number of Vietnamese children who have died since President Ford's Operation Babylift began.

One child, an orphan airlifted from Saigon earlier this week, died at Clark Thursday afternoon, and another fatality was reported in San Francisco where a 2-month-old baby known only as Dorothea D-18, died from an infection which spread from her ear throughout her body.

Several Babylift flights had been scheduled to arrive at Los Angeles International Airport during the weekend, but an airport spokesman said all others, mostly containing Vietnamese adult refugees, would land at Travis Air Force Base.

A large medical team of U.S. Navy and Los Angeles County doctors and nurses was on hand as the huge red and white jumbo jet opened its doors Saturday morning to release a pathetic little army of war victims.

County emergency personnel in light blue jump suits and reflecting yellow markers strapped 30 of the seriously ill children in bassinets and onto stretchers before ambulances escorted them off the field.

Others well enough to travel and not aboard the Georgia flight were taken to the Long Beach Naval Support Station which had been turned into a huge nursery.

Thirty of the youngsters were Cambodian orphans, who were airlifted by the U.S. Air Force from Phnom Penh to Clark.

The week-long airlift has now brought in 846 Vietnamese and Cambodian orphans and almost 800 civilian and military refugees, according to a Clark Air Force spokesman.

Millhand Charged In Murder Of 9 Children

BEULAH, Ala. (UPI) — A 27-year-old textile millhand was charged with murder and arson Saturday for allegedly setting a house fire which claimed the lives of nine children—five of them his own.

The suspect was identified as Sylvester Brown Jr., who was taken into custody at the home of his mother in neighboring Chambers County. He was held without bond at the Lee County Jail in nearby Opelika.

The nine victims, including a babysitter, died Friday night when fire swept a five-room frame farm house belonging to Emma Lee Patterson, the Brown children's grandmother. Ages of the victims ranged from 5 months to 14 years.

"We suspect gasoline was used," said Lee County Sheriff James C. Pearson. He said, however, that investigators were still trying to determine exactly how the fire started.

"It was a very horrible thing," Pearson said. "It appears as if they were trapped and couldn't get out. It was a very disastrous thing."

The babysitter, Elizabeth Dunn, 14, and six of the children were found in a corner of the dining room, according to Pearson.

"She (Miss Dunn) was clutching the 5-month-old in her arms," he said.

Another of the victims was found near a door, he said, and another in a bed.

Pearson refused to explain why Brown was arrested, but said he had been told of domestic problems in the Brown family.

He said Brown had been at a tavern about 10 miles from his mother-in-law's home shortly before the fire.

"I'm not going into the details of why we arrested him until the trial is over," Pearson said.

In addition to Brown's five children and the babysitter, three youngsters from two other families died in the fire.

Pearson identified the Brown children as Donna Jean, 6 months, Anita, 4, Wanda Jean, 2, Richard Andrew, 5, and Vicky Ann, 7. He said the other victims were Evangeline Core, 5, and her sister, Ella Jean, 3, both of Opelika, and Virginia Thomas, 5 months, also of Opelika. Opelika is about 20 miles southwest of Beulah and about 50 miles east of Montgomery.

Mrs. Patterson "normally keeps the Brown children on weekends," Pearson said. The other two families also had apparently dropped their children off there, he said.

Pearson said he did not know where Mrs. Essie Brown and the other parents were during the fire. "They all went different places," he said.

The babysitter was at the home because Mrs. Patterson had gone to a restaurant. Pearson said Mrs. Patterson left home about 20 minutes before the fire was discovered by sheriff's Lt. Ronnie Watkins during a routine patrol.

"Walk For Humanity" Date Set Local Veterans Give Opinions On Current Vietnam Crisis

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

In a little less than two weeks from today—on Saturday, April 26, Greenville people will have a chance for the fourth consecutive year to Walk For Humanity.

Mike Hamer, one of several coordinators of the 1975 Walk project, talked about past achievements and the hope for a successful walk this year.

"The Walk for Humanity events of the past three years have by any measure been successful," Mike said. "More than $10,000 has been raised in those three years, which I think is something for people to be proud of."

Mike, head of the Volunteer Greenville program, noted that the walk was at one time called Walk for Development.

"One thing I feel sure is going to appeal to everyone, both those who sponsor and those who walk," Mike pointed out, "is that this year for the first time every penny collected is going directly to local and international charities. There's no money going to overhead or administrative costs at any level. That should make people feel good."

Local recipients in the past three years have included the Meadowbrook Day Care Center, the Boys' Club and seed money to get VISTA established. In the foreign field, money was allocated to Nigeria and Vietnam.

"This year," Mike said, "local groups to receive assistance from funds raised will be the Boys' Club Summer Day Camp, Meadowbrook Day Care Center, Volunteer Greenville, and 'The Paper', a local information publication."

Walk For Humanity is sponsored locally by the Baptist Student Union (BSU). "The Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board will administer the funds going to overseas charities," Mike said. For 1975, foreign assistance is being tabbed for medical supplies, food and shelter relief in Bangladesh and Vietnam. "With the situation what it is now in Vietnam, I'm not sure how that will be handled," Mike remarked, "but I think it's safe to say every effort will be made to see that the money is put to the best cause where so much help will be needed."

Of proceeds realized locally, 70 per cent will go to local recipients, and the other 30 per cent will go to foreign needs.

"Let me emphasize this is an entire community affair," Mike said, "not just something for ECU and high school students to get involved in. It's really very simple. All that anybody, young or old, wanting to do their share has to do is to volunteer and to find a sponsor.

"Anybody can be a sponsor, a friend, your family, church, club or a business firm. Any amount, per mile from one penny on up is acceptable. Every bit helps."

The basic rules for taking part as outlined by Mike are:

1. Decide to walk, get a sponsor.
2. Sponsors—pledge money to support a walker.
3. Walkers pick up a sponsor card without delay. These are now available at the Baptist Student Union building on East Tenth St.
4. If you can't walk, help by donating food for use by walkers at the rest stops, or volunteer to man a rest stop check point.

Mike said that within a few days the entire route and the location of rest stops-check points would be announced.

"Right now we're anxious that those who might consider being a volunteer walker go ahead and get a sponsor or sponsors lined up," he added.

Among others beside Mike working on the planning and coordinating phase of Walk For Humanity 1975 are Rev. Bob Clyde, campus chaplain and Baptist Student Union Director; Chet Emerson, Executive Director of the Boys' Club; Barbara Turner and Mark Carpenter at BSU; Rick Cagan, VISTA director; and Tony Grey of the Optional School program.

Persons wanting more information are asked to call the Baptist Student Center, 752-4646, or to contact Mike at 758-2030.

Israel Said Ready To Produce Its Own Arms

By United Press International

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres said Saturday Israel is ready to produce as much as 50 per cent of its own arms if the United States decides to cut back military aid.

"Should there be a drought in our purchasing relations, this would oblige us to step up production at home, to work harder, to save every piece of equipment in our possession and keep Israel's ammunition boxes filled," Peres said in an interview with Israel's Armed Forces Radio.

He said Israel now manufactures 30 per cent of its arms and "perhaps we could reach 40 per cent or 50 per cent."

In Egypt, diplomatic moves continued for reconvening the Geneva Middle East peace conference.

The Egyptian and Yugoslav foreign ministers, Ismail Fahmi and Miloc Minic, met Saturday in Cairo to discuss ways of promoting a peace settlement, government sources said.

Egypt asked for a renewal of the Geneva Middle East peace conference following the failure of bilateral talks with Israel last month mediated by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Egyptian government sources said Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi will visit the Soviet Union April 19 for more talks on steps to reconvene the Geneva conference.

In Beirut, Hanna Bathiche, deputy commander of the Syrian-backed As Saïqah guerrilla group, said Saturday Syria will not extend the mandate of the United Nations peacekeeping force on the Golan Heights when it expires at the end of May.

In an interview with the French-language newspaper L'Orient Le Jour, Bathiche said Syria will take a number of "very important initiatives" within the next few days regarding Syrian-Palestinian relations. This presumably referred to Syrian President Hafez Assad's proposal to establish a unified Syrian-Palestinian command.

The Palestinian guerrilla news agency Wafa said Saturday a number of Jordanian army units made an abortive attempt recently to overthrow the regime of King Hussein.

The anti-Jordanian agency said Hussein reacted by ordering the arrest of an unknown number of army officers and soldiers.

No official confirmation or denial of the report was immediately available in Amman.

David Walls, another veteran of Vietnam, feels the U.S. should have stayed in Vietnam. "We are more or less giving it to the communists. Since we put our foot in it we should have stayed," Walls said.

Air Force veteran William Turner said air support is what is needed in Vietnam. "I know what it can do," Turner said, "I wouldn't send in troops, though."

Joe Laney served in Vietnam as a Marine battalion commander in 1966. He feels the U.S. is "renegging on our commitment to the South Vietnamese." Laney likens his opinions to those of Sen. Barry Goldwater. "There is a limit to how far you can go," Laney said, "Thieu has lost confidence, but five presidents have pledged support. We should honor our commitments. I hate to see the lost lives and a ten year commitment go down the drain."

Harry Hagerty did not serve in Vietnam, but he has two sons who did. "The entire philosophy of a no-win war is sickening, discouraging and demoralizing," Hagerty said. The war "deteriorated" from the first day, according to Hagerty, but the U.S. still has a humanitarian responsibility there.

Paul Hustek said "It's sad we have wasted our time." He feels too many people died for a vain cause. "Since we're out, we should stay out." No more U.S. money should be given for military causes, just humanitarian causes, according to Hustek.

Lonnie Miller, who spent one and a half years in Vietnam, feels the current situation there is a result of allowing the North Vietnamese to violate the Paris peace accords. The South Vietnamese should be given their land back, Miller said. "Thieu ought to be replaced," Miller said. The U.S. shouldn't have the responsibility of donating the money to South Vietnam, according to Miller, but the orphans should be taken care of. He added that the Paris peace accords are "nothing more than a worthless piece of paper."

Bomb Explodes In Belfast Bar

BELFAST (UPI) — A bomb exploded without warning Saturday night in a crowded pub in a Roman Catholic district of East Belfast, killing at least four persons.

"It is difficult to say how many have been killed," a police spokesman said. "The place is just a bloody mess, and God knows how many are trapped in the rubble."

A spokesman for the Royal Victoria hospital said at least four persons died instantly in the blast.

"It is one of the worst incidents I have seen," an Army officer said. "Many of the casualties had arms and legs blown off."

More than 40 persons were rushed to hospitals, many of them seriously injured, the spokesman said. "The pub was crowded with more than 50 persons inside. There was no warning."

A wall collapsed on rescue workers searching for trapped victims.

The bomb was left in a doorway of the Strand bar, a pub in a Roman Catholic enclave in the predominantly Protestant East Belfast.

Those near the entrance got the full blast of the bomb, and it brought down two walls on customers inside.

Earlier in the day, a member of the Irish Republican Army's official wing was shot to death by a gunman in a passing car.

New Restaurant Opens In Greenville On Tuesday

Sambo's, Greenville's newest restaurant, will open for business on E. Tenth Street on Tuesday at 6 a.m.

Ted Fowler, district manager for Sambo's Restaurants, said that the 6 a.m. opening will launch a 24-hours per day, seven days a week operating schedule for the new facility.

Fowler said that Mayor S. Eugene West is expected to take part in ribbon cutting ceremonies scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday.

Sambo's of Greenville, one of five restaurants in the famous chain located in North Carolina, will offer both a coffee shop and dining area for customers who will choose from a 108-item menu, Fowler explained.

He said that the new facility has seating for approximately 140 customers. Sambo's also features waitress service, the official said.

According to Fowler, Sambo's will offer several customer features, including a Birthday Club for children, an Early Diners Club for senior citizens involving a discount on menu items, and a "training table" to accommodate athletic teams visiting Greenville.

Construction of the new restaurant was handled by Mel-Jack Construction Co. of Oklahoma City, Okla. Parking has been provided for approximately 80 cars, it was noted.

Manager of Sambo's here will be Keith E. Wells, a native of Oklahoma who recently joined the company.

Sambo's Restaurants, Fowler said, is a chain of over 500 eating facilities located in 44 states. The company was started in 1957 by Sam Battistone and Newell Bohnett who opened their first restaurant in Santa Barbara, Calif. Corporate offices are located in Santa Barbara. Wayne G. Kees serves as president of the corporation.

Restaurants in the chain are located in Wilson, Burlington, Greensboro and Charlotte, the district manager added, and seven more are under construction in the state.

Will An Act Of Love Be A Kiss Of Death?

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Pilot fought back tears as he explained how his love for his Vietnamese wife may mean death for her family.

"It seems like an act of love brought a kiss of death," he said.

"No matter how much I love my wife, if I thought her family would be hurt because I married her, we wouldn't have gotten married."

Pilot, a former U.S. soldier in Vietnam, was expressing concern Friday about Communist reprisals against the families of South Vietnamese women who married American servicemen.

As he spoke about his in-laws, tears welled in his eyes and he told the freshman congressmen listening to him that Vietnam may be just a matter of American policy to the government, but "it's a very emotional and personal tragedy to us."

At one point last week we thought it already was too late and that "we should proceed down to the church and arrange a mass funeral for our relatives," he said.

Pilot of Maywood, Ill., Brand Kahler of Lake Villa, Ill., and John Hollister of Oak Park, Ill., all married Vietnamese women, came to Washington asking for help to save their in-laws before Communist forces take over all of South Vietnam.

They spoke of recrimination and possible death lists because the women married Americans.

Pilot, once in Army counter-intelligence, said, "I saw a death list in Hue, the bodies, children, women in ditches."

"I'm here because my wife is crying. My wife asked me 'will I ever see my family again,'" Hollister said. "We're talking primarily about the younger brothers and sisters of our wives."

The three men appeared at a meeting called by freshmen Democrats to discuss President Ford's Vietnam requests. They said there may be as many as 50,000 Vietnamese brides in this country and some 250,000 of their relatives in danger back home because of the marriages.

They told the freshmen they were having trouble getting people to listen to them, that the State Department has 30 people answering telephones about Vietnamese orphans but none for in-laws.

They said the media wouldn't listen to them and as they spoke television news crews dismantled their cameras and lights that had been used to film the earlier proceedings. Most other reporters had already left.

They said they had been walking the halls of the House and Senate office buildings since arriving in Washington this week "and still I can't get an appointment with my own senator, Percy," Pilot said, referring to Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill.

He and the others spoke mostly to vacant seats. The large hearing room, filled to capacity earlier, was nearly empty behind them.

Before them were only seven of more than 35 freshmen who had been at the meeting. The others didn't wait to hear them.

of an Arabian sheikdom with American cow and chicken manure is more than just a lot of bull.

But several businessmen involved in the deal say they "still have hopes it (the manure sale) will go."

Businessmen in the Olympic Peninsula communities of Port Angeles and Sequim set up companies to collect between 40,000 and 80,000 gallons of liquefied manure a month from each of a dozen farmers and sell it to the oil-rich Persian Gulf emirate of Bahrain.

They said they signed a $600 million contract in November with a man who identified himself as Bahraini prince Mohammed Khalil Ebrahim.

The manure was to go aboard empty oil tankers bound for the Middle East. The first boatload was to have been shipped in mid-January.

But so far, no manure has been collected from farmers.

The contract was for 50,000 metric tons a month at $325 a ton, equal to a gross income of more than $16 million a month.

The State Department told Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., in a letter that it had received several reports of the possible sale of liquid manure.

Statements Said Misleading

GREENSBORO (AP) — J. P. Stevens and Co., Inc., says statements attributed to the North Carolina Department of Revenue regarding the firm's alleged failure to pay its full share of local property taxes are misleading.

Claude C. Pierce of Greensboro, attorney and tax counsel for the giant textile manufacturer, noted Friday the revenue department's position that the only standard to be used in determining inventory values for local property tax purposes is the book value of the inventories as reported for income or franchise purposes.

"Our Aim Is To Work For Your Interest"

Others Modernizing Process

While the Pitt County commissioners continue to drag their heels on modernizing the election ballot counting system, Nash County is considering a new voting machine system.

County commissioners in Nash were told last week of an electronic system that utilizes a pencil-marked ballot and tabulates the ballots as they are inserted in the device.

Use of the equipment was recommended by the Nash Board of Elections.

Voters would mark a paper ballot and insert it in the machine. The equipment tabulates the ballot and stores the paper ballot. As the polls close, results are immediately available, and of course the paper ballots are still available if they are needed.

The voting machines cost $6,000 each but only one is needed for each precinct, plus some spares in case of breakdown.

The system is very new and present election law does not provide for its use, but legislation authorizing the system is being prepared for Legislative action.

It is possible, of course, that the system might not work as well as it sounds, but it seems to us to answer the objections to conventional voting machines. Voters would continue to mark paper ballots and the machine would tabulate them.

Pitt County should not go through another election using present archaic methods of tabulating ballots. More than once elections have been decided before most of the Pitt County vote was in.

We are living in an age when election returns are available quickly from progressive counties with voting machines because the results are available as soon as the polls close.

The Pitt County commissioners should start right now studying the voting machines available, including this new system. Some action should be taken prior to the next election to modernize our vote counting procedures. What we are doing now is ridiculous considering the voting equipment which can now be obtained.

THIS AFTERNOON

Resist Community Care

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Over 30 members of the House of Representatives lined up recently to take their home towns or counties out of a proposal which would permit use of single family homes in residential areas for the care and treatment of the mentally retarded or emotionally disturbed.

State Rep. David M. Blackwell, D-Rockingham County, is sponsor of the measure. The purpose is to keep municipal or county governments from using zoning ordinances, or local health, safety and building codes as a means of blocking community treatment homes.

Blackwell said opposition is, on the surface, from elected local officials who tag the measure an infringement by the state on local zoning authority.

But beneath that, he sees local officials reflecting the opposition of community residents who resist such group homes from fear and ignorance.

Blackwell is seeking a compromise solution: "My ardor is not cooled, but it's futile to go down with all flags flying," he said.

To get the measure adopted now would require General Assembly members to "undergo a mass conversion experience similar to that of Saul on the road to Damascus," Blackwell admits.

There have been numerous incidents around North Carolina of opposition to group homes, and Carey Fendley, director of the state Association for Retarded Children believes most of the problem stems from ignorance.

"This attitude discriminates against those who cannot defend themselves ... if people only understood this effort, the attitude would be different," Fendley said. He has found reasons for opposition including lack of parking space (the occupants don't own cars), down to neighbors who say local dogs might bite the children.

It boils down, say those working with the organization Parents and Professional for Handicapped Children, to people fearing that property values will fall if a group home is allowed in a given area.

"The group home struggling to be formed...is harassed to death by people acting out of ignorance and senseless fear, whose sense of common decency is drowned by baseless considerations of property value, and a twisted concept of local government autonomy," argues Mrs. Bobo Warren, a leader of the statewide group.

Blackwell said there is little optimism for passage of his proposal in this session of the legislature.

Big Attic

Two enormous blimp hangars used by the U.S. Navy in earlier times were declared surplus and one of them is now occupied by the furniture and cabinet-making division of the Westinghouse Corporation near Elizabeth City.

Shaped like a huge quonset hut, the rounded tops reach some five stories into the air. Inside a false ceiling hangs from steel cables, enclosing work space only 25-feet high.

This prompts Elizabeth City Fire Chief Al Poole to brag that he has within his district a building "with the largest attic in the world."

Rest Stop Idea

State Senator I.C. Crawford of Asheville raised such a roar about those plush, million-dollar bathrooms alongside interstate highways that state transportation officials have promised to cut down on the numbers, raise the mileage between each, and remove some of the plush features.

Crawford now has his reward. State Rep. Ernest Messer of Haywood got Canton sign painter Bennett Rose to paint a special award for the senator: an appropriately framed scene of the familiar two-holer once seen behind many a Tar Heel home.

"And only yesterday they ver saying I was getting too big for my britches!"

Sunday Morning Notes

Daily Reflector staffers were scratching their heads about a Hotline call the other day.

It reported that a Lhasa Apso had been lost never Eastern Elementary School.

"Is it a car, or a type of material?" Carol Tyler asked.

She turned to the unabridged dictionary.

Seem a Lhasa Apso is a breed of dog.

And Carol Tyler sat down at her desk Monday morning and held her head.

Finally she muttered something.

"What?" I asked.

"I was talking to myself," she said. Then, "I ran over my daughter, Olive's, bike when I came out to go to work."

Seems the bike handlebar had wrapped itself around a pipe under the car. Then the vehicle wouldn't go forward or backward.

She tried to crawl under the car with a wrench, which didn't work. Then she tried to jack up the car, but the jack didn't work.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Finally she abandoned the car with its attached bike, in the drive and got to work some other way.

Well, some weeks just start bad.

INSIDE REPORT

Making Reagan See Red?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's choice as his new policy adviser of an outspoken liberal Republican from California who makes Ronald Reagan see red reflects both polarization and increasing confusion in the upper reaches of the Republican party.

John G. Veneman, widely esteemed as Under Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) throughout Richard M. Nixon's first term, will be announced soon as the new "counselor" to the Vice President. "That's a slap in the face to the Governor," a gleeful Reagan insider informed us. His hope: the unpleasant news, reaching Reagan in London this week, will be another nudge toward challenging Mr. Ford for the presidential nomination.

At a minimum, picking Veneman confirmed that Rockefeller has abandoned conciliation of the Republican right and is returning to his home is the party's liberal wing. That is polarization. The confusion arises from the contrast with the President's efforts at warmer relations with Reagan, to the point of inviting the Reagans for an intimate family meal last week.

Moreover, that "slap in the face" comes while Reagan seems moving, though with infinite caution, toward a presidential challenge. While the White House had yet to take the first preparatory step toward the 1976 campaign, Reagan's political operatives assembled in Washington last week for hours of political talk.

Actually, Veneman's selection is described by Rockefeller insiders as devoid of political significance. The Vice President needed somebody who knows his way around both Capitol Hill and the bureaucracy and understands the issues. Who could fill that bill better than Jack Veneman? "This was not a political appointment," a Rockefeller spokesman told us in all seriousness.

But Veneman is a politician to his fingertips who, of course, will be advising Rockefeller on politics as well as health care legislation. Accordingly, his political background takes on significance.

As a young state Assemblyman, Veneman vigorously supported Gov. Rockefeller against Sen. Barry Goldwater in the bloody California presidential primary of 1964. After serving as Gov. Reagan's liberal Republican hairshirt in the legislature, Veneman came to HEW in Washington — much to Reagan's public displeasure. That produced transcontinental feuding about welfare issues.

Returning to California in 1973, Veneman was the only prominent Republican to oppose Reagan's unsuccessful referendum to limit state spending and publicly nailed the Governor for exaggerating how much he had saved on welfare. Reagan, in turn, did not disguise hostility to Veneman's unsuccessful 1974 bid for lieutenant governor. By then, the Reagan-Veneman enmity had transcended ideology and reached a highly personal level.

Contentions by the Vice President's aides that these political facts were not considered is of a piece with Rockefeller's own claims that his rulings in the Senate filibuster debate on Rule 22, which so infuriated conservative Senators, were procedural in origin without political relevance. In truth, both Rule 22 and Veneman illustrate the end of Rockefeller's most recent courtship of the right (climaxed by his 1973 pilgrimage to South Carolina to discuss foreign policy with Sen. Strom Thurmond).

Nor does Rockefeller's new course seem coordinated with the President, who would have ruled differently on Rule 22 and prefers not to offend Ronald Reagan. The latter desire explains Mr. and Mrs. Ford inviting the Reagans to dinner-for-four at a rented Palm Springs mansion April 2.

The dinner accomplished little. The President asked Reagan's support for his forthcoming vetoes of spending bills — support he obviously could count on anyway. According to Reagan sources, the evening did not increase Reagan's modest regard for the President's abilities.

Nor did it affect the secret gathering in Washington a day earlier of Reagan political operatives. Present were four senior members of Reagan's last staff as Governor — Ed Meese, Robert Walker and Mike Deever from California and Jim Lake from Washington — plus Washington lawyer John Sears, a manager of Nixon's brilliant 1968 delegate hunt. The quintet dined long and well at two expensive restaurants, the Sans Souci for lunch and the Palm for dinner, discussing Reagan's presidential prospects in detail.

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Another example of blatant action by the United Nations has been uncovered.

Now the World Health Organization, an arm of the United Nations, in a move sponsored by Communist China, is pressuring over 100 affiliate scientific associations to expel anyone connected with Taiwan.

These organizations, in many cases, have reacted vigorously against the move.

"This thing is cockeyed," said the official of one association. "This year Taiwan, next year it will be South Africa, Israel and so on."

Apparently the targets are nations displaying strong anti-Communist policies.

Communist China replaced Taiwan in the United Nations in 1971. It recently asked the WHO executive board, which is dominated by Communist and so-called Third World countries, to pass the resolution calling for expulsion of all individuals "associated with Chiang Kai-shek and sever all links with them."

The move was urged before the death of Chiang last week, but it is doubtful if the Reds will have a change of heart because Taiwan will remain strongly anti-Communist.

The United States cast the lone dissenting vote, arguing the board had no right of dictate to the associations what members they can admit.

The U.S. delegate said it would be a "great loss to the WHO if contact were severed with the large number of professional organizations in question and their scientific talent."

Apparently the Red-dominated health agency is more interested in ideological compatibility than in scientific competence.

"This is a blatant interference into our affairs," said Dr. John F. Delafresnaye, executive director of the International Union Against Cancer.

"I object to any kind of pressure, either overt or covert, from the WHO. I doubt that we will even answer the letter."

Utilities commission member Dr. Howard Gradis asked City Manager Harry Hagerty when the dog ordinance takes effect at a recent meeting.

"May 1," Hagerty replied. "I was wondering," Gradis said. "Somebody left a birthday cake at my door and the dogs got it."

Utilities commissioners were discussing the flood of last month which reached 18.9 feet.

A report of the flood effects showed that in a 100 year period floods could reach 24 feet on the Tar here.

"We put a light on the highest hill to warn planes (Taking off from the airport)," City Manager Harry Hagerty said. "Bless Pat, that's supposed to be under water."

The Environment Protection Agency ordered new equipment installed at the sewage plant. If it were not done within a certain time the Utilities is supposed to notify the press, radio and television and also include the fact on its monthly bills to (Continued on Page A-5)

Macao Fever Sedate

By KENNETH F. ENGLADE

MACAO (UPI) — Gambling is a big business in Macao, a tiny flyspeck of an island 40 miles southwest of Hong Kong within spitting distance of China.

But the action is not quite at the Las Vegas pace.

The men who run the two major casinos in Macao are reluctant to talk about how much money they take in but one Westerner said he saw a middle class-looking Chinese drop $6,000 in a short time at a blackjack table.

Another watched as a Chinese man about 20 years old cashed in his chips and walked off, casually stuffing about $1,200 in a side pocket of his blue jeans.

At the baccarat table in the center of the casino in the basement of the Lisboa Hotel, the maximum bet is $30,000. It's the most expensive game in town.

Moving outward in circles are the blackjack and roulette tables and the slot machines, all open 24 hours a day to the Chinese who come on hydrofoils from Hong Kong where gambling is illegal.

The other casino is aboard a boat anchored on a small, dirty brown inlet looking up at the hills of China. On the walls are signs in English, Portuguese and Chinese warning visitors not to take pictures.

On the deck level is a large restaurant featuring a Chinese opera complete with colored costumes and ear splitting gongs.

The surroundings are a little less expensive than at the Lisboa casino, but the games are the same: blackjack, baccarat, roulette, slots and keno.

During the week in the off-season, the gamblers are mainly Chinese. On weekends and for festivals, such as the Macao Grand Prix in November, the casinos are jammed with Chinese and Westerners from Hong Kong to relieve their island fever or tourists anxious for travel money.

Located near the mouth of China's Pearl River, the ancient colony of Macao was once considered one of the seamiest places in Asia with its brothels and noisy bars.

The only other team to see action this afternoon is the freshman tennis team which will meet Wilmington High School at 2:30 p.m. in Chapel Hill.

The senate today lowered the rate of the proposed tax on chain filling stations in the biennial revenue bill but rejected an amendment by Senator Johnson of Duplin to eliminate the new levy in its entirety.

WHEN LEAVES HAVE FALLEN

We always see farther when winter takes the leaves off the trees.

"The winter of our discontent," the winter of sorrow, disappointment, and failure has a terrible way of stripping the landscape of its beauty. And when the leaves are gone, we feel that beauty and life have gone also, and that we are left standing alone in a dead world.

But it is when the leaves have fallen that we see the farthest. Hard as it is to bear

Liberal Art Grads In Trouble

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The bleak employment prospects for this year's liberal arts graduates point up, in the view of some authorities, a basic conflict in the American concept of education.

The conflict is mainly between educators and employers, but it is the graduate who suffers. Educators tend to stress the value of a broad education; employers seem to prefer the more practically educated youngster.

As a consequence, reliable estimates place at 1 million the number of broadly educated liberal arts graduates by 1980-1981, nearly triple the number of 1960, while another study shows a shrinking market for their skills.

The College Placement

Council, for example, found that liberal arts hiring decreased over the past five years, with threefourths of employer respondents to a study saying they fill less than 10 per cent of openings from liberal arts ranks.

While aggravated by the recession, the problem is also part of a long-term trend to fewer sources of employment in such traditional areas as teaching and social services.

This forces the CPC, a non-profit organization whose membership includes college placement officers and employers alike, to conclude that if basic improvements are to be achieved, it is essential to develop an adequate corps of specialists in career counseling and placement.

Essential — but apparently unlikely for the time being.

"Relatively little money is available to implement work in career counseling and placement in four-year colleges," says Robert Herrick, CPC executive director and a veteran observer of job trends.

"Right at the time when these youngsters need all the help they can get in four-year colleges, the colleges have less and less money available, and they get none from the federal government," he laments.

Almost the entire federal emphasis on career education is at the high school and junior college level, he argues, leaving the financially pressed four-year schools without the ability to advise their students.

While that dilemma remains to be resolved, the CPC believes other changes might be equally urgent. For one thing, Herrick believes students must be provided an expanded choice of courses in the form of minors and electives.

And it is important also, he insists, that programs be developed to provide internships, part-time work and summer jobs, all of which, of course, provides students with a realistic view of the world in which they must earn a living.

The CPC has scheduled a national meeting May 27-30 in Washington, D.C., to seek ways to achieve a better matching of education and career opportunities.

Even if answers are forthcoming, however, they won't help this year's class very much. Almost all indicators show a bleak job market, "the worst of the 70s," says Herrick.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Farm Revolution Ahead

Just the other day there was a report about the trolley car coming back to a large U.S. city. And now listen to this about what some of the wisest heads are urging for rural America:

An article in the January issue of "Smithsonian" magazine points to some oncoming dire straits for agriculture, due to the heavy dependence on petroleum. Both on the farms themselves and in the production of fertilizers, fossil fuels are being gulped at an alarming rate.

A possible answer? Well, the thinking is that, in harness with a few contributions from the new technologies, the solution lies in . . . limiting the scale of mechanization to provide job opportunities . . . better land use and a more wide-spread population . . . better ways to use natural fertilizer . . . the hand-spraying of pesticides and herbicides, rather than application by large machines and airplanes. . . Windmills . . . to pump water for agricultural irrigation. . .

And, for an overall policy: " . . . the development of smaller, less energy-intensive farms."

For a great many older Americans, and some not so old at that, this is where they came in.

Get Lost?

Free road maps are about to become a thing of the past. Some service stations are beginning to charge for them.

In fairness to the oil companies, they say the maps cost a good bit of money and people have been taking them whether they need them or not.

But it doesn't quite fit in with the profit statements we've been reading. Some critics might say the companies have just found another way of telling the rest of us, "Get lost, folks."

Finding Dissent

People usually find that which they are seeking. If they are looking for a cause to dissent, surely it will not take long to find such a cause.

On the license tags on our vehicles in North Carolina today are the words "First In Freedom." And a lot of people are making a big deal about something which was designed to compliment us as North Carolina citizens.

To carry such a case to court and to make so much noise about these three little words being on North Carolina license plates will be hard for a lot of people to understand.

Surely, some people might dislike it. But what is really wrong with it? Maybe some people can argue about its historical truth. Sometime ago a lot of commotion was generated because a prayer was involved in a state matter.

We seem to be living in a world in which some people are just standing around looking for something to complain about. And when one looks for this type of commotion, it does not take long to find it.

In fact, with "First In Freedom," those who want to make a big deal out of a relatively small thing have found the substance with which to do it.

Crimes Are Overlooked

We continue to be criticised as a state because we happen to have more people on death row than any other state in the Union.

Many states do not have the death penalty so they, naturally, aren't in the running for that dubious distinction.

Our glut population of death row is not a reflection of the inhumanity of the North Carolina system. The opposite happens to be the case.

We could easily reduce our death row population to zero by simply executing the sentences given these people for murder and rape.

Those who get up tight about the number of people on death row should look beyond the numbers game to the crimes for which these now are incarcerated.

These people have been found guilty "beyond a reasonable doubt" of some of the most fiendish crimes imaginable.

Their guilt seems not to be a concern among those who look only at the numbers. There are callings far more worthy of our concern that getting up tight over the death sentence for people who, for example, raped and buried alive a four year old child.

NOT MUCH ONE CAN SAY NOW!

A Conservative View Paying High Price For Compelled Integration

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Almost 21 years after Brown v. Board of Education, the nation today is hearing many of the same warnings and protests that were heard then. Once again, a period of agonizing reappraisal is at hand.

On the statistical record, as the Commission on Civil Rights recently reported, the Supreme Court's landmark decision has been pretty well implemented. The 17 Southern and border states that were maintaining segregated public school systems in 1954 are not maintaining them now.

But on the whole record, has Brown produced net gain? Most observers, myself included, probably would answer without hesitation: Yes, on balance, black children educationally are better off now than they were then. Yet the court itself remarked long ago that the issues are complex and not readily resolved. Consider, if you will, a recent speech by James S. Coleman; and consider the matter of Kalamazoo.

No one ever would describe Coleman as "soft on integration." The University of Chicago professor is the principal author of the 1966 "Coleman Report," which defended court-ordered desegregation in terms of its benefits to poor black children. Coleman's view is that such children have a better chance of succeeding in school if they attend classes with culturally advantaged children.

Two weeks ago, Coleman spoke to the American Educational Research Association. In a major address, not widely reported, the reviewed new findings that indicate a different and gloomier aspect of the situation.

The phenomenon of "white flight" continues unabated. The effect is to undermine the very thesis of the early Coleman studies. Faced with court orders for racial reorganization of city schools, middle and upper-income white parents flee to the suburbs, taking their culturally advantaged children with them. They leave behind the lower-middle white families whose children are as culturally disadvantaged as the black children with whom they are forcibly merged.

This phenomenon was foreseen from the beginning, but in Coleman's view it never was sufficiently understood or anticipated. Federal judges relentlessly pursued what they took to be the principles of Brown. In the process, the courts have proved to be "probably the worst instrument of social policy" that could have been devised. Court-ordered desegregation, said Coleman, may serve in the long run "to separate whites and blacks more severely than before."

Kalamazoo provides a case study. A century ago, the city pioneered in providing free public high schools. There is substantial evidence that city officials never have pursued policies of either overt or covert segregation. But by 1971, because of neighborhood population patterns, some schools had become disproportionately black. A federal judge imposed a draconian decree.

The senior minister of a Kalamazoo church writes me: "This has been a sad four year for all of us, and for every hope for the city's future. We are now spending just over one million dollars per year on additional bus transportation and the attendant expenses alone. That cost, which buys us nothing in the way of education, will go on indefinitely. Something over 3,700 children—most of them white, affluent, and from families that care about education—have left the public school system. . . . Our children are infinitely more racist than they ever were before this busing for racial balance program got started. And the black part of our population is now overwhelmingly against continuing with this said experiment."

If court-ordered "racial balance" is not working—if such decrees are producing poorer schools at greater cost in money and in racial tensions—why not search for a better alternative? Professor Coleman provides respectable authority for the need; Kalamazoo offers sad example of the need unmet.

Too Many 'Ifs' In Any Economic Forecast Of When Recovery Is Due

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Economic forecasters still hedge on when the slide will hit bottom and the upturn will get going.

The consensus, if there actually is such a thing, is that the decline will end during the summer and that recovery will be gathering strength no later than the last quarter.

Even among those who profess to see bits of blue sky there is a strong inclination to condition appraisals with a lot of "ifs"—if interest rates ease, if housing gets started, if auto production can get going, if consumers use their tax cuts and ease their purse strings.

These are big "ifs", indeed. Failure of any of these factors to perform in the hoped-for fashion could well extend the decline period and then bring on a sort of drawn-out stagnation at the bottom. The entire time table would be thrown out of kilter.

And right now, there is no hard sign that these "ifs", or any significant number of them, are about to take "favorable" turns. It may well be another month or two before they move in any significant way.

Take interest rates, as an example. Rates, especially short term, tumbled sharply from last year's lofty peaks. A return to something approaching easier, if not easy, money seemed probable. But recently, both long and short terms rates have displayed upward strength. The unsettling factor has been the prospect that the high federal deficit will strain the money market.

If rates do firm, it will be a hard blow to hopes for recovery in the home building industry. And tied to home building are such industries as furniture, appliances and textiles.

Performance in the automobile industry continued to disappoint. Inventories have been reduced by production cutbacks and price rebates. But demand has remained low, with no sign yet that a good spring-summer sales season lies ahead.

It should be noted that both housing and autos have two things in common: Both have had sharp increases in prices and both are tied closely to the energy problem, which is nowhere near solution.

Polls indicate that consumers, meaning the public, have a little more confidence in the future. This is attributed, at least in part, to the tax-cut law, which will put more cash in the hands of the public starting in May. But this isn't going to be enough to make any spending spree.

There is considerable opinion that the tax stimulant, although it totals nearly $23-billion, will not come close to the desired result. For individuals, it's largely a one-shot affair—ends with 1975. And the aid to corporations is limited to the increase in the credit for capital investment.

There are signs from Washington and that Congress may well turn to a new tax-cutting bill to give benefits for 1976. It's pretty obvious that whatever recovery takes place late this year will not be enough to make a dent in the unemployment rate, now close to 9 percent.

But the really dark cloud overhanging the picture is the prospect that steps being taken to rush an end to the decline and provide a strong recovery, once it gets underway, will light off another, even wilder, round of double digit inflation. The Federal Reserve system is going to have to crank out a lot of "greenbacks" if it tries to underwrite the huge deficits without driving interest rates way up.

While some of the zest has been going out of inflation, as measured at wholesale and consumer levels, the price index of basic raw materials has turned up. This is a fairly reliable indicator of what lies ahead. And the turn may be signaling more inflation.

which would require Reagan's consent, but it may be something more than Mr. Ford has. The President talks of setting up an election committee at summer's end (later than his political aides prefer), but nothing has yet been planned — "unless," says one aide, "it's in somebody's mind." In that atmosphere, no wonder that Mr. Ford's political aides were unaware of Rockefeller taking aboard a hard-nosed politician who makes Ronald Reagan climb the wall.

Bridge Club In Need Of Durable Replacements

There are only two ways to meet people in Greenville. One is to stand on the street corner yelling dirty names at passing motorists. The other is to join a club.

This is rough if you happen to be a loner. The last group I joined was the Brownie Scouts, and I was expelled from that after I fringed my napkins the wrong way, set the leader's dress on fire with a flaming marshmallow, and gave the whole troop the German measles.

Of course, I developed an overwhelming aversion to joining any group in which my inability to fringe napkins might be revealed, so I didn't join anything else for 20 years. Next to me, the Maytag repairman could have been voted Miss Congeniality. But my neighbor, unaware of my spurious background and determined to help me meet some people here, finally convinced me to join her bridge club.

"You don't know what you're asking," I warned her. "Asking me to join a club is like building a glass house on the San Andreas fault. It's like putting a turtle on roller skates. Let's face it. I'm a social misdeal."

"Don't think I'm going to let you finesse me with your flimsy arguments," she interrupted, heartlessly preempting the conversation. "You've got to join. You're spending entirely too much time with yourself - and that could warp anyone."

As it was, I warped the bridge club. Two weeks after I joined, we lost two members - one convinced her husband to transfer; the other caught pneumonia. The first time I had the club at my house, another member defected after she lost a tooth in my "Light and Airy" meringue, which isn't so hot as a dessert but makes a marvelous recipe for tennis balls.

Thus, in the final tally, we had only five members left for two table bridge. We had become what is referred to in the bridge world as "a short club."

"That's the problem," I moaned. "I'm always the dummy. When I sit at a bridge table, I look like a discard from a gin rummy pile."

"I think you've got a rubber brain," she answered sympathetically. "I'm just calling a spade a spade, and don't talk to me like that," I whimpered. "I've become extremely vulnerable to criticism."

"You can't just drop out of society every time you meet defeat," she lectured, slamming her hand on the table for emphasis.

"You're right," I sighed. "I guess I can't just shuffle through life. I've got to play my cards sometime. But I'll tell you one thing," I added audaciously.

"What's that?"

"The next time we play at my house, I'm using paper napkins."

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, April 13, the 103rd day of 1975. There are 262 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1743, the third American president and author of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson, was born in Albemarle County, Va.

On this date —

In 1366, King Richard II of England was born.

In 1598, King Henry IV of France signed the Edict of Nantes, granting a large measure of religious liberty to the Protestant Huguenots.

In 1776, General George Washington arrived in New York to prepare the city's defense in the Revolutionary war.

In 1848, the island of Sicily was declared independent of Naples.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt dedicated the Jefferson Memorial in Washington.

In 1964, the Motion Picture Academy named Sidney Poitier best actor. He was the first black to win an Oscar in the top categories.

Ten years ago: President Johnson disclosed that he was sending former ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to consult on Vietnam with four friendly governments in Asia, Australia and New Zealand.

Five years ago: The Pentagon reported that a Soviet submarine apparently had sunk in the Atlantic northwest of Spain, with a heavy loss of life.

One year ago: A special Syrian envoy went to Washington to discuss his government's detailed proposals for the separation of Syrian and Israeli military forces in the Golan Heights.

Today's birthdays: Singer Lily Pons is 71. Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen is 68.

Thought for today: Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty — attributed to Thomas Jefferson.

Bicentennial footnote: It was 200 years ago today that the British Parliament passed a law forbidding the colonies of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and South Carolina from trading with other nations except Britain and the British West Indies. Similar action had been taken earlier against New England.

Prospects Not Bright

Not only is GOP affiliation now at a low point, but prospects for the immediate future are far from bright, with only 15 percent of voters between the ages of 18 and 29 presently calling themselves Republicans.

Nor can the GOP hope to make major inroads with the exceptionally large group (46 percent) of young voters who describe themselves as independents. Survey evidence shows young independents leaning 5-to-1 to the Democratic party over the Republican party.

Future Rests With Right Candidate

The fact that the GOP is in the doldrums in terms of basic party strength does not, of course, rule out the possibility of a Republican being elected President, provided he has wide appeal or in the event the Democratic party puts up a candidate with little political appeal.

Dwight Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956 swept to landslide victories because of his appeal not only to fellow Republicans but to independent voters and dissident Democrats as well. In 1972, Richard Nixon's victory was due in large part to the failure of senior Memorial in Washington.

Sen. George McGovern to hold Democrats in line.

To determine political party allegiance, the following question has been asked regularly since 1940:

"In politics, as of today, do you consider yourself a Republican, Democrat, or independent?"

Following are the latest results and trend since 1972:

	Republican	Democrat	Independent

(NOTE: The proportion who do not classify themselves in one of the three categories—ranging from 2 to 3 per cent—has been excluded in each set of figures.)

Decline In Affiliation Is 'Across The Board'

On a national basis, GOP affiliation has declined 6 percentage points since 1972. In terms of major population groups, the decline has been generally across the board although some rather pronounced differences do emerge.

In the Midwest, for example, the percentage of voters describing themselves as Republicans is down 8 points since 1972, while in the South the fall-off is only 3 percentage points.

The GOP has had minority party status for more than three decades.

In the year 1940, prior to U.S. entry into World War II, the Republicans and Democratic parties were nearly equal in numerical strength, 38 to 42 per cent, respectively, with another 20 per cent of the adult population classifying themselves as independents.

The next 24 years, from 1940 to 1964, represented a longterm decline for the GOP, while the Democratic party made corresponding gains. The proportion of independents changed comparatively little over this period.

Since 1964, the proportion of independents has increased while the Democrats have tended to lose ground.

PRINCETON, N.J.—Republican party affiliation continues to slide and has now reached the lowest point since the first measurements were taken 35 years ago.

Only 22 per cent of voters currently classify themselves as Republicans, with the trend having been steadily downward since October 1972. This is one of the principal findings to emerge from a major study of political party allegiance in America, based upon in-person interviews with more than 10,000 voters.

Democrats in the electorate currently outnumber Republicans by a 2-to-1 margin, with 46 per cent of voters now classifying themselves as Democrats. Independent voters also outnumber Republicans with approximately one third (32 per cent) of the electorate classifying themselves as independents.

Chimps That Communicate Threaten Old Concept

EDITOR'S NOTE — A dozen chimpanzees across the country are learning sign language and talking with man. But is it really language? Can apes acquire all the complex of learning and culture that is part of human language?

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Dr. Doolittle did it. And now, to some degree, so are mere mortals. They're talking to the animals — chimpanzees, that is — and the chimps are talking back.

Sample: Washoe is an 11-year-old female chimp raised by scientists who taught her American Sign Language, the gestural language of the deaf. Recently, she spotted one of the men who helped raise her, Dr. Roger Fouts.

She signed to him with her hands: "You, me go ride car, drink."

Not much from a grammarian's point of view. On the other hand, not bad for a chimp. And Fouts knew exactly what she was saying.

She was asking him to take her out of the cage and to drive to the nearby Seven-Eleven and buy her a coke, something he had done before. He rewarded the request by piling her into his Volkswagen camper and starting off. As they approached, Washoe became very excited and began signing: "Hurry, hurry."

Washoe, while a very special chimp, is not all that special. There are more than a dozen others communicating with man — in Oklahoma, California, Georgia, Nevada and even one in New York City.

Most are taught American Sign Language, also called Anselam, but the one in Atlanta communicates through a computer and in California, the chimps are taught to communicate through plastic symbols and a visual symbol generator. It's an age-old dream, talking with higher animals. It's also a controversial subject, threatening the concept that man was unique because he had language.

The rocky question is just what is language and when does communication become language. Linguists and anthropologists are divided on the subject. Lately, those who believe that chimps can learn to talk with man have been making a major effort to prove their point.

Washoe, perhaps the most famous of the chimps in various projects across the country, attained a vocabulary of some 165 words, according to Fouts. He says she has strung as many as seven or nine words together to make a sentence of her own invention. More importantly, she has demonstrated that she understands the concepts she forms with her hands. For instance, when she saw a duck for the first time, she labeled it "water bird."

Another chimp called Lucy, raised in a home in Oklahoma and still a member of the family, tasted a watermelon for the first time and spontaneously dubbed it "candy drink" and "fruit drink." And then she tasted a hot, spicy radish. She spat it out instantly.

With tears in her eyes and pain in her mouth, she signed that it was a "hurt-cry-food."

Washoe, raised by Drs. Allen and Beatrice Gardner in Nevada, is now at the institute for Primate Studies, a run-down looking farm just outside Norman.

She and the other chimps — there are seven signing chimps in this compound and about 20 nonsigners — have demonstrated they can generalize. The word "open," for instance, is routinely applied to different doors and strange boxes.

The new wave of research began in the mid-1960s, although the dream of communicating with a different species was certainly not a new one. In 1651, Samuel Pepys went down to a dock in London to observe the strange animal an African sea captain had brought back. Pepys observed that it was so human looking that it might have been begotten by man out of a she-orangutan. He also wrote in his diary that he bet it could be taught the language of the deaf.

In this century, various attempts were made to reach a chimp to talk. Winthrop and Luella Kellogg raised a chimp named Gua in the 1930s, with their infant son. She could understand about 100 words at the age of 16 months, but she never tried to talk.

In the '40s, Keith and Cathy Hayes worked six long years with a chimp named Vicki and managed only to get her to say four words. And those practically had to be beaten out of her with various physical pressures to force the vocal cords to do what nature had never intended them to do.

The dismal outcome of that project was widely regarded as proof that chimps could not be taught to talk. The Gardners, however, became intrigued by the natural use of gestures demonstrated by the chimps. Why not try with ASL?

The Gardners, both psychologists at the University of Nevada at Reno, immersed Washoe in sign language. She never heard spoken English. The Gardners and the graduate students involved in the program communicated with each other in the gestural language. Fouts was then one of the graduate students.

New games and new toys were constantly introduced to the chimp and soon she began signing and then combining signs. She even signed to herself when she was alone, much as young children talk to themselves.

"We gave her an interesting life so she would have interesting things to talk about. One of my friends remarked that it was like we put a 100 I.Q. being in a 200 I.Q. environment," says Gardner.

At about the same time, Dr. David Premack was teaching a chimp named Sarah to communicate through differently colored, variously shaped pieces of plastic at the University of California in Santa Barbara.

Each piece of plastic represented a word. He now has three more chimps — Peony, Elizabeth and Walnut — and is teaching them on a visual symbol generator, a sort of keyboard word machine. Each key represents a word, or a concept.

Premack's main concern is with the cognitive ability of the chips and the larger question of intelligence. He believes he has seen strong evidence of concept of causality in the chimps. "Like man, the chimp looks at the world in terms of cause and effect," says Premack.

The animals have been able to analyze action. If, for instance, Premack shows an apple and a knife and then shows a wet apple, a bruised apple and a severed apple, the chimp will pick the severed apple. That's what the knife did.

In another experiment, he calls upon their ability to reassemble disassembled figures. He uses the disassembled face of a chimp. The chimp puts it back together and even shows some inventiveness. One took the mouthpiece, turned it over on the blank side and made a hat for the chimp face. That was after she saw a picture of a chimp wearing a hat.

In Atlanta, a chimp named Lana is communicating through a computer, which she manipulates by pressing buttons. When she asks the computer for something, she must ask in the right order.

For instance, she must say "Please Tim, tickle Lana." (Young chimps love to be tickled.) And she must use the period to show her sentence is finished.

For those interested in what is language and what isn't, syntax is very important. In Project Washoe, the Gardners did not require or record the sequence of word order. The Lana project, at the Yerkes Primate Research Center, had the advantage that every utterance was recorded.

Lana seems to have shown some evidence of syntax, although some of the structured sentences could be criticized as just memorization. Dr. Duane Rumbaugh, the director of the project, reports that Lana has constructed new sentences, substantially different from those she had been taught.

One of these was "Tim put milk in machine." Tim is one of the students helping to run the project and machine had never been used by Lana in that position in a structured sentence before.

The Gardners, pioneers in the sign language method, now are working with two new chimps, a male named Phil and a female named Moja. This time they began with chimps a few days old and surrounded themselves with people fluent in ASL, including deaf graduate students, using what might be called their "native tongue."

"They see each other like neighborhood children would see each other," says Gardner.

Follows His Father As A 'Stiltman'

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — It's a tall act to follow in your father's 12-foot-high footsteps, says Dave DeGarro. DeGarro, like his father, makes a living by striding about on seven-foot stilts at fairs, shopping-center openings and auto shows.

He was at the National Orange Show here recently and spoke of the woes of a stiltman.

"I was followed all over the first day by a group of eight or nine boys who kept poking at the stilts," he recalled. "I finally had to chase them off, but it got kind of risky for a couple of minutes."

"It's also very tiring ... I'll be exhausted by the time I get home tonight. But I have a ball."

At the Orange Show he waved to kids and dropped greetings: "How's the weather down there?"

"This is the first fair I've worked in quite a while," said DeGarro, unstrapping his stilts while seated atop a ladder. "My father was here last year, and he wanted to come back but he had another engagement in Florida. So I'm filling in."

DeGarro has been a stiltman for 15 years.

It was the elder DeGarro who taught Dave the delicate profession when he was a boy. He grew into the job.

"I just went up about a foot at a time as I learned to keep my balance," he said.

On a job DeGarro goes "out for an hour and then rests for an hour. That way I'm working about four hours a day."

"The stilts weigh about 12 pounds each, plus these jeans weigh almost 20 pounds. With all that weight I have to walk with a swinging motion," the ever-smiling stiltman explains. "But remember I also have to lift. You have to be on a good solid surface or you've got all sorts of problems. Plus with this wind the job is about twice as hard."

As he roved the sprawling fairgrounds, DeGarro wore specially designed 34 by 84-inch jeans.

At the Orange Show DeGarro occasionally took time out to bend over and shake hands with bewildered children.

Demolition Expert Starts Own School

ISSAQUAH, Wash. (AP) — Albert E. Teller is a teacher who will soon have an explosive classroom situation.

Students from Morocco, Colombia, Argentina, Peru and the United States have enrolled for the opening of what he says is the nation's only blasting school.

"This course is not for the guy who stuffs explosives in holes," Teller said. "I could teach that to a chimpanzee. This is for the project managers and engineers, teaching them how to plan a job, supervise it and get it done properly."

With his beard and turtleneck sweater he looks more like an academician than a man who has spent his life with high explosives.

"People sort of expect a John Wayne image," Teller said. "I remember a guy who brought me out to Illinois for a job. I didn't have a beard then and my hair was short."

"I showed up in a business suit with an attache case. The man off the plane behind me was a big, burly guy in a hard hat. My man walked up to him and asked him if his name was Teller."

Teller then stepped up and identified himself.

"And he said, 'What the hell's this? I don't want a school boy.'"

"Anyway I blew his damned smokestack. And that's what counts."

Teller once dropped a 15-story building in Sacramento, but he said his biggest job was laying a 186-foot smokestack down between two buildings, in Bristol, Tenn.

"I drilled for four hours, and dropped it an hour later," he said. "The whole job took only five hours. But it took planning for four weeks before, thinking about nothing else."

Teller's first demolition work came in the Army. After he was out a friend asked him to remove a stump in Hawaii and he found there was little reference material on explosives.

Six years ago he helped found the International Society of Explosives Specialists, and he has been president of it for four years.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, APRIL 14, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to use your charm and your magnetic radiation to eliminate problems and to get rid of any antagonism that could be directed toward you. Make necessary decisions and be sure to stick by them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget a secret annoyance and engage in more important activities. Try to cement better relations with associates. Be wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Although you may feel irritated for personal reasons, don't let it interfere with regular routine. Take health treatments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't argue with a good friend in the morning since later you see things in the proper perspective. Keep poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after personal aims in a logical way and get excellent results. Keep poised when dealing with others. Relax tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are now able to get the backing of an influential person. Engage in civic work that brings out the talent you possess.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle your responsibilities early in the day. Don't argue with associates. The evening can be interesting in the social world.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to use tact with an associate to get the results you want. A new project needs more study to be successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A co-workers' ideas are quite different from yours, but avoid an argument and strive for harmony. Think constructively.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make long-range plans with associates with the prospect of having more abundance. Show increased devotion to loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't make any comments at home that could stir up trouble. Put your finest talents to work and get excellent results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Instead of criticising others, get busy on own affairs and accomplish a great deal. Show higher-ups that you have wisdom.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she must be controlled early in life, or there could be a tendency to get into difficulties. There could be much success in this chart if a good education is provided. Be sure to give ethical training early in life. Sports is a must.

Durability Of NAACP No Accident; It's Dedicated

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — A solid marble fireplace sits in Margaret Bush Wilson's law office in an old remodeled home in midtown St. Louis. When she realized the beauty that lay beneath layers of paint and years of neglect, she began working to restore the fireplace to what it had been.

Mrs. Wilson moved into the office a few months ago, just about the time she was chosen chairman of the board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Like the fireplace, the 66-year-old NAACP is not what it once was, but Mrs. Wilson is beginning the tough job of restoring it to what she considers its rightful place of influence.

Mrs. Wilson, 55, a real estate and housing attorney and lifetime worker in the NAACP, believes the organization will grow strong and stable only by bringing in young persons and instilling in them early the ideal of equality for all.

"I've been taught and trained and honed for this position," she said.

Mrs. Wilson's parents, Berenice and James Bush, were active members of the NAACP when she was a child. "My mother would leave us with my father and go off to meetings," she recalled.

Mrs. Wilson worked up through the St. Louis chapter and became its president in 1958. In 1963 she was elected to the national board and has been there ever since, elected either by her local region at at-large.

After the death in December of Stephen G. Spottswood, chairman of the 64-member board since 1961, Mrs. Wilson heard she was among those being considered as his successor. She didn't believe it would happen until the official announcement came Jan. 13 in New York.

As the first black woman to head the organization, she said she does not see any real change in its goals.

"I hope there will be increased emphasis on strategy," she said. "What we want is a completely open society without regard to race or sex or creed. That can't change."

Strategy, organization and attention to detail form the foundation that have made the NAACP and its network of 1,700 branches endure while other civil rights group burst upon the scene with a flash of rhetoric, then faded just as quickly. Mrs. Wilson said that durability is no accident.

"Doing the day-in, day-out job that keeps any organization going is not very appealing," she said. "It's drudgery, really. But the NAACP from its inception has been committed to doing this type of job."

"There was a tendency for some groups in the '60s to be long on rhetoric and short on detail. They did not take the time to build in the kind of detail that is needed for longevity. We work at this."

Her activities as madame chairman have only begun, but Mrs. Wilson is already traveling across the country, and at home answering phones that seem never to stop ringing.

"I can't get any work done in this office with the phone," she said with her ready smile, "so when I want to get anything done, I leave."

What she wants to get done is the revitalization of major cities, a revival in the American consciousness of the need for equality and the establishment of a strong sense of brotherhood. The letter "C" in NAACP stands for all colors, she says, black as well as white, yellow as well as brown.

"If I handed you a Kennedy half dollar and asked you to get me a package of colored

THE NAACP is not what it once was, but Margaret Bush Wilson, shown in her law office, is beginning the tough job of restoring it to what she considers its rightful place of influence. (UPI Photo)

Handicapped Group Skis, Or Learning

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "My goal is to ski with poles. It's sheer vanity — I hate crutches."

Paul Rosen, a 19-year-old junior college student from Palo Alto, was just beginning to learn on one ski. His right leg was amputated a year ago because of bone cancer.

He was with a group called the National Inconvenienced Sportsmen's Association at Donner Ski Ranch, 90 miles east of Sacramento in the Sierra.

All of the members — who prefer to call themselves inconvenienced rather than handicapped — are blind, deaf or amputees. They were skiing or learning to ski.

Word of the courageous sportsmen's recreational program zssor of physical education at the University of Southern California.

He took 20 men and women — physical education majors from USC and teachers from suburban Garden Grove Unified School District — to the ski ranch to observe the activities.

Lerry skied 30 yards across the side of a hill with his eyes closed to get the feel of a blind person skiing.

It was "very scary," he said. While at the ski ranch, Perry said, "We came here in order to see what kind of things the blind and amputees are capable of doing."

Just 200 Years Ago: Paul Revere's Famous Ride

EDITOR'S NOTE — Two hundred years ago this week Paul Revere's ride and the battles of Lexington and Concord launched the American Revolution. This story of that week is the first in a series of AP Bicentennial Specials about the events and personalities that gave birth to a nation.

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
A score of horsemen rode out of Boston on the afternoon of April 18, 1775, setting off an alarm which in a few hours would begin the American Revolution.

Solomon Brown came upon them as he rode home to Lexington from market in Boston. He recognized them as British officers. An unusually large band, he thought, to be so far from Boston at sundown.

The youth noticed the soldiers were wearing greatcoats despite the early spring which already had brought dandelions to Lexington green.

Then he spotted concealed sidearms — something strictly forbidden for officers riding for pleasure. And they rode strangely, haltingly. Wherever they were going, Brown guessed, "they did not care to reach there until the shades of evening had set in."

Brown spurred his horse on to Lexington where he told William Munroe, his sergeant in the minute company. Munroe sent for his commander, Capt. John Parker. The sergeant also sent guards to the house where Sam Adams and John Hancock were staying during the session of the Provincial Congress in nearby Concord. Munroe watched from the shadows as the British rode through Lexington. He dispatched three men to follow. Other minutemen, not knowing exactly why, began reporting for duty.

Back in Boston they knew why. The mysterious horsemen were riding in advance of a military column and there would be "the hell to pay tomorrow." The column would try to seize contraband and arms.

A groom at the Province House heard the soldiers' talk and told John Ballard, who told William Dawes, who told Paul Revere, "who told him he had already heard it from two other persons."

Boston had known for days that something was brewing. British ships in the harbor had lowered their boats. The grenadiers and light infantry had been taken off duty, indicating a special mission ahead.

Then on the night of the 18th, the troops were loaded into boats for ferrying across the Charles River.

Gen. Thomas Gage ordered that no townspeople be allowed to leave the city that night.

But Revere had expected that the city might be sealed. Friends in Charlestown were watching for a signal from Christ Church — one lantern in the steeple if the troops marched out by land, two if they took a shortcut across the river. Robert Newman, the church sexton, would be the signalman, but his house was full of billeted British officers. So, he pretended to go to bed early, then slipped out a window and over the rooftops. Across the river his twin signal was seen and an express rider sent out with the news. The Redcoats were coming!

Revere, meanwhile, made his way down to the waterfront, where he had a boat hidden and two friends waiting to row him across. They rowed well out to sea to avoid detection, listening for a challenge or a shot.

At last their boat glided beneath the Charlestown docks. Revere was given a horse and warned of British patrols on the road. They had captured the first rider sent out.

When the British troops came by Boston Neck checkpoint, Revere was riding out of Charlestown. As he turned toward Lexington, he spotted two men on horseback under a tree.

"One of them tried to get ahead of me, and the other to take me," Revere said. "I turned my horse very quickly and galloped toward Charlestown Neck, and then pushed for the Medford road."

"The one who chased me, endeavoring to cut me off, got into a clay pond," Revere recalled. "I got clear of him and went through Medford, over the bridge and up to Menotomy."

Revere "alarmed almost every house, till I got to Lexington." He made straight for Adams and Hancock, but Sergeant Munroe refused to let him in the house and told him to hold down the noise.

"Noise!" exclaimed Revere. "You'll have noise enough before long. The Regulars are coming out!"

Out on the green the village bell rang the alarm and minutemen mustered. The roll was called, and Parker sent scouts to find the approaching British.

"The weather being rather chilly, after calling the roll, we were dismissed, but ordered to remain within call of the drum," said minuteman Ebenezer Munroe.

About this time Dawes, having managed to make his way from Boston, arrived and set off with Revere for Concord. Samuel Prescott, a Concord physician who had been courting a Lexington lass, caught up to them on the road.

A British patrol was just ahead. Halfway to Concord, Revere sighted two horsemen standing suspiciously near the road.

"In an instant I was surrounded," Revere reported. Dawes and Prescott, coming upon the scene after a stop at a farmhouse, also were collared. As the British herded them off the road, Prescott gave a signal and all three spurred their horses.

"I observed a wood at a small distance and made for that, intending when I gained that to jump my horse and run afoot," Revere said. "Just as I reached it, out started six officers, seized my bridle, put their pistols to my breast."

Dawes got back on the road and sped away with two Redcoats in hot pursuit. Knowing his tired horse could not win the race, he pulled into the front yard of a roadside house and reined his horse so hard he fell off.

"Halp, boys," he shouted. "I've got two of 'em. Surround 'em."

And while the British paused to consider what they might be rushing into, Dawes made his getaway on foot. Unable to reach Concord, he turned back to Lexington.

Prescott jumped his mount over a stone wall, cut across fields he knew better than his pursuers, slipped down a creekbed, went through an orchard and reached Concord with the alarm.

Revere, meantime, had a big mouth which was stoking the violence to come. One of his captors tried to tell him they were only out looking for deserters.

"I told them I knew better," Revere boasted, "I knew what they were after ... that I had alarmed the country all the way up ... and I should have 500 men there soon."

Believing Revere's exaggeration, the British freed their prisoners after cutting their saddle girths and stealing Revere's horse, and raced back to the approaching column.

Hearing their report, Lt. Col. Francis Smith, commanding the 700 men now marching to Lexington and Concord, sent back to Boston for more troops.

Most of Capt. Parker's minutemen had retired to Buckman's tavern near the green, awaiting the call from William Diamond's drum. It came by daybreak.

When the first columns of British under Marine Maj. John Pitcairn marched into Lexington, they saw 70, not 500, minutemen strung across the village green.

"Stand your ground," Parker ordered. "Don't fire unless fired upon. But if they mean to have a war, let it begin here!"

"The British troops came up directly in our front," said Pvt. Munroe. "The commanding officer advanced within a few rods of us and exclaimed, 'Disperse, you damned rebels!'"

"Ye villains, ye rebels, disperse!" It was Pitcairn. "Damn you, disperse!"

"I immediately ordered our troops to disperse and not to fire," Parker said later. He could see they were hopelessly outnumbered. But his men ambled away slowly, sulkily, each in his own direction — and holing onto his weapon.

And as Pitcairn demanded that the provincials disperse, he moved to prevent it by ordering his own men to surround and disarm them. As the Regulars advanced, they shouted.

Then somebody fired a shot. Many witnesses said it was a pistol — meaning a British officer. Some even named Pitcairn. Pitcairn believed it was an American straggler off the edge of the green. The British broke ranks and began firing at will among the scattering provincials.

It was a riot, not a battle. Eight Americans were dead, 10 wounded. The worst British injury was a private nicked in the leg.

The British reassembled and marched off toward Concord. Lexington buried its dead in a common grave, covered with fresh pine boughs for fear the returning British might disturb it.

The colonials let Smith march unopposed into Concord and took position on high ground across the Concord River while the British searched the town.

The British found little contraband remaining, but what they did detect was piled in the streets and burned. The Americans thought their town was being put to the torch.

"Will you let them burn the town down?" demanded Joseph Hosmer, the Concord adjutant.

"I haven't a man that is afraid to go," said Capt. Isaac Davis of Acton, and issued the order, "March!"

The three British companies guarding the North Bridge drew back and fired a warning. The Americans kept coming. This time the British fired to kill.

Capt. Davis, father of four, died on the spot. So did Amos Hosmer. "Fire, fellow soldiers," cried militia Maj. John Buttrick. "For God's Sake, Fire!"

Half the eight British officers fell. A sergeant and six privates were hit, one dead, another dying. The British broke and ran. A local boy coming on the scene buried a hatchet in the head of a wounded Redcoat.

Smith regrouped in Concord and set off for Boston. "As soon as the British had gained the main road and passed a small bridge ... they faced about suddenly and fired a volley of musketry upon us," a minuteman said. It seemed to the Regulars "as if men had dropped from the clouds" as the Americans lashed back.

Hospital Care For 50 Years

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A Prohibition agent accidentally shot George Walther in the neck in 1924. Now 71, Walther has spent the past 51 years in a Portland hospital, paralyzed below the waist.

He sold magazines from a wheelchair for several years, but hospital volunteers took over that duty when Walther's strength began to fail and he took to his bed.

"I hurt all the time, right in the solar plexus, and I'm not very cheery with my misery," says Walther, who lives in a 10-by-14-foot hospital room.

"I try to get by, though. I watch a little television, but I can't follow the story in the wild Westerns anymore. I can't sit. I just try to be in as easy a position as possible. My arms are still pretty good. But I get no good out of my food. I just get skinnier," says Walther.

Walther was walking down a hill on a farm near Underwood, Wash., 51 years ago when federal Prohibition agents moved in to investigate an illegal cache of liquor.

One of the agents tripped over a log, his gun discharged and the bullet struck Walther in the neck.

Walther and two other men were indicted on charges of bootlegging, but the charge against Walther was dismissed.

A Fine Thesis And Graduate Exhibit At The Art Center

LYRICISM IN STEEL...one of James Davies' sculptures.

"Visual Nutriment" is the collective name five East Carolina University School of Art graduate students with thesis exhibitions and 11 other students have given to the show now on view at the Greenville Art Center.

I'm not sure I agree with the use of the word "nutriment," but there's no doubt about this show being collectively a cohesive feast in form, execution and color. It is seldom that a group show put together by students stands together as well as this one does.

Though the span of works are totally diverse, the artists have in common an artistic discipline that shows a full technical understanding of their chosen media and their ability to marry technique with intention.

The five with thesis exhibitions are Carolyn A.F. Charles, James A. Davies, III, and Mary Alice Langston, all sculpture majors; Danny W. Hill, commercial art major; and Norbert W. Irvine, printmaking major.

Carolyn's jewelry, necklaces and rings of silver combined with semi precious stones are elegantly formal, strikingly encased in clear containers against simple dark backgrounds. She also shows two decorative wall sculptured boxes of butterflies in silver and gold plate.

Jim Davies' half a dozen black steel sculptures are assertive, lyrical in conception and design, yet making full use of the inherent strength of the steel from which they are forged.

In his brilliantly colored, precisely designed studies of flowers — orchids, pansies and violets, alone or in combination with crabs, Danny Hill works in tempera and India Ink to produce a series that will delight a wide range of viewers. Danny's work is like a child's colorful garden of verse, where imagination and intricate detail combine to give an enchanted look into a picture book world of nature.

A DANNY HILL...crab study in tempera and India Ink.

Norbert W. Irvine gives viewers an unusual insight into the details involved in making a print. Working with a basic print "Amber's Dawn," Norbert shows 19 separate runs from each stencil used in the print, as well as 19 separate states of the print showing the progressions of the print's development. In this manner, a relatively simple print is seen in all the exciting variations possible, from subtle touches of color to a full range of rich browns, tans and golds of the finished print.

The wood and metal (walnut and cast aluminum, oak and steel, oak and walnut) sculptures of Mary Alice Langston, seven of them altogether, are reminiscent of wooden flames, substantial, but slender. The warm wood colors are accented minimally with touches of steel and aluminum. A couple of her sculptures are wall hanging creations, with a kinship to mule harnesses or a rack of sturdy kitchen tools.

In addition to the five thesis exhibitors, 11 other students show works that in each instance complement the underlying tenor of the show. These are Richard Heiser, Brown Holloman, Cheryl Little, Cliff Stuckey and Edward Weintraub, ceramics; Glenn Lewis, mixed media; David McDowell, various media; John Mizell, steel sculpture; Gail Rabold, watercolors; Nancy Croll White, oils; and Debra Williams, drawings and stoneware sculpture.

This is a fine show, one that deserves wide public attention. The show will be on view through April.

The judges will be Dr. Francis Speight of Greenville, Mrs. Effie Raye

Bateman of Belhaven, Bob Mitchell of Raleigh and Mrs. Jerry Freeman of Kinston.

The show opens at 3 p.m. on April 18.

Fairfield Recreation Center will be the site of the exhibits and demonstrations of crafts from noon until 6 p.m. on April 19. Special rooms set aside to display heirloom, traditional and contemporary crafts. Anyone wishing to display an item may bring the article between 9 and 11 a.m. on the 19 to Fairfield Center. The show opens at noon.

Pioneer Living Day

Cracklin cornbread and leather britches (dried green beans) will be highlights of the open hearth cooking demonstration — one of the features of the spring "Pioneer Living Days of 1975" on Sunday, April 20 at Vance Birthplace.

Everyone is invited to attend the 1-5 p.m. festivities which will center around the visitors center at the restored historic site where Gov. Zebulon Baird Vance was born and lived as a child.

The site, located on Reems' Creek Road east of Weaverville, consists of the Revolutionary era log house and six log outbuildings, where staff and volunteers will demonstrate the activities that occupied pioneers in the western settlements during the lifetime of Civil War and Reconstruction Governor Vance (1862-1865; 1877-1879).

Candlemaking, battling clothes, weaving, churning, coffee grinding, quilting and open hearth cooking in the fireplace built by Governor Vance's grandfather in the early 1790's will be demonstrated during the afternoon.

Demonstrators and guide will be attired in reproduction dress of the mountain settlers. Volunteers and staff members will serve sassafras tea and gingerbread to guests during the activities.

New Show On Campus

The April show at the Kate Lewis Gallery on campus at East Carolina University is a show of paintings, sculpture and stained glass window by Dwayne Lowder. Lowder is a faculty artist at the University of Michigan, Kalamazoo.

This is an exchange show, and at this time the University of Michigan is featuring an exhibit of art works by 16 faculty members of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

The Dwayne Lowder show will remain on view at Kate Lewis until April 28 and may be viewed during regular university school hours daily.

Rare Document At The Mint

An exceedingly rare silk "broadside" copy of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, printed in Knoxville, Tennessee by Heiskel and Brown in 1819, has recently been obtained by the Mint Museum of Art. One of only three copies of the alleged "original" document (dated May 20, 1775) known to be in existence, it was purchased by Mrs. Milton Getz in 1925 from Andrew Jackson IV, who had received the copy as an heirloom.

Mint Museum director, Cleve K. Scarbrough, following up on a tip from Dr. C.G. Hopper, Jr. of Monroe, tracked down this copy at Kenneth Nebenzahl, Inc., dealers in rare books and manuscripts, in Chicago. The document, valued at $3,500 is on loan to the museum.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By KAY TAYLOR
Children's Librarian

John was a kind and good boy, but he could not do anything very well. All the other children made fun of him. Sad and lonely, John hides in the tall grass where none of the children can see him. Here in the grass he comes across a magic snail. The snail rewards John for his goodness and kindness by giving him 100 stories no one has ever heard. The other children are delighted with John's wonderful new stories. They ask him to tell the stories again and again. No one laughs at John. Then one day the children get tired of John's stories. Tell us a new story, they beg, but John does not know any new stories. Again the children begin to make fun of John. John goes to look for the magic snail to get some more stories. On the way, he meets an elf, a mermaid, and a dragon. When he finds the magic snail, he is disappointed. The snail cannot give him any more new stories. He must find his own.

How John learns to make up his own stories makes a very satisfying ending for this adventure story for primary grade children. Ask for The Story Snail by Anne Rockwell.

Boys especially will be enchanted by A Comick Book of Sports by Arnold Roth. The book contains definitions of terms in many different sports, as well as brief histories and explanations of the objectives of several games. Included are such sports as baseball, football, basketball, golf, bowling, track and field, water sports, soccer, gymnastics, and many others. The text is minimal with many cartoons. The drawings are hilarious and sure to entertain all sports fans both young and old.

Older children are often fascinated by the way people of different backgrounds live. Elinor Horwitz provides a very interesting look at Southern Appalachian people in the book Mountain People, Mountain Crafts. Traveling far back into the hills, she interviews many different mountain people and shows the people, their surroundings, and their crafts through photographs, commentary, and the words of the craftsmen themselves.

For many children one of their greatest dreams is to own their own horse. Often this just isn't practical so the child turns to books where he can know vicariously the joys of having a horse. A new collection of stories about horses and their riders, Gentle Like a Cyclone, selected by Phyllis R. Fenner will provide this type of enjoyment for horse lovers.

Confederate Cemetery In Brazil Belongs To Past

THIS OBELISK with a Confederate flag on it leads to a small cemetery in Brazil with graves of Confederate immigrants. (UPI Photo)

By STAN LEHMAN
AMERICANA, Brazil (UPI) — Surrounded by tall fields of sugar cane and accessible over winding trails of red dust stands a grey concrete obelisk with a Confederate flag engraved on it. It leads to a small cemetery with 96 tombstones with names such as McAlpine, Newman, Morris and Oliver.

One of the inscriptions reads: "Soldier rest; Thy warfare o'er;

Sleep the sleep that knows no breaking
And days of toil or nights of waking."

Next to it another: "In loving memory of Alice Kathleen Hawthorne; Lent to us July 21, 1876; Called home while sleeping June 8th 1892;

Safe in the arms of Jesus; Safe from corroding care;
Safe from the world's temptations; Sin cannot harm her there."

The cemetery could be one of many in the American South. It is located, instead, in southern Brazil, about 78 miles from the industrial city of Sao Paulo.

It lies about five miles from a town called Americana in a eucalyptus forest overlooking vast plantations of sugar cane and cotton.

The graves belong to Confederate immigrants who left the South almost immediately after the end of the Civil War in 1865, preferring to start new lives rather than live under reconstruction.

"They felt conditions under reconstruction would be impossible for them, so they decided to start anew," says Judith MacKnight Jones, who has chronicled the Confederate immigration to Brazil in a book entitled "Soldado Descansa" (Soldier Rest).

Mrs. Jones, 59, is a third generation descendant of Col. William Hutchinson Morris, who brought the pioneers to Brazil.

"The immigration began in 1865 and continued for approximately 10 years during which time about 3,500 Southerners arrived," Mrs. Jones said in a recent interview. "Not all of them remained. About 80 per cent of them returned to the United States by 1875.

"They came from all over the South—Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Texas, South Carolina and Mississippi.

"Most of them were professionals: teachers, doctors and lawyers. Some were farmers or businessmen and yet others were drifters or adventurers. None of them were wealthy, either before or after the Civil War."

In Brazil, they all became planters.

"Brazilians already living in the area named their town Americana in honor of the immigrants because they introduced the plow, the sewing machine and butter making," Mrs. Jones said.

Other Civil War exiles settled in Santarem, a port on the Amazon River, and in Rio Doce in the state of Espirito Santo. Mrs. Jones said these colonies failed and some of the immigrants eventually turned up in Americana where the Southern heritage survives today.

She said the only discrimination encountered by the Americans was religious, "and only in relation to the cemetery.

"The immigrants were all Protestants, and at the time they were not allowed to bury their dead in the Roman Catholic cemetery, so they built their own," Mrs. Jones said.

Today there are only about 20 or 30 families in Americana which can trace their heritage directly to the Southern immigrants.

Once every three months, they meet in a large shaded area adjacent to the cemetery for a lunch of Southern fried chicken.

"It's a way to keep in touch with each other and, in a small way, keep alive our Southern tradition," Mrs. Jones said.

If not for these meetings, she said, it would difficult to keep alive the tradition "since most of the families have been totally assimilated into the Brazilian way of life and don't even speak English at home any longer."

Mrs. Jones speaks fluent Portuguese with a slight Southern American accent, and fluent English with a slight Portuguese accent. Americana, now an industrialized city of about 68,000 persons, is famous for its textile mills and its "aguardente"—a local firewater made of unrefined rum.

Mrs. Jones, who is working toward a master's degree in education while teaching at the local high school, also is involved in efforts to build a museum next to the cemetery. It will contain objects that testify to the Confederate presence in Brazil.

Weiskopf One Up On Nicklaus

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf came from six strokes off the pace, stormed past struggling, grimly frustrated Jack Nicklaus with a six-under-par 66 and assumed command in Saturday's drama-packed third round of the Masters Golf Tournament.

Tall Tom, a three-time runner-up in this event but never a winner, put together a 34-hole total of 207, nine under par in sunny and windy weather on the Augusta National Golf Club course, 7,020 yards of rolling Georgia hills that suddenly turned a potential rout into a race.

Nicklaus, who matched a couple of tournament records over the first two rounds and appeared poised to make it a run-away, suddenly developed some putting problems and plummeted back to second with a struggling, one-over-par 73. At 208, he trails Weiskopf by one going into Sunday's last round of the chase for the famed green jacket Nicklaus has won four times previously and Weiskopf wants so desperately to wear for the first time.

Record-setting Johnny Miller, meanwhile, copped a couple of more standards—but missed the one he wanted—and suddenly became a factor in this prestigious tournament that holds such a unique position in the world of golf.

The slender blond, who has the happy habit of forging some extremely low scores, reeled off an improbable string of six birdies in a row and shot a seven-under-par 65 that gave him a 211 total, five under par and four back of Weiskopf.

Red-haired Tom Watson was next, matching par 72 for 212 as such glamor names as Arnold Palmer, Billy Casper, Lee Trevino and Gary Player joined Nicklaus in the miseries of the mid-70s.

But while all had their troubles, none, perhaps, was more stunned than Bobby Nichols. The long-hitting Nichols once crept to within two shots of the lead, but three-putted for bogey on the par-five 15th, a bogey that sent him reeling back to a 72 and a 213 total. He played his last four holes three over par.

He was tied with the portly Casper, a 43-year-old former winner who went to a 73.

No one else was close. Arnold Palmer, the still-hopeful 45-year-old who once dominated this ancient game, played in the final twosome with Nicklaus and struggled and strained to a 75 and 215.

Nothing went right for Arnold, now graying and wearing glasses but still the most popular player the game has ever known. His approaches found the deep, white-sand bunkers. His putts wouldn't fall. His drives went awry.

But still he kept trying, fighting it all the way. He swung so hard at one tee shot he almost left his feet and got some good-natured ribbing from Nicklaus.

He was tied with Trevino, who was as grim-faced as an Aztec god in his frustrations. Trevino, promoted to make another of his off-again, on-again appearances here after he won the PGA National Championship last fall, shot himself out of title contention with a 74. He was tied with Palmer and the other Miller, Allen Miller, at 215. Allen, no relation to Johnny, had a 72.

Player, the little South African who won this crown and the British Open title last year, went to a 73-eight shots high.

Player, the little South African who won this crown and the British Open title last year, went to a 73-eight shots higher than Johnny Miller, his playing partner—and was at 219.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin had a 71-218.

The dramatic swing from Hicklaus to Weiskopf was reminiscent of the third round of the Heritage Classic just two weeks ago. Nicklaus owned a six-shot lead going into that one, but shot a 74 and Weiskopf tied him with a 68. Nicklaus, however, won the Heritage on the final day. "Yes," Weiskopf agreed after a question, "this is a lot like it—but I sure hope it doesn't turn out the same way."

Weiskopf recovered from that disappointment to score a front-running victory in the Greensboro Open last week and came into this event with his formidable attack at a peak. He was listed as the second favorite behind Nicklaus.

Now, suddenly as summer lightning, the roles are reversed. He built his charge on some fantastic putting.

But that part of his game was slow in coming.

"I really think I played just about as good in the first two rounds," he said, "but the putts didn't fall." He had scores of 69 and 72 in the drizzly damp of the first two days play.

He scored from five feet for a birdie on the second hole, then three-putted for bogey on the second.

Then the short stick began to work.

The undeniably talented but sometimes temperamental man saved par from 10 feet on the third hole. He ran in an 18-footer for duce on the sixth. He needed only an 18-inch putt for birdie on the par-five eighth and chipped to 12 inches to save par on the ninth.

But the big move was still to come. It came on the back nine, and it started quickly.

He dropped a 30-footer on the 10th.

He two-putted from 30 feet for birdie on the par-five 13th.

He scored from 15 feet on the 16th.

And he took the lead alone with a sidehill putt of 16-18 feet on the final hole, a stroke that sent him leaping into the air in joy.

The 16th and 18th were the keys he said, because they followed a missed birdie on the 15th, when he failed on a three-foot effort.

"I was disappointed to miss that one, of course," he said. "But, the way I was playing, I figured there was no reason I couldn't birdie a couple of those holes going home and that's just what happened."

Nicklaus, meanwhile, was having his putting problems.

He was bunkered on the first and missed a six-foot par-saving putt.

He managed to birdie the par five second, coming out of a trap to four feet.

But, with Weiskopf and Miller charging, and Nichols making a move, Nicklaus began to falter. He three-putted the ninth for bogey.

He three-putted the 11th for bogey.

Rockets Rip Knicks To Take The Series

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston bench, led by Gus Bailey, Ron Riley and Zaid Abdul-Aziz, fueled a late second-quarter rally to lead the Rockets to a 118-86 rout of New York in the deciding game of their National Basketball Association playoff Saturday.

The victory gave Houston a 2-1 edge in the best-of-three series and put the Rockets into a best-of-seven second-round set against the Atlantic Division champion Boston Celtics Monday.

The Ronkets substitutes, which also were instrumental in Houston's 99-84 victory in the first games, hit eight of 12 field goal attempts in the first half, mostly in the final three minutes when the Rockets outscored the Knicks 12-3 to take a 54-43 halftime lead.

A basket and two free throws by Ed Ratliff plus two straight baskets by Bailey and two more by Aziz sparked the spurt for the Rockets, who are in the playoffs for the first time.

The only time New York scored in that span was on a three-point play by Walt Frazier, who led the Knicks with 24 points.

Rudy Tomjanovich scored 25 for the Rockets, and guard Calvin Murphy added 20.

The Knicks, in the playoffs for the ninth straight year, couldn't match Houston in the third quarter as the Rockets maintained their surge. The Rockets boosted their lead to 64-49 after four minutes of play in the period on a jump shot by Tomjanovich.

Except for a brief span where Houston had four straight turnovers, the Rockets were in command the rest of the game.

Starters Ratliff and Mike Newlin each scored 14 points for Houston, but it was Rocket bench that was difference. Aziz, replaced as the starting center by Kevin Kunnert earlier this season, scored 14 points. Bailey added 10 and Riley contributed four.

Earl Monroe scored 15 points, Hawthorne Wingo 11 and Jim Barnett 10 for the Knicks in the nationally televised game.

Tomjanovich scored six of Houston's first eight points in the game, and the Rockets led through most of the first quarter.

The Knicks tied the game at 19-19 on two foul shots by Monroe and took the lead briefly at 21-20 with 2:04 left in the opening quarter.

Steve Hawes wiped out New York's final lead of the game when he tied the score at 36-36 on a jumpshot with 6:24 left in the second quarter. Ratliff's two free throws with 5:46 remaining put Houston ahead for good.

Simmons Paces Cardinal Victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ted Simmons triggered a three-run rally with a run-scoring single in the second inning and then knocked in the go-ahead run with another base hit in the ninth, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

After the Phillies tied the game 5-5 in the seventh, the Cardinals rallied in the ninth as Ted Sizemore opened with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Bake McBride. Reggie Smith was then walked intentionally before Simmons' single gave the Cardinals a 6-5 lead. A bounce by Keith Hernandez later produced the Cardinals' seventh run.

The Phillies tied the score in the seventh on a run-scoring single by pinch hitter Tony Taylor. Willie Montanez triggered the rally with a one-out single, moved to second on Greg Luzinski's base hit and rode home on Taylor's single to center off Cardinal starter Bib Gibson.

The Cardinals took a 3-0 lead in the second inning of Philadelphia starter Steve Carlton. Smith opened the rally with a triple and scored on Simmons' single. Sacrifice flies by Ed Brinkman and Gibson produced two more runs for St. Louis.

The Cardinals added a run in the fourth on Ken Reitz' RBI single before the Phillies came back to tie the game with a four-run fifth. Dave Cash and Montanez each knocked in two runs with doubles.

Smith's seventh-inning double gave the Cards a 5-4 lead before the Phillies came back to tie it.

Suggs Is Buc Star

CHAPEL HILL—Carter Suggs paced the East Carolina University effort in the Carolina Relays Saturday, and was one of two double winners during the afternoon.

Suggs ran a leg on the winning 440-yard relay team which was timed in 41.0 seconds. Joining him were Arian Johnson, Maurice Huntley and Robert Franklin.

Suggs also won the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds. Huntley finished fifth in the race with a time of 9.9 seconds.

Jim Willets took first place in the 880-yard run with a time of 1:54.9, while Mike Cunningham was fifth in 1:56.4.

The mile relay team of Ben Duckenfield, Huntley, Franklin and Suggs finished second, setting a new school record of 3:14.7.

Al McCrimmon was fourth in the high jump at 6-6, while John Johnson was fourth in the discus at 146-7. Tom Watson finished fourth in the shot put with a toss of 50-2.

Coach Pat Dye was a much happier man Saturday afternoon following the second weekend scrimmage of the East Carolina Football team. Last week, when the Bucs went through their first scrimmage, Dye wasn't pleased at all.

"We've made a hell of a lot of improvement in a week's time," he said. "We have the makings of a pretty good football team. We have so far to come, however, it's hard to see what we really will be."

"We've been fortunate not to get any more hurt than we have so far," he added. "It's a credit to our off-season conditioning program." Dye said there had been very few injuries, and none to key personnel.

"The best thing about the scrimmage was that we put our best up against our second unit, and the first team won 20-17. That is an indicator that we have a lot more people of equal ability than we did last year. But we're still a young team. We have only six seniors, and 17 juniors on our top 44."

The coach feels that his two top quarterbacks (with Mike

Pearson Grabs Pole With Record Times

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — David Pearson and four other drivers broke the track qualifying record Saturday as Pearson put the Wood Brothers' Mercury on the pole for Sunday's Rebel 500 stock car race at Darlington Raceway.

Pearson, last man on the track during the first section of the rain-delayed time trials, toured the 25-year-old oval at 155.433 miles an hour, breaking Charlie Glotzbach's 1970 record of 153.822.

He bumped Buddy Baker's Ford into the outside position on the front row. Baker had turned the lap in 154.783.

Also breaking the old record were Richard Petty, who qualified his Dodge third in 154.036; Darrell Waltrip, who pushed his Chevrolet around in 153.929; and Dick Brooks, who came in at 154.157.

Brooks missed the morning trials because of mechanical problems but set the pace for the afternoon runs. He will start in the 21st position.

Glotzbach's old record was set before the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing restricted carburetor openings.

Pearson and the other drivers credited several factors for their increased speeds. The Darlington track has a new coat of asphalt over two-thirds of its surface.

"It's taken the humps out," Pearson said.

The cars have better tires, Pearson added, and the cool, damp weather Saturday morning was "perfect for qualifying. The car stuck (to the track) really good. Once or twice I thought I might slide but I didn't."

Pearson will be looking for his fourth straight victory in the Rebel 500, and his sixth since 1968. He has not won any of this season's seven NASCAR races, but he said he wasn't worried.

"We hadn't won last year until we came here. We're doing better this year than we did then," he said.

Behind Pearson in the third row will be Bobby Allison in a Matador, and Benny Parsons in a Chevrolet. Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough, both in Chevroles, occupy the fourth row. Dave Marcis in a Dodge and Lennie Pond in a Chevrolet round out the top 10 qualifiers.

Joe Frasson qualified his Pontiac 15th, but he spun out and struck the wall after finishing his trial. Both the car and Frasson were banged up enough to miss the race Sunday.

Clear skies were forecast for the race, which carries a purse of at least $15,000 for the winner.

Slam Keys Tiger Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Nate Colbert's grand-slam home run and Bill Freehan's solo blast highlighted a seven-run seventh inning that carried the Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Freehan started the outburst with a homer off Pat Dobson, 0-1, then the Tigers loaded the bases on Dan Meyer's single, a walk to Tom Verzer and Aurelio Rodriguez' single. Another run scored when third baseman Graig Nettles bobbled Ron Leflore's grounder and Gary Sutherland made it 3-0 with a sacrifice fly.

Sutherland took second on the throw home. Willie Horton was intentionally walked to load the bases and Colbert cleared them with his homer, a line drive that curled around the left field foul pole.

The Yankees got two runs off winner Vern Ruhle, 1-0, in the bottom of the seventh on Lou Piniella's bases-loaded single. John Hiller relieved Ruhle and finished up for the Tigers.

Homers Help Oakland Defeat Rangers, 5-4

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Oakland's Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers teamed on a three-hitter, and Sal Bando and Billy Williams hit home runs for the A's in a nationally televised 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday.

Bando's homer drove in three runs and Williams' was his first in the American League, off former teammate Ferguson Jenkins.

It was Blue's second victory of the season. Tom Grieve's 370-foot homer over the left field wall in the third inning and Lenny Randle's run-scoring single in the ninth accounted for the only hits off the Oakland left-hander, who was replaced by Fingers with two out in the ninth. Fingers surrendered a two-run single to Jeff Burroughs.

Blue retired 20 of the first 21 batters he faced.

Williams, who hit 392 homers in 19 seasons in the National League for the Chicago Cubs, greeted good friend Jenkins with a 370-foot line drive homer in the second inning. Jenkins was a 20-game winner six times for the Cubs before coming to the Rangers where he won 25 games in 1974.

With Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and AL President Lee MacPhail looking on, designated hitter Grieve timed a Blue fastball perfectly on a 3-and-2 count to tie the score.

Bando's two-out homer, his first of the year, followed singles by Ted Kubiak and Bill North in Oakland's fifth frame.

Jenkins was treated roughly by the hard-hitting A's. He beat them five times in five outings last year but surrendered 10 hits Saturday in seven innings en route to his second loss of the year.

The A's chased Jenkins in the eighth inning when Reggie Jackson doubled and Joe Rudi singled. Jim Merritt got Williams on a pop fly to right field.

Ranger Manager Billy Martin brought on Stan Thomas who forced Gene Tenace to pop to third. Oakland scored its fifth run when Thomas barked a throw to first base, scoring Jackson. Kubiak lined to left field to end the inning.

Blue, now the ace of the Oakland staff with the departure of Catfish Hunter to the New York Yankees, retired 19 batters in a row after Grieve's homer. He walked Jim Sundberg as the second batter in the ninth. Cesar Tovar walked and Randle singled home Sundberg with two out.

Fingers relieved Blue at this point and Burroughs served up a single, driving home two runs. Jim Spencer flew to deep center for the final out.

It was the fourth loss in five games for Texas and put the Rangers three games behind the defending world champion A's who are leading the AL West.

Attendance was 20,598.

Bosox Finally Win In 13th

BALTIMORE (AP) — Doug Griffen's run-scoring single in the 13th inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Bob Montgomery started the 13th with a walk off Baltimore reliever Jesse Jefferson. Jim Rice sacrificed pinch runner Rick Miller to second and, after Rick Burleson walked, Miller raced home on Griffen's single to center.

Dwight Evans tied the game at 2-2 for Boston and sent it into extra innings when he belted his first home run of the season with one out in the ninth off starter Ross Grimsley.

Juan Beniquez rapped Grimsley's first pitch of the game for a single and moved to third on a double by Carl Yastrzemski. Tony Conigliaro singled to score Beniquez, but right fielder Ken Singleton's throw to catcher Dave Duncan caught Yastrzemski at home.

Baltimore matched Boston's first-inning run when Paul Blair walked, moved to third on a double by Tommy Davis and scored when Davis was tagged out on a grounder by Lee May.

NICKLAUS WORKED HARD NORTH PALM BEACH (AP) — Jack Nicklaus won only two golf tournaments in 1974 and now he says he has worked harder on his game to prepare for the 19 5 tour. While he won $238,000 to finish second behind Johnny Miller in money won in 1974, Nicklaus would rather have won more than the Tournament Players Championship in Atlanta and the Hawaiian Open.

Last year he had three second place finishes. They came in the PGA, the World Open, in which he lost a playoff to Miller, and the Colonial National at Fort Worth.

Gene Sarazen was 71 years old when he competed in the 1973 Masters tournament, his 34th.

When Jimmy Demaret won the 1940 Masters, the Texan completed the last nine holes of the first round in 30 strokes.

Brewers Score Early For Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Charlie Moore's two-run double capped a four-run first inning and Robin Yount and Sixto Lezcano belted solo home runs to lead the Milwaukee Brewers past the Cleveland Indians 6-5 Saturday.

Boog Powell drove in three runs for Cleveland with his second and third home runs of the season, and George Hendrick added a leadoff homer in the ninth.

A walk to John Briggs, Hank Aaron's double and an intentional walk to George Scott loaded the bases for the Brewers against lefty Fritz Peterson in the first.

Don Money beat out and infield hit to score one run, Lezcano doubled in another and Moore followed with his two-run double.

Powell and Yount exchanged home runs in the second and Lezcano's home run made it 6-1 for Milwaukee in the third.

Hendrick singled for the Indians in the fifth and came around to score on two wild pitches and an error. Oscar Gamble followed with a double and Powell belted his second homer of the baseball game.

Babe Ruth To Have Prep Loop

The Greenville Babe Ruth League will inaugurate a special 13-year-old Prep League this year, and is aiming for four teams to participate in the loop.

"We hope to get at least 60 13-year-olds out for the league," Babe Ruth League President Roy Selby said. "We are still looking for coaches and sponsors, too, but we hope to have all that arranged before the tryouts."

Selby added that over 60 boys aged out of the Little League program in Greenville last year. "We hope that all these boys will come out for the new league. In the past, we have felt that many youths didn't feel they could make the transition from Little League to Babe Ruth and successfully compete with the older boys. But with a league exclusively for the 13-year-olds, they will be able to play a great deal more and develop their skills."

Selby hopes that with the success of the prep league, the six-team Babe Ruth loop could later be expanded.

Registration for both this league and for the regular league will be held on Saturday from 10 a.m. until 12 noon, and on Monday, April 21, from 5:30 until 9 p.m. at Elm Street Gym.

The leagues are open to all boys and girls born between August 1, 1959 and July 31, 1962.

Tryouts for the two leagues will be held on Thursday and Friday, April 24 and 25 at 6:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium, and again on Saturday, April 26, 8:30 a.m., also at Guy Smith.

Selby pointed out that this year, the regular league will have an expanded program. Currently plans call for the league to begin play on May 23, with the first part of the season to end on July 3. A second part of the season would begin on July 7 and continue through July 29, giving each team a 25-game slate.

Plans now call for an 18-game schedule for the 13-year-old league.

Following the end of the school year, the league will begin every night play. On Monday, Wednesday and Fridays, two 14-15 year-old games will be played at Guy Smith Stadium. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, one 13 and one 14-15 game will be played at the new Jaycee Park. Saturdays will see one 14-15 year old game at Guy Smith, and will also be used for make-up games.

"We feel that by expanding our season, and adding the 13-year-old prep league, we will do a lot to help improve baseball in Greenville," Selby said. "We want to involve more youths in the program and give them more playing time too."

Anyone interested in coaching in either the regular or prep league is asked to contact Selby at 758-5145 after 6 p.m. Anyone interested in sponsoring a 13-year-old team may contact Woody Peele at 752-6166 or 758-4207.

Pirate Singles Nail New York To The Wall

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who normally travel on the long ball express, took a dozen short trips against the New York Mets and still got where they wanted to go.

The powerful Pirate bats were coming up a little short Friday. They scratched out 12 hits—all singles—but if they didn't belt the Mets into submission, at least they pawed them to death.

"We'll get our share of home runs here," said Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh after the Pirates scored a subtle 4-3 victory over the Mets. "Give it some time."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Chicago Cubs edged the Montreal Expos 2-1; the Atlanta Braves beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2; the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Philadelphia Phillies 6-3; the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Houston Astros 7-0, and the San Diego Padres dumped the Cincinnati Reds 5-2.

The Pirates shortened the fences at Three Rivers stadium during the off-season, but the only beneficiaries on Friday were the Mets, who carried a 3-0 lead into the ninth inning on solo homers by Dave Kingman and Del Unser and a run-scoring double by Joe Torre.

Pittsburgh, in its home opener, was held to seven singles by Jerry Koosman until the ninth. Consecutive singles by Richie Zisk, Dave Parker and Manny Sanguillen knocked in one run and chased Koosman.

Rookie reliever Rick Baldwin, making his first major league appearance, then walked pinch-hitter Paul Popovich to load the bases. One out later, Rennie Stennett singled up a middle to tie the score.

Cubs 2, Expos 1

Pete Lacoock's long fly ball was supposed to move the runner up a base. It got the job done and more for the Cubs.

Rick Monday singled in the eighth and was safe at second on an infield error. Lacoock followed with a deep drive to right field, long enough for Monday to take third. But when Carter fell down after making the grab, Monday steamed home for the winning run against the Expos.

"It was just one of those things," said Carter. "I was going backward, but the ball carried and I had to keep going back quicker and my momentum caused me to fall down."

Monday never saw Carter's sit-down in right field. "I didn't find out that Carter fell down until I reached the dugout," he said. "As soon as the ball came in contact with his glove I took off."

Dodgers 7, Astros 0

Don Sutton checked Houston on four hits and Los Angeles beat Houston for the Dodgers' first victory of the season.

Bill Buckner backed Sutton's pitching, contributing a solo homer in the third inning off losing pitcher Tom Griffin and a run-scoring double in the fifth. Jim Wynn doubled in runs in the fifth and ninth.

Sutton struck out nine and walked one.

Cards 6, Phillies 3

Bake McBride rapped four hits and batted in four runs, three of them with an inside-the-park home run, leading St. Louis past Philadelphia.

Lou Brock led off the Cards' third with a single and Ted Sizemore walked before McBride ripped a shot to right-center that right fielder Mike Anderson got his glove on, but couldn't hold and the ball rolled to the wall.

Padres 5, Reds 2

Enzo Hernandez and Dave Winfield each knocked in two runs to help the San Diego Padres and pitcher Dan Spillner beat Cincinnati. The loss was the first in four games for the Reds.

Braves 4, Giants 2

Darrell Evans' two-run homer in the eighth carried Atlanta over San Francisco. With the score tied 2-2, Ralph Garr beat out an infield grounder to start the Braves' eighth and moved to second on a sacrifice. Evans then knocked his homer over the screen in right-center field.

Thompson Sparks Aloha Cage Win

HONOLULU (AP) — North Carolina State's All-American David Thompson scored 31 points in another dazzling shooting display as he led the South All-Stars to a 109-98 victory over the Midwest All-Stars in Friday's session of the 7th annual Aloha Basketball Classic.

In Friday's other Aloha game, Bowling Green's Corneliush Cash hit for 26 points to spark the West All-Stars to a 100-95 win over the East team.

Thompson, who had scored 41 points Thursday as the South lost a 114-113 thriller to the West, hit on nine of 11 shots from the floor to give the South team a 58-46 halftime margin. Midwest never came closer than nine points after that.

The South had six blocked shots in the first half, with 7-foot-1 Fessor Leonard of Furman University getting two of them as he played an outstanding game on the boards.

Monte Towse, Thompson's teammate on the North Carolina State team, scored 17 points for the South. Kentucky's Kevin Grevey had 16, Alabama's Charles Cleveland 14, and West Virginia's Jerome Anderson 11.

Ken "Grasshopper" Smith of Tulsa University led the Midwest All-Stars with 24 points, followed by DePaul's Bill Robinson with 20 and Cleveland State's Ted Hathaway with 16.

In Saturday's closing play of the round-robin classic, South meets East in the first game and West plays Midwest in the feature.

Rampants Pace Review Of Boys, Girls Track

Based on times turned in to date, Rose High School's Rampant track teams, both boys and girls, should be heavy favorites to win this year's Pitt County Track Meets.

Farmville Central won the boys' title last year, nosing out the Rampants in a hard-fought match, but the Rampants appear to have more depth at this point, based on best times, as reported to The Daily Reflector.

In the girls' standings, Rose also has a wide margin as the lassies prepare for their first county-wide meet.

The annual Pitt County Track Meet for boys will be held on April 25, while the girls' meet is scheduled for April 28.

Based on current best times, and including two schools in the area, but not involved in the county meet, Greene Central and Williamston, in a point rundown, Rose could "earn" 127½ points, well ahead of arch-rival Farmville Central, which could gain 62.

Greene Central would follow with 42 1-6, followed distantly by Conley, 12½; Williamston, 8½; and Ayden-Grifton, 2 1-3.

Among the girls, Rose would pile up 101 2-3 points, easily outpacing Ayden-Grifton, second with 51. Farmville Central would follow with 32, while Williamston had 22 1-3, and Conley, 19.

North Pitt has not reported any boys' times this year, and is not fielding a girls team this year. Greene Central also does not field a girls' track team.

The Rampants, on paper, would win nine individual events, and tie for first in another, along with capturing one of the relay events. Farmville Central would win three, while Greene Central would win one, share first in another and take the other relay event.

Rose would lead the way in individual stars, having one triple winner, Lindberg Morris.

He currently has best times in the marks in the 220-yard dash, the long jump and the triple jump.

Farmville Central's Ray Hardy is the only other multiple winner, with the best marks in the 440-yard dash and the discus throw.

In the girls' events, Rose would take six events, share first in two and take all three of the relays. Ayden-Grifton would win three, while Farmville would win one and share another. Williamston could gain a share of first in one event.

Rose has two potential double winners. Pat Hardy has the best distances in the shot put and the discus, while Bonnie Lee has the best time in the 60-yard hurdles and shares the best mark for the 110-yard hurdles.

Marletha Kilpatrick of Ayden-Grifton would be a double winner. She holds the best times in the mile and the 880-yard runs.

Weiskopf. . .

He got one back with a 12-15 foot putt on the 12th, but quickly reverted.

He three-putted the 13th for par, after reaching the green on the par five hole in two.

He missed from eight feet for birdie on the 15th, a failure that had him taking an unhappy little hop of frustration.

Coming home, over the last three holes, his mouth was a tight, grim line.

He tried mightily, booming his drives, studying his approaches, hanging for a seeming eternity over the putts.

Nothing happened. He parred in and suddenly was a challenger instead of the commander.

Miller, who captured the nation's fancy with the gaudy arithmetic he scrawled across the sunwarmed scoreboards of the southwest at the start of the season, picked off two more records.

His string of six consecutive birds beginning on the second hole was a Masters record. So was his front-nine score of 30. But the one he wanted—the Masters single round record of 64—eluded him.

"I was more interested in the record than I was in the tournament," he said.

But, for a while, before Weiskopf made his closing rush, it appeared that Miller might even challenge for the lead.

"At least I let 'em know I was here," said Miller, who shot a pair of 61s early this season, and who took the 1973 U.S. Open with a record final round of 63.

He started a distant 11 strokes back, but chopped away at that deficit quickly.

Miller birdied the second after chipping to one foot. He scored from 14, 10 and 14 feet on the next three. He almost made hole in one on the sixth and tapped in from one foot. He closed out the string with a 35 footer on the seventh.

His only birdie coming home was from six feet on the 13th, after a good break.

He went for the green on the par five with a fairway wood for his second shot. It just barely cleared Rae's Creek, coming to rest on the bank. A foot lower and he'd have been in the water that flows over the rocks at the bottom of a deep ditch. But Miller chipped close and made the birdie putt.

Hunter Falters, But Aaron Shines In Debut

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Catfish Hunter faltered in his debut as a New York Yankee, but another star, Hank Aaron, shone brightly in his return to Milwaukee.

Hunter, once baseball's most celebrated free agent, took the mound for the first time in a Yankee uniform in New York's home opener Friday, but got cuffed for home runs by Detroit's Willie Horton and Nate Colbert and the Tigers spoiled his premiere, 5-3.

Meanwhile, Aaron returned to Milwaukee, where he started it all 21 years and 733 home runs ago, and contributed a hit and a run batted in to the Brewers' 6-2 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox edged the Baltimore Orioles 6-5 in 12 innings, the Kansas City Royals beat the Minnesota Twins 8-3, the Oakland A's defeated the Texas Rangers 7-5 and the California Angels blanked the Chicago White Sox 5-0.

Hunter found the spotlight a bit too bright. But it has followed him since he signed his reported $3.75-million contract on New Year's Eve.

"It seemed like a World Series," he said, after dealing with a barrage of media people. "I never saw this many writers in Oakland, even during the World Series. And the crowds here are more alive than the ones in Oakland. There you get the same people every day; you can close your eyes and tell where they're sitting."

Despite pitching in seven World Series games and four All-Star contests, the jitters of the debut got to Hunter. "I was a little nervous out there," he conceded. "I was pressing a bit too much."

It didn't take long for the Tigers to jump on the jittery Hunter. The third man up in the first inning was Horton, who cracked a two-run homer to left. Then, after the Yankees had scored three runs in the bottom of the first, Colbert came up in the sixth inning and blasted a three-run shot to left for the victory.

"They're not hitting any maiden when they hit a home run off me," said Hunter, who was tagged for 25 homers while winning 25 games for Oakland last year. "I've heard the ball doesn't travel here, but I proved that wrong."

Mickey Lolich got the victory for the Tigers, with some spectacular relief from John Hiller, who bailed Lolich out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the seventh and then finished up.

Hunter, meanwhile, asked that the 26,212 who turned out to see the new star in town bear with him.

"I'll be more relaxed next time," he promised.

Brewers 6, Indians 2

A crowd of 48,160 came out for Henry Aaron's return to Milwaukee, and greeted the home run king with prolonged standing ovations during pre-game ceremonies.

Aaron drove in the Brewers' initial run in the third inning by bouncing into a force play, then cracked a single in the midst of a five-run Brewer rally in the sixth. Pedro Garcia slammed a two-run double and John Briggs a solo homer in that outburst.

Like Hunter, Aaron said he'll be happy once the media spotlight is turned off, or at least dimmed.

"I just want to get down to baseball," he said.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 5

Carl Yastrzemski's 12th-inning homer was the game-winner, but Tony Conigliaro's sixth-inning blast was the one which drew the most attention in the Boston clubhouse.

"You go too long without hitting a home run, you start thinking about it," said Tony C, who is returning to baseball after a 3½-year absence due to recurring vision problems. "Then you really go into a slump. So I was happy to get it today."

Angels 5, White Sox 0

Nolan Ryan blanked Chicago on six singles and California ruined Claude Osteen's return to the American League by defeating the White Sox.

Ryan, who has permitted only nine hits in winning his first two starts of the season, struck out 10 and walked four as he handed the White Sox their second shutout in as many days.

Chalk paced California's 13-hit attack with a double and three singles, giving him seven hits in his first nine at-bats this season.

Favored Teams All ABA Losers

By The Associated Press

The unexpected has become commonplace in the American Basketball Association.

Friday night, the teams favored to win all lost and, as a result, the ABA playoffs are a little more scrambled today.

In St. Louis, rookie sensation Marvin Barnes outdueled Julius Erving during a hectic final three minutes and led the Spirits of St. Louis to a 113-108 victory over the New York Nets.

The triumph by the young Spirits, their second in a row over the defending ABA champions, provided them with a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven series. Game Four will be played in St. Louis on Sunday.

In Memphis, Stew Johnson scored 25 points and had 11 rebounds to lead the Sounds to a 107-93 playoff victory over the Kentucky Colonels. It was the first playoff victory for Memphis in its five-year history and set the best-of-seven series against Kentucky at 3-1 with a fifth game to be played Sunday in Louisville.

In Salt Lake City, captain Ron Boone led a first-half surge that carried the Utah Stars to a 132-110 rout of the Denver Nuggets. This Western Division playoff series is now knotted at 2-2 and moved to Denver for game No. 5 Saturday night.

In the other ABA playoff, the Indiana Pacers, leading 3-0, had a chance to wrap up their series against the San Antonio Spurs in Indianapolis Saturday night.

Spirits 113, Nets 108

Barnes rambled through and around the Nets to score a game-high 35 points. Close behind were Erving, the ABA's Most Valuable Player, and Spirits guard Freddie Lewis, who scored 30 points each.

"They scored 108 points. I thought they played well," said St. Louis Coach Bob MacKinnon. "We just played better. It just feels good to win. But there's a long way to go."

Sounds 107, Colonels 93

Johnson had heavy support from Sounds teammates Tom Owens, Chuck Williams and George Carter, who each scored 24 points as the Sounds broke Kentucky's 13-game winning streak.

Dan Issel scored 26 and Louie Dampier had 21 for Kentucky, which trailed most of the game.

Stars 132, Nuggets 110

Boone hit 30 points for Utah to lead all scorers. Randy Denton added 22, Moses Malone contributed 18 points and six blocked shots and John Roche, Jim Eakins and Al Smith chipped in 17, 16 and 15 points, respectively, for the Stars.

Aaron: Thrill To Be Back

By DENNIS KOIS
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Henry Aaron says it's a thrill to be back in Milwaukee, but he had nothing on more than 48,000 other idol-worshippers who Friday joyously ended their 10-year separation with the Beer-town Bambino.

Hammerin' Hank, who hit more than half of his major league record 733 home runs performing for the Milwaukee Braves, marched off to Atlanta when the Braves left in 1966.

But he marched back last November when Atlanta traded him home to the Brewers, and since then fans eagerly awaited for Friday's home-season opener the way a desert traveler lusts for water.

His team's symbol is a beer keg instead of an Indian warrior. He runs to the clubhouse to keep warm between innings, and he wears a streamlined knit uniform that doesn't quite hide his advancing paunch.

There was nobody named Adcock, Burdette, Spahn or Mathews on the field with Aaron, just a bunch of guys named Scott, Briggs, Money, Coluccio, Lezcano, Yount and Garcia—some of whom weren't even born when Aaron first put on a uniform and walked out of the County Stadium dugout.

But the cap still has a big "M" on the front, there's no mistaking that swing, and even if he is 41 years old, Aaron's wrists still perform as if they were created just to propel a baseball bat in an arc a little more powerful than anyone else's.

Dressed in winter coats, hats, scarves, mittens and gloves for the 37-degree weather, the fans sang "Hello Henry" to the tune of "Hello Dolly," and stood and cheered for nearly two minutes when No. 44 finally walked out on the County Stadium field.

Tommy Jacobs was a 17-year-old amateur when he played in his first Masters golf tournament at Augusta, Ga., in 1929. He's the youngest amateur ever to compete in the event.

PACKING UP—Lee Elder gives his caddie, Henry Brown, right, an assist in packing his golf bag at Augusta Friday when he failed to make the cut in the Masters. Elder was the first black ever to play in the prestigious event. (AP Wirephoto)

It was not a good night for playoff forecasters. All three of the teams expected to win playoff games Friday night went down to defeat. As a result, the Stanley Cup quarter-final matchups are as follows:

Toronto Maple Leafs vs. Philadelphia Flyers.

Chicago Black Hawks vs. Buffalo Sabres.

Vancouver Canucks vs. Montreal Canadiens.

New York Islanders vs. Pittsburgh Penguins.

The end came rapidly for the New York Rangers, Boston Bruins and Los Angeles Kings, the teams expected to cruise through their best-of-three first round series and into the quarter-final action which begins Sunday.

But the upstart, third-year Islanders handed the Rangers sudden death with a 4-3 overtime victory; Black Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito came back from Tuesday's opening game embarrassment with a 52-save, 6-4 triumph over the Bruins, and the Maple Leafs topped the Kings 2-1 in the fight-marred deciding game of their series.

So the Flyers, Sabres, Canadiens and Canucks—four teams which drew byes for winning division championships—will spring into action Sunday. All but Vancouver will have the home ice advantage.

The Black Hawks and Sabres will compete in the national television game on NBC at 3:30 p.m., EDT.

Islanders 4, Rangers 3

Just 11 seconds into the extra session, veteran J.P. Parise slammed in a pass from Jude Drouin to help the Islanders upset the Rangers and win their first playoff series ever.

Black Hawks 6, Bruins 4

Tony Esposito recovered from Tuesday night's series opening 8-2 bombing to play a spectacular game in Thursday night's overtime victory, then help Chicago into the quarter-finals Friday night. Cliff Koroll and J.P. Bordeleau scored two goals each in Esposito's support.

Maple Leafs 2, Kings 1

Toronto Coach Red Kelly got some long-awaited vengeance against the team that fired him when his Maple Leafs—sparked by the goaltending of Gord McRae—held off the Kings.

Jury To Decide On Rozelle Rule

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A jury will decide whether the National Football League's so-called "Rozelle rule" and part of the college player draft are reasonable and legal, a judge has ruled.

After hearing arguments Friday, U.S. District Court Judge William T. Sweigert denied an NFL request that he set aside his partial summary judgment of Dec. 20.

But he modified it in an interim pretrial order so that evidence can be offered to the jury by the NFL and former Boston Patriots quarterback Joe Kapp, who brought the suit.

Trial on Kapp's suit is tentatively set to begin May 19.

Judge Sweigert said the two sides could offer evidence to help the jury decide as a matter of fact whether the rules are reasonable, rather than relying on his conclusion that they are "patently unreasonable and illegal" as a matter of law.

The rule applies when a player leaves one team and then signs with another as a free agent. If the two teams involved can't agree, the rule allows NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle to decide how much the new team must pay the old as compensation for the player.

Judge Sweigert declared the rule an unlawful restraint on a player's choice of teams.

He also ruled unlawful a portion of the player draft which "permits perpetual boycott by other NFL teams of a draft prospect, even when the club drafting him refuses or fails within a reasonable time to reach a contract with the player."

Whalers Even Series At 1-1

HARTFORD (AP) — Rick Ley picked up 19 minutes in penalties for his contribution to a wild brawl that spiced the middle period of the second playoff game between the New England Whalers and Minnesota Fighting Saints.

But the defenseman managed to stay on the ice during overtime and give the Whalers a 3-2 victory to tie the World Hockey Association quarter-final series at one game apiece. The best-of-seven series resumes Sunday night in Minnesota.

It was the only WHA playoff game Friday night. The Cleveland Crusaders try to even their series with the defending champion Houston Aeros in the second game tonight. The Toronto Toros play at San Diego, which leads 1-0 and Phoenix, down 2-0 travels to Quebec in the other games tonight.

Ley scored his first goal of the playoffs on a low slap shot past Minnesota goalie John Garrett with 6:46 gone in sudden death overtime.

"I just wanted to keep the shot low and on net," said Ley. "Al Karlander dug the puck out from behind the net and Garry Swain got it to me with a perfect pass."

The Whalers have yet to lose an overtime game this season, having won seven and tied five during the regular campaign.

"We just live a good life," said Kelley. "I don't know how to explain it, but we'll take 'em like that anytime."

Life wasn't so good during the melee that erupted with 1:10 gone in the second period and held up play for 32 minutes.

It started when New England's Larry Pleau and Minnesota's Bill Butters went to the penalty box with two-minute roughing penalties. Pleau left the box moments later when a fight broke out. Butters followed and hit him from behind.

Then both benches emptied. "Butters hit Pleau with a sucker shot," said Kelley. "It's as simple as that. The rest was spontaneous."

Offensively, the Whalers got off to a good start. They took the lead when Wayne Carleton scored in the first period, and extended it to 2-0 on defenseman Brad Selwood's goal midway through the second period.

But Minnesota came back on goals by George Morrison in the second period and Ron Busniuk early in the third to send the game into overtime.

The game lasted three hours and 47 minutes and set eight WHA records for penalties. The second-period melee resulted in penalties to 11 players for 119 minutes. There were 39 penalties for 217 minutes for the entire game.

A Soybean Tour To "South Of The Border"

DISCUSSES FARMING. . . Stencil Dilda discussing farming with Lucio Miranda, the owner of a 30,000 acre farm in Brazil. Miranda's farm grows 7,000 acres of soybeans annually.

Stencil Dilda of Fountain, past president of the North Carolina Soybean Producers Association, Inc., has returned home after spending two weeks studying soybean markets and production in three Latin American countries.

He participated as North Carolina's representative on the Soybean Presidents Mission to Mexico, Colombia and Brazil, where the U.S. group met with industry and government officials to explore ways to help increase the use of soybeans in these countries.

The trip was sponsored by Elanco Products Company, manufacturer of Treflan soybean herbicide.

In Mexico City, the group reviewed progress of a joint Mexico-U.S. project which is working to enrich the protein content of Mexican diets by using soy flour as a supplement to corn meal and wheat flour in traditional foods.

"During a visit to a factory of Industrial De Alimentos, S.A., in Mexico City, we saw baby food, textured soy protein, soy flour, dry breakfast food and a chocolate soy drink mix all being processed from raw soybeans.

"Company officials said they are unable to keep up with the demand despite continued plant expansion," Dilda added. "Mexico does not have the potential to be large soybean producers."

The traditional diet of Mexico is based on corn, beans, peppers, and rice. Among the poor, protein is often deficient and in younger children this results in an abnormally high death from pneumonia, measles and intestinal infections. Such children have low energy levels and sleep more than normal. As a result they are often hindered in their school progress.

"The Mexican government, aware of this problem, is studying ways to add soy protein to milk distributed to the poor. They also are starting programs to fortify such basics as corn tortillas and wheat bread with 56 percent protein soy flour. It was also announced that the Mexican Social Security Agency has a major study of ways to use soy protein in their institutional food programs, Dilda explained.

Dilda said the Mexican program is the prototype of what the American Soybean Association would like to see all over Latin America, India and parts of Africa—wherever people suffer from protein deficiency.

Individual children in one test in Mexico gained as much as seven pounds in three weeks when fed three glasses each day of Soyacit chocolate drink, in addition to their regular meals. Average weight gains for the entire test group of 125 grade school children was three pounds in three weeks.

The U.S. mission group also visited in Colombia with the aim of increasing the use of U.S. soybeans there.

In Brazil, the group inspected the new soybean crop, now approaching maturity in the field, and evaluated Brazil's future as a soybean producer.

"Brazil is a sleeping giant as far as production is concerned," Dilda said,

"because they have so much land that could be planted.

"Until recently, Brazil has been buying soybeans from the United States. However, they are increasing their production and probably will not have to continue to buy from us."

Dilda said he felt Colombia and Mexico would continue to buy soybeans from the United States because they did not have the potential to plant the quantity of beans to meet the demands in their countries.

Dilda said the U.S. group encouraged industry and government officials in Brazil to use their soybeans rather than sell them on the common market with the United States. Dilda said the ASA wants to continue good market relations with the three countries visited during the mission.

"These countries use a lot of soybeans in their eating," Dilda said.

Dilda said the amount of soybeans produced in Brazil increased from 523,000 metric tons (432,000 acres) from 1965 to seven million metric tons (4,219,000 acres) in 1974.

"They are just beginning their production operations in Brazil and are not quite as advanced as American companies," Dilda stated. "However, their yield is comparable to ours and they plant the same varieties."

The group visited a Brazilian farmer who had increased his farming operations from 125 cultivated acres of land in 1959 to 14,375 cultivated acres in 1974. The total enterprise encompasses 30,000 acres.

The farmer plants about 3,000 acres of dry land rice, 7,500 acres of soybeans, 3,750 acres of wheat and has 1,700 head of cattle.

Dilda said the farmer also produced his own seed for wheat, rice and soybeans. In order to get his grain to market, the grower has a homemade ferry to carry his crop across the river.

"This particular farm had a grain dryer with the capacity of drying 15 tons per hour and a silo with the capacity of storing 9,000 tons," Dilda said.

"We visited another farmer in Brazil who had recently cleared several thousands of acres of jungle land and was growing crops of soybeans, corn and wheat. His farming production also included a large hog operation.

In comparing the soybean production in the United States with other countries, Dilda said the U.S. produces more soybeans than any other country. Other countries look to the U.S. to supply the world market of soybeans.

"The largest U.S. soybean production area in the Midwest, including the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Indiana and Ohio.

"The quantity of soybeans produced in the U.S. varies from year to year—the amount produced usually depends on price, demand, and fertilizer costs," Dilda explained.

Dilda said the soybeans used in the United States are more for feeding livestock than for human consumption.

Dilda said he has eaten soybean products but that he doesn't really care for them. While on the trip, he sampled pork, chicken and beef that soybean extenders had been mixed with.

"I have eaten a soybean steak that is called Joshua file and I enjoyed it," Dilda added.

Dilda operates a 600-acre farm near Fountain. A certified soybean seed producer, he grows 50 acres of soybeans annually.

He is a past president of the Fountain Ruritan Club, past president of the Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Co-op and is a former irrigation sales engineer. Dilda was state supervisor of Agricultural Adjustment Administration in 1939-40, and district fieldman from 1942-47.

Dilda and his wife, Aileen, have five children, Major S. L. Dilda Jr., USAF; Capt. James H. Dilda, USAF; Lillian, Mrs. W. P. Esche, both of Miami, Fla.; and Mrs. Frank Fauner Jr. of Columbia, S.C.

ENJOYING TORTILLAS. . . Stencil Dilda talks with two school girls in Mexico City who are main beneficiaries of protein supplementing programs in Mexico. The three enjoyed a lunch of tortillas that soybean supplements had been added to.

Mario Machado, Host Of "Medix" Series

"Medix" is aired over CBS, WNCT Television, Channel 9, each Sunday morning at 11:30 a.m.

A Sampling of "Medix" Programs Sponsored By Burroughs Wellcome

"The Physical"—Mario Machado undergoes a complete physical to show what doctors are looking for in physical examinations.

"How Drinking Affects Driving"—Four race drivers, three street drivers in a dramatic "sober" and "drunk" driving experience.

"So Old The Pain"—Jane Wyman with host Mario Machado in a program about arthritis, the nation's big crippling disease.

You can tell at first glance that Mario Machado is a man who believes strongly in keeping physically fit and alert.

Yet it is not for the sake alone of staying trim and agile that Mario continues to be active in sports. "Sports are my abiding love," he said. "I thoroughly enjoy playing tennis and swimming."

A native of Shanghai, China, "the son of a Portuguese and Chinese marriage," he speaks English with a fluency that any native American can envy. That despite the fact that he was already a young adult when he and his family left China to come to the United States. An occasional trace of learning English the British way—at a British public school in Shanghai—remains; just enough for a listener to note now and then.

On Friday, West Coast television host Mario Machado spent a typical visitor's day in Greenville—beginning with a guest spot early in the morning on WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" program. Later he talked to drama students at East Carolina University, and met people at Burroughs-Wellcome, the firm sponsoring the "Medix" show which Mario hosts.

During his Greenville visit, he made the rounds with Thack Brown, Public Relations Director for Burroughs Wellcome Company at Research Triangle Park. Brown was also hosting another communications man, William Koblenzer of New York, vice-president of Sales for Syndicast Services, an independent distribution firm. "We're distributing the 'Medix' program throughout the country," Koblenzer said.

Free Spirit
It doesn't take long to discover that Mario Machado is one of those increasingly rare human products in our western 20th century specialized society, a free spirit who has not let himself be harnessed into a stereotyped mold.

"I had planned to be a business man," Mario said, "you know, the typical successful Oriental trader. My early thoughts were directed to the import-export business. But then I got into communications, and . . ." he smiled, making an expansive gesture with his hands.

Mario studied in the business field—at St. Francis Xavier's College in Shanghai, which he attended after being at St. John's Military Academy in Los Angeles. Later, back in the U.S., he graduated from the University of Washington with a degree in business management.

Following graduation, Mario served a business apprenticeship in management with the IBM Corporation, and was afterwards controller for another large company.

Into Broadcasting

Mario's love of soccer—he was a former collegiate soccer player; "and I still play on Mondays and Thursday," he pointed out—led to his career in broadcasting. In 1967 he became broadcaster for the Los Angeles Toros soccer club for a local television station. Since that date, he has also broadcast soccer matches on the CBS television network and in July 1974 was host and anchorman for the World Cup Soccer Championships televised in Germany.

In 1968 Mario joined television station KNXT in Los Angeles as a consumer affairs reporter. It was not long before he was named weekend Sports Reporter for the Saturday and Sunday news broadcasts over that station.

Branches Out

Once again, his unwillingness to be tied exclusively to business or sports broadcasting resulted in his taking on what might be considered an unlikely task for a TV man—host for an entertainment fashion series, "Boutique". At that time he also became a news anchorman for KNXT.

The next step in Mario's communications career came in February, 1972, as host of "Noontime," a daily thirty minute mid-day entertainment series featuring guest celebrities combined with airing the latest news.

Soon after that, Mario was given the assignment of host for "Medix." The "Medix" weekly series, an Emmy Award winner, covers science, medicine, general health care and medical research.

"This is the fourth year of broadcast for 'Medix,'" Mario explained. "Now it is going nationwide over 70 stations because of the Burroughs-Wellcome sponsorship. In addition, it is receiving world wide coverage through the Armed Forces Radio and Television network."

Mario added yet another bead to his growing string of broadcast activities as the host of "It Takes All Kinds."

"This program," Mario said, "is a Los Angeles show, one about minority people, their hopes, their problems, everything about their lives."

Human Concern

The hopes and cares of

MARIO MACHADO . . . host of "Medix," sponsored nationally by Burroughs Wellcome other people is a source of continuing active concern for Mario.

"I like getting involved in community affairs, in things that can help people," he said. "When I get involved, I get enthusiastic."

"Right now I'm programming a benefit concert to be held in June for the International Student Center at the University of California, Los Angeles. This will have stars from six continents. Mel Torme and Sarah Vaughn from the U.S., the Little Angels of Korea, Hugh Masakela of South Africa, Enrico Macias of France, Helen Reddy, the Australian girl, and the famous Brazilian guitarist, Laurindo Almeida.

"There'll also be the Nelson Riddle Orchestra," he added.

Not all of Mario's charitable projects are on so large a scale. "Soon after I return to Los Angeles," he noted, "I'll be playing in a tennis match with Gussie Moran, Lloyd Bridges and Marie Windsor."

TV Specials

TV Specials are favorite assignments for Mario. "I'm doing a CBS special on the subject of compulsive gambling," he said. "It's being taped this month, and will be aired at a later date." Other specials already completed include "It's A Matter of Fat," which he said "is a look at diets and obesity; "Can You Survive Divorce?" and a suicide special "I'll Call You Tomorrow."

"When I was in Israel last summer I did a special on two of our astronauts, Edgar Mitchell and Scott Carpenter, who were also in Israel at the time."

Likes To Travel
Travel is another thing Mario chalks up in the column of things he enjoys doing.

"I would like very much to go back to China again," he said. "I've returned twice, the last time in 1972. My chances to travel were limited then. I want to do an in-depth study of the people, the land. After all, I lived there for many years and can speak two dialects, Shanghaiese and Cantonese. So I feel I'm well qualified to do a creditable job."

In all his travels—Europe, Guatemala, Hawaii, etc, the Friday trip was his first to North Carolina. "I'm glad I came at a time when the azaleas and dogwood are in bloom," he said. "It's really lovely. I like your fresh clean air and the absence of traffic. Above all, I've found real warmth among the people I've met in this short time."

He promised ECU Drama Chairman Edgar Loessin and Mrs. Loessin he would try to return. They assured him it was even lovelier on spring days when it was not raining.

Other Interests

Even the most dedicated sports enthusiast and active worker needs to have some less energetic interests. It was gratifying to find out that Mario Machado is no exception.

"My big hobby is collecting gramophone records," Mario said. "I have about 4,000 now, including some of Chinese music. Another thing I take pleasure in is my collection of paintings. Off-beat, you'd have to call them. But they mean a lot to me personally. For example, I have a lovely painting by a retarded person who's an exceptionally talented artist. I even have an oil done by a lowland gorilla."

"I'm trying also to acquire a small representative collection of Chinese art. You know, when I was young, I didn't recognize the full beauty of many of the Chinese arts. At that time in China many fine things were not expensive. Now," he smiled, "that I'm aware of their beauty, the prices are so high that most are out of my reach."

Now that Mario Machado is being seen as host of the "Medix" series, it's quite possible fate may open up new career challenges for him. With his good looks—a physical heritage of Latin and Chinese—it would not be at all surprising if women viewers across America asked to see him in roles other than that of host. Who knows?

ANNEX ENRICHED BY TWO BEDROOMS, BATHS

By Jerry Bishop

More and more families are finding themselves cramped for space, finding bedrooms too small and baths too few. At the same time, rising real estate costs have made buying a new home more difficult.

If your family finds itself in this situation, consider transforming your present home. Annex Four shows a two bedroom, two bath plan that can change almost any existing home into a more comfortable structure for living.

Attached to the home via an existing hallway, the addition involves two sizable bedrooms, each with plentiful closet space, divided by a double bath complex. Connecting full baths, one with bathtub and one with shower stall, are accessible directly from the bedrooms for convenience and also serve as a buffer zone between bedrooms. The back-to-back bath arrangement promotes economy of construction, since all plumbing is confined to one area.

Another of the addition's advantages is the automatic zoning effect of the wing. Whether reserved for a guest suite or developed into a children's living area, the two bedroom plan offers a certain isolation from the rest of the home yet maintains accessibility.

In this and all Annex Series plans, the homeowner can, at the same time, add on, achieve individuality, and unify the elements of the facade. Roofing and siding are specified to blend with the existing structure, and other design elements, such as the shuttered windows shown in the illustration, may be added or omitted as desired. In addition, room or closet sizes can be adjusted to meet individual needs.

A final advantage of Annex Four is its effect on the resale value of the present home. In today's housing market, a third bedroom is almost an absolute necessity and a fourth highly desirable. With its adjoining baths and ample closet space, the annex becomes a wise investment in the home's future.

You might not have given it a thought, but one of the many ways energy can be saved by mowing your lawn the proper way.

The less time it takes to do the mowing, the less the fuel consumption. And if you don't want to consider it from the standpoint of lower gasoline costs, think of the time saved which might be devoted to more enjoyable leisure pursuits or, for that matter, just resting.

There are three basic types of gasoline-powered mowing equipment. Walk-behind mowers, which may be self-propelled or pushed, have mower blades with cutting widths ranging from 18 to 22 inches. These can cut one third of an acre, a little more or a little less, in one hour's time. Riding mowers have the engine in the rear or the front and have cutting widths of 24 to 36 inches. They can cut anywhere from half an acre to slightly more than an acre in an hour, depending on the size of the mower blade. Garden tractors, which are all-purpose machines, have mowing blades of 36 to 48 inches in width and can cut from an acre and one third to nearly two acres in an hour.

How do you get the most out of your mower? Paul Silliman, an executive with a leading supplier of lawn and garden equipment (Homelite), has these suggestions:

1 — The lowest speed in the mow range (toward stop) is best for cutting common types of grass at normal height. This speed setting minimizes the noise level and fuel consumption. Higher engine speed may be more effective when cutting light, wispy grass such as bahia or rye, or very heavy or tall grass. Also, if the grass is damp, the catcher bag will fill better at higher speeds.

2 — Approach sunken flower beds, edges of drives and walks head-on and let front of mower extend over the edges slightly on each pass. Overhanging grass will be cut cleanly. Guide the left side of the mower along trees, posts or other obstacles and follow the contour as closely as possible.

3 — When mowing wet, thick or heavy grass without a catcher assembly, you should start at the outer edge of the area and mow counter-clockwise so that clippings are always deposited on cut grass. Less engine power is required and a more even cut free of streaks will result.

4 — The correct mower height can make the cutting job easier. On thick or springy grass, for instance, the wheels can sink into the lawn and result in too short a cut if the height is too low. For heavy growth, the height setting should be raised to the highest cutting position. You must then recut the lawn at the lower height you desire.

5 — It is a good idea to change your cutting patterns occasionally in order to eliminate matting, graining and a corrugated appearance. You might wish to progress front to back, side to side or on a diagonal.

Know-How Needed To Sell Home

By DOROTHEA BROOKS

United Press International
"Selling real estate is akin to merchandising any other product. It takes imagination and a creative selling program" — and the right price.

Carl J. Kosnar, licensed real estate broker, president of two real estate firms, consultant, lecturer, sets forth the first proposal in the introduction to his new book, "How to Sell Your Home Without a Real Estate Broker" (McGraw Hill $10.95).

His opening chapter concerns pricing. Price, after all, is one of the first considerations once a family decides to sell its house.

The only thing preceding it is the choice whether to follow custom and employ a broker for a fee or attempt the sale on your own. There are pros and cons for both methods. Kosnar's book is a helpful manual whether you choose the do-it-yourself approach or employ a professional.

Kosnar tells his readers it is possible to sell a property at a price as high as a real estate agent could, thus pocketing his commission, or even at a higher price.

He doesn't say it is easy. He says it can be done, "because no agent will put forth the effort you will to get the highest price for your property," and he tells how, covering preparation of property for sale, advertising, showing the home, negotiating the sale, financing, legal and tax aspects.

Kosnar points out "one of the basic rules of selling anything is to know the product," and he says the homeowner has the advantage in that respect. "Who knows your real estate better than you? ... When you purchased your property, obviously there were amenities that attracted you to this particular piece of real estate."

Amenities, Kosnar explains, are those subjective, intangible benefits which are agreeable to the owner of the real estate. They can include such things as a backyard view, a river or trees, all of which have no value that can be measured precisely but can have a great influence on the selling price of a home. These should be considered very carefully in pricing property.

Other influences are the character of the neighborhood and the design and style of the house. Obviously, proximity of a factory will have more influence on the price of a home than the price of a commercial property. An architectural style that is out of place in a neighborhood also affects price.

And, often, selling price reflects other things than fair market value. A buyer pressured by circumstances to buy may pay more than fair market value; a seller under pressure may take less.

Kosnar outlines the three basic approaches of appraisers in determining real estate value: the cost method, the market method, the income method, all based on facts existing in the market. The last is an indicator chiefly for multi-unit dwellings. Single family homeowners will be concerned primarily with the cost and market methods.

The cost method, Kosnar explains, involves the estimated per-square-foot cost to reproduce the building, less depreciation.

Example: housing comparable to yours costs $35 per square foot for the building only. Exterior measurements of the house indicate 1200-square-foot size. It is 10 years old. To calculate cost, multiply per-square-foot cost times total square feet, for a total of $42,000. To figure depreciation, divide cost to reproduce, or $42,000, by 40 years (the government estimate of useful life for most residences), arriving at $1,050 of depreciation annually. Multiply this by 10 years, and subtract $10,500 from $42,000 for a cost to reproduce, less depreciation, of $31,500.

Add to this the cost of land comparable to yours with the same utilities, walks, driveways, fences, retaining walls, etc., for the fair market value by cost method.

Market method, Kosnar says, compares similar properties that have been sold recently with the subject property and, he says, probably is the best way to determine residential value, if enough sales data are available to analyze.

Care should be taken, however, to compare only similar properties, not those which may vary greatly as to cost, size, design, type of construction or location. You might find it wise to employ a professional appraiser.

Regardless of the method you use to price, Kosnar advises, "you must be as objective as possible and recognize the undesirable features of your property as well as the amenities."

"Obviously, you will want to get as much money as you can for your property, but you must be reasonable when pricing, or you risk the possibility of not selling your real estate or of taking an unusually long time to sell it."

Gardening Questions

Q. Please suggest some shrubs we can plant for fragrance near our patio. (Mrs. B.C. Burlington)

A. Among the best are Buddleia (Butterfly Bush), Calycanthus, Crabapple, Chaste Tree, Eleagnus, Gardenia, Jasmine, Lilac, Lonicera (Honeysuckle), Loquat, Osmanthus, Philadelphia, and Viburnum. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. My problem on boxwood is said to be boxwood leafminers. When is the best time to treat and what do I use? (J.B., Raleigh)

A. About three (3) weeks after new growth starts to develop, treat boxwood plants with a spray of dimethoate (Cygon, De-Fend). Use one and one-half teaspoonsful of the dimethoate 25 per cent emulsifiable concentrate per gallon of water. One treatment is usually sufficient as this chemical is a systemic which enters the plant tissue and kills the leafminers in their burrows. (H.E. Scott, extension entomologist)

Q. What vegetables can be grown in the shade? (S.G., Dallas)

A. Carrots, chives, salad onions, cabbage, beets, leaf lettuce, most leafy greens, turnips and most other cool season vegetables can be grown in partial shade. No vegetable will grow satisfactorily in deep shade. (George Hughes, extension Horticulturist)

REALTOR

HOW CAN REALTOR HELP?

Selling your home through a Realtor will bring you as much or more profit — with none of the attendant problems and headaches you can expect when you try to sell it on your own.

Besides his knowledge of the market and the skill to suggest realistic prices, the Realtor has built up a list of prospects that no homeowner can possibly match. ... prospects who are honestly interested in finding a home and financially able to buy. ... not casual lookers. He knows how long to hold out, whether to take a second mortgage, how to handle earnest money, whether to lease with option to buy or sell on contract.

He's prepared to arrange the intricacies of financing and has the "know-how" necessary to close the transaction properly. Believe me — listing with a Realtor will save you time and make you money.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at LOUIS CLARK AGENCY, IBM Bldg., 100 Reade St., Greenville. Phone: 752-4173. We're here to help!

A Dark Horse In Minnesota

By WILLIAM FOX
ST. PAUL, Minn (UPI) — If you are living in a state where the governor and lawmakers are tearing their hair out over money problems...

Where gloom abounds at all levels of government and essential government services are threatened...

Then consider the situation in Minnesota, where the biggest question seems to be whether taxes should be cut, keeping in mind that a new presidential candidate from Minnesota may be in the making.

Gov. Wendell Anderson, a young Democratic Farmer-Labor leader serving his second term, recently proposed a $5 billion budget for the next two years, calling for a $1.2 billion increase in spending.

But except for a proposed two-cent increase in the gaso-line tax, he said there would be no need to increase any major tax.

And despite hard times, consider these features of the Anderson budget:

A 27 per cent increase in aid to schools.

A 33 per cent boost in aids to local governments — cities, counties, townships.

A tuition freeze for all college students.

A jump in aid to private colleges.

A tax credit boost from $120 to $425 a year for those living in apartments.

A $50 million raise in a property tax relief program that has been called "the Minnesota miracle."

And, what's more, the governor wants to put $150 million away for "a rainy day."

It should be remembered the state has a very high income tax. At some levels it is the highest in the nation.

There also is a four per cent sales tax, but this does not apply to food, clothing or drugs.

Most observers consider the key to Anderson's success the fight he made when he first became governor in 1971 for a 25 per cent increase in income taxes for both individuals and corporations.

This enabled the state to reduce — or at least put the lid on — property taxes, which were skyrocketing because of the mounting cost of local government.

Also, the income tax has proved an effective tool in keeping pace with inflation. The state will enter the next biennium with a $400 million surplus.

Giving himself a pat on the back, Anderson has said, "We have developed the most rational and effective method of managing state and local government finance in the nation."

There has been talk of Anderson on the Democratic presidential ticket in 1976 and he has a few things going for him. He is young (41), handsome (brown curly hair, an athlete's physique), a former hockey hero (college, U.S. Olympic team) and he is an effective campaigner, especially on television.

Anderson insists he is not interested in running for president.

But there are strong indications that the lure of the Oval Office may be stirring.

Anderson is chairman of Democratic governors in the National Governors' Conference, a position which gives him a useful forum for speaking out and for testing political winds.

Considered a moderate, he has been accused of not providing effective leadership in all areas, especially on issues dear to the hearts of some liberals. He was slow to endorse no-fault insurance (now law) and slow to back gun-control legislation (still before the legislature).

But he can be effective on the stump. Last fall, Republicans tried to make an issue of the fact that several firms had located or expanded in South Dakota because of Minnesota's high taxes.

"Sure, our taxes are high," he would reply, "but we got the kind of schools our children deserve. Do you know in South Dakota there is no money to provide libraries in elementary schools? Libraries, you know are where books are kept."

Anderson won the election by a record 62 per cent of the vote and led a massive sweep for the DFL.

EPA Fuel Economy Results — 20 MPG Highway driving

This is only one example of the savings you can get at M & W Chevrolet. You'll never know how much you can save unless you figure with us.

Offer Ends April 30, 1975

Ayden, N.C. 746-3141

There's never been a better time to buy a new car than right now.

Here's why.

Great cars. And a great time to buy.

- 1.. 1975 cars generally offer better fuel economy than 1971, 1972 or 1973 cars.
2. New maintenance schedules can save you hundreds of dollars. Spark plug life is longer. So are lubrication and oil change intervals.
3. Many important features you once paid extra for as options now come standard in the new '75 cars.
4. In many ways, it's what you can't see "under the skin" — quality, durability, engineering improvements — that make a '75 car a value-holding investment for the future.
5. 42-month installment plans, where available, can reduce your monthly payments.
6. The average monthly auto loan interest charge is only $3 more than it was six years ago.
7. New car price percentage increases are less than upturns in cost of food, clothing and even your local movie theater.
8. The cost of a new car now takes less from today's paycheck than it did 10 years ago. Then it took the median wage earner 5.1 months to earn the price of a four-door car. Today, he can earn a four-door car in 4.4 months.
9. During the last few months the increase in resale value of used cars has been high enough in many cases, to offset completely the new '75 price increases. In effect, used car prices may never be higher and the cost to trade may never be lower.
10. It all adds up to a lot for your dollar at a time when you probably need a new car — and the nation's economy needs your vote of confidence.

HOW DO YOU RECOGNIZE A GOOD HOME BUY? WELL HERE'S A FEW HINTS

- 1.) If the asking price is rather far below what you could build it for on a comparable piece of land at today's prices . . .
- 2.) If your alternatives in the same price range are vastly inferior . . .
- 3.) If a good, thriving Savings & Loan, (By necessity both ultra-competent and a bit conservative) enthusiastically agrees to finance 95 per cent of the sales price. As Home Savings & Loan, Greenville's oldest financial institution, is doing . . .
- 4.) If you can get in at the beginning at the base, asking price of the development
- 5.) If you're paying rent and that rent is as high or higher than the monthly payments of the home . . .
- 6.) If all that hard irrefutable consumer logic backs up an attractive, modern, comfortable home with extras like prime location, swimming pool, etc. . .

Then You've just recognized UNIVERSITY CONDOMINIUMS $19,500.00

Real Estate Quiz
What is the most important factor to consider in the selection of a home?
Answer: Location, and frankly that's why we are so excited about this three bedroom home. We think that it would be a good value anywhere in the city, but in this neighborhood, it has to be exceptional. It has two full baths, living room, dining room and family room with fireplace. Beautiful corner lot. The most striking feature of this home is it's condition both inside and out. Anyone would be willing to call it their own. 40's.

Ideal Starter Home...
... for the young family with small children. 3 bedrooms, fenced yard and air conditioning. Short walk to school and shopping. With a little paint you'll have a great value in this home because you can buy it for only $33,500. Payments would be less than rent now and you'd be building up a nice investment for the future.

Use Your VA...
... to buy this 3 bedroom, 1½ bath brick home with garage. No city taxes but conveniences of city living. Nicely landscaped yard. Bring your dishes and linens and move right in because the home is like new. Asking $28,500.

FORE!!
Let's tee off from the patio! This beautiful split level comes with a set of golf clubs—and many, many extras! 4 bedrooms and family room that overlooks the golf course.

What Is Chaleur?
Chaleur is that unique combination of "Charm" and "Value" that combine to make this 3 bedroom home an outstanding housing investment. The unique single level design features unusually large bedrooms, comfortable living room and dining room, family room with fireplace. The decorating is exquisite in all rooms and ties the flowing floor plan together beautifully. Other extras include a patio, added storage area and so much more. We invite you to see how much "chaleur" your money can buy.

Definition: Garden Home
gar den - gard - n - home - hom - n - (1) A habitat offering the ultimate in indoor-outdoor living. Should be located in exclusive area of quality homes with abundant community area and swimming pool complex. Preferable floor plans would include 4 bedrooms, large living room, family room and formal dining room arranged in an open and airy manner. Decorating should be bright — i.e. off white carpeting with subtle shades of yellow, green throughout. Options rarely found would include planters, walk-in closets-most bedrooms, study with bookcases, hideaway oversize range and oven. 70's.

If You Were A Builder—What Would You Put Into Your Own Home?
To begin with, you might use quality carpeting throughout. You'd use upgraded cooling equipment and you'd use extra insulation in the home. You'd use quality fixtures including ceramic tile in the baths, decorator light fixtures. You'd probably build 3 bedrooms, living room, dining room and a large warm family room with a fireplace. Finally you'd locate it on a large lot in a prestigious area like Club Pines and finish it off with all the little extra custom touches that you've always wanted. AND THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT HE DID!

Swim Ski Fish Boat...
... from your own vacation land cottage on the river. Paneled family room, 3 or 4 bedrooms, bath, kitchen with built-in range and oven, 3 porches for sunbathing and barbecuing and entertaining. Close enough to save gas and far enough to get away from it all. Move in before the summer begins! 20's.

Says Banks Unprepared For Thefts

By MICHAEL ROSENBAUM CHICAGO (UPI) — The problem with bank robbers is that they tend to drop in unexpectedly. All too often, the banks are caught unprepared.

That's the view of William Kristofek, a member of the technical division of the Bank Administration Institute. Security against robberies is not what it should be at many banks, according to Kristofek, who helps the institute's 9,000 member banks with security planning.

The institute has prepared a titled Security and Emergency Procedures to help bank personnel handle bomb threats, holdups, kidnap-hostage robberies and a half-dozen other emergencies.

"It's the kind of thing that can sit in a teller's drawer and when she's got a few minutes with nothing to do, she can pull it out and look at it," Kristofek said.

"Common sense and training should dictate the reaction of bank personnel," the booklet states, and Kristofek added that the teller's response is crucial in avoiding tragedy.

The booklet is a shortened version of the institute's security manual, designed to impart a basic understanding of security procedures. The booklet includes a robber description form and a list of questions to ask when receiving a bomb threat over the phone.

One bank in 10 was robbed in the last six months of 1974, according to FBI statistics, and robberies of all savings institutions during that period were up 50 per cent over the last six months of 1973.

In 2,449 robberies, burglaries and larcenies against savings institutions in the last six months of 1974, alarms were activated only 1,834 times, according to the FBI. Robbers took money 72 times in that period from savings institutions which had no alarm systems, despite federal regulations requiring alarms.

Kristofek said alarm systems are usually triggered by the person being robbed and that a teller facing an armed robber can easily forget to trip the switch. Some banks overcome this problem by placing marked "bait money" in the teller's cage. Moving the money from a drawer sounds the alarm automatically, he said.

About 90 per cent of all banks keep bait money, but few institutions are willing to pay for the equipment that triggers the alarm, Kristofek added.

Few banks are willing to hire guards either, according to the FBI. Robbers faced guards in only 412 of the 2,049 robberies committed in the last half of 1974.

Many of those guards had little or no training, according to Kristofek.

"Some banks have what they call guards, but they're nothing more than retired janitors and, what's worse, they have guns. Of course, this is my own personal opinion, you understand, but if you go to the First National Bank or the Continental Bank in downtown Chicago, the guards there are as well trained and as well equipped as any Chicago policeman," he said.

Kristofek and an FBI spokesman in Chicago agreed that banks in large cities are generally safe and that security breaches are most common at banks in very small towns.

But even Chicago-area savings institutions have trouble with one security device. About 90 per cent of the pictures taken by Chicago area surveillance cameras are unusable for identification purposes, usually because of poor maintenance, according to the FBI spokesman.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Ceremony Saturday

KINSTON—The marriage of Miss Judith Lynn Wetherington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Woodrow Wetherington of Kinston, and Donald Jackson Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jackson Edwards of Greenville, took place Saturday at 3:30 p.m. at Queen Street United Methodist Church here. Rev. James C. Lee and Dr. John Maides officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of miro mist and cluny lace. It was fashioned with a high lace collar, see-through tucked neckline and empire bodice with lace motifs. All lace details were repeated on the cuffed long Gibson girl sleeves, and bordered the double ruffles that formed the hemline and flowed on the chapel length train.

Her capulet of matching lace was attached to a mantilla of silk illusion and flowed into a chapel length train. The bride carried a bouquet composed of white bridal roses, illusion and bridal ribbon, cascaded with baby's breath and love knots.

The bride chose her sister, Mrs. William Carven Stallings Jr., as matron of honor and Sherry Gordon Sullivan as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Sue Shivar, Mrs. William Charles Whaley, Jeanne Susan Hartfield, Mrs. William Hallock Evans, Mary Bryan Carlyle, all of Kinston, and Nancy Fleming Edwards, sister of the bridegroom, of Greenville.

They wore formal gowns of orchid chiffon and carried nosegays of variegated pink miniature carnations tied with matching ribbon and long streamers.

Serving as honorary bridesmaids were Angela Karen Pittman and Jacqueline Ann Gay, both of Kinston. The sisters of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority all served as honorary guests. Freda Jane Smith assisted at the bridal register.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were William Shaw Corbitt III, Samuel Edwin Vincent, Michael Lee Harrington, Clifton Hugh Edwards III, James Oliver Bond Jr., William Camillus Clark III, John Bryant Kittrell III, Thomas Gilmore Gardner Jr., all of Greenville, John Dixon Fleming Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, of Smithfield, and Josua Hines Weeks of Rochester, N.Y. Junior ushers were Clarence Hardy Wetherington and Walter Woodrow Wetherington Jr., twin brothers of the bride. Jonathan Carven Stallings, nephew of the bride, was the ringbearer.

A program of religious music was presented by Mrs. Alma Offutt. Prior to the ceremony, Lewis Byrd Gidley and James Turnage Warren sang "A Wedding Suite," their original composition, and accompanied themselves on the guitar.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception given by the bride's parents was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a graduate of Kinston High School and is attending East Carolina University, where she is a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. She is majoring in home economics education. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where he was a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. He received a B.S. in business administration and is now manager of the University Book Exchange, Greenville.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Greenville.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held Friday night at the bridegroom's home honoring the wedding party and out-of-town guests. Hosts and hostesses were parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon Fleming, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Henry Fleming, and Mr. and Mrs. Maxel Eugene Minges, aunts and uncles of the bridegroom.

WHEEL SAFETY

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Parents should give children proper instruction in bicycle safety when they receive a bike as a gift, say Allegheny County police.

Two factors high on the safety priority list are fitting the bike to the child who will ride it and equipping the wheeler for maximum safety.

The police suggest giving riding lessons near home, preferably on empty lots, bicycle paths or marked areas, before permitting long trips.

They added that bicycles should have headlights, tail-lights or reflectors, warning bells, chain guards and coaster brakes.

Engagement Announced

MISS PRICILLA ANN SMITH, . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smith of Winterville, who announce her engagement to Johnnie L. Moye, son of Mrs. Ola Bea Moye of Ayden, and Mr. John H. Moye of Norfolk, Va. The wedding will take place June 21.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I've told you before about my son who marches to a different drummer.

Well, between the drummer and the drumme, I'm going to goose step my way into an institution.

I have been driven literally crazy by a child who is flakier than acute dandruff. Dumb things. Like playing "Bridge Over Troubled Waters" on the push button phone, adding $34 to the bill. Crawling out of the Grand Canyon and saying, "I have to go back. I left my billfold at the bottom." Leaving his cat to guard his bicycle.

Then one day you say firmly, "From here on in, you learn to live with your own stupidity and your own forgetfulness. Grow up!"

It was 3 a.m. last night when I got the call from him that he had returned from a skiing trip and was in a dark parking lot phone booth on the south side of town alone. "Where's my car you said you'd leave for me?" he asked. "In the garage. We couldn't move it when you took the car keys with you."

"Right. So can you come and get me?"

Deep breath. "Absolutely not! Call a cab. You're on your own."

3:05. Suppose that was his last dime and there's a car at the curb with a gang of hoods in it armed with chains who won't believe that a kid with all that skiing equipment wouldn't have any money on him and punish him for it.

3:10. Suppose the police see him in a phone booth late at night with a big red S on his shirt for Snow and say, "We've got another Superman lonie on our hands, Walt. Let's run him in." And he spends the night in a cell full of pervers.

3:15. I've got it. The cab driver picks him up but is weird and not really licensed by the cab company but is filling in for the driver he has just done in.

3:30 Wake husband and show him the baby book. "Remember? It seems like just last week when he used to sit up in his little bed and say, 'Mama, more milk.'" "That WAS last week," he snarled. "Go to sleep!"

3:30. The air is fresh tonight. People should spend more time pacing their driveway. "HERE HE COMES!"

"Don't you see?" I explained as he fell into bed, "I had to be cruel to punish you to teach you a lesson. It's time you accepted the responsibility for your own actions. Do you see that?" As he snored I marvelled at how he could sleep. Those lousy drums he was marching to kept me awake the rest of the night.

First Lady Dolls Planned For The Bicentennial

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer
Wit, warmth, compassion, humor and service were some of the qualities that motivated "Madame" (Bee) Alexander, as she is known, in choosing six First Ladies for her newest doll collection meant for the Bicentennial. Her dolls — some 5,000 different ones in the last half-century — have always carried a cultural message, she said, in explaining her choices of Presidents' wives.

"Now you take Mary Lincoln," the pretty octogenarian was saying the other day. "She was so misunderstood. I believe there were enemies all around her in the White House because she was a southerner . . . and her son, the terrible thing he did, saying his mother was mental. I think she was spending money too fast to suit him and he feared there wouldn't be enough left for him . . ."

"And what Julia Grant had to put up with," she went on. "Because of the President's problem (alcoholism) she had to receive many delegations and take over in trying to weld the nation . . ."

As for Eleanor Roosevelt, "she was a great humanitarian," Martha Washington was "sweet, amiable, neat with dainty, doll-like qualities and, like me, she was not an eager scholar," Madame Alexander added.

Dolley Madison had "wit and warmth, taking care of her mother and younger sister." She also was a good hostess for Jefferson and "the secret of her success may have been that she never held a grudge," she remarked.

Abigail Adams had special appeal for the world-famed doll woman, who parlayed three dolls in the first year into one of the most solvent independently-owned businesses in the world.

"Abigail made such excellent business investments that the President could retire with a very nice income," she says, admiringly.

It has been that way through all the ages of Mme. Alexander's doll making, which begins with her own research and sketches. The dolls are babies, little girls, paintings or fictional characters that have come to life for her in a special way. They are meant to be cultural, she says, to help educate children and pique their interest in the arts, dancing, theater, books, which "can be enjoyed by the poorest people."

"When I designed my ballerina, it was really to encourage little girls to dance, to make them more graceful," she says, and while she claims to have no favorites in the doll world, "like any good mother," an affectionate series was Little Women, where she identified with the eldest of four girls, the Meg of the family.

When campus riots were at their height, she introduced a Grandma Jane doll with silvery head and glasses which she hoped "would bring little girls closer to their grandmothers and respect for family life."

"The maternal instinct is born in women and it should be encouraged," was the way she felt.

She was impressed with "Gone with the Wind," and her sympathies were aroused by the starving Scarlett's generosity in "sharing a carrot, the only thing she could find, with her Negro maid." So Scarlett, too, was the basis for a doll.

She is not designing dolls to compete in a boy's play world, though, an idea that some feminists have touted. Her elegantly dressed Blue Boy (Gainsborough) and Red Boy (Goya) are among dolls in her portrait series. And there is Laurie, a boyfriend of Jo in Little Women. That is about as far as the doll thing will go at the moment, Women's Lib or not.

"If a little boy wants to play with a doll, let him. It may show his paternalistic instinct. But you shouldn't rush out and buy him a doll for his birthday," in her opinion.

Her dolls are beautiful, well-groomed and handsomely dressed, large and small. They have established fashion trends. Her ballerinas in the '20s wore the forerunners of pantyhose and her dolls have been dressed in luxurious fabrics and Paris-styled clothes that are American-made like her dolls.

Twenty years ago she created a sensation in bringing out the first fashion doll. After "thinking about introducing an anatomy-perfect doll for three years" she brought out Cissy at a toy fair.

"In her black lace chemise or white lace covering over her pink body, the buyers ogled her ecstatically and I had to convince them it wasn't meant for a peep show. I was seriously introducing fashion."

And then manufacturers copied it and turned her "thing of beauty" into a sexpot with big bosoms, she commented.

A vibrant, radiant woman, who looks decades younger than her 80 years, Mme. Alexander has been around dolls all her life — her father had a doll hospital in New York — before she began making dolls 52 years ago. Now she is assisted by her artist daughter, Mildred, her son-in-law and grandson in a family enterprise. Of her recent awards, she is proudest of two, the "Torch of Learning," given by the American Friends of Hebrew University, and one bestowed by the Alfred Einstein College of Medicine, Women's Division.

Alumnae Day Scheduled At St. Mary's

RALEIGH — St. Mary's College's annual Alumnae Day will be held Saturday, April 19.

Over 200 alumnae are expected to gather on the Raleigh campus for a day of festivities. One of the highlights will be a duo-piano recital held at 3:00 p.m. in Pittman Auditorium.

To honor visiting alumnae, Jane Blackmore, a 1970 graduate of St. Mary's who teaches piano in Warsaw and Michael Bulley, chairman of the music department at St. Mary's, will perform music by Brahms, Mozart, and Rachmaninoff.

St. Mary's will have two alumnae as special guests for the occasion. Mrs. George Flint, the former Lizzie Ashe and a life-long resident of Raleigh, will be celebrating her 80th reunion on this day. Also Mrs. William J. Gordon of Eden, and a graduate of the class of 1905, will be honored by the Alumnae Association on her 70th reunion as a graduate of St. Mary's.

New officers of the Alumnae Association to be installed that day include Mrs. Harry G. Walker Jr. of Raleigh, replacing Mrs. Robert J. Page of Chapel Hill. Mrs. Walker, a graduate of the class of 1946, is a past Alumnae Council member and trustee of the college. The regional vice-presidents who will be taking office are: Mrs. John McCain, Wilson; Mrs. Frank H. Conner, Charlotte; Mrs. Simpson Bobo Tanner III, Rutherfordton; Mrs. Charles E. Stevens, Greenville; and Mrs. Josephus L. Mavretic, Beaufort, S.C.

Classes holding reunions are: 1915; 1920; 1925; 1930; 1935; 1940; 1945; 1950; 1955; 1960; 1965; and 1970.

Fiance Conveniently Forgets License

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18, and the boy I've been dating for two years is 19. We were supposed to get married secretly last month, but Dick showed up without the license.

Originally, when I had asked him if he had it, he had said yes.

But after we arrived at the preacher's house and the preacher asked Dick for the license, Dick said he "forgot" it at home, hoping the preacher would perform the ceremony anyway, and let him bring it around later.

Well, the preacher wouldn't marry us without the license, so we decided to stay in a motel that night, thinking Dick would get the license the next day, and we'd get married and nobody would know the careless mistake he made.

Well, the preacher called my father, and my father came to the motel to pick me up. I felt just awful, but I went with my father.

I still have feelings for Dick. He says if I don't come back to him he will kill himself. My parents say I should let Dick go. Should I listen to my parents or stick with Dick?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Listen to your parents, dear. Dick didn't make a "careless" mistake, he lied to you. He sounds much too immature and irresponsible for marriage now.

DEAR ABBY: I wish people who ask ministers to conduct funerals and weddings knew what the word "honarium" means (a payment to a professional for services for which no fee is set or legally obtainable.)

Some people feel it is so crude to ask a minister: "How much do I owe you," that they just let the matter go and do nothing about it at all.

My husband is a minister (please don't say where), and within the last year, he was called to officiate at the funeral services of both an elderly man and his wife, who lived 35 miles away. He was given no fee.

Abby, can you imagine anyone writing the following note to an attorney? "Thank you, Mr. Jones, for your legal services. Mother and Dad would have wanted you to come down to handle these legal services for us at this trying time."

Or the minister to his barber: "Thank you, Mr. Smith, for cutting my hair at this time. I would not want to embarrass the family by needing a haircut." Or: "Thank you, Mr. Brown, for the gasoline, oil and car wash. I wouldn't want to run out of gas on my way to a funeral or show up with a dirty car." Or: "Thank you, Mr. White, for cleaning and pressing my suit. I would not want to embarrass the family at this time by appearing unkempt."

In order to make ends meet, my husband moonlights and had to pay a substitute for his second job so he could make these two funerals.

INDIGNANT

DEAR INDIGNANT: Perhaps because there is no set fee for conducting funerals and weddings, some folks feel that there is no fee at all. Also, some clergymen have written to tell me that they consider such services a part of their job, and they're insulted when they are offered money for doing the work of the Lord.

I say: "Offer anyway. The offended clergyman can always refuse."

CONFIDENTIAL TO LU: Don't believe everything you see in print. Many celebrities prefer to let vicious untruths go unchallenged rather than to sue for defamation of character because they believe that if one wrestles with a skunk, he's apt to emerge smelling as bad as the skunk.

Get your rattan furniture ready for warm weather use by washing with a sudsy sponge or cloth. Avoid over-wetting and rinse well with a damp sponge or cloth. Let the furniture dry before using liquid furniture wax for extra protection.

Miss Jean Flanagan Weds Saturday Afternoon

The marriage of Jean Gaskins Flanagan and William Bennett Flanner III was solemnized Saturday at 3:00 p.m. at Saint Paul's Episcopal Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr. and the Rev. Joseph Arps. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Sharon Irwin.

Parents of the couple are Mr. Charles Roy Flanagan of Greenville, and the late Mrs. Jean Gaskins Flanagan, and Mr. and Mrs. William Bennett Flanner Jr. of Kinston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of candlelight organza over peau de soie with a trim of candlelight peau d'ange lace applique. The gown was fashioned with a scooped neck bordered with peau d'ange lace applique. The empire bodice and the long colonial sleeves had a motif of lace applique and were finished with a ruffle. The full skirt featured a scatter of matching lace applique and extended into an attached chapel train which was finished with a border of peau d'ange lace with a ruffle.

Her two tiered mantilla style illusion veil had a lace border. The bride carried a semi-cascade bouquet of yellow roses, baby's breath and springerli fern.

The bride is a graduate of Hardbarger Business College, Raleigh, and is employed by Burroughs Wellcome. The bridegroom attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is employed by the N.C. Division of Environmental Management.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Charles Edward Flanagan of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride. She wore a formal length gown of romance blue knit featuring a sheath slip dress with a matching blue knit jacket, which was styled with an open collar and long full sleeves. Ivory Venise lace panels accentuated the bodice of the jacket that tied at the waist. She carried a semi-nosegay of white daisies, baby's breath and springerli fern.

Bridesmaids were Miss Eva Spears Harrington, Miss Pamela Tyson Riddick and Mrs. Carl Crawford Jr., all of Greenville. They wore gowns styled identical to that of the honor attendant in robin's egg blue knit with ivory Venise lace trim. They carried bouquets similar to that of the matron of honor.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Charles Edward of Greenville, brother of the bride, Lee Fitzgerald Coper and Hugh Heath II, both of Kinston.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a pastel green knit pants ensemble with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow roses with baby's breath.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

Immediate following the ceremony, the bridal couple was honored at a reception at the church given by the bride's father.

The refreshment table was decorated in a color scheme of yellow and blue. Mrs. Robert H. Gaskins and Mrs. E.G. Flanagan poured punch and Mrs. Hoyt Minges and Mrs. Charles Gaskins served cake.

Mrs. E.C. Wilkerson and Mrs. Jacob H. Froelich greeted guests and Mrs. Travis Flanagan presided at the guest register.

A wedding breakfast was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T.I. Wagner Saturday morning. Assisting hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Minges, Mrs. E. Graham Flanagan and Mr. and Mrs. Travis H. Flanagan.

Following the rehearsal, the wedding party was entertained at a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Gaskins assisted by Mrs. E.C. Wilkerson, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Gidley, Mrs. J.H. Froelich, Miss Helen Gaskins, Mr. and Mrs. V.E. Wells Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Mackenzie.

A bridesmaid luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Graham Flanagan Jr. Friday.

'Diagnosis For Careers' Offered Girls

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Many American girls have talent, beauty and brains but they haven't the vaguest idea how to further their attributes in careers. They may even be far removed from the opportunity to find out, says charming Helene Obolensky, who plans to conduct her first yearly "finishing school" on careers in New York.

The dynamic half-Russian, half-Persian wife of Prince Alexander Obolensky, who is a professor of Russian literature, had been personal assistant to the late famed couturier, Coco Chanel, before coming to the United States from Paris in 1949.

"This will be sort of a finishing school for career aspirants, a five-day crash course, with the assistance of top people in fashion, beauty, advertising, photography, travel, writing and so on," she says.

It will be like a diagnostic thing, she explained. It may discourage some young women from their dream and it "should be good for them to find out," but for others such a course might provide easy access to a career. They should learn not only whether they are suited to a particular field, but they should learn how to prepare for the pursuit of it.

"The girls will attend workshops focusing on specialties conducted by well-known people. These include photographers Milton Greene and Peter Fink, makeup man Pablo, hair stylist Vidal Sassoon, skin specialist Georgette Klinger and so on. There will be workshops in modeling, acting, airline careers, nutrition.

"Many girls are bright and searching for a purpose. Our goal will be to assist them in avoiding a more costly investigation of the opportunities that may exist for them. Some might never get a chance to find out any other way," she says.

"The workshops will be helpful to the evaluators, too. They may find good personnel they otherwise would not have an opportunity to tap which will benefit the young women."

She has already lined up some guarantees for qualified girls to model in Paris and she feels other openings may materialize.

In addition to career incentive awards in some categories, the course will provide fringe benefits. Trips to Broadway, the costume institute at the Metropolitan Museum and other pertinent diversions are being planned. There will be exercise demonstrations, including yoga. Fashion shows and television tests of candidates will permit them to compare their own behavior with others' and will show them "how to make themselves presentable for a particular job," she says.

Although Princess Obolensky had planned to accept no more than 300 girls, and her first idea was to conduct the course only for girls yearning for careers in modeling, in response to requests it has branched off to include other careers. In fact, the enthusiastic evaluators have already come up with suggestions to conduct similar courses for business women executives and others.

Earlier, a minimum height of 5 feet 7 inches was specified at the suggestion of the model agents but this, too, has been changed.

For example, a young woman from Nicaragua wrote that she "was only 5 feet 4 inches in bare feet," that she is married with two children, but would like to take the course anyway "if she were acceptable." Her photograph "was so adorable" that she could not be turned down.

"I had to decide that I'd been given a chance to do something meaningful, so whoever can benefit should be helped to do so," Princess Obolensky commented.

She began the Helene Obolensky Enterprises many years ago and under her aegis a photographic tribute to the bicentennial of the Bolshoi Ballet has just been published. She organized and developed the first national Model of the Year Pageant, she says, and was a fashion editor of Town and Country. She is well known professionally and socially over the world.

THREADLESS SEWING
LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Sonic sewing machines that use air pressure to fuse seams may some day make thread obsolete, says Gail Skinner, extension clothing specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

chines have been used since the 1950s for plastic rainwear. The air pressure they create causes vibrations of very high frequency. The vibrations cause friction, which causes heat and bonds or fuses fabric. Once fused, an ultrasonic bond cannot be altered. In fact, the bond outlasts the fabric.

Unsupervised Furloughs For Felons Are Studied

EDITOR'S NOTE — Prison officials across the country are trying something new in rehabilitation: unsupervised furloughs. Are felons on the loose worth the risk? The programs aren't without horrible failures, but generally the plus side of the ledger is impressive.

By ALLEN NACHEMAN
Associated Press Writer
Terry Scroggs, armed robber, is doing 15 years in the Oregon State Penitentiary. But one weekend a month, he's a free man.

"I never forget this place," he says. "But when I go home, see my wife and really relax, it gives me hope. Oh, God, you don't know what this means to a guy who's locked up. It's the only thing that keeps me going."

Scroggs, 33, is only one of many prisoners in jails across the country now benefitting from such weekends of hope. Another is Earthy Reed, 43, is doing 10 years in Oregon for drug possession. He, too, gets regular "social passes" of 12 to 72 hours.

"Being incarcerated is like fluctuating between life and death," he says. "When I can get outside for a while, go home, play golf, visit friends, I say to myself, 'Hey, man, I'm breathing again. I got life.'"

Reed and Scroggs are products of a penal philosophy being embraced by corrections officials in 40 of the 50 states. It says you can't keep people caged for long periods, then suddenly set them free and expect them to function as productive, law-abiding citizens.

"We recognized this with our Vietnam prisoners of war," says Warden Hoyt Cupp of the Oregon prison. "We put great emphasis on phasing these men back into society gradually. We understood on a national level that you can't just let a man walk out of prison at the end of his sentence because he's not going to be in tune with what's going on around him."

Prison systems in many states have for a long time had release programs in which good-risk inmates live outside the prison in minimum security dormitories in the community and hold down jobs or go to school. But the idea of letting prisoners free without guard or supervision, to be with family or friends, is an innovation. Prisons having adopted it say it's still an experiment, successful so far, but closely scrutinized.

"The big advantage," says Kenneth Robinson, spokesman for the Pennsylvania Bureau of Corrections, "is that it takes away a lot of tension and stresses that develop from being cut off from family and loved ones." Pennsylvania allows unsupervised home furloughs of up to seven days for inmates with good conduct records who have served at least half, but not less than 9 months, of their sentences.

Furlough applications, in Pennsylvania and in all states using the system—and they include all except New Hampshire, Nevada, Rhode Island, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming and Montana—undergo tight screening by prison personnel.

"It's more or less an honor type thing," says Robinson of Pennsylvania's two-year-old program. He says about two per cent of all inmates furloughed have not returned voluntarily, "about as close to complete success as you can get."

Most prison officials say the vast majority of inmates released without supervision visit family, look for jobs, keep their noses clean and do precisely what the pass programs were intended to accomplish.

But there are horror stories. And, unfortunately, say officials, they are the ones that get the headlines and generate public criticism and distrust.

An inmate on furlough from the Maine prison stole a car. The ensuing high speed chase resulted in the death of a policeman.

A District of Columbia inmate was arrested carrying a sawed-off shotgun as he boarded a train.

A Washington state inmate killed a policeman.

A Utah inmate on work release murdered a housewife.

And there was Carl Cletus Bowles.

Bowles, 33, left the Oregon penitentiary on a four-hour pass last year to visit his girl in a motel. He didn't come back. A month later he had a shoot-out with FBI agents on a residential street in Eugene, Ore. — and got away.

Finally he was shot and captured in western Idaho, but not until he had taken five hostages. Two were found dead. His four-hour pass resulted in a new sentence of 75 years for kidnapping; he has yet to be tried for the murders.

The public was outraged, figuring that Bowles had been a poor risk for the furlough program.

"When you're dealing with human behavior," said Warden Cupp, there's a lot of gray area. It's not an exact science." But he defended his choice of Bowles.

As a result of the Bowles incident, an extra layer of screening was added to Oregon's pass clearance procedure for inmates convicted of violent crimes. Cupp no longer has the final word. It's been given to his boss, Amos Reed, the corrections administrator.

Nonetheless, says Cupp, "I think Oregon's system is the most progressive in the nation."

The law creating Oregon's prison release program was passed in 1963. But it wasn't implemented on a regular basis until after the prison was torn by a riot in 1968.

There are no concrete rules. Any inmate, regardless of his crime or the amount of time he's served, may apply for a pass for "any reason consistent with approved rehabilitative and corrective practices."

The main emphasis in Oregon's program, and those of most other states, is on marriage and family.

"We first of all look at whether the man has a stable marriage and a sound family life," says Bob Watson, Oregon's assistant corrections administrator. "Because a man in that situation is the best risk for a pass."

"Prison separates the family," says a spokesman for Georgia's three-year-old furlough program. "This keeps the family together."

"From a correctional standpoint, one of the most compelling reasons for granting furloughs is reinforcement of normal, close family relationships," says Charles Holmes, Kentucky Corrections Commissioner.

Chinese Seed Is Shipped

MILLBROOK, N. Y. (AP) — A major shipment of seeds from the Peking Botanical Garden in the capital of the People's Republic of China has been received by the Cary Arboretum of the New York Botanical Garden here.

The shipment of seeds of 82 species of trees, shrubs and vines is the second received by the arboretum from mainland China. The first, consisting of nine seed packets from the Nanking Botanical Garden, reached the Millbrook scientific institution last July. It was the first shipment of plant seeds from mainland China to an American scientific institution in more than 20 years.

The shipment from Peking was arranged, in part, through the efforts of Mrs. Donald B. Straus, who visited China in January with her husband. Mrs. Straus, who is vice chairman of the board of managers of the New York Botanical Garden, took a letter and a package of seeds of 54 native American tree species from the Cary Arboretum to Peking.

Wyoming Mines Employ 7,500

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (UPI) — State Mine Inspector Alan W. Shafter says mining in Wyoming employed 7,500 persons last year, a number which is expected to continue to increase.

Shafter said even this number did not include an estimated 3,000 engaged in plant construction and another 600 in mineral exploration in Wyoming.

Bridges Unable To Meet Limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The biggest problem with bridges in America is their inability to handle loads for which they were designed, according to Donald B. Stabler, president of The Road Information Program. Stabler said 25,404 bridges on the federal-aid highway system require reduced traffic loads, or weight limits.

Tribal Trek Dramatized

INDIAN DRAMA — The heroic 1600 mile trek of Chief Joseph and his Nez Perce tribe from Oregon to Montana as they resist government attempts to force them on to a reservation is dramatized on "I Will Fight No More Forever," a Xerox Special on ABC-TV April 14 (8-10 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

"Hear me, my chiefs. I am tired of fighting. Our chiefs are killed. Looking Glass is dead. Too-hul-sote is dead. The old men are all dead. It is cold and we have no blankets. The little children are freezing to death. My people, some of them, have run away to the hills and have no blankets, no food. No one knows where they are — perhaps they are freezing to death. I want to have time to look for my children and see how many of them I can find. Maybe I shall find them among the dead. Hear me, my chiefs, I am tired. My heart is sad and sick. From where the sun now stands I will fight no more forever."

—Chief Joseph, 1877

This speech of surrender was made by Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce Indians to General Howard of the U.S. Army. It marked the end of a way of life, the recognition of defeat, the surrender of tribal lands inhabited for centuries. It put the name of Chief Joseph indelibly into the books of American history.

On Monday, April 14, 8 to 10 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12, the ABC Television Network brings that historically dramatic moment to the screen in the special, "I Will Fight No More Forever," a graphic recreation of the Indians' last major confrontation with the white men.

Actor Ned Romero, who is part Blackfoot Indian, fought a battle against his own emotions in order to portray this giant of Indian history. "I'm a very emotional guy," he said during the filming, "and some of Joseph's speeches are included in the script written by Jeb Rosebrook and Theodore Strauss, and when the actor read for director Richard Heffron and producer Stan Margulies, he remembers, "I just broke down after I read Joseph's last speech. I cried, right in front of everyone."

The speech, however, is not spoken in the special. It is printed over the final scene. It reads:

"If the white man wants to live in peace with the Indian he can live in peace. Treat all men alike. Give them an even chance to live and grow. All men were made by the Great Spirit Chief. They are all brothers."

"Chief Joseph was a great man," Romero repeated, "well educated, very simple and down-to-earth, and very wise. Those are the final words of a man who only wanted peace and friendship with the white man."

'Women Of The Year' Show Is Set April 19

The annual "Women of the Year, 1975" show, honoring for the third consecutive year outstanding American women in various fields of achievement, will be seen Saturday, April 19, 10-11:30 p.m., on CBS-TV and Ch. 9-11.

Florence Henderson is host of the telecast, which in addition to the awards will include entertainment by Roberta Peters and Diahann Carroll, and tributes to famed lyricist Dorothy Fields and four of the women writers of some of television's top comedy series.

"Women of the Year, 1975," to be telecast live from the stage of New York's Ed Sullivan Theatre, will honor women in eight fields of endeavor: Business and Economics, Education, Communications, Creative Arts, Government & Diplomacy, Humanitarian & Community Service, Political Life and Quality of Life.

A special tribute to celebrate International Women's Year, 1975 will also be made.

Each of the eight winners will receive an 18 carat gold pendant in the form of a stylized letter "W" set with a single diamond, to highlight the unique quality of the selection. It was designed especially for "Women of the Year, 1975" by Alfred Durante of Cartier's. Among those presenting the awards in each of the eight categories will be Liz Carpenter, Angie Dickinson, Helen Hayes, Linda Johnson Robb, Mary Louise Smith, Marlo Thomas and Barbara Walters.

Among the women who will act as judges are four previous "Women of the Year" winners, Martha W. Griffiths, lawyer, former Michigan Congresswoman and sponsor of the Equal Rights Amendment; Dorothy Height, president of the National Council of Negro Women; Dr. Dixy Lee Ray, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and Ellen Straus, founder of Call for Action. Ms. Straus was a 1973 winner. The other women won in 1974.

In the special tribute to Dorothy Fields, Florence Henderson joins Roberta Peters and Diahann Carroll in a sampling of her songs ranging from "Digga, Digga Doo" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" to "The Way You Look Tonight" and "Big Spender."

The medley represents only a smattering of the award-winning words that the lyricist wrote whenever she felt a song coming on: Miss Fields wrote the memorable words to some 300 hits before she died last year.

ACTRESS-SINGER Florence Henderson will preside over and perform on the awards-presentation special "Women of the Year, 1975", to be broadcast live from the Ed Sullivan Theatre in New York City, Saturday, April 19 (10-11:30 p.m.) on channels 3W, 9, 11.

Somerset Had 5th Birthday

NBC Television Network's "Somerset," seen weekdays from 4-4:30 p.m., recently celebrated its fifth anniversary.

The program, a spin-off of NBC-TV's "Another World," is the only daytime drama to have grown out of another serial.

In the early months of the show there were many exchanges of characters and cross references with "Another World," but after a short time, the vitality of "Somerset" resulted in its pursuing its own dramatic course.

Executive producer Lyle B. Hill said: "This is a happy anniversary for us. As we start our sixth year, we have a strong cast and several interesting storylines. We are happy to welcome to the show players like James O'Sullivan, Ted Danson and James Congdon, and welcome back Susan MacDonald after a two year absence. The warm viewer response to our show in recent months through letters has been especially gratifying."

VIN LINE

Pat Paulsen, a regular on NBC-TV's "Smothers Brothers Show," lives on a ranch in Sonoma, California, where he grows grapes for local winemakers. His spread is about a 20-minute drive from the ranch of Tom Smothers.

Declares Career Can't Come First

Denise Alexander, star of ABC-TV's "General Hospital," says the biggest pitfall for aspiring actresses is to forget that she's a person first and an actress second.

"It doesn't get lonesome for me being a single career girl in this city," Denise explains from the comforts of her charming Beverly Hills hideaway home, "because having the parents I did, I grew up knowing that acting is my work and it had nothing to do with my life."

"The work was not my life, it was my work! And my parents, when I was a child, always made sure that I had a very full life. I didn't go to professional schools, we always had a lovely home, and it was very important to them that I be a person first and an actress second."

"And I can not give anyone any greater advice for mental stability and health and for really not having those problems of crushing loneliness, than to have your life and your being as a person come first and your being as an actress come second."

"I've never really had any problems of being lonely because my job has always been in its own place, and I think to come from out of town to Hollywood to be an actress and to have that as the center of your world must be incredibly lonely."

"It's the same kind of thing in which I do not believe that someone should skip college just because they want to be an actor or actress. You're going to be a person first, and any education you can get, any growing you can get, is only going to do you good as a performer because the best performers I've ever met are intelligent people. You have to be."

"You have to be able to understand people and situations that are totally foreign to you if you're going to be an actress, as well as the ones that are very common place to you. But you have to understand them on a level that allows you to recreate them without truly experiencing them, so whatever kind of education and growth you can get is very important," she says candidly.

Denise also warns that Hollywood currently has an abundance of talented actresses but far too few jobs, though that's an obstacle Denise is optimistic will eventually change.

DECORAMA

By

R.N. McLanahan, Jr. Ray Reese

Decorate With Color

Take your courage and your own sure taste in hand and decorate. This season, there's a beautiful explosion of color and pattern in decorating. Walk right up and claim it. Don't settle for nice, safe, milk-toast beige, or some mousy print like your best friend might have. Tired, timid, me-too decorating isn't only dull—it's expensive. If a room doesn't snap with excitement when it's new, don't expect it to sparkle with age. Spring time is change of color time. Decide where the decorating will take place and let it happen. New carpeting can bring spring into your home in a special way. Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Where There's Always A Sale."

MARITAL BLITZ

When Dr. Norman Vincent Peale and his wife, Ruth, were guests on NBC-TV's "Tomorrow" recently, host Tom Snyder asked if they had to overcome any problems. "Oh, yes," Ruth answered pointing to her husband. "Well, I've had to live with him all these years. We were married in 1940, and it wasn't any easier this morning."

An old female bear named Nakomis, a favorite among park rangers at Yellowstone, goes after a package of marshmallows stored in the pocket of a foolish tourist who ignored the "Do Not Feed" warnings posted everywhere. The tourist takes off in a panic, not realizing Nakomis' two cubs, Tuffy and Tubby, have hitched a ride in the food chest of the frightened family's trailer. It happens on Walt Disney, Sun. April 13 at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 6, 7.

The rangers, not knowing that Nakomis has two cubs to look after, subdue her with a drug dart, paint her forehead yellow to mark the fact she has attacked a tourist, and transport her to the outer limits of the park, far from the tourists and also her two lost cubs.

While Nakomis begins her long trip back in search of the cubs, the cubs have begun their own journey — getting into every possible kind of mischief as they take advantage of the freely available food unwittingly being provided by the tourists.

Among their comic adventures: an unescorted cruise in a fishing boat left unattended by the owner with a catch of fish inside; a wet and muddy investigation of the park's famed geysers and mud pools; a campsite investigation that leaves everything in shambles and an unbelievable afternoon in the kitchen of the park's inn.

When Nakomis finally finds the cubs, the rangers, still not knowing the old female is a mother, prepare to kill her, fearing she is too dangerous. Only at the last moment, when the three are rejoined, do they discover her actions have been caused only by her protective instincts for her cubs. Narrated by Rex Allen, it was filmed entirely at Yellowstone National Park.

Noted Judge Has Added Concerns

Harry Low is one of the first Chinese-Americans ever to be appointed a judge in the United States. Beyond being a respected and dynamic jurist, Low spends his out-of-court hours trying to help the Asian community in San Francisco's Chinatown in many important and constructive ways. "Americans All," the ABC News documentary series, visits with Judge Harry Low on Sunday, April 13, beginning at 10:25 p.m., immediately following "The Big Bounce." "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" starring Ryan O'Neal and Leigh Taylor-Young. Concerned with the plight of Asian immigrants to the United States, Judge Low has helped to establish schools to teach the English language to newcomers as a way toward integration, so difficult for many Asians. He has helped find jobs for inhabitants of the Chinatown area; set up a school for chefs and at the same time, initiated a food program for the poor. Low also worked to establish the North East Medical Services, a clinic for Asian-Americans in the heavily populated Chinatown area.

"We have an obligation, as all Americans have," explains Judge Low, "to better the lot so that people don't suffer, or have the same handicaps as those of the past."

ABC News Correspondent Anna Bond narrates the series, which is produced and directed by Howard Enders, with Willie Suggs as staff writer.

Amy Prentiss Deals With An Old Friend

Chief Amy Prentiss (series star Jessica Walter) wrestles with an unwanted dilemma involving an old family friend suspected of industrial espionage and homicide in "Baptism of Fire," a re-broadcast on the "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie," April 13 (8:30 to 10:30 p.m.) on Channel 6-7. William Shatner, Peter Haskell and Mariclare Costello guest star.

Ross Whitman (Haskell), a close friend of Amy's late husband, is accused of industrial espionage and homicide by hard-nosed cop Lt. Bill Parkins (Shatner), who is acting on "gut" feelings rather than hard facts. Chief Prentiss must decide if Whitman is a victim of unnecessary harassment or if Parkins has a case.

Meanwhile, the chief directs the crackdown of a mad bomber (Mills Watson,) while trying to answer charges — by a councilman (Hector Elias) seeking reelection — that her sex is causing dissension in the all-male department.

Costello plays Enid Feeny, wife of the bomber suspect. Jeffrey Hayden directed from a script by Michael P. Butler and Christopher Trumbo.

Teamed Up To Write Script

Carroll O'Connor, star of "All in the Family," has teamed with Ed Waters, Al Martinez and Bruce Geller to write a script, "Bronk," which will be airing this week as a 90-minute movie pilot on CBS-TV.

Jack Palance stars in the pilot and co-starring is Tony King. This marks King's first television venture. The actor, who forsook a six-year professional football career with the Buffalo Bills, Denver Broncos and Oakland Raiders, appeared previously in "The Godfather," "The King of Marvin Gardens," "Klute" and "Panic in Needle Park."

Everybody's Invited To A Wedding Again

"I'd say that, from the response to the original broadcast of Rhoda's wedding, that romance and marriage are alive and well," reports Rhoda Morgenstern Gerard's alter-ego, actress Valerie Harper.

The wedding, which was one of the most popular events of this television season, will be shown again on an hour-long rebroadcast of "Rhoda" Monday, April 14, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV and Channel 9-11.

According to the series' producers, David Davis and Lorenzo Music, the wedding episode became a participatory event among Rhoda's followers. "The day the show was first aired," the producers explain, "we were getting calls informing us of wedding parties being held in cities around the country that night to celebrate Rhoda's and Joe's marriage."

"We knew the show was popular," Music adds, "but we had no idea that people had become so involved in it. We were very pleased with the response, to say the least."

The wedding episode was the latest stop in the blossoming life of Rhoda Morgenstern, former plump, date-less and insecure neighbor on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" on the CBS Network. She has since become the svelte, married, and still insecure, leading lady of "Rhoda."

Valerie Harper earned three Emmy Awards for her characterization of Rhoda while she was a cast regular on Miss Moore's show.

In the premiere performance of "Rhoda," Mary Richards saw Rhoda off on a Manhattan vacation that turned into a permanent stay.

Taking up temporary New York residence with her younger sister Brenda, in whom she saw herself at age 21, Rhoda met and began dating Joe Gerard, the head of a buildings demolition company, with whom she quickly fell in love. Viewers' interest heightened through the following episodes and came to a fitting climax with the special one-hour show when wedding bells chimed for Rhoda and Joe.

Rhoda was determined to have a small, simple wedding in a judge's chambers, but her mother planned a large catered affair with a list of relatives to match. The growing throng got another boost when Mary arrived from Minneapolis for the occasion, accompanied by two unexpected, and tipsy, traveling companions, Lou Grant and Murray Slaughter, along with Phyllis Lindstrom, who was undaunted by the fact that she was not invited to the wedding.

VALERIE HARPER has the most accident-prone wedding ceremony of the year, in a rebroadcast of a special one-hour presentation of "Rhoda" to be seen Monday, April 14 (9-10 p.m.) on channels 3N-9-11.

MARTIN MILNER, Pat Delaney and Eric Olson heave heartily to raise a tree house on their island retreat in "Swiss Family Robinson", a new version of the family classic airing as a two-hour "Special Tuesday Movie of the Week" April 15 (8-10 p.m.) on channels 3W-5-12.

High Adventure TV Drama Airs April 15

A family, striving together to survive on a remote island following a shipwreck, faces an invasion by pirates in the world premiere of "The Swiss Family Robinson," a new high-adventure drama based on the family classic, which will air on the ABC Television Network as a "Special Two-Hour Movie of the Week," Tuesday, April 15, 8 to 10 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Starring in the Irwin Allen production as the father, Karl Robinson, is Martin Milner, with Pat Delaney playing his wife, Lotte. Their two sons are played by Michael-James Wixted and Eric Olson.

Cameron Mitchell stars as the raffish Jeremiah Worth, sole survivor of a long-ago shipwreck, with John Vernon playing Charles Forsythe, black sheep of a British family. Cindy Fisher is co-starred as Helga, daughter of the deceased captain of the wrecked ship, who is befriended by the Robinsons.

Stranded on the lonely island at the turn of the century, the Robinsons salvage what they can from the wreck and build a tree house with a little help from Jeremiah, whose primary salvage is a cask of wine. All goes well until a band of pirates led by Forsythe lands in search of a jewel-encrusted gold idol, which Robinson and Jeremiah later find inside a rumbling volcano.

The pirates hold Lotte and the children as hostages for the treasure as the volcanic activity shakes the island and hot lava begins to flow.

In-Depth Profile Of Premier Rabin

ABC News cameras have focused on Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin for more than a month in Israel, filming him at work, in informal sessions with advisors, at conferences with such key statesmen as Henry Kissinger and even on helicopter trips to a kibbutz and a copper mine for the documentary special, "Rabin: Action Biography," airing Tuesday, April 15, 10 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

In developing an in-depth portrait of Rabin, the Prime Minister and the man, the ABC News team headed by Bill Seamans, Bureau Chief in Tel Aviv, also covered a free-wheeling question and answer session between the Israeli leader and students at the Itri Yeshiva in Jerusalem. Excerpts from some of his answers on a broad range of topics follows:

Pressures: "My interpretation of the term pressure is if somebody would come to Israel and say: 'Unless you'll do what we say, you wouldn't get either financial support or the arms support.' For the time being this has not been spelled out this way. I would not deny it — that without certain political understanding, not in details but about directions, Israel has not been given aid from the United States. It is not unique to Israel. See what happens to the relations between Egypt and the Soviet Union for the time being."

Emigration: "We all know that to discover the milk and honey requires a lot of work, a lot of hard work. And only those who really carry with them the conviction, the faith, the determination... only those will manage to stay in this country."

Virginia Hill Story Retold

Dyan Cannon made her TV dramatic debut in the title role as the girlfriend of one-time Los Angeles gangster Bugsy Siegel in "The Virginia Hill Story," an "NBC World Premiere Movie" to be rebroadcast Tuesday, April 15, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

Harvey Keitel co-stars in this true story as Siegel, who was slain in a 1947 gangland ambush while seated in a Beverly Hills home.

Also featured are Allen Garfield as a Chicago gangster who becomes smitten with Virginia, and Bobby Benson as a teen-age family friend, whom Virginia takes with her when she abandons her life of poverty and abuse in the South to make a new life in Chicago.

John Vernon portrays a Chicago mobster to whom Siegel becomes deeply in debt.

Built Career As Lady In Distress

Donna Mills has made a career of playing young women caught in terrifying situations, and her latest film characterization is no exception.

In "The Bait," which airs on the ABC Television Network's "Wednesday Movie of the Week," April 16, 8:30 to 10 p.m., Miss Mills plays an undercover policewoman who serves as the lure to trap a homicidal maniac.

"In all honesty, I can say my role in 'The Bait' is three-dimensional," Miss Mills said with a smile.

Actually, it's three parts in one. In the first place, she is a spunky policewoman. She goes undercover as a secretary working and living downtown where the murderer is believed to be. Finally, when investigation reaches an impasse, she poses as a floozie in a last-ditch effort to attract the killer.

"Although I never thought of a career as a lady cop, social work was my second choice. I can see a close kinship between an undercover policewoman and an actress. To be successful, both require a keen sense of the dramatic. I certainly admire the woman I play in 'The Bait,' not only as a 'performer,' but as a person willing to face terrible danger."

Miss Mills, who started her career as a dancer in clubs and stage musicals, has recently found herself in jeopardy in the following film situations: as Clint Eastwood's girl friend stalked by a female psychopath in "Play Misty For Me"; and as a crippled girl tracked down by a murderer in "Night of Terror," a recent ABC "Movie of the Week" presentation.

"I don't mind playing these roles at all. They give an actress great dramatic leeway. In fact, I was worried for a time that my recent series, 'The Good Life' with Larry Hagman, would type me as a comedy actress. However, the tips I got from Larry on comedy timing will be invaluable to me in the future."

Palance Stars As A Detective

Jack Palance stars as a maverick homicide detective who goes undercover to pursue a narcotics ring that has caused the death of a fellow officer and his own suspension from the police force, in "Bronk," a world premiere drama to be seen on "The CBS Thursday Night Movies" Thursday, April 17 (9-10:30 p.m. on Channel 9-11. David Birney guest stars in the film.

Palance, who starred in "Dracula" last season and in the film "Shane," which earned him one of two Academy Award nominations, portrays Alex Bronkov, a non-conforming police investigator whose involvement in a drug raid turns into a crisis for the department when his partner is surprised and killed.

Even his close friendship with Major Peter Santori cannot prevent Bronkov from being hauled before a police commission board, which upholds his suspension and orders him to wait the department trial which could strip him of the benefits and pension he had accumulated in a 20-year police career.

"Bronk" discloses to Santori that his surface-scraping investigation may be the first step toward revealing a narcotics scandal of gigantic proportions involving city officials and high-level political figures.

The mayor places his confidence in Bronkov by assigning his personal aide to assist him in an undercover investigation of the apparent government corruption."

JACK PALANCE stars as a homicide detective who goes undercover after being suspended from the force after an unauthorized raid that nets $5 million worth of heroin, in "Bronk", world premiere drama on "The CBS Thursday Night Movies", April 17 (9-10:30 p.m. on channels 3N-9-11).

She played opposite Clark Gable in a radio drama and says he was "a most natural, charming guy."

She co-starred with Dick Powell in the motion picture "Happiness Ahead" when Powell was still a crooner.

She was in "Cass Timberlane" in 1948 when Lana Turner threw the glass of champagne in the face of her husband, Spencer Tracy, and then heard women on the street talk about the audacity of this act.

For producer Harry Cohn, she did an audition scene with a young hopeful, Raymond Burr.

She's Josephine Hutchinson and she's the guest-star in the "Little House on the Prairie" episode, "If I Should Wake Before I Die," which will be rebroadcast on Wednesday, April 16, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC TV and Ch. 6-7. She plays an 80-year-old woman who decides to shame her absent offspring into visiting her by staging her own wake.

"They tell me I'm the guest star in this episode," says Miss Hutchinson, "but I never was a star. That's someone whose name is put above the title. But I've been a leading woman for a long time."

Right she is. Miss Hutchinson, small and frail in appearance, but big and robust in energy and spirit, with lively eyes and mellifluous speaking voice, has been an actress for 50 years.

Born and brought up in Seattle, Josephine found herself in school plays at an early age. Her mother saw to that. For mother also was an actress, in the boom towns of the western mining country.

"Those were the days of the melodramas," Miss Hutchinson explained, "and most actresses played their scenes high, wide and handsome. But mother played true."

Young Josephine earned a drama scholarship to the Cornish School back East and through this won a place in the Chautauqua circuit of tent theaters that stretched across the country.

"That was back in 1923," Miss Hutchinson recalled, "when Drew Pearson's father was head of Swarthmore College, which was the center of Chautauqua activity."

From Chautauqua, the young actress moved to the Civic Repertory Company in New York City where she starred as Nora in Ibsen's "A Doll's

Mia Farrow To Play Peter Pan

Mia Farrow will star as "Peter Pan" in a totally new musical adaptation for the NBC Television Network of Sr. James M. Barrie's magical play about a boy who refuses to grow up. This new production — which will be presented as a two-hour special during the 1975-76 season — will remain faithful to the contents and spirit of the original play. All of the popular characters created by Barrie will be on view: the ever-faithful Tinker Bell; Mr. and Mrs. Darling plus Wendy, Michael and John (their children, who follow Peter Pan to Never Never Land); the plotting (and plodding) villain, Captain Hook; Tiger Lilly; Smee the pirate; Crocodile; and the dog Nana, who cares for the Darling children.

"Peter Pan" has had a profound impact on television and has been one of the most successful vehicles in the English-speaking theatre. A production starring Mary Martin became a milestone in TV history via six presentations on NBC-TV. In 1955, it became the first stage hit to be moved intact from Broadway to television studios. That's when the Richard Halliday - Edwin Lester production was first colorcast live. A second live broadcast was presented via NBC-TV in 1956.

The production starring Miss Martin originally was telecast in 1960 and rebroadcast in 1963, 1966 and 1973. All were resounding successes. Both "Peter Pan" and Miss Martin received Emmy Awards. Yet, when Barrie completed the play, friends were dismayed that he had created such a fantasy about youth. Barrie's answer was: "O, that we were boys and girls all our lives...for nothing that happens after we are 12 matters very much."

For Miss Farrow, "Peter Pan" is the latest challenge-seeking venture in a career which spans theatre, films and television. The star, who appears opposite Robert Redford in "The Great Gatsby," made her Broadway debut in "The Importance of Being Earnest." Her motion picture credits include "Rosemary's Baby," "A Dandy in Aspic," "See No Evil," "John and Mary" and "The Public Eye." For her film performances she was won four international awards — A Golden Globe Award, an honor from the French Academy, a prize from the Rio de Janeiro Film Festival and an Italian Academy Award.

On television, she rose rapidly to national fame via her role in the original prime-time production of "Peyton Place." Farrow starred in the special, "Johnny Belinda." She is married to composer-conductor-pianist Andre Previn and lives in England.

GARDEN GAIT

Rock Hudson, star of McMillan & Wife" on "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie," says he hates organized exercise. "I don't mind exercising by working around the garden," he explains. "I have a gymnasium in my house but I never use it."

Dean Martin And NBC Sign Pact

A new long-term agreement between the NBC Television Network and Dean Martin was announced recently by NBC-TV President Robert T. Howard.

The new contract calls for Martin to star in a combination of a number of one-hour variety specials and 'roasts' during the 1975-76 season.

"The audience response to the 'Dean Martin Celebrity Roast' specials of the current season has been outstanding," said Howard. "We are delighted to extend our already long association with Mr. Martin who signed his first contract with NBC Television in 1957 and whom we consider one of America's great entertainment personalities."

Martin made his first solo television appearance on NBC in 1957 as star of eight specials. In 1965, he launched his Dean Martin Show series and has starred or hosted on NBC every year since then, marking the longest consecutive run for any variety show personality in television.

Said Martin, who has never been associated with any other network throughout his career, "It's been a good relationship and I'm pleased to be able to continue it."

Friday Comedy Special

A widowed Pennsylvania steelworker is rearing two teen-aged sons on humor, love and his hopes for their future, in "Joe and Sons," half-hour world premiere comedy starring Richard Castellano, Maureen Arthur, Barry Miller and Mitch Brown, on "The Friday Comedy Special" Friday evening, April 18, 8 to 8:30, on CBS-TV and Ch. 9-11.

Richard Castellano, whose performances in the films "A View From the Bridge" and "Lovers and Other Strangers" and in the drama "Honor Thy Father" won him popular critical acclaim, stars as blue-collar press operator Joe Vitale, who finds his two sons are sometimes at odds with his plans for their betterment. Maureen Arthur stars as the Vitale's neighbor, Estelle, a cocktail waitress and long-time friend who acts as confidant to both Joe and his boys.

Joe's son Mark is a typical 16-year-old boy, an aspiring surgeon who, for the present, is more interested in fashions and girls. Fourteen-year-old Nick seems to be preoccupied with sports in his every waking moment.

Receiving a complaint from Mark's teacher that he has been showing up late and drowsing through his classes, Joe imagines the worst, from petty larceny on up. Mark hatches a series of elaborate fabrications to avoid telling his father the truth—that he has a girl friend. Joe is thrown off the track until Mark is brought home by a policeman at 2 a.m.

"Joe and Sons" is a Douglas S. Cramer Company production, directed by Peter Baldwin for producers Jeff Harris and Bernie Kukoff, who wrote the script with Robert Illes and James Stein. Douglas Cramer was executive producer.

Julie Andrews Will Entertain

Silver white winter will melt into spring—to steal a line from the lovely song—when Julie Andrews takes viewers on a musical journey through a world made up only of her favorite things in an ABC Television Network special, Friday, April 18, 9 to 10 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12. Some of Julie's favorite people—Peter Sellers and Jim Henson's Muppets—are her guests on the special, entitled "Julie—My Favorite Things."

The program is inspired by one of Ms. Andrews' own favorite and most favorite songs from the musical in which she starred, "The Sound of Music."

Deferred To Cook's Wishes

Mrs. Yitzhak Rabin, wife of the Israeli Prime Minister, agreed to allow ABC News to bring cameras into her kitchen during filming of "Rabin: Action Biography." The purpose was a behind-the-scenes look at preparations for an important dinner at the family's official residence in Jerusalem.

But when the camera crew arrived, the busy cook objected. Israel's First Lady apologized and deferred to the cook. Mrs. Rabin explained that in the culinary department, the woman cook was in command. Ultimately, a settlement was negotiated with the cook.

'GO' Goes Underwater --And How!

A trip aboard a windjammer, with adventures on the surface and below the Caribbean waters, is the subject of NBC-TV's "GO!" show Saturday, April 19, 12:30 to 1 p.m. Producer-director Phil Miller recruited two youngsters, John Hennessy and Suzie Cheryl Hodge, 11-year-olds who had never before left their native island of Tortola in the British West Indies, to perform on the show.

In the story, they rubberneck aboard the windjammer Yankee Clipper and fail to notice that it has set sail, making them accidental stowaways. During their cruise, the children steer the vessel, work the sails and ropes, and do chores — cleaning the decks, helping in mess.

Some of the crew go overboard with breathing lungs and take some undersea color scenes, for which the minicam was encased in a special structure designed for the show. It marked the first time a tape camera had been taken underwater. The resulting color scenes shot at 60 feet below the surface with only natural light, produced pictures that could never have been taken with film.

This segment of "GO!" narrated by Geoffrey Holder, was written by Joan Bender.

DIALOGUE

Ray Milland was asked what he considered his best screen role. He said "Aside from 'The Lost Weekend' (which won him an Oscar), I'd have to pick a piece of film from 'Dial M for Murder.' I was 11 solid pages of dialogue, which I filmed in one take without a break."

Brokaw 'Sources' In News

NBC News White House correspondent Tom Brokaw commented on Washington "sources" in a recent broadcast. His remarks follow:

"I have found that, as a Washington journalist, few things I say are more irritating to the American public than this: 'informed sources told NBC News...' Regularly I get complaints. Who are these people, these informed sources?"

"Well, if it's any comfort, the Washington source business is a source of irritation to me as well. Unfortunately, it is a firmly fixed part of the Washington scene and it is regulated by a commonly accepted set of guidelines.

"Briefly, they go like this: On the record — the public official will let the reporter use his or her name in the story.

"Generally, Washington sources go on the record when they don't know anything — or when they're running for re-election.

"Background — probably the most popular form. A reporter can't attribute the information to the source by name but rather by description — such as 'Treasury Department tax expert close to Secretary Simon...' Background is popular because if something goes wrong, the Treasury Department tax expert can always tell Secretary Simon that it must have been the other tax expert who was talking with reporters.

"Deep Background — similar to 'Deep Throat,' Woodward and Bernstein's famous, but still anonymous, source in the Watergate investigation. Deep background means that the reporter must go with the information without attributing it — such as 'NBC News has learned...' — without saying where or from whom. This is the best way for public officials to float trial balloons without having them blow up in their face. Reporters don't like deep background because they don't like to be used.

"Off the record — information not to be printed or broadcast. Washington officials like to go off the record with information that doesn't reflect well on them. It's a kind of dishonorable way of appealing to a reporter's honor. Reporters like off the record even less than deep background.

"This primer on Washington reporting was based on information learned from an informed source close to the White House who sometimes works at NBC News, New York."

GO TO SEA — John Hennessy and Suzie Cheryl Hodge, 11-year-old residents of the British Virgin Islands, play young rubbernecks who accidentally go to sea on a windjammer on NBC-TV's "GO" Saturday, April 19 (12:30-1 p.m.).

Involvement Plays A Part In Series

"The two ingredients in every good children's film that we look for are involvement and participation," says Faith Frenz, producer of the award-winning weekly series, "The CBS Children's Film Festival," seen Saturdays, 1 to 2 p.m., on CBS-TV.

"While entertainment is, of course, important in a film," Miss Frenz says, "the act of participating, of identifying with someone else's life nourishes the child's awareness and enables him to reach out and care about those around him.

"Involvement allows the child to grow emotionally without being conscious of the process. Identification lifts the viewer out of his skin. Without realizing it, he has learned the meaning of empathy."

Another important element required by the CBS Children's Programming Department when selecting a film for young viewers is a clear definition between the good guys and the bad guys.

"The Children's Foundation of England polled a group of children, aged 7-12," says Miss Frenz. "It seems that villains are universally popular — especially among boys — because of the appeal of bravery and masculine daring, and of the rejection of conventional morality when these are illustrated on the screen."

"The children are delighted when the hero is triumphant and the villain meets his just deserts. Basically, the children fear villains, so they derive satisfaction from seeing the source of their fear overcome in the last reel."

Presidency Is Not For Welk

Lawrence Welk won't run for the Presidency.

To stop a rapidly growing pile of letters, some 5,000 to date, generated by a fan's grassroots draft effort, Welk has been forced to send out a letter to 60 newspaper declining the honor.

The mountain of mail has been building since Anthony Defina of Santa Barbara blanketed the country with letters-to-the-editor urging Welk fans to write the bandleader, coaxing him to become a candidate.

In his own letter, Welk said he might bring some "harmony, teamwork and rhythm" into government and that his accent is at least as good as Henry Kissinger's. However, he added, "I am not politically oriented; politics, like music and golf, is best learned at an early age. Having reached the age of 72, I'm afraid it is a little late to change horses in the middle of a stream beset with such treacherous currents."

Loser Guaranteed Almost $250,000

Are you ready for a TV tennis match where even the loser is guaranteed close to $250,000?

Apparently, CBS, which will televise Jimmy Connors vs. John Newcombe on April 26, thinks so.

Owners of thin wallets and bills that are difficult to pay in these days of inflation may well drool over the fact that the winner of the match will receive $250,000 as a prize and a loser zero. Also, to make your envy greener, between the TV rights and a kitty provided by Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, site of the action, each athlete should receive more than $200,000 just for showing up. So, it looks like the victor may grab close to $500,000!

All that money to the participants and the winner will still leave a profit for CBS, because one sponsor has already purchased half of the match for $500,000. About 12 minutes are still 'for sale' and will be an easy sell in these hard times.

The February 2nd successful Connors-Rod Lavers made-for-TV tennis match obviously cleared the way for this bigger-than-ever telecast.

From a financial and production viewpoint, the Connors-Newcombe match is neat and simple compared with team sports and leagues, where conditions frequently lead to chaos and confusion for the networks.

Take, for instance, the National Hockey League. CBS and NBC poured a fortune and a tremendous amount of imagination into it in the hopes of making this proven regional sports a national products. Alas, despite the efforts, ratings barely edge up, turning hockey from a terrible loser to a very, very bad loser.

Will Portray Jim Bridger

James Wainwright will star as the legendary Jim Bridger, trailblazer, geographer and woodsman, in "Bridger," a special two-hour motion picture which will have its world premiere on the ABC Television Network.

"Bridger" is based on the true life adventures of the mountain man who was deeply involved in opening up the American West for settlement in the 1830s.

'Mike' Brings Relief

(The Los Angeles Dodgers will meet the Cincinnati Reds on Monday, April 14, at 8:15 p.m. on Channel 6-7.)

Mike Marshall is fast relief for the Los Angeles Dodgers when things aren't going as planned. His record-setting performances and contributions to the Dodgers' National League pennant in 1974 earned him the Cy Young Award. Mike became the first relief pitcher ever to win the award. He joined three other Dodgers as Cy Young Award winners — Don Newcombe, who won the first award in 1956; Don Drysdale, 1962; and Sandy Koufa, a three-time winner — 1963, '65 and '66.

Marshall placed third in the voting for the Most Valuable Player Award and for the second year in a row he was the leading pitcher in the MVP poll.

Marshall established Major League records in 1974 for games pitched — 106 (breaking his own mark of 92 which had been set in 1973); innings pitched in relief — 208.1 (again Mike erased his own record of 179, set in 1973); games finished — 83 (erasing the record of 77 set by Ken Sanders of Milwaukee in 1971); and consecutive games pitched — 13 (shattering the mark of nine which had been shared by Elroy Face, George Shultz and Tim Lincecum).

In addition to winning the Cy Young Award, Mike became the first relief pitcher in 24 years to be selected National League Pitcher of the Year by The Sporting News (Jim Konstanty won the honor in 1950, becoming the first relief pitcher to win the award).

Mike's 15 victories gave him 43 relief wins over a three-year span, and, with his 21 saves, he became The Sporting News' Fireman of the Year in the National League. Marshall pitched in 65 of the Dodgers' 102 victories.

In addition to being a vital part of the Dodgers team, he is completing work toward a doctorate in physiological psychology at his alma mater, Michigan State. He also teaches a course in kinesiology at Michigan State in the off-season.

Now Pregnant Sportscaster

Add a couple of 'firsts' for the nation's pioneer gal sportscaster, Jane Chastain, of CBS-TV — she's now the first sportscaster to become pregnant and the first to let her fans know about it via coast-to-coast TV. Chastain, whose husband, Roger, is an industrial designer and product engineer, announced the forthcoming birth on a recent airing of "The Mike Douglas Show."

She was pregnant during a December 'Douglas Show' stint in Miami, but was too busy cavorting on water shoes and going down slides to mention it.

Susan Flannery shocked the cast and crew of "Days of Our Lives" as well as her friends when she announced she is leaving the popular daytime serial as of April 18th. The show goes to an hour format three days later and reportedly Susan made the decision to depart when she couldn't come to terms on a new contract.

Sherman Hemsley of the "The Jeffersons" is suffering from severe back pain which has required care from his physician. Sherman admits that

Glen Campbell 'Norwood' Star

Glen Campbell, Kim Darby and Joe Namath (in his first movie) star in "Norwood," a happy all-family comedy about an ex-Marine rattling his way from Texas to New York and back again in a car he doesn't know is stolen and a series of cross-country busses. The film makes its television debut on the ABC Television Network's "The ABC Saturday Night Movie," April 19, 9 to 11 p.m. on Channel 3-5-12.

Carol Lynley, Pat Hingle, Tisha Sterling, Dom DeLuise and Meredith Mac Rae are co-starred as some of the oddly lovable and usual characters young Norwood Pratt (Campbell) meets during his American odyssey.

the pain has been easier to take since CBS renewed the show for next fall.

John Amos of "Good Times" and his wife Noel are divorcing after some 11 years of marriage. Noel will have custody of their two children, Shannon, 8, and K.C., 4.

"Hawaii Five-O" has resolved its studio in Hawaii by renegotiating a new deal with Hawaii Studios. Residents near the facility had hoped to get the series moved to another studio due to what they called excessive noise and traffic.

"Cannon" and "Barnaby Jones" have been renewed for next fall, and there's the possibility "Harry and Tonto," the successful film starring Art Carney, may become a TV series for next season.

The daytime Emmys will be telecast on ABC on May 15th. Rumor has it that "The Waltons" will lose Richard Thomas who'll star in a spinoff called "John-Boy."

Probing Legal Profession

ABC News examines the legal profession in areas that have triggered growing controversy—fees, ethics and competence—on the documentary special, "ABC News Close-Up on Lawyers: Guilty as Charged?", Saturday, April 19, 8:00 to 9:00 p.m., on Ch. 3W,5-12.

Rhonda Fleming Seen In Saturday TV Film

Rhonda Fleming makes a rare television guest-starring appearance in "Last Hours Before Morning," airing Saturday evening, April 19, from 9:30 to 11:30 on NBC-TV and Channel 6-7.

After a self-imposed semi-retirement of several years, Miss Fleming is back in the swim of things and the entertainment medium is far richer because of her return. Only a handful of performers can match her long list of achievements, and fewer can match her as a person. She is one of those extremely rare people who are beautiful, talented, genuine and gifted with a warm, keen sense of humor.

Two years ago she burst back on the scene as one of the stars of the Broadway production of Clare Booth Luce's "The Women," and was greeted with great critical acclaim.

Would she like to go back to Broadway?

"If it were a musical, possibly, because I love to sing and I studied singing long before I started acting. I've sung individually and I've acted individually, but I've never put the two together.

"I'm a California girl — born and bred — and I love it out here. It would have to be something really special to get me away from here. But, I'll never say 'never'.

"Speaking of 'never,' I recently did a segment of 'Kung Fu.' It was to have been a 'walk-thru,' but everything happened to me...I came down with the 'Hong Kong' flu while we were filming and then, one of the 'heavies' pushed me at the wrong time in a flight scene and I injured my back. I'll tell you, that's ONE show I've done that I really don't care to see!

In "Last Hours Before Morning," I play the role of Mrs. Pace, a flamboyant lady, sort of a 'society' type, who loves men, especially younger men...and she gets herself carted off to jail!

"You know, they only give me these 'heavy' roles. I don't think I look like a 'heavy,' but it looks like I'm ALWAYS getting carted off to jail," laughs the green-eyed blonde.

"I hope that I will find another type of role. I would really like to play a very meaningful part, not a 'wishy-washy' woman, but a 'real' woman. Writers are beginning to write these 'real' woman parts again and I'm so glad. I haven't come across her yet, but I hope I will in the near future. I think what I'm looking for in a role is 'quality'."

Casualties In Movie 'Fight'

In movie battles, nobody is supposed to get hurt — right? That's why, for the more risky parts, stuntmen are employed. But during the filming of a battle scene in the ABC-TV special, "I Will Fight No More Forever," principal actors headed a small casualty list. Ned Romero, who stars as Chief Joseph, the leader of the tribe, suffered mild hyperventilation from exertion at an altitude of 10,750 feet in the mountains of Mexico. Nick Ramus, who plays Rainbow, had his palm burned in a burst of rifle fire created by the special effects men. Both incidents happened within five minutes, causing Ramus to remark: "Isn't this the fight the Indians win?"

RARE TV APPEARANCE — Rhonda Fleming makes a rare television appearance as Mrs. Pace, a flamboyant hotel resident, in "Last Hours Before Morning," the second part of the "NBC Double Feature Movie," Saturday, April 12 (9:30 - 11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

FOR SEN. HENRY M. JACKSON (D-Wash.)

Would you support a bill that the President serve only one term—a six-year term?—G. Hoffman, Waterbury, Conn.

● I'm skeptical of efforts to tinker with such fundamental constitutional institutions as the Presidency. No amount of tinkering can assure that abuses will be eliminated. In fact, such changes may well create new possibilities for abuse. There can be no "quick-fix" substitute for the single most important thing—picking individuals of character and competence for positions of high trust.

FOR EVA GABOR

When did you first feel the urge to become an actress?—K.B., Jackson, Tenn.

● When I was four. I used my mother's belt as a top, joined some banana skins together for a skirt, climbed on top of the kitchen table, pretended it was a stage and started to dance.

FOR FREDA PAYNE

How did you get started working for sickle-cell anemia?—Sheila Yvette Harris, Washington, D.C.

● Four years ago, the child of a very close friend of mine died from the disease. At first I felt powerless to do anything about it; but then I realized that as a singer I was in a position to raise money by performing, and to educate the public by talking about this illness during talk-show appearances.

FOR FRANK ROBINSON, manager of the Cleveland Indians

Now that you've become the first black manager in major-league baseball, would you say you've reached all your goals?—Bob Davis, Havelock, N.C.

● Certainly not. Now I have new goals: I want to win a pennant. Also, I want to live to see the day when I am known only as "Frank Robinson, the manager of the Cleveland Indians," not "Frank Robinson, the first black manager in baseball."

FOR RONA BARRETT, author of "Miss Rona"

Do you have any friends among the stars?—B.B., York, Pa.

● Not too many close ones, although I know them all. Familiarity breeds contempt, and I couldn't have done my job properly if I were bosom friends with each and every one of them. My "Friends List" includes Mae West, Jack Nicholson, Kirk Douglas, Ann-Margret, Fabian and Brenda Vaccaro (if ever a film is made of my life, she's the one I'd like to play me). I have an "Idols List"—Golda Meir and Eleanor Roosevelt.

FOR CLIFTON DAVIS, star of "That's My Mama"

Why are you so reluctant to talk about relationships with the opposite sex on the show?—J. Mack, Durham, N.C.

● I would love to talk about them, but my sponsors don't want me to. In fact, I'd like to discuss lots of things more openly, but I'm not allowed to. I have to stick to the script, and not change the personality of the character I'm playing.

FOR DINA MERRILL

Why does a woman like you, who has a perfect face, use makeup?—Barbara House, Franklin, Mass.

● I don't have a perfect face; it is makeup that creates that illusion. Because I have a square face, I correct my jawbone with a bit of shadow under the chin. I have a prominent bone under my brow. The fashion today is to highlight it. I don't. It jumps out at you anyway in photos. I tone it down with a deeper shade of makeup.

FOR GEORGE BURNS

Why do you mention Altoona so often in your act?—G. W. Steele, Newark, Ohio

● I played there once, a long time ago, and met this beautiful little blonde waitress. After the last show, I took her down by the lake and. . . I forgot—this is a family magazine. Let's just say I have fond memories of Altoona, Pa. In fact, I'll never forget it.

FOR JOHNNY BENCH, baseball catcher

How many gloves do you wear out in a season?—Mrs. Jack Shine, Lima, Ohio

● I usually wear out two gloves during a season. But I always have several gloves around that are in various stages of being broken in.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is Vic Damone still around?—D.L., Hackensack, N.J.

● He sure is. For many years, he stuck mainly to Las Vegas and the West Coast. But he recently made his first New York nightclub appearance in eight years at the Rainbow Grill. Damone was born Vito Farinola in New York. He sang his first song at two, accompanied by his father on the guitar. (Vic's mother was a piano teacher.) His career really started when he won an Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts show. After an Army stint and ten movies, Vic decided to return to and stick with his first love—singing. When he wed Becky Ann Jones in 1974, he brought along four children from previous marriages. He's an avid golfer and boater, has been named one of the nation's ten best-dressed men, designs his own clothes and is interested in billiards, karate and cooking.

The Great (And Thankless) American Food Giveaways: Are We Really Doing Anybody Any Good?

By Rep. Jerry Litton (D—Mo.)

Last year, I attended the much-heralded World Food Conference in Rome. But before going there, I took a swing through six African nations to see some of the drought-stricken countries that would have representatives in Rome asking for food aid. I also visited some not-so-poor African nations to see what plans they had for helping their starving neighbors.

By the time I got to Rome, I was filled with ideas about how we should handle the world food situation. What I was not prepared for was the barrage of attacks that was continually hurled at the United States. It appeared to me that many foreign governments, short on memory and long on words, were more interested in condemning the U.S. than in finding solutions to the problem.

Most accused the U.S. of not helping enough. The Committee of 77—a group of nations that started out numbering 77 but that now numbers more than 100—openly suggested that the U.S. owed help to them, and not only should give them billions of dollars worth of aid, but should also write off these countries' past debts.

Nations such as China, who by their own failure to help starving nations could not condemn the U.S. for failing to help, attacked us for helping too much. Their line of criticism suggested that we helped other countries only so we could continue to exploit them.

Listening to this kind of criticism—plus that coming from countries who said we did not help enough—I started to question the success of our foreign policy. You really can't buy friends, can you?

I am not an isolationist. I recognize that we live in a world that is growing smaller every day. I also recognize that the United States has a moral and humanitarian obligation to help others. I have had enough business and political experience to know that helping others is not without its rewards, even if help is not extended with that purpose in mind. Obviously, it is to the advantage of the U.S. that we live in a world of nations whose people are both stable and economically well off.

But one look at America's economy today should tell us that spending and giveaways like those that followed World War II can't continue. At that time, we looked at a destroyed

France, England, Italy, Japan and many of the other countries leveled by the ravages of the war and decided we would help rebuild the world, for friend and foe alike.

What we came up with was the Marshall Plan, a mammoth giveaway foreign-aid program. And it was a good one. We were strong and Europe was weak. We had many natural resources and the capacity to produce. We felt an obligation to help other nations and we recognized that they would eventually become good markets for our products.

Well, times have changed. Europe has long since rebuilt. Still, we continue to maintain more than 300,000 troops there. And despite the fact that Japan sells us billions of dollars more in goods than we sell it, we continue to have troops there too.

What I am suggesting is not a policy of isolationism, but one in keeping with the economics of today, rather than a continuation of one de-

"At one point an African leader told me that 'family planning' were dirty words in his country and that America had no right to meddle in his country's internal affairs. I pointed out that 'helping countries unwilling to help themselves' were getting to be dirty words in America."

veloped during a time when the American dollar held a different position in the world economy. Show me a businessman or a nation that can't adjust to changing times, that spends in the bad times as profligately as in the good times, and I'll show you an incipient bankrupt.

I visited with the leaders of some of the more prosperous African nations, such as Nigeria, which saw its oil exports jump from $2 billion to over $8 billion in one year and which expects to take in over $16 billion in 1975. I asked its leaders if they had any plans to help their starving African neighbor to the north. I was told they had none.

It appears to me that it is time that developing countries who are asking America for aid start setting a good example by aiding their neighbors whenever possible. And if they aren't willing to do that, at least they should be willing to help themselves instead of taking our aid with one hand and slapping us with the other.

Representative Litton in his Washington office. Until he was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1972, he was a full-time farmer and rancher.

I also remember the World Food Population Conference in August in Bucharest, and the speeches made by some food-short and overpopulated countries such as India. They wanted no part of America's plan to bring runaway world-population increases in check. Instead, these countries blamed U.S. consumers for eating too much and U.S. producers for not producing enough.

World hunger is caused by too many people and not enough food. Bangladesh is a nation the size of Missouri, but by the year 2000 it is expected to have as many people as now populate the entire United States. Its president, Sheik Mujibur Rahman, is concerned over the prospect and the urgent need to find a remedy. In a recent speech explaining why he had expanded his presidential powers, he referred to Bangladesh's current "chaotic situation" and asked: "How long will friends continue to give us food and assistance? We must have population control. We must discipline ourselves. I do not want to lead a nation of beggars."

In 1830, we had fewer than one billion persons inhabiting the earth. In the following 100 years, we added another billion, and in the next 30 years (by 1960) one billion more appeared.

We have been filling orders for strawberry plants at House of Wesley for more than 20 years. It's important to us to offer the hardiest, best producing varieties. And it saves our customers money! We are constantly searching for better ones. The ones that are best for shortcake, freezing and jams. We listen when our customers tell us about the varieties that taste and produce best for them. We also make sure that the plants we send out are especially adapted to your area. Sorry, they cannot be shipped to Arizona.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS IN THE NORTHERN, MIDWEST AND EASTERN STATES we send the extra sweet, giant, ROBINSON strawberry plants. This top-selling variety produces big, juicy, bright red berries. They're so large you can expect to get about 30 berries to the quart. They often grow as big as a plum! This is a firm berry that ripens fast. It is highly disease and drought resistant and winter hardy. The Robinson plant itself is relatively small but very vigorous and high yielding. It is especially adapted for the long fruiting season in the midwest.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS IN THE SOUTH AND WEST COAST STATES we send the new TIOGA strawberry plant. This is an extra-ordinary new university-tested virus-free berry that produces a big flush of delicious red berries from April to July. They are plump, sweet and juicy. The long-producing TIOGA has retained the better qualities of older varieties - - produces more fruit, better flavor and firmness. Don't compare the TIOGA with ordinary varieties.

House of Wesley Plants Are All Indexed Virus-Free

You always get clean, nuclear planting stock. Meristemmed mother plants are held in isolation in University plant pathology greenhouses until indexed as virus-free. This means you get superior fruit, double yields and increased plant vigor.

All Number-One Plants and Easy To Grow

Plant in fertile clay soil if possible. Set plants 18" to 24" apart in 4' rows. They produce lots of new runners to give you a bigger patch every year. PLANTING HINT: For best results plant in new ground where strawberries have not been grown for several years to avoid contaminating these healthy virus-free plants.

Strawberries Should Be Included In Every Home Garden

Even if you don't raise a garden - - you should grow strawberries. They are not hard to grow, yet they probably produce the greatest pleasure of all home grown fruits. Strawberry shortcake - - jams - - and eating fresh from the patch! In these days of high food prices a strawberry patch is an especially good investment. And you don't have to wait years to harvest a crop! Strawberries will supply a full day's allowance of Vitamin C. This is more Vitamin C than is supplied by an equal weight of orange juice.

What To Do When You Are Short of Space And Still Want Strawberries

A very small space (as small as 9' x 12') will produce all the berries an average-sized family will need. But if you don't have even a few feet to spare you can still have them. Drill holes in a nail keg, fill it with dirt and put the plants in the holes. This is decorative as well as a good way to grow many delicious berries in a small space. Trellises and strawberry pyramids can also be made when space is limited.

Our Full Protection Guarantee

All plants are guaranteed to be of high quality, and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY — you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

Food Giveaways

A fourth billion has probably been added by now (1975), and a fifth billion is expected by 1985. Most estimates suggest a world population of 6.5 to 7.5 billion by the year 2000. At this rate, by the end of the next century we will have 37 billion people on this earth!

Most of the food-hungry countries not only are experiencing their biggest population growths, but seem to be the least interested in doing anything about it. Each time I suggested family-planning programs to high officials of African nations, I was met with critical frowns from my hosts and raised eyebrows from our embassy officials. At one point an African leader told me that "family planning" were dirty words in his country and that America had no right to meddle in his country's internal affairs. I pointed out that "helping countries unwilling to help themselves" were getting to be dirty words in America and that asking us to give away food at a time when we were experiencing our greatest food shortage in 40 years was meddling in our internal affairs.

Because of the inelastic demand for food, a one percent reduction in supply in America can result in a four or five percent increase at the retail level. A five percent reduction in supply can increase consumer food prices by 25 percent. And inelasticity works against producers as well as consumers. If steaks were five cents each, for example, you still wouldn't eat 50 for lunch. Thus, food surpluses drive prices down for the producer just as severely as slight shortages drive them up for the consumer.

It was with all of this in mind that, upon my return from the World Food Conference, I introduced a bill in Congress that limits America's nearly $1 billion yearly food giveaways to those countries that meet us halfway in solving the problems of world hunger. Our "Food for Peace Program" (Public Law 480), which was passed in 1954 when we had huge surpluses of grain and millions of idle acres, no longer works. Our graineries today are empty, and most of our idle acres have been put into production. We will give, yes, but recipient nations must do their part. That means they must put more emphasis on their own agriculture production. It means they must build irrigation ditches instead of A-bombs when their country is filled with starving people. And it means that if they want large families, fine, but they can't say that we have an obligation to feed them.

My bill specifies that no Public Law 480 funds will be used in the future to give food to countries whose populations are growing faster than the world average if such countries are not making reasonable efforts to put forth family-planning programs. Exceptions would be made for short-term emergency situations.

Is this a coldhearted approach? I don't think so. Nor do I think it is inhumane. I think it is far more humane to put recipient nations on notice that world-population growth is going to have to be slowed now. If it isn't, and we wait, millions of starving people will learn of the necessity of limiting population growth the hard way.

A Postscript: Surprisingly, my bill has received strong support from religious and social leaders who one might have thought would have opposed it. Many newspapers, including President Ford's hometown paper, The Grand Rapids Press, have given my bill editorial support. It remains to be seen what kind of support it will have in Congress. My bet is that if it were put to a vote before the American people it would pass by an overwhelming majority. Perhaps if this same majority speaks up to its representatives, Congress will pass it too.

Well today that very same plate sells for around $100.00 each—which is a 400% increase from our original issue price. Even at $100.00 each they are hard to find.

THE GENIUS OF CHARLES M. RUSSELL

A LIMITED EDITION ON FINE RIDGEWOOD CHINA

The Western Collector Plate Series

Charles Russell roamed the early American range as a hunter, trapper and wrangler—and also as a poet, painter and sculptor. Along with Frederick Remington, he is considered a genius among Western documentary artists. Few American artists have received the acclaim given to Charles Russell both during his lifetime and since his death in 1926, and fewer artists have had their works loved as much.

Charles Russell saw, participated in, and portrayed in vivid artwork, one of the most colorful periods in American history. He even worked as a night wrangler for a dozen years so that he had all day to paint and sculpt, but it was not until he met Will Rogers, who was a fan of his, that he was persuaded to work at his art full-time.

The finest examples of his great paintings have been chosen for these four magnificent Limited Edition Collector Plates. 8½" in diameter with 24Kt. gold rims, they are on the finest Ridgewood China and although they are supposed to sell for $85.00 for the set of four—your Special Price from Joy's Limited Editions for the next 4 weeks (or until we're sold out) is only $60.00. Here is one series that every American will be proud to own.

1975 A Big Bicentennial Year, Too!

FAMILY WEEKLY and the U.S. Bicentennial Office of the National Parks Commission put their heads together to come up with a travelers' guide to some of the most important and interesting Bicentennial-related events for this "pre-Bicentennial" year. Our conclusion: 1975 is perhaps as big a year for celebrating 200th birthdays as 1976 will be. See if you don't agree.

The first major event of the nationwide celebration, and certainly among the most historic, is the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington and Concord in Massachusetts. The "shot heard around the world" was fired on April 19, Redcoats and patriots will march again in many Park Service living-history demonstrations.

1775. The townspeople of each town—Lexington, Concord and Lincoln—plan to commemorate the historic occasion next weekend with typical New England Patriots Day parades. Concord's festivities begin at 5 a. m. on the 19th at North Bridge—located in Minute Man National Historical Park. The parade will pass there at approximately 10 a. m., and there will be appropriate ceremonies honoring those farmers who took the irrevocable step that led to a new nation.

The Second Continental Congress convened at Philadelphia on May 10, 1775. It was an eventful day. After almost 14 months of deliberation, that congress issued the Declaration of Independence. This May 10, 1975, the convening of that historic body will be commemorated in Independence National Historical Park. Call the park for the exact time—it is an event you shouldn't miss.

Meanwhile, a continent and an ocean away, in Hawaii, three National Park Service sites are celebrating with a series of unusual programs. Idyllic City of Refuge National Historical Park on the Kona Coast is featuring a living history based on the native culture of the Islands during America's colonial period. At Haleakala National Park on Maui, site of the famous 10,023-foot volcano, the beautiful Seven Pools section has a living history planned on ancient Hawaiian taro farming.

Three of our best-known patriots will lead the Bicentennial tribute in the two Disney parks.

HOW THE FOLKS AT DISNEY ARE CELEBRATING OUR BIRTHDAY

A Bicentennial celebration would not be complete without two of America's favorite characters—Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck. Along with sidekick Goofy, they will star in a spectacular salute to America's history, "America on Parade." This colorful and almost continuous procession will debut this June at both Disneyland and Walt Disney World, and will be staged daily at both locations through September 6, 1976. Officials of Walt Disney Productions estimate that more than 25 million people will view the parade during the 15-month period. This will break all records for attendance at any production in the entire history of the U.S.!

Aside from the old Disney favorites, an entirely new family of characters is being developed, the "People of America." These larger-than-life dolls, together with hundreds of live performers, will highlight a pageant that traces America's glorious achievements and contributions to world progress. This monumental celebration promises to make history fun for old and young alike.

In keeping with the grandiose Disney tradition, a myriad of other events is planned at both the California and Florida parks, among them: A special one-week salute to every state in the Union, a new version of the widely acclaimed film "America the Beautiful," and a unique and thoroughly patriotic "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks display.

Before: "When you're 180 pounds, you have to grin and bear it—or do something about your weight."

After: "125 pounds! As you can see, I did something about my weight."

She had five children and lost 63 pounds.

How Shirley Badders got fat having 3 babies, took it off, then slimmed down even more having twins.

By Ruth L. McCarthy

Shirley is quite a woman. You could even say she's a knockout! Poised. Articulate. Clothes-conscious. Happy with her husband. Proud of her five children. Why, she's even eight pounds slimmer and almost one inch taller since the last time I saw her. Perhaps because she's standing straighter these days. Whatever the reason, Shirley Badders has come a long way in the past three years.

At our first meeting, she had lost 55 pounds—or what she liked to call her "shame fat." You see, Shirley had come from a large family, so she had learned to cook enormous meals. When she married, in her teens, she had a dreadful time getting used to cutting down on the amount of food she cooked. If it wasn't all eaten, she'd feel so ashamed about wasting good food that she'd stuff herself with it.

As a result, each time she became pregnant, she had to wear maternity clothes in her second month. By the time her third child was born, Shirley was carrying around 180 pounds—mostly from the waist down. Why it was almost impossible for her to find pantyhose to fit. So she wore regular stockings with the fat bulging over the top.

Actually, it was a party joke about her "hangover" knees that finally jolted Shirley into doing something about her weight. Luckily, she remembered that her mother had once used those reducing-plan candies, Ayds®, and with great success. So Shirley picked up a box of the vanilla caramel kind at a drug counter and started on the plan. She took one or two Ayds before each meal with a hot drink and they really helped her cut back on what she ate. They even helped free Shirley from the late-night sandwich trap, and she was able to go from 180 to 125 pounds.

Although Shirley said little about her marriage during that first meeting, there were problems. Unfortunately, they didn't go away even after she'd slimmed down. So eventually Shirley and her husband separated.

During my recent meeting with Shirley, I learned she had married again. And happily so to Larry Badders. When I admired the way she'd kept her weight down, Shirley smiled and said that Larry had never seen her heavy, except when she was pregnant with their twins. And even then, she apparently had held her weight down. Because Shirley told of a sight-seeing trip to Rock City when she was seven months "big," and she was still able to squeeze through Thin Man's Pass.

Interestingly, Shirley weighed only 121 pounds the day she left the hospital (in Muncie, Indiana) with the twins. And at this writing she is now a trim 117 pounds. "I no longer have to worry about willpower," said Shirley. "Thanks to the Ayds plan, the willpower is 'there' now."

Your words certainly are an inspiration to all of us, Shirley. With five children and a figure as trim as yours, you've got to have something going for you. Must be those Ayds!

Now: "As the mother of five, I decided to put on a body shirt so you could see my slimmer-than-ever figure—117 pounds."

Bicentennial Year

Continued

At Hawaii Volcanoes National Park on the "big island" visitors will enjoy special demonstrations of lauhala weaving, the making of grapefruit poi and ancient hulas. If you wish, you can even receive instruction in ancient hulas and the old Hawaiian language.

The Bicentennial is being honored in many different ways in every state. In North Dakota, for example, from May through September both Fort Union Trading Post National His- just as exciting to visit is Castillo de San Marcos National Monument at St. Augustine in Florida. It is the oldest masonry fort in the continental United States—construction by the Spanish started in 1672—and was built to protect the first European settlement. A British stronghold from the end of the French and Indian War in 1763 through the Revolution, the fort this year will feature special living-history programs this summer emphasizing the little-Locations of some important 1975 Bicentennial events: 1) Lexington and Concord, Mass.; 2) Philadelphia, Pa.; 3) Hawaii; 4) two parks in North Dakota; 5) Fort Clatsop, Ore.; 6) Fort Davis, Texas; 7 & 8) battlefields in North and South Carolina; 9) St. Augustine, Fla.; 10) Washington, D.C.

toric Site and Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial Park are featuring unusual Indian living-history demonstrations, especially of such artistic crafts as bead- and quillwork, painting and leatherwork.

At Oregon's Fort Clatsop National Memorial this summer you can discover the frontier life-style of Lewis and Clark during their famous exploration of the West. While down in Texas at Fort Davis National Historic Site there will be a special old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration—frontier cavalry style.

Historically speaking, there are five key Revolutionary War battlefields in the South: Moore's Creek and Guilford Court-house in North Carolina and King's Mountain, Cowpens and Fort Moultrie in South Carolina. They will conduct living-history demonstrations all summer. Lesser known but understood but vital Loyalist views held by so many Americans of the day.

One of the major events of 1975 Bicentennial celebrations will be found at Washington, D.C., from June 25 through July 6. This is the ninth annual Festival of American Folk Life held on the 50-acre mall between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. This one will be the biggest ever. It is being cosponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and the National Park Service, and it will feature a number of folk cultures, a kaleidoscope of exhibits and demonstrations, tracing our nation's roots and traditions.

As with all these remarkable events in 1975, the folk festival is a celebration of the links with our heritage—the real roots of America. What better way to honor and enjoy our Bicentennial than that?

Not only does it surge skyward in the most spectacular burst of beauty you've ever seen... but, also arches out in a magazine-cover display of color-drenched branches.

EASE: Leading editors report: Tree of unusual merit... grows in almost any soil... and below-zero root-hardy, too. Yes, because nature has endowed this landscape-artist's "dream-tree" with super-growing strength... because it is virtually resistant to most every common disease... requires practically no care at all. You simply plant it and forget it... it's as simple as that.

A TOWER OF BEAUTY IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

Yes, who says you have to spend a small fortune for a flowering shade tree? — and then spend half a lifetime waiting for it to grow? It used to be that way — BUT NOT ANY LONGER. Not since we have finally tracked down the one single tree in all of nature that hoists itself high, so fast you can literally measure the difference in both height and spread from week to week... or take a yardstick and measure the incredible difference in feet from month to month!

GROWS IN ANY SOIL — REQUIRES NO SPECIAL CARE — SOARS INTO A MASTERPIECE OF LUSH, GREEN BEAUTY IN JUST A MATTER OF MONTHS!

Best of all, unlike most trees that demand sprays, pesticides, insecticides and constant pampering... the only thing you do when you plant Paulownia is water it and enjoy it. That's why leading botanical gardens... landscape artists... garden editors... can't stop raving about its indescribable beauty... its super-growing, super-flowering ability... its trouble-free maintenance. Is it any wonder that every leading expert has hailed Paulownia in the most glowing terms... recommended it again and again for home-owners who want a stunning display of both beauty and shade... and with practically no more work than a couple of sprinkles a season.

Never Has There Been A Faster Growing, Flowering Shade Tree Introduced To America — Royal Paulownia

Yes, plant now — see it soar forth in a tower of beauty in just one year! But wait — That's only half the thrill. Just wait 'til you see the looks of awe and envy on your neighbors' faces when it starts to erupt into bloom. Each branch so densely packed with flowers, you can hardly see a twig peek through. It's the most spectacular splurge of both growth and beauty of any shade tree ever brought to this country. And it's so easy to grow even a child can do it.

So Remember: Satisfaction is guaranteed. You must be thrilled in every way with this wondrous flowering shade tree or RETURN AT ANY TIME within 90 days for a full refund of your purchase price. Use the no Risk Coupon below.

How's this for a natural archway in front of your driveway — twin towers of flowering beauty in less time than you ever dreamed possible.

Picture your patio bathed in the cool, fragrant beauty of this show-stopping miracle-tree from early spring to the first snows of winter.

ONLY A LIMITED SUPPLY YET AVAILABLE FOR RELEASE TO THE PUBLIC — SO ACT NOW!

Now, the price of this super-growing shade tree is not the $20 or $30 you might expect... and probably be glad to pay. On this special introductory offer it is a mere $3.95... yes, only $3.95 for this magnificent shade tree that rewards you with such a glorious display of growth IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

However, since supply is still sorely limited... it will take our growers at least another year or two to propagate enough trees for full nationwide distribution. Here's a luxury sight you don't have to wait half a lifetime growing — a matched pair of flowering show-pieces, so strong and sturdy you can actually sling a hammock between them.

GENE LITTLER:

They Said His Career Was Over— Then He Beat Johnny Miller ...

When Gene Littler left the pro golf tour in 1972, his career—and perhaps his life—seemed to be over. The agonizing pains in his shoulder and armpit had been diagnosed as cancer. To eradicate the cancer, he had to undergo surgery of the lymph glands. He still remained confident that he could make a comeback. ... His confidence was justified when he returned to the tour in 1973 and earned $95,000 in winnings for that year and over $100,000 in 1974. His greatest performance came early this year when he won the $37,000 first prize in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am tournament on one of the country's most demanding courses. The field he beat included the incomparable Johnny Miller. "That Crosby victory proved beyond any doubt that my comeback is both real and lasting," Littler says. "I spent years before my surgery trying to win the Crosby, but I was never able to bring it off."

... Littler's career has been studded with victories. He won the U.S. Open in 1961 and won 23 other tournaments before his ordeal with cancer. ... That ordeal, he says, has some positive aspects. "In some small way, I am able to be an inspiration to a lot of people who have had the same problem I did," he points out. "It makes them realize they can still do many things and be successful." Littler has always been popular because of his easygoing nature, modest demeanor and lack of temperament. His smoothness has earned him the nickname "Gene the Machine." Littler says his "easy-does-it" manner stems from the fact that he refuses to make golf an obsession, "Sure, I like to win, but I enjoy the game. I would never let it devour me." A native of San Diego, 44-year-old Littler has a wife Shirley and a son Curt. —By Barry Abramson

The Doctor Lets You In

Some Facts About That Mysterious Killer, "Stroke"

Presidents Wilson and FDR, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson and William Howard Taft died of it. Doctors call it CVA, or cerebrovascular accident, but it's usually called stroke. ... There are different causes but all have one thing in common: Circulation of the blood to the brain is impeded because of a break in a blood vessel or, more commonly, because of a blood clot. What are the symptoms? There may be sudden weakness of muscles or paralysis of one side of the body, or difficulty in talking or understanding. In extreme cases, there may be a coma. Older people are more susceptible, particularly if they have heart disease or have had previous little strokes, and especially—the biggest cause—if they have high blood pressure. Also, people who sleep abnormally long—say, ten hours regularly—are four times as likely to die of stroke. (Why, no one knows.) There is another variety of stroke called the "little stroke." Doctors refer to this as TCI (transient cerebral ischemia, meaning temporary suppression of blood flow in the brain). It is caused by a temporary contraction of a blood vessel in the brain and can create momentary dizziness or unfamiliarity with surroundings, slurred speech or temporary weakness of limbs. People may get a number of these and forget about them. But the danger is that little strokes may be forerunners of big strokes. A study was recently undertaken to find out if one tablet of aspirin daily can prevent stroke. The results are not in yet. But the reason for aspirin is that it reduces the clottability of the blood. And 80 percent of big strokes are due to blood clots in the brain. Only about 20 percent are due to hemorrhage. —By Erwin Di Cyan, Ph.D.

Are People Bugging You?

Here's a Short Guide To Self-Defense

True or False: It's not difficult to discourage door-to-door salesmen if you know the magic words. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. It's difficult to deal with a relative, friend or pushy neighbor who makes a habit of dropping in around mealtime, thus jockeying himself into an invitation to dinner.
2. The best way to get rid of a bore is to subject him to a barrage of caustic humor or biting wit.
3. There is no easy way to deal with the character who's always coming over to borrow tools or whatever else he may need but is too cheap to buy.
4. It's not difficult to discourage unwanted door-to-door salesmen if you know the magic words.
5. Anyone who has distinguished himself through hard work and accomplishment should not be surprised to find that there are many people who take delight in "bad-mouthing" him.

ANSWERS

1. False. If a relative or acquaintance you don't care for bugs you by frequently dropping in at dinner time uninvited, you can use one of several psychologically tested techniques. You can simply switch the menu, serving the freeloader something he is known to dislike or to be allergic to. If that doesn't work, try seasoning the visitor's portion too generously with salt or whatever. This will make a lasting impression on him and will probably cure him of "just happening to drop in" at the dinner hour.
2. False. As one psychiatrist observes: "The typical bore has a faulty sense of humor that makes it difficult for him to appreciate or see the point of jokes or witticisms. It's further noted that 'The bore's pompousness and imperviousness to wit are two of the prerequisites of being a bore.'" Most behavioral specialists are inclined to believe that "bores are not to be gotten rid of except by rough means. They are to be scraped off like scales from a fish."
3. False. The chronic borrower often employs a special technique: He starts in small, then gradually works up to capital items. The first thing he asks to borrow involves such a trivial consideration that you'd feel like a piker turning him down. This puts the chronic borrower in business. Studies at Stanford University show that granting a first small request makes it psychologically much more difficult to refuse subsequent larger ones. Now that the borrower has gained a foothold, how do you cope with him? Simple. You start borrowing from the borrower. He may not have anything worth borrowing, but you borrow it anyway. This tactic disconcerts him, and when you have him off balance, you administer the coup de grâce. "Joe," you say to him, "I've got a real problem. My mother-in-law's threatening to visit us for a couple of weeks and our house isn't big enough to accommodate her. Do you suppose we could borrow that spare room of yours—just while she's here . . . ?" You let your voice trail off here, and you watch Joe's face. As he gropes for words, you know he's gotten the message. He's met the super-borrower and he's out of his league. You can rest assured he'll find someone else to bug with his constant borrowing.

4. True. And it doesn't matter in the slightest what these magic words are—as long as they're in a foreign language. Delivered with an expressive shrug when you answer the door, this will disconcert the unwelcome caller, causing him to seek greener fields where there is less of a language barrier.

5. True. There are two chief ways by which people can give their egos a shot in the arm: by distinguishing themselves through their own talents, or by downgrading and belittling others. Unfortunately too many people take the latter option. If they bug you by their "bad-mouthing," don't let it throw you. Consider it a compliment, for this is the treatment such people consistently reserve for their superiors.

What in the World!

CARY GRANT AT 71
He has only one regret...

Cary Grant says: "I feel better today than I did 40 years ago when I was at the peak of my film career." He hasn't made a film in nine years, and yet just mentioning his name still sends shivers up many a woman's spine. Looking fit and much younger than his 71 years, Grant is presently involved in a number of projects, among them, renovating his Beverly Hills farmhouse (which multimillionaire Howard Hughes used to rent when he wanted ultimate privacy and peace). He is not in retirement—in fact, he works at least 12 hours a day as a board director of both the Fabergé cosmetic company and Western Airlines. His only regret is that he can't return to his native England to live. There is someone dear to his heart in California and he won't leave her. Who is this fascinating woman? His eight-year-old daughter Jennifer (from his marriage to Dyan Cannon, with whom he is still battling for custody rights). What about remarriage? With five marriages behind him, Cary says he is in no hurry to take that step again. Sorry, girls.

Boxing, the "harmless" sport: A report just published in England provides fresh ammunition for those who want to see professional boxing banned. The study provided conclusive evidence that extensive cerebral damage can be incurred from repeated blows to the head. Dr. J. A. Nicholas Corsellis, who headed the British Medical Association research team, concedes that the brutal heyday of boxing is behind us, but he warns that all risks have not yet been eliminated. "I will never allow my 14-year-old son to don boxing gloves," he says. "A single, or even many punches to the head, need not visibly alter the structure of the brain, but there is still the danger that at any moment and for any reason, one or more blows to the head will cause the destruction of irreplaceable cerebral tissue."

Dr. Corsellis

A woman's best defense against rape? "Rape may seem about as bad as anything that can happen to you, but it is not as bad as being born blind, being maimed or killed," says Frederic Storaska, author of "How to Say No to a Rapist—and Survive." Mr. Storaska hopes to shed new light on the rape problem by erasing the myths surrounding it and reducing the fear associated with it to a manageable level. He devotes all his time to lecturing at campuses across the country and recently made a movie with the Learning Corporation of America as part of his rape-prevention program. How can you avoid rape? Use a little psychology. Try talking to a would-be rapist as you would to anyone, but above all don't lose your composure. "Rape is often a humiliation of the woman in order to enhance the rapist's ego. It is not simply sexual aggression," Storaska concludes. He believes that the frequently suggested methods of self-defense (tear-gas pens, martial arts, screaming for help) are actually the most harmful because they tend to increase the assailant's anger or perhaps even excite him further.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY By Richard Armour

CAT NIPPED

Our cat is always leaving fur
On chairs and sofas. We demur
And wish it picked the floor for sleeping
Instead of always upward leaping.
Our cat claws chair legs, also draperies,
As well as tablecloths and naperies.
Our cat wants in and then wants out,

It's underfoot when it's about.

Thus what I really do not know
Is how it makes us love it so.
I guess it's just that each meow
Is followed by a purr—that's how.

Our Story: BELLA GROSSI SENDS HIS EMISSARIES BEFORE THE GATES OF THESSALRIGA DEMANDING SURRENDER ON THE CRUEL TERMS HE HAS LAID DOWN.

TO GIVE EMPHASIS TO HIS DEMANDS HE EXHIBITS WHAT IS LEFT OF THEIR KING. "THIS IS WHAT BEFALLS ALL WHO OPPOSE MY WILL!"

KING LEOFRIC RAISES HIS HEAD, AND IN A GREAT VOICE CRIES, "FIGHT! FIGHT! I, YOUR KING, COMMAND YOU!"

ODO IS SHAKEN. HE HAS NEVER EXPERIENCED SUCH CRUELTY. "MY FATHER, MY POOR FATHER!" HE MOANS. DUPUY REPLIES, "IT IS YOUR DUTY TO SAVE YOUR FATHER NO MATTER WHAT THE COST. I WILL GO TO BELLA GROSSI AND TRY TO SOFTEN HIS HARSH TERMS."

DUPUY KNEELS IN THE DUST BEFORE BELLA. "MASTER, MY WORK IS DONE, FOR I HAVE CONVINCED PRINCE ODO TO PAY THE RANSOM AND OPEN THE GATES OF THE CITY, IF YOU RETURN KING LEOFRIC."

"I HAVE LOWERED THE CHAIN AND LET YOUR FLEET INTO THE HARBOR. I HAVE TAKEN ALL THE WAR MACHINES FROM THE FORTRESS AND PLACED THEM WHERE THEY FELL INTO YOUR HANDS."
