

PRG Seeks Stamp Out Foreign Influence Decrees Issued By Conquerors

By The Associated Press
The new government in Saigon announced today that it had completed the conquest of South Vietnam while North Vietnam demanded that U.S. warships withdraw from coastal areas and cease what it called the "forcible evacuation of the population."

Wasting no time after its takeover of Saigon Wednesday, the Provisional Revolutionary Government—PRG—issued a series of policy decrees aimed at building a new nation and stamping out 15 years of American influence. Saigon radio said "Acting like an American"—in such ways as operating night clubs or prostitution—was now forbidden.

Another Viet Cong broadcast said the PRG forces had taken over the entire rice-growing delta and had dismantled the headquarters of four South Vietnamese army divisions at the mouth of the Mekong River.

There was no mention of any fighting. A Viet Cong broadcast Wednesday night said eight provinces south and west of Saigon were "not yet liberated," but it, too, said nothing about fighting in those areas.

Associated Press correspondents Peter Arnett, George Esper and Matt Franjola sent a brief message through the Japanese Embassy in Saigon, relayed to the Foreign Ministry in Tokyo, that they were able to move freely around Viet Cong-controlled some of the U.S. warships would remain more than three miles off the coast for perhaps a day to pick up any more South Vietnamese who sail out to them.

The Pentagon said Wednesday that the Navy rescue fleet in the South China Sea had picked up about 18,000 South Vietnamese who escaped in sampans, rafts and other small craft.

New Bill To Meet Ford's Appeal House Rejects Refugee Money Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $327-million aid bill that President Ford said was "desperately needed" to take care of approximately 70,000 Indochina refugees was rejected today by the House.

Ford said House approval of the bill would be the fastest way to get the money and said the authority still contained in the legislation for him to use military evacuation forces in Saigon no longer has meaning.

"The evacuation has been completed," Ford said. "The Congress may be assured that I do not intend to send the armed forces of the United States back into Vietnamese territory."

But opponents, including House Democratic Leader

Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts, said Congress should act quickly on a new bill and not approve use of military troops that could set a precedent for the future.

The bill was defeated 246 to 162, drawing cheers and applause from opponents.

Rep. Donald W. Riegle, R-Mich., said Congress does not know how much money will be needed to take care of some 70,000 refugees.

"This bill doesn't address that," Riegle said. "This bill just gives the President a blank check."

But House International Relations Committee chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., said the evacuation authority was moot because it applied only to evacuating Americans from Saigon and those Americans are out.

"There is nothing in this report that gives the President any authority tomorrow, the day after tomorrow, or any time in the future to send one Marine back into Vietnam," Morgan said.

"The authority in this report died the day the last American was evacuated," Morgan said. "The issue here is money to take care of these poor people."

Speaker Carl Albert had said earlier he expected interruptions before the vote because of opposition in the House to considering the measure, since it still contains authorization for the military evacuation of Saigon.

A stall began immediately after the House went into session. Rep. Philip L. Burton, D-Calif., forced a time-consuming roll-call vote on whether to read the previous day's journal.

Ford said in a letter to Congress that provisions for him to use military forces for an evacuation, still contained in the bill, "have been overtaken by events and have no further utility."

But Ford urged the House to complete the bill anyway because that would be "the most expeditious method of obtaining funds which are now desperately needed for the care and transportation of homeless refugees."

He said the cost of caring for and processing the evacuees and contributions to international organizations and volunteer agencies assisting in this effort will exceed $400 million.

Further, all available funds already appropriated to aid Vietnam will be programmed and "utilized to the maximum extent possible" for the refugees, Ford said. He gave no estimate how much money this would be.

"But the additional authority of $327 million will be required to fully meet immediate needs," the President said.

Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, said the $327 million can be used to transport refugees to the United States and provide housing, clothing, food and medicine for them.

But Morgan said it cannot be used for resettlement of refugees in permanent homes.

"This is all emergency money," Morgan said. "We've got to pick all these people up. What are we going to do? Throw them back into the water? We have to take care of them."

Family Contact Is Lost

(Editor's Note: The subject of this article, Army SP-5 Trung Van Lu Raynor, is a native of South Vietnam. Now an American citizen, he is married to Thai Thi Huynh Hoa, a Vietnamese girl. Trung was adopted in Saigon in 1965 by Reflector Staff writer Jerry Raynor and has been living in the U.S. since the summer of 1966. He is a graduate of Rose High School. Trung's family and his wife's family were last known to be in Saigon.)

By JERRY RAYNOR

"Nobody knows what's going on now, what to expect," Trung Van Lu Raynor said in a telephone conversation Tuesday night. "Huynh Hoa and I have tried every way to get in touch with our families in Saigon for the past two weeks, but we cannot. There's no need to keep trying now."

"We had letters from her folks and from mine no longer than ten days ago and like we do we wrote back right away. There has been no reply and we don't think we'll get more letters any time soon." Three weeks of efforts to make contact by telephone proved fruitless.

Trung, a native of the Mekong Delta whose family years ago moved to Saigon; and his wife, Huynh Hoa, whose folks were natives of Saigon, are in many ways typical of the thousands of South Vietnamese outside South Vietnam who can only wait and hope that someday they will be able to get in touch with their families again.

In all parts of the U.S., in Paris, the Comore Islands—wherever sizeable numbers of South Vietnamese have been visiting or living in recent years, this is a time of waiting to get word about relatives.

In many ways, Trung and Huynh Hoa are more fortunate than many of the South Vietnamese who are living outside South Vietnam. Trung has the advantage of someone to turn for help. "All the Army people here where I work have been real kind and concerned about our problem," Trung said. "When the situation started to look real bad, they sent by cablegram to the American Ambassador in the Saigon the names of my family and the names of Hoa's family."

"But we don't know yet if that did any good," he added. "Everything happened so quickly the last week and there was not enough time left."

Trung and Huynh Hoa have been helping with the task of processing incoming orphans and refugees arriving in the San Francisco area. "I'm baby sitting with Lili tonight," he noted. "Huynh (Continued on page 12)"

'Tax Break' To Workers

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina House gave overwhelming tentative approval to a tax break for some workers and the State Senate approved a legislative ethics bill Wednesday.

The House was expected to give final approval to a bill to give that would give a tax break to workers who must pay for the care of dependents to hold a job. It won 97-7 tentative approval.

Under the bill, $100 a month per dependent would be allowed if the care is out of the home, and there would be a total of $400 a month allowed. If dependent care were in the home, $400 a month would be allowed no matter how many dependents.

The bill would allow the deduction for any legal dependent who is unable to care for himself. The full deduction would be allowed for taxpayers with an adjusted gross income of $18,000 or less. After that, the deduction allowed would decline until hitting zero at $27,000.

The bill would cover this tax year, meaning that North Carolinians would be allowed to take the deduction when they file their tax forms next year.

The maximum amount could save would be $336. That would be if the person paid $400 a month for dependent care and was in the top 7 per cent tax bracket but not earning more than $18,000 adjusted gross income.

The Senate passed the ethics bill on a 45-1 vote and sent it to the House. The bill would require legislators to disclose their personal financial and business connections that might lead to a conflict of interest.

The Senate adopted an amendment that would require lawyer-legislators to list the types of clients they serve who pay at least $2,500 a year in fees. They wouldn't be required to disclose the names as several senators said that would violate the confidential lawyer-client relationship.

The bill would also require legislators to disclose stock valued at $5,000 or more held by themselves or members of their immediate families. It also would require legislators to reveal real estate holdings, major debts and the lawmaker's personal financial interests.

Last year, the House killed a similar measure.

In other action Wednesday, the House killed two proposed amendments to the state constitution.

One amendment would have provided equal rights between men and women. It was postponed indefinitely at the request of its sponsor, Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson.

Campbell, who led the successful fight against the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution said he didn't believe he had the 72 votes needed for approval of a constitutional amendment.

Supporters of the ERA interpreted Campbell's bill calling for a similar change in the state constitution as an effort to prevent state ERA ratification in 1977. They believed Campbell was banking on public rejection of the state proposal as constitutional amendments must be approved by the voters.

Also killed in the House was a proposal to lower the minimum age for holding elected offices to 18 unless the state constitution specified otherwise. The bill also would have lowered the minimum age for state senators from 25 to 21 and set the age for representative at 21.

The bill needed 72 votes to pass and the roll call came out 69-41.

Leaving Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The U.S. government has agreed to a substantial withdrawal of American forces from Thailand, Foreign Minister Chatichai Choonhavan told a news conference today.

Chatichai said the withdrawal will be announced simultaneously Monday in Washington and Bangkok. He refused to reveal how many men and aircraft will leave but said it "will be a large number."

Chatichai met last week with Edward E. Masters, the deputy chief of the U.S. mission in Bangkok, to make preparations for the withdrawal of part of the 25,000 U.S. servicemen and approximately 350 aircraft still stationed in Thailand.

Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj has pledged that all American troops will be withdrawn within a year.

Chatichai said the withdrawal must be gradual so that new work can be found for the 25,000 Thais working for the U.S. military.

He said the U.S. government had confirmed that it would stand by its defense commitments to Thailand.

Jackson Wants Airing Of Promises To Thieu

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials will be called before Congress to tell what promises the United States made in winning South Vietnam's consent to the Paris peace accord, says Sen. Henry M. Jackson.

Jackson, chairman of a permanent subcommittee on investigations, said the disclosure of two previously secret letters from President Richard M. Nixon to South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu "simply corroborates the need for a full disclosure." The White House indicated Wednesday it was not prepared to make such a disclosure.

The two Nixon letters implored and threatened Thieu to sign the Vietnam peace agreement being negotiated in Paris. One warned of an end to American aid if Thieu refused to sign the accords.

One letter showed Nixon promised on Jan. 5, 1973, that the United States would use "full force" to punish any Hanoi violations of the impending peace agreement, which was signed Jan. 27, 1973.

Copies of the Jan. 5 letter and another dated Nov. 14, 1972, were released to newsmen Wednesday by Nguyen Tien Hung, an American-educated economist who was South Vietnam's minister of planning until Thieu's government dissolved last week.

The White House acknowledged ed the letters were genuine "as far as we can determine." However, Press Secretary Ron Nessen repeated Ford administration assertions that "nothing was promised to Thieu in private that wasn't said out loud."

Jackson charged earlier this month that Thieu was privately assured that Nixon was committed to renewed American military intervention if Hanoi violated the Paris agreement. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee asked Ford for "all of the pertinent documents" relating to the possible secret agreements.

The White House disclosed Wednesday that Ford rejected the request.

Tighter Animal Control Law Is In Effect Today

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

The new Greenville "leash law" which goes into effect today is aimed mainly at "bands of wild dogs" which roam at night and cause damage, according to city manager Harry Hagerty.

The new law is an amendment to a 1973 animal control ordinance. The amendment states: "Every person owning or having possession, charge, care, custody or control of any dog shall keep such dog exclusively upon his own premises; provided, however, that such dog may be off such premises if it is under the control of a competent person and restrained by a chain or leash or other means of adequate physical control."

The old ordinance allowed for dogs to run free during the daytime, but they had to be restrained at night. "The trouble was, the dogs couldn't read a watch," according to Hagerty.

The amendment allows for dogs who are well-trained to be off a leash, if they are in the presence of their masters. The masters must have complete control over the dog, however.

The new law will be enforced "gradually so it will not be a hardship on innocent victims," Hagerty said. Barry Littleton, Greenville animal control officer, will be issuing warnings for a length of time to first-offenders whose dogs have both a rabies tag and dog license.

Efforts to find its owner will be made at the site of pick-up of an unrestrained dog. The dog will be returned to the owner if he can be located. If the owner cannot be immediately found, the dog will be taken to the animal shelter and the owner will be called from there.

The price of recovery from the animal shelter is $5. There is also an additional charge of $1 per day for care and feeding of a dog at the shelter. These charges did not change with the new law, Hagerty said. If it is the first time his dog has been picked up, there will be no charge to the owner.

If a person suspects his dog has been picked up in violation of the new law, he should check at the animal shelter. Copies of the animal control ordinance are available at no charge at City Hall or the animal control shelter. Littleton will also be carrying copies in his truck, Hagerty said.

NEEDING GOODS

Willie and Carrie Anderson are living with a cousin down the road from the charred remains of a house where they lost to fire two of their own children and two in their keeping a week ago last Wednesday. It's a temporary arrangement until they can find a house for their surviving five children and three more they keep for two of Mrs. Anderson's sisters.

"People have been good to us," Mrs. Anderson said. "They've given the children a lot of clothes, and we sure do appreciate it."

The children arrived home from school while she talked. They are Julietta, 14; Beverly, 13; Sylvia, 12; Willie Jr., nine, and Derwin Anderson, 5. Then there are nephew and nieces, Ronald, five, Inez, 10; and Iris, five. Ronald's mother is in Baltimore and Inez and Iris stay with and get off to school with the Andersons each day, since their mother works on third shift.

Willie Anderson works on third shift at National Spinning Mill in Washington.

"They're a fine family," says their minister, Bishop James Smith of First Born Holiness Church. He has set up a Helping Hand Fund, which will be an ongoing thing, he says. Persons having household items with the family may contact either Bishop Smith at 758-3091 or Mrs. Anderson's Cousin, Mrs. Mamie Daniels at 946-2700. Mr. Anderson said he would be glad to borrow a truck and pick up any large items. Small gifts also may be left at Tucker's Grocery in Grimesland, a clerk at the store said.

"We sure do thank everyone for wanting to help us," Mrs. Anderson said. "Anything that's given us that we can't use, we'll certainly pass along to somebody who needs it."

Don't Have A Moving Day Hassle

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Living Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — A moving experience is a distinctly unpleasant one to many of the 40 million Americans who change their abodes each year. Ask anyone who has moved recently. You probably will hear about damaged or lost goods, or bills substantially higher than the mover's estimate and a long dispute over settlement.

Ten million households changed locations in 1974, many of them during the peak summer months of June, July and August. Except for asking other families on the move, most had no way of checking on the mover they were considering hiring.

In February this year, the Interstate Commerce Commission established a performance report requirement for movers. It gives consumers access to a mover's record of over and under estimation of charges, late pickup and delivery and claims history on interstate moves.

People moving within a city or a state are not covered. Most can only turn to state agencies for information, some of it pretty scanty, says James

P. Harley, impartial chairman of a consumer appeals board. The Moving and Storage Industry of New York was founded in 1956 as a self-policing agency for more than 265 member-movers here. Harley says it has reduced complaints in the metropolitan area to one half of one per cent.

In an interview, he said most complaints originate because customers don't know their rights.

It's not enough, he said, to ask friends, relatives, neighbors, or associates for recommendations. Try to call someone who maintains a central file. In New York, the someone would be Harley's agency. It can supply a list, updated every spring, of licensed companies, and the complaints on file about them.

After narrowing his choice to two or three firms, a prospective customer can call back to check for recent complaints.

Elsewhere, the best you can do is contact regulatory agencies such as the Interstate Commerce Commission or your state Department of Transportation or Public Utilities Commission to find out if the firm you're considering is licensed as a household mover.

If it isn't, look for someone else, said Harley.

"When you are moving a long distance, you'll probably deal with an agent from a major van line. In general, they are more responsive to the consumer and more vulnerable to attack from regulatory agencies."

Before you decide, call in several and get written estimates. Try to size each up for honesty.

"Most problems arise because people pick marginal operators at a lower price," Harley said.

Before calling for estimates, he suggests analyzing what you want to take to your new location.

"Throw out your husband's old World War II army jacket. Give away anything not worth moving."

"You should pack all unbreakable items yourself to save money. Books, clothing, linens, pots and pans, small appliances, all well-wrapped. But leave packing of breakables to the professional."

If you pack china, don't use newspaper for wrappers, he said. The ink can permanently mark fine porcelain.

"Take jewelry, your stamp collection, the family silver and any other valuables with you. If you cannot carry your valuables, including insurance policies, wills and other important records, pack and ship them, well-insured, by air freight."

If you must ship valuable art and antiques, have the mover identify each piece on the estimate documents and the bill of lading but not their packing boxes.

Give away liquor, especially opened bottles, or have a party, said Harley. Liquor is a temptation and susceptible to damage. Some state laws prohibit carrying it across state lines.

"Make a floor plan of your new location. Identify boxes by number and correlate them with your floor plan so you can tell movers where to put each one."

"Be at the origin point at the start of the move and at your new location when the movers arrive."

The cost of a long move is based on load weight and distance rather than an hourly rate. In the first case, Harley recommends following the moving van to the weigh station to verify the load report.

If you can't be there, and think the weight quoted is wrong, you have the right to insist on re-weighting in your presence at your destination before accepting shipment, Harley said.

If the mover is correct, re-weighting usually will cost you $25. For a discrepancy of more than 200 pounds, re-weighting is free, and the mover must adjust his bill downward.

If you notice damage or loss when the van is unloaded, note it on the mover's document.

"You must file any claim in writing, and the statutory period for filing is nine months," Harley said. Unsettled claims must be taken to court; the regulatory agencies have no authority over them.

Annual Symphony Ball To Be Held In Pinehurst

PINEHURST — The 15th annual N.C. Symphony Ball, hosted by Governor and Mrs. James E. Holshouser Jr., will be held at the Country Club of North Carolina here Saturday, May 17.

Mrs. Frank J. Daniels Jr. of Raleigh, will coordinate a tennis tournament to be held Saturday at the Pinehurst Country Club. A golf tournament, organized by Julian Bunn III of Raleigh, will be held concurrently at the Country Club of North Carolina. Trophies for tournament winners will be presented at the ball.

The Saturday evening festivities include a cocktail party hosted by Mr. and Mrs. James L. Cresimore and Senator and Mrs. Marshall Rauch.

The Bill Harrington Orchestra will provide entertainment.

To plan the decorations, Mrs. Cresimore traveled to the Country Club of North Carolina, where she consulted the artistic Mrs. Edward Town Taws Jr. of Southern Pines, a Symphony trustee and former ball co-chairman.

Charles Burnette Is Credit Women Speaker

"Consumer Finance Companies — Direct Loans" was the program topic for the Monday night meeting of the Greenville Credit Women-International.

Charles Burnette, vice president and manager of the Bank of North Carolina, was the speaker for the evening.

He stated that the typical consumer finance customer is between the ages of 30 to 40 — more than 85 per cent are married and being generally thrifty minded, have accumulated personal assets.

More than half are home-owners as well as automobile owners.

The vast majority carry life insurance and one out of four will have savings accounts as well as checking accounts. They are high school graduates and at least three out of 10 are college graduates and have attended undergraduate schools he said.

Burnette added that the credit factors in handling cash borrowers are based principally on the three "C's" — character, capacity and collateral.

The speaker, in closing, added that the consumer finance industry has a national trade association located in Washington, D.C., and each regulated state has its own trade association to work with controlling authorities. Both national and state organizations are constantly striving to improve this service to the public. Each is vitally interested in credit education and will work with all interested in improving this needed aspect of our credit industry.

Following the program, the business meeting was conducted by Inda Wingate, president. She gave a report on the Dixie Council Convention, which was held in Columbia, S.C.

Angeline Venters reminded the members of the state convention, which is to be held May 25-26 in Winston-Salem at the Hyatt House. Those planning to attend are: Inda Wingate; Angeline Venters; Sue Meeks; Clara Seago; Sally Broughton; Mary Roberson; Corrine Bedard; and Dawn Fitts.

Ollie Bowen, membership committee, announced that Audrey Norris was voted to become a member.

President Wingate announced that the club will be distributing cookbooks in the near future. Lynne Brown announced that the doughnut sale was a success.

Plans were made for the next meeting to be held May 19.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Do you know what depression is, Bunkie?

It's opening your alumni newsletter and finding one note under your class: "See: IN MEMORIAM."

I wondered how long it would take the class of '49 to come to this. For awhile we were lousy with achievers. Back in the 50s our news would run an entire page, and that was just the births.

In subsequent years, we continued to dominate the news scene with new jobs, transfers, higher degrees, promotions, awards, military service, published papers and honors ad infinitum.

In March, 1971, there were only two items under the class of 1949. Margaret Hollenkamp (Lib. Arts) won a showcase on "The Price Is Right" (including a microwave oven) and the alumni secretary was still trying to locate the last known address of Ralph Ordwell who had not turned in his graduation gown. Being a good sport about the sparseness of news, I started to read the news of the year before and the year after my class, rationalizing it was possible a name might ring a bell. With each month I included a few more years either way. Finally, one day I shouted excitedly, "I knew it! Here's a girl I know and she's enrolling in a graduate course at Ohio State. Wanda Schmidlapp...that son of a gun...still in there improving herself. I guess now the alumni secretary will realize the class of '49 isn't ready to be phased out."

Mr. husband glanced over my shoulder and said, "You're reading the class of '71. That's Wanda's daughter."

I did a strange thing when he told me that. I bit an $8 scarf in half.

"You're overreacting. You know that," said my husband as I tried to piece the scarf back together again. "If you think there should be more news from your class, just sit down and think what you've done lately and send it in."

"You're right," I said grabbing a pencil. "Let's see, I...no, I told them that 10 years ago..."

know I... that's none of their business... I could tell them about... but I'd be lying."

Feeling uneasy, I flipped the pages of the alumni newsletter back to "IN MEMORIAM."

"What are you doing?" asked my husband.

"Thank goodness," I sighed, "it isn't me."

I wrote to the alumni secretary, "Erma Bombeck (Lib. Arts '49) is breathing in and out on a regular basis. SEE CALENDAR OF EVENTS."

Author Writes About What's In Cosmetics

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A protein additive in shampoos is "usually derived from the cartilage and joints of cows and pigs," some face masks and wrinkle creams contain a serum extracted from the "chopped up bodies of unborn chicks," and to thicken cosmetics products, spermaceti, a waxy substance, is obtained from the head of the sperm whale.

Awareness of such things became so intriguing to Deborah Chase, 29, as she researched beauty material for an article that she parlayed the idea into a book, one with a scientific approach.

"In reading various medical publications, I changed my own thinking about beauty. I learned that dry skin doesn't cause wrinkles, that oily skin doesn't need moisturizers, that the hair needs water, not oil as we are constantly being told by experts," she said in an interview.

A one-time high school science talent winner who worked as a research assistant in the lab of the anatomy department of New York University when she attended a premed program there, she has written "The Medically Based No-Nonsense Beauty Book."

In preparing the book she used information from some 70 authors, who had written for medical journals and other publications, and she studied cosmetics chemistry textbooks which explain how various chemicals work in cosmetics—for example, "cream rinse has a chemical which relaxes hair," she says. She studied products on the market to determine those that contained essential ingredients. "If those ingredients are missing from a product you are wasting time and money," in her opinion.

A sunscreen is necessary to protect the skin from painful burning, and many experts believe the sun is also responsible for deep wrinkling of the skin. But few sunscreens provide total protection. A total sunscreen, she learned, is the thick white paste of zinc oxide used by lifeguards. A second type which can resist some or most ultraviolet rays includes se-same oil (which can resist 30 per cent of the ultraviolet rays) and other oils—coconut, peanut, olive and cottonseed (which resist about 20 per cent of the rays). When certain chemicals are added, para-aminobenzoic acid or, secondly, salicylate compounds, you get a more complete sunscreen and either of those should be sought in commercial products, she advises.

If these ingredients are not listed, the sunscreen is probably nothing more than a mixture of oils, waxes and emulsifiers, she contends, "and gives relatively scant protection from the sun."

Water is probably "the most essential ingredient for the skin and hair," she insists. Sun and many other things deplete the skin of moisture and dyes and bleaches dry the hair.

"Remove a hair and stretch it," she suggested, illustrating the point by removing one of her own dark hairs, which stretched about an inch. "When water is lacking, the hair loses this flexibility."

Ideas in the book begin with basic ones about the skin and how it grows and the soaps, cleansers, astringents and other products that are used on it, what they contain, and what they do or do not do. It goes on to hair and includes a program of care for straightened hair, a chapter on plastic surgery with

A beneficial clay mask for oily skin is made with 2 tablespoons of alcohol and one tablespoon of fuller's earth mixed to a paste. She also lists commercial products that contain the ingredients that her research has shown are necessary to a particular product.

Her husband, Dr. Neil Schacter, 31, now chief of inhalation therapy at Yale-New Haven Hospital, helped her on the basic physics and chemistry and brought home medical papers she needed for her research, particularly those to do with allergy and endocrine glands.

Much time and money can be wasted in trying to find products that do not cause an allergic reaction. Switching from one product to another is no guarantee that you are avoiding an offending substance, she maintains. An eyebrow pencil produced by one factory and marketed by at least five companies, selling from 29 cents to $1.50, was seized by the FDA because it contained coal tar. A contaminated brown eye shadow was packaged by three companies, and "many commonly used cosmetics ... are made by one source for many brand names ... you can buy the identical cosmetic at prices ranging from 39 cents to $7.50."

Cosmetics can be tested for allergy by putting a little of the suspected substance on the skin and covering it with adhesive tape for 48 hours to see whether it causes redness, she suggests. (Doctors put it on the back, usually.)

Cigarettes and alcohol can be a detriment to pretty skin, she advises. Smoking can line the face and alcohol can rob the skin of water and dilate the blood vessels, causing small red lines. Drugs also interfere with the body's ability to obtain oxygen, she points out.

Miss Chase admits some habits are hard to give up—for example, she bites her nails, "but it doesn't bother me, so I don't do anything about it," she says.

Constant Moving Upsets Her Life

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You are my last hope, My father is in the Army and we always move just when I meet new kids and start doing well in school. I've never lived in one place longer than 18 months, except when we were in Europe. My parents don't seem to realize that this moving around so much every year is what's tearing my life up. My grades are going downhill, and my chances of being anything in school are ruined.

Kids tell me I should try out for cheerleading, but I can't because I know we'll be moving. I can't even have a boyfriend because just when someone gets interested in me, I have to move.

Abby, I am not the complaining type, but here I am, nearly 16, and I don't have any roots, and I am sick of it. Please tell me if there's a solution to my problem. Outside of running away, that is.

ARMY BRAT

DEAR BRAT: Forget "running away." That's a stupid trip. I know how frustrating it must be for you, honey, but look at it this way: You are making friends all over the world and seeing places that few kids get to see.

Concentrate on the advantages of moving, not the disadvantages. You'll soon be old enough to live alone, but for now, you belong with your family.

DEAR ABBY: My 16-year-old daughter received a phone call from a nurse at the Department of Public Health, who asked her to come in for some "tests." When my daughter asked, "Why?" she was told that a boy (I'll call him "Bill") who is being tested for V.D. said that he had been in contact with her.

Abby, my daughter is so upset, she doesn't know what to do. She swore on a Bible that she is a virgin and that she's never had sex with this boy or any other boy. She said she dated him twice and didn't even kiss him goodnight once. I know my daughter, Abby, and she is not lying.

Does she have to take those tests? It doesn't seem fair to me.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I think your daughter should take the tests. They won't hurt her. Perhaps the boy misunderstood the question and named all the girls with whom he had had contact—sexual and otherwise.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote to ask why a Catholic would wear a star of David—a symbol of the Jewish faith. I am a Catholic who, during the war years, was closely associated with three of the finest men I have ever known. I shall never forget their integrity, patriotism and high moral standards. And today, when I am asked why I, a Catholic, wear a star of David, I waste not one second to explain that Mike Korman of Houston, Texas, Sid Kaufman of Steubenville, Ohio, and Jerry Goldberg of Ft. Lee, New Jersey, are worthy of being remembered for the years we spent in constant companionship as comrades in arms.

No Small Honor For Grifton

Congratulations should go to Grifton for its national recognition as a bicentennial community. The designation was announced this week by M. T. Swinehart, regional director of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

An official bicentennial flag and plaque will be presented on May 26 at the Town Hall and there will be a community family picnic following.

The announcement of the honor quoted Dr. Lawrence J. Wheeler, consultant for the N.C. bicentennial communities as saying it is unusual for a government unit as small as Grifton to have such a strong sense of working together with broad citizen participation in all areas of bicentennial goals — heritage, festivals and horizons.

Knowing the citizens of Grifton, we are not surprised that Dr. Wheeler has found this to be true. Grifton has won a number of awards for community improvement. In recent years the town has used its resources to sponsor an annual shad festival.

In short Grifton is a very active town and its citizens are dedicated to improving their community.

Grifton is one of only 13 municipalities which have been designated as National Bicentennial Communities so far. It is the smallest of the 13 communities to be designated. We have no doubt that the citizens of Grifton will more than live up to what is expected of them as a bicentennial community.

Like It Or Not, New Leash Law Is A Law

Dog owners should remember that the city's new leash law went into effect today.

Whether we agree or disagree with it individually, it is now the law. The problem of going to the animal shelter to retrieve a pet can be avoided by complying with the law which prohibits dogs running loose.

THIS AFTERNOON Trial Delays May Be Over

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—The instances are numerous: a storekeeper robbed, or a homeowner the victim of a break-in, finally see the bandit caught by police and are anxious to see justice done—in the courts.

After sitting all day in a crowded courtroom, waiting on the trial of "his man," the citizen is informed that the defense lawyer has asked for a two-week continuance.

Two weeks later, the arresting officer is on his day off; no trial.

Next week, the defendant is sick; no trial.

The following week, the prosecuting witness is called out of town on business, and upon return finds the fellow who broke in and took his money is free: the case was called, and he wasn't in the courtroom, so they turned the defendant loose.

"When a warrant is sworn, and the man arrested, the state is under obligation to set a trial, and the person harmed will know when the trial will take place," says State Rep. Carl J. Stewart Jr., D-Gaston, who is pushing his "speedy trial" proposal in this session of the General Assembly.

90-Day Limit
The measure essentially calls for the state to bring a defendant to trial within 90 days, unless there is adequate reason for delay such as a psychiatric exam, witnesses not able to be present, or an especially difficult case requiring extended investigation.

Stewart's proposal calls for a two-year phase-in of the 90-day limit; with a 120-day time limit during that period. By Jan. 1, 1978, all trials must be set within 90 days.

The speedy trial, Stewart said, is the foundation of criminal justice. "The quicker the trial, the more likelihood of conviction: delay is on the side of the defendant," since witnesses forget details, key parties move or die or get sick.

The speedy trial provision is part of a package of court reform measures Stewart is backing in an effort to crack down on the rising crime rate in North Carolina.

Other measures in the works include steps to train and upgrade the magistrate system, establishment of a separate district attorney for Gaston County, revamping of the jury system to allow smaller panels and to permit non-unanimous verdicts, and a hefty increase in court costs.

The court cost increase (from the present $16 to $30) is necessary to pay the bill for speedy trials if the General Assembly enacts that measure. The step will require additional judges and prosecutors to handle the cases more efficiently. The proposed increase would raise $11.2 million annually to improve the courts.

Self-Sustaining
Stewart is convinced that those convicted in the courts should bear the costs, making the operation self-sustaining.

The separate district attorney for Gaston County is the first of a number of similar steps required across the state, Stewart thinks. Many judicial districts have several counties within them, with one district attorney. When a high-crime urban area is within that district, it is automatically short-changed on court personnel, and a fulltime prosecutor is essential to help handle the case load.

On balance, the various measures speak to efficiency in the administration of criminal justice, avoiding the philosophical conflict between those who would impose stiffer penalties, and those favoring the penal reform measures put forth by the Knox Commission which would reduce sentences in many cases, eliminate victimless crimes from the criminal codes, and provide speedier release from prison with the goal of rehabilitation rather than punishment.

Stewart said his measures would complement the system, whatever sentences are handed out: "If a court system does not operate efficiently, then any crack-down on crime is a vain thing because cases are not handled properly; there are delays and postponements until witnesses are no longer available." Stewart added that he personally leans toward the penal reform measures adopted by the commission chaired by former State Sen. Eddie Knox, D-Mecklenburg.

Some lawyers in the General Assembly are opposing Stewart's speedy trial proposal, arguing that postponements are a necessary part of handling a case.

Stewart thinks lawyers actually would benefit from the speedy trial measure: "This would create a certainty in the trial of cases; the lawyer can get his case disposed of, get paid, and move on to another case."

INSIDE REPORT

Geo. Wallace Riding High

By ROWLANE EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The first serious effort to control Gov. George C. Wallace's 1976 presidential surge collapsed here in early evening April 23, convincing even diehard doubters that he poses deadly, unsolved problems for the Democratic party.

"That was really a show of people power," said a beaming Wallace, mocking the New Left idiom as he left the Tennessee House of Representatives. He had just put on a vintage Wallace performance before cheering Wallaceite galleries and awed, somewhat frightened anti-Wallaceite legislators. With legislature and governor dropping efforts to repeal Tennessee's primary, top Democrats gloomily concede most of the state's delegates to Wallace.

Moreover, the backstage effort quietly to repeal primary elections in states with Wallace strength has collapsed almost everywhere, the mere effort bolstering his invective against the establishment's "slowly crushing to death the middle class." Although nobody thinks Wallace can be nominated, Democratic leaders lack either strategy or tactic for denying him hundreds of delegates in the primaries.

The grand design of disarming Wallace by repealing primary laws in states he is apt to win depended on quiet action by state legislatures going unnoticed at Wallace headquarters in Montgomery, Ala. (as was the case in New Mexico, where Wallace had won 8 of 18 delegates in the 1972 primary without campaigning). But Wallace stormed into Raleigh, N.C., April 9 to kill repeal in North Carolina. Soon after that, repeal plans for Michigan foundered.

Nevertheless, Tennessee Democratic leaders still hoped a variety of forces would coalesce to repeal their primary, preventing a repetition of Wallace's 1972 landslide. When Democratic Gov. Ray Blanton failed to pass a party registration law, he backed repeal. Tough and self-confident, the new governor advised friends he was going toe-to-toe against George Wallace and fully expected victory.

Even when Wallace asked to testify here to rerun his North Carolina triumph, state Democratic leaders did not give up. First, they urged Speaker Ned McWherter to refuse. When that failed, they tried to hurry the repeal bill through the legislature to confront Wallace with a fait accompli. Getting wind of that move, Wallace operatives slowed down the bill.

Torn between desire to frustrate Wallace and fear of his hold on their constituents, the legislators predictably heeded their fear. On the day before Wallace's arrival, a senate committee surprised everybody (Gov. Blanton included) by voting down the repeal bill. Then, instead of testifying in a committee room, Wallace was invited into the house chamber with the trappings of a formal state visit — much to Blanton's disgust.

It was a field day for Wallace, who has incorporated the primary repeal issue into his highly effective anti-establishment routine. He told reporters the Tennessee Democratic party "consciously or subconsciously, is trying to take away the right of the average citizen of Tennessee to take part in picking a President." He told legislators to follow Andrew Jackson's example and "believe in the people."

Not only was the house repeal bill withdrawn but the politician's fear of Wallace deepened immeasurably. "I'd been kidding myself that he was sick and lost his stuff," one veteran legislator told us. "I'd have to say now that the little obscenity is tougher than ever."

Returning from Washington just as Wallace began speaking, an irritated Blanton listened over the (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

WE'D BETTER WANT TO
A prominent clergyman often tells how during his boyhood he heard his father say to his mother one morning as he left the house, "Tell Harry he can cut the grass today if he wants to." When he got to the front gate the father called back good-naturedly, "And tell him he'd better want to."

Often, says this minister, he has recalled that incident and thought how truly it reflected not only the attitude of a father toward a boy he loved and to whom he wished to teach responsible living, but also the attitude of the Heavenly Father toward his children.

We are never compelled from on high to do anything. Everything is left to our choice. God says, in substance, "Here is the pathway of right; you can walk it if you want to." But through the mouth of prophet and seer he adds very solemnly, "And you'd better want to."

We have the power and the right to close the door on goodness; but goodness will also exercise the right to close the door on us.

A Theme For Law Day

The White House issued its annual proclamation the other day, calling on us to observe Law Day and to reflect on the workings of justice. Let me offer for your reflection the story of Mrs. Christen Gibson. Her name could be Legion, for she is many. Mrs. Gibson is a victim of crime.

The story comes from Robbie Pitts, Ardmore stringer for the Daily Oklahoman in Oklahoma

City. She wrote her story in hard, swinging sentences, as if she were hammering nails. Let me extract the essence.

On the night of Nov. 14, 1974, Mrs. Gibson was working, as usual, as a clerk in the E-Z Shop, a neighborhood grocery in Ardmore. About 10:30 o'clock, a young buck came in, presented a five-dollar bill, and asked for cigarettes. When she started to make change, the man knocked her down, leaped across the counter, and began beating her brutally. "He didn't say anything, he just kept hitting me." He stole $111, and left.

Mrs. Gibson was injured so badly that more than half her stomach had to be removed surgically. A frail woman of 56, only 5 feet tall, she lost 10 pounds and now weighs only 76. Her right wrist and her left shoulder have suffered such impairment that she cannot work even as a waitress or clerk. When Robbie Pitts interviewed her late in March, she had only $28 to tide her over until red tape could be cut to provide disability payments under Social Security. Her savings were exhausted. She is in debt for medical care.

The victim is reluctant to go on welfare: "I believe, and taught my children to believe, that accepting anything that we didn't earn (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Say More Punishment

(Washington Daily News)

A bill is now before the North Carolina General Assembly which if passed will increase the maximum sentence for armed robbery from 30 years in prison to life in prison.

That of course does not mean that every person convicted of armed robbery would automatically get life in prison if found guilty. It does mean that the court could give up to life in prison. Senator Julian Allsbrook of Halifax County has introduced this legislation. In a related measure now in the assembly the Senate has passed a bill and sent it to the House which if approved there would require one sentenced to prison for armed robbery to serve at least five years before parole could be granted. As of now some convicted armed robbers are able to gain freedom after only 15 months in prison.

The very fact that legislators are showing such concern about this one crime is of itself dramatic evidence that the general public is becoming deeply disturbed by the many such armed robberies taking place over our state.

Greater punishment ought to serve as a deterrent to crime, but again the length of punishment, in our opinion, is less effective as a deterrent to crime than is surety of punishment.

If society could be assured of quick trials, pure justice, and sure punishment for crimes committed, then that is about all that can be done to deter those bent on robbing a bank or an individual at gunpoint.

Yet, the very effort to do something is a step in the right direction. Somehow week by week when we read of the number of armed robberies taking place, we are appalled. It is just unbelievable that we are having so many.

A special commission was named two years ago headed by former Senator Eddie Knox of Mecklenburg County. This commission has handed over a package of recommendations, we understand. One of them is that of allowing judges to split prison sentences by giving a defendant a taste of prison life, then letting him out in the effort to cut down on crime. This will work for first offenders who have not yet been to prison, but hardly will do much for repeaters who already have served prison sentences.

More punishment along with surer punishment will help. And not being too quick on the parole trigger could help immeasurably too.

Fuel Cutoff Fears

By R. GREGORY NOKES

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With gasoline in plentiful supply, and the nation having little difficulty paying for foreign oil, the national energy crisis has boiled down to a question of concern for national security.

Fear of the consequences of a repeat of the 1973 Arab oil embargo is behind the Ford administration's program to achieve energy independence by 1985, even at the cost of driving up domestic energy prices.

Most members of Congress share the administration's concern, but express greater worry over the economic impact of higher energy prices, especially during a recession.

John A. Hill, deputy administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, said in a speech Wednesday that "strong national security implies a strong economy."

"If we are overly dependent on a particular source of energy, they can manipulate our energy supply, and do so because they have a differing set of international objectives," he told the National Economists Club.

The administration has virtually written off any hope of getting substantially lower world oil prices, which are now higher than $10 a barrel. In fact, the State Department is seeking to get world agreement on a sort of price floor, possibly at around $7 a barrel.

But officials admit it is difficult to get public support for energy programs that will raise prices — such as Ford's proposed oil tariff and his plan to decontrol all oil prices at home — because the element of crisis is now lacking.

Hill, for one, said he was pessimistic about getting congressional approval of a comprehensive energy program.

The administration's goal is to reduce the need for imports enough so that the nation will only have to import about three to five million barrels of oil a day by 1985, an amount that would not cripple the economy if it were cut off.

It estimates that without any action at all, imports would rise to eight million barrels a day by the end of 1977 which would be 20 per cent above the amount imported before the 1973 oil embargo, and to 12 mil-

To the editor:

We have received an announcement from the Humane Society of the United States that "Be Kind To Animals Week" begins May 4th through May 10th.

It is ironic that the Greenville leash law becomes effective just prior to this date, which means that dogs must be confined, roped or chained for 24 hours a day for every day for the rest of their lives.

In addition to this cruel aspect a rodeo is scheduled for this area which event is also decreed by the HSUS because of the possible injury to animals by the calf-roping and bronco-busting events.

It appears as though "Be Kind To Animals" week has no place in Greenville.

Back In The Securities Market

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Today is May Day in the stock market, the day on which competitive rather than fixed commissions will be charged on purchases made through brokers. For individuals it probably will mean higher costs.

Such a turn of events isn't anticipated by individual investors. They have become accustomed to obstacles in practicing people's capitalism, of being tolerated but seldom encouraged.

Nevertheless, renewed interest by individual investors is being noted again. Brokers report their telephones are ringing. Membership in investment clubs, down sharply since 1970, is on the rise again.

In fact, the biggest boost to the market and to the concept of participatory capitalism might well come from these unappreciated small investors through a program now being launched by investment clubs.

The National Association of Investment Clubs, which describes itself as "the largest organization of individual investors in the world," has just launched Campaign 1976, an effort to get individuals back into securities markets.

It is now signing up corporations to distribute its educational literature to shareholders, employees and customers, and asking them to enlist two other companies in the campaign.

Eight pieces of literature discuss significant economic factors — pricing, productivity, profits, capital, free trade, world trade, inflation and another still in the works. One folder will be distributed each quarter, beginning with the final one of 1975.

Thomas O'Hara, chairman of the Royal Oak, Mich. association, lists two main objectives.

1. To really interest individuals in becoming investors. He hopes that several million people will be contacted over a two-to-three-year period "in the biggest investor education program ever."

2. To educate people, to help them understand the economic world in which they live. It should lead to a better business climate, O'Hara says. "The program is basic to what is fundamental in our economic system."

One commendable aspect of the program is that an association representing the much maligned individual investor should take upon itself the job of restoring energy to the system, when it might be argued that the government, the investment community and even the corporations dependent upon it have been dragging their heels.

The campaign has a secondary purpose also — it seeks to encourage the development of more investment clubs. In October 1970 there were more than 14,000 clubs; now, while the number is rising, it is below 8,000.

intercom in his office and then invited Wallace for a private visit that was short but not sweet.

Unlike other presidential candidates, Blanton noted, Wallace had not notified him in advance of coming to Tennessee. Wallace replied blandly that he was so at home in neighboring Tennessee that he felt no need for formalities. Translation: I'll come here any time I want. Asked whether he would support Blanton's party registration bill (excluding non-Democratic Wallaceites from the primary), Wallace said he could never advocate taking away people's right to vote.

Blanton told us he will try again next year for party registration and, failing that, would again seek a primary law repeal. But most Democrats feel the battle is lost.

Nor is there much doubt about the primary's outcome. Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington has support from party regulars here. Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia won friends on a recent visit. But party leaders confess neither has much chance against Wallace and his campaign to prevent "the destruction of the middle class."

Accordingly, Blanton is considering a favorite son contest against Wallace. Although he has moved left since flaunting a commendatory telegram from Wallace in his unsuccessful 1972 U.S. Senate race, Blanton's basic constituency is the same as Wallace's: white*working class. But whereas Wallace ran away with 68 per cent of the presidential primary vote here, Blanton was nominated for governor with 22 per cent. Thus, the favorite son ploy seems no more promising than other frantic efforts to outmaneuver the canny little troublemaker for Alabama.

(Continued from page 4) would destroy our pride. And if we destroyed our pride, we, too, would be destroyed. Today there is so much given to people they don't have any pride anymore."

Ardmore police arrested one Odean Traylor for the crime. He is 22, the youngest of nine children. His mother died when he was 2; his father abandoned the family and left the children to be raised by grandparents. Traylor dropped out of school at the ninth grade, worked briefly in a chicken-processing plant, served time last year for burglary in Texas. Three months after he was released on parole, he went to the E-Z Shop.

Traylor pleaded guilty to robbery by force. He was sentenced to 12 years in prison. He is now ensconced at the McAlester Penitentiary, where he will be fed and clothed by the taxpayers at a cost of $3,600 a year until, presumably, he is again paroled. End of story.

What about the Christeen Gibsons of this world? We read volumes about the Odean Traylor. The victims of crime seldom are remembered.

Some efforts are being made to improve the situation. St. Louis has a program to aid victims of crime. So does Seattle. A number of states, starting with California and New York in 1966, have adopted laws that to some limited extent serve to aid or to compensate victims. The other states are Hawaii, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Nevada, Georgia, Alaska, Washington, Illinois, and Delaware. The federal government has yet to act, but Majority Leader Mike Mansfield has introduced a Senate bill that contains some promise.

The most ambitious program comes from the National District Attorneys Association, which last August received a $996,000 grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to see what might be done. A study commission is now at work, coordinating data from Philadelphia, Oakland, New Orleans, Denver, Chicago, White Plains, N.Y., Farmington, Utah, and Covington, Ky. Already a number of steps have been taken to help victims and to protect witnesses. Some model programs are taking shape.

The problem of the innocent victim cries out for correction. In a nation riddled by violent crime, it is, of course, important that we try to understand how children grow to be criminals and to identify their twisted roots.

But I, for one, have had a bellyful of the bleeding hearts and weep-easies who shed tears for the Odean Traylor. When will they cry for the Christeen Gibsons as well?

Small Firms Served By ECU Business Students

Three Pitt County students in the East Carolina University School of Business are counseling small business firms in eastern North Carolina this quarter. These advanced students are: Albert Smith of Greenville, Mike Worthington of Ayden, and William Hathaway of Farmville.

They are among the 26 students involved in the ECU Small Business Institute, an agency sponsored by the Small Business Administration. This program provides a valuable link between schools of business and the small business in the community, usually those with Small Business Administration loans.

At this time, the program involves 14 eastern North Carolina businesses, including retail, manufacturing, and service firms. Teams consisting of three or four ECU seniors furnish management assistance and counseling to the participating firms—usually in the recordkeeping, selling, and management areas.

The student counselors attempt to assist the business owners to solve their problems; under the direction of Dr. R. B. Keusch of the ECU School of Business, the students make suggestions to alleviate the problems of the businesses.

Publications Workshop At ECU Slated May 17

Student staff members and teacher advisors to high school publications are invited to attend a workshop at East Carolina University Saturday, May 17.

The High School Publications Workshop is sponsored by ECU's Delta Nu chapter of Alpha Phi Gamma honor society in journalism in cooperation with the ECU Division of Continuing Education and the ECU Journalism Program.

Included in the workshop will be activities designed to provide students with an improved practical understanding of specific aspects of publications work.

Two sessions are scheduled for teachers who serve as advisors to school yearbook and newspaper staff.

Workshop discussion leaders include:

Ira Baker and Lawrence O'Keefe, ECU journalism faculty members; David J. Whitchard, publisher of the Greenville Daily Reflector; Bob Flanagan, associate city editor, Kinston Daily Free Press; Ray Davis, Manager of the ECU Print Shop; B. L. Dodson, Thomas Publishing Co. Southern Representative; Linda Pate, editor and photographer, Kinston Daily Free Press; Terry Maulsby, Josten's American Yearbook Company Representative; Phil Arrington, editor, ECU campus magazine The Rebel; James Rees and Dr. Carlton Benz, broadcasting faculty members at ECU; and Mary Sorenson, ECU faculty advisor to the Buccaneer campus yearbook.

Interested persons may secure further information and registration materials from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, ECU Division of Continuing Education, Box 2727, Greenville.

Farm Prices See Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department reports that farm prices have gone up for the first time in six months but they are still well below levels of a year ago.

The department said Wednesday that its farm price index rose 4 per cent in the month which ended April 15, but prices still averaged 7 per cent below mid-April of last year.

The report said higher prices for cattle, hogs, cotton, soybeans and calves accounted for most of the price increase for commodities farmers sell. Lower prices were reported for eggs and milk.

As a group, meat animal prices rose 9 per cent during the month but trailed the year-earlier average by 8 per cent. Beef cattle, meaning all kinds, averaged $31.80 per 100 pounds, up $4 from mid-March. Hogs, at $26.80 per 100 pounds, gained only 10 cents.

Cotton prices, which have plummeted the past year, averaged 32.2 cents a pound, a gain of 2.2 cents for March. Soybeans were $5.61 a bushel, up 30 cents. Other grain prices, including wheat and corn, showed slight increases but were well below peaks of last fall.

Farm expenses climbed 2 per cent during the month and were up 11 per cent from a year ago.

Cannot Use The Criminal Courts

DURHAM (AP)—A Durham district court judge has ruled that cities cannot use the criminal courts to enforce the collection of parking tickets issued in city-owned off-street parking lots of garages.

The City of Durham appealed the ruling Wednesday of Judge Lawson Moore. The ruling has statewide implications.

Judge Moore ordered the quashing of 46 warrants against Howard S. Carter Jr., 37, of Durham. Carter pleaded guilty to one on-street parking violation and was ordered to pay $16 and costs of court.

LEADING SERVICES
Rev. Jimmie Dixon of Winterville will be in charge of services Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Bethel Chapel Free Will Baptist Church in Bethel.

Await Rulings On Joan Little

By CATHY STEELE ROCHE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON, N. C. (AP) — The decision on where to try former black inmate Joan Little for the slaying of a white Beaufort County jailer may be delayed while a state judge considers a defense motion for a change of venue.

Superior Court Judge Henry McKinnon said Wednesday he may take the motion under advisement after attorneys complete their arguments today.

McKinnon indicated he would rule on the defense motion for state funds to pay expert witnesses who have testified for the defense in two and a half weeks of pretrial motions in Beaufort County Superior Court.

Attorneys for Miss Little have requested that her trial be moved to an urban area, such as Raleigh, 115 miles west of this eastern North Carolina community where the slaying occurred last Aug. 27.

Miss Little was the only female inmate in the county jail at the time. The 20-year-old black woman claims that jailer Clarence Allgood, 62, tried to rape her and that she stabbed him in self defense with his own ice pick.

She fled the jail and he was found later, dead in her cell naked from the waist down.

In two days of testimony, the defense sought to show through statistical surveys that racial prejudice is stronger in eastern North Carolina than in other areas of the state.

Miss Little's attorneys also attempted to show that publicity about the case was slanted more against the defendant in the eastern part of the state than in the Raleigh area.

Paul Brandes, a professor of communications at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, testified that press coverage of the case had been biased both for and against Miss Little.

He said he checked coverage in six North Carolina dailies, with special attention to the Daily Reflector in Greenville and the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Greenville, the countyseat of Pitt County, adjacent to Beaufort, is a possible site for the trial. Under North Carolina law, a trial can be moved no further than an adjoining county.

Dist. Atty. William Griffin has agreed to such a move and McKinnon has indicated that Greenville would be the most likely site.

Under questioning by defense attorney Jerry Paul, Brandes declined to say that press coverage in the area would prevent Miss Little from getting a fair trial in Pitt County.

He replied, "I would like to put it on a comparative basis. I would be inclined to think one might get a fairer trial where the attitudes reflected by the News and Observer were more operative than the attitudes reflected by the Daily Reflector."

Brandes read two Associated Press stories that appeared in the Daily Reflector. He said one tended to favor the defense while the other tended to favor the prosecution.

The professor based his judgments on the appearance of certain "word clusters." He said stories that mentioned an "ice pick slaying" without mentioning that the jailer was not wearing his pants were slanted against the prosecution.

A. G. Mullin of Raleigh, an expert in applied statistics, testified for the defense that the statistical probability of getting an unbiased jury was much less in Pitt County than in an urban Piedmont county.

He said that with a 100 per cent effectiveness in the defense's 14 peremptory challenges there would be only a 46 per cent chance of getting an unbiased jury in Pitt County.

In Orange County, he said, with only 50 per cent effectiveness in the jury challenges, there would be a 74 per cent chance for an unbiased jury.

Doctors Vow To Quit Practicing

By LINDA KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Many of the 4,000 Northern California doctors hit by skyrocketing malpractice insurance rates have vowed to take down their shingles today rather than pay.

More than half the doctors in the San Francisco Bay area were expected to refuse to pay what they termed "prohibitive" premiums sought by Argonaut Insurance Co., thus forcing many hospitals to curtail services sharply.

Argonaut, headquartered in nearby Menlo Park, offers malpractice coverage in 30 states and the expiration of its group policies in California on Wednesday was only the tip of the national malpractice crisis.

The firm had decided to get out of the malpractice insurance business, but later agreed to renew coverage for Northern California physicians on an individual basis for three-month periods at rates averaging as much as $22 per cent more.

High risk rates for anesthesiologists, which have been averaging $5,377 a year, will go to as high as $21,508. Rates for low risk practice such as that performed by psychiatrists and doctors of internal medicine will go from a low of $1,131 a year to a high of $4,912.

The soaring rates asked by Argonaut and other companies were prompted by huge awards in some malpractice suits. Argonaut says it has lost "millions and millions" of dollars writing malpractice insurance.

The California Hospital Association says paid losses from hospital malpractice claims increased from $1,903,686 in the state in 1971 to $3,944,105 in 1973. There have been individual malpractice judgments in excess of $1 million.

Doctors argue that only 14½ to 19 cents of every insurance dollar gets to the patient involved in lawsuits. They say the rest is absorbed by lawyer fees and insurance company operating costs not connected with malpractice suits.

Anesthesiologists to all eight

Northern California counties affected by Argonaut policies face some of the highest rate hikes and the overwhelming majority have decided not to pay. This will mean a virtual suspension of all but emergency surgery at most private hospitals.

Officers of the Hospital and Institutional Workers Union and the California Nurses Association say their members face large-scale layoffs with the suspension of most surgery at private hospitals.

The hospitals and county medical societies have set up plans for referring patients of uninsured doctors. The California Medical Association called the health care situation "grim."

The California legislature was considering several bills to resolve the malpractice situation by setting up some form of insurance pool and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. held meetings Wednesday on the issue.

Nonpartisan Role Advised

RALEIGH (AP)—Legislative proposals to shift power from the governor to the legislature are being interpreted by the public as a partisan attack on Gov. Jim Holshouser, former Gov. Bob Scott warned Democratic legislators Wednesday.

Scott told the lawmakers, "the impression that is coming from this General Assembly is that you are in a political stripping business of a Republican governor. And the people don't like it."

Scott made these comments as he appeared before the House Constitutional Amendments Committee in support of a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow a governor to serve two consecutive terms.

In a question and answer session after his formal endorsement of the two-term proposal, Scott discussed current proposals to limit the governor's appointive and budget-making powers and to enhance legislative influence in state government.

"I think it's wrong, fundamentally wrong," said Scott. "And I don't care whether there's a Democrat or a Republican in there (the governor's office). It's politically wrong."

Birthday Of Queen Marked

SOESTDIJK, The Netherlands (AP) — Thousands of Queen Juliana's subjects have joined in celebrating the monarch's 66th birthday.

The queen's husband, Prince Bernhard, their four daughters and 11 grandchildren were present for the annual palace parade Wednesday.

His Turn As Council Head

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Ambassador Rashleigh Esmond Jackson of Guyana today begins a month's term as president of the United Nations Security Council.

He succeeds Ambassador Louis de Guiringaud of France in the regular alphabetical rotation of the presidency among the 15 countries on the council.

Refugees Fan Out Across U.S.

By The Associated Press
A stream of refugees from South Vietnam which stretches across the Pacific has started fanning out to many cities and communities across the United States.

More than 850 Americans and their Vietnamese wives, children and in-laws have already made it past the red-tape at Camp Pendleton, the big U.S. Marine base in California which is serving as one of three reception centers in the United States for Vietnamese evacuees.

But another 1,350 evacuees are still housed in the tents and quonset huts of Camp Pendleton's "Little Saigon," and more are en route.

The stream of refugees extends from the Philippines, to Guam, to Wake Island and to the U.S. mainland.

U.S. officials estimate that as many as 70,000 evacuees might eventually reach U.S. shores, fleeing the Communist-led armies that engulfed South Vietnam.

In addition to Camp Pendleton, two other U.S. military bases will be used as reception centers for South Vietnamese refugees, Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and the Army's Ft.

Chaffee, Ark.

Officials at the latter two bases are still preparing for the refugees they expect to start receiving later this week.

For some of those who arrived at Camp Pendleton, it was a matter of arranging transportation to the homes of relatives or "sponsors" who have agreed to be responsible for them.

Others, almost all Vietnamese, arrived at Camp Pendleton without sponsors, in self-imposed exile not knowing where to find friends, homes or jobs.

Immigration officials said these persons "are not yet a major problem." But they said continuing trans-Pacific refugee flights would bring more and more "hard-core refugees," as they describe the unsponsored Vietnamese.

The "hard-cores" are given Social Security numbers, so they will be able to work once they find jobs, and their names, skills and other data were being made available to volunteer agencies so that homes and employment could be found for them.

Cynthia Weyland, a spokeswoman for the State Department, said all government agencies are trying to find sponsors and jobs for the Vietnamese refugees.

She said that during their stay at the U.S. reception centers, the Vietnamese will be offered orientation and English classes before they leave for assimilation into American society.

Another State Department official emphasized that none of the refugees will be dumped on the welfare or unemployment rolls.

At Guam, Adm. G. Steve Morrison said the movement of refugees from that American outpost to the United States has been speeded up to 4,000 a day.

But Morrison, commander of U.S. naval forces in the Marianas, said 28,727 refugees still remain on the island. He said 7,030 have already passed through.

On Wake Island, a dry, isolated, 2.5-square mile island with a normal population of about 250 government-contract workers, the refugee population has swollen to 5,000, and military spokesmen say they expect to care for as many as 8,000 in the coming days. A total of 650 have already passed through.

ECU Team To Compete

Three seniors from the East Carolina University School of Business have finished first in their "industry" and will go to the Research Triangle on Friday and Saturday to compete against seven other ranking North Carolina teams.

The "industry" was a business simulation played on a large computer at the Triangle University Computer Center, under the sponsorship of the North Carolina Educational Computer Service.

The ECU team, composed of David O'Neal of Rockingham, Frank Page of Fayetteville and Dale Stout of Greensboro, with Dr. R.B. Keusch as their faculty advisor, played six simulated three-month periods against five other teams in their industry over the last seven weeks.

The business simulation used was the complicated "Emory" game, which requires 56 separate decisions for each simulated period. The decisions include many items in the financial, marketing, production and management areas.

Some 18 teams from 12 state universities and colleges participated.

Angry Thieu Shuns U.S.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Nguyen Van Thieu is not going to seek asylum in the United States because he is "very angry" with the U.S. government, sources close to the former South Vietnamese president reported today.

One source said Thieu and his family were furious because "the U.S. government did not honor its commitment to South Vietnam, resulting in the dire consequences leading to the fall of Saigon."

The sources said if Thieu decides to leave Taiwan, he would prefer to go to Europe.

Thieu's wife and daughter and four other members of his family arrived in Taipei late Wednesday afternoon on a Thai Airlines flight from Bangkok, the Nationalist Chinese foreign ministry reported.

Thieu, who resigned April 21, has been in seclusion at a suburban home owned by his brother, who was his government's ambassador in Taipei.

A truckload of luggage was delivered to the South Vietnamese embassy this morning.

Senate OKs Ethics Bill

RALEIGH, (AP) — A bill that would require legislators to disclose stock and real estate holdings, major debts and business interests was approved Wednesday by the state Senate and forwarded to the House.

Before the measure passed on a 45-1 vote, it was amended to require lawyer-legislators to disclose the types of clients paying $2,000 or more a year, but not the names.

Tuesday, the Senate rejected an amendment that would have required lawyer-legislators to disclose the names of clients because several attorneys in the chamber said it would violate lawyer-client confidentiality.

Under the new amendment, the lawyer-legislators would list "a textile firm" or "a power company," but not name the firm.

Essentially, the bill would require legislators to reveal their personal financial and business connections that could lead to a conflict of interest.

Legislators would be required to disclose stock holdings of $5,000 or more owned by themselves or members of their immediate families. They would also be required to reveal real estate holdings, major debts and personal business interests.

During the 1973 session the House killed a similar bill.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced again today despite some profit taking as Wall Street began a new era of price competition.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.72 at 823.06, and gainers held a 7-4 edge on losers at the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading was fairly active. The session opened with some broad gains amid a general feeling that the changeover to full price competition among brokers would bring less confusion and uncertainty than earlier had been feared.

Later in the morning the advance narrowed, however, with some profit taking setting in after Wednesday's 18.30 jump in the Dow.

There was some apparent enthusiasm over President Ford's moves Wednesday to further defer increased oil import tariffs and to end price controls on domestic crude oil.

Schering-Plough led the NYSE's most-active list, unchanged at 58. A 221,200-share block traded at that price.

The oil issues turned mixed after some broad gains Wednesday. Mobil was up a point at 41 1/4 and Exxon gained 1/4 to 81 1/4, but Getty was down 1/4 at 109 and Texaco lost 3/4 to 23 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .24 to 43.43 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index moved up .13 to 84.37. Syntex, the Amex volume leader, gained 1/4 to 42.

Says Surrender 'Sad Chapter'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Retired Army Gen. William C. Westmoreland describes the surrender of South Vietnam as "a sad chapter" in American history.

"I gave four and a half years of my life to what I thought was a noble and worthy cause," the former commander of U.S. forces in South Vietnam told newsmen here Wednesday. "I feel that to allow an ally to go down in defeat is a sad chapter in an otherwise glorious history."

Accreditation Goal Discussed For PTA

STOKES—Mrs. Arlene Hoot discussed accreditation of the Pitt County Schools at the PTA meeting of Stokes-Pactolus Grammar School Tuesday night.

"The Pitt County Board of Education made a commitment to improve the total learning situation for students in Pitt County Schools by directing a study and evaluation of the local school system."

"This study led us to receiving accreditation by the State Accreditation Association," Mrs. Hoot said. The Pitt County Schools are currently working toward accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

"Accreditation means that schools which are quite different may be equally good," Mrs. Hoot said. "The central theme behind the entire process is planning for the improvement of educational opportunities for the students."

Music was presented by students in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, under the direction of Mrs. Nancy Moldin. An art exhibit was on display in the school library and refreshments were served.

Also participating in the program were Eugene Morris, principal, and Michael Shackelford, who gave the invocation.

Hoa is at the Presidio now with other Vietnamese who live around here," Trung said. "They're going to meet a plane due to come in tonight (Tuesday night) with about 200 refugees."

"We do all we can to help them, but there's not much we can do except try to make them feel a little better. Most of them are so tired, been traveling so much, living in tents and still they must go on to some place else, to Camp Pendleton or wherever."

"Some have told me maybe they should have stayed in Vietnam, because now they don't know what will happen, if they can get work, if they can learn the English language. They worry about all these things. They are confused."

"It is more easy for the rich," Trung said, "because they have already money in Swiss or some other banks and do not have to think about the problem of living."

The dramatic turn of events of the past two weeks, Trung admits, "Just leaves us stunned. It is like you can't believe it all takes place so quickly. We know we have to wait, to see what will happen to our families, to hope it will all be all right. That's all we can do now."

Cardenal Felt Like Crying, But Made Mets Weap As Cubs Won

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After Jose Cardenal broke his favorite bat, he said he "felt like crying."

Think of how the New York Mets felt when Cardenal helped break their winning streak.

Cardenal and his Chicago teammates had plenty of bats left after he broke his in the second inning Wednesday, but the Mets had very few—and the result was a 7-4 victory for the Cubs.

"When you've got a seven-game winning streak going and Jon Matlack pitching for you, that's quite a quinnella," said Chicago Manager Jim Marshall. "That's why it was such a big win for us, breaking their winning streak and not falling into a losing streak ourselves."

Cardenal triggered a five-run first inning with the first of his three singles. Then after making out in the second, and losing his bat in the process, Cardenal got a new one and knocked out Matlack with a two-run single in the fourth inning.

Bill Madlock blasted a two-run homer off the Mets' fine southpaw in the big first inning.

In the other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds beat the San Francisco Giants 4-1; the Philadelphia Phillies turned back the Montreal Expos 2-1; the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0; the San Diego Padres trimmed the Houston Astros 4-2 and the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-2.

Chicago starter Ray Burris, 3-0, was the benefactor of the Cub assault on Matlack, 2-2, but had to leave the game after five innings when he was hit on his pitching hand by a batted ball. Madlock's first homer of the season followed Cardenal's single. A pair of walks and Manny Trillo's double chased two more runs across and then Burris singled in the final run of the first inning.

Reds 4, Giants 1
Ken Griffey belted a two-run triple and Tony Perez added a two-run homer, powering Cincinnati over San Francisco. John Bench's leadoff walk and Cesar Geronimo's one-out single preceded Griffey's triple, giving the Reds a 2-0 lead in the second off loser Jim Barr, 1-2.

Joe Morgan's one-out single and his second stolen base of the game came before Perez' fourth homer of the season, a two-out drive to left off Barr in the fifth. Winner Jack Billingham, 2-1, lost his shutout in the bottom of the fifth on Gary Matthews' RBI single.

Phillies 2, Expos 1
Steve Carlton pitched a six-hitter for his first victory of the season while Dave Cash scored one run and drove in the other to lead Philadelphia over Montreal. Carlton, 1-3, struck out seven, walked three and lost his shutout when Barry Foote led off the eighth inning with his first home run of the season.

Pirates 5, Cardinals 0
Home runs by Willie Stargell and Richie Zisk backed five-hit pitching by Jerry Reuss and led Pittsburgh over St. Louis. Losing pitcher Bob Gibson fell to a 0-3 with the loss, the seventh in eight games for the spinning Cardinals.

Zisk opened the scoring in the second inning with a solo homer to right, his first of the season. Stargell followed with another solo homer on Gibson's first pitch of the fourth inning. It was Stargell's fifth homer of the baseball season.

Padres 4, Astros 2
Two-out doubles by John Grubb and Dave Winfield in the fifth inning produced three runs and sparked San Diego to a come-from-behind victory over Houston. Winner Sonny Siebert walked, Enzo Hernandez singled and Bobby Tolan drove in Siebert to tie the game at 1-1. Then Grubb doubled to left for two more runs and Winfield made it 4-1 with another double to chase starter Larry Dierker.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2
Lee Lacy ripped three singles and drove in a pair of runs, leading a 10-hit Los Angeles Dodgers attack, as the Dodgers defeated Atlanta for their seventh straight victory. Doug Rau went the distance for the Dodgers, scattering seven hits for his third victory in four decisions. One of the hits was a two-run homer by Larvell Blanks, his first of the season and only the second in three years in the big leagues.

ROCKY MOUNT—Macon Moyer spoiled Doug Henley's bid for a no-hitter with a single in the seventh inning last night, but it didn't hurt the Rocky Mount ace's 7-1 victory over the Rampants in a key Division I baseball game.

Rose retained first place in the tight league race, but for all practical purposes fell into second place in the league. Rose is 8-2 in league play (13-3 overall) while Rocky Mount improved its mark to 7-2 in conference play. The Gryphons are 13-3 overall also.

While Rose technically holds a half-game lead over the Gryphons prior to Rocky Mount's meeting with Wilson tonight, the Gryphs are in the superior position in the loop. Rose will have no chance to win the title and claim the post-season berth in the state playoff unless someone else beats Rocky Mount during the rest of the season. If the two should finish in a tie, Rocky Mount would claim the title by virtue of having beaten Rose twice.

Thus, the Rampants can only back into the title—and must wait to see if someone else can top the Gryphons during their remaining six games.

Henley was strong throughout most of the game, striking out 11 and walking just two. At one point, however, he trailed 1-0 due to mistakes made both by himself and by his teammates.

Henley had a perfect game going until the fourth inning when Griff Garner laid down a bunt and reached on an error.

The catcher, making the play to first, struck Garner in the back, allowing him to reach safely. Garner moved on to second on a passed ball, but died there after Kelly Heath drew one of the two walks.

It was the other walk that got him into trouble. That came in the fifth inning. With one down, Ron Hunt drew a walk and moved up on a passed ball. Eddy Connolly struck out, but the ball got away from the catcher again, and while he was busy chasing it down and throwing Connolly out at first, Hunt moved on to third. He scored from there on a passed ball for the lone Rampant run—an unearned one.

The Rampants were hitless until Moyer chopped one in the hole between third and short with one away in the seventh. He was the final Rampant to reach, however.

Rocky Mount stayed on the Rampants' backs all evening, keeping the pressure on them. But until the bottom of the fifth, the Rampants had responded to the pressure and come up with the plays.

In the first, Marvin Dancy led off with a walk and Tommy Crocker also drew one as Kelly Heath didn't quite have his usual accuracy. Both moved up on a wild pitch, but died there.

In the second, Ronald Kearney reached on an infield hit, but was thrown out stealing.

In the third, two more walks put the Rampants in trouble, but again, they were able to get out of it.

Then, in the fourth, Moyer keyed a fantastic double play to save a run. Henley and Randy Roberson led off with walks and were sacrificed up. Kearney then lifted a long fly to center, which Moyer caught about 310 feet from home. He fired a perfect strike to Connolly at the plate to nail Henley by a good five feet, for a double play.

But in the fifth, the Gryphons exploded for all seven of their runs. Phil Braswell led off with a walk and was sacrificed up. Larry Joyner singled and Crocker got a hit to center, scoring Braswell with the tying run. Dean Bradshaw followed with another hit, driving in Joyner to put Rocky Mount into a 2-1 lead.

Relief pitcher Jimmy Averette was greeted by Henley, who drew a walk, with Ricky Smith coming on to run for him. Roberson followed with a double, driving in both Crocker and Bradshaw. Greg Proctor was hit by a pitch, reloading the bases. Kearney grounded back to third, and the ball was played home but Smith knocked the ball loose from Connolly to score the fifth run. Mike Pearce then singled in both Roberson and Proctor with the final Rocky Mount runs.

The Gryphs had another threat in the sixth. Bradshaw singled, moved up on a wild pitch and took third on an out, but got no further.

The Rampants, now with one eye on the Rocky Mount schedule, travel to Elizabeth City on Friday for a make-up game with Northeastern. For Rose, their remaining five games are "must win" contests.

Eastern Wayne Tops Vikings

NEW HOPE—Eastern Wayne High School handed D.H. Conley a 7-0 shutout last night in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The loss evened the Conley record at 6-6 on the year.

Conley was able to get only three hits during the night as they were unable to plate a run.

Eastern Wayne pushed over three in the second to get all the runs they needed. Willie Jernigan led off with a single, and Joe Kelley followed with another hit, with both moving up on an error on the play. Greg Gambrell reached on an error, allowing both Jernigan and Kelly to score. Gambrell moved on to third and scored on Jose

Milkovitz, sacrifice fly.

In the fifth, the Warriors added another run. Roger Sutton singled and scored on Bo Graham's hit.

The sixth saw Eastern Wayne add three more runs. Terry Taylor doubled and Gambrell singled. Woody Sutton tripled to drive in both runners. Roger Sutton followed with another triple, driving in the final Warrior run.

The Vikings return to action Friday, traveling to Southern Nash.

Bullets Grab Second Victory

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. (AP)—Basketball is a game of instincts, and the Boston Celtics apparently are thinking too much. Mostly about how to stop Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets.

But Hayes goes right on scoring, Boston's defending National Basketball Association champions get more confused, and the Bullets have moved ahead 2-0 in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals.

Hayes scored 29 points Wednesday night, giving him 63 for the two games, pulled down 12 rebounds and blocked five shots while leading the Bullets to a surprising 117-92 runaway.

The series resumes Saturday afternoon in Boston, with the eventual winner advancing to the NBA title round against either the Golden State Warriors or the Chicago Bulls. The Western Conference finalists are tied 1-1 following Chicago's 90-89 victory Wednesday night.

"He's just shooting over our guys," Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn said of Hayes. "It's difficult covering him. We've tried doubling him, but that takes us out of our normal defense."

"We're thinking too much about our defense instead of just doing our thing," said Boston's John Havlicek, who scored only 11 points while hitting but four of 14 field goal attempts.

With their vaunted fast break effectively shut off, partly because of Washington's 50 per cent shooting average, the Celtics hit only 37 per cent from the floor.

The Bullets opened up a 31-20 lead after one quarter and led by at least seven points the rest of the way. Phil Chenier, who played only 27 minutes before fouling out, had 25 points for Washington and Wes Unseld grabbed 16 rebounds.

Don Nelson topped Boston with 23 points, while Jo-Jo White and Dave Cowens added 18 apiece.

Tarboro Wins Meet

TARBORO—Tarboro High School captured the Northeastern Conference boys track championship yesterday, easily out-distancing the rest of the field.

Tarboro finished the meet with 100½ points, while Washington had 79. Edenton was a distant third with 30 points, followed by Plymouth with 23, Roanoke Rapids with 15, and Williamston with 9½.

Williamston was able to place in only four events. Their 880 relay team finished fourth in 1:37.5, while their mile relay unit came in second with a time of 3:40.5.

Bermey Stevens finished fourth in the pole vault with a leap of 10 feet, 6 inches, while Merritt Taylor was fourth in the high jump, leading 5 feet, 6 inches.

The meet closed out the year for Williamston, except for the upcoming state qualifying meets.

Chicago Bulls Nip Golden State By 90-89

By JERRY LISKA

AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — You'd expect Golden State's Rick Barry to be a hero under the gun. But lumbering Tom Boerwinkle of the Chicago Bulls?

Yet it was the 7-foot Boerwinkle who popped in the winning basket with two seconds left and Barry who faltered as the Bulls won a cliffhanger 90-89 Wednesday night. The victory enabled the Bulls to even at 1-1 their best-of-seven showdown with the Warriors in the National Basketball Association Western Conference final playoff.

Barry got possession with about 25 seconds left and the Warriors ahead 89-88. Instead of stalling out the 24-second clock and virtually clinching it for the Warriors, Barry took an errant shot and the Bulls took over with 10 seconds left.

The Bulls called time out and, after a quick out-of-bounds pass, Norm Van Lier rifled a toss to Boerwinkle under the basket for his easy layup which triggered bedlam among the 18,533 fans in Chicago Stadium. Warrior Coach Al Attles explained, "Rick apparently thought that time had run out because I had told him to run out the clock. Then, realizing that time had not run out, he got caught between making a shot or a pass and he made a shot."

Boerwinkle said, "We set the last play to go to Bob Love. But Van Lier was open for a shot. Instead he passed to me. I'm sure glad I didn't have my back turned to be ready for a rebound if Norm had shot."

Until the dramatic finish, the Warriors seemed to be in control of a game in which the lead changed 12 times and the score was tied 12 times.

The Bulls, led by Chet Walker's game-high 28 points, were in front at halftime 43-40 but never got ahead after Golden State went in front at 62-61 late in the third quarter until Boerwinkle's game-deciding layup.

Jeff Mullins' basket gave the Warriors an 89-86 with 1:07 left. But with 45 seconds remaining, Van Lier drove in for a layup and the Bulls trailed only 89-88.

Even after Boerwinkle's go-ahead basket, the Warriors had a fleeting chance.

Strikeout Nice, Perry Says, But Wins Better

By BRUCE LOWITT

AP Sports Writer

Going from 15th to 14th place on baseball's all-time strikeout list didn't really thrill Cleveland's Gaylord Perry. What made him happier was going from 3-2 to 4-2.

"Strikeouts are nice when you need them, but the big thing is winning," Perry said after posting his fourth victory in six decisions in the Indians' 8-1 rout of Boston Wednesday night.

He chalked up nine whiffs against the Red Sox. That gave him 2,337 career strikeouts and moved him past Early Wynn's 2,334.

In other American League action it was New York 6, Baltimore 4; Texas 8, Chicago 2; Milwaukee 6, Detroit 2, and California 7, Kansas City 6. Cold and wet grounds forced postponement of Oakland at Minnesota.

"I look forward to pitching every fourth day," Perry said, downplaying even more his feat in this, his 202nd career victory. "It doesn't make any difference which club I go against."

Not much. He's beaten the Red Sox 14 times — the last 13 in a row — and lost to them just once since making the switch from the National League's San Francisco Giants to the Indians in 1972.

He won partly because Boog Powell drove in three runs, two with his fourth homer of the season.

Yankees 6, Orioles 4
"In the National League we used to call Reynolds 'Bullet Bob,'" the Yanks' Bobby Bonds said. "He could throw that bullet — hard. He was doing it tonight and I caught one."

He caught it at a most opportune time, too ... with New York trailing 4-3 and two runners on base in the bottom of the ninth inning. Elliott Maddox had just chased Grant Jackson with a run-scoring single and had brought Reynolds out of the Baltimore bullpen. Bonds greeted him by crashing his second pitch 400 feet over the center field fence for the three-run homer that beat the Orioles.

Rangers 8, White Sox 2
Jim Spencer took a .211 batting average out of the Rangers' game against Chicago. Not very good ... but, then, not very bad either considering he took a .147 average into it.

Spencer, Texas' designated hitter, finally warmed up to his role. He started slowly, with a first-inning single, then unloaded a two-run homer in the third and ripped a two-run double in the fourth to pace the Rangers' assault against winless Stan Bahnsen and the White Sox.

Angels 7, Royals 6

Mickey Rivers singled, then Tommy Harper and Bruce Bochte lined successive run-scoring doubles to left in the ninth inning to lifted the Angels past Kansas City and into a first-place tie with idle Oakland in the West Division.

Bochte also singled for a first-inning run and California got two in the third on singles by Rivers and Harper.

Brewers 6, Tigers 2
Darrell Porter's fourth-inning triple gave Milwaukee what proved to be its winning run and George Scott's eighth-inning homer gave the Brewers two more for good measure in the triumph that halted Detroit's five-game winning streak.

Robersonville returns to action on Friday, hosting South Edgecombe.

ROBERSONVILLE — Robersonville High School rallied for four runs and took a 4-2 victory over North Johnston High School yesterday in the Eastern Plains Conference.

The victory kept the Eagles atop their division of the league with a 9-2 record. They are 10-6 overall.

North Johnston scored first, getting a run in the first. Jerry Stancil walked and moved up when a pickoff attempt was errored. Jerry Hinnant doubled him home.

North Johnston added another in the second. Brian Mitchum walked and Jimmy Mitchell singled. Stancil singled in Mitchum for a 2-0 lead.

Robersonville came up with three in the fourth to take the Robin Fowler reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Smith, and Ricky Jenkins walked to force in Spruill. Reid Bullock also walked, driving in Carl Bullock.

FARMVILLE — Charles B. Aycock High School pushed over two runs in the first inning and made them stand up for a 2-0 victory over Farmville Central last night.

Joey Durham tossed a three-hitter at Farmville, keeping them from making a serious threat for most of the night as he shut them out.

Both of the Aycock runs were unearned. In the first, Durham led off with a walk and Finch singled him to third. Finch stole second and an error on the throw down allowed Durham to score. Another error on the relay let Finch come the rest of the way.

That closed out the scoring for the rest of the evening. Aycock got only one man as far as third

Nuggets Tie Western Series

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Denver Nuggets, 40-2 at home during the regular American Basketball Association season, "can forget about the home-court advantage Saturday night," says Coach Larry Brown.

One of those two losses was to the Indiana Pacers, who since have won two more at Denver in their West Division playoff finals.

But the Nuggets also have won two games at Indianapolis, including a 104-99 victory that tied the series at 3-3 on Wednesday night.

The seventh and deciding game is at Denver Saturday, with the winner of that game taking on the East Division champion Kentucky Colonels for the ABA crown.

"Our team showed a lot of class out there," said Brown, who admitted he was worried for a while when the Pacers scored three baskets to start the second half and built an eight-point lead, 52-44.

"The key to the game was when we were down by eight and within two minutes outscored the Pacers 11-2," Brown said.

"I didn't think it was our game. It could have gone either way."

The contest, before an ABA record crowd of 17,421, was close throughout. Denver was ahead most of the first quarter, the Pacers were out in front in the second period and the two teams exchanged leads the rest of the way.

The lead changed 15 times in the third period and six more in the final quarter before Mike Green put the Nuggets ahead to stay at 98-97 with under three minutes to go.

Green had two more free throws and a field goal before Mack Calvin iced the game on a pair of free throws with six seconds remaining.

Green, a 6-foot-10 center, led all scorers with 31 points, while Calvin finished with 21. George McGinnis, the ABA scoring champion, topped the Pacers with 26, while rookie Billy Knight added 18.

This is the third time Indiana has met Denver in the playoffs. The Pacers won both previous series and went on both times to capture the ABA championship.

Reflector Gets Its Second Win

The Daily Reflector became the first Industrial League team to capture its second victory, downing the Jaycees last night. Greenville Utilities and Daniel Construction also picked up victories.

In the opening game, Daniel took a 10-5 win over State Highway. Daniel pushed over two runs in the first, but State Highway matched that. Daniel came back with five in the second, however, including a homer by Job, and that put the game away. Daniel added three more

6-6 in the third. The Chargers added two in the fourth, but White's pushed ahead with four in their half of the frame. The Chargers tied it with two in the fifth, but five in the bottom of the fifth put the game away for White. Pier Five downed the Rockets, 9-2 in the second game. Pier Five picked up two in the first and added four more in the second. They came away with three more in the fourth. Both of the Rocket runs scored in the fourth on W. Ward's homer.

Sixty-Five NFL Players Become Free Agents; Have Five Options

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The advertisement could read: "For Sale — one Super Bowl team. Mint condition. All reasonable offers considered."

Object of the bidding is approximately 13,000 pounds of football players — 65 of them according to the National Football League, and that's a record.

They became free agents at 12:01 this morning after they had declined to sign contracts and had played out their option year — the year following the expiration of their old contracts.

Quarterbacks Joe Namath of the New York Jets and Sonny Jurgensen of the Washington Redskins head the list of the NFL's unindentured.

But the list goes on. The Associated Press canvassed the 26 NFL teams and accounted for 48 of those players who became free agents, with only Kansas City and Houston declining to name names.

The discrepancy between the NFL and AP figures probably can be accounted for by players who may so recently have signed that the NFL is unaware of it, or by players so close to signing that their teams do not consider them up for grabs.

Bucs Fall To Bulldogs

WILSON—East Carolina University closed out its 1975 tennis season yesterday, bowing to Atlantic Christian College, 9-0.

The Bucs were able to capture only one set from the strong Bulldogs, who earlier swept the Bucs on their home courts.

The defeat left the Pirates with a 7-9 record for the year. Atlantic Christian upped its record to 12-5.

Summary:

Bill Kent (AC) defeated Tom Durfee, 6-4, 6-7, 6-2.

Rocky Peed (AC) defeated Howard Rambeau, 6-1, 6-1.

Asad Niaz (AC) defeated Mark Callaway, 6-1, 6-0.

Pat Taylor (AC) defeated Doug Getsinger, 6-2, 6-1.

Robert Wells (AC) defeated Jim Ratliff, 6-4, 6-0.

Charles Wooten (AC) defeated Randy Bailey, 6-1, 6-2.

Kent-Taylor (AC) defeated Tim Hill-Don Nelthrop, 6-3, 6-3.

Peed-Niaz (AC) defeated Getsinger-Keith Gray, 6-1, 6-4.

Wells-Umstaedter (AC) defeated Jeff Sutton-Bailey, 6-2, 7-5.

There are basically five alternatives open to these new free agents: (1) sign with their old club, (2) sign with another NFL club, (3) sign with the Canadian Football League, (4) go to the World Football League, or (5) quit.

Many players find themselves in the situation of having signed already with the WFL, only to find they weren't getting paid. Many of these contracts have been voided, and now the player must look elsewhere for employment.

Detroit's Ron Jesse, for example, signed with the WFL's Birmingham franchise, which went bankrupt last season and has been reorganized.

"At this point on Jesse," said Detroit General Manager Russ Thomas, "we don't know if his contract has been breached."

The free agent roster includes names like these:

—Running backs Calvin Hill

of Dallas, a near certainty to go to the Hawaiians of the World Football League, and Larry Csonka and Jim Kiklick of Miami, presumably going to the WFL also (their contracts are owned by John Bassett, who owns the Memphis WFL team);

—Wide receivers John Gillion of Minnesota, under contract to the Hawaiians, Jesse of Detroit, another WFL signee, and Paul Warfield of Miami, in the same boat as Csonka and Kiklick;

—Tight end Ted Kwalick of San Francisco, who has been re-negotiating with the 49ers;

—Miami's guard Bob Kuechenberg, trying to break a WFL contract with Birmingham;

—Defensive backs Tim Foley of Miami, another unhappy Birmingham signee, and Spider Lockhart of the New York Giants; —And Viking defensive lineman Gary Larsen, an 11-year veteran who may retire.

Still others are: Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica, Denver wide receiver Otto Stowe, Pittsburgh defensive end L.C. Greenwood, Los Angeles tight end Bob Klein, Minnesota running back Oscar Reed, and Washington running back Duane Thomas.

The U.S. Open golf championship will be held at Chicago's Medinah No. 3 course June 19-22.

Jack Nicklaus plans to defend his Tournament Players championship at the Colonial Country Club course in Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 21-24.

Indiana won the 1975 Big Ten basketball crown by taking all 18 league games.

Anthony Eden Warns Margin Of Survival Now Low

EDITOR'S NOTE: Anthony Eden, now Earl of Avon, was Britain's foreign secretary before and during World War II and prime minister 1955-57. He is the last of the Western statesmen who personally knew all the great wartime leaders. In the following exclusive interview, he looks back on the end of World War II in Europe 30 years ago May 8 and comments on subsequent events.

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer
ALVEDISTON, England (AP) — In Europe, at last, the most devastating war in history was over.
Winston Churchill stood among the ruins of Hitler's Reich's Chancellery. Around lay the shattered landscape of Berlin, acre on acre of rubble pierced by the skeletons of broken buildings.
At the British war leader's side was his foreign secretary,

Anthony Eden, now Earl of Avon. In May 1945, when Allied victory had brought Germany's unconditional surrender, Eden had been in San Francisco and far from Britain's frenzied celebrations.

Now, under the July sun amid the ruins of Hitler's capital, came the moment which might seem best to symbolize triumph, the end of a road which had begun in 1938 with his stand against appeasement of dictators.

Yet it was, Lord Avon explained in an interview to mark the 30th anniversary of victory in Europe, a moment less of triumph than relief. That relief was shadowed by anxieties for the future, and overwhelmed by personal grief at the loss in action of his elder son.

During a two-hour conversation at his country home, Lord Avon recalled those forebodings of 30 years ago.

Japan had been defeated. The Soviet Union was sowing the seeds of the Cold War. Differences of approach, if not intent, had developed between the United States and Britain, Western keystones of the Grand Alliance.

Lord Avon conducted the interview in Churchill's wartime style, dictating from his bed and surrounded by newspapers.

Lady Avon, who is Churchill's niece, was the only other person present.

"The immediate Nazi danger was over," he said, "removed after years of courage and endurance by our people and their allies."

"Churchill had the best right to rejoice as had the British Commonwealth. Remember, we stood alone for a battered and dangerous year."

"However, as we stood there in Berlin, it was hardly the time to rest on thoughts of victory. I was vividly conscious of a morning I had spent with Gen. Marshall (George C. Marshall, U.S. Army Chief of Staff) in the Pentagon only a few weeks before."

"He forecast a desperate struggle in the Far East if conventional weapons were used."

The Soviets had declared willingness to move against Japanese forces in mainland Asia but the declaration of war had still to come. At that time the atomic bomb had not yet been tested.

Lord Avon quoted from a telegram he sent from Washington to Churchill:

"Marshall was inclined to think that the Russians underestimated the extent of the challenge they would have if they engaged the Japanese on a large scale by land. He thought they would have very heavy losses ..."

Thus, said Lord Avon, a long and costly war against Japan seemed inevitable. In addition, he was already worried by differences among the Big Three and for the future of the United Nations organization.

Lord Avon was asked if he thought that the West had any share of blame for the Cold War.

"No," he said, "the breaches of the letter and spirit of wartime treaties came from across the Iron Curtain."

"But it could be effectively argued that we ought to have been firmer with the presentation of Western points of view at an earlier stage."

He cited President Franklin D. Roosevelt's reluctance to discuss the Polish issue at the Tehran Conference of 1943. Britain was urging Russia's Stalin to come to terms with the Polish government in exile in London.

But Roosevelt was looking toward the presidential elections of 1944 and, Lord Avon recalled, told Stalin privately that for electoral reasons he could not discuss the Polish issue for another year.

"This," said Lord Avon, "was hardly calculated to restrain Stalin. He would think that time was on his side and act accordingly."

"The President for whatever reason, was always convinced that he could handle Stalin as no one else could."

Lord Avon is, at 77, the only survivor of the Western leadership at the meetings with Stalin which shaped postwar Europe.

Now, speaking amid a succession of Communist victories in Southeast Asia, he warned again appeasement of Stalin's successors. The North Atlantic Alliance, he said, is more than ever important.

"If Western Europe were ever lost to the free world," he said, "the balance of resources and manufacturing capacity and therefore of political power would be dangerously tilted against the American continent and the remaining free countries of the Pacific. "That must not be allowed to happen. Above all, no appeasement, which means no yielding to obtain a little present ease at the cost of the future."

He closed the interview with this warning: "We can afford no illusions: The margin of survival for the free nations is now dangerously low."

Small Town Fights For 'Home Rule'

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
GENOA, Nev., (AP) — Citizens of the oldest and one of the smallest Nevada towns are fighting a legislative move to curb their free-wheeling form of "home rule."

Even if town meetings spark fist fights and elections happen irregularly, residents are part of an enthusiastic form of "democracy at the grass roots," said one spokesman.

"Everyone has a chance to say his own thing, as vigorously as he chooses," says Lou Schaffer. He and others active in Genoa affairs feel that residents' enthusiasm will suffer under a bill to standardize government in all 39 of Nevada's unincorporated towns.

Lena Falcke, 92, Rocky's grandmother and lifelong resident of the 124-year-old town, says early settlers "made the decisions on what was necessary and had to be done."

"They didn't need a computer or big government to tell them what was needed. Why start now?"

Legislators argue there are almost as many forms of government as there are unincorporated towns. They point to technically illegal actions and problems such as fist fights after town hall meetings break up.

Genoans are proud of their tax-free local government. Dances and benefits pay half the cost to keep up the volunteer fire department, town hall, water supply, street lights, a snow plow and roads — mostly dirt.

The rest of the money comes from property taxes assessed by Douglas County, which encompasses the town nestled on the east edge of the Sierra Nevada.

Genoans concede they're controlled by county government, but want to be able to negotiate for control of services they've handled for decades.

They want to be able to hold elections when needed instead of at the same time state general elections are held, and don't want to pay filing fees for their non-paying posts.

The bill would bar such practices.

'Squawks' Cut His Gas Usage

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — When Henry Merriman steps on the gas pedal of his car too fast, it squawks. And he says that saves him money.

Merriman, a 70-year-old inventor with more than 100 patents to his credit, has developed an inexpensive fuel efficiency gauge from a simple squeeze-toy, placed under the accelerator of his car.

"I thought I was a pretty good driver until I put this thing under the gas pedal of my car," Merriman said. He says that since he has learned how to drive without squawking underfoot, his gas savings have amounted to better than 12 per cent.

N.C. Lost 1,282 In Viet Conflict

RALEIGH (AP)—Vietnam and U. S. involvement there took the lives of 1,571 North Carolinians, the state Department of Military and Veterans Affairs said today.

A department spokesman said the figure was based on the address given at the time of enlistment in the military.

Of the total, 1,282 Tar Heels were killed in hostile action and 289 from other causes.

Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park in Virginia, established Feb. 14, 1927, covers 3,672 acres and includes parts of four battlefields.

Says His Salary Hike Too Large

WAITSBURG, Wash. (AP) — Claiming the school board was offering him too large a salary increase, School Superintendent Gerald Maib turned it down in favor of half as much.

"My opinion is the salary for this job is as high as it should go at this time," said Maib. "There has to be a ceiling point."

The board, which had offered a 12.5 per cent pay hike, agreed instead to make it a 6 per cent raise. Maib's salary next year will be $21,000.

Few 'Rice Paddy' Vietnamese Among Refugees Reaching U.S.

By RICHARD SALTUS
Associated Press Writer
CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (A) — Who are these emigrants, this first big wave of Vietnamese refugees arriving in the United States?

And what is going to happen to them? Many officials fear they couldn't have arrived at a worse time, in the middle of a recession.

An estimated 70 per cent of the 1,500 persons living in "tin can" quonset huts and tents at this sprawling Marine base are dependents of Americans who worked in South Vietnam as contractors, engineers, employees of the Agency for International Development (AID) and other U.S. agencies.

They include wives, children and in-laws.

The rest are mostly "people who worked for us or associated with us," an immigration official here said. "High risk" cases — prime targets for execution by the VC.

He explained he meant Embassy and consular personnel, teachers, politicians, journalists and employees of concerns with military contracts.

The "real hard core refugees," the ones from a cross-section of Vietnamese society that begged, bought or stole their way aboard American mercy flights and have few if any of the proper immigration papers, are not expected to be here for several days, he said. Preparations have been made to house up to 20,000 persons each at Pendleton, Ft. Chaffee, Ark., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. This largest and longest emergency airlift of humans in aviation history began Tuesday.

Other than the American dependents, the Vietnamese arrivals so far are "not your average rice-paddy farmers, you know," said an AID official at Pendleton to help process the refugees.

"Oh, I guess we have a few of those, too. But mostly these people here are — were — wealthy middle-class types.

"A few could even be called rich. Well, very few of them will be rich, now. It's going to be a different world for them."

Most are merely happy to have escaped. "I am lucky," said Rene Ngo, 29, former professor of French at the University of Saigon. "My brother-in-law is an American and was sponsor for my wife and I to come to the United States. We left everything behind."

One refugee arriving on a C141 on Tuesday was Gen. Cao Van Vien, 53, former South Vietnamese defense minister and retired chairman of the joint general staff. He was taken to an undisclosed destination.

A free-lance photographer from Washington, D.C., brought out 12 members of his wife's family. American officials in Saigon issued exit documents to dependents in the "fireside relative" category — spouses, parents and unmarried children.

Most of the refugees are dressed in Western fashions and appeared in good health. At least half of the evacuees are older women and their children, teen-age girls and elderly people.

A few had gold jewelry, but little else other than a few suitcases.

The refugees are being treated as "prospective immigrants." They are being "paroled" into the United States until Congress passes legislation making them citizens. Parole power was used in the 1950s to admit 40,000 Hungarian refugees and in the 1960s to admit 675,000 Cubans.

Martin Luther King's Home A Nat'l Landmark

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The two-story, buff-colored Victorian birthplace of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was restored as a national landmark with the aid of a 1929 Sears catalogue.

The home, now open to the public, is one of the few birthplaces of black Americans to receive recognition by the National Register of Historic Places.

"I can't help feeling emotional every time I go into the house," said Mrs. Christine Farris, King's sister, who with her mother, helped restore the old home on Auburn Avenue.

"We've been working on the home since 1971," said Mrs. Farris. "We were fortunate because Mother was able to personally supervise painting, wallpapering and selection of some of the furniture before she was taken from us and the home is very much as it was when Martin was born."

Mrs. King Sr., who was shot to death last June in historic Ebenezer Baptist Church only a block from the home, visited antique shops and other homes in the old neighborhood searching for replicas of furniture.

"One of our most valuable aids," said Mrs. Farris, "was a 1929 Sears catalogue—it reminded us of the things we had forgotten and gave us a picture of what we needed."

The home, although comfortable and spacious, is typical of a middle class home during the depression. Only the living room has a rug, the others have linoleum.

The piano on which Mrs. King played and all three of her children learned to play, is in the parlor.

It was in this home that Mrs. King Sr. was reared and began her married life with the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr.

All three of the couple's children were born in the upstairs master bedroom. A chifferobe and cedar chest which were in the room the night Martin was born, Jan. 15, 1929, are in the same spot.

Mrs. King gave many authentic pieces of furniture for the home in addition to duplicating its interior as it was when her eldest son was born. Mrs. Farris' childhood bedroom is completely restored with its original furnishings—a delicate white poster bed, vanity and chest.

The home was built in 1895 and purchased in the early 1900s by King's maternal grandfather, Dr. Elizabeth Lyons of the Atlanta Urban Design Commission says it is also a worthy architectural landmark.

"Most people don't recognize the Victorian style for what it is," she says, "and the result is that many of our most worthy structures in Atlanta have been torn down."

"People usually think of historic homes in the South in white-columned antebellum terms...but the truth is Atlanta was never a white-column town—even before Sherman came through.

"Atlanta built its finest homes after the Civil War, when Victorian was the rage," Dr. Lyon added. "And the King home is one of the city's best examples of the period."

Between the birth home and Ebenezer Church is an old fire house—the oldest in Atlanta.

Dr. King used to like to chase after fires," says an associate pastor of the church. "When he'd hear the fire engines, he'd run down there."

Prevent Speech By Rhodesian

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Fifty to 75 chanting demonstrators prevented the director of Rhodesia's information office from addressing a meeting at Harvard University.

Kenneth Towsey was scheduled to address the Harvard Law School Forum in a public meeting Wednesday night. He later spoke to forum members in a private session.

The demonstrators protested Rhodesia's racial policies and urged support of United Nations sanctions against the African nation.

No arrests were made and the protest was peaceful.

"I'd expected some people from the opposing viewpoint to attend, but I hadn't expected them to organize a boycott of the meeting," Towsey said.

Saturday's Children Run Into Series Of Dead Ends

NO PLACE FOR THEM—Greg Hawkins (left), 7, and Eddie Walker, 10, have learning disabilities that prevent them from fitting into any of the educational programs available in the Rocky Mount area. (AP Wirephoto)

By MILLIE BUCHANAN

Written for The AP
ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — They're called "Saturday's children," in reference to the old nursery rhyme. "Monday's child is fair of face," in which "Saturday's child has far to go."

They're also called brain damaged, emotionally disturbed, exceptional and a host of other names.

Because they appear normal, they are frequently and mistakenly dismissed as "kids who just need a good spanking."

They are the subject of legislation and discussion and the object of pity. What they are not, according to two Rocky Mount residents, is understood and helped.

"They" are children with learning disabilities.

Ten-year-old Eddie Walker and 7-year-old Greg Hawkins are two such children.

According to their mothers, Violet Walker and Lou Hawkins, their struggle to get help in North Carolina has been a long series of dead ends. They are angry and frustrated and frightened for the future of their children.

"If you want to see what my child will be like unless he gets help, just go look in Central Prison," Mrs. Hawkins says, "and every year that passes means less chance for help. Every article tells you that the important thing is to get help early, but when you try you're told, 'you're overreacting, wait and he'll outgrow it.'"

Studies in a number of states show that from 60 to 90 per cent of delinquents are failures in schools.

Mrs. Walker's search for an answer began when she and her husband, John, took 23-month-old Eddie, whom they later adopted, into their home.

"I didn't know he had a problem when we got him," she said. "I just knew he was the most active child I had ever seen in my life. He was like a wild, untamed animal, but I thought that it was due to a lack of training."

As he grew older, "he was always running or climbing, never still," Mrs. Walker said. "He was the fastest runner I've ever seen."

She went to a pediatrician for medication. It only increased Eddie's activity.

When Eddie was 6, the Walkers were advised by school officials to keep him at home for a year in the hope that he would mature and outgrow his problem. By summer Eddie had still not improved, and Mrs. Walker asked for help from a psychiatrist.

She was referred to the mental health clinic in Rocky Mount. And when Eddie started school that fall, doctors from the clinic went to the school to explain his problems. They worked with him each week. His behavior worsened and each afternoon, Mrs. Walker said, he would be "completely all to pieces from the frustrations of the day."

Mrs. Walker next turned to the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities. She now believes this was the first step toward hitting at the source of Eddie's problem, a dysfunction in the brain that was causing visual and auditory perception problems.

She organized a local ACLD chapter. It joined others in working to get legislation that established the right of all North Carolina children to an educational program designed to meet their individual needs.

Through the ACLD, Mrs. Walker discovered the Institute for the Achievement of Human Potential, in Philadelphia. Tests run at the clinic established for the first time that Eddie had a pattern of brain seizure and a chemical imbalance.

Two subsequent programs have helped bring about noticeable change in Eddie. Mrs. Walker said. One is the institute's sensory-motor training, a program designed to train undamaged brain cells to take over functions of damaged cells. The other is megavitamin therapy.

"During the last year and a half, Eddie has constantly improved. He has been able to do his school work (he is taught two hours a week by a home-bound teacher) and retain what he learns, and he even won an award for being the best behaved in his Sunday School class."

Eddie is not yet assured a normal life. He still has visual perception problems, and is far behind his age level in school work.

"What he needs now is a combination of academic and sensory-motor training. With a year of intensive, specialized training, there is a good possibility of his coming up to age and grade level, and reaching the point of going to regular school, so he can go ahead and take his place in society," Mrs. Walker said.

She feels the answer for Eddie is the program of the Dallas Academy in Texas, which combines academic work with sensory-motor training. The search for help began differently for Greg Hawkins and his parents, Lou and George Hawkins. Born in Zambia in Central Africa, Greg was normal at birth. But when he was 10 months old, he developed cerebral malaria, resulting in brain damage.

"When he came home from the hospital, it was like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Mrs. Hawkins said.

She said there was "a total personality change. He never stopped crying, where before he seldom cried. He didn't even crawl again until he was 17 months old. And he was hyperactive."

Greg's problems did not lessen when the family returned to the United States. He was treated at the behavior modification center at Penn State University, through the remedial education activity program at East Carolina University, and by the Developmental Evaluation Clinic in Greenville.

He attended a public school in Greenville, while receiving special help two afternoons a week from a learning disability teacher. His auditory and visual perception programs and his hyperactivity remained severe. Mrs. Hawkins believes that none of those programs attacked his basic problem.

Like the Walkers, the Hawkins family turned to the Institute in Philadelphia. Greg was placed in an intensive sensory-motor patterning program that appeared to be showing results until it was interrupted last December when Greg required surgery.

He has not been able to return successfully to the patterning program, and his behavior has worsened. The Hawkins now believe the best answer lies in the program at Dallas.

The immediate problem for both families is a financial one. Travel, private schools and hundreds of visits to doctors and clinics have been expensive, and insurance has paid only a small portion. The families' incomes are too high to make them eligible for social services or welfare and, because of the nature of their problems, Greg and Eddie do not qualify for assistance from agencies for handicapped children.

The only state program under which both are eligible is the one for which Mrs. Walker and the ACLD worked. But it may be too little and too late.

For 1974-75, $124,000 was appropriated. A recent survey indicates there are more than 90,000 children with learning disabilities in North Carolina.

The program provides a maximum grant of $2,000 for tuition at out-of-state schools for children whose educational needs cannot be met in North Carolina. Tuition for the nine-month program at Dallas Academy is $8,000.

"My desire is to get to Dallas one way or another. I want professional help, and I won't settle for anything else. I'm willing to sacrifice an eye if necessary," Mrs. Walker said.

Earlier this month, Mrs. Walker publicly offered to sell her eye for enough money to send Eddie to Dallas next year.

Moby Dick Would Be Target Of Critics If Written Today

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
MYSTIC, Conn. (UPI) — Captain Jacques-Yves Cousteau, French oceanographer, says Herman Melville's 19th Century classic Moby Dick, "could not be written today without a storm of protest" over the stalking of the white whale.

Cousteau added, however, that in his opinion the book, considered by many to be the finest American novel ever written, has nothing to do with whales.

"It is a description of the attraction of man for the impossible. And Melville has chosen that subject of the size of the victim which would be of perfect nature for the size of his book."

He went on to point out that "moral values change with time. We do not have the same set of moral values today as Melville had in his time...and you have to judge it with their set of moral values. We have no right to condemn what these people have done in their time."

The captain spoke following ceremonies aboard the Charles W. Morgan, the only surviving 19th Century American wooden whaleship, at anchor in Mystic Seaport.

With a cool breeze blowing off the water, Cousteau presented to Mystic's chairman of the board, Francis Day Rogers, the first copy of a limited edition of Moby Dick. The book, hand-bound in morocco leather, has a preface written and hand-signed by Cousteau. A frontispiece by artist LeRoy Neiman also is hand-signed. Twelve other paintings by Neiman illustrate the 1,500 numbered copies.

The book, which sells for $450, is available only through the publisher, The Artist's Limited Edition company.

Mystic's copy of the new edition will be housed in the G.W. Blunt White Library, specializing in the maritime history of the United States.

After the ceremony Cousteau was asked to comment on Jaws, a popular novel about a great white shark. Cousteau bridled.

"It is stupid. It's a stupid novel, very well written," he replied.

As for his own work and the danger from sharks, the captain, his handsomely tanned aquiline features belying his 64 years, said, "Every time you think of exploration, it has to be dangerous. It has to be a daredevilish adventure. It is not. We are diving to discover, to look, to observe. We are not in danger. It is safer than riding a bicycle. So forget about it. It is a cliché. Meeting sharks is commonplace. It is not dangerous."

Reminding his audience that "I'm not a prophet, I'm a witness," he said he would need.

Telephone Poles Need Replacing

NEW YORK (UPI) — To assure long life to telephone poles, Western Electric impregnates the raw wooden poles with a preservative before putting them into the ground. Despite the treatment, however, Western Electric replaces or newly installs more than 300,000 of them each year for Bell System customers.

a crystal ball to predict the future state of the sea.

"Nevertheless the odds are very bad. So what I can say without any chance to be wrong is that in the past 30 years the vitality of the sea in general has decreased at least 50 per cent."

"The main obstacle is the fragmentation of the world into 150 national sovereignties, which means that everyone can have his own rules while the sea has only one sea body. Water is one. It goes everywhere. It goes from one country to another. So the

when a country decides to release toxic products into the sea, it spoils this country as well as every other country. So that as long as this split of sovereignty between nations exists, there is no hope. The only way would be a super-national body."

Aboard the helicopter back to New York City, Cousteau pulled a turnabout by sketching a quick but creditable portrait of artist Neiman. Ever a study in contradictions, he rejected painting per se.

"I'm going to be a heretic. I don't like painting. It doesn't move me. For me, any form of art that does not include as a working ingredient time is incomplete and invalid."

As the helicopter landed and Cousteau dashed off to catch a plane for Los Angeles, Neiman said smiling, "I draw pictures and Capt. Cousteau draws crowds."

Liz Returning To Leningrad

LONDON (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor returns to Leningrad Monday to resume the filming of "The Bluebird."

Miss Taylor left Wellington private hospital Tuesday after 10 days of treatment for the flu. She appeared pale and much thinner than she was when she flew here from Leningrad for treatment.

"I'm much better," the 43-year-old actress told reporters as she left the hospital with businessman Henry Wynberg. "The treatment was successful, but I'm a little tired."

State's Electric Chair Executed 172; All Males

By DR. H.G. JONES, Curator
Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL (AP)—Forty years ago May 4 North Carolina's General Assembly adopted legislation substituting lethal gas for electricity in the punishment of persons sentenced to death by the courts.

Many years earlier, in 1909, the state had taken over the responsibility, previously held by the counties, for capital punishment. In March, 1910, Henry Spivey of Bladen County, a black convicted of killing his father-in-law, became the last person to be executed by legal hanging in North Carolina.

The very next week the awesome $1,650 electric chair was in place, its installation and first use supervised by its inventor, E.P. Davis of New York. Walter Morrison, a Robeson County Negro convicted of raping a Lumbee Indian woman, was its first victim. Four charges of electricity were required to snuff out his life. Morrison had a record of successive offenses against other citizens, and no one came to claim his body.

During the quarter of a century that the electric chair was in use, it took 172 lives, all men.

Human tragedies connected with the electrocutions abound. In 1925, for instance, C.W. Stewart and his son Elmer of Brunswick County were executed for murder of two prohibition agents. Then in 1934 three members of the same family—Bascom Green and his son Lester and son-in-law R.E. Black—were electrocuted on the same day for the killing of a bank official in Alexander County. All were white.

A strange thing happened in 1916. Ed Dorsett and Jeff Walker, both Guilford County blacks, were executed. When Warden T.B. Sale, who had been in charge of the electrocution, prepared to sign the record of their deaths, his pen suddenly jerked and blotted the page. He dropped over dead.

At least two men—Hardy Wiggins and Merrett Miller of Graham County—were saved by the magic of the telephone. Gov. Thomas W. Bickett put through a telephone call from Asheville only 15 minutes before the switch was to be thrown. Lucky the line wasn't busy.

The bill to substitute lethal gas was sponsored by one of the few Republicans in the 1935 legislature, Representative Charles A. Peterson, a Mitchell County physician, who argued that the new method was more humane than electrocution. A newspaper article favorable to the substitution said, "The prisoner is strapped into a chair in the death cell, cyanide eggs are dropped in a sulphuric acid solution above him, the heavy gas falls and one deep inhalation is sufficient to cause death. The gas is odorless and so swift in its action that there can be no suffering, scientists say."

There was considerable opposition to the bill, particularly from those who thought the "more humane" method of execution might attract spectators like the public hangings of old. Dr. Peterson pointed out, however, that the new act did not change the number of required witnesses (six) and the number of other spectators was left to the warden. Thus, said the newspaper article, "the curiosity-seeker will have no more of an opportunity to see how gas kills men than do those who now would see how effective electricity is."

North Carolina became the first state in the east to adopt the gas chamber as a method of execution.

It was almost a year before the chamber was ready for use, and on January 24, 1936, Allen Foster, a black from Hoke County, became its first victim. Since then approximately 200 persons have gone to their deaths in the chamber, including 23 in 1947 alone.

FITNESS FINALS

Fitness is, first of all, its own reward. But all that puffing, jerking and sweating can be carried by perfectionists almost to a degree of artistry and sometimes that brings another kind of reward. These finalists at the National Championships of the Marine Corps Youth Physical Fitness Program, held annually in Washington, are serious devotees of fitness, whose exceptional proficiency has gained them special recognition. They've pulled-up, pushed-up, sat-up, jumped and run the best among 300,000 young athletes from more than 1,500 high schools across the nation where the Fitness Program is conducted. Now at the national finals they have a chance to win awards, trophies and scholarships, as teams and as individuals.

School teams compete first in local contests in six districts, each of which sends its best three teams with their coaches to the national championships. The Fitness Program began in 1958, it's conducted in cooperation with the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, and it's based on exercises used by the Marines to test the fitness of their own recruits.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lorne Michaels was just 5 years old when "Broadway Open House," NBC-TV's first late-night entertainment show, premiered in 1950. Now he's going to produce NBC's latest venture in that arena.

He'll run "Saturday Night," a 90-minute comedy-variety effort set to start Oct. 11 at 11:30 p.m. EDT. It'll appear three Saturday nights each month, broadcast live from New York.

For Michaels, who says he was weaned on the live TV shows of Sid Caesar and Milton Berle in the early 1950s, the new show may be just as nerve-racking as it was for producers in the live old days of TV.

"I'm already starting to have these recurring nightmares where the set falls over the first night, hundreds of people are killed live on the air and people are chasing me," he said, only partly in jest.

He said his previous network efforts always were on film or tape and admitted that "I'm the type of producer who was always running out and saying,

"Let's do it again." You get used to that.

"But I like the idea of a live show. Performers get a certain 'edge' when they know 'this is it.'"

Michaels, a Toronto native, says he started in TV as a comedy writer for Canadian shows after graduating from the University of Toronto in 1966. After a brief fling as gagwriter for some comedians in New York, he went to Los Angeles and stayed there until late 1969, writing for various shows, including NBC's "Laugh-In."

He said he then went back to Canada with a colleague, Hart Pomerantz, and for almost four years they wrote, produced and appeared in a number of comedy specials for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Then he returned to Los Angeles in 1973 to write for an ABC summer comedy series and while doing that met comedienne Lily Tomlin, whom he calls "the best of all the people I've ever worked with or for."

His writing for one Tomlin special on CBS last year earned him an Emmy award. He may earn another one this year as co-producer — with Jane Wagner — of Miss Tomlin's first comedy special for ABC.

P.T. Barnum opened a circus in 1871 known as "the Greatest Show on Earth."

"Although most judges in the U.S. are now selected by partisan or non-partisan election, there is increasing interest in merit selection plans," Dr. T. E. Yarbrough told a meeting of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters (LWV) on Tuesday evening.

"A merit selection plan has been introduced in both the House and the Senate of the North Carolina legislature," Dr. Yarbrough added.

Yarbrough, as associate professor of Political Science at ECU, was guest speaker at the LWV meeting last night.

Explaining the merit plan, Yarbrough said that though it varied from state to state, the plan generally follows a pattern of: (1) A judicial nominating commission composed of lawyers and non-lawyers, most appointed by the state bar association or by the governor, selects several nominees to fill a vacancy; (2) The governor selects one of the nominees to fill the position; (3) The nominee serves a probationary term in the position; (4) After the probationary period, the electorate votes on whether the judge will be retained for a full term; and (5) After a judge's term expires, the judge must submit his or her name to the electorate in order to serve another term.

"Persons who support the merit selection system rather than popular election of judges contend that the people as a whole do not have the background or the information necessary to wisely choose a person possessing those 'special' qualifications desirable in a judge," Dr. Yarbrough commented.

"Those who oppose the merit selection of judges," Yarbrough said, "content that no method of selection will be completely removed from politics and that under the merit plan the governor usually has great influence even as to the nominees submitted for his selection."

A local attorney, Lawrence S. Graham, pointed out that "the North Carolina Bar Association supports the proposed merit selection plan."

Pie In Face Of Newscasters

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Television newscasters have been hit in the face with pies this week while they were on the air in Charlotte.

It was part of the initiation for new pledges of Sigma Delta Phi fraternity at Piedmont Community College.

Jack LeFaivre was hit with a banana creme pie as he was finishing his evening sportscast on WCCB, Channel 18, Tuesday night.

Russ Dubuc was hit with a lemon meringue pie as he gave the weather report on WSOB TV, Channel 9, Monday night.

Both said they would not press charges against the pie throwers. Station executives said security would be tightened.

Astute card-reading enabled declarer to overcome a serious communications problem on this hand, thereby enabling him to bring home a difficult five diamond contract.

Our choice of opening lead would be the king of hearts, but West elected to lead his singleton spade in the hope of obtaining a ruff. Declarer rose with dummy's ace and tried the trump finesse. West won the king and shifted to the king of hearts.

Declarer saw that, even if he could develop the club suit for four tricks, he would still require a heart ruff to bring his total to eleven. Rather than give up control of the heart suit, he elected to take his ruff in dummy immediately. The ten of diamonds was overtaken with the jack, and the ace of diamonds drew the outstanding trump.

Obviously, declarer could not afford to allow East to gain the lead, for that defender had a high spade to cash. Thus, declarer led a club from his hand. Had West produced the king, declarer would have allowed him to hold the trick. When West followed low, declarer finessed and breathed a sigh when the queen held. He paused to take stock. West had shown up with three diamonds and a singleton spade. Since he had to have seven hearts for his vulnerable preempt, that left him room for only two clubs. Thus, West's remaining club had to be the king. It was now a simple matter to lead a low club of dummy. West won his king, but the club suit was now set up. Declarer lost only a trick in each minor suit.

Note that declarer would have failed had he continued with the ace of clubs after winning the finesse. The king would drop, but East would get in with the jack to cash a high spade, and the defenders would still have to get a heart for a two-trick set.

Tot Unhurt By Runaway Car

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A runaway car took a 2½-year-old boy for a jolting ride 100 yards down a driveway, off a steep bank, past some pine trees and through a barn in Charlotte. The car came to rest against a fence Wednesday. And the lad, Steven Keener, was pulled out uninjured.

Apparently, he had pulled the gear shift out of the "park" position while his mother, Mrs. Sylvia Keener, carried some packages to the porch. The car injured a horse in the barn. The animal had to be destroyed.
