

Israel Said Massing Troops Along Border

By The Associated Press
Israel is massing troops and armor along the entire length of the Syrian and Jordanian cease-fire lines, a Jordanian newspaper claimed today. There was no immediate comment from the Israeli, Syrian or Jordanian commands.

In Beirut, Lebanon, an explosion ripped the ground floor entrance of an eight-story building housing the offices of the pro-Palestinian Lebanese newspaper Al Moharrer, slightly injuring four newspaper employees, police said.

Al Moharrer supported Palestinian guerrillas during four days of street clashes with right-wing Lebanese two weeks ago in which 300 persons were reported killed.

The independent Jordanian newspaper Al Dastour quoted Arab travelers from the Israeli-occupied west bank of the Jordan River as saying the buildup along the cease-fire lines included tank columns and missile batteries that were "moved up to scores of concentration points on both Arab fronts."

Al Dastour said thousands of Israeli reservists released from service after the October 1973 war were recalled to active duty when the buildup started last week.

Meanwhile, Iraq's chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Abdul Jabbar Shanshal, announced that his army lost 1,640 killed and 7,903 wounded in the final year of civil war between Iraqi troops and Kurdish rebels seeking an independent state in northern Iraq, the official Iraqi news agency reported. The report did not list Kurdish casualties.

Shanshal made the announcement at a victory parade held Sunday in Baghdad to celebrate the collapse of the Kurdish insurrection led by Mulla Mustafa Barzani who is living in exile in Iran.

Shanshal also disclosed for the first time an official casualty list of Iraqi losses during the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. He said 835 officers and soldiers were killed, 271 wounded and 73 missing in the fighting on Syria's Golan Heights front.

Iraq also lost 26 fighter-bombers, 111 tanks and personnel carriers, 249 military vehicles and 837 other pieces of various military equipment, Shanshal added.

Shanshal said 60,000 Iraqi troops were massed on the Syrian front for a counter-offensive when Syria and Egypt accepted the cease-fire. Reports during the war said Iraq had an 18,000-man contingent there.

"Had it not been for the cease-fire," Shanshal said, "the counter offensive on the Syrian front would have achieved final victory over Israel."

In Jerusalem, several terrorist bombs exploded Sunday in a Jerusalem apartment complex, wounding four Israelis. The Palestine Popular Struggle Front issued a statement in Beirut claiming responsibility for planting the bombs, cans of paint filled with gunpowder.

Potato-Spill

COLLISION . . . A wreck Sunday morning at the intersection of N. C. 11 and Main Street, just outside the Winterville city limits, left some 800 bushels of potatoes scattered over the roadside. The Highway Patrol charged Hubert Edwards of R. 1, Winterville, driver of the car involved, with failure to yield right-of-way at a stop sign, following investigation of the 9 a.m. wreck. Curtis Edwards, a passenger in the car, was reported injured. Charlie Mitchell, driver of the truck owned by Bright Belt Motor Lines of Grifton, was not injured in the mishap. A spokesman for the Winterville Police Department, who noted that some 700 bushels of potatoes were salvaged, said that the car was a total loss and damage to the tractor-trailer was estimated at $40,000. Ask County Okay Recreation Board

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The county Recreation Study Commission asked Pitt Commissioners this morning to create a Recreation Commission for the county and appropriate $21,600 for the 1975-76 fiscal year to hire a director and fund the group's operations.

Steve Mohler, a recreation consultant with the State of North Carolina presented the request for Mrs. Joyce Mills, chairman of the study group. Mohler said the study commission is asking that the board hire a "full-time recreation director. . . coordinator. . ." to head a "county-wide effort in recreation."

He said the study committee's proposed budget "to get into the business" is $21,600. "I think you can afford to do it," Mohler said. "You need somebody with leadership capabilities."

The consultant said that at the present time, 37 counties in the state have full-time recreation directors.

Representatives of the Rose High School Athletic Council also met with commissioners this morning.

Council president Max Ray Joyner told commissioners he and council member Mrs. John East were appearing in an attempt to bring "some of the needs of the Greenville City Schools" before the board.

He said "I don't know of any school system that has any fewer facilities. . ." for athletics than Rose High.

Explaining that there are ever-increasing conflicts with scheduling high school football games at ECU facilities, as well as conflicts with city recreation programs in holding baseball games and tennis matches at recreation department areas, Joyner suggested minimum needs of the school system at present include tennis courts, and bleacher seats at E. B. Aycock Junior High School where junior high school ball games are played. He indicated, however, that plans should be laid for developing separate athletic facilities for the city school program so conflicts with other agencies would not occur.

Mrs. East, a member of the Greenville Recreation Commission, told commissioners that the city Recreation Commission will eventually be forced to phase out the high school tennis program because of the demand for use of the city's courts by the general public.

She asked the county board to "allocate the money" the City Board of Education has asked for to provide these facilities. "The school has the land," Mrs. East explained. "I hope you will take this into consideration."

Commissioners, who told the council representatives that the county board cannot legally set priorities for the expenditure of school capital improvement funds, suggested that they have the Greenville Board of Education establish a high priority on the projects the Athletic Council is requesting.

In other business this morning, Commissioners heard reports from various county departments and agencies, and approved a resolution establishing May as "Operation Beautification Month," in Pitt County.

Mrs. Janice Buck of Greenville, chairman of the county beautification committee told the board that Gov. James Holshouser has proclaimed May as beautification month in North Carolina and said the county program will operate "in conjunction with state efforts," to clean up sightly areas in Pitt.

Pertaining to the "Orange Spot" in your column April 29, I would like to know if a pine could live through this fungus and what will happen to oak if they contract the disease. Must you destroy or dispose of a tree to keep it from spreading to other pines and oaks? B. H.

A pine seedling probably will die if it contracts the fusiform rust fungus written about in our Apr. 29 column, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent Henry Riddick said. A larger pine probably will not, but will be weakened in this spot, so it could be broken off in a high wind. Oaks are only intermediate hosts and are in no way permanently affected, he said. Any time you remove an infected tree from a stand of pines, you're lessening the chance of your other trees' having the fungus, though, of course, the range of the disease is such that, no matter how careful you are your trees could get it from your neighbors'. Obviously the disease does not discriminate and will go on to another pine once it leaves the oak leaves.

This time of year, the disease may be recognized by brilliant orange spots on limbs or trunks of pine trees.

COURT INJUNCTION

Hotline has received a letter from the Clairiol Company of New York, giving us further information concerning an inquiry written up in Hotline April 8. They sent one of our readers a refund and a free bottle of shampoo after they were unable to honor a special offer for a $3.49 terrarium.

They told us that Rigsby Hollow Corporation, a commercial nursery in Potosi, Wisc., was handling the offer. After some 30,000 orders had been filled, the supplier fell short and a high percentage of the terrariums shipped did not meet Clairiol's standards. Therefore, the promotion was canceled and some refunds were sent out along with free bottles of shampoo. However, orders were going directly to Rigsby Hollow and Clairiol did not feel the nursery was cooperating, a court injunction was obtained ordering Rigsby Hollow to deliver to Clairiol a list of those persons whose checks had been deposited and whose orders had not been sent. Now orders are being forwarded to Clairiol in batches, resulting in delay in processing refunds. "This has been a difficult and unhappy experience for Clairiol," Vice President for Public Relations Jack Shor wrote Hotline. "We shall be happy to provide satisfaction for any other disappointed terrarium orderers about whom you may contact us."

Anyone else who responded to this offer and failed to have it filled may write Jack Shor, V.P. Public Relations, Clairiol, 345 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Jenkins Takes Issue On Caldwell Call For Delay

ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins has taken issue with retiring N.C. State University Chancellor John Caldwell, who called for delaying the ECU Medical School during the weekend.

Caldwell spoke out against funding the ECU Medical School and the N.C. State Veterinary School, as well as the increases in aid to private colleges, with student tuition increases being proposed at the same time.

Caldwell spoke out against funding the ECU Medical School and N.C. State Veterinary School, as well as the increases in aid to private colleges, with student tuition increases being proposed at the same time.

Caldwell said that "if these expansions were either postponed or the capital requirements financed through a bond issue, these impositions (quality reductions and tuition increases), which fall heavier on North Carolina State University than on any other institution, would not be necessary."

Jenkins said this morning,

"I have utmost respect for Chancellor Caldwell as a university administrator and wish him well in his retirement; However, I do not quite understand his suggesting the delaying both the School of Veterinary Medicine and the ECU School of Medicine as if they are in the same stages of development and can be readily stopped."

"Surely, he of all people must realize the difference. The School of Veterinary Medicine is an idea heading for federal court adjudication and is hardly more than in the planning stages, an idea on paper. By contrast, the School of Medicine at East Carolina has been more than ten years in planning and has actually been in operation for the past three years with faculty on hand. Also, as he well knows, the Pitt Memorial Hospital is now under construction and this is the appropriate time to add the medical school wing at the least possible expense to the state."

"To delay the medical school would obviously cost far more in the long run than to complete it now. The good Lord has told us, he who puts his hand to the plow should not look back. Our only course now, it seems to me, is to move ahead and be done with it."

Sec. Kissinger Before Probers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger appeared today before the Rockefeller commission as it entered the final month of its investigation of CIA domestic activities.

Kissinger followed former CIA Director John A. McCone, who was to reappear before the panel after the secretary of state completed his session. In addition to Kissinger and McCone, Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger and former national security adviser Walt W. Rostow were scheduled to testify.

United States probably will not or whether it thinks that we certainly cannot," Kissinger said.

"I do not believe that Hanoi would have sent 19 of its 20 divisions south if these two things hadn't happened," he added.

When it became clear that a gradual erosion of morale was occurring in South Vietnam, "we tried very hard to get negotiations started," Kissinger said.

Former South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Van Thieu made proposals on a number of occasions to get peace talks started unconditionally, Kissinger said. "But once the North Vietnamese realized what the trends

Kissinger Cites 2 Factors That Helped Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says the United States will watch the actions of the new Communist regime in Saigon before deciding whether to recognize it diplomatically.

"We now have to see what the conduct of this government is internationally and partially domestically," Kissinger said in a taped interview with Barbara Walters broadcast today on NBC's "Today" show.

"For example, we know that in Cambodia very tragic and inhuman and impoverished things are going on," Kissinger said. "We don't regret not having recognized Cambodia immediately."

Kissinger also said he doubts that Hanoi would have staged its successful military drive on Saigon if Watergate had not sapped presidential power and Congress had not passed the war powers act.

"In January '73 we did not foresee that Watergate would sap the executive authority of the United States to such a degree that flexibility of executive action inherently would be circumscribed," Kissinger said.

"We did not foresee that the Congress would pass a law which prohibited us from enforcing the Paris agreement and while we probably might have done nothing anyway, it makes a lot of difference for Hanoi whether it thinks the were, they blocked all negotiations and went for a military solution," said Kissinger.

The secretary also defended the Ford administration's refusal to reveal the contents of a January 1973 letter in which former President Richard M. Nixon promised Thieu the United States would use full force to punish any violations of the Paris peace agreement.

"If we begin revealing the contents of letters, simply because a senator, on top of it a presidential candidate, but quite apart from this, a senator alleges that there is something in these letters, then presidential correspondence will lose its private character," Kissinger said.

Younger Set Should Keep Gifts Impersonal

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Please say a word about teenage boys who buy their girl friends expensive, extravagant gifts. Our daughter received a stereo player from her boyfriend at Christmas, and now she feels obligated to date him exclusively even though she would like to date others. She's 17 and he's 18.

It isn't fair to her boyfriend, either, since he can't possibly know whether she dates him because she wants to or because she feels she has to.

Please stress how important it is for young people to keep their gifts inexpensive and impersonal.

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'll say a word. And the word is "no" to extravagant gifts between teenagers. Your daughter's experience is not unique.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died suddenly. He was only 57 and in the best of health. I am 47.

A business associate and good friend of his flew in for the funeral, but I was in such a state of shock I can scarcely remember seeing him.

Later, I received a lovely letter from him expressing his sorrow. He wrote: "When things settle down, why don't you come to Florida as my houseguest for a long weekend? He gave me some alternate dates to choose from, so I knew he was sincere.

Well, I chose a date and I went. This man is a charming, well-to-do bachelor, who is 69 but doesn't look it. He has a gorgeous home that is well-staffed, a beautiful boat and a great social life (but no woman in his life from what I could see).

The closest he came to a romantic gesture was saying, "If I were 20 years younger, I'd ask you to marry me." Abby, I'd marry him in a minute, anyway.

He's been seven months since my husband's death. Do you think this man was serious? Was that a proposal? If so, how can I get him to repeat it?

WILLING

DEAR WILLING: You missed the boat. You should have told him (very quickly) that the age difference didn't matter. And if that was indeed a proposal, you'll hear from him again.

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with Rich Tramp, but even a "Tramp" has more class than a "Bumb," which I have been for the last six years.

It's amazing how many variations on the name new acquaintances will come up with to avoid calling me "Bumb"; they prefer to believe that I've mispronounced it or that they've misunderstood it.

I teach English, and it's funny when my students use "bumb" on their compositions when they mean "bum."

My only consolation is that I chose my name. What a "bumber"!

Affordable Art For Couples

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Walls are generally the last thing to be decorated in newlyweds' houses or apartments.

Wall decorations are not necessarily expensive, especially if you buy limited editions of graphics by recognized artists whose value is likely to increase with the passing of time. Most such works are in contemporary styles—abstract, pop, op, hard edge—that complement modern furnishings and give a mixed-period chic (popular with professional decorators) to period furnishings.

Prices run from $75 on up into the thousands for newlyweds with generous wedding checks. Simple but attractive framing such as welded aluminum will add $30 to $70, according to size.

"Andy Warhol's flower prints originally sold at $250 apiece and now sell for $6,000," said Richard Solomon, president of New York's prestigious Pace Editions. "But speculation on prints is not what it's all about. We try to give people a chance to enjoy the contemporary image by good artists. Since we are aiming at young people of modest means, we try to price things between $100 and $300. For the mass market there are posters, which cost even less."

Graphics are original works of art, unique in originality but not in availability. The artist either operates the press which makes the print or supervises the pulling of the print.

Lithographs, silk screen prints, serigraphs, etchings, collotypes and other types of graphics are produced in numbers ranging from 25 to 250; 125 impressions is an average edition. They bear the artist's signature and the sequential number of the print. Plates are destroyed when the limited edition is completed.

Graphics should be bought from reliable galleries, department store art departments, and framers who know the difference between a limited edition and a reproduction that can be reprinted endlessly. There also are collectors' groups that operate like a print-of-the-month club. A pioneer club was the Original Print Collectors Group Ltd. in New York.

"We price our prints at least 20 to 30 per cent lower than most galleries because of the volume of buying and selling," said Bruce L. Whyte, the group's founder. "We have eliminated middlemen and deal directly with the artists. We guarantee our prints, and a purchaser can always return them and get back the original price."

Many galleries, collectors' clubs and graphic workshops will mail catalogues of available graphics with a current price list. Some prices include framing but usually not.

The graphics department catalogue of the Martha Jackson Gallery here offers more than 100 different prints by such big names in modern art as Johns, Lichtenstein, Sam Francis, Appel, Albers, Dine and Anuszkiewicz.

Artario, a project of the Ontario Council for the Arts, sells by mail order a boxful of prints, modular sculptures and other objects by 21 Canadian artists.

Posters come in limited editions, signed by the artist, and regular unsigned poster editions. They take up lots of wall space and usually abound in color.

Many of the test designet result from the List Art Posters Program. It commissions major artists to design posters for important events sponsored by art museums and other cultural institutions. Most cost less than $50 and some, as little as $10—for Picasso, Ernst, Dubuffet, Leger and Mondrian.

"Most people have to replace the junk they bought for their walls when they started out in marriage," said Solomon. "They become more affluent and, although they may not move on to paintings, they'll acquire graphics. Why not start out with graphics and be ahead of the game?"

"And there's prestige in being a collector. A collector is someone who buys a second print because he liked his first."

Many Americans Frustrated By Vietnam Outcome

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer
The guns are silent and few are sorry for that.
But to a nation accustomed to celebrating peace with ticker tape, the war in Vietnam ended, in the minds of many Americans, only in disillusionment, frustration, anger, confusion.

"A senseless tragedy," said Constance Gordon, a Chicago librarian, interviewed after church services. "More than 55,000 killed and hundreds of thousands wounded — what do you say to that? Senseless tragedy is the only way to put it."
"I breathed a sigh of relief when it was finally over," said

Richard Scott, a 33-year-old telephone company executive from Omaha. "But it was a sad sigh. Even with the kind of effort we gave, it was all really to no avail."
Those were the fundamental feelings of scores of their countrymen questioned at random by The Associated Press at their jobs and homes and churches in cities and towns and villages across the land.

Some, utterly drained by the 12-year Indochina experience, were too benumbed even to follow closely the daily accounts of the fall of Saigon; a Vietnam veteran in Philadelphia, preoccupied with his own problem of unemployment, was not aware a day later that the war had ended.

Others, as if reflecting the promise of spring after winter's rains and ruins, preferred to look not behind but ahead with hope.

"It is time that as a country we begin anew, that our center-nial and the end of our involvement in Southeast Asia may offer us an opportunity to recapture the ideals upon which our country was founded," said The Rev. William Pegg in a Sunday sermon at the Ontario Street Methodist Church in Buffalo, N.Y.

Edgar Crossman, a New York stockbroker, had been a staunch supporter of that involvement. "But I'm past feeling defeated," he said. "I would rather look to the future."

The underlying national mood — dejection tempered by optimism — had, however, a number of shadings.

To those whom the war touched personally the end was especially cruel. Mrs. Howard Donald of Tamaqua, Pa., lost a son. He was 19. "He thought he was doing the right thing and was there for the right purpose," she said. "Now it's all gone down the drain and it hurts. What did he die for?"

Joe Funn, a Wheeling, W.Va., banker, also lost a son, but his frustration was of a different sort.

"Yes, I'm disillusioned, but not bitter," he said. "My wife and I are disillusioned with the government officials who would not allow the military to win the war. That is the tragedy of Vietnam."

Unlike Funn, some who shared his view still harbored bitterness.

"In my opinion, with our failure to win, we dealt a death blow to the democratic way of life," said Richmond, Va., City Councilman Nathan J. Forb, a lumberman. "It was the saddest day of my life when it sank in that we had lost the war in Vietnam."

Azariah Jennings, a 52-year-old father of three, from Peabody, Mass., said he was a hawk during the war and his feelings haven't changed. "What we've done is taken the easy way out. Vietnam represents a lack of will, and it doesn't portend well for the future."

An Air Force veteran in Spokane, Wash.: "We should have blown Hanoi off the map five years ago."

A Dallas housewife: "We made idiots of ourselves."

Curiously, or perhaps not so curiously, persons now claiming to have been opposed to the war all along seemed far in excess of the numbers who actively opposed it during its progress.

"We never should have been there in the first place," was a line tirelessly repeated. When M.A. Duvernay said it, however, he seemed utterly believable.

"We never knew the politics of the war," said Duvernay, a portly, 54-year-old New Orleans postman. "We were like the British in the American Revolution, out there fighting a war we didn't like or understand, getting shot by people in the woods."

Those who did participate in antiwar demonstrations were,

by and large, not inclined toward smugness.

Marriner Eccles, a Salt Lake City banker, said he was one of the first businessmen in his county to oppose the war strongly a decade ago. Now that it is over, he politely declines to comment.

At Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, once the scene of antiwar protest, the campus mood was almost somber. The only thing he really noticed, said University President Warren W. Brandt, was a spontaneous "reaching out to help the 40 Vietnamese students on campus who may have families trapped in Vietnam."

Reaching out to help Vietnamese refugees was, in the nation as a whole, another matter.

A priest from the Archdiocese of Hartford, Conn., gave eight radio and TV sermons during the weekend on "What would Christ do today with the Vietnamese refugees," and a $36,000-a-year Dallas executive, himself a Cuban refugee, had no misgivings about the welcome he would give them.

Others, however, usually citing the current economic downturn, weren't so sure.

"I don't think children in America should be hungry," said William M. Galloway, a Hyattsville, Md., filling station manager whose view represented a sizeable minority. "If you can raise the money for refugees, you should feed the people here."

Auctioneer, Ray Oglesby, will auction off student-made items such as macramé belts and planters, wall hangings, woven pillows, paintings, chalk drawings, block prints, printed scarves and fabrics, pottery, posters, and sculptures. Proceeds will go toward the purchase of art material and a potter's wheel.

The Home Economics Department sponsored a spring fashion show Thursday. Students modeled clothes that they had made themselves.

DHC's JROTC cadets did an outstanding job at their annual Formal Inspection that was held recently. Inspection of ranks, arms, personnel records, and training schedule, a pass and review parade, and a staff briefing were all included in this inspection. The inspection team chose the Second Platoon, Company B, commanded by Second Lieutenant Trent Knight, as the outstanding platoon.

The girls JROTC Drill Team will perform Saturday in the homecoming parade at Pantego.

May Yet Avoid Tuition Boost

A State Senate subcommittee voted last week to drop a proposed tuition increase from $200 to $100 for in-state residents and from $300 to $150 for out-of-state students.

The change was made after UNC President William C. Friday appeared before the subcommittee to urge that all of the tuition increase be dropped.

The UNC president was most concerned following the subcommittee's action. He said he could not accept an increase with many students now on financial aid.

There is still much work to be done on the state budget and it is possible that a tuition increase may be avoided. For one thing the state economy may have already brightened a little, with the unemployment rate showing a decrease.

The state is now getting an accurate reading on the amount of income tax paid by the April 15 deadline, and perhaps this year's tax take may be a little better than anticipated.

If it is found that revenue projections are better than the present dark projections indicate, we would certainly urge the Legislature to reconsider these tuition increases.

Out-of-state tuitions have only recently been raised and further increases almost certainly will mean decreases in numbers of out-of-state students attending state universities. Most authorities agree that having some out-of-state students in state universities is good for the educational process.

The in-state increase can also mean that some young people won't be able to attend college. This could come at a time when the job market simply will not absorb these young adults who would otherwise be in college.

A prime value of public universities is that they allow most people who are capable of doing college level work to attend. Increases in tuition could mean that some young people will be denied this opportunity solely because they don't have the financial means.

Contract Is A Giant Step

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—State officials are frankly open in admitting an element of risk in signing a $405 million contract with a California firm to handle all Medicaid activities in North Carolina.

The hope is, of course, that service to welfare people who qualify for Medicaid will be improved, costs cut, and both the private firm and the state will come out winners.

The risk is that Health Application Systems will not be able to cover all the people who demand service, can't make the money go far enough, and will have to back down on the agreement. If so, the state still recovers a $6 million performance bond posted by the firm; and if the cost goes over the $405 million budgeted for the period May 1, 1975 through June 30, 1977, Health Application Systems is supposed to bear the cost.

The only thing the state can lose, says David T. Flaherty, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, is face: "It took a lot of guts for Jim Holshouser to go out on a limb and be the first governor in the nation to bet into such a private contract," Flaherty said.

A Big Bundle
Actually, the big hope of top state officials is that the pressure of public opinion, and the glimmer of other state contracts similar to the one with North Carolina—and the big bundle to be made on a federal contract down the road if National Health Insurance becomes a reality—will keep the private contractor working hard.

"The people in other states and in Washington are watching this move closely," Flaherty said. Success can mean a pilot system for other states, and for the administration of federal money under any of several national health insurance systems currently being studied by the Congress, and reasonably expected to be enacted in the coming two or three years.

North Carolina now has about 312,000 people eligible for Medicaid. Federal money pays 68 per cent; state money 27.2 per cent; and county money 4.8 per cent.

People receiving money from local Social Services programs under a variety of programs are eligible for Medicaid. Costs have soared as participants were added and medical prices skyrocketed.

In fiscal 1970-71 a total of $93.9 million was spent. Four years later, a total of $181.4 million is budgeted—nearly double, for one fiscal year.

Signing the private contract gets the state out of the business of administering the program, investigating claims, issuing checks, etc. About 150 state employees are being transferred either to the private firm to work, or to other state jobs. Flaherty says the $405 million contract covers a period of 26 months, saving the state $1.5 million off the top; with a potential savings of another $14 million during the period if projections hold true.

Better Techniques
The Health Application Systems people say use of computer technology, riding closer herd on fraudulent claims, guarding against administrative overhead, and using a review system to reduce unneeded hospitalization or extended care can mean full service to North Carolinians at less cost.

The North Carolina Peer Review Foundation, a non-profit corporation largely made up of physicians, has a sub-contract of $3.5 million with Health Application

Systems to conduct that monitoring.

Spokesmen for the California contractor claim that 95 per cent of the money will go for patient care; that administrative costs will run about 3.5 per cent. If claims run more than $405 million, the contractor must pay them.

If claims—plus administrative costs—are less than $405 million then the private firm will keep 25 per cent of the surplus; the state will get 75 per cent back.

This project, Flaherty and Gov. Holshouser hope, will prove the logic of government and private enterprise working together to provide essential service at reduced costs.

North Carolina's pilot program could be history-making says Emil P. Martini, head of the Bergen Brunswig Corp. of Los Angeles, parent firm of Health Application Systems. This could be the prototype for other state efforts, for revamping the Medicare program for all elderly, and the future national health program.

"We're in good position," Flaherty says. "A lot of people are watching... they have to make this work."

INSIDE REPORT

Miscalculation A Blessing

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The wrenching horror of the last American being helicoptered out of Saigon in the dead of a stormy night threatened by enemy fire resulted from American miscalculation of Communist strategy, but that miscalculation saved thousands of Vietnamese lives.

It bought time, however dangerously, for evacuation of South Vietnamese who had worked as allies of the U.S. for 15 years or more and to whom this country owed a debt of honor.

Thus, the miscalculation of Communist strategy in the battle for Saigon at highest levels here and in Saigon turned out as something of a blessing in disguise.

As late as last Monday, the American ambassador in Saigon, Graham Martin, felt the odds were above 50-50 that with final liquidation of former President Nguyen Van Thieu's regime, and his replacement by Gen. Duong Van Minh, Hanoi would stop the unequal military struggle for Saigon and negotiate what amounted to terms of South Vietnamese surrender.

Indeed, secret messages from Martin, a brave and stubborn diplomat who lost a son in the Vietnam war, made this forecast to President Ford; the lull late last week in the battle for Saigon and its suburbs signalled Hanoi's willingness to strike a deal with incoming President Minh allowing the Americans "two to three weeks" to complete the evacuation.

That forecast was but-tressed — but just how much is still unknown — by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's strenuous and highly secret diplomatic approaches to the Soviet Union through Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin here. President Ford and Kissinger were seeking Soviet aid in their effort to do exactly what Martin was trying to do in Saigon: persuade Hanoi to accept negotiated settlement at the ultimate moment of American catastrophe.

What happened next in the ghastly scenario of this country's worst foreign disaster is now history. Not only did Hanoi and its Communist allies in South Vietnam reject the negotiations route, but the Soviet Union failed in any major way to change the course of events, either because of inability to influence Hanoi or because it did not choose to intervene.

Indeed, that result was probably predictable. For days Hanoi had repeatedly raised the ante for negotiating a ceasefire: get rid of the "Thieu clique"; dismantle the military establishment; dismantle the administrative establishment; throw out all American "advisers"; ad infinitum.

In the Pentagon, military commanders showed growing strain over the delays imposed by Martin and Kissinger. Their two highest options for removing the stranded and endangered Americans were to fly them out by commercial aircraft or by special military flights. Both those options, plus Option 3 — special military aircraft plus a sealfit — went down the drain when Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airfield came under heavy rocket fire.

That left only Option 4 — the perilous but successful helicopter escape from downtown Saigon. To the military brass, Option 4 was to be avoided at all costs as carrying unnecessary dangers. In Congress, so infuriated was the Democratic majority by the delay in evacuating Americans that unprecedented restraints were shackled on the President in the hill — still not sent to the Oval Office—financing the evacuation and providing humanitarian aid for Vietnamese refugees.

But Kissinger, fully backed by the President, controlled the timetable. Both he and Martin were deeply motivated by an obligation that angry Congressmen and Senators did not want to think about. That was the American obligation to tens of thousands of Vietnamese who followed Washington's lead and were marked for Communist revenge.

Thus, Martin's cabled messages to Washington predicting Communist agreement on a negotiated ceasefire, together with Kissinger's secret diplomatic approaches to the Russians, became a blessing in disguise, buying time, dangerously but fruitfully. If the Americans had been (Continued on page 5)

JUDGE NOT
Jesus said, "Judge not that ye be not judged." Did Jesus mean by this that we are not to distinguish between the good and evil deeds of other people? Did he mean that we are to take a perpetually neutral position in the struggle between good and evil which goes on in this world?

Certainly not. Jesus meant that we should distinguish between the act and the doer of the act. As Christians and good citizens we have a duty to denounce evil wherever we find it and use both legal and moral suasion to rectify it. But we simply do not know enough about other people to condemn them as persons for evil acts they may have done. We know too little about all the factors entering into the misdeeds of others to put the blame precisely where it belongs.

More specifically, we should not impute evil motives to others. Given the same background or environment, we, in a similar situation, might do something even worse.

You Are What You Eat

WASHINGTON—There is good news for newspaper readers. Recent reports indicate that it may not be long before newsprint can be turned into food. A process now being developed involves extracting the glucose from the cellulose content of newsprint, then feeding the glucose to a batch of edible yeasts, molds or bacteria inside a fermenter. The protein left over would be dried into a powder and used as a nutrient supplement.

Dr. Barry Coombe of Australia has been feeding pellets made from newsprint to sheep, and he says they have been thriving on it.

This will, of course, present a new problem for the printed media. Not only will news reporters and columnists have to worry about how their words will affect the reading public; they also will have to remember that people are going to eat them.

One question is: What news will be more digestible than others? Should you start the morning with a light breakfast of comics or a heavy breakfast of editorials? What wine do you serve with Jack Anderson's column, and would it be a mistake to eat the text of a Henry Kissinger press briefing before going to bed?

Dr. Coombe did not concern himself with the content of the newsprint he fed his sheep, but I believe a lot more research has to be done before we permit human beings to eat their daily newspapers.

We do know that most people get indigestion when perusing their front pages. But we're not sure how their gastric juices would react if they started chewing on them.

Another question which would be raised is, if publishers discovered that there was money to be made from food in their paper, would they insist on their editors sugarcoating the news?

In a few years we could expect a series of cookbooks on how to prepare meals with your daily paper.

The recipes might go something like this:

"Chop up your newspaper until it is finely ground. Add three cups of water and mix into a paste. Then take a Dear Abby or Ann Landers Column and separate the questions from the answers. Beat up the answers and let them stand. Throw the questions away."

"Take a William Buckley column and let it simmer for 15 minutes. Then add a dash of a President Ford speech (not much or your dish will be too bland), a pound of denials by the CIA and season with a hot Herblock cartoon."

Roots Of The Power

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott chided the legislature last week for a spate of bills that he, along with many Republicans, sees as measures designed to strip the power from Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Scott stopped himself short of delivering a lecture on gubernatorial limitations. But he could have.

Ever since North Carolina gained independence, its governors have been constitutionally weak. The initial "stripping" was a reaction against the autocratic rule of royal governors in colonial days.

Most people know that North Carolina's governor, alone among his 50 colleagues, has neither the veto nor the right to succeed himself. But neither of those limitations is as binding as the effect of the "long ballot," or direct election of Council of State members.

Governors run, for the most part, with promises to improve education, law enforcement, insurance regulations, etc. But governors do not have control of those areas. The Superintendent of Public Instruction, the Attorney General, and the Commissioner of Insurance do. Governors have only an indirect power, through budgetary and persuasive efforts. And a Council of State member can always appeal to the legislature if he does not like the governor's budget recommendations for his department.

There are benefits to this, as the early colonists envisioned. A weak executive branch is less prone to abuse. The attorney general is not responsive to bad ideas from the governor's office, as he has been in Washington.

But there is also a loss of accountability since power is shared by so many. An intelligent voter in May, 1972, may have known that Democrat Skipper Bowles favored career education, while Holshouser was cool toward it.

But how many knew how Democrat Craig Phillips, the current superintendent, felt? Or how Carl Eagle, his Republican opponent felt? Yet, the winner of that race has had more to do with formulating educational policy than has the governor.

A few states which used to have long ballots have abandoned them, allowing the governor to appoint virtually every state executive. The idea of doing that in North Carolina is politically infeasible. "You'd just get all the Council of State members mad at you," Holshouser says.

"So, Holshouser and his successor will limp along. The legislature will be buying at their heels, as it did 200 years ago. Efforts such as those introduced this year will have little effect on the governor's real powers, which have developed only in this century and which are not affected by minor stripping bills.

Knowledge, for one thing, is power. The governor, with bureaucratic legions at his behest, can generate more data and knowledge than the legislative branch can assimilate.

So too, in today's world, is access to the media. The governor is the only man in the state with the power to put his views in newspapers and on telecasts all over the state.

Finally, patronage is power. Unless the legislature strips the governor of all appointments, (Continued on page 5)

College Grad Job Outlook Dim

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer
Job prospects for this spring's newest crop of college graduates are dismal. Desperate students are queuing up for cracks at whatever is available, a campus phenomenon that is making college placement officials work harder and longer.

Paul Ginsburg, dean of students at the University of Wisconsin, says it's not unusual for 70 students to be waiting in line each day to discuss job possibilities.

Charles Sunberg, placement director at UCLA, says, "I really don't know what adjective to use to describe the situation. Bad? Worse? It's the worst I've seen in many years."

Only for engineers, accountants and mathematics and science teachers is the employment outlook bright. But even in these areas, the number of job choices is considerably fewer than earlier anticipated.

The College Placement Council, which is headquartered in Bethlehem, Pa., and compiles job offers received by 156 colleges and universities around the nation, says:

"Slim pickings for just about everybody but engineering candidates, and possibly accounting majors. Now, midway through the season, cutbacks appear to have hit engineering as well."

Doug Nichols, placement director at Shippensburg, Pa., State College, says, "The cliché that a college education guarantees you a job is no longer true."

Jerry Richardson, assistant director of career planning at Ohio's Bowling Green State University, blames the recession for the reduction in campus recruiting.

says. "A lot of them aren't going to make any offers until July."

Some college seniors, faced with the dwindling job market further glutted by experienced laid-off workers, are making commitments to seek graduate and doctorate degrees.

A placement spokesman for Georgia Southern College says "many graduates try to expand with a masters degree to give themselves more saleability."

But UCLA's Sundberg sharply disagrees. "Going to graduate school just because you can't find a job is the wrong thing to do," he said. "That's not why a person should continue his education."

Richardson also claims continuing school just compounds the problem.

"If you can't get a job with a bachelor's degree, you can't get a job with a second degree, because many companies can't afford that second degree," Richardson says. He says that liberal arts grads, more than anyone else, are going to have great job hunting difficulties unless they have career goals and change tactics.

Nichols tells students they've got to do a lot more than ever before — be more mobile, more flexible and able to identify the alternatives.

"It is especially difficult for those who are not geographically mobile," says Nancy Gilpin, of the career services office in Philadelphia's Temple University. "If you are able to go to the southern part of the United States, or to some rural areas in other parts of the country, your chances are a little better. For teachers, the East Coast and the West Coast are saturated."

Nichols says, "We're encouraging people to prepare a very thorough search. It's going to take more time and effort to get a good job."

The recipe should serve a family of four, but if you don't have enough sauce you can throw in Evans and Novak for gravy. The important thing is to serve before it gets too sticky."
"The reason I have left myself out of the recipe is I am constantly hearing from readers who say that everytime they read my column they throw up. If reading it can do this, we have to assume eating it could be very hazardous to your health."

No Suggestions For Alternative

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said President Ford "is a very decent, warm human being, but just not providing the leadership" the United States needs. However, the Massachusetts Democrat did not suggest anyone else who might do the job better.

Asked on a WOR-TV program Sunday what qualities a person should possess in order to be a good president, Kennedy replied: "An understanding of history — what this country is about, what you want it to be."

Kennedy did not say and was not asked whether he might reconsider his decision not to seek the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1976.

Two Lawmen Fatally Shot

CORDELE, Ga. (AP) — A state trooper and a city policeman were shot to death in the Cordele police station late Sunday. The trooper was only the second shot to death in the line of duty since the Georgia State Patrol was organized in 1937.

Authorities said the shootings occurred after the trooper arrested a motorist on two charges, including drunken driving, and brought him to the station while the man's wife, mother and brother followed along.

All four persons were arrested after the shooting. No charges were placed immediately.

Killed were trooper James Young, about 38, a native of Fitzgerald recently stationed in Cordele, and Cordele policeman W. R. Haralson.

Bill Wilson, a spokesman for the state patrol, said the only other member of the Georgia State Patrol shot to death in the line of duty was Cpl. Fred Black in 1940.

Wilson said Young stopped the car and brought the driver to the police station in his patrol car while the man's three relatives followed in their car.

"In the police department," Wilson said, "while intoximeter tests were being administered (there was) an argument, a scuffle, a shootout. We believe now (the driver) was able in the struggle to pull the trooper's service revolver and shot the trooper twice, once in the head and once in the chest."

Cordele police said Haralson apparently went to Young's aid and was shot at least twice, once in the head.

The state patrol said the wife and brother were apprehended almost immediately in Cordele. The man and his mother were taken into custody about 40 minutes later by troopers at Perry, some 35 miles north of Cordele on Interstate 75.

Job-Making Funds Ready

WASHINGTON (AP)—Local communities in a three-state area will receive a total of $3.8 million, involving 56 individual projects, from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission for federal funding.

Communities in the Coastal Plains Region of South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia that have high rates of unemployment will receive federal funds for job-creating projects in June, according to the federal chairman of the commission.

Jack Hawke said the goal is "to reduce the impact of unemployment by providing jobs to people as soon as possible."

The Coastal Plains Commission is one of 24 federal agencies participating in the job opportunities program. A total of $125 million will be made available to all participating agencies with from $1.5 million to $3.5 million reserved for the Coastal Plains Commission.

Hawkes said the program is intended to provide financial assistance to stimulate, maintain or expand job-creating activities in areas suffering from unusually high levels of unemployment.

FPC Proposes Desperate Step

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Power Commission has proposed that North Carolina industries short of natural gas next fall be allowed to buy directly from out-of-state producers, at perhaps double or triple the current price.

The FPC won't officially approve or reject the plan for several weeks.

The proposal comes as congressional efforts to get the more state natural gas have apparently bogged down.

State officials contend that federal allocation rules for handling shortages are unfair to North Carolina. The rules give priority to home users. And North Carolina has an above-average share of industrial users, like textile plants, whose supply is cut back first in the event of shortage.

Status Of Legislation Before N.C. Assembly

RALEIGH (AP)—Here is the status of important measures pending before the North Carolina General Assembly:

Presidential Primary—A Senate State Government subcommittee still has before it a House-passed bill to abolish North Carolina's presidential primary.

Utilities—Legislation to expand the State Utilities Commission from five to seven members are near enactment. House concurrence is needed in two Senate amendments before the measure can become law.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Le-noir, introduced a bill last week to broaden the energy role of the Utilities Commission and to create an energy policy council to develop recommendations for a long-term state energy policy.

Auto Insurance—The House passed and sent to the Senate last week a bill that would abolish age and sex as factors in setting auto liability insurance rates. One no-fault insurance bill is pending in a House subcommittee and another is before a Senate committee.

Government—The House Constitutional Amendments Committee is expected to approve a bill this week to amend the state constitution to allow the governor to serve two consecutive terms.

ERA—The House postponed indefinitely last week a proposed amendment to the state constitution which would have provided equal rights between men and women. The action came at the request of the bill's sponsor, Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson. He said he didn't believe he had the 72 votes needed for approval of a constitutional amendment. Still pending is a House bill calling for a referendum on whether voters favor ratification of an equal rights amendment.

Taxes—Bills to repeal the sales tax on food and to increase the income tax in the higher brackets are still pending in the House and Senate finance committees. Also before the Senate Finance Committee is a measure to phase out the manufacturer's inventory tax.

Death Penalty—The Senate Judiciary 1 Committee has taken no action on a bill to substitute life imprisonment for the death penalty.

Mountain Area Management—Legislation to create a 12-member commission to regulate development in North Carolina's mountain area is still pending in Senate and House committees.

Appropriations—Several committees and subcommittees are still going over the proposed state budget for the next biennium in an effort to make reductions totaling $232 million.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Profit taking reined in the stock market's latest advance today, leaving prices mixed in moderate trading.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 4.38 at 844.10 after last week's 36.68-point gain.

Advances maintained a narrow lead over declines, however, on the New York Stock Exchange.

Optimism remained in the market background over the chances for an economic recovery soon. A trade group's survey of purchasing executives at corporations showed a general belief that the recession was bottoming out.

And Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, told financial writers in Washington the slump was at or near the bottom.

But brokers pointed out that an impulse to cash in on some profits was natural after the Dow's rise to a new 10-month high at Friday's close.

Sony was the most active issue on the Big Board, up 1/4 at 10 1/4. A 114,700-share block moved at 10 1/4.

Universal Oil Products fell 4 1/4 to 13 1/4 on news that Signal Cos. $21-a-share offer for 4.3 million UOP shares had been oversubscribed. Signal said it would buy the 4.3 million shares from tendering holders on a pro rata basis.

Signal was off 1/4 at 16 1/4.

Interest rate sensitive issues continued to benefit from the Treasury's announcement late last week of a $5 billion reduction in its borrowing needs. Great Western Financial, for example, was up 1/4 at 16 1/4, and First Charter Financial gained 1/4 to 13 1/4, both in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .10 to 47.08 in the first hour.

The American Stock Exchange market-value index was up .23 at 85.14.

Keating Is Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kenneth B. Keating, U.S. ambassador to Israel and before that a U.S. senator, died today at Harkness Pavilion Hospital in New York, State Department officials said.

Keating, who would have been 75 on May 18, returned from his post in Jerusalem last month suffering from a heart ailment. He was a former ambassador to India and a former congressman from Rochester, N.Y., for nine years beginning in 1946.

Keating's illness coincided with reports that President Ford intended to appoint a high-ranking diplomat to succeed him.

Keating's background was largely political. In contrast to Israel, U.S. ambassadors to Arab capitals are long-time career foreign service officers.

Record High Savings

ATLANTA (AP)—Savings deposit increases at North Carolina savings and loan associations reached a record high of $122.2 million for March, the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta reported. Deposits with the 163 Tar Heel member associations topped the previous high set in March 1972 by $38 million. The figure was $44 million above last year's deposits increase.

The associations reported a total of $240.1 million in new savings while withdrawals amounted to $117.9 million.

The bank said the trend toward increased savings began last year and is expected to result in increased lending. The Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta is the regional reserve bank for savings associations.

Mortgage loan closings for the month amounted to $81.2 million, below the $92.6 million for March of last year.

JIPCHO LIKES APPLAUSE—Ben Jipcho, of Kenya, acknowledges the applause from the crowd Saturday after winning the one and two mile events at the International Track Association meet at Durham. (AP Wirephoto)

Jipcho Needs A Challenge To Hit Potential

By BOB CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—How fast can Ben Jipcho run? The track world may never know. Jipcho showed only a hint of his potential last weekend while winning his accustomed double in the International Track Association's first outdoor meet of the year. His two-mile time was 8:30.6. Two hours later, he won the mile in 3:57.6. Both times were more than respectable. But both were also well short of world records. And world records are what many track observers feel the goateed, stocky Kenyan is capable of shattering.

At 32, Jipcho is in his prime. His stamina and speed seem inexhaustible. In both races Saturday, he entered the last lap slightly ahead of the pack and then looked around to see how wide his margin was.

When someone challenged,

Jipcho picked up the pace another notch. He won both times going away and looking over his shoulder.

"I think the crowd wants close finishes," he explained later. "Running for money doesn't make you run fast. It makes you run first." Jipcho picked up $3,000 for his day's work.

He said he thought he might have run an 8:18 or an 8:20 in the two mile. "I have trained myself to go with any pace. If it had been an 8:10 (world record) pace, I would have done that."

It is unlikely that Jipcho will face the kind of competition that could test him anytime soon. The men who could do it—Filbert Bayi of Tanzania in the mile, Brendan Foster of England in the longer distance—are amateurs. They appear determined to stay that way, at least until after the 1976 Olympics.

Jipcho's best times, 3:52 in the mile and 8:14 in the two-mile, are within a second of the world record in each event. He set them in his last summer of amateur competition.

Open competition, which has stimulated tennis interest, appears years away in the thoughts of the men who rule amateur track and the world's biggest sports spectacle, the Olympics.

Jipcho turned pro after numerous squabbles with amateur officials in his country. He said the money he earns helps support his family of four back in Kenya.

He has won 15 straight races this year on the pro circuit. The only challenge that appears left to him is the possibility of a $100,000 challenge mile in Houston this summer. That might make him run all out. Failing that, there is the possibility he will try a triple—the half mile, mile and two mile—in each meet.

"I would like to try it," he said with a broad grin.

Trying might turn the ITA circuit into the Ben Jipcho Show. The meet Saturday, under an intermittent drizzle, drew a crowd generously estimated by the ITA at 9,500. Far larger crowds have turned out for major international amateur meets in recent years in the same stadium.

Owens' Death Shakes Petty Buddy Baker Wins Rich Winston 500

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer
TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Strapping Buddy Baker came up with a simple formula for breaking his jinx at Alabama International Motor Speedway and then followed it to win the rich Winston 500 Grand National stock car race Sunday.

He was asked prior to the race what it would take to win and he replied: "Beat everybody that's here."

Baker, starting on the pole with the fastest car in the field, had little trouble beating everyone except the grey fox, David Pearson, and the two veterans turned in a stirring finish sprint before Baker took the checkered flag two feet ahead of Pearson.

Baker, a 6-foot-5 charger from Charlotte, N.C., headed off a slingshot attempt by Pearson at the start of the home stretch by moving up on the track in front of Pearson and then throttled it home to keep the lead he had held for 17 laps.

Baker's Ford and Pearson's Mercury both performed without a flaw in a race that had other cars dropping out throughout either because of crashes or because they could not hold up under the fast pace.

The victory, his first at the track, brought Baker $25,425. Pearson, unsuccessful in his attempt to win a fourth-straight Winston 500, went back to Spartanburg, S.C., with $14,800. David Brooks got $9,250 for finishing third.

Richard Petty, king of the stock car circuit, took his car behind the wall after seeing his young brother-in-law killed in a freak accident.

Petty, who ran with the leaders much of the race, pulled in on the 140th lap because of a hot tire and as his crew prepared to put out the fire, a pressurized water tank exploded and killed 20-year-old Randy G. Owens of Randleman, N.C., Mrs. Petty's brother and the father of two sons, suffered a fractured skull as the blast threw him 20 feet into the air.

"He was just a kid and he's got those two little, bitty boys," Petty said. "The horrible part about it is somewhere down the line, it could have been prevented."

"That's really getting close to home," the tearful Petty said.

In contrast to the fatal accident, none of the drivers were hurt despite several flaming crashes on the 2.66-mile trioval at speeds more than 190 miles per hour.

The accidents and various troubles took out all but 17 of the 50 starters by the time Baker crossed the finish line.

Five caution flags cut Baker's average speed to 144.948 m.p.h., a sharp drop from his qualifying speed of 189.947 m.p.h.

There were 52 lead changes among 12 drivers before Baker and Pearson locked up in their 17-lap duel. Pearson was content to draft Baker most of the way, hoping to slingshot past him when it counted.

But, when he tried to go high around Baker coming toward the end, Baker moved up to head him off. Pearson then dropped below Baker and got along side him, but Baker's heavy foot kept him ahead long enough for the victory.

The winner said afterwards that he was thinking: "Oh, Lord, don't let him catch me before I cross the line. I was praying and I was saying, 'He's won over here and I haven't won here.'"

Woody Hayes Happy Over Practice Play

By GEORGE STRODE
AP Sports Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The spring cram course is over for Ohio State's young football players. Their crusty old professor, Woody Hayes, is happy with the results.

The Big Ten co-champions launch their 1975 season with Michigan State, Penn State, North Carolina and UCLA, the reason behind rigorous spring practices.

Hayes, working on his 25th Ohio State team, wore a satisfied look after the Reds, his regulars, chopped up the Whites 54-7 in the school's spring intrasquad game Saturday.

"I'd say our schedule is extremely tough," he said. "That's why we brought our young kids on faster. That's why we scrimmaged so much."

"It was a good spring because we finished on the upswing. You must do that," added the 62-year-old Hayes.

The Buckeyes lost 13 regulars from their 1974 team that won 10, lost 2, shared the conference title with Michigan and lost to Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

So what are the team's problems before the opener Sept. 13 at Michigan State?

Hayes pulled a move that would make his Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin proud by responding: "I'll have to study the pictures today before I answer that."

The Reds pounded the Whites for 505 total yards, 442 of them rushing, committed no major errors and avoided serious injury. "Those were three of our goals in the game," said Hayes.

Converted tailback Bob Robertson, a sophomore-to-be from Barberton, Ohio, punched across for four of the Reds' eight touchdowns. His 55 yards from the fullback spot was more than four times greater than his entire output last fall.

"He wasn't going to beat Archie Griffin out at tailback and he's too good a back. He's getting better. He's up to 210 pounds," said Hayes, listing Robertson as the No. 2 fullback behind injured Pete Johnson.

Griffin rushed for 96 yards in only eight carries, scoring a 38-yard touchdown. Another principal Buckeye weapon, quarterback Cornelius Greene, added 126 total yards and a 40-yard score.

Griffin, Greene and wingback Brian Baschnagel, who had 46 yards in five rushes, played near error-free football.

That pleased Hayes. "A veteran backfield can get careless. They didn't."

The regular defense, shorn of eight starters, was just as impressive, holding the Whites to one yard rushing and only 47 total yards. "The team we had on the second offense wasn't that good though," said Hayes, minimizing the performance of his No. 1 defensive unit.

Levi Jackson of Michigan State led the Spartan eleven in ground gaining last season, averaging 6.2 yards on 153 carries.

Millionth Run By Houston Win Cheers Crampton

Houston's Watson

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Minnesota's Rod Carew and New York's Chris Chambliss were 90 feet away from glory Sunday, but they came up a couple of feet short.

Carew and Chambliss were both tossed out at home moments before Houston's Bob Watson scored major league baseball's one millionth run Sunday. Watson collected $1,000 and a gold watch for his feat. Carew could take consolation in the Twins' 6-3 victory over Kansas City. Chambliss and the Yankees got nothing but an 11-4 pasting from Milwaukee.

"I knew it would have been the one millionth run because the word was relayed from the dugout," said Carew, who was thrown out at the plate by right fielder Al Cowens on a short fly ball in the second inning.

"I don't think it really would have meant that much," Chambliss missed his chance in the fourth when Milwaukee first baseman George Scott caught him trying to score on a grounder.

"I did that to Chambliss? I didn't know that," said Scott. "Poor Chambliss. That's all I can say, man—poor Chambliss. If I knew that maybe I wouldn't have thrown him out...yes, I would have, too."

Elsewhere in the American League, Texas edged California 1-0; Baltimore and Cleveland split a doubleheader, the Orioles winning the opener 11-1 and the Indians taking the nightcap 4-3 in 11 innings; Chicago beat Oakland 5-2, and a Detroit-Boston doubleheader was rained out.

Minnesota got seven scoreless innings of relief pitching from Jim Hughes to hand the Royals their 10th loss in the last 13 games. Hughes surrendered just four hits to earn his first major league victory.

Craig Kuskick homered for the winners and Harmon Killebrew, whose number was retired by the Twins before the game, belted a two-run shot for Kansas City on the first pitch thrown to him.

In Milwaukee, Sixto Lezcano collected four hits and Scott had three as the Brewers ran their winning streak to five games. Milwaukee built a 9-0 lead against three Yankee pitchers after five innings and coasted home. The Brewers lead second-place Detroit by two games in the East Division.

Rangers 1, Angels 0

Jeff Burroughs' fourth-inning home run accounted for the game's only run. Bill Hands, who was ready to quit baseball last year until Texas Manager Billy Martin talked him out of it, held California on five hits through 8 1-3 innings and then got clutch relief help from Jim Umberger and Steve Foucault to preserve the win in the ninth.

Orioles 11-3, Indians 1-4

Al Bumbry and Doug DeCinces collected four hits, including one homer each, as Baltimore routed Cleveland ace Gaylord Perry in the first game to snap a six-game losing streak. Bumbry drove in four runs and DeCinces three. Mike Torrez, 3-1, stopped the Tribe on five hits.

The Indians rallied in the nightcap to win in the 11th inning when Frank Duffy doubled and scored on a single by George Hendrick, his fourth hit of the game. Cleveland's Oscar Gamble and Baltimore's Dave Duncan exchanged solo home runs.

White Sox 5, A's 2

Left-hander Jim Kaat posted his 11th straight victory, his fourth this season, and Jorge Orta hit a double and two singles for the White Sox. Kaat, who hasn't lost since last August, got relief help from Terry Forster in the eighth. Brian Downing homered for Chicago and Reggie Jackson belted one for Oakland.

HOUSTON (AP) — Bruce Crampton came to Houston hoping—not too optimistically—to make the cut for the last two rounds. Now he goes home to Dallas seeking—very enthusiastically—two victories in a row.

"There is no substitute for victory," the veteran Crampton said Sunday after he'd scored by two strokes over challenging Dr. Gil Morgan, a far-sighted eye doctor who decided to take up golf instead of fitting classes after receiving his doctorate from the Southern College of Optometry.

Crampton, an Australian native now living in Dallas, made the cut comfortably on Friday, took the lead from struggling Lee Trevino the next day and scored by two strokes Sunday with a last-round 69 and a 273 total, 15-under-par on the Woodlands Country Club course, a 6,929-yard layout that was hacked out of a South Texas pine woods less than a year ago.

Morgan, now in his second year of tour activity, briefly tied Crampton three times on the front nine of the final round but couldn't stand the pace. Bruce dropped a pair of 15-foot birdie putts coming home that Morgan couldn't match.

"I knew I was close," Morgan said. "I knew I had to make some more birdies, but I just couldn't get them."

He finished with a 70 and second alone—by far the best finish of his brief career—with a 275 total. Joe Inman, 67-276, and John Schroeder, 71-278, were next with Tom Kite, Larry Nelson, Eddie Pearce and 47-year-old Lionel Hebert grouped at 279. Kite had a 68 in the hot, humid weather, Hebert 69, Nelson 70 and Pearce 71.

Trevino, the leader through the first two days, never really got in the chase after opening the final round four strokes back. He played his last round in 74—147 for the last two rounds—and finished well back at 282.

Arnold Palmer had a closing 69 for 289. Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller, Gary Player and Tom Weiskopf did not compete.

North-South Play Begins

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The North and South Amateur golf tournament opens today with 128 hopefuls, including defending champion George Burns of Port Washington, N.Y., competing for the prestigious championship.

Burns, a member of the U.S. Walker Cup team and the low amateur at the 1975 Masters Tournament, was one of 42 golfers exempt from weekend qualifying for the 36-hole event.

Other top contenders include Curtis Strange of Virginia Beach, Va., the national collegiate champion from Wake Forest and Bill Campbell of Huntington, W.Va.

During the weekend, 213 golfers competed for the 86 remaining spots over the No. 1 and No. 4 courses at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Henri deLozier of Silver Springs, Md. won the qualifying medal by a one-stroke margin with a 36-hole total of 143.

Tied for second were Robert Morrison of Fayetteville, N.C.; Tom Proben of Detroit; and Steve Barnett of Anderson, Ind.

David Thore of Reidsville, N.C., the first round co-leader with 68, shot a 77 on the No. 4 course and qualified with a 145 total.

Paul Desjardins of Miami Shores, Fla., who shared the first day lead, fumbled to an 82 on No. 4 and earned a berth at 150.

Sixteen men who shot 154 tied for the last four places.

Bruce Crampton of Australia set a Masters record when he registered four eagles (two below-par) in the 1974 tournament at Augusta, Ga.

Klein Signs Contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Starting tight end Bob Klein has signed his contract with the Los Angeles Rams, leaving reserve defensive end Phil Olsen as the only man on the roster who has played out his option.

The National Football League team announced Sunday that Klein had signed a multi-year pact, but gave no other details of the contract. The seven year veteran from Southern Cal caught 24 passes for 336 yards and four touchdowns in 1974.

Klein and Olsen became free agents when they played out their options and did not sign with the team by the May 1 deadline.

Olsen has asked to be traded to a team where he can play regularly.

Harvard Ready For Saturday

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard's heavyweight and lightweight crews appear ready for the Eastern Sprints Regatta Saturday at Princeton.

The Crimson heavies, unbeaten in three races, easily defeated Penn and Navy Saturday, winning the Adams Cup for the fourth consecutive year.

The Harvard lights also scored an easy victory in defeating Princeton and Yale in the 50th Goldthwait Cup competition Sunday.

Mike Garman figures to get a chance to start with the St. Louis Cardinals this spring. He broke in last season by winning seven of nine decisions in relief.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Olympian Marshal Avener and Peter Korman, a sophomore at Southern Connecticut State College have qualified for the U.S. Gymnastics Federation national tournament.

Eleven men competed at a two-day eastern regional tournament held at Temple University over the weekend.

Eagles' Guard Faces Surgery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles' guard Wade Key is scheduled to undergo surgery this week on his left knee.

Key, a six-year veteran from Southwest Texas State, was hurt during the team's annual three-day spring training camp.

The Eagles also announced Saturday the signings of two players, guard Mark Ellison and tight end Keith Kreple.

Kreple, 24, was the Eagle's fifth draft choice in 1974 with the World Football League Jacksonville Sharks. He's 6-foot-3 and 222 pounds.

Ellison, 26, was a 10th-round draft choice of the New York Giants for the 1972 and 1973 seasons. The Pittsburgh native is 6-foot-2 and 245 pounds.

Buccaneers Pound Jollie

The Buccaneers pounded out 24 hits in trouncing Jollie 15-1 here Sunday in semi-pro action at the Pitt Fair Grounds.

J.C. Daniels' home run capped a three-run outburst in the first inning as the Bucs scored all they needed to win. Daniels added another home run in the sixth inning while Leroy Ross slammed a homer in the third.

After the three-run first, the Bucs added single tallies in the third and fourth innings, scored two in the fifth, three in the sixth, four in the seventh, and wrapped up the scoring with one run in the ninth.

Jollie picked up its only run in the seventh inning and only managed three hits for the afternoon off winning pitcher Doug Cayton.

Cayton also helped himself with the bat, pounding out five hits in six trips to the plate to share team hitting honors with Danny Singleton who had five hits in five trips. Leroy Ross added four hits for the winners.

The Bucs are now 5-0 for the season while Jollie is 1-4.

There's a Lasso tank-mix that's right at home on your soybean fields.

For soybean growers, Lasso is the herbicide to start with. By itself, Lasso controls many annual grasses, including fall panicum and crabgrass. And some broadleaf weeds.

What's more, Lasso doesn't carry-over, and that makes it a good working partner in any labeled tank-mix. Which tank-mix is right for you? For medium soils with relatively low organic matter, Lasso plus Lorox® will help you control common ragweed, foxtail, smartweed, and pigweed. And you don't incorporate Lasso plus Lorox.

On the other hand, if your soybeans need relief from cocklebur and annual morningglory, Lasso plus Dyanap® or Lasso plus Premerge could be what you've been looking for. They both cut down on cocklebur and annual morningglory competition. Again, no incorporation.

Anyway you look at it, Lasso is the herbicide to start with. It's right at home on your soybean fields.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ10943 ♡KJ92 ♦543
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1NT Dble. 3 ♠
What action do you take?

A.—Pass. By now, you are probably beginning to regret that you opened this hand, for your partnership is treading in very dangerous waters. However, if you were to act now, you would be showing a hand of considerably better than minimum strength. Let partner have the next word, and then you can decide what action to take.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K87 ♡5 ♦KJ9542 ♠AQ7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Three diamonds. We hesitate to jump to three clubs with only three-card support. If partner persists with three no trump, we will be content. If he makes a strength-showing bid of three hearts, we will again settle for the no trump game. But if he makes any other bid, we will support clubs next.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K106 ♡KQJ5 ♦J7643 ♠7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 1NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. Once partner has shown a minimum there is no future in this hand, and it is probably unlikely that you have a better spot. Since partner would have strained to introduce a four-card major suit, the best you could hope for in hearts would be a 4-3 fit.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J62 ♡5 ♦KQ105 ♠K8742
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
4 ♠ Pass Pass 4NT
Pass 5 ?
What action do you take?

A.—Pass quickly! There are an awful lot of hearts unaccounted for. At the moment, the opponents are hardly likely to be in their best spot, and if you double someone might just try to improve the contract.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A65 ♡J762 ♦AKQJ7 ♠A
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♠ Dble. Pass 1 ♠
Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid three diamonds. You have an extremely powerful hand, and you can convey that information to partner by following your takeout double with a jump shift. While this bid is not forcing, partner will bid again on the smell of an oil rag. If he rebids his spades, raise to game.

Q.6—As South, not vulnerable, you hold:
♠J10 ♡AQJ9 ♠Q8 ♠J10652
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠
Pass 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠
Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. With your 11 HCP and good intermediates, you should make another effort to reach game. Since partner is unlikely to hold four hearts, we prefer this action to a rebid of hearts because it shows the all-round strength of our hand.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK10 ♡AQ82 ♦762 ♠Q5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Two hearts. You have the count to rebid two no trump, but you should avoid making that bid with one suit completely unstoppered. All you can do is rebid your suit and wait to see what action partner takes.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A876 ♡J10942 ♦982 ♠J
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ 3 ♠
Dble. Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—If you expect partner, who passed originally, to have enough strength to defeat three clubs, you have considerably more faith than we do. Your hand is almost useless defensively, and your only trick is likely to duplicate values in partner's hand. For those who like to look after their pocketbooks in these days of spiraling inflation, we strongly recommend a strategic retreat to three spades.

Wild Hogs Learn To Swim In Park

SILVER SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Although they don't have the grace of an Esther Williams or the speed of a Mark Spitz, there is a group of swimmers at this central Florida nature preserve that is setting its own record.

"They" are a group of wild hogs that have been trained to swim, something that is virtually unknown in the world of the swine. Hogs can't swim, it is said, because if they tried they would slash their own throats with their sharp hooves. These hogs obviously don't know that. Instead, they spend half their day in the water, swimming out to the boats that cruise the Silver River, waiting for the boat captains to toss them slices of white bread. Whole families swim together, from a 400-pound boar to a mother hog and her litter of piglets.

It all started several years ago when Leon Cheatom, a gamekeeper, decided to try to coax the wild hogs out of the forests and closer to the river, so that tourists would be able to see them from the boats. He too believed that hogs couldn't swim. But once he succeeded in getting them to feed at the water's edge, which in itself took months of careful planning, Cheatom started tossing bread in the water to see if they would at least get their feet wet. Timidly, the hogs would wade into the river to retrieve the food, each time going deeper and deeper. Many months later, to Cheatom's great surprise, several of the hogs plunged into the river and swam up to his boat.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Heat from the sun's rays reduced fuel costs for bulk curing tobacco by at least 10 percent in a preliminary test last summer on a Johnston County farm.

The test, supported by the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station, indicated that fuel savings as high as 20 percent could be achieved if weather conditions were favorable.

Rupert W. Watkins, an extension specialist in biological and agricultural engineering at North Carolina State University, said he completed four curings in a standard bulk barn equipped with a reinforced panel roof made of clear plastic.

"We used 10 percent less fuel in this barn than in a similar bulk curer with conventional roof," Watkins said. "If there had been more hot, sunny days during these curings, the savings in fuel would have been considerably larger."

For the solar heat test, Watkins removed the metal roof from the barn, put down a layer of black tar paper, installed 2 by 10 inch rafters, and placed the plastic greenhouse-type panel roof on top of the rafters.

"The clear plastic let the sun shine through onto the tar paper, which absorbed the sun's rays and broke them up into heat," Watkins said. "The black paper is a perfect absorber of solar rays, causing the air between the rafters to become heated."

Graduated air ducts were installed to channel the solar heated air along the ridge row and toward the furnace at the rear of the barn. Solar heat and furnace heat merged at the fan which forced hot air through the bulk-packed tobacco.

"The ducts were arranged so that the solar air flow could be cut off when desired," the N. C. State University specialist said. "At some phases in curing you don't want outside air—just recirculation."

Total cost of the alterations to utilize solar heat was about $400, or approximately 40 cents per square foot of roof, Watkins said.

Many greenhouse operators utilize plastic fiber panels as roofing, to take advantage of heat and light from the sun. The panels are reinforced for longer life—up to 10 years or so.

The fuel savings from supplemental solar curing may be marginal at this time in terms of dollars, but if the time ever comes when a person can't get energy, solar heat might look a lot more attractive.

Watkins said a greatly enlarged clear plastic roof, acting as a solar energy collector, possibly could provide enough heat to eliminate the need for conventional curing fuel.

"Part of the fuel savings could come through stopping the heat loss through the barn roof or ceiling," Watkins said. "The solar collector on top of the barn recaptures heat lost through the plywood subroof of a conventional bulk barn. Even at night you would normally be saving this heat lost through the roof."

Final Days Of Argument

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Final arguments begin today in a $1 million federal court lawsuit against former White House aide H.R. Haldeman and others, accused of unlawfully barring 18 young persons from a 1971 rally attended by President Nixon.

Haldeman, who served as White House chief of staff, has not appeared since the trial began April 21. He gave a deposition here last summer, in which he invoked the Fifth Amendment on all questions relating to the case.

The suit alleges that potential dissenters were kept from the Oct. 15, 1971 rally honoring evangelist Billy Graham. The plaintiffs claim they were forcibly evicted or told their tickets were counterfeit.

Former White House counsel John W. Dean III released a memo during the Senate Watergate hearings of 1973 in which Haldeman allegedly approved plans for security at the Charlotte rally.

The plaintiffs contend that White House advance men devised a plan for keeping Nixon opponents from Presidential rallies by telling them their tickets were invalid.

Attorneys for three former White House advance men named in the suit confirmed the existence of the plan, but said it was used because local authorities had information that Since pine trees are used extensively in landscaping homes in the county, there has been much interest recently in pine tree diseases. The two most prominent diseases now noticeable are Fusiform Rust

(with the distinctive orange gall) and Needle Cast (which gives a dying appearance to the tree).

Fusiform Rust: A fungus disease which affects mainly loblolly and slash pines, appears as an elongated, swollen gall on the trunk or branches of the tree. The bright, orange, powdery masses that appear on the surface of the gall in the spring, is a dead give-away for this disease. The life cycle of the disease is fairly simple; the orange spores are blown from the pine tree to an intermediate host, an oak. Within a couple of weeks, the spores are blown back to nearby pines. There is no damage to the oak tree host and spores may travel for two miles to complete their life cycle.

If the gall is located on the trunk of a small seedling, the tree may die or become bushy and stunted, or the tree may break along the gall. If the gall is on the branch, it may girdle and kill the branch, or it may move into the main trunk. Usually there is little damage except more spores are produced to increase the disease. If you have this disease on small trees, we suggest that you cut the tree and replant with a more resistant species. If the gall appears on a branch 8 to 12 inches from the trunk, it can be pruned off with little chance of the fungus growing into the trunk. All wounds should be painted with a tree wound paint.

Needle Cast: Attacks most species of pines. Symptoms: The old needles turn brown from tip to base and shed in the spring, leaving only new growth. This disease attacks the lower branches first and moves up through the tree. The only damage to the tree is the stunting of growth of young trees, but little damage is done to older trees.

There are no known control measures for this disease other than the removal of the needles as soon as they fall. Fertilizing the defoliated tree will help promote new growth.

anti-war protestors would try to disrupt the rally.

Charlotte Police Chief J.C. Goodman testified that he knew nothing of the plan. Secret Service agent C.V. Lyda said agents knew of the plan but told the White House staffers "we would have nothing to do with it."

Rock Concerts 'Dangerous'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rock concerts can be dangerous to your hearing, says the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Noise levels produced by rock musicians with the aid of high amplification are much higher than those considered safe for prolonged exposure, says J.A. Bell of the AMA's Department of Environmental Public and Occupational Health.

At the sound levels of some rock bands within the walls of a theater some of the audience could suffer permanent hearing loss, Bell declares.

N.C. Traffic Took 14 Lives On Weekend

By The Associated Press
Fourteen persons died in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend.

The toll for the year rose to 422, or 62 fewer than at the similar time last year.

There were two double-fatality accidents. The victims of one of them were Mrs. Hanson Towery, 26, of Shelby, and her 22-month-old daughter, Connie. The Cleveland County Sheriff's Department said that a man from the Waco vicinity a few miles from Shelby, Weldon David Borders, 47, whose car collided with the Towery vehicle, had been charged with manslaughter, hit and run involving personal injury, and driving under the influence. The accident happened near Waco.

Victims of the other double-fatality accident, near Harmony in Iredell County, were Jan Johnson, 40, of North Wilkesboro, and her 13-year-old daughter, Stacy.

Killed in other road accidents were: Charles O. Jenrette, 5, of Shallotte.

David Fisher, 25, of Beula-ville in Duplin County.

Richard C. Spruce, 22, of Springfield, Pa., whose car hit a tree in Buxton on the Outer Banks.

Otto Frank Milligan, 64, of Sanford.

James Steve Jacaruso, 32, of Greensboro.

Thomas Harold Ledford, 23, of Franklin.

Andrew Lee Chesson, 19, of Washington, N.C.

John Harris Wilson, 64, of Charlotte.

A Springfield In Many States

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP)—The next time someone tells you he's from Springfield, don't take it for granted that he means Illinois. According to the 1975 Rand McNally Road Atlas, there's a city or town named Springfield in 20 states of the U.S., the most for any one name. The runner up is Washington. There's one of those in 17 states, in addition to the one in the District of Columbia.
