

Thailand Impounds Cambodian Gunboat

By The Associated Press
Cambodian navy men who sailed a 175-foot subchaser to Thailand seeking asylum claim theirs was the vessel that captured the American freighter Mayaguez last week, officials in Bangkok and Washington report.

In southern Laos, student demonstrators took two Americans from their homes in Savannakhet in a resurgence of unrest in the Mekong River town where 12 Americans are detained, a senior U.S. official in Vientiane reported.

The Thai navy, in a one-sentence statement, said it had impounded a gunboat flying the flag of the old Cambodian government and disarmed and detained 10 crew members.

The fleeing Cambodians were reported to have arrived at Satthip, on the Gulf of Thailand, last Thursday, the day U.S. Marines and planes rescued the Mayaguez and her crew of 39.

The Thai government was keeping the crew under wraps in an attempt to keep from angering the new Communist government in Cambodia.

A Phnom Penh broadcast thanked Thailand for "supporting the Cambodian struggle against foreign intrusions" by staging anti-American demonstrations in Bangkok over the Mayaguez incident.

The new Cambodian regime also sent a cable to the Thai government saying it would be willing to normalize relations with Thailand and denied that it had any designs on Thai territory.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman denied that the U.S. Navy would make a search for the bodies of 16 men missing in the military operation that recovered the Mayaguez. They were lost in the three helicopters that were shot down, and the commander of the Marine landing force indicated Monday that an attempt might be made to recover the bodies.

The Pentagon promised a "preliminary final count" today of American casualties in the operation. The first official report last week said one man was killed, 13 were missing and 22 were wounded. On Sunday the figures were raised to five killed, 16 missing and 70 to 80 wounded, but on Monday the number of wounded was tentatively reduced to 49.

The seizure of the two Americans in Savannakhet was reported to Vientiane, the Laotian capital. Twelve Americans and six other foreigners have been under loose house arrest in the town since a student mob sacked the U.S. Agency for International Development compound last Wednesday.

"The situation has turned sour again," an official of the U. S. Embassy in Vientiane said.

However, he said he did not think the lives of the Americans were in danger.

The Savannakhet students and demonstrators in Vientiane and Luang Prabang have demanded an end to U.S. aid, and the Embassy today offered to "modify, reduce or eliminate" economic assistance to Laos. It asked the Laotian government, which is now dominated by the Communist Pathet Lao, for a clear-cut statement of its policy toward the aid program.

The Laotian government has been saying since last weekend that it was sending a government delegation to Savannakhet to negotiate with the students, but so far the officials have not left. The U.S. Embassy said there were no plans to try to rescue the Americans.

Thousands At Charlotte For Celebration

By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Freedom Park, decked out in red, white and blue bunting, took on the air of a quiet Fourth of July, church picnic and county fair rolled into one today as thousands of persons marked the 200th anniversary of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

Coming by the hundreds, youngsters started arriving at the park several blocks from Charlotte's downtown business district soon after dawn to be on hand for the all-day session of music, religion and speech-making highlighted by a midday appearance by President Ford.

As the morning grew on, more adults joined the throng, filling the public seats erected in front of a lake-locked bandshell from which Ford was to speak. The crowd overflowed to the grassy hills of the park.

Officials said 100,000 persons were expected.

The late arrivals included two groups of two to three dozen persons, some of whom carried signs that included the statements: "U.S. Labor Party, Impeach Rockefeller Now," and "Economic Democracy." They moved through the crowd quietly passing out a few pamphlets that listed quotes from writers of the Revolutionary War era, and then took seats on the hills overlooking the bandshell.

One protest spokesman, Marvin Sparrow of Charlotte, said in response to a question as to what they planned: "We are all here celebrating the revolution, aren't we?"

Sparrow was one of the plaintiffs in a civil suit by several young persons who contended they were illegally excluded from a 1971 rally in Charlotte that was attended by then President Nixon.

Spectators wandered through the park during the morning, listening to high school musical groups, watching dancers and, for the most part, quietly observing.

Concession stands scattered through the park were doing a brisk business in the hot, muggy weather. Perhaps the most visible item was a giant, hot-air balloon that floated over the middle of the lake. The balloon, emblazoned with the slogan of a hot dog restaurant, was anchored to the shore of the lake.

Identify Father

TERRA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — A brother and sister say it took 22 years and an international incident to locate the seafaring father they claim is Charles T. Miller, captain of the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez.

"I tried to get hold of him a number of times like when I got married and when my two children were born," James T. Miller said in an interview Monday. "Now he's got six grandchildren he doesn't know about."

The 34-year-old electrician said he and his mother recognized the captain's voice and face in a television broadcast Saturday after Cambodia released the Mayaguez crew.

"We compared old photos to pictures in the papers," he added. "He's older now, but it's him. No doubt about it. My sister and I are both excited and want to talk to him."

His 28-year-old sister, Cheryl Miller Pedersen, said, "I didn't even know if he was living. When I was born, he and my mother were divorced."

"I was five or so the last time I saw him," she recalled. "He took my brother and me to an Oakland department store and told us to buy anything we wanted for our Christmas presents."

"There's no bitterness towards him," she added. "Things like this happen when people get divorced."

Wiseman Sentenced In Branch Shooting Case

Harold Payne Wiseman, charged with murder and conspiracy to murder in connection with the March 29, 1974 shooting of Lynwood Branch was handed a 7 to 10 year prison sentence in Pitt County Superior Court yesterday.

Wiseman pled guilty to the conspiracy charge and was given the prison term by Judge Joshua James, who dismissed the murder charge against the Virginia man.

Three other persons—including Branch's wife, Connie

Hardee Branch—have been handed prison terms in connection with Branch's death.

Mrs. Branch and Roy Lee Sullivan of Kingston were tried on charges of conspiracy and being accessories before the fact in the death and given life and 10-year prison sentences. Both have appealed those convictions and Mrs. Branch is free on bond pending review of her case by the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE... Greenville fireman work to extinguish a blaze that damaged the Greenville Furniture and Appliance Co. early this morning. The fire according to firemen was confined

Fire Strikes Local Firm

A pre-dawn fire today caused extensive damage to the Greenville Furniture and Appliance Co. at 505 Dickinson Avenue.

Police discovered the blaze and called firefighters about 4:30 a.m. Responding fire units quickly extinguished the fire, which generated intense heat and dense smoke in the building.

Fire officers said the blaze was confined to the rear of the store, although heat and smoke caused extensive damage to the remainder of the building.

The 2,800 square foot building, owned by Mrs. Mildred A.

Taylor, was valued, according to Pitt County Tax Department records, at $10,590. The Greenville Redevelopment Commission is in the process of acquiring the property as part of the Central Business District project.

Richard M. Garris is manager of the furniture firm, which is in the process of re-locating.

Garris told investigators he was in the building a short time before the fire was discovered.

An investigation is under way into the cause of the fire.

$85,000 Offer For Eppes Property Given Turndown

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Reporter
An offer of $85,000 by the Greenville Recreation Commission for the C. M. Eppes School property has been declined by members of the Greenville City School Board.

The property carries an appraised value of $196,500.

Following discussions on this issue in an executive session Monday night, school board members reached a consensus to decline the $85,000 offer as unacceptable.

Considerable time was spent at the regular May meeting of the school board in discussions relative to the school policy on student teaching.

A sizeable delegation of teachers was on hand to express concern about the wording of one section of the policy paper; the section on "Selection of Classroom Supervising Teachers." The wording being questioned reads: "Under normal circumstances a supervising teacher may have the responsibility for no more than one student teacher each year."

Dr. Thomas A. Chambliss, Director of Student Teacher, ECU, was also present. He explained that any teacher in the school system was eligible to apply for a student teacher provided that teacher met the qualifications of having taught for three or more years and was also certified in the field in which he or she was teaching.

Board members informed the teachers it was not the intent of the student teaching policy to deny any qualified teacher from applying for the use of a student teacher for more than one quarter of each school year. (A student teacher is assigned on the basis of a quarter.)

Mrs. Terry Shank noted one fact that had motivated the board to stipulate limitations had been that "some parents are concerned that their child would have as many as three different student teachers in one year to get acquainted with, plus the regular classroom teacher. It is felt this could prove to be a detriment. This is a concern I feel everyone should be aware of."

Board members directed Supt. Glenn Cox to study that section of the student teaching policy for the purpose of bringing to the board ideas for an amended phrasing.

Max Joyner and Mrs. John East appeared before the board to talk about the possibility of tennis facilities at Rose High. They reported on a recent meeting with County Commissioners to discuss the possibility of reinstating the 20 cents Greenville district tax levy. "The commissioners said they're not about to increase the levy by 20 cents," Joyner said. "Does this mean another year we're not going

'Wild Man' Of Florida Swamp Takes Own Life

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer
BUSHNELL, Fla. (AP) — After surviving eight months in a dense Florida swamp, a be-wildered Chinese seaman who feared his captors hanged himself in his jail cell, deputies say.

"He didn't understand," an interpreter said after "The Wild Man of Green Swamp" was found hanging by his belt Monday. "He didn't believe police would let him go free."

The man, believed to be Tu-Mei Hu, 39, of Taiwan, had been chased down by a posse which followed a trail of half-eaten wild animal carcasses and captured him Saturday in the sawgrass jungle.

Don Clark, chief deputy sheriff of Sumter County, said Hu, father of seven, wrapped one end of his belt around his neck and fastened the other end to a cell bar.

Earlier, Hu had told Border Patrol officers he wanted to go home but then refused to sign the necessary papers, Clark said.

David Chen, a Chinese engineer from St. Petersburg, spent six hours Sunday talking to Hu in his native Mandarin dialect.

"He did something wrong. He stole food," Chen said. "He thought they would execute him soon. I tried to convince him this wasn't so. But he was so scared."

In jail, Hu was given fruit and nuts, chicken and rice and outfitted with new clothes. Deputies offered to buy him a ticket home.

"He couldn't understand how police could be nice. If they had asked him to pay for the ticket maybe he would have believed," Chen said.

Hu was jailed on a breaking and entering charge. Police said the charges were a protective measure and probably would be dropped when his identity was firmly established.

According to information pieced together by the police, Hu was flown to the United States in May 1974 to work on the freighter Harold J. Jaquet, which had an all-Chinese crew. He had never been to sea before and became sick on board. Hu wound up in Tampa General Hospital where, apparently scared by a blood test, he escaped and ran to sanctuary in the swamp.

ALUMINUM CANS PURCHASED

When and where do you take aluminum cans to be sold in Greenville? S.P.

Reynolds Metal Co. of Richmond, Va., has a representative who visits Pitt Plaza every two-weeks to purchase used aluminum cans for recycling at Reynolds' recycling center in Williamsburg, Va.

CONCERNING THE DRAFT

Will anyone be drafted into the armed services within the next two years? V.C.

According to William H. McCachren, state director of the Selective Service System, Raleigh, the world situation is always a determining factor for the size of our military forces. The Department of Defense has given no indication that they will call on Selective Service to furnish any manpower in the immediate future.

The president of the United States cannot authorize involuntary induction into the armed forces without first getting the approval of Congress. The induction authority of the president expired June 30, 1973, and Selective Service has not inducted anyone into the armed forces since December, 1972.

Communist Seizure Of Socialist Newspaper Is Pondered By Tribunal

By STEPHENS BROENING
Associated Press Writer
LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The government today shut down the Socialist party newspaper Republica pending a decision by a special press tribunal on the seizure of the newspaper by Communist workers.

A spokesman for the information ministry said the newspaper, Lisbon's only non-Communist daily, must cease publication until the court rules on the dispute.

The decision to close the paper came after a visit by high government officials while Socialists kept vigil through the night outside the offices.

Paratroopers rushed to the building by the leftist military government barred the Socialists from entering the building to drive the Communists printers out.

Led by party chief Mario

Soares, a minister without portfolio in the government, scores of Socialists spent the night in a drizzling rain outside the building. Soares threatened to take his party out of the cabinet unless it regains the paper. Speaking from the roof of a car, Soares told his supporters: "The seizure was illegal, against the press law and all that the Portuguese revolution stands for. The paper was taken over by a minority. It is our duty to stay here, to defend our liberty."

"Our patience has its limits," he warned when told that the printers balked at carrying out an agreement to clear the building. Leaders of the typographical union and the Socialist editorial staff, bargaining under the supervision of an army major, reportedly agreed that the building would be cleared and sealed off while the government decided who should get control of the paper. The printers reportedly told the editor of the paper, 62-year-old Raul Rego, that his ideology was incorrect. Rego was imprisoned three times by the fascist dictatorship that the army overthrew last year. Meanwhile, the 240 officers of the Armed Forces Movement, the parent assembly of the regime, ended a special meeting without launching an expected purge of moderates in the group.

Instead the AFM declared it was ready to "intensify its direct links with all popular structures ... and to overcome partisan struggles in the battle for production." The assembly also announced it was setting up a revolutionary tribunal and 12-man jury to try persons implicated in the unsuccessful rightist counter-coup on March 11.

Kissinger, Gromyko Still Talk

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Talks between Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko continue today after a warning by Kissinger against Russian attempts to exploit American failures in Indochina.

The talks today were to focus on the pace of the SALT negotiations in Geneva for another strategic arms limitation treaty. There was also to be a brief general discussion of the Middle East situation before Kissinger's departure for Bonn. Kissinger and Gromyko began Monday with a 75-minute session in which they faced each other with only their interpreters present.

U.S. officials said Kissinger warned Gromyko against trying to take advantage of the American setbacks in Vietnam and Cambodia by challenging U.S. commitments elsewhere. He called Gromyko's attention to a speech Kissinger made last week in St. Louis, Mo., in which he warned Moscow against adventurism stemming from a mistaken belief in American weakness, the sources said.

Gromyko objected previously to the St. Louis speech, criticizing Kissinger by name for preaching detente on the one hand and calling for increased U.S. military strength on the other.

U.S. sources said Kissinger gave a new warning to the Russians to underline the Ford administration's determination to keep Moscow from testing the American resolve elsewhere.

Following their private meeting Monday, Kissinger and Gromyko called in their experts on Europe and strategic nuclear arms for a look at specific issues of detente.

The meeting continued for three hours and 45 minutes, and American officials said the chief topic of discussion was the European security summit conference the Russians are anxious to hold.

U.S. officials said before the talks started that this would be a minor matter because real decisions could not be made without first getting the approval of the rest of the European governments. But informed sources said most of the session was spent on procedural matters in connection with the proposed conference.

The two leaders finally got to the SALT negotiations in the last minutes of the meeting and had a general review of the factors slowing progress toward a treaty. U.S. sources said Kissinger asked to hear Gromyko's thinking about a compromise on the issue chiefly responsible for the delay: how to verify Soviet compliance with the terms of any treaty agreed on.

Lawmakers Act To Forestall Any Threat From Malpractice Suits

By The Associated Press
Lawmakers in California, New York and Tennessee have moved to forestall real or threatened health care crises by advancing legislation to deal with skyrocketing medical malpractice insurance rates.

And in Florida, a judge has stepped in to assure physicians dealing with at least one of the major malpractice insurance carriers of continued coverage at Jan. 1 rates.

As California's legislators worked Monday on proposals to put a lid on malpractice insurance rates, a doctors' protest begun May 1 in the San Francisco area spread into Southern California.

Officials said about 150 anesthesiologists in a six-county area of Southern California and another 60 in Sacramento joined a doctors' slowdown that began when colleagues in the San Francisco Bay refused to handle all but emergency cases.

The walkout by 165 anesthesiologists in the Bay area was triggered by announced rate increases of up to 324 percent for malpractice insurance by Argonaut Insurance Co. of Menlo Park.

In Albany, New York's lawmakers enacted a measure to avert a threatened collapse of the medical malpractice insurance business in the state.

The bill approved Monday will not prevent rate increases for malpractice insurance, but it places strict new limits on the rights of patients to bring suit against doctors.

It also creates a pool which all companies writing personal injury liability insurance in the state would be required to join. The pool would guarantee the continued availability of malpractice insurance if private companies fail to provide the coverage.

The state Senate in Tennessee ended three days of debate Monday by passing a bill to make it more difficult to file suits for medical malpractice.

The 26-3 vote came with 400 doctors packed into Senate gallery or listening to a loudspeaker in the empty House chamber.

The key feature of the bill, which returns to the House for action on a half-dozen amendments, is the creation of a review board to screen malpractice claims before they reach court. The board could not prevent the filing of a lawsuit, but could report its opinion of the claim.

Florida doctors, meantime, won their second victory in as many weeks against skyrocketing rates for malpractice insurance.

U.S. District Judge Gerald B. Tjoflat issued an order directing Argonaut Insurance to provide coverage for the rest of the year at Jan. 1 rates.

Argonaut had gone to court asking for a 95 per cent increase on top of a 96 per cent boost that went into effect the first of this year. Otherwise, the company asked to cancel its policies with about 5,850 of Florida's nearly 10,000 doctors.

Last week, Florida doctors won a guarantee of malpractice coverage from the state legislature.

Philadelphia Mayor In Hot Battle To Survive

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Frank L. Rizzo battled for political survival and control of the powerful Democratic organization in America's fourth largest city in today's primary election.

The 54-year-old former police commissioner was rejected by the party bosses for supporting Richard Nixon and other Republican candidates in 1972-73, but he insists he has strong voter backing for easy renomination to a second term.

But state Sen. Louis G. Hill, the mayor's chief opponent on a six-man Democratic ballot, says party organization endorsement will bring him victory in a close race.

Hill, a 51-year-old ex-Marine and lawyer, advertises himself as "the Democrat for mayor," but Rizzo calls him "the hand-picked candidate of political boss Pete Camiel."

Camiel, fighting to remain party leader in a city that has been controlled by Democrats since 1952, responds that Rizzo is "a monster" and "a menace" who must be defeated if Philadelphia is to grow and prosper.

About 65 per cent of the city's 605,848 registered Democratic voters are expected to vote before balloting ends at 8 p.m.

On the Republican side, former City Councilman Thomas Foglietta has party endorsement and is expected to win easily over his lone opponent, Valinupo J. Alalima, a self-styled Samoan prince. Less than half of the city's 227,787 GOP voters are expected to cast ballots.

Meanwhile, in Denver, Mayor William McNichols' camp was hoping for a light voter turnout in today's election to bring about a runoff and a repeat of his 1971 election victory over Dist. Atty. Dale Tooley.

Election officials estimated that only 135,000-140,000 of the 229,000 registered would cast ballots.

Ford Plans Price Boost

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. probably will raise new car prices about $300 this fall, says board chairman Henry Ford II.

Ford's prediction, made Monday at an impromptu news conference, was at the upper limit of the increase of 3 to 6 per cent mentioned by company President Lee A. Iacocca at the firm's stockholders' meeting earlier this month.

New car prices rose an average $450 last September and another $500 or so in the preceding nine months, contributing to the sharp sales slump started by the Mideast oil embargo and deepened last fall by economic recession.

Ford also said the firm is cutting production for June to 345,000 vehicles from the previously announced total of 370,000. A company spokesman said the move would not add to the number of workers on indefinite layoffs, but would mean more downtime for some assembly plants.

Ford said he is trimming his personal estimate for 1975 total auto sales to about 8 million, including 16 or 17 per cent imports. In the first four months of this year imports have captured a record 21.2 per cent of the market.

"I've written off 1975," Ford said. "We've had some real tough problems this year. We hope we'll be in real good shape (for) calendar '76."

ERA Backers Looking To '76

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition supporting the Equal Rights Amendment is launching a national fund-raising drive to bolster its campaign to win ratification of the measure by the nation's Bicentennial in 1976.

The coalition said that a national telethon later this year is one proposal under consideration. The telethon would focus on the Equal Rights Amendment as well as such other issues as financing for women's candidates.

"It will be a chance for women to go professional in fund raising in a big way," Anne Zill, one of the coalition organizers, said in an interview Monday.

Coalition leaders said the participating organizations have a combined membership of 23 million women.

The groups include the National Education Association, the American Nurses Association, the Republican and Democratic national committees, Common Cause, the League of Women Voters, the National Organization for Women and the Federation of Business and Professional Women.

The amendment has been ratified by 34 states but there are legal questions about two states which subsequently rescinded the ratification. There is no legal precedent for such action. Thirty-eight states must approve the amendment by the spring of 1979 for it to become part of the Constitution.

Shirley was competing in Division II for girls in the 14-15 year old age group. In Louisville, she was the guest of the Kentucky Colonels at the second championship games.

Shirley received a trophy presented by Brigadier General Robert Montague, Executive Director of Special Olympics.

The Land of the Free didn't come cheap.

Even before we had a formal constitution, investors were asked to buy over $27,000,000 in securities to provide the arms we needed. And to provide the money to rebuild.

That was just the beginning. Through war and peace, the good years and the bad, Americans have always given freely. Millions invested their money. Many invested their lives.

We've never stopped fighting for freedom. For the American way of life.

Today, over 9½ million Americans buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Maybe you should consider your interest and take stock in America. It isn't cheap, but there's never been a better deal.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

False Security As To Energy

Now that there is plenty of gasoline available, it is easy for the public to be lulled asleep regarding the energy crisis.

The recession, coupled with higher prices of gas, apparently has reduced usage enough so that there are ample supplies. Some electric companies are also saying they expect to be able to meet demand this summer, again because the need for electric power is not growing as rapidly as it was.

There is a false security in believing that there will be adequate energy for the future, however. Given an upturn in the economy we can be right back in the shortages of gasoline and electricity which plagued the nation only recently.

Utilities Director Charles Horne sees a bleak outlook for natural gas supplies unless things change radically. The situation could become "very desperate," he said at a Utilities meeting last week.

Projections show that in a few years gas will not be available to interruptible customers and it could extend to the higher priority customers, the residential users.

The natural gas companies are holding out for deregulation of well head prices of gas prior to undertaking extensive new exploration for gas fields. Unless this situation changes the future is not bright at all.

The customers which usually depend on natural gas for energy will have to turn to some other source. This will probably be oil products, or sometimes coal. This will put a further strain on the alternative energy sources as the former natural gas users compete with oil and coal customers for their products.

This country is fortunate that we have gained a little time to learn to use energy more efficiently and to develop new energy sources. However, if we waste this time we are going to be in for a real disaster, economic and in our quality of life, in the years ahead. We must plan now so that adequate energy will be available to keep our economy going in the future.

THIS AFTERNOON

Mountain Bill To Oblivion

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Chances are practically zero for passage of mountain land control measures in the 1975-76 session of the General Assembly.

Supporters and opponents alike agree that the landmark companion measure to the 1974 Coastal Land Use Management law is destined to quietly die in a committee of the House of Representatives.

Strategy of supporters both within the General Assembly and the Department of Natural and Economic Resources aims at avoiding sure defeat in a bitter floor fight—an action which would perhaps hurt chances of passage in future years as well—while using the time between now and the 1977 General Assembly to drum up support.

Several factors are seen as leading to the present condition of the mountain part of a package of land use management techniques once hailed by planners and environmentalists as putting North Carolina in the vanguard of states seeking to control development and remove blight:

Several Reasons

—Mountain opponents are better organized than were those who fought the Coastal Land Use legislation;

—The recession has sharply curtailed mountain land development and removed some of the urgency for controls;

—The General Assembly normally does not initiate such far-reaching legislation, but responds to the executive branch; a lame duck governor with no strength in the assembly can't push the proposal.

Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., asked about his active role in passage last year of the coastal measure and the lack of aggressive leadership this year, replied that he feels "no less strongly about the mountain measure than the coastal bill. . . we will be pushing hard. We are gearing up for it now, for this session of the General Assembly."

Sources both in the legislature and Holshouser's administration think it is too late to "gear up." First, the governor has only 10 fellow Republicans in the assembly, and they lack unity; secondly the governor has left no major appointments to boards or commissions to be bartered for votes — a strategy used in passage of the Coastal law—and, finally, the governor has no spare dollars to be sprinkled about for favored projects to nail down support.

State Rep. Carl J. Stewart Jr., D-Gaston, chairman of the House Air and Water Committee holding the mountain bill says he sees less than a 50-50 chance for it to get out of committee.

Measure Dead

State Rep. Claude DeBruhl, D-Buncombe (a mountain county), is one of the leading opponents. He says bluntly the bill will "never see the light of day."

State Rep. John S. Stevens, D-Buncombe, who agreed to sponsor the measure in the house is widely quoted by others as confessing that the proposal lacks sufficient strength to get out of committee, and faces certain floor defeat if it should. Stevens denies that he has said that, however, insisting that action will come "soon."

State Senator Willis P.

Whichard, D-Durham, who was in the house last year and was the principal sponsor of the coastal land use legislation, is not ready to concede defeat, saying he is "hopeful. . . but realistically looking ahead to strategy if it doesn't go through this time."

Whichard said in another session with another governor who can put sufficient effort behind the measure, "it will go through. Also, the coastal bill would have enough experience by then and could be used as a successful measure."

Whichard agrees that floor defeat would be "harmful to the concept of land use legislation," and is to be avoided.

The land use control measure require each county within certain areas to prepare zoning and development plans, protecting environmentally sensitive areas such as marshes, beaches, rock outcroppings, peaks, etc. Development permits are designed to control growth and building, and a commission made up largely of people from the area oversees the program.

INSIDE REPORT

When America Had To Act

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The gamble taken by President Ford in using armed force against Cambodia, starting with air strikes against Cambodian gunboats last Tuesday evening, was based above all on this hard conclusion: the U.S. had to seize the occasion of Cambodian piracy to prove it both could and would react with decision and power to international lawlessness.

There was no split of any kind in the National Security Council (NSC). Indeed, every top official in the administration agreed that whatever the risk, a show of American will and power was absolutely essential following the humiliation of South Vietnam.

In ordering American attacks on the Cambodian gunboats to block an obvious Cambodian effort to remove the American crew of the Mayaguez to the Cambodian mainland, neither the President nor the NSC even attempted to figure out an answer to this potentially explosive question: what if the Cambodians should use the gunboat attack as the pretext for murdering some 40 American crewmen?

"Of course we had contingency plans," one top presidential aide told us. "But we couldn't sit around and try to estimate every possible contingency when we are dealing with a primitive government which has virtually no outside contacts with the world. We had to act."

The underlying assumption of the President's aides was that the U.S. must deal with such an act of piracy as a Western nation acting in a civilized fashion: demand immediate return of the ship and crew and map a contingency plan to seize both by force if the demand was not met within a reasonable time.

Following seizure of the Mayaguez by Cambodia just after midnight, Sunday, the President allowed almost 48 hours to go by without any military response. Next, the basic plan of isolating the little island in the Gulf of Thailand, where the Mayaguez was held, went astray when Cambodian gunboats moved toward the mainland about 15 miles away. The president then gave his order to halt the gunboats.

At that point, the U.S. went the full and necessary distance to prove what Mr. Ford and his Secretaries of State and Defense, Henry Kissinger and James Schlesinger, had been preaching non-stop ever since the catastrophic end of the Vietnam war: despite that national humiliation, no foreign country should make the mistake that the United States was discarding its role as world leader, or was reluctant to take strong action where demanded.

Indeed, the private remarks of top officials here make it abundantly apparent that the Mayaguez seizure became the ideal case to prove the point.

In the background was the utter failure of all efforts to open some kind of circuitous diplomatic channel to the revolutionary Cambodian government of the Khmer Rouge. The Soviet Union has been kicked out of Phnom Penh for failure to break with the old regime. The People's Republic of China, according to one high official, informed the U.S. it would try to help, and did so, but proved the point that the jingoistic Cambodian regime was simply beyond reach.

On Tuesday evening, Mr. Ford ordered word passed to congressional leaders that "appropriate action" would soon be taken. Perhaps in retrospect the President should have summoned these leaders to the White House for a face-to-face conversation. Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Senate Democratic leader, for example, said later that he had not been "consulted," on the theory he was told, not asked.

Other criticism in a Congress now showing dangerous symptoms of taking over American foreign policy from its feuding committee rooms was also heard, raising ominous questions about a vicious partisan debate erupting from the President's bold action.

But on that point Mr. Ford and his top aides, often indecisive and vacillating on lesser matters, showed no concern this time. They assumed that whatever partisan outcry might ensue, the American people as a whole would react with overwhelming approval to the President's powerful response to an unprovoked act of piracy on the high seas.

NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING GAINED!

A Minor Testing, But--

Well, God bless Jerry Ford. By his resolute handling of the Mayaguez incident, the President boosted the national morale, spit in the Communists' eye, and incidentally promoted his own political fortunes. He had the country smiling on Thursday. It had been a long time since we had much to smile about.

The past few years, and especially the past few months, have constituted one of the most melancholy chapters in the history of the American Republic. Defeat abroad was piled upon shame at home. Recession, inflation, unemployment, vandalism, violet crime, disgrace and corruption in high places — the litany of bad news went on and on. However briefly, the clouds now seem to lift.

In the long chronicle of arms, the Mayaguez incident may rate no more than a footnote. Yet small matters may have large consequences, and the consequences of Mayaguez will be felt both at home and abroad.

It is a truism in foreign affairs, as it is in human affairs, that strength inspires respect and weakness breeds contempt. If we have learned anything about the nature of Communist aggression, surely we have learned that much at least. The Communists are forever pressing, testing, probing for weakness.

A part of the tragedy of Vietnam is that the Communists probed for weakness after the signing of the Paris accords — and they found weakness. The North Viet-name early in 1973 moved troops south, and paused. Nothing happened. They moved artillery and rockets. Nothing happened. With increasing boldness, they moved whole divisions. A weakened president failed to respond. A flabby Congress made matters worse by prohibiting even the threat of retaliation by air. The enemy rightly concluded that the U. S. had lost its resolve. This same perception was not lost on the South Vietnamese. The end was inevitable.

Then came Cambodia. Anti-American demonstrations in Laos triggered a pro-Communist shakeup there. Thailand scrambled to make peace with her new neighbors. From Singapore to Seoul, from Malaysia to Manila, heads of state reacted with barely concealed consternation. Ripples from the Pacific reached the Mediterranean. This was the wretched situation when the importunate Cambodians, for whom a small blessing may also be invoked, recklessly seized the freighter.

Ford's bold but measured response will not undo the terrible damage that had been done. Of course it will not. But it will help. In some small degree, he has restored the grand old image of an angry Uncle Sam. Hallelujah!

The incident will have domestic consequences also. Pride cannot be measured nor confidence precisely analyzed. These are intangibles, but they have the force of electric current. The President's action could jolt us out of a depression, not of the economy but of the spirit; and a surge of confidence is sorely needed now.

Ford himself will surely benefit politically. He did what had to be done. He made the right diplomatic motions, but he refused to pussyfoot around. While Senator McGovern was still mewing about a few days' delay, Ford acted. In the course of a dramatic 24 hours, Americans caught memorable impressions of political leaders. Senators Kennedy, Humphrey and Jackson left images of indecision and weakness. Senators Buckley, Tower and Baker, among others, left images of firmness and strength.

Is this trip really necessary? A group of 20 Tar Heel educators are planning a 42-day, $102,000 trip to Japan for the purpose of, to use the words of Betty Bullard, consultant in the division of social studies at the State Department of Public Instruction, "refining the perspective of educators as they look at other societies and work with the key question: can you take it from a textbook or is there more value in something more immediate."

She may have a point, but we fail to see—at least for $102,000—how an excursion to Japan is going to answer this crucial question.

The proposed trip hit the spotlight recently when members of the North Carolina General Assembly learned of the planned foreign tour. Leaders of the budget process in the House took immediate opposition and plans are afoot for steps to halt the project.

Nash County's Rep. John Ed Davenport, who is a member of both the Base Budget Committee and the Commission on Governmental Waste, was outspoken in his criticism and led a fact-finding committee to determine if the General Assembly could block the tour.

It is well and good if educators wish to edify themselves in the more abstract questions of education, even about whether or not to use textbooks, if such endeavors are privately financed.

But this one is not. Taxpayers are footing the bill for most of it at one level or another. For example, of the total cost of $102,000, the U.S. Office of Education is granting $50,000 while $52,000 comes from non-federal sources including $36,976 in state salaries paid participants during the six-week trip.

A direct allotment from the budget of the State Department of Public Instruction in the amount of $12,600 is also included. From private sources a foundation grant of $2,000 came from the Smith Reynolds Foundation.

Miss Bullard, in defending the trip, objects to the use of the term "trip" in describing the trip, choosing to label it "on-site exploration."

She fears adverse public reaction to the idea of a "trip," or tour, as being frivolous with all its accoutrements. "The group will take a jet break in Honolulu before proceeding on to Tokyo, where the first item on the agenda calls for 'Introduction to the Japanese Bath.'"

Strength For Today

WARTS AND ALL

When Sir Peter Leyle, a leading portrait painter of seventeenth century England, was commissioned to paint Oliver Cromwell, Cromwell told him, "Paint me as I am. If you leave out a scar, a freckle, or a wart I will not pay you one shilling."

"Paint me as I am!" Few men would have the courage to give that command, especially if their features were rough and seamed like Cromwell's, and if their foreheads were creased with perpetual frowns. There is something about such honesty that touches us. When we find a man who abhors flattery and asks nothing of his fellow men but that they take him as he is, we confront someone who disarms us and commands our admiration. We know that a person of this type has a great deal of self-confidence which comes from knowing his own worth without any illusions.

Only the honest and courageous are willing to be painted with all their scars, wrinkles, freckles, and warts.

Profits-Job Question Mulled

NEW YORK (AP) — American industry is face to face with one of those painful confrontations with self that individuals also go through from time to time.

Its identity is involved. It wonders about its role in society. Its ethics are questioned. The polls show it far down the list of institutions deserving of our trust and confidence.

The doubts and questions assail businessmen from every direction, and from within as well. Sometimes such painful re-evaluations lead to understanding and growth; sometimes they

Saigon Spirit Broken

By GEORGE ESPER

Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Nearly three weeks after Communist forces took over Saigon with almost no bloodshed, there still is no sign of a civilian government for the city.

Markets and shops are open, and looting has been reduced. But the banks are still closed, and many residents and offices are hard pressed for money.

International airline schedules have not been resumed. Telephone and telex circuits abroad are still cut, although there is cable traffic to Hong Kong and via Hanoi to Paris.

The Viet Cong presence appears minimal. Some observers say they do not have enough people on hand yet to undertake the management of a city of 3.5 million.

There is talk of quick reunification with North Vietnam, perhaps within the year. Mail and telegraph service between North and South Vietnam has resumed for the first time since the country was partitioned by the 1954 Geneva agreement.

Most of the troops in Saigon — perhaps 90 per cent — are North Vietnamese. They hold all of the strategic positions including Tan Son Nhut air base and have scores of tanks, armored personnel carriers, artillery pieces, antiaircraft guns and surface-to-air missiles defending the city.

But it is not known how many troops are in the city.

Ostensibly the city is being run by the Viet Cong's military management committee, headed by Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra. Asked at his first news conference, on May 8, when the transition to a civilian government might take place, he said: "We cannot tell you. . . There has never been a city so large liberated so quickly and there are many problems to be solved. The reason for the organization of the military management committee is to restore normal life, to restore security and many other matters."

On the surface, Saigon is tranquil, but there is an underlying sadness and fear of what lies ahead. There is fear of regimentation.

"Study-practice" political meetings are being held; usually one member from each household is required to attend. Students, women's groups and block committees are being organized, but in a scattered fashion.

There have been no visible signs or reports of any reprisals.

An ancient question is being resurrected: What kind of economic society is best for the United States, centrally planned or free enterprise? Any businessman worthy of membership in the Chamber of Commerce openly declares himself for free enterprise, but then he doesn't always follow through.

Many businessmen today are calling for some sort of economic central planning, if only to avoid the shortages and price eruptions that have brought misery to their lives and those of their customers.

And, while declaring themselves foursquare for independence from government, many business executives regularly shuttle to Washington in search of special treatment and aid, sometimes in the form of loan guarantees.

Old Movie Pros Share Honors

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two old movie pros, Katharine Hepburn and Laurence Olivier, and their "Love Among the Ruins" shared top honors with "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" at the 27th Emmy Awards.

"QB VII," which had scored the highest in nominations with 13, also won six awards Monday night. But none was in a major category.

Oscar-winners Hepburn and Olivier won Television Academy Awards Monday night as outstanding stars in a special program for "Love Among the Ruins," which scored a total of six Emmys including those for director George Cukor and writer James Costigan.

"The Mary Tyler Moore Show" was hailed by the Television Academy as the outstanding comedy series of 1974-75, winning a total of six Emmys including those for supporting performers Betty White, Ed Asner and Cloris Leachman.

But Miss Moore lost out as lead actress in a comedy series to Valerie Harper, whose "Rhoda" was an offshoot of the Moore series.

"I am full of love for everybody, especially Mary, who made it all possible," Miss Harper exulted to the television audience.

"Upstairs, Downstairs," the British-made story of servant life in Edwardian England, won for the second year in a row as best dramatic series. Its victory and that of the British-made "Love Among the Ruins" gave the Emmy awards a decidedly British accent.

Britisher Jean Marsh, chosen best dramatic actress for her role as a maid in "Upstairs, Downstairs," commented, "It's very generous, unchauvinistic and typically American."

Some of the winners were also losers at the Hollywood Palladium festivities. Tony Randall was best lead actor in a comedy series for "The Odd Couple" and Jessica Walter best lead actress in a limited series for "Amy Prentiss." Both shows have been cancelled.

Lamented Randall: "I sure am glad I won. Now if I only had a job."

"The Carol Burnett Show" won as best comedy-variety or music series for the third time and "An Evening With John Denver" was named best special in that category.

The five-part "Benjamin Franklin" with its revolving cast portraying the statesman-inventor collected five awards including outstanding limited series.

"The Law," a television movie about a feisty public defender, was a surprise winner as outstanding special in comedy or drama, defeating "Love Among the Ruins," "QB VII" and others. "The Law" became a limited series and then was dropped by NBC.

Other major awards included: Robert Blake, "Baretta," lead actor in a drama series; Peter Falk, "Columbo," lead actor in a limited series; Jim McKay, "Wide World of Sports," outstanding sports broadcaster.

Cloris Leachman was a double winner. Besides her Emmy for "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," she also picked one up for her supporting performance on a "Cher" show.

Awards Won By Local Jaycees At Convention

The Greenville Jaycees received a bevy of awards for chapter projects and activities this past weekend during the 38th annual N.C. State Jaycee Convention in Asheville.

The local chapter, represented in Asheville by Mark Meltzer, Hal Smith, Don Brady, Jack Myers and Glenn Willingham, received five first-place awards, six second-place citations, and one third-place award, in addition to an award for overall chapter activities.

Competing in Population Division Four, the Greenville Jaycees gathered in first-place awards for: inter-club relations, (Spring Regional 1975); mental health and retardation, (second annual Greenville Special Olympics); publications (Jaycee Newsletter); public relations, (Jaycee Week); and senior citizens, (Flynn Home Christmas Party).

There is speculation that high-ranking officials of the former government eventually will be questioned and perhaps be made to face a people's court.

Duong Van Minh, who surrendered the city less than 40 hours after being sworn in as president of South Vietnam, is free but stays inside his home and doesn't see newsmen.

There appears to be no shortage of food. The countryside is reported quiet, and strawberries are flowing in from the vegetable farms around Dalat.

The city bustles with activity, but there is less noise, fewer motorbikes and less smoke because of the gasoline shortage.

But the old spirit is gone, and melancholy hangs over the city, a sadness of hopes shattered, defeat, lost pride, shame and regret.

The incident himself is likely to pass swiftly from the news, but the images will remain on the retina much longer. The armed services will benefit from this affair: We are likely to hear less talk of whacking the Navy and Marines. The pusillanimous liberals, yowling about the high cost of defense, may not be so influential now.

A small affair, yes. It ought not to be overblown. But after so long a series of failures, it is wonderfully good to hear a President report even a modest success: Mission accomplished!

Bolivia Taking Legal Action

By HAROLD OLMOS
Associated Press Writer

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The Bolivian government placed the local representative of Gulf Oil Corp. under house arrest today, ordered Gulf's American president to appear in court and said the company would be "criminally prosecuted" for making illegal political contributions to Bolivian officials.

District Attorney Rolando Simbron said he had issued a summons for Bob R. Dorsey, president of the American oil company, to appear in a Bolivian court. He said the company must name the Bolivian officials who received $360,000 Gulf has admitted paying between 1966 and 1969.

Simbron, who charged that Gulf's payoffs damaged "the prestige, the dignity and the respectability of the state," did not indicate how he could enforce the order.

Dorsey testified before a U.S. congressional committee last week that Gulf gave President Rene Barrientos the $100,000 helicopter in which he was killed in a crash in April 1969. The oil man also told the committee he supposed that associates of Barrientos may have shared in "political contributions" totaling $360,000 which the company paid.

Simbron said that as soon as he learns the names of officials who received payoffs, "they will immediately be arrested." If found guilty, they would be liable to from two to six years in prison.

A strong police guard was ordered to the La Paz home of Gulf's representative in Bolivia, Carlos Dorado Chopitea. A police spokesman said the house arrest was ordered to prevent him leaving the country.

Dorado Chopitea was expected to be moved to jail soon. He could be sentenced to from one to three years in prison if convicted of participating in acts of bribery.

President Hugo Banzer called Monday for the Organization of American States to condemn Gulf for its "sordid activities" in developing countries. Foreign Ministry sources said Bolivia was seeking "a unanimous, hemispheric condemnation" of the company.

Students Learn History In 177-Year-Old School

SUDBURY, Mass. (AP) — About 300 youngsters are learning their Bicentennial history by attending the historic Little Red Schoolhouse, complete with quill pens, dunce caps and colonial costumes.

Only about a dozen children can attend at any one time in the tiny, 177-year-old school, which graduated its last class in 1951 and is part of the Wayside Inn restoration.

The children are roughing it, says Joan Dropkin, a fifth grade teacher. The school doesn't have electricity, heat or blackboards.

John Pitchel, 10, said the knickers he wore were "uncomfortable and hot." And Anthony Velardo, 11, said his time at the school taught him a lot, "but I still prefer TV" for learning about the past.

Daily lessons are written on slates and narrow wooden boards called hornbooks.

"Since there are no blackboards, it is impossible for a teacher to write down a poem for the children to learn," says Terry Redfern, a fifth grade teacher.

"So the blab method is used. We shout out a line of verse and the children shout it back to us. We keep this up until the entire poem is learned. This takes time, but it works."

The old ways of discipline were a shock for some.

"After seeing that stick they used to punish the bad kids, I'm glad I'm going to school today, instead of then," said 10-year-old Mike Bergantino.

Visitors aren't allowed inside the school during classes.

"We're not putting on a Bicentennial pageant here," said James Christie, a school principal who had the idea of reopening the school. "We're just giving Sudbury children a chance to take part in a learning experience they will never forget."

The school was built in Sterling, Mass., in 1758 and was moved here by Henry Ford in 1926.

The famous poem, "Mary Had a Little Lamb," was written after one of the school's first graders, Mary Sawyer, was followed to school by a lamb one day in 1812.

Third Wife Lost By Vanderbilt

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Harvey Vanderbilt, the third wife of multimillionaire horseman Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, has received her formal divorce.

The couple had been living apart for more than a year.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, 38, asked state Supreme Court referee Gerald Mazur for custody of the couple's three children, ages 8 to 17, who live with her. She also asked alimony and child support.

Vanderbilt, 63, was not present Monday during the brief proceedings in which Mazur converted a June 15, 1973 separation agreement into a divorce. However, he did not contest the divorce.

The owner of Sagamore farms, Vanderbilt long has been active in thoroughbred racing, and is chairman of the New York Racing Association.

VP's Wife Role Easier

NEW YORK (AP) — Margaretta "Happy" Rockefeller says she finds her role as wife of the vice president easier than her former role as the governor's wife and she's happy with her new home in Washington.

Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller gives her views on these and other matters in an article in Ladies Home Journal.

Mrs. Rockefeller responded to questions by Lynda Johnson Robb, daughter of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson and a contributing editor of the Journal.

The rarely interviewed one-time Philadelphia socialite says she has been painted as disliking her husband's public career but "it just isn't so."

She says, "The truth is that I have always wanted Nelson to be in public life so long as that has been what he has wanted. I am his wife — first and foremost — and we happen to like each other very much."

"I recognize his deep sense of responsibility to his fellow man, and have never begrudged for an instant the devotion he has given to public service . . ."

But she admits the period between his resignation as governor of New York and his assumption of the duties of the vice presidency was a happy time for her and her sons Nelson and Mark, because "the more Nelson's at home, the happier we all are."

Technician Strangled

RALEIGH (AP)—A 42-year-old female dental technician has been found strangled to death in the laboratory at Triangle Correctional Center, where she worked.

Prison officials said the body of Mrs. Jennette Fish was found by an inmate on a cleaning job in the lab. The State Bureau of Investigation was called into the case about an hour later.

Late Monday night, prison officials said an inmate had been transferred from Triangle to nearby Central Prison and placed in maximum security. They did not identify the inmate nor say whether he would be charged with the slaying.

Triangle warden W.L. Kautzky said there was evidence that a struggle had occurred in the lab. The building that houses the lab also serves as a dormitory building for inmates in minimum security who have work release jobs.

Burger Warns Kids Penalized

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In a decision which Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says will penalize slow learners in parochial schools "not because of any act of theirs but because of

In a 6-3 opinion Monday, the court struck down Pennsylvania programs authorizing loans of instructional materials and state-paid remedial teachers and counselors to the private schools.

Burger said the decision on teachers and counselors would penalize slow learners in parochial schools "not because of any act of theirs but because of their parents' choice of religious exercise."

A third feature of the $17.5 million-a-year Pennsylvania aid plan, state loan of textbooks to private school pupils, was upheld by the court in line with its decision several years ago allowing a similar program in New York.

The justices said Pennsylvania's textbook program merely made available to the private school pupils a benefit which was already offered to other children.

The decision said the Pennsylvania provision for instructional materials would unconstitutionally advance religion, since three-quarters of the schools which would receive the direct loans have church affiliations.

It said providing state-paid teachers for slow learners would require the state to involve itself excessively in the affairs of church schools to see that no religion was being taught.

Dissenting from the decision were Burger and Justices William H. Rehnquist and Byron R. White. Justices William J. Brennan Jr., William O. Douglas and Thurgood Marshall dissented from the part of the ruling which upheld the textbook loans.

Convention Is Set For June

The music will be presented by the Convention Choir.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market was mixed today, getting little mileage out of an early rally attempt.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up a little more than 2 points in the early going, was off .86 at 836.83 by 11:30 a.m.

Gainers maintained a moderate lead over losers, however, on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading was quiet. Analysts traced some early buying to Monday's disclosure by a White House adviser that an administration committee was considering various possible ways to stimulate savings and investment.

But they noted that the up-trend drew no substantial support—an apparent indication that many investors were still cautious over the market's near term prospects.

Xerox was the most active issue on the Big Board, up 1 at 77 1/2 in a rebound from some sharp recent losses after an unfavorable earnings forecast from the company last week.

Barber Oil, which doubled its dividend, climbed 1/2 to 25.

Mesta Machine was down 1 at 21. The company reported that first quarter earnings fell to 1 cent a share from 40 cents in the like period last year.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .15 to 48.16 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .31 to 87.52.

Jones Hurls One-Hit Victory Over Cardinals

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

You have to be a pretty good pitcher to lose 22 games in one season in the major leagues, and Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres is proving he's a very good pitcher indeed.

Jones dazzled the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night, stopping the Redbirds on just one single as the Padres eked out a 1-0 victory over John Grubb's 10th inning home run, his first of the year. The only hit for St. Louis was a leadoff single by Luis Melendez in the seventh inning.

"It was the best game of my career because of all the ground balls the Cardinals hit," said Jones, a 25-year-old left-hander who one year ago led the major leagues with 22 defeats but is now 5-2 with a sparkling 1.80 earned run average for 1975.

Against the Cardinals, Jones recorded 22 of his 30 outs on ground balls. He also struck out three.

He retired 12 of the 13 batters remaining after Melendez' single before Grubb sent the crowd of 10,111 at San Diego Stadium home happy.

Elsewhere in the National League, the San Francisco Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4, the Houston Astros defeated the Philadelphia Phils 4-2 and the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the Chicago Cubs 3-2.

Giants 6, Pirates 4

Mike Caldwell, given a vote of confidence by San Francisco Manager Wes Westrum, posted his first victory after five defeats with a complete-game effort against the Pirates, and helped himself with a three-run double in the fourth inning.

"I was going to leave him in there come hell or high water," said Westrum, figuring Caldwell, 7-1 at this point last season en route to a 14-5 mark, was more than due. "It's good to see him get that first one."

Astros 4, Phils 2

Bob Watson's eighth home run of the season, tying him with Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski for the National League lead, plus a trio of unearned runs helped Houston snap the Phils' seven-game win streak.

Watson has driven in seven of the Astros' last 12 runs, five on Sunday and two Monday night.

Dodgers 3, Cubs 2

A sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Bill Buckner with the bases loaded in the eighth inning provided the Dodgers with the winning run. The Cubs had tied it in the top of the eighth on Jose Cardenal's two-run double.

Ali Battles To Aid Hurricane

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The New Jersey judicial system is "too proud to admit they put a wrong man in jail for nine years," Muhammad Ali believes.

"The people that convicted Rubin 'Hurricane' Carter probably were doing what they thought was right at the time," the world heavyweight champion told an overflowing audience at a New York night club Monday night.

The affair was to raise money to aid Carter's legal fight to overturn a 1967 conviction in a triple murder.

Besides Ali, who is co-chairman along with movie director William Friedkin of The Hurricane Trust Fund, others who addressed the plush gathering included Friedkin; fight promoter Don King; Mayor Lee Alexander of Syracuse, N.Y.; Dave Anderson, sports columnist for the New York Times, and Richard Solomon, board chairman of the Fund.

judicial system," the heavyweight champion said. "These people are too proud to admit they put a wrong man in jail for nine years."

"I say the man is innocent. But I can't be the judge. He needs a retrial."

Friedkin said Carter's lawyers will attempt Thursday to get the former boxer released on bail pending his appeal for a new trial. But the movie director said chances for that happening, appeared slim since Judge Lerner would hear the application for bail and the appeal.

But Friedkin said if Lerner turns down the applications, Carter's attorneys will go to the New Jersey Appellate Division.

"If that appeal fails, then we'll go to the New Jersey Supreme Court, then to the federal appeals court," he said.

runs but stealing 69 bases in their first 37 games, the Angels rewrote the script in a 12-5 rout of the Cleveland Indians. They slugged a double, a triple and three homers among 12 hits — Lee Stanton, Jerry Remy and Tommy Harper were the homer-hitters who jogged around the bases — while Remy was the only base-stealer.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox trounced the Oakland A's 10-5, the New York Yankees downed the Kansas City Royals 5-1, the Chicago White Sox edged the Baltimore Orioles 2-1 and the Detroit Tigers whipped the Minnesota Twins 6-3. Milwaukee and Texas were not scheduled.

Remy's first major league homer, a three-run shot off reliever Jim Perry, highlighted a five-run fourth inning that broke a 3-3 tie. Stanton hit a two-run homer in the first inning off Don Hood and Harper connected off Perry in the seventh.

Red Sox 10, A's 5

Speedy Juan Beniquez scored the tie-breaking run all the way from first base on Rick Burleson's hit-and-run single in the seventh inning. A walk to Carl Yastrzemski and doubles by Jim Rice and Dwight Evans added three more runs.

Oakland's Gene Tenace drove in four runs against Boston ace Luis Tiant with his fourth and fifth homers of the season but Rico Petrocelli's homer touched off a five-run fifth inning for the Red Sox and they capitalized on a porous Oakland defense for four more runs in the inning and a 5-2 lead.

Yankees 5, Royals 1

Chris Chambliss belted the first two home runs of the season off Kansas City's Steve Busby and Roy White ripped a two-run double. The fourth-inning homer was the first of the year for Chambliss, who delivered again in the eighth and also drove in New York's fourth run with a fifth-inning single.

Meanwhile, New York starter Rudy May allowed three hits and struck out eight in 5 2-3 innings before giving way to Dick Tidrow, who yielded one more hit the rest of the way, the first 1975 save by a Yankee relief pitcher.

White Sox 2, Orioles 1

Jorge Orta's two-run single in the third inning helped Stan Bahnsen gain his first victory of the season, with clutch seventh-inning relief from Rich Gossage.

Tigers 6, Twins 3

Two-run homers by Willie Horton and rookie Leon Roberts and a pair of solo shots by Gary Sutherland powered Detroit to victory. Joe Coleman got the victory with help from John Hiller in the eighth.

Roberts' fifth home run of the season gave Detroit a 2-0 lead in the first inning against rookie Mike Pazik. After Roberts walked with two out in the third, Horton hit his ninth home run, tops in the league.

Rams Outlast Ayden-Grifton

LITTLEFIELD — Greene Central and Ayden-Grifton battled for nine innings yesterday before the Rams finally pushed over three 10th inning runs and came away with a 3-0 victory.

The game ended the season for the two Eastern Carolina teams, taking care of a make-up game rained out earlier in the year.

Both teams had several opportunities to win it during the regulation game, and then in the two extra innings prior to the 10th.

Dennis Cristiano went the entire game for the Chargers, striking out 16 along the way. He brought his strikeout total for the year to 112.

In the 10th, however, the Rams came up with the game winning runs. Ronnie Whitley doubled and Jeffrey Pridden singled. Donnie Blizard, attempting to sacrifice, reached on an error, scoring Whitley. Floyd Adams then singled to drive in both Pridden and Blizard.

Ayden-Grifton finished the season with a 12-6 Eastern Carolina Conference record and a 14-8 overall mark.

David Lazzo had three assists, while Randy Hawkins had two goals and one assist for the Bruins.

During the season, the Bruins won nine games, while the Rangers won six. Three were two ties.

A two-game playoff is set, next Monday, and the Monday following.

On May 31, two All-Star teams from Greenville will travel to Richmond to meet teams from the Old Dominion Youth League in exhibition matches.

Daniel Widens Industrial Lead

Daniel Construction put a little more room between itself and the rest of the Industrial Softball League last night with a key victory as both the second and third place teams bowed.

Daniel now has a two-game lead over the second place Daily Reflector, which is a half-game ahead of the Moose, in third.

In the opening game, Burroughs-Wellcome nipped the Jaycees, 8-7. B-W pushed over one in the top of the first, while the Jaycees came back with two in their half of the frame. B-W tied it up in the third, they pushed over three in the fourth to take the lead, 5-2. The Jaycees came up with one in the fifth and four in the sixth, gaining a 7-5 lead.

But B-W came back to score three runs in the top of the seventh, on a triple by Lynn Cherry and a double by Jackie Hardee to win it.

In the second game, State Highway downed third place Moose, 9-7. The Moose gained the initial lead with two runs in the fourth, while the Highwaymen came up with one. But State Highway came back with six in the fifth to take the lead. The Moose rallied for four in the sixth, but the Highway men added two in the bottom of the sixth then held off another Moose rally that closed to within two in the seventh.

The final game saw Daniel down the Daily Reflector, 14-7. Daniel pushed in four in the first, while the Reflector came up with one each in the second and third. Daniel added another in the third and one in the fourth. The Reflector scored three in the fifth, while Daniel came up with four, including a homer by Browning. Daniel got four more in the sixth, while the Reflector scored a pair in that frame.

Pearson Gains First Win In Mason-Dixon

By LARRY SIDONS
Associated Press Writer
DOVER, Del. (AP)—The 27 Hours of Dover brought David Pearson his first victory of the season, but the veteran driver hopes stock car officials don't decide to schedule any two-day races.

"I don't think I could go along with that, even though this one gave me a win," Pearson said after taking the Mason-Dixon 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway Monday.

The National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing event was stopped after 140 laps Sunday because of rain and fog and completed on Monday. It was almost 27 hours from the time the race started until Pearson's Mercury took the checkered flag.

Pearson was in the third spot when the race was called Sunday and stayed there for the first five laps Monday, which were run under the caution flag.

But once the green flag dropped, the Spartansburg, S.C., grandfather wasted little time moving to the front. He sped past the Chevrolets of Benny Parsons and Cale Yarborough and gradually increased his lead to almost half a lap on the high-banked mile oval before a series of caution flags slowed the pace and allowed the challengers to close in.

Parsons grabbed the lead briefly as Pearson pitted during two of the afternoon's eight caution periods, but each time Pearson was able to catch his competitor from Ellerbe, N.C., and pull back in front.

The last challenge to Pearson came about 355 miles into the race. Parsons had wheeled his car in front as Pearson went to the pits for tires. Pearson tried to regain the lead but couldn't. "It didn't worry me much though," Pearson said of the second-place position and Parsons' speed. "I had new tires and I knew that once they were in I'd be faster than Benny."

But Pearson never got a chance to find out if he could outduel Parsons. After turning back Pearson's challenge on the 359th lap, Parsons' car suddenly slowed and he entered the garage with a blown engine.

Yarborough, who made a strong run at Pearson and Parsons in the first few laps Monday, had retired earlier, also with a broken power plant.

"I still had a good shot at winning it before the engine blew," Parsons said. "David seemed to be able to outrun me but after the tires got hot I could run as well as David."

"Before I left the race I was running better than I had all day. I felt we were more equal and had we gone the whole length of the race I think I might have been able to beat him."

After Parsons dropped out Pearson had the track to himself. At the finish his closest rival, Cecil Gordon in a Chevrolet, was seven laps behind.

"When you're leading that big at the end, you have time to really think while you're driving," Pearson said. "Believe me, the last few times around the track I was looking for every pebble."

It was Pearson's second Mason-Dixon victory in three years and his fourth triumph at Dover Downs. He now has 31 super-speedway victories in his career, more than any other driver.

When rookie LPGA pro Amy Alcott practiced in her front yard she putted into empty tin cans. But when she drove balls into a nylon net in her back yard she broke her bedroom window three times.

Pacer Victory Gives Life To Indiana Five

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The roar of the crowd barely had died out Monday night and Indiana's George McGinnis already was looking forward to Game 5 of the American Basketball Association championship playoff with Kentucky.

"Now we're going down there Thursday to knock heads," he said with a smile after the Pacers stayed alive with a 94-86 victory over the Colonels.

Indiana, pumped up when McGinnis and little Billy Keller broke out of three-game slumps, cut Kentucky's series lead to 3-1.

Indiana earlier in the day lost a protest of a 95-93 loss in the second game of the series last Thursday night. New ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere traveled to Indianapolis, met with team officials and reviewed evidence supplied by both teams before deciding that a disputed three-point goal by Keller as the game ended would remain disallowed.

But both teams put the protest furor behind them as quickly as it was decided.

McGinnis, a bullish, 6-foot-8 forward, was excited after Indiana's triumph.

When asked if his sore ankle, injured Saturday night in the 109-101 third game loss here, still bothered him, the Indiana captain replied, "No way! They'll have to put me in the hospital to keep me off the court. If I had to, I'd play in a cast."

Indiana Coach Bobby Leonard, though obviously happy, wasn't as delighted as his superstar.

"We've still got our backs against the wall and we must play better Thursday night if we're going to win at Louisville. Kentucky would sure like to win (the title) at home."

McGinnis came up with 22 points and 21 rebounds in the game, but the key man for the Pacers was the 5-foot-11 Keller.

The six-year veteran from Purdue University, suffering through a frustrating shooting slump in the first three games, scored 20 points.

The Pacers came from behind and took the lead midway in the final period. Keller's three-point goal with six minutes remaining and a two-point scoop shot seconds later gave the Pacers an eight-point lead and they were in command the rest of the way.

Namath Future Known Today?

By PHIL ORAMOUS
Associated Press Writer
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP)—The yearling World Football League learns today whether free-agent quarterback Joe Namath will make the jump from the National Football League New York Jets to the WFL's Chicago Winds.

But WFL President Chris Hemminger said Monday that it would be a while before the decision is made public.

Winds owner Eugene Pullano held his first face-to-face meeting with Namath in Tuscaloosa Monday night, after day-long discussions among league officials, the backers of the Winds and Namath's lawyer, Jimmy Walsh.

Hemminger told a news conference in Birmingham that the meeting in Tuscaloosa, where Namath owns a popular restaurant, was "a big step. It's important that Joe meet the people he is going to work for and with."

Namath reportedly has been offered a $4 million multi-year contract with the Winds, including $100,000 a year for 20 years.

The Jets, with whom Namath has played out his option, reportedly have offered him a million-dollar pact. The quarterback signed with the Jets in January 1965, fresh off the University of Alabama team, for a then-fabulous $400,000.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Jets said Monday night, "We have made Joe a substantial offer. I guess like everybody else, we just have to sit and wait for Joe to make up his mind. That's all we can do."

Namath's decision, Hemminger said, would be known internally by the league, "but we'll keep it confidential until he wants to make the announcement." That probably would come in Chicago, he said.

The president said the "material parts of the contract and some subtle parts of it have been worked out. Namath is looking for additional potential or contingent benefits."

Hemminger would not define the additional benefits. He said, however, that they represented "a substantial sum of money, based on substantial performance."

A total of 211 three-year-olds were nominated for the 1975 Belmont to be run at New York's Belmont Park on June 7.

Warriors Seek Second Victory

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—

The Golden State Warriors and their "no-name" offense, still underdogs in the National Basketball Association's championship series even though they upset the Washington Bullets in the opening game, go for their second victory tonight on an unfamiliar "home" court.

The setting for the nationally televised second game — and Friday night's third game — is the Cow Palace, an arena in which the Warriors have not played a home game since 1971. The Warriors were forced out of their normal home court, the Oakland Coliseum, by an ice show.

"I'm a little concerned about not being able to play in our regular place," said Golden State Coach Al Attles. "We haven't played in the Cow Palace in so long that it's really like playing on a neutral court. But one thing in our favor is that we will still have our fans behind us."

"The court is not familiar to either team, so we'll both be in the same bag in that respect," said K.C. Jones, the Bullets coach, still noticeably upset over Washington's 101-95 loss Sunday at Landover, Md., and the fact that his team was forced onto the road for tonight's game. "But naturally the fans will be for them."

Normally in a coast-to-coast NBA series, one team is home for two games before the scene shifts for Games 3 and 4. Arena availability, or lack of it, prompted the switch in this series.

Thus, the unexpected opening game loss puts the Bullets in a precarious position.

"We'll be happy with a split out here," conceded Jones.

Rick Barry, Golden State's captain and high scorer, and one of the few players on either team to have played in the Cow Palace, doesn't mind the switch in sites at all.

"I love those hoops there," said Barry. "They're like big sewers."

West is to be congratulated for a smooth defensive play that lulled declarer into a false sense of security, but in the final analysis South had only himself to blame for failing to make this game.

Simple arithmetic was all that was required of North-South to reach their optimum contract. North added his 5 points to his partner's minimum of 22, came up with enough for game and bid it.

West selected his fourth-best spade as the opening salvo. Declarer seized the opportunity to win in dummy and run the ten of hearts. West ducked in tempo and, flushed with success, declarer repeated the finesse. West, however, won the king and returned a spade. Declarer took East's queen do.

with the king and tried to run his diamond suit. He received a rude shock when West showed out on the second diamond and, since dummy was now entryless, he had no way of picking up the jack of diamonds. When East got in with a diamond, he shifted to a club, and declarer suffered the indignity of a two-trick defeat.

Note that declarer would have made his contract easily had West won the first heart trick. After discovering the diamond distribution, the queen of hearts would have been an entry to dummy, enabling declarer to take a finesse for the jack of diamonds. Nevertheless, South could have avoided this disaster had he managed his resources to better advantage.

South should not have squandered his only entry to dummy at trick one. Instead, he should have won the first trick in his hand and cashed the ace and king of diamonds. When West shows out on the second round, it is obvious that declarer can score five diamond tricks by using the king of spades as an entry to finesse against East's diamond jack. To-morrow with two spade tricks and the ace of hearts, that brings declarer's total to eight tricks. Before entering dummy with the king of spades to take the diamond finesse, however, declarer simply leads a heart from his hand, conceding a trick to the king. Since the opponents cannot cash more than three club tricks, declarer is assured of nine tricks, no matter what the defenders do.

New Programs For Public TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — New series by Lowell Thomas and Jacques Cousteau are coming to public TV. So is "Canine College," a bow-wow baccalaureate program. But "Zoom" is out and "Washington Straight Talk" is shutting up.

These are some of next season's program decisions that PTV stations recently made in selecting 38 of the 136 shows offered by the Public Broadcasting Service's "station program cooperative."

Under the system, stations decide which offerings they'll help finance. If a show gets enough support to cover its costs, it goes on the PBS schedule. If not, it's bye-bye unless other funding is found.

PBS says shows chosen this way will make up 50 per cent of its schedule next season. The other 50 per cent will be wholly-underwritten shows distributed to PBS stations without charge.

According to PBS, 150 licensees for 254 stations spent $16.5 million for cooperative-offered shows for 1975-76. About $7.3 million of the money came from the stations' own coffers.

The balance came from matching funds provided by the Ford Foundation and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Twelve of the 38 shows are new, at least nationally. One is a single program about blacks in America, the rest series of five to 260 segments.

Over-all, 11 shows concern arts and the humanities, eight involve public affairs, seven are "how-to" or consumer series, two are about science, three are for children, four concern minorities and three are in the "variety" category of entertainment.

In addition to "Zoom" and "Washington Straight Talk," other familiar shows leaving the PBS lineup for lack of station financial support are "Black Journal," "Behind the Lines" and the new "Assignment America."

Old reliables renewed by the cooperative include "Sesame Street," "Electric Company," "Wall Street Week," "Theater in America," "Bill Moyers' Journal," "Firing Line," "Nova," "Evening at Symphony," "Washington Week in Review" and "Black Perspective on the News."

Two popular music series begun this season are returning — "Soundstage" and "At the Top," the latter a jazz series. Joining them is the new "Austin City Limits" country music series by KRLN in Austin, Tex.

Judge Halts Ad Testimonials Given Further Restrictions

TRENTON, N.C. (AP)—U.S. District Court Judge John Larkins has ordered a halt to state plans to construct a wider highway on Bogue Banks, south of Morehead City.

Larkins said the state had filed an inadequate environmental impact statement on the project and granted a preliminary injunction requested by a group of conservationists and Bogue Banks property owners.

Larkins ordered the state to prepare a new impact statement, discussing in detail the proposal's effect on erosion, sand dune destruction, increased traffic and pollution, and population density.

The state proposal calls for a 100-foot right of way with a bypass around Salter Path and elimination of two right turns at Emerald Isle.

The new road would run from Atlantic Beach to the Bogue Banks bridge.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission announced today a set of rules that would restrict the testimonials that advertisers can use for their products.

For example, satisfied customers of drug products would be barred from affirming that a headache remedy gave them fast relief.

An automotive engineer must actually look at test results or conduct a personal examination before declaring one car superior to another.

An athlete claiming to get quick energy from a certain breakfast cereal must actually use the cereal.

The examples are a part of what are actually five separate guides. In Federal Trade Commission terminology, guides do not carry the force of law, but they do put businesses on notice that if they violate the guides they can expect to be held to answer to the commission's general sanctions against unfair or deceptive practices.

Two of the five guides were put into effect today. One covers endorsements by experts and generally requires that the expert must have done his or her homework before providing the endorsement.

The second final guide covers endorsements by organizations and generally requires that the organization must have actually considered the product in question and made a decision that fairly reflects its collective judgment. Endorsement by an organization of experts must also meet the standards outlined for expert endorsements. The three other guides were offered in proposed form, which means they will be subject to public comment before the commission decides to implement them.

One would be a general guide covering all endorsements and would incorporate three basic principles: a testimonial must be the honest views of the endorser, the advertiser may not distort a testimonial by taking it out of context, and the endorser must actually use the product.

The second proposed guide would apply to endorsements characterized as representing actual consumer experience. This guide bars testimonials from laymen on the effectiveness of drug products. It also requires testimonials to be typical of broad consumer experience and requires a disclaimer if the testimonial does not represent typical experience.

The use of professional actors to portray consumers also must be disclosed.

The third proposed guide requires an advertiser to disclose any connection with an endorser where the link "might materially affect the weight or credibility of the endorsement." Such a link could be if the celebrity owns a sizable interest in the producer of a product he or she endorses.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: During daytime obstacles may hinder your efforts, particularly where getting in touch with others important to some joint arrangement is concerned, or gaining their support. However, the evening finds these hindrances removed and associates give valuable help.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Home conditions come first today. Some basic matter can be annoying, so correct it wisely. Make up with a close tie in p.m.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have so much work that it will be later in the day before you can do it. Plan it well first. Improve health early.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get your work done during day and put off recreation to the evening. Add to your income and increase happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) The situation seems bleak to you in a.m., so busy yourself at something practical. Evening brings surcease from worry and you accomplish much.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have early anxieties but then can get much done. Follow an expert's advice as tested against your own good judgment.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Although pals may take much of your time in a.m., be patient since you get good ideas from them. Avoid a depressing older acquaintance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't argue with others. Be productive. Steer clear of community matters which could be touchy. Have fun with friends in p.m.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan schedule to handle distant matters and also to investigate new ideas. Gain the support of mate and show more loyalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Keep promises and don't try to squirm out of them. Do not trust your intuition during daytime, but tonight it can be helpful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) An associate requires your assistance during day and you should give it though you had other things planned. Win higher-up's favor, also.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle vital tasks first, then get into new ideas and projects you have in mind. Plan that trip wisely with a fellow worker.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Although you want to have fun, you must carry through with important business to advance. Enjoy recreation in evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will like to stick to the old-fashioned ideas and will be family oriented, which is fine, provided you teach to accept also the really good things in New Era ideas and pursuits. Understand early what the forte is here and slant the education along such lines. There could be fame in this chart, provided the religious training is provided early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Celebrating The Mecklenburg Declaration

EDITOR'S NOTE — Independence-minded pioneers from the back country of North Carolina met in May 1775 to put their anti-royalist feelings in writing — almost 13 months before the Continental Congress declared independence. Two hundred years later, their descendants are celebrating the occasion.

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Local historians will tell you that the gentlemen who penned the Declaration of Independence in July 1776 had been upstaged a year earlier by a minister, a tailor and a dozen others in a back country courthouse in North Carolina.

They insist that local patriots drafted the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence on May 20, 1776, some 13 months before the Continental Congress declared independence.

Others, among them Thomas

Jefferson, maintained the declaration was either a fabrication or at best the muddled recollection of senile old men a quarter-century later.

Despite the questions, the 200th anniversary of the supposed signing will be celebrated in Charlotte on May 19 and 20. Parades, religious ceremonies and a speech by President Ford are planned.

Although authenticity of the declaration may be in doubt, there is no question that the local populace — largely English, Scotch-Irish and German — was for independence.

Their inclination for independence arose from their being so far from the coastal centers of royal authority and by the sermons of the Rev. Alexander Craighead, who came to Mecklenburg County after being expelled from Maryland in 1758 for preaching separation.

The Rev. Mr. Craighead died in 1766, but many local leaders were reared on his railings at the crown and the Anglican Church.

Their contempt was returned by the royal government in New Bern, which viewed these countrymen as rabble whose quarrels with the Indians caused headaches for colonial administrators.

Frontier habits, such as polygamy and drunkenness, appalled refined royalists along the coast.

The spirit of revolution flickered briefly in the back country in 1771, when farmers in Alamance County 100 miles to the north rebelled against royal taxation Mecklenburg County raised a militia to join the rebellion, but the revolt was quashed by the time they arrived.

As word of trouble between the crown and the New England colonists reached the back country, the Committee of Public Safety called a meeting of local leaders for May 19, 1775.

One account says a resolution for independence was introduced at the onset of the meeting. Others say it was introduced late in the day after a messenger brought word of fighting at Lexington and Concord a month earlier.

They all agree that at 2 a.m. on the 20th, delegates declared themselves "free and independent people...under the power of God and the general Congress."

After reading the declaration to a crowd outside the courthouse, delegates adjourned. They returned on May 31 to draft articles of local government to supersede royal rule. The second document became known as the Mecklenburg Resolves.

Capt. James Jack was dispatched to carry the Resolves and the Declaration to North Carolina's delegation at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia.

When he arrived June 23, he found the delegation in no mind for revolution. The chairmen of the colony's delegation, Richard Caswell and William Hooper, were still hoping for reconciliation with the British. Capt. Jack was sent home.

Royal Gov. Josiah Martin sent a copy of the Resolves to England, saying they "surpassed all the horrid and treasonable publications that the inflammatory spirits of this continent have yet produced."

Since copies of the Resolves were printed in several contemporary publications, their authenticity is generally accepted. The original copy of the declaration was supposedly destroyed in 1800 in a fire at the home of John Alexander, one of the signers.

Lack of an original document cast some doubt on its authenticity. Some historians believe Alexander and others confused the Resolves with a declaration and that the meetings produced only the Resolves.

Jefferson, in a letter to John Adams in 1819, wrote he had no doubt "the paper from Mecklenburg County of North Carolina is spurious."

Because of a similar phrasing in the Declaration of 1776 and the Mecklenburg document, Adams once accused Jefferson of plagiarism in drafting the 1776 document. Adams recanted the charge.

Those who accept the Mecklenburg document's authenticity argue Alexander and other supposed signers stated its existence nearly 20 years before their deaths and they were considered of sound mind.

Others claim that without the declaration, there would have been no need for the Resolves.

"When you don't have an original of anything, you're going to have people question the authenticity," said Grant Whitney, a leader of the bicentennial celebration. "This thing is deep in the feeling of the people of this community and I don't think it would have been so widely held if it were not true."

Prewett Scholarships Announced By Chapter

The East Carolina University chapter of Psi Chi, National Honor Society in psychology, has announced the establishment of a new scholarship honoring Dr. Clinton Prewett and the late Mrs. Nancy Napier Prewett.

The award, named the Clinton and Nancy Prewett Scholarship, was presented for the first time this year to an undergraduate student, Yi Ling Liu, it was announced by Dr. W. F. Grossnickle, faculty adviser to Psi Chi.

Psi Chi annually awards three scholarships, made possible by donations from faculty, students and friends of Psi Chi.

The Mary Faulkner Wray Memorial Scholarship was awarded this year to a graduate student, Mrs. Carmella Lane. In future years, this scholarship will be funded from interest from an endowment of $2,500 donated by Robert Wray, plus additional donated monies.

The third Psi Chi scholarship was awarded to an undergraduate, Ronald D. Franklin.

The new Clinton and Nancy Prewett Scholarship honors Dr. Prewett, who served as chairman of the Department of Psychology at ECU from 1957 until 1972, and his wife, Dr. Prewett, who has been a prominent in mental health activities for many years, was appointed to the N. C. State Board of Examiners of Practicing Psychologists when the board was first formed. He is a former president of the North Carolina Psychological Association and has served as a consultant to mental health centers throughout Eastern North Carolina.

During its recent spring meeting, new officers for Psi Chi were installed as follows: Larry Hines, president; Kingsley Hoemann, vice president; Barbara Lyons, secretary; Connie Campbell, treasurer; Rise Long, publicity. Faculty advisers are Dr. John Lutz and John Childers, as well as Dr. Grossnickle, who also is southeastern vice president of Psi Chi.

Dr. Boice Daugherty, principal speaker at the spring installation and awards gathering, discussed and demonstrated concepts in hypnosis.

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT

MAY 21, 1975
P. O. BOX 1903
GREENVILLE, N.C. 27834
PH. 752-4137

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

The City of Greenville proposes to request the US Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL-93-383) to be used for the following project:

PURCHASE OF THE EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY FOUNDATION PROPERTY:

—TO BE USED AS A RECREATIONAL AND OPEN SPACE FACILITY FOR THE CITIZENS OF GREENVILLE;

—LOCATED OFF MUMFORD AND EXTENDING TO THE TAR RIVER (APPROXIMATELY 338 ACRES); (FORMERLY THE BARRUS-WHITE PROPERTY);

—$75,000 PURCHASE PRICE;

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment; and, accordingly, the City of Greenville has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL-91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such statement were as follows:

—that the purchase of the property and future use of it as a recreational and open space would not involve any major construction;

—that the major attraction of the site is its natural or wilderness characteristics which will be fully preserved;

—that since much of the area is in the Tar River flood plain, the project, by leaving the natural areas intact, would help to preserve this flood plain;

—that the addition of open space areas to the recreational facilities of the City would provide for expanded recreational opportunities for all citizens; and, therefore,

—the Environmental Advisory Commission feels that the project would have no adverse or harmful effects on the surrounding environment.

An Environmental Review Record requesting the within project has been made by the City of Greenville which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the City Hall and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at the City Planner's Office, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. during weekdays.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City of Greenville to the Office of the Mayor. Such written comments should be received at the City Hall on or before June 10, 1975. All such comments so received, will be considered and the City of Greenville will not request the release of Federal funds to take an administrative action on the within project prior to June 10, 1975.

Fidel Castro Struggles With Development Effort

EDITORS NOTE — Sam Summerlin, who was chief correspondent for The Associated Press in Havana in 1953-54, returned to the Cuban capital earlier this month with Sen. George McGovern. Here is his analysis of what Castro is trying to achieve in his "second revolution" — a drive to bring a new prosperity to his country.

By SAM SUMMERLIN
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA, Cuba (AP) —

New President Of Humane Soc.

Barbara Puryear of Greenville has accepted the presidency of the Pitt County Humane Society for the remainder of 1975. She will fill the term of former president Mary Gandy, who resigned. Mrs. Puryear was unanimously elected by the Humane Society's Executive Board.

Members of the Humane Society met at the home of Evelyn Beasley recently for a combination business meeting and patio party.

Treasurer Nicole Aronson announced that the May 4-10 "Be Kind to Animals Week" fund drive netted $285.

Other committee reports indicated that a total of 14 Friends of Animals Reduced-Fee Spaying Certificates were issued during April, and 12 pet adoptions were arranged through the Greenville Animal Shelter. There were three investigations of cruelty to animals.

A Certificate of Recognition was issued to Jean Derner of York Road, Greenville, for outstanding aid to animals during the past six months.

Four Humane Society members, including the president, plan to attend a workshop at the Royal Villa Motel in Raleigh May 23-24, co-sponsored by the Humane Society of the United States and the Wake County Humane Society.

The Pitt County Humane Society includes persons of all age groups and occupations who are interested in the welfare of animals. Its projects include local coordination of the FoA Reduced-Fee Spaying-Neutering Program, securing veterinary care for injured or sick stray animals, and placement of unwanted or abandoned cats and dogs.

Membership is open to any Pitt County resident.

Tax-deductible contributions to the Humane Society may be mailed to P. O. Box 1155, Greenville.

Fidel Castro once said: "It is a lot easier to win 20 wars than to win the development battle."

The former guerrilla now is a subdued prime minister, dealing with a daily torrent of plans and statistics that he hopes will bring prosperity to his Communist state.

Such an achievement, Castro reasons, would be as compelling a victory as his two-year campaign in Cuba's mountains which ended in triumph in early 1959.

For 16 years, Castro has been striving to match that stunning rebel revolution with an equally audacious battle to make Cuba a socialistic showcase that would catch the eye of neighboring Caribbean and Latin American countries, as well as Third World nations in Africa and Asia.

Behind him are such early experiments as "instant" industrialization, a disaster that gravely dislocated

Cuba's traditional dependence on agriculture, largely sugar which accounts for about 80 per cent of the island's exports.

Stung by this and other economic failures, Castro and his associates set out to achieve a program that would bring order out of chaos.

Five years later, Castro seems to have pretty well succeeded.

A senior diplomat who has watched the Cuban revolution evolve said the country's economy has shown a "remarkable improvement" in the last few years.

By shifting priorities, this diplomat explained, Castro has started to accomplish his long-sought goals. The envoy recounted that early in the revolution, Cuba stressed that it was, above all else, a Communist state, secondly a revolutionary regime, thirdly an undeveloped country and lastly, a Latin American nation. In recent years, this diplomat reasoned, Castro reversed those priorities, emphasizing that Cuba first of all is a Latin American country, undeveloped and in need of progress, and lastly a Communist and revolutionary society.

This shift in emphasis, the envoy said, provoked Cuba to break out of its isolation and sole dependence on the Soviet Union, which has been pumping about $1.5 million a day into Cuba. Despite the blockade imposed by the Organization of American States, Castro has managed to crack the OAS stranglehold on trade and now is enjoying both diplomatic and commercial ties with 10 nations in the area, including oil-rich Venezuela and Argentina, which is pouring new cars, refrigerators, meat-processing plants and other equipment for light industry into Cuba.

Castro pulled away from backing revolutionaries in other countries as his trade flourished with once-bitter enemies.

Castro's contribution to socialist lore, one diplomat said, is that Cuba, unlike most undeveloped nations, moved first to create an educational and social foundation for its society, whereas other countries struggling for growth have tried to push their economies first and take care of their people later.

"You don't find hungry, diseased children in the streets and countryside of Cuba," this diplomat observed. "Over a period of 16 years, Castro with his massive campaigns of free education and health care has wiped out the misery that is so endemic in much of Latin America."

"Now," the envoy said, "Cuba has created a strong, vibrant, healthy base of young people on which to build a boom economy. Cuba is ready to take off."

Castro's move to seek renewed trade relations with the United States is viewed as an effort to depend less on the Soviet Union and to resume the flow of ships from Cuba's one-time dominant customer and supplier.

The soaring world market prices for sugar have enriched Cuba's storehouse of foreign assets, and the Cuban leader wants to buy such critically needed equipment as U.S.-made cane harvesting equipment and spare parts for American equipment that is badly in need of repair.

Cuba does not seek to achieve a consumer-oriented society. One observer said Castro isn't interested in every Cuban having a dozen wardrobes or a car in every garage. But the prime minister is intent on proving to an often skeptical world that his socialistic scheme for Cuba is working, and is on the crest of a Caribbean boom that inevitably will call attention to what some are calling Castro's "second revolution."

Witness Didn't Want The Ordeal

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) —

"The prosecuting witness just didn't want to go through another trial," said Dist. Atty. Roy Holdford after agreeing to reduced sentences for three young blacks once sentenced to death for raping a white woman.

"It appeared that the trial would have lasted in the neighborhood of three to four weeks and she didn't want to go through it again."

Bobby Ray Hines, Vernon L. Brown and Jesse Lee Walston were sentenced on Dec. 3, 1973 for raping a 21-year-old white woman on Aug. 5, 1973. On Monday, Superior Court Judge Herbert Small accepted pleas of no contest to charges of assault with the intent to commit rape and gave them sharply reduced sentences.

Under an arrangement negotiated among the court and attorneys, Small sentenced each to a six-year prison term and then suspended the sentences. The three will be released Aug. 18 and must remain in Edgecombe County during a three-year probation.

The death sentences touched off several protest marches in the Tarboro area by civil rights groups who claimed that the death penalty was used unfairly against blacks.

Earlier this year, the North Carolina Supreme Court had ordered a new trial for the three after ruling that the prosecutor erred by telling prospective jurors that no one had been executed in the state since 1962.

At the time of the trial, conviction of rape charges carried an automatic death sentence in North Carolina.

Holdford said he also agreed to the early release because the defendants had been held on death row in Central Prison for much of the time since their conviction.

By the time of their release, the three will have served nearly two years imprisonment.

The Southern Poverty Law Center said it would pay the trial costs and jail fees assessed against the three.

One Reporter For Every 2 Members

RAMBLING IN THE HOUSE WITH SAM D. BUNDY
Sessions of the North Carolina General Assembly are about the best-covered events in the state. According to the media roster for the 1975 session, there is about one reporter for every two members of the House of Representatives. Both the print and broadcast media are well represented. Legislators welcome reporters. They are a vital and indispensable communications link, complementing efforts of individual legislators to keep the folks back home informed of Assembly action.

If you freeze up at the thought of a written examination, you can appreciate a bill introduced in the House that would permit applicants seeking certification as emergency medical service practitioners the option of taking written or oral examinations.

Would-be ambulance attendants must take a 40-hour course of study, and aspiring emergency medical technicians must pursue an additional 41-hour course, for a total of 81 hours of study. Applicants must then pass comprehensive examinations on their studies to be certified. Some people freeze when confronted with a written examination, even when they have the knowledge and qualifications required for certification. Provided this bill passes the General Assembly, applicants for those jobs would have a choice of how they wished to take their examinations.

Two bills have been introduced in the House that would change the length of terms of members of the General Assembly, the governor, and lieutenant governor.

One bill would amend the state constitution by increasing the terms of legislators to four years. Members now serve two-year terms. The bill provides that in the first legislative election after adoption of the amendment, half the legislators would be elected to two-year terms, the other half to four-year terms, to set up a staggering system. After that, all members would be elected to four-year terms in elections held, as now, in even-numbered years.

The other bill would amend the state constitution to increase the term of office of the governor and lieutenant governor to six years. Both are now elected to serve four-year terms. The bill also provides that any person who has served as governor or lieutenant governor may not seek the same office again.

The constitutional amendments proposing the term changes would be submitted to voters at the first statewide election after passage of the bills. If the amendments were approved by voters, they would become effective January 1, 1977.

A bill recently introduced in the House would require pharmacists to quote prescription drug prices to persons seeking such information either in person or by telephone. However, the person making the request would have to describe the drug adequately.

The bill would also require prescription drug retailers to inform customers, by posting notice, of their right to receive price information.

See you next week.
