Ford Reminds U.S. Freedom Has Price

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paying tribute to the nation's war dead on Memorial Day, President Ford said that "as long as there are lawbreakers in the world, we must have the strength and the resolve to stand up for what is right.

"It is the price we have always paid for being free," Ford said. "It is the price we must be willing to pay in the future."

Ford made the remarks in a speech prepared for a wreathlaying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery.

Speaking in the wake of the fall of South Vietnam and Cambodia, the President pledged to continue the search for American military personnel missing in action in Indochina.

"The world should know that the United States will not falter in its determination to achieve an adequate accounting of MIAs," Ford said.

He called for prayer "for the safety of those still missing in action and the solace of those who wait as well as those who mourn."

The President said the value of the sacrifice of those who gave their lives to defend America "depends on how well we meet our responsibilities today. If we live in peace as bravely as they died in war, the world will remember them as long as there are free men to be inspired."

Prior to the speech, Ford summoned his economic policy board to a meeting in the Oval Office shortly after 8 a.m. Among decisions the President is facing is whether to impose another $1-a-barrel tax on imported oil in an effort to cut Americans' consumption of fuel.

Ford spent a rainy Sunday at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., with members of his family. Despite the weather, he went for a swim in the Camp David pool. Aides said he also spent time preparing for his upcoming European trip and conferring by phone with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

When it came time for Ford's scheduled return to Washington Sunday evening, rain and fog made a trip by helicopter impossible. So, the President went back to the White House in a motorcade.

Claim Blame For Killings

PARIS (AP) — A group identifying itself as the Revolutionary Republican Movement of the Armed Forces of Iran today claimed to have killed two American Air Force officers in Tehran last week.

Col. Paul R. Shaffer and Lt. Col. Jack J. Turner were shot as they rode to work last Wednesday. The Iranian government blamed Marxist guerrillas and said it had identified the three killers.

A photocopied circular posted in Paris in a plain white envelope was received today by The Associated Press. The circular said:

"The recent regrettable but unfortunately unavoidable imperative execution of two U.S. officers in Tehran, reported in the international press as an act committed by 'terrorists' is inexact. Such a statement is an insult to the honor of the Iranian people. The two U.S. officers were condemned by order of a special tribunal of the Revolutionary Republican Movement of the Armed Forces of Iran. The order of the military tribunal was carried out by a military commando directed by an Iranian officer."

The statement attacked Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi as a despot who has squandered Iranian wealth and accused him of being under the orders of the CIA.

"We hope that our message to imperialism in general and to the American people in particular will be heard, failing which should the present bankrupt U.S. policy in Iran be continued, drastic and violent actions against all and everything American in Iran will be continued," the statement said.

Confer Degrees On ECU's Largest Graduating Class

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins conferred degrees upon the largest graduating class in the school's history in commencement exercises yesterday.

The 2:00 p.m. program was the school's 66th annual commencement. It was held outdoors in Ficklen Stadium in mid-80 degree heat.

Senator Robert Morgan closed out his official association with the university as a trustee by giving the graduation address. He traced the achievements of the school and took a nostalgic look at his own days as a student at ECU.

In congratulating the 2,618 graduates, Morgan said he was now a member of what may be the "greatest of all universities"—the U.S. Senate, where "100 members are lectured daily by the great leaders of the world."

Morgan cited conservation, the preservation of our basic freedoms, and the national economy as areas with problems which need solutions. "But the solutions are not easy, there are no clear-cut answers," Morgan said.

Morgan said the university was originally founded to give an education to those who might not otherwise receive one. "Those who preceded me were determined that young men and women have the opportunity to burgeon out what's inside them," Morgan said. "And in the words of John F. Kennedy, the torch will be passed," he added.

In naming the accomplishments of the different departments and schools of the university, Morgan took time to extend appreciation to the legislators who made it possible. He said he was proud of the fact that ECU had been able to "move ahead without keeping others down." Morgan told of the advancements made at other universities and in the technical schools in North Carolina at the same time ECU was making great advancements.

The school has developed to be one of the best on the eastern seaboard, Morgan said, and "top businessmen are seeking graduates of ECU because of their willingness to put their natural ingenuity and talents to work. "They don't expect to start out as executives," Morgan said he was told by one businessman.

"By working together," Morgan said, "we can meet the needs of the state and the nation."

Morgan paid a "special tribute" to the faculty and administration of ECU, saying the school has one of the heaviest teaching loads in the state. ECU also makes the highest utilization of its physical plant, Morgan said.

Morgan also praised Dr. Jenkins, saying he is a "tireless worker for the people of eastern North Carolina."

In his remarks, Jenkins lauded the faculty and told editors and reporters that the "real story" should be headlined "Faculty Dedication at ECU."

Jenkins said the faculty deserves "our thanks and praise for having taught nearly 1,000 additional students we over-enrolled this past year at no (extra) cost to the state." This extra work "should be regarded as a gift which the members of this university gave as added service to the people of North Carolina."

"This is the spirit of East Carolina University," Jenkins said.

"Although many of us received criticism for some of the things we accomplished, there are things we have done for which we do not apologize," Jenkins said.

Jenkins cited some of the opposition and criticism he has received for "placing to much emphasis" on different areas—adult education, military education, athletics, enrollment, and the medical school.

Of the medical school, Jenkins said "the enemies. . . are seizing every opportunity to destroy it, and their tactics and remarks border almost on the hysterical. We must keep our calm and ignore these."

The ECU Band gave a one-hour concert before the ceremony. The processional and recessional were played by the Wind Ensemble under the direction of Herbert L. Carter. The University Choral, under the direction of Brett Watson, performed two songs during the program.

Police officers reported several cases of heat prostration among the 10,000 in the stadium. Several victims were sent to the hospital by the Rescue Squad.

AT GRADUATION . . . Senator Robert Morgan, who delivered the keynote address, and Chancellor Leo Jenkins prepare for the 66th annual commencement at East Carolina University.

Think Cool

RALEIGH (AP)—The cost of keeping cool this summer has risen 20 per cent over last year, Carolina Power & Light Co. advised as the first heat wave hit North Carolina last week.

The power company estimates it will cost $137 to cool a 2,500 square foot house with central air conditioning this summer, up from $114 last year.

CP&L recommended that customers get used to a warmer indoor climate and set the air conditioning at 78 or 80 degrees when the house is occupied. When the house is empty, the company suggested moving the setting to 82 or 84 degrees.

Each additional degree of coolness increases your power bill by five per cent, CP&L warned.

State government reduced electricity consumption by 15 per cent last year by raising the temperature in state offices six degrees, to 78, according to General Services plant manager Lewis Strong.

Appliance dealers reported meanwhile that air conditioning sales are sharply down this year. Many dealers blamed the slump on higher power costs. Air conditioners themselves have jumped by about $50 to $75 over last year and slowed construction of new homes has also reduced demand.

Fan sales were reported up. "People seem to be cutting back on electricity by buying fans, they are making do," said Ron Reeves, appliance manager of a Raleigh discount store.

Abrupt Decline In Birth Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record drop in a key birth rate statistic may be a temporary dip that will be balanced by a later surge, a Census Bureau analyst says.

Campbell Gibson, who prepared the report, said the speed at which the drop occurred during 1974 suggests that postponement rather than abandonment of child-bearing was the cause of the decline.

It was the third year in a row that the statistic, the total fertility rate, has been below the level at which births and deaths balance. And it came despite the first increase in four years in the nation's total number of births, which was reported by the National Center for Health Statistics in February.

Gibson said it is too early to tell whether the drop foreshadows a permanent decline in the birth rate.

He said other census surveys showing that women of child-bearing age still are planning an average of a little more than two children apiece suggest that current birth rates are below what the long-term rate will be. The current total fertility rate means every woman would have an average of 1.86 children during her lifetime.

The total fertility rate, which census demographers consider the most useful of the three birth rates they compile, projects the number of babies every 1,000 women of child-bearing age would have during their lifetime at the birth rate for a given year.

In 1974 the figure was down to 1,862 compared to the previous record low of 1,896 in 1973. The population would theoretically balance at a permanent rate of 2,100.

Found

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP)—State Rep. W. Stanford White, D-Dare, was picked up today by a Coast Guard helicopter after being missing overnight in foggy Croatan Sound.

The Coast Guard station at Elizabeth City said White had drifted 25 miles down the coast to Long Shoal Point in a heavy fog when his motorboat was spotted. In it, White had painted the words, "Have walked." He had just waded ashore and was hoisted into the helicopter and taken to Albemarle Hospital in Elizabeth City.

A Coast Guard spokesman said White was in good condition but was suffering from fatigue and exposure. He said he assumed the engine on the 21-foot boat had failed.

The pickup ended a search that began Sunday evening when White's family said he had not returned after taking off alone on a fishing trip Sunday morning from his home in Mann's Harbor.

The sound was shrouded Sunday and today with a heavy fog that dropped visibility to nearly zero.

How do you find a doctor who will take Medicaid stamps? M.R.

Brenda Worthington of the Social Services office said that office has no control over which doctors will take the stamps; that is left up to the doctor. The only way to find one who will take the stamps is to call each doctor and ask if he accepts stamps.

DOG LICENSES

Since there is a leash law, do you still have to buy dog licenses? J.A.

Dog licenses are still required and a person could be subject to a fine if his dog is not licensed.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

DONOR INFO ON LICENSE

Hotline dealt two days last week with organ and tissue donation, a means of giving better health to another person after one's own death.

An Associated Press report recently told of several states' legislating to have donor bequests included on a person's driver's license, if he wishes. The reasoning is simple: removal of organs or tissues to be donated must be made quickly or it's useless. If a person becomes ill or dies away from home or is injured or killed in an accident, the driver's license is probably the first item sought to establish his identity. Too much time may have elapsed before a donor card is found or a member of the grieving family thinks to tell someone of the victim's intention to donate, if, indeed, it's known.

Some states which have the law are Tennessee, Kentucky, and Arizona.

Hotline believes this is a very good idea and one which all interested persons should suggest to our legislators.

Increased Services Cited In Health Dept. Work

The Pitt County Board of Health, Chaired by Charles Gaskins held its annual spring dinner meeting Thursday night with the staff of the Pitt County Community Health Department and the County Commissioners as guests.

Health Director, Roger J. Barnaby, M.P.H., and County Manager, Reginald Gray, presented the Health Department's 1975-76 budget for the Board of Health to review and study for consideration at the June meeting.

Earl Trevathan, M.D., Medical Consultant to the Health Department and Mrs. Tillie Cullipher, Acting Chief of Personal Health Division, reported a successful beginning in increasing hypertension screening during May which was designated by the Board as Pitt County High Blood Pressure Month. With the cooperation of the Medical Society and coordination with local physicians regarding referrals, the Department is providing additional screening services during May to take advantage of the current national publicity on hypertension. Mrs. Cullipher said that after two and one half weeks, the number of persons requesting a blood pressure test already has doubled at all clinic sites, and over 20 people have been referred to their physician. It was indicated that this month's experience will provide a basis for planning in conjunction with the Medical Society and other community agencies what the hypertension program for this county should be.

Three Board members reported upon the Health Board Committee study of the satellite clinic services and facilities in their area of the county with Dr. Charles Fitzgerald discussing the Farmville Clinic; Joe House the Ayden-Grifton Clinic; Mrs. Hattie Thompson the Grimesland Clinic; and Barnaby Board of Health Secretary, reporting on the Bethel Clinic in the absence of Board of Health member, Sammy Carson. Each commended the staff for an outstanding job and meeting the increasing demand for public health services; and recommended that a satellite clinic be continued in each geographical area. The limitations of the present physical facilities for efficient delivery of services to the population needing the services is a concern in each of the clinics. The Board affirmed its resolution to work out satisfactory arrangements such as acquiring some type of mobile housing unit on a permanent location in each area. The individual committee Board members will be contacting the officials in each community to seek their help in identifying permanent sites.

Willie Pate, Director of Environmental Health, showed a graph comparing Environmental Health services provided in 1973-74 and the first part of 1975 which showed a substantial increase in monthly services over previous years. He explained that this marked increase is related to the increase in Environmental Health Division staff and some new services being offered which increase requests. Another service for the prevention of communicable disease is the current increased emphasis on swimming pool monitoring to assure all public swimming pools compliance with Board of Health regulations.

Pate also reported that a

At Least 49 Congressmen Taking European Junket

TWO WERE INJURED... The driver of this car, Guy Neal Warthan of Route 1, Disputanta, Va., and a passenger were injured early Sunday when the vehicle collided with a utility pole on Memorial Drive 24 feet South of the Paige Drive intersection. Police charged Warthan with careless and reckless driving in connection with the 1:45 a.m. crash. Damage was estimated at $1,800 to the car and $100 to the pole. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least 49 members of Congress are taking advantage of the Memorial Day recess to make trips to Europe to investigate at taxpayer expense.

The trips include an inspection tour of NATO facilities, visits to the Paris air show and travels to look into the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union and to examine prison systems in Sweden and Holland.

Time for sightseeing and shopping is set aside along with the work and members have time off at night for entertainment.

They get expense money plus their travel costs but members taking their spouses have to pay extra.

On the NATO trip, for example, the Pentagon says each of the 16 House members and one senator are getting $825 in government funds for expenses.

The trip to Berlin, Brussels, Rome, Naples, Vienna, Athens and the Azores began after Congress began the 10-day recess Thursday night.

A Pentagon spokesman, when asked how the members were selected for the Pentagon-sponsored trip, said "most are members of the House International Relations Committee and the others all have an interest in NATO affairs."

But only two of the congressmen are members of that committee, Reps. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., and Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Calif.

Five others are on subcommittees dealing with NATO affairs.

They are Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., and Reps. Clarence D. Long, D-Md., Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., Burt L. Talcott, R-Calif., and Edward T. Patten, D-N.J.

The 10 members not on any NATO-related subcommittee are Reps. Phil M. Landrum, D-Ga., Herman T. Schneebeli, R-Va., Mark Andrews, R-N.D., Don H. Clausen, R-Calif., Del Clawson, R-Calif., Robert B. Duncan, D-Ore., C.W. "Bill" Young, R-Fla., Yvonne Brathwaite Burke, D-Calif., William N. Ketchum, R-Calif., and Trent Lott, R-Miss.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., cancelled out to take a trip with a group that will go to the Paris air show, an aide said.

That apparently is a trip on which 10 House Armed Services Committee members are going to Vienna to visit the U.S. delegation on mutual U.S.-Soviet troop reductions with a stop at the air show on the way home.

Also going to Paris is Rep. Wayne L. Hays, president of the North Atlantic Assembly, who is leading a three-member delegation to an assembly conference in Brussels and then a seven-member delegation to a conference in Paris.

Attending the North Atlantic Assembly conference with Hays are Reps. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., and Bob Wilson, R-Calif.

The six members joining Hays in Paris to discuss international monetary problems and U.S.-French relations are Reps. Brooks, Bob Casey, D-Tex., Philip Burton, D-Calif., John Buchanan, R-Ala., Charles Rose, D-N.C., and Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C.

Members of three House Judiciary subcommittees also are traveling.

Assembly Acting On Legislation

RAMBLING IN THE HOUSE WITH
SAM D. BUNDY

The 1975 session of the General Assembly has begun the preliminary phase of winding down and enactment of bills into law is picking up steam. Here's a brief look at some new statutes:

It is now unlawful for a person to "willfully trespass upon or damage a public school bus." Violation is a misdemeanor punishable by a $500 fine or two years in jail. The law also makes it a misdemeanor to enter a school bus after being forbidden to do so by an authorized person, and a misdemeanor to refuse to leave a school bus after told to do so. Each is punishable by a $100 fine or 30 days in jail.

A law designed to "insure maximum safety for pupils being transported to school related activities" authorizes local boards of education to purchase activity buses with local tax funds and maintain them in county school bus garages on par with regular school buses. The law provides that local funds may be used to hire additional mechanics "so as to insure that all activity buses owned and operated by county and city boards of education are maintained in a safe mechanical condition." However, the State Public School Fund must be reimbursed for all maintenance costs incurred by the activity buses.

Prisoners with felony sentences may now be prevented from escape by "any means reasonable necessary, including deadly force" under a law ratified by the General Assembly early in May. The new act repealed "all laws and clauses of law in conflict. . . ."

Probation officers will soon be required to take new probationers on tours of prison units within the first month of probation under a law that becomes effective early in July. The law states that probation officers "shall use all practicable and suitable methods. . . to add and encourage persons on probation to bring about improvement in their conduct and condition. It requires that "within the first 30 days of a person's probation" the officer must take him to a prison unit for a tour "so that he may better appreciate the consequences of probation revocation."

Prisoners assigned to work-release programs or on temporary parole who fail to return to prison units on time may be charged with first escape violations if they return voluntarily to custody within 24 hours, under a law enacted early in May. Late returners will, however, under a law enacted early in May. Late returners will, however, face administrative action and will not be allowed on work-release for four months. The law provides that repeat offenders will be punished for escape.

The General Assembly has approved an increase in license fees for hunting, fishing, and trapping in North Carolina. The new prices for some of the most popular licenses are: Resident state combination hunting and fishing license, $10.00; resident state hunting license, $7.50; and resident county hunting license, $3.50.

See you next week.

Sees A Life With 'Less'

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Living with less does not necessarily mean a cheapened lifestyle, a Davidson College economics professor says.

"I think the time will come when we may look back on our garish billboards and shoddy treatment of living space as senseless and wasteful," said Dr. Louise Nelson, chairman of a national study entitled "Economic Facts of Life—Living With Less."

The study is sponsored by the American Association of University Women.

Dr. Nelson said in an interview that greater attention to basic social values could make it easier to adapt to diminished material wealth.

She said that population increases coupled with diminishing resources will force Americans to live with less in the immediate future.

She said Americans will have to accept smaller homes, more durable but less fashionable goods and forms of recreation "that make heavier demands on the cultured mind and less on costly gadgets."

Although she believes inflation will be controlled, she has "a real question whether we can have full employment within the marketplace."

She said the answer lives in more employment in areas not so sensitive to price incentives, such as improvements in park and recreation areas.

O'Neill Play Is Strong Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Eugene O'Neill's "A Moon for the Misbegotten" is on ABC-TV tonight. It's a brilliant show, but we warn that it's a shade gloomy and may leave you depressed. So take precautions.

Brew a nice pot of tea, invite over your most loyal friends and hire an Irish tenor with no demons in his head to sing "I'm Off to Dublin in the Green" during the commercial breaks.

That'll gird you for 2½ hours of strong drama about tortured love, drinking, deception and three-way guilt on a seedy Connecticut farm owned by a tormented, alcoholic Broadway has-been and run by a rundown old Irishman and his slatternly, heavy-set daughter.

Jason Robards as the actor, Ed Flanders as the Irishman and Colleen Dewhurst as the daughter each turn in superb performances in this original-cast reprise of the play's 1973 revival on Broadway.

The drama centers with considerable anguish on the possibility actor Jim Tyrone (Robards) will sell the farm on which impoverished Phil Hogan (Flanders) and his daughter Josie (Miss Dewhurst) live.

They're way behind in rent, Tyrone is low on funds, and the prissy, well-to-do owner of a neighboring farm is willing to pay $10,000 for Tyrone's turf just to get the slovenly Hogans off it.

To complicate matters, the boozy, world-weary actor is a friend of the Hogans. And Josie insists on claiming she's made love with all the lads in the neighborhood, which surprisingly dismays the thespian, a veteran and wanton wencher.

Despite her brazen talk and coarse ways, he sees in her only virginal innocence and beauty. And in her fashion she's sweet on him, as they say. She knows he's in misery.

Despite this, she and her father hatch a plot to keep the farm.

He'll take Tyrone to town and get him drunk. After that, she'll seduce the actor. Then Old Dad will arrive at dawn with witnesses, find the two in bed and, as he puts it, "I raise the roof and threaten him if he don't marry you."

It's a wee bit more complex than that, of course, and viewers who've never seen the play will soon learn that Things Aren't What They Seem to Be in the course of this poetically written view of sad and sorry lives.

It's not pure tragedy, of course. The play often sparkles with bittersweet wit and the Irish brogue of the Hogans has a way of softening the harshest words — of which there are many.

Viewers who grouse that commercials wreck the continuity of TV dramas will be pleasantly surprised to find no commercial breaks except at the end of each of this play's four acts.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Widespread interest in edible wild plants launched a research project by undergraduates at Purdue University here. Jerry McLaughlin, project director and a professor, said almost half of about 70 plants examined so far were toxic in some degree.

Couple Exchanges Vows Sunday

MRS. WILLIAM FREDERICK WHITEFORD

Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Carol Ann Thomas and William Frederick Whiteford Sunday at 4:00 p.m. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Bailey.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lee Thomas of Greenville and the late Mrs. Carolyn Pierce Thomas. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Charles Whiteford III, also of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Sharon Irwin, organist, and Mrs. Donald J. Raper of Rocky Mount, aunt of the bridegroom, sang 'O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory silkened organza over peau de soie. Designed with a colonial neckline of English net and Venise lace flowerettes, the bodice featured a sheer V-yoke of schifflie embroidered English net trimmed with flowerettes. The Venise braid and schiffli lace bordered the empire waist and long sheer sleeves and chapel train. Her headpiece was a cathedral lenghth mantilla of imported alencon lace and she carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Floyd Wayne Avery, sister of the bride, of Greenville, was matron of honor. She wore a formal length slip gown of romance blue knit designed with a sweetheart neckline and flared skirt. Her gown was enhanced by a bolero jacket in matching blue knit with long fitted sleeves and lettuce ruffle along the neckline and tie front. Her headpiece was a remance blue tailored bow and she carried a bouquet of summer flowers with yellow ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Acra Ames, cousin of the bride, of Marion, Ala., Miss Cynthia Henrietta Davis of Lumberton, Mrs. Robert Dunn Whitley of Greenville, and Miss Ina Kandee Zerby of Eoodbridge, Va. They wore dresses and carried bouquets identical to the matron of honor

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Jacob Charles Whiteford IV and Graham Clinton Whiteford, brothers of the bridegroom and Robert Warren Thomas, all of Greenville, and George Sitgreaves Attmore of Rocky Mount, brothers of the bride, Julius P. Cherry Jr. of Kinston, Mathew Stuart Davis III of Bethel, and Whitney Miller and Leonard W. Jones of Greenville.

The bride is a 1974 graduate of Greensboro College and is employed by the Greenville Recreation Department. The bridegroom Whiteford is continuing his education in physical therapy at East Carolina University.

The mother of the bride wore a blue chiffon floor length gown with an orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother chose a mint green floor length gown with a orchid corsage. Mrs. James A. Kackney Sr. of Washington, grandmother of the bride, the bridegroom's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Barney R. Raper of Lucama, and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Jacob Charles Whiteford Jr., wore orchid corsages.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lee Thomas, parents of the bride, entertained at a reception at the Brook Valley Country Blub.

Twins Want To Double-Up While Away At College

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My brother and I are 17-year-old identical twins. Our parents have been separated since we were 10, and we haven't seen our father since then.

My twin brother and I are very close. (We have no other brothers or sisters.) Some people think that we feel "incomplete" when we're apart, but the truth is that we are always together because we really want to be. We have most of the same friends, doubledate a lot and stick together out of choice, not out of need.

Next year we will be going off to college. We want to go to the same college, but our mother says that we should go to different colleges so that we can learn to be independent. Our guidance counselor says it's time we made a break from each other.

Abby, we don't really want to make a break.

Are they right? Or are we?

A TWIN

DEAR TWIN: IF you and your brother are not using your twinhood to get attention, if you are equally endowed, if you really enjoy each other as friends, if you can each cultivate friends individually, I would advise you to go to the same college—if you want to. A twin is more than just a womb mate. A twin is a friend. And a closer friendship never was. I ought to know.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14-years-old, and I have a problem. My family moved into a new house, and my father made some rules.

One was "no eating" except in the kitchen. However, my father eats wherever he wants to. He dropped greasy foods on the floor in the living room, which left a grease spot on the new carpet. My mother doesn't eat much, but she smokes a lot, and she already dropped ashes on the carpet and burned a hole in it.

My little sister and I are watched like hawks, but we don't eat in the living room and we are neater than they are.

What do you think? Don't you think my parents should practice what they preach?

HUNGRY IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR HUNGRY: They should. But there is no way of forcing them to. They belong to that big club whose motto is: "Don't do as I do—do as I say." Unfortunately, rank has its privileges, and parents outrank their kids.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law died recently. She had one daughter and three sons—all of whom are married.

All of her good stuff she left to her daughter. Everything else (the junk) she left to her daughters-in-law.

I fell heir to a well-worn beaver coat. It's at least 20 years old and looks it. I know that I will never wear it, so I'd like to donate it to our church auxiliary resale shop.

My husband says he doesn't care what I do with it, but it has his mother's name embroidered on the lining, and he's afraid people will think I'm disrespectful if I donate it to the resale shop.

What would you do?

GOOD FOR NOTHING

DEAR GOOD: I'd remove the name and donate it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HUNG OVER AND FEELIN' ROTTEN": At the risk of oversimplifying, I'd advise you to ask yourself if you'd rather feel good in the evening—or in the morning. That should do it.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Credit Women Hear Speaker

"For Your Health's Sake—Medical Credit" was the program topic for the meeting of the Greenville Credit Women's International held last week.

The program was presented by club member Dawn Fitts. She pointed out that consistency and persistency are the keys to medical collections.

An installation service was held for three new members, Corrine Beddard, Dawn Fitts, and Audrey Norris. The candle ceremony was conducted by Mary Roberson.

President Inda Wingate appointed Clara Seago, chairman of a committee to write the club history to be included in the club's clubbook. Mary Roberson was appointed chairman of the Dixie Council Project for 1974-76 and will be assisted by Barbara Manning.

Members were reminded of the state convention to be held in Winston-Salem.

Sally Broughton was named chairman of the annual picnic which will be held in July.

Couple Operates A Fragrant Business

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Living Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — You could smell the Castagnas' booth at a craft show and fair here before you reached it. It was the lovely, old-fashioned fragrance of dried herbs and flowers, like the potpourri mixtures our grandmothers scattered among the linens to capture the scent of summer throughout the year.

Sally and Lou Castagna grow, buy or import all sorts of herbs, spices, botanicals, seedlings, organic grains, nuts and dried fruit, essential oils and ginseng, a root highly esteemed in the Orient for its supposedly medicinal propertes. They also operate a farm store six days a week during the summer to sell fresh herbs and organically grown produce.

Many of their products are botanical dyes. Some have been used for centuries in different parts of the world. Some have a biblical ring: frankincense and myrrh, which the three wise men took as gifts to the Christ child.

Others are reminders of American Indian wisdom passed on to the settlers: juniper berries, used to tenderize venison, flavor game sauces and make dyes, and squaw tea. The Castagnas chose the latter name because the blend was derived from a favorite beverage of the Minisink Indians near their Rocky Hollow Herb Farm, Sussex, N.J.

What Mrs. Castagna began as a hobby in 1970 has grown to a full-time occupation or, in her words, an eight-day week. She holds a degree in fine arts, and had worked at museums here for several years prior to the farm project.

Many of the Castagnas' products are raised on their 40-acre property. They also have a steadily growing corps of volunteers throughout the United States who gather wild plants.

Howard Greer, a retired fur trapper in Zionville, N.C., is one of them. In Vermont, another man forages for pine cones and needles for their pine bath mixture. A young male camper digs ginseng every spring.

"An Oregonian was sending us eucalyptus leaves from California, and my sister gathers bay leaves in Virginia," said Mrs. Castagna.

"It's amazing. There are more wild things now than we've seen in years. Small farmers can't exist any more in the Northeast. Their farms are being bought up by large companies or land developers. They don't till the land, and many let us forage."

"Us" consists of her husband, who gave up a successful career as an interior designer and television set designer to help run the farm, and their four children, ages 5 to 16.

"A lot of the weeds we pull we eat," she said. "The nettle is considered a pest. Farmers say we must be crazy when we ask permission to pick nettles on their property.

"The stems and leaves can be steamed like spinach, and they have a flavor like a delicate spinach. Our herbal hair rinse contains nettles, and they can also be used as a dye.

"I grew up knowing plants," she added. Her childhood home was a dairy farm in upstate Warwick, N.Y.

Her father, a retired army air force colonel, also raised thoroughbreds. She said being around horses made it necessary to recognize plants, to know which ones are poisonous.

She also learned about plants from a grandfather who, as a doctor, patented many medicines still in use.

Annual Family Reunion Planned

GRIFTON — Descendants of the late John William Rouse and his first two wives, Winifred Ann Pridgen Rouse and Bettie John Dail Rouse, will hold their 11th annual family reunion at the Riverside Christian Church at Rt. 1, Grifton, Sunday, according to Egbert T. Rouse of Jacksonville, who is president of the reunion.

Members of the Rouse family are urged to meet at the church at noon. A picnic lunch will be served on the church grounds and a business meeting will be held in the church.

Efforts are being made to compile a history of the Rouse family since its arrival in America about 1674.

Lenoir County's first John Rouse, the great grandfather of John William Rouse, was granted 1,200 acres of land between 1739 and 1748 by King Geroge II of England. This land adjoined that of Governor Richard Caswell and is in the immediate vicinity of Caswell Center, west of Kinston.

When the 10th annual Rouse reunion was held at Riverside Church, June, 1974, the following officers were re-elected: Egbert T. Rouse of Jacksonville, president; Mrs. Sallie Rouse Johnson of Grifton, vice-president; and Mrs. Eliza Walters Magill of Goldsboro, secretary-treasurer.

The Kind Of Needed Diversity

It is a facility which is unique in this area and it will mean a great deal to the economy of our area.

The big plant includes some of the finest equipment that can be found for such an operation and a plant tour showed us that the fork lift trucks are manufactured starting with sheet steel which is stamped and shaped. The trucks follow assembly lines where the various parts and equipment are installed. The trucks are finally tested and painted, then lined up in a shipping area for transportation to dealers and customers.

Eaton is heavily invested in North Carolina. As Gov. Holshouser pointed out in his talk, the Greenville facility is the sixth Eaton facility in North Carolina. Three more are in various stages of planning and construction at Kings Mountain, Lenoir and Hendersonville.

"It's quite obvious that Eaton has found a home in North Carolina," the governor declared.

Eaton board chairman Mandell de Windt agreed with the governor's remarks. North Carolinians "have an excellent attitude toward their work," he said.

The plant was originally scheduled for Smithfield but the location was moved to Greenville, and de Windt said it was a good move.

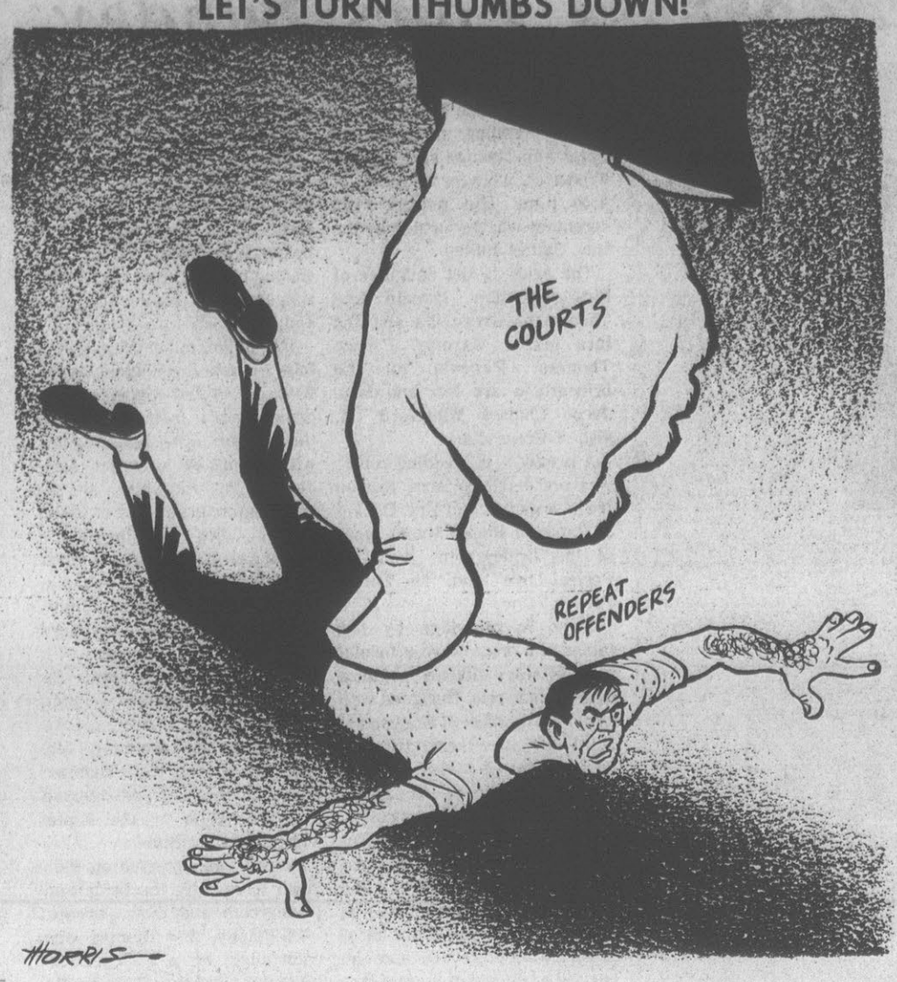
Eaton Corporation honored Greenville with the governor unveiling a plaque which read: "To the citizens of Greenville on their 200th Anniversary."

Finally de Windt emphasized Eaton's aim of being a good corporate citizen.

We are as happy with Eaton Corporation locating in Greenville as Eaton seems to be with the location and with our people.

The plant represents the kind of diversity in industry that Pitt County needs so much. Eaton Corporation has already proven itself to be a good corporate citizen for our community. The board chairman said Eaton has every expectation of being around for Greenville's tricentennial celebration. We fully expect that this outstanding corporation will be here a hundred years from now.

LET'S TURN THUMBS DOWN!



Demise Of Pork Barrel

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—One of the less lamented consequences of the current budget crunch in state government is the temporary demise of the pork barrel.

The pork barrel is an old political term for budgetary largesse in the form of public works projects and appropriations. It is an apt name, for the barrel gets bigger in fat years and diminishes in lean ones. This year, it may shrink away entirely.

But that hasn't stopped a host of legislators from introducing pork barrel bills on the theory that constituents may soon forget how they voted on the Equal Rights Amendment but will always remember who brought the money home.

This year, the barrel should be draped in red, white and blue bunting, because the Bicentennial has inspired many of the hundred or so bills.

Most legislators would like merely to have $25,000 or so to restore an old home or some such thing; but Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, is thinking big.

Hardison wants a barge nearly 200 feet long, to be built at a cost of $2.5 million. It would contain a theatre in which the crew could place exhibits and stage dramas about North Carolina's heritage.

The barge would be based in the East, where Hardison's constituents could see it. But it would be seaworthy enough to visit foreign nations, which would undoubtedly clamor for the right to see a $2.5 million barge with a theatre in it.

Hardison's bill appoints himself to the barge's board of directors. It does not specifically state whether the boat would be named for him or whether he would get to steer it.

By comparison, the mountain legislators have modest requests. The most intriguing is a bill that would appropriate $25,000 in matching funds to send the Carolina Cloggers to England this summer.

THIS AFTERNOON

Enthused Over Rescuemen

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — After 40 years of working in state government you'd figure a man was ready to sit and rock a spell.

Not Col. Charles Speed, former commander of the State Highway Patrol, head of the state's highway safety program, and currently leading the Emergency Medical Services division of the Department of Human Resources.

Speed says it is "pretty hard to get me excited" after all he has seen, but he is excited over his involvement with the men of the state's network of Volunteer rescue units, and the progress being made to build a coordinated emergency response system across North Carolina.

"Those men are a special breed. They'd blush if they heard somebody say this, but those are men dedicated to making sacrifices out of love for their fellow man.

"They're just like Sunday School teachers, Boy Scout workers, or Red Cross volunteers. . .they got out there and raised money, bought equipment, purchased uniforms, built headquarters, and trained themselves back during a time when they weren't getting much if any help," Speed says of the rescue squadmen.

A Love Affair

The love affair appears to be mutual as the gangly, down home Tar Heel, widely respected for his service in the State Patrol, goes about patching up the rift between the squad members and the state.

The controversy erupted last year as federal guidelines were put into state law, requiring 81 hours of training and successful passing of a test before a rescue squad man could be tagged an Emergency Medical Technician.

Many volunteers with years of experience didn't think that fair in light of the time and cost, and because many of them had been long out of school and a number simply can't read or write.

"The problem was that the rescue squad thought every man had to be a trained Emergency Medical Technician. . .that's not true," says Speed. "The most important men in the units are those who can tear a motor apart, climb up a wall or down a well, have years of experience in all sorts of things.

"The most important man on a response team is the driver. . .and special training is not required hunting a lost child, climbing mountains, or working at a drowning."

The law calls for one Emergency Medical Technician on an ambulance working with a victim. . .but not all squad members have to qualify, Speed explained.

Meanwhiile, Speed sees the statewide training program which has already produced 4,000 qualified technicians as the birth of a new health response in North Carolina. Highway patrolmen, school bus drivers, local police officers, housewives are among those who have completed the training.

Prompt Help

"Imagine what it will mean when we have a network across this state of lay people who have been taught to respond and stabilize the victims in an emergency situation. . .Experience proves that this immediate care is the most critical in saving lives," Speed said.

Work is progressing on several fronts, as well:

—A statewide communications system is building plugging all rescue squads into local law enforcement and hospital units, along with more sophisticated monitoring gear to transmit patient information to a doctor watching a screen at the hospital and advising the ambulance attendant what steps to take en route.

A pilot system of telementry of body functions is set to go into operation shortly in the Greensboro-High Point sections.

—A statewide information system with a data bank locating trauma centers, emergency room response team locations, and medical capabilities at various hospitals is being built. This will mean that a victim can be referred immediately to the nearest location to secure the right kind of treatment.

—An air-ambulance capability is being developed, although slowly due to the costs involved, and availability of military aid is being catalogued.

The Problem Of Hiring

WASHINGTON—One of the toughest jobs in the country today is to be personnel officer for a company doing business with the government.

Everett Dollop, a friend who hires people for Ozone Aviation, was telling me his troubles the other night.

"I'm going crazy," he said. "The law says that when a federal contract is awarded to a company the employer is required to draw up an 'affirmative action plan' for hiring, which means he has to show he will hire minorities and women appropriate to the general skills."

"What's wrong with that?" I asked.

"Nothing except that the law also states that firms with government contracts have to submit reports to the government on how many veterans they've hired."

"So?"

"So," said Dollop, "we eliminate male whites over 25 years of age to start with."

"Why over 25 years of age?"

"Because there is a federally supported program to promote the hiring of youths and we're pledged to support it."

"So when it comes to a job," I said, "you have your choice of women, minorities, veterans and youths."

"And handicapped people, The law requires employers with government contracts to make a good faith effort to hire appropriate numbers of handicapped people. At the same time, we can get a tax break if we hire people from the welfare rolls. So it's to our advantage to hire the last group."

That makes sense."

"At the same time," Dollop said, "the company is a member of National Alliance of Businessmen which supports the hiring of ex-offenders who have been released from jail."

ART BUCHWALD

"You have quite a varied group to pick from," I said.

"We also are involved with a program that encourages the hiring of the disadvantaged who are not on welfare rolls, for one reason another. And last week my boss agreed to give jobs to members of the Spanish-speaking community."

"There hardly seems to be anybody left."

"Did I mention that I've also been ordered to find work for senior citizens?"

"No, you forgot," I said.

"So you see the problem. I have no difficulty when a white male nonveteran walks in my office. I just throw him out as that quota has been filled for several years. But what do I do when a woman, a black, a veteran and a person on welfare all apply for the same job?"

"I guess you give it to the one who is most qualified."

"But the handicapped person might be the most qualified, or the ex-offender, or the person from the Spanish-speaking community. In any case no matter who I give the job to, the other people are going to sue us for discrimination. Our legal fees are more than the job is worth."

"Why don't you advertise for a black woman who served in the armed forces, speaks Spanish, has some form of infirmity, would like to get off welfare and did some time in jail."

"They're not as easy to find as you would think. Besides no newspaper will allow you to put sex or color in a classified advertisement. We also are not permitted to mention age. All we can say is that there are job openings. Once they apply I have to weed them out to follow the

INSIDE REPORT

Political Ethics Problem

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Donald Fowler, the astute young Democratic state chairman of South Carolina, last January asked his friend and political ally, national chairman Robert Strauss, whether he knew of any business he could steer down to the Charleston, S.C., advertising agency Fowler had just joined—an understandable request in every way except one: it led to a collision between the old politics and the new politics of post-Watergate morality.

Strauss was indeed able to steer a small bit of business Fowler's way—Democratic National Committee business. Without announcement or open bidding, Fowler was given a $25,000 public relations contract for the party's fourth annual national fund-raising telethon (for about two months' work). At the same time, Fowler and Strauss were collaborating in a highly successful political operation which resulted in Fowler replacing an arch-enemy of Strauss, Alabama state chairman Robert Vance, as head of the state chairmen's organization.

In no conceivable way does this mixture of business and politics violate any law or party rule. Fowler's fee is reasonable, and his firm qualified. Fowler and Strauss say that they never saw in their arrangement any ethical difficulties. In truth, the entire matter probably would never have become public had not it been leaked by employes at the Democratic National Committee concerned by its implications.

The incident reflects the strengths and weaknesses of Bob Strauss, in his third flamboyant year as national chairman. By nurturing personal alliances to an unprecedented degree, Strauss has been unexpectedly and remarkably successful in gently nudging his party back toward both moderation and financial integrity while keeping the peace internally. But those alliances always have the potential for old politics cronyism.

That potential seems realized in the Fowler incident, arming Strauss's implacable foes on the McGovernite left wing with new ammunition in their untiring struggle to destroy him politically. Thus, as a case study of how an honest, well-meaning politician can momentarily lose his way in post-Watergate ethics, the incident is worth reporting in detail.

A Philadelphia agency named Sonder, Levitt & Sagorsky handled the 1974 telethon for a $20,000 fee but was not considered for 1975, according to telethon director Kitty Halpin, because it showed "no interest." However, a partner in the firm, Irv Sagorsky, told us a different story: "We would have liked to do it again. However, we were not asked to participate."

At least one New York firm wanted the contract. But when it telephoned Democratic national headquarters, according to one officer in the firm, he was told there was no chance.

Indeed, Miss Halpin told us that although she did investigate a public relations firm in Washington—and also the possibility of hiring a time-buying firm—there was direct contact with only one concern combining public relations, advertising and time buying as desired by the committee: Hellans & Ullman of Charleston, S.C., Don Fowler, 25 per cent owner.

The unpublicized decision to give it the contract was made by Strauss and Miss Halpin, with no intention to have it ratified by the party's executive committee. When we checked out the leaks with Strauss and Fowler last Tuesday, Strauss decided to bring the matter into the open the next day when the executive cmmittee was scheduled to meet on routine business.

Actually, it was Fowler who brought it up, saying he had received two telephone calls about the contract that cast aspersions on "my own personal integrity" and the "role and status of Bob Strauss." Anybody who questioned his integrity, Fowler continued, was "a dirty-minded, pluperfect s.o.b." The whole effort, he said, was "another attempt to cast Bob Strauss in an unfavorable light." He then made his offer: "If that bothers anybody, I'll get out, and I want to make that perfectly clear."

Arnold Alperstein of Colorado, a leftish committeeman and Strauss critic, hesitantly suggested

Public Forum

To the editor:

I hope the citizens of Greenville are aware of the wonderful opportunity that their children have to participate in the East Carolina University String Project. The Youth Concert on May 18 under the direction of Dr. Rodney Schmidt was a wonderful tribute to the students and the teachers who have worked so hard over the past years to develop a strong and meaningful program for the youth of Greenville.

The East Carolina University String Project, currently completing its eighth year, involves some 150 youngsters from the Greenville City Schools. Students meet during school hours twice weekly for instruction at their school, and participate in the Friday afternoon Youth Orchestra program at the University.

Because of the cooperative efforts of dedicated individuals at the Greenville City Schools and the ECU School of Music, the youth of Greenville can grow and develop in a more enriched and creative atmosphere. The community should be very proud of this wonderful program and support it in very way possible.

Very truly yours,
Betty B. Aldridge

To the editor:

For the past four weeks, I have had the experience of working with mentally retarded children in Greenville. Along with other members of my class, we helped prepare these children for the Special Olympics, which were held in Greenville. Not only was it an experience for me but I also felt like it was a privilege to be able to give help to someone who needed it.

The Special Olympics were held on April 24, 1975 in Greenville. It was a day to remember. I was an official in this special event, so I really was involved. The pleasure was happiness of seeing a child participate and smiling from ear to ear knowing and feeling he has done his best. Seeing the happy expressions on one child's face who had just won a blue ribbon and seeing another child who lost, yet still smiling because he participated.

The thrills, sadness, and joys were all mixed into one beautiful day.

Why can't there be more days like this for these children? Give these children more than just one day out of a year to look forward to.

To the editor:

The ideas of the Bible—that love, patience, kindness, forgiveness—portray the highest actions of people and nations are not mere pulpit oratory. These are ways of life that we honor and urge on ourselves and our children. The massive military reaction of the United States Government to the seizure of the S.S. Mayaguez and its crew hardly fit these ideals of charity and restrain.

There is serious question about the legality of President Ford's actions but this is ignored in the gruesome delight that victory by power brings to our heads. We give no praise to the Cambodian Government for their arrogant use of power but we equally condemn our own government for the massive violence used against a small nation. The ways of patience and reason are expected from responsible and mature people and nations. We found this lacking on both sides. When will the violence and killing end?

Strength For Today

IS GOD DEAD?

A short time ago a little girl refused to say her prayers before she went to bed at night. "What's the use?" she said. "God is dead." She had seen a television news report of children dying of starvation and wounds in South Vietnam.

If we are going to confine our search for God to this world, we may come to the same conclusion the little girl did. The hand of God is apparent in history, but not to such an extent that we could build a satisfying religion on this revelation. In days when the world is in turmoil, we must look for God not amid the events which fallen man is bringing to pass, but in the Word of God itself where alone we have the revelation of God and His purpose.

The world has been shaken before, but God has not died. And God is not dead today even though the insanities of men may make it appear that He no longer intervenes in the affairs of this world.

Cubans Help Many Viet Exiles

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Cubans who streamed here after the takeover of their country by Fidel Castro in 1959 are assisting many Vietnamese refugees who have arrived here.

Wilfredo Acosta, a Cuban exile, worked at Eglin Air Force Base processing Vietnamese refugees; Jose Menendez provided rent-free housing in a duplex apartment house for two Vietnamese families; Gladys Victores brought canned milk, ham and soup to 31 South Vietnamese refugees who arrived in South Florida after flying 12,000 miles in five days.

"I heard on the radio about these people, and it just broke my heart," said Mrs. Victores. "We Cubans have to help."

Acosta, Menendez, Mrs. Victores and others said they provided help for some of the thousands of refugees because they have not forgotten how this country welcomed them a decade ago.

At first the Cubans came by regular commercial airliners, with American visas in their passports. They stayed by claiming political refuge. After the U.S. and Cuba broke off diplomatic relations in 1961, it became more difficult to leave the Caribbean island, particularly for the poor. Then it became impossible.

The Cuban exodus had a rebirth in December 1965, when President Lyndon B. Johnson took up a Castro challenge and established the Cuban refugee airlift between the island and Miami.

In seven years of operation, the Freedom Flights brought in some 270,000 Cubans. Approximately 400,000 other Cubans got here on their own. Philip A. Holman, acting director of the Cuban refugee program, told Congress last week that the government had spent more than $1 billion to aid the 670,000 Cubans.

The Cuban program, under the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is being phased out, but it is still costing some $90 million a year.

Cubans were resettled throughout the country, but the majority —more than 350,000 — are in Miami. Most of the others are in the New York City area, in New Jersey and California.

Although many have assimilated and become part of the American mainstream, many others still live in their own colonies, virtually apart from any American influence.

In Miami, their activities range from bank presidents — seven — to laborers holding down two or three jobs. They live in luxury, in neat middle class homes or in substandard housing in areas heavily populated by blacks and other minorities.

Guerrillas Seeking Prisoners Release

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Guerrillas from Zaire holding two Americans and a Dutch woman kidnaped a week ago are believed demanding the release of Zaireans held as political prisoners in Tanzania.

A third American kidnaped by the guerrillas, Barbara Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., was freed early Sunday. She brought with her nine letters: three from the guerrillas to President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, one to U.S. Ambassador Beverly Carter, one to the U.S. Embassy, one to Dutch Ambassador Jan Van den Berg and three from the hostages to their parents.

Carter said a report that the kidnapers were demanding a million dollars was inaccurate. He said he did not know of any demands made on the United States or on any government except Tanzania's.

Those still held by the kidnapers are Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif.; Kenneth Stephen Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., and Emilie van Zinnick Bergman of The Netherlands.

Carter said their lives would be in danger "if anything went awry with what's been asked." He said negotiations will be conducted by the Tanzanian government in consultation with U.S. officials.

The three Americans, all Stanford University students, and Miss Bergman were seized last Monday by about 40 armed, uniformed guerrillas believed to be members of the Popular Revolution party in Zaire, a Marxist group opposed to President Mobutu Sese Seko.

The guerrillas took the captives across Lake Tanganyka to the Zaire side.

"I'm very tired but I am all right," Miss Smuts told friends after being flown 700 miles from Kigoma to Dar es Salaam. "They treated us as well as could be expected. I don't want to say any more because I might endanger the lives of the others."

American diplomats said she reported the other three were in good condition. She said several guerrillas brought her back across the lake Saturday night and left her on the shore about a mile from Kigoma about 5 a.m. She walked into Kigoma and notified the Tanzanian police.

The guerrillas crossed the lake in a 40-foot motorboat last Monday night and raided the Gombe animal research station 14 miles north of Kigoma where British anthropologist Jane Goodall directs a program of inquiry into the behavior of chimpanzees and baboons.

Most of the students' cabins were high in the hills and hidden by the foliage, and they escaped into the bush. Miss Goodall also escaped.

Miss Smuts' mother, Mrs. Robert Walter Smuts of Ann Arbor, was reported en route to Dar es Salaam along with Miss Hunter's father, Smith's father and an aunt of Miss Bergman.

Warns Budget-Cutting Accreditation Effects

RALEIGH (AP)—The president of North Carolina's community college system says accreditation of some of the colleges and technical institutes may be threatened if the legislature proceeds with plans to cut their funding.

Ben Fountain, president of the system, said accreditation rests partially on per student expenditures by the schools. He said the state's 17 community colleges and 40 technical institutes may have to start limiting admissions if funds are cut.

"It would be the beginning of the closing of the open door," Fountain said.

Fountain said teachers would have to be laid off, classes would get larger and the quality of education would decline if the General Assembly approves the budget recommendation made by a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

The president was not optimistic about the chances of avoiding the cuts. "Time is running out, and I think the die is pretty well cast," he said.

The Advisory Budget Commission recommended that $104.2 million be spent on the system in 1975-76 and $112.3 million the following year, compared to $119.1 million appropriated by the legislature in 1974-75.

The Senate appropriations subcommittee on education recently suggested a further $7 million cutback in budget for the schools. Fountain said the appropriation suggested by the subcommittee would leave the system 20 per cent short of its needs.

He said the cuts would mean the system would get 706 fewer teaching positions than determined to be necessary on the basis of enrollment figures. Enrollment in community college and technical institute courses is growing, he said, as people seek new skills to deal with the economic slump.

Fountain estimated that an additional $40 million would be needed over the 1975-77 biennium to avoid cutting back enrollment and jeopardizing the accreditation of some of the schools.

He said proposed tuition hikes, from $33 to $39 a quarter for in state students and from $137.50 to $252 for out-of-state students, could be hard on some students, many of whom are unemployed or underemployed.

The bill is sponsored by many mountain legislators, chief among them Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison. Ramsey has long had an aversion to the expenditure of state funds for the "toe dancing school" (known to the general public as the School of the Arts in Winston-Salem).

But the cloggers, Ramsey says, are exponents of indigenous Tar Heel culture. Besides, their parents are constituents.

Even Ramsey, though, is willing to concede that now might not be the right time to give them the money. Rep. Tommy Rhodes, R-New Hanover, also feels it might not be justifiable any longer to spend the $5,000 he's asked for to subsidize the Azalea festival in Wilmington.

Harold Hardison has not yet been heard from. But it's become obvious that if the Bicentennial Barge ever floats, it will be on a sea of red ink. And that's not likely.

"In the past few years," said one legislator who is not particularly proud now of the pork barrel bills he's signed, "we weren't exactly rolling in money, but we had enough to fund some of those things. Now, we obviously don't. And maybe that's not such a bad thing."

the telethon ought to "be like Caesar's wife" and suggested the Fowler contract might pose a public relations problem. Strauss followed with a rip-roaring stump speech defending the right to hire qualified friends, declaring: "Is there a public relations committee problem that we have to have? Not if we bury it here."

Although Strauss drew cheers and applause, the matter is not quite buried. The poisonous campaign against Strauss carried on by left-wing political operative Alan Baron will continue with new fuel. Silent in the face of the verbal intimidation from Strauss and Fowler, one middle-roader on the executive committee left the meeting muttering that "it's a damn dumb thing for them to do."

The "dumbness" derives from the changed world of post-Watergate politics. Strauss and Fowler told us they could see nothing wrong with an arrangement where the fee was modest and the services of unarguable high quality.

The problem is not size of fee or ability to perform, but a problem of political ethics which today is paramount. If they cannot understand that, worse troubles could lie ahead.

Labor-Related Deaths For 165

RALEIGH (AP)—The state Department of Labor reported Sunday that a study showed 165 persons died in North Carolina in 1973 as a result of job-related injuries.

Labor Commissioner Billy Creel said reported job-related injuries and illnesses totaled 152,000, with a resulting 530,000 days lost from work. That was a decline of 5.9 per cent from 1972, he said, and 13.6 per cent below the national average.

Figures compiled by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration showed there were 9.5 injuries and illnesses requiring first aid treatment per 100 workers.

Varied Explanations For Failure In Energy Field

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats have various explanations for their failure to legislate an energy conservation program for the nation.

Some blame the leadership for not knocking heads together to get agreement before the current recess.

Others say the freshmen aren't following enough.

President Ford, who earlier postponed planned increases in the tariff on imported oil, says he is considering increasing the tariff by $1 per barrel this week because of the failure of Congress to enact an energy program.

In varying degrees, the Democrats expect flak from the voters about the congressional impasse on energy.

Rep. John Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., a second-termer from the energy-scarce Northeast, said he expected President Ford "to go on the tube and whack the hell out of us. And I think he'll have the public sympathy because the people will say why didn't Congress do it."

Most Democrats are irate about the impasse because it breaks the momentum of what they consider near-historic speed and unity in acting on a variety of economic relief measures recommended by a leadership task force in January.

They concede it was easier to pass bills to help people get jobs or keep their houses when they are out of work than to agree on taxing gasoline or penalizing persons who buy gas-guzzling new cars.

After last week's collapse of plans to bring an energy bill to the House floor and the postponement of a veto vote on the strip mining bill, GOP Leader John Rhodes, R-Ariz., said "the public should be getting the idea that this Congress is inept."

In an interview later, he said the Democrats with their majorities of nearly two-to-one appear "practicaly paralyzed" on any complicated piece of legislation.

He said he hoped the troubles would prompt the Democrats to begin to compromise on legislation within their ranks and with Republicans to avoid future vetoes.

Democratic leaders rejected Rhodes' characterization, pointing to the earlier passage by large margins and with substantial GOP support of many economic relief measures.

successful dog vaccination program has recently been completed with twice as many dogs vaccinated in the public clinics as in years past. Pate pointed out that this indicated an increase awareness now on the part of Pitt County residents of the importance of rabies control measures. Also as part of the rabies control program, there have been some renovations and repairs made at the county Dog Pound. The new method of euthanasia has been installed and is in compliance with the recommendations of the American Veterinary Medical Association and the Humane Society.

Mrs. Cullipher, reporting for the Personal Health Services, also used a comparison chart to show a marked increase in the number of patients served. She, too, said increases are directly related to offering more services as new programs or new activities have been added. Examples included added case finding and extended clinic services. The seasonal fluctuation tend to go with the start of school and children coming for immunizations and physicals plus the school nurses screening increasing the figures during these months. One of the new staff, the social worker, has relieved nurses of some of the counseling time and home visits on social problems related to health, and her close liasons with the Department of Social Services has helped to reach more people.

The only two new positions requested in next year's budget were in Personal Health which Mrs. Cullipher assured the Board were essential minimums to permit efficient operation of the clinics.

Barnaby reported that he and other staff members of the Health Department recently met with AHEC (Area Health Education Center) coordinators from the new Greenville office in an effort to maximize resources available to Pitt County Health Department as a result of AHEC's location here.

Gaskins reported favorably that the Health Department capital expansion program has been approved for funding by both the County Commissioners and the federal office administering Hill-Burton funds, and that $140,000 has been reserved in Raleigh for this program. The architect's working drawings have been submitted to the Division of Facility Services of the State Department of Human Resources in Raleigh and have been approved. The final working drawings are now being prepared for final approval with the next 30-45 days.He said the project will go to bid in early July.

Rain Halts Race On 172nd Lap

Unser Sloshes To Second Indy Victory

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It rained on Bobby Unser's parade, but he didn't mind it a bit. He was leading it.

"What a day! What a beautiful day!" Unser exclaimed as he climbed from his Eagle-Offenhauser in Victory Lane, his beaming face turned upwards into the waning rain of a thunderstorm that had just given him his second triumph in the Indianapolis 500.

It was supposed to go the standard 200 laps — 500 miles — just like the race he'd won here in 1968 when he beat Dan Gurney.

But on the 172nd lap Sunday the lightning-laden storm clouds which had been menacing the Indianapolis Motor Speedway for more than an hour finally unleashed their fury.

First it was with a brief sprinkle, then with a torrential downpour that had Pat Vidan waving the red and checkered black-and-white flags which signaled the race was over and that Bobby had won it after 174 laps — 435 miles.

When he crossed the finish line, he was cruising along at a dainty 30 miles an hour, nowhere near his winning speed of 149.213 m.p.h., accomplished in 2 hours, 54 minutes, 55 seconds. But that didn't matter one bit. The fact that he crossed the line at all was a victory in itself.

As he tooled down the main straightaway, other less fortunate drivers were swimming and fish-tailing all over the place. Their low-slung, lightweight, wide-tired racers were about as stable as surfboards on the slick, flooded asphalt.

And Gurney, who came here Sunday winless in 13 tries as a driver and builder at Indy?

Where was he when this 59th classic of American auto racing sloshed to its conclusion? Why, right there alongside Bobby in the winner's circle. "I've never forgiven Bobby for beating me in '68," he joked.

It was a clear case of "If You Can't Beat 'em, Join 'em." That's what Gurney had done five years ago when he teamed up with Unser to build the American Eagle cars that Bobby drove. It nearly paid off last year when Unser came in No. 2 to Johnny Rutherford.

This time it was Rutherford's turn to be second-best, all because of an untimely pit stop.

Actually nobody really figured on either of them being No. 1. That, everybody said, was reserved for Wally Dallenbach. And wasn't it nice, they said, that the guy from Basalt, Colo., who had never finished better than 15th in eight previous Indy races, was going to outshine the big and brassy names on this grey, overcast, hot and humid day.

Dallenbach charged from his 21st starting position into the lead by the 60th lap, then held it virtually all the way until the 161st, opening a commanding 25-second edge, about half a lap.

Then, poof! It was all over for Wally. Engine troubles, caused by debris from the day's only serious wreck, sent him smoking into the pits for good and sent Rutherford into the lead, just ahead of Unser.

On the 165th, though, Rutherford decided to make a pit stop of his own, 19 seconds that put Unser in front.

Five laps later, Rutherford found out just how costly his pit stop was. In the 170th lap, the drivers were frozen in their respective positions under a yellow caution flag — the fifth and final one — when Gary Bettenhausen blew a tire and played handball with his car along the main straightaway's outside wall.

The yellow stayed out the rest of the way — and Unser stayed in front — until Midwest America's changing weather made topless cars gauche.

Luck was certainly on Unser's side on the 127th lap, when Tom Sneva and rookie Eldon Rasmussen got together a little too hard on the second turn. Sneva's car hurtled along the outside wall, flipped over several times and burst into flames. Debris was flying everywhere.

Unser managed to weave his way through the shrapnel without incident.

Luck wasn't on A.J. Foyt's side, though. The grizzled veteran from Houston, trying to become Indy's first four-time winner, led for 51 of the first 60 laps and was right in there with the rest of the leaders when he, too, came upon the metallic litter in the second turn.

He didn't quite escape it. It ruined all four of his tires, necessitating a 45-second pit stop that put him just about a lap off the pace — and that's where he finished.

Sneva suffered severe burns on his hands and milder burns over 15 per cent of his body, the only serious injury of the race. Rasmussen wasn't even shaken up. He continued on for a lap, then stopped at the accident scene and helped extricate Sneva from the burning wreckage.

Lady Luck also turned her back on a few other drivers, particularly Lloyd Ruby, who has been trying unsuccessfully to romance her for 16 long years now.

Ruby hasn't finished any better than third in any of those races, and that was way back in 1967. This time he made it through just seven laps, then a piston went on him and once more the fan of life's perennial losers shed a tear.

Littler's Win At Memphis Puts Him On Ryder Team

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — It's beginning to get repetitious.

A week ago, 43-year-old Billy Casper almost skipped the New Orleans Open. He won it.

Sunday it was Gene Littler. He almost skipped the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic. He won it.

Casper's victory in New Orleans clinched a spot on the Ryder Cup team which will play Britain's best in Ligonier, Pa. this fall. He's made it every time since 1961.

Littler's victory in Memphis clinched a spot on the Ryder Cup team. He's made it every time since 1961 — except for the time he was sidelined because of cancer surgery.

"To play this well is just a bonus."

His six-under-par closing round — built on the foundation of birdies on his first four holes — was the best of the warm, windy day. His total of 270 was a distant 18 under par, a record for the 7,193 yards of rolling hills, pine woods and sparkling lakes that make up the Colonial Country Club course.

His second victory of the year — and the 27th produced by that fluid, graceful, classic swing in a 22-year career — came over the best field this tournament has ever had.

"If I couldn't win this golf tournament, I think it's the greatest thing in the world for Gene Littler to do it," said John Mahaffey, who started the final round in a tie for the top and he finished second.

Mahaffey, who had to roll up a pants leg, take off a shoe and go wading after one wet, watery shot, finished off with a scrambly 71 and a 275 total. It was the second time this year, and the fifth in 17 months, that he's finished second.

Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf tied for third at 277. Each had a 68. Nicklaus' included a birdie on the final hole while Weiskopf got off to a birdie-eagle-birdie start, went six under through six holes and then finished poorly.

Gary Player, the 1974 Memphis champion, and Lee Trevino didn't get in it. Trevino had a closing 70 for 284 and Player was well back at 286 after a last-round 74.

Nicklaus won $10,325 and moved well in front of the absent Johnny Miller in the race for the season's money-winning title. Nicklaus now has $165,800, Miller $155,233. Littler's share of the $175,000 total purse was $35,000 and pushed his winnings for the year to $110,555.

"The money's nice and the titles are important," Littler observed, "but what I'd really like to do is win one more major title."

He took the U.S. Open in 1961.

WarriorsCompleteSweep With 96-95 Squeeker

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — There may still be a few hardcore disbelievers holding out, but Coach Al Attles of the new National Basketball Association champion Golden State Warriors no longer cares.

"Probably some people will still say that it wasn't how well we played, but how poorly the other teams played," Attles said after the Warriors beat the Washington Bullets 96-95 Sunday to complete a stunning four-game sweep in the title round.

"But we're not concerned about what people say," Attles said. "We won the championship, and we did it the way we had to do it."

The winning formula on Sunday, as it had been in two of the three previous victories over heavily-favored Washington and in the Western Conference title game against Chicago, was to overcome a sizable deficit.

Golden State won the series opener 101-95 at the Capital Centre — where the Bullets had lost only six of 48 previous games — after falling behind by 16 points.

With their regular home court in Oakland tied up because of an ice show, the Warriors posted victories in the next two games played in San Francisco's Cow Palace, 92-91 and 109-101. In Game 2, they once trailed by 13 points.

The opposing team, said Golden State's Rick Barry, the Most Valuable Player of the title round, "never knows whether they have the game wrapped up. It's like they're always looking over their shoulders, waiting for us to creep up on them."

Many observers figured Golden State would be the easiest postseason hurdle for the Bullets, who had not lost a home game to the Warriors since 1970. Even after three losses, Washington was favored by six points on Sunday.

But a field goal by Butch Beard put the Warriors ahead for only the second time in the game at 94-93 with 1:45 to play, and he added two of five free throw attempts in the closing 19 seconds to clinch the victory.

Beard missed the first two of his last three foul shots, with Golden State ahead 95-93 and nine seconds left.

With a 92-86 lead, the Bullets started on an incredible series of misplays. They failed to sink three foul shots, reserve Dick Gibbs botched a fast-break layup and Wes Unseld committed two turnovers.

"When we made a run at them, they died again," said Barry, whose 20 points was high for the game and gave him 118 for the series.

With high-scoring Elvin Hayes limited to just 15 points before fouling out, Washington leaned heavily on guards Phil Chenier and Kevin Porter. They combined for 45 points — 26 by Chenier — 19 assists and seven steals.

By winning the series, the Warriors earned another $110,000, raising their playoff booty to $330,500. It was the third title for the team, but the first since the franchise was moved to the West Coast from Phildelphia in 1962.

For the Bullets, it stretched their title round record to eight consecutive defeats. They also lost in four straight to the Milwaukee Bucks in 1971.

Boston Loses More Than The Ball Game

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

It wasn't one of Boston's finest hours.

The Red Sox lost one ballgame, one manager and two sluggers. They made four errors, allowed four stolen bases and managed only three hits off unheralded Ed Figueroa of California.

"We played a long stretch without a bad game and maybe we were just due for one," said Boston Manager Darell Johnson after California's 6-1 victory Sunday. "It was a bad day for everyone except their young pitcher."

Elsewhere in the American League, Kansas City whipped Baltimore 9-1; Minnesota beat Milwaukee 7-2; New York edged Texas 5-4; Cleveland split a pair with Oakland, the Indians winning 6-0 and the A's taking the nightcap 6-3, and Detroit beat Chicago 4-1 in a rain-shortened game.

Figueroa kept the Red Sox bats quiet but not the batters, who spent the afternoon arguing with plate umpire Lou DiMuro. Carbo was called out on strikes in the second, complained bitterly, was kicked out of the game and had to be restrained by teammates from attacking the umpire.

In the sixth, Johnson was tossed out for arguing a strike call to Yastrzemski. When Yaz was called out moments later by DiMuro, the Boston first baseman knelt down, cleaned off the plate, then carefully piled dirt all over it and dropped his batting helmet on top of the pile.

He was promptly thumbed out of the game.

Meanwhile the Angels, with Mickey Rivers stealing three bases to raise his season total to 28 — tops in the majors — picked up a run in each of the first two innings, got two more in the fifth on RBI-singles by Rivers and Jerry Remy and scored another two in the eighth on Billy Smith's double.

Royals 9, Orioles 1

Hal McRae raised his major-league RBI total to 34 by driving in six runs with two singles and a three-run homer for Kansas City. Steve Busby tossed a five-hitter to beat Baltimore for the first time ever and the Royals stole four bases, three by Amos Otis. Jim Palmer, 7-3, saw his four-game win streak ended.

Twins 7, Brewers 2

Tony Oliva and Bobby Darwin drove in two runs apiece and Rod Carew collected three hits as Minnesota handed Milwaukee its fifth straight loss and seventh in the last eight games. Dave Goltz scattered nine hits to earn his third victory in seven decisions.

Yankees 5, Rangers 4

Graig Nettles drove in two runs with a double and a sacrifice fly, then scored the winner on Jim Bibby's wild pitch in the sixth. Pat Dobson, 4-5, won it and Bibby, 2-4, lost it. Jim Spencer clubbed a three-run homer for Texas, which tumbled to fourth in the AL West.

Indians 6-3, A's 0-6

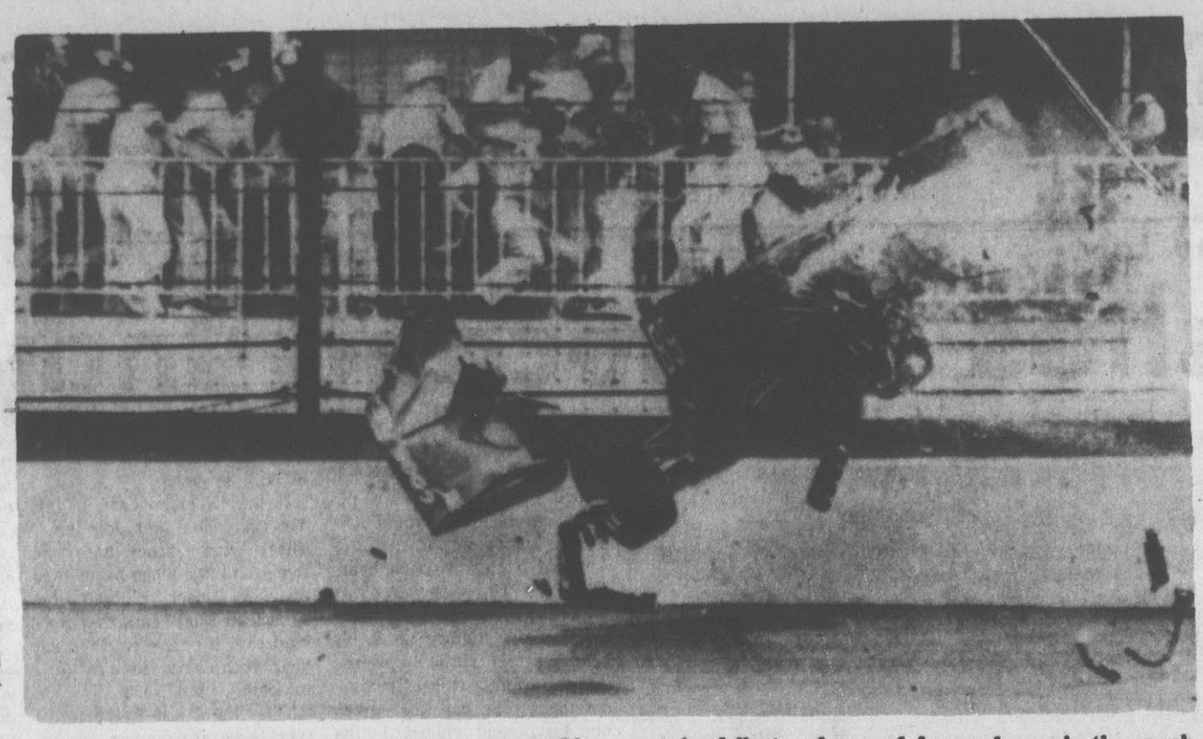
Cleveland rookie Dennis Eckersley, a 20-year-old right-hander, fired a three-hitter in his first major league start and Rico Carty collected four singles in the opener. Buddy Bell homered for the Tribe and Jim Perry, 1-7, was the loser in his first appearance since the A's picked him up from Cleveland last week.

Dick Bosman, also dealt from the Indians to the A's last week, won the nightcap with relief help. Phil Garner and Gene Tenace homered for Oakland and John Lowenstein had a three-run shot for Cleveland.

The Indians also learned that player-Manager Frank Robinson will be sidelined for the next three games and fined $250 for a run-in with umpire Jerry Neudecker last week in Chicago. Robinson had appealed the penalty, but his appeal was denied Sunday by American League President Lee MacPhail.

Tigers 4, White Sox 1

Mickey Lolich picked up his 200th major league victory, tying him wih Hal Newhouser as Detroit's winningest left-hander, as the Tigers took a rain-shortened victory. Willie Horton and Aurelio Rodriguez singled in one run each for the winners. The contest was called with one out in the top of the eighth.



RUNNING FOR THEIR LIVES—Race fans scramble for safety as Tom Sneva in his McLaren-Turbo Offy flies through the air after hitting the outside wall in the second turn of Sunday's Indy 500-mile race. Sneva sustained first and second degree burns in the crash which disintegrated the car but was able to walk away from it. (AP Wirephoto)

Petty Ends Charlotte Drought Sneaking Past Yarborough

By RICHARD WATERS
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — It looked like Cale Yarborough had the 16th World 600 stock car race all locked up in the trunk of his Junior Johnson Chevrolet here Sunday.

But Richard Petty, who had never won at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, proved the spoiler and won the $176,530 race in record time.

The race, the season's longest stock car event, was run at an average speed of 145.327 miles per hour, besting the old record of 142.255 m.p.h. set by Buddy Baker in 1972.

The 37-year-old Petty took the lead from Yarborough at the end of 247 miles shortly after they had pitted during the third and final caution flag of the day. Petty scampered out of pit row ahead of Yarborough, who had led for 149 of the first 165 laps.

From then on it was Petty all the way, as Yarborough slipped farther back and David Pearson, who started from the pole, encountered mechanical problems with his Mercury.

Petty, who led six times for 234 laps, was given the checkered flag a lap and a quarter ahead of Yarborough. Pearson finished third, four laps back, and Darrell Waltrip, driving a Chevrolet, was fourth.

Rounding out the top 10 finishers were Buddy Baker, Charlie Glotzbach, Dick Brooks, Richie Panch, Donnie Allison and Walter Ballard.

Petty, who pocketed $27,190, attributed his victory to luck, plenty of rest, a new "cool" helmet and the speedy performance of his pit crew.

"It's just like anything else," he said. "You work at it long enough, hard enough. You don't know if that will do. You just know that's the way you do everything else.

"We didn't do anything different for this race than we did last year. We know that all the good luck came our way and some of the bad luck went the other way."

The Randleman, N.C. driver was recovering from a cold when he snapped his Charlotte track jinx.

"When I was sick I got a lot of rest," he said when asked if he worried about the heat bothering his cold. "When I rested that got me in shape. "I think probably the cool hat (a new water-cooled helmet) had as much to do with it today," he added. The "cool hat" is a helmet containing water circulated over ice.

Petty said the heat, in the low 90s in the stands and as high as 144 on the asphalt track, caused drivers to change the setup of their cars. That resulted in fewer automobile problems, he said.

"We didn't win the war but we won a battle," quipped Yarborough. "We kept the engine together for the first time in a long time. Maybe we've found the secret. We'll win some races now."

Yarborough has been haunted by engine problems all season.

Pearson, winner of last week's Mason-Dixon 500, was the pre-race favorite because of his record-shattering pole speed. But tire problems plagued him and a nearly two-minute pit stop on the 328th lap cost Pearson three laps. He was running third at the time, one lap behind Petty and Yarborough.

Lennie Pond, the surprise No. 2 qualifier who led for the first seven laps, fell out at the halfway point and finished 36th in his Chevrolet.

Benny Parsons, a recent Daytona 500 winner, dropped out with engine trouble in his Chevrolet at the 55th lap.

Travel Does Everything But Help Cubs And Phils

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It's a good thing the guy who said travel is a broadening experience didn't make the recent road trips with the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies.

The Cubs, who left the friendly confines of Wrigley Field with a 3½-game lead in the National League East, concluded a 2-8 journey through three California cities Sunday by losing to the San Francisco Giants 9-7, their fifth consecutive setback. Their lead is down to 1½ games over New York and Pittsburgh.

Meanwhile, the Phillies, fresh from a 7-0 home stand, concluded a winless six-game trek to Houston and Cincinnati by bowing to the Reds 4-3, giving them nine straight defeats away from home.

Elsewhere, the Los Angeles Dodgers trounced the St. Louis Cardinals 7-3, the Atlanta Braves stopped the New York Mets 6-3, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the San Diego Padres 6-5 in 11 innings and the Houston Astros nipped the Montreal Expos 8-7 in 12.

The Cubs really had to make an effort to lose Sunday's game. They opened a 7-1 lead in the fourth inning but Chris Speier and Ed Goodson each collected two singles in San Francisco's seven-run fifth and Bobby Murcer provided an insurance run with a seventh-inning homer. The victory was the Giants' seventh straight.

Singles by Speier and Goodson started the rally and Marc Hill's run-scoring single chased starter Geoff Zahn. Pinch hitter Jake Brown singled in a run, Von Joshua belted a run-scoring double and Bruce Miller added a run-scoring single off Tom Dettore.

Murcer hit a sacrifice fly off loser Ken Frailing and Gary Matthews, who knocked in a first-inning run with a triple, doubled to tie the game. Matthews went to third on a fly ball and scored the go-ahead run on Speier's squeeze bunt single.

Reds 4, Phillies 3

Cesar Geronimo drove in three unearned runs with a bases-loaded double in the third inning and George Foster homered in the fourth for the decisive run. Geronimo's double was the only hit off Jim Lonborg in the third inning after the Reds loaded the bases on a walk, a hit batsman and a two out error by third baseman Mike Schmidt.

Bob Boone homered for the Phils in the fifth and they scored twice in the eighth before rookie reliever Rawly Eastwick struck out Schmidt with the bases loaded to end the rally.

Dodgers 7, Cardinals 3

Joe Ferguson belted two home runs and Jimmy Wynn hit his eighth homer and drove in four runs for Los Angeles. Neither had been hitting much of late.

Wynn doubled home the first run off John Curtis in the third inning and scored on Steve Garvey's single and then hit a three-run homer in the fourth. Ferguson hit solo homers in the fifth and seventh innings off Tommy Moore and Ryan Kurosaki, respectively, while Don Sutton pitched eight innings and gained his eighth victory.

Braves 6, Mets 3

Earl Williams' three-run homer off Jerry Koosman in the third inning was the big blow for Atlanta, giving the Braves a 5-1 lead. Meanwhile, ex-Met Buzz Capra held his old team to one run until the seventh, when they scored twice. Tom House finished up.

Pirates 6, Padres 5

Ed Kirkpatrick hit his first home run of the season in the 11th off Danny Frisella after the Padres tied it on Ted Kubiak's two-run single off Dave Giusti in the ninth.

Rennie Stennett slammed a tie-breaking triple and then scored on a sacrifice fly by Willie Stargell in the seventh to put the Pirates ahead 5-3.

Astros 8, Expos 7

Enos Cabell, whose error helped Montreal go ahead in the top of the 12th, doubled home the tying run in the bottom half and scored the winning run on Milt May's single.

Mike Jorgensen's run-scoring single in the top of the 12th gave Montreal a 7-6 lead after the Expos blew an early 6-0 bulge. But Doug Rader and Cabell doubled with one out in the last of the 12th off Don DeMola and May greeted Dan Warthen with his game-winning hit. It was Rader's fifth hit and third double.

Pepe Mangual capped the Expos' six-run second inning with a two-run homer. It was his fourth of the season and third in as many games and extended his hitting streak to a club-record 18 games, breaking the mark of 17 set by Bob Bailey in 1973.

Bear Grass Rallies To Beat Jamesville

JAMESVILLE—Bear Grass rallied for four runs in the top of the sixth breaking a 1-1 tie and went on to beat Jamesville in the second round of the state 1-A playoffs, Saturday night.

The Bullets had taken the lead in the second as Jeff Holliday reached on an error and scored after singles by Ronnie Padgett and Pierce.

Bear Grass countered in the top of the third as Alton Cratt singled, took third on Danny Peak's fielder's choice and stole home.

Then in the fourth, Junie Wynne led off with a triple and Jimmy Peaks drove him in on a sacrifice. Jerry Wynne walked and Cratt singled. An error on Mark Gardner's hit scored Wynne and Cratt and a hit by Danny Peaks scored Gardner.

The Bears added one more in the seventh. Richard Knox singled, moved up on a balk and scored on Terry Wobbleton's hit.

Danny Peaks led the Bears' offense with three hits and Cratt had two. Gardner went the distance for the Bears fanning nine and walking just one. He gave up five hits.

Bear Grass will meet Clement Thursday at an as yet undetermined site.

Gurney, Unser Worked For Indy Win

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Meet the odd couple.

Bobby Unser, 41, from the rugged Rocky Mountains of New Mexico. Square-jawed, rawboned, brash, wreckless. A hotrodder. His youth conjures up a picture of a cigarette dangling from his lower lip, a pack rolled in the sleeve of his white T-shirt. From a racing family, cut his teeth on Pike's Peak in the famous hill-climb. Now a two-time Indy 500 winner with his first in 1968. Definitely one of the fastest men alive since being hired to race Dan Gurney's Eagles in 1970.

Dan Gurney, 44, retired race driver, from the comfortable suburbs of Southern California. Ivy League. Shy, blushes easily, intelligent, a dreamer. All-American good looks, with a stubborn lock of blond hair that is always across his forehead. A sporty-car guy. Formula I driver, Grand Prix winner. A thinking man's driver. Designer of the Eagle race car which has dominated Indianapolis-style racing since 1972.

How did they get together?

"I wanted someone who could run hard," Gurney explained. Personalities aside.

Unser fit the bill, and also happened to be unemployed in 1970 when Gurney retired as a driver and began looking for his own replacement.

It was no easy road for the pair to victory Sunday in the rain-shortened Indianapolis 500.

"The Eagle was always a fast car, and Bobby drove it the fastest," said Gurney, who raced his first Eagle in 1965 on the Grand Prix circuit. "What we needed though was reliability."

Gurney had the reliability with the Eagle at Indianapolis from 1968 to 1970 with two seconds and a third. But no victories.

"The Eagle we brought out in 1971 we knew was an outstanding car, and it's basically the same design we have now," Gurney said. "Again its speed was no problem, but reliability was. In 1972, Bobby upped the Indianapolis lap record by about 17 miles per hour.

"But we weren't finishing races. For the 1974 season we changed our strategy. We decided to concentrate on finishing races instead of winning the pole position or leading every lap from the green flag."

The decision was unpopular with Unser, and it involved taking away his on-board boost or engine power control. Unser usually turned up the boost all the way and ran the car flat out until it or the checkered flag dropped.

"No, I didn't like that new idea. Not one bit," said Unser, who is going against his upbringing at anything less than full throttle.

There were rumors the pair would slit over the decision.

Talk of dissension was stopped when Unser won the opening race of the 1974 season, finished second in the 500 and won the season driving title.

Part of the "conservative" approach was due to fuel restrictions and dimension changes designed to slow down the race cars.

"I was a big complainer about this in the beginning, let's admit it," Unser said. "But I can't argue with success."

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bernard Toone, 6-foot-8 forward from Yonkers, N.Y., and one of the most extensively recruited high school basketball players in the nation, has announced he will enroll at Marquette University in the fall.

Toone's announcement completes a recruiting coup for Coach Al McGuire, who has coached Marquette to post-season tournaments each year since 1967.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have selected a site 125 miles from here, Eastern Illinois University, as their training camp base for the 1975 National Football League season.

Cards' Operation Director Joe Sullivan said the Cardinals will open camp July 19 and continue their preseason preparations on the school's Charleston campus until late August.

St. Louis until two years ago operated a preseason camp at Lake Forest, Ill.

Bombers Sting Hornets

OAK CITY — Maurice Hardy and Bobby Short had four hits each to lead the Bombers to a 22-7 rout of the Hamilton Hornets, Sunday, in a semi-pro ball game.

The Bombers took the lead right at the start picking up five runs in the first. Hamilton fought back with a run in the second and five in the third to take the lead, 6-5 but the Bombers bombed the Hornets for eight runs in the fourth to take the lead back for good.

The Bombers added four in the fifth, two in the sixth and four in the seventh. Hamilton got its other run in the sixth. Rufus Walston, Bernie Colardo and Robert Johnson had three hits each for the Bombers.

Many Double Winners

There were 12 double winners in the Junior Olympics Track Meet held Saturday. All were from various age groups.

Fecia White of Elm City and S. Jones of Jacksonville won twice in the 9 and under group; D. Beasley of Elizabeth City and G. Elliot of Windsor won in the 10-11 group; in the 12-13 group, C. Powell and Shwan Carson of Winterville got victories; L. Bartlette of Elm City and L. Roundtree of Elm City and Flak were winners at 14-15 while Mamie Jones of New Bern, E. McCain, New Bern, both won.

Gator-Raisers Victims Of A Modern Catch 22

By AUSTIN WILSON
Associated Press Writer

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Robert and Harvey Kliebert are up to their hips in alligators and over their heads in government red tape.

Nine thousand of the reptiles slither through the ponds of the brothers' gator ranch, hiss from concrete pins where they're stacked like cordwood and snap at anything that looks like food.

Another 1,200 hatch each year.

The Klieberts set out to raise alligators for hides, but just as their toothy crop was ready for harvest the government passed the Endangered Species Act, forbidding killing alligators or shipping anything made from their skins.

"They tell us we can sell alligators to anybody who has a license, but they won't give anyone a license," Robert said.

"And if anyone had a license, why would he want to buy something he couldn't sell?" added Harvey, enlarging on the "Catch 22" of the gator business.

The Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission has asked the government to reclassify the alligator as "threatened," rather than "endangered," since there are so many of them in Louisiana.

A federal census puts the alligator population at 350,000 in the state. Downgrading alligators to threatened could permit limited harvesting.

But Robert said he's afraid reclassification would only designate his farm as an exhibit.

"All that would mean is the state could have another hunt for wild gators in Cameron Parish. We'd still be stuck."

He gestured at one of his ponds teeming with 5-foot long reptiles—a ravenous bunch that Harvey said eats $6,000 worth of scraps from a chicken hatchery every year.

"You want to know how to keep alligators from becoming extinct," Robert said. "Let us farmers alone. If we're able to sell, the hunter can't make a living on alligators, and he'll leave the wild ones alone.

"How's he going to deliver when a tannery says it wants a thousand hides? We can do that. We can give them a thousand any time they want them, and I'll guarantee you we'll never kill off our breeding stock.

"You want to finish off the alligator for good, just leave things the way they are. Hunters can't make any money on them, and alligators wipe out the nutria.

"We're getting $6 for nutria hides. If it comes to a choice between a $6 nutria and an alligator that don't mean nothing, then the gator's got to go."

Harvey said he has had trouble with poachers jumping his fence, but for the most part his alligators are safe from the perils of the wild.

The big gators that make up his breeding stock are confined in one seven-acre hyacinth-covered pond.

"They probably wouldn't know how to get their own dinner, if you turned them loose," he said.

"And they don't fight. They're pen-raised, and even the bulls don't fight—not even in mating season.

"There's five females for every bull in there. When you hear one of the bulls bellow, he ain't challenging, he's looking for help.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1975, The Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable with a part score of 70, you hold:
♠AKJ10542 ♥954 ♦K8 ♣Q
What is your opening bid?

A.—Though you have the values for an opening bid of one spade, your hand is so spade oriented and your defensive values are so sparse that we suggest a tactical preemptive bid of three spades. That will make it hazardous for the enemy to compete, and if they do, it might prove disastrous to them. If your opponents do enter the auction, you should double to show your super heavy preemptive values.

Q.2—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠108752 ♥Q104 ♦AK7 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Dble.	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Your side can probably make three no trump, but why take chances? You are certain to obtain a substantial penalty from three spades doubled, and you are still a 2-1 favorite to take the rubber.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠62 ♥AQ9732 ♦J9 ♣J54
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. Partner has denied interest in your hearts and you have nothing else to say. If partner's spade bid was a cue-bid in support of hearts, he can correct to four hearts. If, however, he rebids a minor suit, you will raise to game.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♥762 ♦AJ9 ♣AK872
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three diamonds. You have the values for a game, but where are you going to play the hand? If partner has hearts stopped, three no trump could be your best spot. By showing your diamond stopper, you may give partner all the information he needs to bid the no trump game.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ83 ♥A109 ♦7 ♣AJ1032
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♥	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Five hearts. Your hand is too strong for a simple raise to four hearts. Whenever, you bid two suits and then jump raise a third suit, you promise a singleton in the unbid suit. Partner should now be able to judge the final level of the contract.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ7 ♥AQJ8 ♦KQJ102 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	3 ♣	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Double. Since partner has not yet bid and this is your first chance to double an opponent's bid, your double is for takeout. It shows a strong hand because you are committing your side to the three-level when partner could have a bust. The double also allows partner the option of converting to penalties in case he has club length and little else.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ82 ♥K87 ♦AK2 ♣K9
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Even though North could not open the bidding, the fact that he could jump raise spades now puts your hand into the slam zone, for your hand revalues to 22 points. While it is inconceivable that partner is aceless, we will not charge anyone for employing Blackwood, providing they intend bidding six if partner shows one ace. However, we would leap to six spades immediately. Three demerits for anyone who bid a cowardly four spades.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J109652 ♥954 ♦A8 ♣Q7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	3 ♣	Pass	Pass
Dble.	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid four spades. In view of the auction, your hand has become exceptionally strong. You would be forced to bid three spades without the ace of diamonds and with one less spade, and partner could (and most likely would) pass. The only way of making sure you get to game is to bid it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't think you can buy your way out of difficulties today. Avoid one who causes you to make mistakes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to be more understanding with mate. Steer clear of the social where arguments could erupt. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't delay doing important work early in the day. Later try to assist a friend who needs your help. Be generous.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't show your ire to a friend who you feel has been working against you since this is not the case. Be thoughtful.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she should be taught early in life to be more considerate of others or your progeny could go through life alienating others. Direct the education along troubleshooting lines, since there is thoroughness and courage in this nature.

Good Year For Shrimp

CHARLESTON (AP)—State officials say shrimping can be good this year, provided the nation's economy cooperates.

"Whether we have a good season financially will depend strictly on the economy," said Dr. Charles M. Beardon, head of oceanic resources for the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department.

"The shrimp certainly appear to be present in commercial strength. But the question remains: 'Will the market hold-up'?"

South Carolina's shrimping fleet of about 750 commercial vessels are realizing good harvests and substantial prices presently.

Early white shrimp are fat and plentiful. Market demand is high and price are $2 a pound, 50 cents higher than a year ago.

"Shrimp right now are coming up smelling like roses again. But we're keeping our fingers crossed, hoping the economy doesn't have us competing with the price of hamburger," said one trawler.

Another echoed the sentiments. "Too many people think of shrimp as something special, a gourmet treat. When housewives get down to counting pennies, we lose out in a fight with the budget."

TRANSFORMING NATURE—A group of peasants of Wukungling Production Brigade of Huangtien Commune in Anhwei Province poses recently on terraced tea gardens and croplands they and others created on what once was barren mountain slopes. According to Hsinua, official news agency of the People's Republic of China, the brigade has in the past six years terraced more than 34 acres and planted over 82 acres with trees, transforming a once barren area more than 3,000 above sea level into a wooded village area producing both tea and grain. Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Backyard flocks of laying hens have virtually disappeared from North Carolina farms.

Egg production, like other farm enterprises, has become highly commercial. Gross income to producers has skyrocketed from about $10 million in 1935 to $158 million in 1974 according to Bill Humphries, agricultural information specialist at N. C. State University.

But the period of rapid expansion may be over.

"In four decades, North Carolina increased its gross income from egg production by 1,461 percent, while the national increase amounted to 358 percent," said D. G. Harwood, Jr., agricultural extension economist.

The Tar Heel egg business has become concentrated in 10 counties that produce nearly half its table eggs and three-fourths its hatching eggs.

High feed and other production costs, along with depressed market prices and declining per capita consumption, have caused egg producers to cut back on output over the past two years.

Nationally, according to N. C. State University economists Harwood and R. C. Brooks, production has been below year-earlier levels for each month since April 1, 1972.

This is the longest period on record for declining egg production.

On the first of January the nation's laying flock was estimated at 280 million hens, down from 294 million a year earlier.

In North Carolina, according to Brooks and Harwood, egg output is expected to be below year-earlier levels through most of 1975. Prices to producers likely will average around 45 to 54 cents a dozen in the second and third quarters, or 10 to 11 cents above prices in the corresponding periods of 1974.

Compared with 1974, however, higher feed costs are expected to add 5 to 6 cents per dozen to the cost of producing eggs in the first six months of 1975.

In 1935 many small farm units produced eggs and operators performed virtually all production, processing and marketing functions. Today, fewer but larger production units are specialized. Processing and packaging typically are performed by large non-farm operators.

North Carolina now ranks fifth among the states in egg production and has become an egg-surplus state.

About 45 percent of the state's eggs are produced on contract. These contracts, through risk-sharing and coordination of production and marketing, have contributed to the growth and concentration of the egg industry.

The number of eggs produced per layer in North Carolina has risen from 101 in 1935 to 228 in 1973. Feed usage has been reduced to about four pounds per dozen eggs produced.

Recent development of a vaccine for control of the costly Marek's disease has cut mortality rates of layers by about 50 percent.

According to Harwood about 80 percent of North Carolina's table-egg layers are housed in cages. This practice allows greater mechanization and automation as compared to floor housing.

The N. C. State University specialist also pointed out other improvements in technology that have led to efficiencies in the egg industry which are improved feed formulation, insulation and ventilation in layer housing, force molting techniques, University strain testing, and feed restriction programs.

Status Of Legislation Before N.C. Assembly

Primaries: The Senate approved a bill this week that would shift the primary for state and local offices to the fourth Tuesday in August while the House passed a measure setting the primary for the last Tuesday in August. Further action on the issue may come this week. The Senate bill would set the presidential primary for the third Tuesday in March.

Auto insurance: The Senate Insurance Committee is expected to vote this week on a House-passed bill to abolish age and sex discrimination in auto insurance rates. The Senate this week passed and sent to the house a bill establishing a modified form of no-fault auto insurance that would call for the payment of up to $1,000 for medical expenses of auto accident victims regardless of fault.

Taxes: The Senate has given tentative approval to a bill that would levy state income taxes on a person's income from North Carolina corporate dividents above $15,000. The Senate Committee is still studying removing a sales tax exemption for the value of autos over $6,000. Both houses have legislation to repeal the state's sales tax on food and to raise income taxes, but approval of these bills is not expected. The Senate still has before it a bill to phase out the manufacturers' inventory tax over a 10-year period.

Equal Rights: A bill authorizing a statewide referendum on ERA is still on the House calendar and may see action this week.

Utilities : House and Senate committees are considering two major utility bills. One would estabish a state energy council. The other would require utilities to set higher rates for power used at "peak" periods.

Constitutional Amendments: The House this week killed a constitutional amendment to allow North Carolina governors to succeed themselves. A proposed amendment calling for merit selection of judges is still in committee

Death Penalty: Bills to abolish the death penalty are still lingering in a Senate Judiciary Committee with no action expected.

Appropriations: Bills to appropriate funds for state government operations for the next biennium are still before appropriations and base budget committees.

Environment: The Mountain Area Management Act is still pending in committees of both houses. The Senate this week enacted a bill to extend the scenic river designation to 26 miles of the New River.

Bond Issues: A bill introduced last week would authorize a statewide vote on the issuance of $41.8 million in bonds to finance improvements at state universities. Already before the House finance committee was a bill calling for a referendum on about $40 million in bonds for the East Carolina University medical school.

Sinatra Drops Berlin Concert

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Frank Sinatra has canceled a concert scheduled for today in Berlin. Sinatra's New York publicity agent said the concert was scratched because of "scurrilous" attacks in the Berlin press and rumors that he could be in danger there.

Even if untrue, the spokesman said, the reports and rumors have increased the possibility of trouble and have caused "a real concern that adequate security for Mr. Sinatra's physical safety will not be provided."

Sinatra is on a 10-concert tour of seven European countries.

TOBACCO SHORT SUBJECTS

Thank You!

A big thank you is extended to all the tobacco growers who offered plants to those people who were less fortunate. I received over thirty requests for plants and was able to give each person the name of a Pitt County farmer to contact for plants.

Summer Management of Plant Beds

Now that most farmers have finished transplanting, they should destroy all plants left on the plant beds and sow a cover crop. If plant beds are not destroyed, they will only serve as areas for insects; disease, especially mosaic; and weeds to build up. When a cover crop is sown, pests are controlled and the physical condition of the soil is improved. A good cover crop to sow is soybeans. The soybeans can be harvested plus they add nitrogen to the soil. Farmers should use caution when applying pesticides to these plant beds since some chemical may persist in the soil and cause injury to next year's beds. It is best to avoid the use of vegetable crops in the plant bed site since many vegetables are host to the same disease as tobacco.

Cutworms

I have received a few calls from farmers who have cutworm problems. According to the North Carolina Agricultural Chemicals Manual, the only insecticide recommended for the control of budworms is Trichlorfon (Dylox) 5 per cent commercial or homemade bait. Twenty pounds of bait should be used per acre and should be scattered on the ground near plants in the late afternoon.

Investigate Bribe Story

RALEIGH (AP)—The State Bureau of Investigation is investigating an allegation by a former State Highway Division employe that an attempt was made to bribe him, SBI director Charles Dunn said.

Dunn said the former employe, Tony McCall of Dillsboro, made the bribery allegation and other charges in a letter of resignation sent to Gov. Jim Holshouser.

McCall was one of 11 divisional personnel officers hired by the Holshouser administration. He said he was offered money if he would agree to block the transfer of a highway engineer.

McCall said he refused without reporting the incident.

Dunn said he got a copy of the letter from Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten and then conferred with Holshouser about the matter. He said the governor told him he had been preparing to call Dunn to request a probe.

The SBI director said his agency would also investigate a charge in McCall's letter than an employment agency operated by a local-level Republican party official collected commissions on persons the agency referred for state jobs.

Edmisten said the investigation would center on the alleged bribery attempt.

The attorney general said, "The flat statement about the offer of a bribe is indeed serious." Edmisten, a Democrat, said there was "a lot of raw politics" in the letter that "we're not concerned about."

He said he had been waiting for the governor's office to react to the letter, but had heard nothing before Dunn visited Holshouser.

McCall told Holshouser in the letter that he was writing because he did not think Holshouser was "completely aware of the caliber of persons that have been appointed to positions of authority."

Referring to the number of non-North Carolinians appointed to state jobs by the Republican Holshouser administration, McCall said he was "sick and tired of seeing our state used as a playground for unqualified transients."

Participation Said Necessary

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica has delivered the commencement address at Fairfield University.

"Democracy is not a spectator sport. It requires a high degree of participation," the graduating students were told Sunday by Sirica, who presided at the Watergate trials.

Full Stadium On Tito Birthday

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A stadium was packed with 50,000 people and 7,000 youths and soldiers performed gymnastics, dances and games. It was President Tito's 83rd birthday Sunday, and Yugoslavia celebrated it as "Youth Day."

Tito apeared in the stadium in a blue marshal's uniform, apparently in good health, and was greeted with applause and cheers.

Reluctant Optimism

By The Associated Press

Things are better in the Carolinas textile industry.

But executives are reluctant to say it's the beginning of the end of the recession.

"They told us,'Don't throw your money away, save some of it, 'cause we don't know what's going to happen,'" said Jesse Jones of Lowell near Gastonia, N.C. He is back to working six days a week at Pharr Yarns in Gaston County after two months of getting two and three days work a week.

Insured unemployment in North Carolina and South Carolina has slipped below 10 per cent, compared with more than 12 per cent a few months ago.

About 425,000 people in the two states were collecting unemployment benefits during the peak month of March, one third of them textile workers. The figure has now dropped to 337,000, meaning that 88,000 have gone back to work.

The drastic production cutbacks of January and February reduced glutted stocks of textile products to the point where production could pick up a bit. But few manufacturers are confident enough to plunge full steam ahead.

There's a Lasso® tank-mix that's right at home on your soybean fields.

For soybean growers, Lasso is the herbicide to start with. By itself, Lasso controls many annual grasses, including fall panicum and crabgrass. And some broadleaf weeds.

What's more, Lasso doesn't carry-over, and that makes it a good working partner in any labeled tank-mix.

Which tank-mix is right for you?

For medium soils with relatively low organic matter, Lasso plus Lorox*

will help you control common ragweed, foxtail, smartweed, and pigweed. And you don't incorporate Lasso plus Lorox.

On the other hand, if your soybeans need relief from cocklebur and annual morningglory, Lasso plus Dyanap or Lasso plus Premerge could be what you've been looking for. They both cut down on cocklebur and annual morningglory competition. Again, no incorporation.

Anyway you look at it, Lasso is the herbicide to start with. It's right at home on your soybean fields.

Anniversary Of Franco Victory

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Gen. Francisco Franco marked the 36th anniversary of his victory in the Spanish Civil War this weekend and prepared to receive President Ford next weekend as the U.S. chief executive makes an official one-day visit to Madrid.

Beside the 82-year-old Spanish chief of state Sunday to review the nation's military and police forces was 36-year-old Juan Carlos de Borbon, the prince named by Franco to succeed him and Spain's first king since 1931.

Files Warrant On Mrs. Graham

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An assault warrant has been filed against the wife of evangelist Billy Graham.

The warrant was signed by Daniel Lewis Pollock of Charlotte, who said the incident happened while he was picketing during President Ford's visit here last week.

Pollock alleged in a complaint filed Friday that Ruth Graham committed simple assault, a misdemeanor, "by pushing him away and taking a sign away from" him during the protest.

Police said Mrs. Graham will be informed of the charge.
