President Chides Footdragging Demos Rap Ford Petroleum Price Raise

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Democrats who control Congress are sharply criticizing President Ford's latest actions to force up petroleum prices but cannot guarantee the votes to substitute their own energy program.

As a result of the President's action, announced in a national broadcast Tuesday night, the price of gasoline is expected to increase by at least 1.5 cents a gallon in early summer. And if Ford has his way, the price would climb another six cents or more over the next 18 to 24 months.

The President chided Congress for failing to approve a broad energy program, as he recommended in his State of the Union message last January. Therefore, Ford said he will:

—Impose a second $1-per-barrel tariff on imported oil, effective June 1. Although the tariff is aimed at reducing consumption of foreign oil, the extra dollar, like the previous $1 tariff, also is likely to be added by oil companies to the price of the 40 per cent of domestic oil production that is exempt from price controls. This could mean an extra $255 million a month in oil company profits reflecting both dollar increments. Ford also has proposed a windfall profits tax on oil producers.

—Levy a 60-cent-per-barrel tariff on imported petroleum products, such as gasoline and heating oil, also effective on June 1. The effects of this increase will be felt most in Hawaii and on the East Coast which are heavily dependent on oil refined abroad.

—Send to Congress next month a plan for removing federal controls from domestic oil prices, probably over the next 18 to 24 months.

Such a move, which could be blocked by Congress, would raise consumer prices for petroleum products by at least six cents a gallon.

In addition, Ford administration officials say they expect the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise the cost of their petroleum products by 10 to 15 per cent this autumn.
Such a boost would add another 1 to 1½ cents to a gallon of gasoline.

Ford said he had delayed the tariff increases in March and April after congressional leaders had "promised to come up with a congressional energy program better than mine" but they didn't.

Declaring that Congress had "done nothing" on energy legislation, Ford picked up a calendar and ripped off pages for the months of February, March, April and May to dramatize his point that Congress had four months to develop an alternative program but failed.

"The Congress cannot drift, dawdle and debate forever with America's future," Ford said.

The President said "our American economy runs on energy. No energy, no jobs...
The sudden fourfold increase in foreign oil prices and the 1973 embargo helped throw us into this recession.

"We are now on our way out of the recession. Another oil embargo could throw us back. We cannot continue to depend on the price and supply whims of others," he said.

Almost without exception, congressional response to Ford's action split along party lines. Democrats said the higher petroleum prices would set off a new round of inflation and further dampen the economy, while Republicans said Congress' failure to act left Ford no choice.

"I for one won't buy this nonsense," said Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Interior Committee and a key influence in energy matters.
Jackson said the President's program, aimed at forcing energy conservation by driving up fuel prices, would cost the average American family $600 a year, with the burden falling most heavily on the poor and middle-income groups.

The Democrats "haven't done anything to discourage the importation of foreign oil," said Sen. Carl T. Curtis, ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.
"They do not seem to recognize the danger to our economy in permitting domestic production to go down and increasing our dependence on foreign sources."

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was more optimistic than most of his colleagues that Congress can pass an energy program of its own.

Ullman predicted ultimate approval by Congress and the President of a conservation package by Ways and Means that would raise the tax on gasoline used for pleasure driving by as much as 23 cents a gallon and impose a stiff tax on gas-guzzling cars.

But freshman Democrats in the House and key Democrats in the Senate are sharply opposed to that concept, while House leaders are just as skeptical of a Senate-passed bill imposing mandatory fuel-conservation standards on the states.

Despite lopsided majorities in both the House and Senate, it appears doubtful that Congress can impose any energy program that does not have Ford's approval.

Democratic leaders would be hard pressed to put together

the two-thirds majorities needed to override a veto.

Kissinger Urges Third World Aid

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today that the industrial nations must accelerate their economic growth — and lend a hand to the Third World — or face dangerous and destabilizing political pressures.

"Economic issues are turning into central political issues," he told the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development — OECD.

Kissinger said the 1973 oil embargo is an example of "misused economic power" that threatens the political stability of the West. He said the United States will resist "bloc pressure tactics," but will also try to accommodate the interests of developing countries.

Kissinger detailed a series of U.S. proposals for world collaboration that he said could help
"usher in a new era of economic advance and human progress."

Among them was that the OECD establish a $2 billion trust fund to help the poorer nations meet the rising costs of imported energy, food, fertilizer and industrial goods.

Kissinger said $1 billion of this should be in the form of gold held by the International Monetary Fund and contributions, especially from oil producers.

He also recommended new trade procedures to improve the developing countries' access to markets and supplies, establishment of a blue ribbon group of economists to prepare new policy recommendations and a $1 billion fund for agricultural development.

"The United States recognizes the responsibility that accompanies its economic power," Kissinger said. "We are prepared to do our part, in a spirit of equality, mutual respect and cooperation."

Describing economic expansion as essential within the West as well, Kissinger said,
"Economic stagnation breeds political instability. For the nations of the industrialized world, the economic crisis has posed a threat to much more than our national income.

"It has threatened the stabl-ity of our institutions and the fabric of our cooperation on the range of political and security problems."

Meanwhile, Algeria, the leader of the Third World's drive to use the oil countries' bargaining power to aid producers of other raw materials, gave a cold reception to Kissinger's proposal for the creation of international commissions on raw materials and special problems of developing countries.

Under his proposal, such commissions would operate separately from any future international oil conference. But Algeria indicated it would not agree to this divorcement of oil from other raw materials with less bargaining power.

Amendment Is Moving Ahead

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina voters may be asked to approve a constitutional amendment giving legislators four-year terms instead of two.
The House tentatively approved the amendment Tuesday by a narrow 73-34 margin.

That was one more than the 72 votes required to approve a constitutional amendment. The amendment was scheduled for final House approval today.

Three-fifths of the Senate would still have to approve it before it could be submitted to the voters in the spring of 1976.
If it cleared all those hurdles, legislators elected in 1975 would serve until 1980.

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alabama, argued that his bill would reduce campaign costs and place legislators on the same level with other elected officials, who serve for four years.

The opposing argument, voiced by Rep. John Stevens, D-Buncombe, was that the state is well-served by a legislator who must face the people as often as possible.

The House, after approving longer terms for legislators, rejected a similar proposal for the governor. It killed an amendment which would extend gubernatorial terms to six years.

Tobacco Board Of Trade Held Annual Meet

The Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade held its annual business meeting this morning and reelected the current slate of officers for another one-year tenure.

Reelected to serve for 1975-76
were A. A. Forbes Jr., president; J.B. Belcher, vice president; and J.N. Bryan, secretary-treasurer and supervisor of sales.

Representatives attending the session discussed the approaching 1975 tobacco season and began making plans for the opening of the Greenville Market.

Tentative dates for the launching of the local market season have been proposed but a definite date has not been set.

Highly Educated Young Adults Accepting Any Jobs

By JOHN STOWELL

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The young woman, educated to be a French and art teacher, is waiting on tables in the Raleigh, N.C., area.

Her husband, with a bachelor's degree in sociology and a master's in demography, repairs bicycles and hopes for a job teaching retarded children.

"At least they're making a living and not sponging off the old man," says the girl's father, a Washington business executive.

Across the land, the worsening economy has thrown highly educated young adults out of work or into jobs for which they are neither trained nor particularly suited.

"PhDs parking cars and teachers typing in the steno pool are no joke, they're real," says a businessman.

The College Placement
Council confirmed that point Tuesday, releasing results of a survey of 709 employers showing an 18 per cent drop in jobs for new college grads this year compared with last year. Those surveyed reported hiring 69,733 winter and spring graduates, down from 85,499 a year ago.

The employers in business, industry, government and nonprofit and educational institutions excluding teachers said they were not recruiting because of a lower personnel turnover during the uncertain economic situation.

"Judging from their comments, employers do not expect appreciable improvement in hiring until possibly next spring," the council said.

The hiring decline was the first since the 1969-71 recession and the severity approached the 27 per cent drop in the 1970-71 season.

The survey showed that jobs remained available for top students, minorities and females in high-demand fields. But the only industries hiring more new grads this year than last were petroleum, up 4 per cent;
state and local governments, up 18 per cent, and nonprofit and educational institutions, up 7 per cent.

Liberal arts majors are experiencing a 9 per cent drop in jobs available this year from last year, on top of a 45 per cent decrease in 1970-71 and almost no improvement in intervening years.

Engineering jobs, normally among the most heavily recruited categories, dropped 20 per cent at the bachelor's level, 23 per cent at the master's level, and 10 per cent at the doctoral level.

Employment in engineering had increased a cumulative total of 53 per cent the three preceding years, however.

Opportunities in business, usually another heavy employer, fell 28 per cent this year from last year.

Higher-degree holders in general are experiencing greater difficulty in finding positions.

Jobs declined 20 per cent for new PhDs, compared with 18 per cent for bachelor's degrees and 17 per cent for master's degrees.

Laotians Free 3 Hostages

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Student demonstrators ended their occupation of the U.S.
AID compound in Vientiane today, freeing two U.S. Marines and an American civilian who had been confined for a week during anti-American demonstrations.

The three were heavily bearded but seemed in good condition as they emerged under an agreement in which U.S. authorities bowed to demands for total shutdown of the U.S.
Agency for International Development — AID — mission by June 30.

Marine Sgt. Donald E. Wilburn, 28, of Osgood, Ind., at first refused to roll up the metal protective gates of the building where he had stuck by his guard post.

"Everybody kept telling me to open up except my boss," he said later, referring to the non-commissioned officer in charge of his unit. Finally Wilburn relent for U.S. Charge d'Affaires Christian A. Chapman.

The Americans released were Marine Sgts. Donald E. Wilburn, of Osgood, Ore., and Roger Murphy of Gresham, Ore., and the civilian, William Darden.

Darden was identified as a civilian electrician. His home town was not immediately known.

Wilburn, 28, and Murphy, 22, jumped into a station wagon and drove off to get their first regular meal in a week.

Five American paymasters entered the paper-strewn compound after Pathet Lao and stu-
set to work paying $25 advances to Laotian AID employees.

The restoration of the compound to the Americans was calm and relatively orderly despite a week of harassment and humiliation at the hands of the demonstrators.

Only minor damage was found in the big compound, taken over by the students last Wednesday.

The American entry was delayed from the morning until mid-afternoon as students pressed demands that were not in an agreement signed Tuesday night by Chapman, Pathet Lao leader Soth Pethrasy and a protest leader.

Chapman finally agreed to student insistence on accompanying the Americans on an inspection tour with reporters along as witnesses so they could not be accused of destruction. Chapman said:
"They are very suspicious of all Americans now."

and Means Committee, says that the House, by mid-June, would pass some version of the energy bill his

Memories Stirred At Carrier Shipmates' Reunion

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

"It was hard not to get emotional, shaking hands with people you haven't seen in 30 years," Gene Edwards said of the reunion of his aircraft carrier shipmates from World War II.

This was no ordinary armybuddy reunion, however. The Memorial Day weekend gathering featured an honorable guest—formerly a USS Monterey navigation officer and presently the President of the United States, Gerald Ford.

The crew of the USS Monterey was invited to Washington by the President for its first reunion. On Saturday evening, Ford met with his former shipmates in an informal, cocktail party atmosphere.

Edwards and his wife, Fla, described the President as "warm and receptive."

A maintenance engineer for Wachovia Bank who resides in Greenville, Edwards, was a pilot in a fighter squadron on the ship, and saw action in the Pacific during the last year of the war. The ship sat across the bay from the USS Missouri during the Japanese surrender, Edwards said. "It's interesting," Edwards commented, "we were sitting on one side and the USS North Carolina was on the other side of the Missouri during the surrender."

The Monterey also had the distinction of winning ten battle stars, said Edwards, who himself was awarded a distinguished flying medal. Ford kept his remarks at the reunion light and humorous. He talked mostly about things that happened to him aboard the ship. "That was the spirit of the occasion," Edwards said.

"He talked of the accomplishments of the ship and said we ought to be proud of what we had done," Edwards said.

Ford quipped that "he hoped the courses he plotted for the 'Ship of State' were as accurate as those made during the cruises of the Monterey," Edwards said.

At the reunion, Ford was presented with a painting of the ship which was made by a Monterey crewman during or just after a battle.

The presentation was made by Rear Admiral (Ret.) Roger Mehle. Mehle had been an air group commander during the war, according to Edwards.

The painting was done in 1944, Edwards said. "Mehle found it, but I don't know how," he added.

The reunion included a tour of the White House. The Edwards' group saw the President's mansion on Monday morning and were told that the President was preparing for the visit to Arlington National Cemetery for the placing of the wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Edwards said he did not know Ford personally while aboard the ship. His closest friendships were made with people in his own squadron. Memories of people were vague after 30 years, Edwards said. Over 3,000 men serve on an aircraft carrier.

The Edwards learned of the reunion about a month ago, when they received a letter of invitation. They were told the President would be there and

"people came from coast to coast," Edwards said.

When the President did arrive at the reunion, the doors were locked and no one was allowed to leave. "There were many Secret Service men there, but the security was handled quietly,"

Mrs. Edwards said.

The Edwards returned from the reunion Monday, missing a chance to see actors Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman at the Library of Congress as they prepared for the movie based on "All the President's Men."

Claim Kosygin's Base Bid Failed

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin recently failed to win naval and air base rights in Libya, U.S. intelligence sources report.

But these sources say Kosygin came away from a May 14 visit with a Libyan promise to allow the Soviet fleet limited use of some port facilities.

The Russians, who have been supplying Libya with increasing amounts of advanced military aircraft and tanks, apparently want base rights there as a hedge in case Soviet relations with Egypt should deteriorate again.

Even if the Soviet navy should continue to have access to the Egyptian port of Alexandria, a base in Libya would give Russia's Mediterranean fleet a supply, repair and refueling site about 1,000 miles farther west.

The U.S. intelligence reports appear to differ from the account last week in the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram which stated that Libya had granted army, navy and air bases to the Soviets.

Russia has been trying to get base rights in the western Mediterranean since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war led to an expansion of Russian naval operations in that area. The Russians unsuccessfully wooed the Algerians, among others.

Libya, a country of vast desert and only about two million inhabitants, has been shopping for modern arms with its big oil revenues.

U.S. analysts believe the Libyans want the new weapons not only to boost their prestige, but to provide an arms reserve for other Arab nations in case of a new war with Israel. In the 1973 Mideast war, Libya sent 26 French-built Mirage jet fighters to Egypt. It got them back after that war ended.

Alaska OKs Referendum For Home Loans Pot In Home ERA Is Gaining

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) —

The Alaska Supreme Court has legalized possession of marijuana for private use in the home.

In a 5-0 ruling handed down Tuesday, the court became the first in the nation to legalize some aspect of marijuana use, saying that "mere scientific doubts" about the medical effects of marijuana do not justify government intrusions into the home.

Left intact by the court were penalties for public possession and use for sales, offenses which the justices said related to a "compelling interest" of the state.

The decision came 10 days after the state legislature voted to remove criminal sanctions for private consumption of marijuana, substituting a maximum civil fine of $100, a penalty apparently voided by the ruling.

"There's no question about (the decision)," said R. Collin Middleton, an Anchorage lawyer who helped argue the case. "You can now ring your yard with marijuana plants, if you want to."

The court said there was "no firm evidence" that marijuana is generally dangerous. "But neither is there conclusive evidence to the effect that it is harmless," the justices added.

Use of marijuana should not be encouraged in minors, the court said, and said "the one significant risk" posed by marijuana appears to be its effect on drivers.

But, when the question turns to consumption in the home, the court said, "mere scientific doubts will not suffice. The state must demonstrate a need based on proof that the public health or welfare will in fact suffer if the controls are not applied."

During the 1974-75 school year she was also initiated into Phi Kappa Phi national honor society. After fulfilling the requirements of student teaching, Ms. Ebbs will graduate at the end of winter quarter, 1976.

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to submit the federal equal rights amendment to a statewide straw vote at the next state-wide primary election won tentative House approval Tuesday night.

The vote would be advisory only and would not be binding on the state's lawmakers.

Rep. Robert Jones, D-Rutherford, an opponent of ERA, and sponsor of the referendum measure, told the House the Senate had a close vote on the amendment in 1973 and the House this year.

"The third time around, I think it should be the people's choice," Jones said.

Several supporters of ERA joined opponents in support of the measure as it won House approval 62-42.

One of the supporters, Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said, "The only way we're going to get ERA through this General Assembly is by having the people tell us to put it through. I am not afraid of a vote."

Another backer of the amendment, Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, told the House, "I don't think the people can do any worse with this question than we in the General Assembly have done."

Other backers of ERA have opposed a statewide referendum on the issue because they fear the outcome would be a solid vote against ERA.

The House defeated an amendment by Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, to hold the referendum at the time of the general election next year instead of the primary.

Diamond said the general election would bring out more voters.

However, if the amendment had been adopted it would have made the bill identical with a measure already killed by the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

The House defeated the Equal Rights Amendment 62-57 after two days of heated debate last month.

Tentative Town Budget Adopted

WINTERVILLE—The Winterville Board of Aldermen held a special meeting last week to discuss the proposed budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, a tentative budget in the amount of $671,965 was approved for the next fiscal year. Last year's budget totaled $452,910. The increase reflects rates that the town is paying and charging for electricity.

A budget hearing has been scheduled for Monday, June 9, at 8 p.m. in the municipal building. The budget will be reviewed and the aldermen will be on hand to answer any questions that might be asked.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp increase in lending for new home buying last month is being hailed as an encouraging sign for the depressed housing industry.

"Anything is an improvement at this point," an economist for the National Association of Home Builders said. He said the lending activity "is not an upturn, but it is an encouraging sign."

The nation's saving and loan associations increased mortgage lending in April by one-third over March, from $3 billion to $4 billion, the highest level since last June, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported Wednesday.

It said lending for purchase of single-family homes totaled $2 billion, up from $1.5 billion in March. The April figure was the highest level since August.

In addition, new deposits at savings and loans totaled $2.7 billion in April, 28 per cent higher than the previous April record established in 1971, the bank board said.

The April savings were down from nearly $3.7 billion in March but considerably better than the net savings loss of $340 million a year earlier.

Airline Given A Record Fine

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The record $150,000 fine imposed by the Civil Aeronautics Board against American Airlines for illegal campaign contributions closes another chapter in the Watergate saga but leaves several others open.

The CAB announced Tuesday that American has agreed to pay the record fine for making $275,000 in illegal campaign contributions to several political candidates, including former President Richard M. Nixon, and for using bookkeeping maneuvers to hide the contributions.

The settlement leaves one CAB complaint — an allegation that Braniff International Airways made similar contributions — unsettled. CAB investigators reportedly are looking at other airlines to determine if any other corporation made similar political donations from corporate funds.

In addition, several other federal agencies are investigating corporations which they regulate to see if those corporations made illegal contributions. Congressional committees are looking into alleged contributions made to political candidates in foreign countries.

American's contributions went to various candidates, including some for state offices, between 1964 and 1973. They were uncovered in 1973 when American officials admitted to Watergate prosecutors that the corporation had made an illegal $55,000 contribution to the re-election campaign of Nixon in 1972.

Braniff also has admitted in federal court that it made illegal donations to Nixon's re-election campaign.

American was fined $5,000 by a federal judge for its donation to Nixon's campaign and Braniff and its chairman were fined $6,000 for making an illegal $40,000 corporate contribution to Nixon.

The $150,000 fine is the largest ever imposed by the CAB. The previous record fine was earlier this year—a $113,000 fine against Saturn Airlines for running illegal charter flights.

Tar Heel Girls State Scheduled

GREENSBORO—Over 300 rising high school seniors will gather in Greensboro Sunday, June 8, for the opening of the 38th annual Tar Heel Girls State week at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion, the annual conference is designed to give the girls greater insight into everyday politics by actually simulating local and state governments.

Representatives will hold mock political conventions, elect a governor and state officials, elect two senators to Girls Nation and carry out governmental operations.

The opening session will be held Sunday night at seven o'clock with a welcome by UNC-G Chancellor James S. Ferguson. Greensboro Mayor Jim Melvin will speak at 8 p.m., and is scheduled to discuss "City and County Government Problems." All of the sessions will be held in Cone Ballroom of Elliott University Center.

Heading the list of speakers will be Gov. James Holshouser and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. Holshouser will address the girls on Friday, June 13, at 9 a.m., discussing "Duties of the Governor's Office." Edmisten will speak on Wednesday, June 11, at 3 p.m., and will discuss the responsibilities of his office.

Other speakers during the week-long event will be State Rep. Mrs. John Chase, from Wayne County; State Sen. McNeill Smith Jr. of Greensboro; Dr. Thomas Tedford, UNC-G professor of speech; Mrs. Arleen Winfield of the U. S. Department of Labor's Women Bureau, all of whom will speak Monday, June 9.

Speakers on Tuesday, June 10, will be Judge Elreta Alexander of Guilford District Court; State Rep. Charles W. Phillips of Greensboro; Dr. Sandra Thomas, vice president for student development at Meredith College; and Dr. James Svara, an assistant professor of political science at UNC-G. In addition, James Allen, vice chancellor for student affairs at UNC-G, will speak on Wednesday, along with Edmisten.

Dr. Dudley Flood, an assistant superintendent in the State Department of Public Instruction, will speak on Thursday, and Holshouser on Friday.

During the week, a new governor of Tar Heel Girls State will be elected to replace last year's governor, Miss Jane McDuffie of Raleigh. Girls State will be concluded Saturday, June 14, when the delegates will elect two senators to Girls Nation.

Fire Prevention Is Good Program Topic All Year

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: According to official records, the number of deaths and injuries from fire has reached epidemic proportions.

In order to educate the public in fire prevention and control, the U.S. government has made some fascinating demonstrations available.

For instance, government agencies have contracted table-top-sized model homes that actually go up in flames from overloaded electric wiring. They also have graphic demonstrations that show how the fumes of flammable liquids travel great distances, causing explosions and fires.

These demonstrations make tremendously interesting programs for schools, organizations and industries, and are perfectly safe in the hands of trained personnel in the fire department.

Fire departments that have or have access to such units are happy to present them in public demonstrations. All an interested group need do is call its local fire department and request this program.

J.E. BROWN, CHIEF
PANAMA CITY BEACH, FLA.

DEAR CHIEF: I hope your letter lights a fire under the program chairman of service clubs throughout the nation. And readers, please don't wait until Fire Prevention Week—which isn't until next October!

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is 25, is a nurse. She is engaged to a 29-year-old doctor. He is from India.

We are Irish Catholics. The young man was educated in England. He is well-mannered, quiet and from a good family (who is in India), and he plans to remain here and practice medicine.

Our problem is how our friends and relatives will react. Will they accept him? He is very dark. Will he be considered black?

Do you know what people's feelings are about white American girls dating and marrying people from India? Are our friends going to look down on him?

We would like to have a nice church wedding, to which he agrees, but are people going to criticize us? They both seem to know what they are getting into. Can you help me?

WORRIED YOUNG MAN

DEAR MOTHER: If your daughter and her young man love each other and know what they are getting into, you have nothing to worry about. Whether or not he is "accepted" or considered black—or you are criticized—is beside the point. People who matter will accept him for what he is. And those who feel differently aren't worth bothering about.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Homemaker's Haven

To offset spiraling food costs, many people are turning to home grown fruits and vegetables. As more and more food begins to ripen, produce which can't be eaten or given away is usually canned. Home canning provides safe, inexpensive, quality products—but only if the fruits and vegetables and especially tomato products, have been carefully selected and properly processed. Improper canning may result in botulism, a food poisoning which may cause death. Botulism is caused by the toxin formed during the growth of the bacteria, clostridium botulinum. This may result from improper processing which may be avoided by following these guidelines.

—Don't take shortcuts or experiment in home canning. Use only tested, currently approved methods, such as those in our Food Preservation Booklets. These are available for the asking.

—Do not overpack foods. Trying to get too much food into one jar may result in underprocessing and spoilage.

—Follow exactly the time and temperature specifications for foods and container sizes listed in instructions.

—Do not reuse sealing lids. The rubber ring deteriorates easily and prevents a tight seal. Get new rings for 1-piece lids and new metal lids with sealing compound for 2-piece lids.

—Do not use canned foods showing signs of spoilage. Watch for bulging lids, leaks, off-odors, or mold. If in doubt, don't taste. Destroy out of reach of children and pets.

—Boil home canned vegetables covered for at least ten minutes before serving.

—Tomatoes-follow established recommended canning procedures closely.

A recent problem in home canning tomatoes is the acidity variation which affects the quality and safety of the canned product. The problem is associated with a few tomato varieties and to some extent the climate and soil in which they are grown. Weak acidity may permit the growth of highly toxic organisms such as Clostridium Botulinum—the cause of botulism. Strong acidity inhibits the growth of such organisms. There is much research yet to be done to determine the best way to strengthen the acidity when canning different varieties of tomatoes. As new information becomes known the USDA will make it available to home canners.

Adding the following to tomatoes and tomato juice has been recommended to reduce spoilage and protect against botulism.

Citric Acid U.S.P.: ¼ teaspoon per pint; ½ teaspoon per quart. Add citric acid when cooking the tomatoes; mix well. Citric Acid is a uniform and reliable product for strengthening acidity. You may need to order citric acid from your druggist a few days before you need it.

SUPPER FOR FOUR

Shrimp Special Rice

Green Peas Rolls

Apple Pie Beverage

SHRIMP SPECIAL

Great for company!

2 tablespoons butter

¼ cup minced onion

¼ pound mushrooms, thinly sliced

2 tablespoons flour

13-ounce can cream of lobster soup

¼ cup heavy cream

½ teaspoon all-purpose seasoning, from a 1½-oz. 4-ounce bottle

¼ teaspoon white pepper

1 pound medium shrimp (cooked, shelled, deveined and cut in half lengthwise)

1 tablespoon medium or dry sherry

½ cup (2 ounces) grated processed Gruyere cheese

In a 10-inch skillet melt the butter; add onion and mushrooms and cook over moderate heat until wilted. Remove from heat; stir in flour; gradually stir in lobster soup, cream, all-purpose seasoning and pepper. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens slightly. Stir in shrimp and sherry. Pour into a 1- to 1½-quart casserole; sprinkle with cheese. Place in a preheated 350-degree oven until cheese melts—about 10 minutes. Makes four 1-cup servings.

SUPPER FOR TWO

Sausage Tomatoes Rolls

Candid Yams Green Beans

Fresh Peas Cheese

SAUSAGE TOMATOES

Attractive and easy to prepare.

2 large tomatoes, about 1 pound

Prepared mustard

½ pound pork sausage meat

Wash and dry tomatoes; cut out stem ends. Slice each tomato in half crosswise; lightly spread cut surfaces with mustard. Make 4 patties of the sausage so each is diameter of tomatoes; place a patty on each tomato half and pat down, molding slightly over edges so they are completely covered—this is because sausage will shrink. Place on rack of broiler pan with pan in place below or on a ridged foil broiling pan—so sausage fat can run down—and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. Remove with a wide spatula and serve at once. Makes 2 servings—2 tomato halves per portion.

When a recipe calls for sour milk or buttermilk, and you are out of it, make this substitute: place 1 tablespoon of vinegar in a measuring cup, fill with milk to the 1 cup mark and let stand about 5 minutes.

Leave Off The Frills In Budget

Various municipal boards and county commissioners in the area are in the process of preparing budgets for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

We would caution those who are responsible for drawing up local budgets to provide for the needs of their constituents, but to leave off the frills for the coming year.

The feeling in Raleigh where the big state budget is now being prepared is that there should be no new taxes this year. Even though there is a slowing in growth of revenues, state budget planners are hopeful of being able to stay within the anticipated revenues.

City and county officials should feel the same way about local budgets. We should do everything we can to provide for local needs but, for this year at least, we should do everything we can to avoid tax increases.

Our people have been hit in the pocketbook, first by inflation and then by a recession and we feel that they should not have to bear any additional tax burden during the coming year.

So for one year let's see if our local governments can't make do with the prevailing tax rates.

It could be important to our citizens as they try to make ends meet during difficult economic times.

An Old Associate Is Returning To N.C.

Our old friend and associate here at The Daily Reflector has been named travel director for North Carolina.

William V. Arnold, formerly of Greenville, ECU graduate and a former sports editor of The Daily Reflector, has been appointed to the post.

He is presently assistant commissioner of the Virginia State Travel Agency and is said to be primarily responsible for the famous "Virginia is for Lovers" slogan.

We are delighted to see Arnold returning to his home state. You might say, "North Carolina is for the Arnolds."

THIS AFTERNOON Crawfish Stir Up Trouble

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—A crawfish, as any country boy knows, is good for little but to run about sideways or backwards, stirring up the bottom of the stream and muddying the waters.

It's only natural, then, for the North Carolina General Assembly—filled as it is with "good ole boys (and gals)" from the rural byways of the state—to fall back on such colorful descriptions from time to time.

A crawfish amendment to a bill under consideration and debate thus becomes obviously something that is trying to get away from the main issue at point, lead the onlooker in another direction, or at least muddy the waters to the degree that the main point can no longer be seen.

Talk among legislators, on the floor or in the corridors, is filled with similar colorful, down-home phrases which are confusing to the uninited; but strike to the heart of legislative activities when the real meaning is known.

Crawfish, catfish, lobsters, and the boys on the creek bank don't mean a bunch of legislators gathered together for a seafood cooking:

—The crawfish is normally put forth by somebody trying to beat a suggestion put forth by somebody else, and draw attention elsewhere;

A Catfish

—The catfish has a similar purpose, and is a bill or amendment to a bill which on the surface doesn't seem to have much impact. But close examination will show that the change would kill, skin, and gut the bill without doing any surface damage to the proposal. The bill could be passed intact—but never have any effect.

—The lobster is the fellow who hangs out in the cool balcony outside the chamber doors waiting to nab in his claws the unwary legislative fish who comes meandering along; in fact, the lobbyist.

—The boys on the creek bank is used by legislators to describe advisors back home with whom he confers on weekends to get guidance and consensus about what constituents think. Actually it's safe to say most of the boys on the creek bank types no longer sip moonshine while waiting on their snare lines to catch a mess of catfish—more likely they're the bank directors, local political leaders, and industrialists.

The General Assembly is a colorful place, and the language reflects the diversity of a state which stretches from offshore islands to the highest peaks in the eastern part of the nation.

Whether you call beaches or the mountains home depends on perspective. To western North Carolinians, anything east of Chapel Hill is "the beach" and a colleague from any locality in the section of the state is automatically considered "one of those hardnosed Easterners."

The Mountains?

The mountains—from the viewpoint of a flatlander—begin just beyond the western city limits of Durham, thus lumping all the true mountain folks and the Piedmonters together. Except the true mountain lawmakers are not considered in the same group as the "rinky-dinks" who are the liberals from urban sections of the Piedmont.

"Sticking together" is another country expression often heard in legislative conversation, especially as coastal and mountain legislators continually talk about pulling together a coalition of those rural sections so as to dominate the lawmaking process and "keep them big counties from running over us." In practice, the two regions seldom stick together.

Despite the colorful expressions which are so full of meaning, law-makers really hear what they hear—and the words don't always mean the same thing to the speaker and the listener.

Take, for instance, the debate in the senate the other day. State Senator I.C. Crawford, D-Buncombe, was holding forth. An opponent rose to challenge a point, snidely requesting that "the senator from the Great State of Buncombe" yield the floor.

"Yes, the Great Senator from Buncombe will yield."

"Yes, the Great Senator from Buncombe will yield," Crawford responded as his colleagues nearly fell out of their chairs laughing at the unintentional transposition of words.

"Why, you old rascal! You've made me an offer I can't refuse."

Arms Offer Acceptable

WASHINGTON—Mayor Abe Beame and Gov. Hugh Carey came to Washington a few weeks ago to try to get President Ford to lend New York City $1.5 billion. It wasn't a very successful meeting. The details are now starting to trickle out.

"Mr. President," Gov. Carey said, "this is my good friend Mayor Beame of New York City who has a little problem he'd like to talk to you about."

"I'm very pleased to meet you, Mayor Beame. How is John Lindsay?"

"That's what I came to speak to you about. Boy, did he leave me with a debt. Listen, Mr. President, I know you're very busy so I'll make it short. I need one and a half billion dollars or New York goes down the tube."

"Well, I'm sorry to hear that. I've always liked New York City—just to visit, mind you. I wouldn't want to live there."

"Mr. President, Abe is really in a spot. If he doesn't get the loan, the banks are going to foreclose on his city and everyone will be out in the street with their furniture, which means I'd have to call out the National Guard to prevent looting."

"Well, Hugh, as you know I'm always willing to help out a Democratic city with a Democratic governor, but we're a little strapped down here right now. Have you tried the banks?"

"Have we tried the banks?" Mayor Beame said. "We've been to every bank in New York. We don't even have a friend at Chase Manhattan any more. Look, you're always bailing out those rinky-dink countries when they run out of money."

Why can't you help one of your own cities?"

"We don't give them money—we give them arms. Would you like some anti-aircraft missiles or some airplanes? I'm sure I could arrange that," the President said.

"What he needs, Mr. President," Gov. Carey said, "is cash."

"You want callateral?" Mayor Beame said. "I'll put up the Bronx and Staten Island. It's unimproved land, but it would make a heckuva investment."

"Mr. Mayor," the President said, "I would love to give you the money, but what kind of precedent would I be setting if every time a city ran out of money it came running to Washington? You have to live within your means like we do in Washington. You can't keep borrowing money all the time."

"I thought you had a 50 billion-dollar deficit this year."

"There's no reason to get snappy, Mayor," President Ford said.

Gov. Carey jumped in. "Forgive him, Mr. President, he's under a lot of tension. Isn't there some way to find some money for the mayor? What about the CIA? Certainly they could spare a billion and a half."

"The CIA only gives financial aid to put in right-wing governments. I don't think Mayor Beame's administration would qualify."

"Then give the money to overthrow me," Mayor Beame said. "I don't care how I get it."

"All right then, I'll take the arms you offered me. I'll need 150 fighter bombers, 3,000 tanks and 600 ground-to-air missiles."

INSIDE REPORT

Undercutting Ford Policy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The letter from 76 Senators pressing President Ford to give up his even-handed Middle East policy and make clear "that the U.S. stands firmly with Israel" was only the first of a one-two punch which strips him of vital bargaining power on the eve of his summit meetings with Egyptian President Anwar-Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The second punch: an amendment to the defense procurement bill by a leading Democratic presidential candidate and staunch friend of Israel, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, singling out Israel alone for potentially unlimited supplies of American arms on long-term, low-interest credit sales.

A similar amendment was inserted in the defense procurement bill by Jackson in 1970, but this year the Senator decided not to put the amendment in the committee bill but to offer it on the floor after the bill comes up for debate June 2.

"That way," said one Senate Democrat, "the amendment will get much bigger treatment in the press."

The Pentagon did not request such a special arms deal for Israel, and the President does not want it. Indeed, Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, asked Jackson not to offer the amendment on grounds that military aid to foreign countries falls under the jurisdiction of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama, chairman of Foreign Relations, is planning a point of order, asking the amendment to be sent to his committee.

Both Sparkman and Stennis know the amendment reeks with politics. Both strongly back the President's "reassessment" of U. S. Mideast policy. Both refused to sign last week's round-robin letter asking Mr. Ford to "be responsive to Israel's urgent military and economic needs."

But the effort of these two old Senate warhorses will be swept aside in top-heavy Senate voting which once again will undermine a calculated presidential plan to lift the Arab-Israeli struggle above domestic politics.

Once again, Sadat and the Arab states for whom he will speak when he meets Mr. Ford in Salzburg, Austria, June 1-2, will be on notice that no matter what the President (SET ITAL) says (END ITAL) about "reassessing" American policy, he cannot deliver because of Israel's political power inside the U. S. Congress.

But the more damaging effect of both the letter to the President and the Jackson amendment will be its impact not on the Arabs but on Israel.

Mr. Ford ordered his reassessment following the breakdown of the latest U. S. mediation effort with Israel and Egypt. By reassessing overall policy, the President intended to delay U. S. decisions on new weaponry for Israel: the F-15 fighter, the ground-to-ground Lance missile, the miraculous laser-guided bomb and other exotic American arms.

The President's purpose in this war to jar loose Israeli policy. By holding up deliveries and delaying an administration decision on how much of Israel's new $2.59 billion aid request should be granted, Mr. Ford hoped the stonewalling in the Israeli government might break down a little.

While trying to tack with Israel, the President has exerted equally hard pressure on Sadat and other Arab leaders publicly to acknowledge Israel's irrefutable rights as a sovereign nation. Except for Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), Mr. Ford has had growing success in this campaign with the Arab leaders.

With Israel, however, the going has been hard. Middle East specialists in the government worried that Israeli Prime Minister Rabin might arrive in Washington for his summit meeting with the President on June 11 in stonewall position — that is, without a single new proposal.

Now, on the heels of the one-two punch — the senatorial letter and the Jackson amendment—the President's bargaining leverage has been drastically

Public Forum

To the editor:

One of the luckiest days for Greenville was May 1, 1975. That was the day the 24-hour leash law for dogs came into law. Ever since that date I have read many messages in the Public Forum about the way the dog warden is doing his job. To hear some tell it, he is a dog killer instead of a dog catcher. Some say the tranquilizer gun is not humane enough. Some say the dog warden had rather kill a dog than to capture him. I am here to say that if these so-called pet lovers would obey the law and keep their dogs on their property, instead of on someone else's, we wouldn't need a dog warden.

I have lived in Greenville now for over 15 years and am proud to say that it sure feels good to sleep at night and not be bothered by a bunch of dogs running loose, barking, chasing cars, and turning over trash cans for the food they eat. I own a dog and keep him home. I find no fault with the dog warden and don't believe anyone else will as long as he obeys the law. If you can't manage your dog, then get rid of him. Don't let someone else have to do your job for you.

The next time you wish to find fault with someone who is doing his job right, think of yourself first and say, am I right in judging this man or am I just putting the blame on someone else, because he will not do his job to suit me? The only fault that I find with the dog warden is that the city doesn't have enough of them.

Keep up the good work, fellows, and be proud, for you are doing a good job.

Safety Belts Unused

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of seat belt usage has found that 93 per cent of all children riding in cars are unprotected against crashes.

Another 1 per cent were improperly restrained by seat belts or infant holders, the survey by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety said.

The unrestrained children were sitting or standing, sitting on someone else's lap unrestrained or in infant holders that were not restrained.

The survey involved observation of more than 5,000 cars carrying nearly 9,000 children under 10 years of age at amusement parks and shopping centers in Maryland, Massachusetts and Virginia.

The insurance institute noted that 1,090 children under 5 years of age died in automobile accidents in 1973. Another 1,650 children between 5 and 14 were killed in accidents in the same year.

In addition, passengers in those age categories "receive many of the nearly four million annual injuries resulting from motor vehicle crashes, frequently head injuries," the institute said.

The survey found that 82 per cent of the children surveyed were sitting or standing alone unrestrained, 6 per cent were in devices which in turn had not been restrained.

Of the 1 per cent improperly restrained, some were sitting on an adult's lap with the same seat belt restraining both adult and child. The institute called this practice "likely to result in serious abdominal injury to the child in a crash."

The survey found that children whose parents buckled their own belts were more likely to have restraints but said that even in this category 75 per cent of the children were not restrained.

The report suggested that discomfort and inconvenience probably were factors associated with the low level of seat

40 Years Ago Today

May 28, 1935

Voters of the Greenville School district went to the polls today to decide whether or not Greenville will have a nine-month school term next year and succeeding years.

Balloting was being conducted at the courthouse and supporters rallied around the polls in large numbers during the morning hours. More were expected in the afternoon as the closing time drew near.

At two o'clock this afternoon, 543 persons had voted.

In an appeal for the preservation of wages and hours established under the NRA, Harper Sibley, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, called on all businessmen to uphold the levels of the codes established under that act.

Greenville High School awarded diplomas last night to 89 graduates, the largest graduating class in the school's history.

Diplomas were presented by J. L. Little, chairman of the board of trustees of the city schools, assisted by J. H. Rose, superintendent of public instruction.

Strength For Today

THE LORD OF CONSCIENCE

When, some three hundred and fifty years ago, some Puritan ministers met to formulate their creed, they set up as their slogan these words: "God alone is Lord of the conscience."

Of course there are many circumstances which influence our moral choices, but the supreme arbiter is none other than the Most High. A belief like this puts stamina and confidence into everything which a person does. Here is a belief by which the school boy and the senators, the laborer and the landlord, the clerk and the capitalist, may all be guided. Too look to conscience as the guide and to God as the Lord of conscience will make the way of the most humble person respected among his fellows and honored by the Almighty.

This conviction will also bring the humanity to seek constantly for the right and the self-confidence to make a personal commitment once a moral choice has been made.

Energy Treasure For Aussies

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer
CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — While the world battles to cope with the energy crisis, Australians are sitting atop a treasure of uranium, coal, natural gas and oil worth billions of dollars to overseas buyers.

Huge deposits of iron ore, bauxite, copper, nickel and tin also lie under the vast Australian outback. Prospecting parties report new discoveries every month.

Despite the resources, there is no exploration and development boom. Government restrictions and uncertainty in the board rooms of mining companies have slowed the mining business in Australia to a shadow of what it could be.

The reasons are:

—Actually aware that foreign interests already control 40 to 60 per cent of Australia's minerals, Prime Minister Gough Whitlam's Labor government has slapped tough restrictions on mineral exports. Some companies find themselves with freshly mined minerals they can't send out of the country, and are reluctant to search for more.

—The Socialist-leaning government has also been buying shares in foreign and domestic mining companies, sending directors into a flurry of concern about their companies' future. The government is doing some mining entirely by itself.

—State and federal governments are fighting over who should license prospecting and production.

—Mines and overseas buyers are hesitant to go ahead with new projects and contracts until after the national elections, possible for later this year. The Conservative opposition has promised a 180-degree switch in government mineral policy — if it gets into power.

Mining companies with capital ready to invest in Australia are plainly confused about the future.

U.S. Ambassador Marshall Green noted in January that Australia probably leads the world in per-capita mineral resources.

Only two or three countries have more iron ore. Australia now exports more iron ore and bauxite than anyone else. Aussies are among the big five producers of uranium, lead, zinc, manganese, tin, nickel and silver.

The State of Victoria probably has more brown coal underground than any entire nation. Black coal exports from Australia are 10th in the world. There are huge deposits of phosphate, and explored and unexplored reserves of natural gas and oil.

Exports are increasing every year, but mining companies say this is the result of explorations carried out in the past decade.

If new explorations aren't encouraged, they say, Australia's 70 per cent self-sufficiency in oil could drop dramatically and the growth of other mineral exports will also decline.

Momentous Week In May, 1775 For N. Carolina

By DR. H.G. JONES, Curator
Written for the AP

CHAPEL HILL (AP)—The last week of May, 1775, was crucial in events leading to the American Revolution in North Carolina. The presiding officer of the first two provincial congresses, John Harvey, had died; and now the leadership of the forces of resistance in the colony shifted to Samuel Johnston.

Two momentous actions were taken on May 31. The first occurred at Charlotte Town when the Mecklenburg County committee met and adopted the most rebellious resolutions yet sanctioned in the colony.

Subsequently called the "Mecklenburg Resolves," the document began with the assumption that inasmuch as Parliament in a February address to the Crown had declared the colonies to be "in a state of actual rebellion," the committee conceived that "all laws and commissions confirmed by or derived from the authority of the King and Parliament are annulled and vacated and the former civil constitution of these colonies for the present wholly suspended."

Formerly the colonists had professed loyalty to the Crown while placing blame for worsening relations upon Parliament; now for the first time by a responsible body the king's authority was challenged.

However, inclusion of the words "for the present" showed rejection of any notion of declaring independence. Indeed, item 18 provided that the resolves be in full force "until instructions from the Provincial Congress regulating the jurisprudence of the Province shall provide otherwise or the legislative body of Great Britain resign its unjust and arbitrary pretensions with respect to America."

The Mecklenburg Resolves, having suspended the "laws and commissions" previously in force, declared that the Provincial Congress was the sole legislative and executive power in each colony.

And, inasmuch as North Carolina's congress was not then in session, the committee proceeded to provide for a structure of government for Mecklenburg. The county was divided into nine "companies." From each company were to be chosen two "discreet freeholders" who would have specified powers individually and who would meet as a body four times per year to handle more serious cases. This committee of selectmen would, in effect, replace the old Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions.

Significantly, the resolves closed by directing the purchase of 300 pounds of powder, 600 pounds of lead, and 1,000 flints "for the use of the militia of this county."

Although Governor Martin

knew of the bad temper of the backcountrymen, he could not have known the extremes to which the Mecklenburg citizens had gone on the very day that he himself took the second momentous action of May 31.

Feeling himself a virtual prisoner in the governor's palace in New Bern, he had already sent his pregnant wife to Long Island. And now that the New Bern committee had begun showing particular interest in the cannon around the palace, he decided that he should move to Fort Johnston where, presumably, it would be safe to unload supplies anticipated from England.

The governor must have felt a little silly as he and his servants worked into the night secretly spiking the cannon and burying other military equipment and supplies in a cabbage patch. Then he slipped aboard a British craft for the two-day cruise to the ill-equipped Fort Johnston at the mouth of the Cape Fear.

Thus ended the month of May two hundred years ago: a county removing itself temporarily from the provisions of the laws and authority which had governed it since its founding, and the governor stealing away to a military fort.

Strict Controls On Gold-Buying From Vietnam Refugees

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

AGANA, Guam (AP) — The government has put strict controls on the purchase of gold from Vietnamese refugees here because it says the refugees have been cheated by buyers who didn't pay a fair price.

William Paupe, deputy senior civil coordinator of "Operation New Life," said he ordered a freeze on all gold buying at the Guam refugee camps for three days this week to stop "shady practices."

The firm of Deak & Co., and two newly arrived gold-buying firms were allowed to open shop again today under new strict rules regulating gold at international prices and with only five per cent profits allowed. Paupe said they will be closely watched.

"The refugees were getting cheated in the sense that they weren't paid a fair price," said Paupe.

Paupe said that when Deak was the only currency exchange buying refugee gold, the firm was paying $165 for a tael of gold — a measurement of over an ounce. He said the fair rate now, adjusted according to the London Gold Market, is $187 per tael, "and I can assure you that the London Gold Market price hasn't gone up that much in that short a time."

The manager of the Deak office in Guam, Bruce Aitken, said Deak had not cheated the refugees. "We thought under the circumstances ($165) was a fair price to begin with," he said.

"There was a great deal of risk involved. We were taking the gold without testing equipment. We picked up some gold that wasn't up to par and some counterfeit pieces. It doesn't take many of them to knock the price down," he said.

Paupe said there is a definite need for the gold sales because many of the refugees were carrying all their assets in large amounts of gold. He said many were so terrified about theft that they refused to leave their tents to get food and were going sleepless to stand guard over their valuables.

"We have to have this service available to them or they risk losing their assets," he said. "But we have to make sure they are not compromised."

Workshop Will Begin June 30

A special workshop for elementary school counselors will be offered by East Carolina University June 30-July 11.

The workshop will meet for regular sessions each weekday from 9 to noon. During the afternoon, the five consultants will be available for special programs for the participants.

Completion of the workshops carries three quarter hours graduate credit.

Further information and registration materials are available from the ECU Division of Continuing Education, Box 2727, Greenville.

weakened, the Prime Minister's correspondingly strengthened. By going public for Israel under pressure from the Pro-Israeli lobby in this country ("My phone did not stop ringing until I agreed to sign the letter," one Democratic Senator said), the Senate stripped down Mr. Ford and delivered its power to Rabin.

This giddy assertion of legislative clout to disrupt one of the most delicate presidential foreign policy negotiations ever attempted, with war or peace in the balance both in the mid-east and the world, should help satisfy Senators worried about presidential power. In this case, it seems, there is very little presidential power to worry about.

Court Expands Control Power

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in recent years, the Supreme Court has expanded the power of Congress to control wages and working conditions of state and local government employees.

However the battle will be resumed after the court returns in October from a summer recess expected to begin late next month.

Over a dissent by Justice William H. Rehnquist, who cited "danger to our federal system," the court ruled Tuesday that public employees on all levels may be subjected to federal wage controls.

In other actions, the court: —Let stand a ruling upholding the Central Intelligence Agency's right to delete material from a book about the agency by a former CIA official.

Melvin L. Wulf, legal director of the American Civil Liberties

Union and lawyer for author Victor Marchetti, said the action was "an insult to the First Amendment and a renunciation of the court's responsibility to decide important constitutional cases."

—Ruled unanimously that a youthful defendant may not be tried in an adult court for the same offense for which he has already been adjudged a juvenile delinquent.

—Decided by an 8-1 vote that congressional investigators have constitutional immunity from being sued for violating individuals' rights. Justice William O. Douglas protested that "no official, no matter how high ... may invoke immunity for his actions for which wrongdoers normally suffer."

Douglas' two-paragraph dissent was his first written opinion since March 25. He is in a New York Hospital recovering from a stroke.

Sermons From Holt, Johnson

'Smart Willie'

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C. (AP) — Love will find a way, even with man's best friend. That turns out to be the answer to the mystery of how Willie, a basset hound, arrived at the veterinarian's office recently — right on time for a 3 p.m. appointment to have stitches removed from his injured paw.

Although he was alone, Willie was admitted and treated after he scratched on the door.

All the time, Willie's owner, Mrs. David W. Joyner Jr., was searching for him to make the trip to the vet. That search ended when the doctor's office called to say Willie was ready to go home, a mile away.

The veterinarian eventually came up with the answer.

It seems that Willie is in love with a female dog housed at the vet's office. Willie, who's now called "Smart Willie" by those who know him, just timed his visit to his lady friend to coincide with the appointment.

Dr. Robert L. Holt, vice chancellor of East Carolina University and Dr. F. Milan Johnson, Professor of Mathematics at ECU will be speaking at Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church throughout the months of June, July, and August, while the regular minister, Bronson Matney is on leave.

Dr. Holt will begin a series of sermons that will last through June, this Sunday.

Dr. Johnson will preach each Sunday in July, and during August, they will share the pulpit.

Dr. Holt and Dr. Johnson are ordained Baptist ministers and are members of Oakmont Baptist Church. Neither of them are strangers to the Meadowbrook congregation. An invitation is extended to all of the public to attend the 11:00 a.m. service on Sundays.

At the onset of the Civil War, the Cherokee Nation was the only state carrying on peaceful negotiations with both the Union and the Confederacy.

Repairing Viet Railroad Link

SAIGON (AP) — Six thousand Vietnamese are "working on the railroad," the Provisional Revolutionary Government says.

They are working to repair South Vietnam's war-shattered rail system and link it with North Vietnam, another step toward reunification of the country.

The government says the railroad project has been given top priority.

Only short sections of the rail system are still operating, and none of them are linked up yet. Sections in operation include Saigon to Bien Hoa, Nha Trang to Cam Ranh and Qui Nhon to Bong Son on the central coast, and Da Nang to Hue on the northern coast.

The government also announced that 163 factories, large and small, have resumed operations in one district of Saigon, providing employment for nearly 3,000 persons. Their work forces range in size from 20 workers to more than 100.

They had been closed since Saigon surrendered to the Communists on April 30.

The announcement said: "Thanks to the relief activities, the repatriation campaign, the resumption of activities of the factories and the reopening of shops, the life of the population of the sixth district of Saigon has returned slowly to normalcy. Hunger, poverty, homelessness and unemployment left behind by the Americans and their puppet government will be solved."

The government announced that 30,000 war refugees have returned from Saigon to their former homes in the Central Highlands, traveling by bus and military and civilian trucks.

It was in the Central Highlands that the collapse of President Nguyen Van Thieu's regime began in mid-March with a hasty, ill-planned retreat that turned into a chaotic debacle.

Will Meet To Pick Successor

WINTERVILLE—The Farmers Home Administration submitted the only bid yesterday for purchase of $220,000 in bonds from the town of Winterville. The bonds were sold at five percent interest.

The bonds will be used to finance a water expansion project currently under way in the Town of Winterville. The project includes construction of a 500,000 gallon water storage tank and a 1,000 gallon per minute deep well.

RALEIGH (AP)—The resignation of Rae F. Watts as executive director of the State Ports Authority will become effective Saturday, Transportation Secretary Jacob Alexander said Tuesday.

According to Alexander, the ports authority will discuss Watts' successor at a meeting in High Point Friday.

The authority accepted Watts' resignation at its March meeting. It was scheduled to be effective April 15th, but Watts agreed to stay for an indefinite period.

Impact Of Family Planning Program Now Visible

EDITOR'S NOTE — With so many young people in the world, the potential for population explosion is great. Nevertheless, the world's birthrate is declining at least in part because of family planning programs.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Some day late this year, somewhere in the world, in some crowded city or some distant town, some woman will labor and bring forth a child. And yellow or black, brown or white or red, there will be four billion of us.

Mankind has been around two million years or more. When Christ was born there were only 250 million humans on earth. By 1830 we counted our first billion. We doubled that by 1930. And by the end of this year we'll double again.

Even trying not to, we will double again in some 35 years. But the arithmetic milestone is only an introduction. In the world today there are two salient facts of life.

—More people live in squalor without enough to eat and prey to infectious disease than at any time in the world's history. The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization estimates there are 460 million malnourished people in the world — and many experts consider that figure conservative. Of four billion, that's almost one out of eight.

—There are more women of child-bearing age capable of reproducing than at any time in the world's history. Roughly these women number 800 million. That's how the fertility gun is loaded.

So the number of people living has increased dramatically. The quality of their lives has not.

Malaria still kills about a million African children a year. Cholera, dysentery, typhoid and other water-borne diseases kill five million babies a year and attack 500 million other humans. Available resources dwindle and there is not enough food, in some parts of the world.

At least one out of four children born in developing countries will not reach the age of five. The main cause is malnutrition. Half of the children in those countries may be inadequately nourished, says FAO. Malnutrition, especially lack of protein in pregnancy and in early years, cuts short mental and physical potential. Most experts are heartened by lowering birthrates in the last five years, a trend they attribute at least in part to family planning programs. But in a world where the average birthrate is 31.5 per thousand people and the average death rate is 12.8, they are understandably cautious.

One of these is Dr. Reimert Ravenholt, head of the population program for the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Ten years ago, he says, the world was growing at the rate of 2 per cent per year. For every 14 deaths per thousand people there were 34 births. That meant with a 3.2 billion population, 66 million more people per year in 1965.

Today, the growth rate has fallen to 1.6 or 1.7 per cent. That still means an annual increase of 64 million people. "But the trend is favorable and the annual decrease will be favorable in the years ahead," Ravenholt says.

It will take more than a decrease in birthrate to satisfy some. It will take a restructuring of age groups. It will mean fewer people in the reproductive age groups. The United States, for instance, is now at a replacement growth level, thanks to a social pattern in which young families are having fewer babies. But the potential birth rate in the United States, as in the world, is tremendous. Demographers applaud the current trend and worry about the potential.

"This is really capricious," says Robert Avedon, president of the privately funded Population Reference Bureau. "Anything of a social or an economic nature can trigger a tremendous change in these fertile young people. If literally they start having babies at a rate in excess of the present rate of two, you have a numbers game, an explosion, the likes of which this country has no notion of."

To Avedon, and to his research director, Leon Bouvier, zero population growth is when the population's fertile age group is in balance with the rest of the population, thereby defusing the population "bomb."

"Even if every woman in the world restricted herself to having two children by 1985," says Bouvier, "we would still reach 8 billion people before we ever leveled off. Why? Because of this pent-up potential. I'm not a peessimist. I'm not a doomsayer myself, but I get burned up at the optimists who fail to see the tremendous dynamics involved here."

Lester Brown, a population and agriculture expert who leads his own study foundation, called Worldwatch Institute, sees it slightly differently.

"The U.N. population projections show the world population going from the current four billion to somewhere between 10 and 16 billion before it eventually stabilizes. I don't think it's realistic," Brown thinks other things would interfere.

The U.N. projections, he says, are based on certain assumptions about family size based on current surveys, then projected into the future. They ignore, he says, concerns about ecology, human toxicology.

"Environmental disturbances are beginning to affect death rates now in many countries of the world," says Brown. "There's something wrong with

GROWING UP FAST—Drinking and smoking are six years behind Joel Maker at the ripe old age of 12. Joel, who had to give up the vices to attend kindergarten, recently told his father it was time for him to on the wagon too. His father has now graduated from an alcoholism treatment center and plans to be with his Oklahoma ranch family more often. (AP Wirephoto) the notion that the earth's ecosystem will support four times as many people as we have today without coming apart, without the oceans dying, without too much heat being generated, without the climatic system going awry."

"We tend to talk about a life solution or a death solution," says Peter Cott, executive director of the Population Institute, which operates with Foundation grants. "The death solution will take care of itself, and we'll starve a lot of people to death before we get around to bringing it into balance. We'll probably have enough wars and enough collapsing governments to take care of the death part."

It is that particular awareness — a political awareness — that is changing the fertility scene, many experts believe. Some nations that followed a policy that said more people is more power are deciding that the converse is true.

Food and population are today political exigencies. Says Robert Avedon: "You've had in this year alone, traceable to population pressures, changes in 15 governments in the world, and that's a conservative figure. It's going to happen more and more...When bellies are empty and they have people marching and dying, they're going to have to start waking up."

One reason for the current decline in world growth rates is the family planning assistance provided by the U.S. Agency for International Development, a program only 10 years old.

"I'm really quite encouraged and optimistic," says Ravenholt, who heads the population division. "This is my 10th year in building a world population program. It wasn't until the late '60s we began to get enough money and commodities into these countries to make a difference. In many cases it wasn't until the last few years."

In its 10 years, AID has spent about $750 million on population control. Of that, $95 million has

Crime Spotter Panic Buttons

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 100 residents of the Lower East Side are being armed with "panic buttons" to trigger nearby sirens and summon neighbors to the rescue in case of a crime. The devices are tiny transistor radios that, upon being pressed, send signals to receivers in nearby apartments which in turn touch off the sirens. To cover the $5,000 cost, 135 residents paid $10 each for their panic buttons, additional money was raised at a block party and the city is putting up $3 for each dollar put up locally.

Cautiously optimistic police think that false alarms will be the biggest problem for the system.

cal or other reasons, cannot approach the U.S. for help.

For instance, AID has distributed 345 million monthly cycles of birth control pills, at 15 cents a cycle, almost a billion condoms and over six million IUDs.

Certainly the pill and other contraceptives, even abortions — the afterthought control — have made great changes in the world's birthrates.

Three European nations — West Germany, East Germany and Luxembourg — have stabilized their populations. Three others probably will reach that point this year — Austria, Belgium and the United Kingdom, says Brown of Worldwatch. They only constitute 4 per cent of the world's population, but, says Brown, "it's a beginning and it shows countries can do it if they want to."

People seem to want to. There are an estimated 40 to 50 million abortions in the world each year. In Washington, D.C., last year, there were more abortions than live births, Brown says.

In Japan, in the late '60s, the birthrate dropped by one-fourth in just one year and popped up again the next year. Why? Because it coincided with the oriental calendar's Year of the Horse, during which female children are said to be born ugly and unable to marry.

Spontaneously or intentionally people control their birthrate when they want to, when they can.

Still this is 1975. And sometime in this fall, there will be four billion human beings more or less healthy, more or less prepared to survive.

Presenting a program for almost perfect sucker control in '75.

Off-Shoot-T 85 introduces an extraordinary new program for sucker control that is not just improved, but almost perfect. It comes after years of research and testing—and solid data that it works.

Last year, one application of Off-Shoot-T 85 gave you excellent sucker control...excellent leaf quality...and excellent yield. But this special program produces results beyond that, even with an uneven crop.

Here's how it works. Spray Off-Shoot-T 85 in the early button stage. Then apply a second application around 5 to 7 days later. This will help control the suckers that were undeveloped or shielded by the cluster of top leaves at the time of the earlier spraying. What's more, this will also help control any new sucker growth. Top either before or after the second application, and follow in about 10 days with maleic hydrazide.

Result: almost perfect sucker control—and at a cost that's usually less than one application of Off-Shoot-T 85, plus hand "cleanup," plus maleic hydrazide.

Get all the details, as well as an informative new booklet about sucker control, at your local Off-Shoot-T 85 dealer. Look for the special window seal identifying him (shown to the right)—and check the new information center inside. See him today—and order Off-Shoot-T 85.

It's your way to almost perfect sucker control this year.

Vandals Destroying Southwest's Indian Artifacts

EDITOR'S NOTE — Vandals are destroying and stealing ancient Indian artifacts in the Southwest, and federal officials have not been able to stop the onslaught. Sometimes a vandal is caught stealing pottery worth $1,000 or more. But the fine is only $100.

By MIKE McCLOY
Associated Press Writer
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Armed with picks and shovels, even backhoes and bulldozers, 20th century looters are vandalizing the sites of ancient Indian civilizations in the Southwest.

Federal agencies are about to use electronic sensing devices to combat the quest for centuries-old artifacts. And Indian tribes are prohibiting strangers from wandering in areas where ruins are located.

Federal and state agencies say they don't have the money or men to inventory Indian ruins in Arizona, where the problem of vandalism is especially severe. Officials say four-wheel drive vehicles used by vandals are disintegrating fragile traces of past civilizations carved into soft rocks. Other rock paintings are being stolen to sell or spray-painted with four-letter words.

The U.S. Forest Service has two criminal investigators for 11 million acres in Arizona, and the Bureau of Land Management, responsible for millions of acres, has been waiting three years for congressional action on the BLM Organic Act. It would give them enforcement power to protect prehistoric Indian artifacts in the southwestern state of Arizona, Utah, California, Nevada, New Mexico and Colorado.

Frustrated by the destruction are scholars, among them John Douglas, a University of Illinois archaeologist recently assigned to the BLM here to inventory historic sites in Arizona and to arrange for their study and protection.

"There probably is no possibility of inventorying all the sites until there are so few left that you can count them on your fingers and toes," Douglas said.

"I have talked to Boy Scouts who have gotten their Indian lore badges by going out and destroying archaeological sites. My thesis site was damaged by a Cub Scout leader."

In the six-state area, vandals are looting ancient homesites of the Pueblos, Navajos, Papagos, Apaches and Paiutes.

Many vandalized sites in Arizona are those of the Hohokam Indians, an ancient tribe that disappeared about 1400 A.D. Scientists excavating sites in Southern Arizona have dated some remains back 23 centuries.

Students at Arizona State University at Tempe use a site near Mesa, a few miles from the campus, for study.

The site, known as Mesa Grande, has been subject to raids by amateur artifact hunters, professionals with bulldozers, and motorcycle riders who "jump the mounds."

Fencing placed around the site was stolen, along with signs warning "No Admittance."

Dr. Alfred Ditter Jr., an ASU archaeology professor, said vandals knocked down walls of earth left standing between pits to record soil layers, and that survey stakes were kicked out.

"Motorcyclists became so bold as to ride at high speed through the site while we were working there, dodging between pits and excavation equipment. The crew was powerless to stop them," he said.

Ranger Jimmy E. Hibbetts of the Tonto National Forest in Central Arizona is particularly plagued with pottery hunters.

"The ruin digger is hard to spot," he explained. "All he has to do is put his tent over a ruin and dig away."

Remains of past civilization near recreation areas have all but been wiped out, and recently, Hibbetts said, he is finding evidence of diggers in areas accessible only by horseback.

Four diggers, out of hundreds, have been caught and prosecuted in Hibbetts' 640,000-acre district in the past three years. "The value of a good pot is $1,000 to $1,600 and the fines we're getting are not commensurate," he said. "The most has been $100."

To discourage digging, the Forest Service tried posting metal plaques emphasizing the $500 fine and 90-day jail term provided by the American Antiquities Act of 1905 for those who disturb any "object of antiquity" on federal land. But wherever plaques were placed, digging increased, Hibbetts said.

Soon the service will place electronic sensors, of the type used to detect guerrilla movements in South Vietnam, in Arizona trouble spots.

Eddie Walters, criminal investigator for the Forest Service, said authorities will use helicopters and airplanes to apprehend anyone detected by the sensors at an Indian site. Federal officials and archaeologists are calling for public education to make people understand they are not only stealing or desecrating religious articles, but destroying information about the past. A BLM-produced "public service" film distributed to television stations in the West portrays a weekend "grave-robbing" expedition by a family through the sad eyes of an Indian man and boy.

Rise Of 'Killer Kids' Forces Re-Evaluation Study

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

They're the "killer kids." Moving from the playground to the penitentiary; terrifying other children as well as adults; committing crimes like murder, armed robbery and rape.

The steady increase in the rate of juvenile felonies, particularly those involving violence and brutality, has forced authorities to re-evaluate crime prevention and correctional programs.

What are the youngsters doing?

—A 13-year-old New York boy blew off his father's head with a shotgun. He escaped from the facility he was sent to, injuring a counselor when he ran away.

—A 17-year-old girl allegedly beat, choked and robbed an 86-year-old man in his Coney Island apartment.

—A 12-year-old boy in New England admitted that he set fire to a playmate. Why? She refused to take money from the cash register in her father's store.

The latest available statistics from the Federal Bureau of Investigation show that people under age 18 committed 44.7 per cent of all serious crimes in 1973, up from 42.6 per cent in 1960.

The increase is not that great. Youthful crime, after all, has been around for decades. The problem emerged during this century after World War II. Juvenile delinquency. The Blackboard Jungle.

Why, then, all the concern? Brutality.

"Years ago, when somebody went into a grocery store to commit a crime, he would take the money and that would suffice," said Dominick DiLorenzo, deputy warden for New York City Department of Corrections. "Today, they feel they have to hurt people. Why do they feel they have to hurt someone when the accomplishment was to get money? So there are now so many senseless killings."

In 1973, 11.2 per cent of all murders and 35.3 per cent of all robberies were committed by people under 18, according to the FBI Crime Index.

In the period between 1960 and 1973, the number of persons 18 and under arrested for murder increased 255.2 per cent, the FBI statistics show. That was more than double the 124.4 per cent increase in the number of people over 18 arrested for murder in the same period.

The number of people under 18 arrested for rape during the same period increased 132.3 per cent, while arrests for those over 18 increased 95.2 per cent. Aggravated assault arrests increased 206.2 per cent for people under 18; 101.3 per cent, for those over 18.

In 1973, 13 of the 1,249 youngsters arrested for murder were under age 10; 212 were boys and girls under 14.

DiLorenzo, a 25-year veteran in corrections work, said that when he started on the job, the average age of the so-called young criminal was 28. Now it's 15.

Why? What makes them do it?

Penologists, psychologists, sociologists, lawyers, youth workers, criminologists, parents and children offered a variety of explanations in interviews with The Associated Press.

"These children are the debris of society in terms of the emotionally disturbed," said Leon Herman, administrator, Goshen, N.Y., Center for Boys.

"If you look beneath the pattern of violence, you see a disturbance among these children — a cry for help. Since they do not get attention from their parents or friends, they try to get attention from killing," said Dr. David Abrahamsen, a psychoanalyst who has studied the nature of violence. "Most children who commit violent crimes come from homes where they have been brutalized."

Many of these youngsters don't seem to regret their actions; they don't worry about the consequences until after they're caught.

"At the time, all I cared about was getting the money. It didn't matter if they got hurt," said a 16-year-old Chicago mugger, talking about his victims as he visited with members of a youth gang in New York. He was 13 when he committed his first offense, he said.

Another youth, Melvin, was convicted of murdering a taxi driver during the commission of a robbery in upstate New York when he was 13. "I didn't feel anything. It just happened," he said. Melvin, now 17, was remanded to the Goshen Center for 18 months.

"It was just like a toy," Chiba, 18, said of his first gun which he said he bought at age 8. "I knew it could hurt somebody. In one way, that's why I bought it."

"The thought of violence, aggression — it was exciting," said Kenny, 19, who spent five years with a youth gang in Queens, N.Y. He recently was convicted of manslaughter in the knife slaying of a man he argued with during a traffic incident.

The authorities interviewed by The Associated Press cited the erosion of family relations, unpunished official corruption, rapid urbanization and the availability of drugs and handguns as reasons for the increase in violent crime by youngsters.

They also talked about the portrayal of explicit violence on television, the Vietnam War and its media coverage and the stresses of a life of poverty in an affluent society.

Listen to Lawrence Zelic Freedman, co-chairman of the Institute of Social and Behavioral Pathology at the University of Chicago and a former psychiatric consultant to the President's Commission on Violence:

"It doesn't matter to an inner city boy who knows that 40 per cent of his friends are out of work when the Department of Labor says unemployment has gone from 8 to 11 per cent."

"It's a permanent condition and he knows his chances of getting a job, at best, are much less than that."

Melvin Tumin, professor of anthropology and sociology at Princeton University, elaborated: "Your hard-working father brings home $88 a week as take-home pay, but the pimp on the block drives a Cadillac. Your father, then, is not a very good moral example of why you should keep your nose clean."

Los Angeles, Calif., mother of two, whose 12-year-old daughter has three assault complaints against her, blamed television for the child's problems.

"I came in the room one day and she was sitting on her little brother's head. She said she wanted to see him flip and jerk around the way they do on television when someone is smothered. Can you imagine? She got it from television," the mother said.

What can be done? The experts admit they don't know. Solutions are as elusive as causes.

Some authorities argued that longer sentences — more than two years — are not the answer. They said confinement does not necessarily change a child's attitude or prevent a repetition of the crime.

Others said that shorter sentences — 10 months to two years — don't provide enough time to counsel a child and prepare the youngster to go back to society.

The two approaches are typified, to some extent, in New York and Massachusetts.

A bill has been introduced in the New York legislature that would mean longer sentences for juvenile offenders 14 and over. It would enable the Family Court to send the most difficult and violent young felons to the adult criminal justice system. Upon conviction, the child would be sent to a secure facility for a minimum of two years. Present law provides for sentences of from zero to two years for juveniles convicted of felonies.

Massachusetts closed all of its training schools and reformatories three years ago. Youthful offenders now are placed in group homes, foster homes or paroled to their own homes, receiving family therapy, tutoring, remedial school work and planned leisure time activities.

"Our system is much more difficult on kids because we force them to a certain degree to accept responsibility," said Joseph Leavey, commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Youth Services.

"The kids are getting the idea that this is a department of youth services. Before, it was a junior police force. The level of violence has gone way down. And the kids participate a lot more in decisions — decisions about their lives."

Cancer Vaccine Given Poor Marks In Testing

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Japanese Cancer Institute, commenting on a report from Japan of a supposedly remarkable "cancer vaccine," says that its use in authorized institutions there has shown "almost negative or very, very slight effect."

The so-called Maruyama vaccine was hailed in one U.S. publication as a "remarkable breakthrough" that had saved nearly 50 per cent of the terminal cancer patients who had been treated.

But when Dr. Frank J. Rauscher, director of the U.S. National Cancer Institute, sought information from Japanese experts he was told that use of the vaccine in animal experiments and on humans had resulted in little or no effect.

"Academic people here do not believe the real effectiveness of this vaccine on cancer, but the public likes such a matter," wrote Dr. Harou Sugano, director of the Cancer Institute, one of the two major Japanese cancer research and treatment organizations.

"Monthly and-or weekly magazines, not scientific but general, reported this vaccine several times in a sensational way," Dr. Sugano told Dr. Rauscher.

The Japanese substance is named after Dr. Chisato Maruyama, a professor and chief of the department of dermatology at the Nippon Medical College in Tokyo, who recently was appointed dean of his medical college, Dr. Sugano said.

The substance is now being produced in Dr. Maruyama's laboratory, Dr. Sugano added. It is distributed at the request of patients along with a doctor's certificate, he continued.

The substance is described as an extract of the tuberculosis bacilli. In this sense, it is similar to the use in several clinical tests of a substance known as BCG, the entire tuberculosis bacillus.

NEW ADDITION— Art enthusiasts throng the new addition to New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art on opening day Tuesday, peering, among other things, at Gauguin's paintings of Tahitian women bathing, right. The addition houses $100 million worth of art treasures which form a legacy from investment banker Robert Lehman to the people of New York. (AP Wirephoto)

Doctor Fears Return Of Illegal Abortions To U.S.

By WILLIAM STOCKTON
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Deaths and injuries caused by illegal abortions would increase if abortion restrictions were re-instituted, an author of a report on abortion and health says.

Dr. Henry W. Foster, one of the authors of a National Academy of Sciences report released Tuesday, said available data indicates "illegal abortions are markedly down" since the Supreme Court legalized abortions two years ago.

As a result, the number of injuries and deaths from illegal abortions are declining sharply, the report said.

"If restrictive laws are re-instituted, we can look to an upturn in the poor outcomes and health problems that come from illegal abortions," Foster said. He is a professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn.

Congressional aides involved with anti-abortion bills now before both houses of Congress say there is little chance that a constitutional amendment could emerge from this session of Congress.

"Abortion is a very touchy issue and most congressmen are happy to leave the situation as it is now," one congressional aide said.

The report on the health effects of abortions was prepared by the Institute of Medicine, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences. The academy is a private organization, chartered by Congress, that conducts research for the federal government.

The study panel also found that:

—Abortions in the first three months of pregnancy are far safer than abortions in the second and three months.

—Data isn't complete, but there are no indications abortion is being chosen as a primary means of birth control, except perhaps in the cases of some teen-agers.

—Abortion may be stressful psychologically, but there is no indication it leads to increased mental illness.

—Two-thirds of all women obtaining abortions are under age

25. One-third are under age 20.

—In states where data was available, about 25 per cent of the women obtaining abortions were married.

The authors of the report stressed that their study was intended to be a careful, objective analysis of all data available about the health effects of abortion. They said the study wasn't motivated by any ethical or religious viewpoint.

The Academy of Science report came the same day the Harris poll reported that a 54 to 38 per cent majority of the American people support legalized abortion.

The Harris poll said it was the greatest public support ever for legal abortions and was "a marked change of public opinion since 1972 when 46 to 42 per cent opposed abortion of a 3-month-old fetus."

Chinese Climb Mt. Everest A Second Time

TOKYO (AP) — China has conquered Mt. Everest for the second time, putting a woman and eight men on the world's highest peak Tuesday, Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, reported.

The Chinese climbed to the peak via the northern side 11 days after a Japanese, Junko Tabei, became the first woman to reach the 29,028-foot summit.

Mrs. Tabei, who is 35, went up the south side with a Nepalese sherpa guide. She returned to Katmandu, the Nepalese capital, today with the leader of the 15-woman Japanese expedition.

The Chinese group was the ninth expedition to reach the top of Everest since Sir Edmund Hillary and the sherpa Tensing Norgay first conquered the peak on May 29, 1953. The first Chinese conquest was reported on May 25, 1960.

Hsinhua said the latest expedition included a Tibetan woman named Phanthog, six other Tibetans and a Chinese. The report said they began their climb in mid-March.

Humphrey Feels 'Pressure' To Be Candidate

WAVERLY, Minn. (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey says he's getting "an ever-increasing amount of pressure" to seek the Democratic presidential nomination. But he says his supporters will have to "wait and see" if he decides to run.

Humphrey, who celebrated his 64th birthday Tuesday, said he's made a decision not to seek the nomination again.

"The only question is whether I'll reassess it or not," he said. "All kinds of people around the country talk to me about running," said the former vice president. "They said run! As a matter of fact, there's an awful lot of this kind of talk and it's kind of difficult to resist, to be honest about it."

A Humphrey adviser has suggested that the senator might enter a late primary as an indication of availability if no other Democrat has emerged by then as a clear frontrunner.

But Humphrey said that is "very unlikely."

Study Effects Of Two Ethics Bills Confront Legislators Mankind On 'Permafrost'

By FRANK CREPEAU
Associated Press Writer
YAKUTSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Russians call permafrost the "Northern Sphinx" because it presents man with a paradox:

Frozen earth that is rock-hard and impervious, is also a precariously balanced ecological system that can be thrown into chaos by careless treatment.

An area hard as granite in winter can become a summer swamp, and heavy machinery that breaks the skin of vegetation over permafrost can lead to vast scars heaved up on the landscape.

"If the permafrost melted tomorrow it would be a desert here," says Rostyslav Kamensky, an assistant director of the Soviet Union's Permafrost Institute. "Our wonderful forests would disappear and we would have nothing."

Permafrost, frozen earth that can be nearly a mile deep, covers approximately 50 per cent of the Soviet Union, and in that area there are natural resources of tremendous value.

Two-thirds of Canada is in the permafrost zone, as is all but the very southern strip of Alaska. There is even permafrost on Mt. Fuji in Japan and Mt. Kilimanjaro in Africa, but at least nobody is trying to build railroads, mine coal or put up large buildings on those mountains.

Early builders ignored permafrost at their peril. One can see log buildings in Yakutsk and elsewhere across Siberia with the windows at ground level because the heat of the buildings melted the permafrost and they slowly sank.

Built in such a way, tall concrete buildings would topple, dams would crack and bridges fall.

There were plenty of examples of such destruction on the Trans-Siberian Railway line built in the early years of the century.

Now, the basic rule is "leave permafrost in peace," and everything is done to preserve it in its frozen state. Buildings, for example, are put on piles to leave an air space so that heat does not reach the ground.

Kamensky took visitors into the institute's underground laboratory. In one tunnel 36-feet below the earth's surface, the frozen sandy walls were so firm no supports were needed — an illustration of how the rigidity of permafrost can be an advantage.

"Once you study permafrost you realize it is our friend, not our enemy," Kamensky said.

Two such underground vaults are used for storage of meat and fish in Yakutsk, he said. Since their temperature is only about 25 degrees, the supplies can be kept colder by piping in frigid air from outside.

Though methods of erecting buildings or laying railroads on permafrost are well developed, there is still a problem in transporting oil by pipeline through permafrost areas.

The oil must be warm to move and that poses a danger of thawing the permafrost. When that happens, the surrounding permafrost can settle and crush the pipes.

"I can't say this problem is solved either here or in the United States," Kamensky said.

Also unsolved and under study is what to do when man wants to build a city on permafrost. He may destroy the snow cover, fell trees, drain swamps and thus produce a greater penetration of heat into the ground.

Then the ground can sag, craters or lakes may be created or the ground could heave upward. Especially fragile are areas honeycombed by latticeworks of ice 10 feet high and covered only by two to six feet of earth.

The 400 scientists and researchers at the institute are studying all these problems and are producing a detailed permafrost map of the Soviet Union for use by geologists and builders.

In the long range is the problem of a gradual warming of the earth that could have a major impact on the permafrost area of the world.

In Yakutia, where there are vast areas of forest and the permafrost is covered by moss and lichens, the permafrost acts as a waterproof seal. It keeps the scant moisture near the surface so it can nourish the vegetation.

Without the permafrost, the water would drain away, the vegetation would die and the desert Kamensky spoke of would result.

RALEIGH (AP) — Both chambers of the North Carolina legislature have passed ethics bills. But whether they can get together on a law remains to be seen.

The House Tuesday gave tentative approval to a sweeping bill that would require legislators, judges, and many executive branch officials to file financial statements about their income, stock holdings, debts, and business relationships.

The Senate has already passed a bill which is slightly more lenient in its disclosure provisions and applies only to legislators. One legislator, Rep. Herbert Hyde, D-Buncombe, said Tuesday that he was afraid that the differences in the bills will give the legislators a chance to kill both of them.

The House bill was approved overwhelmingly when it came to a final vote, 91-18. But that was after the House more narrowly defeated efforts to table the bill, refer it to another committee, and debilitate it with amendments.

The key vote in that series was a 67-40 defeat of a motion by Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, to kill the bill indirectly by tabling it. After Quinn's motion failed, 21 legislators hopped on to the winning side for the final roll call.

The legislators who voted to kill the bill and, when that failed, went on record in favor of it were: Reps. Thomas Baker, D-Duplin; Allen Barbee, D-Nash; Chris Barker, D-Craven; Joe Bright, D-Craven; Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson; P.C. Collins, D-Alleghany; Claude DeBruhl, D-Buncombe; T.W. Ellis, D-Vance; Peter Hairston, D-Davie; Leo Heer, D-Guilford; George Holmes, R-Yadkin.

Also Wilda Hurst, D-Onslow; Roberts Jernigan, D-Hertford; Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg; Larry Leonard, D-Davidson; Daniel Lilley, D-Lenoir; Glen Morris, D-McDowell; Aaron Plyler, D-Union; Hugh Sandlin, D-Onslow; R.C. Soles, D-Columbus; and John Varner, D-Davidson.

Their switches illustrate a major factor in ethics legislation. Many legislators intensely dislike the prospect of listing the business associations and assets of themselves and their immediate families. But they feel that the public, in the aftermath of Watergate, is demanding a higher standard of ethics for public officials.

Hyde's fear is that in the confusion surrounding the two bills which have now won approval, the legislators will see an opportunity to kill both without losing the right to say they had supported the ethics bill in their chamber.

One of the major hurdles in the way of a compromise is the question of lawyer-client privileges. Many lawyer-legislators say it violates legal ethics to disclose the name of a client.

Assembly Assures Insurance For Doctors Available

By CATHY STEELE ROCHE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina General Assembly enacted legislation Tuesday designed to assure that the state's medical personnel are able to buy malpractice insurance to protect them against lawsuits. The bill received unanimous approval on a 45-0 roll call vote in the Senate. The House then concurred with a Senate amendment that guarantees that rates for the insurance would be high enough to assure companies "a reasonable profit."

The insurance industry opposed the bill, which requires all companies that sell general liability insurance to sell malpractice insurance. It sets up a reinsurance exchange for the pooling of risks on malpractice policies that individual companies consider to be bad risks. All general liability companies must join the exchange.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, a physician, is an attempt to avert a threatened cancellation of malpractice insurance coverage in North Carolina.

The St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., which insures over 90 per cent of the state's doctors, has said it will quit offering malpractice coverage after July 1 unless it gets a rate increase and a change in the way policies are handled.

J. C. Chambers, General manager of St. Paul, predicted an early court test of the new law. Lawyers for the insurance industry have questioned the constitutionality of requiring a company to sell a certain kind of insurance.

Chambers said his company would join the reinsurance exchange if it were declared constitutional and would continue doing business in North Carolina. He said he had heard a lawsuit against the plan was being prepared, but would not say which company planned the challenge.

The St. Paul manager said it would be difficult for small domestic liability companies to write malpractice policies if they refused to provide the coverage, however, they would be forced to quit doing business in North Carolina. Of 225 general liability companies in the state only four or five now sell malpractice insurance.

St. Paul does over $20 million in business each year in the state, according to Chambers, and just over $1 million of that is in malpractice insurance. Lobbyists from the North Carolina Hospital Association and North Carolina Medical Society were busy pushing the bill Tuesday in a rush to get it passed. Several hospitals, including North Carolina Memorial in Chapel Hill, faced a loss of malpractice insurance on July 1.

A hospital association spokesman said cancellation of the policy "would effectively close that institution."

Trouble has been brewing between the insurance industry and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram over malpractice coverage since last fall, when the companies threatened to discontinue the policies unless they got an 82 per cent rate hike.

Fate Is Up To Gov't

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Sixteen Vietnamese students, attending the University of South Carolina on arrangement between their government and the United States, now are in a state of limbo, waiting for the Department of State and the Department of Defense to decide their fates.

The students had the rug pulled from under them when the government of South Vietnam fell to the Communists on May 1.

Capt. H. D. Mann, Navy ROTC officer in charge at the university, is the administrator of the contract between the students and the government.

"They have not been booted out of the university dormitories. The original contract they were under is still in effect. We're waiting now on a decision by the Department of State or the Department of Defense," he said.

Mann said six of the students graduated from the university this month, eight are due to graduate in December and the other two will graduate next May. He said they have done "extremely well" at the school.

He said the graduates are now looking for jobs and two have expressed the desire to go on to graduate school.

Mann said the South Vietnamese government was paying the students' bill at the school before the government's fall and any decision about their future would have to come from the U.S. State Department.

RESTLESS VOLCANO—David Frank, Univ. of Washington, observes steam rising from Sherman Crater, south of the summit of the volcanic Mount Baker in Washington state. Unusually large amounts of steam and ash clouds over the 10,778 foot volcano, first reported on March 10, has spurred intensified aerial and ground monitoring of the volcanic activity. The increase in steam emission is judged to be from 10 to 100 times normal. The volcano last erupted in the 19th century. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue chip stocks recovered from some early losses today but the market remained mixed and trendless.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue chip manufacturing stocks reversed a 5-point loss and showed a gain of 1.17 at 827.28 at 11:30 a.m.

The broad-based NYSE composite index of all common stocks was off .07 at 47.90 at 11 a.m. and declines narrowly led advances on the New York Stock Exchange.

The inflationary implications of the $1-a-barrel increase on foreign oil taxes announced by President Ford caused some selling.

"The short-term inflationary implications of the move (raising oil tariffs) are clear and the market is also uncertain about whether it will accomplish the long-term objective of reducing oil imports," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

Brokers said there was little in the news to boost the market except a basic demand for stocks.

"The news lately has mostly been negative for the market but there's still a lot of money around for investment and, of course, that's really why the market goes up or not," said John J. Smith of Fannestock & Co.

International Business Machines, one of Wall Street's blue chip favorites, gained 1/4 to 216 1/4 after an early one-point drop.

The most active NYSE stock, Louisiana Land Exploration, rose 1/4 to 25 1/4.

Food processor Libby, McNeill rose 1/4 to 8 1/4 with a 34,300-share block traded at 8, and Del Monte fell 1/4 to 23 1/4 with a 33,700-share block at 23 1/4.

Auto stocks were lower led by General Motors, down 3/4 to 44 1/4.

The award is the largest ever given here in a personal injury negligence case and may be a record for the United States, attorneys said.

The jury, which set the award figure Tuesday, had ruled last week that the Washington Sheraton Corp. and the ITT Sheraton Corp. of America was liable for the 1971 accident involving Thomas Hooks of Venice, Ill.

Hooks, then 18, was attending an Explorer Scout convention here when he broke his neck diving into the swimming pool of the Sheraton Park Hotel. Now he is a quadriplegic and confined to a wheelchair.

After the accident he spent 3 1/2 months in a Washington hospital and 8 1/2 months at a hospital in St. Louis, Mo.

Opine Patty Is 'Guilty'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Most persons surveyed believe fugitive Patricia Hearst conspired in her own kidnaping, vowed allegiance to the Symbionese Liberation Army without duress and ought to go to jail if found guilty of the charges against her, the California Poll said today.

The poll, directed by Mervin Field, found that 58 per cent of those questioned think she should be jailed without bail, and 68 per cent believe she should be imprisoned if found guilty of SLA actions.

Miss Hearst, now 21, was kidnaped from her Berkeley apartment Feb. 4, 1974, by the SLA. Subsequently, in tapes transmitted by the kidnapers, she denounced her family, jilted her boyfriend and announced that she had joined her terrorist captors.

As a result of incidents later, she is charged with helping the SLA rob a San Francisco bank, kidnaping, and firing a weapon on a Los Angeles street—counts that could mean life imprisonment. Most of the SLA was wiped out in a fierce fight with Los Angeles police last May.

The California Poll is an independent survey of California public opinion. It was founded in 1946 to promote public opinion research and is operated by Field Research Corp. Financial support for the poll comes from newspapers and television stations.

Judge Favors Reimbursement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Glenn W. Turner and associates should be ordered to reimburse thousands of persons who invested $44 million in a cosmetics marketing plan, a Federal Trade Commission administrative judge recommends.

Judge Donald R. Moore, in an order Tuesday, ruled that a pyramid marketing plan was used to sell Koscot cosmetics unlawfully by an "endless chain" of recruits, and that exaggerated earnings claims and other misrepresentations were used to enlist distributors.

Moore also ruled that Koscot engaged in price fixing and price discrimination, and that Koscot imposed unreasonable and anticompetitive restrictions upon distributors.

In his recommendation for restitution, Moore said that from August 1967 to July 1972 Koscot obtained more than $44 million from initial fees paid by some 30,000 distributors.

In Orlando, Fla., a spokesman for Turner said the promoter could make no comment because he remains under a gag rule imposed during a 1974 mail fraud trial. That federal Introducing Life-Links. Eat them to your heart's content.

Life-Links are not a funny-tasting health food. They're plump. Tender. Delicious. And with their nutritious ingredients, everyone can enjoy them.

Regular hot dogs contain 28% to 30% animal fat. Life-Links contain less than 5%. And they're prepared with polyunsaturated vegetable oils.

So they're better for most people. Even healthy teenagers, who quite often have an unhealthy build-up of fat in the heart's circulation system.

Of course, if you're not 19 anymore, fatty foods may have become a strict "No-No." But doctors will tell you that with Life-Links you can pretend you're a kid again. Enjoy.

Taste like quality hot dogs.

Life-Links are made with lean beef. So they're not greasy. They're not mushy, either. No fillers such as cereal are added.

What we add are spices to make Life-Links taste like the best hot dogs you can buy. Bake them in a casserole. Grill them. Or boil them. Then serve them any way you want.

Cost less than many hot dogs.

Life-Links cost less than many hot dogs. And in value, there's no comparison. Not when you consider how much healthier Life-Links are for your family.

Try Life-Links. It'll do your heart good in more ways than one.

Phillies' Five Errors Lead To San Francisco's Tenth Inning 1-0 Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

On page 19 in the Philadelphia Phillies' media guide you'll find a section entitled "Baseball's Best Infield."

Well, "Baseball's Best Infield" looked more like a typographical error Tuesday night ... and that was about the only type of error the Phillies didn't commit in losing to the San Francisco Giants 1-0 in 10 innings.

To quote the Phils' press guide: "In 1974, the Phillies' infield of Mike Schmidt, Larry Bowa, Dave Cash and Willie Montanez all finished second in balloting for the National League Gold Glove awards. The Phillies' foursome hit for the highest average, .290."

But third baseman Schmidt took this year's .190 average to the bench Tuesday night, ending the league's longest consecutive game string at 231.

Shortstop Bowa was on the disabled list with a broken thumb suffered a night earlier.

Cash was in his accustomed spot at second base, but he went hitless in four trips and committed two of Philadelphia's five errors. And Montanez was at first base, all right, but he was wearing a San Francisco uniform, having been traded to the Giants three weeks ago for center fielder Garry Maddox. And Maddox was alongside Bowa on the disabled list with a cracked kneecap.

Elsewhere in the NL, the Los Angeles Dodgers trounced the New York Mets 10-4, the Atlanta Braves downed the Chicago Cubs 7-2, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Houston Astros 6-5 and the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the San Diego Padres 7-1. Cincinnati and Montreal were not scheduled.

The Phillies' fifth error was the one that cost them the ballgame. San Francisco's Von Joshua singled with one out in the 10th off reliever Gene Garber and continued to third when the ball got away from center fielder Jerry Martin, just up from the minors to take Maddox' spot on the roster. Joshua scored on a double by pinch hitter Glenn Adams and that was all John Montefusco needed as he pitched a five-hit shutout.

Pirates 6, Astros 5
Bill Robinson's ninth-inning single capped a three-run rally that lifted the Bucs past the Astros.

Robinson walked Manny Sanguillen intentionally to get to him with two out and the score tied. Robinson, hitless in four previous at-bats with three strikeouts, laced a 1-2 pitch from Ken Forsch into left field to win the game and lift the Pirates into second place in the NL East, one-half game behind the Cubs and one game ahead of the Mets.

Dodgers 10, Mets 4
Jimmy Wynn knocked in three runs with his ninth and 10th homers — he tied Cincinnati's Johnny Bench for the NL lead — and Dave Lopes walloped a three-run shot to back

Burt Hooton's six-hit pitching. Steve Garvey started the Dodgers scoring with a two-run double off Harry Parker in the first inning and Wynn homered in the third with a man on and again in the sixth. Ed Kranepool homered for the Mets.

Cardinals 7, Padres 1
Lou Brock hit for the cycle and Bob Forsch pitched a five-hitter. The 35-year-old Brock, who was struggling with a .253 average May 8, boosted his mark to .342 with his home run, triple, double and single. He led off the first inning with a single, slugged a bases-empty homer into the center-field seats in the third, a run-scoring triple in the fifth and a double in the eighth.

Coke Smashes Kiwanians

Coca-Cola won only its second game of the year yesterday in the North State Little League, but it did a good job of it, ripping the winless Kiwanis, 20-3.

The win boosted Coke to 2-5 on the year, while the Kiwanis fell to 0-7.

Coke grabbed the lead with two in the first inning. Chuck Allen doubled and Todd Lovette singled. Billy Brannigan doubled in both runners.

The Kiwanis came back with one in their half of the second. Spencer Mayo singled and John Parnell walked. They moved up on a passed ball and Mayo scored on Jeff Boyd's infield out.

Coke exploded for seven runs in the third to take a 9-1 lead. Jonathan McGee reached on an error and Raynor Casey was safe on another, scoring McGee. Skip Cannon walked and Richard Pace did too. Brannigan reached on an error, scoring Casey and Cannon. Jeff Camp singled, scoring Pace. Barry Tyson reached on an error, bringing in both Brannigan and Camp. McGee walked and Casey singled, scoring Tyson with the seventh run.

Five more scored in the fourth. Cannon walked and Lovette reached on an error. Both moved up on a passed ball and Pace walked. Brannigan grounded out, scoring Cannon. Camp doubled, driving in both Lovette and Pace. Tyson reached on an error and Casey reached on another, scoring both Camp and Tyson.

The fifth saw the Kiwanis score their second run. Boyd singled and moved up on a passed ball. Brian Hill reached on an error, as did Jay Whitehurst, scoring Boyd.

Coke closed out its scoring with six more runs in the sixth. Tyson walked as did McGee. Both scored when Casey reached on a three-base error. He scored when Allen reached on an error. Chip Little was safe on a fielder's choice and Robert Puryear walked. Michael Smith also walked, scoring Allen. Brannigan singled in Little and Camp walked to score Puryear.

The Kiwanis also got their final run in the sixth. Grant Stackhouse doubled and took third on a passed ball. He scored when Mayo reached on a fielder's choice.

Camp had three hits, while Brannigan and Lovette each had two for Coke. No one had more than one for the Kiwanis.

T of C Is Back On Slate After Being Cancelled

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Pro golf's Tournament of Champions is back in business.

The controversial cancellation of the Tournament of Champions, for 23 years one of the game's most prestigious events, was rescinded Tuesday and the tournament was put back on the schedule for 1976.

The announcement was made by pro golf Commissioner

Deane Beman at a closed-door meeting of the touring players at the Atlanta Country Club Tuesday night.

"The board has reconsidered the matter today and asked me to inform you that the board has rescinded its previous decision and will reschedule the Tournament of Champions in 1976," Beman said in a prepared statement read to the players.

A meeting of the tour's Policy Board, the policy-making group for the conduct of the tour, was held behind closed doors a few hours prior to Beman's statement to the players.

No date was announced for the tournament, which traditionally was played two weeks following the Masters. And there is a possibility that the Tournament of Champions' unique format — they took only the winners of regular tour titles from the previous 12 months — may be altered.

"The board's action was based on the expressed willingness of the sponsor to adjust the format of the Tournament of Champions to accommodate the development of the World Series of Golf," Beman told the players.

Beman and the president of the PGA announced earlier in the year that the World Series of Golf, previously a four-man, 36-hole event would, in 1976, be changed to a 24-to-36 man field playing over 72 holes.

It is scheduled to be played in the fall and "serve as a true World Series of Golf," Beman said.

"Golf," he had said earlier, "is the only major sport that does not have a major, season-ending event, a climax to the season. It is something we need. The World Series of Golf can fill that need."

The Reflector slipped into the lead with two in the first but Daniel tied it in the second. The Reflector regained the lead in the third, 4-2, only to see Daniel forge ahead, 5-4 in the fifth.

The Reflector bounced back into the lead on Sandra Spivey's two-run homer and added another in the sixth to win the game.

Winning Protest Gives Niekro, Braves Big Lift

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Phil Niekro, Atlanta's "Old Pro" knuckleballer, said he felt as if he had won a game and a half Tuesday after he hurled the Braves to a 7-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Not only did Niekro scatter seven hits to even his record at 4-4 but he also learned that the Braves' protest of a rainout game in Montreal in which they were leading 4-1 in the fourth inning was upheld.

Ironically, Niekro learned about the protest being upheld from umpire Nick Colosi who had been the plate umpire in the May 15th game which was called because of rain.

The Braves based their protest on the fact the umpires did not wait long enough before calling the game and National League President Chub Feeney upheld the protest and the game will be resumed from the point it was called.

"I didn't know about it until the second base umpire told me when I reached second base in the eighth inning," said the 36-year-old Niekro. "You're darn right I want to win that game. I was half way home."

But back to the game Niekro put into the records.

He was masterful through the first five innings during which he allowed the Cubs only one baserunner on a two-out single by Pete LaCock in the fourth inning. He retired the next five batters as the Braves staked him to a 1-0 lead, but with one out in the sixth, opposing pitcher Rick Reuschel hit his first major league homer to tie it up.

"My knuckle ball was pretty good," said Niekro. "But somehow I couldn't get it over the plate to Reuschel. He was laying off of it so I had to go to the fast ball. He knew it, waited and timed it real good."

The Cubs picked up a hit in the seventh, another in the eighth and three in the ninth when they scored their other run.

Atlanta Manager Clyde King, who bemoaned the fact his slugging Braves were shut out by Ray Burris on Monday, said "That's more like it. A few hits and a few runs make it a different game."

"That Niekro's a real Old Pro," said King.

Two Played; Four Drowned

Oakmont rallied for four runs in the seventh to beat Black Jack, 11-8 and St. Gabriel held off a last inning rally by People's to preserve a 9-7 victory in the only church softball league games played last night. The others were rained out.

Oakmont started off with two in the first. Black Jack picked up one in the third but a five run burst in the fifth gave Oakmont a 7-1 lead. Black Jack knocked off five runs from the lead but Oakmont got four of them back in the seventh to hang on.

People's went up by two in the top of the first but St. Gabriel pushed over three in their half. St. Gabriel added three more in the second and then won it with three runs in the sixth. People's rallied for five in the seventh but fell two short.

Accepts Position

Two-time All-Southern Conference swimmer for East Carolina University, Ricky Prince, has been granted a graduate assistantship at the University of Richmond beginning next fall.

Prince will become an assistant swimming coach and begin his work in graduate school under the grant.

Pirate coach Ray Scharf commented, "This is an excellent opportunity for Ricky and a good step for the future. I'm real happy for him and feel he will definitely do a fine job at Richmond."

Crandall Lets Team Pick Own Lineup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Keep it under your hat, but Del Crandall has come up with a most unusual way to win a baseball game.

It goes like this: Let the ball-players choose the starting lineup.

The Milwaukee manager, in a desperate move to change his luck, had the lineup picked out of a hat at random by the players Tuesday night and it resulted in a 9-8 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"I was just looking for something to kind of take the pressure off things and I thought it was worth a try," said Crandall, whose team had lost six straight games and eight of nine before Tuesday night. "Billy Martin did the same thing a couple of years ago."

The Milwaukee starters determined their positions in the batting order by drawing scraps of paper with numbers written on them. This luck of the draw found Hank Aaron, the all-time home run king, batting seventh and Kurt Bevacqua, a .156 hitter, in the cleanup spot.

That wasn't all. Aaron suggested to Crandall that he play left field instead of starting in his familiar designated hitter position.

"I thought we'd shake things up a little and I asked Del if I could start in left," Aaron said. "He said okay."

In the other American League games, the Kansas City Royals beat the New York Yankees 3-0; the Minnesota Twins stopped the Detroit Tigers 6-5; the Cleveland Indians turned back the California Angels 6-3 and the Oakland A's defeated the Baltimore Orioles 4-2. The Boston-Texas game was postponed by rain.

Bobby Mitchell capped a five-run fourth inning with a three-run homer, rallying Milwaukee over Chicago. The Brewers rallied from a 4-0 deficit to win it for rookie Tom Hausman, 1-0, who relieved Ed Sprague in the second inning.

Royals 3, Yankees 0
Al Fitzmorris retired the first 11 batters and allowed just three hits the rest of the way, pitching Kansas over New York. Fitzmorris had a perfect game until Roy White singled with two out in the fourth inning. The only other hits off Fitzmorris, 7-3, was a single by Graig Nettles in the fifth and a base hit by Bobby Bonds in the ninth. Fitzmorris went through the game without walking a batter.

"Fitzmorris kept the ball in good spots all night," said New York Manager Bill Virdon. "I guess we didn't hit too well, but you have to give him credit."

Twins 6, Tigers 5

Rod Carew, whose sixth-inning homer touched off Minnesota's comeback from a five-run deficit, hit a sacrifice fly to cap a two-run rally in the ninth inning that gave the Twins their victory over Detroit.

Indians 6, Angels 3

John Ellis' two-run single capped a three-run rally in the eighth inning, leading Cleveland past California.

A's 4, Orioles 2

Reggie Jackson drove in two runs with a double and a homer as Oakland came from behind twice to beat Baltimore.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Lee of the Boston Red Sox, who allowed just seven hits in pitching two shutouts last week, has been named the American League's Player of the Week, the league announced today.

On May 20, Lee stopped the defending champion Oakland A's 7-0 on just two hits. Then Saturday, in a nationally televised game, Lee blanked California 6-0 on five hits. He has a string of 22 consecutive scoreless innings.

Runner-up for the award was Gene Tenace of Oakland, who hit .414 with five homers and 12 RBI last week.

Roasting Poultry Foil Wrapped

Poultry cooked wrapped in aluminum foil can be very tender and juicy with shorter cooking time. . . and they are self basting. In addition, foil permits the use of higher temperatures and therefore results in still shorter cooking time.

Truss a seasoned bird and generously wrap in foil. Place in pre-heated 450°F oven.

Roast to an internal temperature of 185°F.

Sneva Looking To Run In Milwaukee June 8th

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — As driver Tom Sneva sits in his hospital bed recovering from burns suffered in a brutal crash in Sunday's Indianapolis 500, he worries not about who or what caused the wreck, just about how soon he will be racing again.

"I could be racing again by the Milwaukee 150 on June 8," Sneva said Tuesday. "But I'll definitely be back by the time practice starts June 18 for the Pocono 500."

Sneva, listed in serious condition as a precaution only for two days while he was in intensive care with mostly minor burns, might be well enough to go home in seven to 10 days, doctors say. After moving to a private room Tuesday, his condition was immediately changed to good.

Sneva slept well Sunday night, and felt fit enough Monday to watch his colleagues salute him during the televised 500 Victory Dinner.

Tom Sneva—like something from a horror movie.

Each wished him a speedy recovery and a quick return to racing.

"Some people may wonder why I don't give up driving after a crash like that," said Sneva, a former schoolteacher from Spokane, Wash. "When you make your decision to become a race driver, you also accept the risks."

"If I'm smart, I'll learn from my experience and be a better driver."

Sneva, considered one of the top new talents in racing, doesn't remember too much of his "experience." His wife Sharon, watching from the second turn, would have seen the whole episode, except for an alert friend who steered her quickly out of view.

"I remember going through the south short chute alongside Eldon Rasmussen, but when we went into the second turn, he dropped back and I thought I had passed him," Sneva said.

"But then I noticed his left front wheel coming in on me. When it touched the side of my car, it started me flipping."

"I remember getting upside down and looking out over the end of the car and seeing the race track upside down and the cars going past me. It was all like in a dream, in slow motion. But that's all I remember until I got to the track hospital."

Sneva's car landed on its tail, bounced end first into the fence where the gear box and rear wheels caught and tore off.

About that time, the fuel and oil coming out of the ruptured car exploded. Fortunately the car continued flipping on past the burning fuel.

On its last flip, the car landed on its right front wheel, which held up under the impact, and springboarded the wreck back over rightside up.

The shattered car was carted off in two dump trucks.

Chinese Love Acrobatics And Terry Porter's Pole Vaulting

By WILL GRIMSELY
AP Special Correspondent
PEKING (AP) — The Chinese appear ready to adopt freewheeling uninhibited Terry Porter, and Terry is almost in the mood to accept.

"These people are beautiful," the lanky slow-talking Texan said today. "If I didn't have some problems back home to clear up, I think I would like to stay here a while."

"They have been great to me and I've tried to pay them back by giving them a show. You know, they may never see another American for years."

Certainly not an American like Porter.

The 23-year-old pole vaulter from Wharton Tex., whose 17 feet, 3/4 inch leap constituted one of America's 16 victories in 17 track and field events against the People's Republic of China Tuesday, has been the people's choice from Canton to Shanghai to Peking.

The Chinese generally show only a detached interest in track and field, which is just beginning to emerge as an important sport here. But they go wildly ecstatic when Terry picks up a pole.

The Chinese people love acrobatics and they love the art in jumping over a high bar with a long stick. It is the one event which stirs their passions.

And they have found a special friend in Porter, who plays a continuing game of charades with them from the jumping pits.

Once when Terry's rival and teammate Roland Carter of Houston took a belly flop, Porter turned to the crowd and made a circular gesture with his hands to indicate that Carter must be crazy.

The crowd didn't recognize the gesture but laughed heartily.

When Dick Buerkle was running the 10,000 meters, his shaved head glistening, Porter ran to the edge of the track and pointed to Buerkle's bald dome, and then gave his long locks a swish. The crowd giggled and applauded.

Porter's hair reaches to his shoulders, longer than that of any girl on the team. His mustache and handsome sharp features give him the appearance of a TV deputy sheriff.

Porter has become the maverick of the American team, which ends its Chinese trip today and heads home Friday via Tokyo and Seattle.

In Canton he showed up for the opening day parade of athletes in a red rain suit — a sharp contrast to his teammates who were in red white and blue uniforms. "It would have been better if he had got wet," said Coach Bob Giegnack. "But there are chipmunks everywhere. I've got some in my fireplace back home."

When the American team went to the Great Wall earlier this week, Porter missed the bus so he took a taxi for the 43 mile mountain-climbing trip. The state paid the bill.

"Shucks," said Terry, "I just forgot my coat and went back for it. I didn't do anything wrong."

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were reelected on major roll call votes May 15 through May 21.

HOUSE
B-1 BOMBERS—Rejected, 164 for and 227 against, an amendment to delete from the Department of Defense budget $108 million earmarked for procuring the B-1 aircraft. The amendment was attached to HR 6574, a bill authorizing $32 billion for weapons development from July 1, 1975 through Sept. 30, 1976.

Not until November, 1976 will Congress finally decide whether to purchase a fleet of B-1 bombers, now being developed and designed primarily by Rockwell International Corp. The $108 million at issue would go toward tool design, engineering and manpower necessary to continue the program.

Supporters said the amendment was a first step toward discontinuing the B-1 program, which has an overall estimated cost of $20 billion. They said the cost of replacing existing B-52 bombers with a fleet of B-1's is too high to justify the "marginal" improvements which would be achieved.

Opponents favored unflagging congressional support of the B-1, which they said is being designed to last through the century. Rep. Joe Waggoner (D-La.) said, "If we fail to continue to develop weapons and weapons systems which are conventional, we are hastening the day of nuclear holocaust because eventually we will not have anything to fight a war with except nuclear weapons. Conventional bombers deter war."

Reps. Stephen Neal (D-5) and W.G. Hefner (D-8) voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L.H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-7), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

Rep. James Martin (R-9) did not vote.

WOMEN—Rejected, 113 for and 284 against, an amendment directing the department of Defense to study for one year whether to create a separate women's service academy. With its one year delay, the amendment sought to thwart passage of a separate amendment to admit women to all U.S. service academies. Following the rejection, the House voted to admit women to military, naval and Air Force academies for the first time, under the same admissions criteria applied to men.

The amendment was proposed to HR 6674 (above), a bill later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

Supporters of the amendment were those members opposed to opening service academies to women. Rep. Sonny Montgomery (D-Miss.) said such an action would be "a foot in the door of putting women into combat" because the primary purpose of service academies is preparing combat leadership.

Opponents countered that 10 percent of today's service academy graduates have never served in combat. They said the real issue was "sex discrimination." Rep. Bella Abzug (D-N.Y.) cautioned against falling for the "old canards" which proclaimed women biologically unfit to succeed as college students, lawyers, doctors or TV repairers.

Henderson, Hefner, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Andres, Neal, Preyer and Rose voted "nay."

Martin did not vote.

STRIP MINING VETO—Voted, 208 for and 195 against, to postpone until June 10 a vote on whether to sustain or override President Ford's veto of a bill (HR 25) setting stricter federal controls on the strip mining of coal. The vetoed bill provides, in part, that strip-mined land be returned to its original condition and that unreclaimable land not be strip-mined.

Supporters of the delay generally supported HR 25 and are expected to vote to override. They said more time is needed to assure the two-thirds majority—290 votes—required for an override. Rep. Morris Udall (D-Ariz.) said: "A . . . flood of propaganda . . . emanating in large part from the White House . . . the coal industry and . . . the electric utility industry" must be refuted.

President Ford said HR 25 would reduce coal production, increase the cost of electricity for consumers, cause as many as 36,000 workers to be laid off and increase U.S. dependence on foreign oil. Most of those voting against agreed with him. Other members voting against supported the legislation but wanted the veto issue resolved immediately.

Henderson, Neal, Preyer and Taylor voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

AID TO TURKEY—Passed, 41

for and 40 against, a bill (S 846) permitting President Ford to lift the ban on U.S. arms aid to Turkey. S 846 was later sent to the House.

Congress imposed the ban on Feb. 5, as a result of Turkey's 1974 invasion of Cyprus and in compliance with federal law prohibiting aggressive use of American-supplied weapons. S 846 would remove the ban as long as Turkey maintains the current Cyprus cease-fire and refrains from sending more troops or U.S. weapons to Cyprus.

Supporters said the ban, though justified by law, hurts "vital national interests" such as promoting a Cyprus settlement, keeping the North Atlantic Treaty Organization strong and maintaining Turkey's pro-western attitude. Sen. Edmund Muskie (D-Maine) said the Administration needs more flexibility to cope with "the day-to-day business of foreign policy" for which it is held responsible.

Opponents said it would be illegal to lift the ban. Sen. Birch Bayh (D-Ind.) said, "... a large portion of the world's nations are armed with American weapons. . . we must stand by the sound principle that military supplies provided by this country shall not be used for aggression."

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "yea." Sen. Robert Morgan (D) did not vote.

BUSINESS—Adopted, 51 for and 38 against, an amendment to remove anti-busing language from a House-passed bill (HR 5899) making supplemental appropriations to various federal agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975. HR 5899, as amended, was sent to conference with the House.

The amendment seeks to reaffirm the civil rights law directing the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to withhold federal funds from unsatisfactorily desegregated schools.

One supporter, Rep. Edward Brooke (D-Mass.), said the amendment would maintain HEW as a "potent ally of the courts in combating race discrimination and assuring black children of their constitutional right to a desegregated education."

Opponents cited growing sentiment on the part of both blacks and whites that busing may not achieve "quality education." Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.) said a "nay" vote would demonstrate "a frustration on the part of many members of Congress, who oppose busing, yet strongly favor civil rights and equal educational opportunity."

Helms and Morgan did not vote.

Would Return Eniwetok To Micronesians

By ROBERT C. MILLER
HONOLULU (UPI) — Lt. Gen. Warren D. Johnson has handed Congress a $39.9 million janitorial bill along with a reminder of America's 28-year-old moral commitment to 435 displaced Micronesians.

The tall, bald Air Force general who heads the Defense Nuclear Agency also wants to be the janitor who cleans up the radioactive leftovers from the 43 U.S. nuclear tests on Eniwetok atoll in the central Pacific.

Included in the leftovers is an estimated 79,000 cubic yards of tainted, radioactive soil which must be scraped off the top of various islands in the huge atoll, disposed of safely and replaced with 79,000 yards of topsoil shipped across the Pacific from the United States.

In 1947 the United States convinced the 136 residents of the affected islands that they should move elsewhere so the Americans could use their islands to test the awesome atomic and hydrogen devices that had just been added to the American arsenal.

"There was a pressing military need in 1947 to test these new weapons," Gen. Johnson said. "They were new weapons and they required extensive testing which had to be done in a remote area where the experiments could be safely conducted. We asked these people to move which they did with some willingness. We said that they might be able to return to their home islands some day if the military need for further testing ceased to exist."

The Oklahoma-born general said that no guarantee was given the islanders at that time, but that the U.S. has a "moral commitment" to return the islands to their rightful owners the same way it found them.

Last year Gen. Johnson convinced the Senate that justice demanded the Pacific islanders be allowed to return to their home islands, but the House felt there were more pressing needs for the money at home and the bill died in conference.

On April 8, Gen. Johnson presented his case again. There were hundreds of pages of engineering reports, cost estimates and time studies. But the basic clean up campaign was the same.

Some of the islands have less radiation today than Denver, others like Runit probably will remain "hot" for decades. Gen. Johnson said the readings range from a high of 750 at Runit to a low of one at Eniwetok. Japant has a reading of five, Boken 560, Lujor 400, Medren 2. For comparison, Denver has a reading of 15 and Seattle five.

"The cleanup would be handled in three stages," Gen. Johnson explained. "If the appropriation is approved, the first stage would start about the middle of next year on Japant where the DNA plans to bring in 50 of the displaced Micronesians to help start the project."

He estimated it would take about three years of work by some 800 people to complete the project.

"On some of the islands it will be just a tidying up job, removing old piers, junk and collapsed buildings," Johnson said. "On the islands that are still heavily radioactivated, we plan to make a concrete slurry of all the contaminated topsoil, debris and scrap, dump it into the crater formed in the Eniwetok lagoon by the 'Cactus' detonation and seal the whole thing over with 18 inches of concrete."

The general said the Hole created in the lagoon by "Cactus" was about 85,000 cubic yards in size and would easily hold all the waste collected from those islands to be rehabilitated. He estimated $14 million would be spent on the cleanup project during the first stage.

Gen. Johnson asked that the $39.9 million cleanup bill be viewed in relation to the more than $2.5 billion spent in conducting the tests.

"In relation to today's dollar the cost is quite reasonable," the general said. "We were able to conduct 43 nuclear tests and accomplish everything desired. The $39.9 million should be regarded as part of this over-all investment and not as a separate item. The Eniwetok people have a great traditional sense of belonging to the land, and they have tremendous faith in the United States. They are convinced the Americans will return them to their islands."

Originally 136 people were moved in 1947, but today there are 435 Micronesians who want to return.

Bottle Collector Selling Treasure

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Charles Gardner is selling his bottles — all 4,500 of them valued at $775,000.

Gardner has been collecting bottles for 46 years. He's 84 now and says it's time to auction them off.

"I'm married and getting on. I don't want to leave my wife all those bottles to dispose of," Gardner said in an interview.

His collection includes early American liquor flasks, perfume bottles, patent medicine bottles and pottery bottles, several of them worth more than $10,000 each.

He recently packed up all his bottles and sent them to Bolton, Mass., where they will be offered during two three-day auctions in September and November.

"It's the biggest deal in the United States that ever happened to bottles," said Gardner.

Although he has received bids for the entire collection, Gardner said he preferred the auction. "Anyone who asked me for an individual bottle will get a fair chance at it," he said.

Gardner, who used to run a moving and storage company, began collecting bottles in 1929 when he purchased an old flask, now worth $50, for $2.50. Through the years, he rummaged through antique stores and attended flea markets and auctions, buying bottles for a few cents or several dollars.

"For me, these bottles are a hobby. I haven't been in it for the money,"

Eventually, he built an addition to the rear of his house where all the bottles were neatly placed on shelves. "It was like your own private museum," said Gardner.

Gardner's black English wine bottle made in 1629 is the oldest in his collection. He also has numerous ornate whiskey flasks.

"The ones that are tops with me are the Connecticut whiskey flasks. They go back to the early 1700's and were made by six bottle manufacturers in Connecticut. I've got one with Lafayette's bust on it made by a Coventry company. I've been offered $10,000 apiece for some of them."

The only thing that Gardner won't touch are fruit jars. "That's a dirty word around here. Just not much to 'em."

B.J. Thomas Vows Country Music Is Home

ON COMEBACK—B.J. Thomas has traveled full circle, from country to rock to pop, and is now back to country. (AP Wirephoto)

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—After stints at rock, cowboy and glamour pop music, B.J. Thomas has returned full-circle to country.

His weepy "Hey Won't You Play Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song" has hit number one on the country charts and has restored his standing in the field after a long absence.

The fact that the tune skyrocketed to the top selling single in the pop field while creeping up the country charts helps confirm what Thomas says is a shift in the public's taste.

"Country is the 'hippest' music there is today," he says. "The lyrics are sad but the songs are happy."

Thomas (the B.J. is for Billy Joe) has been in Nashville to record a new album that he says will be even a little more country than the last. In the planning stages are a live album and one devoted to gospel.

In 1966 Thomas got his first gold record with an old Hank Williams song, "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

Emerging from the Texas nightclub rock circuit, he then recorded a string of hits including "Hooked on a Feeling," "Eyes of a New York Woman" and "Rock and Roll Lullaby."

There were troubles, too. Thomas says he was paid only $1,800 for his first six records even though they sold eight million copies. Now, with well over 20 million records sold, he still is cynical of record company executives and producers.

And there were the drugs. Thomas says that's all part of the past now and that he hasn't touched any drugs in the last three years.

"People started pumping me with pills when I was 15. I thought it was just something that made you feel good. I didn't know what I was messing with."

"By the time I was 18, I was gone, a total speed freak. I don't even remember what happened from 1968 to 1972."

One of the things that happened then was a single that was pushed to a five million best seller by a movie about two turn-of-the-century Robin Hoods called "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

His record company and manager say Thomas is weary of being associated with "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" even though that and "Somebody Done Somebody Wrong" are what he's most known for.

Thomas says he still never tires of singing "Raindrops" but that the image it gave him almost drove him crazy.

"It put me in a tuxedo image with dancing girls, a big horn section, strings—all that rigamarole just to satisfy the whim of somebody who thinks they know what's happening but doesn't."

"I had to talk like Andy Griffith and say, 'Well, now, I'm gonna do sumpin', an I-towell-yen song.' I don't say that, I say Italian like everybody else."

"I know how to talk even if my neck is red. Not everybody can be a redneck."

Singapore's Auto Traffic Restricted

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
SINGAPORE (AP) — One way streets didn't ease the rush hour traffic jams. Neither did increased vehicle taxes, special lanes for buses, staggered working hours and other remedies.

So access to Singapore's central business district is to be restricted from June 1.

Car poolers with a minimum of four persons per vehicle can continue to drive in. Others must pay for the privilege, park outside the downtown area and climb on a bus or arrive at work before 7:30 a.m. or after 9:30 a.m.

Drivers who insist on coming downtown in their own cars alone between 7:30 and 9:30 a.m. can buy a monthly license for about $27 or daily licenses for about $1.35. They are also expected to pay much more for parking garages and meters once downtown.

Traffic experts in this 224-square-mile island republic place most of their hopes on the park-and-ride plan. At least 15 large lots are being prepared. Shuttle buses are to link these fringe parking areas to the central business district.

The restrictions have plenty of critics and some officials are uncertain whether they will work. Said one:

"We don't say it's the final solution to the traffic problem. It is an experiment and will be adapted as the need arises. But we had to do something."

A spokesman for the Singapore Automobile Association said motorists "will encounter the irony of owning a car and not being able to go where they like and when they like ...

"Yet there is no doubt that the congestion problem is assuming increasingly serious proportions, but instead of clobbering the poor motorist, ways and means of improving the roads, building more flyovers and filter roads should be considered as alternatives for the harassed commuter."

Some 150,000 autos are on the roads now, about one for every 15 Singaporeans. Driving schools report excellent business as still more aspirant motorists prepare for their exams. Motoring discipline is relatively good and the standard of driving skill is above average, one Automobile Association man said. "There's just too many cars chasing too little space."

Even outside peak commuting periods traffic crawls bumper-to-bumper on some roads. Prosperity and inadequate public transport have enabled Singapore to join the ranks of traffic congested cities.

In Asia only the Japanese have a larger per capita annual income than the 2.2 million people here.

Public transport consists of buses, taxis and bicycles with sidecars called "trishas."

Taxis are efficient but too expensive for commuting purposes for the average wage earner, said one cabbie. Trishas are mostly tourist attractions.

Under private management the local buses were a rolling disaster, unsafe as well as unprofitable. Last August the government stepped in before the system collapsed.

Hundreds of new buses have been added to the fleet and 8,500 workers were given wage increases. The average number of bus breakdowns was reduced from 800 per day in May 1974 to 384 in December. Other statistics show similar betterment. Service has improved but the real test for the buses is expected June 1 from the park-and-riders.

High And Low Accept Cards

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the world's literally highest and lowest restaurants and hotels are accepting credit cards these days, according to Diners Club, the founding credit card company.

The "high" is located in Nepal, where the Mount Everest View Hotel, located at an altitude of 14,700 feet and reportedly one of the world's "highest" hotels, accepts the card. The "low" is in Israel — in the towns of Sodom and Dead Sea. There, the hotel-restaurant Galei Zohar and Pan American, respectively, each located at approximately 1,250 feet below sea level, honor the credit card.

Seventeen per cent of the country's domestic production of crude oil and natural gas comes from the Outer Continental Shelf.

Consumer's Interest Is Emphasized

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

Eleven years ago, when Esther Peterson was named to head the newly created post of presidential assistant on consumer affairs, she had a staff of one and a budget that was borrowed from other agencies.

Virginia Knauer, today's occupant of the White House consumer post, has a staff of 55 and a budget of $1.6 million.

That growth is mirrored at almost every level of American life. No one knows — or is even willing to guess — how much is being spent now to advise, protect and watch over the U.S. consumer.

There are almost two dozen consumer offices, departments or agents at the federal level in addition to Mrs. Knauer's Office of Consumer Affairs in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Legislation to create an independent federal Consumer Protection Agency is being debated in Washington and the measure is given a good chance of passage, despite defeats of similar measures in the past.

Some congressional committees have consumer affairs subcommittees. There are more than 300 state, county and city consumer offices, almost all of which have been created in the past decade.

Followers of auto industry critic Ralph Nader, sometimes called the father of the consumer movement, have formed public interest research groups to study everything from atomic energy to life insurance.

Grass-roots organizations, ranging from the umbrella-like Consumer Federation of America to the neighborhood club fighting high electric bills, exist in nearly every city of the United States.

Industry has consumer advisers and panels. A 1974 study of 149 major U.S. companies by the Conference Board, a non-profit research organization, showed that all had full-time consumer affairs departments, formed within the last six years.

"Name the issue and you can find your consumer expert," said one federal official.

There even is a Society of Professional Consumer Affairs Professionals. The Washington-based organization is comprised of people employed as consumer advisers by business. It had less than 100 members when it was founded May 24, 1973. As of March 1, 1975, there were 431 members.

"At present there are none," said Bradley. "There's not even a book on the subject."

Where did it all start? What good does it do? Where is it all going?

Defining a consumer used to be relatively simple. He was somebody who used something. But the consumer in today's world has become something more. He has rights. He has interests. He has specific concerns about specific products.

The first president to meet with consumer representatives was Theodore Roosevelt. The session grew out of an investigation into stockyard conditions described in Upton Sinclair's book "The Jungle." The investigation and meeting resulted in the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906.

Modern-day consumerism probably started with John F. Kennedy who promised during his 1960 presidential campaign to name an adviser on consumer affairs. Kennedy never named such an adviser, but he did set up a Consumer Advisory Council and, in 1963, issued a statement of consumer rights.

Kennedy said the consumer had four basic rights:

—The right to be heard.
—The right to a choice.
—The right to be protected against unsafe products.

—The right to a response to legitimate complaints.

In January, less than two months after taking office, President Johnson created a consumer affairs post and tapped Mrs. Peterson, an assistant secretary of labor, for the job.

"I started with one office, a telephone and a secretary," recalled Mrs. Peterson, now a consumer adviser for the Giant Food supermarket chain. She borrowed staff from other agencies and put together a budget the same way. Later, Congress issued a regular appropriation.

Betty Furness, now a consumer affairs reporter for NBC, replaced Mrs. Peterson in March 1967 and Mrs. Knauer took over in April 1969.

President Nixon issued an executive order in February 1971, changing the name of the job — from executive director of the Presidential Committee on Consumer Interest to director of the White House Office of Consumer Affairs.

Study Getting Bikes Off Roads

HAUPPAGE, N.Y. (AP) — Suffolk County's legislature is considering a proposal to establish 308 miles of bicycle paths. In 1972 there were more bike fatalities in the county than in any other in New York State. There were 14 fatalities out of the state's total, although Suffolk has only 6 per cent of the state's population.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1975

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is no day to force any activities upon your friends and acquaintances. Instead, work yourself at gaining the hopes that mean the most to you. You find social conditions in your favor.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can now easily get over stumbling blocks in the path of your progress that were difficult in the past. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get busy early in the day and improve credit affairs. Remain impersonal with others for now. Take health treatments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have new ideas but they need more study, so don't jump into them blindly. One who opposes you could cause trouble.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use diplomacy in the handling of promises to others, or you could get into trouble over them. Be charming with others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You don't understand the views of associates in the morning, so wait until afternoon before discussing an important matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good day to put a new system to work. Discuss it further with associates. Make the evening a quiet and relaxing one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The daytime is not good for recreation since you have important practical affairs to attend to. Engage in hobby tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't get embroiled in a family squabble, but keep your mind active on important business affairs. Think constructively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) The planets are not favorable for starting new projects at this time. Show increased devotion to the one you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure to protect your assets, or you could feel the pinch later on. Be sure to study your monetary position carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't neglect any business matters early in the day. Avoid arguments with anyone if possible. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are tempted to lose your temper during the day, but this is the worst thing you could do. A friend needs your help now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want to be of service to others so direct the education along humanitarian lines, so that the greatest number can be helped. Teach fair play.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass
 4♥ Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Two of ♠.

The term 'endplay' is an appropriate description because the final position generally occurs fairly late in the play and usually requires quite a bit of preliminary groundwork to prepare for the end position. Consider this example.

Once his heart suit has been supported, South's hand revealed to 20 points. Thus, he saw no point in dilly-dallying and leaped straight to game.

West led a low spade, East won the ace and shifted to the king of clubs. It was tempting to win, draw two rounds of trumps and then, if the queen had not dropped, strip the spades from the hand and exit with the ten of clubs. However, that would lead to defeat as the cards lie, for East can win the club and exit with a diamond, and the defenders will come to a diamond trick, thus scoring a trick in each suit.

But observe the difference if declarer allows the king of clubs to hold the second trick. Assume East returns a club (as good as anything—a diamond return would be won by the ace, leading to the same ending). Declarer wins the ace, cashes one high trump, and then strips the spades, ending in dummy. The risk of doing this is minimal, for West's opening lead indicates a holding of only four, and if someone does ruff the spade, declarer can fall back on the diamond finesse for his contract.

Now the scene is set for a perfect endplay. Declarer leads the jack of hearts and runs it when East follows with a low heart. No, declarer was not peeking and we know all about 'eight-ever, nine never'. The fact is that declarer does not care if West wins the queen of hearts. With the black suits stripped from the North-South hands, West must either return a diamond into declarer's king-jack tenace, or give declarer a ruff-and-slua. In either case, declarer will not lose a diamond trick.

As the cards lie, the hearts finesse wins. After drawing trumps, declarer can now take the diamond finesse in an attempt to score an overtrick.

N.C. Rapist Is Finally Caught

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — John Newman Montgomery, 24, wanted in five North Carolina counties on charges of rape or attempted rape that usually involved young girls and a "lost dog" ruse, has been arrested while hitchhiking in New York state.

Authorities said he would entice victims by offering them money to help him find a lost dog.

He had eluded police for almost a year. Authorities said they had almost captured him several times.

Montgomery was declared an outlaw last month by Superior Court Judge Hal Walker. Under such a declaration, a North Carolina citizen was permitted to shoot him with impunity if he failed to heed a call to surrender.

Montgomery was picked up by New York state police who were making a routine check of hitchhikers on the New York State Thruway about 8:30 p.m. Monday.

The officers ran a check on Montgomery, who was alone and unarmed, and a federal fugitive warrant from a rape charge in Charlotte popped up.

He was placed in the Onondaga County jail in Syracuse, N. Y. He will wait until Forsyth, Davidson, Cabarrus, Mecklenburg and Rowan county authorities race to be the first to claim custody.

"We'd like to be the first to claim custody."

"We'd like to get him first," Manly Lancaster, sheriff of Forsyth County, said Tuesday at Winston-Salem.

"We think we should get him because we were the ones who broke the case last summer and we were the ones who had him declared an outlaw," Lancaster said.

Montgomery, who lived in Randolph County, was charged with raping a 15-year-old Clemmons girl last July. The girl told authorities she was lured into a wooded area by a man who said he was looking for a dog.

Clemmons is near Winston-Salem. After Forsyth County brought the first warrant against Montgomery, other counties followed, charging him with rapes or attempted rapes that go back to November, 1973.

Wheels Roll Off A School Bus

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The two left rear wheels rolled off the axle of a school bus Monday morning.

None of the 10 pupils aboard was hurt. The bus had been taking them to classes at the Myers Park Elementary School.

"We attribute it to some vandalism, or the lugs just were not tight," said Walter H. Neely of the transportation department of Charlotte-Mecklenburg County schools.

One of the wheels jammed between the hub and the side of the bus, keeping the vehicle from hitting the ground. The other wheel rolled harmlessly 300 feet into a yard.

Deaf TV Viewers Enthused About Subtitles Experiment

By CLAUDIA WATERLOO WASHINGTON (UPI) — Schoolteacher Susan Davidoff thinks her deaf students could learn a lot watching television programs with subtitles, which the Public Broadcasting Service is offering experimentally to seven of its stations.

Miss Davidoff, 22, who lost her hearing seven years ago because of a neurological ailment, now enjoys a captioned, late night rerun of the ABC Evening News on WETA, the Washington area public broadcasting station.

She and PBS officials believe subtitles could finally open the world of television to the one of every 10 Americans with a hearing problem.

Miss Davidoff teaches sign language to deaf 9-to-12-year-olds at a public elementary school, in suburban Silver Spring, Md.

If other shows were subtitled, she said in an interview, "TV could teach them. They could learn better language through captions."

Miss Davidoff agrees with Kay Corcoran, information director for WETA, that "ordinary TV shows are frustrating" to viewers with impaired hearing, as anyone knows who watches his favorite program with the audio turned off.

WETA has aired a number of PBS shows with subtitles, including the evening news, French chef Julia Child, the President's Inauguration and "Feeling Good," the 13-week, prime-time health series hosted by Dick Cavett.

Deaf viewers such as Miss Davidoff responded enthusiastically, but regular viewers found the captions distracting. Producers and broadcasters routinely balk at subtitled their regular shows. PBS decided to use subtitles only with repeat programs.

Three years ago, PBS tried to get around the problem by starting development of a "decoder" device that would allow deaf viewers to switch on a subtitled version of the same programs the rest of the TV audience was seeing and hearing.

PBS officials say they hope to make a decoder available at a reasonable price in the next few years.

The prototype is a rectangular electronic device, about the size of a cigar box, that could be sold as an adapter for regular television sets or built into new sets by the manufacturer, with a special decoder setting on the channel dial.

PBS has petitioned the Federal Communications Commission for a permanent switch-on captioning system. Approval is expected by year's end. Then PBS will seek a decoder manufacturer.

"When the decoder is commercially available and installed in enough deaf homes, there will not be a continuing need for the interim service," said PBS project director John Ball.

The first year of interim subtitled service has been financed with a $340,000 grant from HEW's Office of Education for the Handicapped.

PBS stations equipped with decoders in Washington, D.C., St. Louis, Portland, Ore., Boston, Sacramento, Calif., and in regions of Pennsylvania and North Carolina have broadcast the half-hour "Feeling Good" programs with subtitles.

Locally, the regular show is broadcast first and repeated later in the week with captions added. The ABC Evening News is run nightly with captions.

Last year, in a study conducted by Gallaudet College in Washington, viewers with impaired hearing watched 13 PBS programs on TV sets equipped with decoders at selected sites. Gallaudet reported that 90 per cent of the audience could not have understood the programs without captions, and 95 per cent wanted to own a decoder.

Fishing Project Has Hit Snag

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) —

Private fishing interests are holding up plans for a mixed corporation of government and private capital to develop Argentina's vast fishing resources, according to Congressman Jorge Lorenzo.

Lorenzo, a member of the opposition Radical Civic Union, said the government should proceed with plans to make use of its immense coastline. He suggested the southern port of Puerto Deseado as headquarters for new fishing development.
