Battle Expected Over Med Referendum

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—Legislation calling for a statewide vote on the question of issuing $32 million in bonds for expansion of the East Carolina University medical school is headed for the House floor where a sharp fight is expected.

This became apparent Wednesday when the House Finance Committee voted 24-23 to approve the bill sponsored by Rep. Carolyn Mathis, R-Mecklenburg

The committee then shouted its approval of a bill that would submit to a vote of the people the issuance of $43.2 million in bonds to finance improvements at other state-supported universities.

By a vote of 29-23, the committee voted a one-shot tax rebate of up to $35 to Tar Heel citizens having a gross income of $9,000 or less. The hike would be financed through temporary increases in the tax on beer, wine and whisky.

Rep. John Hunt, D-Cleveland, sponsor of the bill, told the committee the bill would add three cents to the tax on a 12-ounce container of beer, about 15 cents on a fifth of whisky and 30 cents on a gallon of wine.

The committee also gave its approval to a Senate-passed bill that would make income on dividends from North Carolina corporations in excess of $15,000 a year subject to state income taxes. The bill would bring in about $3 million a year in revenues to the state.

The two bond proposals would be voted on at the next statewide election.

Eastern Carolina legislators strongly opposed the ECU bond bill. They saw no point of risking a defeat at the hands of the people when appropriation measures now before the General Assembly would provide the funds for the medical school expansion.

"It's just another way the Mecklenburg (County) delegation has of keeping us from getting a medical school at East Carolina University," said Rep. Larry Eagles, D-Edgecombe.

Mrs. Mathis told the committee the purpose of her bill was "not to kill the medical school." In answer to a question, she said she would favor the legislature financing the medical school expansion through direct appropriations if the ECU bonds were disapproved by the people. She said if her referendum measure is passed it would free funds now earmarked for the ECU expansion to restore budget cuts.

Pitt Rep. Horton Roundtree said this morning "We're not worried about that angle of it," referring to the bond proposal. "I don't know if it (the bill) will be on the calendar (for House action) or not. It (the bill) got out (of committee) with such a slim vote."

Roundtree said the Legislature now is "in the throes of trying to close this thing out. Both the Senate and House bills (appropriations bills) have the med school monies in there."

He predicted there "will be a move on the floor of the House . . . and Senate, I assume . . . by people from the Charlotte area to pull it (the medical school funds) out (of the appropriations bill)."

Roundtree said, "We're in real good shape in the Senate," but said there are "43 new people in the House," and "they are not familiar with the fight that's gone on for the last 10 years. The issues have never really been debated. Maybe they will be debated today."

The Representative said the House should act on the second reading of the appropriations bill today, with the third reading tomorrow.

"The House and Senate bills will then go to a conference committee between the two bodies," for joint action before final approval by the General Assembly, Roundtree explained.

NCNB Not Threatened Dr. Jenkins Claims

RALEIGH (AP)—An official at the Greenville branch of North Carolina National Bank reported in a memo that East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins threatened to withdraw university accounts from the bank because a former NCNB executive criticized expansion of the ECU medical school.

Sid Warner wrote a memo on May 14 saying Jenkins telephoned him the day before to discuss criticism of the school by Addison Reese of Charlotte, former NCNB chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

Jenkins denied Wednesday that he had made any threats, but said he was "not averse" to withdrawing the university's funds from NCNB, "if their people keep hammering at us."

East Carolina has about $200,000 deposited with NCNB.

Warner wrote in the memo, "I listened very patiently to his ramblings and not so veiled threats to discontinue any deposit relationships with NCNB if this sort of thing continues."

Reese, now chairman of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, was quoted in a May 11 editorial in the Charlotte Observer as saying the ECU medical school was "the most expensive error ever made by the legislature."

Luther Hodges Jr., NCNB chairman of the board, said, "The bank has no position on the med school. Jenkins passed on his comments. There's nothing the bank can do or wants to do."

This morning Dr. Jenkins commented to The Daily Reflector concerning the issue:

"Let's set the record straight. I shall continue to do all in my power to get the things desparately needed by our people. The medical school is but one of many of our needs. When it was brought to my attention that a prominent spokesman in North Carolina intimately associated with NCNB spoke out vigorously against our medical school, I called the local representative of that bank and advised him that these derogotory remarks would not be received kindly by our people throughout the state.

"In contrast to the alleged statements in the so-called confidential intra-bank memorandum, released thirty days after the conversation, I made no threats, veiled or otherwise. Furthermore the people know me well enough to recognize that I do not ramble or rave. I must raise the question regarding the timing and circumstances of the release of this memo, apparently timed at a very critical period in the final legislative decision-making process. I feel confident the people of North Carolina on both sides of this issue recognize this maneuvering for what it is."

Warner said this morning that he, indeed considered Jenkins' telephone call as a threat. "That's the way I understood it . . . yes," he commented.

He added, however, "I think everybody has a right to his own opinion.

"Personally and selfishly, as a citizen of Greenville, I favor the ECU medical school. It would certainly improve the service (medical service) in this community and enhance the economy of the area to the point that my job as a banker would be easier.

"That is my personal feeling," Warner emphasized. "The bank has no stand pro or con. Any comments made by anyone are his own personal feelings . . . or representing some other body (organization) than the bank."

Reese is not the only person affiliated with NCNB to criticize the medical school proposal recently, however.

Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, said Tuesday, "All I can see that we're doing here is doing one heck of a lot in Pitt County, and we're not doing anything for the rural counties."

Tison's comments came as a House committee Tuesday discussed the funds recommended for the ECU medical school.

Tison, an NCNB official in Charlotte—in charge of the bank's industrial development operation—indicated he would protest the funding of the medical school facility when the appropriations bill reaches the floor of the House of Representatives.

Continue Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, declaring "it would be a tragedy if they failed," and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin are continuing to seek a solution to the Middle East deadlock.

The two leaders, who scheduled a meeting for this morning, were said by diplomatic sources to have made progress during their first talks Wednesday. The sources said Israel might be ready to make concessions in a new round of U.S.-managed peace negotiations if it receives American support in the form of arms and other assurances.

American officials denied a report from Amman, Jordan, on Wednesday which quoted Arab diplomatic sources as saying Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger would renew his shuttle diplomacy in late June with visits to Egypt, Syria and Jordan.

The Amman report said Kissinger would carry new proposals for Israeli withdrawals from the Golan Heights and the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Kissinger's most recent effort to achieve an Israeli-Arab agreement failed in March. He is not expected to resume shuttle diplomacy unless he and Ford are sure it will succeed.

Election Irregularities Throw Shadow Over Mrs. Gandhi's Job

By MYRON L. BELKIND
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A judge convicted Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today of wrongfully using government officials in her last successful campaign for Parliament and barred her from public office for six years. But a spokesman for Mrs. Gandhi said she would remain in office while appealing to the Supreme Court to set aside the conviction.

The judge in sentencing the 57-year-old prime minister stayed the sentence for 20 days so she could appeal. Her spokesman said the appeal would probably be filed Friday, and it was expected to include a request that the Supreme Court continue the stay on the sentence until it decided on the appeal.

That could take months.

Mrs. Gandhi has headed the Indian government since January 1966 and is the first Indian prime minister to be threatened with ouster by judicial process. Her two predecessors — her father, Jawaharlal Nehru, and Lal Bahadur Shastri — died in office.

Mrs. Gandhi was convicted by Judge Jag Mohanlal Sinha in Allahabad, her hometown in northern India which gave her a landslide, 183,000-to-71,000-vote victory in 1971 over Raj Narain, a Socialist.

Republicans Boycott Opening Of House CIA Panel Hearings

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans boycotted a hearing today by a new House intelligence subcommittee focusing on the Central Intelligence Agency's own secret probe of its misdeeds. The boycott forced cancellation of testimony by CIA Director William E. Colby.

Subcommittee chairman James V. Stanton, D-Ohio, said the refusal of Republican members to attend the open hearing was "apparently prompted" by the resignation of Rep. Lucian Nedzi, D-Mich., as chairman of the full committee.

Asked to turn over secret material in advance of another meeting of the subcommittee planned for next week, Colby declared: "I'll do it to the extent that I can and still protect the secrecy of the material."

Cancellation of Colby's testimony came shortly after Stanton declared that he knows of "successsful assassination plots" but refused to identify any victims. A subcommittee member, Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., said he believed Stanton's statement was based on "in-house gossip."

While acknowledging that Stanton might have gotten his information from a House staff member who had received it from someone who knew, Harrington said the intelligence committee has been given no information about assassinations.

Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., said committee Democrats want Stanton to step up to become chairman of the full intelligence committee. "We want to get somebody that we can all support and just get this investigation started," Giaimo said.

"It is shameful the way this has lagged."

House rules require that at least one member of the minority be present for hearings, Stanton said in announcing the cancellation to Colby, who already had taken his place in the witness chair before a packed hearing room.

Nedzi resigned after several days of Democratic infighting prompted by his acknowledgement that he had been given information more than a year ago that CIA officials considered carrying out "some sort of assassinations." Five Democrats on the committee accused him of doing nothing about the information.

In a compromise move to head off demands for Nedzi's resignation, the subcommittee was created and given responsibility for the CIA investigation. The investigation of other intelligence agencies was left to the full committee.

Asked about a newspaper account quoting him as saying he was informed the CIA had been involved in the assassination of at least one foreign leader, Stanton declared: "The reporter asked me, 'Do you know of any successful assassination plots?' I responded yes."

Stanton was interviewed on the CBS-TV "Morning News" about an account in today's editions of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Asked for details about the "successful assassination plots," Stanton said: "I think the record will speak for itself when it becomes available."

Stanton's subcommittee is part of a larger special House intelligence committee set up to investigate U.S. intelligence operations. A Michigan newspaper said today the chairman of that committee, Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., has declared he is quitting his post.

The Macomb Daily in Mt. Clemens, Mich., said Nedzi told one of its newsmen in a telephone conversation that he was resigning as chairman because the Democratic caucus was stripping him of any real power to direct the committee.

Stanton had asked for Nedzi's resignation as chairman last week because of questions about whether Nedzi knew of illegal activities by the CIA and did nothing about them. Nedzi acknowledged Sunday he had been given information that CIA officials considered carrying out "some sort of assassinations."

But he said that what he was told "was history at the time."

Subsequently, Stanton's subcommittee was formed, and the CIA investigation was turned over to it. The Macomb Daily said Nedzi declared that, while he had agreed with the compromise that resulted in the subcommittee, he was to have authority to appoint its members.

"They pulled some caucus rules on me this morning which call for the filling of the new CIA investigation subcommitttee with the same members of the oversight committee," the paper quoted Nedzi as saying.

ONE CAR?

The driver education program at D. H. Conley High School only has one car for 250 students. What can be done about this? L. S.

More cars are on the way, according to Associate Superintendent of the Pitt County Schools, Tom Craft. Dealers were asked to have the cars here earlier but due to because of unavoidable delays the cars were not available for the start of driver education. Therefore D. H. Conley is forced to have only one car for a short while. The new cars hopefully will be here in the next 10 days, Craft said. Craft is hoping to have six more cars at D. H. ROOMS FOR BLIND

Pat Parker of the N.C. Division of Services for the Blind is appealing for places to live for a number of blind or visually impaired students who will attend Pitt Technical Institute in the fall.

"Probably as many as 30-35 of these students will be coming here and many will be needing places to live since Pitt Tech has not dormitory facilities. Boarding situations or nearby eating facilities would be nice," Parker said. He emphasized that he is merely lining up prospects, that final decisions and agreements will be made by the students themselves. Anyone interested in renting a room or apartment to one or more of these students should contact Parker at 756-3130, Ext. 58.

Ford Tells Congress To Move Energy Bill

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford was quoted today as telling congressional leaders that it is his "firm determination that the nation must have a comprehensive energy program."

The 65-minute White House session followed Wednesday's overwhelming scuttling by the House of the 23-cent gasoline tax program of Democratic tax strategists.

There has been a five-month deadlock between the different energy programs put forth by Ford and the Democratic congressional leadership. There had been indications that peace feelers might be extended at today's Oval Office session.

After the meeting, House Speaker Carl Albert told reporters that no consensus was reached and various aspects of the energy problem was discussed.

House Majority Leader Thomas T. O'Neill, D-Mass., said: "It is going to be difficult to meet on any common ground with this Republican administration."

In a statement issued after the meeting, the White House said "the American people should realize this is a national issue of great urgency."

Ford was said to have stressed the need for "both meaningful energy conservation and increased domestic supplies" and said he was firmly determined that the nation must reach three goals:

1. Reducing foreign oil imports by two million barrels a day by the end of 1977.

2. Energy self-sufficiency by 1985, and,

3. Provide for fairness. The statement did not indicate what Ford meant by fairness.

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and Ford's top energy and economic advisers as well as Secretary of Commerce Rogers C. B. Morton and Energy Administrator Frank Zarb attended the session.

After watching his gasoline-tax plan suffer a crushing defeat Wednesday night, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, indicated that a new compromise might be attempted.

"The President is in trouble with his program.... We are in trouble with our program.... Maybe we can talk. This is too important for politics," Ullman declared.

He also said, "It is not a case of backing off and accepting the President's program. We both have a new position to start from."

Ullman added he was talking about reports that Secretary of Commerce Rogers C.B. Morton had urged Ford to remove the second $1-a-barrel oil import tariff. Such a step would be a White House gesture toward compromise with Congress, where there is strong antitariff sentiment.

As part of his energy program, Ford has imposed a $2-a-barrel tariff on imported oil and has said he will increase it to $3. Ford also has called on Congress to replace the tariff eventually with a tax of $1-a-barrel on all oil, U.S.-produced as well as imported oil, a tax of 37 cents a 1,000 cubic feet on natural gas and an end of price controls on oil and natural gas.

In rejecting the Ways and Means panel's tax plan, the House first voted 345 to 72 to chop 20 cents off the proposed 23-cent boost in the existing 4-cents-a-gallon federal gasoline tax.

Your Mother Needs Treatment For Grief

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You are the only person I can think of who might be able to help. It's about my mother, Abby.

My father died four years ago (he was 71), and my mother is still carrying on like he died last week. She talks about him constantly. She visits his grave every single day, and if we don't go with her every Sunday, she thinks we're disrespectful.

Every holiday is turned into a day of mourning because Mother insists on all of us going to the cemetery with her to cry over Papa's grave.

We loved our father, too, but don't you think four years of mourning is long enough?

Mother's doctor told her it's time she snapped out of it, but it hasn't helped her any.

Isn't there something we can do?

MOTHER TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: Yes. Tell your mother's doctor that simply telling a deeply troubled woman to "snap out of it" is not much help. She needs treatment to resolve her grief and resume a normal life. Her daily visits to the cemetery and constant talk of her deceased husband are symptoms of her illness. And if her doctor doesn't clearly see this, find one who does.

DEAR ABBY: Ten months ago, I met this wonderful man, and we fell in love. We plan a December wedding. I am 24. He's 29.

One thing bothers me. Three years ago, I chose to have an abortion. No one knows about it, and I want to block it out of my mind forever. I know I did the right thing and have no guilt feelings about it, but here's the problem:

Recently, my fiance said that he wanted me to know all about his past, so he confessed to a few past love affairs. I didn't consider any of them very serious. Then he said he had the feeling that something in my past was bothering me because it "shows." (He couldn't possibly know anything.)

I wonder if I should tell him about the abortion. He seems to be very understanding. But what if he isn't? If I told him and he were to throw it up to me later, I couldn't stand that.

Should I tell him?

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Since you don't know how "understanding" he would be and you don't feel the need to "unburden" yourself—keep mum. I think your fiance is fishing. Don't bite.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "UPTIGHT MOM," whose 4-year-old kid refused to eat anything but peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and chocolate chip ice cream:

I have three kids and they've never had an eating problem. Know why? Because kids eat only what you have in the house. I never have junk foods around. No sugar drinks, cookies or candy. Only nutritious foods, fresh fruit, vegetables and milk. That's what they eat for snacks because that's all they can find.

Also, I never take my kids along when I go marketing because kids want everything they see advertised on TV.

Personally, I'd be ashamed to call my doctor and tell him my 4-year-old kid was giving me orders.

Just give the kids what YOU think they should eat, and if they don't want it, they can go without. Pretty soon they'll get hungry enough to eat anything.

EGG BREAD

Great to bake on a stay-at-home day.

1 package active dry yeast
4 cups flour
2 large eggs
¼ cup salad oil
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons sugar
Egg yolk mixed with 1 teaspoon cold water

In a small bowl dissolve the yeast in ½ cup warm water. Into a large mixing bowl pour the flour; make a well in the center and into it turn 1 cup warm water, the eggs, oil, salt and sugar; add the yeast mixture. With a wooden spoon, mix until combined — dough will be sticky. Cover and let stand in warm, draft-free place for 3 hours; every half hour with the spoon, work dough by turning a few times. Onto a floured board or pastry cloth turn dough and cut into 2 portions; form each into a loaf and place in well-greased loaf pans (each about 8 by 4 by 3 inches). Generously brush tops of loaves with some of the egg-yolk mixture; cover with tents of foil (so dough will not stick to covering) and let rise in warm, draft-free place one hour. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until well-browned — 45 minutes. Loaves have airy texture and taste delicious warm from the oven; to toast, cut fairly thick.

Women Took Part In Revolution

EDITOR'S NOTE — Women's Lib was taken for granted during the American Revolution. But afterwards prosperity descended, creating a class of leisured women whose labor no longer was needed.

By SHELLY COHEN
Associated Press Writer

They were the army medics and the logistics officers. They fought the British with muskets and with words. They ran shops and newspapers and farms.

They were the women of the American Revolution. And if you think you've come a long way, baby, take another look at 1775.

No one really knows how many women served in or aided the ragged bands of soldiers who formed the revolutionary army.

"It could have been thousands," said Linda DePauw, associate professor of history at George Washington University. "Officials tried to keep the ratio of Washington's Army to no more than one or two women for every 15 men, but they never could."

The author of the soon to be published "Founding Mothers, Women in the Revolutionary Era" said women were usually responsible for foraging for food and clothing for the troops. A number of women, former Indian fighters, served as scouts to army units.

Molly Pitcher, who brought water to the troops for drinking and cleaning their cannons, "was really like Rosie the Riveter; there were hundreds of them, not just one," Dr. DePauw added.

Betsy Ross, whose flag sewing venture for decades characterized the role of women in the 1770s, may have done more harm than good as a historical reference.

"I get a little annoyed with the Betsy Ross legend, because she blinded people to those women who did exist," said Selma Williams, a Lexington, Mass., historian, who added that research now shows that Washington wasn't even in Philadelphia at the time the famed seamstress was supposed to have presented the flag to him.

A number of women donned men's clothing to fight in the Revolution. Among them was Deborah Sampson of Massachusetts. At the age of 22 she managed to enlist in the continental army under the name of Timothy Thayer, a feat made easier because so many young, beardless boys were enlisting at the time, Mrs. Williams explained.

There are those women who didn't fight with muskets, but played big roles in the founding of the new nation.

The tools Mercy Otis Warren turned on the British were her poems and plays satirizing the British. Six women owned colonial newspapers. Five supported the colonial cause and one the British.

Ten per cent of the merchants in Boston in the 1770s were female, according to Mrs. Williams. And as early as 1765 women traders in Salem, Mass., banded together to oppose the stamp tax.

But victory brought prosperity.

"Excess wealth opened up the possibility of a class of leisured women," Dr. DePauw said. "Working had been a source of status and independence. When American women became similar to European ladies, they lost the status of when they were an integral part of the economy."

The mother of the bride wore a floor length gown of light blue silk organza with V-neckline. Her dress was accented with a long cape trimmed in marabou. The mother of the bridegroom wore a floor length gown of light green knit.

Mrs. Mervin Early of Ahoskie served as mistress of ceremonies.

For traveling, the bride changed into a navy and yellow knit jersey with navy accessories. After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception at their home.

Guests were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. Jack Welch of Greenville and were directed to the register where Mr. and Mrs. James A. White III of Scotland Neck presided.

They were then directed to the refreshment table which was decorated with a pink organdy cloth. Nosegays of pink and white roses decorated the four-tiered wedding cake. On either side were three branched silver candelabras holding pink burning tapers and arrangements of pink and white sweetheart roses, miniature carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Lester Keel of Oak City and Mrs. David McLawhorn of Williamston, grandmothers of the bride, served the wedding cake and punch.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There is a special place in heaven for people who own pianos or organs . . . where the sun always shines, the instruments are always in tune, and the keys lock when some hamburger sits down to play Chopsticks.

Children are drawn to an organ or a piano . . . especially the ones who are tone deaf. My mother owns an organ. I have watched that poor soul deteriorate from an apple-cheeked loving grandmother to a sniveling, water-eyed troll.

Believe me, it is not easy watching someone you love sit through 100 raggy choruses of "Long, Long Ago" (with drum attachment).

Every Sunday before going to Grandma's, I deliver the same, tired sermon to the kids. "Do not—repeat—do not ask Grandma to let you play her organ. It gets on Grandma's nerves. I know she pretends it doesn't matter, but I watch Grandma while you are thumping on the organ and last week she grabbed a plastic banana off the coffee table and crushed it in her hand. Take something to do . . . a game, a baseball, or a sedative . . . but DO NOT PLAY THE ORGAN!"

Grandma meets them at the door with a big hug and the first words out are, "Can we play your organ, Grandma?"

The repertoire is always the same: "Chopsticks" (played lively); "Heart and Soul" (with another no-talent playing bass), and a pitiful stab at "Love Story" with one finger while the vocalist strains with "How do I begin . . . begin (higher) . . . begin (lower) . . . begin (between the cracks) . . ." ending up eight keys later with the right note.

"They're not the King family, are they?" said mother the other Sunday, knotting her handkerchief and biting on it with her teeth.

"Speak up, mother," I shouted over the din.

"I said they're not the King family."

"Does their playing bother you?" I asked.

"No, why?"

"I saw a commercial once about a grandparent who was crabby when her grandchildren beat on the piano and it was because she was irregular."

"The noise could do that?" she asked.

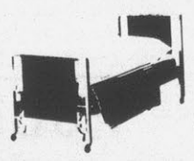

"I think I have a solution, mother. Give me a week or so."

Last Sunday at mother's no

No Need For Bond Referendum

The House Finance Committee yesterday approved by a one-vote majority a bill which would submit the funding of the ECU medical school to a bond referendum.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Carolyn Mathis, R-Mecklenburg and it was approved by a 24-23 majority in the committee.

There is no necessity for a bond referendum on the ECU medical school financing. Committees in both the House and Senate have been working all year in shaping the 1975-77 state budget and their work is virtually complete. Both versions of the proposed budget contain full funding for the medical school.

As we have pointed out many times, the ECU medical school is an ongoing program which has actually been in operation for a number of years. Highly complex planning is now underway for expansion of the school and if we should have to wait for a bond referendum there would be an undetermined delay in the school's development—and this at a time when we desperately need the physicians which the school will train.

In addition, at a time when our entire state is grappling with the effects of recession, the legislators would be breaking faith with the taxpayers if they submitted to them a bond referendum for a program which is already underway.

Mrs. Mathis says the purpose of her bill is not to "kill the medical school." Yet much of the opposition to the school's development has come from Mecklenburg County and the city of Charlotte which Mrs. Mathis represents.

Obviously if the funds are left in the budget the battle is lost for Mecklenburg, so any delay such as a bond referendum would have to be favorable to opponents.

It is regrettable that the bond referendum bill even received Finance Committee approval, but sound fiscal policy calls for a quick death for this bill. We hope the legislators will not delay in killing this poor legislation.

Whites Leave Angola

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer

LISBON, Portugal (AP)— Hundreds of working-class whites from strife-torn Angola are streaming into Lisbon daily, claiming they were driven from their homes by racial terror and a breakdown in law and order.

Flown here in a government airlift, they are being housed in refugee camps near Lisbon. Angola, a Portuguese overseas territory in West Africa for 500 years, is scheduled to become independent next fall.

Fighting has broken out among three rival rebel groups — the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, the Front for the National Liberation of Angola and the Union for the Total Liberation of Angola.

Portuguese troops in Angola have been given orders to arrest trouble makers and to shoot on sight if necessary.

About 200 whites marched on the United States Embassy in Luanda, Angola's capital, on Tuesday appealing to the Americans to help them leave for Portugal. One woman drew her fingers across her throat and screamed, "We don't want to stay here and have our throats cut."

A refugee in a camp outside Lisbon told a newsman, "I stayed in my house four days and four nights because of the shooting."

Unshaven and wearing donated trousers, he shared his gloom with 2,000 other refugees in the camp at the resort of Caprica. A few army tents were up to supplement the cottages housing the refugees.

Almost to a man, they reported they were workers.

"The intellectuals, the professionals and the rich left months ago," said a young man mak-

Look To Leisure Lands

By FRANK JETER JR.
USDA Soil Conservation Service

RALEIGH—With centers of population growing steadily, and with fewer natural resources such as seashores, mountain parks and the like available, most students of the urban scene agree that one of the pressing needs in the immediate future will be expanded opportunities for outdoor recreation.

North Carolina is a fortunate state in the amount of recreational facilities available to the general public. The attractions of resort areas have been widely publicized throughout the nation.

But North Carolina has another asset in this same category which, up until now, has been relatively unheralded and is not generally known even to people who live in the Tar Heel State.

Through the cooperation of the Soil Conservation Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and many local and state agencies, North Carolina has completed a county-by-county appraisal of the potential for outdoor recreation which takes a far-sighted look in this critical field.

Future Need

"This program is not simply an inventory of what we have now," says State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, who heads the federal conservation agency in North Carolina. "It also gives an accurate indication of what we will be able to develop in future years, and provides guidance on the directions that recreation enterprises in various counties should take."

Under the program, a bound book is published for each county to provide a handy summary of recreational possibilities in that county. To date, 94 counties have published such booklets and the other six in North Carolina are expected off the press in the near future.

A wide range of activities—actual or potential—is surveyed in each report. The reports cover climate, scenic areas, places affording natural environment, and of course lakes, streams and other water resources.

Soils characteristics—important for deciding the best use for land—are covered, as well as the proximity and access of areas where high potential for recreation exists.

Present land use patterns are included, along with the population of people who live close enough to utilize recreational facilities. One section even covers historic areas, with their proven appeal for recreational activities.

Which areas present the best potential for vacation cabins? Homesites? What about opportunities for camping? Where are the best picnic sites, and localities for field sports?

Answers to all these questions are provided in the appraisals. Useful maps prepared by the Soil Conservation Service show localities in each county.

Many Kinds

Naturally, some of the favorite pastimes of North Carolinians today are covered—both now and for the future.

Golfers can get information on present golf courses—and where new ones might be installed as the demand increases.

Hunters are provided data on both large and small game, including birds. Again, a look into the future is also provided. What is the potential for game animals?

A separate section on game preserves, increasingly popular in many areas, is also included.

Fishing waters, riding stables, vacation farms and places where people can swim, water ski, enjoy boating and other water sports are key sections. Again, both the present situation and the future potential are evaluated.

Opportunities for enjoyment are a main purpose of the surveys. But economic data—useful to those preparing to invest in future recreational facilities—is also provided. "These summaries give a good indication of whether a recreational business will succeed or fail in a given area," was one comment made about the surveys.

The reports were prepared cooperatively through many public agencies, including state and local government offices, business firms and others. "A wonderful spirit of cooperation" among participants was applauded by State Conservationist Jesse Hicks.

The far-reaching recreational report is the reward.

Save Legal Services

President Ford has been understandably preoccupied lately with matters of more immediate urgency than the board of the Legal Services Corporation, but at the risk of appearing an alarmist, forgive me a yell of alarm. Wake up, Mr. President! This matter now demands your attention.

Under the act creating the Legal Services Corporation, an 11-member board must be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The composition of this board is of the utmost importance. The board will approve an original set of by-laws, rules and regulations, and these are critical; once policies are fixed, it becomes fearfully difficult to amend them later on.

The board also will name a director for the corporation, who in turn will appoint the corporation's staff. In the nature of things, the director and his staff will run the show. It is thus imperative that the board launch the corporation's program on a temperate course, free of radicalism and abuse, and that it make clear its determination to abide strictly by the purpose of the act.

That purpose, plainly and simply, is to provide legal services to the poor—to assist them in getting something a little closer to "equal justice under law." This is a noble purpose. I have supported the concept of a Legal Services Corporation from the beginning, over the sometimes bitter criticism of my conservative colleagues, because it seems to me a vital part of the American ideal.

Unless Mr. Ford springs belatedly to action, that dream will become a nightmare. The radicals who want to corrupt the Legal Services Corporation to their own notions of activism will take command. If they can get around the stubborn figure of Senator Jesse Helms (R.-N.C.), who now stands like Horatius at the bridge, they will have won their battle in a single stroke.

This is what has happened: The act creating the Legal Services Corporation became law last summer. It wasn't

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

After so many letters regarding the inhumane treatment of dogs, it's time we had some remarks about the inhumane treatment of unborn human beings. This inhumane treatment, known as medically induced abortion, was legalized by the Supreme Court decision on abortion in January 1973. Seven justices ruled that, "the word 'person' as used in the 14th amendment does not include the unborn." (U.S. Supreme Court Reports, Roe vs Wade, Vol. 35) Thereby, an unborn human being was deprived of the basic right to life under the Constitution and subjected to the life or death sentence of its mother. Two justices disagreed with the majority ruling, saying that "nothing in the language or history of the Constitition supports the courts judgement and that the court had simply fashioned and announced a new constitutional right for pregnant mothers." (U.S.S.C.R. Vol. 35)

Since that time the number of legal abortions has been increasing rapidly. In North Carolina, the Division of Health Services announced a 38 per cent increase in 1974 over the number in 1973. In the nation, the number of abortions for 1974 is estimated at almost one million. (Official data pending)

To combat this inhumanity and the erosion of the basic values and principles of our Declaration of Independence and Constitition, humane societies or pro-life groups such as North Carolina Right to Life, have organized throughout the U.S. These groups agree with the compassionate motivation of the abortionists, but advocate putting all our efforts toward finding humane solutions to our socio-economic problems. They recognize the indisputable scientific fact that human biologic life begins with the union of sperm and ovum, that the unborn human being is in no way a part of its mother's body, that it is unique, distinct and autonomous and thereby should have the same civil right to life as any born person. They support a Human Life Amendment to the Constitution to restore the personhood of the unborn human being and urge everyone to get the facts and study the issues.

Therefore, the Greenville Chapter of North Carolina Right to Life, Inc. proposes to do everything possible to help the public become informed. Information regarding this pro-life organization is available by writing to: N.C. Right to Life, Inc., Greenville Chapter, P.O. Box 3165, Greenville, N.C. 27834

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the nation's First Lady, who delivered the commencement address at the graduation exercises of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill last night, left Raleigh this morning for a 600-mile flight to West Point, N.Y.

Mrs. Roosevelt left the airport on a big Coast Guard amphibian piloted by Tom Burke after she had spent the night at Wakestone, the home of Ambassador and Mrs. Josephus Daniels.

At Ashbury Park, N.J., where Max Baer is conditioning himself for 15-round bout with Jim Braddock; the world's heavyweight champion is putting on just the same sort of show that marked his training for his winning efforts against Schmelling and Carnera.

Apparently Baer cannot or will not take these training sessions seriously. He clowns with his spar mates, shows off while punching the bag and has a lot of fun going through the motions of training.

This generally trying part of a ring athlete's life is no grind to Max, he won't have it so.

INSIDE REPORT

Demoralized Democrats

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Deepening demoralization within the Democratic majority in Congress reached a climax last week just before the House voted to approve a $1.3 billion housing bill viewed by middle-road Democrats as the probable victim of another successful presidential veto.

Rep. Thomas (Lud) Ashley of Ohio, a longtime housing stalwart on the House Banking Committee, privately put this question to House majority leader Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill: "How long do we have to take the gas, Tip, before we begin to hurt?"

In one form or another, that question is being asked by every Democrat in the topheavy Democratic Congress as President Ford consolidates his control over the divided federal government, gives his party its first taste of political cheer since Watergate and watches the Democrats' dream of congressional government go down the drain.

The point of Ashley's question was this: the housing bill had become hopelessly loaded down with questionable high-cost subsidy programs after the original House version went to conference with a far broader Senate housing bill. Ashley, a House conferee, refused to sign that comference report. He then carried the battle to the closed-door House Democratic caucus last Wednesday (6-4).

But Rep. Henry Reuss of Wisconsin, House Banking Committee chairman, never really joined battle. Reuss simply read to the caucus a letter signed by Speaker Carl Albert, O'Neill and Rep. Jack McFall of California, the majority whip, in which the leadership appealed to every Democrat to vote for the swollen bill.

In the House vote that passed the bill the next day, 43 Democrats broke away from the leadership and voted against the subsidy-rich housing bill—a defection from party ranks that would virtually assure the House upholding President Ford's expected veto of the bill. Indeed, Democrats voting no nearly doubled the 22 Democratic defectors who made it possible for Mr. Ford to win his spectacular fight against the House attempt to override his veto of the jobs bill last week.

Indeed, the 43 Democrats who rejected the Albert-O'Neill-McFall leadership should have sent shivers down their spines. Rep. Edward Boland, an intimate Massachusetts colleague of O'Neill, voted with Ashley and against the veto-targeted housing bill. So did Washington's Rep. Thomas Foley, chairman of the Agriculture Committee and past chairman of the liberal Democratic Study Group, Rep. Sam Gibbons, a bonded liberal from Florida, and Rep. Robert Giaimo of Connecticut, a liberal with close ties to the leadership.

What this adds up to is crisis for the Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill and what one Republican strategist calls "the decisive competitive edge" for Gerald Ford as he rolls a Democratic Congress unable to find or assert a collective will. That "competitive edge" is now spreading far beyond Capitol Hill, displaying a political maturing in President Ford which is enhancing his prestige nationally.

The contrast with extravagant Democratic plans last January is particularly vivid. Then, the Democrats unfurled a 14-point legislative program to give them the initiative over an unelected President to solve the energy crisis, recession, inflation and kindred ailments. Ironically, two of those 14 points were the heart of the original housing bill in the House: interest subsidies for middle-income homebuyers and foreclosure relief for unemployed mortgage-holders.

A presidential veto of such a lean housing bill would almost certainly be overridden, and the Democrats then could justify their claim of making responsible congressional government work. But now the housing bill has become an easy victim of Mr. Ford's veto pistol.

Such fine points seem beyond the grasp of the House leadership, which has been

COMPLEMENTARY DIFFERENCES

The English novelist, John Galsworthy, in one of his works says of a certain character, "He could not approve in other people a quality native to himself."

This is an astute observation. Often we get along best with people whose qualities and characteristics complement ours. We can often be in collision with those whose natures are akin to our own. If we are excitable, excitable companions overstimulate and weary us; if we are calm and contained, persons of the same disposition bore us; if we love to talk, garrulous friends annoy us; if we are of melancholy turn of mind, friends similarly inclined plunge us into gloom; if we are always bubbling and ebullient, we sometimes crave the stabilizing influence of more serious people.

This unwillingness to approve in others qualities native to ourselves therefore may be nature's attempt to keep human relationships in balance; a wise provision for keeping life on an even keel.

Why New York Costs So Much

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

New York City, recently rescued from the brink of financial disaster, spends more money on its citizens and foots the bill for more public services than any of the nation's other major cities.

The New York budget for the fiscal year that ends June 30 was just under $11.9 billion, an expenditure of almost $1,507 for each of the city's 7,894,862 residents.

The 1975 budget for Chicago — the nation's second largest city — is just under $1.1 billion, an expenditure of about $325 for each of the city's 3,369,357 residents.

Los Angeles spends about $263 per resident; Philadelphia spends $504; Detroit spends $510; Cleveland, which some experts believe may face financial trouble in the future, spends $146.77.

Why does financially strapped New York pay so much more?

It has more employes, for one reason. And it pays for many items that, in other areas, are financed by county and state governments with broader tax bases.

Of the three largest cities—New York, Chicago and Los Angeles— only New York includes welfare expenditures in its city budget. In other areas, welfare is a function of county or state government.

There are one million persons on welfare in New York. The current annual welfare budget is $4 billion, of which the city paid $2.27 billion. Chicago has 641,000 persons on welfare. All the money for these people comes from the state and federal governments.

Chicago's city budget does not include education or hospitals. Neither does Los Angeles'. New York's budget includes $3.25 billion for education and $1.3 billion for health and hospitals.

Philadelphia spends $442.8 million on its public school system. The money is raised mainly through city real estate taxes, but is handled in a separate school district budget.

The size of the New York payroll is demonstrated in per capita figures showing it has fewer residents per employe.

New York has one fireman for every 658 residents; Chicago has one fireman for every 756. New York has one policeman for every 263 residents; Chicago has one for every 292. New York has one sanitation worker for every 718 residents; Chicago has one for every 1,232.

The current New York City budget includes $1.7 billion for the 53,000 policemen, firemen and sanitation workers.

In order to pay the bills, New York has had to borrow money. Some experts on urban affairs estimate that New York City accounts for 30 per cent of all the short-term borrowing in the country.

New York had hoped to borrow another $1.7 billion but underwriting syndicates — who buy the bonds, then resell them — said no. That put the city in its current financial bind.

In an effort to avoid disaster, the city and state agreed to create the Municipal Assistance Corp., dubbed Big Mac, a new state agency to refinance the city's short-term debt and revise fiscal practices.

The new agency limits city borrowing and requires a balanced budget. Like most other cities, New York already is prohibited from deficit financing, but often has wound up in debt due to complex maneuvering.

Tax Exempt Funding May Go To The People

RALEIGH (AP)—The House has passed and sent to the Senate a measure that would permit the people to vote again on the issue of whether facilities for industry should be financed with tax exempt revenue bonds.

The measure calls for a statewide referendum on an amendment to the state government which would permit local governments to create authorities empowered to issue such bonds.

The proposal was overwhelmingly rejected by the voters in a 1974 referendum. Supporters are hopeful they can get the people to approve with a batter publicity campaign.

Other legislative highlights Wednesday included the action of a joint legislative session in rejecting one of Gov. Jim Holshouser's three nominees to the State Utilities Commission, James W.C. Daniel of Raleigh. Two other nominees, Raleigh attorney Ward Purrington and Barbara Simpson of Charlotte were approved.

The Senate enacted an ethics law for legislators which will require the state's lawmakers to disclose their financial interests, including the names of their employers and any major stock and real estate holdings they own. The bill sets up a legislative ethics committee which will be charged with the task of enforcing the measure. The penalty for failure to comply with the law could be removal from the ballot or from office.

A statewide vote on the issuances of $32 million in bonds to finance expansion of East Carolina University is called for in a bill approved by the House Finance Committee by a 24-23 vote. A sharp fight is expected when the bill comes up on the House floor.

The committee by a voice vote approved another bill calling for a referendum on the issuance of $43.2 million in bonds to finance improvements at other state-supported universities.

The committee voted 29-23 to approve a bill providing for a one-shot tax rebate of up to $35 for Tar Heels with gross incomes of $9,000 or less. The rebates would be financed by a temproary hike in the tax on alcoholic beverages—three cents a can on beer, 15 cents a fifth on whisky and 30 cents a gallon wine.

The committee also approved a Senate-passed bill that would make income from dividends of North Carolina corporations in excess of $15,000 a year subject to the state income tax. The bill would produce an estimated $3 million in revenues.

A bill that would lower the rate on credit life insurance from $1 to 80 cents a $100 but would circumvent a reduction ordered by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram to 54 cents a $100 was given final approval by the House and returned to the Senate for concurrence in a House amendment. Credit life insurance is required by many lenders. It pays the amount outstanding on a loan if a borrower dies.

Zaire Hostages Are Still Alive

NAIROBI, Kenya (Ap) — An American university professor said today that two American students and a Dutch student kidnaped by Marxist guerrillas and taken to the Zaire jungle more than three weeks ago are alive and believed well.

"I cannot say more than that without possibly jeopardizing efforts to obtain the release of the students. They are alive and believed well," said Peter Steiner of Ann Arbor, Mich., visiting economics professor at the University of Nairobi who volunteered to act as a mediator two weeks ago.

He said "things are at a delicate stage" and that the next "four or five days" could be crucial.

Diplomatic sources said communications containing information about the hostages were received recently from Popular Revolutionary party members holding Carrie Jane Hunter, 21 of Atherton, Calif., Kenneth Stephen Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., both Stanford University students, and Emilie Bergmann, 25, of Holland.

It was the first confirmed contact with the guerrillas since a third American who was abducted, Barbara Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich. was freed more than two weeks ago to carry a demand on the Tanzanian government for $500,000, large amounts of arms and ammunition and the release of guerrilla leaders detained in Tanzania.

The kidnapers said then they would kill their three prisoners if their demands were not met by mid-July. The Tanzanian government rejected the demands.

The captives were taken in a raid May 19 on an animal research station on a Tanzanian game reserve.

Diplomats in Dares Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, reported today that Zaire had given the United States an unpublicized go-ahead to seek unofficial contacts with the guerrillas.

President Mobutu Sese Seko is reluctant to admit the existence of the Marxist rebels, who are said to control much of eastern Zaire, the former Belgian Congo.

The Spirit of St. Louis flown by Charles Lindberg was built in 60 days in San Diego, Calif., at a cost of $10,580 in 1927.

one touched the organ. They watched TV, they played ball, they played cards and they took a walk, but not once did they go near the instrument.

"What did you do?" asked mother. "Threaten them?"

until December 19 that Mr. Ford made his "preliminary" selections for the board. His list included perhaps the most radical supporter of far-out legal "services," Revius Ortique of Louisiana, president of the ultra-left National Legal Aid and Defender Association. His list also included such conservatives as Edith Green, former congresswoman from Oregon; Dennis Kitchel of Arizona, former campaign chairman for Barry Goldwater; and William Knecht of California, an outspoken critic of abuses in the California legal aid program.

Publication of the tentative list provoked rolls of thunder on the left. When 60 of her former House colleagues branded her an "enemy" of legal services, Mrs. Green withdrew her name. Kitchel also backed out under fire. On April 28, the President formally submitted a revised list to the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, and there Knecht has been under bombardment from such liberal Senators as Cranston of California, Mondale of Minnesota, Javits of New York, and Kennedy of Massachusetts.

The upshot is that seven of the presidential nominees have been approved by the committee liberals; four have not been approved. The seven include the radical Ortique, regarded as the dominant intellectual force. The other six, with one or two exceptions, are thought to be neither here nor there, but mostly liberal putty. Majority Leader Mike Mansfield is seeking to have the seven confirmed, which would put the corporation in business. Helms has put a "hold" on their confirmation.

Senatorial courtesy has its limits. Mansfield is under intense pressure from his liberal colleagues to get a move on. If the Helms "hold" is broken, no subsequent developments will greatly matter. The corporation will be off and running.

The President can prevent this sabotage by recalling the names of all eleven nominees. An interim director, under the Community Services Administration, could keep necessary services going. A new list of men and women firmly committed to the act's limited but desirable purpose could then be submitted. Nothing will be gained if a weak board is confirmed, just to have a board in being.

"The Communists are to blame," said another, referring to Portugal's leftist military leaders, many of whom fought a 13-year colonial war in Angola before seizing power in Lisbon 13 months ago and deciding to turn rule over to a transitional government of their former foes ahead of independence.

Refugees said Portuguese troops still try to keep order but have been powerless to do so.

Several refugees reported seeing young boys roaming the streets of Luanda with Soviet AK47 automatic rifles. Angola's high commission announced on Tuesday the arrest of six minors, armed by one of the colony's three liberation movements.

Other refugees claimed there were incidents of rape, child molesting, robbery, arson, looting and beating of whites. Always, the refugees said, the attackers were black.

The government began airlifting refugees from the colony when regular commercial flights became jammed as the tempo of violence increased a month ago. From 200 to 400 refugees now are arriving daily.

TWO HONORED. . .Outgoing Greenville Recreation Commission members Sidney Carraway (left) and Mrs. Louis Gaylord were presented certificates of recognition for outstanding services by Recreation Director Boyd Lee on Wednesday night. Mrs. Gaylord has served as chairman of the commission for the past year, and Carraway was previously a chairman.

Retiring Commission Members Are Honored

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Two retiring members of the Greenville Recreation Commission—Chairlady Mrs. Louis Gaylord and Sidney Carraway, were honored Wednesday night at the annual Recreation Department banquet held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Both have served the maximum terms permitted by city ordinances governing the commission.

Recreation Department Executive Director Boyd Lee presented the two with certificates in recognition of their outstanding service to the city.

"I shall always be grateful to Mrs. Gaylord for helping me in my early days here," Lee remarked. "That was when we first had a program for the handicapped, and she was always there to help me.

"I'll always think of her as the Kool Aid Lady," he added. "Mrs. Gaylord was the one who day after day appeared on the scene with Kool Aid for the kids. It was not long before the children, seeing her come up, would say 'there's the Kool Aid Lady.'"

Of commission member Carraway, Lee noted "Sid has been chairman of the commission, and he has served during the several year period that I think of as the swimming pool crisis years. We all hope now that this crisis has passed. So much of what has been achieved is the result of Sid Carraway's efforts."

New Recreation Commission officers elected to serve for the coming year are Thomas Foreman, Sr., chairman, and Mrs. John East, vice-chairman.

Two new members were recently named by the City Council, Mrs. Dorothy Wooles and Hugh Bazemore, to replace the two retiring members.

Lee also introduced two new recreation internes who will be working with the Recreation Department during the summer. The two young ladies are Winnie Hewett, a student from UNC-Chapel Hill, and Chip East, an ECU student. Both are majors in recreation at their respective universities.

In a brief business session, the board approved putting the tennis courts at the Jaycee Park on a reservation basis, while keeping those at Evans Park on Hooker Road on a first-come first-served basis.

CIA Finally Delivers Letter

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly eight years ago, a letter was mailed from the Soviet Union to Robert M. McElwain, a Massachusetts schoolteacher.

It never reached its destination, but McElwain has finally received a copy of it, courtesy of the Central Intelligence Agency.

McElwain wrote the CIA several months ago, asking to see any file it might have compiled on him. He made his request under the Freedom of Information Act. He hardly expected the agency to know who he was.

But McElwain received a brief letter, noting the CIA had a "single reference" to the 38-year-old Harvard, Mass., resident who teaches French and Spanish in a Lincoln, Mass., junior high school.

The file was "classified and divulges intelligence sources and methods," the CIA letter said, and could therefore not be released.

His curiosity aroused, McElwain decided to appeal the decision and enlisted the aid of his congressman, Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass.

On May 21, John F. Blake, chairman of the CIA's Information Review Committee, sent McElwain a letter informing him that the agency now had decided to release the file. It contained a copy of the missing letter from the Soviet Union.

The Soviet letter was written Aug. 18, 1967, by a Russian teacher whom McElwain and his wife had met sometime earlier while the Russian was studying at Harvard Business School.

In 64 words, including salutations and closing, the Russian said he was preparing his teaching materials and planned to spend his vacation at the Black Sea.

The CIA decided the message was worth saving on microfilm, but it says it does not know why the original letter never reached McElwain.

"We can all wonder as much as we want to, but we're not going to discuss the matter further," a CIA spokesman said.

The Rockefeller Commission report on the CIA, issued Tuesday, said the mail opening was unlawful and did not meet national security criteria that would have made it legal. The operation was halted in 1973 when the chief postal inspector refused to allow it to continue without high-level approval.

McElwain said in a telephone interview that he received a long, apologetic letter Monday from Colby.

"I guess I'm past the point of being outraged, but it maddens me," the teacher said, recalling that the disappearance of the Russian's letter interrupted a budding friendship.

He said he originally wrote to his friend after the Russian returned to the Soviet Union. But when he didn't get a reply, he decided not to write again because he feared the Soviet government would disapprove.

"Finally, after seven years, I discover that he ... had replied," McElwain said. "I had thought that it was their government which must have lifted my letter! Now I discover that it was our own government which lifted his and kept it, thereby arbitrarily cutting off our friendship."

Moose Women Closing Year

Greenville Chapter No. 1308, Women of the Moose, will hold a Green Beanie Chapter Night program tonight at eight o'clock at the Moose Temple, according to Mrs. Peggy Jamieson, senior regent.

This marks the final meeting of the chapter year and new officers will be installed at a meeting for WOTM members and invited guests June 19 at 8 p.m. They will assume their duties July 1.

The new officers include: Mrs. Wilma Turner, senior regent; Mrs. Mary Knapp, junior regent; Mrs. Evelyn Cottam, chaplain; Mrs. Earline Coghill, recorder, Mrs. Mary Warren, treasurer, and Mrs. Jamieson, junior graduate regent.

Mrs. Dorothy Anderson, junior graduate regent, will be in charge of tonight's program and refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Mrs. Jamieson reminded members that tonight's meeting is the last at which new members may be enrolled this chapter year. She asked WOTM members sponsoring eligible candidates to urge the latter to attend.

Plans will also be discussed for the chapter's annual Spring Party at the Moose Temple June 21. The traditional Hawaiian luau is the party theme. A social hour is planned at 7 p.m., followed by a buffet dinner and dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. to music provided by the Monitors.

Seminar Scheduled

A Bible seminar has been scheduled for Friday through Sunday at the Evangelistic Tabernacle, located on 264 By-pass.

The sessions will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will feature seven doctrinal sermons by Ned Sauls, president of Heritage Bible College, and R.M. Steward, vice president of the college.

A program will also be held Sunday at 10 a.m.

Chooses Jail Term

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A man has chosen prison over probation.

Willie Baldwin, 62, of Rt. 2, Fayetteville, was found guilty Tuesday of assault with a deadly weapon. Judge Joseph Dupree gave him a suspended two-year prison sentence and placed him on probation for three years.

Baldwin returned to state District Court Wednesday and told Judge Dupree he didn't care much for probation and preferred to serve the active sentence.

A confounded judge obliged.

Singing Is To Be Held

A singing will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the United Church of God featuring the Apostolic Echoes of Wilson.

Other groups will also appear on the program. Revival services will start Sunday night at 7:30 featuring the Rev. Lawrence Boseman.

The public is invited to attend according to the Rev. Woodrow Tew, pastor.

Fire Station Site Bringing Problems

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

Two adjacent S. Memorial Drive lots, purchased by the city as a fire station location for some $47,000 are now worth around $10,000, according to rough estimates by local appraisers, and, under current zoning laws, banned as a fire station location.

The now-vacant lots at 2405 and 2497 S. Memorial Dr., each contained a building when purchased by the city. The 2405 property contained a brick house and was purchased for $34,000. A garage apartment stood on the lot at 2407 and was purchased for $13,100, according to city manager Harry Hagerty.

The clearing of these lots was approved by the City Council on Jan. 9, 1975. The house was sold for $1,000 and the apartment was demolished at a cost of $250 to the city.

As the present zoning ordinances make no mention of fire stations, the city was granted permission to build the fire station in this residential zone by the Board of Adjustments. The Board defined a fire station as a "public utility or use" which, under present law, may be placed in any zone in the city.

A new fire station is needed in this section of the city to replace the present one on Chestnut Street. The increased development in the west end of the city necessitates greater fire protection there, Mayor Eugene West said.

Area residents, opposed to the fire station's location in a residential section, took legal action against the Board of Adjustments. The Board, according to the case judgment, "confessed error in that the definition of a 'public utility or use'. . . does not embrace a fire station, or sub-fire station." According to Hagerty, this was done "to get it (the case) off the court docket. . . so that we may proceed."

The procedure seems to be towards an amendment to the city zoning ordinance which would allow any "municipal government building, use or facility" to be built in any city zone. According to West, a similar federal law allows the federal government to locate their buildings in any zone. "I see no reason why the city couldn't operate on the same basis," West said.

Some councilmen oppose the amendment, however. Councilman Clarence Gray believes it would give the city too much latitude in locating buildings and the public would have little say in the matter.

The proposed amendment was tabled at the last City Council meeting and plans for a "workshop session" to "kick the facts around" are being made, West said. "If anyone comes up with any acceptable (alternate) property (between now and the workshop) we will look at it," he added.

The Council started looking for a fire station location "over a year ago," according to West. Past city manager William Carstarphen "handled the location search and came up with this site," West said. A number of lots were looked at and "the best location, in my opinion, (at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Memorial Drive) was turned down completely," West said.

The lot at 2407 Memorial Dr. was purchased on July 22, 1974, West said, and "when we determined that we might have to go to it, we acquired the adjacent lot." That purchase was made on Sept. 18 of the same year.

The site was purchased "under the assumption that we (the Council) could go before the Board of Adjustments to get the fire station built there, and I still think we could. We checked it out all the way and, to be right technical, we didn't have a clear statement which would allow us to put a fire station in any zone. This is the reason for the (proposed) ordinance."

The lots are "only one block from a commercial zone on Memorial Drive which is a commercial street," West said. "We have already had requests to zone it commercial. At that time, it (the property) will probably be worth more than we have in it."

Should an alternate piece of property become available, "we have a valuable piece of property to trade, I would say," according to Hagerty.

The city was limited to the Memorial Drive location by the Insurance Services Organization, which determines state fire insurance ratings. To avoid a lower fire rating, the city must build a new fire station in this area. In a lower rating, fire insurance for the entire city would be higher by 10 to 15 per cent, according to West. "If that should happen, we will really have an uproar," West said. "We have tried to be just as nice to Mr. Dozier (Eddie Dozier, whose house backs up to the city lots and who is fighting against a fire station being located there) as we could be and yet, we are responsible to all of the citizens of Greenville and not to Mr. Dozier alone," West said.

"The Council is more sensitive to public feeling than anybody," Hagerty said, "and if it has determined that this is where it should go, it should be up to them."

The city must act quickly on this matter, according to West, because of the state rating and because of revenue sharing funds which the city has set aside for this purpose. "We have 24 months to use them or they will revert back to the federal government," West said. "Over 12 of these months are gone," he added.

Investigate Shooting

Police are investigating a shooting incident at Sambo's restaurant on East Tenth Street here early this morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the incident occurred about 12:28 a.m.

Two customers told officers they were seated at a booth inside the business when they heard a loud cracking noise and small pieces of glass scattered over the table where they were sitting.

Officers said an object—apparently a projectile from a small caliber gun—penetrated the outer glass and chipped the inner glass, but did not penetrate completely through the glass.

The shot, Cannon said, was apparently fired from a passing auto.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to the window, investigators reported.

Fourth Inning Hits Power Rose To Win

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

Run scoring singles by Keith Jones and Eddy Connolly in the bottom of the fourth gave the Rose High Rampants a 2-0 win over Charlotte Harding and a 1-0 lead in their best-of-three series for the State 4-A Baseball championship.

Macon Moye had led off the fourth with a single to center and was sacrificed up by Mike Brewington. Jones lined a hit back through the box scoring Moye and after Ron Hunt was safe on an error, Connolly singled in Jones. That was all the scoring.

Kelly Heath went all the way for the Rampants getting his third straight tournament win. He threw a two-hitter at the Rams striking out four and walking four. Only one of the hits was out of the infield.

Dickie Noles was the loser going the full seven innings. He gave up only four hits, struck out six and walked two.

Rose threatened right at the outset putting two on in the first as Grif Garner walked and Moye was hit by a pitch. A ground out ended it. In the third, Wright Hooks singled to left and Jack Jenkins walked. The Rams tried to pick Hooks off second but the throw from Noles was wild. They got Hooks, however, as he slid into third.

The Rams got a man to third only once and to second only three times. In the third, Mike Harding singled and moved up on a sacrifice. He was caught off second as Mike Hare lined out to Heath who completed the double play throwing to Jones on second.

In the fourth, Jamie Lawing singled, Robbie Dunn reached on an error and Rod Lawing walked. Jamie Lawing was tagged out at home as the Rams tried to squeeze him over. After that, Heath allowed only two other Rams to reach base.

Hunt prevented an extra-base hit in the fifth as he made a running stab of a long fly by Mike Harding. Moye prevented a run from scoring in the seventh hauling in Mark Morris's shot 375 feet deep into center field.

The two teams go at it again tonight as the Rampants try to clinch the title while the Rams try to even the series up. The game will start at 8:00 p.m. at Harrington Field. Harding will start Robbine Dunn while Rose will go with either Wesley Deal or Mike Belton on the mound.

Green Hoping To Change Things By Winning Philadelphia Classic

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It's been a long season for Hubert Green.

In some respects it's been a happy one. He's had a good time—gone fishing, done some loafing.

But his golf has suffered.

"You have to pay the price for it," Green said before teeing off today in the first round of the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

He's the defending champion. It's one of four titles the lanky man from Birmingham won last season as he went from promising young player to prominence. He collected $211,000 in 1974 and was surpassed only by Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller.

But this season has been a different story. He hasn't won. His official money winnings are at $37,839—most of it from one high finish. He's missed the cut a half-dozen times. And he knows why.

"I haven't worked hard enough," he said. "I've been lazy and now I'm paying for it. I like to loaf. I like to go deep-sea fishing. But when you do that, when you take time off, your game suffers.

"You know, we're just like anybody else. We like to hear that we're good. We like praise. After a year like I had last year it's easy to start thinking that you're something special.

"I've just got to convince myself, again, that golf, good golf, is hard work. I haven't worked that hard. So maybe I don't deserve to play any better than I have."

His work and practice time have increased enormously in the last few weeks. It paid off with a solid 68 in the final round of the Kemper last week in Charlotte, N.C., one of his best rounds in some time.

"You never really know, but I kind of feel like I'm letting close. I hope so. I'd like to play well this week, as defending champion. And, of course, I'd sure like to be ready for the Open."

The U.S. Open, probably the most prestigious of all the game's championships, is next week in Medinah, Ill., and Green, like many of the major stars, is using this event as a last major prep.

Among the top attractions here are Johnny Miller and Tom Weiskopf, who finished third and fifth in this tournament a year ago and tied for second in the Masters earlier this season, and South African Gary Player, who appears to be reaching the top of his game.

Some of the other standouts in the 150-man field that will test the friendly little 6,687-yard, par-71 Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course are veteran Billy Casper, England's Tony Jacklin, former Philadelphia champions J.C. Snead and Dave Hill, and Ray Floyd, winner last week in the Kemper.

Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Hale Irwin are skipping this one to concentrate on preparations for the National Open.

The Philadelphia tournament is sponsored by the Industrial Valley Bank.

Dibbs Loves To Hear Roaring Of The Crowd

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

PARIS (AP) — "The fans can shout their heads off," said Eddie Dibbs after scoring a heroic victory in the French International Tennis Championships.

"I have never known the fans to make as much noise anywhere else, but it's great fun and I love it."

A volatile French crowd of 10,000 cheered every point Dibbs scored Wednesday as he came back from 0-4 in the final set to defeat Raul Ramirez of Mexico 4-6, 7-6, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4.

The scene was typical of the Roland Garros Stadium, where Dibbs was first man into the semifinals in quest of a first prize of $30,000.

The gritty little man from Miami Beach, Fla., certainly gave the crowd something to shout about. Ramirez was within one point of a 5-0 lead in the final set when Dibbs came charging back to win six games in a row. After the 3-hour, 40-minute marathon, his feet were bleeding, and he went to a hospital for treatment.

Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who won the women's crown last year, gained the women's semifinals and is hot on the trail of the title again. She defeated Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan 6-2, 6-2.

Guillermo Vilas of Argentina reached the men's quarter-finals, downing Onny Parun of New Zealand 6-2, 6-2, 7-6.

The two remaining quarter-finals were scheduled for Thursday, and Americans were involved in both.

Harold Solomon, a clay court specialist from Silver Springs, Md., faced the defending champion, Bjorn Borg of Sweden, and John Andrews of Fullerton, Calif., ranked No. 47 in the United States and the big surprise of the tournament, was paired against Adriano Panatta of Italy.

Also in the women's semifinals is Janet Newberry of La Jolla, Calif., who beat Eva Szabo of Hungary 6-1, 6-2.

Miss Evert will meet Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union and Miss Newberry faces tough Martina Navratilova, the rising 18-year-old star from Czechoslovakia.

Gamecocks Bounce Back To Chase Arizona St., 6-3

By DAN EVEN
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — South Carolina Coach Bobby Richardson has one phrase he uses frequently to describe ace pitcher Earl Bass.

"He's just a great competitor," Richardson said before the start of the eight-team College World Series.

He didn't have to repeat that after Bass' showing before 10,902 fans Wednesday night that kept the fourth-rated Gamecocks the only unbeaten among the four teams remaining in the double-elimination series.

With Bass scattering eight hits, South Carolina chased Arizona State ace Floyd Bannister and scored a 6-3 come-from-behind victory.

South Carolina, 50-4, stands two victories from becoming the first Eastern team since Wake Forest in 1955 to capture the championship.

Arizona State, 60-12, battles Oklahoma, 52-9, in an elimination game Thursdy night and South Carolina faces second-rated Texas, 54-6.

"Earl gave up runs early, but he didn't give up," said Richardson, the former New York Yankee standout. "He's the kind of pitcher who can hold them in check and give us a chance to come back."

Arizona State nicked Bass for two runs in the first inning when the junior righthander had control problems, but thereafter he was in almost total control.

"I didn't worry when I got two runs down," said Bass, who ran his record to 17-0. "The umpire called a good game over-all—although he called them a little close in the first inning."

That's when Bass walked two and Garrett Strong followed with a two-run single.

Bannister, a sophomore lefthander who had struck out 15 in winning an earlier series game, cruised through the first three innings.

In the fourth Greg Keatley's opposite-field triple knotted the score and Mark Van Bever squeezed in another run with a perfectly placed two-strike bunt. An error let in a fourth run.

That was enough for Bass. He surrendered six hits thereafter, but managed to pitch out of trouble each time. Arizona State's final run came on Ken Phelps' solo home run in the sixth.

"They did what they did all year long—come up with the timely hit," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "No matter what man in the order, if there was an opportunity they cashed it."

Keatley, who drove in three runs, is the Gamecocks' No. 7 hitter and Van Bever is No. 8.

"We're the type of club that hopes it works, sometimes it doesn't. Tonight it did, like ordering that squeeze."

He credited the Gamecocks' errorless defense with contributing to Bass' outstanding performance. Bass finished with nine strikeouts.

"When you're down to an elimination game against the likes of Oklahoma your back is against the wall," offered Brock. "But I think if we beat them, we'll win the whole thing."

Graniteers Rally In Sixth To Win

Five singles in the top of the sixth drove in five runs breaking a scoreless deadlock and giving the Graniteers a 5-0 win over the Moose in Tar Heel Little League action, Wednesday.

Both teams had chances to score earlier. The Graniteers got a man to third in the first and the Moose loaded the bases in the bottom of the first. The Graniteers left seven men on base while the Moose stranded eight.

Moose pitcher Dwayne Alligood got the first two batters in the sixth out but gave up a hit to Jaime Byrd. Mike Tucker got a hit scoring Byrd and an error scored Tucker. Art Pittman singled and Alan Dickens walked. An error scored Pittman, a passed ball brought in Dickens and a hit by Lance Searle scored Mike Fuller who had singled.

The Moose got a man to third in the bottom of the sixth but two force plays ended their threat.

Searle and Pittman had two hits each for the Graniteers.

Wild Pitch Leads To Winning Run

One wild pitch led to the winning run scoring giving the Optimists a 6-5 win over Kiwanis, yesterday. Kiwanis was leading 5-4 going into the bottom of the inning.

The Optimist had taken a 1-0 lead in the second as Billy Dough reached on an error and later scored on an error. Kiwanis rallied for four in the third, however, to take the lead.

The Optimists bounced back to tie the game, 4-4 in the fifth but in the sixth, Kiwanis regained the lead. Mike Thurber walked and Jeff Parnell doubled. Jeff Boyd singled scoring Thurber.

But in the bottom of the seventh, Tony Heath singled and Rudy Stalls walked. Both moved up on passed balls. A wild pitch let Heath score the tieing run and when the throw back to home got away from the Kiwanis pitcher, Stalls scored to win the game.

Grant Stackhouse had two hits to lead the Kiwanis.

Kiwanis	004.001—5.7.7
Optimist	010.032—6.3.2

Tanana Gets Good Look At Hero-Didn't Like It At All

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Frank Tanana used to worship Willie Horton from afar. Up close, he's not so crazy about him.

Tanana got a good look at his boyhood hero Wednesday night and didn't like what he saw — or heard.

The tempestuous Detroit Tiger outfielder, enraged by a close pitch from the California Angels' pitcher, roared out to the mound in a homicidal frame of mind and triggered the wildest free-for-all of the 1975 baseball season.

By the time it was over, both teams stormed the field with their feet and fists flying. The untamed Horton did most of the damage, swinging at everyone and everything, and a lot of feelings were hurt, along with a couple of egos. Oh, yes, the Angels went on to win that undisciplined first game of a doubleheader 14-7. The second game was suspended because of the American League's 1 a.m. curfew law with Detroit winning 5-3 and will be completed tonight.

"The last thing you want to do is get Willie Horton mad," said Tanana, who said he was a Horton fan while growing up Detroit.

The pitch that got the whole thing started was an inside delivery that brushed back the Tiger strongman in the fourth inning. Horton gave Tanana a menacing look, then pointed a finger at the young California pitcher and rushed to the mound.

Things were comparatively tame around the rest of the American League. The New York Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins 5-1; the Kansas City Royals whipped the Cleveland Indians 7-1; the Oakland A's stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 5-3; the Baltimore Orioles trimmed the Texas Rangers 9-8 in 10 innings and the Boston Red Sox turned back the Chicago White Sox 9-7 in 14 innings.

The donnybrook at Tiger Stadium delayed the first game for 20 minutes. Before things calmed down, Horton had taken on about a half-dozen Angels and a couple of his own teammates who were trying to restrain him. No solid punches were landed.

California led 2-1 when the fight broke out. Afterwards, the Angels did their hitting with their bats. Bruce Bochte greeted reliever Dave Lemanczyk with a two-run double in a five-run fifth and Lee Stanton later hit a grand slam homer in the eighth, when California scored six times.

Yankees 5, Twins 1

Rudy May scattered seven hits for his fifth consecutive triumph and Roy White drove in two runs as red-hot New York defeated the Minnesota Twins. The Yanks nicked ex-farmhand Mike Pazik, 0-4, for two runs in the second inning and two more in the fifth en route to the 18th victory in their last 23 games.

Royals 7, Indians 1

Cookie Rojas unloaded a three-run homer and rookie Dennis Leonard gave up six hits, leading Kansas City over Gaylord Perry and Cleveland. Rojas' homer, his first of the season, highlighted a four-run fourth inning.

A's 5, Brewers 3

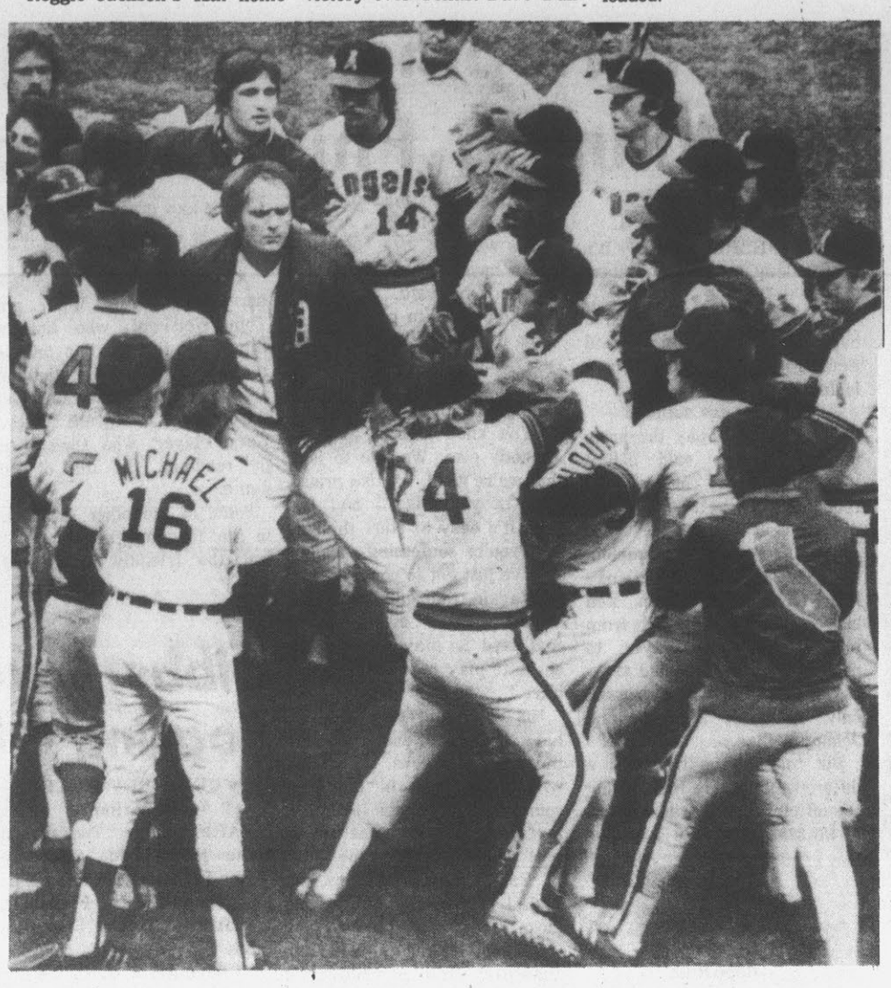

Reggie Jackson's 12th home run of the season, a two-run shot, triggered a four-run sixth inning and propelled Oakland over Milwaukee. A single by Joe Rudi and Jackson's homer erased a 2-1 Milwaukee lead. After a walk to Gene Tenace and a single by Billy Williams chased loser Jim Slaton, 3-8, a wild pitch by Eduardo Rodriguez scored Tenace.

Orioles 9, Rangers 8

Ken Singleton's 10th-inning RBI double gave Baltimore its victory over Texas. Dave Duncan, who had hit a pair of two-run homers earlier in the game, started the 10th with a single off Stan Thomas. After Mark Belanger hit into a forceout, Singleton lined his game-winning hit to center field.

Red Sox 9, White Sox 7

Carl Yastrzemski's sixth home run of the season, a two-run clout in the 14th inning, lifted Boston over Chicago. Rich Gossage hit Bernie Carbo with a pitch before Yastrzemski unloaded.

MEETING AT THE MOUND—California Angels coach Whitey Herzog (24) locks horns with Detroit Tigers manager Ralph Houk when both benches emptied in the fourth inning of the first game of a doubleheader. ABA Foregoes Dispersal Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Basketball Association's decision to forego its proposed dispersal draft of players from the financially plagued Memphis and San Diego franchises guarantees, at least temporarily, that the league again will operate with 10 clubs next season.

The dispersal draft would have been held sometime between today, the start of the Board of Trustees meeting, and Monday, the date of the college player draft. But a league spokesman said Wednesday that the dispersal draft had been cancelled, at least for now.

It could, however, be conducted within about a month, or whenever final disposition is made regarding the league's two weakest franchises.

Frank Goldberg, part owner of the Denver Nuggets and a native of San Diego, was expected to ask for a 30-day delay in resolving the fate of the wobbly franchises, giving him more time to work on the possible purchase of the Conquistadors.

"I have talked with several trustees and they have given me the impression they will go along with this move," Goldberg was quoted as saying Wednesday. "It is not completely assured, but I feel certain we'll be able to delay action."

At present, the league holds the San Diego franchise, having taken it over during the 1974-75 season from Dr. Leonard Bloom.

The Conquistadors had the worst record in the West Division, 31-53, last season and the lowest attendance in the league, drawing only a total of 109,854 fans, an average of 2,616 for 42 home games, to the 14,000-seat San Diego Sports Arena.

Memphis did not do much better financially, attracting the second fewest fans, 162,919, an average of 3,879 for its 42 home games in the 10,400-seat Mid-South Coliseum. Artistically, the Sounds fared even worse than the Conquistadors, finishing with a 27-57 record in the East. But because of Virginia's horrendous 15-69 record, the Sounds managed to make the playoffs, whereas San Diego did not.

Nevertheless, the little extra money accumulated by participating in the playoffs did not come close to rescuing the Sounds from their financial plight.

Mike Storen, the Sounds' president, was optimistic Wednesday that the team would remain in Memphis.

Horton Charges Mound, Starts Free-For-All

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Willie Horton just got tired of biting the dust.

But despite unleashing his anger Wednesday night against the California Angels, he and his fellow Detroit Tigers had to bite the bullet.

The Angels, who led just 2-1 when a fourth-inning brawl triggered by Horton broke out, destroyed the Tigers 14-7 in the opener of their wild doubleheader.

Detroit led 5-3 after eight innings of the second gme but will have to wait until tonight to finish up because of the American League's 1 a.m. curfew rule. The twin bill began at 6:05 p.m. Wednesday and was suspended at 1:10 a.m. — seven hours and five minutes worth of baseball, brawling and rain delays.

"I don't keep any hard feelings for anybody," Horton said afterwards, considerably calmer than when he charged out to the mound to get California pitcher Frank Tanana in the fourth inning of the opener.

Horton had to hit the dirt to avoid an inside pitch by Tanana in the first inning and when a Tanana offering came in tight in the fourth it was just too much.

"I don't like to get mad," the muscular Horton said. "Maybe it wasn't him (Tanana) in particular. Maybe it was just things in the last couple weeks ... in the last three weeks I've been on the ground every game. It's a pitcher's prerogative to back you off the plate, but when the ball is up high they're dealing with a fella's life!

Despite claiming Tanana threw high inside pitches, Horton said the pitch that prompted his actions — and the subsequent clearing of both benches and bullpens — hit him on the thigh.

Plate umpire Marty Springstead, who ejected Horton after the melee, said it didn't hit him at all and subsequently pinch hitter Mickey Stanley took over Horton's 2-2 count and struck out.

"When I first went out there I was going to the mound to talk to him," Horton said of Tanana.

Springstead said Horton pushed him aside along with Angels catcher Ellie Rodriguez as they tried to stop the Tiger slugger from reaching Tanana.

"If I could have stopped him then I wouldn't have need to kick him out," said Springstead, adding later that Horton "is the strongest man in the league. Nobody can hold him."

He said he would not recommend a suspension today when giving his report of the incident to American League President Lee MacPhail, even though second base umpire Larry Barnett was knocked down trying to hold Horton away from someone when the tussle had moved to the front of the California dugout.

There were actually two bench clearings. The first lasted about 10 minutes. The second began almost immediately after Tanana returned to the mound. Both Tiger Manager Ralph Houk and Horton felt Tanana should have been ejected, too. They believed Horton had been hit, but Springstead said he hadn't been and, in his judgment, Tanana hadn't deliberately thrown at him.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Cook, former president of the Ontario Motor Speedway in California, was named Wednesday as director of the newly formed marketing division of the U.S. Auto Club.

Cook runs a public relations firm which will continue to operate out of California and handle a variety of services for USAC, including sponsorships and contingency awards.

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Goodwill Industries and the Waco Chamber of Commerce announced Wednesday they have filed an application with the National Collegiate Athletic Association to hold an all-star football game Dec. 20 at Baylor Stadium.

A spokesman for the organizers said that, if approved, the game would match seniors from the Southwest Conference against seniors from the Big Eight. Proceeds from the game would go to Goodwill Industries.

A spokesman for Goodwill said the NCAA indicated it would approve the game.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Matt Herkenhoff, former University of Minnesota star, has been added to the offensive line corps of the Kansas City Chiefs, the National Football League club announced Wednesday.

Herkenhoff was a 1974 fourth-round draft choice of the Chiefs but played with the Charlotte Hornets of the World Football League.

Herkenhoff was named Minnesota's most valuable offensive player after the 1973 season.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Courtesy paid off Wednesday for Jimmy Wittenberg Jr., of Memphis, an unknown pro golfer whose thank-you note to officials of the Greater Milwaukee Open earned him a sure spot in the meet's 144-man field.

Wittenberg was one of 200 pros who received customary invitations to the event, scheduled July 2-5. About 100 of them, including Wittenberg, usually have to qualify in advance of the meet.

But after receiving his thank-you note, the GMO's board of directors agreed to give the 26-year-old a sponsor's exemption.

Dot Moye and Debra Grimes had four hits each for the Supersonettes. South Greenville will visit Walstonburg, Saturday.

Everybody Has Giants' Young Players

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

A few years ago, San Francisco Giants' Manager Charlie Fox boasted: "Every team in baseball wants our young players." Now it seems just about every team in baseball has them.

A couple of guys named Willie, namely Mays and McCovey, and Orlando Cepeda started the exodus from the City by the Bay a number of seasons back. True, they were veterans whose years and salaries were catching up with them as far as the Giants' coffers were concerned.

But after that, the kids began escaping — under orders of the front office. Trades sent Bobby Bonds, Ken Henderson, Dave Kingman and Garry Maddox packing — and on Wednesday Ed Goodson was packing, too, heading to Atlanta in a swap for Craig Robinson.

"I don't know what happened. It's weird. We're all gone," Goodson said. Well, not quite. A few of them are left. And on Wednesday, one of them kept the Giants within 4½ games of first-place Cincinnati in the National League West.

Gary Thomasson's three-run homer in the fourth inning carried San Francisco to its fourth victory in five games, an 8-3 romp over the Philadelphia Phillies. Willie Montanez and Chris Speier added two runs batted in apiece. Greg Luzinski knocked in all three for the Phillies with a homer and a two-run single.

Astros 5, Pirates 1

Larry Dierker fired a six-hitter to tame Pittsburgh's hot bats and Enos Cabell tripled to highlight a decisive two-run second inning that gave the Astros their second straight victory after a nine-game tailspin.

Mets 2, Dodgers 1

Mike Marshall is no longer Los Angeles' ace in the hole. The Dodgers' top reliever, last year's Cy Young Award winner in the National League, put himself in a ninth-inning hole against the Mets when he walked Rusty Staub and wild-pitched him to second.

Then Mike Phillips took over. He dropped Marshall's record to 2-4 and raised his earned run average to 3.56 with a ground-single to right that scored Staub and put New York within half a game of first-place Pittsburgh in the East.

Padres 3, Expos 1

Montreal's Dennis Blair walked the bases loaded in the sixth inning, then Chuck Taylor took over and gave up run-scoring fly balls by Mike Ivie and Tito Fuentes.

San Diego's Folkers, making his first start since 1973, stuck around until the ninth inning, when Danny Frisella bailed him out of a jam, leaving the bases loaded with Expos.

Reds 3, Cardinals 1

Don Gullett chalked up his fourth straight victory and his eighth of the season — and he did it with both his arm and his bat.

He checked St. Louis on seven hits, losing a shutout on Ted Simmons' ninth-inning homer, and doubled to trigger the Reds' two-run third inning.

Indian Ocean Red Objective

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia is moving quietly to establish close military and economic ties with Mozambique even before that strategically located Portuguese colony on the Indian Ocean becomes independent, U.S. intelligence sources report.

Analysts suggest the Russians may be trying to lay the groundwork for possible future use of a Mozambique port by Soviet naval units in covering oil tanker routes vital to the United States and Western Europe.

The Soviets already have developed major facilities in Somalia for support of Russia's naval squadron patrolling the Indian Ocean and the approaches to the oil-producing Persian Gulf area, according to the Pentagon.

Base rights in Mozambique, on Africa's southeast coast, would give the Soviets two widely spaced positions from which to cover oil tanker lanes.

Although the Suez Canal has been reopened, it is too shallow for today's supertankers. Thus, giant oil tankers still must travel through the Indian Ocean and around Africa going to and from the Persian Gulf.

Mozambique is scheduled to become independent June 25.

Stressing the growth of the Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean, Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger argued before the Senate Armed Services Committee this week for additional funds to expand a U.S. base on the island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean which he said would make it easier and cheaper to support periodic U.S. Navy cruises in those waters.

Oil Producing Nations To Raise Prices Again On October First

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries says that it intends to raise the prices of crude oils on Oct. 1.

A communique issued Wednesday night at the end of the three-day OPEC ministerial meeting in Libreville said the 13-nation cartel would stand by its current price freeze scheduled to expire Sept. 30.

"However, in view of increasing inflation, the depreciation of the value of the dollar and the consequent erosion of the real value of the oil revenues of member countries, the conference decided to readjust crude oil prices as from Oct. 1, 1975," the communique declared.

Algeria and Iraq had pressed for immediate price increases to compensate for inflation losses which they estimated at almost 40 per cent. Mohamed Yaganeh, the governor of Iran's Central Bank, told reporters the October increase should be around 35 per cent, but it was thought likely the cartel would agree on a lower increase to avoid further disruption to the economies of the less affluent industrialized countries.

The conference also agreed to delay abandonment of the dollar as the basis for the computation of oil prices until the end of September. The delegates agreed Tuesday to compensate for the devaluation of the dollar by figuring prices in the International Monetary Fund's special drawing rights, or SDR's, a rate of exchange computed by averaging 16 national currencies.

The communique made no reference to the abortive attempt in Paris last April to arrange a dialogue between the oil-exporting countries and the industrialized countries that are their biggest customers. The preparatory talks broke down because the industrial nations wanted to talk exclusively about oil, while the OPEC members insisted on a general review of all raw materials exported by the underdeveloped countries.

Another OPEC conference is to open in Vienna Sept. 24 to discuss the price increases to go into effect Oct. 1.

Senate Passes Ethics Rules

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina legislators, for the first time, will have to reveal their financial interests under a new ethics law enacted in the General Assembly.

The Senate voted 38-1 Wednesday to give the bill its final approval, ending two months of debate and compromise on the measure.

The new law requires that legislators and legislative candidates file public listings of their sources of income and other financial interests, including real estate and stock.

It also creates a legislative ethics commission, although the main thrust of the law is to place potential conflicts of interest under public scrutiny.

The biggest obstacle in enacting the law was the opposition of lawyer-legislators to any provision that would require them to disclose the names of their clients. They said it might cause them to breach their professional ethics.

The legislature finally compromised with a provision that requires lawyers to disclose the types of business their clients engage in but not their names.

Similar ethics bills had been watered down and killed in previous sessions. This year, though, a number of freshmen had promised to seek ethics legislation in their post-Watergate 1974 campaigns.

Veteran legislators, although reluctant, were fearful of voter reaction if they opposed the bill.

Only one senator, William G. Smith, D-New Hanover, voted against it Wednesday. He said he didn't think a law could impose a code of ethics and resented the implication that it was needed.

Imperial To Join Dead Cars

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s Imperial, the regal luxury car which is selling like a pauper, is being killed off a half-century after its 1926 debut, industry sources say.

Chrysler, which built its reputation on prestigious, top-of-the-line models, is abandoning the U.S. luxury car market to General Motors' dominant Cadillac and Ford's revitalized Lincoln.

Industry observers say the phasing out of the Imperial is an economy move forced by dwindling sales and a trend towards smaller cars.

Officially, Chrysler has no comment about its 1976 model plans until this summer. However, industry sources say the Imperial's demise is certain this fall.

United Auto Workers officials say there are no plans to continue Imperial production at Detroit's Jefferson Avenue plant where the car is assembled.

The sources say Chrysler will pass along the Imperial body and design to the full-size New Yorker Brougham.

New Yorker buyers will miss four-wheel disc brakes, which came exclusively on the Imperial, and the Imperial's automatic load leveler, which will be available only as an additional-cost option.

Some say the Imperial died two years ago, but is only being buried this fall.

In past years, the Imperial had a distinct appearance setting it apart from other full-size Chryslers. But in 1974, when the firm introduced a restyled lineup, the Imperial became a copy of the New Yorker with slight differences in body style.

In 1957, Imperial's best sales year, Chrysler sold 34,500 models to capture 15 per cent of the high-profit luxury car market. The car has been running downhill ever since.

In 1960, sales fell to 16,000, or less than 9 per cent of the luxury segment. A decade later, Imperial sales were down to 10,500 — less than 5 per cent of the luxury market.

Charge Two In Break-Ins

Greenville Police yesterday arrested two juveniles on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with two separate theft cases, Chief Glenn Cannon reported.

According to Cannon, a 14-year-old student at E.B. Aycock Junior High School was charged in connection with a June 2 break-in at the school in which an estimated $98 worth of property was taken, including $86 in cash, a knife and a stereo tape.

A 13-year-old female student at Agnes Fullilove School, Cannon said, was charged in connection with a May 29 break-in at 1106 West Third St.

Reported missing from the dwelling following the break-in was two piggy banks containing an estimated $15 and a pair of sandal-type shoes.

Stamps To Rise Again

NEW YORK (AP) — First-class postage rates will increase this year despite contrary recommendations from an administrative judge, says Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar.

A spokesman for Bailar in Washington said the cost of mailing a first-class letter would probably rise to 12 cents.

The Postal Rate Commission is currently considering a proposal by Judge Seymour Wenner to reduce first-class postage from 10 cents to 8.5 cents while sharply increasing the rates in other classes.

Bailar told the New York Postal Customers Council that the judge's plan is "no good for anyone." He said that even if the commission adopts it, the Postal Service will exercise its option to set new "temporary" rates after a 90-day waiting period.

Bailar was not specific in the speech Wednesday, but he indicated that the new rates would mean an over-all increase.

Wenner's proposal is aimed at making bulk mail self-supporting through large hikes in second, third and fourth classes. At the same time, first-class rates would be reduced to eliminate the profit now used to subsidize the other classes.

California's biggest export is raw cotton.

Coverup Charge In Drug Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., says mismanagement and corruption pervades most layers of the Drug Enforcement Administration and a Watergate-type cover-up involves its leadership.

Jackson commented Wednesday after hearing testimony that John R. Bartels Jr. intervened with initial success to end an investigation by the DEA's chief inspector into allegations linking the agency's former public relations director with racketeers.

Both Bartels and the ex-public relations director, Vincent Promuto, have denied the allegations. Bartels recently was fired and Promuto now works in the DEA New York office.

"The evidence that has been brought out in the last two days would indicate that there was a conscious premeditated plan to cover up a very important investigation involving misconduct at the highest level of the DEA," Jackson said.

Jackson's comments were triggered by the appearance before the investigations subcommittee, which he heads, of George B. Brosan, former chief inspector of the DEA.

Brosan testified that Bartels consistently showed reluctance to permit investigations of agency officials and was angry when he learned of a probe into the off-duty activities and associations of Promuto, a former professional football player for the Washington Redskins.

Promuto's name appeared in a report of Washington police surveillance of patrons of a restaurant owned by another former Redskins player, Fran O'Brien. The report alleged the narcotics agency official was associating with ex-convicts, prostitutes and persons believed by the police to be connected with illegal gambling and narcotics activity.

Brosan testified it later became evident that one of the persons named in the report — Miss Dian Barger, alias Diane De Vito—was known to Bartels as well as to Promuto.

Says American Sows Instability

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Laotian government accused an American woman today of trying to "sow instability" in Laos and held her in a police station for the ninth day.

An official press statement said the woman, Rosemary Conway, 36, of Chicago and Las Vegas, "engaged in activities contrary to the nation and people of Laos and has attempted to sow instability in the kingdom."

American Embassy officials reported no progress in their attempts to get her released.

The woman taught English in the international school in Vientiane, recently went to Thailand to get her Thai visa renewed and returned to Vientiane. She was arrested while on a dinner date with a flier in the Laotian air force.

Some Western observers view her detention as another attempt by the Communist-dominated goverment to humiliate the United States.

Other Western sources reported that the top-ranking Communist leaders of the Pathet Lao are meeting in Sam Neua, the Pathet Lao capital in northeast Laos, to hammer out a strategy for the future of the country.

The sources said the meeting may produce a plan for the administration of the country and may set the pace at which the Communist revolution in Laos will proceed.

Elsewhere in Southeast Asia:

Saigon broadcasts reported that 13 factories resumed production in one district of the South Vietnamese capital, providing jobs for 3,300 workers; that the government distributed 250 tons of rice to almost 13,500 people in Saigon and in the surrounding countryside, and that the medical, dental and pharmaceutical schools of Saigon University reopened today.

The Hanoi correspondent of the Japanese newspaper Yomiuri reported that a Cambodian government mission led by Deputy Premier Khieu Samphan is visiting the North Vietnamese capital for important talks with North Vietnamese leaders.

The Rangoon radio reported that a five-day occupation of the Rangoon University's convocation hall "ended peacefully" Wednesday after the Burmese government banned demonstrations and arrested 213 students.

Pfft May Be Damaging Atmosphere

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gas that propels underarm deodorants as well as many other sprays may damage the world's upper atmosphere and increase the risk of skin cancer, a federal task force warned today.

If so, it may be necessary to ban fluorocarbon gas from those super-civilized cans of aerosol deodorant, antiperspirant and hair spray, the group said.

The cosmetics themselves could be used. But if no other gas propellant could be used in these products, the cosmetics would have to be applied with roll-on applicators, tubes, flasks or hand-squeezed atomizers.

"There seems to be legitimate cause for serious concern," the panel concluded after a five-month review of warnings that first surfaced a year ago that fluorocarbon gas may damage the protective ozone layer in the upper atmosphere.

It recommended:

—Immediate consideration of a requirement for labeling aerosol products using fluorocarbon gas.

—International cooperation on studies and perhaps control of fluorocarbons.

—Restriction of fluorocarbon uses especially in spray-cans if a more detailed study by the National Academy of Sciences confirms their suspected danger.

—And quick passage by Congress of a proposed Toxic Substances Control Act that would provide broad federal authority to regulate not only the fluorocarbons, but other possibly hazardous substances.

In response to the task force report, a group representing the aerosol fluorocarbon industry said "recent and potential discoveries and measurements of chlorine compounds in the atmosphere may ultimately invalidate the theory that fluorocarbons may contribute to ozone depletion.

The Aerosol Education Bureau statement quoted a DuPont Corp. research scientist, Richard Ward, as saying the government report "essentially concurs with the industry's position that there is no appreciable danger in continued use of fluorocarbon compounds while studies are completed."

The task force, headed by the President's Council on Environmental Quality and the Federal Council for Science and Technology, said fluorocarbons present a classic example of society's ability to poison its environment on a global scale by some seemingly trivial activity.

The fluorocarbons — generally chemical compounds of carbon, hydrogen, chlorine and fluorine — are commonly known as "Freon," one of their trade names.

The task force reported that some 13.8 billion pounds of two fluorocarbons nown as F-11 and F-12 have been produced so far worldwide, excluding the Soviet-Eastern Europe bloc.

About half of the total was produced and used by the United States.

One way or another just about all fluorocarbon eventually escapes into the atmosphere — sprayed, leaked or discarded.

The task force said there is no complete proof, but substantial reason to believe, that once released the fluorocarbons work their way up to the stratosphere and break down there to release chlorine atoms.

The stratosphere is laced with ozone, a three-atom form of oxygen which is rare among the two-atom oxygen of the lower atmosphere.

The task force said chlorine liberated by fluorocarbons in the stratosphere may break down ozone. A reduction of ozone may let more ultraviolet radiation through and the increased radiation may increase skin cancers throughout the world.

Claims Evers Diverted Funds

By JAMES SAGGUS
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A federal investigator says he thinks Fayette Mayor Charles Evers diverted funds donated to help the town to his own savings account.

Timmie G. Millis, whose Internal Revenue Serve probe resulted in a grand jury indictment against Evers, testified Wednesday in the third day of Evers' trial in U.S. District Court.

The black leader is charged with evading $52,593 in federal income taxes on earnings totaling $179,556 in 1968-1970. The government contends Evers reported net earnings of $20,220 and paid only $3,644 in taxes during the period.

Under cross-examination by Evers' attorney, Michael Fawer, Millis said the mayor had deposited money from the Fayette Emergency Fund at the State Mutual Federal Savings and Loan in Jackson and in 1969 opened a $19,000 account in Chicago.

Fawer triedto press Millis to say that there were no expenditures from the Fayette Emergency Fund which had not been explained in audits, but Millis insisted that he could not make such a statement.

The fund was set up after Evers' election as mayor of Fayette, a southwestern Mississippi town of 1,700, in 1969. He appeared on national television appealing for funds to help the town, saying the previous administration had spent nearly all city funds. More than $100,000 was raised.

Millis said $19,420 of this was deposited in the Jackson account.

Millis said that Evers had told him the money deposited in Chicago was "money he earned in Chicago before coming to Mississippi. The mayor told me he had not always trusted banks."

Governors Unsure What It's About

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The nation's governors, like the rest of the American people, might do something about the energy crisis if they knew for sure what it was all about.

At the National Governors Conference this week, governors from both parties questioned the energy information put out by Washington and by the energy-producing companies.

"I keep thinking that someone, somewhere, is going to come out with the true facts," Gov. Robert Ray, R-Iowa, the new conference president, said after the closing session Wednesday.

The governors spent three days debating energy issues, but they failed to take any firm new stand.

"How can we make decisions if we can't get at the truth?" asked Gov. Marvin Mandel, D-Md.

Oil state governors kept saying all week that the answer to the nation's energy problems is to take the leash off private industry and it can come up with all the energy the nation needs.

The governors from states where consumers are hardest hit didn't buy that solution, but they couldn't get very far with counter proposals.

A clear majority of the governors went on record as opposed to the congressional and White House plans to conserve energy by raising prices, but the proposed restlution failed to get the necessary two-thirds majority. The vote was 21 to 12.

"I think the American people are tired of being told that if they just pay enough, we can have the supply," Ray said.

Many Democratic governors at the meeting seemed willing enough to criticize their fellow Democrats in Congress for supporting higher fuel prices, but they couldn't convince the oil state governors.

Republicans denied they were swayed by any White House lobbying for price hikes, but they blocked any official criticism of President Ford's energy program.

The energy policy statement which the governors passed Wednesday was mostly warmed-over hash. It reiterated the conference's expressed preference for the conservation approach but did not put much oomph behind it.

The governors rejected, 27 to 11, a resolution proposed by Gov. Edwin Edwards, D-La., calling for all-out production and use of oil, gas and coal without price or environmental controls.

Three Wrecks

An estimated $2,100 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 8:15 p.m. mishap on Deck Street, 100 feet East of the Pitt Street intersection involving a car driven by Retha Hines Taylor of 1811 Norcott Cir.

Police said the Taylor car collided with a fence, chair and porch of a house at 207B Deck St., resulting in an estimated $600 damage to the car and $300 damage to the fence, chair and porch.

Mrs. Taylor was charged with exceeding a safe speed following investigation of the collision.

No charges were reported following investigation of a 4:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets involving cars operated by Kenneth Ray Bradbury of 106 Avon La. and Daniel Roland Harris Jr. of 206 South Meade St.

Officers estaimted damage at $350 to the Bradbury car and $450 to the Harris vehicle.

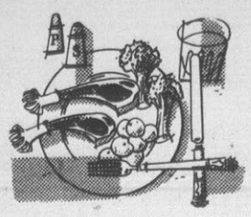

Cars driven by Arvin Lee Williams of Ayden and James Leo McCermott of Ayden collided about 8:50 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Streets, police reported.

Investigators, who made no charges, estimated damage at $250 to the Williams car and $150 to the McDermott auto.

School Board Role Changed Over Years

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Things change a lot in education in the course of six decades, and nothing tells the story of change better than comparison of old records with those of today.

In the case of the Greenville City School system, a peusual of official minutes of board meetings in the summer of 1915 is revealing in many ways. For one thing, the minutes are brief, usually with only one or possibly two or three items of business noted by the secretary at that time, Hoy Taylor. Today, the minutes of the average monthly board meetings run into five, six or seven typed single-space pages.

"You have to remember, however," Supt. of City Schools Glenn Cox noted, "that back in those days the school board was primarily an administrative group taking action to pay the bills. Policy, curriculum and all the things the school board today is concerned about was then taken care of by teachers and principals."

Two summer 1915 school board meetings are good examples of the brevity of school board meetings and also serve to show the tremendous contrast of teacher's salaries then and now.

—June 24, 1915

"The board met in the office of the superintendent at 8:30 p.m. Present F.C. Harding, G.E. Harris, J.R. Moye, T.M. Hooker, W.B. Wilson.

"On motion of G.E. Harris, the salaries of Misses Maude Upchurch and Audrey McLeod were fixed at $72.50 a month and the salary of Miss Delba M. Austin was made at $65.00.

Hoy Taylor, Secretary

Just a little over two weeks later in the summer of 1915, the board met again, and once more the sole agenda item — if the official records reflect all that was discussed — is on the salaries for teachers.

—"July 9, 1915

"The following teachers have accepted the work offered them at the salaries fixed by the Board: E.S. Peel, Audrey McLeod, Maude Upchurch, Helen Hilliard, Norma Burwell, Inez Taylor, Elizabeth Gray, Delba M. Austin. Other former teachers elected have signified their intention not to accept.

"Tentative agreements have been made by the superintendent with the following: Miss Alice Howerson at $50, Miss Mamie Griffin at $55 and Miss Sara Willis at $62.50. Arrangement has been made with Miss Mary Whitaker to teach music at 65.00.

Hoy Taylor, Secretary"

It is not altogether clear, based on the entry "Other former teachers elected have signified their intention not to accept," whether those teachers decided not to accept the salaries offered or whether their decision was one not to teach during the 1914-1915 school year.

Today, the selection of several hundred teachers for the Greenville City School system is a rather elaborate process, one that includes a final evaluation of qualifications by the members of the school board.

Flea Market Is Planned

Plans for the fall flea market were discussed at the meeting of the Greenville Collectors Club Tuesday night at the home of Mickey and Martha Elmore.

An antique flax spinning wheel was shown by Elmore followed by a discussion on digging for Civil War objects. Ms. Elmore played Civil War songs on a pump organ for the program.

Urge Some Warning

DETROIT (AP) — Auto makers are being urged to equip new cars with a sensor which will warn motorists when catalytic converters overheat and become a potential fire hazard.

Eric Stork, who heads the Environmental Protection Agency's auto pollution control division, Tuesday told the Automotive Electronics Conference and Exposition that converters can "get hot enough to ignite combustible materials with which they come into contact.

"One of the most important things that can be done is to give the motorist warning," he said.

Grass and forest fires reportedly have been caused by overheated converter systems, Stork said.

"It's not a tough thing to install an overheating sensor of some kind," he said.

The warning devices already are installed on some foreign cars using converters, which are used to cut pollution by passing exhaust gases over platinum pellets.

LAST STRAW

NEW YORK (UPI) — The raffia covering on bottles of a popular brand of Italian chianti is a victim of inflation.

The export director of the company said high prices for raw material, labor problems and devaluation of the lira created a 600 per cent price increase in five years, and consequently, discontinuance of the wrappers.

The handmade wrappings traditionally were a cottage industry product.

Hayden's Theme Now Is Common Sense

By SUSAN SWARD
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Tom Hayden, a radical student leader in the 1960s, has a new slogan: 1960s radicalism has become 1970s common sense.

Now 35 years old, Hayden says he will run against incumbent John Tunney in the 1976 Democratic primary race for the U.S. Senate.

In 1969, Hayden was a defendant in the Chicago Seven trial and was acquitted of conspiracy and contempt charges. Until the Vietnam war ended, Hayden fought continued U.S. war aid to Indochina.

In 1973, he married actress Jane Fonda, an antiwar activist.

They settled down in a rambling, two-story frame house near the beach at Santa Monica, and Hayden worked as a freelance writer when he wasn't doing antiwar work.

Now the war is over, and Hayden wants to be a member of the U.S. Senate.

"You know, it's not just because the war is over," Hayden joked at a cocktail party a few hours before his recent announcement that he would run against Tunney next June.

At the party, Hayden wore a jacket and tie. His bushy brown hair was collar-length. His wife sat near him, listening to him speak.

The cocktail party in a book-lined Sacramento living room was a long way from the '60s when Hayden helped found the Students for a Democratic Society—SDS—at the University of Michigan.

Hayden explained his evolution the next day at a news conference.

"The radicalism of the '60s is fast becoming the common sense of the '70s," said Hayden.

Hayden says that it won't be easy to bring around some voters who look on him as a dangerous kook. But Hayden, son of a Detroit accountant for Chrysler, takes the long view.

"Walter Reuther, the late president of the United Auto Workers, got banged on the head and was considered a violent agitator in the '30s. Anybody trying to do something has a label, and if you don't have a label, it means you haven't done anything in the last 10 years," Hayden said.

He also knows people most readily associate him with the Chicago Seven trial and his wife.

"I don't regard that as a bad thing. The plus is there are an awful lot of people who supported the peace movement and who want a serious candidate and not some polite, well-scrubbed person who has never been in trouble."

Scientists Nix Plants

RALEIGH (AP) — Eighty-three scientists and engineers at North Carolina State University have taken a position against continued expansion of nuclear power.

They signed a statement saying they do not think the safety of nuclear power has been adequately proven. The statement encourages conservation as an alternative.

The faculty members are from 21 different academic departments. They took the position as individuals and not as representatives of N.C. State.

"Satisfactory solution to the problems of nuclear plant safety, safe-guarding of nuclear materials, safe transportation of nuclear materials and storage of nuclear wastes have not been clearly demonstrated," the statement said.

Yorktown To Arrive

CHARLESTON (AP)—The USS Yorktown is expected at Charleston Saturday instead of Sunday, the Patriots Point naval museum said today. The decommissioned World War II carrier is to become a permanent attraction at the facility.

She is being towed down the East Coast by a tug that is now making 6.2 knots, the authority said. It added that depending on the weather, the Yorktown will arrive in Charleston harbor 24 hours ahead of schedule.

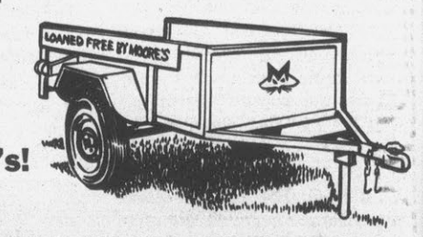

Its location as of 9 a.m. was given as 70 miles west of Albemare Sound, N.C., and 90 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras.

Baseball Sounds Nicer In Italian, Joe Says

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If you hit into a double play in Italy, you're booed, jeered at and otherwise defamed for causing "la doppia eliminazione."

Still, the phrase "sounds so nice you don't mind going back to the minors," reports Joe Garagiola, who last month surveyed baseball, Italian-style, for his Monday night baseball warmup show on NBC-TV.

His findings, to be aired June 23 and 30, concern the 11-team Italian Federation of Baseball and the way the old ball bounces in places like Parma, Bologna, Milan and Nettuno.

Italy's brand of baseball, he says, is comparable to what we'd expect from a good college team here. But this is partly because baseball still is young in Italy and it's not even played in high school.

Another reason, he adds, is that the Italian teams, who do battle just on Friday nights and weekends, aren't even paid, save for two foreigners—usually Americans—each team is allowed to field.

"They play for the fun of it," Garagiola says. The teams all have sponsors — Nettuno, for example, is backed by an aperitif maker — and most wear the sponsor's name on their shirts.

He says the foreigners double as instructors, since such are few and far between in Italy, and the league requires that each team field four players under age 19 at least once a week.

This is because there's no farm system as we know it, and the federation wants to give young hopefuls a gradual entry into big-league play.

Garagiola, who inspected many parks in his eight years as a catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals and three other teams, says all the Italian parks he saw are well-built and none have artifical grass.

"At Nettuno, they got built-in bad hops," he laughed. "You field there, you can field anywhere."

Nettuno also features the league's wildest fans, he says. Pete Rose would feel right at home there "because it seems almost everyone walks in the park with something to make noise with.

"They carry horns, bells and one guy's got an automobile horn hooked up to a megaphone and he blows a whistle during the whole game.

"They also bring in these mannequins and if a visiting team does something they rip an arm off and wave it and shout, 'This is what I'll do to you.' And they sometimes throw rocks."

No beer or hot dogs are available in the stands, only pizza, ice cream and wine. And the vendors don't shout. They're quite dignified.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

One of the fascinations of duplicate bridge is that the same hand is played many times, which gives you the opportunity to study the technique of a variety of players. We found this interesting hand in a recent tournament and took the opportunity to follow it from table to table.

At most tables the contract was four hearts, reached in on an auction such as shown above. Almost invariably, the opening lead was the king of diamonds won by the ace. After cashing the ace of spades, most declarers led the king of hearts, and few Wests could resist the temptation of grabbing the ace. Now, however, declarer could make the contract with careful play. He could force an entry to dummy by leading a low trump toward the eight-six, conceding a second trump trick, and the best the defenders could do was to take two trump tricks and a diamond, for declarer was able to discard his club losers on dummy's spades.

A few Wests managed to defeat the contract. They held up the ace of hearts one round, won the second heart with the ace, cashed the queen of diamonds and exited with the nine of hearts. Cut off from dummy, declarer could not avoid losing three club tricks and went down two tricks.

One declarer found a way to make the contract with no help from the defense. He won the ace of diamonds, cashed the ace of spades and exited with the jack of diamonds. This simple stratagem had the effect of endplaying West at trick three. In fact, had West exited with any suit but a club, declarer would have actually made an overtrick. On the club return, however, West was able to ruff the third round of the suit with the nine of hearts, thus holding South to ten tricks.

It is perhaps one of the flaws of duplicate that the only player who found the correct line in four hearts received no greater reward than the players who were given their contract on inaccurate defense—other than a feeling of satisfaction for a hand well played.

Satire Key To Colonial Music

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "If I've gotten an over-all impression of the music of the colonial period," Gillian Anderson said, "it is that satire was extremely important."

Ms. Anderson is a 31-year-old Washington musicologist who has done perhaps more research than any other person on the music of 18th century America.

With the aid of a $20,000, two-year grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, she compiled a 1,000-page manuscript listing 1,455 lyrics of all the political and patriotic songs published in colonial newspapers in the period 1773-1783.

"These lyrics have usually been treated as literature," she said in an interview. "Often the satire is in the music, so if you study just the lyrics you miss the musical joke.

"It has been a fantastic experience, which most scholars don't experience — the ability to hear it performed, not just studied."

So that she and others could hear the music as well as the lyrics, Ms. Anderson organized the Colonial Singers and Players several years ago. It is comprised of 20 amateurs and 10 professionals who have appeared at the White House, the Kennedy Center, the National Archives, the National Portrait Gallery and elsewhere.

Some of the songs of the American Revolution which she has unearthed tend to be x-rated, but others are merely strongly worded. One that was sung in Chester, Pa., in July 1774 to the tune of "Hearts of Oak" goes like this:

"Come join hand in hand all ye true, loyal souls,

"'Tis Liberty calls let's fill up our bowls,

"We'll toast all the lovers of Freedom's good cause; "America's sons will support all our laws:

"Our firelocks are good; let fair Freedom ne'er yield;

"We're always ready,

"Steady, boys, steady,

"By Jove we'll be free, or we'll die in the field."

A Troy, N.Y., song of the same era, sung to the tune of "The Lilies of France and the Fair English Rose," went this way:

"They've plundered our houses, attempted our lives.

"Drove off from their homes our children and wives;

"Such plundering miscreants no mercy can crave,

"Such plundering miscreants no mercy can crave,

"Such murdering villains no mercy shall have.

"Then draw all your swords, and constantly sing,

"Success to our Troop, our Country and King."

After the Revolution succeeded, many native composers wrote works in tribute to George Washington. An early version of "The Yankey's Return from Camp," which has survived as "Yankee Doodle," had this as one of its stanzas:

"And there was a Captain Washington,

"And gentlefolks about him,

"They say he's grown so ternal proud,

"He will not ride without 'em."

This was the original version of the song. Ms. Anderson says there were at least five variations of the music, and innumerable lyrics, some of which were written after the surrender of the British at Yorktown.

Ms. Anderson's study covers both secular and sacred music of colonial America in the 18th century — dance, secular, popular, stage, religious, military and others.

She said that music of the period tended to be highly localized, both as to geography and church denomination. While the Moravians were highly skilled in religious music, for example, they did not have much influence in other fields, she said.

The dissident religions, which later became the Presbyterians and the Congregationalists, did much to advance musical culture, she said, but perhaps the French Roman Catholic missionaries were premier, teaching sophisticated music to the Indians.

Ms. Anderson is a bit less entranced by the music itself.

"It has a very sweet sound; an awful lot of it has a very sweet sound," she said. "English music of the period, even Handel, used a lot of thirds and sixths. That is a generalization that could be knocked down.

"But when I've been practicing or performing it for a long period, it gets to be cloying, and I just want to hear some noise like the sound of a dentist's drill, or some dissonance."

Vietnamese Sponsored By American Friend

By PEGGY LUEDTKE
Asheville Times Writer
Written for The AP

ASHEVILLE (AP)—On the immigration records, Rodney Beauchamp is listed as Chung To Ha's sponsor.

Actually, Beauchamp and Chung, a Vietnamese refugee now living in Asheville, are old buddies.

They first met in Da Nang in 1967 while Beauchamp was in the Marine Corps and Chung was a liaison coordinator with his unit.

They were close friends then, making patrols together and working on special projects for the Vietnamese. They parted in 1969, but kept up correspondence.

When the Communists began to move into Saigon, Chung was one of the first South Vietnamese evacuated. As an employe of the American embassy, his life was considered to be in danger.

On April 10 he was airlifted to Clark Air Base in the Philippines, bringing with him only what he could carry in a small handbag. There, he contacted Beauchamp, who has retired from the Marine Corps and now is area director for an accounting firm in Asheville.

Chung has become somewhat of a novelty in Asheville. On his second day, the youngest of the three Beauchamp children took him to school for "show and tell." He has talked to several school groups and at club meetings.

Chung's main concern now is to become self-sufficient in his new home.

"He's just that kind of a person," Beauchamp said. "He will be an asset to this country. With his education and respect of his fellowmen, he will never be a burden."

Chung speaks two dialects of Chinese as well as Vietnamese, French and English. Born in a Chinese community in Vietnam, he was educated during a period when the French had control of the country.

He was nearing completion of his work on a bachelor's degree in economics and business when he left Saigon.

Chung said his first move will be to return to school.

TAPED INTERVIEWS GIVEN TO LIBRARY

NEW YORK (AP) — Author and critic John Gruen has given 86 taped interviews with important dance figures to the New York Public Library's Dance Collection for its oral history archive.

The archive now consists of some 1,000 interviews. It was begun in 1974 with a $15,000 grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

Moscow Embassies Are Latest Rumor Factories

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — "What's the latest on Brezhnev's health?" "What's this about Kissinger coming to Moscow?"

The questions, speculation and rumors circulated around the crowded embassy ballroom faster than the drinks and canapes.

Because non-Soviet residents are so starved for information about this country, they join the caviar-and-canape circuit to try to become informed more than to be wined and dined.

That's not surprising for another reason. Moscow's social scene is not noted for its dazzling parties, gourmet food and scintillating repartee, as in the case of Paris or Washington.

"You meet the same people, drink the same whiskey, eat the same food everywhere," sighed a diplomat's wife. "I find the conversations incredibly boring because there's nothing to talk about. It's grim beyond belief."

Earlier this year, the hottest topic of conversation was the state of Leonid I Brezhnev's health. Black-tie dinners, lunches and cocktail parties buzzed with the latest rumors — and often gave birth to new ones.

Foreign news correspondents often are invited to diplomatic parties because they are regarded as good sources of information.

"Compared to the time and effort you have to put into it, the amount of information you get on the social circuit is just not that useful," said one diplomat.

But others disagree, maintaining that they learn a great deal from exchanging ideas with other diplomats and Soviet officials.

"The Soviets are much more forthcoming at these affairs than they used to be. There's a far more relaxed atmosphere," said one veteran diplomat. "They will say very little on such subjects as the health of Brezhnev, but they will — and do — express their opinions about international developments."

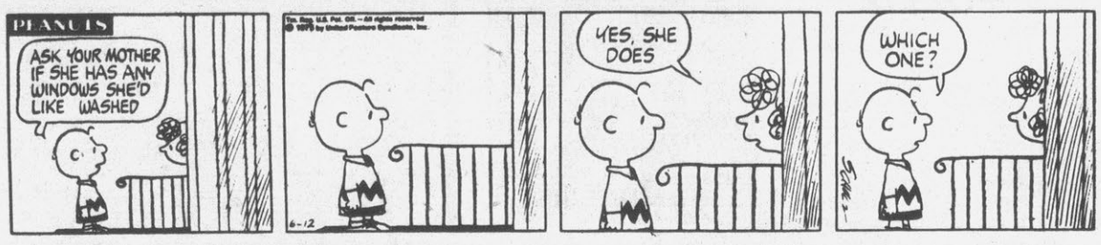

According to experienced diplomats, middle-level Soviet officials are breaking bread with foreigners more than ever before. But that's not true of the top leaders.

Unlike Nikita S. Khrushchev, who loved to come to diplomatic soirees and usually took half the Politburo with him, Brezhnev and his colleagues stay away.

When the current Kremlin leadership entertains, it gathers in one corner of the room, while the guests are kept as far away as possible.

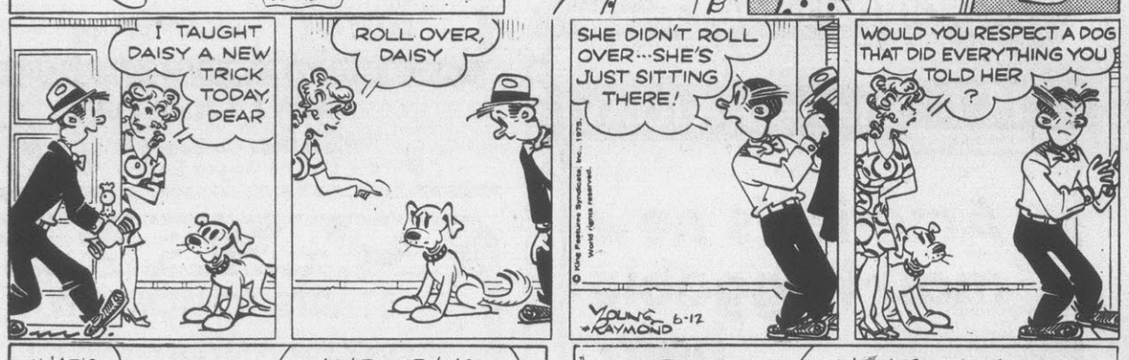

But despite the communication disadvantages, the Kremlin bashes usually have better food than other Soviet functions. The recent reception in honor of the 30th anniversary of the defeat of the Nazis, for example, featured crab, caviar, bananas and pineapples — delicacies not found in ordinary Soviet food stores.

Ice-Skating For Funds

A 24-hour ice skating marathon to be held June 20-21, will begin at 6:30 p. m. Friday June 20. It is sponsored by the Ice House of Greenville to raise Easter Seal funds for crippled children and adults in Pitt County.

Sponsor forms must be picked up at the Ice House and returned there by June 17. To qualify for prizes, contestants must have at least five sponsors. There will be a $2 entry fee for all skaters and a 50-cent charge for onlookers.

The contest will last throughout the night, and prizes will be awarded for: the youngest skater, the oldest skater, the skater raising the most money, and the skater with the most hours.

The proceeds will go to the Easter Seal Society to provide services such as wheelchairs; braces; physical, speech and occupational therapy; summer camping; and transportation for physically handicapped persons.

Receives LR Grant

HICKORY—David Berbert of Greenville has been awarded an honors commendation scholarship to attend Lenoir Rhyne College in Hickory.

Lenoir Rhyne's honors commendation scholarships are awarded to entering freshmen with outstanding high school records.

In addition to financial assistance, the honors commendation selection allows students to participate in Lenoir Rhyne's general honors program. This program consists of special sections of core curriculum courses, each limited to small numbers of select students.

As a student at J.H. Rose High School, David was a member of the chess team and was also a candidate for a National Merit Scholarship Corporation, special scholarship.

Berbert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Berbert of Windsor Rd., Greenville.

Named To Dean's List

LOUISBURG—Harry Mills Wilson was named to the Dean's List at Louisburg College for the Spring Semester. Of all the students named to the Dean's List, he held the highest average possible—a 400 or all A's—while carrying a full academic load. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wilson of Greenville. Wilson won also the recipient of the Physics Award held at the annual Awards Day.

Other students from the Greenville area named to the Dean's List and receiving academic honors by attaining an average of B or better were Charles Painter Cullop Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Cullop Sr. and Edgar Wayland Denton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar A. Denton of Greenville.

Taking Two Weeks Drill

Members of the 694th Maintenance Co. of Greenville are at Ft. Bragg for the N.C. National Guard's annual two weeks summer training.

The area Guardsmen are working with units of the regular Army during the training phase.

Village Only Spends What It Can Take In

CLYMAN, Wis. (AP) — "If we haven't got it, we don't spend it."

That's the motto, expressed by deputy village clerk Mildred Gahlman, of this village of 320 residents.

Clyman has not followed the trend of big cities toward deficit spending, a trend that has brought New York, the nation's largest city, to the brink of bankruptcy.

Erna Klatt earns $575 a year as village president, supplementing her income from working at a canning and bottling firm that employs about half the town's workforce.

She believes in a no-frills budget and refuses to spend one penny more than the treasury has on hand. But that's not to say Clyman officials aren't ready for trouble.

For instance, Mrs. Klatt usually likes to budget about $3,000 annually for welfare cases.

"You never know when we're going to have one," she says. "This year it looks like we may have one. We're not sure yet."

In New York City nearly one person in eight is on welfare.

The people in Clyman aren't rich, but nearly everyone owns a home. Counting on her fingers, Mrs. Klatt tallies four families who rent.

By contrast, nearly everyone rents in Manhattan, one of New York's five boroughs. In fact, there are only 40,000 private houses in Manhattan, with its population of 1.5 million.

Clyman has one constable; New York has 31,000 police officers.

Perhaps the biggest difference is money. New York's annual budget is $11.9 billion; debt is currently an estimated $6.8 billion.

Clyman is operating on a $126,669.52 budget this year, down from $175,537.08 in 1974. To hold down taxes despite inflation, village officials simply decided to cut the budget by nearly 30 per cent.

The village provides all the basics for streets, sewers, trash removal and water, but there are few frills.

"We haven't got any parks or anything like that," Mrs. Gahlman says. "These are very tax-conscious people here, and they all know what their taxes would be if we went out and spent a lot of money."

And, Mrs. Klatt says, there are just naturally fewer expensive problems in a small town.

"Dusty roads, loose dogs, noisy cars — these are the main problems right now," she says. "We don't expect many more."

Few Recognized Declaration

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Peoples Bicentennial Commission said today it polled 2,300 federal employes and found that 68 per cent of them refused to endorse a key section of the Declaration of Independence.

The commission said it sent out 10 pollsters who asked government employes, without saying that the words came from the Declaration of Independence, whether they would endorse the paragraph which begins:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness...."

The commission said its pollsters found that:

—47 per cent of those surveyed didn't recognize the Declaration.

—32 per cent of those polled agreed to sign the passage.

—68 per cent of those surveyed declined to sign the passage.

—Of those who agreed to sign, 16.5 per cent recognized it as part of the Declaration of Independence, but 83.5 per cent did not.

—Of those who refused to sign, 83 per cent recognized it as part of the Declaration and 17 per cent did not.

The Peoples Bicentennial Commission is a private group which opposes what it calls federal efforts to commercialize the observance of the nation's 200th anniversary. It arranged to announce the results of its poll on the Capitol steps today.

Similar surveys have been conducted at other places in other times among random citizens, but so far as is known this is the first to relate specifically to federal employes.

The commission quoted these remarks from those who refused to sign:

"Looks like trash. Commie stuff. So that's what our Founding Fathers were up to. Boy, I tell you that Jefferson erotica.... What's this? An anti-CIA thing?.... I can't sign because I'm military, I can't sign anything.... Sounds very communist. You must be a subversive.... I've read this many times and it doesn't make sense. I'm a law student.... They'd hang me if I signed that.... Yes, I recognize it. It's from the Communist Manifesto. I read it in a history book."

City-County Study On Sale

"The updated study of Greenville and Pitt County is now ready for sale," announced Pat Marshall of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters.

Ms. Marshall, who has directed the revision of the original study published by the LWV in 1972, said "The city-county study includes information on government and finance, public protection, the administration of justice, health and social services, transportation, recreation, culture, planning and zoning, education, and voting."

"Many changes have occurred since the original study was published," said Ms. Marshall. "As a matter of fact, soon after the 1975 edition went to press, the Board of Elections announced that precincts No. 2 and No. 8 have been merged and designated as precinct No. 8, with the Willis Building as polling place."

Complimentary copies of the study are being distributed to the city and county school libraries, the Greenville public libraries, Joyner Library, and governmental officials.

Copies of the study are available for sale at $2 a copy for 1-14 copies; $1.75 a copy for 15-34; and $1.50 a copy for 35 or more. To order, write the LWV of Greenville-Pitt County at P.O. Box 1551, Greenville, N.C. 27834. For information call Kay Davis at 756-6966.

This study was financed by tax-deductible contributions from local business and professional people, as well as by funds raised by the LWV of Greenville-Pitt County. Funds derived from the sale of the 1975 city-county study will be used in the publication of the next edition.

Pearl Buck's Will Invalid

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The Vermont Supreme Court has upheld a lower court decision to invalidate Nobel Prize-winning author Pearl S. Buck's last will. The decision means her estate will go to her seven children.

The court unanimously agreed Tuesday to let stand a Rutland County Superior Court ruling that said Miss Buck's last will and testament was invalid. Miss Buck died in Danby, Vt. on March 6, 1973, at the age of 80, leaving most of her assets to her business manager, Theodore Harris.

In her will, Miss Buck's foreign royalties and property were deeded to Creativity Inc., directed by Harris. The Pearl S. Buck 1971 Foundation, a trust fund set up for her children, was the recipient of her domestic royalties under the provisions of the will.

However, the domestic royalties were transferred to Creativity Inc. to pay off a $110,000 bank loan.

Miss Buck's son, Edgar S. Walsh, a New York City stockbroker, contested the will. Walsh contended that Harris used undue influence with Miss Buck when the will was drafted, playing on Miss Buck's romantic tendencies to get the property transferred to him.

The justices dismissed an appeal of the lower court decision by William and Betsy Drake, the executors of the author's estate, on the ground they did not have any claims on the assets of the estate.

Miss Buck won the Pulitzer Prize in 1932 for her novel, "The Good Earth." She was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1938.

Special Woman

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Tall, strong, athletic women wanted. Not for a basketball team, but for director Federico Fellini's latest movie on the life and loves of Giacomo Casanova, the 18th Century Venetian Romeo.

There are few women in Italy, however, who can meet Fellini's requirements. Not even most of the girls in the Italian basketball championships could fit the bill.

Fellini said in an announcement published in several Italian newspapers he wants "a tall woman, even more than two meters, with a powerful back, muscular arms, the body of a wrestler, but with a good-looking face."

The woman will play the role of Marcolina, a woman who fights in the arena.
