New York Bank Bombed; Weathermen Claim Credit

NEW YORK (AP) — A thunderous explosion blasted windows from the Puerto Rican-based Banco de Ponce early today in mid-Manhattan's Rockefeller Center. A short time later, a person claiming to represent the Weather Underground claimed the group had touched off the blast in support of "the Puerto Rican cement workers."

The only injury reported was suffered by an unidentified driver of a bakery truck who was passing through the area at the time. Flying glass cut him on an arm.

The explosive device, which police said was apparently a medium sized bomb, went off at 4:43 a.m. EDT in a revolving door of the bank at 10 Rockefeller Plaza. The bank is on the corner across from the sunken plaza area containing fountains and the gilded statue of Prometheus.

Windows in the area around the bank were shattered, littering 49th Street with glass. Windows as high as the sixth floor of the RCA building across from the bank were broken.

"It shook the whole floor" of 30 Rockefeller Plaza, said Ed Kane, a Rockefeller Center worker who was on the second floor of the RCA building, headquarters of the National Broadcasting Co.

A spokesman for NBC said the station's broadcasting was not interrupted by the blast.

A female caller to The Associated Press said the explosion was set in support of Puerto Rican cement workers.

About 450 cement workers are on strike in the city of Ponce on Puerto Rico's southern coast. There have been six incidents of violence, including three bombings, since the strike began Jan. 31 against Ponce Cement, the largest cement producer on the Caribbean island.

Negotiations have stalled over no-strike clauses and the length of the contract.

In Puerto Rico, meanwhile, four bomb blasts shook a San Juan suburb today in a terrorist attack against a telephone lines installation company, police said.

The explosions partially destroyed four panel trucks of the Church and Tower Corp., a firm subcontracted by the struck Puerto Rico telephone authority.

No injuries were reported in today's blasts.

It was the seventh time in less than five years that someone claiming to represent the Weather Underground had taken responsibility for a bomb explosion.

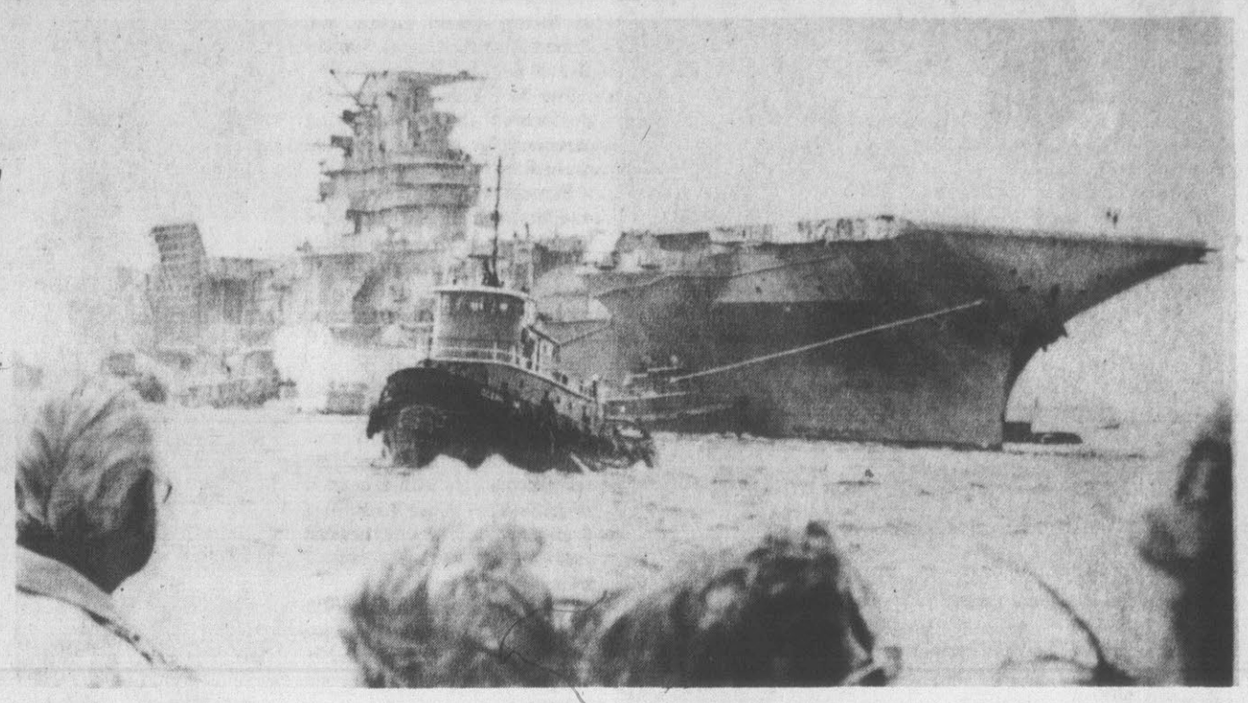

The Weather Underground is an offshoot of Students for a Democratic Society, a campus protest group of the 1960s.

The bank damaged in today's blast was hit by an explosion last April 3. A Puerto Rican nationalist group, the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberation National Puertorriquena (FALN), or Armed Forces of Puerto Rican National Liberation, claimed responsibility for the April blast.

The FALN has claimed responsibility for a series of explosions, including one which killed four persons and injured 53 during the lunch hour at Fraunces Tavern in the Wall Street area January 24. The most recent explosion was last Saturday when three persons suffered minor injuries in two Chicago blasts.

The FBI has said the Weather Underground consists of 20 to 30 persons. Their leader is believed to be Bernardine Dohrn, who is on the FBI's 10 most-wanted list. She has been a fugitive since 1970.

The group was once known as "Weatherman," a name taken from the 1965 Bob Dylan song "Subterranean Homesick Blues." One line in the song was: "You don't need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows."

Young Mother Third Arab Terrorist Victim

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A 23-year-old Israeli housewife died today of wounds received in an Arab guerrilla attack that also took the lives of her husband and brother and wounded her seven-month-old son and her father.

Before she died, the petite brunette told her doctors that her infant son survived only "because I persuaded the terrorists not to shoot him." The baby was wounded by grenade fragments.

Israeli troops killed the four Arab guerrillas who seized the family's farmhouse early Sunday in the village of Kfar Yuval, near the Lebanese borders.

The Israeli military command retaliated with air strikes against the village of Kfar Chuba, "a base for terrorist infiltrators" in southern Lebanon, and Israeli and Arab forces dueled across the frontier with rockets and artillery until dawn today.

The Lebanese Defense Ministry said Israeli air strikes and artillery shelling killed one woman and wounded three other persons. WAFA, the Palestinian news agency, said two successive Israeli air raids "covered the entire Arkoub area" of southern Lebanon, an area with a large population of Palestinian guerrillas. It claimed the guerrillas shot down one Israeli Phantom.

The Israeli command said guerrillas in Lebanon fired Katyusha rockets in a rare daylight attack on the Mediterranean resort area near Nahariya, cutting two Israelis with shrapnel. It said the shelling continued today, and the target was the border hamlet of Metulla, three miles from Kfar Yuval. The command reported no casualties and said Israeli artillery returned the fire.

A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization said it sponsored the raid on Kfar Yuval "because it is our right to fight for our rights." He added that such raids had the support of "the whole world ... because the U.N. General Assembly has approved the right of the Palestinians to pursue their struggle with all means to regain their usurped rights."

The Israelis said the attack was made by four guerrillas who slipped across the Lebanese frontier. They were spotted by armed civilians in Kfar Yuval as they climbed over a fence to get into the village of immigrants from India. The villagers opened fire, and the terrorists fired rifles and rocket grenades in all directions as they seized the house of Yaacov Mordechai.

Mordechai's wife, her father and a brother barricaded themselves in one room with the woman's seven-month-old son, but another brother died trying to block the terrorists as they blasted through the door.

Mordechai, an intercity bus driver, heard of the attack on the radio and rushed back to the village as Israeli troops were organizing the rescue operation.

A combat veteran and a reservist, the bus driver joined the assault force and was killed in a hail of bullets and exploding hand grenades. His wife, baby and father-in-law were wounded along with three other Israelis, and all four terrorists were killed.

The Israeli armed forces radio said one of the terrorists was a Palestinian, and the others were an Iraqi, a Moroccan and a Turk. It said they belonged to the Arab Liberation Front, which is affiliated with the PLO.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry said the terrorist assault was intended to disrupt "diplomatic efforts ... to revive the political momentum" toward peace. The statement also condemned the governments that voted at the U.N. General Assembly last November to recognize the PLO, saying this encouraged "murder and violence."

The latest diplomatic effort toward peace continued in New

Commission Outlines When CIA May Legally Spy In This Country

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Rockefeller Commission's report outlined a number of "plainly unlawful" domestic activities by the CIA, it also described a variety of circumstances in which domestic spying would be legal and proper.

For instance, the 300-page report released last week stated that the CIA's 20-year program of mail surveillance violated laws which forbid the opening of letters.

However, the commission also stated that "mail cover operations (examining and copying of envelopes only) are legal when carried out in compliance with postal regulations on a limited and selective basis involving matters of national security." The eight-member panel headed by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller also suggested domestic mail openings might be permitted in time of war.

The commission's views lack the force of law but instead are findings of fact and recommendations about what the CIA should do in the future.

The commission described other circumstances which, in the commission's view, would allow the CIA to utilize such spy techniques as infiltration and surveillance in the United States.

Thus, while the report criticized the agency for infiltrating domestic dissident organizations to determine if the groups were planning any activities against CIA installations, it did not issue a blanket condemnation of such activity.

Instead, it said "the agency should not infiltrate a dissident group for security purposes unless there is a clear danger to agency installations, operations or personnel, and investigative coverage of the threat by the FBI and local law enforcement authorities is inadequate."

The report also leaves the agency broad powers to utilize spy techniques against "persons presently or formerly affiliated with the agency, directly or indirectly."

When investigating such persons for possible violation of agency security rules, "the use of physical surveillance is not unlawful unless it reaches the point of harassment," while electronic eavesdropping is permissible if the agency has "the written approval of the attorney general on the basis of a finding that the national security is involved," the report stated.

The commission suggested that the CIA should not undertake surveillance of persons connected with the agency without first obtaining written approval from the CIA director. Electronic eavesdropping would be better left to the FBI, the commission said.

According to the report, the surveillance of newsmen suspected of receiving classified information is improper under any circumstances, as are domestic breakins, which the commission found 12 instances of.

No Agreement On N.C. Primary

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina General Assembly returned to Raleigh for its final scheduled week today with no agreement in sight on one of the session's major issues—the presidential primary.

The Senate and the House have both passed bills to retain the primary and move it to the third Thursday in March. But they disagree about the ground rules.

The House insists that the primary ballot should include all recognized presidential candidates unless they disclaim any intent to seek the nomination. That would mean a field of at least six candidates.

In the Senate, a supporter of Terry Sanford, Sen. William Staton, D Lee, amended the House bill to provide that only candidates who seek entry on the North Carolina ballot and pledge to wage an active campaign in the state will be on the ballot.

That is the way most Sanford supporters would like to see it, in view of Sanford's desire for a head-to-head rematch with Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

Why, Staton said in a recent interview, should someone who is not interested in North Carolina enough to campaign here be placed on the ballot in hopes of winning a couple of delegates?

In the House, the Staton viewpoint is not acceptable to the leadership. It "contaminates" the primary issue with personalities, Rep. C. Kitchin Josey, D-Halifax, said.

Josey, the House majority leader, said the ballot should give North Carolinians a chance to choose among all recognized candidates.

The deadlock over the primary developed on June 5, when the House refused to accept Staton's amendment. As of Sunday, Speaker James C. Green, D-Bladen, had not appointed conferees to discuss the issue with the Senate.

"You can't handle everything at once. I just haven't gotten around to it," Green said.

Josey said that there had been quiet efforts to reach a compromise without a conference committee during the first few days. They failed. Then, the House leadership became totally embroiled in formulating the new state budget.

Rep. Judson D. DeRamus, D-Forsyth, sponsored the House bill. He tried to ask Green about the situation Friday, he said, but couldn't see him.

The House's leading Sanford supporter, meanwhile, said he wouldn't push for a quick solution. Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, a former law partner of the candidate, said he would be happy to see the primary run under the 1972 rules, which led to a Sanford-Wallace battle.

A vote in the Senate is scheduled for late Tuesday afternoon on whether to send the issue back to New Hampshire for another election, a move supported by the Republican minority

Inside Problems Bother Congress

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and the Senate are attempting to resolve some personnel problems before turning to legislation this week.

In the Senate, the question is what to do about the disputed Senate election in New Hampshire last Nov. 5 where both Republican Louis C. Wyman and Democrat John A. Durkin claim victory.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said over the weekend that he hoped the Senate would complete its work on the New Hampshire election dispute by June 28 when Congress begins its July 4th recess.

In the House, Reps. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., and Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., say a resolution to abolish the embattled intelligence committee may be introduced when the full House takes up Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi's resignation as committee chairman. Some senior House members want to get rid of the panel because they feel it has been taken over by men who are a threat to U.S. intelligence agencies.

"You've got a problem of what seems to me to be cannibalism," said Bolling. "The cannibals, having eaten the king, become king."

Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., a member of the Senate panel probing the CIA, recommended that the House cease its investigation because of the possibility that more secret information would be exposed.

Morgan, referring to what he said was spying by Soviet agents, also asserted that "we know as a fact that they (Soviet agents) are wiretapping the telephones of ... some senators in Washington now."

Nedzi, pressured by five other Democrats on the House committee, resigned in the wake of criticism that he had known about CIA misdeeds for more than a year but did nothing about them.

Nedzi, a Democrat from Michigan, has contended that the misdeeds were history and that he was concerned with current problems.

House members also hope to wind up action on an energy tax bill which was stripped last week of tough provisions against gas-guzzling automobiles and of proposed gasoline tax hikes.

Mansfield said President Ford's tariff on oil imports, plus a price increase that petroleum exporters are expected to impose in September, could raise domestic gasoline prices to about $1 a gallon, unless "something isn't done by the Congress and the President together.

Quota Down 900 Pints

The last Bloodmobile visit of the current fiscal year for Greenville area donors will be held Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Moose Lodge.

Pitt Blood chairman Billy Ross said that the visit tomorrow is sponsored by the Mittie Smith Sunday School class at Immanual Baptist Church.

Ross said that a lot of work has gone into preparation for the visit and he urged donors to get out to the Moose Lodge early in order to avoid late afternoon lines.

The Pitt Blood quota is some 900 pints down going into the last visit, he added, and a successful collection day is needed to help the county's overall quota.

On Wednesday, the Bloodmobile will be at Burroughs Wellcome Co. for a BW employee visit. Plant employees will be able to donate blood from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

BIKE PARTS TO GIVE

I have heard there is man who every year delivers one or more refurbished bicycles to the Department of Social Services and thereby makes some children's Christmases happier. I have a damaged bicycle that I'd like to give this man to use for parts. I bet a lot of others might, also. Is there any way to get the parts to him? Mrs. R.T.

Social Services Director Miss Dorothy Bolton said no one knows this man's name, though he's delivered bicycles to them for many Christmases. He comes and goes very quickly and refuses to give his name.

If this man will contact Hotline and tell us where to ask people to leave the bikes or bike parts, we'll be glad to let the public know. We don't have to know his name either if he wishes to maintain his anonymity. We think he's a really great fellow!

MARRIAGE LAWS

I would like to know something about the marriage laws of North and South Carolina. T.D.

Both men and women 18 or older may be married in each state without parental consent. With parents' consent, males as young as 16 may be married in each state. In North Carolina, females may be married at 16; in South Carolina at 14. Both states have procedures established whereby younger girls may be married if they are pregnant or have given birth.

In South Carolina there is no medical examination required and no waiting period after issuance of license, though a couple must be in the state 24 hours before they apply for a license.

In North Carolina venereal disease, mental incompetence, or tuberculosis may be reasons for refusal to grant a license. There is a 48-hour waiting period before issuance of a license if both are non-N.C. residents, but no waiting period after issuance.

This information was obtained from The 1975 Associated Press Almanac. The information on North Carolina marriage laws was verified by the Pitt County Register of Deeds Office.

FATAL CRASH . . The driver of this motorcycle, Charlie Alfonza Kelly of Raleigh, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital about 1 a.m. Sunday from injuries he received when his vehicle collided head-on with this car on Memorial Drive about 11:50 p.m. Saturday. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

Cyclist Dies After Collision

A 26-year-old Raleigh man died in Pitt Memorial Hospital early Sunday morning after the motorcycle he was driving collided head-on with a car on Memorial Drive, South of the South Village Drive intersection, late Saturday night.

Investigators identified the dead man as Charlie Alfonza Kelly.

Police said the Kelly vehicle was traveling north in the southbound lane of the six-lane roadway and collided head-on with a south-bound car operated by Johnnie Sparkman Dawson of Glendale Ct.

Witnesses were quoted as saying the motorcycle operated by Kelly — traveling at a high rate of speed — switched from the middle lane of the northbound strip to the south-bound roadway at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue.

Other witnesses told police that other south-bound cars prevented both Mrs. Dawson and Kelly from switching lanes to avoid the collision. The Dawson car, police were told, had slowed almost to a stop at the time of the crash.

The fatal crash occurred at 11:50 p.m.

Kelly was rushed to Pitt Memorial Hospital by the Greenville Rescue Squad, where a team of doctors and other attendants worked for an hour in an unsuccessful attempt to save his life.

Investigators, who reported Mrs. Dawson received minor injuries in the crash, estimated damage at $2,500 to the Dawson car and $2,000 to the Kelly motorcycle.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is divorcing his wife (who is very dear to us) to marry the woman with whom he has been having an open affair for the last six months. This situation has caused irreparable damage to our relationship with him. I'm sure we'll never be on completely good terms again.

What concerns me now is how to treat this new woman. At the moment, I feel extremely bitter toward her, but I know that if I don't eventually give her at least token acceptance, we will alienate our son completely. While I don't want that, I feel that by welcoming this new daughter-in-law into our family, I will in effect be condoning the illicit affair and completely ignoring all the pain and anguish it has caused our present daughter-in-law, her parents and us. To me, this would be hypocritical.

If we talked to our minister, a counselor and family. No one has an answer. Do you?

WITHOUT MY NAME

DEAR WITH: Your choice is clear. If you reject your son's new wife, you lose your son. The obvious alternative is to accept her. What your friends and relatives will think is not as important as maintaining at least a cordial relationship with your son and his new wife, since that is what you want. Understandably, it will be less than loving, but give it time. As the French say, "To understand everything is to forgive everything."

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about nudist colonies?

CURIOUS IN COVINGTON

DEAR CURIOUS: If the good Lord had intended for man to walk around naked, he would have been born that way.

DEAR ABBY: Today in the supermarket I was trying to be friendly to a child, and I said, "My, but you're a nice little girl."

The child became angry and said, "I'm not a GIRL—I'm a BOY!" Abby, how was I to know? He had long blond hair practically to his shoulders. Now that little girls are wearing trousers, it is terribly confusing.

Only last week I mistook a little girl for a boy, and you should have heard her mother tell me off!

Abby, when mothers dress both boys and girls in boys' clothing, and let the boys' hair grow long like a girl's, how is one to tell the difference?

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: It's not easy. But for now, you'd better skip complimenting strange kids until unisex clothing and hairstyles fade from fashion.

Unconscious To Be Examined

Rambling In The House
With
SAM D. BUNDY

Beginning this fall, law enforcement officers and jailers will be required to examine semiconscious and unsconscious prisoners to determine if the condition might be caused by diabetes or other disabling illnesses.

"Whenever a law enforcement officer arrests a person who is unconscious, semiconscious, or otherwise apparently suffering from some disabling condition, and who is unable to provide information on the causes of the condition," the law reads, "the officer should make a reasonable effort to determine if the person arrested is wearing a bracelet or necklace containing the Medic Alert Foundation's emergency alert symbol to indicate that the person suffers from diabetes, epilepsy, a cardiac condition, or any other form of illness which would cause a loss of consciousness."

The law provides that if such a symbol is found, "the officer must make a reasonable effort to have appropriate medical care provided."

The law also provides that "willful false representation of the existence" of a disabling condition is punishable. It additionally provides that the person provided medical care "is liable for the reasonable costs of that care."

The law becomes effective October 1, 1975.

Persons between the ages of 40 and 65 must receive equal employment opportunity from state agencies and local political subdivisions, under a bill ratified by the General Assembly

Our statutes now specically say a person seeking a job may not be discriminated against because of his age.

Counties are now authorized to offer rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons damaging or stealing county property. Under a bill ratified by the Assembly, boards of county commissioners are authorized to offer and pay rewards of up to $500.

The Assembly has enlarged membership of the North Carolina Utilities Commission by two members, to seven members. Members are appointed to eight year terms by the governor. However, under the expansion legislation, the Assembly gained the right to confirm commission appointments.

The new law also provides that the commission may sit on panels of three, and three-member panels may make valid and binding decisions. It also requires a separate hearing on electric utility rate increases based solely upon fuel costs.

The Assembly ratified a bill amending the State Employment Security Law to make teachers with contracts to teach the following school year ineligible for unemployment benefits during summer vacation.

The amended law states that secondary school system employees "whall be considered available for work . . . only if the individual does not have a contract to contracts, written, oral, or implied. . ."

Under the ESC statute, persons are eligible for unemployment benefits only if they cannot find work and are available for work.

See you next week.

New Leader Tells Black Muslim Worth; Membership Kept Secret

By FRED GOODALL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The Black Muslims have assets of at least $46 million, the new leader of the separatist sect said as he broke almost a half-century of secrecy about the group's financial worth.

Both the money and the membership of the Nation of Islam, as the Black Muslims are formally known, have been closely guarded secrets since Elijah Muhammad founded the religious sect during the Depression. The membership is still unknown.

Elijah Muhammad died last Feb. 25. His son and successor, Wallace Muhammad, made his first public appearance as the Nation of Islam's supreme minister on Sunday.

In a move aimed at dissolving any doubts about the transition of power from father to son, another powerful Black Muslim leader, Abdul Aleem Farrakin of New York City, told the rally of 20,000 persons:

"We (the Nation of Islam) are continuing the work of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad and are evolving into what he predicted we would."

Wallace Muhammad also told the rally that there was no power struggle within the sect.

Muhammad said the Nation of Islam had reached the stability necessary to make some of its assets known.

He said the group's wealth was a "dream which has become reality."

But he said he wouldn't disclose all of the assets because "there are still some things that you have to keep secret."

He said one success is a multimillion dollar seafood import agreement the Nation of Islam has with several foreign countries. Since the agreement was negotiated 16 months ago, the Nation of Islam has spent about $6.3 million for 26 million pounds of fish and 541,000 cans of sardines which have returned more than $22 million in retail sales, Muhammad said.

Of that $22 million, $7 million was forwarded to the sect's national headquarters in Chicago and the remaining $15 million was distributed among the group's 176 temples throughout the country, he said.

Muhammad also disclosed that the sect's vast real estate holdings include about $14.5 million in Chicago property and about $6.2 million in farmland in several states. He said those figures represent the cash value of the holdings at the time of purchase and do not reflect any increase in value through property improvement programs.

Asks For Pardon

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI has made a plea for reconciliation among Roman Catholics.

During his weekly general audience on Wednesday, the Pope said that if he had offended those defecting or rebelling against the Church he was asking them to pardon him.

"Have we offended them?" the Pope asked. "We want to assure them that this was not our intention and that, anyway, we will be the first to ask them to pardon us."

A crowd of several thousand, including many pilgrims here for the Holy Year, filled St. Peter's Basilica and the Hall of Audiences to hear the Pope.

Receives Grant

Dr. Carolyn H. Humpton, Associate Professor of Science Education, East Carolina University, has received a community service grant of $32,600 from Title I of the Higher Education Act for support of a project to implement outdoor education in six northeastern North Carolina counties.

The project represents one facet of a cooperative effort between the Department of Science Education at ECU, The Alliance for Progress, and the public schools of six North Carolina counties to work together to build a regional environmental education program. The six counties are Bertie, Chowan, Gates, Hertford, Martin and Perquimans. Alliance for Progress, Inc. is an educational consortium of county leadership who have joined forces to attack some of the areas educational and environmental problems.

Objectives of this project are to upgrade the environmental knowledge and skills of the K-6 teachers in the six-county area and to engage them in integrating outdoor education into the existing curriculum.

Supports Med School

ASHEVILLE—The Old North State Medical Society held it's 80th annual session here last week, and outgoing president Dr. Charles Johnson of Durham called attention to the "unwavering support" by the group to the East Carolina University Medical School project.

In addition to expressing support for the ECU medical facility, the physician urged continued efforts to get black medical professional faculty and advisors at the University of North Carolina medical school at Chapel Hill, and called for a leagal attack on state laws which for the past 88 years have prevented black physicians from serving on State Boards.

Dr. Andrew A. Best of Greenville attended the convention.

Jenkins Speaks In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE—The Wayside Community Organization—a nonpartisan citizens group in Charlotte-Mecklenburg County working toward better medical service for the area—will hear East Carolina University chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins June 22.

Jenkins will be the keynote speaker at the group's first annual convention. He was invited to speak, according to Marvin Smith, chairman of the organization, because of his efforts to secure adequate medical service for Eastern North Carolina through the establishment of a medical school at ECU.

Smith said West Mecklenburg citizens have been waging a campaign since last December to get "decent health care service brought to that part of the county. Most West Mecklenburgers feel that the western half of the county has been badly neglected by local officials in the delivery of health services, and many have now organized to end this situation," according to Smith.

The community organization chairman said the county has been petitioned to provide an emergency ambulance station in West Mecklenburg, as well as a medical facility equippped with an emergency room in the area.

"Many West Mecklenburg residents feel that Dr. Jenkins' efforts to secure improved medical service and doctors for eastern North Carolina closely parallel our own local efforts," Smith explained.

A news release from the Westside Community Organization about Jenkins' speech said the ECU chancellor's visit "is significant because Charlotte newspapers and Mecklenburg State Legislators have waged an intense campaign opposing Dr. Jenkins and the establishment of the ECU Medical School."

The Westside meeting, according to the release, "will demonstrate that large numbers of Mecklenburg residents do not support these newspapers and politicians, but in fact, support and identify with the ECU effort in Eastern North Carolina."

The release continued, "The . . . message to Mecklenburg State politicians will be for them to take care of medical neglects in Mecklenburg before lobbying against constructive efforts in the Eastern part of the State."

Will Fight All Lives

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Symbionese Liberation Army fugitive William Harris has told a friend that he, his wife Emily and Patricia Hearst are not "mad revolutionaries" but intend to fight on for the rest of their lives.

A letter Harris sent to an undisclosed friend last October was excerpted in Sunday's editions of the Los Angeles Times. The friend has shown the letter, postmarked from Boston, only to the Times because he fears it might contain clues that could help authorities capture the Harrises and Miss Hearst, the newspaper said.

The letter said the fugitives were determined to continue their war against "imperialist" America and were in rigorous guerrilla training, restricting even their sexual activities.

"I intend to be free" Harris wrote in the four-page typed letter. "I'll not be free until all exploited and oppressed people are free."

The fugitives were in good spirits and had recovered from the deaths of their SLA comrades. Harris said Six SLA members were killed in a shootout with Los Angeles police last May 17.

Harris told his friend, "Don't let your concern for my life and safety take over work. Pull in support because in the end we are going to win."

Fire Station Site Is Problem

The city has gotten itself into an interesting situation concerning the location for a new fire station on Memorial Drive.

Two houses were purchased at 2405 and 2407 S. Memorial Drive with the idea of using the property for the substation site to replace the old West End Station next to Fullilove School. The city paid $47,000 for the property, received $1,000 for one of the houses and paid $250 to get a garage apartment removed.

Following legal action by residents of the area it was determined that the city did not have the authority to build a fire substation in the residential zone. As it stands now the property is still zoned residential and therefore is worth considerably less than the original purchase price.

The Insurance Services Organization has the say on the general location of the substation and the city's fire insurance rates are involved. In addition the city proposes to construct the building with revenue sharing funds which must be spent within two years, and one year has already passed.

The City Council is considering changing the zoning ordinances so that a municipal building can be built in any zone. This would clear the way for construction of the station on the purchased site, but there would still be a number of angry citizens in the area. On the other hand if the site is abandoned the city will have a potential financial loss on the property.

Councilmen are mulling over the situation now following a public hearing on the zoning ordinance change earlier this month.

Since fire stations and perhaps later police stations and other public buildings will have to be built where they can best serve the public, it is obvious that we have a major deficiency in our zoning laws concerning such facilities. It is regrettable that the deficiency had to be found after the city had moved so far along on this particular project, which is upsetting a number of property owners in the area.

Vote On The Future

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

SAIPAN (AP) — Strategically important land within bomber range of Southeast Asia will become United States territory if residents of the Marianas Islands vote Tuesday to become U.S. citizens.

If at least 55 per cent of the voters in the plebiscite approve, the Marianas will become a U.S. commonwealth, the first new territory acquired by the United States since 1925.

It will be the islanders' first chance to choose their own form of government after 300 years of domination by Spain, Germany, Japan and the United States.

Many observers here say voters will approve the commonwealth covenant, which would give the Marianas a relationship to the United States similar to Puerto Rico's.

But the campaign has been hot, with speeches on local radio and television and meetings even in outlying villages.

"If the United States only wants our islands for military purposes, my strong feeling is that we must raise our price sky high, because our lives are at stake," says Abel Olopai, a leading opponent of the convenant.

Backers of the covenant appeal for the votes of the 5,500 eligible persons with photographs contrasting the backwardness of thatched huts with the promise of prosperity represented by rush-hour traffic on Saipan's two-lane main road.

Under the covenant the United States would pay $19.5 million for a 100-year lease on about 18,000 acres, most of that on Tinian Island, where the military has talked of building a $300 million base. The United States would provide $14 million a year in direct aid for seven years, and the Marianas could participate in some federal grant programs.

Islanders would elect their own governor and legislature to deal with local affairs.

Commonwealth status would separate the 16 Marianas islands from the rest of the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific — 2,100 islands with a total land area smaller than Rhode Island's dotted over three million square miles of ocean. Since 1947, when the United Nations declared it a stategic trusteeship, the United States has governed the territory through a high commissioner appointed by the President.

Many Americans remember the Marianas as the scene of some of the bloodiest fighting of World War II. Wreckage from the battle for Saipan is still strewn along sparkling beaches and across densely overgrown landscape.

Today Saipan, the Trust Territory capital, is the most developed of the territory's islands. There are paved roads, busy shops, a growing Japanese tourist trade. A luxury hotel recently opened and two more are under construction. By the end of summer a new airport is expected to be ready to handle wide-bodied jetliners.

Yet Saipan's telephone book is just 12 pages of large type. A dog can snooze safely on almost any street and many of the 11,000 residents live in run-down shacks.

The 300-mile-long chain of islands are three hours from Japan or the Philippines by jet and within 3,000 miles of all of Southeast Asia.

Except for sun and beaches, there are few natural resources.

Military observers say that Tinian would become vital it

THIS AFTERNOON

Must Watch Spending

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—While signals in North Carolina and across the nation tend to show an easing of the economic recession, the time for rejoicing is not at hand.

And for local governmental units now going into the hard battles of the budgets aimed at the beginning of a new fiscal year July 1, there will likely be some holdover problems created by the recession, even though conditions are easing.

Harlan E. Boyles, deputy treasurer of the state and secretary of the Local Government Commission, thinks city and county governments must be especially alert to ways to hold the line on spending and adjust.

"A well-reasoned budget consistent with the requirements and the ability to pay is of prime importance," Boyles has cautioned county managers and finance officers across the state.

Serious Problems

While discounting the liklihood of a major depression similar to that of the 30s, Boyles warned that "some serious maladjustments exist in our economic fabric which only time and wise management can correct.

"Each of you will have an input on the recovery of our economic balance. The wise and judicious use of the resources at your disposal is of prime importance in countering the forces of inflation and recession," Boyles told the local governmental officials at a recent conference.

Hard headed planning and "resolute action must become a way of life" with local government officials who can "no longer rely on raising taxes a quarter or the water rates a dime per thousand gallons," Boyles warned.

"Instead, other and more appropriate actions must be sought. . .initiative, intelligence and ability will be tried and tested over the next few crucial years. . .the more difficult the times, the harder the decisions."

Boyles sees some good coming from the budget squeeze locally across North Carolina:

—An opportunity to eliminate programs and services which are no longer useful, but exist due to political realities.

—A sobering period for careful evaluation of programs and creation of new ones like the local government commission, central purchasing, state funding of roads and public schools; all of which were born of the Depression.

The atmosphere during this budget-making time is vastly different from normal, Boyles warned, pointing to increasing difficulty in collecting property taxes from people out of work or business which have failed.

Tax-Takers

"A great number of taxpayers may become taxtakers" as food stamps, unemployment pay, and emergency jobs are sought by people out of work.

And while most local government report no slowdown in property tax collections this year, Boyles cautioned officials that "experience to date may be misleading because this year's property taxes may have been paid from escrow accounts accumulated before unemployment hit us and from savings and unemployment benefits available now, but not necessarily available later this year."

Working with local governmental officials from across North Carolina, Boyles has drawn up some suggestions for those trying to trim spending on the local level:

—Study programs and services currently funded for cost-benefit comparisons.

—Purchase only necessary items; curtail travel and telephone use; put off building projects as long as possible.

—Freeze pay scales for all employes at the current level, and leave vacant positions open unless the job is critical.

—Extend the life of cars and trucks by improved maintenance, and sharply restrict use of energy in the forms of lighting, heating, air conditioning, fuel.

Boyles also suggested that local officials be realistic in making budget projections. "It is much easier to increase expenditures, if revenues permit, than to decrease them when they do not measure up to expectations."

A sound budget "consistent with the requirements and the ability to pay is of prime importance," Boyles said.

Father's Day Thoughts

WASHINGTON—Random thoughts of a father on Father's Day.

"Where does my daughter find the guys who show up at the house? I'm not against long hair except it keeps clogging the swimming pool filter. My problem is that if I say anything she'll think it's a personal criticism of her friends—which it is."

"I've spent $60,000 to educate three children. The only thing is whenever someone asks me what they're studying, I don't know what to reply. Yesterday it was stained glass; today it's modern dance; tomorrow it will be photography. How do you get a kid who wants to be a lawyer, a doctor or an accountant?"

"I just got the telephone bill. Most of the calls on it are collect. But I'm afraid if I say anything I won't hear from them at all."

"I don't mind my son using the car. But why can't he fill it up with gasoline before he brings it back? The only thing I ever find in it is empty wine bottles. I wish they would require a deposit for wine bottles. It would solve the American youth's biggest waste disposal problem."

"Why is it when a daughter says, 'Don't wait up for me,' you wait up for her, but when a son says, 'Don't wait up for me,' you sleep like a baby?"

"I have a wheels problem. If I don't get my daughter a car, she'll hitchhike. If I do get her a car, she'll drive it. Which is the lesser of two evils? Why won't kids take the bus and support our mass transportation system?"

"The Rolling Stones are coming to town next month. If my kids don't see them, they'll 'die.' Do I shell out $15 a ticket or watch them expire in front of my eyes?"

"I've been invited by my children to go to a beach where all the kids swim nude. Do I go and be a good sport, or do I go and be a dirty old man?"

"My wife says I'm too easy on the kids and I should be tougher and more assertive like Grimstead, who doesn't let his children get away with a thing. I asked her if she'd rather be married to Grimstead, and she replied, 'I should say not. He thinks he's Mussolini.'"

"I hate to take sides in family fights. When one of my daughters 'borrows' the other's T-shirt, and the latter retaliates by losing the first daughter's sandals, I'm at a loss as to who is at fault. If I make a judgment, I'm immediately accused of only loving one of them. Why do they have to mix up love with T-shirts and sandals?"

"I've just been informed that my daughter has decided to go to Martha's Vineyard, Aspen or Alaska for the summer. When I asked her to be more specific, she says she's not sure because the rock band she's going with hasn't got any bookings yet. I

INSIDE REPORT

Wallace Spot Assured?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NEW ORLEANS—The Wallace spectre haunting the Democratic party has now reached such proportions that two highly regarded Democratic governors only slightly to the right of center say privately that Gov. George Wallace of Alabama may have to be given the vice presidential nomination next year.

Such apostasy by mainstream Democratic leaders would have been unthinkable a year ago. Yet Wallace's awesome ability to dominate the national governors' conference here simply by his silent presence brings such speculative assumptions within the realm of possibility.

Wallace's complete political domination of this biennial assembly of his peers was the result of no Wallace plot or ploy. He attended all the governors' sessions in the Fairmont's international ballroom, but said not a word. "I'm not straining any," he told us with a sly grin. "If anybody's straining, it's them."

The straining of "them" produced a series of public statements from anti-Wallace governors, seemingly as thin as a gossamer thread: Wallace's paralysis and associated physical problems automatically rule him out for the vice presidential nomination; Wallace's support is based on hard-core pockets of strength that do not and cannot exceed 25 per cent of the national Democratic party; Wallace has a magical touch in appealing to vast numbers of discontented Americans, but pin him down and he has no solutions.

That is gossamer rhetoric, and shrewd Democratic governors here know it. As one of the shrewdest told us privately: "Wallace has now become a deadly serious presidential candidate, not a splinter or a regional candidate, and if Democratic leaders don't realize he is a serious candidate we are all going to regret it."

Yet, with only nine months before the first presidential primaries next year, Wallace—not yet an announced candidate—dwarfs all his announced competitors put together. He now talks about entering most of the 30-odd presidential primaries. One exception in New Hampshire (because, he says, small-state New Hampshire gives too much advantage to the candidate able and willing to exploit massive personal campaigning, which is beyond his physical capability).

In larger states, his physical limitation is not taken seriously by Wallace. His name has been a household word for years, pro or con, and he needs no build-up.

More important, other governors totally agree with Wallace's thesis that the 1976 campaign will parallel with surprising closeness the main political themes he has been thundering for ten years: attacks on "pointy-headed bureaucrats," big government, solving social ills "by throwing large gobs of money" at them.

Wallace's well-worn line that "big government is the enemy of the people," which he used in his only public statement here in a speech to the New Orleans Rotary Club, is remarkably close to the theme now being heard from such new-bread Democratic governors as California's Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown and Richard Lamm of Colorado.

"They've finally woke up to states' rights and the welfare mess and all that spending," he told us. "That's just what I've been saying.

Feeding these ancient Wallace themes are the explosive busing strife in Boston and financial catastophe in New York City, the two national bastions of liberalism. Except for an occasional caustic wink, Wallace has not yet even begun to exploit these two major political crises.

Anti-Wallace Democrats, accordingly, are sketching this gloomy scenario: a Wallace national primary campaign, with Wallace making a minimum number of personal appearances but supported by heavy purchase of television time, which could bring him to the convention next summer with between one-fourth and one-third of the delegates.

Such a showing by Wallace in next spring's scramble for delegates would present any mainstream opponent with a mathematical nightmare: he would need between 70 and 75

Other Editors Say What's A Declaration?

(Rocky Mount Evening Telegram)

Americans continue to show abysmal ignorance of their own historic backgrounds, vamous events and great documents of the American past. It may well be that many foreigners know more about our Constitution than many of us.

An example: The Peoples Bicentennial Commission polled 2,300 federal employes about the Declaration of Independence and found that 68 per cent of them refused to endorse that key section that begins: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal. . ."

The poll showed 47 per cent didn't recognize the phrase. Here are some of the remarks offered by those polled about the quoted part of the Declaration of Independence:

"Looks like trash. . . Commie stuff. . . So that's what our Founding Fathers were up to . . . Boy, I tell you that Jefferson erotica. . . What's this? An anti-CIA thing..?. . . I can't sign anything because Im' military. . . Sounds Communist. . . You must be a subversive. . . I've read this many times and it doesn't make sense. . . They'd hang me if I signed that. . . Yes, I recognize it. It's from the Communist Manifesto. I read it in a history book. . ."

Such reactions ought to shock Americans. But it doesn't, and perhaps that is what's wrong. Too many of us have become indifferent, preferring to remain ignorant of such things.

We wonder what people in Europe or other places would think of us if we were, say, on a tour there and were questioned closely about our backgrounds, our origins, our history.

Chances are, too many would have to receive a failing grade. Little wonder other parts of the world don't take us too seriously. We don't take ourselves seriously.

Strength For Today

MAKING A HIT

Many years ago in Chicago as the venerable Bishop Cheney was walking to church one winter morning his hat was knocked off by a snowball. Turning quickly, the Bishop saw a young boy who had thrown the snowball scurrying for cover. Cheney called the boy to stop and come back, and to his surprise the boy did so. The Bishop then proposed goodnaturedly that the boy atone for his misdeed by accompanying him to Sunday School.

The boy did so and then—even more remarkably—became a regular member of the Sunday School class and later a leader in the church.

Today the lad who took such good aim at the Bishop's hat is now a famous surgeon. And he often avers that it was the bishop's understanding of mischevious boys that started a whole new current of development in his life which eventuated in his present career. Sometimes the effect of the church is not so direct as in the case of this surgeon, but in more cases than we realize it starts something new in the life of young people.

No Real Business Indicators

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In baseball they say that the team leading its division on July 4 is likely to go on to win the championship. No such bench mark exists in the world of economics.

As midyear approaches there is no one criterion by which you can measure the immediate future. Some indicators point up, some down.

The consensus is for improvement, but the consensus isn't altogether encouraging. Up is a direction, not an attainment in itself, and we have a long way upward to travel.

Take a look at almost any statistical indicators of the economy's level. You might find some measures that are higher than in May 1975. But compare them with May 1974 and you realize you're looking up out of a pit. The long way up to where we were a year or two ago is likely to be a struggle.

Take unemployment as an example. While a temporary dip in the rate for June is possible, partly because of a statistical fluke, most authorities believe the improvement from 9.2 per cent will be slow.

In fact some analysts believe a rate of at least 8 per cent will persist into 1976.

Inflation? While it averaged more than 10 per cent over the past year it recently has been below that rate. Nevertheless, a survey by Business Week Magazine shows most economists believe a 6 per cent rate will prevail through mid-1976.

Food prices? They'll probably follow the general price pattern, which will be up. A big harvest is expected.

but watch for headlines about poor weather developments. If you see them, watch for higher prices.

As we approach midyear there are some signs of housing beginning to stir again. A onemonth, 25 per cent increase in sales of new single-family homes occurred in April, and the improvement seems likely to continue.

Nevertheless, the industry still must work off a new home inventory that totaled 386,000 units at the end of April, the equivalent of a seven-month supply. Moreover, prices are rising faster than incomes.

In Detroit, automakers express hope for the record, but they're not nearly as certain as they once were of their ability to force the market to do their bidding.

There are several factors that confuse the auto outlook. One is the mood of the buyer, which hasn't been very good. Another is the presence of foreign competition, which now takes 20 per cent of the market.

Detroit badly estimated the impact of both these factors. Car buyers have been buying down, most likely out of necessity. And buying down sometimes means looking for an "inexpensive" foreign import.

There is no denying this is still an automobile society. Cars are the basic means of transportation and whether people like it or not the fact remains. Eventually, therefore, sales should begin rising.

Until that happens, though, the sales and job outlook will be looking downward for one of the most basic of all industries, steel, which up to recently had all but ignored the recession.

Parked Cars Hit In Wrecks

An estimated $1,275 property damage resulted from two Saturday night collisions here — both involving parked cars.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted when a car driven by Melvin Davis Langley of 1903 Norcott Cir. collided with a parked car owned by Bettie Vine Rinehardt of 1905 Kennedy Cir. about 9:22 p.m.

The collision, on Kennedy Circle about 125 feet East of the Bradley Street intersection, resulted in an estimated $450 damage to the Rinehardt vehicle and about $525 damage to the Langley car.

Langley was charged with driving under the influence, no operators license and leaving the scene of an accident.

Frances Elizabeth Salisbury of 314 King George Rd. was charged with failing to keep a proper lookout while backing following investigation of a 9:15 p.m. collision on Elm Street, 125 feet North of the Tenth Street intersection.

Police reported the Salisbury car collided with a parked car owned by Lloyd William Benjamin III of 811 Evans St.

Damage was estimated at $200 to the Benjamin car and $100 to the Salisbury auto.

New Delegate Rules By Demos

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Democratic Executive Committee has adopted new delegate selection rules for the 1976 national convention that require the delegation to reflect the amount of support each candidate wins in the presidential primary.

The rules would allow candidates to designate the delegates that represent them, to assure that they are personally committed to that candidate.

The committee adopted the new rules to bring North Carolina into compliance with regulations adopted by the national party.

As in the past, 75 per cent of North Carolina's 61 delegates will be chosen at congressional district conventions and 25 per cent at the state convention. After some controversy a rule was adopted to allow a nominating committee of the party to propose a slate for all 15 positions to be filled at the state convention.

Some members of the executive committee, including AFL-CIO president Wilbur Hobby, objected to the slate, saying it might receive preferential consideration. However a move to strike the rule was defeated on an 82-42 vote.

State executive director Ben Utely said the slate idea was aimed at making sure the state convention could help balance the delegation with young people, blacks and women, if a sufficient number of them were not elected at the district conventions.

The district level delegates must reflect the outcome of the primary in their district and the at-large delegates must be allocated on the basis of the primary results statewide.

All of the prospective delegates will be required to declare publicly their presidential preference or state they are uncommitted or have no preference.

That rule and the provision that a candidate may approve his delegates is designed to ensure that the delegates represent the outcome of the state primary.

In 1972, although Alabama Gov. George Wallace received 50 per cent ot the vote in the North Carolina primary and got 37 of the state's 64 delegate votes, a large number of delegates were not personally committed to him.

The delegation included as many as 40 supporters of former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford as well as backers of George McGovern and others. The new rules are designed to eliminate that situation.

Forty-six of the 61 delegates will be chosen at the district conventions.

Wallace, in short, would then be enthroned as potential king-maker in a convention whose majority loathes everything he stands for, but which would be compelled to make one of two choices: put him on the ticket as vice presidential nominee, or risk the most potent third—party movement since Teddy Roosevelt fragmented the Republican party in 1912.

Nixon Strolls

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon left the seclusion of his San Clemente seaside villa for recent strolls along nearby Red Beach, it was reported today.

A third photograph showed Pat Nixon during one of the recent walks, described as the third in as many days and lasting about 40 minutes.

Red Beach was a favorite spot for Nixon during his visits to the West Coast from Washington while he was in the White House.

AMA Convention Faces Three Major Problems

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Delegates to the American Medical Association's annual convention face three major problems this week: malpractice insurance, inadequate membership and a financial crisis.

The AMA's money squeeze has become so tight it has attempted to cut costs by such devices as rationing the use of color illustrations in its publications and by buying lighter weight paper.

The AMA lost $3.5 million in 1974 and faces a $2.6-million deficit for 1975. The leaders are asking the delegates to raise dues from $110 to $250.

A special assessment of $60 per member, approved last November, has produced nearly $7.2 million so far. The money has been used to pay off $3 million which was borrowed to cover losses for 1974, to cover the anticipated 1975 deficit and to finance unbudgeted court challenges to government regulations.

The proposed dues increase would cover current activities, restore some programs that were dropped and allow new programs at $2 million a year for the next few years, the board of trustees told the delegates Sunday.

"This has been a year of anguish for all of us," said Dr. James H. Sammons, executive vice president, in his report to the 124th AMA convention which opened Sunday.

increase membership. Of 379,748 physicians in the United States, 45.5 per cent, or 172,646, were dues-paying members in 1974.

"It is amazing — downright dumbfounding — when you realize the lack of attention given by the federation to membership recruitment and retention," Sammons said.

Membership must be increased in order to solve the AMA's financial problem, Sammons said.

Church Investigates Nightly Image On Wall

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

HOLMAN, N.M. (AP) — Roman Catholic Church officials say they are investigating an image, said to resemble Jesus Christ, that appears nightly on the wall of an old church school building here.

Thousands of persons have journeyed to this tiny community, nestled in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains of north central New Mexico, to view the image.

It was first reported about three weeks ago. Some who have seen it call it a miracle. Others say the image is formed by shadows and discolored plaster.

"It's not apparent at this time there is any supernatural cause," said the Rev. Donald Starkey of Albuquerque, vice chancellor of the Archdiocese of Santa Fe.

"But every effort is being made to understand exactly what is involved," Father Starkey said.

Nobody seems sure who saw the image first. But it was called to the attention of the Rev. Leonard Bayer, whose mission includes the church where the image appears, the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church.

"It's not impossible that it is a sign from God. God's ways are not our ways, and he can use different ways to bring people to himself.

"If it proves authentic, so much the better. If it proves false, some good has come out of it," said Father Bayer, who lives in nearby Mora and offers Mass at Holman at 8 a.m. on Sundays.

He said the image has caused people to think about God, and he said people treat each other differently in the presence of the image.

"It's really quite beautiful," he said. "Everything is so orderly. People whisper. Some bring candles or flowers. First they pray, then they look at the image. It's okay. It's very orderly."

A reporter visited the church last week. He found New Mexico 3, the two-lane road which bisects the village, choked with automobiles for a mile around the church.

A crowd, estimated at several thousand, continued to swell as dusk grew despite a light rain.

Three elderly ladies knelt in the dirt, praying alternately in Spanish and English.

Illuminated by a security light, the image itself was clearly visible.

Plot Is Uncovered

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — A plot by Zaireans and black Americans to assassinate President Mobutu Sese Seko has been uncovered and all conspirators arrested, the semi-official newspaper Elima reported today.

The newspaper did not say when or where the assassination was to take place but it confirmed persistent rumors that several generals were among the plotters and had been arrested.

It said the Americans arrested were armed with high-power rifles equipped with telescopic sights "for the liquidation of President Mobutu and all his collaborators."

The government refused to confirm or deny the report. Mobutu has been in power for nearly 10 years.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—North Carolina's broiler market was active today with steady prices and moderate supplies. Demand was good. Weights were desirable.

The North Carolina FOB dock weighted average price for less than truck lots of sized, plant grade broilers to be picked up at docks this week is 48.18 per pound. Estimated slaughter today 1,048,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today in a continuation of Friday's tentative, light-volume technical rally.

The 11: 30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.33 at 825.80, and gainers held a modest lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Noting the continued slow pace of activity, Newton D. Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co. observed, "Many investors are waiting until they can get a better fix on the economy."

Analysts said there seemed to be little question in the marketplace whether the slide in economic activity was at or approaching an end.

Rather the concern appeared to focus on how strong the economy's recovery would be and whether it would bring back with it the high inflation and interest rates of most of 1973 and 1974.

International oils generally gained on talk that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countriesnwould be willing to bargain on the size of price increases it has promised for Oct. 1.

Gulf Oil was the Big Board's most active issue, up ¼ at 22¾; Texaco added ⅛ to 26⅛; Exxon was up ½ at 91⅝, and Royal Dutch rose ⅜ to 37⅝, all in active trading.

Kerr-McGee picked up a point to 90¾. The company reported an offshore Louisiana gas discovery and an oil find in North Dakota.

The NYSE's composite index picked up .14 to 48.33 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .13 at 89.56.

Kissinger said there would have to be "more exchanges between all the parties before we can decide whether a basis for resumption of negotiations exists." Differing Views Of Kitty's Place

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The light in the bedroom is red. The coverlet is scarlet satin. It's the Golden Gate Foundation's main attraction, the Executive Suite.

"Isn't this simply lovely?" asked Bonnie, 21, a smiling girl in a clinging brown gown. "Here are oils and lotions and powders," she said waving a perfectly manicured hand toward a dresser. "And here is our waterbed massage table.

"We try to make it as reassuring and friendly as possible," she said, conducting a guided champagne tour of what the foundation calls a sex therapy clinic.

The police call it a rather uncommon house of prostitution.

"This is not a bordello, we are not call girls and anyone who wants to be a prostitute doesn't belong here. We try to be like the girl next door," said Bonnie, who calls herself a therapist and a sex surrogate.

But police who raided the foundation say it's known on the street as "Kitty's Place" and the women are more like hookers. They arrested the foundation's executive planning director, Kitty Desmond, and six women on various charges of prostitution on May 8.

On Friday, Kitty opened the doors of her 16-room Victorian mansion for the first of three $50-a-person champagne open houses to raise funds for her legal defense.

She hopes the case will vindicate her and make a distinction between sex therapy and prostitution.

"We want to educate people about their bodies and help men with sexual hangups and dysfunctions," said Kitty, 29, a former boutique owner who wore a sea-green gown and silver mesh scarf.

She said she hopes to reopen soon with a better defined program. The therapists admit they don't have much formal training, except some required reading.

At Friday's open house, 60 guests — about half of them paying — listened to rock music, ate Greek food and watched a troupe of Russian belly dancers glide among the dim parlors and potted palms.

They paid $1 each for buttons that said, "Save Kitty's Clinic."

"I admit this doesn't look much like a clinic. It's more like a genteel home," said Kitty as she sat by a fireplace and glanced around the house that costs $800 a month in rent. "But we didn't want to wear nurses' uniforms."

Tan Son Nhut Resumes Service

By MATT FRANJOLA
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Saigon radio today reported the full resumption of civil aviation service at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport.

The broadcast did not say to what cities flights were available. But it said the airport facilities had been repaired, and many aircraft had been put back into operative condition.

From Cambodia, the Phnom Penh radio reported that civilians and Khmer Rouge soldiers "working night and day" had repaired the capital's electric generating plants but the supply of petroleum was still limited.

Most electric plants in Phnom Penh were not damaged during the war, but there was a shortage of spare parts and fuel.

Another broadcast reported the Tonle Sap river north of Phnom Penh had been cleared for shipping. During the last six months of the war the Khmer Rouge forces blocked the river with mines and obstructions to prevent the Phnom Penh government from using the vital waterway.

In Laos, officials of the U.S. Agency for International Development went from Vientiane to several provincial capitals to pay an estimated 1,000 Lao employes of the agency their final wages. The agency is closing out its operations in Laos by the end of the month.

Thailand's ambassador to Washington, Anand Panyarachun, left Bangkok for Peking today to make arrangements for establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Thailand. Foreign Minister Chatichai Choonhavan is scheduled to go to Peking July 27 to sign the agreement.

Perry Shelled In First Start

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Gaylord Perry was a stranger in a strange land. So was Kerry Dineen. But while young Dineen looked and felt right at home, ol' Gaylord found himself in hostile territory.

Sunday night was Gaylord Night in Texas, Perry's pitching debut with the Rangers. He was facing his former Cleveland teammates in his first start since being dealt away last Friday. And he found himself surrounded by Indians.

Before the 27,171 fans were settled into their seats, the game was all but over. Three straight hits in the first inning, the final one Boog Powell's two-run double, started Cleveland on its way to a 5-1 victory.

Dineen, meanwhile, made his major league debut Sunday in the New York Yankees' outfield — flanked by a pair of catchers. And his fielding prowess, coupled with Catfish Hunter's four-hitter, helped the Yanks to a 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

In the rest of the American League, Boston outlasted Kansas City 8-7, Minnesota beat Baltimore 5-4, and, in a doubleheader, California split with Milwaukee, winning 8-7 in 11 innings and losing 4-2. Oakland at Detroit was rained out.

Yankees 3, White Sox 0

Besides Dineen, the Yanks' other outfielders were All-Star catcher Thurman Munson in left field and third-string catcher Rick Dempsey in right. All three regulars — Roy White, Elliott Maddox and Bobby Bonds — are nursing injuries.

So Dineen ranged far afield to haul down drives that others might have usually caught. It fact, he seemed to be swiping them from their rightful fielders.

Munson drove in two runs with singles in the third and fifth innings against Stan Bahnsen and Ron Blomberg singled for a run in the seventh.

Red Sox 8, Royals 7

Tim Blackwell hit what was probably one of the shortest two-run singles in history to cap a four-run eighth inning that beat the Royals and kept the Red Sox a game ahead of the Yanks in the AL East.

Blackwell tapped a Steve Mingori pitch barely 10 feet in front of the plate. Rico Petrocelli, who had singled home the first run in the frame, scored from third. And with the plate unguarded, Dwight Evans, who had singled in the second run of the inning, scored from second.

Twins 5, Orioles 4

Eric Soderholm's three runs batted in on a pair of singles and rookie Dan Ford's second major league homer carried Minnesota past the Orioles.

Angels 8-2, Brewers 7-4

Gorman Thomas hit two homers for the Brewers. The first only prolonged Milwaukee's agony, a two-out shot in the ninth inning that sent the opening game into extra innings. The second one was a two-run shot in the fourth inning that wound up as the deciding margin against California.

Lee Stanton drove in five runs, four with a bases-loaded homer, then Dave Chalk's tie-breaking single triggered a two-run 11th inning that won the first game for the Angels.

Texas Takes Crown On Four-Hitter, 5-1

By DAN EVEN
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The great Texas baseball drought is over.

The second-ranked Longhorns captured their third national crown Saturday night by toppling South Carolina 5-1 in the College World Series as Richard Wortham pitched a masterful four-hitter.

But it was Texas' first title in the classic in 25 years.

"We felt that when Southern Cal didn't qualify for the tournament, that we would take it all," said Coach Cliff Gustafson, whose teams had three thirds and a fourth as Southern Cal was reeling off five successive titles from 1970 on.

Texas captured consecutive series crowns in 1949 and 1950 and qualified 15 times thereafter before finally winning another.

"The whole ballclub played well, like a champions," said Gustafson, whose team was second-ranked most of the season and finished 56-6.

Only Southern Cal with 10 titles in the 29-year history of the tournament has more crowns than the Longhorns, and Gustafson might have them back again next year.

Wortham, fellow pitching ace Jim Gideon, who won two series games, plus five regulars were taken in the summer draft and may sign.

Wortham was the story of the title game.

"I felt like I had something to prove," he said after a nine strikout performance. "I don't think I ever wanted to prove anything so badly.

"I didn't pitch that bad in my first series game, but I lost."

And the same could be said of his teammates, who put together three impressive victories after Wortham lost a 5-2 decision to Arizona State in the second round of the eight-team tournament.

In the title game witnessed by 10,717, South Carolina's only run came on a home run by Hank Small in the fourth.

After that, Wortham seemed to sense victory.

He allowed only two singles and an walk and was aided by a couple of fine defensive plays and retired the final seven men in order. He finished the season 15-1.

A bases-loaded walk forced in the first Texas run in the second inning after an error, Mickey Reichenbach, the most outstanding player in the series, contributed a two-run home run in the third, Keith Moreland doubled home another run in the fourth and the final run came on Garry Pyka's squeeze bunt in the eighth.

"They beat us at our own game," said South Carolina Coach Bobby Richardson. "Our defense broke down and we gave them about everything they got."

Earl Bass, pitching with two days rest, took the loss, surrendering eight hits. He struck out eight, losing for the first time in 18 decisions.

"Earl deserved better," continued Richardson. "He pitched his heart out. He's a great competitor and it's a shame he had to lose, but we have to give credit to Texas."

South Carolina, making its first trip to the double-elimination tournament, finished 51-6 and lost both of its series games to Texas.

"Cliff had a great ballclub and they've been here a few times between championships," added Richardson. "Maybe there's hope for us."

Greenville Splits Pair Of Games

Some of the members of the Rose High Rampants state champion baseball team had little time to let their title soak in as they went right back to the battles on the diamond Saturday as the American Leagion team opened its schedule.

On Saturday, Greenville traveled to Wilson and came back with a 5-3 victory. Sunday they weren't so fortunate falling to Snow Hill, 4-1.

In the first game, Greenville did the most damage in the fourth taking a 4-0 lead over Wilson. Kelly Heath singled and Macon Moye got a hit. An error moved them up and a single by R. Woolard drove them in. Gil Whitford tripled to drive in Woolard and three walks forced in Whitford.

One more came over in the eighth as Whitford singled, took second on a balk and scored on Eddy Connolly's hit.

Wilson got its three runs in the third getting the opening lead as Junior Webb hit a three-run homer. The homer was off Henry Baker. Jimmy Averette relieved him in the third and gave up only four more hits the rest of the game.

Sunday, Greenville was shut out until the top of the ninth. Snow Hill took the opening lead in the first as Tommy Cobb doubled and scored on DeRatt's single.

Edgerton reached on a fielder's choice and Cobb tripled him in in the fifth. DeRatt singled scoring Cobb. Snow Hill added one in the sixth.

Greenville's only run was scored by David Dixon who had singled, moved up on a sacrifice and scored on a sacrifice.

Jenkins Holding Lead Going Into Last Day

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Jenkins held a five-shot lead going into today's 36-hole windup of the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

But Johnny Miller had a warning for him:

"There's a lot of golf to be played yet," Miller said. "Tom has a big lead. He could blow it right open. But 36 holes is a lot of golf. Anything could happen.

"I'm not saying that I'm gonna win. But I could win, and I'll be trying to win. I'll be just as aggressive as I can. If I can start putting, I might be able to put some heat on him.

"If I'd been putting decent, just putting average, I'd be where he is now. And my putting is coming around. It's getting better every day."

Jenkins, a non-winner who seems to play his best in this tournament, one-putted 10 times on his way to a six-under-par 65 in Sunday's second round for a 36-hole total of 134, eight under par for two trips over the 6,687-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

"I wish we could play 40 tournaments a year here," said Jenkins, who was third as a tour sophomore here last year. He has finished higher only once in his brief career.

"I don't know what it is, but my putting stroke seems to smooth out when I get here," he said.

His stroke was near perfect Sunday. He needed only 26 strokes on the small greens and one-putted six times in a row coming home.

That performance left him well in front of Jim Dent, the runner-up at 139 after a second round 67.

Miller, defending champion Hubert Green and Jim Simons followed at 140. Green had a 70, Simons a 71 and Miller an erratic 69 that included an eagle, four birdies, a double bogey, two bogeys and a couple of spectators who got hit by his errant shots.

Tom Weiskopf and nine others withdrew after the first round. Weiskopf had opened with a 76. He pulled out of the second round and hustled to Medinah, Ill., to prepare for the U.S. Open championship that begins Thursday.

The tournament lost the first two days of play because of rain and a flooding creek, pushing the schedule back one full day and necessitating a double round today. More rain was forecast for today, raising the possibility of still further postponements. Tournament officials, however, said the event would conclude no later than Tuesday.

Our Great Polyester Cord Tire Helps Hold The Line On Price

2 for $31

All-Weather 78

Goodyear's All-Weather 78 is built with polyester cord that's first tempered in an exclusive Goodyear process to set the cord at optimum strength and resilience. The wide 78-series tread is "reverse molded," a technique borrowed from race tire production. In reverse molding, the contour of the tread surface is slightly concave as it comes from the mold – so that when the tire is inflated, the tread makes full, flat contact with the road. And the rib-type tread design is well grooved, with plenty of traction edges to provide decisive grip. In every detail, our All-Weather 78 gives you honest quality, at a price that's in step with the time.

2 for $41.50 E78-14 blackwall | 2 for $45.70 F78-14 blackwall | 2 for $47.70 G78-14 blackwall | 2 for $49.80 G78-15 blackwall

Pearson Battles Past Petty To Win Motor State

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — David Pearson doesn't take anything for granted, especially Richard Petty in his rearview mirror.

"I wasn't sure I had beaten Petty until about 50 feet from the finish line," said a more ebullient than usual Pearson, after edging Petty by a few yards in Sunday's Motor State 400 stock car race.

"I thought Petty was having trouble keeping up with me, but you never know if that's really the situation or just what Richard wants to you to believe," Pearson said. "He seemed to be losing the car as he went into the turns and I don't think his set-up was working as well as mine at that point.

"This was a pretty pounding race and it took a toll on the way the car was handling."

It was Pearson's third victory in this event and his fifth in the last Six Grand National races at the two mile Michigan International Speedway tri-oval.

Pearson's victory was about the only thing about the race that could be considered "typical." Heavy rains delayed the start by about three and a half hours and drivers finished as the sun was setting across the lush green Michigan countryside.

The rains drenched the crowd of 53,000 until late afternoon, briefly knocking out electricity and telephone service at the track. A tornado was reported nearby during the storm.

Third-place finisher Dave Marcis ran out of fuel and got a complimentary push around to the checkered flag by fellow competitor Frank Warren.

Cale Yarborough finished a frantic fourth. At one point during the race he disgustedly parked his car in the garage area. He mistakenly thought officials had penalized him a lap for illegally passing the pace car during a caution period. Informed of his error, he roared out of the garage and back into competition.

Fifth-place Darrell Waltrip "bought" his way into the field after engine problems Saturday prevented him from qualifying. He arranged a cash deal with the four alternates and last-place starter Jabe Thomas to let him in the field. "I just about broke even for the race," Waltrip said. "It was the wildest race I've been to in a long time," Pearson said. "I can't remember finishing too many times with the sunset in my eyes.

"But this is my pick of all the tracks we run on. It just suits my style of driving. I guess it shows in the statistics."

The only race Pearson has run here and not won was last year when he finished third. His winnings here in six races exceed $110,000. His victory Sunday was worth $14,230.

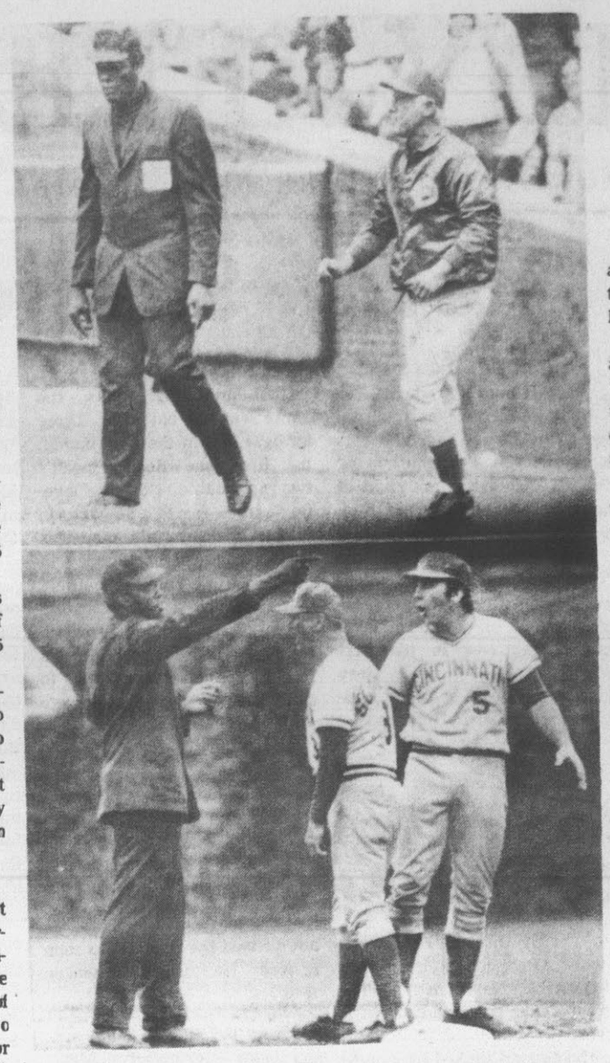

The first 12 laps were run under caution to dry out the track, and the race average after 20 circuits was only 85 miles per hour.

Pearson's average speed was only 131.198 m.p.h.—far short of his race record of 153.485 m.p.h. set in 1973.

The race was the first NASCAR ever for U. S. Auto Club regular Salt Walther, who brought out one of the five caution periods after he spun out of a three car tangle midway through the race. He stayed in the race and finished 17th.

TENNIS

PARIS — Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., downed Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia 2-6, 6-2, 6-1 to win the women's title and Bjorn Borg of Sweden defeated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 for the men's title in the French International tennis championships.

HARD MAN TO ARGUE WITH—First Base Umpire Art Williams has a busy day at the Chicago Cubs-Cincinnati Reds game Sunday at Chicago. In the eighth inning, top, he ejects Reds manager Sparky Anderson for arguing on a close play at first; in the ninth, bottom, he give Johnny Bench the boot for arguing on a close play at first. Marshall Has Stuff But Loses To Phillies

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

There was some good news and some bad news Sunday for the slumping Los Angeles Dodgers.

The good news was that relief ace Mike Marshall's stuff was "the best it's been since coming back from his injury," according to Manager Walter Alston.

The bad news was that Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski walloped a Marshall fast ball into the right-center field pavilion with one out in the eighth inning, giving the injury-plagued Phillies a 4-3 triumph over the injury-plagued Dodgers.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cincinnati Reds lost to the Chicago Cubs 4-3 after completing an 11-3 triumph suspended by darkness on Saturday; the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the Atlanta Braves 8-6, the New York Mets blanked the San Diego Padres 6-0, the Houston Astros edged the St. Louis Cardinals 8-7 on Cliff Johnson's pinch grand slam in the ninth inning and the Montreal Expos swept a doubleheader from the San Francisco Giants 2-1 and 5-2.

Luzinski was the second batter to face Marshall, 2-5, and whacked his 13th home run of the season, breaking a tie and sending the Dodgers to their fifth setback in six games, dropping them 3½ games behind Cincinnati in the West Division.

Cubs 4, Reds 3

Bill Madlock drove in three Chicago runs with a double and a single after the Reds had completed their 11-3 victory in Saturday's suspended game. The victory in the regularly scheduled game snapped Chicago's four-game losing streak and ended a four-game winning string by the Reds.

Bill Bonham, who needed ninth-inning relief from Darold Knowles, scattered eight hits and struck out 12 Reds.

Pirates 8, Braves 6

Dave Parker hit a tie-breaking home run off Elias Sosa in the eighth inning after the Braves tied the score with three runs in the seventh, two on Dusty Baker's 12th homer. After Parker's ninth homer of the season, Rennie Stennett singled home an insurance run.

Mets 6, Padres 0

Tom Seaver pitched a three-hitter for his 10th victory, fifth in a row and second straight shutout. He also singled a run home in the Mets' five-run ninth against Dave Tomlin and Bill Greif after San Diego starter Brent Strom, just back from the minors, allowed one unearned run in eight innings.

Astros 8, Cardinals 7

Pinch hitter Cliff Johnson greeted reliever Mike Garman with a grand slam home run in the ninth inning following Cesar Cedeno's single and two St. Louis errors. The Cards had broken a tie with three runs in the bottom of the eighth on Luis Melendez' bases-loaded single, a bases-loaded walk to Lou Brock and a sacrifice fly by Willie Davis. Davis and Reggie Smith had earlier homered for the Cards.

Expos 2-5, Giants 1-2

Gary Carter belted a pair of run-scoring doubles and Pepe Mangual homered as the Expos ran their winning streak to five in the nightcap. In the opener, Steve Renko blanked the Giants for seven innings and Dan Warthen put down an eighth-inning San Francisco rally.

Fire Fighters Win By One

Gene Forrest singled home Randy Adams in the bottom of the ninth to break a 0-0 tie and give the Fire Fighters a 1-0 win over Ayden-Grifton in the Senior Babe Ruth League Sunday.

Both teams had had ample chance to score during the regulation innings. The Fire Fighters put men on second and third in the first by a hit and a hit batter. In the second, they put a man on third by a hit batter, a stolen base and a ground out but both times failed to score a runner. Forrest was the last man to reach base until the ninth getting on in the fourth with a single.

A-G's Randy Nelson singled in the seventh and moved around on a walk and a fielder's choice but failed to score. Donnie Cox pitched a three-hitter for the Fire Fighters while Chris hurled a four-hitter for A-G.

Malone's Success May Affect ABA's Draft

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The unqualified success of Moses Malone as a teenage rookie in the American Basketball Association was expected to have a big influence on the league's draft today.

A year ago, the 6-foot-11 Malone, then only 19 years old, stepped out of Petersburg, Va., High School and directly into the ABA, signing a multi-million dollar contract with the Utah Stars. He was the first high school basketball player ever drafted by the pros.

Malone survived countless pressures — from the press, from fans, from opposing players. He performed far above expectations, even for a youngster with his unlimited potential.

Scheduled to be brought along slowly, Malone became a revelation. He averaged 18.8 points per game, 15th best in the league. He averaged 14.6 rebounds per game, fourth best in the league. He shot 57 per cent from the field, third best in the league. He blocked 128 shots, 10th best in the league. And he played in the mid-season All-Star game.

His performance set a precedent for future prep stars.

The National Basketball Association, apparently taking note of Malone's accomplishments, broke precedence in its draft last month, selecting two high school players — Dwight Dawkins of Maynard Evans High School in Orlando, Fla. and Bill Willoughby of Dwight Morrow High School in Englewood, N.J. — for the first time in its history.

Dawkins immediately signed a lucrative contract with the Philadelphia 76ers, but Willoughby, drafted by the Atlanta Hawks, remains unsigned.

Willoughby, along with 7-0 Bill Cartwright of Elk Grove, Calif. High School, figured to be two of the most coveted players in the ABA draft. Willoughby, having applied — and been accepted — as an NBA hardship case, no longer can attend a major NCAA college even though he had been slated to go to the University of Kentucky.

Cartwright has said he is going to the University of San Francisco, but such a collegiate commitment didn't stop the Stars from drafting — and signing — Malone last year after it was announced he was going to the University of Maryland.

While Willoughby and Cartwright figured to command a great deal of attention, major focus was expected to be on either forward David Thompson, the major college Player of the Year from North Carolina State, or 7-0 Marvin "the Human Eraser" Webster, the College Division Player of the Year from Morgan State.

The Denver Nuggets, with the No. 1 selection, were planning to take either Thompson or Webster, depending on which player they thought would be easier to sign.

The draft was to last only eight rounds, instead of the customary 10.

Pele Scores Once In American Debut

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Pele's Unites States professional soccer debut was a typical performance for Brazil's Black Pearl, the man who has averaged nearly a goal a game in his 1,254 career games.

But there was far more significance in the reception the sport received — and probably will continue to receive — now that the 34-year-old superstar is a marketable entity in the United States.

Quite simply, a North American Soccer League game wouldn't have drawn national network television coverage in the United States, much less live telecasts to Japan, Costa Rica, Mexico, Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela, Panama, Puerto Rico and Canada.

Quite simply, an NASL game wouldn't have attracted some 300 newsmen from all over the world to the miniature press box at Downing Stadium. It wouldn't have attracted 21,278 fans to the aged concrete structure where there are boards instead of seats and light towers that originally stood atop Ebbets Field.

Pro soccer just isn't that popular here, especially on a Father's Day when the New York Yankees were giving away baseball bats and there was horse racing at Belmont Park.

But they came; in buses, cars, on bicycles and some even on foot to see the Black Pearl show his stuff. And it wasn't even a league game; it was an exhibition.

Naturally, Pele held the spotlight. His goal and assist almost were expected by every fan in attendance — and even his new teammates on the New York Cosmos.

In fact, they spent the first half of Sunday's 2-2 tie against the Dallas Tornado trying to figure out what to do. Pele's mere presence seemed to dictate that he carry the ball throughout, take all the shots and score all the goals. That's what helped Dallas gain a 2-0 lead in the first half.

"The younger players were passing to me too much instead of dribbling more or passing to other players," said Pele after his long-awaited debut. "The team I saw Tuesday (when he watched the Cosmos for the first time after signing his multi-million dollar contract) was much more coordinated."

"It was hard at first knowing what he was going to do with the ball and where he was going to be so that we could get it to him," said 22-year-old New York wing Mark Liveric.

It was nothing that won't be cured by a little time together, and after all, the Cosmos did come back for a tie — thanks to Pele, who hadn't figured on being around for the finish.

"I had only planned to play 45 minutes (the first half)," Pele said through an interpreter. "But I felt so good I decided to play the whole game."

Program Will Combine Three Forms Of Music

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While young viewers can see jazz, pop and classical music shows on TV, they never get the three music forms in one program. James Frazier Jr., a young conductor, hopes to change that.

He says he and an NBC crew will be in Detroit on Wednesday, taping a one-hour children's special, "Soul and Symphony," with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and a few heavies from the pop side of music.

Wolfman Jack will host the show, he says. Also on hand: Singer Melba Moore; trumpeter Donald Byrd and the Blackbyrds, a top jazz-rhythm-and-blues group; and that jazz-rock powerhouse, Blood, Sweat & Tears.

Frazier, who directs the Philadelphia Orchestra's children's concerts and serves as one of its guest conductors, says CBS' periodic Sunday classical music shows for kids are fine, but have a serious flaw.

He says that because of their heavy emphasis on classical music "they only reach a small audience of young persons with middle-class backgrounds," kids far more familiar with Mozart than Motown.

Frazier, 35, says he wants to show the workings of a symphony orchestra to a much broader audience and reach the young black in the ghetto as well as the child of affluent suburbia.

The pop music performers on his show are part of his plan to do this, although none would feel out of place amid so-called "serious" music. They've all had extensive classical music training, Frazier says.

They'll perform with the Detroit Symphony so young viewers "can see a full symphonic orchestra, which in itself is always associated with classical music, playing some music they enjoy," he said.

Blood, Sweat & Tears, for example, will play its hit "When I Die" with the orchestra. Byrd's group, also backed by the orchestra, will improvise on TV's "Ironside" theme by composer Quincy Jones.

The grand finale will feature Byrd's group, Miss Moore, a children's choir and the orchestra in Frazier's own "12th Street: A Soul Opera," which he describes as "an attempt to combine the world of soul (music) with classical opera."

The show also will feature purely classical selections, such as a piece by Rossini, Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and a mod version of Benjamin Britten's "Young People's Guide to the Orchestra."

The show is one of seven new children's specials NBC will air on weekday afternoons next season from October through April under the title, "Special Treat." There'll be one special each month.

Rift Fournier, producer of Frazier's program, says "Soul and Symphony" will be the October special and will pre-empt "Another World" from 4 to 5 p.m. EDT. on a date not yet selected.

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10952 ♥AK854 ♦83 ♣86
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♦	?

What do you bid?

A.—Two spades. Your hand is worth only one forward-going bid. If you responded two hearts and partner rebid two spades, you would be of two minds whether to raise or to pass—and whichever action you choose could be wrong.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ652 ♥94 ♦872 ♣743
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 NT	2 ♥	?

What action do you take?

A—Bid two spades. After an opponent has overcalled your partner's no trump opening bid, any action by you is competitive and does not promise much more than a reasonable five-card suit. If you wanted to force, you would have to either cue-bid or jump the bidding.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K6 ♥AJ8 ♦Q765 ♣QJ92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♣	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Five diamonds. Up to now, you have done nothing but promise partner a minimum opening bid. It is now your duty to show that you have really good diamond support, and not just a preference. Slam chances are quite bright because the hands appear to fit well. Your king of spades is a big card and partner's bidding seems to indicate a singleton heart, which gives your ace in that suit extra weight. We would also not quibble with the scientific approach of cue-bidding the heart ace and then raising diamonds.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J8 ♥KJ42 ♦AKJ87 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. You have a bare minimum opening bid, and partner's response has not improved your holding one iota. You should not take any voluntary action to rebid a good suit even at such a low level without something in reserve.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1065 ♥4 ♦9642 ♣Q754
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. A jump rebid of opener's original suit is not forcing, and since you have a minimum response, there is no need to bid again, or any reason to look for a better contract than three hearts.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♥Q874 ♦K74 ♣AJ102
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	2 ♠	4 ♥	Pass
Pass	4 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A.—Double. You already stretched your values slightly when you jumped to four hearts at your first turn. Your hand is defensively oriented because your minor-suit cards are well placed behind the bidder. By doubling you warn partner that you do not think he can make five hearts and that you are prepared to defend.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠982 ♥AKQ762 ♦A ♣A65
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♦	Dble.
Rdble.	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Jump to two hearts. This action not only shows your fine heart suit, it also reveals your good hand as well. If you were any weaker, you would have contented yourself by removing to one heart. Though your jump is not forcing, it should encourage partner to compete with even slight values.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ76 ♥KQ1042 ♦7 ♣A92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	1 NT	2 ♦	2 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Do not even think of doubling. Your partner's bid showed no particular strength—with a good hand, he would have doubled the no trump overcall. In addition, you appear to have at least a partial misfit, so get out of the bidding as soon as possible.

After $50 Million Loss, Studio Happy

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Can a movie company that loses $50 million in one year find happiness and prosperity?

In the case of 50-year-old Columbia Pictures, the answer is yes.

Following its back-breaking debit of a couple of years ago, the company has staged one of Hollywood's most dramatic comebacks.

Evidence:

During one April week Columbia amassed film rentals of $6 million, a company record. Four of the top 10 moneymakers in May were Columbia's — "Funny Lady," "Shampoo," "Tommy" and "Breakout."

What rescued Columbia from the abyss of bankruptcy?

The answer is that old Hollywood saw: There's nothing wrong with the picture business that good pictures can't cure.

The man who has guided the company's recovery is David Begelman, president of Columbia Pictures since Sept. 4, 1973.

He represents the new managerial breed in the industry — well-educated, low-key, persuasive rather than autocratic. Like many of today's producers, he was an agent; he made deals for top talent as an executive of C.M.A.

"It has been a natural step for agents to move into production," Begelman explained in his tastefully decorated office at the Burbank Studios.

"Major theatrical agents dealing with stars, directors and writers literally put picture projects together. They were, in effect, preproducers, but they didn't actually produce.

"Once you had that training, it was a short step to producing. It was simply a matter of understanding the rhythm of film making and applying taste and judgment.

"Also, an agent must master the art of persuasion, learning to work with people. With the growing independence of actors, directors and writers, studios can no longer mandate."

Begelman understandably shied away from finger-pointing at the previous management's mistakes. But he hinted that Columbia's torch had dimmed because of reliance on a group of "house" producers to make the bulk of the company's product.

All were topflight film makers, but too often they made films to fit quotas, not the movie market.

Commitments to the producers have ended, giving Columbia a more fluid position.

"Now we can make deals for films on an individual basis," said Begelman.

Columbia's new flexibility has even permitted partnership with its competitors. The company joined with MGM to produce "The Wind and the Lion" and with Allied Artists on "The Man Who Would Be King."

Both are expensive epics which might have proved too burdensome for one company.

Charge Engineer

By TIMOTHY J. MADDEN
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The engineer of a Canadian passenger train which rammed the rear of Amtrak's Empire State Express in a switching yard here faces arraignment today on assault charges. Thirty-four persons were injured.

A police officer said tests on the engineer showed the presence of alcohol.

The injured, including the engineer, were taken to several area hospitals for treatment Sunday. Only four were admitted and were listed in fair condition.

The injured included eight children, none of whom were admitted, and at least four railway employes, hospital spokesmen said.

Lawrence M. Beebee, 63, of Ancaster, Ont., the engineer of the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo two-car motor express, was charged with second-and third-degree assault, Buffalo police said. He was held in a police lockup overnight.

Police Lt. Frank Angelo said Beebee asked to be given a chemical breath test for alcohol. Angelo said that the test showed the engineer had a .16 per cent alcohol content. A .10 reading is the maximum allowable for the safe operation of an automobile, Angelo said.

The force of the collision threw the front of the T H & B train off the track and derailed four of the six Amtrak cars. The collision occurred shortly after 6 p.m. and the track was cleared and back in service by late Sunday night, a Penn Central spokesman said.

Here's Mud In Your Eye

BOONE, N. C. (AP) — A man walked into the North Carolina Highway Department office on the outskirts of Boone Tuesday. He stopped in the middle of the office and, as startled workers watched, he dumped a bucket of mud on the floor.

"This is a present from the Roby Greene road," said the man. He turned and walked out. No one got his name, but his message was unmistakable.

The highway department is preparing to pave the rural road, but workers have not yet got to it, said Bruce Jacobs, district engineer. "There is a problem on the road from mud," he conceded.

Natural Reactor Found In Africa

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

MOANDA, Gabon (AP) — French scientists say they have discovered a natural nuclear reactor which burned spontaneously in west central Africa for more than a million years.

A leading French geologist says it may have caused spectacular mutations in plant and animal life 1.7 billion to 2 billion years ago.

He said the natural reactor — now burned out — is in the Moanda area, 350 miles southeast of Libreville, Gabon's capital. The area is the site of one of the world's largest uranium mines.

More than 800 tons of uranium metal is extracted annually from the open pit mine and exported to France, where it provides raw material for the French nuclear deterrent.

But geologist Henry Chauvet says work has stopped on one side of the pit, pending an intensive scientific investigation of the spontaneous reactor, which he described as the only known natural atomic pile.

Chauvet, chief geologist of the partly French-owned uranium mine, said the reactor is believed to have been sparked by unknown causes and burned with cataclysmic effect on the environment for more than a million years.

All radioactivity generated by the spontaneous fission process has long since disappeared, Chauvet said.

The discovery was made through analysis of freak characteristics in the uranium on one side of the huge pit.

"We suddenly found strata containing fantastically rich ore, about 10 per cent per weight of the soil," he said. He said that compares with 0.4 per cent ore in the rest of the mine. At the same time, the uranium 235 isotope normally found in minute quantities in natural uranium almost completely disappeared.

An international scientific conference opens in Libreville on June 23 to discuss the significance and implications of the discovery. It will seek to determine how the spontaneous reaction started and what genetic effect on local life forms may have spread around the world in the millions of years since the reactor burned itself out.

"Science fiction enthusiasts may try to attribute the incident to visitors from outer space," one mine official said. "Fortunately, we are sure it can all be explained naturally."

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Farmland values in North Carolina rose by 15 percent, to an average of $630 an acre, in the year ending November 1, according to a report just published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Nationally, the increase in value during the same period was 21 percent, to an average of $339 an acre.

In both state and nation, however, the rate of increase has slowed substantially in the past year, according to Bill Humphries, N. C. State University Agricultural information specialist.

Currently, farmland values are rising by an estimated one percent a month. For the 12 months ending March 1 this year, therefore, the national increase is expected to be about fifteen percent.

Rates of increase remained strong last year in the nation's cash grain areas but slowed sharply in range-livestock production areas. Grain prices have remained high relative to livestock prices.

A number of investors, disenchanted with the dismal performance of the stock market in 1974, withdrew money from stocks and invested it in farm acreage producing relatively high-priced soybeans and feed grains.

Grain crops in North Carolina are not as important in determining land values as in some other states. Therefore the percentage increase in Tar Heel farm real estate prices in 1974 was below the national average.

"However, favorable flue-cured tobacco prices in 1974, along with the need to consolidate tobacco production into larger units, is expected to help maintain a strong demand for farmland in the state," said Dr. D. F. Neuman, an extension economist at North Carolina State University.

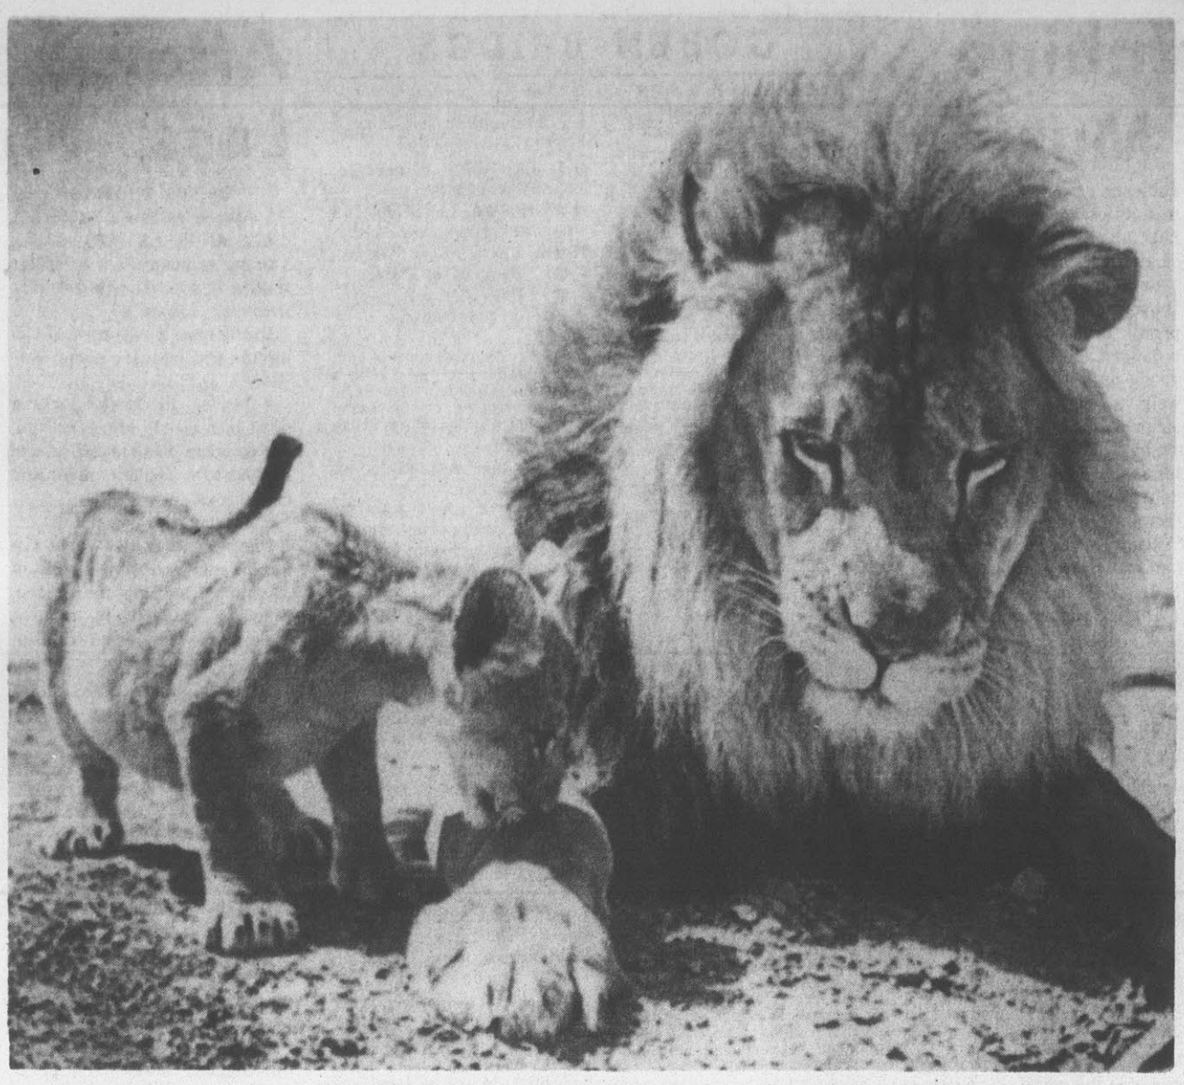

General economic conditions will affect farmland prices in the year ahead, Neuman said. But, he added, undeveloped farmland ordinarily is one of the last things to respond to an economic slowdown.

Many people consider land a good investment and will continue buying it even when they are discouraged with other types of investments.

An estimated 400,000 acres have been removed from farm production in the state in the past two years due to urban growth, building of superhighways, and conversion of acreage to other nonfarm uses.

Nationally, tightening credit and higher interest rates in 1974 contributed to slackening of the high rate of increase in farmland values. Also, there was less demand for land to be used for such nonfarm purposes as recreation, retirement and development.

In just seven years, from 1967 to early 1974, the average value of farm real estate in North Carolina exactly doubled, rising from $295 to $590 an acre. By November 1974, the average value had risen to $630.

Aviators Gather To Honor Favorite Plane

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP)—A 15-year-old dream became reality this weekend with the rumble of old airplane engines, the aroma of hot oil and fine leather and a generous portion of nostalgia.

An energetic group of confessed "old airplane nuts" dedicated the new Staggerwing Beechcraft Museum, believed to be the first museum dedicated to a single type of aircraft.

"These are great old airplanes," said John Parish, one of the guiding hands of the foundation which runs the museum. "The Staggerwing, probably more than any other plane, proved that executives could fly in comfort and speed—it was the best way to travel."

Opening of the museum, at the southeast corner of Tullahoma's Northern Field, climaxed a three-day fly-in celebration that attracted more than 25 Beechcraft Model 17s, the "Staggerwing," plus 40 or more other antique airplanes and an estimated 200 modern airplanes flown by people who admire the old planes.

Among those attending were Louise Thaden, a pioneer aviatrix who flew Staggerwings to speed, altitude and endurance records in the 1930s; and Mrs. Olive Ann Beech, widow of the man who designed the Staggerwing, Walter Beech.

The object of all the affection was the Lear Jet of the 1930s. It was one of the first executive-type planes and it offered, for the first time, a comfortable cabin and 200 m.p.h. speed in a day when the latest Army Air Corps fighters could boast only about 175 m.p.h.

About 100 of the 800 Staggerwings built by Beechcraft of Wichita, Kan., are still flying and another 100 or so are being rebuilt with loving care by devotees of the type.

The Model 17 got its nickname because of the curious arrangement of its wings—the lower wing was set slightly ahead of the upper airfoil. Airmen say the wings had "negative stagger."

The museum, housing three complete Staggerwings plus two Travelairs, also designed by Walter Beech, is built on land donated by Parish.

The $120,000 required to build the big hangar plus the restored log cabin which serves as library and office was donated by members of the museum foundation who number about 250.

Much of the construction work was done by members of "the Tullahoma Bunch," about 50 antique airplane enthusiasts whose emblem is a bananna.

The idea for the museum grew out of an organization of Staggerwing owners founded by W. C. "Dub" Yarbrough, a retired Naval aviator who now lives in Tullahoma. Yarbrough he has been responsible for restoring many of the old airplanes, including one owned by Parish.

Yarbrough, who is rebuilding still another Staggerwing, is president of the museum foundation.

Connally Is Juror

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally says that "obviously it is better to be a juror than a defendant."

Connally, who was acquitted in April on bribery charges by a Washington, D. C. jury, served as a juror himself Thursday in municipal court.

He and five other jurors found a 23-year-old defendant guilty of speeding and fined him $10.

Connally, a Houston attorney, turned down the token juror payment.

Suit Is Settled

GREENSBORO (AP) — A $20 million damage suit involving comparative television commercials and other advertisements of pantyhose has been quietly settled.

The suit, filed last October by the Hanes Corp. and its subsidiary, L'Eggs Products Inc., was dismissed early this month.

Hanes had charged the Kayser-Roth Corp. with comparing its pantyhose, the No Nonsense brand, to L'Eggs in an advertising campaign that allegedly contained false, misleading and deceptive material.

Dismissal was by agreement of all the parties according to a stipulation filed with U.S. District Court.

The stipulation gave no details as to settlement of the issues.

Learning Of Politics

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — One of the 425 high school seniors at Boys State, James Young of Lexington, says, "I thought all politics was dirty. But I'm finding out that legislative bills are hard to pass through committees, and the tactic 'I'll vote for your bill if you vote for mine' isn't so bad.

The boys at the week-long citizenship training meeting have been given the choice of several activities, such as swimming, baseball and tennis, that they can participate in during the afternoon. But the most popular sport so far has been water-balloon fights.

"We like to hang out the windows and just bombard guys walking by," said one delegate. "They never know what hit them until they're soaked."

But water-balloon fights came to a temporary halt Wednesday afternoon as the boys discussed campaign platforms for state elections.

Giving Up On Fight

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP)—A pottery maker and his pregnant wife, who staged a sit-down strike and went to jail, say they have about given up their fight to prevent construction of a sewer line near their property.

Jerry and Charlotte Fenberg were fined $5 and courts apiece Thursday on conviction of obstructing a public highway.

They were trying block the sewer line from Asheboro to the state zoo, on the claim it would have a harmful ecological impact.

Americans love their beef, and indications are they are going to love it even more. For each person, consumption has gone from 62 to 115 pounds per person. Consumption is predicted to rise another 22 to 27 pounds between now and 1980. Agricultural economists say that some 8.5 million additional cattle will have to be fed in 1980 to match this increase in demand.

Supply and demand are not the only factors in the price you pay for beef. For instance, today's modern-type 1,000 pound choice steer produces approximately 615 pounds carcass, which the packer sells to a retailer who trims away 183 pounds of fat, bone and waste, ending up with only 432 pounds of beef that he cuts, wraps and sells to customers. Of this 432 pounds, a surprisingly small amount if steak—80 pounds on the average; the majority being roasts. These roasts often make the consumer the best buy.

Retail stores put a higher price on steak and a lower price on pot-roast and ground beef so that they can sell it all and not end up with the less-in-demand cuts like pot-roast and short ribs left in the cooler.

Fertilizer Key to Increased Production

The utilization of soil test and proper fertilization will be the key to meeting the increased demand for beef in the years to come. Already some farmers have lowered the land-cow ration from 1½ acres per cow-calf to 1 acre through intensive fertility practices.

Another advantage of increasing the competition of forages through adequate fertilization is weed control. Weeds come into pastures because existing vegetation is thin and low in vigor. Adequate fertilization will increase the density of forage grasses and legumes to the degree that annual weed infestations can be reduced.

Telephone Bugged?

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan, D.N.C., says foreign agents may have bugged his telephone because of his appointment to a senate committee investigating the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Morgan made the comment in a weekend television interview in Asheville, where he was attending a wedding in the family of a friend, Wallace Hyde, a former campaign worker.

The freshman senator said, "I don't have any idea but what my own telephone was tapped because of some of the CIA information."

He specifically accused spies of the Soviet Union of wiretapping telephones of senators. "We know as a fact that they have even tapped telephones of . . . some senators in Washington now."

He also commended the Rockefeller Commission's for its report on the CIA, but he said he felt the CIA's effectiveness has been almost destroyed all over the world.

Morgan recommended a congressional committee to oversee the agency and suggested that the House discontinue it's CIA probe because the senate committee is "proceeding with caution."

"You've got to have it (intelligence), but you just can't give anybody carte blanche authority to do things without reporting and being responsible to someone, he said.

"We've got to have intelligence because Russia is always on the alert."

Nightmare Ends For Greenville Woman, Husband In Nicaragua

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. and Mrs. Donald Clark of Boone have gained a new appreciation for the United States and for the freedom that the American people enjoy.

"It's really fantastic to be in a country where you have laws to protect people and their rights," Dr. Clark emphasized.

"I've always had the right to express my opinion," Mrs. Clark, the former Sue Stocks of Greenville, explained. "But for one year, I neither wrote or spoke my opinion on anything . . . even the weather."

The couple returned last week from a year in the Central American country of Nicaragua. Dr. Clark, on leave from Appalachian State University, served as a psychologist at the University of Central America in Managua, while Mrs. Clark was a psychologist at the American-Nicaraguan School there.

Before their year in the Nicaraguan capital was up, their stay became terrifying . . . a nightmare.

Dr. Clark, a Virginia native, studied at George Washington University, Southeastern Theological Seminary at Wake Forest and Appalachian State University, before receiving his doctorate at the University of Florida. His wife, a Greenville High School graduate, attended East Carolina University, studied in Mexico and Honduras, and received her masters degree in Counseling-Psychology from Appalachian. Dr. Clark has been on the faculty of ASU in Boone since the couple returned from a tour with the Peace Corps in Honduras, in 1969.

"A Peace Corps friend called and said there were two jobs available . . ." in Managua, Dr. Clark explained, "so I took a year's leave of absence." The University of Central America "needed a consultant for their psychology department," he said.

He arrived in the Nicaraguan capital June 1, 1974, Mrs. Clark on July 6. "We had never been to Nicaragua before . . . we'll never go back," Clark said.

The nightmare started on December 27, 1974, when a band of guerrillas — members of the Sandinistas — shot their way into a diplomatic reception and captured the cream of the Nicaraguan diplomatic corps.

Among the Sandinistas' captives were the Nicaraguan foreign minister, the Nicaraguan ambassador to the United States and the country's United Nation's ambassador, along with the Chilean ambassador and his wife.

U.S. Ambassador Shelton Turner was the guest of the honor at the reception — in a suburban Managua home — but left the part about 15 minutes before the guerrillas, including five men and three women, made their move.

President Anastasio Somoza, who allowed the guerrillas to fly to Cuba with the ambassadors of Spain and Mexico (who offered to accompany them), declared martial law and began hunting down suspected members of the Sandinista Liberation Front. (Sandinistas are named for Cesar Sandino, legendary guerrilla of the 1930's who opposed the United States occupation which brought the Somoza family to power.)

"People didn't think Somoza would let them free," Clark said. "They thought they (the government troops) would kill everybody in the house . . . they were shocked he (Somoza) would pay the ransom (a reported $5 million) and let them (the guerrillas) go."

Clark said it is believed, however, that the reason Somoza met the guerrillas' demands is the fact that his brother-in-law was one of the high officials being held.

"The country was under seige for several days . . . which meant that the police could shoot first and ask questions later," Clark said.

On the day the guerrillas were allowed to leave the country, "we went out . . . drove down to see what was going on. We didn't even know it at the time, but the bus (carrying the guerrillas and hostages to the airport) drove right past us."

There was a news blackout, according to Clark, ". . . absolutely no news at all. We were under martial law the whole time, and they still were under it when we left."

He said after the guerrillas flew to Cuba," things got really heated up.

"We heard that the Sandinistas would bomb public places if Somoza didn't resign and relinquish part of his personal property to the people . . . divide it up into farms . . ."

Mrs. Clark worked at the American school, ". . . children from different embassies . . . a particularly vulnerable place . . . so we sent our daughter home."

Clark said, "The retaliation really began by the government, then," and the "newspapers could only carry government-approved stories."

Clark said "all kinds of rumors" were heard, including one that "250 men were shot in the mountains."

"But what we do know," because of stories carried in La Premsa, the government controlled newspaper, "one young man was shot immediately, as being a Sandinista, in his home."

Another young man "fled into the Costa Rican Embassy," and "one young girl being pursued by the police had an accident and was killed. They were the only stories in the paper."

Clark explained, "This was all pure coincidence. We were working very hard . . . staying out of anything having to do with the internal situation. We were visitors in a foreign country."

But, he emphasized, "This is where our problems started."

"It was pure chance, but it turned out that all three of these people were connected, either by family or close friends, to our patients . . . people we were psychologically treating.

"The young man who was shot was the boyfriend of one of my patients," Clark said. "She didn't know where he was until she saw a picture of him dead, on the front page of the paper. I didn't know she was connected until she came in after seeing the picture and told me," he explained.

Mrs. Clark said the brother of the youth who gained asylum in the Costa Rican Embassy "was one of my patients, and the girl (who was killed in the wreck) . . . I was treating her best friend's mother."

Clark outlined what followed.

"All of a sudden, we started getting picked up by the police without knowing what was going on.

"We had been seen in public with the people we were treating.

"The police came ot our house late one night . . . examined our passports, papers. They surrounded our house . . . heavily armed . . . in the middle of the night."

According to Clark, "This went on for a period of time . . . five times all together . . . without ever saying what their interest in us was."

And in addition to the nighttime visits, the Clarks would be stopped as they walked along the street. Armed police would step up and check their passports.

"We became the only Americans we knew who had to carry our passports with us all the time. Some of our friends living in the country (both U.S. citizens and Nicaraguan nationals) said we better get out. But we both had contracts . . . trying to fulfill the contracts we had signed."

Their mail was apparently being censored, too.

Mrs. Clark explained that after the police began checking their papers, she sent letters to five friends in the United States — including one in Greenville — telling of the harrassment, "just in case" something happened to them."

Only one, to a professor at Southern Illinois University, got through.

"Talking about being afraid. This was stark terror," Mrs. Clark emphasized.

The Clarks theorized that one reason they may have been harrassed is the fact that the girl killed in the wreck while fleeing the police was a college student who was carrying a list of psychology students planning a bus trip to another Central American country.

"We had been invited to go on that trip . . . we're psychologists . . . and our names may have been on that list. Another list contained names of church kids doing social work. All these lists became suspect to the government," Mrs. Clark said.

Finally the Clarks had had enough.

"We tried three times to get across the border," Mrs. Clark said, "but were unable to."

Clark added, "We gave everything we had away except our clothes and suitcases and told people we were going on vacation."

They were turned back at the Nicaraguan-Honduras border twice.

But then, "we got out . . . early morning May 1," Mrs. Clark said. "It took us a month to get home . . . we had car trouble, and got sick." But on June 3, the Clarks drove their car across the U.S.-Mexican border.

"When you go through something like that, you can really appreciate this country," according to Mrs. Clark. "I have the deepest sense of reverence for my country."

Nicaragua operates under Napolionic law, Mrs. Clark said. "You are guilty until proven innocent. You can't imagine the terror we lived under. Even the American Embassy can't help you."

Knew Of CIA Plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — President John F. Kennedy and his brother Robert may have known of Central Intelligence Agency plots to kill foreign leaders, Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller suggests.

Rockefeller raised the possibility Sunday as he defended the absence of any details on alleged assassinations in the report prepared by the commission he headed in an investigation of the CIA.

In an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press," Rockefeller said he had no proof the Kennedy brothers knew of CIA assassination plots.

Observers See Little Upturn For Furniture Industry Early

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Analysts who watch the nation's furniture industry say there will be no substantial recovery in the industry until late 1975 or early 1976.

Continued hesitation among consumers and the slow recovery in the housing industry are blamed for sluggish furniture sales.

"There has been a gradual increase in business since the first of April but it is certainly a long way from being back to normal," said Robert Philpott, president of Burlington House. "I think we will see a gradual increase for the remainder of the year but it will be next year before we're back to normal."

Most observers in and out of the industry, while agreeing that the decline has bottomed out, feel recovery will take longer than had been expected a few months ago. Some believe the recovery will be centered largely in a few of the largest manufacturers.

"We're not terribly optimistic that the furniture industry is going to make a fast recovery," said Ken Flynt, an economist for the North Carolina National Bank. "The consumer has suffered from inflation so long that his buying power is just not there."

After boom years in 1972 and 1973, furniture makers saw sales begin to slide in the second quarter of 1974. Government figures show first quarter furniture sales this year were 32 per cent below the figures for the same period of 1974.

Nationally, unemployment in the industry jumped from 8.4 per cent in April 1974 to 16.1 per cent last April, according to the U.S. Labor Department.

In North Carolina, where much of the industry is located, furniture unemployment stood at 18 per cent last April and at 11.9 per cent in late May.

According to most analysts, the furniture industry will not regain its health until the housing industry recovers. Although sales of new homes jumped 25 per cent in April, the U.S. Commerce Department says sales were still lagging behind construction of new homes.

Housing accounts for between 30 and 40 per cent of the furniture market. And according to Flynt, it takes about six to eight months before the furniture industry will reap the benefits of a housing recovery.

"The incentives that have been given out by the government have been less dramatic than hoped," said Jerry Epperson, vice president of Scott and Stringfellow, a Richmond, Va., brokerage house.

"You haven't seen that sudden shot in the arm from the tax rebate. You haven't seen the tax credit on home buying wipe out the 400,000 inventory in unsold homes!"

Epperson, who believes recovery in the furniture industry could be well under way by late 1975, says many small manufacturers will not survive the recession.

"A lot of marginal manufacturers are already moving out," he said. "Nationally, there are between 5,200 and 5,400 manufacturers. But 40 per cent of the 1974 shipments were concentrated in the top 35 corporations."

Protest Conditions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A delegation of inmates met with prison officials today following a disturbance at the state Corrections Center for Women late Sunday in which 13 persons were injured.

Meanwhile, some 150 of the prison's some 434 inmates remained in the prison yard, protesting conditions at the institution. The inmates vowed they would remain outside their cells until they spoke personally with Gov. Jim Holshouser.

There was no indication whether Holshouser planned to meet with the demonstrators.

A prison spokesman gave this account:

The disturbance began about 8 p.m. Sunday when the demonstrators refused to return to their cells at the evening lockup.

Guards forced the women into the prison auditorium, where the prisoners began breaking windows and scuffling with the officers.

Eight officers and five inmates were injured, and some were hospitalized. It was not known whether all 13 were hospitalized, however.

About 50 additional guards were called in from nearby Central Prison, which houses male prisoners.

Inmate spokesman Ann Wilett said the prisoners were protesting alleged poor medical care and conditions in the prison laundry and dining hall. They also wanted acting director Morris Kea named permanent director, she said.

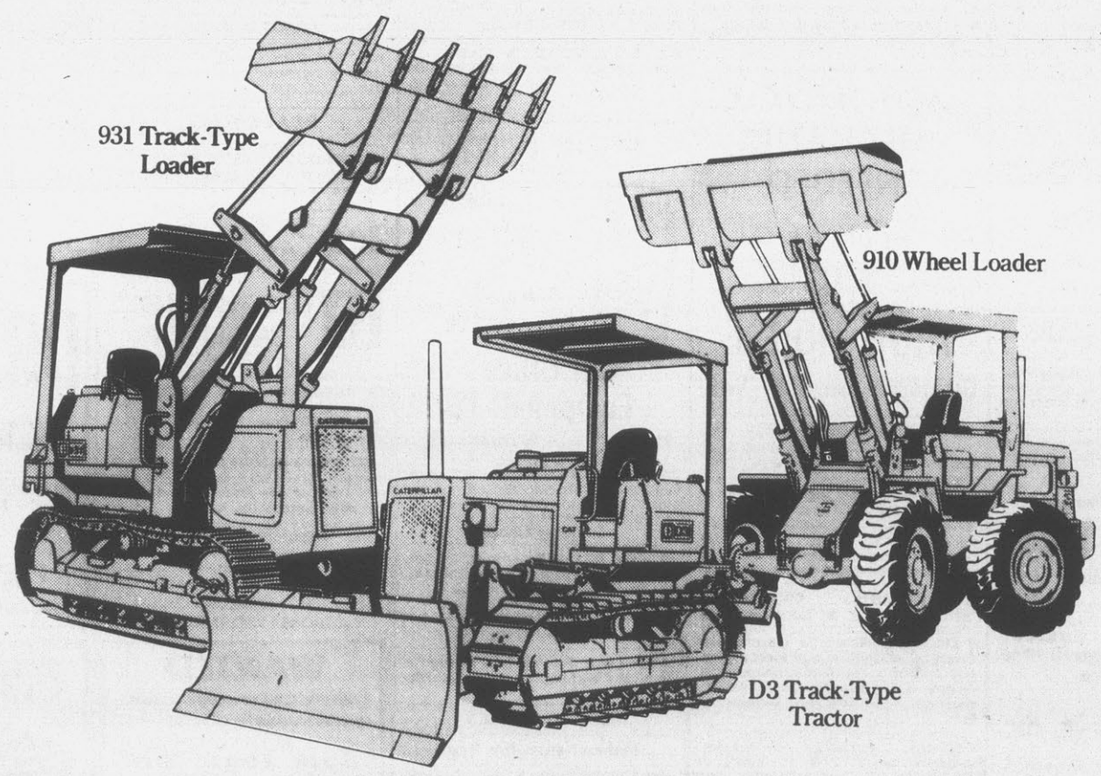

Kea became acting director last December following the firing of director Juanita Baker. Inmates said Kea, who was in Charlotte when the demonstration began, had instituted improvements in other areas while in his post.
