

LAST MINUTE CHECK . . . Jamie Besso makes a last minute check of the sail on "The Tammie Adventure," an 11 foot inflatable kayak. Jamie embarked from the Town Common on the Tar River just before noon Wednesday. His destination is the small harbor town of Mystic, Conn., some 600 water miles away.

He's Connecticut-Bound In An Eleven-Foot Kayak

At a quarter to twelve on Wednesday morning, 34 year old James (Jamie) Besso made a final check of his 11-foot bright orange inflatable kayak that he has named "The Tammie Adventure."

"Well, I'm off," he grinned, stepping into the small craft that will be his home for the next three or four weeks if all goes well on a 600 plus mile boat trip up the waterways of the Atlantic coast. Jamie's destination is the small harbor town of Mystic, Conn.

Shortly after 11:00 a.m., a Greenville friend brought Jamie, his boat and supplies to the Tar River at the point used by the ECU crew for their launchings.

Under the 90-plus-degree sun, Jamie's torso was soon streaked with perspiration as he checked and arranged water, food, clothing, a radio, tape recorder, medical supplies and a back-up oar. This long-haul trip by his own arm power is "something I promised myself when I got a second lease on life," Jamie remarked last week while talking about his past life and future hopes.

"I've been in and out of hospitals for years," Jamie said. "For three years, in 1970, '71, and '72 I was an alcoholic. I made two suicide attempts on my life in 1970. Let's say things were a mess for me."

Until 1958, Jamie, a small but brawny man, had not experienced any exceptional problems with his health. Then in February of that year he went into the Army. "I developed a bad case of double bronchial pneumonia," he said. "Just a bad break. Two months later I was mustered out, and went in and out of hospitals for regular treatments."

Now a resident of Wallingford, Conn., Jamie is a native of Boston. He grew up in the fishing village of Saco, Maine. "That's where I developed a love for the water, one I've never lost," he said.

"From the time I was in the seventh grade," Jamie said, "I've been following true stories of sea adventures. Kon Tiki was a real thrill to me, as was Le Heretique."

"Like lots of kids who grow up on the coast, I did my share of building rafts and I learned how to handle small boats. And like kids everywhere, I dreamed of having my own adventures at sea."

For five years after the 1958 attack of double bronchial pneumonia, Jamie suffered lingering problems. He continued working, at a department store in Meriden, Connecticut and then worked in Ossining, New York.

"In 1963 it was discovered I had bronchostenosis," Jamie said. "In 1965 a lobectomy was performed on my left lung. In 1969 there was a recurrence and I was told that mine was a terminal case."

It was then that Jamie said his bouts with the bottle began, followed by the

Ayden's Budget Adopted

AYDEN—The Ayden Board of Commissioners adopted a budget totaling $1,862,014 for the 1975-76 fiscal year during a special meeting Monday night.

According to Town Manager Don Russell, the new budget shows an increase of $296,996 over the budget for the current operating year.

Expenditures in the general fund total $465,522 while $47,700 has been designated for the Debt Fund. Other items included in the budget include Electric Fund, $1,273,000; water and sewer fund, $81,000; and Revenue Sharing $84,399 less interfund transfers of $89,607.

The budget includes $100,618 which has been appropriated for the Ayden Police Department and $14,529 for Crime Prevention. Other large appropriations include: Street Department, $81,083; Non-departmental, $82,889; Sanitation, $53,553; Administration, $21,195; and Garage, 19,516.

The Ayden Recreation budget amounts $12,601 and the library budget totals $13,330.

LITE SALT?

I saw a sign in a doctor's office saying that Morton's Lite Salt should not be used by anyone except someone for whom a doctor has prescribed it. Could Hotline get a doctor's opinion on this? J.S.

Dr. Jack Wilkerson said you saw the sign in his Greenville Clinic. He said he believes the product is of little value to anyone and harmful to those who may have heart of kidney problems. "The stuff is half sodium chloride (table salt) and half potassium chloride, the latter commonly used as a salt substitute," he said. "A person with fluid retention problems can get into trouble in a hurry if he uses this half-strength salt believing it to be a salt substitute. Morton has a notice on the box which says something to the effect that no one on sodium—or potassium—restricted diets should use it without a doctor's approval, but how many people read labels? And how many people know that salt is sodium chloride? Twenty-three million people with high blood pressure can be made worse by using this product."

Is it possible that a left turn signal be installed at the intersection of Elm and Tenth Streets in Greenville? L. B.

The traffic signals along Tenth Streets are interconnected, according to Department of Transportation Division Traffic Engineer Gerald England. For this reason, it would be very difficult and expensive to install a left turn signal. The entire signal system would have to be changed. Since the problem at this intersection is delay-oriented instead of accident-oriented, England said he does not believe the present conditions justify putting in the new light.

Woman Learns She May Be Last Survivor In Massacre Of Indians

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — "It's all so unreal!" Mary Jo Estep said after learning she is one of the last known survivors of a massacre of Indians in the United States.

The year was 1911 when her mother, her father, her grandfather and seven other members of a fleeing Shoshone Indian band were massacred by a posse of whites in desolate sagebrush country of northern Nevada.

Now a retired school teacher, Miss Estep, 75, said she grew up with a white family and never asked about the massacre. Her place in Indian history was recently discovered by Dayton O. Hyde, an author who spent 15 years researching a novel, "The Last Free Man."

This is his account of the massacre: Miss Estep's grandfather, Shoshone Mike, and a small Indian band that included her family, lived in a canyon near Twin Falls, Idaho.

In 1910, Mike was charged with horse stealing, so he and his band fled. Believing they were being pursued, the Indians made their way to California, then across the Sierra Nevada into Nevada. They holed up in a canyon and were soon confronted with the worst winter in Nevada history.

The Indians lived on butchered beef until they were discovered by ranchers. Fighting erupted and the ranchers were killed.

The Indians fled, chased for more than 300 miles through Nevada Territory by a large posse.

The end came near Winnemucca, Nev., when the posse attacked while Mike and his band were asleep. Only four children survived, Miss Estep, two sisters and a brother.

The children were taken to the Carson, Nev., Indian School where they remained a short time. Evan Estep, superintendent of the Indian agency at Ft. Hall, Idaho, came to the school and took the children back to Ft. Hall. He adopted Mary Jo after the three older children died of tuberculosis.

"They never talked about what had happened," recalls Miss Estep.

"I knew my parents had been killed in a massacre, but that's all I just never asked."

Earlier this year, a woman in California read the book and wrote Hyde that she had gone to school with a Mary Jo Estep, whose parents had died in an Indian massacre in Nevada.

Summer Shortages

By CHRIS J. HARPER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. consumers face spot shortages and higher prices for gasoline this summer in what may become the tightest supply situation since the Arab oil embargo, a top energy analyst says.

Herbert Hugo, senior editor of Platt's Oilgram, predicted in a telephone interview today that "by July 4 we are going to see some big price increases of three to five cents a gallon."

The severity of the situation will depend on whether the consumer "continues to cuss out the oil companies and then says, 'Fill'er up,'" he said.

Hugo said shortages probably will first appear on the East and West coasts, where gasoline shortages were especially severe in the summer of 1973.

"But the situation won't be as bad as the Arab embargo," he added.

Still, he said some city drivers may have trouble finding gasoline after sundown and on Sundays should the gasoline situation worsen.

Because of late rains in the Midwest, farmers have not been able to use their tractors and thus fuel stocks remain only slightly lower than last year, he said.

Hugo said refiners are operating at an average of between 80 and 85 per cent capacity. Oil stocks are down 10 per cent from last year.

He said he doubts the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) will launch another embargo even though it is considering another price hike that would increase gasoline prices.

"It's true an embargo would be disastrous, but it's 99 per cent impossible," Hugo said. "OPEC needs liquid funds and they won't get them by cutting off their consumers. No one's really worried."

Heavy Guard For Prison Protestors Police Deter Ransom

By CATHY STEELE ROCHE
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

About 150 prison guards and about 16 highway patrolmen dressed in riot gear lined up between 50 to 75 demonstrators outside the troubled state Correctional Center for Women this morning.

The protestors arrived about two hours before dissident inmates met inside with prison officials to discuss grievances that erupted into violence on Monday.

The protestors rushed to the gate about 8:45 a.m. and talked to inmates through the fence for about 30 minutes, but they retreated when additional guards were seen arriving.

Larry Little, a Black Panther leader from Winston-Salem, urged both the guards and the demonstrators to be peaceful.

The inmates rejected concessions announced by Director of Prisons Ralph Edwards on Wednesday, which included only a partial closing of the prison laundry.

Edwards said in the wake of a violent disturbance Monday that the laundry would be closed "within 90 days." But Wednesday he said the workload at the facility would be sharply reduced instead of the entire operation shut down.

The inmates threatened to remain outside in protest, after the 8 p.m. lockup Wednesday night, but the last of them went to their dormitories quietly about 9 p.m. Their supporters outside the gate warned them that busloads of guards were on call at Central Prison, the main men's prison, a few miles away.

Representatives of Action for Forgotten Women, the group organizing the demonstration, met with Edwards and other prison officials Wednesday night.

Larger Budget, But No Farmville Tax Increase

FARMVILLE—Farmville Commissioners have adopted a budget a half million dollars larger than last years, yet have kept the tax evaluation at the same level as last year.

The budget amount is $2.59 million for the fiscal year beginning July 1; the tax rate, 55 cents per $100 valuation. Water, electric, and sewer rates are being retained at their present levels.

The half-million dollar increase is accounted for by the higher cost of electricity, but this is being passed on to the electric consumers. The power budget in the past 12 months was $790,000. The projected power budget for the coming year will be $1,255,295.

A revised time table for the construction of a waste treatment plant for the town schedules bid-taking for Sept. 18, Engineer John Pridgen told the Commissioners in the same call meeting Monday night.

Bids will be received Oct. 23 and contracts awarded Nov. 6, with construction beginning around Dec. 4 and taking approximately two years.

The size of the plant, at the recommendation of the federal Environmental Protection Agency, has been decreased from four million-gallon capacity to 3.5 million. The new plant will be built east of Farmville on a site bought from the R. A. Joyner heirs. Some time ago local voters approved the issuance of up to $1.1 million in bond as its share of construction costs. 87.5 per cent of the cost is supposed to come from federal and state sources. Revised estimates of the costs set the town's share at $944,400.

The Commissioners agreed to accept the resignation of Carl Tanner as police chief, but to retain the 30-year veteran on the force as a lieutenant as long as he wishes to remain. Applications for the job are being considered, but Tanner will not resign until a replacement is named, Town Administrator W.A. Martin said.

Newport Girl Found Slain; Killer Sought

NEWPORT, N. C. (AP) — Local police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation were searching Wednesday for the killer of Donna Emmel, 15, whose body was found Tuesday afternoon.

Police said she had been strangled.

Her mother had reported her missing Monday night after going to a variety store in Newport where Donna and a younger brother had been.

The brother told police that Donna had left the store after an earlier telephone call from her mother. He said he saw her cross the highway and enter a path leading to their home and that a man had followed the girl on the path through the woods.

The search, which began about 9 p. m. Monday, ended Tuesday afternoon and a local resident found the body in a ditch inside the city limits.

'Tickled' Woman Should Try Same Approach On Hubby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I must make a comment about the woman whose husband tickles her until she is hysterical, even though she begs him to stop.

I had a husband like that. He used to shadowbox around me, occasionally landing a genuinely painful blow here and there. He would dance around, prizefighter-style, saying, "Let's mix it up a little." He would pretend it was all in fun, but I knew he was sadistic when I begged him to stop and he wouldn't. I even told him that if he'd quit that little shadowboxing game for good, I would accept it as my Christmas present. Even that didn't work.

Then I casually asked a friend of mine in the presence of her husband and mine if her husband ever played such games. Of course he hadn't. And then a knowing look passed between the two of them.

He never played that game again. A psychiatrist later told me that when I exposed his cruelty to our friends, he saw himself as others saw him, and he stopped voluntarily.

So maybe this poor "tickled" woman should try the same approach.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN: It's worth a try. Isn't it a shame that some people are more concerned about how they appear to strangers than how their own families view them?

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a grown son and his mother who kiss each other on the mouth? My boyfriend is 27, and you should see the way he and his mother kiss! Every hello and goodbye is like a love scene in the movies.

The first time I noticed it was last New Year's Eve. They embraced like a pair of lovers, and they held a kiss for what seemed like five minutes without coming up for air. I was so angry I didn't even feel like kissing him after that.

It looks like his mother loves him the way I do. Could I be mistaken? Or could I be overreacting because I love him?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: It depends. You don't say whether your boyfriend is the KISSER or the KISSEE. If he's the kisser, he may have a problem.

DEAR ABBY: Please put something in your column to shake up some of those thoughtless people who make stinging remarks to pregnant women.

I'm pregnant, and I've had people ask, "When's your due date?" And when I tell them, they say, "You'll never last that long!"

I've had some people ask, "Did your doctor tell you you might have twins? You sure look like it!"

And, "Are YOU still walking around?"

Then there are some women who insist upon telling you in detail what a hard time they had delivering their babies.

It's difficult enough to be pregnant without having to answer all those questions and listen to their frightening talk. Be a pal, Abby, and print this. It may help. Thanks.

OVERDUE IN ORLANDO

DEAR OVERDUE: Here's your letter. And many a woman who has walked a mile in your moccasins will identify with your situation and thank you.

More Female TV Stars Than Women Moviegoer Pleasers

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — What does television have that motion pictures don't? A flock of female superstars.

Women like Mary Tyler Moore, Carol Burnett, Valerie Harper, Cher, Beatrice Arthur, Angie Dickinson, Elizabeth Montgomery, Lucille Ball. They draw huge TV audiences.

There are star actresses in films, certainly: Faye Dunaway, Liza Minelli, Elizabeth Taylor, Liv Ullman, Jane Fonda, Ellen Burstyn, Glenda Jackson, Julie Christie, Pam Grier.

But only one, Barbra Streisand, is considered a heavy-weight today in terms of box-office drawing power.

Why the disparity? There are several reasons, including the number and type of films being made these days, but the main reason stems from a basic difference between the two mediums: movies, for most people, tend to be special events while television is a daily fixture.

Movies, with their enormous screens, tend to be bigger than life in both stories and characters. Television material, both in subject matter and treatment, tends to be scaled down to a much more "ordinary" level for the small screen.

The result, contends Ethel Winant, head of casting and talent for CBS, is that women on television can emphasize warmth and vivaciousness rather than glamour and eccentricity, which the big screen seems to demand.

Of the female powerhouses on television, she observes:

"They're all easy to know. They come into your living room as guests and you could conceive of meeting them and sitting down to coffee."

What it boils down to, she believes, is that these women are not threatening to the viewers at home — women or men. She illustrates the difference between female movie stars and female television stars for the average woman in the audience this way:

"If Elizabeth Taylor or Barbra Streisand was coming over for dinner, she'd feel like she had to go out and buy a new dress, get her hair done, run next door to borrow a friend's jewelry and get someone else to cook dinner.

"But if Mary or Carol or Bea were coming over, she'd say, 'Well, I'm serving coffee and cheesecake and they'll understand.'"

Despite the greater number of female TV stars, however, television is a long way from deserving meritorious citations for its use of actresses, says

Ms. Nolan, who is national chairperson of the Screen Actors Guild's committee on women.

She believes there are more women superstars on television only because there are more television shows than movies.

"People think we're doing well in television because they associate very strongly with a few very important women," says Ms. Nolan.

"They forget that out of a seven-night schedule, we're talking about very few (women stars) over-all."

She points out that except for Angie Dickinson in "Police Woman," virtually all of television's top females now, as generally in the past, are in comedy and variety shows.

ECU English Professor Publishes Grammar Text

A modern grammar text for teachers by Janice Hardison Faulkner, assistant professor of English at East Carolina University, was recently published by Kendall-Hunt Publishing Co. of Dubuque, Iowa.

The 140-page textbook, "Grammar and the Language Arts," is "a by-product of several years of working with public school teachers in in-service courses." Says its author. It is designed to introduce a specific approach to sentence analysis by comparing methods of traditional grammar to those of the newer, transformational grammar.

In the first chapter, Mrs. Faulkner discusses the usefulness of a non-traditional approach to teaching English when the class includes disadvantaged pupils who speak a non-standard English typical of their socio-economic or ethnic backgrounds.

In order to teach these children effectively, she says, teachers must discard the notion that social variations in language indicate low intelligence and concentrate their efforts toward expanding, rather than rejecting, a disadvantaged child's linguistic experience.

All people, including grammar teachers, function linguistically on a variety of levels, she said, often adapting their speech patterns and pronunciation to their hearers. Communication being the purpose of the spoken and written word, language instruction should stress that standard English is what is best understood by most people, rather than what is "correct" or "proper" in the strict sense.

Before joining the ECU faculty Mrs. Faulkner taught English on the high school level in Halifax County and at UNC-Wilmington. She has been director of freshman composition at ECU and has done extensive work as consultant and teacher of in-training service courses for the ECU Division of Continuing Education and the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

Mrs. Faulkner is permanent director of the annual ECU Language Arts Conference sponsored each fall by the ECU Department of English.

Summer Plans Formulated By Opti-Mrs. Club

Plans for summer activities were formulated at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Opti-Mrs. Club of Greenville.

Mrs. Charles Ross, president, announced that the state convention will be held at the Holiday Inn-Four Seasons, Greensboro, Aug. 21-23. She also gave a report on the Operation Sunshine programs.

A party for Operation Sunshine summer participants was scheduled for Aug. 12. The presentation of the "most optimistic girl awards" will highlight the party. A family picnic for Opti-Mrs. members was scheduled for Thursday, July 10, at 6 p.m. at the Cherry Oaks club house.

A program review for April and May was given. Mike Allen spoke on the Community Ambassador program in April at the home of Mrs. Curtis Howell. President Larry Good of the Optimist Club presented an appreciation check to the group in May at the meeting held at the home of Mrs. C.P. Shaw.

A scrapbook workshop was held following the meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. Ross.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I heard of a couple the other day who, in their latter years, enjoy financial independence they never dreamed possible. However, due to maladies, their respective diets are limited to baby foods.

Is that a kick in the head? It's the old saw — when you need it, you can't afford it. . . when you can afford, you can't enjoy it.

We used to drive around on Sundays and look at houses built to accommodate a growing family. The only ones who could afford them were couples whose children had grown. The idea of all those empty bathrooms used to keep me awake at night. (I had a nail outside of ours with a card reading, "This number being served.")

It's cruel to even bring it up, but these are just a few of the observations that are probably in your future and mine.

When you no longer have to read a menu from the dollars and cents column, you'll have to read the parenthesis (20-minute wait may be too long).

When your husband can afford to have his hair styled, he may have nothing left to rearrange.

When you can afford to have your hair frosted, your teenagers may have streaked it for you.

When you can afford to have a cleaning lady take the fingerprints off the walls, you may not have any fingerprints living at home. When your trees are big enough to hang a swing from, there will be no one young enough to use the swings.

When you can afford sexy clothes, you'll have forgotten why you are wearing them.

When you have time to get a tan, researchers will have discovered it makes you look older and is unhealthy.

When you can afford to "get away from it all," it will take more effort to go than to stay.

When you have more than a $5 balance in your checking account, you'll have an accountant to manage your affairs.

When you have a complete set of matching glasses for eight, you'll only need two to set the table each night.

When someone gets around to baking you a birthday cake, the candles will be a fire hazard.

My big fear is that by the time I have time to explore who I really am and find my true identity, I'll discover I'm average.

Better to live with baby food than that.

In Appreciation

This is to our Falkland friends who have been so full of love and concern during our recent bereavement in the loss of Cindy James and Thomas Matthews. We thank you for being more than friends. You've been sisters and brothers to our family. May God richly bless each one of you for all the efforts put forth in bringing the food, the flowers and most of all your time and love.

Suspect Arson Attempts On Big Carrier

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Sixteen cases of suspected arson in the Tidewater area from January through May of this year have been investigated so far, the Naval Intelligence Services says.

The NIS was asked about frequent occurrences of fires aboard various ships following a published report here which said eight fires broke out on the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy in a span of 16 hours last Sunday.

The Norfolk Ledger-Star reported Wednesday that the fires flared up as the Kennedy was stationed at the Norfolk Naval Station's pier.

A NIS spokesman said that although 21 suspected cases of arson were investigated during the same five-month span in 1974, its investigation of what it termed "wrongful destruction" climbed from 26 to 29.

The Ledger-Star said it learned from a "well-placed source" that two of the fires aboard the Kennedy Sunday were in storage compartments, two in "confined spaces," and four in barrels, a strong indication of arson.

The Kennedy currently is preparing to leave next week for a six-week deployment with the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean.

The Navy described "wrongful destruction" as "any wrongful, willful or reckless destruction, loss, damage or disposition of military and nonmilitary property."

The NIS spokesman said suspected arson cases have ranged from "smouldering trash containers to major fires on a ship or station."

He said that in the wrongful destruction category, incidents have ranged from a broken glass instrument cover in an aircraft cockpit to serious damage to a ship's propulsion system.

NIS said through the spokesman, "It should be noted that many arsons investigated by this service are merely fires of suspicious origin and not all are necessarily incendiary. In both categories, some cases are resolved as accidental in origin, but they still appear as part of the statistics."

Arson and malicious damage aboard ships first drew national publicity during the war in Vietnam, when some sailors admitted responsibility for the acts as a protest against the war.

NIS said that in the Tidewater area "there has been a general rise in both categories (arson and wrongful destruction) over the past few years."

Responded To 28 Fires

During the month of May, the 18 Rural Fire Departments in Pitt County answered a total of 31 alarms for 28 fires.

Of this number, house fires accounted for 12 of the alarms, and there were also five mobile home fires. Figures show that other categories of fires occurring during May were: Auto fires, three; grass or woods fires, one; buildings other than houses, one; mutual aid situations, where one station assists another, three; false alarms, one, and other categories, five.

Property with an estimated value of $56,903 was lost in the 28 fires. Value of property involved in the fires was estimated at $136,100, and additionally, property valued at an estimated $50,200 was exposed to the fires.

The Winterville Fire Department was the most active during May, answering a total of nine alarms.

Bishop Gossman Will Be Visitor

As a continuing facet of visitations to deaneries under his jurisdiction, Bishop F. Joseph Gossman, the recently installed Bishop of the Diocese of Raleigh, will tour the Greenville deanery June 20-23.

Bishop Gossman's visits constitute an effort to familiarize himself with the clergy, religious sisters and laity of the diocese.

The Bishop will have dinner here Friday with priests of the deanery, and concelebrate the Mass with Father Maurice Spillane, pastor of St. Peter's Church, at 9:00 a.m. Saturday; followed by visits to churches in Farmville and Grifton, and to Washington and Vanceboro that afternoon. On Sunday, Bishop Gossman will celebrate Mass in Washington, visit Plymouth where a new church is being built, then visit the church in Ahsokie.

A deanery reception is planned at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at St. Gabriel's Hall (in Greenville).

Earlier this month, Bishop Gossman visited the deaneries of Goldsboro and Durham. Future visitations are scheduled for Pinehurst (June 27-30), Elizabeth City (July 11-14), Wilmington (July 18-12); New Bern (July 25-28); Rocky Mount (August 1-4); and Raleigh (August 8-11).

Pitt Woman Named To Serve Campaign

Mrs. David H. Smith, Ayden, Rt. 2, has been selected to serve on the statewide Nickels for Know-How Referendum Committee.

Mrs. Smith is a homemaker, wife of a farmer, secretary-treasurer of the Pitt County Farm Bureau, and a director for the N.C. Agricultural Foundation from Pitt County.

The Nickels for Know-How Referendum will be held across the state on Nov. 25. On that date the users of feed and fertilizer will decide if they wish to continue assessing themselves a nickel per ton to support agricultural research and education.

The unique "nickels" program was started in North Carolina in 1951, and users of feed and fertilizer have voted to continue it on six occasions. The referendum on Nov. 25 will be for a six-year period.

Money collected through this voluntary assessment program is used for research and education by the School of Agriculture and Life Science at North Carolina State University.

Man Arrested For Break-In

Calvin Augustus Harris, 31, of Rt. 1, Box 87, Greenville, was arrested Wednesday and charged with a break-in and larceny at McLawhorn's Grocery on Rt. 1.

Chief Pitt deputy Brooks Oakley said that Harris is charged with breaking into the business owned by Freddie McLawhorn and taking some $40 worth of assorted merchandise.

Oakley noted that entrance to the grocery was gained by forcing open a window. Minor damage occurred to the window frame, he said.

Bond for Harris was set at $2,500 pending a hearing in District Court here on July 9.

May Prosecute Welfare Fraud

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County social service officials are referring nine suspected welfare fraud cases to the district attorney for possible prosecution.

County Social Services Director Edwin Chapin said Wednesday six cases involve food stamp recipients and the others involve women receiving assistance under the aid to families with dependant children program.

This is the first time in almost three years that welfare officials have referred cases to legal authorities for possible criminal action.

Criticism Should Strengthen

It was revealed at the meeting of the Pitt Memorial Hospital trustees Tuesday night that the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals had reached a decision of non-accreditation for Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Director Jack Richardson reported to the board that the decision was based upon recommendations of a survey team which visited the hospital March 17 and 18.

Richardson said several of the recommendations had to do with environmental services and the physical condition of the present building and 21 of the recommendations concerned meeting of new fire safety code requirements.

There were eight recommendations having to do with bylaws and 28 involving revision in the medical staff bylaws. Twenty-one recommendations concerned documentation of activity now taking place in the hospital for which there were no written records.

The physical condition of the building and meeting of new fire safety laws will be taken care of in the new hospital which is now under construction in an area west of the present building. The hospital will soon be redrafting its bylaws as development of an agreement with the ECU Medical School progresses.

It seems harsh to us to deny hospital accreditation based on structural problems in the old building when a new facility is rapidly taking shape a short distance away, but it appears that many objections raised by the committee are based on this. According to Richardson, he and the chief of the medical staff and chairman of the trustees are to meet with the Joint Commission Accreditation Committee in Chicago this week. Perhaps our representatives can impress on the committee the fact that excellent new facilities are under construction and that it would not be feasible to spend large sums in the old building for such short term use.

Pitt Memorial will soon be involved in the development of the ECU Medical School, and it is essential that accrediting problems not cause any delay in the school's progress.

It is well to remember, though, that accrediting criticism is designed to strengthen an institution, not tear it down. Memorial Hospital at Chapel Hill came under heavy criticism from an accrediting committee a few years past and this led to action to correct deficiencies found there.

Our hospital board of trustees should accept the criticism of the accrediting committee as an opportunity to strengthen our hospital. The trustees should do everything in their power to see that immediate steps are taken to clear up these accreditation problems.

Perspective On CIA

The Rockefeller Commission released its report on the Central Intelligence Agency on the night of June 10, and on the morning of June 11 The New York Times almost broke an arm patting itself on the back. It was a remarkable acrobatic exercise; it merits a round of faint applause.

The Times started all this business about the CIA with a spread-eagled story by Seymour Hersh on December 22. It is useful to recall exactly what was charged at the time. This was the accusation: that "the CIA, directly violating its charter, conducted a massive, illegal domestic intelligence operation during the Nixon administration against the anti-war movement and other dissident groups in the United States."

In its lead story of June 11, the Times exulted that the Rockefeller Commission's report "confirmed the basic elements of an article in the New York Times last Dec. 22 that quoted sources as saying that the CIA had engaged in a "massive, illegal domestic intelligence operation against the anti-war movement and other groups."

If you perceive that a couple of elements are missing, your perception is functioning nicely. Curiously, these identical elements also were missing from a story on page 22, in which the Times again lauded the Times. The page 22 encomium asserted that the commission's report "affirmed in virtually every respect an account in The New York Times last Dec. 22 of a 'massive, illegal domestic intelligence operation against the anti-war movement and other dissident groups in the United States.'"

Suppose we get this affair in perspective. The commission report does not confirm that the CIA conducted these "massive" and "illegal" operations in "direct violation of its charter." On the contrary, the report emphasized that the CIA's charter is vague,

Ratrace Is Left Behind

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) — Three years ago Bruce Campbell was part of the Nixon administration, a $27,000-a-year government employee who had two secretaries, wore pin-stripe suits and lived in Washington's Georgetown section.

Now the 31-year-old Campbell operates a party fishing boat on this small, lush island of Martha's Vineyard which lies just off Cape Cod. He has started a scallop company and an ice company and also manages a small, local fish market.

Like hundreds of Americans, Campbell, who grew up in Milton, Mass., has chosen to change his life, to put the pressures and prestige of the executive ratrace behind him. He has grown a beard, wears dungarees to work and is giving his three-piece suits to a Vineyard boy who is going "off-island" to college in the fall.

"I'm working harder and enjoying it more," Campbell said as he downed an early morning breakfast. "The quality of life here is so much better. I don't have to lock the door. Everyone knows you."

Lured by the sound of the fog horn and the smell of the sea, Campbell says he is a happier man, that his marriage has improved, that his kids have a nice place to live. He has a two-story colonial house he built on two acres of land in a wooded section of West Chop, near Vineyard Haven — and though the payments are around $500 a month, he said he has never missed one.

"The first year we had $300 worth of business and $1,200 in debts," he said, rolling his "Rs" softly as New Englanders tend to do. "The next year we had $11,000 in business and $7,000 in debts. Last year we had $22,000 in business and $3,000 debts."

By listening to Campbell, a handsome, healthy looking man who never graduated from college, one can understand why he left Washington's pressure-cooker atmosphere to make a new start on the Vineyard.

At first, the life seemed a little slow and he missed Washington, Campbell said. "Our first year here we got the Washington Post. I missed the activity for awhile, the hustle and bustle. But it fades. It

POLITICAL NOTES

Faced Few Easy Decisions

By JOHN KILGO
If the North Carolina Legislature is successful in adjourning this session by June 20, you will not hear the first member say: "I'm going to miss this place."

There isn't a man or woman in General Assembly who won't be glad to see this session come to a close. It has been a taxing experience.

The main problem has been a lack of money. Revenues weren't up to projections, and to balance the budget the Legislature had to take out the knife and do some deep cutting. Most of the politicians will admit they had to abolish programs that were important to the well-being of the state.

Also, controversy met the legislators at just about every turn. They had to toss and turn over no-fault auto insurance, and anything that comes out of this session might be no-fault in name, but it won't measure up in reality.

There was the Equal Rights Amendment, raises for state employees, and the most controversial, time-consuming item of them all—a degree-granting medical school for East Carolina University.

The latter will be discussed long after the Legislature packs its gear and leaves Raleigh.

Many view it as a landmark victory. They see it as East Carolina coming to age as a great university, and as a chance to end the critical doctor shortage that exists in many rural areas of the state. Throughout the controversy the comment was often heard: "The East deserves this. The state has been short-changing the area for years."

On the other side, people are angry about the Legislature, in a critically tight money year, funding the ECU med school. It was done in a year that other campuses in the university system were asked to tighten their belts and do without. Faculties are upset because they're not being paid what they think they're worth.

Schools like UNC-CH and Appalachian State feel their requests were set aside to satisfy a power play directed by ECU partisans.

No matter which side you're on in this one, it's likely to be replayed many times during the next year.

At least two men who were prominent in the ECU discussion were Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt and House Speaker Jimmy Green. Both men favored the medical school for ECU and pushed for its passage. Also, both men are looking at the Governor's race next year—Hunt as a certain candidate, Green as a possibility.

Will they be hurt or helped by the role they played in the medical school controversy? Who's to say? But they will be called on to answer questions about their roles should they campaign for Governor six months from now.

Nothing about this session was easy. It was like Sen. Billy Mills of Swansboro said: "We haven't had many easy decisions to make up here this year."

The GALLUP POLL

Public's Optimism Rising

By GEORGE GALLUP
(Copyright 1975, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.)

PRINCETON, N.J. June—Public optimism regarding the nation's economy continue to climb. In the latest survey, 42 per cent think the economic situation during the next six months will get better, up seven points from a late March survey and three times the figure recorded in a measurement taken last August.

The most dramatic change has occurred in the West, with 48 per cent now predicting improvement compared to 32 per cent in March.

The public has established a good record for economic predictions. In January 1974 more than eight in 10 Americans predicted a year of economic difficulty, in contrast to the predictions of virtually all economists.

A growth in optimism is currently recorded or all major groups in the population, save one. Among non-whites, little change has come about in economic expectations since the March survey, with only about one in five saying economic conditions will improve.

Here is the question asked in the latest nationwide survey and in five previous surveys: "Do you think the economic situation in the United States during the next six months will get better or will get worse?"

The latest results show that, for the first time since August, when the measurements were started, the percentage saying "better" outweighs the percentage saying "worse."

Here is the full trend:

	Will Economic Conditions Get Better Or Worse During Next Six Months?
	Better	Worse	Stay Same	No Opinion
May 30-June 2	42%	36%	16%	6%
March 28-31	35	50	12	3
Jan. 31-Feb. 3	30	56	10	4
Nov. '74	16	71	10	3
Sept. '74	15	69	11	5
Aug. '74	13	68	15	4

East	34	41	18	7
Midwest	46	35	14	5
South	40	33	19	8
West	48	39	10	3

A total of 1,626 persons, 18 and older, were interviewed in the May 30-June 2 survey, while 1,566 persons were interviewed in the March 28-31 survey.

To the editor:

Regarding the article in Hotline several days ago about making the public aware of a pending rate increase—in the first place each customer received a notice of the proposed increase in their monthly bill several weeks ago. It is not as if we are trying to sneak anything across on the customer as the writer implied. We have not had a rate increase since 1957, furthermore our installation charge is only $12.50 labor for residence service, regardless of how much time the installation requires. (Let a plumber, electrician, auto mechanic or whoever spend several hours at your residence or his shop and compare the bills!) At least we raise our rates very seldom instead of every month like the power companies do. What other industry or business maintains their product for life after it is installed other than the Telephone Co., free of charge.

I challenge the writer of the referred article to find me one product or business that has kept their prices in line as well as Carolina Tel. & Tel. Co. After all we have to eat also.

was the operation "illegal"? In the commission's view, "some domestic activities of Operation CHAOS unlawfully exceeded the CIA's statutory authority." But that finding has to be set against the commission's finding that the mission itself — to study foreign influence on domestic dissidence — was proper.

The great bulk of the CIA's investigation was lawful, prudent, and discreet. Files were kept under absolute security. The commission could find no evidence that the CIA at any time engaged in any "personal or electronic surveillance, wiretaps, or unauthorized entries against any dissident group or individual."

Against the Times' exalted opinion of the Times' allegations, let me venture this observation: a fair reading of the entire commission report, taking the findings by their four corners, provides persuasive evidence that in its domestic activities, the CIA has acted, on the whole, with reason and with restraint. The opportunities for abuse, over a quarter of a century, were enormous; the actual abuses were few.

40 Years Ago Today

June 19, 1935
Greenville's league leading outfit broke a tie by scoring three runs in the ninth yesterday, and the best Snow Hill could do in their half of the inning was come up with one. Greenville won 4-2 to protect their one-game lead in the conference.

The game was a hurler's duel between Newsome of Snow Hill and Greenville's David Smith. Newsome went the route, but Smith was relieved in the ninth by Chubby Dean after Snow Hill scored one run.

Ambler's single opened Greenville's victorious rally in the ninth. Huiskamp sacrificed. Ace Parker flied to left and it looked as if Newsome might pull out of trouble. Manager Boley Farley of Greenville then decided to surrender his turn at the plate to Dean. The move proved a good one as Dean dropped a short single into left field. The blow was good enough to score one run, but three came in when the ball was erred by Neuman. Bostic popped up to end the inning.

Strength For Today

SEED UNCONSCIOUSLY SOWN

When the Danish sculptor Thorwaldsen returned to his native land with many sculptures which he had made in Italy, the servants in unpacking them scattered some of the straw in which they were wrapped on the ground near Thorwaldsen's house. The next year flowers came up which usually only grow in Italy.

This was a by-product of Thorwaldsen's creativeness. Intent upon pursuing his course as an artist, he was unconscious of the fact that he was also scattering beauty and cheer in another way.

Some of the most gracious acts of a Christian's life are unconscious. He goes about his work day by day intent upon his daily tasks. But as he goes he drops here a word of good cheer, there a wise counsel, and perhaps in passing gives life to some brother who was stumbling. What is the result? Tomorrow flowers spring up beside the path which he has trod. And in some cases these may be his most beautiful creations.

'Median' Home Buyer Hurting

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — According to an old and often-violated rule of thumb, a family can afford to pay 2½ times annual income for a home.

Since the median price of the typical one-family home now is between $36,000 and $37,000, and median income is around $13,000, that rule, if applied, would mean a good many Americans couldn't afford a new home.

Presumably they would continue to rent instead. But, say the economists of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, problems are presented in that direction too. And the major problem is, of course, price.

Saul Klamon, chief economist of the savings bank group, observes that it is increasingly difficult for developer-builders and bankers to come up with economically viable plans for multifamily dwellings.

Rising land, material, money and labor costs have plunged that segment of housing into a deeper depression than most people realize. After peaking at about one million units in 1972, the annual rate now is just one quarter of that.

It is for this reason — the depression in multifamily, rental units — that the association remains relatively glum about housing's future.

Just a few months ago some forecasters expected an influx of savings to stimulate more mortgages, and it has, but not sharply.

Both consumers and bankers seem hesitant and uncertain.

The potential buyer balks at rising prices and mortgage rates that remain higher than he can adjust to.

The banks are almost mortally afraid of being caught with long-term, low-interest loans on their books. To them, the pressure of interest rates is upward.

As they see it, they are being forced to act as if this were an economically stable society. It isn't, they say. That is, they feel they are asked to commit themselves for 30 years ahead when they can't see beyond a few weeks.

The savings bankers, and indeed most bankers, insist that the future stability of interest rates depends upon having fiscal policy share the burden with monetary policy. Cut the deficits; promote efficiency, they say.

Launch Grain Trade Corruption Probe

By JAMES GERSTENZANG, Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department officials are among the first witnesses as the Senate opens its investigation of alleged corruption in the foreign grain trade amid allegations that exported wheat and other commodities are being mixed with dirt and debris.

The Senate subcommittee on foreign agriculture policy joins at least four other investigations looking into the foreign commodity trade, focusing on alleged bribery among federally licensed inspectors. Some of these inspectors allegedly have approved the shipment of low-quality grain from U.S. ports.

Under Secretary of Agriculture J. Phil Campbell was expected to testify today about inspection procedures on the docks and about Agriculture Department attempts to solve the problems that have led to complaints from overseas buyers of U.S. grain.

Campbell substituted for Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who is in South America this week.

A spokesman for the subcommittee said the panel was primarily concerned with determining how extensive the problems are, although it would look into grading standards used to classify the grains and the manner in which the commodities are handled on the docks.

"Are there a few bad apples in the barrel or is the barrel so rotten that it contaminates all the apples that get in?" he asked.

The Departments of Justice and Agriculture, the Internal Revenue Service and one other Senate subcommittee are investigating the handling of grain as it moves from the farm belt to cargo ships.

The probe began in New Orleans, the nation's biggest grain shipping port. There have been 15 indictments in New Orleans and five in Houston as a result of various federal investigations.

Butz said in a recent interview that the Agriculture Department was looking into several options to improve inspections, including a federal takeover that could add 3,000 jobs to the federal payroll. Federal law now prohibits the federal inspection of grain but requires licensing by the department of the grain inspectors.

The inspectors are hired by private firms, boards of trade or state agencies to approve or disapprove the grain shipped from U.S. ports and to inspect the shipping facilities, including cargo holds.

A six-man delegation from the Federation of European Feed Compounds recently confirmed charges that broken corn, cheaper grains, dust, dirt and trash are added to export shipments.

A federation spokesman said that unless the quality of the grain and soybean meal is improved, European buyers may be forced to look elsewhere for the commodities.

However, Harlan Ryan, chief grain inspector at the port of New Orleans, denied that dirt is intentionally added. He said foreign buyers can purchase any grade of grain and specify its cleanliness. Most purchase lower grades because they're cheaper, he said.

Claims Wallace A Natural Rival

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford says he and Alabama Gov. George Wallace are "natural opponents" for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination.

Sanford told a news conference Wednesday he and Wallace "came along at the same time and in the same part of the country in the second most difficult time in the history of the country in terms of racial affairs."

"But," said Sanford, he and Wallace approached matters differently. "He went at it based on a negative approach, developing the fears and hatreds of the people, and I went at it with a sense of good will in trying to develop from a positive point of view what we might do," said the former governor.

"He stood in the door attempting to keep little children from going to school, while I was trying to open doors of opportunity. So I contend he and I are natural opponents," Sanford said.

Sanford, governor of North Carolina from 1961-65 and then president of Duke University, was briefly a presidential candidate in 1972. He ran second to Wallace in the North Carolina primary in 1972, but attributed that to getting a late start in the race.

Sanford said he would probably withdraw from the race if defeated by Wallace in North Carolina again next year. He said he expected to enter more than a dozen primaries and run against Wallace in many of them.

"I'll talk about the positive and let him talk about the negative, and I'll bet that the American people will go with the positive approach," he said.

Sanford was in the Illinois capital for a dinner being held by a local Democratic group.

School Accreditation Said Still Endangered

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Even though the legislature is expected to increase its operating budget by $225,000 for the next two years, an official said Wednesday that North Carolina Central University's law school might lose accreditation this summer.

After presenting a study on the school's needs to the board of trustees, Chancellor Albert Whiting said it would cost at least $600,000 to upgrade the school enough to meet accreditation standards of the American Bar Association.

The state budget is still in flux, but as it stands now the school would get the operating budget increase plus $2.5 million to construct a new building.

The ABA had warned in February that if the school doesn't have a suitable plan for improvement, it would lose accreditation this summer. Whiting said an ABA committee will visit the school in July to decide on renewing its accreditation.

The school's shortcomings were studied by Frank R. Strong, law professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Among his recommendations were: —Raising admission standards, but retaining the school for minority and disadvantaged students. It is now 65 to 75 percent black.

—Doubling the faculty from eight to 16 and adding two assistant administrators who would also teach parttime.

—Increasing the library from 46,000 volumes to 60,000 at a cost of about $310,000.

—Raising faculty salaries from the current average of $17,835 to about $25,000, similar to salaries at UNC and Duke law schools.

Strong's report also said the current building is "absolutely impossible" and "intolerable," adding the new building must be built.

Trucker Plans Assault On Big Rig Speed Mark

By FREDERICK STANDISH, Associated Press Writer EASTABOGA, Ala. (AP) — John C. Ray says he's ready to set a motoring record — in an 18-wheel, 25,000-plus-pound tractor-trailer rig that he says will have to hurtle around a race-track at more than 100 miles per hour.

Ray, 37, is planning to set the first-ever closed course speed record for a giant rig, complete with trailer.

His reason? "Well, I guess for one thing, that it's never been done," the 5-foot-7, 140-pound Ray said.

The attempt is to come during the Talladega 500 weekend, tentatively scheduled for Aug. 8-10, on the 2.66-mile sharply banked Alabama International Motor Speedway in nearby Talladega, Ala.

And the trial has special meaning for Ray.

"You know," he said, "I used to plow that land where the speedway is sitting."

"My father leased the land from the government and we parked our tractors under the shade of the oak trees that sit behind the press box," he added.

But with all the fond memories Ray has about the speedway, there's danger lurking in its severely banked turns.

It takes a speed of at least 70 m.p.h. to keep a passenger car up on the steep banks. Ray figures he will have to push his $45,000 rig at an average speed of at least 100 m.p.h. to keep it up. That means the 40-foot long vehicle will have to hit somewhere around 125 m.p.h. on the back stretch.

"It scares me a little bit," he said, "because those banks at Talladega are extremely steep."

"It is a bit top-heavy," he said.

"It started off as a conversation piece late last year," he said, "and it kept growing and growing."

The truck got off the road about a week ago and it undergoing some modifications, he said. He is adding another cooling system and the truck will be delicately balanced to cope with the turns.

Other than the banks, Ray said, the only problem that he sees now is the possibility of winds whipping across the track.

"I'd say that winds of 10 m.p.h. would be excessive," he estimated.

Ray, owner of a trucking company that's one of the five businesses in this small town east of Birmingham, is no stranger to powered racing. He drove in three NASCAR Grand National races in 1974 and has competed in two so far this year.

But there still is the question of why does he want to lead-foot the 13½ feet tall, 8 feet wide rig around a speedway?

"I'm a trucker and I think that I need a record to look to."

Four Accidents In Traffic Yesterday

Damages totaling an estimated $1,200 occurred in four traffic accidents investigated on Wednesday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage resulted from a crash at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Street involving vehicles driven by Ernest Bruce Sloop of 505 E. 11th Street and Erma Jean Baker of 819 S. George Street, Farmville.

Investigating officers, who charged Erma Baker with failing to stop for a red traffic light, estimated damage to her car at $1,200 and $1,000 to the Sloop vehicle.

No injuries were reported in the 11:01 a.m. mishap.

A hit and run incident on Colonial Avenue west from Vance Street resulted in damages estimated at $500 to a parked car owned by Hubert White Jr. of Rt. 1, Box 287-B, Greenville.

No charges were preferred following investigation of a 9:40 a.m. wreck on E. Fifth Street near Elm Street involving vehicles driven by Patricia Manning Williams of Box 1, Grimesland, and Diane Smith Jackson of Box 221, Winterville.

No injuries were reported and damage was set at $200 for the Williams car and $100 to the Jackson car.

Both drivers were charged with failure to see their intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9:30 a.m. wreck on E. Tenth Street near Rock Springs Road.

Police said the accident, involving vehicles driven by Elnora Davis Baker of 2009 Sherwood Drive, and Chester Ray Hicks of 1518 Fleming Street, resulted in damages of $100 to each car. No injuries were reported.

Faisal's Assassin Said Combatting State Religion

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — King Faisal's assassin confessed before he was beheaded that he killed his uncle to put an end to the rule of Islam in Saudi Arabia, the government radio reported today. Prince Faisal Ibn Musaed, the late king's 27-year-old nephew, was executed at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in the central square of the Saudi capital. His head was displayed briefly on a pole, then head and body were carried away for burial in an unmarked grave, in accordance with the tenets of Islam. The broadcast today said he told his captors he wanted to end the influence of the state religion because it "was standing in the way of development in the country." But the broadcast said the nation will glorify the dead king by implementing the teachings of Islam and his plans with greater vigor.

The government radio announced two hours before the execution that a religious court had found the young prince guilty of shooting King Faisal on March 25 as he was receiving a Kuwaiti delegation during the feast of the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed. Public beheading is the sentence prescribed by Islamic law for murder. The prince was calm as security men led him from a jail behind the government palace to the block in the center of Dira Square. An official of the court read the sentence to the prince and invoked "Heaven's mercy" for him.

The young man's hands were tied behind his back, but he wore no blindfold. As he knelt, a security man prodded him in the side with a stick and his head jerked upward. The executioner, wearing a yellow robe, decapitated him with a single blow, and the crowd chanted "God is great" and "Justice is done."

The prince was the first member of the Saudi royal family ever executed in public. The only member of the family known to have witnessed the execution was Prince Salman, the governor of Riyadh and a brother of King Faisal.

The prince's father, Prince Musaed, was in Riyadh, but it was not known whether he was present. One of King Faisal's brothers, he has a history of alcoholism and mental illness. The young man's mother also had a history of mental instability.

In Los Angeles, 26-year-old Christine Surman, who claimed she lived with the prince for five years when he was studying in the United States, said he would eventually be honored as a liberator of the Saudi people.

Explanations that have circulated in Riyadh were that Prince Faisal was avenging the death of his brother, Prince Khalid, a religious fanatic who was killed by the police nine years ago; that he was part of a power struggle within the royal family; and that he was angry because the king would not let him have a passport to travel abroad because he had been arrested in the United States for selling LSD.

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The Baltimore Promotion Council spent $20,000 on Bicentennial advertising about the bombardment of Ft. Mchenry inspiring the "Star Spangled Banner."

But the ads gave the wrong year, 1812, for the 1814 bombardment.

Ken Mayhorne, the account executive at the VanSant Dugdale agency who handles the council's work, said the ad was designed to help overcome the city's gross inferiority complex.

"Baltimore is always two years behind... It was always 1814 everywhere else, but it was 1812 here and that was probably the origin of the inferiority complex."

About 10 people at a local advertising agency and the council read the copy before it was forwarded to the regional editions of seven national magazines. No one noticed.

It's not the only historical misstep associated with the city's effort to make the War of 1812 the center of its Bicentennial observance.

In two recent letters, Army Lt. Gen. Claire E. Hutchins Jr., executive director of the state Bicentennial Commission, referred to the 15 star, 15-stripe flag flying over Ft. Mchenry as the "Stars and Bars"—the Confederate flag.

Can Adopt New Names If Reason 'Sufficient'

RALEIGH (AP)—Four Raleigh women were told by the North Carolina Court of Appeals Wednesday they could have their names changed from their husbands' surnames, but not without sufficient reason.

In an opinion written by Judge Naomi Morris, the court's only woman, the four women were told "the court is not subject to the whim or capricious desire of a petitioner to change his name."

The women had given no reason for the requested name changes but the court allowed that with sufficient cause, their requests could be granted.

Judge Morris noted that a married woman still may use another name professionally while using her husband's name socially. "These situations rarely cause confusion" and usually do not require legal action, she said.

One of the problems with name changes noted by Judge Morris was that "with the increasing mobility of our society, and the growing dependence upon credit cards, automated check cashers, charge accounts, computerized record-keeping both in commerce and in government, numerous name changes can lead to chaotic confusion."

A concurring opinion written by Judge Edward Clark said, "That upon marriage the wife by operation of law takes the husband's surname is based on custom extending back for centuries into the heritage of Western civilization. It has ripened into a common law rule that has been generally recognized by the states, including by implication in the state of North Carolina."

The women—Jayne Bryant Mohlman, Elsie Thull Cisar, Margaret Pipes Lysaght and Elizabeth Buie Smith—were urged to return to Superior Court with their petitions and give sufficient reasons for their requests.

"While it is generally held that some substantial reason must exist before the court is justified in refusing to grant the petition, it is also the general rule that the court is not subject to the whim or capricious desire of a petitioner to change his name," Judge Morris said.

Big Exodus Of Senior 'Brass'

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 200 generals and admirals are expected to retire before September in a major exodus of senior military officers.

The main reason for this unusually large surge of retirements is a technical quirk in the law which means they would lose substantial pension income if they remain on active duty beyond Sept. 1.

Pentagon officials say at least 215 generals and admirals have either put in for retirement or are expected to do so. They represent nearly one-fifth of the roughly 1,200 top officers in all the armed services.

By comparison, before a complex ruling by the comptroller general on the retirement law brought on the problem, only 93 generals and admirals and 938 colonels and Navy captains retired during all of 1973.

For the same reason, about 2,300 colonels and Navy captains, out of a total of about 14, 900 in both groups, are hurrying to retire before September. The generals and admirals stand to lose as much as $333 a month and colonels and Navy captains $76 a month in retirement pay for the rest of their lives if they stay in uniform.

Although these retirements would open wider promotion opportunities for other officers, Pentagon leaders are concerned about possible turbulence and other problems that might arise from a major turnover in command and staff posts.

Another Good Day For Blood

The Bloodmobile had a good collection day Wednesday at Burroughs Wellcome, according to Pitt Blood chairman Billy Ross.

Ross commended Burroughs Wellcome employees for their fine effort in donating 179 pints of blood yesterday to top the company's one-day quota of 140 pints.

In addition to the donors, there were 25 persons rejected.

The chairman thanked the Greenville Service League women and volunteer nurses who assisted in the plant collection effort.

Tuesday's Moose Lodge visit, coupled with yesterday's drive at Burroughs Wellcome, resulted in the collection of 358 pints of blood as the county closed out its Bloodmobile schedule for the current fiscal year.

Going into Tuesday's visit, the county was some 900 pints of blood behind in its overall quota.

Club Break-In Reported Today

A break-in and larceny that occurred sometime between 8 p.m. last night and 6 a.m. today at the Hillsdale Club on Rt. 4, Greenville is under investigation by the Pitt Sheriff's Department.

Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley said that the break-in, reported at 6:22 a.m. today, resulted in the theft of $40 from a juke box and $5 in change from a cash register.

Oakley said that a front door to the establishment was forced open to gain entrance.

The Hillsdale Club is owned by Albert Ray Atkinson, Oakley noted.

suicide attempts. "At this time a person came into my life who gave me courage to try to hang on," Jamie said. "Clara Macluso. She's from Ossining, and is in her 70's. Clara's a religious person. I'm not. She kept telling me everything would be fine, just to have a little courage."

"It has been Clara's strength that has given me my strength. And somehow, I don't know how, the lung stabilized and I realized that I might have a second lease on life."

Before leaving Greenville, Jamie thought it best to take the precaution to have a physical check-up. "Everything seems to be fine, so I'm going ahead with the trip," he smiled.

"It won't be a rush trip. I'll take my time, hoping to average maybe 20 or 25 miles a day. Some days I may make no more than ten miles."

From Greenville Jamie will travel down the Tar River to Washington, then go on to Belhaven and take the Intercoastal Waterway to the Alligator River, across the Albemarle Sound, into North River, to Currituck Sound and on the bigger waters of Hampton Roads.

"I'll be using intercoastal waterways as much as possible," he said. Where this can't be done, I'll be sticking as close as I can to the shore. My plans are to get early starts each day and to come into land while there's still plenty of daylight left."

Hoping to take advantage of breezes, "The Tammie Adventure" is carrying a simple triangular sail that Jamie made. "There'll be a lot of rowing. Any time I can let the breeze help me, I'll certainly take advantage of it."

Jamie admits some of his friends consider his decision to strike out on a lone adventure like this to be a foolhardy one. "But, for me, it will be a great personal satisfaction," he remarked. "I think anyone like myself who has been given a new chance, a second time around on life, will understand why I'm going to try to do what I always wanted to do."

Postal Strike Chances Said To Be Increasing

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Union leaders say chances of a strike by the nation's 600,000 postal workers are increasing because of what they say is slow progress toward a new labor agreement.

Several thousand postal employees from New York and other areas along the East Coast planned to demonstrate today in front of the Postal Service's headquarters to protest what they term management's uncompromising attitude at the bargaining table.

"The Postal Service seems to be inviting a strike," said Moe Biller, president of an organization of New York City's 26,000 postal workers, who organized the demonstration. "We have a mandate not to work without a contract," he said Wednesday night.

The four postal unions are prohibited by law from striking, but several have adopted a "no-contract, no-work" stance.

Biller, a leader in the 1970 postal strike, said the purpose of today's demonstration is to warn the public that the mail service might grind to a halt next month.

The present contract expires July 21, but ratification procedures are expected to take at least three weeks. Thus, a contract should be negotiated by the end of June to have it ratified in time.

James H. Rademacher, president of the 200,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers, claimed the Postal Service was "stalling" and said, "We haven't even gotten down to the key issues," which he said were wages, benefits, retention of a no-layoff clause, work standards, rules for part-time employees and mechanization.

A Postal Service spokesman declined comment on the negotiations, which have been going on for two months.

Postal workers now earn a top of about $12,000, excluding fringe benefits.

Leaves For FBLA Meet

Carol Gooding, member of the D.H. Conley Chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America left today for Miami Beach, Fla., to attend the 34th annual FBLA National Leadership Conference. FBLA is the national student organization for high school students who plan to enter careers in business or business education.

The major purpose of the conference will be election of national officers or the 1975-76 school year and a series of competitive events between chapters and between state delegations. Events include public speaking, typing, accounting, a spelling relay, and parliamentary procedure demonstrations.

Miss Gooding, who is presently serving as vice president of the N.C. FBLA, will travel with approximately 70 other students from the state. In addition to attending the convention, the group will take a three-day boat cruise to the Bahamas, make a two day stop at Walt Disney World, spend two nights in Savannah, Ga. and sight see in St. Augustine, Fla.

Lynn Gets Revenge On Tigers

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Fred Lynn had a 20-game hitting streak stopped Monday, so the Boston Red Sox rookie center fielder decided to do something about it.

"I came to the ballpark early for extra batting practice," Lynn said after leading Boston to a 15-1 walloping of the Detroit Tigers Wednesday night. "I wasn't satisfied with the way I'd been swinging."

He was satisfied after Wednesday's game.

He smashed three home runs, a triple and a single, driving in 10 runs and missing the American League RBI record by one, a mark set by Tony Lazzeri of the New York Yankees in 1936. The major league record is 12, set by James Bottomley of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1924.

Lynn wasn't the only bat on target Wednesday in the American League. In other games, Baltimore clobbered Cleveland 13-6, Kansas City crushed California 13-0, Texas clubbed Chicago 10-3, Milwaukee edged New York 5-3 and Oakland nipped Minnesota 7-6.

With his 5-for-6 effort, Lynn moved in the league lead in runs with 42 and RBIs with 50. He increased his home run total to 14, only one behind the leaders, is third in batting with a .352 average and tied for fifth in doubles with 13.

Lynn began his carnage with a two-run homer in the first inning off starter Joe Coleman. He also tagged Coleman for a three-run blast in the second, slamming the ball off the right field roof at Tiger Stadium.

In the third he slashed a two-

Coke Tops R.C., 11-0

Coca-Cola romped to an 11-0 victory over R.C. Cola behind the one-hit pitching of Jeff Camp yesterday in the North State Little League.

The lone hit came in the fourth inning when Stacy Mills got a lead off single. Camp struck out seven and walked none in going the distance. Only two other runners reached base, one on an error and one on a fielder's choice.

Coke got their scoring going in the second inning, scoring four runs. Chuck Allen walked and Todd Lovette was hit by a pitch. Both moved up when Richard Pace reached on a fielder's choice. Billy Brannigan singled in Allen, and a double by Camp brought in Lovette, Pace and Brannigan for the 4-0 lead.

Four more came over in the fourth. Skip Cannon singled and Danny Agee was hit by a pitch. Brannigan singled, and an error let Cannon and Agee score. Camp singled in Brannigan, and he scored on Barry Tyson's hit.

The other three came over in the fifth. Roy Casey was hit by a pitch and Agee singled. Brannigan doubled both runners in and he scored on Camp's double.

concluded the evening with a three-run homer off Walker in the ninth.

Orioles 13, Indians 6
Lee May, Tommy Davis and Paul Blair combined to bat in 10 runs as Baltimore pounded out 19 hits. May and Ken Singleton boomed for the winners while Boog Powell and Buddy Bell had round-trippers for Cleveland.

Royals 13, Angels 0
Cookie Rojas' double scored Tony Solaita with the fourth run of the first inning as Kansas City belted starter Nolan Ryan and three other California hurlers. Ryan, who pitched the fourth no-hitter of his career June 1, was forced from the game in the third inning with a groin injury.

Pitcher Andy Messersmith has won 20 games for two of California's four major league teams.

College View, Home Builders Take BR Wins

Home Builders remained atop the Babe Ruth standings with a 6-1 win over Pepsi-Cola, last night. College View took its third win of the season over Planters, 10-0 in the afterpiece.

In the opener, Gary Allen held Pepsi to three hits. His team got home a run in the first as Ronnie Chapman walked, moved up on an error, was sacrificed to second and scored on Allen's ground out.

Two more went up for Home Builders in the second. Reggie Selby and Micky McGrath both singled, McGrath's hit scoring Selby who had moved to third on a passed ball. Chapman got a hit and Tim Allen reached on an error scoring McGrath.

Chapman got a hit with two out in the fourth and scored on a single by Tim Allen. Gary Allen walked in the fifth and later scored on an out.

The only Pepsi run came in the sixth as Greg Lee walked, moved up on a wild pitch, stole third and scored on a throwing error.

Chapman had two hits for Home Builders.

Planters' loss was the second 10-run decision in as many days. College View did the most damage in the first getting six runs. Scott Brady and Reggie Spain both walked. Jeff Aldridge singled to load the bases but Spain was caught in a rundown. Michael Shank singled in Brady, and after Joey Downing walked to load the bases, Bubba Rowlett doubles to drive in Aldridge and Shank. Jimmy Clemmons reached on a walk and when Marshall Crumpler reached on an error, Rowlette scored. A hit by Spain scored Clemmons.

College View added two in the second, one in the third and one in the fifth.

Planters got two hits in the game, both by Chris Moye. Spain in winning, struck out five and walked one.

Exchange Ices Tie For Title

The Exchange had to halt a rally by lowly Big Value Drugs yesterday to come away with a 9-8 victory and at least a share of the Tar Heel Little League title.

The victory insured no worse than a tie for the title for the Exchange. They are now 10-3 in the league, and only Pepsi-Cola, 8-5, has a chance to catch them. A loss by Pepsi to the Exchange Saturday would wrap it up—or any other loss by Pepsi or a win by the Exchange after that. Big Value is now 1-12.

and moved up on a wild pitch. Steve Irwin walked and Billy Bost singled. Chip Cayton walked to force in Williams, and Jimmie Jones was hit by a pitch, scoring Irwin. Allison Taylor walked to bring in Bost, and a double by Douglas scored Cayton, Jones and Taylor.

Big Value rallied for one in the second. Singleton singled and Jackson was hit by a pitch. Mann reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases. Sneed reached on an error, scoring Singleton.

The Exchange got what proved to be the winning run in the fifth. Cayton singled and moved up on a passed ball. Rodrick Harrell singled, and an error on the play let Cayton score to make it 9-6.

Big Value came back to score two in the sixth to cut the gap to one. Walsh singled and Singleton reached on an error, then stole second. Jackson singled in Walsh and a double steal scored Singleton, and put the tying run on second. But the Exchange cut off the rally at that point and preserved their victory.

KFC Tops Sluggers

The American and National division races in the City Softball League got a lot tighter last night after Kentucky Fried Chicken took a 4-1 victory over the Little Sluggers.

The win boosted KFC into a tie with Pier Five for the American Division lead, and whittled the Slugger lead in the National Division to only one game.

KFC grabbed the lead in the game in the second inning on a home run by Mike Aldridge. They came back with three more runs in the fourth inning.

The lone Slugger run came over in the seventh inning.

In the second game, the Rockets romped to an 11-3 win over One-Hour Koretizing. The Rockets got three in the first with C. Norfleet homering. They came back with two in the third, one in the fifth, and one in the sixth and four in the seventh with Hubert Drewery homering.

One-Hour got two in the first and one in the seventh.

White's Insulation gained a 3-2 victory over Morgan Printers in the final game. Morgan grabbed the initial lead with one in the second. White's came back with three in the fourth to take the lead for good.

The other Morgan run came over in the bottom of the fourth.

Daniel Holds League Lead

Daniel Construction held onto its one-game lead in the Industrial Softball League last night, but also eliminated its victim, Union Carbide, from the title picture. Three teams have now been ousted from any chance at the crown.

In the first game, the Moose ripped Carolina Telephone, 18-0. The Moose pushed over 10 runs in the first inning to put the game on ice. They added one in the second, four in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the sixth for their 18-run total.

State Highway had to battle for a 12-11 victory over Greenville Utilities. The Highwaymen pushed over five runs in the first, but GUCo came back with six in the top of the second. State Highway came back with three in the second for an 8-6 lead. GUCo added one in the fourth and two in the fifth to take a 9-8 lead, but again the Highwaymen rallied, this time for three to push back ahead, 11-9. GUCo then scored one each in the sixth and seventh to tie it again and force extra innings.

The Highwaymen got the win in the ninth, when P. Mills reached on an error and scored on S. Worthington's hit.

The final game saw Daniel take a 14-8 win over Union Carbide. Daniel pushed over four in the first and added seven in the fourth. Three more came over in the sixth. Job hit a homer for Daniel.

Union Carbide, behind all the way, got one in the first, one in the second, another in the fifth and five in the sixth.

Allison Tries Again

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Grand National stock car superstar Bobby Allison will be visiting Kentuckiana twice this summer, to make up for last July's monumental flop.

Allison was hired last summer by Salem, Ind., racing director Steve Stubbs for a show-down with the leading U.S. Auto Club drivers. Less than two laps into the 100-lap feature race, with 6,000 fans watching, Allison pulled to the sidelines with a rear tire rubbing dangerously against the frame of his car.

"I really, really felt badly about that deal," Allison says. "I really left myself standing there with my face hanging out."

Bench Hits Umpire--But It Was Nothing Personal, Just A Double

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Johnny Bench hit an umpire, but it was nothing personal.

The Cincinnati catcher rattled a freak hit off Lee Weyer's shoe at third base and it hurt the Atlanta Braves more than the man in blue.

Two runs scored on the bizarre double in the third inning, leading the Reds to a 6-1 decision over the Braves Wednesday.

"It's just unbelievable," said Bench, thinking more about the RBI title than the ricochet his hit took into left field.

The two runs batted in gave Bench 57 for the season and the major league lead in that department. That means that Bench is in good shape to pull off a baseball oddity — four RBI titles.

Only Rogers Hornsby and Hank Aaron have done it and Bench — at 27 — says he has his sights set on it.

"I started off thinking it would even out after a while, but it hasn't so far," says Bench.

In the other National League games, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 9-7; the San Francisco Giants routed the San Diego Padres 8-1; the Pittsburgh Pirates walloped the St. Louis Cardinals 9-3; the Montreal Expos nipped the New York Mets 7-6 in 10 innings and the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Houston Astros 4-0.

Bench's latest binge gave him 19 RBI in the last 14 games, propelling him to a wide lead over his National League challengers. Both teammate Tony Perez and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia are tied for second in the RBI race with 44.

The Reds overcame steamy humidity and wore out Blue Moon Odom early for their 22nd victory in their last 29 games.

Phillies 9, Cubs 7
Reserve infielder Tommy Hutton, a .171 hitter, slammed a two-run pinch home run in the ninth inning to carry Philadelphia over Chicago. Dick Allen, who had homered and doubled twice earlier, got his fourth hit of the day, a single, with one out in the top of the ninth. Then Hutton was inserted for Mike Anderson and responded with a blast off reliever and loser Bob Locker, 0-1.

Giants 8, Padres 1
Derrel Thomas doubled and scored in a three-run first inning, belted a two-run single in the fourth and singled and scored in the sixth, leading San Francisco over San Diego. Pirates 9, Cardinals 3

Pittsburgh scored four runs in the first inning and held on behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Rooker to defeat St. Louis. The Pirates backed Rooker with 17 hits, including two by Bill Robinson.

Expos 7, Mets 6
Nate Colbert led off the 10th inning with a double and scored on Pete Mackanin's single, giving Montreal its victory over New York.

Dodgers 4, Astros 0
Ron Cey slammed a first-inning grand slam home run and Burt Hooton hurled a three-hitter to lead Los Angeles past Houston. Cey's homer was his 10th of the season and second in as many games. It was the first grand slam of his career.

Three Conference Bids Turned Down By Division I Cage Group

By KEN ALYTA
AP Sports Writer

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — The Division I Basketball Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association pressed toward completion of its annual meeting this afternoon following an extra closed session Wednesday night.

Announcements were expected on recommended sites for the 1980 NCAA basketball tournament finals and first-round regional games for 1976.

They will be recommended to the NCAA executive committee for consideration at a special August meeting in Chicago.

Although the committee met in two sessions Wednesday for a total of seven hours, only one decision was announced.

It involved disposition of requests from three conferences that their champions be qualified automatically for the 32-team NCAA tournament in March.

The six-man committee headed by Tom Scott, retired Davidson College athletic director, turned down the bid of the six-team Southland Conference to have its champion qualified; tabled a bid from the new six-team Metropolitan Conference; and approved the Eastern College Athletic Conference request to grant at-large berths to its four regional tournament winners.

The Southland was voted down because the committee felt its members have not complied a record warranting such action. Only Southwestern Louisiana has represented the league in NCAA competition.

The Metropolitan Conference bid was tabled because the new league has yet to be approved for allied NCAA membership. Action on this request is expected at the Chicago meeting in August.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Basketball Coaches wound up its meeting Wednesday. It went on record as favoring a delay in application of the Title IX regulations laid down by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to end sex discrimination in collegiate athletics.

Bill Foster of Duke, head of the ABC, issued a statement saying the organization is making "a concerted effort" through its members to delay Title IX application until HEW makes a serious study "of the practical application of Title IX on college programs."

The statements said the regulations would "place intercollegiate athletics under the full control of the federal government and will eventually destroy many intercollegiate programs."

The nation's basketball fans were urged to join coaches in "contacting our congressmen to support our concern."

Unless Congress acts to delay or reject the regulations, they become effective July 21.

The coaches also went on record against legislation proposing limits on the size of basketball coaching staffs. This proposal is up for consideration at the special August convention. Foster said his group believes the size of coaching staffs should be left to institutions to determine.

One proposal would limit a staff to a head coach, one full-time assistant and one part-time aide. Another proposal would permit a second full-time assistant.

Foster said the NABC is "vitally concerned with the lot of the assistant coach and the ensuing unemployment which could be the direct result of impending NCAA legislation."

Webster's Goal: Championship

By KEVIN MCKEAN
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Marvin Webster, "The Human Eraser" from Morgan State, says he's signed a five-year contract with the Denver Nuggets and hopes to help the Nuggets win the American Basketball Association championship next season.

Webster refused Wednesday night to disclose the contract's monetary arrangements, but published reports put them at $1.2 million to $1.5 million. Bob King, the Nuggets' assistant general manager, said earlier that those figures were "good ballpark" estimates.

"I think I made the right decision," Webster said in a telephone interview from his hotel room. "I think Atlanta is a very good place, but here was where I wanted to play. I feel like it's the place for me."

The Nuggets drafted Webster, whose colorful nickname derives from his shot-blocking prowess, in the first round of the ABA draft. The Atlanta Hawks of the rival National Basketball Association waited until the second round of the NBA draft to choose him, opting in the first round for the Collegiate Player of the Year, David Thompson of North Carolina State.

Webster said he chose Denver not because of the offered contract but because "they were very interested in me as a ballplayer." He said money "wasn't a factor. There wasn't much of a difference."

The 7-foot Morgan State graduate is expected to give the Nuggets needed height on the front line. They won the Western Division championship of the ABA last season with 6-10 Mike Green as their tallest man. Green, at 200 pounds, provides much less bulk than does Webster.

"I'd like to win the championship next year," Webster said. He said he plans to return to his home in Baltimore today, then come to Denver permanently in August to prepare for the ABA season.

In signing with Denver, Webster ignored last-minute pleas from Hawks' Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons; John Wilcox, owner-president of the financially troubled Atlanta club; and Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson to sign an NBA contract.

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus threw down the gauntlet to his 149 rivals as he prepared to tee off today in the opening round of the 75th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"I am as ready as I can be," he said.

A loose air of confidence, tightened with a steel thread of determination, was evident as the world's premier tournament pro faced the second and perhaps the most rugged test in his bid for an unprecedented Grand Slam.

"I feel I am playing as well as I was playing in the Masters," Jack added, perhaps escalating the tension that has gripped old Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course because of recurring thunderstorms and tornado alerts.

In winning the Masters, Nicklaus gained the first leg on the four major championships which include the U.S. and British opens and the America PGA. No golfer has ever won the quadrangle in a single year and only one man, Ben Hogan, has won three.

"This is a very good course, I like it," Nicklaus said. "It reminds me much of the Scioto course in Columbus, Ohio, where I grew up, although the greens are slightly tighter."

Nicklaus acknowledged the recent heavy rains, which have a 30 per cent chance of spoiling today's opening round, have increased the number of players with a chance of winning the tournament.

"Wet greens would raise the number from four or five to about 30," he said. "But I am not sure that the greens won't dry out for the week-end."

Nicklaus is the 6-1 favorite. Chief threats are Lee Trevino, Johnny Miller and Tom Weiskopf, listed unofficially at around 8-1, and South Africa's Gary Player, defending champion Hale Irwin and Tom Watson, 10-1.

Wieskopf and Miller, like Nicklaus, are long hitters who fly a high trajectory to the greens. Under dry conditions, they would be figured to hold most of the greens where the line drive hitters, such as Trevino, probably would be scrambling from the fringes.

Trevino, who twice has beaten out Nicklaus for the U.S. Open and twice for the British Open, is rated one of the best maneuverers of the ball in the game. He would profit from slow greens.

Barry Looking To Television

By DAN BERGER
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rick Barry says he is not being paid "commensurate with my abilities," and so the star forward of the National Basketball Association champion Golden State Warriors is looking elsewhere — to television.

"I would like to set myself up financially so I wouldn't have to worry about things five years down the line," the 31-year-old Barry said Wednesday. "I'm not the type of player who's making an astronomical amount of money that some other players are making, and what I'm looking for is security."

Barry emphasized, "This isn't just a ploy to make the Warriors offer me more, but I'm sure that it does put the Warriors in a difficult position."

He's got a summer contract with CBS and starts work this weekend, at the National AAU track championships in Eugene, Ore.

"I'm not going to be a color man," he said, "so I won't have to know track like an expert. I'll do interviews and some of the races. Sometimes I think it's a detriment to have a sportscaster who can step on the toes of the expert."

Barry, a 1964 graduate of Miami where he took numerous courses in communications, worked as a sportscaster for WABC-TV in New York when he was a member of the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association, doing the nightly sports reports during the off-season.

He also did the color commentary for the NBA playoffs two years ago, but missed the chance to do it again last season when he led the Warriors to a four-game sweep of the Washington Bullets.

"It wasn't disappointing at all to miss this year," he said with a smile.

UCLA Is Contender

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — UCLA, its forces thinned after Wednesday's battles, remained a strong contender here today in the 91st National Collegiate Athletics Championships with its top-seeded singles player and its two doubles teams still in competition.

The Bruins held a one-point edge in the team standings over Trinity University of Texas which had 19 points. Stanford and Miami of Florida followed with 17 each.

Trinity was the only team with two singles players in the quarterfinals.

The Bruins lost three of their four singles players in Wednesday's fourth round and Stanford lost a singles player in that round and two more in the fifth.

American Youth Send Message In Swims

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer
LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — America's teenage swimmers served quick notice on foreign athletes that they'll be tough in world competition, and 18-year-old Bruce Furniss spelled it out with a world record.

Also, 17-year-old Kathy Heddy lowered her American record in the women's 200-meter individual medley to 2:20.86 at the AAU World Swimming Trials.

Furniss, who graduated from Foothill High School in nearby Santa Ana June 11, won the men's 200-meter freestyle in 1 minute, 50.89 seconds Wednesday evening.

In the morning at this Belmont Plaza 50-meter pool, he had bettered the record with a 1:51.41 clocking as the five-day meet opened. Tim Shaw of Long Beach, who will graduate from high school later this month, had held the record at 1:51.66 and equaled that mark in finishing second to Furniss in the finals.

Both Furniss and Shaw are listed today for the 400-meter freestyle with the men's 400 individual medley and 200-meter butterfly on their programs.

The women compete in the 200 freestyle and 100 backstroke.

In an opening night surprise, Rick Colella of Seattle, a veteran at 23, won the men's 100 breaststroke, beating American and world record holder John Hencken of Santa Clara, Calif. Colella swam 1:05.86 with Hencken second and qualifying for the team at 1:06.10. The record holder went the distance in 1:03.88 last year.

Two also qualified in the men's 100 backstroke, John Murphy and Mel Nash. From the Gatorade Swim Club of Bloomington, Ind., the two are University of Indiana teammates. Murphy swam 57.83 and Nash 58.52. Bob Tierney of Dallas was just behind at 58.53. Miss Heddy of Summit, N.J., held the American record at 2:21.05, until she broke the mark in the finals as she beat out Shirley Babashoff of Mission Viejo, Calif., who also bested the previous record with 2:20.93.

Miss Babashoff is rated America's best in the freestyle but also entered both medley events in these trials for the international competition at Cali-

Pele Says He's No Superman

NEW YORK (AP) — Pele may be a superstar, but he's not necessarily a "superman."

Though Brazil's "Black Pearl" did not score any goals or assists, magnificent or otherwise, in his professional debut with the New York Cosmos Wednesday, he did direct the North American Soccer League team to a handy 2-0 triumph over the Toronto Metro-Croatia and drew a sellout crowd of 22,500 in the process.

"I might not have scored," said Pele afterward, "but I think that I made the Toronto defense spend two men on me and sometimes three. Both goals were as a result of a man being free on these types of plays."

Pele assumed the role of on-field coach in the first half and most of the second, directing the movement of his teammates. But he failed in three easy scoring attempts, most of which went wide, including a direct kick from twenty yards out with Toronto goalie Zelko Bilecki out of position.

When asked about the trio of mishaps, the 34-year-old soccer legend said, "It's not the first time and it won't be the last."

"I still have to get adjusted to the American ball which is lighter than the ball we play with in Brazil," he said. "I feel this will take me about another week or so. I feel real good physically."

The Cosmos finally broke through with 12:51 gone in the second half. New York's Barry Mahy passed to Julio Correa, who headed a shot past Bilecki for the Cosmos' first goal.

At the 17 minute mark, Pele passed to Correa, who fed Manoel Maria. Maria was fouled inside the penalty area and Mordechai Shpigler converted the penalty shot to make it 2-0.

The win raised the Cosmos record to 4-6, while Toronto is now 4-7.

Brook Valley
Signs up are now underway for the Brook Valley Golf and Country Club annual Handicap Tournament. It will be played Saturday and Sunday, June 28-29 at the club.
Sign-ups will close next Friday.

Jan Woodworth had her best round recently, firing a 39-41-80. Ashley Taylor had his best hole score with a 43 on the back side while playing with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Taylor. Coach Pat Dye of East Carolina had his best Brook Valley score, an 87.

Greenville
Joan Hooper captured first place in low gross in the last Ladies Day Tournament at Greenville Golf and Country Club. She fired a 39.

Second place went to Joan Warren and Della Dayson, who tied with 43, while Louise Webb was third with a 46.

In the low net category, Put Carter took first with a 35. Dardie Longino was second with a 36, followed by Ann Whitehurst and Virginia Wiggers with 37's.

These winners may pick up their merchandise certificates in the pro shop.

Greg House, a 13-year-old, who has only been playing slightly over three months, scored a hole-in-one on the 166-yard 15th hole. He used a five-wood for the shot. He also had a 35 on the front for his low score.

A Father-Son Tournament will be held on July 24. The deadline for signing up is July 20. The Mother-Daughter Tournament is on July 18 deadline.

The Beginners' Match Play tournament begins this week and those entered should check with the proshop for their matches. The first round matches should be completed by June 26.

In another beginners tournament, Diane Land took first place in the B flight, while Mrs. Dorothy Doyle was second. In a flight, Miss Dot Doyle was first, while Kathy Blount was second.

Robersonville
The annual Club Championship will be held at Robersonville Golf and Country Club this Sunday. The 18-hole event will begin with first tee-offs at 11:45 a.m. Pat Smith is the defending champion.

Grifton
Ron Anderson, assistant professional, carried back-to-back eagles at the Grifton Golf and Country Club. Anderson got the scores on the second and third holes.

Parapsychology Exhibit Formed

By MAXINE YEE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Be it levitation, clairvoyance, mind reading or ESP, it all comes under the heading of "psi," otherwise known as psychic phenomena or parapsychology.

Psi is a term adopted by researchers to refer to occurrences that are out of the ordinary and do not conform to known scientific principles.

To uncloud the murky mess that has covered the subject for countless years, Norma Bowles has put together an exhibit that is more educational than entertaining.

It presents an overview on the subject of parapsychology.

Can someone read your mind or use his to bend spoons? That's what the exhibit, called "Psi Search," is all about. It examines recent research on the subject and explores the possibility of psychic phenomena in daily life.

The exhibit, displayed at the California Museum of Science and Industry, does not come out with a definite "yes" or "no" on the existence of psi. It indicates that phenomena have occurred and further research is needed to answer the questions of "what" and "how."

The exhibit was put together with the cooperation of the Parapsychological Association, an international organization composed of parapsychologists, psychologists, physicists, mathematicians, engineers, biochemists and other professional persons involved in the scientific investigation of psi.

"Psi Search" is composed of a series of poster-sized information cards hooked together on aluminum stands that zigzag around the exhibition room.

It is the first exhibit of its kind, according to Mrs. Bowles, a graduate of Bryn Mawr College, where she won distinction in experimental psychology and statistics.

"People in parapsychology have had requests to do overviews, but those have not been completed," she said. "The exhibit did it for them by bringing together the material in a graphic, visual display."

Such an exhibit had to be presented "in the right climate," she said, because the nature of parapsychology does not offer concrete evidence to back up its existence and has been the subject of constant criticism.

"Psi is a non-physical thing," Mrs. Bowles said. "It's hard to find effects which can be measured. Ridicule and scepticism was so heavy. It was tenuous and required a great deal of tolerance for the ambiguities."

She said psi is now tolerated and "parapsychology is now accepted as a science. Scientists in the field are now willing to live with half answers."

She said the exhibit tries to avoid editorializing.

"We don't want to give people a bias, but let them study on their own level. We needed to avoid bias. There's nothing like an exhibition for it."

The exhibit is aimed primarily at the literate public to educate them about psi.

"We tried to clear the atmosphere," she said. "There was so much stuff coming out that we wanted to educate the public. People really want precise information, not only the science students but lay people."

The exhibit was installed at the museum, located at Exposition Park next to the University of Southern California, in January. It was dismantled at the end of a two-month run but was brought back for an indefinite period because of its popularity.

The exhibit will eventually go on the road. Cities requesting the exhibit include Philadelphia, Boston, Oklahoma City, Detroit, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Baltimore.

Promise Probe Inmate Plaints

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. C. (AP) — A promise of a full investigation came late Wednesday following charges of prison abuse at the Bladen County prison unit.

C. L. Sparkman, superintendent of the state prison camp, said he would conduct "a full investigation" into charges by inmate Jerry Hare who said he and other prisoners have been used for private work purposes by unit officials.

Jim Smith, legal aide to corrections head David Jones, said also that the charge would be investigated.

The allegations were made public by The Fayetteville Times

Smith said also that a refusal by Bladen County officials to allow the Times access to inmates Wednesday would be investigated. That denial came following recent stories which focused attention on units in Bladen, Columbus and Robeson counties.

Bladen county inmates say they are harassed for complaining about bad conditions.

Wednesday, reporters were called away from a prison fence at the minimum security unit as they attempted to inquire into labor abuse charges.

Similar charges have been made by inmates at the Robeson County unit where an FBI probe is pending.

'Mortified' By Paint Job

DE KALB, Ill. (AP) — Betsy Beasley was mortified. Her husband thought it was "kind of cool." Their son, Jon, conceded, "I may have to repaint the house green before I return to school."

"But first we're going to have a Fourth of July party," said Jon, who with some friends painted a 13-star American flag the full length of his parents' home while they were on vacation.

Mrs. Beasley had left money for Jon, 20, to buy avocado green paint for the vacation assignment.

"I thought painting the red, white and blue flag would be spectacular so I got some friends and we went ahead with the idea," said Jon, whose father, Ken, is assistant to the president of Northern Illinois University.

"The neighbors think it looks good, what with the Bicentennial coming up next year."

But his mother said, "I'm really just mortified. There's been a steady stream of people coming by to look at it. I guarantee that this house will be green by August, or my name isn't Betsy."

Jon, a junior at DePauw University in Greencastle, Ind., said his father just muttered, "Oh, no," but after recovering conceded, "I think it's kind of cool."

Hare claims that he and other prisoners have worked on boats, farm equipment, law mowers, home window fans and other items for a unit program supervisor and guards.

Inmates at the Bladen, Columbus, and Robeson county units claim they can advance in prison rank by doing favors for prison officials.

Fred G. Morrison Jr., head of the Inmate Grievance Commission established by the North Carolina General Assembly, says he proposed in January that convicts be given honor grade contracts to prevent favoritism from entering into inmates' advancement in rank.

Morrison said that proposal was denied by state prison officials.

Inmates at the Bladen unit said that a boat which allegedly figured into the private work was moved from the camp "between 5 a. m. and 6 a. m. Wednesday."

Superintendent Sparkman said he knew the boat had been near the camp maintenance building and that it resembled a boat belonging to a camp official.

"I'm not saying that it is a possibility or that it is not a possibility" that inmate labor has been abused, but he said he would check it out.

Bike Patrol Effective

LINDSAY, Calif. (AP) — Pedaling policemen have helped give this small central California farming town one of the lowest crime rates in the area, Chief John Beene says.

Beene calls the bicycle patrols, now five years old, the "ultimate compromise between walking the beat and the automobile."

The bicycle patrolman can cover just about as much territory on his 10-speed as his more conventionally conveyed officers in patrol cars, Beene said.

The crime-busting secret is in the silence of his approach and the view the officer gets from his padded seat, the chief added.

Beene says from one to four bike-mounted officers sally forth each day in this two-square-mile community of 5,000. Most bike patrols cruise residential neighborhoods beginning at 8 a.m., then shift to business sections after dark when people have gone home.

"Statistics show an increasing number of burglaries now occur in the morning when people are at work," Beene said.

"The officers have walkie-talkies, and even if they can't chase cars, it's better to chase them off than not to see them at all."

Sea Lions Trained For Diving Chores

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — When the Navy sends Fat Man to find and bring to the surface objects stranded on the ocean floor, taxpayers may be saving $2,000 per trip.

That's the difference between hiring human divers and using Fat Man, a 142-pound sea lion that is paid in fish, the Navy says.

The year-old animal is one of five that has been trained at the Coronado Amphibious Base to retrieve objects such as mines and torpedoes from the ocean bottom with unerring skill.

A special "grabber" device designed at the nearby Naval Undersea Center is fitted over the pug nose of a sea lion, which swims to a sunken object by homing in on a beeper device.

When the grabber hits the object, a tripping device flips out two arms which form a circle, snaring it. Above, a line operated with the aid of a winch pulls the object to the surface.

The sea lions are given a fish before each dive and several more smelt as a reward for each successful trip below.

Sea lions such as Fat Man can make 150 dives in succession into water 50 or 60 feet deep, going down even after his food supply is ended, according to the Navy.

Several have been taught to locate submarines and other objects without the aid of beepers.

"Given enough fish, you can teach them to do anything," says former Navy diver Marty Conboy, who turned sea lions into deep-water retrievers before the project was officially turned over to the Navy in 1972.

Sea lions are ideal for the job because they have good vision in deep water and the ability to determine the source of a tone or beeper which they are trained to find.

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans usually can get a quick rundown on the major speeches, news reports and commentaries broadcast on foreign stations simply by reading published accounts or watching TV newscasts.

But few realize they also now can get complete or excerpted texts of the same broadcasts by subscribing to a worldwide monitoring service administered by...would you believe...the Central Intelligence Agency.

You can even charge it on your American Express card, the CIA says.

For $1,000 a year, you can get daily translations of foreign broadcasts in eight regions, or, if you prefer, just one region for $125.

The areas are Asia and the Pacific, the Middle East and North Africa, Western Europe, Sub-Sahara Africa, the People's Republic of China, Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union and Latin America.

The foreign news texts primarily are for interested federal agencies, but they can be bought by the public from the National Technical Information Service, an arm of the U.S. Commerce Department, the CIA says.

The monitoring operation, known as the Foreign Broadcast Information Service—FBIS, publishes the material as broadcast, without background information and interpretation.

A CIA spokesman declined because of national security laws to say how many persons FBIS employs or in how many and which countries it operates.

He conceded it's logical to assume that foreign countries know their public broadcasts are monitored for FBIS, but said that to name the countries might well jeopardize the monitoring operation there.

Until two years ago, he said, the FBIS reports were available only to U.S. agencies, although some portions of them always had been made available for scrutiny by newsmen and scholars.

He said certain portions weren't made public "because they were considered for official use only."

But now, he says, everything the governments gets from FBIS is available to subscribers of the service, whom he says are mainly news organizations, universities, libraries and members of Congress.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

There are obvious advantages to playing a hand with your long suit as trumps. It is not always easy to see, however, how to put your trumps to best use. Consider this hand from a recent team match, where both teams reached the desirable contract of four spades.

South has a close decision to make at his second turn. A jump to three spades is, perhaps, somewhat aggressive, but both Souths decided that a rebid of two spades would not express the playing potential of the hand. Both Norths raised to game.

At both tables, West made his natural lead of the king of hearts. Given a 3-2 trump division, declarer could count nine tricks, and the first declarer decided that he would try for his tenth trick via a club ruff in dummy. Therefore, he won the opening heart lead, led a club to the ace and returned a club. East won and shifted to a trump, taken by the queen.

After ruffing a club in dummy, declarer returned to his hand with a heart ruff and cashed the king of spades. The bad break was unhappy news, but there was still a chance if declarer could end-play West. He led a diamond to the ace, on which West had the foresight to unblock the queen, then ruffed a heart and exited with a diamond. East cashed two tricks in the suit and simply exited with a club. There was no way declarer could prevent West from scoring the jack of trumps for a one-trick set.

At the other table, South also came to the conclusion that he had to score the fulfilling trick via a club ruff. However, his timing of the play was a considerable improvement over his opponent's. He won the first trick with the ace of hearts and immediately ruffed a heart. Now he exited with a low club.

The defenders did the best they could by letting East win the club trick and shift to a trump. Declarer won, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in his hand, cashed the king of spades to reveal the distribution, then entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and scored his ten of trumps by ruffing a third heart. In all, declarer made seven trump tricks, which included four ruffs, and aces in the three side suits.

Janis Ian Making Her Show Biz Comeback At Ripe Old Age Of 24

By PAUL ANDERSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — At the ripe old age of 24, singer-songwriter Janis Ian is making a show business comeback.

Janis is best remembered for her 1960s protest song, "Society's Child," a smash hit about an unrequited teen-age interracial love affair that catapulted the 15-year-old youngster into near-instant stardom.

And she, like most kids that age, wasn't ready for it.

"I was supposed to be a prodigy," she recently told the audience at Reno Sweeney, a Greenwich Village nightclub. "But I thought being a prodigy meant being as snotty and surreal as possible. But when I found out that all prodigies were supposed to die at age 19, I knew that's what I wasn't."

Instead, at 19, trailed by a reputation of being hard to work with and a general pain in the neck, Janis bagged the star syndrome and went into seclusion to sort out her life, using songwriting as a sort of therapy.

During her self-imposed exile in Philadelphia and Los Angeles, Janis penned batches of songs—many of them still not released—and was able to come to some sort of understanding with herself about priorities and values in life.

In 1974, Janis re-emerged on the music scene with a new Columbia album, "Stars." Her latest disc, "Between the Lines," was released this year.

Both albums are doing well on the charts, but Janis says she no longer has illusions about stardom—at least as she knew it before.

"It's hard to live up to that kind of image unless you are surrounded by sycophants," she said. "I used to think that I was going to be a star. But I've stopped thinking about it."

"That kind of stuff (stardom) is hard to handle any time, but when you're 15 it's just impossible. I hope the songs I do now are successful, but I'm not sure I want to do the 'star' thing again. I'm just writing songs that I think are good and I hope other people like them."

Other people do like her songs. Aside from the successes of her two current albums, Janis' songs have been recorded by such artists as Roberta Flack, Joan Baez, Cher, and Blood, Sweat and Tears. Miss Flack's version of "Jesse," which Janis also recorded on her "Stars" album, was a major hit.

The songs that Janis is writing these days are a considerable departure from her folk-protest period.

The tiny (5-foot) singer, topped by a Jewish afro hairdo already tipped with gray, admits that Billie Holiday and French Chanteuse Edith Piaf are among her favorite song stylists. And some of Janis' songs are in the blues and jazz styles reminiscent of those two singers.

Many of her songs are autobiographical, speaking of her disillusionment as a teenage star in the unreal world of popular music and the problems of being a public figure.

"Just how wonderful can you be, how endlessly fascinating can you be?" she asked.

Most of her current songs, such as "Bright Lights and Promises," "When the Party's Over," "You've Got Me on a String," deal with sadness, loneliness and lost loves. Despite the bittersweet orientation, other tunes, such as "Sweet Sympathy," "Applause" are up-tempo.

But the overall theme of her work and, presumably, her life can be wrapped up by the opening lines of her song "At Seventeen."

"I learned the truth at seventeen
That love was meant for beauty queens
And high school girls with clear-skinned smiles
Who married young, and then retired

The valentines I never knew
The Friday night charades of youth
Were spent on one more beautiful
At seventeen, I learned the truth."

At seventeen, I learned the truth."

Little Home Is Filled With 27 Viet Refugees

By JON HALVORSEN
Associated Press Writer
GUILDERLAND, N.Y. (AP) — "Please excuse us, the house is a mess," Lieu Bolduc said as she welcomed a visitor to her brick ranch house where 27 Vietnamese refugees have been living the past few days.

Don Bolduc and his Vietnamese wife have christened their one-story house "Ft. Chaffee North," after the refugee camp in Arkansas.

The refugees here range in age from a 6-month-old toddler to a 66-year-old grandmother. All intend to settle in the United States, some in this prosperous suburb of Albany.

To accommodate their guests, the Bolducs have put 13 cots and several sleeping bags in their basement to supplement the three double beds upstairs.

Bolduc, 27, and his brother-in-law, Pat O'Brien, 31, of Lorton, Va., are serving as sponsors for the 27 refugees and brought them here Saturday in a convoy of four vans from O'Brien's home.

"I started all this" by marrying Lieu, Bolduc said with a grin. He met her while serving with the Army in South Vietnam.

O'Brien, who worked for the General Accounting Office in Vietnam at about the same time — although he never knew Bolduc there — later married Lieu's sister. Each couple has a young daughter.

Bolduc said the refugees are all relatives of the two men's wives, although it "gets hairy" trying to sort out relationships. Bolduc and O'Brien said that despite the crowd of 33 persons, including 11 children, there have been few problems.

"Our neighbors around here have been terrific," said Bolduc, manufacturer's representative for a giftware firm. "They've donated the use of their beds, sleeping bags and everything."

LAST DAY! "ESCAPE TO WITCH MOUNTAIN" G

Early Recruits Trained Under von Steuben

By MICHAEL SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Sometime after 1776, John Sail of Massachusetts found this bit of bad news in his mail:
"This is to inform you that you are this evening drafted as one of the Continental men to go to General Washington's headquarters and you must go or find an able-bodied man in your Room (place), or pay a fine of twenty pounds in twenty-four hours."
Sail might have been any age between 16 and 60 when he received the draft notice from a local militia captain summoning him to serve in the regular Continental Army.

Washington's regular forces were constantly short of men and there was steady draft of soldiers from state militia units.
Many of the 100,000 Americans who fought in the Revolution were middle-aged and in poor physical shape compared with military forces of today.
Those who fought in the early battles in the spring and summer of 1775 were farmers with little or no military training who did their fighting from behind stone fences, little caring what other members of their units were doing.

But after the first several months of war, the colonial army was organized into units whose drill and training were modeled after the conventional British tactics of the time.
With few exceptions, the most important battles of the Revolution were set piece affairs with one army faced off against another, most often in an open field.

It was not until the Americans learned the rigid musket drill of 18th century European armies and became proficient with the bayonet that the tide of battle turned against the British.
In 1777, Washington imported a German military officer, Baron Frederick William Von Steuben, to instill in his troops discipline and confidence.
Steuben broke tradition as an officer and personally drilled the soldiers encamped at Valley Forge. He also wrote the most widely used drill manual of the time and there are historians who believe that without him the British might have won.

Chances are that Sail was trained with Steuben's methods. The troops used muskets known as "Brown Bessies," which were notoriously inaccurate and often misfired. They were effective at a maximum range of 60 yards and only if fired simultaneously by large numbers of troops.
The soldiers formed two lines; one kneeling and the other standing behind the first line. While one rank fired, the other reloaded. That meant that the troops who responded with the greatest speed and precision to Steuben's drill were the most likely to win. A good battalion had much the battlefield impact of a 20th century machine gun.

As for bayonets, there were few Americans who believed that close-in fighting would be a major factor in the outcome of the war. For one thing, medical practices of the time were so crude that a man injured by a well-placed bayonet was unlikely to survive.
Sail slept on a mattress of straw and he awoke to ear-shattering drum rolls. It was vital for him to learn a score of beats, for the drum was the radio of the 18th century battlefield. In the heat of battle, only the drum, in occasional combination with the fife, could be heard.

As a member of the Continental Line, Sail fought among the elite of the American forces. Local militia troops often were placed in the front rank of battle on the assumption they would fire one musket volley, then break and run.
The better disciplined and trained regulars to the rear were expected to stand fast, firing several times before the battle was decided.
Washington's armies were plagued constantly by desertions. Thousands of recruits picked up a bounty for enlisting in a unit, and then deserted so they could enlist in another unit for still another 10 pounds, or a promise of a land grant when the war ended.

HEAVY SPRAY ON WELL BLOWOUT—Some 20,000 gallons of water per minute are being sprayed on an Amoco Production Company drilling rig 80 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico off the Louisiana coast. The water is being used in hopes of preventing another fire while the well is being capped. Pollution from the rig that is spraying gas at right was minimal during an aerial view Tuesday. (AP Wirephoto)

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 20, 1975

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: First decide exactly what you desire, then put in motion the chain of events necessary to bring your goals to a satisfactory conclusion. Be definite.
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Interests you are working on may need more commitment from you to meet with success. Make your life with mate more harmonious.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Find out from partners what is expected of you and state your own views for fine results. An unexpected situation increases prestige.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Energy and enthusiasm get work done efficiently. Co-workers give good suggestions which should be heeded. Enjoy home in p.m.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have a good opportunity to have a good time today unexpectedly. Mate is in a fine mood and will join you at recreation.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Decide how to make home more charming and close ties happier. It will be a bit difficult, but you can handle it.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact those who can help you attain your finest aims, whether business or personal. Handle correspondence well. Social p.m.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A new opportunity arises so that you can add to your income; be sure to seize it. Get advice from a most successful person.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are dynamic today and can accomplish a great deal dealing with others. Get out to the social and become more popular.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your hunches are fine today so use them. Ideal time for happiness with mate. Make it a real partnership. Be adroit.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make appointments early for social life later in the day. You can go after that personal aim with speed. Use your money wisely.
AQUARIUS (Jan 21 to Feb. 19) You can handle public affairs in a delightful way to gain the approval of others. A new project can increase income.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to do things unexpectedly. This can lead to something interesting. Make helpful new contacts. Get out from under drudgery.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will do unexpected things and will pioneer where others fear to tread, and for this reason can achieve both fame and fortune. Be sure to give a good education so your progeny can make the most of this quality. Teach early to complete whatever has once been started, then give as much freedom as possible. Teach ethics early.
"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!
Carroll Righter's Individual Forecast for your sign for July is now ready. For your copy send your birthdate and $1 to Carroll Righter Forecast (name of newspaper), Box 629, Hollywood Calif. 90028.

'New Town' Dream Ran Into Mounting Troubles

By JOHN LUNDQUIST
Associated Press Writer
JONATHAN, Minn. (AP) —
Dr. Robert Kiste has a stake in the $21 million dream that is this village in the woods, lakes and rolling hills southwest of Minneapolis. Indeed, his 7-year-old son likes it here so much that he told his mother she should be a kid again so she could grow up in Jonathan. But 7-year-old eyes don't read the debit sheets on this project that was the first of 14 "New Towns and Model Cities" scattered around the nation — experiments in living that were to find answers to the problems of land planning, home design, pollution, schools, mass-transit and other aspects of metropolitan living. The U.S. Congress authorized financial and technical help to approved developers. But almost all of these experiments are in trouble today, and money is the reason. Consider Jonathan:

Born seven years ago, it was authorized $21 million in federal mortgage guarantees in 1970 and was to house 50,000 people by 1990. It would be a designed balance between residential, commercial and recreational areas. Commuter trains would whisk workers the 25 to 40 miles to their jobs in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and others would work at companies that moved into Jonathan.

But today, there are only 2,200 residents in what is called Village One, the first and only residential area completed. There are no commuter trains, and Bob Kiste for example drives an hour and a half roundtrip to his job at the University of Minnesota where he is an associate professor of anthropology. It doesn't bother him. He spends three days a week at the university, two at home reading and writing. His home has office space at a walkout level that opens on an expanse of rolling terrain.

"For my kind of work, it's a beautiful place," he says. "It's like country living, quiet and peaceful. It's a delightful place to live and raise children." Not necessarily for the people who built it.

The Jonathan Development Corp. has had to ask the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for advances of $468,000 and $340,000 to meet interest payments.

Bruce Nimmer, third president of the corporation in a year, says he's trying to line up another company to take over the mortgaged 6,000-acre spread.

The model cities program began in 1968 with HUD looking for functional, pleasant styles of living, as opposed to the haphazard, subdivision on subdivision jigsaw puzzle of the suburbs.

Jonathan is not the only new town in trouble. HUD says that almost all, but not all, of the 14 model communities are having difficulties. Some blame changing times, inflation, and changing money supplies. Others say the federal government has not helped enough. As a result of the problems, some of the new towns might become carbon copies of what they were supposed to replace.

Under laws passed in 1968 and 1970, HUD was authorized to guarantee up to $50 million worth of each developer's bonds, plus interest on the bonds, plus technical assistance, plus financing for roads, schools, sewers and other facilities. But some developers have charged that the federal government has withheld funds for the new communities program.

Some new towns are healthy, at least for the time being. Woodlands, a 20,000-acre project 30 miles north of Houston, Tex., that has preserved much of the site's existing forest, reports no present money problems. And Maumelle, a development 13 miles from downtown Little Rock, Ark., is busy with its construction program.

Otto Stolz, the HUD official in charge of the new community program, says almost all the 14 projects are in financial difficulty. He says most developers have planned the financing of their projects poorly. He also says there are a limited number of people willing to buy homes in these experimental communities.

Stolz pointed out that financial failures wouldn't mean people would be thrown into the streets at these new towns. The land simply would be sold to other developers, and the people there would stay if they chose to stay.

The state of the economy gets much of the blame for the problems faced by new town developers. But Nimmer, echoing complaints from other developers, cites a "basic lack of direction" within HUD.

A major problem, Nimmer said, is that HUD is not making loans to cover interest payments. Another is that HUD isn't making grants to cover installation of sewer and other facilities. Both, he said, are part of the 1968 legislation.

'Foxy' Doomed In Third Fight

By CHARLES GREEN
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Foxy is dead at the age of 14, killed by a man who saved his life twice before.

Foxy was a fighting bull. He was so brave, and fought so well, against Manolo Espinosa "Armillita" on Feb. 5, 1966, that Armillita asked officials of the El Progreso Bull Ring in Guadalajara to spare Foxy's life.

Fighting bulls are not allowed to breed before they enter a ring. A bull who shows exceptional bravery in a fight is sometimes spared so he can be put to pasture to breed others like him.

Foxy, who was 4 at the time, was sent to a tranquil life in the pastures of Javier Garfia's famous bull ranch where he was born. Armillita was symbolically awarded Foxy's ears and tail as a token of the excellence of the fight.

It is rare for a bull to be granted an "indulto" or pardon because the whole purpose of a bull fight builds toward the climactic moment when the matador must expose himself to the horns in order to lunge over them and plant a sword in the bull.

It is even more unusual for a bull, once given pardon, to fight again. Fighting bulls are intelligent, cunning animals. They learn quickly, as a Spanish saying goes, "to attack the meat instead of the cloth."

But a year later Foxy was brought from retirement to face Armillita again.

Again Foxy was brilliant and brave. Again Armillita asked that Foxy's life be spared. Again El Progreso officials agreed. And again Foxy went back to pasture.

Armillita is not one of Mexico's most famous bullfighters. He is a journeyman who is used to fill out cards topped by one of the big names. He cannot make heavy demands on promoters.

Promoters of an unusual Saturday fight (most bull fights are on Sunday afternoon) needed a gimmick. Someone remembered Foxy.

He had already fought twice. He was very old for a fighting bull. He had spent eight years as a seed bull and some of his grandsons had already had their moment of glory in the ring.

But the promoters needed a draw and Armillita needed a fight.

Bullfight critics in the Mexico City newspapers said it was the first time in the recorded history of bullfighting that the same bull had been fought three times in a major plaza. And they said old Foxy again proved his mettle. He was especially fast and dangerous and showed more stamina than many much younger animals.

But this time Foxy was doomed.

After it was over Foxy, like any other dead bull, was dragged from the ring by mules. He left without his ears and tail. They were cut off to replace those given symbolically to Armillita almost a decade before.

The Gulf of Mexico, with 3,100 miles of shoreline and 596,000 square miles in area, is the largest gulf in the world.

Attic And Bake Sale Planned

An attic and bake sale will be held at the Greenville Church of God fellowship hall Saturday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The purpose of the sale is for the YWEA Missions Project in which the youth have been working for six months. The money will help build three churches in three countries.
