

Congress Approves Pay Hike

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' vote for its cost-of-living pay raise gives the members two dates to watch: October 1975 for setting the amount, and November 1976 when the voters speak.

Concern with what the voters may think showed through the House debate Wednesday, the maneuvering to determine whether there would be a recorded vote disclosing each member's position and the final breathtaking, 214-213 recorded vote which passed the bill.

In the Senate, where only a third of the members will be up for re-election next year, the measure passed Tuesday, 58 to 29.

Democratic House freshmen, especially vulnerable to opposition next year because they are newcomers, voted 51 to 21 against the bill.

Leaders of both parties in the House predominantly were for the measure.

President Ford had urged passage of the pay-raise measure and so his approval is assured.

What Congress did was to blanket itself, the vice president, Cabinet members and other high officials and the top echelons of the civil service under the comparability adjustment system now in effect for the rank and file of government employees.

The president, after receiving expert advice, recommends to Congress adjustments designed to reflect pay trends in private employment. They go into effect in 30 days unless Congress says no.

The next recommendations are due in October. Preliminary calculations are that comparability might work out to more than an 8 per cent increase, but Ford indicated he might hold his recommendation to 5 per cent. The president's $200,000 salary, raised in 1969 from $100,000, is not involved.

Among those that would be affected are the $62,500 salaries of the vice president and chief justice, the $60,000 salaries of Cabinet members and associate justices of the Supreme Court, the $42,500 salaries of senators, representatives and federal appeal judges, the $40,000 salaries of federal district judges and others ranging down to $36,000.

If the October increase comes to 5 per cent, members of Congress would get a $2,125 raise and Cabinet officers would get $3,000 more. Congress, which has been struggling with energy legislation almost since it convened in January, whizzed the pay raise legislation through in two days.

The Senate attached it Tuesday to a minor unrelated bill the House had passed. The House Rules Committee took less than a quarter hour to prescribe quick procedures Wednesday for handling it.

Find Two Dead Of Gun Shots

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

At noon today, the Pitt County Sheriff's Department was pressing its investigation into the death of a man and his wife—apparently the result of gunshot wounds—a mile from D.H. Conley High School, on rural road 1711.

Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley identified the two as William Earl Wainwright of Bethel, and Thelma Norris Wainwright of Manning's Trailer Court near McGowan's Cross Roads.

The death of the two apparently occurred about 8:30 a.m., and the incident was originally reported to the Highway Patrol as a head-on collision.

Highway Patrolman D.R. Taylor said when he arrived, he found a pick-up truck in the highway and a car in a road-side ditch.

Wainwright was lying face-down along the shoulder of the road between the car and truck, while Mrs. Wainwright was slumped face down in the front seat of the car.

Pit. Taylor said when he discovered bullet wounds in the woman's back, he notified the Sheriff's Department.

"The vehicles did collide," the trooper explained, an estimated damage at $400 to the truck and $600 to the car. The truck had apparently been heading West while the car was traveling East at the time of the collision.

Oakley said the Wainwrights "reportedly were separated." He said Mrs. Wainwright had been shot five times—four in her back and once in the upper chest, while Wainwright had been shot one time in the upper chest.

A pistol, according to Oakley, was found on the ground beside Wainwright. Seven empty cartridges were found in the weapon, he noted.

He noted that autopsies are being performed on the victims today.

Preparing For Oil Price Controls To End Aug. 31

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials are preparing for the abrupt end of U.S. oil price controls on Aug. 31, and Congress is moving to soften the impact on the consumer of higher petroleum prices after the House killed President Ford's plan for a gradual end to controls.

Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb said today that while he expects controls to end suddenly by the end of next month consumers should feel the impact gradually over six to nine months.

Still awaiting House action today is a Senate-passed bill extending the price controls for six months beyond the Aug. 31 expiration. Ford has said he will veto such a measure and Zarb said "there is no doubt in my mind" that Ford will do so.

Meanwhile, the Senate is ready to take up a bill to tax windfall oil profits and return some of that money to consumers. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee said he hopes to have the bill passed by the Senate and the House this week before Congress begins its month-long recess Friday night.

Zarb said he saw enactment of a windfall profits tax as the key legislative priority now. He said such legislation is needed to prevent oil companies from reaping excessive profits once controls are removed.

Zarb said he saw no chance for a compromise with Congress after the House rejection of President Ford's proposal. Saying "we are extremely disappointed" by the House action, Zarb said: "At the President's direction, FEA is making necessary preparations for an orderly transition" from controlled oil prices on Aug. 31.

The House voted 228 to 189 Wednesday night against Ford's plan. The action was the second time in two weeks that the House has turned down a White House proposal to phase out oil price controls.

The FEA estimates that overall petroleum prices will increase about 4 cents to 6 cents a gallon over the six-to-nine months following expiration of price controls. The expiration means the end of the $5.25-a-barrel lid on old oil, which makes up more than 60 per cent of U.S.-produced oil. That oil then would be free to rise to the unregulated price of new oil, which is more than $11 a barrel.

The Senate bill, approved 11 to 0 Wednesday by the Senate Finance Committee, would provide tax cuts totaling about $375 over 5½ years for each of the 150 million Americans 18 years of age or older.

The bill's windfall profits tax basically takes 90 per cent on all oil price increases above the $5.25-a-barrel controlled price, though the industry could escape up to 25 per cent of the tax by reinvesting that amount in further oil or gas exploration.

Maharini Jailed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Maharani of Jaipur, who has spent her life in bejeweled palaces, has been arrested on charges of violating India's foreign exchange and smuggling laws, the government said today.

An official announcement read to Parliament, of which the 56-year-old Maharani, Gayatri Devi, has been a member for a decade, said she was taken into custody Wednesday and imprisoned in New Delhi's Tihar jail.

The Maharani, who once had a reputation as one of the world's most beautiful women, joined more than a dozen other members of Parliament imprisoned since Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's proclamation last month of a national emergency.

The Maharani, however, was the first parliamentarian arrested on charges unrelated to political activities although she belongs to a conservative party opposed to Mrs. Gandhi.

Kidnapped A Second Time

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Guerrillas kidnaped a British executive today for the second time in two years after shooting and wounding his chauffeur and two bodyguards, police said.

The same man, identified by police as Charles Agnew Lockwood, was kidnaped June 6, 1973 and freed after payment of a multimillion dollar ransom.

Police sources said Lockwood, 67, was seized about 20 miles northeast of Buenos Aires when gunmen traveling in several vehicles intercepted his car on a highway.

A shootout broke out between the gunmen and Lockwood's chauffeur and two bodyguards, and Lockwood's chauffeur and two bodyguards were wounded in the exchange, police said.

The attackers then seized Lockwood and pushed him into another car.

Simon Asks Relief From Double-Tax

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that the nation's industry has grown rusty and needs help, the Ford administration asked Congress today to cut taxes for corporations and stockholders by nearly $14 billion over a six-year period.

"This is not a program for big business. It is a program to benefit all savers," Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said in presenting the tax plan to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Simon also urged the Congress to help develop a program to encourage new savings by all Americans by offering special tax incentives, and he urged that the 1974 Individual Retirement Accounts legislation be broadened.

The major part of the program outlined by Simon was a reduction in corporate and stockholder taxes, by a phased out elimination of what is regarded as a double tax on dividends.

At present, corporations pay taxes on their profits before any dividends are paid to stockholders, and then stockholders face additional tax liability on the dividends they receive.

Prior to making the proposals to Congress, Simon had sketched the outlines to newsmen.

Simon proposed that the double taxation be eliminated by two actions — first, giving corporations a tax deduction equal to about 50 per cent of the dividends they pay, and secondly, through a tax credit to stockholders.

Stockholders would be able to claim a tax credit equal to about one-half of the dividends they receive. The total savings to stockholders, based on current levels of tax payments, would be about $6.3 billion a year.

The direct savings to corporations from the dividends deduction would be about $7.5 billion, Simon said.

He proposed phasing in the stockholder credit over a five-year period from 1978 to 1982 at a rate of about $1.25 billion in savings for stockholders each year. The stockholder credit, however, would not apply to tax-exempt or foreign stockholders under the administration proposal.

The dividend deduction for corporations would be phased in over a six-year period, beginning in 1977 with a net reduction in corporate taxes of about $2.5 billion the first year, increasing at a rate of about $1 billion a year.

Simon said the double taxation of dividends "is inherently inequitable" since other kinds of income are taxed only once. He said most of the nation's major trading partners already have acted to eliminate or reduce the double tax.

Ford, Turkey's Premier Confer

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Turkish Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel met with President Ford today and then talked of possibly reopening U.S. bases in his country, saying they were shut "for the time being."

After the breakfast meeting, Demirel told newsmen he and Ford had reviewed troubled relations between their two nations and he added: "As far as Turkey is concerned, these relations are very valuable. We will do our very best not to spoil these relations."

Asked what it would take for Turkey to reopen U.S.-manned bases, Demirel said: "I cannot tell you right now." But at another point he said activities by American military personnel at the bases were halted "for the time being."

Ford said the United States will "do our best to remove any roadblocks" to close ties with Turkey. He said relations between Turkey and the United States were mutually beneficial and of great value to the rest of the Western world.

In advance of the breakfast meeting at the U.S. embassy residence here, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a Wednesday night news conference that an effort would be made to "bring about a radical solution rather than a stopgap one" to the problems that led Turkey to halt all American military activities at the bases

Kissinger acknowledged that economic subjects would probably be discussed at the four-power meeting hosted by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson. But he sought to play down this aspect of the meeting, describing it simply as a regular, informal meeting of the nations that have a special responsibility for maintaining the post-World War II status of Berlin. The highlight of Ford's day Wednesday was the first of two meetings with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev. Kissinger said the discussions would be continued Saturday morning, "hopefully leading to an agreement to implement the Vladivostok decisions."

WHEN AND WHERE?

Will you please clarify the time and place for the aluminum pickup at Pitt Plaza. I went there on the last announced date and didn't see the truck. Mrs. W. B.

A spokesman for the Pitt Plaza Business Council says the Reynolds Aluminum pickup vehicle has not been here for the last couple of announced visits. She said a letter asking why not has been sent to the company and that a release says they will be here on schedule from now on—every other Friday from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. The next dates are Aug. 1, 15, and 29. The truck usually parks in the front (264 Bypass) parking lot near the Salvation Army and Sheltered Workshop drop-off houses. It has large signs and should be quite visible, she said.

Youngster Hates Piano Lessons

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10-years-old and take piano lessons, but I hate it very much. My lessons are almost over for this year, but my mom says I have to take piano lessons again next year, and I don't want to.

What should I do?

PIANO LESSON HATER

DEAR HATER: Take lessons and practice! Many adults have told me that one of the biggest regrets of their lives is having quit music lessons. But not one who has quit has said that he was glad he did.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 16 and have been going with a guy I'll call Doug for nearly two years. (He's 17.) He's very popular at school and comes from a well-to-do family. (More so than mine.)

Well, four months ago his mother came home early and caught us going all the way. She didn't say anything, but the next day Doug told me he'd promised his mother that he'd break up with me. (She doesn't know it, but we've been going all the way for a year and a half.)

We stayed apart for two months, then we started seeing each other on the sneak.

Doug's mother was driving by a hamburger shop yesterday and saw Doug and me coming out, so she phoned my mother and told her she didn't approve of Doug's seeing me. (She didn't say why.) My mom said she approved and that it was up to me. (My mom doesn't know I've gone all the way.)

Doug's mother is crazy. Doug said she had been treated for mental illness.

Doug and I love each other and hate all this sneaking around. How can we make his mother realize that she can't keep us apart?

DOUG'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: First, I think Doug's mother was very charitable in not telling your mother why she disapproved of you. Furthermore, your remarks about the woman were unkind. Having been treated for a mental illness does not make a person "crazy."

I have no idea how you can get Doug's mother to realize she can't keep you apart. She's understandably concerned about her son's future, and I can't fault her.

A little unsolicited advice from me: "Going all the way" is for people who can handle mature relationships. Obviously, you don't qualify.

DEAR ABBY: You hear a lot about ungrateful children. How about ungrateful parents?

Our parents are retired on modest pensions. To save them money, my husband does their plumbing and electrical-repair work. He's no amateur. He makes his living that way. Sometimes he spends two or more days on a repair job for them and asks nothing in return. He even supplies the parts.

My kick is that my parents have called other plumbers and electricians who have charged them outrageous prices (one bill was $75 and the other, $160 for jobs that were so poor my husband had to straighten them out afterward.)

It seems to me that if my folks are going to pay for a job, they could at least call my husband and give him the business.

Should we tell them that from now on they should hire people to do their jobs for them? Or should we apply for guardianship of these old fools?

TIRED OF IT

DEAR TIRED: Of the two alternatives, I'd recommend the former.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Jackson-Perry Vows Exchanged

AYDEN—In a candlelight ceremony Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, Miss Deborah Gail Perry became the bride of William Leroy Jackson Jr. in the Community Baptist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Stanley Wingard. Carroll Smith presented a program of nuptial music and Earnest Beppard, soloist, sang "Because," "Whither Thou Goest" and the "Wedding Prayer."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Carlton G. Perry and Mr. and Mrs. William Leroy Jackson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza designed with a scoop neckline edged in re-embroidered lace beaded with pearls and sequins. Matching lace enriched the waistline of the empire bodice and trimmed the cuffs of the bishop sleeves. The modified A-line skirt was styled with panels of re-embroidered lace extending down the front, sides of the hemline and attached chapel length train.

She wore an elbow length illusion veil attached to a tiara headpiece of Venise lace scalloped medallions and centered with a pearl design. The bride carried a colonial nosegay of white roses, white miniature carnations, baby's breath and ivy with satin ribbon streamers.

The church was decorated with two candelabra of white daisies, miniature carnations and springeri. The couple knelt for the benediction on a white prie-dieu.

The maid of honor was Miss

Deborah Jackson, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a formal length pink floral gown and carried a nosegay of miniature pink carnations, baby's breath and white daisies.

Carlton Perry Jr., brother of the bride, served as best man. Ushers were Harry Lee Shirley, uncle of the bridegroom, and Greg Dennis of Ayden.

Mrs. Perry wore a pink polyester dress with matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a yellow and white knit ensemble with matching accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white carnations.

The grandmothers wore white carnation corsages.

Miss Joan Pierce presided at the guest register at the church.

Following a wedding trip to Raleigh, the couple will reside in Ayden.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of Ayden-Grifton High School. The bride is em-

Following the rehearsal, a cake cutting was held at the Ayden Community Building given by the parents of the bridal couple.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of greenery, candles and doves. After the bridal couple cut the first traditional slice of the three tiered wedding cake, Mrs. Nancy Shirley served cake and Miss Joan Pierce poured punch. Miss Perry presented her attendants with gifts.

Time For A Dramatic Upswing

Tobacco growers are becoming fidgety about the prices they are receiving early in the marketing season, and in fact some growers disrupted sales on the Border Belt this week.

John H. Cyrus, tobacco specialist for the N.C. Department of Agriculture, flat out says that the tobacco growers aren't getting adequate money for their crop to cover their production costs.

Both Cyrus and Bill Little of the N.C. Farm Bureau say that farmers are protesting increasingly.

The feeling at the opening of the season was that early prices wouldn't be too high because the poor tobacco would be moving on the warehouse floors first. Here on the Eastern Belt low quality tobacco still predominates, but on the South Carolina-North Carolina Border Belt better tobacco is reportedly moving on the floors and farmers are unhappy with the prices they are receiving.

Clyde Gore, president of the Columbus County Farm Bureau, said there were "the most dissatisfied farmers I've ever seen," after Monday's sales.

It's far too soon yet to declare the selling season on the Eastern Belt a disaster, but the reports of dissatisfactions form the S.C.-N.C. Border Belt are ominous for our tobacco growing area.

Tuesday the Eastern Belt averaged $86.56 with most of the markets averaging from the mid to high 80 dollars per hundredweight.

For poor quality tobacco such averages might not be too bad, but there will have to be a considerable pick-up in prices as the better tobacco moves on the market if our tobacco growers are to make a profit.

This year's crop has easily been the most expensive ever to produce. Fertilizer costs have been up. Fuel has skyrocketed. Labor and equipment are more costly. The bad thing from the farmer's point of view is that his investment is already made in harvesting this crop. If he doesn't get a price that covers what he has already spent he simply has to take a loss on the whole year's operation.

We shouldn't yet panic over the price situation in the Eastern Belt area, but we can only hope that there is a dramatic upswing in the prices paid for tobacco so that our growers can expect a reasonable profit for the year.

Await A-Bomb Effect

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Thirty years after its destruction by an American atom bomb, Hiroshima is a prospering commercial center dedicated to peace.

But an unanswered question plagues the now grown children of the 100,000 survivors of the holocaust — will they inherit the radiation diseases of their parents?

A long-term study by the newly created joint United States-Japan Radiation Effects Research Foundation will attempt to give the answer.

As the successor to the American-backed Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission, which has operated here since 1947, it plans to continue the quest into the deadly effects of nuclear radiation well into the 21st century.

The doubt and anxiety which linger over Hiroshima cloud the lives of nearly all its 839,000 inhabitants, most of whom have relatives or friends killed or maimed by the first atomic weapon used against humans.

Despite this lurking concern, life goes on with vigor.

Estimates of the Hiroshima bomb toll vary. The Japanese say 200,000 died while Americans estimate a more conservative 80,000.

An energetic team of Hiroshimans, led by its first postwar mayor, the late Shinzo Hamai, set about raising the city from the ashes. Absorbed in their task, they had little time to hate but enough to visualize their reborn city as the peace capital of the world.

Hiroshima today is an example of how well they succeeded. The population in 1944,

THIS AFTERNOON

The Realistic Bureaucrat

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Charles McMillan appears to be a federal bureaucrat who accepts realistically the failures of past battles in the War on Poverty, and looks forward—very guardedly—to future prospects of winning a battle.

A slender, light-skinned man hailing originally from Iowa, McMillan is an educator first, a bureaucrat second. He is Southern Regional Chief of the Office of Minority Business Enterprise, and came to North Carolina recently to announce a federal grant to fund an office in this state.

The funds are very small, says the bespectacled McMillan. The feds will put up $80,000 for the state; the state will put up $50,000 worth of what is called in governmental jargon "in kind services." That generally means some office space and equipment. The money will just about cover a staff of four: a director, associate director, two secretaries, and some supplies.

A Commitment? The entire South, McMillan says, has federal money totaling only $5 million; nationally, the figure is $52 million. As for governmental emphasis on nurturing minority business ventures, "that says something about our commitment... or lack of it."

The big push will be not toward massive federal funds, but toward helping minority businessmen find the kind of job that needs to be done, raise the capital to do it with, and build a management potential to run that business.

"We're not talking about those little Mom-and-Pop operations, but manufacturing and processing operations," McMillan said. The goal in the first year is to build slowly: three or four minority business operations launched with perhaps a quarter of a million dollars to finance them, not in federal funds, but in money raised as venture capital in North Carolina. Such money would not be in the form of loans, but investments in the enterprises.

The way it is supposed to work is simple: locate an existing North Carolina industry which needs a particular product supplied for its operation, one which could be provided by another firm located nearby; raise the money to get that plant going; and help it get on its feet.

Some Chance

What are the odds? McMillan thinks that being realistic in the goals will help make success possible. But he also observes wryly: "I work for the government, and in all honesty, I don't expect the red tape to be minimized any time soon in any government program."

So, the prospective employer will be dealing with a variety of federal agencies: SBA, OMBE, HUD, etc.

But, McMillan says the objective is to stop pumping millions of federal dollars into operations which probably can never stand alone.

Instead, take about three in North Carolina; perhaps 10 across the entire South, and pump not dollars but help into them, he says, is the new approach. The help will come in management advice, legal expertise, accountants, assistance in raising capital through selling stocks or bonds.

McMillan bristles at the suggestion that this is just another federal giveaway, a welfare program for blacks who can rake off some federal dollars.

"I get very disturbed that just because we are associated with a certain segment of the population, we are always categorized as a giveaway program... we are not... it is a business effort and not a welfare program."

Sometimes, McMillan noted, programs help a struggling business put together a loan, only to get it into deeper trouble. The object now is to take time and care to help a few succeed.

The INSIDE REPORT

Humiliating King Hussein

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The newest intrusion by Congress into foreign policy, its imminent refusal to permit President Ford to deliver on his commitment to sell 14 batteries of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan, threatens the long U.S.-Jordanian alliance and the U.S. position throughout the Arab world.

Both House and Senate, strongly lobbied by friends of Israel, seem certain to approve only six Hawk batteries. But King Hussein has privately let Washington know that he has been promised is unacceptable. He may then turn instead to Soviet arms, either directly from the Russians or through the King's former blood enemy, Syria.

Apart from giving the world another spectacle of two contradictory foreign policies carried on in Washington by President and Congress, this possible course of events is steeped in irony. Instead of keeping Jordan out of another Mideast war as an ally of Syria, as Congress claims it is doing, the humiliation of Hussein may have precisely the opposite effect and alienate Washington's staunchest Arab friend.

King Hussein requested defensive missiles almost two years ago, when Jordan was odd-man-out in the Arab world. Wholly dependent on the U.S. and pilloried in Arab capitals as a U.S. stooge, the King had nowhere to turn except Washington for defense against Israel's U.S.-equipped air force, the region's preeminent military force.

But Hussein's position in the Arab world has undergone dramatic change. Through skillful diplomacy, he now has enough prestige in the Arab world, plus credits from oil-rich Saudi Arabia, to buy missiles outright—from Moscow or anywhere.

There is deep irony in the argument circulated to congressional offices in a July 15 memo from the American Israel Public Affairs Committee—the highly effective pro-Israel lobby here. That argument: the Hawk missiles will be used against Israel in alliance with Syria. To buttress that claim, the memo points to an unsubstantiated New York Times dispatch of April 25 that Jordan and Syria are planning "a joint military and air command."

Denied instantly by King Hussein and more importantly by the State and Defense Departments, the reported "joint command" is taken deadly seriously in Congress to justify disapproval of Mr. Ford's agreement with Hussein.

The irony: If Jordan if forced to turn to Damascus or Moscow for Soviet SAM-type missiles, far closer military collaboration between U.S.-aligned Jordan and Soviet-aligned Syria becomes starkly probable.

That prospect stems from Jordan's predictable reaction to a congressional turnaround. With half its country under occupation by Israel (which is armed to the teeth offensively and defensively with American weapons) and with a record as America's closest Arab friend, Jordan would see itself victimized by an inexplicable double standard. Hussein might then, for the first time, turn to Soviet arms.

The American Israel Public Affairs Committee memo dismisses that as nonsense. "The possibility that Jordan would buy similar equipment from the Soviet Union is remote, given Jordan's complete reliance on Western arms, training systems and technology."

In other words, says the Israel lobby, the U.S. can keep Jordan on a short leash and Jordan will have no choice but to accept.

That dubious premise gets majority acceptance in both the House and Senate. At last week's Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing, not one Senator spoke in favor of selling 14 batteries.

Only the surprising intervention of a devoted friend of Israel, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, prevented the committee from limiting the $350 million sale to merely three batteries. He proposed six—still less than half the number that Pentagon technicians say is essential for an effective defensive system covering Amman, the army divisional commands and Jordanian air bases.

A slim chance remains that King Hussein might accept half a loaf and hope that the other half will come at some future time. Even so, the lesson of Congress's double standard has already damaged the U.S. at a critical point in its Arab-Israeli peace mediation.

It has deepened the chaos of two U.S. foreign policies confronting the world: one in the White House (the basis for formal negotiations); the

Teaching And Preaching

There was as much preaching as teaching in colonial American schools. But that's more than half the children of the period could have told you; they never set foot in a classroom.

From the outset, the primary goal of American education was the support of revealed religion. Though secular sciences gained growing footholds in colonial curriculums after 1700, it was not until the Civil War that intellectual values superseded those of the Gospel.

Even then much formal instruction was denied the majority. The duration and character of a pupil's studies reflected the social and economic status of his parents.

More patriots were educated in the home, the tradesman's shop, the field or the church than in the schoolhouse. To attend a free public school, where they existed, was tantamount to proclaiming indigency.

The American colonists first expressed their concern for education in their new wilderness environment 356 years ago this week when the first legislature in America, meeting at Jamestown, Va., asked England to send workmen to build a university.

Colleges, with their classical studies of Greek, Latin, moral philosophy and natural science, were only for the upper crust in the 18th century.

Children of the middle class served apprenticeships with a craftsman and cribbed their letters on the side. Or, those lucky enough to attend a grammar school or academy, were prepared for the callings of business.

A poor boy was fortunate to pick up a smattering of literacy at the free school, usually imparted with exhortations to obedience, thrift and industry intended to offset the examples of his shiftless father.

A girl of any class seldom received more than a polite education. All elementary pupils, many of whom studied only at home, wrestled with five basics instead of the familiar three Rs. Beyond reading, writing, and arithmetic were rules of conduct and religion.

The New England Primer, the most widely used textbook in the 13 colonies for nearly 200 years after its initial printing in 1690, set the standard.

It's alphabet was accompanied by couplets heavy on moral admonitions usually based on Biblical incidents, and illustrated with rough woodcuts, many of them frightening.

Often the volume served several generations in a family. Frequently when a child finished it he finished his education as well, especially if he lived too distant from a town.

Historian Clinton Rossiter writes: "Most children were cut off completely by custom and economic necessity from secondary and higher education... Neither the fact nor the ideal of educational democracy had any standing in early America."

A few moved on to English grammar schools, sort of prep schools for the mercantile class. One which opened in New York in 1732 offered math, algebra, geometry, navigation, bookkeeping, and Latin—a utilitarian education for the young merchant or planter.

College-bound boys, such as those attending the seven-year course at the Boston Latin School, which opened in 1635 and is the oldest secondary school on the continent, spent a lot of time translating classic Greek and Latin works.

By 1790 academies combining both curriculums replaced the grammars and dominated education until the advent of the public high school.

The first North American college, Harvard, opened in 1636. A dozen were already operating in Latin America. Intended for the production of Congregationalist ministers, Harvard's scholars studied Aristotelian philosophy, classical languages and Hebrew.

Of the nine colleges in the country by the Revolution, seven were sectarian and all were adapted models of English institutions, as, indeed, was all of American education.

Other Editors Say Hard Labor

(Greensboro Daily News)

The little finger-pointing exercise in Raleigh last week over who's to blame for a stalled highway work program for prisoners served no one. The issue is tangled, to be sure, but hardly one that could not be worked out amicably between Gov. James Holshouser and his department heads.

It seems that the General Assembly enacted legislation requiring prisoners to be used for highway labor beginning this summer. But the legislators failed to appropriate any funds for the plan. That oversight prompted Corrections Secretary David Jones to blast the legislation as "irresponsible." What the secretary did not say, or know, is that the chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the legislation said his subcommittee had worked out an arrangement with the Department of Transportation to pay the inmates a dollar a day for highway work without any new money from the legislature.

It is not entirely clear where the lines of communication broke down, though that seems to have become a much more frequent occurrence now that Republicans control the governor's office and Democrats the legislature. What is well documented is that thousands of inmates throughout the state's prison system sit idly in their cells, creating a potentially explosive situation.

Labor on the highways is not the kind of vocational training that ought to be offered minimum-risk prisoners in a legitimate work release program. That is why the legislature banned the old highway prison-gang program in 1973, only to restore it again this year after reports of idleness and overcrowding in the prisons began to worry prison officials.

But in this matter, as in so many others, something still remains a better choice than nothing at all—even at dollar-a-day wages that are less than satisfactory. We trust the various departments involved will be able to find the relatively small amount of money needed to get this program off the ground, and out of the political arena.

Strength For Today

WATER OF LIFE AT HAND

Many people waste their time asking God to do for them what he has already done. The opportunity to achieve their fondest desires stands right before them. The means lie at hand, yet these people continue to implore God to give them the opportunity and the power to use it.

A ship in the mouth of the Amazon River once sent out a call for fresh water to another ship standing by. The Amazon is 150 miles wide at its mouth and the captain of the distressed ship, not able to see the shore of South America, thought he was in the open sea. The call came back from the other ship. "Lower your buckets over the side and get all the water you want. You are in the mouth of the Amazon river."

The water of life, given to us by God, is at hand and as readily available as the water of the Amazon river was to the ship captain. We should stop asking God to give us powers we already possess and should ask instead that he stir up within us the disposition to use these powers intelligently. —By Elisha Douglass

Dental Insurance Plan Working

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Less than 25 years ago it was widely believed that insurance couldn't be written on dental care. Expert insurance men termed the idea naive. Their response was a reflex: Dental care is uninsurable.

Times have changed and so has the attitude. Insurers now are just as convinced that it does pay. Premium income to private insurers now is approaching $1 billion a year. Private insurers are making money.

Some 425,000 steelworkers and their one million dependents begin receiving coverage Friday. They'll join thousands of autoworkers. And they'll be joined on Jan 1 by 750,000 employees of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

In 1965, fewer than two million Americans received coverage on dental care. Even in 1970 the total was only 12 million. But the American Dental Association now estimates 25 million will be covered by the end of this year.

This is still only the beginning. By 1980, the ADA estimates, 60 million Americans, workers and dependents, will be entitled to full or partial reimbursement for dental expenses. A national health insurance act might push the total toward 100 million.

Dental insurance has become a big, profitable industry. Scores of insurers now compete. Labor unions see it as the most important "fringe benefit" they can add. Employers view it as a valuable work incentive.

The development probably never would have occurred without pressure from union members, especially West Coast longshoremen, and an uncharacteristic re-evaluation by insurance company actuaries.

Insurers were convinced that dental insurance couldn't pay, simply because of the known fact that almost everyone has some form of dental problem. The costs would be too great, it was feared.

As Aetna Life & Casualty puts it, "Approximately 230 million people in the United States have some form of dental disease." If everyone is dentally ill, how can you insure them? The risks are almost 100 per cent.

Said a spokesman for the ADA: "It was considered a benefit that everyone would utilize. It wasn't something that might happen but something that would happen."

Southern Legislators Trade Views On New Issues

By GEORGE W. WILBUR
Associated Press Writer
WILLIAMSBURG, Va.
(AP)—Legislators from 15 southern states focused their attention today on an array of topics ranging from medical malpractice to agriculture.

day was a discussion of the proliferation of medical malpractice suits in the nation's courts.

States in the South and elsewhere are hurriedly seeking answers to this growing problem which has already sparked doctors' strikes in California and New York.

Also on the conference's morning program were panel discussions on education and the role of government in regulating business and occupations.

But clearly the day's highlight was a scheduled afternoon address by Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz.

Wednesday's conference activities began with some gloomy economic predictions and ended on a brighter note with a nighttime visit by the delegates to the Busch Gardens theme park a short distance from this restored colonial capital.

The dispiriting economic news came from two Washington economists, Robert W. Hartman of the Brookings Institution and Robert Reischauer of the Congressional Budget Office.

Both were in agreement that the current recession has bottomed out but that it may take years before the nation's economy is back to normal.

Quarterly Meet This Weekend

Allen Chapel FWB Church is having its quarterly meeting this week-end at the church.

Services begin on Saturday night with the Rev. C. R. Paker and Cherry Lane presiding. Rev. J. L. Tyson will deliver the sermon Sunday morning. Sunday night services will be presented by Eldress Hattie Cobb and the members of St. Luke Church.

The public is invited to attend the services.

Hartman said "it is close to a sure bet" that high unemployment will persist over the next three or four years. And Reischauer said he thought it would be 1980 before unemployment drops back to what is considered a normal five per cent.

The pace of economic recovery, Hartman said, depends largely on public attitudes and fiscal and monetary policies at the federal level.

He chided President Ford for vetoing federal spending programs on the grounds that they are inflationary and said the dangers of overspending are not tied inextricably to what the federal government does.

And even with economic recovery, Reischauer said, state and local governments would feel the financial pinch for many years ahead.

He attributed many of the financial woes of state governments to being burdened with the need to provide matching funds for federal programs in education, health care and crime control.

Reischauer said that even if states reduce expenditures and impose higher taxes, they can

Set Trap, Nab Purse-Snatcher

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A new police undercover squad fighting purse snatching, mugging and other crimes in downtown Charlotte has made its first arrest.

A young policewoman was disguised as a middle-aged shopper. She was the bait for a purse-snatcher like the ones who recently preyed on several women.

A husky teen-aged boy walked up behind her Tuesday evening and tried to snatch her pocketbook. Two undercover policemen arrested him after a short foot race. He was turned over to juvenile authorities.

expect either to run deficits or eat heavily into accumulated surpluses over the next few years.

He said local governments would fare even worse because their revenues are not responsive to economic growth or price increases.

A continued slump in the housing industry, he added, will do little to beef up property tax roles on which local governments depend for the bulk of their revenues.

Later in the day, the state legislators switched their attention from the economy to the preservation of individual rights.

A stern warning was issued by professor Melvin B. Lewis of the John Marshall Law School in Chicago that the nation, in its zeal to combat a rising crime rate, was infringing seriously on the rights of law-abiding individuals.

Recent court decisions, he said, have posed a serious threat to such rights as the freedom from illegal searches and seizures, the right against self-incrimination, and communication in certain confidential relations.

Lewis said it was one thing to shout the slogan "law and order," but it was quite another to seek order without giving due deference to basic law.

the year before the cataclysm, was 336,483. It plummeted to 136,518 by November 1945, as many fled, dreading the unknown terrors of radiation. By 1955, it had climbed to 374,793 and 10 years ago it was 524,558.

The city now is a flourishing regional center dotted with skyscrapers, high-rise apartment buildings, wide avenues, parks, new schools, and an ambitious half billion dollar industrial park development in the western suburbs.

The sleek, high-speed trains of the new Tokaido line now link Hiroshima with Tokyo in five hours as opposed to 10 hours before, bringing an influx of tourists who mingle with the crowds in the covered shopping arcades, the gaily decorated department stores and the proliferation of new restaurants, bars, coffee shops and markets.

Inflation and recession have hit Hiroshima as they have elsewhere, with layoffs at the big Mitsubishi shipbuilding yards and the Toyo Kogyo auto works. But business leaders are optimistic that the economy is on the upswing.

The center of Hiroshima is its grassy peace park — Heiwa Koen — where a museum records the horrors of the bomb, a cenotaph with the names of the dead, and the stark skeleton of the atomic dome, the old industry promotion hall.

The park, with its monument to the thousands of child victims, its eternal flame, its shade trees and rose gardens, is a symbol of peace.

By 1750 the rays of the enlightenment were showing brightly enough here that schools began to grow more secular, offering more courses in the sciences and politics, for example.

However, the aim of these institutions remained, by and large, the same: securing young gentlemen entrance to the ranks of community leadership and clergy.

For the general urban public some instruction could be had from newspapers — which increased from none in 1700 to 23 in 1765 — libraries, lectures, and even evening schools.

As rudimentary as the early education appears today, it would be a mistake to judge it by modern standards. It was at least adequate for the day and laid the groundwork for the future.

A contributor to James Franklin's Rhode Island Gazette, commenting on the paucity of American literature, wrote: "In the Rise of States, the Arts of War and Peace, Agriculture and the like are of necessity more attended to than erudition and politeness, that comes on of course afterwards when the Golden Age succeeds the Iron. So that instead of wondering why our country has produced so few good Writers... we may rather admire at the contrary."

And, in the postwar period, at the advocacy of the founding fathers, the system extended and developed the idea of the school as a republican institution, a place to train citizens.

Benjamin Rush stated the case in 1786: "Without learning men are incapable of knowing their rights, and where learning is confined to a few people, liberty can be neither equal nor universal."

Nancy M. Wooten of Greenville is one of only four women who are going to enter the North Carolina Military Academy as officer candidates for the North Carolina National Guard. The four women will enter the Fort Bragg Academy with nearly 100 of their male counterparts. The officer candidates classes will begin on August 10.

There are also two Greenville men involved in the program. Robert G. Hughes and William P. Mills are scheduled to complete their training as officer candidates during the North Carolina Military Academy two-week activity period to be held in mid August.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Let me tell you something. I thought a long time before I decided to write this column. I mean, this country has enough on its mind what with the price of oil, the unemployment rate, and the scarcity of energy.

But . . . how do you say goodbye to an old hot water heater? Answer: Very slowly. Maybe some of you have never had the problem of replacing your hot water heater. I hope it is something you never have to live through. If there's anything worse than not having a hot water heater, it's having two of them.

The list of people who do not want your old one would reach up to your elbow.

First, I approached the outfit who sold us the new one. They said there was no market for resale in an old hot water heater.

Then I called the service agencies who said they could find no therapeutic value in picking it up, let alone fixing it.

I called a junk dealer who said, "What is this, lady? An invitation to attend a hernia?"

Then an incredible phenomenon took place. For 26 years, my husband and I have sustained our marriage on a 50-50 basis. All of a sudden, the broken hot water heater not only assumed a sex, but without benefit of a hearing, I assumed its custody . . . all 100 per cent of it.

"When are you going to get rid of her?" asked my husband.

"Her who?"

"Her. The hot water heater."

"If things keep going the way they've been going, we may have to put her in the spare bedroom."

As the weeks wore on, I considered planting flowers in it, putting four wheels on it and driving it, slipcovering it, putting it on the porch, or putting it in my car, locking all the doors, and waiting for someone to steal it.

Today, it stands in the garage . . . a monument to man's over-enthusiasm for technology.

Can't you see life from another planet in the year 2001, finding an entire earth littered with the remains of billions of hot water heaters and reporting, "They were a tall race with a 30-40 gallon capacity and very little expression."

"Did you bring one back so we could study it?" asks his leader.

"Hey, man . . . that's not my job!"

Common Law Wife Suing For Divorce

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The "Father of Bluegrass Music," Bill Monroe, has been sued for divorce by a woman claiming she became his common law wife in 1960.

Bessie Lee Mauldin Monroe, 51, seeks the divorce on grounds of abandonment and cruel and inhuman treatment.

In her suit filed Tuesday, she said she joined Monroe's country music band at age 17 and that she later traveled as his wife in several states that recognize common law marriage. Tennessee does not.

She listed the date and place of her marriage to him as "1960—Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina and various other states."

Her suit said when she first met Monroe, now 61, he told her he was single, but said she later discovered he was married. She was forced into a form of concubinage under the dominion of Monroe, the suit said.

He was divorced in 1960 but the decree stipulated he could not marry the plaintiff.

In 1954, the suit said, Monroe purchased a 288-acre farm north of Nashville for their home.

She said she was registered to vote as Bessie Monroe and the entertainer introduced her as his wife.

She still lives at the house, but Monroe refuses to provide for her needs except for a meager supply of food, she said.

Monroe is known as the "Father of Bluegrass Music" for developing and perfecting that form of music. He is a descendant of the fifth president of the United States.

No Longer Jail Drunks

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Mecklenburg County police chief, B.L. Porter, is telling all his men that whenever they can, they should take public drunks to the detoxification center instead of to jail.

This is prompted by the recent death of a Charlotte physician, Dr. Paul Jones Chambers, who died of a stroke after he was jailed as a drunk.

In addition, three of the seven state District Court judges in the county have declared the state public drunkenness law unconstitutional. Their ruling is not binding on other judges. The three held that the law gives policemen too much discretion on whether to arrest a public drunk, put him in a detoxification center, or send him home.

Mecklenburg County Sheriff Donald Stahl has suggested that if public drunkenness is no longer a crime, drunks who are constantly in and out of jail should be placed in institutions.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long battle over the disputed New Hampshire Senate seat, now headed back to that state's voters, has demonstrated that a minority can still win a Senate fight despite the rule change making it easier to limit debate.

By sticking together, Senate Republicans frustrated the efforts of the Democratic majority to settle the issue in the Senate, where the Democrats hold a 61-38 majority.

The GOP goal all long has been a new election, and that became assured when Democrat John A. Durkin reversed himself and agreed to a runoff in the race.

The Republican strategy was based on two tenets, that they would be unable to win in the Senate because of the Democratic majority and that, in a runoff, Republican Louis C. Wyman would be favored to win.

Many Democrats and their labor allies backing Durkin conceded that result was likely, noting that the election took place last November at a time when Republicans generally were in trouble and Wyman had angered the state's largest newspaper, the Manchester Union-Leader.

But they based the long Senate fight on the fact that the Constitution specifies that the Senate should decide election disputes and that if it hadn't been for the action of the Republican dominated state Ballot Law Commission, Durkin would have to come to Washington as a 10-vote winner.

Wyman had been the original victor election night, based on an unofficial tally that showed him 355 votes ahead. But the official recount put Durkin 10 votes ahead.

The Ballot Law Commission, composed of two Republicans and a Democrat, rechecked several hundred disputed ballots, then unanimously gave Wyman the nod by two votes.

The battle in the Senate has been over the disputed ballots, with Democratic Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., often siding with three Republican members of the Rules Committee to offset the other four Democrats.

This meant a series of 4-4 ties on how individual ballots should be counted. The Senate was never able to bring those deadlocks to a vote because Democratic leaders were unable to muster the 60 votes needed to limit debate under the revised anti-filibuster rules.

The 60-vote rule was adopted earlier this year to make it more difficult for a minority tie up the Senate. At the time opponents of the change argued it would erode minority rights in the Senate.

Four Southern Democrats voted against limitation, Allen and three conservative committee chairmen, Sens. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., of Judiciary; John C. Stennis, D-Miss., of Armed Services; and John L. McClellan, D-Ark., of Appropriations.

At one state, there was a strong effort to win the support for debate limitation from four liberal Republicans, but they were under strong GOP pressure to keep their ranks solid and they never wavered.

So in the end, the New Hampshire Senate seat will be filled by New Hampshire's voters, given a second chance by a steadfast GOP minority and the failure of the Democrats to keep their majority as united.

Detroit Keeps Its Guard Up

DETROIT (AP) — Hundreds of riot-equipped police continue to patrol Detroit's tense Northwest Side despite a quiet night in the area where street violence erupted three days ago.

Mayor Coleman Young toured the area Wednesday night and said he noted little of the hostility which greeted him earlier when he tried and failed to calm an angry mob of rock-and-bottle-throwing youths.

Some 350 officers moved into the area Wednesday, breaking up groups of black teen-agers whenever they gathered. Some 500 officers were concentrated in the area the first two nights.

Police Chief Philip Tannian said the patrols were now spread out over a 10 square-mile area. They had been concentrated near a bar where the white owner shot and killed a black teen-ager, Obie Wynn.

Andrew Chinarian, who was rearraigned on a second-degree murder charge Wednesday and released on $25,000 bond, told police Wynn was tampering with his car in the bar's parking lot.

Young, the city's first black mayor, said that in his tour of the neighborhood Wednesday night, youngsters waved to him as he went by, some raising their fists in the black power salute.

On Tuesday night, Young was jeered and some missiles were thrown at him. Then the crowd ransacked Chinarian's tavern.

Young, who said he would attend Wynn's funeral Saturday, told newsmen that only a small minority of the neighborhood had joined in the violence.

Whale Washed Up On Shore

A female hump-backed whale, about 30 feet long and estimated to be about one and a half-years old, was the object of considerable attention this past week when it washed up ashore just behind the Cape Henry Lighthouse at Ft. Story on the tip of Virginia Beach, Va.

BM1-c Daniel (Danny) Alexander Monroe, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Alexander Monroe, Jr. of Smithfield and Greenville, coordinated protection of the whale and its subsequent removal. He is the lighthouse keeper at Cape Henry.

"The hump-back whale is not a rare whale, and is the kind most often found in this part of the Atlantic," Monroe said, "however, they're really not often seen in this area."

"Word soon spread about the dead whale ashore," Monroe said, "so it was necessary to post a guard of Army men around it until the Smithsonian people came and took it away." The whale was transported on a LSD.

"This particular whale," Monroe said, "was in good condition, with no outward obvious signs of what caused its death, although speculation is that it was possibly hit by a ship.

"The Smithsonian people will do an autopsy to determine the cause of death," Monroe said, "and have told me I'd receive a report on their findings in a matter of several weeks."

Monroe, whose father is superintendent of Plumbing at Pitt Memorial Hospital, is one of two brothers making the military service a career. The other brother is Burt Monroe.

Danny Monroe is serving a three year assignment at Ft. Story and has completed nine years service in the Coast Guard.

Miller Looking For Turn-Around

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — "It was," said Johnny Miller with a pleased but rather wistful quality to his voice, "a very good year."

Miller was referring to his banner season of 1974 in which he won eight American titles and a record $353,021.

"I'm sure, at my age, I shouldn't be looking back," the slender, blond 27-year-old said, then smiled. "But it was, as Frank Sinatra said, a very good year. I have it. It's behind me. No one can ever take it away from me."

Miller, who teed off today as the defending champion in the $250,000 Westchester Classic, started this season in the same way that he dominated the game last year. He won three of his first four starts, setting records in a couple of them and shooting rounds of 61 in the first two.

But he hasn't won since then, since the first week in February. He's come close—second by a shot in the Masters, one shot out of a playoff in the British Open, second in the Philadelphia Classic. But he hasn't won.

He hasn't beaten Jack Nicklaus all year. He's lost his lead in the money-winning race. The spotlight has shifted from him to Nicklaus to Tom Watson to Hale Irwin to Tom Weiskopf.

"In a way," Miller said before his start on the 6,614-yard, par-72 Westchester Country Club course in suburban New York, "it was a lot like this last year. I didn't play that much and I didn't play all that well during the summer.

"The only difference is that last year every time I got in position to win, I won. This time I haven't done it. I've let some get away."

Now, with a chance to regain his money-winning lead, he's looking for a turn-around in his season.

"About this time last year I started playing really well again," he said. "Maybe it'll happen again this year."

With $50,000 going to the winner of this event and $28,500 to the runner-up—prizes that are exceeded by only one tournament on the schedule—Miller has an opportunity to regain the money-winning lead from Nicklaus, who is skipping this tournament for the first time in history.

Nicklaus leads the money race with $203,599. Miller, with $183,270, could take over the top spot by finishing either first or second. Irwin and Weiskopf, with $180,227 and $169,565 respectively, also could move into the No. 1 position with high finishes here.

Although Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Arnold Palmer all are among the missing, the 153-man field includes 54 of the top 60 money-winners of the year.

Among the other standouts are South African Gary Player, U.S. and British Open champions Lou Graham and Tom Watson, $1 million winners Gene Littler and Bruce Crampton and John Mahaffey, a four-time runner-up this season.

Ellis Seems To Agree With Robinson; Plays

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
Frank Robinson asked what seemed to be an ironic question: "What's everyone so uptight about John Ellis for?"

The feeling had been that Frank Robinson was uptight about John Ellis, or vice-versa. Mere weeks ago the Cleveland Indians manager had benched the big catcher and said that Ellis might never again wear the Cleveland colors.

At least, that's the way it appeared; but Robinson criticized gathered newsmen for listening with one ear Wednesday night after Ellis' two-run eighth-inning home run had beaten the Baltimore Orioles, 3-1.

"When a story is carried somewhere else, you guys never get the full quote. The full quote was: 'He'll never be my regular catcher and he'll never play for me again if he doesn't come and tell me he's going to play the game the way I want it played—for the good of the team.'

"No player is bigger than the team. It's as simple as that," said Robinson.

Now it seems Ellis agrees with that philosophy, although when asked if the hatchet had been buried with the manager, he said "I'd rather not talk about it. I'd rather just stay away from it."

Elsewhere in the American League, California rallied to trim Chicago 5-4; New York edged Detroit 2-1; Oakland blanked Texas 1-0; Milwaukee downed Boston 6-2 and Kansas City beat Minnesota 6-4.

Angels 5, White Sox 4
John Doherty's bases-loaded ninth-inning single capped the three-run rally that lifted California past Chicago and gave Nolan Ryan his second consecutive victory after eight straight losses.

Yankees 2, Tigers 1
Rudy May held Detroit to three hits and Roy White's tie-breaking double in the sixth inning drove in the winning run for New York.

A's 1, Rangers 0
Bert Campaneris hit his fourth home run of the season—the 28th surrendered by Ferguson Jenkins—and three Oakland pitchers combined for a five-hitter to carry Oakland past Texas.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 2
Sixto Lezcano's three-run homer in the eighth inning was the telling blow in Milwaukee's triumph over Boston.

Royals 6, Twins 4
Freddie Patek collected four hits and drove in three runs to lead Kansas City to victory.

Connors Still Won't Join Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Will Jimmy Connors ever play for the U.S. Davis Cup team?

Not so long as Dennis Ralston was captain, he wouldn't.

Connors' manager says he won't play for Tony Trabert, either.

Trabert, a Davis Cup player and international singles champion in the 1950s and now a teaching professional in California, was named captain of the team Wednesday by the U.S. Tennis Association.

The appointment, announced at a news conference in New York, was an effort to calm the turbulent tennis waters and put the United States back into Davis Cup contention after humiliating early-round defeats the past two years.

One of the keys was to get Connors to play.

"The USTA came to us four or five months ago saying they wanted to talk, to try to bring all the sides together," said Ralston from his office in Salisbury, Md.

Ralston said Stan Malles, president of the USTA, went over a list of 20 possible candidates for the job. Perhaps one would please Jimmy.

"The list was endless," said Ralston. "The only one that Jimmy couldn't agree with was Tony Trabert. It's obvious to me they don't want Connors."

Ralston said Connors' objections to Trabert were personal and philosophical. He said Trabert, a teaching professional and sometimes television commentator, made disparaging remarks about Connors during a telecast of the Australian Open championships, verbally abused Connors' mother and then, in Las Vegas during Connors' challenge match with John Newcombe, took Ralston aside.

"He went into a long harangue about how Connors was disgraceful on the court," Ralston said. "He said if he had his way he'd suspend him. He went into the glory days of tennis in the 1940s and 1950s and I told him that things had changed."

Despite Ralston's dire predictions, Trabert plans to meet with Connors and his manager in an effort to iron things out.

"I'd like to talk to Jimmy personally and tell him what I have in mind, clear the air," said Trabert. "I think I can if we can sit down."

Connors, who built his personal reputation on being recalcitrant toward the establishment and Peck's Bad Boy on the tennis court, has boycotted Cup competition since Ralston rebuffed his offer to help the squad in the final in 1973, a 5-0 rout by Australia.

Waltrip Has Ride

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, who has finished among the top five finishers in half of his 16 Grand National races this year, has been hired as the new driver for Di-Gard Racing.

The 28-year-old driver, winner of $62,665 so far this year on the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) circuit, will be based in Daytona Beach the remainder of the season that ends Nov. 23.

He replaces Donnie Allison as driver of Di-Gard's Chevrolet. Allison quit Di-Gard and returned to Hueytown, Ala., earlier this month.

"We are enjoying our best year and feel with the added talents of Di-Gard, we will accelerate our progress to the NASCAR Grand National championship," said Waltrip, who made this year's Nashville race his first Grand National triumph.

Waltrip is in his fourth year on the Grand National circuit. He won $57,690 last year with his best effort a second in the Southern 500 at Darlington, S.C.

Jets Apparently Feel Joe Is Worth The $$

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — "The greatest sports attraction since Babe Ruth," said Phil Iselin, president of the New York Jets.

"Tremendous charisma—has a way of relating to people, kids and women as well as fans," added Weeb Ewbank.

"No doubt about it—he's got a way of making things happen, a big plus for the National Football League," commented Hank Stram, former coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

The subject: Joe Namath.

Namath had just signed a two-year $900,000 contract Wednesday with the Jets at Hofstra University, where the team is in training.

The cameras had stopped whirring, newsmen had scattered, a few hardies lounged around Weeb Ewbank Hall, the Jets headquarters, mulling over the obvious question: Can a gimpy-legged quarterback cost $2 million?

"Well, I'll tell you," said Iselin, "we're already a sellout for the 1975 season and have a long waiting list. You can give Joe a lot of credit for that."

Stram, a surprise visitor, tanned and dapper with a Super Bowl champion's ring glistening from one of his fingers, agreed. "You know, I've had some contact with the World Football League," he said. "They were really disappointed when Joe turned down a $4 million offer."

"They were sure if Joe jumped to the NFL he would trigger an avalanche of NFL players who had played out their options. They said every time Joe was on TV with the Jets you could count on 10 million additional viewers."

Stram said the value of Namath's natural charm could not be discounted.

"I can remember the All-Star game in 1971," he said. "I had my wife and kids along. My daughter, who was 11 then, was dying for Joe's autograph so she queued up and got it."

"Joe had no idea who she was, but he was so nice and pleasant she came away completely in a trance. Too many people have given him the Broadway Joe image. He's not that way at all."

"Sonny Werblin was responsible for that," interjected Ewbank, who coached Namath for nine years with the Jets. "Sonny was show business conscious. He played up Joe as a playboy. He's not that way at all," said Iselin. "He is actually a very quiet and timid guy. I think more people are getting to know the real Joe Namath."

It was Werblin who signed Namath to a $400,000 contract out of the University of Alabama and helped promote him into one of the nation's folk heroes, a talented rakish swinger.

Marathon Set For Charity

On August 22, the Greenville Recreation Department will sponsor a softball marathon. The event will last 26 hours and will involve approximately 160 players. The purpose of the event is to raise money for programs for exceptional children and adults such as the physically handicapped, the mentally retarded, the blind, the elderly, and others.

Starting at 6 p.m. and continuing through 8 p.m. the following day, the players will be organized in rotating shifts so that the game will continue for the 26 hour event.

There will be two marathon teams, the Green and the White. These teams will be made up from several different league teams now in existence. Each team member and other interested persons will be approached by friends, relatives, business persons, and others asking them to sponsor a team. Sponsors will not be supporting an individual player, but an entire team - paying a certain amount for the number of innings that the team completes. In a 26 hour period, a team could play as many as 190 innings.

If you have any questions about the marathon or you would like to sponsor a team, please call the Recreation Department.

Counting On White's Play

CHICAGO (AP) — "Imagine him roaring down the line and crushing people play after play," says a pro football executive about Randy White, who the College All-Stars are counting on to help stop the Pittsburgh Steelers' offense Friday night.

"He is 6-4 and weighs 248 pounds, runs a 4.6 forty, bench presses 450 pounds and is as quick as anything," said Gil Brandt, in charge of player development for the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys traded quarterback Craig Morton for the New York Giants' first-round college pick to get White, the second player tabbed in this year's draft.

"He'll be used at end and as a linebacker for the All-Star game but he won his honors at the University of Maryland as a lineman, last year picking up the Outland and Lombardi trophies.

White credits a weightlifting and running program started by Maryland coach Jerry Claiborne with his success.

"That program helped me tremendously," he said. "It not only made me stronger, it helped me in everything."

In four years, White's weight climbed from 215 to 240 pounds and he lowered his time in the 40-yard dash from 4.9 to 4.6 seconds.

But playing linebacker Friday night won't be a new experience for him.

"I had been a linebacker ever since I was 10 years old," he said. "I was more like a tailback because I carried the ball, passed it and caught it."

But at Maryland, he was changed to a lineman and didn't complain. "I didn't say anything when they switched me. I was a freshman and just wanted to play," White explained.

All-Star coach John McKay of Southern California plans one last practice late today before Friday's contest, scheduled for 9:30 p.m., EDT, at Soldier Field and televised nationally on ABC-TV.

Two aces were received over the past weekend at Brook Valley Golf and Country Club.

The first came during play in the Men's Four-Ball Tournament, and was scored by John Taylor of Snow Hill on the 18th hole. He used a 3-iron for the shot. With him were Jim Grauer, Jim Harper and Sid Ashby. The shot enabled the team to tie for third place in the tournament.

The other ace came on the 12th hole and was made by Mary Dumbroski of Tarboro, while playing with Jane Sauve. She used a 5-iron for the shot.

In the Men's 4-Ball Tournament, the team of Bill Tripp, Doug Morgan, Frank Orgel and W. L. Allen Jr., took first place with a score of 115.

Second place went to Willard Wilson, Tim Kermon, Smokey Lancaster and Bob Pinkston with a 116. Third after comparing scorecards were Taylor, Harper, Grauer and Ashby with 117. Also with a 117, but taking fourth were Joe Hallow, Jay Collie, Kirk Ashby and Mike Bach.

On August 10, a Mixed Spectacular will be held at the club. Those wishing to play are urged to get a partner of the opposite sex and sign up as soon as possible.

The Member-Member Tournament will be held on August 15, 16 and 17 at the club. It is open to all male members of the club with current CGA handicaps cards.

Greenville

The W. S. Moye Memorial Tournament will be played under a different format this year—involving just 36 holes instead of the 54 as in the past. The tournament, held annually at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, will be on August 31 and September 1. Practice round will be held on August 30.

Sign-ups are now underway, and will close on August 25th.

A College Day event will be held on Tuesday, August 19, for sons and daughters of members. It will be a 9-hole Captain's Choice tournament, and the field is limited to the first 50 to sign up. The pool will be open afterwards for participants.

A Dates And Mates Tourament will be held on Thursday, Aug. 7, at 5 p.m. with a nine-hole shotgun start on the front side. A Come-As-You-Are dinner will follow.

Another Dates & Mates will be held on Tuesday, August 19. Those interested may sign up for either or both now.

The annual City Tournament between Brook Valley and Greenville will be held on August 23-24 at Greenville. The 36 hole tournament is open to male members, 16 and older, of either club.

Several Greenville golfers turned in best rounds recently. They include Cheryl Collie, a 49; Hal Wiggers, 78; Camille Gaylord, 54, and Jane Collie, 96.

Ben Harrison Sr. and Jr. captured top honors in the championship flight in the Father-Son Tournament with a 72. Ben then teamed with another son, Nat, to take second place with a 73. Rick and Fred Lemmond won the putting contest.

In the first flight, Barney and Bill Barrett won with a 40. Dick and Gordon Douglas were second with a 41. Bob and Lathan Mills took the putting.

The pee-wee division was won by Marvin and Jim Blount. Leon and Lyn Moore took second place and also won the putting event.

The flights were based on the ages of sons. Those 16 and older were in the championship flight while 11-14 made up the first flight. The pee-wee division were sons 8-10.

Seeking To Sign

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Ted "Mad Stork" Hendricks, the free agent All-Pro linebacker who played out his option with the Green Bay Packers last season, will be in Atlanta today "hopefully to sign" with the Falcons, according to General Manager Pat Pepller.

Hendricks, 27, and his agent Tony Roberts, were scheduled to meet with the Falcons in the afternoon, Pepller said Wednesday from the club's training camp.

The 6-foot-7, 220-pound Hendricks, a No. 2 draft choice of Baltimore in 1969 out of Miami, Fla., played five seasons for the Colts before being traded to the Packers a year ago.

One More Music Bear-Poaching In National Park Grows Award Show Due

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — I, pardon the personal reference, am of the opinion that TV needs another awards show as much as it needs more reruns.

Don Kirshner will not present the case for the defense. He says such a show is justified when other awards shows don't give recognition to a certain category of entertainment — namely, rock music.

He argued his case so convincingly to CBS that on Saturday night, Aug. 9, the network will televise the "First Annual Rock Music Awards" show live. He'll be executive producer of the 90-minute bash.

It'll be the fourth music awards show this season. CBS already has aired the music industry's Grammy awards, while ABC has emitted a country music awards show and Dick Clark's pop music awards program.

Kirshner, a 41-year-old pop music impresario who got in the business in the mid-1950s writing songs with Bobby Darin, insists he's not putting on his rock huzzah "just for the sake of having another awards show."

He said he got the idea of doing a rock music salute two years ago while attending the Grammy show, of all things.

"The awards were coming up and it was incredible to me that Led Zeppelin, the Rolling Stones, Alice Cooper, people who are the leaders in a $3 billion business, weren't even getting nominated," he said.

(Grammy voting is done by members of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences. Kirshner's balloteers are rock music critics and members of the National Association of Progressive Radio Announcers, disc jockeys who spin rock music records.)

Kirshner, who has been boosting rock music for nearly three years on his syndicated weekly TV show, said he proposed the idea of a CBS rock-only awards show to special only awards show to CBS without much hope of CBS buying the idea. "I really didn't think they'd give me the gig because they had the Grammys," he said.

However, he added, "CBS is a pretty sophisticated network and they must have felt there was a need for this. Even though at the time they gave me a chance, I didn't have Elton John or Diana Ross."

He referred to the two pop music stars who'll co-host his show on Aug. 9 from Santa Monica, Calif.

"It was just a concept then, but thankfully, things have worked out just fine," he said.

Budget Set By Center

The Executive Board of the Greenville REAL Crisis Center has adopted a 1975-76 budget of $28,000, according to REAL House director Marjorie A. Boney.

A grant from the N.C. Drug Commission is providing $13,500, which will leave a total of $14,500 to be raised locally to meet the projected budget. REAL is also a participating agency within the Pitt County United Fund and will receive some financial assistance from that source. The amount to be received has not yet been confirmed.

Among plans and projects scheduled to raise funds for REAL are two September events—an art auction on September 21 at Holiday Inn in Chapel Hill; and the fourth annual REAL Revue radio marathon to be sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees during the last weekend of that month.

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Bear poaching in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park has become a major problem in recent years, park officials say.

It is estimated that last year as many as 200 black bears were killed by hunters sneaking into the park, according to Chief Ranger Dick Moeller. He said there are about 800 bears roaming the park wilderness.

"There is really no way to tell for certain how many bears were killed or for that matter, how many there are in the park," he said. "All we can do is make estimates based upon observations and information."

Moeller said the number of animals killed last year has not caused a noticeable depletion in the bear population because the bear reproduced at about the same rate they were killed.

About 75 per cent of the poaching last year was for commercial purposes, and that figure this year is about 36 per cent, Moeller said.

However, the chief ranger expects the number to increase between now and fall, when the bears begin to hibernate.

Moeller said rangers will be patrolling the park increased numbers this year in an effort to cut down on the illegal hunters.

"We will be where we suspect the hunters are going to be," he said. "Of course, there are some pretty remote areas where a hunter can come in, kill a bear and leave without us ever knowing it."

Moeller said about 50 persons have been arrested for illegal hunting in the last two years. He said the conviction rate has been running about 90 per cent.

A person caught hunting within the national park can be sentenced up to six months in federal prison and fined up to $500, he said. If a person is caught transporting an animal across the state line, he could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined as much as $10,000, he said.

The hides and meat are sold on the blackmarket mainly in Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina and Virginia, Moeller said. He said last year bear meat on the blackmarket was selling for $3 a pound, while a complete bear hide was selling for about $100.

He estimated the value of a live cub was up to $300 and a mature bear could be sold for about $500.

Moeller said many hunters use dogs to chase the bear into an area where they wait with their guns ready, while other hunters set up bait stations for the animals.

"They use things like sardines to lure the bear into a specific area," he said. Other hunters use a variety of traps, although the traditional vicejawed bear trap is seldom used.

He said one of the more common traps is the "deadfall," in which the animal walks on a triggering mechanism, causing a heavy weight, such as a log, to fall, crushing the skull or breaking the neck.

Moeller called poaching in the park "a traditional problem" because many area residents have been bear hunting longer than the park has been established. "Really it's a manhood thing for many of them, sort of like proving they are men."

Physician To Be Speaker

Dr. A. Heyward Smith Jr. of Waynesville, a practicing physician and surgeon who is a deacon in the First Baptist Church there, will speak to the Greenville chapter dinner meeting of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship, Monday, Aug. 4.

Dr. A. H. SMITH, Jr.

His talk, his own personal testimony, is scheduled at 7:45 p.m. in the American Legion Building, located on St. Andrews Drive off 264 By-Pass. It is free and open to the public. Women and their families are invited. Prior to Dr. Smith's talk, a dinner will be served at 7 p.m. The public is also invited to the dinner.

Dr. Smith comes to Greenville under sponsorship of a number of church laymen, members of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship in the Greenville Chapter. President of the local chapter is John Montgomery.

Dr. Smith is a member of the council ring of Eastern Carolina's Camp Farthest Out, an inter-denominational camp which meets annually at Wrightsville Beach.

Singing Group In Free Concert

The Stevenson Brothers, a gospel singing group from Norfolk, Va. will present a concert at the University Church of Christ Monday at 7:30 p.m. The concert will feature contemporary as well as gospel songs, along with some of the group's original compositions.

The local appearance is part of a one-week tour of North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

There is no admission charge, and the public is invited to attend.

poaching is done by persons living within a 50-mile or less radius of the park. Many of them field dress the bear and take them home for processing in their backyards, he said.

Moeller said much of the large-scale poaching is done where the park joins the Cherokee Indian Reservation in North Carolina.

"This is not to imply it was all done by Indians, but a lot of it has been going on in that area," he said.

What are the thoughts of an expert as he goes about planning the play of the hand? Join us as declarer at four spades as we take you through the step-by-step reasoning that culminates in bringing home a difficult contract.

The bidding is unexceptional. North's hand is worth 14 points in support of spades (the four-card trump support is upgraded 1 point), which is enough for a jump raise in support of partner's suit. Since he has a minimum, South simply closes out the auction in game.

West leads the king of hearts, and the first step is to presume that the cards do not lie favorably. In that case, there are four possible losers—one in each suit. If the spades are 3-1 and declarer has to lose a trump trick, the only way to make the contract is via an endplay. For this to succeed, the North-South hands must be stripped of red-suit cards. The first step in this plan is to allow the king of hearts to hold the first trick.

Since there is no good shift, West continues with a heart to the ace. Now, it won't do to draw two rounds of trumps. If the queen fails to drop, the defender holding the lady might also have the ace of diamonds, in which case he can foil the endplay by winning the ace of diamonds, cashing the queen of spades and getting off play with a diamond.

Correct technique is to cash just one high spade and then force out the ace of diamonds. Let us assume that East takes his ace immediately and returns a diamond. Declarer wins in dummy and cashes the second high spade, and his fears are realized when East discards a club. Now, declarer will need some luck if he is to make the hand.

He cashes the king and ace of clubs and the king of spades. (It wouldn't help West to ruff the second round of clubs.) Fortunately, West is stripped of every suit but hearts, and he must concede a ruff and sluff, allowing declarer to discard his club loser while he ruffs in dummy.

Now the care declarer took in cashing his winners in the end game. Had he carelessly played off the ace and king of clubs, in that order, West would ruff the second round and exit with a diamond, leaving declarer stranded with a club loser. By leading the second round of clubs through the defender known to have the last trump, declarer neutralized that threat.

Preparation Needed For Offshore Oil Boom Impact

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "Everybody accepts the notion that we are going to have offshore drilling. We need, first of all, some funds to prepare, and we need time to prepare," says Ronald Poitras, until recently Maine's supervisor of coastal planning.

One after another, in interviews from Maine to Florida and from Alaska to California, state and local spokesmen have echoed the same demands — time and money, to face offshore oil's onshore impact.

What impacts?
—Big new oil refineries, tank farms and natural gas processing plants, attracted to major offshore finds.

—Tag-along petrochemical and satellite industries.
—Construction yards for the giant oil rigs; docks and support facilities.
—Pipelines.
—A population surge, fading after construction to leave communities with excess facilities they are still paying for.
—Finally, local economies built on oil and facing crisis within decades, when the oil runs out.

To many, refineries mean the smoky, sulfurous Purgatories around Bayonne, N.J., and Marcus Hook, Pa., an image the industry is trying to live down.

"We've had a lot of oil people in the area," said Mayor John Rousakis of Savannah, Ga., a likely target of oil development, "and they show us the pictures of new refineries, you know, with the white-glove approach. 'And you pray, my God, that better be true!'"

Gulf Oil's Alliance Refinery, in operation since 1972 and processing up to 184,000 barrels of oil daily, is a neat stand of white towers and tanks amid green meadows, 45 minutes' drive south of New Orleans.

When a reporter dropped by, 11 of the plant's 13 cracking units were in operation. There was only a tiny wisp of steam to show it.

No visible smoke, no odor.

On the marshland road west of New Orleans, even armed with a detailed map, you can drive over the major pipeline crossing you are looking for, and never notice.

At Morgan City, La., offshore oil-support is more visible, strung out for 10 miles east of the town on Route 90: terminals, supply houses, drilling and surveying companies, and the McDermott and Avondale Shipyards where offshore rigs are constructed on the shore of a bayou, to be barged to the Gulf of Mexico.

In an ugliness contest, however, Morgan City's Route 90 is only modest competition to many of the nation's other "Industrial Highways" and "Miracle Miles".

In Baton Rouge, an attractive capital next to a huge — and smoky — refinery, Louisiana's commissioner of conservation, Ray Sutton, said, "the oil industry is not putting themselves in the position, and never have, not in Louisiana anyway, of going into an area and completely wrecking its aesthetic condition."

But Louisiana, with refineries scattered along the Mississippi River and bayous, is about 24 times as big as Delaware, which has only one big refinery — and a law barring any more from its seashore.

In New Hampshire, even one refinery was too much for a coastline only about 20 miles long, and the town of Durham refused to permit its construction.

In other states, shorelines already are sandwiched between industrial centers.

If the United States insists upon offshore oil, said Skip Webb, an aide to the governor of Delaware, it better start some long-range planning — and right now.

Offshore construction employment would grow, Webb estimated, for only about 10 years — "after 10, you start down."

"What are you going to do then with your construction workers?" he asked. "It could be they would move on. Then, what about the housing they leave behind, the empty schools?"

"You've got to be looking at those things right from the beginning, because if you don't they walk up and hit you."

Webb thought there should be some federal obligation to aid communities stranded with lasting expenses if federal offshore leasing plunges them through a boom-and-bust cycle.

The Interior Department's offshore oil man, Asst. Secretary Roy Hughes, said, "The downside of the boom-and-bust cycle is probably so far in the future we haven't given much thought to it."

In Jacksonville, Fla., however, civic leaders are thinking about it. Lex Hester, the mayor's chief executive, said that while the city might welcome offshore oil to gain the economic benefits, he's had some second thoughts about "bringing in a self-destructing industry due to shut down in 20 or 30 years." Or, he asked, would the oil companies promise to rebuild the economy when they move out?

Maine's coastal planning expert, Poitras, says don't count on that. Instead, he suggests Scotland's approach to the offshore boom: formation of a public corporation, with federal involvement, to ease the economic transitions.

Poitras quit his state post recently because Gov. James B. Longley refused to accept the coastal zone management plan that Poitras had spent three years developing.

The responsibility for easing the economic impact is unclear to the federal official most intimately involved in offshore development.

"I don't know whose responsibility it is," said Hughes of Interior. But it's something that ought to be looked at."

But even Hughes agreed with state officials that "they can't conclusively do their planning until we get beyond the exploration stage."

Hughes said Interior might give the states a look at the companies' development plans once offshore petroleum is discovered. Poitras countered that by then it may be too late for states to exercise control.

Even before Interior sells the leases "private industry is already in here looking for sites, buying up land ... they've already bought an option for land in the Portland area for, I guess, platform construction," noted Poitras.

Hughes himself noted that Brown and Root, an offshore platform construction company, has purchased 2,000 acres near Cape Charles Va., more than a year before the first scheduled mid-Atlantic lease sale.

Alaska's Gov. Jay Hammond has reported that shore property "is rapidly being purchased by oil companies for onshore support centers," months before the scheduled Gulf of Alaska lease sale.

Under present rules, Interior sells a single offshore lease entitling a company to explore for petroleum and to produce petroleum.

Many state officials want exploration separated from production — separate authorizations, or at least a delay in between — to give them time to prepare, once they know for what to prepare.

Interior opposes separation or delay as impractical.

But can the states control development if oil companies have already moved in by the time states are let in on the offshore secrets?

"There's no clear answer to it," said Hughes.

"I guess my bottom-line argument would be that it's in the national interest to move ahead."

Mohammed Birthplace Is Today A Library

HISTORIC SITE—The birthplace of the Prophet Mohammed in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, now serves as a library. During its 14 centuries of history it was also a mosque.

MECCA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The birthplace of the Muslim prophet Mohammed is a simple 40-by-25-foot house turned into a library.

It includes a reading hall where the Prophet was born 14 centuries ago, and two small rooms with shelves of 11,000 Arabic books.

The place is run by a head librarian, 70-year-old Abdel Malik Tarabulsi, and three assistants. There are three metal desks, one round table, four fans and four air-conditioners.

The books are mainly reference volumes about Sira, or the biography of Mohammed, his ghazwas — or skirmishes — his teachings and books on Islamic law, known as Shari'a. Not many people come to the library, so the librarians spend most of their time reading those books.

They can recite the history of Mohammed's birth, wars and da'awa, or his efforts to spread Islam.

Mohammed lived in this house off and on for 25 years, until he married Lady Khadija, a wealthy Meccan businesswoman.

The house was sold in Mohammed's life to a rich man from al-Thiqafi clan. It remained in that family until, 170 years later, Emperor Haroud ar-Rashid's wife Kheizeran bought and turned it into a mosque.

A dissident Arab tribe came from Hassa, in the eastern edge of the Arabian peninsula, raided Mecca 270 years after Mohammed's death and destroyed his birthplace, then a mosque. But Meccans quietly rebuilt it on the same site.

In subsequent centuries the mosque became so tumble-down and deserted that Meccans decided to demolish it. It remained without doors, windows or ceilings until King Abdel Aziz, founder of the Saudi monarchy, rebuilt it as a mosque. It was changed into a library 11 years ago.

"Mohammed was an ordinary man, just like you and me," says Tarabulsi. "But he was chosen by Allah for a sacred message. Think of him and his special qualities ... a man who single-handedly spread a new religion and launched a world-wide conquest that, in not more than 38 years, reached as far as Europe and China. His name is mentioned by 700 million Moslems billions of times from hundreds of thousands of minarets and in prayer five times every day.

Tarabulsi has appealed to Moslem governments and private citizens to donate books for the Mecca library "to make the birthplace of the Prophet more worth visiting."

On the issue of money, there is however, at least some general agreement in principle: that coastal states should share in federal offshore revenues.

But how? The Interior Department, the oil industry and a number of states proposed a flat-rate percentage share for each state; most northeastern coastal states want a flexible guarantee of federal compensation for whatever impacts they may suffer from offshore oil.

The issue must be settled by Congress, for present law does not allow the coastal states any direct share of offshore revenue, which goes to the national treasury.

Time may be an even more controversial demand, for Interior

LWV Embarking On A Two-Year Study

The Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters (LWV) is embarking on a two-year study of city and county government, with emphasis the first year on the budgetary process and the second year on the formation and function of boards and commissions.

According to Anne Frost, Chairperson of Local Government Study, Dr. John Vogt, an Assistant Director at the Institute of Government, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will speak at a fall LWV meeting on local government budgeting and finance.

Members of the LWV Local Government Study Committee will then research various questions including: Where do local revenues originate? How is this money spent? and Who decides how the money will be spent?

Their findings will be presented at a spring meeting. The LWV has been concerned that so few citizens attend the city and county budget hearings each June. Through this study the League hopes to increase awareness among LWV members and the public as to how the local budgetary process works and to encourage more citizen participation in budget-making.

She served a year of internship in West Virginia. She will be associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Rocky Mount.

Some of those participating in the ordination service besides the Rocky Mount First pastor, the Rev. Thomas Farmer, are Greenville residents, the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Davis and the Rev. John Miller.

Hong Kong's Worst Convicts Save The Government Money

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD HONG KONG (UPI) — Many of Hong Kong's officials have a special reason for pride in their uniforms.

Attractive and durable, the trim outfits worn by postal, railway and prison employees are the work of the British Colony's worst criminals.

Soon schoolchildren will be sitting at desks constructed at Hong Kong's only maximum security prison.

Authorities at Stanley Prison don't worry about riots. The convicted murderers, rapists, thieves, arsonists and drug smugglers are busy turning the aged facility into a modern factory that is not only rehabilitating criminals but saving the government millions.

Instead of idling away their hours or working at tasks that have no relevance outside prison walls, the inmates at 38-year-old Stanley Prison are taught a useful trade in one of the many massive workshops equipped with the most modern machinery.

Hardened criminals enthusiastically are learning new ways of making a living and turning Stanley into a major government supplier of uniforms, shoes, signs, flags, publications and, most recently, furniture.

Riots at Stanley are almost unheard of now, escape attempts numbered only a handful during the last two years and attacks among prisoners have plunged drastically.

Prison officials are delighted. Last year the government saved $1.2 million, the difference between the $2 million it would have cost to have the products made by private industry and the $800,000 it cost to make them at Stanley. This year the saving is expected to double.

Wallace Knight, Superintendent of Industry in the Prison Department, said, "Whenever a former prisoner calls me with thanks for the training he received, I tell him, don't thank me. Just continue your work."

"And don't end up back at Stanley again."

More than 3,000 men are locked behind the white walls surrounding the complex. Under the "open prison" concept, unusual for a maximum security facility, they get the chance to learn a useful and legal trade, earn a small salary in confinement and hope for gainful employment after release.

Knight said the skills the inmates master enable them to earn a good living in the clothing, tailoring, and printing industries once released.

Knight is particularly pleased that a large government order for furniture for use in schools, offices and quarters has expanded the prison's carpentry workshop.

In addition to large quantities of fiberglass furniture already produced for use at the prison and in hospitals, Knight is hoping additional orders will transform the carpentry workshop into the government's main supplier of furniture.

Richard Mackie, the Senior Superintendent of Stanley, said the inmates work about seven hours a day during the week and a few hours Saturday.

After work, there's recreation. Some prisoners choose sports, and heated soccer games are a favorite on the large recreation field. Others relax in front of a television set or settle down in the library.

The bulk of the prisoners are in their 20s, and the largest single group falls into the 10 year sentence category. Mackie said after four years each sentence is up for review.

Officials have found no attempts to smuggle tools out of workshops to use as weapons.

The earnings are minute, only about $1 a week, and 25 per cent of that is automatically saved for the prisoner until his release.

Drop News Chrysler Can Pledge Rule Pay For Shift

RALEIGH (AP)—State prison officials decided Wednesday they would no longer require newsmen to pledge they will allow prison officials a chance to respond to any negative comments on the system by inmates.

The pledge was called for in an order issued in June by Corrections Secretary David L. Jones. The pledge was required before inmate interviews would be allowed.

At a meeting with media representatives in Raleigh Wednesday, Jones and Prisons Director Ralph Edwards decided such a pledge was unnecessary because normal journalistic practice is to seek comments from officials if inmates make allegations about the system.

Jones and Edwards also agreed to change pool reporting rules after a prison disturbance. Broadcast newsmen had complained they were excluded by the policy that allowed only two newsmen on the grounds after order had been restored.

Under the new rules, a writer, a still photographer, a television cameraman and a person with sound recording devices would be allowed on the grounds.

By OWEN ULLMANN Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it will have the financial muscle to revamp its entire U.S. car line by 1980 even though the firm will lose another $59 million or more in the current quarter.

The company said Wednesday it is in the midst of a $1.5 billion product program that includes scaling down the size of intermediate and full-size cars and building a front-wheel drive subcompact.

All the U.S. auto makers are spending billions of dollars to produce smaller, lighter and more fuel efficient vehicles to meet President Ford's goal of a 40 per cent improvement in fuel economy by 1980.

Chrysler President John J. Riccardo also acknowledged on Wednesday that losses in the third quarter would exceed the $58.7 million incurred during the second quarter.

He blamed the losses on inflation and recession, but he said Chrysler has "the financial resources needed to carry out this very competitive product program." He said the firm would return to profitability in the fourth quarter.

Riccardo said the new product program covers an estimated $300 million to $400 million the firm has spent to develop a new compact line of cars the firm will bring out as 1976 models in November.

He said Chrysler's 1980 vehicles would be an average 400 pounds lighter than current models.

"Our new vehicles will give us a product line-up to cover a broader range of the market than we cover today," he added.

General Motors Corp and Ford Motor Co. are spending a combined $5 billion to reduce the size of their cars by 1980.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground again today on the strength of an early burst of buying that greeted new signs of an improving economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 6 points at its early peak, showed a 3.21 gain at 834.87 by 11:30 a.m.

Gainers outpaced losers by about a 5-2 margin in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

As the market opened, the Commerce Department reported that factory orders posted their third straight monthly rise in June with a 1.7 per cent increase.

The agency also reported a decline in inventories for the fourth consecutive month.

Shrinking inventories in theory represent a clearing of the distribution system to open the way for resumed production.

After the early enthusiasm over that news, however, the

Seek Alternate Theories In Jail Death

By CATHY STEELE ROCHE Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Attorneys for Joan Little are seeking alternative theories to explain the death of the night jailer found slain last Aug. 27 in the cell from which the young black woman had fled.

Defense attorney Jerry Paul tried to plant the seeds of a suffocation theory Wednesday when he questioned the Greenville, N.C., pathologist who performed the autopsy on jailer Clarence Allgood, 62.

SENATOR'S DAUGHTER ARRAIGNED—Marian S. Concanon, 41-year-old daughter of Pennsylvania's U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott, holds sweater over her head on way to arraignment on charges of possession and delivery of hashish Wednesday in Doylestown, Pa. She is accompanied by state police and a woman narcotics officer. She informed, Sen. Scott said "I stand by my daughter. Otherwise I have no comment." (AP Wirephoto)

Dr. Charles Gilbert testified that he believed the cause of death to be excessive internal bleeding around the heart caused by a stab wound inflicted in the left ventricle with an icepick.

During cross examination, Paul inquired, "Is it possible that he could have died of suffocation before that wound would have killed him?"

Gilbert conceded, "It is possible."

He said he had no indication that the jailer was smothered, but said the tests he performed would not necessarily have shown such evidence.

Miss Little, 21, says Allgood was trying to attack her sexually and that she stabbed him in self defense with his own icepick. She said, however, that she did not mean to kill him and did not know he was dying when she fled the jail in Washington, N.C.

The state contends Miss Little killed the white Beaufort County jailer in order to escape. Defense attorneys said Wednesday that Miss Little may take the stand in her own defense, although no firm decision has been made.

Marvin Miller, one of six defense attorneys, said the nature of the state's case will determine whether Miss Little will testify. He added, "The inclination is that she will go on the stand."

The pathologist testified that Allgood could have lived between two and nine minutes after the stab wound in the left side of the heart was inflicted. He said if the jailer lived as long as nine minutes, it would have been possible to smother him before the stab wound caused death.

Paul also queried Gilbert about the varying degrees of depth of the 11 stab wounds. He sought to introduce the idea that someone with greater strength than Miss Little, who weighs about 110 pounds, would have been more able to strike the blow that penetrated about three and a half inches into Allgood's chest.

The defense is seeking to raise doubt about the state's case by offering alternate theories to suggest that someone else was responsible for the jailer's death after Miss Little left the jail.

Gilbert also testified that he found seminal fluid containing spermatozoa in Allgood's urethra. He said that indicated to him that ejaculation had occurred just prior to death.

Gilbert said he had heard that ejaculation sometimes occurs at the time of a traumatic death, but said he had never observed the phenomenon or read of it. He said he has performed about 2,000 autopsies.

Family Planning Work Gets $225,443 Grant

A Family Planning grant totaling $225,443 has been awarded by the Statewide Family Planning Program to the Mid-East Commission for Fiscal Year 1976.

Regionwide utilization of the funds will provide comprehensive family planning services through the appropriate agencies in Pitt, Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford and Martin Counties.

A variety of services involving clinical procedures, such as physical examinations and laboratory tests, will be provided at each of the five health departments in the region.

The Family Planning Program will provide a broad range of services at the clinics held regularly in the five counties and staffed by the two family planning nurse practitioners and local physicians.

General counseling and education in the area of family planning, plus contraception counseling will be offered to those seeking assistance through the health departments and the family planning clinics held in the region. Subcontract arrangements with local health departments will provide for these services.

Coordinated with this assistance will be the provision of counseling and certification services by the area departments of social services.

The Fiscal Year 1976 grant includes funds for the addition of another Family Planning Nurse Practitioner to work in the five health departments.

Govm't Seeks Further Control On Cigarettes

By EDMUND PINTO Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is trying again to win congressional approval to ban the manufacture and sale of cigarettes with high tar and nicotine content.

On the heels of this announcement Wednesday by Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, a House tobacco subcommittee chairman vowed to resist all such efforts.

Weinberger, in submitting the government's ninth report on smoking and health to Congress, urged the ban. But congressional action is necessary to grant this power to any government agency.

The HEW report referred to new scientific research that said again that cigarette smoking is a serious health problem.

"It's toll in illness and premature death is needless and preventable," Weinberger said in a letter accompanying the report.

But Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the House Agriculture tobacco subcommittee said that the request pointed up renewed efforts by the federal government to "interfere in the private lives of American citizens who enjoy smoking and who should have a choice of brands."

Jones said that Weinberger was fostering "another government attempt to regulate the lives of American citizens, of which we have had too much in recent years."

A trade industry group, the Tobacco Institute, criticized test results used to partially support HEW's conclusions.

A spokesman, commenting about quantities of carbon monoxide found in test rooms where smoking had occurred said the same results cannot be obtained except under laboratory conditions.

There have been at least two attempts this decade to ban cigarettes with high levels of tar and nicotine.

One was by Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, in 1972, who held hearings but was unable to have a bill reported out of the Senate Commerce Committee that would have authorized a ban.

Last year Moss tried again by attempting to have the Consumer Product Safety Commission set nicotine and tar levels above which the commission would then declare a particular cigarette a health hazard. The commission rejected Moss' petition, saying it did not have authority to take such action.

A federal court eventually ruled that the commission did have such authority but by that time tobacco interests had succeeded in amending the law setting up the commission to specifically exclude cigarettes from its area of regulation.

BIAS BANNED AT GAS PUMP
NEW YORK (AP) — In the event of another gasoline shortage, gas stations giving preferential treatment to regular customers would be violating the law, reports National Petroleum News.

The U.S. Supreme Court, the publication notes, recently upheld the Federal Energy Administration's position that it has the authority to ban favoritism.

Stir Christmas Spirit In July

HOLDEN VILLAGE, Wash. (AP) — A hot July sun beat down on this central Washington mountain village as residents sang Christmas carols and the voices of children rendered "Jingle Bells."

This Lutheran Church retreat community east of Lake Chelan has been celebrating Christmas seven months late — or five months early — for the past eight years. Why?

"We're helping everyone to see that Christmas is not just a year-end celebration," said Werner Janssen, business manager of the renewal center for lay persons. "Christ comes into our lives every day."

Five hundred persons crowded the dorms and chalets that once housed copper miners for this year's celebration. The retreat is open year-round, but the Yuletide gathering is one of the biggest events annually at Holden Village.

On "Christmas Eve" children decorated a 10-foot fir, then joined their parents in a dinner, vespers and an evening of mime and dance. Later, villagers walked from chalet to chalet singing Christmas carols in the summer evening.

"Christmas Day" began at 5 a.m. with a fitness hike and pilgrimage led by a designated "Father Christmas."

Next came the reading of the Christmas story in five languages, a 13th century shepherd's play and a children's fantasy walk to the "North Pole," which featured Santa Claus — a bird call expert — popping out of the brush along Copper Creek.

"It's helpful to see old things in a new way, to catch dimensions of Christmas this way," said Herb Brokering, an author of 17 books on religious poetry and short stories. "A lot of people haven't known Christmas until they came here."

A reporter covering the celebration found the Christmas spirit had spread to taxi drivers.

A driver returned a $5 bill offered for the 13-mile ride between Holden Village and Lucerne, on Lake Chelan.

"That's a Christmas present," he said.
