No Solution Reached On The Portuguese Government Crisis

By NAT GIBSON

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The leaders of Portugal's left-wing military regime Saturday ended another round of talks with civilian party representatives, but politicians said they found no solution to the nation's government crisis.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes and premier-designate Adm. Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo met with the party leaders from noon until early evening.

Azevedo announced at 5 p.m. he would make an important television address to the nation, but four and a half hours later he still had not appeared on the screen.

Socialist leader Mario Soares said "I think he can say something concrete to the country—which does not mean that he will announce the new government. This certainly won't be the case."

Both Socialist and Popular Democratic politicians predicted there would be no government until next week.

A spokesman for the Popular Democrats said "we will be very tough" on demands for less Communist influence in the press, radio and television. He said economic policy was another major sticking point.

Azevedo, who commands the navy, had publicly vowed to break the political deadlock among Socialists, Communists and Popular Democrats and announce formation of a cabinet Saturday.

Politicians said his television address would probably be an effort to explain the delays in putting together the new government.

His inability to form a government after two weeks of negotiations has become a subject of derision in the press.

The deadlock centered on apparently hardening positions between the Socialists and left-of-center Popular Democrats on the one hand and the Communists on the other.

The dispute is over the composition of a coalition cabinet as well as demands by the Socialists and Popular Democrats for an end to Communist dominance in local government and the mass media.

Politicians said Azevedo could step down and ask another military officer to take his place. They said the most likely candidate was former foreign minister Maj. Ernesto Melo Antunes.

Antunes led the officers who forced pro-Communist Gen. Vasco Goncalves to surrender power and this caused the collapse of the sixth cabinet since the military coup 16 months ago ended 50 years of right-wing authoritarian rule in Portugal.

The Socialist newspaper A Luta said the deadlock could result in violent conflict. It reported the disappearance in recent weeks of 1,000 automatic rifles from armories controlled by left-wing military units.

Two Are U.S. Personnel
Eight Missing In Eritrea

WASHINGTON (AP)—Eight persons working at a U.S. Navy communications facility near Asmara, Ethiopia, are missing after attacks by undetermined forces, the U.S. Defense Department said Saturday. Two of the missing were listed as U.S. military personnel.

"In what appears to have been a series of attacks by unknown forces against various locations in and around the Ethiopian city of Asmara, a U.S. Navy communications facility near the city was attacked last night," the Saturday announcement said.

The facility is located about 10 miles southwest of Asmara, the capital of civil war-torn Eritrea Province.

The Defense Department said the facility "received some damage during the attack."

The announcement did not identify the missing U.S. servicemen except to say one was from the Army and one from the Navy. A department spokesman said no further information was available.

Ford Winds Up Campaign Trip

By RICHARD E. LERNER

DALLAS (UPI) — Undaunted by two recent assassination scares, President Ford rode through Dallas in an open limosine Saturday and denounced the "prophets of gloom and doom" who see America crumbling under economic woes, crime and assassination fever.

"I didn't take the sacred oath of office to preside over the decline and fall of the United States of America," Ford told an applauding audience of 3,000 Republican women at the Dallas Convention Center.

"I most emphatically reject these scenarios of pessimism ... How even the President of the United States should stop visiting public places and seeing the American people."

Later, Ford rolled back the bullet-proof roof of his limosine and waved to crowds lining his motorcade route to the Dallas airport. He stood alongside Texas' Republican Sen. John Tower in the rear seat.

The President flew on to Midland, Tex., to dedicate an oil industry museum before returning to Washington from two days of speach-making and political fund raising in Texas, Missouri and Kansas.

Arriving in Dallas from Kansas City, Mo., Saturday morning, Ford said he considers the investigation of President John F. Kennedy's 1963 murder in Dallas a closed book, with no new evidence worthy of consideration.

New Downtown Traffic Signal System Underway

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

"It used to be traffic lights were called 'stop lights' because that was their function — to stop cars," according to assistant city engineer Ron Sewall. However, "their purpose now is to get the most amount of traffic through."

In order to fulfill this purpose of more efficient traffic flow, the city is installing a new downtown traffic signal system, involving some 20-25 intersections.

Each intersection in the new system will have its own controller, Sewall said, and all the controllers will be tied in with a master controller which will synchronize the lights' switching. The system will also have the ability to change signal operation during peak traffic periods to allow traffic to move faster. For example, incoming lanes will move faster in the mornings, and outgoing lanes will move faster in the afternoons.

"When we get it in, it's going to be really nice," Sewall said.

The system will also have the capacity to be linked with a computer later on, which, among other things, could adjust traffic flow by measuring the number of cars at each intersection.

Sewall estimated the cost of the new system at around $10,000 per intersection, or about a quarter of a million dollars for the entire system.

In addition to the city lights on the system, about 11 state lights will be involved. The state currently has 35 signalized intersections in Greenville, according to division engineer C.W. Snell.

Maintenance for both the state and city signal lights is handled by Greenville Utilities Commission, except for maintenance to the controllers. Reports of malfunctioning signals should be reported to GUC. People reporting malfunctions should be sure to tell exactly what is wrong with the light.

Claims Credit

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — The Eritrean Liberation Front said Saturday it was responsible for an armed attack late Friday on a U.S. navy communications base near Asmara, capital of Ethiopia's Eritrea province, and warned there would be more such raids.

The claim was made by a spokesman for the Revolutionary Council, one of the two factions which make up the ELF, which has been fighting for the secession of Eritrea from Ethiopia for the past several years.

"American bases in Ethiopia should expect further raids, because the fighting is continuing," the spokesman said.

"Victories are being realized by the revolutionaries and the liberation army, and there will be constant operations launched by the Eritrean revolutionaries," the spokesman said.

Ford Cuts Off Committee Access To U.S. Secrets

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has cut off the House intelligence committee's access to U.S. secrets because of the panel's four-word disclosure of American monitoring of communications in the Middle East.

A committee source said the four words that irked Ford and the U.S. intelligence community was a phrase showing that Egyptian communications were monitored before the 1973 Middle East war.

The phrase was in one of five excerpts from top-secret intelligence assessments released by the committee Thursday.

Several words were blocked out at the request of intelligence officials, but the committee refused by a 6 to 3 vote to delete four words that met objections.

The committee source said the phrase is in a Defense Intelligence Agency summary the day of Egypt's invasion of the Sinai. The summary said that despite "mobilization of some personnel, increased readiness of isolated units and greater communications security" by Egypt, there were no indications that Egypt planned a war with Israel.

Asked if the phrase "and greater communications security" was the one the officials wanted kept secret, the committee source said, "I can't say you're wrong."

Ford sent word to the committee Friday that the disclosure would be "serious and irreparable harm," and he asked for the immediate return

Wants Tighter Rein On Lawyers For The Poor

RALEIGH (AP)—A tightening up on how much money the state spends on lawyers to defend the poor and better representation of those persons has been requested by the state Supreme Court.

A letter to trial judges was sent by Bert Montague, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, at the direction of Chief Justice Susie Sharp who oversees the state court system.

The letter complained about: "The exorbitant amount of fees being allowed in many cases, particularly those on appeal" and "The obvious lack of competence displayed by too many assigned attorneys in both the trial and the appellate courts."

Court officials said at the rate funds are now being spent to defend the poor, the money will run out several months before the end of this fiscal year. The General Assembly did not allow an increase in the budget this year.

Last year, the state paid lawyers about $5 million to represent indigent clients. Montague's office said the costs have been rising about 30 per cent a year for several years.

The State Conference of Superior Court Judges adopted a fee schedule for lawyers representing indigents. The attorneys are paid $30 an hour for courtroom work and $20 an hour for waiting and for work required to prepare a case. Those fees are well below the amounts attorneys commonly charge.

Attorneys volunteer to represent indigent persons and are selected by the trial judge from a list. Many of the volunteers are recent graduates of law schools and take more time to handle a case than an experienced attorney would, court officials said.

"The state, which now gives (the attorney) the opportunity to get experience, should not be required to pay his tuition in addition to a fee," the letter said.

To help ease the situation, the letter asked judges to review the list of attorneys and appoint a lawyer to a case only if he is capable of handling it all the way through the appeals process if that should become necessary.

Seeks Bus Drivers

The Greenville City School system is currently looking for substitute bus drivers, according to superintendent Glenn Cox.

The school system presently has "just enough drivers to operate the buses, but no substitutes," Cox said. Substitutes are needed to take over in case of illness or if a driver is cited for a moving violation. The system currently operates 27 buses.

Pay for drivers is $2.23 per hour, Cox said, and the drivers work two and a half to three hours a day. Interested persons should get in touch with Bob Alligood, principal at J.H. Rose High School, Cox said.

Tar Heel Laureate
Poet Celebrates 96th Birthday

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP)—North Carolina's poet laureate, James Larkin Pearson, was 96 years old on Saturday.

A birthday celebration was planned at Wilkes Community College, which is to be the home of the proposed James Larkin Pearson Memorial Building. The manuscripts, printing press and personal library of 3,000 volumes of the writer, editor and author of seven books is to be housed there.

"My old thinking apparatus is about as good as it was last year," Pearson said. "I can't tell that my capacity for using words is any worse."

Pearson was born Sept. 13, 1879 in a log cabin on Berry's Mountain, less than five miles from the college.

Gov. William B. Umstead proclaimed Pearson poet laureate Aug. 4, 1953. Pearson is the only person to be so named.

"I've got lots of friends, and I've got more girls than I can count," he said in an interview last week.

He said women in the Brushy Mountains once feared a man who like books and wrote poetry.

"Now the girls, young ones and married one, too, come up to me and act like I was something pretty. Why, I've had more hugs and kisses since I turned 90 than in all the other years put together."

Of Hands And Hips

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP)—There is a significant correlation between the size of a young man's hands and his girlfriend's hips, Dr. Robert Prytula, Middle Tennessee State University psychology professor, has found.

The problem: what is the significance?

It all started, he said, when he suggested that statistics were useful but "very often misused to the detriment of people."

To prove his point, he asked the young men in his class to measure their hand, then the hips of their girlfriends or wives. With that information in hand, Prytula was able to correlate the two.

"As his hand size grows, her hips grow," he said. "You can make your own inference as to how that happens."

He added, "The study showed the students how people misuse statistics. Statistics don't lie. It is the people who misuse them."

Elizabeth Ann Seton

Canonization Of Saint Being Celebrated Today

By TERRY COLVIN
Associated Press Writer

EMMITSBURG, Md. (AP) — About 20,000 people are expected in this hamlet of small brick row houses and narrow winding streets today to celebrate the canonization of Elizabeth Ann Seton, America's first native-born saint.

Emmitsburg, 10 miles south of Gettysburg, Pa., in the shadow of the Catoctin Mountains, was chosen by Mother Seton in 1809 as the place to found the Daughters of Charity of St. Joseph. A year earlier, she had started the first parochial school in the nation in Baltimore.

It is here also that her remains are enshrined, and the imposing red brick headquarters of her order overlook the village.

All day Sunday, prelates from throughout the East will celebrate mass in honor of her canonization in Rome by Pope Paul VI, culminating a 94-year effort to bestow sainthood on Mother Seton, who died in 1821.

Cardinal Lawrence Shehan, former archibishop of Baltimore and William D. Borders, the present archbishop, will join some 6,000 other Americans at the Vatican for the veneration.

Beginning at 11:50 a.m., the Pangborn Memorial Carillon at Mount Saint Mary's College in Emmitsburg will be rung for 10 minutes. Following each mass, to be said in the chapel in which the saint's remains are enshrined, a relic of Mother Seton will be venerated by the priests.

Sister Mary Clare Hughes, provincial superior of the Emmitsburg Province of the Daughters of Charity, and one of Mother Seton's boosters, says, "I am overjoyed at the thought that canonization will take place this year — a holy year and the year of woman."

Mother Seton was born in New York City in 1774. A former socialite and Episcopal convert, she left New York when her husband died in 1803. She was the mother of five children.

Mother Seton has been credited with the supposed cure of three persons suffering from terminal cancer who prayed to her.

One of them, Anne O'Neill Hooe, 27, of Severn, Md., will be in Rome for the canonization. Her father, William O'Neill, will bring her four children here to attend one of the masses.

Anne O'Neill, the beneficiary of the second of the three miracles, was 14 when she was confined to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore suffering from what doctors said was terminal leukemia. A nun at the hospital told her mother about Mother Seton, and she began praying for "divine intercession" to spare her child's life.

Besides the O'Neill case, Mother Seton is said to have cured Sister Gertrude Korzendorfer of New Orleans of pancreatic cancer in 1934 and Carl Kalin of New York City of brain cancer in 1963. The Kalin case was verified by a Vatican Tribunal last year and prompted the canonization decree.

The Daughters of Charity now include six religious communities with more than 11,000 members in the United States and seven foreign countries.

TAPESTRY FOR CANONIZATION — This is a picture of the tapestry of Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton which will be hung in St. Peter's Basilica Sunday for her canonization. Mother Seton will be the first U.S.-born saint of the Roman Catholic Church. The tapestry was designed by Italian artist G. Ciotti. (AP Wirephoto)

Soviets Silent On Implementing Of Treaty Agreements

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department sources are reporting that U.S. attempts to get the Soviet Union to implement provisons of the agreement signed at the summit conference at Helsinki have been met by silence.

The two nations were among 35 signing the nonbinding charter earlier this summer, aimed at guiding the conduct of European affairs and at improving the treatment of citizens.

But U.S. efforts to implement even minor provisons of the agreement have brought no response from the Soviets, State Department sources say.

The unification of families split by national and political boundaries is one of the major issues. State Department press officer Robert Funseth said Friday the United States, as recently as Aug. 18, handed Moscow a list of 650 persons in the Soviet Union who wanted to emigrate to the United States to join their families.

Funseth said no response to the list was received. He said it was the 18th such document given to the Soviet government.

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Hard water costs consumers $6.3 billion annually, according to economists at the Water Quality Research Council. It wastes $1.8 billion in soaps, detergents, shampoos and other cleaning materials. It deteriorates plumbing at an estimated $2.7 billion rate. It does $1 billion in damage to sheets, linens, towels and washable clothing. In addition, by depositing insulating scale in water heaters, it adds $800 million to the nation's fuel bills.

No Entitlement Ruled

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Three former English professors at Western Carolina University are not entitled to monetary damages in their loss of tenure at WCU during the 1973-74 academic year, a U.S. District Court jury has decided.

The jury deliberated an hour and 40 minutes Friday following the close of a four-day trial here. It ruled in favor of the defendants, who were the 12-member WCU board of trustees and an acting academic dean.

The plaintiffs, Drs. D. Newton Smith, Allan B. Grant and James Kasprzak, filed suit last October asking $600,000 damages against the 13 defendants. They indicated Friday that they would appeal the jury's decision.

Judge Accused Of Misconduct

RALEIGH (AP)—District Court Judge Edward E. Crutchfield of Albemarle has been accused of misconduct and the Judicial Standards Commission has recommended the North Carolina Supreme Court censure him.

If the court takes that action, officials said Friday Crutchfield would be the first judge censured under the Judicial Standards Act, which took effect Jan. 1, 1973.

In a recommendation filed with the court Aug. 13, the commission accused Crutchfield of signing judgments in 1974 which allowed two persons to receive limited driving permits even though they refused to take breathalyzor tests when charged with drunken driving.

Postpones Slowdown

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Police have postponed their planned work slowdown for two weeks. This will give city officials time to consider their demand for a 25 per cent salary increase.

Detective Sgt. W. L. Dillingham, president of the local chapter of the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), made the announcement Friday. He had met with the city attorney, William Moore just before the job action was to start.

The police organization had voted Thursday night to begin a work slowdown at 3 p.m. Friday after the pay demand was turned down by the City Council.

Police Teacher For Marijuana

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The head of a police academy in North Florida says he smokes marijuana and would like it legalized for home use. But he admits his stand may cost him his job.

"It's just a pleasurable experience that I and everybody else ought to be able to enjoy if they want to," said Bob Phillips, coordinator of Sante Fe Community College's Police Academy.

Two Performers Killed

RENO, Nev. (AP) With some 10,000 people watching, a young wingwalker and a racing pilot have been killed in separate accidents 25 minutes apart at the National Championship Air Races.

Gordon McCollom, 23, a Huntington Beach, Calif., high school teacher, was killed Friday when he hit the ground while dangling from the wing of a biplane flying upside down.

A short time earlier, M. D. Washburn, 40, of Houston, Tex., was killed when his AT6 plane hit a 500-foot tall pylon during a race.

Suit Against Senators

NEW YORK (AP) — American Airlines has sued Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and the estate of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy for a total of almost $360,000 in unpaid bills.

"It was something we regretted to do," an American spokesman said, "but we had an obligation to our stockholders to collect the money."

The separate suits were filed Friday in state Supreme Court in Manhattan. They are answerable in 20 days.

Stopped Paying Taxes

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate Henry Kirksey says he stopped paying income taxes in 1964 because he and other blacks were victims of "taxation without representation."

Federal and state tax officials said after Kirksey's statement Friday that his tax status would be investigated.

Three 'Ligers' Born

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Tama, a four-year-old tigress at Osaka's Tennoji Zoo, has given birth to three "ligers," a rare mixed breed of lion and tiger, a zoo spokesman said today.

Two of the cubs died within three days of birth but the surviving cub, now in an incubator, is likely to survive as the world's only known living "liger," the spokesman said.

Tensions Erupt In Beirut

Street Fighting Breaks Cease-Fire

By MICHAEL KEATS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — New shooting in suburban Beirut broke the tenuous cease-fire between warring political factions Saturday night and a leftist call for a general strike increased tension in other parts of Lebanon.

Trouble flared along the road connecting Karantina and Sinn El Fil in the outskirts of the capital when leftists traded small arms fire with right-wing Phalangists, witnesses said.

Beirut Radio broadcast warnings to motorists that the road was not safe and had been closed by security forces.

In other areas, wracked by civil strife in three rounds of fighting between April and the end of June, tension ran high in the wake of alleged kidnapings.

Roadblocks went up in several Beirut suburbs and although some streets later reopened to traffic, groups of armed men patroled them and the situation remained tense.

Security forces issued a warning that unless all fighting stopped gendarmes would fire on both sides, but this failed to end the shooting in Sinn El Fil.

The fresh outbreak of fighting in Beirut came after army units in the north maintained fragile peace in buffer zones separating Moslem leftists from Tripoli and Christian militiamen from Zghorta.

Premier Rashid Karami called in key cabinet members and military chiefs, including new Lebanese army commander Maj. Gen. Hanna Said, to "review the security situation in the light of latest developments," the national news agency said.

One of the developments was a strike call by Socialist and other leftist parties, set for Monday, to protest army intervention in the Tripoli-Zghorta fighting.

The statement reiterated demands for the arrest of those responsible for the killing of 12 Moslems, taken off a bus and shot near Zghorta last Sunday.

It denounced what the leftists called "the policy of protecting and hiding" those responsible for a similar killing of a busload of Palestinians near Beirut in April.

The message was delivered by Asst. Atty. Gen. Rex E. Lee, who said the President also had directed that no more secret material be furnished to the committee until it agreed not to disclose anything over intelligence officials' objections.

Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said Ford's action would close down the committee's investigations temporarily. He said the panel will meet next week, possibly Wednesday, on what action to take but doubted it would return the secret information it already has.

Central Intelligence Director William E. Colby told newsmen that the disclosure that the United States monitors communications was no problem, but that a reference to a specific operation was.

Party Leaders At Atlantic Beach

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (UPI) — Democratic presidential aspirant Terry Sanford faced his first statewide gathering with party leaders Saturday since announcing his candidacs earlier this year.

Sanford, a former North Carolina governor and now president of Duke Unversity, was scheduled to address an evening banquet at the state party's Downeaster, an annual fund raising event.

Sanford, who tried unsuccessfully for the nomination in 1972, was the only presidential hopeful on hand for the gathering. Representatives of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, who beat Sanford in the state's 1972 primary, had not appeared late Friday.

When he announced his candidacy, Sanford offered himself as an alternative to Wallace, and though Wallace has not formally announced for the nomination, it is all but certain the two will meet in the state's 1976 primary next March.

Among those arriving Friday night were Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., considered the frontrunner for the party's gubernatorial nomination, and Sen. Thomas Strickland, D-Wayne, expected to announce next month he will oppose Hunt for the nomination.

Several potential candidates for lieutenant governor also attended the event.

Charlotte Policemen Fined

CHARLOTTE (AP) —A federal court jury has ordered five Charlotte policemen to pay $200 each to a laborer from Lincolnton on the finding they used unreasonable force in arresting him.

They had arrested Richard G. Hinson after a high-speed automobile chase nearly three years ago.

Hinson had asked for $200,000 in damages. He contended he was "dragged from his car and without cause viciously beat, hit and kicked. . ."

Hinson, who admitted he had been drinking shortly before the chase, testified he suffered a broken jaw, two broken ribs and numerous cuts and bruises from the beating.

He was awarded the $1,000 Thursday by a jury in U.S. District Court.

In another development, Charlotte Police Chief J. C. Goodman suspended Friday four city policemen for slapping and verbally harassing three men during an arrest last June.

The four policemen, one a sergeant, were suspended without pay for periods ranging from three to eight days, said a police spokesman.

Sanford Attacks Ford

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina today opened a unique forum of Democratic presidential candidates with a sharp attack on President Ford, charging him with listening to "the big banks and the big oil companies" instead of the people of the nation.

Sanford was the first of five announced and expected candidates appearing before Democrats from 11 Midwestern states at the opening of the series of five regional candidate forums. Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania and Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., were to follow in a day-long session of speeches and audience questioning.

"It's about time we start getting mad; started showing President Ford and Mr. Rockefeller that they have to be accountable to us; that they should be working for us," Sanford said

"We should be getting mad because the President says he does not want more inflation and then considers it a victory when he knocks out oil controls," Sanford said. He said the policy was not rational and the President would know that if he "were listening to the majority of the people out there."

"But no. Ford and Rockefeller listen to big banks and the big oil companies," he told the crowd of about 1,500.

Law School Accreditation For NCCU Withdrawn By ABA

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)— University of North Carolina officials have been given until March 1 to "show cause" why predominately black North Carolina Central University's law school should not lose its accreditation.

The officials were notified by Sept. 10 letter that the American Bar Association's (ABA) accrediting committee voted in closed meeting in early August to withdraw the school's accreditation. The ABA said it ordered a reinspection of the school next spring.

The committee said a shortage of funds was a major problem facing the school, but in addition the panel said there were major problems with the school's "administration, faculty selection procedures, the quality of the student body, faculty compensation, library acquisitions and staffing" and a construction program to meet the school's needs.

The ABA had informed NCCU officials in February that it would lose accreditation if it didn't draw up a satisfactory plan for upgrading the school. In June, NCCU submitted an improvement plan worked up by Prof. Frank Strong of the University of North Carolina law school at Chapel Hill.

University officials estimated it would require a budget of about $900,000 a year to upgrade the law school by Strong's program. The school's budget last year was $352,000 and for this year it is $452,000.

Strong recommended doubling the faculty, expand the library holdings, raise faculty salaries and add two assistants to the dean and hire more clerical help. He also said the school should raise its admission standards but retain it predominately black identity.

The General Assembly increased the school's budget this year and allocated $2.5 million for a new law building at the school.

The ECU Med School—From Inspiration To Realization

(The following article appeared in the September issue of "We The People of North Carolina," the official publication of the North Carolina Citizens Association.)

On a Sunday afternoon some eleven years ago, President Leo Warren Jenkins of what was then known as East Carolina College had a visitor at his home. The visitor was Dr. Ernest Ferguson, a general practitioner from Plymouth.

"Dr. Ferguson told us he had just returned from a symposium at Duke University," Leo Jenkins recalled recently. "The symposium dealt with the decline of medical practice in rural areas. As a family doctor in rural Eastern North Carolina, Dr. Ferguson was particularly concerned about the growing shortage of doctors to meet the medical needs of the region.

"I became concerned myself when he acquainted me with the alarming situation," said Dr. Jenkins who is now Chancellor Jenkins of East Carolina University. "It came as a shock to me to learn that in terms of the availability of medical and health care delivery, the eastern section of our state was one of the worst in the nation. The question was, what could our institution do about it?"

What the institution could—and is going—to do about it is to build a four-year degree-granting medical school and, so those in charge if the program insist, open it to the freshman class in the fall of 1976. Chancellor Jenkins and others who have supported his decade-long quest for the medical school at ECU declare themselves certain that the program will rejuvenate family medical practice and health delivery in the region. There are others who are skeptical. There are still others who are down-right scornful over the whole idea and who regard the decision to build the ECU medical school as perhaps the most expensive public boondoggle in the entire history of North Carolina.

Time must be the referee of the long and burning debate over the topic of whether the medical education facility here will accomplish that which its promoters have promised, and whether the training of new doctors in the state might have been better and less expensively accomplished through expansion of the medical school at UNC-Chapel Hill, the establishment of a new school on some state campus other than ECU, or increased state support to the Duke University and Bowman Gray Schools of Medicine. In practical terms, however, the debate is ended. The decision has been made and work is proceeding here at Greenville.

As controversial as the school itself through the years has been its chief proselyter, Leo Jenkins. The middle ground of opinion with regard to this man seems sparsely populated. Those who have supported him and his tireless advocacies of growth and diversity at East Carolina University view him almost as a prophet of higher education in North Carolina—one who is not without honor in his own territory. Those who have fought against his campaign for the medical school and other ECU causes have referred to him as a bully—the "tough guy" of state-supported higher education—as an educational pirate who has ruthlessly plundered upon the academic seas in high disregard of the overall public interest.

Whatever view one wishes to take of Chancellor Jenkins, objectivity insists that, for good or bad, he has been probably the strongest single influence upon the course of public higher education in North Carolina during the past fifteen years. One day in 1960, Dr. Jenkins stood before a luncheon at the Faculty Club of what was then N. C. State College in Raleigh. Speaking of the Greenville campus which he headed, he declared: "Here stands a university in fact. Why not make it one in name?"

The idea fetched hoots of derision. That college at Greenville, which had only in recent years shed the appellation, "East Carolina Teachers College," a university? What nonsense! At the time of the proposal, the State Board of Higher Education was only a few years old. In the process of drawing was a blueprint which called for a carefully-controlled pattern of growth in state-supported higher education with three constituent campuses of what then comprised the University of North Carolina at the hub. There was no thought whatever of converting East Carolina to university status; the next university was to be the Mecklenburg County campus called Charlotte College, and small campuses at Asheville and Wilmington were later to be upgraded to universities under the UNC umbrella.

Those plans did not reckon with the force of Leo Jenkins' personality and persistence, nor with his understanding of the political process and the importance of having the right political allies. By 1967 the university status campaign for East Carolina came to fruition. The General Assembly of that year bestowed the designation. But East Carolina was not to have the honor alone: West Carolina College, Appalachian State College and North Carolina A&T College also became universities. The lid of Pandora's higher education box having been pried open to that degree, the General Assembly session of 1969 conferred university status upon every other state-owned campus except for the N. C. School of the Arts. Asheville-Biltmore and Wilmington Colleges became parts of the University of North Carolina, joining the new Charlotte campus in that six-campus system. And five other campuses became—in name though scarcely in fact—independent universities, joining East Carolina and the institutions at Boone, Cullowhee and Greensboro in the now wide-open state university club.

Even his worst enemies would have difficulty in assigning to Leo Jenkins all the blame for that incredible state of higher education affairs. But it was indeed he who planted the university seed which grew blossoms that perhaps neither he nor anyone else in higher education could, at the time, foresee. Obviously it was an impossible situation for the State of North Carolina to operate one university system and nine separate and independent universities, all ambitious to add programs, buildings and students, regardless of overall need. Revamping the structure of the State Board of Higher Education to bring some order out of the academic chaos didn't work. That led to the inevitable: the calling of a special session of the legislature by Governor Bob Scott in the fall of 1971 to create a single University of North Carolina System to embrace all 16 state-owned campuses, controlled by a Board of Governors and a President, and theoretically immune to legislative intervention.

For Leo Jenkins, whose title was changed from President to Chancellor of East Carolina, the final victory would seem to have belonged to the state's higher educational establishment which he had bucked over the years. William C. Friday, one of his principal backstage adversaries in the medical school quest, headed the new university system of which ECU was a constituent member. Cameron C. West, former director of the defunct Higher Gasoline Tax Needed?

Among its other problems, North Carolina is having serious trouble getting in enough money to keep its highway construction program going.

The Greensboro Daily News reported this week that Gov. Holshouser is "kicking around" the idea of proposing a new gasoline tax. And the Department of Transportation people see an urgent need.

"Unless something is done to provide more revenue, the urban areas are going to have a tough time getting street projects built because the Department of Transportation doesn't have the money," Robert Vaughn, member of the DOT board said.

"That is up to the General Assembly to decide how to raise the money," he said. "But I will say that I am real concerned about it."

Much of the problem seems to be that the gas tax is based on a certain amount per gallon. As everyone knows, gas prices have shot up—and official policy is to encourage more costly gas to discourage consumption—so the state is getting a smaller percentage of the cost per gallon, and less gas is being used.

As that happens, the cost of building highways is shooting upward because much of the cost of building highways is based on petroleum costs.

The answer might be a tax which is a percentage of the selling cost of gas, just as the sales tax on goods is set at four percent. Then as the cost of gas rises so would the state's gas tax revenues increase. If autos are built in the future which get better gas mileage, a new formula for the gas tax might be all-important in keeping any sort of a road building program going.

As one of North Carolina's most rapidly developing cities, Greenville could be one of the municipalities with the most interest in keeping the road funds coming in. Despite a number of important thoroughfare projects which have been carried out recently, it is obvious that there are quite a few projects which must be initiated in the near future if we are to continue to meet our traffic needs here.

Nobody likes to see a tax increase, but the gas tax has always been based on the theory that those who use the roads and highways should pay for them. They are still going to have to be paid for and the logical place to get the funds is through some adjustment in the gas tax.

Smith Pushes Peak-Pricing

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—State Senator McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, is still pushing his peak-pricing idea on electricity. The General Assembly authorized the method, but as yet no moves have been made in that direction.

Meanwhile, Smith has come up with a simple explanation:

"If a grocer were to quit pricing articles according to their cost and start charging customers only one price per pound based on his average cost, he would soon go bankrupt.

"He would soon sell out of steak and other high cost items, and no one would buy his cheaper items because his average cost was too high," Smith says.

"If he were the only grocer in town—like the utility company—he might survive for a little while, but not long, and he would grossly distort the food habits of the community."

The senator maintains that the recent hot spell showed power companies hitting the highest peak demands in history at about 5 and 6 p.m. "This . . . is going to be used to claim they need more generating plants" even though sales by Duke Power are only 59 per cent of capacity and CP&L sales are 47 per cent of capacity.

But shifting power use away from those hours when peak demand occurs would make for better use of present generating capacity and "reduce the clamor for costly new plants," Smith says.

Voluntary compliance doesn't work, but higher prices would prompt people to cut off appliances at peak times, he thinks.

Equal Rights

There's one area of activity in public schools in which most people don't believe girls and boys should be treated the same: physical education.

Boys and girls should not take physical education classes together, and should not participate on the same athletic teams, a big majority of high school and junior high school coaches and physical education teachers think.

A survey of 211 schools produced the general agreement on five points: males and females should not participate on the same teams (although opposition is not so strong regarding tennis, golf, and swimming); males and females should not be assigned to the same physical education classes; they should have equal opportunity for participation; they should be treated equally in regard to use of facilities, allocation of funds, assignment of coaches, and salaries; and that females should not coach all-boy teams.

Responses pulled together by Jeanne Heningburg of the central school staff in Raleigh generally showed females more in favor than males of boys and girls participating in the same physical education classes and team sports, but with the totals showing 66 per cent opposed to co-ed physical education; 94 per cent opposed to co-ed team sports.

Picturesque College

One of the prettiest campuses in the state is that on the shores of the Pasquotank River at Elizabeth City which is home of College of the Albemarle, part of the Community College system.

A new campus is under construction to replace the 50-year-old brick buildings, which once housed a hospital. A fairly new gymnasium will likely be saved, and state officials figure the property will be sold in the next few years, with the hope that Elizabeth City government will buy it for use as a park and community center.

Sunday Morning Notes

Warren Beck, a student in the School of Technology, and Daryl Davis, who is on the staff, took a sailing trip from Winsteadville to Ocracoke during the break between the summer and fall sessions at ECU. Accompanying them was Davis' nine year old son, Archie.

There were a number of people from many areas on the Outer Banks at the time and Beck and Davis met a couple from Florida.

As they exchanged information about themselves, the man learned that Beck and Davis were from Greenville.

He smiled. "I was in Greenville during the 1940s," he recalled.

It seems the man had been in the Marines and stationed at the airport here which was built for a Marine training facility during World War II.

The field was later turned over to the city and county and is now operated at the Pitt-Greenville Airport for private aircraft and Wheeler Airlines service.

The former marine recalled a Greenville of yesteryear, when virtually all of the business places were downtown. He remembered the municipal swimming pool on East Fifth Street which is now a parking lot and right-of-way for Reade Circle.

Most of all, Beck said, he recalled a town where the people were hospitable and decent to the Marines. "He enjoyed his stay in Greenville."

Following the war the man entered the insurance business in Michigan and has since retired to Stuart, Fla.

Beck didn't recall the man's name, but he was obviously one former marine who had fond memories of a much smaller Greenville during the turbulent days of World War II.

A lengthy power failure one day last month may have saved Greenville Utilities a new peak day, which would have run up its cost of electricity.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Assistant Director Malcolm Green said at a utilities meeting the new peak was in the making that day until a massive power failure halted all power consumption.

"Now it comes out," Mayor Gene West quipped.

Mayor West also reported that a broken water main sent muddy water to his house during the month. His white sheets were being washed and they came out gold.

"I complained about it and they wanted to charge me for a dye job," he said.

A Long Wait In Mexico

By STEPHEN DOWNER

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Dozens of Mexicans get up in the middle of the night to stand in front of the United States embassy and by dawn the line often stretches more than three blocks.

They are seeking visas to the United States.

Many of those who begin their vigil in the middle of the night reportedly do so for pay, holding down a spot in line for someone else who shows up later.

Consul General Fred Smith and his team of four interviewers are being flooded with 20 percent more applications this year than last year's record, when 144,000 non-immigrant visas were issued.

At least two more officers are expected to join the team soon to help cope with the avalanche. And other cut-the-queues measures are being considered.

"It's really very unfortunate people feel they have to stay up all night and we feel very sorry for them," Smith said.

But he added that "when you are dealing with 600 or 700 applicants every day, it's difficult to try to set up appointments."

The refusal rate in Mexico City is about 10 percent, and occurs "mainly because the consular officer believes an applicant intends to remain in the United States," Smith said.

"The (United States) government is extremely concerned about the illegal immigrant problem. It has been a problem over the past five years," he explained.

Before the "bracero" — farm workers — program ended early in the 1960s, "about 500,000 Mexicans were employed in the United States temporarily every year. That is about the number of Mexicans deported every year now," he said.

At the same time Smith denied there are new requirements.

"We are no stricter now."

He said a higher proportion of applicants are turned down at other U.S. embassies.

INSIDE REPORT

MicawberViewsPrevailing

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—In a backstage development of far-reaching economic consequences, the Ford administration's policymakers are turning an icy shoulder to pleas from central banker Arthur Burns to at least consider governmental intervention in wage-price decisions as an anti-inflation weapon.

President Ford himself leads the way in rejecting out of hand such intervention. But his key economic advisers privately concede failure to control federal spending, their preferred anti-inflation device. Rather, they fall back on cheery prophecies that inflation will not run wild, repeated so often that high officials begin to believe them.

This is in keeping with the economic Micawberism underlying seven years of faltering Republican economic policy in Washington. Dr. Burns, who as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board is not a part of the administration, confronts congenital optimism and improvident refusal to plan against future ills. The backstage economic debate here, therefore, pits Dr. Burns against Mr. Micawber.

At age 71, elder statesman Burns is burdened with neither illusions nor false hopes. Apprehensive of ruinous inflation ahead, Burns has informed the administration that the Federal Reserve cannot fight it with tighter money. Furthermore, he has watched three Republican Presidents flinch from the politically bitter fruits of draconian budget cutting. Nor would the Democratic Congress permit Mr. Ford to control the budget anyway.

Accordingly, in testimony before the Senate-House Economic Committee July 29, Burns declared, "We need to reopen our economic minds" about how this nation can achieve high employment without provoking new inflationary outbursts. Listing some ideas, he concluded by suggesting an "incomes policy"—government wage-price intervention short of outright controls. In somewhat convoluted prose, Burns said:

"Nor would I rule out the possibility that some form of incomes policy, going beyond the legislation governing the Council on Wage and Price Stability but continuing to rely mainly on voluntary compliance, may yet be of some benefit in moving our nation towards the goals of full employment and a stable price level."

This was hauntingly similar to his Pepperdine College lecture in Los Angeles Dec. 7, 1970, which helped push the Nixon administration toward wage-price controls in August 1971. But nearly five years later, Burns's words went unnoticed by the press, the financial community or the administration. He may well rephrase his proposal in less equivocal language, perhaps at a University of Georgia speech Sept. 19.

Unequivocal or not, talk about an incomes policy will encounter a closed mind in the Ford administration. "Over my dead body," Treasury Secretary William Simon told us, adding he would not stay long at the Treasury if an incomes policy were adopted. There is little danger of that. Shutting the door to any incomes policy are economic adviser Alan Greenspan, budget durector James Lynn, and senior White House aides Donald Rumsfeld and William Seidman. Secretary of Labor James Dunlop leaves the door open only a tiny crack.

Greenspan, the most influential economic force in the administration today, believes a non-mandatory incomes policy inevitably evolves into mandatory controls. Having run the Nixon controls program, Rumsfeld fiercely opposes any return to it. Beyond such declarations, there is simply no serious discussion of the question within the administration.

Burns actually feels it is too soon to resume controls (while not ruling them out forever). He may envision guidelines for higher prices and wages, with possible government power to postpone temporarily—but not abort permanently—such increases. Other Western industrial nations have rotated similar mechanisms with direct controls and no intervention at all.

While rejecting any intervention, the administration proposes no alternative. Instead, it confronts returning double-digit inflation with perpetual hope and a warm smile.

But Treasury Secretary Simon, certainly no Micawber, is different from his colleagues. He and Burns joined this year in unsuccessfully fighting for a tighter budget and now are both pessimistic about inflation over the long haul. Among friends, Simon despairs of a democracy's ability to handle inflation. Nevertheless, he rules out controls or even an incomes policy on philosophical grounds.

Crime As An Issue?

(The Wilson Times)

Crime control appears to be shaping up as a major issue in the upcoming Democratic gubernatorial campaign.

First to emphasize the need for strong North Carolina anti-crime measures was Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. of Wilson, considered a virtually certain contender for the nomination.

In a series of speeches before civic clubs, Hunt has outlined the basic points of an extensive anti-crime program he said the next governor should present to the General Assembly.

The resignation Monday of Charles J. Dunn as State Bureau of Investigation director to join the as yet unannounced campaign of drug chain executive Edward O'Herron of Charlotte was interpreted by some as an indication O'Herron will stress a strong law-and-order theme, although Dunn said the subject had not been discussed.

Finally, several speakers at an appreciation dinner Monday for state Sen. Thomas E. Strickland praised the Wayne lawmaker for his role in upgrading the criminal justice system and his advocacy of tougher criminal penalties, including capital punishment. Strickland has said he will toss his hat into the gubernatorial ring next month.

Among the 800 persons at the Strickland dinner was U.S. Sen. Robert B. Morgan who lauded the state solon's efforts on behalf of Morgan's programs while he was attorney general.

Realizing the public's growing concern over lawlessness, other potential candidates no doubt will also beat the anti-crime drum loudly.

Crime has reached serious proportions in North Carolina and the nation and current efforts at combating the problem have proved ineffective. Perhaps extended political debate will provide some answers, or at least focus enough attention on the issue that the General Assembly will be spurred to action.

40 Years Ago Today

September 14, 1935

Sales on the Greenville Tobacco Market were larger yesterday, the day's offerings running over 1.3 million pounds.

Prices were slightly weaker than on the previous day's sale, however, with the average falling below the 18 cents mark.

While few tags were turned, there was an apparent growing dissatisfaction on the part of growers at the price situation.

Official figures for yesterday's sales were 1,365,944 pounds for $243,462.2 and an average price of $17.82 per hundred pounds.

The bad weather of the past two weeks has held sales down from a poundage standpoint and observers express the opinion that the weather has likewise had a tendency to hold down prices. With better weather in prospect for the next week, larger sales are looked for and warehousemen express the belief that there will be a strengthening of prices.

Strength For Today

FAR FROM EVIL

The King James version of Proverbs 4:14 reads: "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men." The Moffatt translation is, "Never set foot on a bad man's path." This is an example how sharply this modern scholar can bring ancient truths into focus for us.

Many an evil has had its start in some trifling circumstance. The urgency of Maffatt's epigram lies in the emphasis it makes on never putting even one foot on a bad man's path. One foot on it will soon mean both feet, and both feet on it will mean travel toward catastrophe. The best way to avoid evil is to keep away from it.

Christianity commands this decisive way of dealing with evil. Jesus said, "Get thee behind me, Satan." He would not even allow himself to look upon evil. He would deny and disavow it, and turn from it, and His command to His followers was that they do the same.

'The Great Gold Rush' Is A Dud

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It was as if a great gong were struck and gave off no sound, or some fireworks were lofted into the sky and no bursting kaleidoscope showered down.

The "great gold rush of 1975" turned out to be a creep, said an important gold dealer. There was no rush, no eagerness to own the precious metal that in bullion form had been banned to Americans for 41 years.

Rescinding of that ban last Dec. 31 was accompanied by great excitement and expectations of a rush to gold dealers. Many had expected people even would draw money from savings accounts to buy gold. Hucksters forecast big price rises.

The peak price, around $190 an ounce, was reached just about the time the public was permitted to buy bullion, which is the metal in its rather plain, unfabricated, bar or wafer form. The price this week was around $150. Some boom!

What killed the "gold boom?"

Herbert Coyne and Irwin Shisko, vice presidents of J. Aron & Co., an old-line merchant banking firm which puts industrial and commercial buyers and sellers together — they are more or less disinterested observers of retail markets — gives this assessment:

There was a lack of tradition of gold ownership in the United States. Americans apparently are unlike Europeans, who tend to place great faith in the ability of gold to retain its value during inflation or collapse.

But even before the lifting on the ban on bullion, Americans were permitted to own certain gold coins. Many smart people already had satisfied their longing for gold by purchasing these coins. They didn't have to wait until Dec. 31.

Thirdly, the price of gold kept rising, and Americans are wary of buying items on the rise. Sometimes they might conclude that prices, though high, might continue rising. This time they didn't think so. They were correct.

Finally, there were too many "anxiety elements" to owning gold. "There was a carnival atmosphere, a feeling that flamboyant operators would bilk the public." There was a fear of financially weak dealers going bankrupt.

There were fears also that bars of alloys would be plated to look like gold, and there were fears that some dealers would make extraordinary profits.

Finally, they said, Americans became aware of the difficulties and costs in returning gold bars to the market. They realized that maybe gold wasn't always negotiable. And they eventually realized they would have to pay $25 to $50 an ounce to obtain an assay prior to sale.

"The media did a great service to the public in pointing out these drawbacks, by pointing out that gold bars were not a panacea and that prices go down and up."

Ford Leads HHH In Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.,—In the latest nationwide trial heat, President Gerald Ford holds a 50 to 42 per cent lead over Sen. Hubert Humphrey, one of his two top challengers.

Ford is currently the top choice of GOP voters for the nomination, winning 45 per cent of their vote to 19 per cent for Ronald Reagan from a list of 10 Republicans. Humphrey is in a virtual tie with Gov. George Wallace as the top choice of Democrats, winning 20 per cent of their vote to 23 per cent for Wallace from a list of 15 Democratic possibilities.

Humphrey has come on strong in recent months, having nearly doubled his support since November.

In trial heats to date, Ford has led every Democrat tested, except Sen. Edward Kennedy. The Massachussetts Senator, however, has insisted he will neither seek nor accept the Democratic nomination next year, and the recent attempt on the life of Ford may strengthen Kennedy's resolve.

This question was asked first:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today. If President Gerald Ford were the Republican candidate and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were the Democratic candidate, which one would you like to see win?" (If the respondents were undecided, this question was asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Ford, the Republican, or to Humphrey, the Democrat?")

Gerald Ford	52%
Hubert Humphrey	40
Other-undecided	8

The Wallace Factor

Wallace looms over the 1976 campaign as a potential problem for both the Republicans and Democrats.

To test what effect a third party effort by Wallace would have on a contest between Ford and Humphrey, registered voters in the survey were asked this question:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today. If Sen. Hubert Humphrey were the Democratic candidate and President Gerald Ford were the Republican candidate and Gov. George Wallace were the candidate of a third party, which would you like to see win?" (If the respondent was undecided, this question was asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Humphrey, the Democrat, Ford, the Republican, or Wallace, the third party candidate?")

When Wallace is added to the test, Ford's lead over Humphrey is marginally reduced from 12 points to 9 points.

Ford	41%
Humphrey	32
Wallace	20
Other-undecided	7

The trial heats reported today are based on registered voters among the 1,515 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period Aug. 15-18.

A Conservative View

Pay-As-You-Go Rule Remains Sound In Govm't

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Roughly a century and a half ago, John Randolph of Roanoke startled the House with a sudden interruption. "Mr. Speaker," he cried, "I have discovered the philosopher's stone! It is this, sir— Pay as you go! Pay as you go!"

As events in our own time have demonstrated, this proved to be the stone the builders rejected. Now Senator Carl Curtis of Nebraska is trying to retrieve it. On September 23, a Senate subcommittee on constitutional amendments will begin formal hearings on the senator's proposal to write into the supreme law of the land a requirement that the federal budget be balanced.

Now, there is one view of constitutional amendments, firmly held by some of my brother conservatives, that there have been no good amendments since the first ten. It is not necessary to embrace that troglodyte conviction in order to justify a wary approach to the amendment process. I therefore do not endorse the senator's amendment, as such, but by the bones of John Randolph and the memory of Harry Byrd, it is something to think about.

Over the past three or four decades, deficit spending has become a way of life within the federal government. It is immaterial whether a Democrat or a Republican occupies the White House. Party divisions within the Congress do not matter. Deficits continue in peace as in war. Only a handful of conservative senators still defend the old cause. The last time the question came before the House, when Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois tried for a balanced budget in fiscal '76, his effort failed by 311 to 94.

The appalling figures long since ceased to appall. Back in January Mr. Ford, the sturdy Republican proposed a '76 budget with a deficit of $51.9 billion. A couple of months later, his convictions grown stronger with the passage of time, the President drew a line at $60 billion. As of September 2, the prospective deficit stood at $68.8 billion. It seems entirely probable that before Congress adopts its last spending bill, the deficit will rise to $75 billion.

The figures wash across our consciousness as indifferently as one more wave upon a sandy beach. They leave no residue of shock behind. When Curtis first came to Congress, the symbolic "000" meant hundreds of thousands of dollars. Now we read the "000" in hundreds of billions. It will be routine, the way things are going, to translate "000" into trillions a few years hence.

In the current fiscal year, the government is spending money at better than a billion dollars a day. Ten years ago, interest on the debt came to $10 billion a year; now it surges past $35 billion a year. The Treasury will go into the capital markets this year to borrow more money than all public and private borrowers put together ever have borrowed in a single year. The day never passes on Capitol Hill that some special interest is not drumming up support for larger outlays. And the beat goes on.

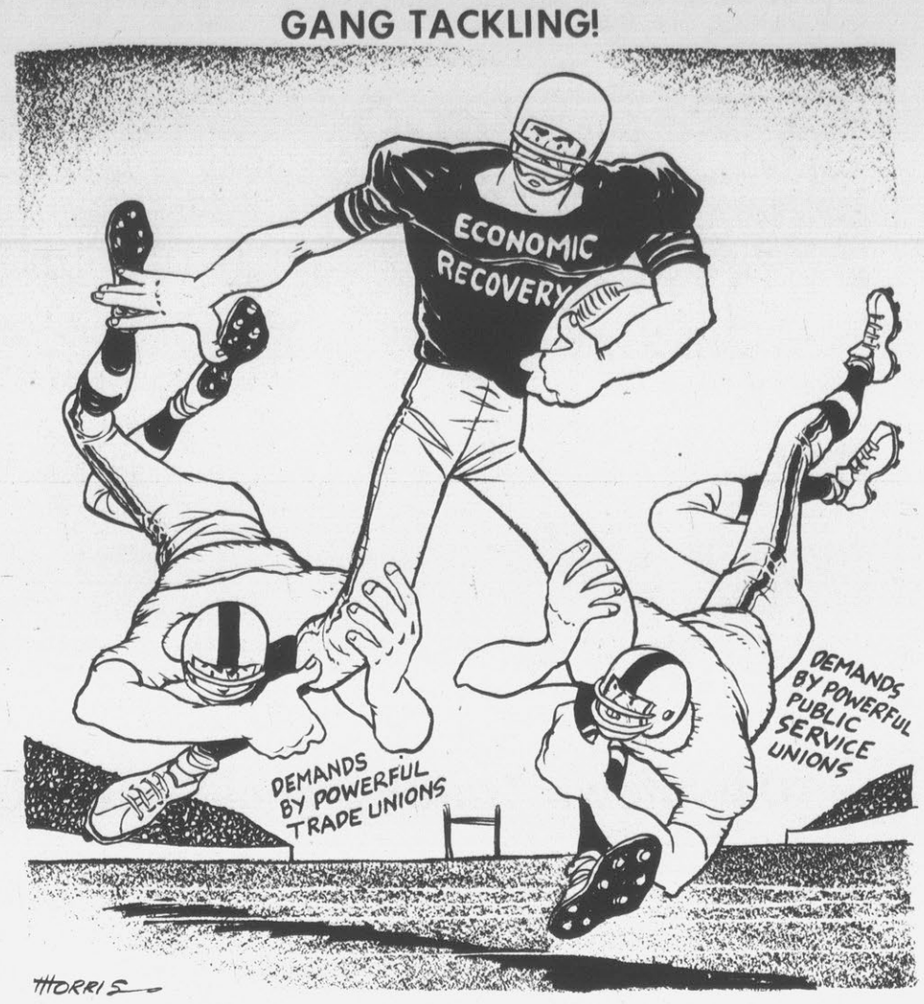
The Curtis amendment would call a halt. He would require the President annually to submit a balanced budget. If proposed expenditures exceeded anticipated revenues, the President would have to fix a surtax sufficient to make up the deficit. The Congress could agree to the surtax (or to equivalent alternate taxss), or the Congress could cut proposed expenditures; but if Congress took no independent action, the presidential surtax automatically would be imposed. Only in the event of a "grave national emergency," by a recorded three-fourths vote in each chamber, could the draconian requirements be suspended.

It is inconceivable, to put the matter bluntly, that the senator's resolution could now command the two-thirds vote in House and Senate required for submission of a constitutional amendment. The probabilities are strong that his proposal will die quietly in subcommittee and not be heard from again. Nevertheless, Curtis is determined to make his pitch, and he has a number of respectable witnesses lined up in support of his plan.

"There is one thing of which I am very certain," says Curtis. "That is, that it is totally immoral and dishonest to vote for more welfare state programs than we are willing to pay for. The greatest challenge to this generation is to bring federal spending under control, and to stop the ravages of inflation. If we fail to successfully meet this challenge in our generation, our very liberty can be destroyed."

Pay as you go! It remains a basically sound rule for the ordinary operations of government. And Curtis may be right. If Congress will not voluntarily accept the wisdom of that rule, in time the Constitution may have to impose the philosopher's stone.

GANG TACKLING!



U.S. Climate Not One To Help Confidence In War Against Inflation

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

What happens on the inflation front will determine, in large measure, whether the recovery trend strengthens and survives, or sickens and leads into another slump.

Statistically, a fairly solid case now can be made that things are looking up. Unemployment is less of a threat. Employment is making slight gains. Industrial production is up a bit, reflecting shrinking inventories. Disposable personal income is among the gainers. Home building is not so flat on its back. Detroit's auto makers think they see better times ahead.

So far, it's a somewhat spotty picture. But is is an improvement over spring and early summer, when the no. 1 question was "how far to the bottom?" Looking back, the overall picture is not inconsistent with the early stages of past recovery movements, although this time the best road back is bound to be much longer, and, also, rougher.

But one vital ingredient still is missing. That's the return of public confidence in the future. This has butressed all past recoveries and is essential if this one is to progress, with gains spreading along a widening front. Whatever improvement was scored by the confidence index during the summer now threatens to erode.

The reason is inflation. After the double digit performance of 1974, the rate of inflation slowed as the recession deepened. It broke under an annual rate of 5 per cent a few months back. This raised hopes that the "worst was over". But the picture has changed radically over the past two months. This can't be explained away by simply blaming it on food and fuel — energy.

Food and fuel prices have made the headlines. On fuel, Congress has fiddled and faddled for three years without doing anything to establish a national energy policy. This has been time lost in reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil. This has an upward impact on prices across the board, since energy is basic to the economy. It raises the danger that still more years will pass before Congress faces up to the task. The legislators are more concerned with prices at the gas pump than with what's happening to the economy.

Food is a different matter. Russian grain buying has had an impact. No question about that. But the public, the consumer, has lived with food price surges in the past. He doesn't like them. But he can compensate by changes in eating habits.

But what has been happening to the prices of manufactured products now poses another threat. With all costs, including labor costs, pushing up, even during the recession, manufacturers are past the point where they can absorb increases. The arithmetic is simple. They find they are better off selling less at a price which recovers costs than they would be if they sold more at prices which fail to recover costs. And when capital is so hard to come by few businesses can afford losses for long.

But the public's apprehension goes well beyond these aspects of inflation. There is a growing understanding that the basic force underwriting inflation not only is still alive, but actually thriving. That is the sloppy fiscal management out of Washington, dominated by Congress, which has piled deficit on top of deficit, in good times and bad.

It doesn't take a PHD in economics to see that there is only one real difference between bankrupt New York City and the U.S. Treasury. New York City simply spent itself out of money — ran out of new sources of revenue and ran out of the ability to borrow. No such thing can happen to the Treasury. Under the constitution, Washington can issue currency, and does, through the Federal Reserve system. This is the way a substantial portion of today's near $500-billion debt — accumulated deficits — has been financed.

The thing to remember is that money which is created in this way has no connection with goods and services produced. It is simply fed into the system as so much paper. And since it represents no value, it winds up in higher price tags.

The underlying fear today is that there will be no end to this process. It is deeply ingrained in the political process. The pressure centers today are the big lobbies which can supply votes and cash for members of Congress seeking election and those challenging them. One news story noted when the House voted to override the veto of a bloated education bill the gallery was packed with cheering lobbyists.

Such things cost confidence. There's nothing reassuring that in writing the program of what they will do if reelected next year the Democrats in Congress has topped their list of "promises" with a national health bill. The bill may have some merit. But one thing is sure: It would underwrite still more inflation in the health industry.

Also, when Congress votes to tie its salaries to living costs, the public has every reason to believe that its law makers have no intention of giving up their inflation-making habits. They have little to loose.

It simply is not a climate which encourages confidence. No country has ever found an easy way out of inflation.

To the editor:

Always freedom must be fought for and won and later fought for and rewon, . . . Freedom once won must be constantly guarded. Always some must sacrifice for others. The others are forever in their debt. America with all her faults has from her beginning had a history of expanding freedom. This growth of freedom will not stop. It could but it won't, because most Americans won't let it. Some voices there are who freely take America to task but never (within my hearing) other countries. They hold peace vigils lamenting America's guilt in dropping the A-bomb on Hiroshima, but they are curiously silent on Pearl Harbor Day. These voices constantly castigate America and in so doing avail themselves of the freedom of speech American guarantees its citizens. Why do my ears never hear them deplore foreign tyrannies of the left or the right—tyrannies which destroy free speech?

I believe in America. Many have sacrificed themselves to guarantee freedom to me. I honor them. I do not find patriotism (love of country) unworthy. Our freedom is always under attack—chiefly from within—but the good sense of most Americans prevails. I thank God for America.

This is the real choice as President Ford heads into the election year: whether to follow Dr. Burns's quest for new economic thinking or to do nothing, hoping that for once those sunny forecasts will come true. As of today, the former course is not even being considered beyond the marble palace of the Federal Reserve Board.

You Begin To Realize Everybody Is Involved

I'm just beginning to realize that when a woman gets pregnant, she automatically becomes public property. For instance, as soon as a woman begins to look pregnant, strange men start to approach her, solicitously asking if they can help her carry her magazine. Muggers take the liberty of patting her stomach as they snatch her purse. Women who have never even spoken to her before feel compelled to give advice, to entertain her with macabre labor room stories, and to relate the progress of their own daughters' entire pregnancies, from the first time they threw up at a cocktail party to the time they strained themselves by lifting too many fig bars at one time.

More noticeable than any of these examples, however, is the family's total involvement in all a pregnant woman's concerns. My family is so involved in my pregnancy that I don't even have to do my own worrying. My grandmother worries about whether or not the nursery will be adequately equipped to care for the baby in the first few weeks, and my mother-in-law worries about whether my husband will be adequately equipped to care for me in the first few weeks. My father-in-law worries that the baby won't be a boy, and my mother worries that it won't be a girl. The only thing I have left to worry about is that it won't be either one.

GAIL MICHAELS

Of course, Phillip worries, too. He worries about whether or not he'll faint when I go into labor, about whether or not he'll have a nervous breakdown when he gets the hospital bill, and about whether or not he'll have a cardiac arrest the first time he has to change a dirty diaper. But what worries him the most is the family policy of total involvement.

"I can't get over all this fuss about someone who hasn't even been born yet," he said one day last week. "My mother's already trying to put the kid on the Ten Best-Dressed Infants list, and your mother is setting him or her up in the stuffed toy business. I wonder what it'll be next."

"The nursery," I said. "Your mother and grandmother decorated the nursery today."

"How could they decorate the nursery?" he asked. "The only things up there are a plastic frog toy box and a couple of rusty diaper pins."

"Well, they brought a few things with them," I said hesitantly.

"Stop, stop," he groaned. "This is getting to be ridiculous. I feel like a first-class freeloader. How could you let them do this?"

"Because it makes them happy," I answered.

"But it's our baby, and we haven't bought it anything yet except three jars of peanut butter a week," he said dejectedly.

"That's where you're wrong. This isn't our baby. It's everybody's baby. We've all had a small part in creating a new life, and everyone wants to share in the fun."

Phillip picked up the telephone and started dialing.

"Now what are you doing?" I asked.

"I'm just calling Mother," he said softly. "To tell her thank you."

Concept Of A Common Cause Came Slowly For Americans

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The overland agony of colonial travel was a very real barrier to a physical or metaphysical consensus in the budding America.

Simply put, you could hardly get from here to there.

Word of mouth or quill could travel no faster than a horse, ferryman's scow or captain's schooner. The high road to nationhood was quite literally blocked by innumerable rivers and creeks, swamps, fallen trees, mud, foul tides and headwinds. "Good roads," said one colonial American, "are like angels' visits; few and far between."

Massachusetts was closer in outlook, and in fact, to England than she was to interior North Carolina. And vice versa. Home was where the hearth was and where you stayed, unless, armed with a desperate determination and a cast iron stomach, you set out to brave unknown roads and equally opaque tavern cooking. It is an unsung miracle that enough Americans survived their rattled vertebrae and outraged gizzards to forge the spine of a nation.

An age that watches the day's events from all over the world before sitting down to dinner might pause to consider that the news of Lexington and Concord, fought April 19, 1776, arrived breathlessly in Charleston on May 8.

The Declaration of Independence took four weeks less a day from Philadelphia to the same destination. When Charleston, in turn, had some hot news to tell after the battle of Sullivan's Island, the bulletin was entrusted for want of anyone else to Daniel Latham, "a very athletic young man who was going to Philadelphia on business." John Donne to the contrary, in colonial America every man damn near was an island.

Travel was such an adventure then that almost every voyager seemed to have written about it after his bones stopped jangling. A Virginian of a road in winter: "I say it's not passable, not even Jackassable."

Drink was about the only solace for the colonial traveler, a shining beacon at the end of a hard day's journey in a crammed and malodorous wayside inn. People wrote about inns, too.

The Marquis de Chastellux, a Frenchman who knew America too well to have brought his fastidiousness over with him, noted: "Throughout America, in private houses (which also took transients) as well as in the inns ... it very commonly happens that after you have been fed, a stranger of any condition comes into the room, pulls off his clothes and places himself, without ceremony, between your sheets."

Of course, if the bed got too crowded, the transient could adjourn back to the bar and console himself with draughts of Whistle-Belly Vengeance. This was a potion made of bitter beer, sweetened with molasses and covered with bread crumbs, served hot. Milder beverages could be an equal gamble. At one rural inn John Randolph of Virginia spat out what was reported to be tea and called to the inkeeper: "Sir, if this be tea, bring me coffee. If this be coffee, bring me tea."

Closer to town, conditions improved. A wayfarer might dine on lobster stew or Yankee oyster pie in New England; sauerkraut, knockwurst and creamed potato salad in the Pennsylvania German regions; terrapin in Maryland; ham in Virginia, and crabs in South Carolina. The common drink was cider, beer or small beer (beer weakened with water).

The first roads in the Colonies were trails that simply followed where the deer or the Indian had roamed. There were few if any bridges, and wagon drivers carried axes to clear fallen timber. Logs were sunk across bogs to corduroy a path. Summer was the best time to travel, when trails were dry and rivers low.

Until the French and Indian War, when east-west roads were cut into the interior, roads mainly paralleled the seacoast. But by the 1760s a traveler had a choice of four roads between Boston and New Haven and could travel overland all the way to Charleston. Nonetheless, Bostonians much preferred sailing to nearby Salem rather than fording the many streams. So did New Yorkers prefer the 240-mile water route down the Jersey shore and up to the Delaware River to an 80-mile land trip.

Traveling was becoming more pleasant. John Singleton Copley, perhaps because he was an artist, delighted in plodding through New England where "you scarcely lose sight of a house." In the South, plantation owners kept a slave at the gates to ask any wayfarers in for dinner. But the most colorful highway was the Blue Ridge. It was also called "The Bad Road."

This was the artery of the frontier, a byway for newly arrived immigrants, herds of sheep and cattle, tinkerers, black-clad itinerant preachers on spavined horses, lurching Conestoga wagons drawn by dull-eyed oxen or heavy-withered horses specially bred for the job.

The huge wagons, designed and built by Germans in the Conestoga Valley of Pennsylvania, could haul eight or 10 tons up to 15 miles a day. Their bottoms were curved to the center to keep the load from shifting, with hoops covered by homespun to keep out the weather. They rode on hubs of sour gum trees girded by iron tires half an inch thick that were hammered on while hot then plunged into cold water to shrink the tire to the wheel.

But all of this tenuous network of ruts and wagons and crowded inn rooms could not stay the growing national sensibility.

Besides the spoken word, the printing press was a viable form of communication. By the time of the Revolution 37 were being printed in the Colonies.

New VISTA Volunteers

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

A new staff is on hand as the Greenville chapter of VISTA goes into it's final of three years of activity here.

"Since this is the final phase out year," James (Jim) Wynn, VISTA's new coordinator noted, "our work plans for the coming year will be to continue activities now in operation and also to phase out this work with other organizations and agencies taking up where we'll leave off."

The new staff of six members is headed by Wynn, a native of Robersonville, who succeeds Rick Cagan. Cagan in late August completed two years service with the Greenville chapter of VISTA (Volunteers In Service To America).

A graduate of UNC majoring in pre-law studies, Wynn is single and is a member of the Providence Missionary Baptist Church in Robersonville. He also studied journalism and is a free-lance writer.

The five other VISTA staff members who have volunteered for a one year period of service are:

—Bradford Smith, a native of Livington, N. J. A graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in sociology, Smith heads the ECU Student Volunteer Association and also works with the Volunteer Greenville activity. Smith is a bachelor.

—Ms. Rachel Short, a native of Greenville, is the mother of five young daughters ranging in age from two to nine years old. She is working with the Senior Citizens program at Kearney Park.

—Williamsport, Pa. native Mrs. Carol Wilkerson has studied architectural drafting at Pitt Technical Institute and is the wife of Richard Wilkerson, a teacher at Elmhurst Elementary School. Her primary field of work is with the Senior Citizen program in Ayden. She will also work with the Pitt County Council on Aging.

—Barbara Turner of Durham, a graduate of East Carolina University majoring in journalism and English, is assisting Brad Smith in the ECU Student Volunteer Association. She is a free lance writer and has worked for a Durham newspaper.

—Mrs. Brenda Bynum, another Greenville native, is working with the Senior Citizens program in Moyewood. She is the mother of three children.

All of the six new VISTA staff members were recruited locally. The local VISTA chapter is active in projects and programs both in Greenville and in Pitt County.

Wire-Service Cost Cut Ruled Illegal

By JERRY T. BAULCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has ruled illegal a rate arrangement by which news wire services have been able to cut the expense of their leased telephone lines. And it refused to approve another cost-cutting plan.

The commission's decisions, announced Friday, are expected to increase considerably the cost to the wire services for use of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. facilities.

However, the FCC said it would soon institute a separate investigation of the need for preferential press rates for private line services.

It said it would try to determine whether the dissemination of the news was impaired by the various increases in charges for private line services experienced by the news media in recent years.

Under the so-called Telpak exemption, the news services have been allowed to lease a short bulk line and use the extensions to various points at rates cheaper than those AT&T put into effect in June 1974.

The FCC said this violates the law, and it gave AT&T 30 days to remove what it called this unlawful discrimination.

The commission also found that AT&T had shown it could not justify the offering of simplex or half duplex at reduced rates, as the news agencies requested. Simplex is one-way transmission service. Half duplex is alternate one-way transmissions service.

The two rulings were included in a 7-0 decision in which the commission said it could not decide the broader question of letting the Bell System continue the interim rates, called "hi-lo," it put into effect in June 1974.

The commission said it needs more information and ordered expedited hearings on the question.

The hi-lo system provides for lower rates on high-density lines and higher rates for those used with low density. This replaced the traditional uniform nationwide mileage charge for lines used by about 19,000 business customers, largely news wire services, and government agencies.

It meant higher charges especially for serving small town newspapers and broadcast stations.

The commission said, however, it found that the interim low-density rate schedule that took effect last year was unreasonable. And it said a revised schedule filed Aug. 8 to be effective Oct. 9 might also be unreasonable. The lowering of this rate would ease the impact of Friday's ruling on news wire services.

Specialized common carriers compete with the telephone companies by leasing lines or microwave systems to private business.

Common Cause...

Fourteen were in New England, 13 in the Middle Colonies, including three in German in Pennsylvania and 10 in the Southern Colonies. Only Delaware and New Jersey lacked one.

But newspapers, too, suffered from the tortured and slow movement of men over road. Colonial news was increasingly exchanged as war approached. Its freshness, necessarily, varied.

News of Lexington and Concord was printed in Boston the day of the battle, in Philadelphia six days later, in Williamsburg 10 days later, and in Charleston 20 days later.

Ponderously but as ineluctably as a Conestoga wagon, the word spread up and down the rutted and rocky roads that linked the Colonies, and Americans were beginning to choose.

Three City Library Personnel Announced

Three new staff members have been assigned to the Greenville City Library system. Two fill vacancies created by former staff members who have resigned to continue their education.

Announcement of the new personnel was made by Elizabeth Copeland, Librarian for the Greenville City Libraries.

—Greenville native Lou Wilkerson is the new librarian for East Branch Library. She succeeds Joe Stines.

A graduate of Rose High School, Ms. Wilkerson attended Meredith University and UNC-Chapel Hill, where she received a degree in English. She received the master's degree in librarianship from Emory University in Atlanta.

A member of Emanual Baptist Church, Ms. Wilkerson is interested in ceramics, tennis and water sports.

—Mrs. Margaret Sheeran of Miami, Florida is the new Children's Librarian at Sheppard Memorial Library. She succeeds Mrs. Kay Taylor in this position. She majored in comparative literature at New College in Sarsota, Fla., and received the master's degree in Library Science from the University of Chicago.

Before coming to Greenville, Mrs. Sheeran was County Librarian for the Jackson County Library in Sylva. She is a weaver, and likes to hike, swim and play tennis.

—Ann Noble of Rayville, La., is an assistant in young adult and reference work at Sheppard. A graduate of Louisiana Technical University at Ruston, La., and Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, she holds a degree in English Education and a masters in Library Science.

This is Ms. Noble's first library assignment. Before coming to Greenville recently, she taught school in Mangham, La. A Methodist, she likes water sports and needlepoint.

Raises Electrical Rates

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Fayetteville Public Works Commission has raised its industrial electrical rates by 13 per cent in anticipation of a new wholesale rate increase by Carolina Power & Light Co.

Public Works Commission manager Ray Wuench Jr. also warned Friday that PWC's 40,000 residential customers can expect a similar increase if CP&L is awarded the increase by the Federal Power Commission.

Downtown Traffic Signal System Underway

The state determines the need of signals at an intersection by volume of traffic and accident type at the intersection, division traffic engineer Gerald England said. Some types of accidents are not correctable by signals, according to England, and the installation of signals usually raises the rate of rear-end collisions at an intersection.

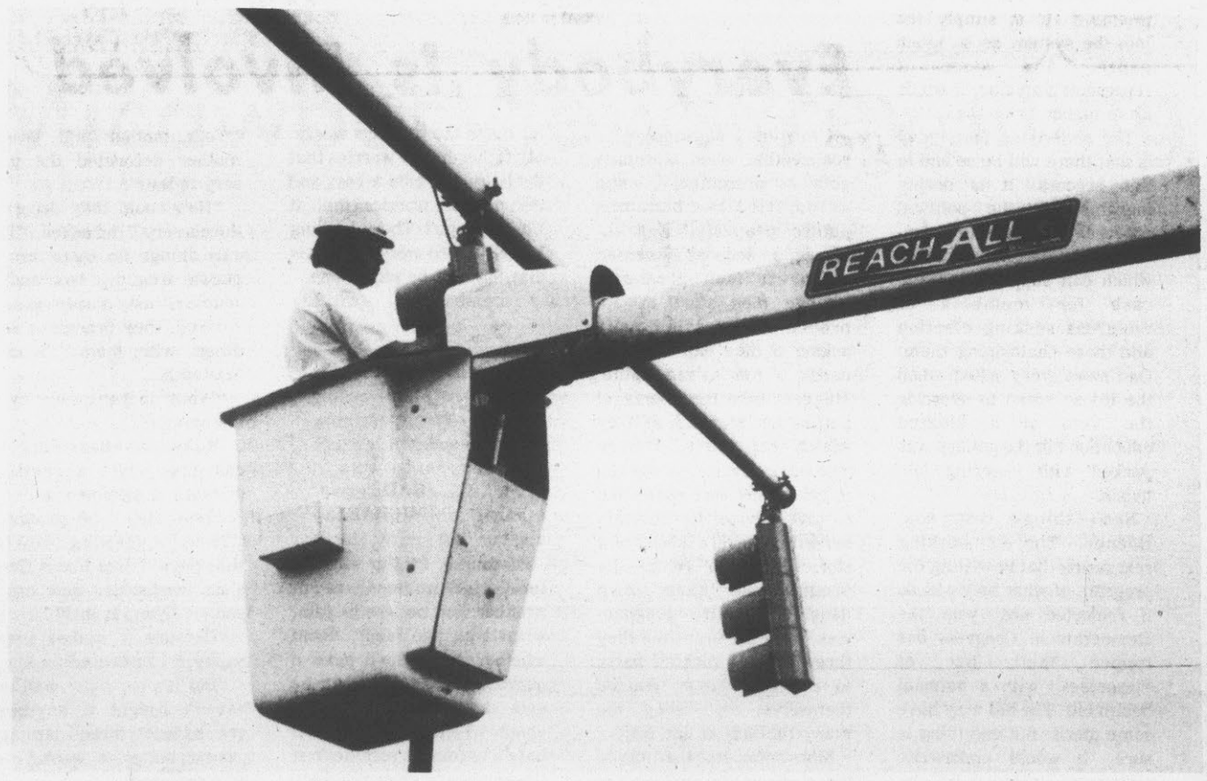
The state will probably have to "take a tougher and harder look (in choosing intersections for signals) in the future because of funds," said Snell.

With installation and upkeep costs rising along with budgetary cutbacks, "There will probably be some intersections in the future that, just won't get them, I can foresee that," Snell said.

Installations costs are up $1,000 and $1,500 from two years ago. Maintenance and power for a large intersection (in this case, Charles Street and Greenville Boulevard) is nearly $900 a year, with over $500 of this spent for electricity, according to James Boyd, state division traffic services supervisor.

Snell said cutbacks in road spending in the state totalled $95,000 this year in the primary and secondary road category. Urban road funds were not cut, Snell said.

In addition to general maintenance, traffic lights are also the victims of vandalism and accidents. Although they are hung 17-19 feet from the road, lights are sometimes destroyed by high trucks, Boyd said.



SIGNAL LIGHT REPAIR . . . A Greenville Utilities Commission "trouble-shooter," James Ross, works on a Tenth Street traffic light. GUC is contracted with both the city and the state for signal light repair here. Persons noticing a malfunctioning signal should call GUC and tell the location and type of malfunction involved. Wild West Town For Australia

By THOMAS KENT

KALGOORLIE, Western Australia (AP) — The capital of Australia's Wild West is a roarin' town, pardner, and lawmen don't mess much with what goes on in the patch of scrub eight miles of out town.

You go out Broad Arrow Road to find the spot, take the first right at the rusty oil drum and bump along a maze of unmarked dirt roads. Then — if you're not ejected because you're a woman or have a camera — you step right up and join the local goldminers in Kalgoorlie's completely open and absolutely illegal "two-up" gambling ring.

Officially, of course, the two-up, a game in which two coins are tossed in the air and gamblers bet odds or evens on their fall, doesn't exist. The law hasn't been out there, the story goes, since the cops used to finger gamblers on the way in for contributions to the Police Youth Club.

The brilliantly spotlighted row of brothels on Hay Street, two blocks from police headquarters, doesn't exist either. The last time anyone asked the West Australian police minister about them he allowed that "if there are complaints, the police will take action."

But he said there would have to be evidence first that the 40 beckoning girls are involved in something illegal.

"You've got to realize this is a town of working men — hard workers," said Barney Jurley, a Kalgoorlie game warden downing his first beer in 10 days after a trip to the outback to chase wild dogs.

"The police just consider it a tradition to leave these places alone. Anyhow, if they shut them up, there'd be corruption all over town and they'd probably have a rebellion on their hands."

Kalgoorlie, (population 22,000), looks as if it had been lifted lock, stock and cheap rooming house from the California gold rush days.

The 150-man Mt. Charlotte gold mine still cranks away downtown, right across from the Federal Hotel. Weekend prospectors tunnel and pan for gold in the nearby scrub.

Kalgoorlie (if you're initiated, you don't pronounce the "r") was the center of the big Australian gold rushes in the second half of the last century. American prospectors came here after the steam went out of the California boom, and even President Herbert Hoover spent 10 years here as a mining engineer.

Today, gold mining is still a big business in the town, 350 miles east through flat desert and scrub land from the West Australian state capital of Perth. But the gold isn't expected to last forever, at least in commercial quantities.

One mining company, Kalgoorlie Lake View Ltd., announced in June that it would progressively reduce its work force by at least 300.

Yet even if the gold industry eventually peters out, recent nickel finds in the Kalgoorlie area should stave off the last round-up for this rough and ready town. There is a shortage of skilled underground miners all over Australia, and the old gold hands of "Kal" stand a good chance of absorption into the nickel industry.

Meantime, the living continues friendly and easy in Kalgoorlie, where the locals have made their peace with the thousands of visitors who regularly tramp through the town and over the old mine shafts that honeycomb the countryside.

The 20th century has intruded into Kal in the form of Kentucky Fried Chicken commercials on the radio, a Woolworth department store a nugget's throw from the old Commercial Hotel and American rock music in the barrooms. But consciously, people try to remember the old gold days when camel trains padded down Hannon Street and prospectors bartered whisky for precious water.

"The people are conscious of the 'Wild West' image here and they like its uniqueness," said Peter Faulker, a Canadian who now works for the local newspaper, the Kalgoorlie Miner. "This never was a tough or violent town, but people want to preserve the old adventurous ways.

"You see it in the old hotels, and in the old buildings they don't tear down. The place, for sure, still has a pioneer spirit."

L-SHAPED DUPLEX DECEIVING DESIGN

PLAN HOUSES TWO FAMILIES IN COMFORT, PRIVACY.

By Jerry Bishop

Open planning and an efficient use of space contributes to the success of the Craigbrook, an attractive duplex styled deceptively like a single family home.

Two units, each containing over 1000 square feet of living space, are joined in an "L" shape that maintains privacy for each family. Complete with shutters, brick trim, and a gently sloping roof treatment, the exterior is also detailed to support the illusion of a single family home that would enhance any neighborhood.

Each unit is entered by crossing the small porch, and doorways are placed several feet apart to insure privacy. In both cases, entry is into a 19-ft. well-windowed living room with closet space provided.

Beyond the living room is the family-dining room, open to the kitchen and large enough for informal entertaining. The long breakfast bar provides a place for quick snacks and sets a relaxed pace for the area. Each unit also offers a rear entry, close to the kitchen, for convenience in catering barbecues.

Bordering the kitchen is a feature not often found in multi-family designs: the first floor utility room. Perfect for laundry chores, the room stretches over 13 feet to offer storage space as well. Its rear entry also suits it as a mud room, a handy spot for removing wet clothing.

Bedrooms are tucked away at the end of each section, and the units differ only in the fact that one shows a slightly larger bedroom. Closet space is adequate, and both bedrooms in each unit are steps from a full bath.

The Craigbrook combines two compact homes, each with two bedrooms and an open family/kitchen, to create an appealing design adaptable to any residential area.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There is nothing mysterious about finishing plywood, although the number of questions received on the subject might indicate otherwise.

Since plywood is nothing more nor less than real wood, with thin sheets of veneers glued together, it is finished very much the same as almost any kind of wood you might buy. The key is the type of wood used for the facing, sometimes known as the good side. Thus, if the facing is birch, you handle the finishing chores just as you would a piece of solid birch. If it's oak, then you would have to make a decision on whether to use a filler in its pores, the same decision you would confront if finishing, let's say, an oak table.

The two examples given — birch and oak — are not likely to occur unless you are making fine furniture or working on a project where hardwood is required. Plywoods with hardwood facings or those with all-hardwood veneers are not big sellers with most do-it-yourself purchasers. The most widely used plywoods are those made of softwoods like fir, pine or spruce, with far and away the most popular being the plywoods made of fir. Lumber yards carry large quantities of fir plywood and small amounts of hardwood plywoods. Some sell hardwood plywoods only on special orders, in which case the material is ordered by the dealer to fit your specifications.

Why is fir plywood so popular? Because it's the cheapest, has exceptional strength and fits the bill for the great majority of projects. Regular fir plywood is moisture resistant and suitable for interior purposes. Exterior fir plywood has waterproof glue between the plies and other qualities that make it more advantageous for outdoor and marine use.

The grain in fir is what is known as "wild." It will sometimes show through ordinary finishes after a period of time. This is true no matter what kind of fir is used, but fir plywood is finished more often than regular lumber and so gets more attention from a finishing standpoint.

A special sealer for use on fir is made by several manufacturers. The principle is the same no matter which company makes it: one kind is made for use on fir which is to be given a clear finish; a second kind is made for use on fir which is to be painted. There is a white pigment in the sealer intended for use on plywood to be given a final coat of paint.

Most plywood is sanded before you buy it. But, except for rough work where the appearance will not matter, you should sand it again before going ahead with the finish. After the sanding, wipe it with a cloth moistened in turpentine to remove any remaining grit. Denatured alcohol is even better for this purpose if you intend to use shellac as the finish.

Should you wish to stain the plywood, the best results will be achieved if you apply a coat of sealer to the raw wood, then the stain and then another coat of sealer. The first coat of sealer enables the stain to take evenly. The second coat — over the stain — prevents it from bleeding through the final finish.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booket, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — My husband and I recently signed to buy a new house in a development. The house was built last February, has never been occupied and was priced at its lowest figure since being built, so everyone concerned assumes that it qualified us to get the five per cent tax deduction. We were told by the builder that, in order to get the deduction, the house would have to be occupied before Jan. 1, 1977. It is our plan to have my daughter and her husband move in this year and remain until 1978, at which time my husband and I will occupy the house. I have now been told that we cannot do this if we wish to get the tax deduction. We are confused, since we were under the impression that occupancy before 1977 was the qualification. Can you clarify this for us? Can an exception be made?

A. — The Treasury Department says that, to get the tax deduction, the buyers themselves must occupy the house. If others occupy it, even if they are close relatives, the credit does not apply. However, since the builder has no control over the regulations on tax credit, it is a waste of time to try to get him to make an exception in your case. For a detailed clarification of the entire matter, drop in at an Internal Revenue Service office.

Q. — I have gotten a lot of good tips out of your articles, so I thought it only fair that I should pass one along to you. I have discovered that foam rubber of any thickness can be cut easily with my electric kitchen knife. It's much easier to work with than scissors.

A. — Thanks. As a matter of fact, upholsterers use an electric knife on the thicker pieces of foam. Scissors work well when the foam is less than two inches thick.

Q. — I intend to use 4 by 4 wooden posts for a fence I will be putting up soon. What's the best way to anchor the posts into the ground?

A. — Most of the posts should be set into the ground about 2 feet, but those which will be at corners where there is extra stress should be four or five feet below the surface. Dig each hole to a diameter of about one foot. Place gravel or small stones at the bottom of the hole. Place the post into the hole, make sure it is straight and keep it that way with temporary braces. Pour concrete into the hole until it is very slightly above the surface of the ground. Smooth it out. The next day, pour water on the concrete; do this every day for five or six days. When you are certain the post is solidly in place, remove the braces. There are other ways to set posts into the ground, but the basic procedure as explained here has worked well in actual cases.

Homes Need Safety Awareness

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
United Press International

At home, you're the safety director!

This advice to readers of Monitor, publication of the Division of Safety and Hygiene of the Industrial Commission of Ohio, should ring a bell in every household.

"At work," the Monitor editorial points out, "you get a lot of help staying out of harm's way ... But what about safety and health in the home? That's all up to you."

Most of us know the safety rules. Practicing them is another matter.

The idea is not to become a worry wart but to develop safety consciousness. No one wants to keep the youngsters from climbing in the apple tree, but you don't want them riding your power mower for fun, either.

Areas of concern detailed by the Monitor include:

Falls. With the growing popularity of the single-story house, one major source of home accidents has decreased dramatically: falls downstairs. But falls still are the leading type of accident, accounting for more than 10,000 deaths each year. And stairs remain a hazard, even though it's usually the case of one or two steps rather than a full flight.

Inattention or carelessness, hurrying, carrying too heavy or unwieldy loads, improper footwear, slippery surfaces and inadequate lighting all contribute to falls, on stairs or on the level. So can improper use of ladders, and use of makeshift devices for climbing.

Poisoning. The proliferation in our homes of potentially lethal toxic substances has made safety in this area more than a matter of just locking the medicine chest. You don't want children rummaging in workshops or cleaning closets either. You can't depend on close supervision to protect children. All hazardous materials must be locked up when not in use.

It is important that adults consider carefully any substance used in the home for its possible hazards. Always read instructions, and follow them to the letter. Don't mix products.

Always keep sucm substances in the original containers, with the label intact so that in case of accidental poisoning you will have instructions for immediate first aid and identification of the poison for the doctor. Above all, do not place hazardous materials in cups, soda bottles or other containers that would normally contain food or drink.

Take care with medicines. Keep them out of the reach of children — and protected against accidental misuse by adults. Avoid taking medicine in the presence of children who like to imitate adults. Always call medicine by its proper name; never suggest that it is candy. Dispose of prescription drugs by flushing them down the toilet once the illness for which they were prescribed is over.

Fire. The third major cause of accidental death in the home is fire. To be effective, a home fire prevention plan must be built around a thorough understanding of the problem by everyone in the family. And regular drills should be held.

Good housekeeping is the major deterrent to fire. Respect for matches should be taught to children, and observed by adults. Only safety matches should be used and they should be used properly, and disposed of properly. Smokers in the family have a heavy responsibility. Careless smoking habits are a major source of home fires. Misuse of electricity also results in a large numer of fires.

Electricity. In addition to the fire hazard, there are other safety precautions involving electricity. The watchword: treat it with respect. Rely on experts for all but the most rudimentary electrical work. Use care in plugging in appliances; don't overload circuits, use a ground where one is called for; maintain equipment in good condition. Instruct youngsters in the proper use of electricity and protect toddlers from accidental contact with extension cords or open sockets.

Firearms. A gun is a bit like a car — you've got to know how to operate it to be able to use it properly and avoid accidents. If firearms are kept — and it is a question to be considered seriously — they should be kept unloaded and out of the reach of children. Those who might have occasion to use firearms should be instructed in their proper use.

Almost anyone, with little effort, can come up with dozens more potential hazards in the home. Almost every activity has its pitfalls.

Monitor sums it up: "Safety consciousness is the key to a safe household. Develop it and you will instinctively apply the principles of safety to every set of circumstances in which you find yourself."

Eton Offering Spartan Life

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — There's a new status symbol in Britain — have your laundry done by exclusive Eton College.

There's an even classier status symbol coming up next summer — use Eton College's dormitories as a hotel (though you'll have to take language instruction nearby to do it).

For the 535-year-old institution, which has produced 18 British prime ministers, is a victim of inflation and fighting to keep its $3,465-a-year boarding fees from soaring still higher.

They have gone up 90 per cent in the past five years. Even the rich and famous fathers of many of the students have suffered as prices and taxes have soared and investments plummeted.

The measures taken so far are so radical that the school magazine, the Eton Chronicle, said : "One begins to wonder if there is any point in not closing down the school here and now."

Last winter the heating was cut down to what Richard Symes-Thompson, the bursar, admitted was a "spartan" level. This coming term the 1,200 students have been advised they will have to do their own laundry, serve their own meals and clean up their own quarters.

The boathouse has been instructed to make its own boats and use fibreglass because it's cheaper than wood.

Plans to hire out the sports facilities of the preparatory school and to charge tourists for a look around its historic buildings have been shelved for the moment. But they may be revived if the present economies fail to save $330,000 a year.

The idea of using the dormitories for the language school students was not taken lightly — nor was the decision to take in the laundry of London Airport and several hotels.

"I think it was a bit of a wrench to make this decision," Symes-Thompson said, "in the sense that any innovation is quite a problem at a traditional place like this. But we have just got to change our ideas and do more of this kind of thing."

An old alumnus, The Duke of Wellington, conqueror of Napoleon, once said: "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton." Symes-Thompson hopes Eton will be just as successful a century later in the battle against inflation.

The Garden Clinic

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Would you please explain hydroseeding. (T.T., Raleigh)

A. Hydroseeding is the mixing of seed with water (hydro) in a tank and spraying it over a prepared seedbed. The mixture may contain lime, fertilizer, mulch and so forth in a slurry. Hydroseeding was developed for and is usually used for steep banks or cuts that could not be seeded by conventional means. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. I have some nice Charleston Grey watermelons that I would like to store for later eating. How can I do this? (G.T., Burgaw)

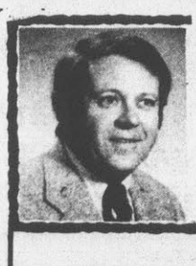
A. Two weeks is about as long as a person can normally keep a watermelon. Best storage results are obtained when the melons are kept at 40 to 50 degrees with a relative humidity of 80 to 85 per cent. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. How do you plant horseradish? We have looked for seed at several stores. (C.B., Conover)

A. Horseradish is almost always grown from cuttings or "sets" taken from the previous year's crop. The cuttings are taken in the fall, stored through the winter, and planted in the spring. A few garden supply businesses offer cuttings for sale. Horseradish requires deep, fertile, moist soil. It is a lush growing plant and subject to crown rot and other diseases. Success with horseradish in North Carolina improves as one gets nearer to the mountains. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please give me some suggestions for pruning a Crepe Myrtle. (Mrs. P.L., Aberdeen)

A. Crepe Myrtle is grown as a tree or as a shrub. When grown as a tree, prune sparingly. Prune only enough to maintain the trunk form with top branching. When grown as a shrub, prune in late autumn, winter or early spring. Remove all twiggy growth and from one-third to one-half of the previous year's growth. This is conductive to the production of larger flower heads. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)



Real Estate

REALTOR

Do You Really Own Land?

Do you really own the land you live on? Yes, but not unconditionally. There's no question that you, your family, and heirs have strong historic rights to your own land. You can build on it, dig on it, keep others away from it, sell it, give it away, or borrow on it.

But your rights do not override certain public rights. A utility company may buy rights-of-way for power lines. The telephone company may have the right to a five-foot easement for poles along your backlot line. Similar easements are purchased or granted for local electric power lines, under ground sewer pipes, natural gas lines, and water supply piping.

You should know about all easements, rights and claims made on your land while you are living on it. This is the reason for a title search prior to purchase. When it's completed, you'll know if your title to the property is, or is not, free and clear of all "encumbrances" and, if not, what they are.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at LOUIS CLARK AGENCY, IBM Bldg., 100 Reade St., Greenville. Phone: 752-4173. We're here to help!

THE ELEPHANT SEAL, a ponderous sea mammal, is flourishing once again thanks to the protection of Mexico and the United States. (UPI Photo)

Giant Seal Flourishing Again

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The northern elephant seal, a ponderous sea mammal which once faced extinction because of its prized blubber oil, is flourishing once again, thanks to the protection of two governments.

A team of biologists from the California Department of Fish and game counted 3,900 seals on San Miguel Island during their annual head count this year and said the number is encouraging evidence that the northern elephant seal has made a dramatic recovery.

The seal population was nearly eliminated by sealers and whalers who began killing them in the early 1800s for their skin and the fine oil contained in a thick layer of blubber which protects the seal's bulky body.

The trade continued into the late 1800s and by 1892 the known population was only nine seals which had taken refuge on Guadalupe Island off the coast of Baja California, 300 miles south of San Diego.

Of the nine, seven were taken as specimens by scientists.

In 1911, Mexico prohibited the killing of elephant seals and the population on Guadalupe began to grow. In 1930, the island's estimated population was 1,500 and by 1938 some had migrated 400 miles north to San Miguel Island, one of the Channel Islands off Santa Barbara, where 13 were tabulated.

Because San Miguel Island, the only known breeding ground off the U. S. coast, is owned by the U. S. Navy and is off limits to visitors, the seal was not put on the protected list by the United States until 1972, five years after California took similar action.

The Fish and Game Department began surveying the herd population on San Miguel Island in 1965 and counted 3,000 animals. Two years later, the population was 3,700. Since then, it has fluctuated between 2,200 (1970) and 3,600 (1973). Last year, 2,700 animals were tabulated.

Biologist John G. Carlisle Jr. said the 3,900 counted this year were encouraging evidence that the huge seal, which once ranged from Prince of Wales Island in Alaska to Cape San Lazara, Baja California, had begun to re-establish itself.

Elephant seals, so named because of the males' inflatable noses, follow an uncertain ocean migration route for most of the year, but from January through April they can be found breeding at their favorite rookeries. Bull elephants reach lengths of up to 20 feet and weigh 2 to 2½ tons, while females are slightly smaller. Each bull may have a harem of from eight to as many as 40 females.

The pups, with their large luminous eyes and silvery coats, can be appealing but massive, weighing as much as 100 pounds at birth.

Carlisle and fellow biologist Harold Clemens take their nose count by walking the beaches of the island with mechanical counters, tallying the seals lolling in the sun, scattering sand on their backs with their flippers to keep flies off patches of skin worn raw through shedding.

"They appear very phlegmatic and move like giant caterpillars as they inch along the ground," according to Clemens, "but they can be lightning fast."

One bull lunged at Carlisle one year, narrowly missing him. Another member of the department was not so lucky. While pulling a skiff ashore in 1971, he was scarred when a bull took a bite out of his backside.

Patients Are Overstaying

SOUTHPORT, Conn. (AP) — The federal Medicaid program tends to extend patients' stays in skilled nursing homes and may keep them there longer than necessary, a study shows.

Edith S. Baum says the program provides more aid for nursing home care than for less intensive intermediate care and home care, such as visiting nurses.

As a result, Medicaid patients are less able to afford more suitable care than non-Medicaid patients, her study shows.

The 150-page study was Mrs. Baum's thesis for her master's degree in public health at the Yale University School of Medicine.

"The extended length of stay of the Medicaid patient is not only more costly in terms of federal and state reimbursement but is also psychologically debilitating to patients," her study says.

Mrs. Baum collected data on 16 long-term care facilities in the Greater Bridgeport area. The study was based on 440 patients discharged in 1973. It compared Medicaid and non-Medicaid patients and showed that the average Medicaid patient stayed five times as long in nursing homes, although they were no more seriously ill on admission than non-Medicaid patients.

She recommends that alternatives to institutionalization such as home care, day care, day hospitals and meals on wheels be set up and that more reimbursement for intermediate and home care be made.

Education Association Meeting On Oct. 16-18

The 1975 Study Conference of the N.C. Association for the Education of Young Children has been scheduled for Oct. 16-18 in Winston-Salem. The conference is coordinated by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Hair Stylists Can Be Sued

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Malpractice suits are not only a problem for physicians. Now they threaten to get into the hair of barbers and beauticians.

So, a major insurance company here is offering a special policy covering almost all hair styling services. The new policy protects barbers and beauticians from malpractice claims arising from hair styling, shampooing, cutting and trimming, hair removal, tinting, coloring and bleaching, manicures and pedicures.

The Fireman's Fund American Insurance Company policy also covers work done during hair stylists' house calls, wigs that are damaged while in the insured's custody and liability protection against customers' slips and falls.

Sleep Unlikely Solve Problems

CHICAGO (UPI) — Legend notwithstanding, sleeping on a problem is not likely to help solve it, says Sally Ames of the University of Illinois department of psychiatry. She says it is a rare phenomenon if difficult and puzzling problems are solved in dreams. Researchers say the probability is that a good night's sleep refreshes the mind and creates the mental energy to find solutions.

Plastic Pen Is Far Ahead Of The Old Quills

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the world's top authorities of autograph collecting says if plastic-tipped pens had been available years ago, many autographs would be perhaps worth a great deal today.

Autograph collector expert Charles Hamilton said "pens of today have a lot over quill pens of the past. Quills had to be constantly sharpened and sometimes would catch in paper, squirt out ink and make a mess. Also, you couldn't write anything secretly because the quill squeaked so loudly."

Hamilton said the plastic-tipped pen "is a perfect example of a pen which gives an even distribution of ink and gives a letter a bold and cleaner appearance."

It is estimated there are more than 1,000,000 autograph collectors in the United States today — double the number 10 years ago — but only 10,000 take the hobby seriously.

RETURN RELIC

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Museum of Natural History is returning to Peru a 4,000-year-old jar taken from the country 28 years ago.

The Mate of Huaca Preta, a jar about the size of a tangerine, was found in pieces in far northern Peru in 1946 by Dr. Junius Bird, an American archaeologist.

Dr. Bird reassembled the jar and took it to New York with the permission of the Peruvian government

Young Jews Learn Their Heritage

By MEL LAYTNER

LIBERTY, N.Y. (UPI) — They came from such places as Leningrad, Tashkent, and Nalchik: nearly 100 young Russian Jews seeking knowledge of their heritage at a summer camp near a village appropriately named Liberty.

For many, it's their first taste of traditional Judaism without the fear of unofficial discrimination that led their parents to immigrate to the United States.

"In Russia I knew I was Jewish, but I didn't know what it meant," Alex Weiss, 17, a gangly redhead from Tashkent, said in halting English. "At first this was hard—so much to learn—but the teachers are patient."

Run entirely by other recently arrived Russian immigrants, the program is part of Camp Gan Israel, which literally means "Garden of Israel," located on some 70 acres of rolling hills and forests near Liberty, N.Y., in the Catskill Mountain region.

"Very, very few of the Russian campers are Orthodox," camp director Rabbi Abraham Shemtov said. "Many had knowledge of their heritage from their parents but for some this is their first contact with Judaism."

The program combines courses in English, Hebrew and theology with a full athletic program which includes swimming in two large pools, softball, tennis, arts and crafts and—since the Russian program began four years ago—an ever increasing interest in soccer and chess.

Camp Gan Israel is run by the Labovitch Hassidic movement, an international organization of highly Orthodox Jews formed amid Czarist persecution 200 years ago in the tiny Russian village of Labovitch. Labovitch means "City of Brotherly Love."

"We're celebrating that bicentennial too," Rabbi Shemtov said with a chuckle as he stroked his full-length red beard. "And please, don't call us a sect; there is too much sects around."

Besides the special Russian program for boys ages five through 20, Camp Gan Israel has campers from Korea, Mexico, Venezuela, Italy, France and the United States.

"The younger campers, five to 10 years old, are fully integrated in bunks with American children because language and cultural differences are easily overcome at that age," Rabbi Shemtov said. "The boys 10 through 12 are semi-integrated in bunks but have separate programs while the older boys have their own bunks and programs."

The Russian boys speak little English, and when Grisha and Vova Tomarkin, 10-year old twins from Leningrad, were interrupted during a hockey game and asked what aspect of the religious camp they enjoyed the most, both replied "swimming." And what about religious training? "That, too."

Despite the light-hearted atmosphere in the camp, Rabbi Shemtov cautiously asked each camper whether he still had family in the Soviet Union before a reporter was allowed to use the camper's name.

Rabbi Shemtov was also reticent about Labovitch efforts to help Jews still in the Soviet Union get out or about efforts to attend to the "spiritual" needs of widely separated Jewish communities.

When the Soviet government sharply restricted the printing of prayer books and bibles and the baking of Passover Matzah, many Labovitch members risked jail by smuggling prayer books and baking matzah underground.

"We prefer not to comment on this because we believe in silent diplomacy," Rabbi Shemtov said quietly. "This is a situation where those who talk do not know and those who know do not talk."

The Graphite Rods Stir Up Industry

By VIC WATIA

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fishermen interested in purchasing graphite fishing rods should be certain they know exactly what they are buying.

This warning came to light recently during talks with fishing rod manufacturers who are concerned about a possible influx of low-grade graphite rods on the market.

The concern is not without merit since many industry officials believe graphite fishing rods will capture 40 per cent of the market within five years.

However, the problem for the consumer soon may be resolved, according to Jack G. Roach, vice president of Skyline Industries, Fort Worth, Tex.

Graphite rod manufacturers have asked the American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association to settle the issue, Roach said.

Roach said his company was especially interested in seeing new guidelines recently pass an AFTMA committee because Skyline "produces rods that are 100 per cent graphite." The only step required before the guidelines can take effect is approval by AFTMA members, and that is expected in September, Roach said.

"The recommendations of this committee will be to call a graphite rod graphite, it must be 100 per cent graphite. Any rods that contain graphite and other materials will be called graphite-glass or whatever," he said.

"The symbol will be the AFTMA fish, with the percentage content in the center of the fish and then on the tail whether it is graphite or graphite-glass. If the rod contains more than 50 percent of another material, the other material will be listed first and graphite second. There must be 10 per cent graphite in a rod to even use the word graphite," Roach said.

What it means to consumers, he said, "is they will be protected from people putting a small amount of graphite in it and still calling it a graphite rod. The AFTMA thought this necessary because of the number of rods appearing on the market with small amounts of graphite in them."

However, although consumers will be protected by knowing the makeup of the rod, there still remains an unsettled controversy over the new carbon fiber rods.

Nobody agrees which manufacturing techniques are best.

Skyline, of course, believes 100 per cent graphite rods are the answer. Others believe a mixture of graphite and other materials are best.

Tom Airhart, technical director for Skyline, said, "There is no relationship in making a true graphite rod to making a fiberglass rod. The problems come in when people try to adapt graphite to glass rod manufacturing processes. Graphite is not a black glass. Graphite is a completely different product. It doesn't have any characteristics of glass."

But Hiro Asai, executive vice president of O.L.M. International Corp., San Francisco, Calif., disagreed with Airhart.

"On this point there are so many opinions," said Asai, whose Japanese firm — under the name of Olympic Fishing Tackle Co. Ltd. — produces a wide assortment of fishing rods containing about 90 per cent graphite. "Due to the nature of the material, if you use 100 per cent carbon fiber it will become too much like a stick. There will be no action, really stiff.

"We can make 100 per cent carbon rods," he said, "but they will not have the right action. If you want good fly action, it is almost impossible (with 100 per cent rods)," he said.

Asai said several manufacturers have developed rods using mixtures of graphite with different materials, such as glass. But he feels Japanese rods are superior to American rods because of different manufacturing processes used by the Japanese.

"We are using much thinner filament (carbon fiber) than American manufacturers," he said, "and get good action. American manufacturers had some breakage due to material which was too hard and shattered easily. So you have to mix something that will have flexibility."

The argument over proper graphite mixtures may never end because most firms producing such rods — whether 100 per cent graphite or only partial graphite — are able to put out workable products.

The angler, in selection of products from local sporting goods shops, will have the final word in the argument.

Ellington Band To Open ECU Season Next Sunday

MERCER ELLINGTON . . . who will be conducting the band of his late father, Duke Ellington, in a concert at Mendenhall Hall on Sunday, September 21.

The Mendenhall Student Center Theater will be the site of a concert by the internationally famous Duke Ellington Orchestra, under the direction of Mercer Ellington, son of the late Duke. The Orchestra is scheduled to perform Sunday, September 21, at 3:00 p.m. Tickets are priced at $4.00 for the Public.

The day after his father's funeral in May, 1974, Mercer Ellington took the orchestra to Bermuda as previously committed to play. It was a hard decision to make, and hard to fulfill, but in doing so Mercer faithfully maintained a tradition established by Duke Ellington during his five triumphant decades as a bandleader.

The band's library contains all the famous compositions and arrangements, and he has steadily reactivated items in it that had become less familiar through neglect in recent years.

He is also able to spring surprises by playing compositions written by his father that were never publicly performed.

The band's personnel includes such musicians as Cootie Williams, Harold Ashby, Money Johnson and Chuck Connors, who had long association with Duke Ellington. Mercer Ellington has appeared as guest conductor at the American Song Festival in Saratoga and at the All-City High School Band Contest in Los Angeles. He is also writing the biography of his famous father.

DeMille's 'Cleopatra' Dates From 1934

Cleopatra is a sexual extravaganza in which DeMille is at his best," writes John Baxter in Hollywood in The Thirties."

The 1934 Paramount film about the eternally fascinating Egyptian woman stars Claudette Colbert, Henry Wilcoxon and Warren William and is being shown Friday September 19, at 9 p.m. over UNC-TV, Channel 25 Greenville and Channel 2, Columbia.

Produced by Adolph Zukor and directed by Cecil B. DeMille, this was an early picture in which costumes played an important role, with Travis Banton designing the lavish clothes worn by men and women.

"Claudette Colbert and a variety of Paramount contractors appear in the briefest of gowns and togas to spell out a version of the Cleopatra story cobbled together from a variety of sources," Baxter notes. "The result has a fine flair and golden surface we are used to seeing in Paramount films, — for which Victor Milner received the year's Camera Oscar. The Drier sets and designs are remarkable, the Royal Barge an incredible fabrication, from it banks of oars each surmounted with a carved ram's head to the pillowed dias on which Cleopatra seduces Mark Anthony (Henry Wilcoxon)... When Anthony succumbs to her wiles, Cleopatra gestures to the slaves and, as veils rise around her bed and singing girls strew them with flower petals, the cadance drummer strikes up the rhythm that sets the oars moving, and the barge moves slowly out to sea."

After the airing of Cleopatra, the 12th and final episode of The Phantom Empire, starring Gene Autry, will be shown.

DEMILLE's "Cleopatra" . . . made by Paramount Pictures in 1934, stars Claudette Colbert and H enry Wilcoxon in the roles of the fabulous Egyptian woman and Mark Antony. The film will be shown over UNC-TV, Channel 25 beginning at 9 a.p.m. Friday.

'Summerset' Show At Mendenhall Gallery

A STANDING BATHROBE . . . without a wearer is the subject of Charles Goforth's painting in the "Summerset" student exhibit now on view at the Student Art Gallery in the Mendenhall Union Building.

If an exhibit of student paintings now on view in the second floor mezzanine art gallery at Mendenhall Student Union Building is a weathervane of trends, articles of clothing and fabrics is an "in" subject for young painters at East Carolina University.

Of about a dozen and a half works on view (all paintings, including one painted college), two are paintings of tee shirts; one a bathroom; one a collection of undergarments; and one a study of a towel fabric.

Since this exhibit represents work accomplished by students during the summer months, it is probably in keeping with the summer weather that tee shirts figure rather prominently. Collectively, the show is called "Summerset" and comprises work done by ten students. Nine of the ten studied with Dr. Emily Farnham this past summer.

Flower and grass studies run a close second to clothing as subject matter in this group which reveals a definite preference for realism. Two of the artists have depicted people in their paintings.

The students exhibiting are Debbie Cofer, David De Berrry, Charles Goforth, Ben Jenkins, Gregory Moll, Mary Ellen Riddle, Mary Lou Strider, Kay Turner, Dana Lehr Webster, and Charles Wkesler.

A word about the Mendenhall gallery. Access is easy, lighting is fairly good, and the area is newly carpeted. Viewers also have the advantage of sofas nearby if they want a brief rest before or after viewing the show.

It's due to be up through this month and the public is invited to come by for a look.

One Week Show

Community Theater Organizational Meeting

Organizational plans for a new Greenville Community Theater will be made on Tuesday at a meeting to be held beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the TV room of the Elm Street Recreation Center.

Stuart Aronson, director of the Theater, is asking all persons interested in any facet of theater production — acting, singing, dancing, directing, technicians, stage hands, etc., to attend the meeting.

If the number attending warrants, the meeting will be moved from the TV room to the downstairs gymnasium. Those attending are asked to use the side entrance to the gym.

Earlier this year, the Arts Council of North Carolina made a grant of $2,500 to support a Greenville Community Theater. The City of Greenville has provided matching funds. The project is under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation Department.

Aronson says that persons 18 and older are to be considered at this time. He notes that at a later date, announcements will be made if a need arises for children or teen-age persons.

Initial plans are for two productions this season; one during the winter months, a second one in the spring.

Reception Today

A reception is being held today at the Greenville Art Center for the opening of an exhibit of work by Billy Stinson and Ron Williams. The reception is from 3 to 5 p.m. and the public is invited to see the show and to meet the artists.

Both artists are on the faculty of the Greenville City Schools. This first show of the 1975-76 season at the Greenville Art Center will remain on view through September.

Old Hotel Reopens

Recently purchased by John "Redbeard" Stanger, the old landmark in this Hyde County coastal village is being rennovated and reopened as Redbeard's Country Inn and Restaurant. Overnight lodging and complete dining facilities are already in full operation.

Plans for the future include complete telephone service in every room, charter fishing and boat rental services, a whirlpool bath, a Country Store, and an outdoor theater.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARGARET CLARK

One of the season's most talked about novels is Ragtime by E. L. Doctorow. Set in America at the beginning of this century, Ragtime is a great billiard game of events, ideas and personages. At the heart of the story is the stultifyingly Victorian model family of a respectable manufacturer of flags, fireworks and patriotic odds and ends whose recovery manufacturer of flags, fireworks and patriotic odds and ends whose recovery of a an abandoned illegitimate black infant leads to a tale of racism, insurrection and injustice in America. This is fleshed out by a succession of wildly imaginative run-ins with (or among) Sigmund Freud, Emma Goldman, Houdini, Henry Ford, J. P. Morgan, Booker Washington, Zaputa and of course - the Archduke Franz Ferdinand. At that time "There were no Negroes . . . There were no immigrants" and that's the theme that pulls this novel together: the vulgarity of the wealthy and their oppression of the lower classes. Rest assured, nevertheless, that this is a very funny novel - nothing quite like it has been written before.

Mary Wallace's Blue Meadow is a romantic bicentennial novel with subtle and significant overtones for our times. In this vivid and engaging tale of the American Revolution there are not battle scenes, no heroic resistances. Instead it is the story of the plight of wealthy farmers of Pennsylvania. It is historic in theme, modern in point of view, with its focus on a forbidden love affair and marriage - a story of people who are concerned with their own daily affairs while the war went on around them. It is essentially the story of young Richard Stafford and how he meets the joys and griefs of life, the emergencies, the losses, the needs of others, and the future.

A psychological suspense thriller that probes the terror of murder and madness is Identity Crisis by Lorraine Latham. Dr. Alexander Kahn, a bachelor with a thriving psychiatric practice, is finally persuaded to take a desperately needed vacation. Thus he sails on a voyage that changes his life. As the luxury liner weighs anchor, Kahn proceeds to the bar where he finds himself in conversation with a beautiful young woman, Annabel Greer. Later tells him a tale of horror and murder that shocks even the psychiatrist. Later she tells him a tale of horror and murder that shocks even the psychiatrist. When he learns that Annabel and her brother are suspects, Kahn must use all his psychiatric learning and knowledge to uncover the truth and solve the haunting mystery of the Greers. Written with sophistication and charm, Identity Crisis will keep you reading on the edge of your couch.

Three Films At Library

Three films are in store for the children of Greenville this week in the Library Series. Dear Kurt, a documentary, dramatizes the actual experience of a 13 year old boy in the All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron. In The Little Sunshade, puppetry and animation are used to tell a tale about the private life of toys; and the third film, The Fisherman and His Wife, is based on Grimm's fairy tale about a poor fisherman catching a magic fish, told in animated form.

Show times are 4 p.m. Tuesday at Carver Library; 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at Sheppard Memorial; and at 4 p.m. Friday at East Branch Library.

Family Reaps Awful Years Of The Parrot's Beak

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

KLONG YAI, Thailand (AP) — Once before the war, Keut Sambo dreamed of being a schoolteacher, of owning a small house for his family and earning enough to buy clothes and playthings for his children. The house was to be built in the quiet Cambodian countryside near where he was born and where generations of his ancestors are buried.

The war came. Its cross-fires leveled his native village. His brother became his nominal enemy and was killed. His parents and friends vanished. Sambo, now a refugee nobody wants to accept, points to the few souvenirs left him after 27 years of life: 17 pieces of shrapnel embedded beneath his skin, forming small black lumps across his body.

But Sambo says that he, his wife and two small children will probably never return. He has applied for entry to the United States and France, and says an American official told him he should get ready to go to the United States because as a former military man he was a "high risk case" and probably would be killed if he went back.

He has heard nothing since to encourage him about his family's future, from the Americans or the French.

And as the American refugee pipeline grows more and more constricted, Sambo's chances of going to the United States lessen. Thailand has made it clear it does not want Indochinese refugees to remain permanently.

"It is true that we lost the war. But even so, we still have confidence that America will help us," he says.

His 23-year-old wife, Pich Naroun, sitting in the dark, steamy hut that is now their home, interjects, "Who knows if anybody will help us?"

Outside, the monsoon rains pound the soggy earth of Klong Yai camp, one of several in Thailand that hold some 7,000 Cambodian exiles among perhaps 40,000 from all of Indochina.

Sambo, a soft-spoken, somewhat shy man, sold the only two valuable items they brought out of Camboda as they fled the Khmer Rough advance in the closing days of the war — his own wristwatch and his wife's necklace. With the $27.50 they received they were able to add to their meager daily diet of rice and salted fish. But the money quickly dried up and now the family lives on the erratic charity of the Thais and of an evangelist group which hands out canned meat and "Jesus loves you" sweatshirts.

Life was very, very different some years ago, Sambo says.

His parents and six brothers and sisters lived together in a wooden house perched on stilts in the village of Sam Yong, surrounded by a cool bamboo grove and within easy stroll of two ponds and a river teeming with fish.

The family was not rich, but the rice paddy around their home and some cattle, oxen, ducks and chickens provided more than enough for good meals and money to buy a few extras at the market.

An accident of geography brought the first agonies of war to Sam Yong. When he was in his late teens, Sambo says, American and South Vietnamese warplanes thundered across the sky to bomb North Vietnamese infiltration routes that criss-cross his native region. Two of his cousins died in the air raids and several homes of friends were destroyed as the planes searched out suspected camps and supply lines in the area near the South Vietnamese border known as the "Parrot's Beak."

North and South Vietnam, the United States and China increased their involvement in the country, the conflicts sharpened and the Vietnam war spilled over into Cambodia.

Sambo recalled sitting in a high school classroom in Phnom Penh on March 18, 1970. Students and teachers enthusiastically relayed news of a coup that had just toppled Prince Norodom Sihanouk and installed a general, Lon Nol, in the seat of power. A patriotic war, backed by the United States, was to be waged to throw the Vietnamese out of the country.

Sambo said he was swept up by patriotism in the first heady days after the coup, before the bloodshed started — and before Cambodians fought Cambodians in a savage civil war fueled by foreign weaponry. Sambo said he was ready then to fight in the war.

A day after the coup, he made his last trip to Sam Yong. He did not know it then, but it would also be the last time he saw his father, brothers and sisters because in the opening months of the war his village fell to the North Vietnamese and Khmer Rouge. The family was irrevocably split.

From his mother, who was allowed to visit him briefly, for the last time, in 1971, and from friends, he heard that Sam Yong had been razed by the South Vietnamese who, with U.S. troops, had invaded Cambodia to root out the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in the Parrot's Beak. It was the operation that President Nixon hoped would shorten the war and help save American lives in Vietnam.

Sambo heard that his 18-year-old brother who, along with many of the village youths, volunteered or had been forced to join the Khmer Rouge guerrillas, had been killed in a clash with government troops. The two of them had been close, spending many afternoons together by the ponds, Sambo said. His brother was about his same height, lean and athletic. He liked to play basketball and soccer and help their father in the fields. He probably would have become a farmer.

Sambo joined the Navy, serving on patrol boats escorting supply ships that ran the gamut of fire on the Mekong River between South Vietnam and Phnom Penh. He earned the equivalent of about $10 a month.

He was at the naval base of Ream in southwestern Cambodian when Phnom Penh fell on April 17, 1975. "When we heard on the radio that the city had surrendered we were ready to celebrate," he says. "We thought there would be peace and that the killing had finally stopped."

The navy commander radioed them from Phnom Penh telling them not to surrender and continue the fight. Other radio reports told of massive evacuations, of Khmer Rouge brutalities upon former government soldiers and officials. Sambo realized the suffering had not ended, that the Khmer Rouge victory would not mean a healing of wartime scars.

Sambo, his wife, two children and several relatives boarded a boat and sailed for Thailand. Others at Ream took their chances in the Philippines, Malaysia, Singapore.

"At first we thought Klong Yai would be a temporary shelter. But then we heard more about what was happening in Cambodia and we knew we could never go back," Sambo's wife says as she swings her baby in a hammock strung out across their family floor space. Her parents and five brothers and sisters are in Cambodia. She does not know what happened to them.

Sambo wanted to be a teacher before the war. In the Navy, he specialized in electrical work. Now, he says he is willing to do any work in the United States to support his family and "not just sit and wait for donations."

"I want to go to the United States, but I dream at night about Cambodia. Sometimes, after I listen to the stories of refugees, dreams come about my family forced to toil in the rice fields, being treated with harshness and cruelty.

"Sometimes I am at home in my native village. I see the old places where I used to play. I see my father and my mother and I approach to speak to them. I am back again."

Detroiters Are Happy

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit gets high marks from the people who should know.

A six-month survey of a cross section of residents of Detroit and its suburbs reveals some surprising findings, including:

By 10 to 1 they are satisfied with themselves.

By 84 per cent to 16 per cent they are "very happy" or "pretty happy."

By more than 6 to 1 they give a positive rating to their police protection.

The study, undertaken by the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research, is the first attempt to survey the quality of life in an urban region.

It showed by margins that often reach 10 to 1 that Detroiters, both black and white, as well as suburban residents expressed satisfaction with their community, their neighborhood, their job, their marriage and family life, their health, their amount of leisure time and how they spend it and their income and standard of living.

Name-Changing Views Sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Public opinion on the pros and cons of a formal proposal to change the name of 20,320-foot Mt. McKinley, Alaska — the highest mountain in North America — to Denali (the Tanana Indian name for "the big one"), is being sought by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names.

Although several proposals to make the name change have been advanced since about the turn of this century, none was approved officially by the Federal government. A recent Joint Resolution passed by the Alaska State Legislature, however, focuses fresh attention on the matter.

Appalachian Hands Pirates Second Loss

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Appalachian State University served notice on the Southern Conference that it was a firm contender for the league title this year, as the Mountaineers demolished East Carolina, 41-25 last night. It was the opener for ASU and the second straight loss of the year for the Bucs.

Overall, it was the third straight loss for the Bucs, who bowed to VMI in their final game last year.

About the only bright spot for the Pirates was the passing of Pete Conaty and the receiving of Terry Gallaher. Gallaher caught a record three touchdown passes, for 82, 59 and 77 yards. His total receptions of 217 yards was also a new ECU record. The old mark was held by Dick Corrada, 169 yards against Southern Illinois in 1970.

The five Pirate touchdowns came too late, however, as Appalachian rolled up a 27-0 lead early in the third period, and led by as much as 41-7 in the final period.

Robbie Price, the talented ASU quarterback scored once, on a 32-yard run, while Emmitt Hamilton picked up two touchdowns, on a two-yard run and a 19-yard pass from Covin Simon. Hamilton would have had another, but he fumbled right at the goal line and end Bill Yeager recovered for the score. Richard Patrick scored on a one-yard run, and Devon Ford caught an 82-yard pass from Price for the other. Gary Davis booted five of six PATs.

Pete Conaty passed for three Pirate touchdowns, the last two of Gallaher's and a four-yarder to Clay Burnett. He hit one PAT kick, but missed on three pass attempts for two-pointers.

ECU hit on 10 passes in 17 attempts for 270 yards.

The only things that stopped Appalachian State in the first half were a fumble, a penalty and a loss of footing. Otherwise, Appalachian moved through the East Carolina defense like a knife in melted butter.

The Mountaineers didn't make a first down on their initial series, but were thrown back by an off-sides penalty on the first play and failed to make it up. Joe Parker then booted the ball 56 yards for his initial effort of the year.

Three plays later, Jimmy Southerland fumbled the ball at mid-field, and James Huffman recovered for ASU on the 49. Price went around the right side for a yard then pushed back to Simon, who raced to the 34. Patrick added two yards, then on third and eight, Price sprinted through the line and cut his way through the secondary for a 32-yard touchdown run. Davis added the PAT for a 7-0 lead after just 4:29.

The Mountaineers got the ball back following a punt at their own 34. From there they drove down to the Pirate six before Price fumbled and Mike Dross recovered for the Bucs.

The Pirates then got off their only series of the half. They moved from the 16 to the ASU 47 before a fumble left them with a fourth and nine situation.

Following the punt the ASU team moved from their own 23, going in for their second score. Five times along the way, the Mounties made good on third down plays. Key plays included a 13-yard halfback pass from Simon to Emmitt Hamilton. They used it again for 11 yards four plays later to put the ball on the Pirate nine. On third down, Hamilton went in from the two, and Davis made it 14-0 with 9:46 left in the half.

After holding the Pirates once more, ASU drove again, this time from their 40. After one first down, Patrick raced for nine yards, then after another play, Hamilton got nine more. Simon picked up 14 to the 15, and Price carried it down to the 11 on second down. Patrick dove over from there. This time Davis' kick hit the upright and bounced back, leaving it at 20-0, the same score as last year's halftime. Just under four minutes were left.

ASU drove again, however, from their own 24, to the Bucs' 40. Price slipped and fell at the ASU 49 to help kill the drive, leaving the Mountaineers a second and 14 that they just failed to convert with seconds left in the half.

Things got no better in the second half, as ASU continued to cut the Pirate defense to shreds. From the Pirate 47, following a punt, it took just nine plays for the next score. Price hit Simon at the 34 for one first down. After another first down at the 24, Simon hit Hamilton for 19 yards and the score. Davis made it 27-0 with 8:30 left.

It took just one play for the Bucs to get back. Terry Gallaher got way behind the ASU defense, and Weaver hit him on stride for an 82-yard bomb. It took just 17 seconds, including the kickoff return. Conaty added the PAT.

The Mounties chose to punt on fourth and inches at the Pirate 49, but when the Bucs were held, Tom Daub tried to run, then passed to Dross at the 14, turning the ball over there. Three plays later, Hamilton went around end from the nine, but fumbled shy of the goal line. End Bill Yeager got the ball as it rolled across the stripe for the next ASU score. Davis' made it 34-7 with 2:33 left in the quarter.

Appalachian got the ball back on its own 18, and failed to make yardage on the first play, but on the opening play of the final period, Price hit Ford over the middle, and ECU's Ernest Madison, the only man with a chance at him, was flattened by the official, allowing Ford to go 82-yards untouched. Davis again kicked and with 14:49 left, it was 41-7.

With the second team in the game, ASU drove from its own 46 down to the two before a fourth down try there fell short.

The Bucs got help of a 15-yard penalty to the 17, and after Conaty hit Strayhorn for 17, and Kenny made seven more on his own, Conaty hit Gallaher for 59 yards and the second Pirate touchdown. A two-point try failed, leaving it at 41-13.

After holding the Apps, the Bucs launched another aerial attack. After Willie Hawkins picked up a first down on the 18, Conaty hit Barry Johnson for five. Then, from the 23, Conaty again hit Gallaher for 77 yards and his third touchdown of the night. Again, a two-point try failed. That out it to 41-19.

The Bucs got it back following a fumble at the ASU 45 on the first play. A pass interference then moved it to the 18. Hawkins drove to the six on a draw, and Raymond Jones added two yards. Conaty hit Burnett from there for the score, but again the PAT pass failed, and it was 41-25 with 4:39 left.

ASU was back in the shadow of the goal when the game ended, as ASU Coach Jim Brakefield put the first unit back in to be sure and keep the lead.

Conaty hit on five passes in seven tries for 166 yards to lose the Pirate offense.

ASU's total offense at 544 yards was a Mountaineer record.

Citadel Beats Presbyterian

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The Citadel scored on its first two possessions, tacked on a fourth quarter touchdown and defeated Presbyterian 21-0 Saturday in a college football game.

The crowd of 21,465 was the second largest homecrowd in the history of The Citadel. It was the season opener for both teams.

Quarterback Gene Dobson tallied the first touchdown on a four-yard run with 9:34 remaining in the first quarter. Senior halfback Mike Bazemore sprinted 64 yards to set up the second touchdown on the following Citadel series, capping the drive off with a two-yard scoring run.

The final touchdown came on a two-yard run by The Citadel's running back Andrew Johnson. Sophomore placekicker Steve Bailey added all three extra points, stretching his string of consecutive extra points to 23 over a two-year periods.

Ohio St. Mauls Michigan St.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Fullback Pete Johnson bulled for two touchdowns and Cornelius Greene fired a 64-yard scoring pass Saturday as third-ranked Ohio State began defense of its Big Ten co-championship with a 21-0 whitewash of Michigan State.

The opening game for both teams had been ballyhooed as a grudge match to demonstrate early advantage in the Big Ten. But the 11th-ranked Spartans, touted as a conference contender, never mounted a serious threat as their offense stuttered with early season mistakes.

For most of the first half, the two teams engaged in a defensive struggle. But with just over a minute to play before intermission, Johnson chugged six yards for his first score.

Ohio State all but put the game away eight minutes into the second half when Greene rolled out to throw from his own 36-yard line. The long toss was almost picked off by MSU's Joe Hunt at the Spartan 25, but he knocked it into the air for Lenny Willis to grab and go the final yards untouched.

MSU tailback Rich Baes fumbled the ball away moments later, but the Buckeyes' Archie Griffin fumbled it right back deep in Spartan territory. However, a short MSU punt gave OSU the ball at the Spartan 30.

Greene scrambled to the 18 and, after two Griffin plunges, Johnson smashed nine yards up the middle for the final OSU score.

For Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes it was the first victory at Spartan Stadium since 1970.

Tennessee Whallops Maryland, 26-8

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Fleet Stanley Morgan scored three touchdowns, two on runs of 50 and 70 yards, Saturday night as Tennessee romped over 14th ranked Maryland 26-8 in its season opener.

Morgan, who led the Southeastern Conference in scoring last year with 14 touchdowns, scampered 50 yards for his first six-pointer on the last play of the first quarter.

The third came on a one-yard plunge after quarterback Randy Wallace had hit tight end Tommy West with a 21-yard pass to the Terrapin 2.

Maryland scored its touchdown with 6:14 left in the fourth quarter on a three-yard pass into the end zone by quarterback Larry Dick to split end Tim Hoover.

The Terrapins also got a safety in the first quarter when Joe Campbell tackled the Vols' Craig Colquit in the end zone.

Goodwin Scores Four Times As Navy Wins

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Gerry Goodwin scored four touchdowns, equalling a modern day Academy record, as Navy exploded for 21 third-quarter points en route to a 42-14 victory over the University of Virginia in the season football opener for both teams.

Goodwin tallied on runs of 19,1, 2 and 5 yards to match the four touchdown effort of Middie great Joe Belino against Virginia in 1960.

The Flint, Mich., native triggered the third-period outburst, smashing over right guard from the one to cap a 76-yard drive and send Navy ahead for good 21-14. His two-yard burst through the middle ended a 78-yard cruise that made it 28-14.

Goodwin's other six-pointers came in the second and fourth periods as he amassed 166 yards on 24 carries. Navy riddled the Cavalier defense for 472 yards, all but 70 of them on the ground.

Overshadowed by Goodwin's stellar showing were performances by junior fullback Bob Jackson and senior tailback Ed Gilmore. Jackson, who had 62 yards on 16 carries, accounted for the final touchdown in the third quarter uprising, and Gilmore contributed 93 yards to the Middie running game as he carried 12 times.

Virginia did all its scoring in the second period as the teams traded quick touchdowns. Scoring for the Cavaliers were David Sloan, on a 22-yard run, and flanker Tommy Fadden, on a 10-yard pass from quarterback Scott Gardner.

Virginia, which opened its 1974 season with a 35-28 loss to Navy, finished with a total offense of 318 yards, two-thirds of which came on the passing of Gardner. Gardner put the ball in the air 38 times, completing 18 for 203 yards.

A partisan crowd of 29,740, largest ever to witness a Virginia season opener, sat stunned after Navy scored twice within eight seconds at the outset of the second quarter.

Wake Holds Off State For Upset Victory

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Quarterback Jerry McManus ran for one touchdown and passed to Bill Millner for two others to lead unrated Wake Forest to a 30-22 upset Atlantic Coast Conference victory over 15th-ranked North Carolina State Saturday night.

Bob Hely kick a 32-yard field goal with about five minutes gone in the fourth quarter to ice the victory for the Demon Deacons. The score was set up when Randy Woodle recovered Ralph Stringer's fumble of a punt return on the State 19.

Wake Forest thwarted State's comeback hopes a few plays later when Randy Carroll recovered Buster Ray's fumble on the State 49. Bill Armstrong's tackle jarred the ball loose.

The the Deacons added insult to injury as McManus passed 29 yards to Millner to cap a drive that covered 49 yards in six plays.

State tried to come back again as Dave Buckey passed six yards to Richard Carter for a touchdown and then passed to Johnny Evans for a two-point conversion. But the comeback attempt fell short.

Wake Forest's victory was the first loss in Carter Stadium for Coach Lou Holtz of State and ended a 16-game Carter Stadium winning streak for the Wolfpack.

Birdies Carry Weiskopf Into World Open Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — On-rushing Tom Weiskopf birdied three of his last four holes for a 68 and swept into the lead after Saturday's third round of the $200,000 World Open Golf Tournament.

Weiskopf, seeking a third victory of the season, put together a three-round total of 206, seven under par on the 7,007 yards of sand hills and pine woods that make up the historic No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Weiskopf, who has compared his play this season with his banner year of 1973, started the third round two strokes back but quick-stepped into the lead with his three-under-par effort that matched the best round of the cool, cloudy day.

"I really played well, very well," said Weiskopf, who added that he may be playing as well as he did two seasons ago when he won seven titles in four countries.

Pat Fitzsimons, the gritty little guy who led at the end of the second round, had to work hard for a round of par 71 and was one shot back at 207.

Quiet Ed Sneed managed a 70 that put him alone in third and only two strokes back at 208.

Veteran Billy Casper shot a 68 that lifted him into a tie for fourth at 210 with Larry Nelson and Howard Twitty. Nelson had a 69, Twitty 73.

Jack Nicklaus remained in contention with a 70—211, five strokes back. He was tied with John Mahaffey and Rod Funseth. Mahaffey also shot 70, Funseth 74.

Johnny Miller blew to a 76 and lost any hope of making a successful defense of the title he won in a dramatic playoff last year. He was far back in the field at 220. Lee Trevino shot 74 for 216. Arnold Palmer failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Weiskopf, who beat Nicklaus in a playoff for the Canadian national title just a couple of months ago, had only one bogey in his superlative effort over the course that ranks among the world's best. That came on the 13th where he hit his drive unplayable in the deep grass.

He'd birdied the third with a seven iron to four feet, saved par on three holes then dropped back to even for the day with the poor tee shot on the 13th, one of only three fairways he missed all day.

He was locked in a three-man fight with the scrambling Fitzsimons and the steady, unspectacular Sneed until he began his drive for the top on the 15th hole.

Weiskopf ran in a 25-foot putt for a duece there, reached the par-five 16th with a two-iron second shot then two-putted from some 50 feet and burst in front alone on the 17th. He scored another duece there with a 20 footer.

Blocked Punt TD Beats VMI, 10-9

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Delaware's Blue Hens turned their own blocked field goal attempt into a touchdown Saturday, then thwarted Virginia Military's two-point conversion attempt with 40 seconds left and escaped with a 10-9 football victory in the season opener for both teams.

The Blue Hens' Hank Kline, who had kicked a 34-yard field goal in the second period, tried from the 18 with 10:34 left in the game. VMI's Johnny Garnett blocked the attempt, but Delaware halfback Larry Wagner picked up the ball at the 23 and threw a touchdown pass to tight end Cliff Ainsworth.

Richmond Drops Opener, 19-6

CINCINNATI (AP) — Defensive back John Viltro scooped up a teammate's fumble and ran 75 yards with a punt return as Cincinnati's veteran defense smothered Richmond 19-6 Saturday in a nonconference college football game.

Viltro also recovered a second-quarter fumble, setting up a Cincinnati field goal and stopped a Richmond drive with an interception.

Freshman running back Mike Smith ignited Cincinnati's running attack in the third quarter and finished the game as the leading rusher with 83 yards. He scored an eight-yard touchdown three minutes into the third quarter.

Viltro, a 175 pound senior from Wintersville, Ohio, grabbed Wentford Gaines' fumble late in the third quarter and sped down the sidelines untouched.

Richmond avoided a shutout by scoring a touchdown in the final minutes when Bob Allen crashed over from the one after a 30-yard pass play from quarterback Larry Shaw to Buster Jackson.

Richmond, 0-1, threatened twice in the first half, marching inside Cincinnati's 25-yard line twice. But the Spiders were thrown back both times by a bristling Bearcat defense keyed by middle linebacker Clarence Sanders, who was in on 16 tackles.

Smith, a 180-pounder from Marion, Ind., carried only once in the first half, ripping off 20 yards, before reappearing to trigger the Bearcats' offense. He gained 45 of his total in the third quarter. Smith averaged nine yards per carry.

Tom Liggins rolled up 49 yards in 10 rushes for the Bearcats.

Fumbles stymied both clubs throughout the game. Cincinnati lost possession on two of its five bobbles. Richmond yielded the ball on two of its four fumbles.

Cincinnati held a slim 308-299 edge in total yards, but the Spiders spent most of the day at midfield, frustrated by the Bearcats' senior-studded defense.

Interception Ices Tulane's Victory

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Wyatt Washington scored on a 76-yard return of an intercepted pass to assure independent Tulane a 17-13 victory over Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference Saturday.

The senior cornerback's second period touchdown put Tulane in the driver's seat for the rest of the afternoon. Washington had set the stage for Tulane's initial touchdown earlier in the period with an interception, and cut off a Clemson threat with a third theft later in the game.

The teams opening the scoring with an exchange of field goals. The first was a 23-yarder by Clemson's Willie Jordan. David Walters responded with a 38-yarder for Tulane as the second period opened. Jordan added another three-pointer from 38 yards out in the final quarter.

Washington's first interception put Clemson in the hole. After a punt exchange, Tulane drove 61 yards to score on a three-yard plunge by Gary Ruddick.

The drive featured a 15-yard run by Steve Treuting and passes by Buddy Gilbert for 24 yards to Jamie Garza and seven to Howard McNeill.

Clemson, hampered by fumbles and pass interceptions, finally got a touchdown on Steve Fuller's pass to Craig Brantley that covered 78 yards late in the third period.

Clemson was on the Tulane 16 as the game ended before 45,100 fans in Death Valley.

The game started with Clemson in charge. Tulane completed pass but the receiver fumbled it and Clemson recovered at the Green Wave nine. When Clemson failed to gain, Jordan came in for his first field goal.

On the ensuing kickoff, Tulane again found itself deep in its territory and punted to midfield. Ken Callicutt picked up 18 and quarterback Mike O'Cain reeled off 16 yards on another run. But a fumble covered by Tulane at the five ended the threat.

Don Lemon was the running workhorse for Tulane as it moved the ball into position for Walker's field goal that came in the opening seconds of the second quarter.

Tulane also dominated the third period as Clemson twice fumbled away chances.

Rose Adds Another Trophy To Collection

NEW BERN—In Rose High's first hunting trip of the season the Rampants bagged a Cougar. Friday night they ventured forth and returned with a Bear.

The Rampants have recorded two big trophies in two outings, Friday night's being a 28-0 blanking of the New Bern Bears. But the Rampants did not get out of that fight unscathed. Running back William Joyner reinjured a knee scoring one of the Rampant TD's and did not play after the second period.

The Rampants picked up a respectable 153 yards rushing but completed only three passes for 17 yards. Two of those were Henry Travathan-Mark Conway combinations for touchdowns. The other completion was the result of someone being in the right place.

Besides the TD passed, Trevathan scored one himself and Joyner scored once from ten yards out. The Rampants were led by Robert Williams who picked up 68 yards on 11 carries.

At times the Rampant defense looked like a open flood gate but at other times, the defense came through with the big play to kill the Bears' momentum.

The first Rampant score was set up by an interception at the New Bern 38. Trevathan threw to Conway for the tally. In the second quarter, Joyner capped a 47 yard drive with a TD but a late tackle cost Joyner a knee and the Rampants another running back. Trevathan made it 20-0 diving in after a 61 yard punt return by Jay Chenier gave Rose the ball on the Bear seven. Trevathan hit Conway on the second play of the fourth period for the final score. Wright Hooks was 4-4 from the extra point tee, including one that had been moved back on a penalty.

This Friday night, Rose hosts Kinston while New Bern will meet Southern Wayne.

Rose took the opening kickoff and drove to the Bear 47 but an interception killed the drive. But only momentarily. On the next play, Rampant Rocky Butler picked off a flair pass getting the ball back.

Joyner carried seven times moving the Rampants to the Bear nine and on third down, Conway made a falling catch for the touchdown.

The Rampants put together another drive in the second quarter getting the ball on a punt. Four plays moved Rose to the New Bern 36. Trevathan kept for 14 yards and a penalty gave the Rampants a first down just shy of the ten. Joyner took a pitch out in for the score.

Rose forced another New Bern punt on the first series in the second half. Chenier took the boot on his 32, found a hole and raced 61 yards before he was caught from behind on the seven.

From there, Williams picked up two and Mike Brown moved the ball to the one inch line. Trevathan dove in from there.

Late in the third period, the Rampants forced another punt, this time getting the ball on the Bear 46. Nine plays later the Rampants had added another score on a Trevathan to Conway pass of 15 yards.

The Rampants were marching downfield when time ended. Rose began the drive on its 13 and got to the New Bern 23.

There were only three fumbles—two by the Bears, one by Rose but none were lost.

W. Va. Smashes Temple, 50-7

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Artie Owens romped for a pair of touchdowns and seven other Mountaineers joined in the scoring as West Virginia opened its football seaon by routing Temple 50-7 Saturday.

After building a 14-0 halftime lead, West Virginia explodee for three touchdowns in a third quarter that saw two pass interceptions returned for scores.

They went 55 yards in three plays on their second posession. The score came on a 47-yard run by Owens, who wrapped up the day with 127 yards in 11 carries.

Auburn Upset By Memphis St.

AUBURN, Ala. (AP)—Unheralded Memphis State, led by quarterback Kippy Brown, ran up a quick 24-0 lead over 7th-ranked Auburn Saturday then fought off a fierce comeback attempt to pull off a dramatic 31-20 college football upset.

Brown, a 5-foot-10, 180-pounder from Sweetwater, Tenn., fired two touchdown passes and picked up a total of 103 yards in the air as Memphis State cashed in on repeated Auburn fumbles and miscues.

Penn St. 34, Stanford 14

STATE COLLEGE, PA. (AP)—Freshman Tom Donovan ran 61 yards for a touchdown, and Rich Mauti twice scored on one-yard plunges as 10th-ranked Penn State drubbed Stanford 34-14 Saturday before 61,325 persons, the largest crowd ever to see a college football game here.

The 2-0 Nittany Lions took a 7-0 lead in the first period on a 78-yard drive climaxed by Duane Taylor's six-yard scoring run. Chris Bahr, who later booted field goals of 39 and 33 yards, kicked the first of his four conversions.

Oklahoma Extends String

NORMAN, Okla. (AP — Split end Tinker Owens speared a 43-yard pass for one touchdown and recovered a teammate's fumble in the end zone for another as No. 1-ranked Oklahoma buried Oregon 62-7 Saturday, extending college football's current longest unbeaten streak to 30 games.

Miami Runs Up String

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Rob Carpenter scored twice to help Miami of Ohio extend its college football unbeaten streak to 24 with a 50-0 rout of Marshall University Saturday.

The junior tailback gained 109 of the Redskins' 244 yards on the ground in the first half when Miami piled up 26 points.

Colorado 34, California 27

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Colorado quarterback David Williams and fullback Terry Kunz, operating behind college football's biggest offensive line, wore down California in the second half and the Buffaloes posted a 34-27 victory Saturday in a wild season opener.

Williams passed for one score and ran for 114 yards, including a 12-yard scoring jaunt that gave the Buffs their final victory margin late in the third quarter.

Orangemen 24, Villanova 17

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Donoghue passed for 214 yards and two touchdowns Saturday, leading Syracuse to a 24-17 come-from-behind victory over Villanova in the Orangemen's season opener.

Trailing 17-14 midway in the fourth period, linebacker Ray Preston recovered Mike Lombardi's fumble at the Syracuse 37. Donoghue hit Don Magee with a 22-yard scoring pass four plays later. Dave Jacobs' extra point put the Orangemen on top for good 21-17.

Northwestern In Upset

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — Senior tailback Greg Boykin, back in action after a knee injury kept him sidelined last year, scored three touchdowns Saturday in a 31-25 Big Ten upset by Northwestern over Purdue.

Boykin, flashing the power running he showed in his first two seasons with the Wildcats, got 122 yards in 25 carries for a career high and scored on runs on 21, 1, and seven yards.

Illinois 27, Iowa 12

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Illinois capitalized on the running of tailbacks Lonnie Perrin and Chubby Phillips for a convincing 27-12 Big Ten Conference football victory over Iowa Saturday.

The Illini's power-I offense overwhelmed the Hawkeye defense, racking up a total 220 yards rushing and 47 passing.

Thomas Saves Texas Victory

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Texas A&M All-American cornerback Pat Thomas batted down an almost certain desperation Mississippi touchdown pass with less than two minutes to play Saturday to save a 7-0 victory for the hard-pressed eighth-ranked Aggies over the scrappy Rebels.

Nebraska Wins On Luck

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Quarterback Terry Luck tossed a five-yard scoring pass to Bobby Thomas and Mike Coyle kicked a 37-yard field goal to lead sixth-ranked Nebraska to a 10-7 intersectional college football victory over stubborn Louisiana State Saturday in the opening game for both teams.

Both teams had trouble sustaining drives as the defensive units managed key plays and the offensive squads seemed sluggish.

Oklahoma St. 34, Wichita St. 0

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State, led by the running of Terry Miller and Robert Turner, rode to an impressive 34-0 season-opening football victory over Wichita State Saturday afternoon.

The Cowboys have abandoned their exclusive use of the wishbone this year, inserting the slot-I for a better passing attack. But they relied almost totally on their running game Saturday, sending Miller wide on pitchouts and Turner up the middle.

Catawba 17, Glassboro 14

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP)—Pat Witheril passed 23 yards to Al Simmons for a third period touchdown and ran over from the one with 9:37 left in the last quarter to lead Catawba to a 17-14 victory over Glassboro State Saturday in the football opener for both teams.

The visitors from New Jersey led 14-3 before Witheril sparked the Indians' comeback. He completed 10 of 18 passes for 120 yards and Kim Smith added 80 yards in 18 rushes.

Glassboro scored on Mike Cawley's 25-yard second period pass to John Canderan and a one-yard plunge in the third period by Jim Abbatemarco.

Fumbles Lead To Win

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Defensive end Mark Husfloen recovered his second fumble of the game with 7:28 remaining Saturday and Washington State turned it into a one-yard touchdown run by Vern Chamberlain, giving the Cougars a come-from-behind 18-14 victory over Kansas.

Army Opens On Big Win

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Second-string quarterback Leamon Hall highlighted a near-perfect afternoon by completing all five passes during two second-period touchdown drives, including a 12-yard scoring toss to Jeff Jancek, as Army opened its football season by walloping Holy Cross 44-7 Saturday.

Hall, a 6-foot-5 sophomore from Apopka, Fla., completed his first eight passes and finished with 10 of 12 for 107 yards, including a two-yard, fourth-down touchdown flip to Greg King with 10 minutes left as Army rolled up its highest score in 65 games since a 58-25 rout of Boston College in 1968.

Cougars Slip Past Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — End Mark Husfloen recovered two late fumbles, setting up a field goal and a touchdown that lifted Washington State to an 18-14 intersectional football victory Saturday over Kansas.

Kentucky 27, VPI 8

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sonny Collins rambled for 120 yards and the Kentucky Wildcats took advantage of Virginia Tech errors Saturday for an easy 27-8 college football victory over the Gobblers.

Only one of Kentucky's four touchdowns came on a sustained drive, when the Wildcats moved 86 yards in 14 plays with Steve Campassi carrying the final five yards with 5:52 left in the third period.

Tech erred worse at the start of the third quarter when a pitchout went wild.

Patriots Strike Despite Threats

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots, ignoring a threat of suspension for the entire team, voted Saturday to strike and to refuse to play Sunday's National Football League exhibition game against the New York Jets.

Player representative Randy Vataha said the team was fully aware of the league's threat to suspend the players and said the Patriots would be watching other clubs for support in the form of joining their strike.

The St. Louis Cardinals were reported to be voting on a strike later Saturday.

The league, facing the start of the regular season next week, retaliated by telling the Patriots that if they carry through on their strike plans they will not be paid and will be suspended until a labor peace is reached.

Vataha said the Patriots wanted to see progress made toward obtaining a labor contract, something the league and the players' union haven't had for more than 14 months.

Bando, Tenace Homer In A's Win

BLOOMINTON, Minn. (AP) — Two solo home runs by Sal Bando and a three-run shot by Gene Tenace powered the Oakland A's to an 8-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

The victory reduced Oakland's "magic" number to nine for clinching its fourth straight American League West pennant.

Bando's second blast led off a three-run Oakland sixth inning, which broke open what had been a pitching duel between winner Ken Holtzman, 17-12, and loser Dave Goltz, 13-13.

Tenace unloaded his 25th homer in a four-run seventh off reliever Vic Albury. Manager Alvin Dark again turned to his bullpen early, summoning Rollie Fingers who earned his 21st save.

Holtzman, who had held the Twins to an infield single by Rod Carew for five innings, ran into trouble in the sixth when the Twins scored twice to make it 4-3. Fingers got the final out and went the rest of the way.

Chicago Hands Phils Another Loss

CHICAGO (AP) — Ray Burris pitched a five-hitter Saturday, leading the Chicago Cubs a 4-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Cubs gave Burris, 14-10, a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning when Jerry Morales singled, moved to third on Jose Cardenal's single and scored on Andy Thornton's single off loser Tom Underwood, 14-11.

Burris held the Phillies to one hit through six innings, but the Phillies tied the score 1-1 in the seventh.

Chicago took a 3-1 lead in the seventh when Thornton walked, moved to third on George Mitterwald's single and Greg Luzinski's error in left field and scored on Dave Rosello's base hit. Don Kessinger singled in the second run of the inning to give Burris more working room.

Giants Break String, Win 9-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Gary Thomasson homered and doubled in a seven-run, fifth inning and the San Francisco Giants snapped an eight-game losing streak with a 9-2 rout of the Cincinnati Reds Saturday.

Right-hander Jim Barr, 12-12, picked up his first victory since Aug. 14 and Willie Montanez knocked in three runs with a single in the first, a sacrifice fly in the third and a bases-loaded walk in the fifth.

The Giants sent 12 batters to the plate in the fifth off loser Don Gullett, 13-4, and relievers Clay Kirby and Pedro Borbon. Thomasson led off with his homer and capped the rally with a run-scoring double.

Cards May Still Have A Chance

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Are the Redbirds dead birds?

In other words, do the St. Louis Cardinals have a chance to catch the high-flying Pittsburgh Pirates?

"We've got a chance," says positive-thinking Mike Tyson. "If we can just get within four games of Pittsburgh by the time we start a series with the Pirates, we've got a chance."

The Cardinals, who face the Pirates in a three-game series at the end of the season in St. Louis, kept their fading hopes alive Friday night with a 5-1 victory over the New York Mets.

It kept the third-place Cardinals 7½ games in back of the Pirates in the National League East. The Pirates whipped Montreal 6-3 to increase their lead to 5½ games over second-place Philadelphia.

In the other National League games Friday night, the San Diego Padres stopped the Houston Astros 1-0; the Atlanta Braves turned back the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 and the Cincinnati Reds defeated the San Francisco Giants 6-3.

Luis Melendez singled twice and scored two runs and Tyson cracked a two-run double, leading St. Louis past New York. All St. Louis runs came during two-out rallies as the Cardinals snapped a four-game losing streak behind Lynn McGlothen, 15-11, who scattered seven hits. One of them was by Mike Vail, New York's sensational rookie who hit in his 20th straight game, a National League record for this season.

Pirates 6, Expos 3

Dave Parker hit a three-run homer and Bob Moose pitched 7 1-3 innings of shutout relief to rally Pittsburgh over Montreal.

It was the first major league victory since April 14, 1974, for Moose, who entered the game in the second inning after Montreal had taken a 3-1 lead off John Candelaria.

Padres 1, Astros 0

A ninth-inning sacrifice fly by Tito Fuentes gave San Diego its victory over Houston. Bobby Tolan led off the ninth with a single, moved to second on a balk and advanced to third on a sacrifice before scoring on Fuentes' fly ball.

The victory went to Dave Tomlin, 3-2, who recorded just one out after Dan Spillner loaded the bases in the top of the ninth after pitching shutout ball for 8 2-3 innings.

Braves 2, Dodgers 1

Dusty Baker slugged his 17th home run of the season and rapped a run-scoring single to back the four-hit pitching of Phil Niekro and lead Atlanta past Los Angeles.

Baker's homer staked the Braves to a 1-0 lead in the second inning. They made it 2-0 with an unearned run in the third, the result of an error by Dodgers' first baseman Steve Garvey and Baker's RBI single. Niekro, 15-12, lost his shutout in the seventh on Dave Lopes' sacrifice fly.

Reds 6, Giants 3

Pete Rose singled and scored on an error in the first inning and belted a run-scoring single in the second, helping Cincinnati beat San Francisco. Lefthander Fred Norman, 10-4, posted the victory over Giants rookie John Montefusco, 13-9. Montefusco struck out 12 Reds for a season total of 203, most by a rookie since Gary Nolan's 206 for Cincinnati in 1967.

Chargers, Ahoskie Battle To 0-0 Tie

AHOSKIE—Ayden-Grifton and Ahoskie sloshed through the rain and the mud to a 0-0 deadlock Friday night in a non-conference football game.

By DAN BERGER
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tailback Ricky Bell smashed the Southern Cal single game rushing record Friday night, totaling 256 yards and scoring four touchdowns in leading the Trojans to a 35-7 victory over Duke in the college football season opener for both teams.

The explosive Bell, a 215-pound junior converted from fullback, had 141 yards by halftime and both Southern Cal scores as the Trojans assumed a 13-0 lead. Bell scored on runs of eight and six yards.

Bell added two touchdowns in the second half as he surpassed the single game record of 251 yards set back in 1956 by C.R. Roberts in a 44-20 victory over Texas, four years before John McKay became head coach at the school.

The 6-foot-2 Bell, who was a linebacker as a freshman and a fullback behind Dave Farmer last year, ignited the Trojans immediately after halftime.

He gained three yards on a sweep to start the series, Farmer added 20 up the middle and then Bell tacked on 21 more after taking a pitch from quarterback Vince Evans.

Five plays later Bell capped the 61-yard drive with a one-yard smash and Glenn Walker's extra point kick made the score 20-0.

The Blue Devils were befuddled by USC's young but quick defense and midway through the first quarter replaced starting quarterback Hal Spears with Bob Corbett, who moved the club.

Corbett's pitchout to tailback Art Gore late in the third quarter led to Gore's six-yard touchdown run and Duke's only tally.

Bell had 170 yards after three quarters and with the Trojans leading just 20-7 he went back into the game and picked up 51 more yards, the last one coming on a dive at the goal line for his fourth touchdown.

Nearing the record Bell returned to the lineup for one series after Mosi Tatupu had boosted the Trojans lead to 35-7 with a 16-yard run.

He gained 13 yards on a sweep, 10 more up the middle, six more off left tackle and six more up the middle and left the to a standing ovation of the 56,727 fans in Memorial Coliseum.

Nearly six minutes later Tatupu ran interference as Bell scored again and the third score came with just 3:45 gone in the third period as fullback Farmer wiped out a Duke defender.

On Duke's next offensive series Grupp punted 31 yards to Danny Reece who brought the ball back 21 yards and the Trojans had the ball at the Blue Devil 24. Three successive tackles by Lewis King plus a pair of penalties pushed the Trojans back to the 41 and Walker punted with the ball going out at the Duke 10.

Using a slot man in motion, Corbett connected on an 18-yard pass with Larry Upshaw for a first down and then two Southern Cal interference penalties brought the ball to the Trojan 42.

It was then that Bell took over. He carried on five of 10 Southern Cal plays as USC traveled 87 yards capped by Bell's one yard dive.

Evans wound up with just two completions in 10 attempts for 41 yards but Southern Cal got 434 of its 481 total yards on the ground.

Duke got 107 yards passing from Corbett and 307 total yards, but USC won the battle of the first downs 27-15.

Six teams have moved up to major college status in football this season. They are Arkansas State, Ball State, Central Michigan, Louisiana Tech, McNeese State and Northeast Louisiana.

Nebraska has won its last six bowl football games.

Sneva Surprises Foyt, Johncock

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Surprising Tom Sneva ran A.J. Foyt and Gordon Johncock into the ground and won his first Indianapolis car race Saturday in a 150-mile event at Michigan International Speedway.

Unser, credited with third place, pinwheeled into the outside retaining wall then skidded into the infield. He suffered minor injuries to his right foot.

Fourth place went to Jimmy Caruthers, followed by Roger McCluskey.

Sneva, who returned to racing three months ago after suffering burns in a spectacular crash at Indianapolis, averaged a record 176.16 miles per hour in his McLaren for the victory.

He kept the leaders in sight through the first 140 miles then burst into the lead. Two laps later, Foyt and Johncock who set the pace most of the way, ran out of fuel.

Johnny Parsons brought out the only caution period during the race when he lost control on the 49th lap and grazed the fourth turn wall. He was uninjured.

Johncock caught Foyt, who had won the pole position with an eye-popping 201.117 m.p.h., on the start of the 75-lap race but Foyt surged ahead on the third lap. The two old rivals traded the lead most of the way and Sneva did not gain control until his burst five laps from the finish.

The Indianapolis-type car race was the first half of a $100,000 twin bill called the Michigan Grand Prix. The other half of the program was a 100-lap event, the International Race of Champions.

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — The Canadian challenger Marauder defeated Golden Dazy, the American entry, by five minutes and 42 seconds in the 188-mile Canada's Cup yacht race Friday.

Marauder's victory on Lake Huron forces at least one more race in the series on lakes St. Clair and Huron.

The victory, worth two points, pulled Marauder within one point of Golden Dazy, 3-2. Four points are needed to wrap up the series.

Officials said two more runs are scheduled for Sunday and Monday on Lake St. Clair.

Vikings Get Win On Big Safety

HOLLYWOOD—D.H. Conley tackled West Carteret's punter in the end zone in the fourth period Friday night to record a safety and an 8-6 win over the Mariners in rain-drenched contest.

"I couldn't even see the end zone," said Conley coach Chuck Dunn. "I couldn't see the numbers," it rained so hard.

The Vikings had taken a 6-0 lead in the second quarter as Curtis Clemons picked up 12 of his 140 yards scoring Conley's first TD.

The Mariners came back in the third period to tie the game, 6-6 as Pettitas fell on a fumble in the end zone. The play came on the first play after Conley had held on downs at the Viking six-inch line.

The Conley defense has yet to be scored on in two games. Besides Clemons's 140 yards, Nuggie Worthington picked up 65 in nine carries.

Coles Gives Evert Tough Court Battle

By CLINT SWIFT
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — "I just kept thinking she couldn't keep it up," Chris Evert said Friday.

Indeed, Glynnis Coles couldn't. But the Britain representative gave the U.S. Open champion a fight and provided the best show of the night for fans watching the 47th Wightman Cup tennis competition.

"She was a lot tougher than I thought. We had some great rallies," said Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale. Fla.

The most impressive rally was Miss Coles' come-from-behind effort to tie their first set at 4-4, when it appeared she might follow her team captain Virginia Wade's example.

Veteran British tennis titlist Miss Wade had dispatched Mona Schallau of Iowa City, Iowa, 6-2, 6-1, to give the visitors a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series for British-U.S. women's tennis supremacy.

Miss Evert triumphed, 6-4, 6-1, to leave the event a 1-1 draw after the first two matches.

Janet Newberry of St. Petersburg, Fla., was to carry the brunt of U.S. hopes on the second day of the competition. She was to face 19-year-old Sue Barker in singles, then join Julie Anthony, a University of California graduate student, in doubles against Miss Wade and Ann Haydon Jones.

"It's always nice to get off to a good start," said Miss Wade, who is playing in her 11th Wightman meeting. She said the British had conceded Miss Evert's singles victory but that the rest of the singles would be close and the doubles were very much in doubt.

Roanoke Is Upset By Tigers, 17-0

WILLIAMSTON—After two big wins, the Roanoke Redskins were knocked off the warpath by the Williamston Tigers Friday night as Williamston upset Roanoke, 17-0.

Roanoke had rushed for over 500 yards in its first two games but were able to get just 78 Friday night. Williamston picked up 134 rushing and 89 passing.

The Tiger defense, which had been a question mark stopped the Redskins on their only threat when Mike Koesy intercepted a pass at the Tiger six.

Deno Lloyd had two TD's for the Tigers the first coming in the first quarter. Williamston marched 77 yards in the drive with Lloyd going in from the three with 5:53 left in the period.

A fumble recovery led to Lloyd's second score, a 12-yard run in the second quarter. Lloyd ran in the conversion with 5:38 left in the half.

The final Williamston tally came on a 27 yard field goal by Gardner in the third period.

Don't Count The Birds Out Yet

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Baltimore Orioles won't go down without ruffling a few feathers.

All but counted out when they dropped two games to the first-place Boston Red Sox in Baltimore last week and fell eight games off the pace in the American League East, feisty Manager Earl Weaver has his Orioles on the wing again.

The Orioles have taken to the road and won seven of nine to soar right back into the thick of things.

"We've proven we're not quitting," declared Weaver after his club beat the Detroit Tigers 6-4 in 11 innings Friday night to pull within 4½ games of the Red Sox.

"We'll fight," vowed Weaver. "We'll argue with umpires. It's going right down to the wire. We're not quitting no matter what happens."

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago beat Texas 5-2, Kansas City swept two from California 10-2 and 7-2 and Oakland won the opener of its doubleheader with Minnesota 11-4 before losing 7-6. Cleveland at New York and Milwaukee at Boston were rained out.

When it comes to arguing with umpires, Weaver talks from experience. The Baltimore skipper was not around to see the conclusion of his team's latest victory, having been ejected by home plate umpire Joe Brinkman for arguing a strike call in the 10th inning.

Ellie Hendricks' three-run homer capped a four-run second inning that staked Mike Torrez to an early lead, but the Tigers tied the score on two-run homers by Tom Veryzer in the fifth inning and Ben Oglivie in the eighth.

Then a trio of pinch-hitters won it in the 11th. Al Bumbry drew a leadoff walk, moved to third on Tony Muser's hit-and-run single and scored on ex-Tiger Jim Northrup's double. Ken Singleton added a sacrifice fly for the final run.

Torrez, 18-8, got the victory, allowing eight hits before giving way to Dyar Miller, who got the final three outs. Joe Coleman, 9-17, took the loss, although he retired 25 of 26 batters in one stretch, including 18 in a row.

A's 11-6, Twins 4-7

The A's took advantage of five Minnesota errors in the opener to stretch their winning streak to seven games. But the Twins took the nightcap by scoring six runs in the sixth inning, Dave McKay and Jerry Terrell driving home two runs apiece.

Rod Carew, the Twins' allstar second baseman, played the entire first game and part of the second game at first base. It was his first appearance there since 1970, and he made one error in 15 chances. Afterwards he said simply, "I felt uncomfortable."

Royals 10-7, Angels 2-2

Consecutive singles by Jim Wohlford, Cookie Rojas, George Brett, John Mayberry and Al Cowens began the first inning of the first game and set the tone of the evening for the Royals, who now trail first-place Oakland by seven games in the AL West. John Mayberry's two-run double keyed a five-run third inning in the second game.

White Sox 5, Rangers 2

Jorge Orta drove in four runs with a home run and a single and Deron Johnson singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning for the White Sox. Rich Gossage recorded his 25th save of the year.

JAMESVILLE—Bill Jefferson scored three times in leading the Chocowinity Indians to a 30-0 win over Jamesville, Friday night, in a game shortened by lightening.

Chocowinity jumped off to a 16-0 first quarter lead. Jefferson got the first touchdown scoring on a one-yard run. Bill Younce added a second as he pounced on a fumble in the Bullet end zone for a score. In the second quarter, Jefferson scored again on a 14 yard sprint but the extra-point try failed.

In the final period, Jefferson went in on an 18-yard run and shortly thereafter, the game was called as a storm broke and the lights went off.

East Carolina University's cross-country team opens the 1975 season tomorrow as they entertain Virginia Military Institute—but the opening meet may not be what Coach Bill Carson expected.

"VMI had a good recruiting year," Carson said, "but I thought we'd be able to keep up with them. But right now, I'd say there was no way we can do it."

The problem, according to Carson, is that his runners reported in out of shape in general. "We had some come in in good condition, but most of them have summer jobs, and I allowed them to continue on these with economics like they are. So we really didn't start getting in shape until school started."

What Carson does like, however, is the team attitude. "This is a great group of kids," he said. "They are working hard, and I think that we have the potential to be better than we were last year, although our finish in the conference may not show it."

One of the big pluses for the Pirates this year is Kevin Breen. Breen, an Ireland native, is a graduate of East Tennessee State University, where he was a member of EISU's national championship team and an All-America selection. "He's living in Greenville now, and he's been working with the team. He runs with them on Tuesday and Thursday, and it's really been a bonus. He can talk to them as they go along and give them a lot of good information. He's talking about things I know nothing about. Carson was not a distance runner during his collegiate days. Breen is training to run for Ireland in the Olympic marathon next year.

In the Southern, Carson looks for William & Mary to repeat—again—as champion. "Furman has the ability to challenge them. This could be the year. It'll be their toughest test since we came within a point six years ago."

VMI and Appalachian State both had good recruiting years, and Carson notes that this could help keep the Pirates down in the pack despite their overall improvement of the team. "We've put most of our emphasis on the outdoor and indoor track seasons, and we don't really have a lot of long-distance runners."

The meet this year will be at East Carolina, and Carson feels this can help the Pirates. "We plan to try and run as a pack, sticking together. We know we don't have anyone capable to finishing way up in the standings, so we'll plan on bunching. VMI and Richmond also run this way, so we'll have to nose them out." Carson feels that fourth place is a reasonable goal for the Bucs this year.

Right now, however, injuries have also bogged down the Bucs. Three of the top seven may not be able to run on Monday against the Keydets. Some of the injuries are due to the late start, others to summer injuries, and one just to a freak stumble while out on the raceways.

Charles Avery, a sophomore, currently is the number one man for the Bucs. "He came in hurt," Carson said, "It's really an arithritic condition that comes and goes."

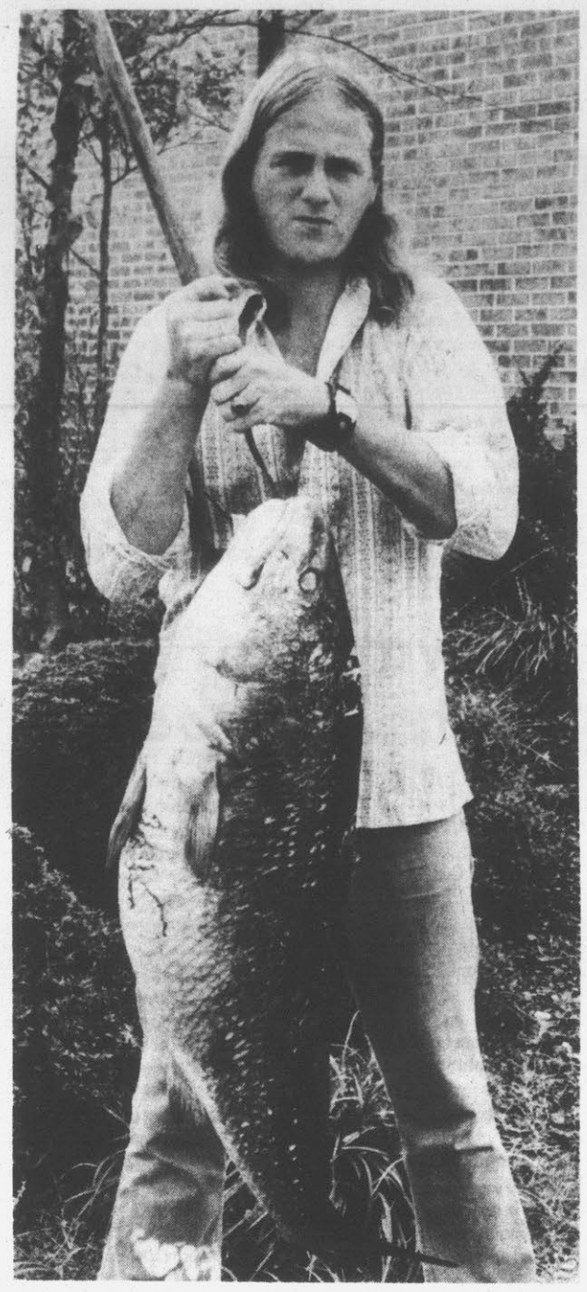
Running number two is freshman Jim Deal. "He's a good six-miler, and could be the best distance runner we've ever had. He could well be in the top 15 by the time the conference meet gets here."

Ricky Warren, a sophomore from Edgecombe County, is number three right now. "He's been bothered by knee problems right now, but we expect some good work from him."

The fourth, fifth and sixth positions are fairly interchangable right now. William White of Greenville came to East Carolina as a quarter-miler, but has grown to a distance runner. He came in strong after working over the summer.

Al Kalmaja has a foot injury, and this has slowed his pace so far. Jimmy Green is showing improvement and could move up as high as fourth man. Jim Willett, who injured a tendon on the course, is at seven right now.

"Our goal is to try and run within 1 or 1½ minutes of each other by conference time. We think this could be our best hope of a good finish. We can't win the conference championship, but we can be improved."



RED DRUM . . . Billy Greene of Greenville caught this 43-lb. Red Drum or Channel Bass recently while fishing off Hobucken. Greene, who landed the fish after a battle that lasted nearly an hour, was casting for blues using a silver spoon on spinning tackle and 20-lb. test line when the fish was taken. PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Penguins, making an attendance push under their new owners, will hold public hockey workouts next week at their training camp in Rostraver Township south of here.

Thirty players will report for physicals Sunday, and the morning and afternoon drills will begin Monday at the Rostraver Gardens ice arena.

The Penguins, who have trained in Canada in past seasons, will switch workouts Sept. 24 to the Civic Arena in Pittsburgh.

Home exhibition foes are the Buffalo Sabres, the St. Louis Blues, the New York Islanders and the New York Rangers.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons of the National Football League have signed running back Bob Thomas, a five-year veteran, as a free agent.

Thomas, a 5-foot-10, 200-pounder who played at Arizona State, signed as a free agent with the Los Angeles Rams in 1971 and was traded to the San Diego Chargers in 1973.

The veteran running back, who joined the Falcons Friday, has a career rushing mark of 531 yards with a 4.5-yard average per carry.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles have picked up former Penn State running back Tom Donchez after he was put on waivers by the Buffalo Bills.

Donchez, 6 feet 2 and 216 pounds, was the Bills' fourthround draft pick last winter. He is from Bethlehem, Pa. The Eagles acquired him Friday.

LAC DU FLAMBEAU, Wis. (AP) — Gene Ronzani, former Chicago Bear running back and Green Bay Packer coach, died Friday at his cottage here. He was 66.

Ronzani, first nine-letter winner at Marquette University, joined the Bears in 1933 and played eight years before taking over as coach of a Chicago farm team.

Ali Says He Will Fight Just Two More Years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Muhammad Ali says he'll fight only for two more years, and he seemed deadly serious in his dislike of Joe Frazier on the eve of departure to The Philippines.

Ali defends his world heavyweight boxing title aginst the ex-champion on Sept. 30 (Oct. 1 in Manila), and what made him angry was Frazier's assertion earlier in the week that Ali is jealous of all other great black athletes.

"Ridiculous, just ridiculous," was the quiet Ali answer.

Then he waxed flamboyant again, saying: "I don't hate him, but I don't like him. I promise I'll stop him. We're not going to rope-a-dope and we're not going to play. Frazier is still too good to play with."

Verbally, Ali continued to play with his foe. Frazier had said that for rope-a-dope, the strategy of Ali backing to the ropes and letting his foe wear out, "I'll tie the rope around the dope's neck."

"Someone must have written that for him," Ali laughed. "He's not smart enough to come up with something like that himself."

The champ added, "Everything I do, I do better than him. His head should be sore in round four."

Ali said before he retires he wants to beat Frazier, George Foreman and Ken Norton. Norton divided two meetings with Ali.

"I'll have him calling me king," said Ali of Norton who was present at the Los Angeles workout. Norton replied: "And when I win, you'll call me king."

Norton said he already had an agreement to fight Ali again if the champ retains his title in Manila.

Ali drew a throng estimated at 10,000 to the ABC Entertainment Center at Century Plaza. Some fans tried to crash the ensuing news conference. Even trainer Angelo Dundee was caught in the jam and had to be rescued by fight promoter Don King.

Dundee figures that Ali will enter the ring about 225 pounds, the same weight he carried against England's Joe Bugner, whom he outpointed in Malaysia earlier this year.

"I'm 33 but don't forget I've had four tough fights in the last year and won them all," Ali told his audience. "I don't plan to fight forever. I'm going to become a minister. But first I have to whip Frazier, Foreman and Norton."

Ali said he weighted 227 and wanted to get to 220, somewhat opposing the plan of his veteran trainer who said: "Against Bugner at 225 he was busy, aggressive and steady. We want him to be the same way against Frazier. Poor Joe is only an earthling. My guy is a superman."

Cincinnati Trims Giants By 6-3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pete Rose singled and scored on an error in the first inning and belted a run-scoring single in the second, helping the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-3 victory over the skidding San Francisco Giants Friday night.

Left-hander Fred Norman, 10-4, posted the victory over San Francisco's rookie sensation John Montefusco, 13-9. Montefusco struck out 12 Reds for a season total of 203, most by a rookie since Gary Nolan's 206 for Cincinnati in 1967.

Rose led off the first with a single and went to third on Dan Driessen's one-out single. George Foster walked with two down, loading the bases, and Rose scored on a fielding error by second baseman Derrel Thomas on Cesar Geronimo's grounder.

Doug Flynn opened the second with a walk, took second on Norman's sacrifice and scored on Rose's single. The Giants, who have dropped eight in a row, scored in the third on Thomas' fifth home run of the season.

Flynn's two-run single capped a three-run rally for Cincinnati in the eighth. The Giants came back with two runs in the bottom of the inning on RBI singles by Bobby Murcer and Gary Matthews.

SIRES A DOUBLE

SCHOOL THAT PRODUCES

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Woodrow Wilson High School in Long Beach in 1967 had part of the makings of a major league baseball team. Three of its players are now in the American League.

Bobby Grich of Baltimore and Ed Crosby of Cleveland were seniors on the '67 nine, while Jeff Burroughs of Texas was a sophomore. Crosby led the team in hitting with .415.

Alston Hired For One Year—Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walt Alston, after signing his 23rd consecutive one-year contract to manage the Los Angeles Dodgers again in 1976, said, "What we're going to need next year is some more run production."

He might have been talking about Friday night's 2-1 loss to the Atlanta Braves.

Dusty Baker drove in both Atlanta runs, one with his 17th home run and the other with a run-scoring single in the third.

Both came off loser Don Sutton, 16-12, who failed for the seventh time to nail down his 17th victory. He may not get another shot at it this year. The Dodger right-hander went out of the game because of a severely sprained left ankle, suffered while running out a double-his first two-base hit of the season-and after the game was walking with the aid of crutches.

"We need somebody with sock," the 63-year-old Alston said, talking about the 1976 season. "Our run production is far off from what it was last year.

"But if can get the man we want and everyone comes back 100 per cent next year and plays like they're capable of playing, then we've got a real shot at getting back in the race."

At the same time as Alston signed for 1976, it was learned that Los Angeles third base coach Tom LaSorda had been offered the position of manager of the Atlanta Braves.

Atlanta General Manager Eddie Robinson, who accompanied the Braves on their West Coast trip, formally asked permission of Dodger vice president Al Campanis to talk to LaSorda, for 28 years a member of the Dodger organization as player scout, minor league manager and for the past three seasons as third base coach.

Clyde King was fired last month as the club's manager and Connie Ryan is an interim pilot.

In Friday night's game, Baker's second-inning homer gave Atlanta a 1-0 lead and Baker singled home an unearned run in the third.

Niekro, 15-12, lost his shutout in the seventh when the Dodgers got an unearned on a scoring fly ball by Dave Lopes.

Alston, in talking about his signing, said 1975 was a disappointing year "because anytime you win the pennant one year, naturally you expect to have a shot at repeating.

"Well, we didn't and I'd have to say the way the Reds played this year no one would have beat them. You play 162 games to see who has the best club and I'd say the Reds proved the point real well."

Alston said that at no time did he consider retiring at the end of the season, saying, "I feel as good as I ever did, there's nothing I'd rather be doing and, anyway, I'd rather go out on a winning note."

LEADS THE PARADE

NEW YORK, N .Y. (AP) — In 1964 Rich O'Keefe of Yorktown Heights, N. Y., was chosen to throw out the first ball of the season at Yankee Stadium. The invitation for the then 7-year-old O'Keefe came after the youngster had his picture taken in the annual St. Patrick's Day parade up Fifth Avenue.

This June, O'Keefe was the No. 1 draft choice of the Milwaukee Brewers of the American League. He was the fifth high-school-age player chosen in the nation.

On The Good Boat 'Sweet Agona'

ECU Research Team Maps Carolina Coastline

THE "SWEET AGONA" . . . East Carolina University's research vessel, spends long hours in the rivers and sounds of eastern North Carolina. The vessel is named for a character in Paul Green's outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony."

The "Sweet Agona", East Carolina University's research vessel, rocked in the bubbling swells and chop that filled the mouth of the Pamlico River on the North Carolina coast.

A small boat could be capsized or swamped by one of the frothy waves but the 37-foot Chesapeake Bay oyster boat converted into an inland water research vessel by the ECU Geology Department was stable and secure.

"She'll take water rougher than this," said Scott Hartness, a geology student from Rocky Mount, in control of the "stick," a steering device resembling a tiller built into the starboard side of the boat near the stern.

Dr. Michael O'Connor, Chairman of the ECU Geology Department, Dr. Vincent Bellis, ECU Biologist and Dr. Stan Riggs, ECU Geologist, and a small corps of geology and biology students are engaged in the initial phase of a three year study to compile a series of shoreline maps. When completed, the maps will show the areas of erosion and accretion throughout the estuaries of North Carolina.

Their work is being funded with a $28,568 grant from the North Carolina Sea Grant Program.

Throughout the summer the professors and their crew have been surveying hundreds of miles of the state's inland shoreline.

Their mapping has taken them up and down the waterways adjoining Ch[illegible]n, Bertie, Washington, Tyrrell and Beaufort counties. On larg[illegible] maps drawn from aeria[illegible] photographs of each county they color code such things as the elevation of the shoreline, types of vegetation, residential development and erosion.

Their goal is to produce an atlas filled with data on the shoreline characteristics of all of North Carolina's estuarine counties.

"By compiling this atlas, we can give county planners, state planners and the individual land owners and prospective buyers a guide by which they can judge their actions and plan for the future development along our coastline," O'Connor said.

Assisting with the project are ECU students Cindy Blanck, Greenville, S.C.; Paul Albertson, Levittown, Pa.; Scott Hardaway, Greenville; and Scott Hartness, Rocky Mount. On this trip they were mapping a northern shoreline section of the Pamlico River and a portion of the west bank of the Pungo River in Beaufort County.

The trip began on the south side of the river at the ECU Coastal Resources Center near Aurora. The center, comprised of laboratories and sleeping quarters, is maintained by East Carolina University and the biologists there keep a constant check on the aquatic life in the Pamlico River and Sound.

The "Sweet Agona" is permanently docked at the Center. She was relocated there last fall when ECU acquired the facilities from N.C. State University. Prior to that the boat was berthed at Manteo.

The ECU Geology Department bought the 30-year-old boat seven years ago. They overhauled her, installed a new engine and renamed her.

The crew admits that like some older wooden boats she probably leaks in a few spots but as long as the bilge pump is working that is not a problem. Once, however, while the boat was docked for a couple of days at Washington, the pump broke. When the students returned, the floorboards were floating in several inches of water.

"That is about as close as we have come to sinking," O'Connor said.

On this trip the departure from the dock was delayed by a stabilizing fin that had worked loose from the stern and was dangling by a single screw just below the waterline. But that was quickly repaired and the "Sweet Agona" and her passengers were soon on the far side of the river tediously observing a deserted and overgrown shoreline.

The mapping was conducted on a table located near the center of the long open cockpit. Using binoculars, the scientists observed the characteristics of the shore and then colored the shoreline of a large map with pencils that had been coded to correspond to what was seen on the riverbank. The maps, when completed will show vegetation, bulkheads, construction and the overall topography of the land.

They had hardly gotten underway when O'Connor spotted mussel shells in a steep bank. Bellis confirmed the sighting with his high powered spotting scope.

Within moments the "Sweet Agona" was at anchor in three feet of water. Her crew scrounged the shore for evidence of a prehistoric Indian encampment. They returned to the boat with a plastic bag containing several pieces of pottery.

"We'll turn this material and the location of the site over to the Archaelogy Department," Bellis said. He said that several potential archaelogical sites have been recorded since their survey began last spring.

But what the scientists are interested in is the erosion along the shore.

"See that marsh grass over there near those pines," said Dr. Bellis pointing to a ticket of pine trees about 25 yards from shore.

"In a few years those pines will be invaded by marsh," he said.

In other spots along the river where the elevation of the shore is higher, large chunks of earth have been washed away by the water. This is typical of the erosion process. But at other points along the river there is also evidence of accretion where the land is building up instead of washing away but the scientist say that erosion is the most frequent occurance.

Why?

Dr. O'Connor, who has spent several years studying erosion on the North Carolina Outer Banks says that erosion is a natural process that has been occurring for many centuries. He explained that scientists haven't paid that much attention to erosion until recent years when shoreline property development increased.

"We have learned that erosion is much more common and extensive throughout the estuaries than previously thought," he said.

Building upon a recent study completed by the Soil Conservation Service the ECU scientists hope to gain an estimate of the erosion rate. They also expect their studies to indicate how and why such erosion is taking place and what can be done about it.

O'Connor said that the biggest problem is that there is no uniform code for protective measures. "Each property owner within a developed shoreline is left pretty much to his own devices and so you end up with a hodgepodge of different kinds of protective measures some of which work very well and others that don't work at all," he said.

"Without a unified program or procedure, sometimes one persons' protective measure, a bulkhead, a groin or whatever, has a detrimental effect on the adjacent property owner. It may even cause his shoreline to erode."

While floating the shoreline they photographed a variety of ways property owners were protecting their shorelines. The methods ranged from the most desirable concrete and stone to nothing at all. One piece of property that featured a very attractive and expensive cottage had a high sloping shore piled thick with rubbish . . . boards, old shingles, tin can etc. . . . and assorted debris. It was a doubtful bulkhead and a menace to neighboring property.

The hours passed as the "Sweet Agona" made her sweep along shoreline. Occasionally she would turn and trace her course to allow the scientists to check the accuracy of their charts.

Soon the sun had begun to dip up a river behind a far away tree line and it was time to head back home again. The wind had slackened but not enough to level the Pamlico's surface. The sharp bow of the "Sweet Agona" sliced through small mounds of green water pulverizing them into tiny drops that washed the wide gunnels and sprayed into the cockpit. The camera and telescopes had been packed away in their cases and were safely stored in the small pilot house along with the maps.

On this particular day they covered only a few miles of shoreline, 15 miles at most, and there are still hundreds of miles along North Carolina's estuarine counties that must be mapped within the next couple of years.

It will be a long and gruelling task but worth the effort, say the scientists. It will give property owners and developers a valuable source of information about the shoreline topography. The project might also uncover a prehistoric site that will lend more knowledge about the people who lived along the rivers and sounds many centuries ago. But the thing that is most important to the geologists and biologists involved in this project is the land. They are learning how it grows, why it dies and if man can prevent it from washing away.

Greenville Native Steve Jackson, Student At The North Carolina School Of The Arts

The Pleasures And Frustrations Of A Musical Tour In Italy

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

A student sojourn to music loving Italy, according to Steve Jackson, is "an entirely new way of looking at life." Home for the tail end of the summer to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bobyby Jackson, before returning for fall studies at the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem, trumpet player Steve talked about the pleasures and frustrations faced by a young bachelor spending several weeks in Italy as a member of the student—faculty group making up the annual performing tour in Europe.

"Not being able to speak Italian didn't matter too much in the larger cities where just about everybody seems to be bi-lingual," Steve said, "but there was one time for me when it really mattered.

"In this little village of Marino where we stayed ten days, you simply wouldn't believe the number of beautiful girls there. Since they couldn't speak English, and we couldn't speak Italian, all any of us could do was walk past each other and smile. It was a very friendly situation," he smiled, "but one without much promise.

"Anyway," he added, "these girls, I'd say they were in their middle and late teens, were pretty well chaperoned and were never to be seen around the village square after nine o'clock at night. So. . ." he shrugged.

"Marino, we discovered later, was a fine introduction to Italy. Being off the beaten track, the life-style there is quite different from larger Italian towns and cities, so we got a good taste of two Italies.

"One thing about Marino that fascinated me," Steve said, "was the place we were housed in. It was originally a monastary, but now you could truthfully say it was a combination monastary, bar, hotel, restaurant and possibly brothel. The food was terrible. But other than here, the food everywhere else we ate in Italy was pretty good."

For several summers, dancers, singers, musicians, and visual artists — both faculty and student, have been making annual performing trips to Europe each summer. "This year," Steve said, "There were about 115 of us altogether. Some went to Switzerland, the rest of us to various places in Italy.

"The singers, for example, took part in the anniversary festival of a 17th century Italian composer, Giacomo Carissimi, who was noted for his Baroque type compositions.

"Our group," Steve said, "was much more into contemporary music. We were divided into two major performing groups and also into brass and string quintets. We gave two concerts at Marino and a chamber concert in Rome. The Rome concert took place at a real swell setting in Rome, Santa Maria Sopra Minerva just behind the Pantheon."

Other concerts by the instrumental group were given in Ariccia, Assisi and Venezia.

"The ten days we had at Assisi," Steve remarked, "were the best days of the tour. We gave two concerts there, outdoor ones in a beautiful, restful area."

A warm, ready acceptance of the Tar Heel based young musicians by the Italian populace was something of a pleasant surprise to Steve. "They were quick to let us know," he explained, "that they didn't look on us as tourists. We came to perform for them. They made it plain that anybody bringing music to them were their friends, not just another group of sightseers. I suppose this has to do with the Italian's fundamental love of music."

Commenting on Italian music he heard performed during his stay there, Steve had this to say: "At the opera in Rome, for example, the singing was absolutely magnificant, really beautiful. But the quality of the orchestra, especially in the brass section was, so far as I'm concerned, pretty poor.

"I understand now," Steve added, "why in recent years so many American musicians have been able to find work with orchestras in Europe. I've heard and now I certainly can believe that American musicians have the finest training offered in any country."

When Steve returns to the North Carolina School of the Arts next week, he said he would "be classified as a junior. I transferred there last year from the University of Louisville (Kentucky) and am still catching up on credits I couldn't transfer.

"By the way," he noted, "my trumpet teacher, Allan Dean, is one of the members of the New York Brass Quintet coming here to ECU to perform in the Artists Series this year. He's a great performer and a great teacher."

Full Color For PBS

Purchased with a U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare grant of $499,776 matched by a state appropriation of $169,092, the equipment ends an era of three studios sharing one color-equipped mobile unit to do color productions.

Equipment installed in the Raleigh and Chapel Hill studios include three color cameras, two film chains (which integrate film and slide material into programs) and two one-inch video tape machines—all the equipment needed for a complete color production studio. The studio at Greensboro will work with the color mobile unit.

The importance of the equipment was underlined by Network Director Dr. George Bair who indicated that the new equipment enables the network to become a fully contemporary public television production facility.

"North Carolinians who have been loyal viewers for the two decades this Network has been broadcasting will be delighted to see many familiar programs in color," he added.

"This represents the first new studio production equipment bought in 20 years," said Network Chief Engineer Alan B. MacIntyre of Chapel Hill. "The original equipment installed in 1954 was a gift collected by then Vice-president Bill Carmichael, and those basic carmeras are still in use."

Among the programs which will benefit from the new equipment are North Carolina People, North Carolina News Conference, Now, and Backyard Gardener.

—From Inspiration To Realization

Board of Higher Education and another opponent of Dr. Jenkins' ambitions, was vice president of the system. Membership of the new Board of Governors did not seem to contain a majority of individuals sympathetic to expansion of the East Carolina medical school beyond the one-year preparatory course that was authorized by the General Assembly in its regular session of 1971.

Yet today the four-year program at Greenville has received the sanction of the University Board of Governors, the blessings of and a multi-million dollar appropriation from the General Assembly, and is about to become a reality.

How did it all happen?

"After that visit by Dr. Ferguson," Leo Jenkins recalled, "I asked some people whose judgment I respected to study the situation. Among them were Dr. Robert Williams, now Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs of the UNC System. I solicited the opinions of Dr. W. C. Davidson and Dr. Lenox Baker at Duke University, and of Dr. Coy Carpenter of Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

"They all agreed that Eastern North Carolina was desperately in need of better health care availability, and that a new school of medicine specializing in family practice at ECU should help the situation tremendously. We learned that for the nation there was a ratio of one physician for every 700 people. For North Carolina as a whole, the ratio was one doctor for every 1,000 people. And for Eastern North Carolina, it was one doctor for every 1,700 people."

Armed with the studies, Dr. Jenkins and Robert Morgan (then chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees, later State Attorney General and now North Carolina's Junior U. S. Senator) worked up a proposal for the 1965 General Assembly. Word got out of what was going on at Greenville and the opposition fired up.

"The major newspapers immediately began to ridicule the idea," Dr. Jenkins said. "Before long they had a full-time campaign going against us. Their accounts were full of distortions and outright lies. We decided that our very best weapon would be to employ nothing but the truth, and that would see us through."

Others had conflicting versions of which side veracity belonged to, but the ECU-Jenkins cause soon started gathering allies. The proposal to establish a medical school on the campus was presented to the 1965 General Assembly with then State Senator Robert Morgan as the principal backer. To the surprise of many, that legislative session did approve the development of a medical school at Greenville, with the proviso that it be planned, the funding secured and accreditation obtained within a short period of time. The deadline, as many who voted for the measure were aware, was an impossible one to meet. The plan appeared to be dead.

Assembly approved and funded establishment of a school of allied health services at ECU. That, added to the school of nursing which had been established on the campus in 1960, further expanded what would seem to be an appropriate environment for a school of medicine.

The campaign was renewed before the 1971 General Assembly, and the breakthrough the ECU partisans had been seeking was achieved. Funds were appropriated to build a one-year medical program. First-year students in medicine would train at Greenville, then transfer to UNC at Chapel Hill for the three additional years. It wasn't what Dr. Jenkins and his allies considered the fulfillment of their quest for ECU, but it was a beginning. A freshman medical class enrolled at Greenville in the fall of 1972. But problems soon arose. Proper accreditation of the class could not be obtained unless its direction was in the hands of the medical school at Chapel Hill. After three years, the one-year course at Greenville was discontinued.

"Those who claimed that the young people who got their first year of medical education at East Carolina couldn't make it academically in later years have been proved all wrong," Dr. Jenkins asserted. "Every member of that first-year class here is now doing well at Chapel Hill. Not a single one of them has flunked out."

Discontinuance of the single year program was no setback to ECU, for by that time the campaign was in high gear to achieve the ultimate goal of a degree-granting school. After an intense struggle in the 1974 legislative session, and against the recommendations of the University System Board of Governors, $15 million was appropriated to develop a free-standing two-year medical school at Greenville. That decision was probably the key one in the entire ECU saga. It swung open the door sufficiently to permit its full opening a year later.

A panel of medical educators from several major schools of medicine around the country had, in 1973, made a study of North Carolina's major needs in medical education and issued its recommendations. Among them were a possible expansion of the ECU program to two years if certain prescribed conditions were met—but no more. "It is our judgment that the proposal to commit state resources to establish a new (degree-granting) medical school at ECU is premature and is based upon a lack of understanding of what the establishment of such a school would involve," the report declared. Instead, the panel recommended an expansion of area health education centers at hospitals in various areas of the state, administered by the School of Medicine at Chapel Hill. That program was approved by the legislature and is in the process of implementation. But the report saw a four-year ECU school as the most expensive and least potentially productive means of increasing the state's physician population.

In spite of the report, and its endorsement by the Board of Governors, the General Assembly of 1974 voted a two-year school for East Carolina. Dr. Jenkins and others allied to his cause saw the report as unrealistic and inaccurate with regard to the ECU potential. But pressures were already mounting upon the University Board of Governors to recommend to the 1975 legislature the four-year degree-granting school first envisioned by Dr. Jenkins a decade earlier. The board, perhaps realizing that pressures in behalf of ECU at the '75 session might be irresistible, and that a losing stand by the board against the proposition might undermine its viability for all time, said "yes" to ECU and Leo Jenkins. So also did the Advisory Budget Commission in its recommended 1975-77 biennial budget document.

So also did the General Assembly. Before the session opened, and in spite of Governor Holshouser's opposition, it was a foregone conclusion that the legislature would give ECU its final victory. But then the economic recession began to dampen down the expected growth of state revenues. Some doubts arose as to whether the capital funds would be available for the school, in spite of the fact that recommended capital appropriations for the other 15 campuses of the University System were virtually nil. But the Assembly's presiding officers, Lt. Governor Jim Hunt and House Speaker Jimmy Green, both Easterners and both committed to the ECU cause, helped outmaneuver any incipient movements to delay or cancel the medical school plans. The enacted budget appropriated $32 million for the program. That, added to the $15 million voted in 1974, will be applied to the building of necessary medical education facilities at Greenville and the construction of a teaching wing at the now-abuilding Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A Dean of the new school, Dr. William E. Laupus who formerly was Chairman of Pediatrics at the Medical College of Virginia, was appointed as of July 1 and immediately set about preparations to open the ECU school in September of next year. Can it be done?

It will take some real doing and a "fast track," he replied, but that is the timetable and he believes it can be adhered to. If things well, the university will probably apply for accreditation of the medical school some time next year in the hopes of having it in time for the fall opening. Dean Laupus said a faculty of about 35 will be on hand for the beginning of classes.

Family medicine, of course, will be the thrust of the ECU program.

"I's an ideal situation," Chancellor Jenkins commented. "The school at Chapel Hill can concentrate upon specialized medicine while we train the family physicians. And you can really believe that we'll be going all-out from the very beginning to improve every aspect of health care and delivery in Eastern North Carolina."

The question remains, can the new ECU program attract and hold doctors in the sparsely-populated regions of Eastern North Carolina? Many are dubious in the face of studies which show that no more than half the students who obtain their medical degrees in North Carolina remain in the state to practice. Further, the whole story of the decline of medical practice in rural areas over a period of many years can be used as a valid argument to insist that ECU medical graduates, like those elsewhere, will tend to locate in the larger metropolitan areas where the amenities of modern life—and the largest potential incomes—are most abundantly available.

Chancellor Jenkins expresses confidence. "I fully believe that a majority of the doctors who are educated at East Carolina will stay in Eastern North Carolina," he declared. "I think they will stay here because they will find the region is an ideal place to live, because it has so much potential for economic and cultural growth, and because it's simply such a great region to live in."

As long as legally permitted to do so, Dr. Jenkins added, "we are going to admit only students from North Carolina" into the medical school. He still subscribes to the idea of laws or regulations which would require a medical student to pledge a residency in some part of the state for a specific period of time in return for admission to the medical school. "I think any student whose medical education is subsidized by the people of North Carolina owes it to them to repay them with his service," Leo Jenkins asserted.

The medical school at Greenville, regarded by most a few years ago as the flimsiest of pipe dreams, is on its way. East Carolina University, with over 11,000 students, is North Carolina's third largest institution of higher education. Under almost any leadership it would have grown significantly in the years since World War II. But it is difficult to imagine that the magnitude of its growth would have been as great under other leadership than that of the former Marine officer named Leo Jenkins.

He himself is quick to credit allies on the ECU staff and others with the kind of active support that made it all possible. Among those are the men who are today North Carolina's two United States Senators—Jesse Helms and Robert Morgan. "Jesse was steadfast and influential in our behalf behind the scenes," said Dr. Jenkins. (Senator Helms was also highly vocal in his support through his television editorials.) "And Bob Morgan was simply a tower of strength. So was First District Congressman Walter Jones during the years he was in the legislature and since then. So were so many physicians and medical educators that I hesitate to mention any of them without leaving out others equally important."

Leo Jenkins may never be the best-loved public figure in North Carolina, but he has a respectable following, not only in the East but in every part of North Carolina. He has never run for public office, but he has all the politician's skills of judging human nature and sizing up strengths and weaknesses in any political situation. His personal ambitions do not exclude the office of Governor North Carolina and he has not been entirely ruled out by the political speculators as a Democratic candidate in next year's primaries. That would probably require his taking a leave-of-absence from ECU to campaign or his retirement (he's now 62). Whether he would want to challenge Lt. Governor Jim Hunt, a certain gubernatorial candidate and an ally in the East Carolina medical school campaign, and at the moment the East's strongest potential contender, would seem doubtful. With Leo Jenkins, however, nothing should be taken for granted.

A new Carteret County newspaper, Downeaster, published its first edition in early August. Prominent on almost every page of that initial issue were pictures of and stories about Leo Jenkins, who has a condominium with his family at Pine Knoll Townes near Atlantic Beach and says he hopes to spend much of his time on the coast when he retires from the groves of academe and the lists of political tilting for the Greenville campus. Dr. Jenkins may never run for—or be elected to—political office, but he has an impressive constituency all the same.

And East Carolina University, thanks first of all to him, has a new degree-granting medical school.

Beards And Bushy Manes Do Not Make The Wearer A Revolutionary

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chief Judge John R. Brown of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals says the time has finally come when the general public no longer sees a revolutionary behind every beard or bushy mane. And he thinks it's about time.

Brown, who himself sports a bushy mustache and mutton-chop sideburns, expressed that feeling Friday in a concurring opinion in a decision upholding the reinstatement of a college teacher fired for having a beard.

"I write only to record with a sense of relief and common sense that the federal courts are now out of the hair business...," Brown wrote.

Brown noted that court decisions now specify a "clippers-razors off policy" for college students and faculty. He added that it is possible that suits could now arise involving hair in kindergarten through the primary grades — but said he thinks hair no longer stirs such emotions.

The public "has come to its senses and does not see in such variations the seeds of violence and revolution," he wrote.

The decision came in a legal battle that began in 1971 when San Jacinto Junior College in Pasadena, Tex., fired Lionel Hander because he wouldn't shave.

U.S. Dist. Judge Carl O. Bue Jr. of Houston ordered Hander reinstated, paid $11,321 in back pay, and awarded $5,112 in lawyers fees.

In appealing, San Jacinto had argued that teachers in public institutions have no constitutional right to wear beards, and that the Constitution bars recovery of back pay and lawyers fees.

The appeals court said some public departments may impose grooming restrictions on employes, but it said college teachers "simply do not have the exposure or community-wide impact of policemen and other employees who deal directly with the public."

St. Paul's Cathedral Marks 300th Anniversary

"RESURGAM" is the title and fitting symbol of a new exhibition marking the 300th anniversary of the rebuilding of St. Paul's Cathedral. The building which triumphantly survived the blitz has existed only half as long as its predecessor. (UPI Photo)

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Three hundred years ago this year, when Sir Christopher Wren began rebuilding St. Paul's, a most curious thing occurred.

Wren measured out the proposed circle of the new cathedral's great dome in the ashes of the old building. Then he called a laborer to bring a flat stone to mark the exact center.

The workman pulled at random from a rubbish pile a piece of gravestone, inscribed with a single word in large capitals: "RESURGAM" — "I shall rise again."

"Resurgam" is the title and fitting symbol of a new exhibition marking the 300th anniversary of the rebuilding of St. Paul's.

The cathedral itself, of course, is a symbol of London. Yet the building which so triumphantly survived the blitz has existed only half as long as its predecessor.

That 600-year-old cathedral was destroyed in the Great Fire of 1666, a blaze which consumed one house every 30 seconds for five days. It heated Old St. Paul's so much that its stones exploded and lead ran in molten rivers from its roof.

The anniversary exhibit in the cathedral crypt retells those stories and shows how the new cathedral was built. It also expresses wonder that the thing was done at all.

"If one conjures up the horrors of the Great Plague of 1665," says an introductory placard, "and a festering London whose dark and narrow streets were a jumble of open sewers, it is hard to understand how a sublime conception like St. Paul's could have arisen out of them."

The "sublime conception" belonged to Wren, the King's Surveyor at the time of the Great Fire. His design for a new London was never carried out, but Wren rebuilt 51 fire-wrecked parish churches, of which 24 still stand. Most of all he rebuilt St. Paul's.

He made three designs for it — a wooden model of a 1673 version still exists. Work on his final design did not begin until 1675 because of money problems.

Then authorities decided to tax coal brought into London, and the proceeds paid the new building's whole cost. One rare document on show puts that cost at precisely 736,762 pounds 2 shillings 3 pence 1 farthing.

The new cathedral was completed in 1708 — Wren sent his son to the top of the 365-foot dome to lay the final stone. Finishing touches were not added until 1716. Repairs began a year later.

Nearly half the current exhibition, in fact, is devoted to the costly and complex process of keeping Wren's building intact and in good repair.

It details the "Great Restoration" of 1925-30 and shows how much of that work was undone by two direct bomb hits on St. Paul's during World War II.

It notes that a "Save St. Paul's" appeal launched in 1970 fell short of its $7.2 million goal, though the danger to Wren's great building is acute.

Stone decay caused by pollution "is now greater than it ever has been in the past," the exhibit says. There is worry about traffic and noise vibration. The closest possible watch is kept for damage.

"For over 50 years the movement of the fabric of the cathedral has been meticulously measured to a degree of accuracy and more continuously than any other structure in the world," the exhibit says.

Quite apart from its grandeur and beauty, the exhibit notes that St. Paul's is unique among the world's great cathedrals because it was designed and built by one man.

Wren himself lies in the crypt near the 300th anniversary show. Elsewhere in the cathedral, in the same Latin as the prophetic stone which first marked the center of his great dome, is his famous epitaph: "Si monumentum requiris, circumspice"—"If you seek his monument, look around you."

Tend 'Garden' In Deep Mine

By JOHN KUGLIN
Associated Press Writer

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) — Some 5,000 feet below ground in one of the world's deepest mines, Ken Miles tends a garden that includes flowers, fruits and vegetables.

In the garden, started years ago when miners in the Bunker Hill Mine threw away the pits and seeds from their lunch pails, the plants receive light and warmth from light bulbs.

"All I do is water them," Miles says.

"Over the years numerous miners have grown all kinds of little and big plants down here: cherry trees, lemon trees, prune trees and apple trees," said Jerry Furnish, a mine veteran of 46 years, who added, "I guess they do it for a hobby."

A hoist inspector, Furnish coated his glasses to keep them from fogging in the 100 per cent humidity in some places in the mine and slogged through mud several inches deep.

Higher in the lead, zinc and silver mine there's a rhubarb garden, Christmas cactus and a grapefruit tree.

"You ought to see that cactus," said hoistman Chuck Wynn. "It blooms like crazy."

A seven-foot lemon tree, perhaps 20 years old, spreads its leaves in an electrical shop 3,300 feet underground. It and the other trees bear no fruit.

Another of the mine's lemon trees — now gone — was featured in the 1930s in "Ripley's Believe It or Not." And the miners tell a beanstalk story to rival the adventures of Jack.

"We had to take one bean plant out of here before it took over the mine," said Keith Morgan. "A fellow who was growing it used to keep track and it would grow two or three inches a night, sometimes more."

Back on the surface, one of the miners gestured with his "green" thumb toward the virtually barren hills ravaged through the years by forest fires and smelter fumes.

"I wish they could do as well growing things up here as they do down there," he said.

Sargent Shriver Keeps Young On Campaign Trail; He Loves Work

BY WARREN TALBOT

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The elevator operator in the downtown office building said he didn't recognize Sargent Shriver. "It wasn't until the man introduced himself that I knew," he said.

A secretary in the Rhode Island State House said Shriver "didn't look like he is 59 years old — more like he was in his 40's."

The face whose name escapes you, younger looking than you expect. That's often the story as Shriver whisks about the country trying to raise enough money to launch a national campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Advance notices of his arrivals are low-key and he is usually taken from airport to fund-raising receptions and back in cars driven by local supporters.

He is spending a lot of time exolaining his ideas to local media representatives, many of whom are more interested in whether his brother-in-law, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is running.

"I asked Ted if he is going to run. He said 'No.' I really believe him. Then I asked him what he would think if I ran, and he said 'God speed, good luck, it's going to be tough'," Shriver said during a recent visit to Rhode Island for fund raising receptions in Providence and Newport.

"I really don't think that my brother-in-law would give his blessings to my campaign, and allow all our relatives to run around on my behalf and then pull the rug from beneath my feet," he said.

Although Kennedy has given his blessing, Shriver said he has not asked him for his support. "I ought to gain his support as a candidate first," Shriver said. "I haven't asked any political leader to support me."

Shriver is waiting for the third week of September before he formally announces his candidacy. By that time he should have raised enough money to qualify for matching funds under the new federal campaign financing law. He must raise at least $5,000 from the residents of a minimum of 20 states. Individual contribution cannot exceed $250.

He has qualified in more than half the necessary states, including Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Maryland and Massachusetts.

The Shriver for President Committee in Washington has signed up a group of supporters ranging from Wall Street brokers and college professors to such celebrities as Paul Newman, James Caan, Cloris Leachman, Kurt Vonnegut Jr., Arthur Rooney Sr., president of the Pittsburgh Steelers, tennis player Arthur Ashe, and former Notre Dame football coach Ara Parseghian.

Shriver says he thinks he's the man who can unify the Democratic party. "If you cannot unify the Democratic Party, you don't deserve to be a Democratic candidate for president," he said.

"I'm not a class candidate ... I'm against racism, sexism, and sexualism. I don't believe in pitting the blacks against the whites, the rich against the poor," he said.

The former ambassador to France and former head of the Peace Corps became more widely known as George McGovern's running mate in 1972 after the Thomas Eagleton fisaco.

Can a candidate who was on that disastrous ticket overcome a loser's image?

"I was not responsible for the architecture and planning in that campaign. When I went on the ticket, it was not because I thought we had such a brilliant chance to win," he said.

He said President Ford will be a tough opponent for any Democrat in 1976. "His strength is that he is not Nixon. That's a terrific strength. I think Ford is going to be strong."

Shriver said the nation should reject the Republican "theory that 7.7 per cent unemployment is acceptable. Democrats are committed to full employment."

Egg Coddler Market Grows

According to Hugh Robinson, president of Royal Worcester Porcelain Co., the market is increasing at a 10 per cent annual rate. Last year, he said, more than a million egg coddlers were purchased in America.

His guess is that many were bought as gifts and that not every recipient knew what he was supposed to do with the coddlers.

Drawn To Priesthood By Nat'l Ad Campaign

BALTIMORE (UPI) — "That boy who wanted to be a priest is still within you. Listen to him. Come home."

A tousel-haired boy's picture appears with the advertisement.

"Doubt no more, wait no longer — we have candles only you can light. Let the boy truly become the man he was meant to be."

For about six years Father Joseph Lupo has run ads in national magazines, summoning men to the priesthood — one each in Life, Playboy, Time, Newsweek, and Reader's Digest.

At the bottom is Father Joseph's address: Grey Rock, Garrison, Md., and a name-and-address space requesting, "Please write to me."

The ads are signed: "Order of the Most Holy Trinity, a Roman Catholic community of priests, brothers and sisters, founded 1198 — the oldest order of friars in the church."

"Since the national ads began, about 100 in response to them have started on their way to priesthood — the ads are the only way people know about us," said Father Joseph. "We are a small community —about 200 in two monasteries."

He said the responses to the ads have passed 600 and that in writing back he has initiated thoughts that have sent 16 men into the Protestant ministry and others into the Jewish rabbinate.

Before the national magazine ads began, the Trinitarians invested only about four a year; afterwards, about 20 a year.

"But this year was the biggest number we began with in the history of our province — 50 candidates — and I think our big class was still the reaping of the advertising harvest."

Thirty-two of those were invested with a friar's habit looking toward the priesthood: "Two were from Ceylon, three from Africa, one from England, one from Puerto Rico, one from Canada, one from Guatemala, two from Mexico (a father and son, that's kind of a famous first), and the others from all over the United States. The people in foreign countries heard about us probably in comments about the ad.

"We've been progressively getting better and better. Next year looks even brighter. We have a problem. We can only take so many. Financially it's pretty rough."

The training for priesthood requires one year as a novitiate, four years of college and then a degree in theology, which takes three more years.

The ad in Playboy in 1971 got plenty of attention, in newspapers and other magazines that reproduced the it, coupons and all.

"Some of the flak it raised kind of shook me," Father Joseph said. "The opposition came from old, traditional people who thought we should be fighting a magazine like Playboy.

"But I was actually a Fifth Columnist in Playboy. I was saying, 'Look, we have a better idea. There is a difference between pleasure and happiness.'"

The Playboy ad stressed the social work done by the Trinitarians. They work in prisons and among alcoholics and under-privileged.

"I think our order is a pioneer in advertising," Father Joseph said. "We kind of invented advertising. During the Crusades the Moslems captured many Christians and sold them into slavery. We were the first to penetrate that Iron Curtain and offer to buy back the slaves that were useless to them — women, children and the sick.

"After we ransomed the slaves, we advertised by going to European towns and letting people see those that were ransomed. And we had floats to let people see what was done: 'Your sisters, brothers, and parents — help us free them.'"

Sees Value In Liberal Arts

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Liberal arts degrees are shrinking in number, but not in value, says Edward Weidenfeller.

Weidenfeller, director of career advising and placement at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, said jobs in business, industry and government are available for liberal arts majors who know what they want. He predicted that liberal arts people, not the technically trained, will be at the managerial level 10 years from now.

Goose Replaced By Wild Turkey

CHICAGO (AP) — At the time of the first Thanksgiving, English goose was the traditional main dish at celebrations and religious feasts such as Christmas. Thanksgiving, according to researchers for World Book Encyclopedia, was the Puritan substitute for Christmas. And wild turkey, being abundant through New England, became the substitute for the goose.

World's Cattle Count Increases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World cattle numbers have increased about nine per cent and hog numbers, about 12 per cent, over the past five years.

So, why do meat department prices keep rising? For one thing, the poor feed corn crop in 1974 led to a four per cent decrease in the total production of red meat and poultry in the United States for the first six months of this year compared with the same period last year, says the American Meat Institute. In addition, meat consumption is increasing in Europe and other parts of the world as living standards improve.

SAY CHEESE

CARLSTADT, N.J. (UPI) — A creamy new type of French brie cheese contains 60 per cent butterfat, 10 per cent more than ordinary brie. The extra fat content makes the cheese cut neater and keep longer than the 50 per cent butterfat variety. It is sold in one and two-kilo (2.2 and 4.4 pound) rounds, whole or in wedges.

A GOOD JOB IN BOSTON IS NO DAMN GOOD IF YOU'RE OUT OF WORK IN RALEIGH.

When a guy's out of work in one town, hearing about jobs in another doesn't do him a bit of good. Unless he can afford to get there. How's he gonna do that without a paycheck coming in?

Trailways has a solution. It's called Opportunity Fare. And it lets anyone who's unemployed ride Trailways for half price, midnight Sundays through midnight Thursdays. (Interstate travel only.)

It all begins at midnight, September 8 and continues through November 6, 1975. The only restriction is that some proof of unemployment must be shown when the ticket purchase is made.

Trailways' Opportunity Fare makes a lot of sense, doesn't it? And for a lot of people who feel like they're at the end of the road, it may mean a whole new start.

TRAILWAYS' OPPORTUNITY FARE.

HALF FARE FOR THE UNEMPLOYED.

TRAILWAYS. THE BEST BUS GOING.

100,000 MILE WARRANTY ?

HOW DO WE DO IT?

Every car dealer in the country is talking "dependability" these days. At Tarheel Toyota, we've decided to do something about it. A new car warranty that's longer than any other warranty in the world (exclusively for Tarheel Toyota). Bill Draper can tell you why:
"Nobody else in the world has a car like this. I've seen how the Toyota is made, the quality of the workmanship, the integrity and the craftsmanship that go into this car. I know the Toyota inside and out."
Until now, most new car warranties haven't been much more than discounts on the car repairs you knew you'd need. Our warranty is our guarantee of faith in Toyota.
"Nobody else in the world can put this kind of warranty on their car. My faith and my knowledge and experience with Toyota tell me I can do it. Toyota builds an automobile to last."
Our knowledge of the Toyota comes from research, from first hand information from our service department and from a great number of satisfied Toyota customers. For 100,000 miles or 3 years from the day you purchase your new Toyota, we guarantee to replace or repair your motor, transmission and rear end, if they fail under normal driving conditions. We'll ask you to keep the vehicle properly maintained and we'll ask that you bring it back to Tarheel Toyota for any repairs covered by this warranty. We're offering the 100,000 mile, 3 year warranty in addition to the new car warranty offered by Toyota Motor Sales, USA. It's a promise, a guarantee of Toyota quality, Toyota dependability.

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end, and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

BEFORE YOU DECIDE ON YOUR NEXT HOME, WHY NOT LOOK INTO THESE.

Ayden is fortunate in having some of the finer older homes in Pitt County. The 3000 square foot home you see pictured is a prime example of what we mean. In today's home market, the replacement costs on this house would probably be in excess of $75,000, so if you are among those who appreciate the charm, elegance and spaciousness of these older colonial homes, why not look into this one. Selling for only $42,500, immaculate, in excellent condition and location, just painted outside. There are 5 bedrooms, 2 full baths, new carpet, wallpaper, and drapes, den, formal living and dining rooms, lovely paneled kitchen, central heat down, large corner lot with trees, wonderful neighborhood and within walking distance of schools, shopping and churches. No need to make an appointment, just pick up your phone and call us and allow us to host you on a tour of this property.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1975

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Good judgment is needed to handle any problems. In early evening, you can get the goodwill and active assistance of one who has considerable influence. Later you need a good rest. Build up energy today.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't contact those persons with whom you could argue; avoid trouble. Try to get on better terms with a bigwig, though.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't rush off to some new place in a.m., but plan for a new course of action later in the day. Don't argue with a stranger.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your hunches are not working right in a.m., but later they are more accurate than your judgment, so make good use of them then.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study what is expected of you early, then let others have your decisions. Get into some civic work that requires exactness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy at work that must be done, though you don't like it. Then put wardrobe in fine order. Take needed health treatments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Making plans early for recreation is wise, then all goes well. Try to spend more time with one who means much to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to get your home in the kind of order that pleases you. Then you can make big headway at a project you enjoy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get into the philosophical studies you like early in the day. Later meet with congenials for social activities. Correspond.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get out of that lack syndrome in a.m., then you know how to make big headway toward prosperity. Don't spend too much.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Think along fine, philosophical lines and get rid of that despondency in a.m. Later, enjoy the company of good friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Ideal morning to sit down with experts and get the advice you need about new projects. Contact a bigwig you know.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Enjoy company of friends in afternoon. Make plans carefully for social affairs for the new week. Stay within your budget.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful young people who early in life will have to re-check studies, papers, etc., since the mind works so quickly there are bound to be many mistakes made, and the logic will have to be organized through trial and error. But the sense of security will be pronounced, and your progeny is a natural worker. Slant the education along lines of real estate, banking, mining, production, etc.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to avoid the temptation to make sudden changes that appeal to you. Maintain a poised manner and later you can accomplish difficult tasks. You can please a close friend.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't rely so much on good friends for assistance today, since they are busy handling own affairs. Be honest with yourself.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to be particularly careful where business is concerned today. The planets are not favorable for civic matters.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Changing your attitude with others is good now, but do not make any radical changes. A stranger could be troublesome.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have to be conscientious in the handling of your affairs today. Take steps to have better rapport with mate.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Not a good day for discussions with associates, since they are not agreeable right now. Act according to your conscience.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use your own ideas and good judgment in the handling of affairs today. Don't broadcast your problems to others now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show close ties more affection since they are feeling blue and need cheering up. Be sure to pay an important bill on time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to make your home more charming during spare time and increase harmony there. A business condition can be improved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Stop criticizing an associate now and come to a better understanding. Stear clear of heavy expenditures. Be logical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Financial affairs need much of your time and attention now. Listen to what an expert has to say and follow the advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Social affairs are best postponed at this particular time. Plan time for improving your health. Be more businesslike.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put those secret worries behind you by doing something constructive about them. Don't follow a hunch you have now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be a natural troubleshooter, so direct the education along police, government and other allied lines. Give good spiritual training early in life. Your progeny could easily excel in sports. Some musical talent here, also.

Finnish Lapland Is Mix Of Old And New Cultures

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press Writer

ROVANIEMI, Finnish Lapland (AP) — A summer sojourn in Lapland can be an intriguing experience, even if reindeer meat heads the menu at lunch and dinner, and the arctic sun floods your hotel room day and night.

Impressions of Finland's northernmost province can differ sharply, depending on where you get your first glimpse of the vast region billed as Europe's last wilderness.

One tourist, whose plane touched down near the provincial capital of Rovaniemi, was taken aback at the sight of this modern town with its glassy facades and smart shops. They seemed a far cry from any wilderness. And a tethered reindeer munching grass in a backyard looked more like a cow with antlers than one of Santa's helpers.

A couple of hours later, this same tourist, driving in a minicar through towering spruces which make up much of this 40,000-square-mile preserve called Finnish Lapland saw herds of graceful reindeer loping across rolling hills.

Beyond lay gleaming lakes and winding rivers that stretched for miles, with no house or any sign of man's handiwork visible. Tiny blue wildflowers dotted the ground in this northern Eden where August temperatures hover close to 70 degrees F., even though it lies above the Arctic Circle.

"This is the last real wilderness, except perhaps for parts of Russian Siberia," said Pertti Korhonen, young manager of the Lapland branch of Finland's Tourist Board.

"Even Rovaniemi was once a rural village of less than 7,000 persons," Korhonen said later as he nursed his car through the city traffic. "But that was before World War II when everything was changed."

He referred to the German armies who put Rovaniemi to the torch when they retreated in 1944, leaving it a smoldering heap. When the conflict was over, an army of architects, builders and engineers descended on the ruins of Rovaniemi and built a modernistic city of steel, glass and stone. Today the population has grown to more than 28,000. Rovaniemi's broad main street is part of the great Arctic Highway that leads to the Barents Sea.

Even the back country has changed considerably since the old days, Korhonen pointed out. A tourist who expects to find the original Lapps living in wigwams with witches and magic drums is in for a disappointment. Today the quaint reindeer-drawn sledges that sped across the frozen countryside in winter have been largely replaced by noisy but more practical motor sledges.

There was once a saying that Lapland was a remote corner on the outskirts of the world, surrounded by Polar bears and darkness. It gets pretty dark in the winter, says Korhonen, but the only polar bears you will find are 500 miles southward in the Helsinki zoo.

But the vast forests still remain, inhabited by bear, wolves and wolverines. The ptarmigan, a plump, white, grouse-like bird that is regarded as a great table delicacy, circles overhead in the cloudless sky.

Reindeer roam the area grazing on the lichen, which covers the ground. In winter they dig it out from under the snow. The reindeer total half a million in the entire Lapp country, which covers some 150,000 square miles stretching across the northern parts of Norway, Sweden and Russia, as well as Finland.

The reindeer is one of the last animals to be domesticated by man, and about 200,000 of them are raised in Finnish Lapland alone, roughly one to each of the province's inhabitants.

This reindeer-breeding has become a highly organized business, and the 17,000 reindeer owners belong to a central association.

They butcher about 60,000 reindeer a year, since reindeer steaks, casseroles, tongues and smoked reindeer meat are considered great delicacies in Scandinavia. The meat is usually accompanied by a sauce of lingonberries, that resemble the American cranberry.

The Lapps have roamed the Lapp tundra for nearly 2,000 years, but they are now a distinct minority in all parts of the region. There are said to be only 2,500 of them among Finnish Lapland's 200,000 residents. But it is difficult to get an exact count, since many have intermarried with Finns.

In olden days, Lapps were nomads who spent their days hunting and fishing and huddled at night in their tents of reindeer hide. Today some of them maintain small farms, but most Lapps breed herds of reindeer for the butcher shops. The majority of them are literate, but a local law calling for the teaching of the Lapp language in school is hard to enforce since few teachers know the tongue.

Lapland has often been called the Land of the Midnight Sun, a term French scientists gave it in the 18th century when they discovered that, starting in late June, the sun does not set here for three weeks. By the same token, at the northern tip of Lapland it is dark around the clock for 51 days in winter.

Number Thirteen Is Losing Reputation

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There was a time when builders skipped from the 12th to the 14th floor, pretending that one floor just wasn't there. The conventional wisdom was that people wouldn't stay on a 13th floor.

Now many are designating their 13th floors as such, apparently believing that triskaidekaphobia, the fear of the number 13, is fading.

In the two years that the Crown Center Hotel here, which has a designated 13th floor, has been open there have been no complaints. The management recently conducted a survey of guests who stayed on the 13th floor and couldn't find one frightened by that number.

There were three questions asked of the guests: Do you consider yourself superstitious? Do you think the number 13 is unlucky? Did anything occur during your stay that you attribute to having a room on the 13th floor?

Eight guests admitted they were superstitious. Two gave "maybe" answers to the second question. Only two answered "yes" to the third question. All other responses were negative.

"This is the first trip I've been on that my luggage ended up somewhere else," explained one guest who felt the number 13 had done him in. "My bag was 23 hours late in catching up with me. For no apparent reason it ended up in Moline, Ill. How's that grab you for coincidence?"

"If you believe in Christ as your savior, you don't have to be superstitious," was the advice from a guest in Room 1321.

One of the 13th floor residents gave a piece of strong evidence that the number is losing its bad reputation. He said that he was "extremely" superstitious but didn't think 13 was unlucky.

Fatherhood, The First Time, The First Year

(Editor's note: This article by a local father appears in the Daily Reflector with the permission of American Baby Magazine, which published it in its June, 1975, edition. Dr. Richard Gilman analyzed questionnaires filled out by Pitt County area fathers, to whom Dr. Knox expresses his appreciation.)

By DR. DAVID KNOX

Our new baby, Lisa, was born nine months ago—Lamaze Style. Although bringing her into the world was an exciting experience, adjusting to her, for me, has been difficult. The severity of the adjustment surprised me. As a marriage and family counselor, I have the luxury of knowing what one "should" do to prepare for these events—marry in your mid 20's (I was 25), get a stable job (I was a college teacher), and delay your children until after you have been married a few years (Frances and I have had the most fantastic marriage imaginable for the last four years). As further preparation for our first child, we attended pre-parenthood classes at ECU and enrolled in the Lamaze course.

After all this preparation, I thought I was ready—I wasn't. After ten marvelous days during which we shared the delivery and excitement of our baby, reality set in. Sleepless nights, extended visits by grandparents and interruptions in our "normal" schedule caused me to wonder how other first-time fathers were experiencing their new baby.

In order to obtain this information, I sent a questionnaire to each new father whose first child had been born in the last 12 months in the same hospital as our daughter (Pitt Memorial). The questionnaire was concerned with five basic areas: 1. Preparation for the baby—Was the baby planned and wanted? Did the new father attend parenthood and-or Lamaze classes? 2. Care of the baby—How many times did these new fathers actually feed, change the diapers, and get up at night for their baby? 3. Feelings about the baby—Did these fathers ever wish that they could return to the time before the baby was born? How would they describe their feelings toward the baby? 4. Social life—Was their social life changed by the baby? 5. Relationships—How did their baby affect their marriage, in-law, and parent relationships?

One-hundred and two fathers (high school graduates with some college education, joint incomes around $12,000, and predominantly white) returned the completed questionnaire. When this information was analyzed along with personal interviews, some answers began to emerge about what it is like to experience a child from a new father's point of view. Regarding preparation for the baby, about one-third of the babies were unplanned. One student father said, "We were shocked at first since we wanted to finish school before starting our family. However, after we thought about it, we were thrilled at the prospect of being parents." This father echoed the thinking of most of the fathers since 99 per cent said that they "wanted" their baby to be born. Hence, almost all of the babies were wanted, even though some were unplanned.

Fathers were then asked why they wanted to have a baby. Most (85 per cent) didn't answer. Of those who did, "Because I just do" was the most frequent reason. Others said, "I want a son to carry my name"; "To have a child that would be part of both of us"; and "We can afford it now." It seems as though most of the husbands gave little thought to their motivations for becoming a father.

Most fathers did not attend parenthood and Lamaze classes in preparation for their child. Although both classes were available, only one-third attended the parenthood class and one-fourth attended the Lamaze class. An insurance salesman said, "I'll take her to the hospital but the rest is up to her and the doc."

This attitude of semi-involvement was continued when the baby came home from the hospital. Although 85 per cent of the babies were bottle fed, the fathers actually fed their babies an average of only five times per week. As for changing diapers, most fathers averaged only six times per week. Getting up at night to take care of the baby involved the average father less than once per week. One pharmacist said, "I have to get up in the morning to go to work. If I don't get my sleep, I've had it."

Despite the belief that daily

care may nurture a positive relationship between father and child, most fathers (73 per cent) indicated that they have never wished that they could return to the time before the baby was born. In addition, each father (all 102) described his feelings for his baby as either love (15 per cent) or love plus extreme happiness (85 per cent). When asked how his feelings have changed since the baby was born, one father said, "For the better... he is really terrific. His good health, alertness, and good looks allow him center stage wherever we go." Another said, "I love our baby more than I thought I ever would."

Effect On Marriage

Although most fathers (75 per cent) said that their baby had no effect on their marriage, several fathers (20 per cent) indicated that their marital relationship had "improved" since the baby. A young accountant said, "I didn't know I was capable of feeling this much love for anyone. Love for my child has spilled over into our marriage and brought my wife and me much closer." Another explained that the baby had become a mutual object of joy that they could share. "Before I knew it, I was excited about coming home to dash upstairs and peer into the bassinet with my wife."

In sharp contrast to the above, a few fathers (3 per cent) reported that their marital happiness had lessened since the baby. These fathers revealed that they were jealous of the attention that their wives gave to the baby and resented having meals delayed, a tired wife to talk to, and a messy home. "Before the baby, I was the most important person in her life. Now I'm number two and I don't like it," reflected a young banker.

Still fewer (2 per cent) fathers revealed that the baby had a severe negative impact on their marriage. They reported wishing that the baby had not been born. One biology teacher said, "A baby is an organism that makes loud noises at one end and is utterly irresponsible at the other. It's good for the baby that my wife loves it, because I don't."

The biggest effect of the baby on the marriage was during pregnancy. Although most fathers reported "no effect," about 15 per cent said that their marriage got worse during the pregnancy. Another 25 per cent said that the birth of their child was a welcome relief from the pregnancy stage. One father complained, "When she was first pregnant, she was always hugging the toilet with morning sickness. Later, she became uncomfortable and would toss and turn at night as she tried to sleep. Our sex life—it slowed down—I was afraid of mashing the baby and my wife seemed less interested."

Effect On In-Laws And Parents

Most fathers (85 per cent) said that the relationship with their in-laws was not affected by the baby, while 10 per cent reported an improved relationship. "Finally, we have something to talk about when they visit us," also said one father. Another remarked, "My in-laws helped us a lot when our baby was born. Carol's mother cooked good meals, washed diapers, and got up at night to feed the baby. They also gave him a lot of clothes which we would have had to buy. It's easy to like people who do things for you."

The effect of the baby on the parental relationship followed the same pattern. Most fathers (85 per cent) said that the baby did not have an effect while 10 per cent talked of an improved relationship.

In summary, these fathers reported a great deal of delight and satisfaction as first-time parents. Other studies have reached the same conclusion. Dr. Daniel Hobbs at the University of Georgia found that "not one of 53 fathers would use the phrase 'extensive or severe crisis' to describe his first experience with parenthood." At the University of Minnesota, Family Life Specialist Candyce Russell reported that fatherhood was only a slight or moderate crisis event (described as a change in self, spouse, or relationship with significant others which the person defined as "bothersome") for 272 first-time fathers.

Other research has suggested that the birth of a new baby is a crisis event. Professor E.E. LeMasters, a teacher in the School of Social Work at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, reported that 83 per cent of the couples in his study (46) said that their first baby was an extensive or severe crisis event. Similarly, Dr. Everett Dyer at the University of Houston observed that 53 per cent of his couples (a total of 32) experienced an extensive or severe crisis. When the fathers in these studies were asked to specify how their new babies upset them, typical complaints were as follows: "I haven't had a good night's sleep since we brought the baby home from the hospital"; "The expenses caused by the baby coupled with the fact that my wife quit working is about to do me in"; "We can't go places like we used to"; and "I can't watch television or read the newspaper without the sound of a crying baby."

As already noted, most husbands regarded fatherhood as an enjoyabale experience. A photographer said, "Our daughter is beautiful. When we take her to the grocery store and push her up and down the isles, people literally stop their basket, lean over toward her, and comment on her outstanding features." When physical appearance was not a source of enjoyment, playing with the baby was mentioned. A graduate student said, "Rolling with him on the floor, hearing that 'he-he-he-' laugh he makes, and watching him crawl after me is a fantastic experience. It relaxes me and makes me feel that the work I'm going through in graduate school is worth it." Finally, fathers were less specific but very enthusiastic about being a parent. One of the physicians who provided for the pre-and postnatal care of Lisa (our daughter) said, "The only thing that I regret about children is that we did not have more of them."

Hence, while most fathers reported that fatherhood makes them happier, other fathers experience less favorable reactions. What makes the difference? Based on the information from the 102 fathers I studies, three patterns emerged: 1. Happy mother—Wives who like their role as a mother tended to make their husband happy as fathers. A real estate broker said, "I makes me feel good to see how much my wife enjoys our baby. She enjoys taking care of our daughter, and I enjoy taking care of them."

On the other hand, wives who complained about their babies made fatherhood a nightmare. An art designer remarked, "It upsets me to listen to my wife complain about how much trouble the baby has been that day." 2. Couple time together—Fathers who went out to eat, see a movie, or take a drive with their wives about as often after the baby as before tended to enjoy their baby more than those fathers who reported cutting in half the social time they spent with their wives. "Before our son was born, we used to go out every weekend. Now, lack of money and babysitters keep us at home. It's not good for our marriage to stay home all the time—I'm certain of that," said a disgruntled car salesman. 3. Good marriage after the baby—Males who enjoyed being fathers reported that their marriage was happier since the baby. "Our baby gave us a common goal, a purpose. Since she was born, we have been much closer. I can't explain it, but that's what happened," mused the manager of a grocery store.

It is interesting to note that fathers who had a "bad marriage (before the baby)," who did not plan to have the baby, and who did not attend parenthood classes were just as likely to enjoy their baby as fathers who were good husbands, had planned babies, and attended parenthood classes.

What can we learn from this study? First, the way a wife reacts as a mother will affect the way her husband reacts as a father. If she is enthusiastic toward her baby, the father is more likely to experience these same feelings. Second, the spouses should take time to be alone to "feed" their relationship. Their role of husband and wife should not be forgotten now that they are father and mother. Rather, the couple who regard their marriage as having primary importance, seem to be the best parents.

When I compare myself with the other 102 fathers, it seems as though my adjustment has been more difficult than most. However, a close male friend (father of three daughters) has assured me that the joy and excitement of parenthood for the father begins at age two. "When she learns to talk and respond back to you, she will capture your heart." I believe him.

'Dream Realized' When Asked To Visit U.S. By Band Members

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Helena Michalowska, a 22-year-old Polish girl, keeps asking people to pinch her "so I'll know I'm really in the U.S.A."

Being in the U.S.A. was an eventuality she never even dreamed of last summer when she was serving as guide to the Elkland, Pa., High School Marching Band, which spent three weeks traveling around Poland giving concerts.

Returning to their hometown (population 2,700), the youngsters were so enthusiastic about Lena, as she is called, that the townspeople raised money through bake sales, barbecues and concerts and invited her for a visit. Enculturation, Inc., the educational services organization that arranged the Polish tour, worked out the red tape and provided the air fare.

In Manhattan for more sightseeing after a month with Elkland hosts who took her on trips around Pennsylvania and New York, she sat on the floor of her hotel room here and talked about her adventures, including a visit to Niagara Falls.

"I was collecting postcards as a little girl and one of the first was Niagara Falls," she said. "I always wanted to see that place but that I would ever be able to was beyond my imagination. It was even more impressive than I expected."

Miss Michalowska has found that Americans are as interested in her country as she is in theirs, but adds that while some people know a lot about Poland, others know nothing.

"They ask things like 'Do you have cars?'," she says with a laugh. "The most frequently asked question is 'Do the kids wear jeans?'. The answer is yes, we do — plus T-shirts and clogs," Miss Michalowska, wearing jeans, a blue-and-white checked shirt and platform-soled sandals, stated firmly.

"Young people there also have all sorts of discussions, go dancing and also fall in love with each other," added the visitor who, though it's not official and she has no ring, says "I feel engaged — yes," to a boy back home.

What she finds most different here is the fact that "people don't use their legs. In Poland public transportation is very well developed and people use that instead of always being in their own cars in traffic jams."

Miss Michalowska learned the English that she speaks fluently, with a slight and charming accent, in high school in her native Warsaw. She perfected it during six months in England, where she was a part-time student and mother's helper.

"I've always been fond of speaking foreign languages and meeting people," she explained of her guide job as "the take-care person" for the band members, which she undertook after completing a six-month course in the Student Tourism Bureau. "I am a proud Pole and I think we have so much to show."

Miss Michalowska, 5 foot 4 and an undisclosed number of pounds heavier than before she started trying out American cooking, recalled that she and the students corresponded after they returned home.

"They started saying they wanted me to come to America, and I thought it sounds good but it's never going to happen. Then they became serious and said they would raise the money. When I got here I couldn't believe it. I asked someone to pinch me to realize I was really in the U.S.A.

"Last summer when the students were in Poland they kept saying how friendly, open and willing Poles are. I wondered, isn't it like that over there? Now my impression is that

When she returns to Warsaw, the June graduate of the College of Trade and Foreign Languages there will start work in a national trade office, where she will be dealing with exporting agricultural machinery.

She'll take back with her many snapshots "of where I was and what I saw, things that were so interesting to me and which were never on the postcards — and a knowledge of people and a broader way of looking at everything."

Miss Karen Jean Hecker Weds On Friday Evening

Miss Karen Jean Hecker and Curtis Grant Crawford were united in marriage in a private candlelight ceremony Friday night at seven o'clock.

The Rev. R. Graham Nahouse performed the double ring ceremony in Our Redeemer Lutheran Church. A program of organ music was presented by Dr. Robert E. Irwin.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Arthur Hecker of Greenville, the bride was given in marraige by her father. She wore a formal length gown of white chantilly lace designed with a high neckline encircled with ruffled rachel lace. The bodice featured chantilly lace in a bib effect which was outlined in the ruffled lace and centered with covered buttons. Floral Venise lace accentuated the modified empire waistline. The cardinal designed sleeves were styled in the sheer lace edged in ruffled rachel lace and Venise lace. The full flared skirt extended to an attached sweep train.

The bride wore a fingertip length illusion veil edged in Venise lace and held in place by a bandeau headpiece trimmed in Venise lace. She carried a prayerbook with a bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, miniature carnations and baby's breath. The prayerbook was carried by the bride's mother in her wedding.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Woodrow Crawford of Lake Mary, Fla.

The chancel of the church held two urns of gladioli and chrysanthemums with seven branched candelabra entwined with greenery on each side. The couple knelt for the benediction on a white prie-dieu.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Steven James Hecker of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride. She was dressed in a formal length nile green organza gown designed with a white chantilly lace bodice over nile green organza. It featured a round neckline edged with Venise lace flowers and long full sleeves with deep cuffs trimmed in white chantilly lace and Venise lace flowers. She carried a colonial nosegay of yellow daisies and baby's breath.

The father of the bridegroom was best man.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length sleeveless gown with a bodice of blue lace and a skirt of blue knit. The gown was complemented by a long sleeved jacket of blue lace. The mother of the bridegroom wore a gown of crystal blue double knit featuring an ivory lace panel up the front, which encircled the neckline. Both mothers wore yellow sweetheart rose corsages.

The grandmother of the bride, Mrs. G.E. Muller of Wallkill, N.Y., and the grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. C.H. May of Greenville were presented white miniature carnation corsages.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm not saying there are subversives in this country. And I'm not saying there are alien forces at work to destroy the Free World.

I am merely suggesting that when it takes a woman so long to get a pound of bacon out of its plastic container that the price has gone up 57 cents, then the packaging industry must be viewed with suspicion.

I personally would like to have firsthand the resume on the man who invented the plastic bubble packaging principle; that is, putting pens, cold tablets, safety pins and pocket combs under an airtight piece of impregnable plastic.

Chances are you would find the inventor is a ballet dancer from Leningrad who defected to the United States when they played Warren, Ohio. He immediately gave up his career on stage and invented this wonderful means of packaging with no possible way to gain access to the product.

It's only an educated guess, but the one-liners, "Tear around dotted line" and "Push thumb on the tab to open," were probably invented by a student activist who turned from activising to advertising and humor. His two "biggies" are the spice can where you whirl around the holes to a spot that reads, "Press here" (It doesn't say with what!) and an invitation to surgery on the canned-ham can that reads, "Insert key and turn."

I would like to meet face to face the man who designed the new child-proof caps. (Any fool knows Americans do not need a child-proof cap. If you have something you don't want within the reach of children, you just put it in a garbage bag, set it on the counter and yell, "Someone empty this!")

It's probably only a rumor, but someone said that the woman who designed the package containing rolls of gift-wrapping paper has been under surveillance by our government for years. It's too late. The damage has been done.

The other night after tearing off the end with my teeth, I used scissors to cut open the cellophane cylinder. The cellophane clung to my arms like magnets. Once free of the cellophane, I tried to take the tape off the gift-wrapping paper only to have it tear off half the design with it.

The originator of the most sinsiter plot to weaken the American system, however, still remains a secret... the man who hides the door handles in cars. It was rumored a CIA agent knew his identity, but by the time he tried to get out of his

Women's Fashion & Sew
Designer Revolutionizes Home Sewing

By HELEN LINDER
Fashion Editor

"I am so busy adjusting my patterns, that I can hardly find time to sew" a typical home seamstress said to Dusan Mrak.

In the closets or work baskets of every home seamstress lurk half-finished garments: a dress with no hem on it, a blouse with sleeves basted but not sewn, pants cut out but never attempted. These are fitting failures, garments that the potential wearer tried on, sighted and took off with a hopeless shrug. Perhaps she ripped out the seams and tried again. Perhaps her patience wore thin when she again tried it on and it just didn't fit.

Dusan Mrak, head of the American Fashion Institute, a New York based firm which was founded in 1968 said - " It seems that most of the giants in the home sewing industry try d a m n h a r d, to make her sewing efforts as difficult as possible. It starts with the pattern. When she opens the envelope, she finds 12 to 18 pattern parts in it, every one of which has to be proportionately adjusted. That in itself is virtually impossible, but she tries for 4 to 6 hours, and ends up with a mess. By the time she thinks it is ready to cut on fabric, she is fed up and has no will or desire to complete the garment. She is constantly faced with buying cheap fabrics with the thought in mind "If it doesn't come out right, it won't cost too much."

We know very well, that if she were sure the pattern will fit, she would buy better quality fabrics to make longer lasting and better looking garments."

Mrak lectures to thousands and thousands of women each year on his US and international lecture tours. He speaks six languages and his demonstrations include some of the most amazing short cuts and easy sew techniques. One that impressed this writer most is, when he demonstrated to me the innermost secrets of the garment industry, was of how simple it is to create fashions at home by copying almost any famous designer with the aid of the basic pre-fitted sheath pattern. Look at the illustration of an elegant design in your Sunday paper, which in ready-to-wear may cost anything from $80.- to $165.-, Mrak demonstrated how any novice or advanced seamstress can make it in less than 15 minutes, at a cost of less than $20.- in her exact individual size and shape.

Mrak's lectures are loaded with fun and laughter. He would call two ladies to the podium, one an average figure, the other as difficult as possible to fit. He asks the first one, - "Have you ever made a pattern - for yourself from scratch?" The answer of course is "No." Than he continues, - "Now you will make one in 20 minutes for this lady here." Sighs are heard from the audience - "this we must see" - But she makes it - for the first time in her life. The same lady comes back the following day wearing finished garment, smiling happily.

As Pattern designer Dusan Mrak began his technical career as an advisor with the manufacturers of Mercedes - Benz. Today he is director and founder of the American-Fashion Institute in New York City. His jump from cars to designing patterns for women's fashions is an interesting story. In 1961 he accepted a position with a South African firm in Frankfurt, Germany and one of his assignments was to promote women's fashions. This work took him to some of Europe's most famous Fashion houses, and became intrigued with the pattern - making techniques of Europe's leading designers.

By 1972 Mrak perfected a simplified pattern-making and fashion-designing method that can be quickly mastered by anyone capable of following easy step by step directions.

Knowing that all home sewers could not come to New York City for study and training, he decided to take his pattern concepts to the women themselves. Now with a crew of trained seamstresses he goes all over the United States promoting his techniques and making his new sewing ideas available to everyone.

She states: "In 3 hours I have learned more with Dusan than in all my 20 years of home sewing. "W h e r e w e r e y o u a l l t h i s t i m e ?"

Mrak's pattern making techniques enable anyone to make exactly fitted pattern in 20 minutes. He has found the answer to the problem of finding patterns to fit the myriad of shapes and sizes which people come in. His method is unique and designed to be used by 12 year olds and up.

He further states, -"Most women have $ 60 to $ 150 worth of standard size patterns at home. Half of them have never been even used."

With his method - you never need to buy another pattern again!

This unique sewing approach will be a stimulus to the entire home sewing industry. Most important, Mrak says, if a woman is able to make beautifully fitting, up-to-the-minute fashions, she will add immeasurably to the pleasure and satisfaction she takes in home sewing.

"Let MAGIC-FIT PATTERN do MAGIC for YOU."

A special craft workshop has been scheduled to be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 21-22, in Williamston. The area event, sponsored by the Agriculture Extension Service, is designed to train leaders.

Classes will be offered in the following: beginning needlepoint; chair bottom caning; Chrismons; frame weaving; macrame; pineneedle craft; quilted pillow tops; wood carving; and recreation crafts.

The workshop will begin at 9:30 a.m. and will continue until 4 p.m. Interested leaders may pre-register for any one of the classes by contacting Mrs. Sue B. May, Pitt County home economics extension agent.

Guilford College's Seminars Abroad program for adults is offering the public a 21-day at-cost trip, Oct. 15-Nov. 5, to several countries bordering the Mediterranean Ocean.

Definite countries to be visited are Turkey, Egypt, Greece and Spain. One of the planned stops, Lebanon, is being eliminated at this time, according to Ms. Ruth Rothe, tour conductor.

An unusual feature about the Seminars Abroad's tour is that in some of the countries, the group will have social hours and dinners with the natives. Another is that while most days are filled with visits to historic sites, one day is set aside in each country for shopping, additional sightseeing of personal interest or for resting.

With Istanbul as the host city in Turkey, the group will visit such attractions as the Topkapi Palace, the Blue Mosque and the Grand Bazaar. From Cairo, with its famous National Museum, the group will travel to the Cheops Pyramid at Gizeh, one of the Seven Wonders of the World, and return there to see a sound and light show.

Another sound and light show is scheduled for Athens and in addition to sightseeing on land, a boat trip through the Greek Island will be available. From Madrid, where there will be an evening of flamenco, the group will make a one-day tour to the home of El Greco, Toledo.

Oriental Restaurants Gain In Popularity

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

Fashions in food appear to be following fashions in clothing.

The Chinese influence transcends all other ethnic looks in fall and winter styles, while oriental restaurants are nudging Italian ones in a popularity poll.

A survey of ethnic dining tastes by the National Restaurant Association showed Oriental restaurants only one per cent behind Italian ones in popularity, or 30 per cent compared with 31 per cent for the Italians.

Mexican, German and French restaurants ran a poor third, fourth and fifth, with 16, six and four per cent, respectively.

It found that age and income are important influences, especially in the choice of German food. The most consistent patrons of German restaurants are people over 45, and persons in one or two-member households in northern urban areas, the survey found.

The greatest variable in French restaurant patronage is income, which obviously is related to the generally higher prices on menus of this persuasion. The survey found that persons with incomes of $25,000 a year were three times as likely to order French food as those with lower incomes.

Inflation and recession apparently help boost patronage at Italian and Oriental establishments, because many of their dishes use smaller quantities of expensive ingredients such as beef, seafood and chicken, and stretch them with vegetables.

"If you order a steak, you are paying for a large piece of meat," says Sid Leo, operator of a Cantonese restaurant in Portland, Ore. "But in Oriental cooking many different dishes are made out of that one piece of meat."

Leo also attributes its appeal to its opportunities for sharing and combining a variety of tastes in one meal.

Frank Grisanti, treasurer of a Memphis, Tenn., restaurant, says:

"Pizza, spaghetti and other pasta dishes combine familiar ingredients into something unusual. They are mysterious and exotic without being completely new and strange."

Grisanti and other Italian restaurateurs across the United States said their establishments tend to be more popular with people under 25 and those with higher than average incomes. They are the most popular ethnic restaurants in five of the nine geographic areas surveyed.

But Oriental eateries outrank them in the New England and Pacific Regions, just as Mexican ones do in the West South Central and Mountain regions. Youth and family size boost the popularity of Mexican restaurants, the NRA said. It said their popularity gradually decreases as their patrons' age increases. Other influences: low price, good protein value and a large Mexican population in both regions.

Only 20 per cent of the 3,200 families surveyed said they do not eat at ethnic restaurants. Such families tended to be older and less affluent than other patrons, and much more numerous in the West North Central and East South Central areas.

The NRA speculated that regional patronage rates are not altogether a matter of consumer preference. Restaurant availability could be an important factor, it said.

Couple Exchanges Vows Saturday

LEXINGTON—The marriage of Peggy Lynn Kearney and William Wayne Rogerson was solemnized Saturday at 3:00 p.m. at the Holly Grove Lutheran Church here by the Rev. Charlie Hoyle.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Carl Conrad, organists, Mrs. Charlie Hoyle, pianist, and Miss Patrice Kepley, soloist. Bulletins were given out by Miss Ann Hoover of Lexington.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Henry Kearney II of Rt. 1, Lexington, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wayne Rogerson of Bethel.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white dotted swiss voile over peau de soie and Nottingham lace. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline, empire waistline and bishop sleeves. Trimmings and borders of Venise and Nottingham lace began at the neckline and continued to the hemline. The waistline was enhanced with matching lace and a band encircled to the back. The sleeves were decorated with dotted swiss voile cuffletts appliqued with lace borders. The skirt was embellished with lace which continued to the chapel length train flowing to the floor.

Her chapel and elbow length veil of silk illusion, trimmed with Venise and Nottingham lace, fell from a pearled lace Juliet cap. The veil was designed by the bride's mother. She carried a hand bouquet of white roses, daisies and baby's breath.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Gary Hedrick of Lexington. She was dressed in a gown of floral white dotted swiss lined in green silk. The gown featured a halter style empire waist with a sheer front tie jacket of floral white dotted swiss. She carried a hand bouquet of daisies and baby's breath tied green ribbon.

The maid of honor was Miss Debbie Lofton of Lexington. Her gown was fashioned like that of the honor attendant and was lined in yellow silk and her bouquet was tied with yellow ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Miss Anna Barnes of Bennettsville, S. C., Miss Marsha Edwards of Cheraw, S. C., Miss Terri Rogerson of Bethel, sister of the bridegroom; and Miss Ellen Warren of Winston-Salem. Their gowns were also styled like that of the matron of honor and were lined in blue silk and their bouquets were tied in blue ribbon.

Miss Beth Kearney of Morristown, N. J., niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a gown of blue dotted swiss with white organdy and a pinafore of white embroidery with lace and satin trim. She carried a basket of rose petals.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were James Doughtie and Robby Case, both of Bethel, John Gulley of Raleigh, George Kearney of Dalton, Ga., and Ike Kearney III of Morristown, N. J., brothers of the bride.

The couple will reside in Bethel.

The bride is a graduate of Central Davidson High School, Lexington, and Appalachian State University. She teachers elementary physical education in the Pitt County School District. The bridegroom is a graduate of Bethel High School and served in the U.S. Army. He is now engaged in farming.

Mrs. Charles Phelps, Mrs. Richard O'Brien, Mrs. Ike Kearney, Mrs. George Kearney, Miss Martha Hepler and Miss Jane Crotts assisted in serving. Beth and Jan Kearney distributed rice bags to the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hoover said good-byes.

Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Kearney received out-of-town guests and close friends at their home for a pig pickin'.

Mrs. William Hedrick and Mrs. Herman Lofton of Lexington were hostesses with their daughters, Miss Jane Crotts and Miss Debbie Lofton for the bridesmaids luncheon honoring the bride Saturday morning held at the home of Mrs. Hedrick.

Special guests were mothers of the bridal couple, and grandmothers, Mrs. Elise Phelps, Mrs. Zell Kearney and Mrs. Lillian Rogerson, Mrs. Ike Kearney III and Mrs. George Kearney, and members of the wedding party were honored guests.

An after-rehearsal buffet dinner was held Friday evening at the Dutch Club, Lexington, honoring the bridal couple. Hosts and hostesses were parents of the bridegroom, friends and relatives.

Abby Debunks Discourse with Dead

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.,

DEAR ABBY: My sister's boyfriend died last year and she and I have been talking to his spirit on a Ouija board ever since. We have also talked to two other spirits on the Ouija board.

My aunt says that we shouldn't use the Ouija board because it is the work of the devil.

Can you give me any information about Ouija boards? Are they bad or not?

J.B. IN OLEAN, N.Y.

DEAR J.B.: The only way one can "talk" to a spirit is through prayer. And you don't need a Ouija board for that. A Ouija board is all right to use as a "game," but don't take it seriously.

DEAR ABBY: I have an unusual problem. I look pregnant, although I'm not.

I've always had a large protruding stomach. Then I became pregnant and foolishly gained 57 pounds.

My son is now 18-months-old, but I'm about 20 pounds overweight and look like I'm seven months pregnant no matter how I dress.

Needless to say, people are always saying to me, "Oh, you're having another one!"

When I say, "No, I'm not pregnant," an awkward silence follows.

Abby, if anyone can come up with a better response to the endless comments, it's you.

LOOKS P.G. IN FLORIDA

DEAR LOOKS: A more satisfactory solution is what to DO, not what to SAY. I know it's easier said than done, but if you would trim off that excess weight and buy yourself a good foundation garment, you'll lose that pregnant look.

DEAR ABBY: About six months ago I met a pleasant, middle-aged married woman while visiting a mutual friend in another city.

After returning home, I was surprised to receive a little gift from her. Nothing costly; just a trinket with a friendly note, "I loved meeting you. Keep in touch."

I wrote and thanked her for her thoughtfulness. A few weeks later, along comes another little gift from this woman. Again I wrote to thank her.

Then she sent a store-brought card for no special occasion with the message, "It's nice to have a special friend like you."

I acknowledged the card only because I would have felt guilty if I didn't. Abby, I am a busy, professional woman, and I wish this woman would leave me alone. It irritates me to have to write these thank-you notes to someone I hardly know.

Why would a person persist in keeping up a contact without any encouragement whatsoever? And how do I get off the hook?

BAFFLED

DEAR BAFFLED: Obviously she wants to maintain the contact. Chill the relationship by making your "thank yous" brief and formal. Unkind? Not really. She's subtly trying to obligate you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO L. IN BUFFALO: You can never do a kindness too soon because you never know how soon it will be too late.

TOURISM DROPS A SMALL AMOUNT

CAPETOWN, South Africa (AP) — A total of 610,170 tourists visited South Africa in 1974, a drop of .28 per cent on 1973 figures, tourism minister Marais Steyn said here. Traditional tourist countries like Spain experienced drops of more than 12 per cent in the number of visitors, he said.

From South Africa's traditional tourist source, Europe, there was an increase of 9 per cent in the number of visitors.

Whale Exhibit In Ellis' Art

MYSTIC SEAPORT, Conn. (UPI) — A collection of 10 paintings by Richard Ellis, depicting the different species of great whales, is on display at Mystic Seaport until Oct 4.

The paintings are in the Campbell Room beneath the Seaport Planetarium. The Campbell Room is regularly used for the "Whales, Whaling, Whalemen" slide-talk demonstration which offers an historical account of the American whaling industry. Included in the talk is a description of whaling's decline and the increasing awareness of the need to conserve these largest of mammals.

The 30-minute whaling programs are free to Seaport visitors.

TEXAS TOURISM

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — An estimated 19.6 million out-of-state tourists spent $4.8 billion in Texas during 1974, the Texas Tourist Development Agency reports.

Auto visitors accounted for 81 per cent of the tourist traffic.

Texans Are Big Tractor-Users

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Farmers in Texas used 297,800 farm tractors to plow their fields during 1974.

The Governor's Energy Advisory Council says 40 per cent of the farm tractors were powered by diesel fuel, 39 per cent by gasoline, 18 per cent by liquefied petroleum gas and two per cent by other fuels.

The trend in the state during the past 20 years has been away from small gasoline-powered tractors and toward large diesel tractors.

Can Childproof That Ice Chest

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doors must be removed from discarded refrigerators, but what about other tight-closing products designed to lock in the cold yet large enough to hold adventurous youngsters?

According to reports from the Thermos Division, companies can childproof their ice chests by designing them with frictiontype latches that will release when internal pressure is exerted.

"Swiss Family Robinson," premiering Sunday, Sept. 14, (7 to 8 p.m.) on ABC-TV, co-stars Cameron Mitchell, for some time now type-cast as "the rascal" in films and TV, and sometimes on the stage.

Mitchell, who is now a resident of Darlington, S.C., "and I love it," portrays Jeremiah Worth, "a rascal, drunk, illiterate, degenerate, but cornball funny," co-starring with Martin Milner.

"It's a character I can have some fun with, like Buck Cannon on 'The High Chaparral,' I have never really wanted to be a constant leading man. In this film, I wear a lot of dirt. The outfit, and I wore it six weeks, was thrown into the condemned pile when I finished," he said, laughing. "I knew I smelled when some of the cast started backing off from me.

"My wife was very unhappy. She doesn't like me playing dirty old men, but really, I never played a senator, or businessman .... any kind of nice guy."

Mitchell is committed to the show, but "I don't know whether I really want it. It means moving back to Hollywood for six, possibly nine months if we make 26 of them. That's 260 shooting days out of the year ...."

Then, he doesn't want another series?

"That's a loaded question," Mitchell replied. "If I have to play a part, I'd just as soon it be Jeremiah. I can't knock a series, really. 'Chaparral' had a weekly audience of 300 million 'cause it played all around the world."

What was his best movie, and the worst?

"I never made the best one. I made one my minister father liked ... I played Christ in 'The Robe.' I made some that made a lot of money, too. I guess my best role was in 'The Death of a Salesman,' and in the theatre it was 'The King and I.' The worst movie was 'The Klansman' the past year. We thought it would be a good one, but it was terrible.

The 52-year-old veteran actor says the most difficult thing about his profession is "to play a part that is something I don't believe in, but I have to perform anyway."

Cosell's Confident

Does the knowledgable host of "Saturday Night Live With Howard Cosell" (premiering Sept. 20, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV) consider himself to be 'Ed Sullivan re-incarnated'?

"I am not Ed Sullivan," Cosell stated emphatically. "Ed Sullivan was what he was, and he lasted 23 years. There's no similarity between us, rather obviously. Unlike Ed, I will be going into the audience and talking with people." Just what is his role in this new variety show?

Cosell says he will not be a song-and-dance man or a stand-up comedian. "I couldn't be. I would make an absolute disaster of the show. I intend to talk, and there will be interviews of course—brief and to the point. The people will be treated as people, or differently from what they've been treated as before. It will not be a mere introduction and then a 'kisser'—'thank-you-very-much' and all the rest.

"We've been working for a number of weeks on booking guests and you'll see great stars who have had a steadfast refusal in the past to go on television. Hopefully, there'll be the Streisands, the Liza Minnellis, the Henry Kissingers.

"You'll also see on our show everything . . late breaking items that will be making news, just as we've done in sports. We expect to invade every avenue of the whole damn world; entertainment, news, and - to a limited degree - sports. Every week the show will be different and exciting."

Cosell doesn't feel that hosting a variety show is very different from his past role as sports show host.

"In the broad spectrum, there are some similarities and, of course, there are many differences. However, in the broad sense of being a performer - if one is a performer - especially with the training, background, the education, the mind and the articulation - there's little difference. It depends on one's background, and my own background is extremely broadly based."

HOWARD COSELL

The 55-year-old native of Winston-Salem, N.C., has the reputation as the nation's most controversial sportscaster and best television sports reporter. In addition to his sports' accolades, Cosell has also hosted many of the 'talk shows' on TV and has been a guest on numerous variety shows.

"In my opinion," he concluded, "television desperately needs some of the 'bite' it used to have. We just don't see it in the present entertainment world anymore."

A 're-incarnated Ed Sullivan'? An unpredicatable host? You bet!

"Let's face it," says Roone Arledge, executive producer of the show, "Howard's a volatile personality. He'll probably be in 50,000 battles with people before the show is over."

It could well be that the 'bite' is about to make its presence known in television once again.

"Cabaret" On ABC-TV

"Cabaret," with an extraordinary total of eight Academy Awards and the greatest audience popularity of any musical of the past decade, will be the season premiere presentation of "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sept. 14, 9 to 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Liza Minnelli, in her first movie singing role, won an Oscar as Best Actress of the year for her performance as the incurably romantic Sally Bowles. Kathleen Cornell in the New York Daily News said, "Liza Minnelli is a star — unlike anyone else (and that includes even her mother, Judy Garland.) She sings with a vengeance, she acts with equal intensity, she has the true comic's ability to project both humor and pathos simultaneously ... 'Cabaret' is Liza's show and she is nothing short of sensational."

Joel Grey, recruiting his Broadway performance as the vicious master of ceremonies in a tawdry Berlin cabaret, won the Oscar as Best Supporting Actor. Film critic Hollis Alpert said, "Joel Grey all but walks off with the show ... nothing like Mr. Grey has happened before, not on stage and not in films."

Director Bob Fosse also won both the Academy Award and the critics' praise: Charles Champlin (L. A. Times) called him "the principal star in an all-star vehicle ... an extraordinary inventive filmmaker."

Co-star Michael York was also roundly applauded: Judith Crist, noting that he is "always a fine actor," added that here he is "able to display the full range of his gifts."

Based on the musical play by Joe Masterhoff, the play, "I Am a Camera," by John Van Druten, and the book, "Goodbye to Berlin," by Christopher Isherwood, the Jay Presson Allen screenplay deals with flames reflected in the bitterly cynical "merry-making" at the Kit-Kat Klub.

Sally Bowles, a young American performer whose incorruptible innocence sees only glamour in the sardonic surroundings of the Kit-Kat Klub, is looking for some famous movie producer to make her a star. The man she actually meets is a sensitive young teacher who can't even deal with his own life, let alone hers. Their love affair — at once tender, stormy and doomed — is played out in a climate of betrayal, jealousy and viciousness, with the clouds of war and the horrors of organized anit-Semitism threatening their friends in particular and the world in general. Lovers discover courage previously denied, ancient truths are proven to be still true and life continues. But the clouds remain.

'CABARET' STARS—Liza Minelli and Joel Grey sing and dance their cruel parodies in a shabby nightclub as the clouds of war gather in "Cabaret," the multi-Oscar-winning film which will be the season premiere on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Sunday Sept. 14 (9-11:30 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

Stars Of Daytime Series

Portraying Liza is actress Meg Bennett who decided in the third grade that she wanted to become an actress. She says her father insists she was a "born ham." Her father, who is in the printing business, and her mother, a psychologist, live in California where Meg was born and grew up.

Her theatrical debut came in a fourth - grade school production, and she has been acting ever since.

A graduate of Northwestern University with a degree in theater, Meg has appeared in numerous summer-stock productions throughout the country. In 1971, she traveled to New York and, almost immediately, went into the cast of the musical "Godspell." She left that to tour with "Barefoot in the Park," then returned to New York to join another musical, "Grease," and landed her first regular television role in "Search for Tomorrow," in September, 1974.

Away from the television studio, Miss Bennett enjoys yoga, singing and dancing. She has also studied the viola for 10 years.

Cast in the role of Steve Kalso is Michael Nouri who, in addition to his role in "Search for Tomorrow," also is a 'regular' in "Beacon Hill," a series which recently debuted on the network and is seen on Tuesday evenings.

Liz Torres Has Role

Actress-singer-comedienne Liz Torres assumes the continuing role of 'Julie Erskine' in the new half-hour comedy series "Phyllis," left vacant by the untimely death of Barbara Colby in July. Phyllis" stars Cloris Leachman in the title role and is seen Mondays from 8:30 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Miss Torres, who has been substituting for Rita Moreno in the Broadway production of "The Ritz," will first be seen in a "Phyllis" episode currently being filmed and scheduled to be broadcast in October. The talented actress was also seen as a regular on the Ben Vereen variety show, in addition to her job in "The Ritz."

Old Friends Get Together

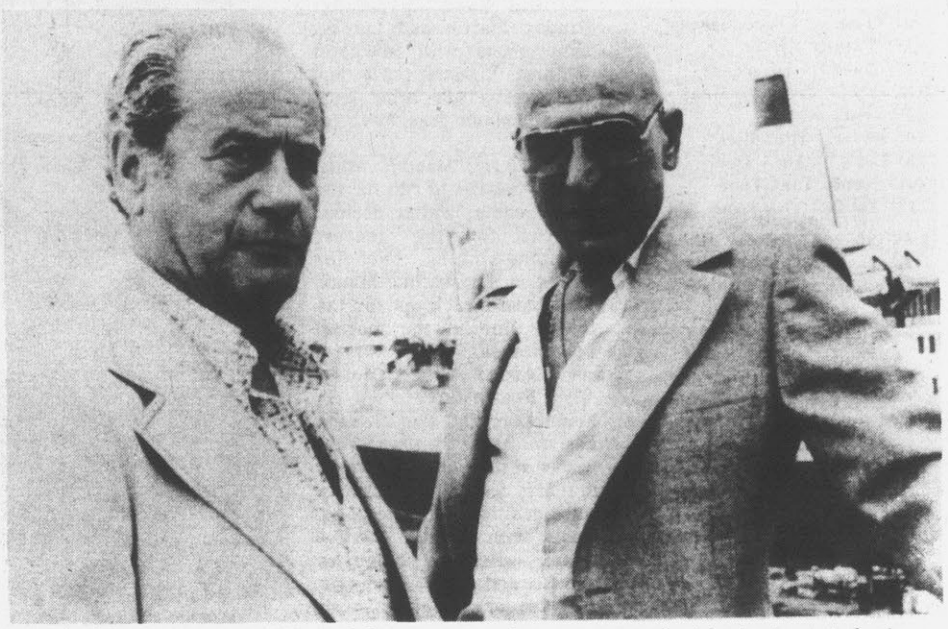
When old friends get together after a long absence, they naturally reminisce. So it was when Telly Savalas welcomed guest star Eli Wallach to the "Kojak" set on a hot, humid July day in New York City, site of the filming of the special two-hour presentation on the series' third-season premiere, Sunday, Sept. 14, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Wallach had not worked with Savalas since 1965, when they filmed the motion picture "Genghis Khan" in Czechoslovakia. They each kidded the other for being responsible for not following through on investing in a foreign car distributionship which today would be worth millions of dollars. "But I don't think either one of us would have been happy selling cars," Wallach observed.

Wallach also reminisced about his college days at the University of Texas, where he, and another friend, Walter Cronkite, were both majoring in drama. After graduation, it was depression time and "neither one of us could find work," Wallach recalled.

Noting that Cronkite found his niche with CBS News, Wallach said, "I've always had an affinity for CBS. They've always been a forward-thinking network. When Television City was built in Hollywood, it was quite an innovation. I was among the first to do live television there."

In his "Kojak" guest-starring role, Wallach portrays a man, caught in a crime, who cooperates with the police to catch the ringleaders and escape prison. "It's easy for me to identify with this role, I knew a man who cooperated in just this same fashion. Of course, he moved to Europe after that," Wallach joked.



COOPERATES — Eli Wallach (left) portrays a desperate man who tries to stay out of prison by helping series star Telly Savalas, as Kojak, trap a ruthless loan shark, on the two-hour story which will be the third-season premiere presentation of "Kojak," Sunday, September 14 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Badger Can Be Friendly Animal

His guttural protestations sound like a Mercedes McCambridge track from "The Exorcist." His body looks like someone smashed him with a shovel and did permanent damage, and his long claws and explosive temper give one the idea that he is eternally getting revenge on the person with the shovel.

But badgers, when given their own way, tend to be soft creatures, plodding along looking like wobbly tables, harmlessly sniffing out the friendlies they can find. And they can be trained, to an extent, says George Toth, trainer of the animal star of Walt Disney Productions' "The Boy Who Talked to Badgers," the two-part television season premiere to be aired on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday evening, Sept. 14 and 21, on NBC-TV, 7:00 to 8:00 p.m.

"They don't go after you," Toth says in a strong Hungarian accent, "but if you corner one to catch him, you'd better catch him."

Toth, who runs the Cougar Hill Ranch in Little Rock, Calif., about 60 miles from Los Angeles, has been the animal trainer for several other Disney films, including "The Secret of the Pond," a two-part action drama which also airs this season.

Toth began raising animals 23 years ago at the age of 16, beginning with birds of prey. He worked for the Hungarian government and later emigrated to the United States where he now keeps wolves, gophers, bears, otters, deer, and coyotes in addition to the nine badgers and a red-tailed hawk he used in the Disney show. Toth used conditioned response with the animals during filming, including buzzers and bells and a reward of chicken and grapes.

The badger is best known for its digging ability; it can outdig the pocket gopher and mole and can excavate itself underground in a matter of seconds. Toth says badgers will fight back when attacked unless the animal is just too large, but adds that one of his recently attacked a bear and sent the bruin yelping into the woods.

GUEST SPACE
In most of our homes the guest room has become as extinct as the live-in maid. Yet the problem of providing a comfortable sleeping place for the overnight guest is still with us. One way to solve the problem, of course, is a folding bed which goes into a closet. But, with storage space at a premium, many hostesses just can't afford to sacrifice an inch of the hall closet. Another idea is to add a permanent room accessory which is decorative yet doesn't call attention to tight space difficulties.
Add special floor covering for this new accessory to create the wanted effect. There is carpeting for every place in your home or business at Eastern Carpet Inc., 602 West Greenville Blvd., Greenville. 756-1944. "Carpet is our Business, Not a Hobby." "Where There's Always A Sale."

HOPELESSLY IN LOVE — Jack Lemmon stars as a successful executive — but henpecked husband — who decides to chuck it all and begin a new life when he meets a sophisticated, glamorous woman (Catherine Deneuve) in "The April Fools," on the "NBC Monday Night Movie" Monday, September 15 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Husband Yearns For New Life

Jack Lemmon stars as a successful executive but henpecked husband who yearns for a new life in "The April Fools," a sophisticated, romantic comedy on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Sept. 15, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

Catherine Deneuve, Peter Lawford, Sally Kellerman, Myrna Loy and Charles Boyer also star.

Though he is a successful Wall Street broker, Howard Brubaker (Lemmon) finds himself ill at ease at a posh Manhattan cocktail party where one of his first duties upon arriving is to call his domineering, suburban wife, Phyllis (Kellerman), to say he'll be late.

Brubaker, trapped in his stultifying marriage, is drawn like a magnet to the party's glamorous hostess, Catherine (Deneuve), who is also being stifled by her insensitive husband, Ted (Lawford).

As the evening wears on, Brubaker and Catherine declare their love for each other and, in the space of less than 24 hours, formulate a plan to run off to Paris together.

Myrna Loy and Charles Boyer portray Grace and Andre Greenlaw, an eccentric married couple who offer encouragement to the lovers.

Schifrin Scores 'Bronk'

Lalo Schifrin, Argentine-born composer and musician, has been signed by MGM-TV's executive Bruce Geller to write and conduct the theme music for "Bronk," a new weekly series starring Jack Palance and premiering on CBS-TV Sept. 21.

The prolific composer returns to the studio that gave him his first scoring assignments more than 10 years ago on "Rhino" and "Joy House."

The former jazz pianist, who was first hired by Geller to compose the themes for "Mission: Impossible" and "Mannix," has also scored "Medical Center," "Petrocelli" and the new ABC series "Starsky and Hutch."

His many motion picture scores include "Magnum Force," "Cool Hand Luke," "The Cincinnati Kid," "The Liquidator," "Kelly's Heroes," "The Fox," "The President's Analyst" and "The Four Musketeers."

The son of the longtime conductor of Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires studied in his homeland with Juan Carlos Paz, then at the Paris Conservatory before returning to write for the stage, modern dance and TV. Schifrin became interested in jazz in 1962 and joined Dizzy Gillespie's band as pianist and composer. He also has toured and recorded with his own trio and quintet.

Everett Says There's A Limit

If actor Chad Everett can figure out how to put all the medical knowledge he has acquired during his years of starring as Dr. Joe Gannon in "Medical Center" to use in case of a need for surgery, he really may achieve his dream of a self-sufficient life for him and his family.

Everett, who will start his seventh year as the omnipresent Dr. Gannon in "Medical Center", on CBS-TV, is building toward an existence which will be both pleasurable and completely independent from the rest of the world.

The ambition started six years ago with the purchase of a seven-acre ranch in Los Angeles' nearby pastoral suburb of Chatsworth. While Everett and his wife, Shelby, were in the midst of remodeling the existing ranch - style residence to reflect a Spanish theme, the disastrous Chatsworth fire of 1970 erased the structure and all but a couple of palm trees and the swimming pool.

The Everetts rebuilt, however, and now have a 6,000 - square - foot rambling Spanish Hacienda complemented by an 1,800-square - foot guest house and a 1,500-square-foot cantina, complete with sauna bath and underground, climate - controlled wine cellar. The complex includes a six-horse stable, new tennis court, and the swimming pool.

To this, the Everetts have added areas which will supply them with the necessities of life — vegetable gardens, fruit trees, pastures and cattle.

Under construction is a wind-driven generator which will supply the ranch with its own electricity. And Everett is soon to start digging a well to bring in his own water needs.

What more could a family need?

"People, for one thing," Everett says. "Even though I want to be self-sufficient, I certainly don't intend for us to become a family of recluses. My plans could just be categorized under the heading of 'Be Prepared.' Besides, where does a recluse get tennis partners?

During a hiatus in the filming of "Chico and the Man," Jack Albertson, a former song-and-dance man, will play a two-week engagement at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas.

What's New On 'Mike Douglas'

When comedian David Brenner was opening recently at the Fairmont Hotel in Atlanta, he and his audience had a surprise treat when Mike Douglas walked out and introduced him. Mike was in Atlanta being honored at a reception and decided to drop in on the Philadelphia native who has been a frequent guest on the Douglas show.

Joe Namath's mother, Rose Namath Szolnoki, guested on Mike's show recently and sought to correct the notion that "all Joe does is run around evenings.'½ Actually, according to Joe's mom from Beaver Falls (Pa.), his great pleasure is "chewing celery and munching pop corn." As for Joe's bachelorhood, Mrs. Szolnoki explained: "I remember when Joe first started playing football, he told me he would never marry until he's through playing football, because he wanted his marriage to be a success. And I feel that after he's through playing football, he'll marry."

Some of the 'famous quotes' heard by viewers of "The Mike Douglas Show" this summer are: Wayne Rogers explaining to Mike his departure from "M-A-S-H"; "(I'm leaving) so I can do other things that I haven't had an opportunity to do" . . . Howard Cosell telling Mike how he feels about being compared to Ed Sullivan now that he's getting in the TV variety show field: "There is a basic similarity. Ed was a journalist and I like to think that I am too, and a darn good one."

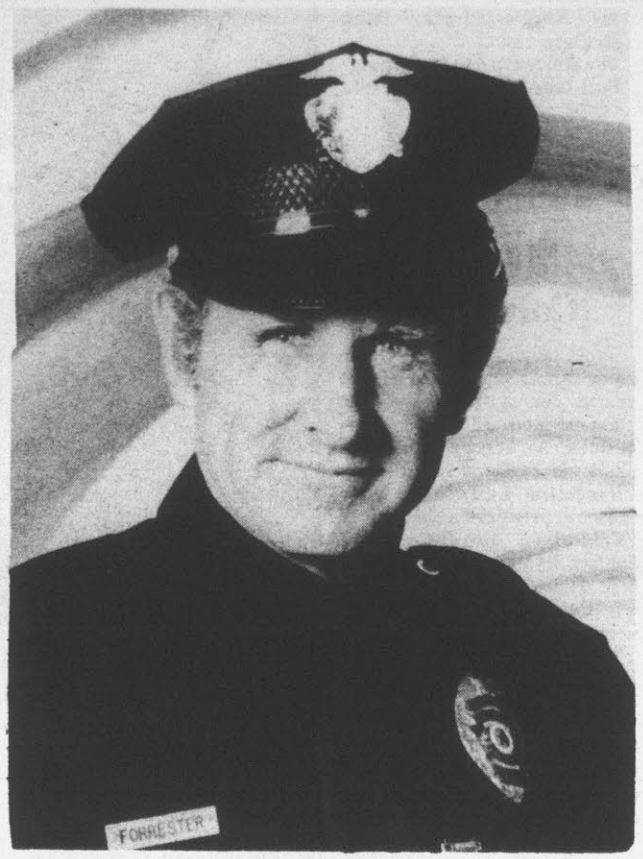
Lloyd Bridges Studies Law



BRIDGES ON THE BEAT—Lloyd Bridges stars in the title role of "Joe Forrester," airing Tuesdays (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7, about a police officer who chooses to walk a neighborhood beat in order to maintain good contact with residents.

Lloyd Bridges, who stars as officer Joe Forrester in the new series "Joe Forrester" (seen Tuesdays, 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV), went to Hollywood to study law - and wound up becoming a "Greek."

Born and raised in northern California, he entered the University of California at Los Angeles to study law.

"I was studying law mainly to please my father," says Bridges. "But I was also very interested in acting and one of the drama teachers made me a 'Greek' - in other words, I soon found myself appearing in various productions of the Greek dramas."

A New York theatre producer spotted him in one of those dramas and offered him a stage role if he ever got to New York. He hurried to New York, won a part, and was spotted by a Hollywood producer who signed him to a film contract and returned him to California.

"During the next three years I must have appeared in a hundred or more movies," says Bridges, who was paid $75 a week under the contract.

Among those early films were "Lone Wolf Takes a Chance," "Two Latins From Manhattan," and many more, with such 'teachers' as Paul Muni, Cary Grant, Ronald Colman and Humphrey Bogart.

His first major role was in "Sahara," and he has since starred in such films as "Master Race," "White Tower," "Sound of Fury," "Plymouth Adventure," "The Rainmaker" and "A Walk in the Sun."

One of the nation's first major television stars, he appeared in such live productions as "Playhouse 90," "The U. S. Steel Hour," "Climax," "General Electric Theatre" and "The Philco Playhouse."

He is perhaps best known as the star of the long-running TV series, "Sea Hunt." He starred in 165 segments over a four-year period starting in 1957. He followed that series with two others, "The Lloyd Bridges Show" and "San Francisco International Airport."

Bridges and his wife Dottie, who recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary, have been together since they met in college, and anyone who spends any time with them will eventually wind up talking about their three children: daughter Cindy and sons Beau and Jeff. The sons have followed their father's footsteps in show business and their success means more to Lloyd Bridges than the acclaim he has received for his performances over the years.

The Bridges live in Beverly Hills, Calif. They also have a beach home at nearby Malibu.

She's A Fan Of The Supernatural

Beatrice Straight, who won rave reviews for her protrayal of the young governess in Henry Jones' play "The Innocents," which details a young woman's encounter with the spirit world, is in reality herself a fan of the supernatural.

Miss Straight, who portrays Emmeline Hacker on "Beacon Hill," airing Tuesdays, 10 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV, is a Leo, having been born on Aug. 2.

Early in her acting career she learned the art of reading cards from the mother of actor Michael Redgrave. She visited India twice as a young woman, and on her second visit had her fortune told in sand. The man responsible for her forecast died, however, before he was able to impart his discoveries to her, she recalls.

While in India, she added to her knowledge of palmistry by studying the ancient art of reading ears. She discovered that the shape of the outer ear is representative of the will, she reports. The inside structure is emotion. The length of the lobe is an indication of one's physical power, and the balance and placement of the ear on the head is an indication of the balance between things physical and spiritual.

Miss Straight is married to Peter Cookson, an author who is at work on a novel, "The Chinese Garden," which focuses on psychic phenomenon in general and on a family incident that involved a seance in the couple's country home, during which they reportedly were visited by the spirit from the Gobi Desert.

Miss Straight, a charming and unpretentious woman, was born in Long Island and schooled in England. She often can be found, between scenes of "Beacon Hill," reading palms of her fellow cast members.

Janet Leigh Stars In 'Columbo'

Janet Leigh guest-stars as an aging dancer - movie queen who yearns for a return to the glamour and glitter of show business so intensely that she plans her husband's demise in "Forgotten Lady," the new season's premiere colorcast of "Columbo" on the "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie" series, Sept. 14, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7. Peter Falk stars as Lt. Columbo.

The guest list also includes John Payne, Maurice Evans and Sam Jaffe.

Still beautiful, but aging, Grace Wheeler Willis (Leigh), forced into retirement from a successful career, makes up her mind to return to the stage in a Broadway musical. But her wealthy retired physician - husband, Henry (Jaffe), refuses to finance the project. Because she has already convinced her former dance partner, Ned Diacmond (Payne), to be the producer and has her heart set on performing again, Grace fakes Henry's "suicide."

FAMED AGENT—Dale Robertson returns as Melvin Purvis, the famed FBI agent who deals with the most deadly teaming of bank robbers in American history in "The Kansas City Massacre," a world premiere film on "The ABC Friday Night Movie" FRIDAY, SEPT. 19 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

G-Man Purvis Grows Up

There is a tremendous feeling of satisfaction for Dale Robertson, a former "Melvin Purvis Junior G-Man" in the 1930s, to be playing his boyhood idol - Purvis - today.

"I grew up in Oklahoma during the '30s," Robertson pointed out while on location for "The Kansas City Massacre," a world premiere presentation which will air on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Sept. 19, 9 to 11 p.m., Ch. 3-5-12. "Every day our newspapers were full of the doings of such public enemies as Pretty Boy Floyd, John Dillinger, Ma Barker and her brood, Baby Face Nelson and Alvin Karpis. But there were also stories about a man who was greatly responsible for stopping the reign of terror of these gangsters — Melvin Purvis."

There was actually very little "hero worship" for the outlaws among the kids and their parents, Robertson recalled.

"All the kids I knew — including myself — wanted to grow up to be Melvin Purvises, not Floyds or Dillingers," continued the actor who starred as Purvis in ABC's "Melvin Purvis, G-Man," one of 1974's top-rated "Movie of the Week" entries.

"I felt then — and still do — that there's no bravery in robbing banks behind a Tommy-gun or a shotgun. Who's going to argue with you? But seeking out these wildmen did call for bravery, and Purvis was a brave man."

"Hank told me that Purvis was the bravest man he ever met," said the actor. "He was absolutely without fear, according to Hank. And from what I've read about Purvis that seems accurate."

Robertson remembers that the so-called "Kansas City Massacre," which occurred on June 17, 1933, resulted in the deaths of four law officers and their prisoner — Frank "Jelly" Nash—and finally focused public anger on the plight of lawmen combating the kill - or - be - killed gangsters.

Questions Settle Jitters

The audience, settling into their studio seats for a taping of the "Cher" show, (moving to a new time — 8 to 9 p.m. — Sunday, Sept. 14) hardly notice the slim figure in a pink bathrobe making her way toward them from backstage. "Hi," she says softly over the house microphone, "I'm Cher. I have a minute if you want to ask me any questions."

Cher has made it a habit to talk with her studio audiences whenever possible before each taping. "The first moment I step out in front of a live audience, I'm usually terrified," she confesses. "The best way for me to conquer a case of nerves is to chat with the people informally before I start trying to entertain them. Then I feel that they are my friends, and I can relax."

At the taping, a young girl asks, "How long did it take take you to grow your hair that long?" "I really don't know," Cher answers, "because it has almost always been this long. I trim a couple of inches off every two months, and it stays the same, so maybe we could figure it out from that."

Many people seem to be curious about Cher's fashions and make-up. "What do you do with your hair when you wear one of our wigs?" a woman wants to know. "I wrap the hair around my head tight, then wrap cheesecloth around that to hold it in," Cher replies, gesturing to the hairdreser on the sidelines of the studio. "Renata here makes all the wigs for me. Aren't they great?" The audience applauds its appreciation.

"What do you like best about doing a television show?" a young man asks. "Honestly, the best part is the people I get to work with," Cher replies. "The guests on my show are either people I knew or people I had admired professionally and never met.

SHARE STORY — William Conrad (left), who stars as "Cannon," and Buddy Ebsen, who stars as "Barnaby Jones," are involved in "The Deadly Conspiracy," a special two-part mystery presentation that begins on "Cannon" Wednesday, Sept. 17 (9-10 p.m.) and concludes on the fourth season premiere of "Barnaby Jones" Friday, Sept. 19 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Scene Had Full Share Of Impact

The movie set is in silence. Standing in the living room are a woman and a teenage girl. The girl admits to the woman that she has contracted venereal disease. The woman reacts and slaps the girl. It sounds like a pistol shot. More slaps follow. The director yells, "Cut!"

The woman is crying and so is the girl. The are portraying mother and daughter. Significantly, they are mother and daughter in real life — Lenka Peterson and Glynnis O'Connor, respectively. They have just completed a physically and emotiojally demanding scene for "Someone I Touched," the "ABC Wide World Movie" on Wednesday, Sept. 17, at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

"What no one on the set knew was that my mother had never slapped me before," revealed Glynnis, who stars in the film with Cloris Leachman, James Olson and Kenneth Mars. "The scene was very hard for us. We stayed up most of the night discussing it and decided, in my mother's words, 'to go all out.' "

And 'all out' they did go. The slaps hurt Glynnis, but she said nothing during the rehearsals and first three takes. It was a hard-hitting scene and the phrase is fitting for the film, too, which is a searching look at venereal disease and the shattering impact it has on several families. Neither Glynnis nor her mother had an compunction about taking her role in the story which delves into the taboos about VD.

"Like everyone else connected with the film," continued Glynnis, referring to director Lou Antonio, the stars, producer Wayne Weisbart and executive producer Dick Bert, "we felt it was a subject that should be brought before the public in story form, rather than documentary."

Setting Is Real Thing

A hallmark of Quinn Martin produced television series long has been the extensive use of diverse location sites, utilizing both scenic and unique cinematic values.

"Cannon," for instance, has ranged far and wide across colorful western landscapes, filming in the historic Mother Lode gold country of northern California at Grass Valley and Nevada City, in the towering Rocky Mountain vistas of the Durango - Silverton, Colo., mining area, and in the yawning Snake River Canyon near Twin Falls, Idaho.

But, in the special two-part episode that begins on "Cannon" Wednesday, Sept. 17, 9 to 10 p.m., and concludes on the fourth season premiere of "Barnaby Jones" Friday, Sept. 17, 10 to 11 p.m. (both on CBS and Channel 3n-9-11), Martin and his producers, Anthony Spinner ("Cannon") and Philip Saltzman ("Barnaby Jones"), achieved a departure in locations by shooting key sequences at a leading southern California cultural center, the noted Huntington Library and Art Gallery in San Marino.

The two-part episode, starring William Conrad as Frank Cannon and Buddy Ebsen as Barnaby Jones and guest starring Charles Durning and Barry Sullivan, required exterior settings of a lavish estate owned by the multi - millionaire Sullivan plays.

Conveniently, the Huntington Art Gallery, once the family home of railroad magnate Henry E. Huntington, who deeded his estates in perpetuity to the American public to house what is one of the nation's leading collections of American and British art and literature, matched perfectly what the producers had in mind.

Other commercial film companies have gained access to the 207-acre Huntington estate, but none before "Cannon" "Barnaby Jones" had been permitted to film on the art gallery loggia, the roofed open gallery which had been Huntington's favorite outdoor sitting porch before the library and art gallery was founded in 1919. With the promise that equipment would not be placed closer than 30 inches to the irreplaceable statuary at the loggia's perimeter, permission was granted.

Huntington, six years before his death in 1927, had placed a collection of art and literature valued at nearly $17-million in the hands of the library's board of trustees. Some of the rare volumes on display include the illuminated Ellesmere Manuscript of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," circa 1410, the Gutenberg Bible (1450-55); early copies of Shakespeare's works, and Franklin's autobiography, written in his own hand. The art gallery contains such works as Thomas autobiography, written in his own hand. The art gallery contains such works as Thomas Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" and Sir Thomas Lawrence's "Pinkie."

Buddy Ebsen, who is a student of British history, found working in such surroundings heady atmosphere, indeed.

Pike's Peeks

PIKE'S PEEKS
By CHARLIE PIKE
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD—Jason Miller, known to many movie goers for his role in "The Exorcist," portrays Rev. William Wasson in a CBS movie, "A Home of Our Own" airing Oct. 19th. The movie tells the story of Reverend Wasson's work on behalf of orphaned children, and says Jason of his role, "It was one of the most rewarding roles I've ever had. We did the film on the actual location, and everyone found themselves attached to those beautiful kids. In fact, next year I'm taking my three children and we're going to spend a month there. It's an incredible story of how one man fulfilled his dream, of how one man can make a difference."

Dina Oursley of "Bronk" is more than just an actress—she's also a lady barber, and among her clientele is Robert Blake, Helen Reddy and Herb Alpert.

Despite a busy schedule on "Switch," Eddie Albert has created what he calls a 'high-rise' garden which consists of a wire-mesh cylinder in which vegetables can be grown. It's ideal for apartment dwellers.

Wesley Eure of NBC's "Days of Our Lives" and "Land of the Lost," is a big outdoorsman, and he hopes to buy a ranch next Spring and convert it into an orphanage so "kids who might not otherwise have the chance will be able to learn about nature and animals."

On the set of "The Six Million Dollar Man" ("Song and Dance Man" segment), Sonny Bono is playing the lead singer of a rock group which includes his girl friend, Susan Coelho.

Also, thanks to some prodding of her own, Chastity Bono returns this year to film several segments of mother Cher's CBS series.

With his new ABC series, "The Swiss Family Robinson," Martin Milner becomes the only actor to have appeared in his own series on each of the three networks. For those who don't recall, Milner starred in CBS' "Route 66" and NBC's "Adam 12."

Role's Become Part Of Life

He used to sing and toot the sax for Sammy Kaye's band. He was (a Tony Award winner) and still is a top-notch Broadway stage actor, but right now, he's Capt. "Barney Miller" of television.

Hal Linden was taking time off to be at home with the wife and family. He explained: "We're still New Yorkers and I don't like to uproot the family, but the show is successful, we're back on in the fall, we'll move to California."

Has he found mixing comedy with something that is supposed to be serious, such as police work, difficult, and is he trying to deliver a message with each show?

"That's the base of the whole show. I compare it with 'M-A-S-H.' The physiology of humor is the basis for both shows. When you have an intolerable situation such as constant danger, blood, etc. — something the body is not ready to deal with — you must use humor to survive.

"I lived with cops for a while. If you take everything seriously, you'd go nuts. You have to laugh about something, so in a sense, it makes our show funnier. I don't think there is a message. There is a point to the show, but not a message. Every show has a point that you don't have to take a stand for or against. We had one about internal affairs — one of my men was supposed to be on the take — showing that you can't take a superhuman philosophy position, but it wasn't a message."

Describe "Barney Miller," and is he similar, in any way, to Hal Linden?

"I think there is the same philosophy in both. Miller is a lot like Linden would like to be. Seriously, I would like to be that kind of man. I admire him very much. He takes a realistic view of the world and he's dedicated to the job at the same time. I'm sorry I'm only him for 24 minutes a week."

"A poorly - written part, no question. Any well-written part I can execute. If it's poorly - written, it confuses me because I don't know if I did it right or not. If you don't come across, you try to figure out why. Sometimes, you can do a pickup and save it again, funny or not funny, or just cut it.

"My part in the show is well-written, and as time goes on, this show's characters will start to take a life of their own, bigger than the original ones that were written.

Bronson In 'Red Sun'

Charles Bronson fights his way out of outlaw treachery, risking his life to pay a debt of honor, in the Western adventure tale "Red Sun," also starring Ursula Andress, to be shown for the first time on television on "The CBS Thursday Night Movies" Sept. 18, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 9-11.

A jeweled sword is the prize sought by Link (Bronson) and his partner Gauche. Together they ambush a train carrying the Japanese ambassador, who plans to present the treasure to the American government. Link, double-crossed by Gauche and left for dead, is saved by a Japanese samurai, and Link and his rescuer go after the sword - one to save the honor of his country and the other to avenge his partner's treachery. When the enemies finally meet, they find themselves facing a common enemy and join forces to fight for survival against bands of Indian raiders.

Mother Is Severest Critic

"Winning the Oscar was great," says Crawford, "but getting a few kind words from my mother about my acting was much more of an achievement."

Crawford portrays a gruff but good-hearted patient in "The God Syndrome," to be colorcast on NBC-TV's "Medical Story" Thursday, Sept. 18, 10 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

He is of the fourth generation in a family of actors and singers. His father was an actor, his grandmother an opera star. But it was years before he was able to convince his mother that he could act.

Even after Ethel Barrymore made a special trip to Helen's apartment in 1935 to tell her how good her young son was in Noel Coward's "Point Valaine," she was still unimpressed.

He's Back In Doc's Uniform

After a five-year medical respite, Mike Farrell is back in a doctor's uniform again. This time, playing a very different sort of surgeon, one who becomes the newest member of the wacky world of "M-A-S-H," which returns for its fourth season on Friday 8 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Farrell, who previously played a more orthodox physician, Dr. Sam Marsh, in "The Interns" series on the Network, suggests that his second turn on television as a medical man is more than mere coincidence. He attributes it to his physical appearance and general demeanor.

"I guess I'm the young, all-American type who looks as if he should be portraying a doctor," Farrell says. But, the rangy, blond actor also concedes that he's never before played anything resembling Capt. B.J. Hunnicutt, the young resident surgeon who is plucked out of civilian practice and thrust into the off-beat company of the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital unit on "M-A-S-H."

"The keynote of 'M-A-S-H' comedy is understatement," he explains. "And I'm discovering that the subtleties of this kind of humor take a while to master. I consider the series creator, Larry Gelbart, a true genius. There's a great deal more to a show in which you have a thread of reality upon which you build comedy."

Uniforms, medical and otherwise, always seem to have been very much a part of Farrell's acting career. He wore a medical attire on another occasion in "The Bold Ones." For a time, he seemed to be typed in military garb, having played servicemen of various stripes in "Ensign O'Toole," "McHale's Navy," "Combat" and "Daniel Boone" (as an American Revolutionary soldier).

A man of diverse talents, Farrell says he is thriving on the new acting challenge presented by "M-A-S-H," noting that he couldn't be happier with this assignment.

JOIN MASH— Harry Morgan (right) as new commanding officer Col. Sherman Potter, joins the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital and adjusts to some of the more unorthodox members of the team, Hawkeye (Alan Alda, left) and B. J. Hunnicutt (Mike Farrell), on "M-A-S-H" Friday, Sept. 19 (8:30-9 p.m.) on Channel 9.

Lloyd Bridges, star of the "Joe Forrester" series, is a little puzzled by the clothes worn by today's youth. He says: "My generation was taught to dress for the occasion - but today's kids seem to dress as strangely as possible. I don't understand it, but neither do I knock it. It's their life, and they should do whatever pleases them as long as it hurts no one else."

Actor Haunted

The occasion was a co-starring role with Shelley Winters, Belinda J. Montgomery, Robert Foxworth and Joseph Cotten in "The Devil's Daughter," which airs on the "CBS Late Movie" Friday, Sept. 19, at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 9-11.

Frid said with a smile, "When I got to the set for the first day's shooting, I felt like a kid."

Leonard Walked A Crooked Line

"When World War II came, Hollywood's greatest 'heavies' all went straight, and that wrecked my chance to make the gangster bit gime," recalls Sheldon Leonard, the veteran Hollywood creator-writer-director-producer, who has resumed his acting career to star in the title role of the new "Big Eddie" series.

"Those heavies never did get around to going crooked again," Leonard adds, "even after the war. That blew their genre of movies, and that was that."

"Big Eddie" moves to its regular time spot Friday, Sept. 19 (8 to 8:30 p.m.).

Twentieth Century-Fox Studios signed Leonard to a contract and brought him to Hollywood in 1939, after he had established himself as an actor on Broadway. Those were the days when such movie stars as Edward G. Robinson, George Raft, James Cagney and Humphrey Bogart were staging prison breaks, heading for "The Chair," making heart-tugging death-scene confessions to 'Fathers' Pat O'Brien or Spencer Tracy and running amok as 'Public Enemies,' as they achieved fame and fortune in Hollywood's popular gangster films of the period.

And that's what Twentieth had Leonard ticketed for. He was to become the newest member of that star-spangled group of high-powered ticket-sellers, the glamor hoods. He appeared to have all the prerequisites - a tough-handsome mug, a menacing voice, an up-from-the-gutter swagger, the ability to wear flashy clothes with oily aplomb, and acting ability to round it all out.

Came the war, and the Hollywood film industry agreed that the portrayal of certain negative aspects of U. S. society - such as menacing gangsters with oily aplomb - would be considered unpatriotic "for the duration."

Inherit the wind.

If you like the idea of tooling down the open road in an open car, guess what?

With the top down, the Volkswagen convertible puts the wind in your hair, the sun on your cheek, and the stars in your eyes. You are at the mercy of the elements.

Rain won't leak in since the top overlaps the windshield frame. Cold won't seep through because the top is layered—vinyl above, leatherette below. Sound is kept to a minimum due to the good inch of padding that separates the two.

So, you see, it really isn't as drastic a character change as it may seem.

The same scrupulous inspection routine and the identical yearly improvements that go into the making of every beetle, go into the making of every convertible.

Ergo, the same economy that comes out of driving the beetle remains reassuringly intact with the topless version.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY YOUR 1975 CONVERTIBLE.

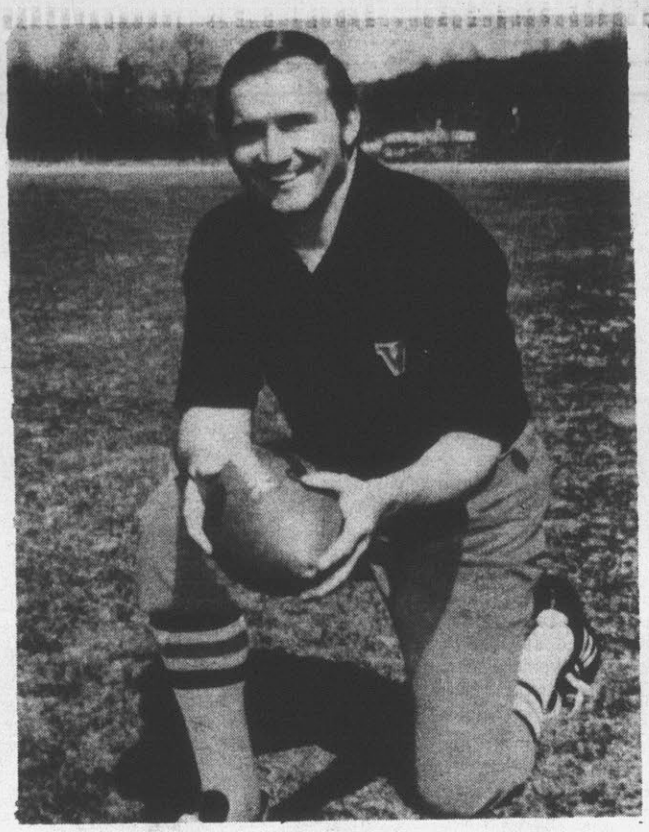
Rookies Begin Fourth Season

"The Rookies" begins its fourth season on ABC-TV Tuesdays 9 to 10 p.m. The show takes a refreshingly new approach to the subject of law and order.

The heroes of the hour long series include three young men from widely contrasted backgrounds who have entered police work for different reasons. Their boss, a lieutenant, is their most severe critic . . . and their staunchest supporter.



LEADS HIS TEAM — Coach Sonny Randle will lead his team, the University of Virginia, against arch-rival V.M.I. on the NCAA Game of the Week on Saturday, September 20 at 3:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Two Virginia Rivals Meet

Two old state rivals, The University of Virginia and Virginia Military Institute, renew acquaintances in the NCAA Game of the Week on Saturday, Sept. 20, at 3:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Sonny Randle, former Virginia great, coaches a team who purports two potential All-Americans, quarterback Scott Gardner and guard Tom Glassic. The backfield features hard-running Billy Copeland and Joe Sroby, two tough, steady performers. The defensive is inexperienced but determined, with strong competition at every position.

VMI surprised everyone by winning their first Southern Conference title in 12 years. Coach Bob Thalman was named District Three Coach of the Year, but his troops will be hard-pressed to repeat. A new quarterback must be found to replace Tony Farry, but the defense is experienced and strong.

Because the game is in Charlottesville, and because the Cavaliers defeated VMI last year, Virginia appears to have the edge.

Michele Will Tell

T.G. BONMAN, ROCK HILL, S.C., asks if— on the First Annual Rock Awards— Alice Cooper's 'frisking' Valerie Perrine was a surprise to her. No, it was thought up the afternoon of the show during rehearsals.

TO K. FREE, FLORENCE, S.C.: Does William Conrad ("Cannon") wear elevated shoes? The lovable 'fat one' says there're 'slightly elevated.'

TO GLADYS THOMPSON, STAUNTON, VA.: Greg Foster on "The Young and the Restless" is portrayed by James Houghton. The handsome actor is a native of Los Angeles and the son of producer Buck Houghton. Educated in Switzerland and sunny California, Jim's been acting since childhood. He's single.

TO SUSAN CURRY, MOUNT SIDNEY, VA.: Scott Jacoby starred in "Bad Ronald," recently shown on TV. He's just graduated from high school and has branched out into the recording world. His first single record was "Act Like a Woman." The talented young man leans heavily toward sports. Anytime the director yells "Cut!", Scott can be found outside playing basketball with any available cast and crew member.

TO I.T.C., BRIDGEWATER, VA. Irene Ryan, 'Granny' of "The Beverly Hillbillies," is dead. Jim Nabors is still very much alive and still singing those beautiful songs when he guests on the 'talk shows'.

TO J.B. ABRAMS, WILMINGTON, N.C.: "Star Trek" will not be brought back. But . . . have you seen "Space: 1999"? It's just as good . . . maybe even better! Louis Prima occasionally appears on the 'talk shows'.

TO DAVID WITHERINGTON, GREENVILLE, N.C. There are no plans at this time for another "Hudson Brothers" series.

TO MRS. J.B., DILLON, S.C.: George Reinholt WAS Steven Frame of "Another World." NOW he's a member of the cast of "One Life to Live."

A Live-Action Series

"Isis," which airs Saturday mornings, 10:30 to 10:56 a.m., on CBS-TV, joins "Shazam" in back-to-back adventures with pro-social values. Isis, portrayed by JoAnna Cameron, leads a double life - her public identity is Andrea Thomas, a high school science teacher; her secret identity is Isis, dedicated fighter against evil in all of its manifestations. She is a woman of extraordinary powers, granted to her forebearers centuries ago. In complementing the "Shazam!" problem - solving stories, the "Isis" episodes will develop mystery - adventure programs in a format that will offer a positive and thoughtful portrayal of a female - role model for young people.

As many stories as possible will be developed that will involve both Shazam and Isis, and, to underscore the social values of each half-hour, a summary will be presented in which both characters appear prominently.

Fictional Film On 'GO'

Two boys, 12 and 17-years-old, endanger their lives so they can bring "Powder and Shot" to the Minutemen fighting at Concord Bridge in this fictional story set in the time of the American Revolution on "Go-USA" Saturday, Sept. 20, 12:30 to 1 p.m.

William McMillan plays 12-year-old Joshua and Clif Gannon plays 17-year-old Aaron. Chris Gampel plays Silas, Joshua's father, and Justin Taylor plays Tom, a Minuteman.

Joshua and Aaron go to an old barn to find powder and shot to help the Minutemen, who have only enough powder for a single volley, in this story written and directed by Bert Salzman. They are shot at by a British Redcoat and, while first giving way to panic and fear, finally outwit the soldier and bravely bring back the needed ammunition.

Armwrestling Championship Airs

The NFL Players Armwrestling Championship with a $44,000 purse will be presented during half-time on CBS-TV's coverage of NFL games beginning Sept. 14, and continuing weekly through Jan. 4, 1976. The top individual prize is $10,000, going to the competition champion. Former Los Angeles Ram player Roosevelt (Rosie) Grier will host the contests.

The idea for the competition itself is the brainchild of Lori Saunders, a Hollywood actress who was a regular on the TV series "Petticoat Junction." When watching an NFL game on television, she found the halftime activity boring. She thought it would be more interesting to see football players at closer range with their helmets off doing something like armwrestling. Knowing that CBS televised the NFL games, she took the idea to network executives who jumped on it like "gangbusters."

NFL Doubleheader On CBS-TV

The New York Jets host the New England Patriots and the St. Louis Cardinals clash with the Denver Broncos in a National Football League preseason doubleheader to be broadcast on CBS-TV Sunday, Sept. 14.

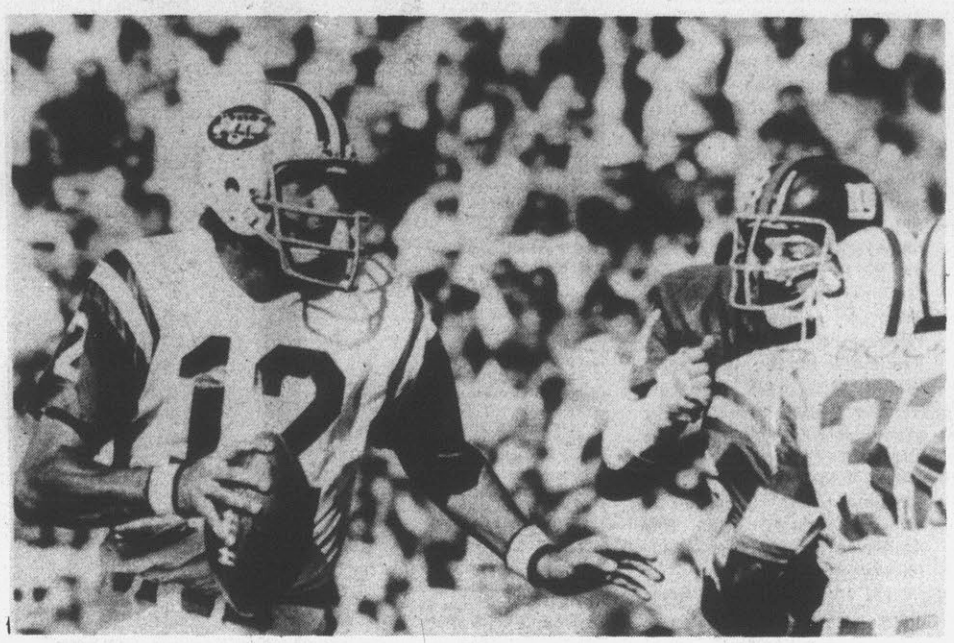
Pat Summerall, play by play, and Tom Brookshier, analyst, will be the broadcast team for CBS-TV Sports coverage of the Jets-Patriots encounter from Yale Bowl in New Haven, Conn. Frank Glieber, play by play, and Alex Hawkins, analyst, cover the action in the Cardinals-Broncos clash from Denver (Colo.) Mile High Stadium.

With Joe Namath at the controls, the Jets' passing game was second in the AFC last year. Wide receivers Jerome Barkum and David Knight and tight end Rich Caster, a Pro Bowler, remain the chief targets, with Eddie Bell behind the wide men. John Riggins and Emerson Boozer are a formidable pair of running backs. The offensive line allowed only 19 quarterback sacks last year, and tackle Winston Hill is rated among the best pass blockers in the NFL. Coach Charley Winner says, "People are going to be impressed with the defense we're putting together, the biggest in the club's history."

The Patriots won their five last year, and six of their first seven before dropping to a 7-7 finish after an injury - plagued second half. Much of the improvement was due to a strong offense that produced 348 points, second in the NFL. As for a team motto in 1975, coach Chuck Fairbanks says, "I would like it to be that we expect to win." Sam Cunningham and Mack Herron continue to be the big guns in the running game and as pass receivers, with quarterback Jim Plunkett throwing to his running backs 38 percent of the time. The Patriots are one of two NFL teams to use a 3-man line and a 4-man linebacker defense.

The 1974 season was the greatest season in the Cardinals' 15-year Missouri encampment. Winning the NFC East title put the "Big Red" in post-season play for the first time since 1948, when the Cardinals were Chicagoans. Coach Don Coryell, entering his third campaign, says, "Last year, we played to our potential, won seven of eight against Eastern Division teams, and created a winning attitude that will carry in 1975."

For the Broncos, "what we need most of all," says John Ralston, "is a good pre-season camp so we can get all the experimentation out of the way early and be ready to get after people on opening day."



LEADS JETS — Strong-armed quarterback Joe Willie Namath will bring his New York Jets into battle against the New England Patriots in the final Pre-Season Game for both teams on Sunday, September 14 on CBS-TV.

Nichaus Feels Tradition

Playing college football is an exciting and memorable experience in itself, but playing for a gridiron tradition such as Notre Dame University leave permanent, emotional etchings on the minds of the participants. Steve Nichaus, a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, who will enter his final year with the "Fighting Irish," anchors the defense for his team against Boston College on "The NCAA Game of the Week," to be broadcast Monday night, Sept. 15, at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

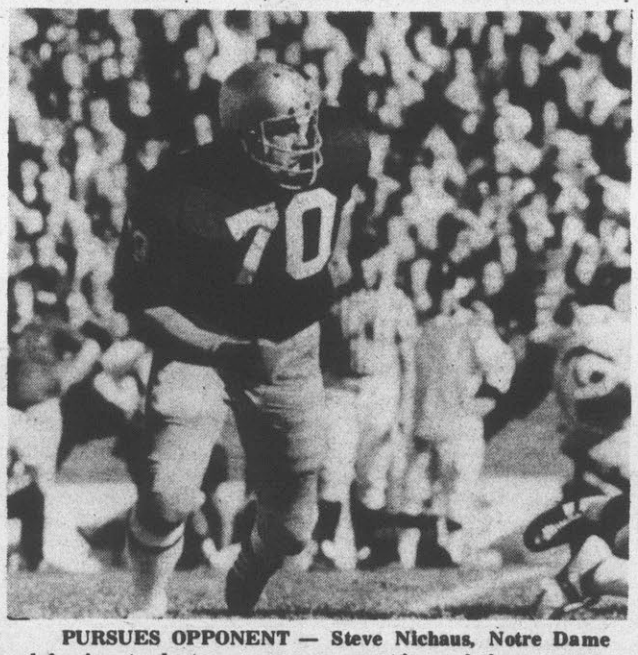
Steve already realizes that he will miss the collegiate game. In a recent interview, he stated, "You read how college football is better than pro with a lot more emotion - not that there's no emotion in pro ball. But I think players especially miss being here at Notre Dame."

The Irishes' entire approach to the game will be different, with a more low-key, deliberate approach, due to the arrival of Dan Devine to replace the legendary Ara Parsegian.

"I do have a positive outlook about the seniors this year," Nichaus declared. "This will be our season this year," Nichaus declared. "This will be our season to remember. I'm looking forward to the fall because of the new system to see how things are going to work out. With a new coaching staff and new concepts to learn, there won't be any time for complacency by anyone."

According to the outstanding record of Notre Dame and Steve Nichaus, it is very doubtful that the South Bend, Indiana campus will field a complacent team.

Nichaus made a switch last year from defensive tackle to end and performed outstandingly, meriting selection to the "Football News'" All-America team. His 95 tackles were third among Irish defenders, behind graduated linebackers Greg Collins and Drew Mahalic. Thirteen of those stops were for losses totaling 82 yards.



PURSUES OPPONENT — Steve Nichaus, Notre Dame defensive standout, pursues an opponent in much the same way as he hopes to chase Boston College Runners when the two teams meet on the NCAA Game of the Week on Monday, September 15 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Guess, if you can, the outdoor shooting location for "When Things Were Rotten," the series saga of Robin Hood and his Merry Men airing on Wednesdays on ABC-TV.

Sherwood Forest, that's where. On the level. Sherwood Forest is located at Calabasas, Calif., in the San Fernando Valley. It's right next to Lake Sherwood, also to be used for the series. Creator of the series, Mel Brooks, calls it a site for sore eyes.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JEB STUART MAGRUDER

What effect did prison life have on your personality? How have you changed?—K.T., Anniston, Ala.

● Personalities don't change—at least not when you've reached the ripe old age of 40. You are what you are by this time in life. What has changed primarily is my perception of the world. The prison experience showed me the kind of life I knew existed—but I only knew it intellectually. Now I know it emotionally. So I have a much more empathetic feeling towards the underprivileged than I had before. You might say prison has been a good experience in the long run. Solzhenitsyn said, and I'm paraphrasing, "When you are young, it seems love can conquer all. As you get older, you realize that life is more than love." I realized finally that life is not simply a love story. It's much more than that.

FOR BOB GIBSON

I heard that you were on the Harlem Globetrotters. Is this true?—Tony Cilia, Owensboro, Ky.

● Yes, I did play for the Harlem Globetrotters. It was during the 1957-58 season, following my basketball career at Creighton University. I gave up basketball for one reason—because I was a better baseball player and saw a brighter future in that game.

FOR VIKKI CARR

Is it easier to become a famous singer today than it was in the days of Judy Garland, Nat King Cole and others? —D.R., Westport, Conn.

● No. It's never been easy to become famous, particularly as a singer. If anything, I think it's tougher now. There's much more new talent around for the public to see—and judge—because of television. If there are twice as many of you, you have to work twice as hard!

FOR HERB ALPERT

I've read you're extremely rich. What effect would losing all your money have on you?—R.A., San Antonio, Texas

● Very little. I'd be exactly the same as I am now. Money gives me freedom to do what I want, but it isn't No. 1 in my life. My father, who manufactured ladies coats and suits, made a moderate living. We didn't wallow in luxury, but we didn't struggle, either. I was perfectly happy with the little I had, and could be again if I had to. I'm not knocking it—but it's not the answer to everything.

● It's all concentration. People on the show are my tools. I MUST know their names. It's my job. But introduce me to people at a cocktail party, and I can't remember who they are two minutes later.

FOR NOEL NEILL, Lois Lane in the old Superman movies

How long ago did George Reeves, the actor who played Superman, die? And how did he die?—Mary Anderson, Upton, Mass.

● He died in 1959. The rumor has been going around for years that he got so wrapped up in the Superman role that one day he thought he could really fly and jumped out of a window. Actually he died of a gunshot wound which was said to be self-inflicted.

FOR MRS. BABE RUTH

Were you for or against Hank Aaron breaking your husband's home run record?—Richard Sanborn, Pt. Pleasant, N.J.

● I was all for it. In fact, I'm all for anything or anyone that can bring excitement and color to the game and ball parks. Hank's marvelous performance made me feel very proud. My only regret was that I wasn't able to see that record-breaking home run in person.

FOR MRS. HELEN TWEEDY, owner of "Secretariat"

I read that horses shorten their lives by so many months with every race they run. Is this true or false?—Mrs. F.C.M., Colorado Springs, Colo.

● False. Horses do not shorten their lives by running races. Kelso is an example of a horse that raced till he was nine years old, then he was used for hunting. But it is true that horses with problems in their legs increase the chances of breakdown in each race. Ruffian had an exceptional temperament, but she resisted help. It was this that caused her ultimate death.

FOR BOBBY KNIGHT, U. of Indiana basketball coach

What punishment would you recommend for colleges that recruit illegally?—J.B., Buffalo, N.Y.

● If school officials are trying to get away with murder, they should get the death penalty when they are caught. I think the coach should be fired and the school lose its schedule for a year. We have either got to set up a stringent set of rules or set up a semi-pro league to subsidize those athletes that are getting cars, clothes and tickets that alumni buy back later for a fraction of the cost.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

How old is Jack LaLanne, and is he really as fit as he professes to be?—W.E.L., Hollywood, Calif.

● Jack is 60 and, from all accounts, seems to be in perfect physical shape. On his last birthday, he accomplished the seemingly impossible feat of swimming from Alcatraz to Fisherman's Wharf with handcuffs on his wrists, shackles on his ankles, towing a 100-lb. boat stuffed with sandbags. The purpose, of course, was publicity; but at the same time he proved that men of his age don't have to be athletic hasbeens. Said Jack: "For my 61st birthday I'm planning something—in the New York area—that will make my 60th look as dull as reciting nursery rhymes backwards." He was recently recognized by the American Academy of Achievement for his contribution to inspiring youth and helping America become a nation of physically fit specimens.

Weather and You:

Your Illnesses, Your Moods in Rain or Shine

Frederic Lewis

With a sudden outbreak of cold weather, many pregnant women have gone into labor. On one occasion, so many women went into labor that they filled entire hospitals.

By T. K. Irwin

It's an evening in March. A middle-aged salesman quietly watching TV at home suddenly suffers a mild heart attack. A young housewife, hit by a splitting headache, feels unaccountably depressed. A nine-year-old boy, usually genial, goes on a rampage, smashing toys in his room. What is happening?

The weather is happening. That day the barometer dropped sharply and a cold front came on abruptly. The result was that people's health, behavior and efficiency were affected in ways that science had never even realized were possible. Now, fresh insights and clues to human response to the elements are forthcoming from the American Institute of Medical Climatology, an informal "invisible college" of doctors, meteorologists and physicists who exchange findings through their scientific grapevine. To learn their latest research revelations, FAMILY WEEKLY called on the Institute's president, Dr. Helmut E. Landsberg at the University of Maryland. Here's how Dr. Landsberg (a meteorologist and former director of climatology with the U.S. Weather Bureau) and other practitioners in this burgeoning branch of medical science size up the often complex impact of weather factors on our well-being:

Your Heart. Most studies stress that heart attacks mount during very cold days, especially when low temperatures are triggered by sudden weather changes. Exposure to high snowfall may cause death, more so for men than for women, based on the theory that men generally spend more time outdoors. People with congestive heart disease can't take heat waves. A nationwide poll of physicians disclosed that most of them believe shortness of breath in cardiacs increases during muggy weather because outside heat makes it more difficult to get rid of metabolic heat, thus placing a load on the heart. Angina pain usually exacerbates during a cold snap, in cold winds and on muggy days.

Migraine headaches. Bright sunshine and reflection from snow bring on or aggravate attacks. In a study by the British Migraine Association, those afflicted also reported suffering episodes before thunderstorms or blizzards.

Arthritis. Experiments with arthritic patients showed that their joints began to ache with the onset of a combination of rising humidity and falling barometric pressure. Many arthritics are so weather-sensitive they start feeling worse even before the barometer falls.

"Humidity triggers a physiologic reaction," Dr. Landsberg explains. "Joints especially are affected. The shoulder and hip joints have cavities with fluid. With a change in the outside atmospheric pressure, the joints act like a barometer, and this causes pain."

Asthma. In a Chicago hospital, asthmatic patients were feeling fine. In mid-afternoon, as rain began to fall, every patient felt the familiar choking sensations. At 9 P.M., the rain subsided and they recovered somewhat. Two hours later, an ear-splitting summer storm hit and all the patients went into attacks that continued through the following day. This was the pattern of unstable meteorological conditions: a sudden drop in temperature, then a marked rise in humidity with sharp fluctuations in barometric pressure—first a drop, then a rise, and finally another drop.

Emphysema, Bronchitis, Respiratory Ailments. "Breatheability of air affects these people," says Dr. Landsberg. "With an impaired respiratory system, the more contaminants you take in, the more trouble you have breathing. When the air is contaminated, people with chronic bronchitis or emphysema suffer. Stagnant air, with little wind and clear skies—especially in the evening—results in an accumulation of pollution, particularly in cities."

Ulcers, Intestinal Disorders. One study in Philadelphia found that the peaks of hemorrhages from duodenal ulcers occurred during the months of March and April and October through November at times of marked variations in temperature. As for other intestinal troubles, Dr. Landsberg says that constipation is likely to be linked to cold weather. Diarrhea is more common in hot weather when food contamination is likely to occur since heat stimulates bacterial growth.

The Common Cold. As we all know, most colds and cases of pneumonia happen in winter when we're physically more vulnerable. But British researchers recently concluded that temperature fluctuations rather than temperature level are more significant.

"Continuation of cold weather," they reported, "can result in fewer colds, demonstrating that the thermoregulation mechanism (located in the hypothalamus) can adjust to any given temperature if maintained for long enough periods."

Other climatologists believe storminess is a culprit. It creates constant shifts in temperature, barometric pressure and humidity. This erratic weather causes chilling, which seems to predispose us to a cold. Even though bad weather can't pro-

HOW TO WEATHER-CONDITION YOURSELF

Try to adapt to weather changes. Doctors used to advocate taking hot and cold showers. This is still sound advice. People who exercise outdoors and take cold showers in the morning probably survive longer than those who take pills.

*Before leaving home in the morning, check your barometer or weather report. If there's been a sharp drop in the barometer, prepare for an off day. Don't overexert yourself. Drive cautiously. Don't let a foul mood control important decisions.

If a sudden weather shift is predicted and you suffer from asthma, emphysema or heart disease, stay home if you can.

On hot days, wear loose-fitting, light-colored clothes of porous material. Overweight people have a rough time withstanding blistering heat and become candidates for heat stroke. Drink plenty of water.

In cold weather, thin people are more prone to physical and mental fatigue and should wear clothes that keep the body warm.

Make Your Own Weather Calendar. "Learn your reactions to weather conditions," Dr. Landsberg suggests. "Keep a record, day by day, for a year or so. You'll get to know what kind of days make you feel poorly or stimulate you to do creative work, and what days you should stick to routine tasks. This way, you could wind up thanking the weather, not blaming it."

Weather and You

H. Armstrong Roberts

duce a germ it does strain the body's heat-regulating mechanism so that bacteria existing in the upper respiratory tract can get out of control.

Mental Illness. Psychiatrists have noted that mental stability can be related to weather disturbances. For some people, hot, moist weather can even lead to violence and suicide.

Other Ailments. People with hypertension should know that their blood pressure usually rises in cold weather and goes down on warm days. . . . Some climatologists say diabetics are affected by hot weather when the balance of blood sugar is upset as the body tries to compensate for the change in water balance. . . . Leukemia is now being studied for climatic links.

Pregnancy and Childbirth. Many obstetricians contend that a change in air masses, either from warm to cold or from cold to warm, can help bring on eclampsia—a convulsive complication in the latter part of pregnancy or during labor. During a sudden outbreak of cold weather, many pregnant women have gone into labor. And on one occasion in Washington, D.C., so many women went into labor that they filled entire hospitals to the point of placing cots in corridors. Dr. Landsberg suspects a sudden cold wave affects circulation and releases the spasms that induce labor.

Your Moods and Behavior. Psychologically, a murkily overcast day can be depressing. Many researchers have found ties between atmospheric pressure and restlessness, accidents and aggressive acts. One theory holds that falling pressure causes swollen tissues, a diminished blood flow and increased pressure on the brain. These in turn lead to fatigue or other unpleasantness in susceptible individuals. Dr. Landsberg believes monotonous weather is more apt to affect your spirits.

For work, the ideal temperature is an average 64 degrees. Seasonally you do your best mental tasks in late winter, early spring and fall. A prolonged blue sky reduces your productivity.

Hazards in Your Environment. Apparently we respond to every whim of the air mass. The immediate effect shows up in our pulse rate, temperature, blood pressure, urine—in all the metabolic and chemical processes of your body. Some people can adjust well, others can't. Often, people on the verge of being sick surrender to the illness when a sharp weather shift depletes their strength. For the seriously ill, a violent weather break can push them over the brink to death.

Medical climatologists are learning more about how winds transport certain types of disease. For instance, strong winds can carry histoplasmosis and other fungi from chicken coops.

Mental stability can be related to weather disturbances. . . . For some people, hot, moist weather can lead to violence and suicide.

Among important findings which still haven't penetrated to the public, Dr. Landsberg cites the influence of weather on medicines. Diuretics, for example, are widely prescribed in specific dosages for hypertension, heart and kidney diseases, to secrete and excrete more water. "Weather influences water metabolism," says Dr. Landsberg. "In hot weather people sweat more, and in cold weather they urinate more. If a patient on fixed doses of diuretics excretes too much, presumably he or she could become dehydrated."

Know Your Weather. Dr. Landsberg points out, "Most of us brought up in a hothouse environment are not elastic enough to adapt to weather quirks. A lot of mysteries are still unexplained. But once we understand what is now known about the weather in relation to how we feel physically and mentally, we'll understand ourselves much better." FW

Smart Cooking
Day Before Payday

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen makes a tasty casserole. "I've been noticing how reasonable canned mackerel has been," says Marilyn. "This week, I've put together a casserole using mackerel, instant mashed potatoes and all sorts of good things. You'll love it!"

A Tasty, Low-Cost Fish Casserole

MACKEREL VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

salt boiling water
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup sliced onions
½ cup chopped green pepper
3 cups seasoned mashed potato*
1 can (1 lb. 12 ozs.) tomatoes, drained; reserve liquid
1 can (15 ozs.) mackerel, drained
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease a shallow 2-qt. casserole. Cook carrots in salted boiling water to cover 15 minutes until tender. Drain.

2. In medium skillet in hot vegetable oil, sauté onion and green pepper about 5 minutes until tender.

3. Spoon half of mashed potato in bottom of prepared casserole. Top with ½ of carrots, ½ of onion-pepper mixture, ½ of tomatoes and all of mackerel.

5. Bake for about 30-35 minutes until heated throughout. In medium saucepan, heat reserved tomato liquid to boiling. Boil about 5 minutes, uncovered, to reduce liquid. Serve as a sauce with casserole.

Makes 4-6 servings

WHAT'S SMART: Canned mackerel is really a good food buy—cheaper than either tuna or salmon. Drained, and blended with mayonnaise, seasonings and pickle relish, it makes a hearty sandwich filling too.

TART 'N' TANGY VEGETABLE SALAD

1 pkg. (3 ozs.) lime gelatin
1¼ cups boiling water
1 cup grated cucumber or raw zucchini
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon grated onion
½ teaspoon salt
Few drops Tabasco
Crisp salad greens

1. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add remaining ingredients.

2. Pour into a 3-cup or 1-qt. ring mold. Chill until firm. Stir once or twice while chilling to set evenly.

3. Unmold on crisp salad greens. Makes 4-5 servings

PLANT NOW - GAIN A YEAR

Why be satisfied with ordinary-sized strawberries when we guarantee you can have these extra-sweet

STRAWBERRIES

ACTUAL SIZE

CAUTION

The most frequently noted "complaint" on these marvelous berries is that most people just didn't think to order enough! Honestly - - you will want at least 50 of these plants to start - - even for smaller patches. Order plenty so you can take advantage of gain-a-season fall planting.

50 for $ 3.75
100 for $ 5.95
200 for $10.95

The last time you picked strawberries - - or bought them - - how many did it take to make a quart? Eighty? One hundred? More? Regular strawberries are so small - - most people lose count. But with these hardy plants you can expect quarts from just 30 strawberries! And these dark red, sweet and juicy Robinson berries are highly disease-resistant. They ripen very fast - - plus they produce lots of new runners to give you a bigger patch every year! Have wonderful, big strawberries for jams, freezer, fresh deserts for months! And get a head start - - by planting now you receive strong, healthy plants with well-developed crowns and roots. They are highly drouth-resistant and winter-hardy. Don't compare the Robinson with ordinary varieties.

Plants are all indexed virus-free so you get clean, nuclear planting stock. Meristemmed mother plants are held in isolation in University plant pathology greenhouses until indexed as virus-free. This means you get superior fruit, double yields and increased plant vigor.

FREE GIFT

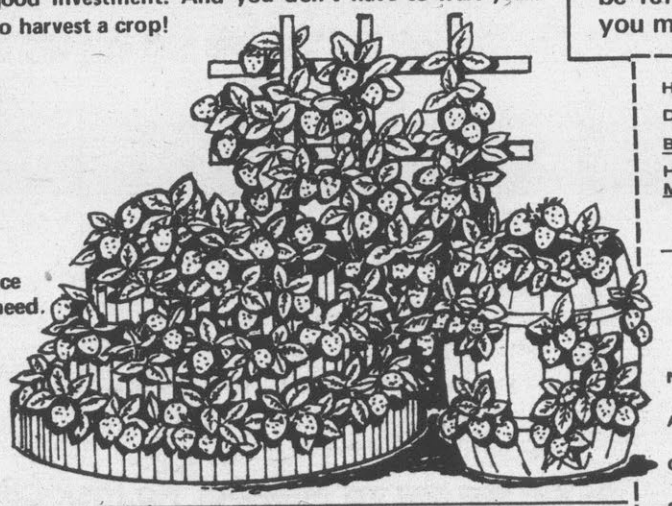
For your immediate order, a winter-hardy Hibiscus! Up to 50 huge exotic flowers on every plant!

Include Strawberries In Your Garden

Even if you don't raise a garden - - you should grow strawberries. They are not hard to grow, yet they probably produce the greatest pleasure of all home grown fruits. Strawberry shortcake - - jams - - and eating fresh from the patch! In these days of high food prices a strawberry patch is an especially good investment. And you don't have to wait years to harvest a crop!

What To Do When You Are Short Of Space And Still Want Strawberries

A very small space (as small as 9' x 12') will produce all of the berries that an average-sized family will need. But if you don't have even a few feet to spare you can still have them. Drill holes in a nail keg. Fill it with dirt and put the plants in the holes. This is decorative as well as a good way to grow many delicious berries in a small space. Trellises and strawberry pyramids can also be made when space is limited.



An Unsolicited Letter From A Satisfied Customer

YOU CAN TELL THE WORLD HOUSE OF WESLEY

April 1, 1975
Bellevue, Nebraska

Dear Sirs:

I am writing you a line to let you know how my Giant Robinson Strawberries turned out. I ordered 100 plants in 1972 and they were sent to me just at the right time for planting. I set them out in medium good soil. I have never seen any strawberries like them. I have to take issue with you on one thing. You advertized that they grew as big as a golf ball. Many of them were as big as 2 golf balls. In all my years growing strawberries I have never raised so many lovely berries on such a small patch. We harvest around 80 quarts per season. I can give positive proof to you on this subject by the neighbors around me as they all share my crop of Robinson's beautiful (hardy) Giant strawberries.

We use the blue grass clipping and place it in the rows next to the strawberries while grass is green. We have never used fertilizer on them. They are the greatest. Thanks for selling me.

Your good friends,
Mr. and Mrs. G.C.G.

OUR FULL PROTECTION GUARANTEE

All plants are guaranteed to be of high quality, and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY - - you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

Problem-Solving: Do You Really Know This Elusive Art?

True or False: It's useless to burden sympathetic friends with problems only you can solve. (See number 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. You can solve a problem better if you have a couple of drinks to loosen you up a bit and stimulate the flow of mental juices.

2. To tackle problems successfully, you've got to go into action. You simply can't solve them by lying down on the job.

3. If personal problems are getting you down, you've got two strikes against you if you try to resolve them while you're feeling depressed.

4. A young child's ability to cope with problems and do well in his studies will be greatly improved if you can teach him to study quietly. This will enable him to concentrate better.

5. It's useless to burden sympathetic friends with problems only you can solve.

6. People solve problems better under pressure or when there's a threat of punishment.

ANSWERS

1. False. University studies show that though a person may feel sharper after he's had a couple of drinks, he really isn't. Even small amounts of liquor were found to dull perception and impair the ability to think and reason.

2. False. Psychological studies conducted at two leading universities have demonstrated that bodily position has a direct bearing on how our mental faculties function, and that subjects made the best scores on tests of creativeness and imaginative ability while lying down. This position was also found the most conducive to deliberation and reflective thinking, and open-mindedness.

3. True. Studies show that a down-beat mood impairs your mental abilities. This is particularly true where emotional considerations color the picture. Since solution of personal problems often requires the use of full thinking capacity, it's important that we don't court failure by making an attempt when we don't feel at our best.

4. False. A study of 300 young school children showed that they made significantly better scores on various problem solving tasks when they were instructed to think aloud. It's concluded that "verbalization of children (putting their thoughts into words) is an integral part of their mental processes, and that children perform less well when silence is enforced." It was also found, however, that after the age of nine, the need to verbalize begins to decrease.

5. False. In studies of problem-solving under various types of conditions, it was found that subjects did much better when they knew that others were engaged in trying to solve a given problem than when they were required to work on it alone.

6. False. Studies at the University of Lublin (Poland) of the effect of psychological stress on the ability to solve problems or complete difficult mental tasks showed that performance on all tests was poorer when a threatening situation was induced by the investigators. The projection of anxiety and a sense of threat caused marked reduction in the subjects' ability to think.

NEW STUDIES ON FOOD FIBER.

There has been a great deal of interest recently on the subject of dietary fiber. Articles and columns in major newspapers and national magazines have reported new scientific observations on food fiber and its possible effect on health.

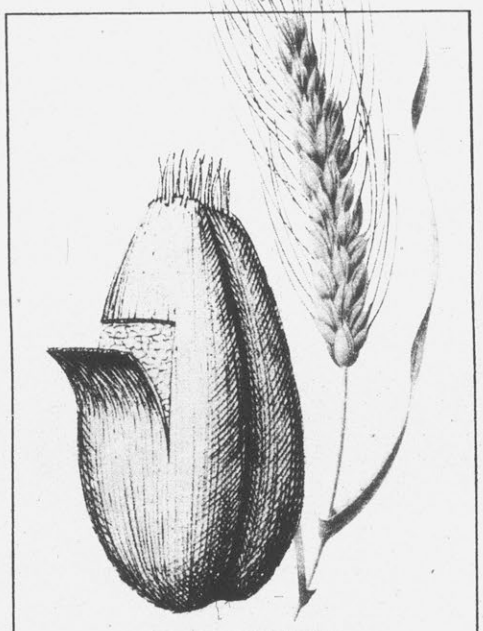
Basically, they're saying what we've been saying for years: natural food fiber is important to help your digestive system regulate itself. But in addition, they suggest that fiber may play an even greater role in our diet than previously believed.

CHANGES IN DIETARY HABITS.

These observations suggest that, with the change in eating habits in recent years, many Americans may not be getting the food fiber they need. This, in spite of the fact that one of the best sources of food fiber is also the most common.

TWO BREAKFAST SUGGESTIONS.

Which brings us to Kellogg's All-Bran and Kellogg's Bran Buds. Not only are both these cereals rich in natural food fiber, they're also an important source of vitamins and iron. Crisp and crunchy even in milk, they offer two delicious ways to get the food fiber you need in your diet.



SOURCE OF FIBER: THE WHEAT BRAN.

these two bran cereals as part of your diet. Kellogg's All Bran, in shredded form, and Kellogg's Bran-Buds, in bud form, with a slightly different taste. Two excellent sources of natural food fiber.

FOOD FIBER AND HEALTH.

If you're concerned about fiber and its relation to health, think about including

French Star Catherine Deneuve:

A Closeup of "The Iceberg Blonde"

Elle/Transworld Features

"It's not in my nature to stand up and talk at meetings. I am not a Jane Fonda or a Vanessa Redgrave. But I do understand the women who participate."

By Michael Leech

She's French. She's a film star. She's an iceberg blonde with a volcano underneath. The kind of pure, porcelain beauty most men would find a challenge.

On screen she's cool, calm and collected. Off screen . . . "I'm very happy, really. I live the way I've always wanted to live. I decided it. My work is very important for me, but I would never make concessions. I would never sacrifice my private life for my career."

That's possibly because her private life is still very bound up with Marcello Mastroianni—and there can't be many women around who wouldn't make some sacrifices for his Italian charm. His Italian charm, however, didn't prevent Catherine from giving him his marching orders a few months ago. A fact which drove him to public despair . . . until she relented and took him back.

But doesn't the French press criticize Catherine's life-style a good bit? "Oh yes. But today, I don't care, quite frankly. When I was 20, I got very upset. I did some interviews with journalists who reported inaccurately what I'd been saying—and that gave me a bad surprise. So I said to myself, no more interviews. So the papers gave me what they call a Lemon Prize for not being cooperative. Well, I didn't mind about that but I was upset about the bad interviews. They hurt me very much. I was young then. After a while, I realized that they had nothing to do with my work. As long as I am working with people who know me and like me, that is the important thing. I cannot please everybody and I cannot

Medical, Nutritional Experts Warn You:

Don't CRASH Diet!*

Here's a simple, medically-approved, university-tested slimming plan that has you losing inches and pounds in days — without fad diets, dangerous drugs or pills! No need to give up the foods you love... and, best of all, once you have slimmed down, you can stay slim, firm and shapely. WE GUARANTEE IT!

Our "5-Minute Figure-Shaping Plan" is for busy, intelligent people, who understand the hazards of diet fads and "effortless exercises."

With our plan, all you do is lie on your back and do one "5" Minute Exercise twice a day, whenever it's convenient, even while watching TV. Instantly, you start speeding up your metabolism, burning off fat, releasing excess water, using up extra calories, stimulating your well-being and helping to curb your appetite without appetite suppressants.

We also suggest a temporary 20% food reduction, without giving up any of the foods you love — eat ice cream, cake, pasta — whatever. (It's all in the guide).

The "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan Works!
(Without Dangerous Fad Diets!)

The slimming action of our "5" Minute Exerciser concentrates on your waistline, hips, legs and flabby arms — where fat accumulates quickest, to give you that aging look.

While crash or fad diets cause some temporary weight loss, they also burn off much muscle tissue — which can also cause your skin to wrinkle, neckline tissue to deteriorate and leave you feeling fatigued.

Our plan stimulates active tissue growth, through the use of our "5" Minute Exerciser, which firms and shapes your figure. When combined with your temporary 20% food reduction, greater fat losses are quickly achieved, making you look years lovelier as you slim. Because our plan is easy and fun to follow — you love staying with it, and without any further food reduction, you remain slim and shapely, not regaining those inches and pounds you lost, saying "goodbye" at last to the "gain and weight loss roller-coaster" cycle.

* WHY FAD DIETS ARE DANGEROUS — HERE ARE THE FACTS!

If you hope to slim down, firm-up and beautify your figure through dieting alone...FORGET IT!

Doctors and nutritional experts warn that fad diets — even fasting — will do absolutely nothing to firm and shape you up. In fact, they caution: Unless you diet under proper medical supervision, you can actually destroy your figure, beauty and sex appeal! You may even seriously damage your health.

Even under medical supervision, dieting alone will do nothing to firm or shape you up. Our simple "5" Minute Exerciser, used twice daily, is the safe, natural way to firm and beautify your figure, while you eat sensibly.

Pat. 3,858,874, © Joe Weider 1973

* THE SAD TRUTH ABOUT DIET FADS:

Formula Diets can be a serious health hazard. Low carbohydrate, skim milk and banana diets — among others — have been severely criticized by many doctors, because they often fail to supply your body with nutrients it needs. This deficiency may cause calcium and iron depletion, dehydration, weakness, nausea or even kidney problems. And diets do nothing to firm and shape your figure!

The Yo-Yo Syndrome comes from crash dieting. You lose a few pounds for a short time — giving up the foods you love counting calories and staying hungry. But, it's too great a price to pay for a few pounds you can't see. So, because there are no firming and figure-shaping results, you go back to eating, and quickly gain back the little weight you lost. This "up and down" cycle is repeated with some people every time a new diet comes out!

It has a negative effect on your metabolism — aging your body and skin — and can be more dangerous to your health than staying fat! And, of course, no fad diet can firm up your figure!

Pills and drugs intended to suppress appetite have been reported to have undesirable mental and physical effects. In addition, some may become habit-forming. And, they do nothing to bring back a trimmer figure!

Diuretics drain water and potassium from your body — which can cause dehydration, nausea, weakness and drowsiness. Dangerous for diabetics. They do nothing to firm and shape your body!

HCG Shots, which supposedly enable a person to subsist on 500 calories per day, allow too narrow a variety of foods to provide adequate nutrients. The low carbohydrate levels of this diet can promote Ketosis and other problems. Does nothing to firm and shape your figure!

Sauna Wraps, inflated belts, rubber suits and so-called "effortless exercisers" have been proven to have no slimming value. You may sweat off a few pounds of water — but, within a few hours you'll drink it all back. Does nothing to shape you up!

Isn't it foolish to risk the hazards of fad diets and effortless exercise "gimmicks" when our "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan works so safely and effectively to reduce unwanted inches and pounds the natural way...firming and trimming your figure and improving your health and energy without depriving you of a single food you love?

HERE ARE THE SIX REASONS

...why our plan SLIMS, FIRMS AND SHAPES your figure so fast you look years slimmer in 14 days, without resorting to dangerous diets, drugs or pills.

1) It concentrates its slimming and firming action on your fatty areas — waist, hips, upper thighs and arms — that give you an "aging look". Because it works most of your muscles gracefully at one time — not body part by body part — the plan stimulates faster slimming action to help you start fashioning a more youthful-looking figure in 14 days.

2) Simple to use...No disrobing. Attach to any door-knob, stretch out comfortably on the floor. Do one "5" Minute continuous, rhythmic, enjoyable exercise twice daily — whenever you have the time (even while watching TV).

3) Designed to slim fatty problem areas. Choose from four different "5" Minute Exercises — each created to help slim down the problem fatty deposit areas of your body in 14 days.

4) No rigid dieting. We suggest you temporarily eat 20% less until you reach your normal weight — without giving up any of the foods you love. Eat ice cream, cake, pasta...whatever! (It's all in the Guide).

5) Safer...and saves time. No more exhausting workouts at the gym. This simple "5" Minute Plan you do at home, leaves you refreshed.

6) Weighs about 10 ounces. Fits any wallet-size case. Stores anywhere. Travels with you — so you never have to miss a slimming session.

So what sort of things does she care about?

"The move for abortion in France. I think it's very important. And Women's Lib. It's not in my nature to stand up and talk at meetings. I am not a Jane Fonda or a Vanessa Redgrave. But I do, of course, understand the women who participate. Most of them aren't even doing it for themselves. They're doing it for the women who don't even care yet. It is not true to say there are no problems for women. There is a big problem and there is going to be one for many years."

While Catherine Deneuve doesn't see herself as a spokesman for rebel causes, she nevertheless occasionally lashes out on behalf of Women's Lib.

"I would never let anyone say anything wrong about it. It's terribly irritating for me to hear women saying 'Women's Lib is not for me because I don't feel concerned. I don't feel I have to be free.' It's like saying 'Politics doesn't concern me because I'm not personally involved in it.' Being free doesn't happen to bother me—but there are many women who need to be free. That's why I think Women's Lib is necessary. Even though I am not involved in it, I do feel for the situation of other women."

Her principal films have been "Umbrellas of Cherbourg," "Belle de Jour" and "Mayerling." One of her best known is "Repulsion," directed by Roman Polanski. She's worked with many top directors and nowadays does about two feature films a year. So far, she's notched more than 30. She nevertheless is only known to some people for her appearance in Chanel Number 5 advertisements.

"I think it is better to be known for that than not to be known at all. In life you are not always famous for what you would like to be famous for. I would have preferred to be famous, in America, say, for my films—but I am a French actress and the problem is the language. So I am known as a foreign actress. Now people associate my face with the one for the commercials, so I am getting better known for the films! There is, of course, always the danger that one becomes that sort of pretty actress who is more famous for her face than anything else."

Although she lived in London for a short time, when she was married to David Bailey, she really considered Paris her home. Her spacious flat is on one of the upper floors of a large townhouse on a fashionable avenue. The dining room, with its modern furnishings, has bird prints all over the walls and large, pale pebbles ranged around the roots of enormous, healthy-looking houseplants. Rust-colored carpets stretch endlessly in every direction and there is a sense of tasteful luxury. Her bed, swathed in thick fox fur, is a modern four-poster. All this must make her the envy of many a woman.

"I suppose I am lucky," she agrees. "I am in good condition physically, and for me there is always the possibility to enjoy life. I have a small house in the country, and when we go there with the children, life is very good. As long as there are trees and children and sun and sea, I think you can find a way to appreciate living. I like the simple things in life—although in some ways I am a complicated woman."

Is it the complicated woman who likes the luxurious things of her life—the expensive trappings, the travel, the clothes?

"It is better to be known for TV commercials than not to be known at all . . ."

"I don't know if it is complicated to like clothes. I love clothes. I don't think a woman dresses for a man—she dresses for other women. I'm very much impressed by elegance. And that doesn't mean one has to spend a lot of money on clothes. I know many women with very little money but with great elegance in the way they wear things. I do care about the way I look and don't believe it when an actress says she doesn't care about the way she looks. I can tell you if she says that, she's lying."

What about the future?

"I'm not a gloomy person. Nor do I worry a lot. Even when there are wars all around I cannot be like those women who worry 24 hours a day. It is not in me to be like that. I can feel very concerned and touched, but it doesn't destroy my life."

She's been intimately associated with an Englishman, an Italian, and a Frenchman. Does she find the men of any nation more attractive than others?

"I don't think like that," she says, shrugging. "For me it is the personality of the man, his warmth and his concern that are important. I make decisions for myself and I don't mind if people criticize me for the way I live, or for the men I love. It's my life and I must always be true to myself."

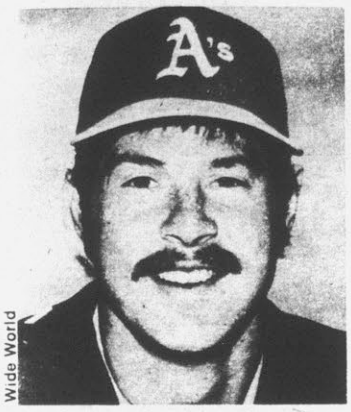
GENE TENACE:

He's Still Taking His Father's Advice



Wide World

Oakland's Gene Tenace is proof that a star does not have to be the greatest player in the world—as long as he's great when it counts. Gene was an unknown substitute in 1972. Suddenly, at the end of the season, he made headlines as the spearhead of Oakland's dramatic World Series win over powerful Cincinnati. He hit four home runs to tie a Series record, was voted the Series' Most Valuable Player and earned a regular job as the A's first-baseman in 1973. Tenace simply has a talent for hitting under pressure. He has hit five grand-slam homers in the past two years, and he produced 11 game-winning hits in 1974 alone. Many of his homers have come off the best pitchers in the league.... Tenace is as valuable for what he doesn't hit as for what he does. Last year, he waited out 110 walks, leading the league in that category. When the A's beat the Mets in the 1973 Series, Gene walked 11 times to tie an old Babe Ruth record. In the 1974 American League Playoffs, he worked Baltimore pitcher Mike Cuellar for a bases-loaded pass that forced in what proved to be the decisive run. . . . Another thing Gene is noted for is his versatility. When A's catcher Ray Fosse was injured, Tenace was shifted from first base to catcher, and Joe Rudi was given the first-base slot. Gene credits his ability to make this kind of switch to his father. The elder Tenace, Fiore, had played catcher, outfielder and third-baseman in the semi-pros and had always urged his son to learn how to play more than one position. Gene is still taking his father's advice. Early this season, Gene fell into a severe batting slump. His dad told him he'd become too selective and was letting good pitches go by him. "I listened to what he said," says Gene, "and my batting average shot up a hundred points!" Gene, his wife and two children live in San Ramon, Calif.

People and You

Some Findings About Those "Liberated" Teenagers

Is sexual freedom healthy for teenagers? There are plenty of experts to argue both sides of this question, and the returns aren't entirely in yet. But one interesting study produced some negative results. Some sociologists investigating the sexual behavior of 14- and 15-year-olds found that youngsters who were involved in sexual relationships seemed to be in an overall state of distress. The sexually active boys and girls were very likely involved with alcohol and drugs. And the more heavily involved they were in sexual activities, the greater the likelihood that they would also engage in shoplifting, car theft, vandalism, assault and reckless driving. It was found that these youngsters also had negative attitudes toward education, teachers, school and the police. What wasn't clear was how much the situation today is different from the situation 10, 20 or even 30 years ago.

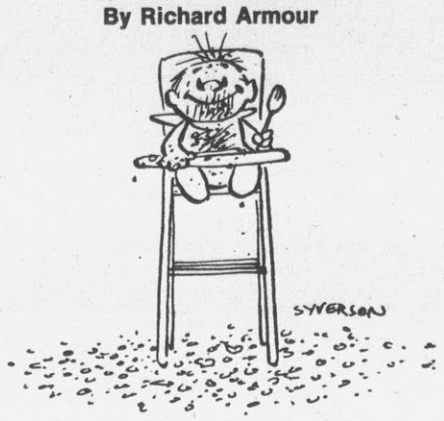
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



COMING FULL CYCLE

Recycling has done well so far
With paper, can, and even car,
But something still we throw away
And don't re-use, day after day,
Don't reassemble, saving thus
Material as well as muss.
What am I thinking of, you wonder?
I'll tell you what it is, by thunder:
It's crumbs! The crumbs of bread and cake
The crumbs I have myself seen left
It's not too late now to begin,
So save your crumbs and turn them in.

I just saw a classified ad in a New York newspaper that says it all. It read: FOR SALE – BURGLAR ALARM, THREE LOCKS, AND STEREO TAPE OF A VICIOUS BARKING DOG. MOVING TO ARIZONA.

–Robert Orben

–Franklin P. Jones

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Kids see life differently. Send contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

My husband proudly drove our new convertible with its top down, into the driveway. Our four-year-old daughter Kelly ran out to greet him and exclaimed in delight, "Daddy, our new car is bald-headed!"

—Mrs. Mark White
Milford, Del.

What do you want to bet that when we finally defeat inflation, we'll do just what we did with our other enemies—spend billions to build it up again.

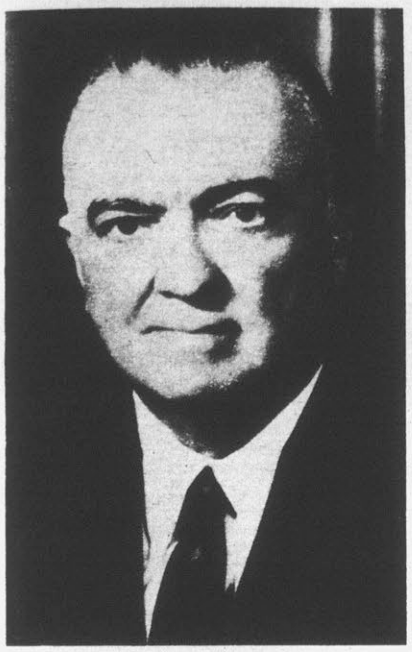
What in the World!



J. EDGAR HOOVER
A Survivor's View

A former agent talks about J. Edgar Hoover's FBI: "In the FBI under Mr. Hoover, you had to work on the premise that the Director was infallible. If you did not really believe this—and of course most employees certainly did not—you nevertheless had to pay lip service to it to survive. . . . Mr. Hoover was old-fashioned, and so were his punishments. They were reminiscent of the eighteenth-century English law, which provided public hangings for thieves and pickpockets. It may sound a little crazy, but it was the danger of this kind of disciplinary action that made Bureau service exciting. The game was to break and bend the rules without getting caught. Most of us who survived became, by necessity, expert players." From "No Left Turns: The FBI in Peace and War," by Joseph L. Schott (Praeger, $7.95)

THE SUPER SECRETARY

The office desk of the future may well be this cradle-like device designed by a West German industrial firm. It incorporates in one neat unit a chair, a desk and an electric typewriter which is hooked up to a computer to receive information. The typewriter can also be replaced by a telex machine and microfilm reading equipment. The chair allows the secretary to sit upright or practically recline while working, and the tools available around her enable her to work completely from her desk. This office unit is a great space saver, and is believed to be a major step toward the paperless office, but critics ask whether it is also a major step toward a sterile, over-automated working environment.

What's Anne Meara's secret fear? She's made countless appearances on TV, has been seen by millions of viewers, and she's been acting for almost 25 years, but one kind of entertaining still frightens her. Anne said, "I can play Madison Square Garden for thousands, but if I have to give a dinner party for six, I'm scared to death. I fall to pieces and get pains in the back of my neck. Then my head throbs and my knees turn to water. By the time my guests arrive, I'm a basket case." Why? "Because certain things are expected of me, and I panic. When I act, I read the lines of my part. I can ad lib. But at home, it's different. I have no script and can't prepare my remarks in advance. Also, our home is geared for children (Anne and husband Jerry Stiller have two children, Amy, 14, and Benjy, 10), not entertaining. As for cooking, I cook a lot. All in one pot. My kind of cooking, beef stews and chunky soups, belongs on a farm." Anne stars in a new TV series for CBS, "Kate McShane."

Our Story: HANTZ MURDERED HIS TWIN BROTHER, FULLA, AND NOW THE OLD CHIEFTAIN MUST PASS JUDGMENT ON HIS REMAINING SON. BANISHMENT!

IT IS A TERRIBLE SENTENCE. AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW THE CONDEMNED IS GIVEN TWELVE HOURS TO REACH THE BORDER. BITTERLY HE CURSES HIS FATHER AND THE ASSEMBLED JARLS.

TWELVE HOURS OF SAFETY, THEN IF FOUND WITHIN THE BOUNDARIES OF THE FIEF, HE CAN BE KILLED AS AN OUTLAW. HANTZ SETS OUT, RUNNING...

..... HIS FATE UNKNOWN, FOR ARN HAD MOUNTED HIS PONY AND DEPARTED. GLAD TO GET AWAY FROM THESE BRUTAL INLAND PEOPLE AND BE ONCE AGAIN WITH THE BOISTEROUS VIKINGS OF THE FJORDS.
