Communications Equipment Bid Is Endorsed By Pitt

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners this morning recommended to the Mid-East Emergency Medical Services Council that the low bid of $45,509 be accepted for radio equipment for emergency vehicle-hospital communications.

the "growing case load" in Pitt County is comparable to other metropolitan areas of the state. He explained that "people bring on more court business", citing the population growth of the area as one reason for the increasing need for additional space.

The low bidder was Motorola. The bid included mobile radios for rescue trucks in the county, a base station to provide central dispatch capability for emergency vehicles, a 150-foot self-supporting tower for the new hospital site, and a number of pager-monitor radios to reduce response time of rescue squads by making notification of squad members easier.

General Electric Corp. submitted a bid totaling $48,316. The Mid-East EMS Council is expected to take action to award the contracts for the communications equipment at its meeting Wednesday night in Williamston.

Commissioners this morning also approved funding for four radios for the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and money for the purchase of two new cars. State Law and Order funds will be used to fund the major portion of the costs of the radios and cars.

Burt Montague, administrator of the court system in North Carolina met with the board to discuss the present and future needs of the court system in the county. Montague told Commissioners that the courts would require more and more space in the future.

Commissioners, who requested the meeting, asked that the court system administrator in conjunction with local court officials provide the Board with detailed information and projections as to the present and future needs. Montague told commissioners

Hijacker Is Shot, Killed

By JIM WILLSE
Associated Press Writer
SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A gunman who took a doctor and four other persons as hostages was shot dead by a police sharpshooter early today while trying to hijack an airliner, police said. The doctor was wounded, but no other injuries were reported at the airport, they said.

The gunman, who was not immediately identified, was shot as he emerged from a Continental Airlines 727 passenger jet with a hostage in front of him and pointed a handgun at one of 25 police officers around the plane, police Sgt. Michael Van Dyke said. The gunman had forced two Continental maintenance mechanics to start the engines of the unoccupied plane earlier, but police had shot out the tires as the jetliner moved down the runway, Van Dyke said at a news conference.

As the plane began moving, the doctor, who had been taken hostage at a hospital shortly before midnight, appeared at the door. A shot rang out, and the doctor tumbled down steps attached to the plane. He was critically wounded but crawled to safety, Van Dyke said. The doctor was identified as

Frank L. Wiefels, a radiologist. He was taken hostage at a hospital after the gunman kidnapped the driver of a car which he commandeered at a small grocery store, Van Dyke said. The gunman had fled to the store, which he tried to hold up, from the scene of a rape in which a woman was stabbed in the chest, Van Dyke said. He went to the San Jose Hospital and Health Center from the store, took Wiefels hostage, and headed for the Reid-Hillview Airport with the two hostages in an auto, Van Dyke said.

At the Reid-Hillview Airport, the gunman took a security guard hostage, switched to a Santa Clara County vehicle and took it and his three hostages to the main terminal of the San Jose Municipal Airport, 20 miles away, Van Dyke said. He escorted the hostages into the main lobby, where he took the two Continental mechanics as hostages, Van Dyke said.

Talking End Oil Controls

By JIM LUTHER
WASHINGTON (AP) — There is growing sentiment among congressional Democrats to end oil-price controls just long enough to give Americans a taste of higher fuel prices.

Then, the Democrats' theory goes, consumers would set up a clamor, controls would be restored despite President Ford's objections, and Ford would have suffered a stinging defeat. It is doubtful the battle between Ford and Congress over energy policy will end that way, but chances for such a turn will be improved this week unless House and Senate Democrats resolve their differences over terms of a brief extension of controls.

Both houses of Congress will devote virtually all their efforts this week to energy legislation. Because of the Yom Kippur holiday, the House planned no action today or Tuesday. The Senate scheduled a meeting for today but scheduled no votes. (Continued on Page 14)

Trooper Slain; Trio Held Following Sunday Search

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)— Three Wilmington men were jailed today after law enforcement officers set up a search late Sunday for one or more persons sought in the slaying of a Highway Patrol trooper.

Wilmington police said the men had not been charged in the shooting death of Trooper

Hugh R. Griffin, 46, but were held on charges filed in the death of a businessman. George Davis of Wilmington was arrested in his home city this morning. The other two men, Willy Lee "Bubba" Williams, 27, and Joseph Sweat Jr., 21, were arrested near Burgaw about midnight after officers had used bloodhounds to search the area where Griffin was killed. Police said the three men were charged with robbery and murder in the shooting death last Wednesday of Thurston Monroe Smith, operator of a Wilmington shoe shop. Smith was killed during the robbery of a grocery store adjoining his shop. A spokesman for the highway patrol in Wilmington said Griffin, a 21-year veteran of the patrol, radioed Sunday afternoon that he had stopped a car on N.C. 53 six miles east of Burgaw and was bringing in the driver.

A few minutes later two motorists notified authorities that Griffin was wounded and slumped over his steering wheel. His blood-stained pistol was found empty next to the patrol car, authorities said.

Griffin was pronounced dead at Pender Memorial Hospital. The spokesman said he did not know why Griffin had stopped the vehicle, but he said the officer had requested that a magistrate be present. Another patrolman said the car's license tags were believed to have come from a 1964 Ford stolen earlier Sunday in Wilmington.

Patrol Capt. R. F. Williamson said officers had a suspect in mind but no arrests had been made.

Egyptian Embassy Seized By Palestinian Guerrillas

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas took the Egyptian ambassador and two aides hostage in the Egyptian Embassy today and threatened to blow up the building at midnight—6 p.m. EDT— unless Egypt pulls out its Sinai negotiating team from Geneva and scraps its new disengagement accord with Israel.

One of the five guerrillas said explosives had been placed at the entrance and all the windows of the embassy — a 12-room apartment on the first floor of an eight-story building in the heart of Madrid's diplomatic quarter. Families in the building and surrounding homes were immediately evacuated.

The Egyptian government in Cairo said it has asked Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat to take steps to secure the release of the diplomats in Madrid, and would hold him and his Palestine Liberation Organization personally "responsible for the incident and all its consequences."

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat formed a special committee to deal with the embassy siege. The seized ambassador in Madrid, a horseman and golfer, is related to Sadat through marriage.

A United Nations spokesman in Geneva said there were no immediate plans to call off the next meeting of Egyptian and Israeli Sinai accord negotiators, now scheduled for Tuesday.

The embassy takeover was the first such action in Spain since the Spanish civil war that ended in 1939.

As the embassy siege began, about 40 Palestinian students from the University of Madrid occupied the Arab League office a quarter of a mile away in a rich Madrid residential district, but left two hours later, releasing the Egyptian director and secretary unharmed.

The students said their action had no connection with the embassy takeover, and was meant only to dramatize their identical demand to scrap the Sinai accord.

At the embassy, about five Palestinian gunmen held 55-year-old Egyptian Ambassador Mahmoud Abdul Ghaffar, his press attache and a consul hostage. They agreed to talk with the ambassadors of Algeria and Iraq, but the substance of the discussions was not known.

Scores of helmeted riot police armed with sub-machine guns surrounded the building, but made no immediate attempt to enter.

The semiofficial Spanish news agency Cifra said it had received a telephone call from the gunmen at the embassy in which they listed their demands:

—Withdrawal of the Egyptian delegation in Geneva.

—A declaration by that delegation to be made at Geneva airport that signature of the Sinai disengagement accord with Israel is "a betrayal of the Egyptian and Arab people and would not serve the cause of peace."

—The Egyptian ambassador and his aides will remain prisoners until the first two conditions are fulfilled.

—If the Egyptian government fails to carry out the demands, it will be responsible for the lives of the prisoners.

The Palestine Liberation Organization, as well as more radical Palestinian groups, have bitterly opposed the recent Sinai agreement which Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger negotiated.

HUGH R. GRIFFIN

Griffin, the father of two children, had been with the patrol since 1953 and had been stationed in Burgaw since 1954.

Eugene Chadwick, who was visiting his father near the scene of the shooting, said he heard noise that sounded like gunfire as he was leaving his father's home. He reported seeing a car speeding down the road.

Chadwick said he and another motorist stopped at the patrolman's car and found Griffin mortally wounded.

Chadwick said he and the other motorist notified authorities.

Griffin was the second patrolman killed in the line of duty in the last two weeks. Patrolman G.T. "Tom" Davis was fatally shot Sept. 2 in Williamston while investigating a bank robbery.

Three persons have been arrested and charged with murder in the incident.

Long Restoration Job On Rembrandt Painting

By JOHN GALE
Associated Press Writer
AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — The director of the Rijksmuseum says the damage that an apparently deranged man did to Rembrandt's "The Night Watch" can be repaired, but the restoration will take four months or longer.

"The canvas is badly damaged," said Dr. P. J. Van Thiel after a burly, 38-year-old man repeatedly slashed the priceless 17th century canvas, one of the most famous paintings in the world.

Officials said Wilhelmus de Rijk, a former teacher from a village 30 miles west of Amsterdam, entered the museum shortly after it opened Sunday afternoon, went directly to the spacious chamber where the "The Night Watch" hangs and began slashing at the lower center section of the huge painting with a serrated bread knife.

A guard grabbed his arm, but Rijk fought him off and moved (Continued on page 14)

WATER IN GASOLINE?

I think I bought some watered-down gasoline at a local gas station. It damaged my car's carburetor and caused a big repair bill. What can I do? S. D.

J. E. Roebuck is the gas and oil inspector for the U. S. Department of Agriculture here, we learned from a local gas and oil wholesaler. We suggested that you contact him. He reported to you and to us that he went to the station you named and ran a test on the gas, finding no water.

Water contamination of gas would be quite unlikely to be intentional, he said. "There'd just be no percentage in it," he said. "It can happen as a result of a leak in storage tank, however. If there is contamination, unless it's excessive, it's doubtful that the customer would get water in his gas because the gasoline would float on top of the water. With the water at the bottom of the tank, it would not be likely to be drawn out since most tanks are made so the last six inches are never pumped from the tank."

Ingram Claims Malpractice Crisis Was Averted

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram spoke to the staff of Pitt Memorial Hospital Saturday morning, telling them how North Carolina legislation has averted a medical malpractice crisis.

"The General Assembly has required insurance companies to write medical malpractice insurance. Unless this were done, our entire health care system could be paralyzed because doctors, nurses, nurse anesthetists, hospitals, and others in the health care professions would be afraid to treat our citizens," he said.

Arkansas has written a reinsurance exchange law that is almost identical, he said, and no restraining order has been issued by the companies, as has been done in North Carolina. "The insurance companies have chosen to make a test case out of North Carolina's health care reinsurance law," he said.

"If the insurance companies should be successful in their court challenge, then it would open the door for them to challenge the requirement that they must write automobile insurance. "The General Assembly did not believe this door would be opened. I do not believe it will be opened."

In some state, he said, health care providers are considering forming their own medical malpractice insurance companies. In Indiana, a government corporation was formed to provide medical malpractice insurance. N.C. has elected to follow the reinsurance exchange approach.

"This keeps the system normal so a doctor may deal with his own insurance agent," he said. "We believe the courts will agree with the General Assembly that providing a means for the free enterprise system to handle the problem of availability to the citizens is the best approach," he said.

"Reinsurance allows the free enterprise system to work," he said. "It assures members of the health care professions that they will be able to buy insurance. This, in turn, assures the people of continued health care. Through reinsurance, all companies writing general liability insurance are required to write medical malpractice insurance and may elect to pool profits and losses.

"Under the reinsurance system, the physician contacts his regular insurance agent for the coverage he needs. That agent and that company then write the medical malpractice insurance policy. If the company does not want to keep the risk of that physician, it can reinsure through the N.C. Health Care Liability Reinsurance Exchange, made up of all general liability insurance companies in North Carolina. In order to keep its license to do business in North Carolina, each company is required by law to participate in this reinsurance exchange.

"Reinsurance prevents excessive and unreasonable rates. It can break up monopolies which have been created in state after state. Rates are set by the Insurance Commissioners, but may be appealed to rate hearings in the courts. This means that the companies must operate within the law and the judicial system. No company can threaten not to write medical malpractice insurance.

"The General Assembly believed that in N.C., the best answer is the reinsurance exchange, which provides the total availability of essential insurance at fair and equitable rates," Ingram said.

Thousands At Festival

AYDEN — The first Ayden Collard Festival has been termed a "tremendous success" by Willis Manning, president of the Ayden Chamber of Commerce.

Manning said, "There were between 6,000 and 8,000 people in Ayden Saturday... more people than we ever remember seeing in Ayden at one time."

"There is no doubt about a second collard festival here," Manning said. "Next year's event will be bigger and better."

Winners in the various contests held Saturday include: Collard Queen: Cathy Stox, queen; Lu Ann Baldrée, first runner-up; Audrey McCarter, second runner-up. Miss McCarter was also named "Miss Congeniality."

—Collard growing contest, for largest collard plant, L. B. Hill;

—Collard eating contest, Wayne Hart who ate three pounds of collards in a 20-minute time limit;

—Collard cooking contest, Audrey Manning. Various activities held during the Friday and Saturday event included a street dance Friday night; booths and games; dunking stool; collard photography contest; parade; pet show; music by the New Dixie Blue Grass Band; displays of arts and crafts, paintings, sculptures and other items of interest at the Ayden Community Building.

A concert by Loonis McGlohon was held Saturday night following the beauty pageant. Serving as judges for the collard cooking contest were Senator Robert Morgan and Loonis McGlohon.

Attention Now Focused On Mosquitoes

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer
GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP)—
Mosquitoes are as much a way of life for Everidge Hollins as the humid summer climate of the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta, where he lives and works.

"Mosquitoes are just something you don't think about," the 49-year old mechanic said. "But I think about them now. I think about them a lot." Hollins is one of 248 Mississippians with confirmed or suspected cases of St. Louis encephalitis, a branch of the mosquito-borne sleeping sickness family. The disease has killed 33 persons in the state.

Doctors diagnosed his problem as encephalitis and ordered him hospitalized.

"I don't remember much about it after that, except that I was really sick. I don't know what they did to me, but I remember waking up at different times," he said.

Dr. Kenneth Powell, a specialist with the State Board of Health, said the symptoms described by Hollins are typical of the disease, which attacks the brain and nervous system.

Once the disease is contracted, he said, there is little a physician can do but try to prevent other medical problems from developing while the disease runs its course.

"Encephalitis is a virus and there are no drugs to cure viruses," Powell said. "It's not that people aren't doing research, it's just they haven't found any cure."

Health officials have started a statewide campaign to kill mosquitoes and eliminate their breeding spots.

In Greenville, municipal trucks cruise the city around the clock, spraying chemicals from 300-gallon tanks into ditches and other areas where the insects collect.

"We even have a fogging machine that is used to spray in storm sewers, where we found mosquitoes were collecting," said Greenville City Manager John Teunisson.

A Greenville physician who has treated a number of encephalitis cases this summer said that when the outbreak began, "nobody really knew what was going on."

"They came in complaining about the flu or a virus," he recalled. After the disease was publicized, he said, "Everyone who got sick...would tell me he thought he had encephalitis."

Dr. Johnny Ozts, head of the biological science department at Delta State University at nearby Cleveland, said the disease is found in the soil and can stay active as long as three years.

He said the disease is picked up by birds and that mosquitoes become carriers when they bite infected birds.

"You have to have the bird and mosquito to make the transmission scheme work," he said. "We've had mosquitoes all along and we haven't had a St. Louis encephalitis outbreak in the past simply because we lacked the disease."

Personal Hostility In New Hampshire Re-Run

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer
CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Bitter personal hostility between Democrat John A. Durkin and Republican Louis C. Wyman is marking the last days of New Hampshire's Senate campaign as the year-long rivals battle for advantage in a Tuesday runoff both hope will be decisive.

The antagonism between Durkin and Wyman flared Sunday, both on and off the air, as they participated in a pair of television interview programs to climax the campaign made necessary when the Senate was unable to decide who won their first race last November.

Durkin accused Wyman of engaging in Watergate-style tactics, while the GOP candidate claimed his opponent had lied repeatedly, as they clashed over a Republican letter to New Hampshire hunters that accused the Democrat of favoring gun control.

year-old Durkin, a liberal Democrat who was state insurance commissioner before launching his first bid for elective office last year, said they hope the margin Tuesday will be decisive.

Neither, however, would rule out a challenge if the outcome once more is close.

The Senate now consists of 61 Democrats and 39 Republicans, including Republican Norris Cotton, whose retirement led to the Wyman-Durkin race and who has been serving until a winner is chosen.

State Atty. Gen. Warren B. Rudman authorized election officials to turn over all ballots and tally sheets to the state police Tuesday night for safekeeping to avoid post-election problems.

Politicians here agree the Durkin-Wyman race is close and will be decided by which organization succeeds better in turning out its supporters. The third candidate, American Party nominee Carmen Chimento, a 45-year-old unemployed writer, is given no chance but is expected to poll more than the 1 per cent he received in November.

Some independent observers give Durkin an organizational edge but add quickly this might have been offset by the impact of President Ford's visit last Thursday, which drew large, friendly crowds in areas in which Durkin did well in the first election.

Tuesday's result may show if the Democratic tide of 1974 is still running and will test the potency of charges by Durkin, likely to be echoed by other Democrats next year, that President Ford has sided with "big oil" and other "special interests."

"I think it represents a new low in New Hampshire politics, and I'm ashamed of you," Durkin declared after he raised the issue and denied the charge on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

"I'm ashamed of you, Mr. Durkin, for lying time and time again," countered Wyman, claiming that Durkin had changed his gun control position.

An hour later, in another Boston studio, they went through a similar confrontation in an interview taped for showing today on NBC's "Today" show.

Both the 58-year-old Wyman, a conservative Republican who has spent 30 years in elected and appointed posts, and the 39-

Japanese Company Says Office Wife System Isn't Chauvinism

By NAOAKI USUI
TOKYO (AP) — Every one of the 371 men working in the Tokyo sales headquarters of a leading Japanese auto maker has at least one "office wife."

That's the name that has been given the system in which each male employe, no matter how junior, is assigned a female secretary-helper.

The men, and in general the women, too, agree it works well.

Most of the 481 women are in their 20s and they spend most of their working time preparing papers and presentations, answering phones, making tea or coffee and doing other chores such as getting aspirin tablets.

There is no female manager in the company — Toyota — that sold 1.25 million cars in 1974. But most of the women say they are fairly happy, although some secretaries with college degrees say they would like more responsibility.

The pattern has been that the young women workers usually quit after working about three years, half of them for marriage to their male chiefs. Virtually none of the women look forward to long-term careers.

"It's not male chauvinism," declared Kei Yamamoto, 25, a company spokesman. "It's an efficient system. Men can concentrate on the more strategic part of the business, while women beautifully run routine things with their superb delicacy and finesse."

A man with a college degree starts out in the company office at a monthly salary of 90,000 yen ($310 U.S.). A woman just out of college starts at 73,700 yen ($250 U.S.), Yamamoto said. The difference in pay, he said, is because the jobs are different.

A newly hired male usually gets an assistant who has had more than two years' experience, and she is expected to teach him the routine business procedures, including such things as how to make out an expense account.

A newly hired woman gets 10 days of initial training, consisting mainly of how to handle phone calls and queries and becoming familiar with her boss' duties.

"If the chief is out on a business trip, the assistant must handle his entire work," Yamamoto said.

"It's a beautiful system," he added. "A man and a woman need each other, and they learn it when either of them is gone."

"I think I am fairly happy with my present job to assist Mr. Yamamoto. But sometimes I feel dissatisfied because after all I am responsible for nothing, and then I get skeptical whether this job is worth making a career," said Miss Fiko Suetsugu, who has a B.A. in French literature.

Then Miss Suetsugu picked up a thick file of American Congressional Quarterly and started checking to find some legislation on car emission control in the United States.

"Some of my friends joined rival companies after college," Yamamoto said, "and they sometimes meet me and say they envy me because I've got my personal female assistant."

"But the company means business, and I think we are supposed to learn management under this system. For example, if one man's assistants should quit very often or very soon, I'm sure he would get into trouble with the higher-ups."

He said the pair system started 25 years ago when the company started from scratch with 261 men and 91 women. Today, it has more than 4,500 employes and is the biggest car wholesaler of Japan.

"This system apparently makes the office atmosphere very active and attractive," Yamamoto continued. "Hundreds of overseas dealers and buyers visit here, and everybody says he enjoys the atmosphere."

It appears to be the well-trained gracefulness and efficiency of the women that attract overseas dealers. For example, a young secretary brought three cups of coffee during an interview, soundlessly and with three polite bows.

But not many women are born bowers, Yamamoto said. The initial 10-day training session mainly teaches them the basics of handling customers, including how to answer telephones and how to accept visitors.

"I felt the job was really tough for the first weeks. I was always scared I might have talked rudely to customers whenever I took phone calls. I still get kind of nervous sometimes," said 18-year-old Miss Tomoko Kawashima, a freshman assistant.

Miss Kawashima is working under a 10-year public relations veteran, Tomoji Komatsu, who married his secretary six years ago. About half of the men end up marrying their secretaries.

"Most of my friends think my wife understands my job pretty well," he grinned. "But not so ever since I got married. A woman changes as soon as she becomes wife. And she often complains that I'm so busy and I eat dinner at home only once a week."

One secretary, who did not want to identify herself, said she wants to marry somebody outside although her boss is a very nice person.

"You see, everybody here seems the same," she said after an hours-long lecture on batteries and tires for cars exported to Saudi Arabia.

"There are company sayings about these marriages," she said. "If a guy marries his secretary, it's called 'goldfish picking' because it's the easiest. If he marries a girl of the same department, it's 'pond fishing' which is the second easiest."

Abby Advises Jogger To Join Other Joggers

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 31-year-old, single career woman. I live alone and recently decided to take up jogging to keep myself physically fit.

The first time I went out jogging, I was stopped by a cop. He said he had noticed me running for two blocks and wanted to know what the trouble was. I told him there wasn't any trouble and that I was just jogging.

I have tried to find others who would jog with me, but no luck. The people I know are just too lazy.

So, Dear Abby, where can a person jog in peace, without appearing that she had just robbed somebody and is making a getaway?

WANTS TO JOG

DEAR WANTS: First, get yourself a sweatshirt and have printed on the back, "JUST JOGGING!" Then, drive your car to a park or playground where other joggers jog and join them.

DEAR ABBY: I should be so lucky as the woman who for 30 years has been sleeping back to back with her husband like a pair of fireplace logs.

We've been married for 32 years, and my 220-pound Romeo holds me in his arms every night until my ribs ache. One night with him and I feel like I've been run over by a semi.

He smokes cigars and loves salami, pickles and garlic, so you know what his breath is like. I've smelled better cesspools.

His toenails are 2 in. long and sharp as razor blades, and he wraps his legs around mine like he's climbing a rope. He sleeps in his shorts, and his chest is covered with bristly hair. It's like sleeping with a raccoon all summer. On top of this, he thinks he's the world's greatest lover, which he isn't.

Please help me. I'm about to cave in.

WATERLOO WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I assume you're on speaking terms with your Romeo, so start talking. Insist that he wear pajama tops, trim his toenails, use a mouthwash and loosen his grip. But don't tell him he's not the world's greatest lover because he'll wonder how you found out.

DEAR ABBY: I have received some expensive gifts (jewelry) from a gentleman with whom I have been keeping steady company for quite some time.

Shouldn't he pay for insuring these gifts? He surely must know that I don't have that kind of money, but so far he hasn't mentioned it.

GIFTED

DEAR GIFTED: So YOU mention it.

Worcestershire Sauce Has Long, Varied History

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Worcestershire sauce that we splash over everything from beef stew to Bloody Marys was concocted in the English town of Worcester about 140 years ago and has been adding tang to foods around the world ever since.

That much I knew. But I was not aware that Worcestershire sauce is actually a souped-up version of garum, a centuries old seasoner created by the cooks of ancient Rome.

It seems that the formula for this piquant sauce was carried from Rome to India via the spice and silk route in early times. The next we hear of garum is a report that it became a favorite seasoner of an epicurean British governor of Bengal. When this official returned to his native Worcester, he brought along the recipe and asked his local druggists to make up a quantity for his own use. The chemists added a few touches of their own and came up with a mixture consisting in part of tamarind, shallots, garlic, chili peppers and anchovies.

The druggists took a taste and found the sauce harsh and raw, so they put the cask in the cellar and forgot about it. A long time after, out of curiosity, the druggists opened up the cask and took another taste. To their delight they found that aging had turned the harsh sauce into a rich, hellow blend.

Worcestershire sauce has proved especially popular in hot countries where they go in for seasoning, such as Hong Kong, India and Latin America. Originally it was used mainly at the dinner table to liven up beef, pork and game dishes cooked without any sauce. But today housewives lean heavily on it to give an added fillip to gravies, soups and salad dressings.

Worcestershire sauce got into the beverage area in 1929 when comedian George Jessel invented the Bloody Mary to settle his stomach after a night on the town. And, if you decide to sip one of these intriguing drinks you might like to try this onion cream dip which also calls for Worcestershire sauce.

- 1-3rd cup dairy sour cream
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped onion
- 1 small clove garlic
- 1 1/2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 1 8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
- 1 hard-cooked egg chopped fine
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley

In jar of an electric blender, combine sour cream, milk, onion, garlic, Worcestershire sauce, salt and paprika and blend well. Add cheese and blend till smooth. Stir in egg and parsley. Turn into a serving dish. Serve with celery stalks and assorted vegetable sticks.

Calf Meat Needs Less Cooking Time

CHICAGO (UPI) — Shorter cooking time and generally lower prices are among the advantages new calf, or baby beef, has over comparable mature beef cuts, says The Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

The council says the best results are obtained with cooking directions and recipes developed especially for young beef. Cooking time ranges from one-third to one-half that of mature beef. Baby beef comes from cattle too old to be classified as veal, but too young to be beef. It has very little marbling (fat flecks in the meat) and limited fat covering on most cuts. It also has a milder flavor than mature beef.

The council estimates total cooking time for a 3 to 4-pound rib, tip or rump roast from calf at one and a half to two and a half hours.

Preferred cooking methods use some fat: steaks to be broiled first should be brushed lightly with oil or steeped in a marinade containing oil. They should be cooked no more than medium or rare on a grill, and they also can be pan fried or braised (simmered in a little of liquid).

Breading and seasoned flour coatings enhance the flavor of baby beef.

Arm and blade roasts can be dry roasted, but care should be taken not to overcook them. Long cooking toughens these cuts when they are cooked by dry heat methods.

A pamphlet containing cooking tips and 12 recipes is available free to anyone sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Calf Recipes, Beef Industry Council, 36 S. Wabash, Chicago, Ill. 60603.

Heat Exhaustion Is A Hazard At Football Practice

CHICAGO (AP) — Heat exhaustion can kill you.

Dr. John D. Burrington of the University of Chicago's Wyler Children's Hospital says that doctors see cases of heat stroke every year among high school football players in training for the fall season.

Dr. Burrington warns especially against exercising strenuously on hot, humid days.

Heat exhaustion is characterized by dizziness, confusion, coma and sometimes death.

"Death results when the body generates heat faster than it can get rid of it and the body overheats," Dr. Burrington says. "The body cools by the evaporation of sweat. Evaporation is slowed by high humidity."

Dr. Burrington suggests limiting strenuous exercise to early morning and late afternoon on hot, humid days, if you must exercise. He also suggests: Drink plenty of fluids. Use salt liberally at meal-times. Take frequent breaks during exercise. Avoid tight-fitting clothes such as football pads. Wear thin cotton in preference to synthetic fabrics. If you feel faint or confused, he says: Lie down in the shade. Loosen tight clothes. Drink fluids. If you can, apply cold, wet towels to arms and legs. The doctor says the victim should be helped to drink liquids if he is able but liquid should never be poured into the mouth of a person who is unable to swallow.

Guests Will Be Snack Happy

DEAR CECILY: What is an interesting snack to serve when I invite friends for a drink in the afternoon or evening? I usually offer the same old thing — a cheese spread and crackers. — IN A RUT.

DEAR IN A RUT: Stuffed mushrooms. You can get them ready hours ahead and refrigerate them. At serving time all you have to do is to put them in the oven. — C.B.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS
12 to 16 (1 pound) large fresh mushrooms
8 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup minced onion
1 cup finely diced cooked ham
1 1/4 cups soft breadcrumbs
1/4 cup minced parsley
Pepper to taste
1 egg, lightly beaten

Rinse, pat dry and remove stems from mushrooms; finely chop stems. In a large skillet melt 4 tablespoons of the butter and dip mushroom caps in it; set skillet with any butter remaining in it aside. Arrange caps in a well-buttered 8-inch square baking dish. Add 3 tablespoons of the remaining butter to the skillet and heat; add chopped mushrooms and onion; cook quickly, stirring several times, for a few minutes; stir in ham, 3/4 cup of the breadcrumbs, the parsley and pepper; remove from heat; stir in the egg. Fill mushroom caps with the mixture — about 1 tablespoon for each. Melt remaining 1 tablespoon butter and stir in remaining 1/2 cup breadcrumbs; sprinkle over mushrooms. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings — 2 stuffed mushrooms per portion.

Our New Park Could Be Unique

Greenville has acquired a municipal park area which can be unique in our state.

Director of the Recreation Commission Boyd Lee reported last week that the final transaction had been completed for acquiring a 346 tract of land north of the river for park use.

The land was purchased from the ECU Foundation for $75,000. The Foundation had acquired it as a donation from Barrus Construction Co.

The $75,000 cost was paid through $37,500 in community development funds and $37,500 in state funds.

The area has about 60 acres of usable high land and the remainder of the low land lies along the river front. Acquisition of the land will help maintain the north river bank in its present natural state.

Lee said the city needs to move along with development of the usable land for recreation purposes. Much debris will have to be removed from the area, and then plans call for utilizing the three ponds on the property for public boat paddling and fishing. The Wildlife Commission will stock the ponds at no charge.

It is possible that in the future nature trails will be developed through the lowlands which will be accessible except when the river is in flood stage.

The city has made an excellent move in acquiring this property. There is ample space available on the high land to develop picnic areas, camping areas. In addition, hiking, horseback riding, and biking trails could eventually be developed. The municipal park could take on the characteristics of a state park on a smaller scale and be of great benefit to our community.

Beyond that, an important part of the natural flood plain for the Tar River will be preserved right in the center of Greenville. This means that the trees and the vegetation, which are so important for the abatement of air and noise pollution, can't be removed by private developers.

The city has gotten a bargain in the north Greenville property. We hope the land will be put to use for all our citizens.

They'll Hunt Missing Dads

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—It is hoped, says Human Resources Secretary David T. Flaherty, that a massive crackdown on fathers who abandon their families will be as much a deterrent as anything else.

"We have made it too easy to run out, and the mother often has no recourse," Flaherty said. For the mother, who has been frustrated in finding help, "she now has a place to turn," Flaherty said.

Basically designed to catch the men who leave wife and children to fall back on welfare checks, the system will also be available to mothers who are not receiving welfare.

The state is building a locator staff of some 30 people headed by Edwin C. Riley, a retired Lieutenant colonel who saw 23 years service as an Army artillery officer, helicopter and light airplane pilot.

Getting Set

The locator office has been working about a month, pulling together sources of information, computer printouts, liaison with various agencies which will help track down missing parents.

The temporary work room is littered with data from the state Department of Motor Vehicles, Corrections, Revenue Department, Employment Security Commission, and others. Relations have been established with the federal Veterans Administration, the Postal Service, and with a system to keep track of federal employees and military personnel. Already on hand are 30,000 cases sent from counties across the state.

Yet to come are access to federal Social Security and Internal Revenue Service files. In sum, the state will exhaust every resource to track down a missing parent and make him pay child support.

A little-noted state law passed by the 1975 General Assembly even provides for garnishment of wages for enforcement of child support obligations, a surprising move for this state which traditionally has resisted efforts to attack a working man's salary for any purpose.

But such action is the measure of insistence on this program, Flaherty said there are more than 43,191 welfare cases in North Carolina in which one or the other parent is absent; in only 7,462 of those cases have support agreements been worked out. And in only 3,926 of the cases are payments actually being made by the absent parent.

Federal Push

The federal government actually is behind the current push to locate parents, offering most of the cost of setting up the bureaucracy to run the program, and establishing a system of bonuses to reward cooperating governmental agencies, and mothers to help put the finger on the missing father.

North Carolina's program will cost about $3 million, with the state putting up about $750,000 of that.

Flaherty hopes enough child-support money will be collected as a result of enforcement to more than support the agency.

Money collected from the father will be placed in the general fund for social services purposes, while the family on welfare continues to receive the stipulated amount. If the family is not on welfare, payments from the missing parent will go directly to the family.

To guarantee inter-state cooperation, the federal government will chop five per cent from the top of funds for aid to families with dependent children in states not operating a locator agency.

Further, the particular county (whether in this state or another state) which locates the man, brings him into court, and gets payment started will receive a 25 per cent cut of the amount he pays. Additional funds will be available for court costs, process serving, etc., to encourage the courts to work harder on non-support cases which traditionally have taken a low priority.

Also, the mother who assists in reporting the father and seeking support will receive up to $20 per month as a bonus on top of her regular welfare check, for the first 12 months.

The GALLUP POLL

The Other Detente Works

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

PARIS—A mood of "detente," unimaginable a year ago, between the U.S. and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing is producing political dividends despite major underlying tensions, most particularly the sharp contradiction between Paris and Washington over the future of Europe.

"We have a detente now with President Ford," French Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues told us at the Quai d'Orsay. "We both need it even though our interests cannot be identical."

A career diplomat and intimate of the French president, Sauvagnargues has helped end the rancid mood of suspicion and mutual recrimination which poisoned relations between his predecessor, Michel Jobert, and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Early returns from this new civility show visible gains, of which an important part is increasing French cooperation with the military structure of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), which France deserted nine years ago, although staying in the alliance.

At NATO's Brussels headquarters, French liaison officers are more closely involved in all aspects of NATO planning, a change that Gen. Alexander Haig, the NATO commander, is carefully cultivating.

One example: with the full backing of Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger, Haig now provides France and other NATO allies with superior American intelligence, thus voiding—or trying to void—the dangerous knowledge-and-consultation gap which split the U.S. from Europe during the 1973 Middle East war.

More tangible evidence of France's new cooperation with NATO were the U.S. maneuvers on the coast of France near Toulon several months ago. "This would not have been permitted in the bad old days," a U.S. diplomat told us.

There are other examples: growing French contribution to NATO in the form of essential communications across Europe and complete cooperation of France as vital storehouse for NATO's logistics back-up.

There was much satisfaction here over the U.S. decision to buy the Roland II, developed by the French with West German help, as the new, low-level anti-aircraft missile for the U.S. Army in forward battle zones.

None of this means Giscard is thinking of rejoining NATO's military organization. His political base is firmly anchored to Prime Minister Jacques Chirac's powerfully-revived Gaullist party, which would regard any such change as heretical. Moreover, even pro-American diplomats quietly reinstated in policy positions at the Quai d'Orsay by Giscard after years of Gaullist disfavor now strongly oppose reintegration.

Thus, despite the warming trend, the fundamental conflict between Washington and Paris is far from solution. That conflict is over U.S. policy toward Western Europe and what one official here calls America's "insistence," led by Kissinger, "that Europe's role must be as a satellite revolving around the American sun."

With its own modest "force de frappe" (now being redesigned for MIRV-able warheads at a huge future cost), France's vision of the middle-distant future perceives a far more independent Europe which, while under the U.S. strategic umbrella, should constitute a powerful military and economic force quite by itself, led by France.

French politicians point to vagaries of American politics, saying it is ridiculous to count for more than another 10 years at most on an American presence in Europe at anything like present levels. That argues for serious moves toward European unity now, requiring American support and sympathy.

But to these politicians, U.S. policy is taking an opposite direction: while talking European unity, the U.S. in fact obstructs it. During the May NATO summit, for example, the French remember one fact above all others: that European unity was never mentioned by the Americans.

The French, accordingly, are caught in a bind. With England and West Germany unable or unwilling to support the French dream of a semi-independent Europe, partly because the existing relationship is so easy and partly for fear of upsetting the U.S.-Soviet balance, the French are immobilized.

But the perception here of a larger future European role is not about to disappear. To (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

WHICH MAN AM I?

Two men hung on their crosses, and our Lord hung on a cross between them. We are told that one of the two nailed at Jesus saying, "Art not thou the Christ? Save thyself and us." But the other had a different quality of heart. To his companion he said, "This man hath done nothing amiss." Then turning to Jesus he said, "Remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

Let us ask ourselves the question, "Which man am I? Am I complaining about misfortune, which means that I am really complaining at God, or am I accepting what comes upon me and trying to find amid pain and trouble the lesson God would teach me?"

One of the malefactors hanging on the cross beside our Lord represented cynicism and rebellion; the attitude of the other showed repentance, love and faith. One said, with bitter irony and disillusionment, "Save thyself and us." The other said, in faith, "Remember me."

The Flogging Of Books

WASHINGTON—Sally is in California; Ben is in Rochester; Irwin is in Philadelphia; Saul is in Greensboro; Myra is in Pittsburgh; Jimmy is in Hartford, and Gail is in Baton Rouge.

What are all these people doing? They're flogging their books—that's what. There was a time when a person wrote a book and sold it to a publisher who printed and distributed it. The writer's work was finished the day he delivered the manuscript. But since television, writing is just a small part of an author's business. His or her major effort must now go into the selling of the book, which means criss-crossing the United States for a month or six weeks, appearing on talk shows that start at seven in the morning and radio shows that go on at midnight.

This is how it goes. After your book is accepted for publication, the publisher takes your editor away from you and turns you over to the "TV and radio co-ordinator" in the publicity department, usually a man or woman who has just started there the week before. The reason for this is the biggest turnover in the book industry is in the publicity department. And the reason for this is that every time a book doesn't sell, the first people to be fired are the publicists.

Crisis In The Wings

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—Finding a permanent solution to North Carolina's malpractice insurance problems is one of the more difficult tasks facing the 1975 General Assembly. An interim legislative committee will soon begin sifting through alternatives.

The 1975 legislature tried to avert a crisis by enacting a reinsurance pool that forces all liability companies in the state to write malpractice insurance whether they know how to or want to. Most neither know nor care to learn.

The 1975 law was an admittedly temporary solution. Whether it can forestall a crisis this fall remains to be seen. It may be declared unconstitutional. There is no doubt that it will have to be revamped or replaced soon.

The task of finding a permanent solution is complicated by the array of interest groups involved. They include the insurance industry, the medical profession, the legal profession and the consumers of health care. Virtually everyone has something to lose, and someone is bound to be unhappy with almost any proposal.

One potential solution is currently being tried in Indiana. There, state government has decided to become the underwriter of last resort for anesthesiologists, brain surgeons, and others who find it difficult or impossible to buy insurance on the free market.

That solution is appealing because the malpractice market is relatively small in comparison to the problems it can create. Only 4,500 physicians require the insurance in North Carolina. But a state corporation would undoubtedly face rough going in a legislature such as North Carolina's, which recently decreed that all school children receive instruction about the free enterprise system.

The insurance companies and the doctors would like to see restrictions placed on the patients and their lawyers. In New Jersey, limits have been placed on the percentage of a judgment that a lawyer may claim as his fee.

Other restrictions might include penalties for patients and lawyers who file groundless suits, a limit on damages, or a statute of limitations for malpractice. All of these would be seen as abridgements of the rights of patients and lawyers, however.

The doctors and their insurers are also interested in pursuing avenues that would increase the medical profession's ability to define malpractice.

They would like to see North Carolina require that a local doctor familiar with local treatment standards be required to testify against a colleague accused of malpractice.

Then there are the peer group review boards being established to help the government define standards of treatment for medicare and medicaid. Under some proposals, these boards—and not juries composed of laymen—would be able to absolve a doctor of malpractice by determining that his treatment of a patient met accepted medical standards.

Those proposals will be met with arguments that the medical profession has never shown itself particularly inclined to root out the incompetents in its midst.

Evidence That Nobody Knows

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Is inflation coming under control?

Evidence that nobody knows is contained in the history of forecasts, which over the past decade have been lamentably inaccurate on this subject.

And the suggestion that one guess is as good as another is suggested by the amazingly wide range of opinions even among professionals who, like fortune tellers, earn good money for their alleged farsightedness.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, maintains the inflation rate will simmer down by next spring, and that the annual rate of inflation for 1976 would be about 7 per cent.

Even that rate, however, would hardly indicate that prices were under control, and Greenspan himself concedes it would be "by no means acceptable." No, not when we used to think that 3 per cent was too much.

The irrepressible Pierre Rinfret, whose opinions sometimes have been solicited by the White House and by political candidates, as well as by his regular big business clients, is a bit more cynical.

"Hope for the best, prepare for the worst. That's the strategy for 1976," Rinfret writes in his current "confidential" advisory.

"How do you protect yourself against inflation?" he asks rhetorically. "By raising your prices by more than the inflation rate," he answers, explaining that for a decade "the major mistake has been to believe inflation would disappear."

In the view of the National Association of Purchasing Management, the business recovery is under way but "an unwelcome return of price increases gives cause for concern."

But not all surveys of purchasing agents indicate a fear that inflation might undermine the recovery. The highly regarded magazine Purchasing World makes this unqualified declaration:

"Everybody is worried about prices — except buyers."

John O'Connor, editor, conducted two surveys and reached the conclusion that "the people who actually pay the bills for their companies' supplies of goods and materials don't buy the economic doomsday prediction."

O'Connor observes that many sellers are maintaining high list, or book, prices, but are quoting actual prices much lower. He suggests that the government indexes, which are based on list prices, are thereby distorted. Well, who do you believe?

Searching for an answer one is eventually directed to the consumer, the final buyer, the final arbiter of prices, the ultimate decision maker. If the consumer is pessimistic he probably is so for good reason.

When the consumer believes his income will be sufficient and prices stable and the job market healthy, he is said to have confidence. Remove one of those factors, such as his belief in stable prices, and his confidence wanes.

The Sindlinger & Co. household survey was consulted in an effort to determine whether consumers were confident — that is, whether they thought prices and other economic factors were in their favor.

As of the final week of August they were divided 50-50, precisely, "a rare point when the ceaseless push-pull battle within the consuming public was at a total standoff."

Sanford Flays GOP In 'Downeaster' Gathering

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP)—Presidential candidate Terry Sanford was just one of many candidates seeking support from North Carolina Democrats at the weekend "Downeaster" fund raising dinner.

Sanford castigated the Republican administrations in Washington and Raleigh during his banquet speech to several hundred party members who paid $50 per ticket.

He said the Nixon-Ford administration was guilty of both stupidity and fraud for its economic policies. No North Carolinian, he said, should have to live under two Republican state administrations. One per century is enough.

Sanford said his candidacy afforded North Carolinians a chance to spread the "good government habit" across the country.

Most of the political action centered around candidates for statewide office, however. Entering the speculation and maneuvering for governor was as easy as renting a room and sending out for some liquor.

State Sen. Thomas Strickland, D-Wayne, and Charlotte businessman Edward O'Herron entertained visitors in hospitality rooms. Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, East Carolina University chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins and 1972 candidate Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles buttonholed people in the lobby.

Jenkins said he was seriously considering asking the University of North Carolina Board of Governors for a leave of absence to allow him to campaign.

Two men who are still undecided about making the race kept their names in front of the party. "Think Jimmy Green" read the signs over the House Speaker's hospitality room. "Don't forget Jim Graham" said the signs for the Commissioner of Agriculture.

Sanford's hospitality room, in a penthouse overlooking the ocean, was the busiest. But the candidate himself did not arrive until shortly before his speech. He had been making an appearance in Minnesota.

Eight Persons Dead In Weekend Traffic

By The Associated Press
Eight persons were killed in weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina, pushing the toll for the year to 1,015.

The 1975 count is fewer than the 1,082 deaths recorded during the corresponding period of last year, the Highway Patrol said.

The victims included an elderly Princeton woman who was killed Sunday when the car in which she was riding backed from a private driveway and into the path of another car near Princeton. The Highway patrol says Mattie Joyner Walker, 69, died in that crash, which also injured seven others.

A Sanford woman, Marjorie J. Colville, 46, was killed Sunday when the car in which she was riding collided with another car. The accident occurred in on U.S. 421 seven miles west of Lillington.

A Columbia, S.C., couple was crossing a four-lane highway in Brevard after stopping at a restaurant when they were killed. City police said Layton Seay, 62, and his wife, Barbara, were hit by a pickup truck. No charges were filed in the accident.

Billy Ray Holder, 20, of Rt. 1, Wendell, was killed Sunday when a car in which he was a passenger went out of control in a curve on a rural paved road six miles west of Wendell, hit an embankment and overturned.

change to a Trailways Bus to Sundown Corners, where one of Bob's people will pick you up and drive you the 90 miles to Corn Blight.

If you raise any objections the co-ordinator says, "Well if you don't want to sell any books that's your business." So you kiss your wife and children goodbye and promise them you'll be home by Christmas.

After missing the connection in Chicago, and the Greyhound Bus in Lincoln, you finally make it to Dimplehoffer's radio station in Corn Blight with a half-hour to spare.

Dimplehoffer is in the studio playing a Bobby Gentry record. He says, "Look, I only got a couple minutes, fill me in on what the book is all about."

"Didn't you read it?" "Are you kidding? I don't have time to read the papers. It's about Watergate, isn't it?"

"No, that was my last book. This one is about a cat who does TV commercials and gets kidnaped."

"But I thought I was going to talk to you about Watergate. My listeners don't want to hear about cats—not at three in the morning."

"But the cat book is the one I want to flog."

"All right but make it short, I have to take telephone calls about Mrs. Ford's attitudes toward young people."

After Bobby Gentry, Dimplehoffer says, "We have a special guest who has just written a book about dogs." "Cats."

"Right, cats. What brings you to Corn Blight, Art?"

"I was just passing through and I had never seen an FM radio station before."

The next morning after three hours' sleep you go into the local bookstore (the only bookstore) to autograph your book.

"What book?" the lady asks.

"Didn't my publisher tell you I was coming here to plug my book?"

"Nope. We only handle best sellers."

Three days later you get back home and call the TV and radio co-ordinator. "They had no books in the stores," you scream.

He she says calmly, "That's not my department. You have to speak to sales."

One thing is certain. The consumers of health care are now paying for the malpractice problem. They will probably pay for any solution.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram has pointed out that the victims of higher malpractice rates—if he grants them—will not be the doctors. They will pass the added costs on to their patients.

And many doctors, speaking privately, acknowledge that the malpractice crisis is already leading them to authorize unneeded treatments to protect against potential suits.

One authority, Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Health Research Group in Washington, estimates that one-third of all the X-rays made in the nation every year are ordered by doctors who want to make sure there is no question about malpractice.

the contrary, high officials in Paris constantly warn in private that the present European relationship with Washington is inherently unhealthy. More to the point, highly-regarded intellectuals such as Michel Tatu, foreign editor of Le Monde, are amplifying in print what the politicians are thinking.

"The real problem is the absence of political will," Tatu recently wrote. "... The main obstacle to European unity is Europe's military dependence on the United States."

The implication of those words is staggering, but they reflect a truth as perceived by many powerful politicians, even if the moment of that truth lies some years in the future.

Dog Obedience Classes Slated

Elvon Stewart, 16, of High Point was fatally injured early Sunday when a car in which he was a passenger ran off the road in the city of High Point.

Leroy Williams, 50, of Charlotte was killed Saturday in a two-car crash that injured eight other persons. Williams was the driver of one of the vehicles, which ran a red light at a Charlotte intersection, police said.

Jimmy Lee Brown, 27, of Shelby was killed Saturday when a car in which he was a passenger ran off a rural paved road in Cleveland County and overturned.

New Breed Of Cattle Urged

By STEVEN M. EAMES
Associated Press Writer
LULING, Tex. (AP) — Beef producers could buy less grain and housewives would get less fat if American ranchers started driving Limousins, an outgoing Texas cattle breeder says.
Limousins are French cattle expanding in United States livestock markets because of their efficiency at putting on lean weight.
"They don't weigh as much as some other cattle, but they'll cut out more beef and they'll do it on less grain, which keeps the price of bread and everything else down for the housewife," Ben Woodson of Del Rio, Tex., said.
Woodson and his partner, Hays Mitchell of Marfa, bought 43 purebred Limousins, including five bulls, from a Canadian breeder recently in the largest such transaction to date in the United States.
They were hosts recently to a gathering of newsmen and beef producers at their rolling Deux Amis Limousin Ranch near here.
Only 200 purebred Limousins are registered in the United States, although some 140,000 Limousin crosses have been recorded since the first animal was introduced in 1968.

Woodson and North American Limousin Foundation vice president Bob Van Trease added that Limousins are rugged, fertile animals which have few problems calving or giving enough milk.
Van Trease said Limousins require less grain because it takes a seventh as much feed to produce lean meat as it does to produce fat.
"These cattle eat less grain because they're putting on lean instead of fat," he said.
He added that efficiency in production has become critical to ranchers since market problems began developing two years ago.
Van Trease said United States ranchers might have turned to Limousins years ago except for tradition and difficulty in importing French animals.
Law prohibits importation of animals from countries where there is known hoof and mouth disease, he said.
To import the animals, U.S. breeders went to neutral nations such as Canada and bought offspring of animals imported from France into the neutral nation.

Expect Merger

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina could have one of the largest public employe associations in the nation if a merger of its two state employe groups is approved as expected this week by its members at separate conventions.
Representatives of the two groups have been planning merger for five years.
The North Carolina State Employees Association, with a membership of 23,000 drawn from workers from most of the state departments, will hold its 29th annual convention in Winston-Salem.
The North Carolina State Government Employee Association, with 11,000 members from the Departments of Corrections and Transportation, will meet in Charlotte.
Each group will meet Friday and Saturday.
Merger will be effective July 1 if approved. The new group will retain the Raleigh headquarters of the larger group and that organization's director would become director of the proposed group. The director of the smaller group would become associate director of the merged body.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

It's just under 300 miles from Boone to Greenville, but those 300 probably seemed like 3,000 or 3,000,000 Saturday night and Sunday morning as the East Carolina Pirates made their way home.

They had been beaten by Appalachian State University, 41-25, and the score really didn't reflect how bad it really was.

"Last year we lost to them. This year, they beat us. They beat us good," Coach Pat Dye said. "They took us out behind the woodshed and whipped the daylight out of us."

Dye was quite displeased with the defense—the segment of the game that had been the most impressive against State just a week earlier. "We were about as sorry as we could be defensively. We didn't hit anybody. There was no all-out effort. We lost containment, missed assignments, had poor tackling, in fact, we made about every mistake we could make," Dye said. "The statistics indicate this. We look like we did way back in the spring."

"There was no leadership out there. The folks in the secondary looked like they had never played against an option offense before," he added. "It's really discouraging."

Dye felt that while the offense didn't set the world on fire, it did show some improvement. "We never saw the ball in the first half. And when we did get it, we didn't make things happen."

Dye termed it "an old fashioned whipping." "I thought we were ready to play," he said. "I felt all along we could throw the football, and I think we probably did get some confidence in our passing game. We had some great protection and the quarterbacks got a chance to throw. The receivers had time to run their patterns. We had people open at State, but we didn't give the quarterback time to throw."

Dye feels that the Pirates are now entering a critical period. "I'm not ready to give up on these people yet," he said. "We'll go back to work Monday and try to get it together. I don't know what it takes to get them to play together. We may have to find some other people who want to win."

Referring back to the game with ASU again, Dye said the performance of the players "didn't speak well of me or of them. We just got whipped."

East Carolina did manage to set several records in the game. Terry Gallagher set a new mark for touchdown passes received and for total yard receiving in a single game. His three TD catches broke the old mark of two, shared by five players. The 218-yard in receptions broke the old mark of 169, set by Dick Corrada against Southern Illinois in 1970.

The 270 yards passing tied the mark set against Richmond in 1970, and the four TD passes tied a team mark first set against ASU in 1953.

Ken Strayhorn's six kickoff returns boosted his career total to 36, breaking the old career mark of 31, set by Tommy Bullock. Strayhorn also returned the ball 120 yards to up his yardage to 649, snapping Bullock's career mark of 634.

Strayhorn has now moved to with 20 yards of his brother Les on the all-time career rushing list. Kenny is ranked sixth with 1,654 yards, while Les is fifth with 1,673. Next up the line is Tom Michel with 1,788.

Nicklaus: This Is My Best Golf Year

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — A very satisfied Jack Nicklaus considered the question carefully. "This is the year of my best golf," said the man who, at age 35, has achieved a record unmatched in this ancient game's history.

"This would have to rank with '72 among my best years," he said. "I won more tournaments in '72 (a total of seven), but from a standpoint of consistency, from the way I've played week in and week out, this is better."

His record this season is all but overwhelming. His Sunday playoff victory over Billy Casper for the World Open title gave him five wins — including the Masters and PGA — for the season that isn't yet complete. No one else has won more than three.

The $40,000 first prize pushed his money winnings for the year to $291,000 — a figure that has been surpassed only twice — and all but clinched a record seventh money-winning title.

His winning score of 280, four under par on the 7,007 yards of piny woods and sand hills that make up the No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club, left Nicklaus with a leading stroke average of 69.9 for the year.

Perhaps even more impressive is his record of near-misses. In 17 starts this year, including the British Open and the World Series, he has been second twice, third four times, fourth once and finished lower than ninth only twice.

And it was to that record, that list of near-misses, that he turned in the wake of his 59th career triumph.

"I darn near won almost every tournament I played since May," he said. "There were only three tournaments, Hawaii, Fort Worth and the World Series, when I really wasn't ready to play."

Coach Opines Mountaineers In Race

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
AP Sports Writer

Appalachian State Coach Jim Brakefield says his Mountaineers "are still young and we'll make some mistakes" in the Southern Conference football race, but "I believe we can compete with 'em now."

The Mountaineers, who finished a surprising second last year to Virginia Military's equally surprising champion Keydets, stamped themselves a team to reckon with Saturday night with a 41-25 rout of East Carolina's Pirates, who won the title in 1972 and 1973.

Appalachian had edged East Carolina last year 23-21 in the biggest upset of the season after blowing a 20-0 halftime lead—and the Mountaineers once again held a 20-0 lead at intermission.

This time, however, the margin grew to 41-7 in the final quarter before East Carolina third-string quarterback Pete Conaty hit three touchdown passes, mostly against Mountaineer reserves.

Four conference teams played outside opponents and only The Citadel, another highly regarded contender, came out a winner.

The Bulldogs whipped Presbyterian 21-0 in one of two night games. In the other, Furman's Paladins went down to a 17-5 defeat at the hands of Tennessee Tech.

VMI, victim of a bizarre touchdown that resulted from a blocked field goal try, missed a two-point conversion attempt with 40 seconds left and lost to Division II power Delaware 109. Richmond's Spiders were beaten by Cincinnati's Bearcats 19-6.

It was the opening game for all but East Carolina, which had dropped a 26-3 decision a week earlier to 15th-ranked North Carolina State, and Brakefield said "I was surprised we were able to move the football the way we did" against the Pirates.

Appalachian rolled up a school record 546 yards in total offense, 394 in a ground attack led by sophomore running backs Calvin Simon and Emmitt Hamilton and junior quarterback Robbie Price.

Simon had 92 yards on 16 carries and hit Hamilton with a 20-yard halfback pass. Hamilton scored three times and Price ran for 82 yards and one touchdown and hit speedster Devon Ford on an 82-yard pass.

Speaking of Price, Brakefield said "If I can keep him well, we've got a pretty good offense."

Terry Gallater caught three scoring passes for East Carolina, two from Conaty, and Pirate Coach Pat Dye said afterward, "We're gonna have to take a look at Conaty." He added that "there was no doubt who was the better team on this field."

Andrew Johnson, league player of the year last season, had 101 yards on 26 carries and Mike Bazemore got 98 yards on just six tries as each scored once in The Citadel's triumph.

"Our defense played well. We were consistent and hit like hell," said Coach Bobby Ross. Of four pass interceptions, he said "I love those turnovers when they are for us, just love 'em."

But Ross said "we weren't able to get the continuity we needed" on offense. The Bulldogs scored the first two times they had the ball, then got just one more touchdown despite 321 rushing yards.

Although VMI's defense gave up several long gainers, the Keydets twice stalled Delaware after the Blue Hens had a first down inside the 10 and made them go for field goals. Hank Kline kicked a 34-yarder the first time, but the second was disaster—for VMI.

Kline tried to kick from the 18, but the Keydets' Johnny Garnett blocked it. The ball rolled to the 23, where Delaware halfback Larry Wagner picked it up and hit tight end Cliff Ainsworth for a touchdown. Kline added the extra point.

With 2:30 left, a massive Keydet rush nailed punter Rich Fugazzi before he could kick at the Delaware 43. Sophomore Mark Lambert took the Keydets all the way with Kim Gildewell, who had 71 yards on 24 carries, scoring from the one with 40 seconds left.

"It was my decision to go for two points," said Keydet Coach Bob Thalman of the Lambert pass that was knocked down by Delaware's Greg Galeone. "I have always played to win."

He called the fluke touchdown "one of those unusual plays. Our guys did a good job blocking the field goal, but

Richmond was done in by Cincinnati defensive back John

Viltro, who picked up a teammate's fumble on a punt and ran 75 yards for a touchdown after he earlier had recovered a fumble that set up a Bearcat field goal.

Despite a combined 127 yards rushing by John Palazeti and Ed Kreilis, Richmond failed to score until Bobby Allen went one yard in the final minute at the end of a 76-yard drive.

"I was really disappointed in the way our offense played," said Richmond Coach Jim Tait. But he said "I knew our defense would come along. I thought, all things considered, it played fairly well."

Three field goals by Murray Cunningham and a fourth period touchdown carried Tennessee Tech past Furman, which had only one real scoring threat despite a 306-253 edge in total offense. Andy Goss kicked a 23-yard field goal, and the winners gave up a last-minute safety.

Holtz Says He Knew Deacs Would Be Tough

By The Associated Press
Last Wednesday North Carolina State coach Lou Holtz told reporters that "Wake Forest is going to win some football games this season."

On Saturday, Holtz saw his prediction come true: Wake Forest 30; 15th-ranked N.C. State 22.

Meanwhile Saturday, three other Atlantic Coast Conference teams were falling to outsiders. Maryland, ranked No. 14, was beaten by Tennessee 26-8; Virginia lost to Navy 42-14; and Clemson dropped its season opener to Tulane 17-13.

North Carolina had an open date and Duke was recovering from its 35-7 loss Friday night to Southern California.

Wake Forest, whose cumulative record over the last three years is 4-28, claimed victory in the second half on a pair of scoring passes to Bill Millner and a 32-yard field goal by Bob Healy.

Quarterback Jerr McManus scored the first Wake Forest TD on an 11-yard run.

Since the game was the season's first intraleague clash, Wake Forest now leads the ACC with a 1-0 record. The Deacons lost their opener last weekend to Southern Methodist.

"This is good for our kids," cried Wake Forest coach Chuck Mills. "They have taken a lot of crap. Maybe this will get us out of the 'Bottom Ten.'"

Holtz said the loss, his first at home in 17 games, "was very distasteful...It was a fine victory for Wake and we're not going to take anything away from it with excuses."

Wake Forest running back Clark Gaines, a junior college transfer from Lees McRae, said, "We came to play and State knew it after our first drive."

Maryland's loss was made worse by news that quarterback Mark Manges could be out for several weeks with a shoulder injury suffered at the hands of the Vols.

Tennessee's defense forced four Maryland fumbles, three of which the Vols converted into TDs. Maryland scored on a first period safety and was shut out until the final minutes.

Tennessee's Stan Morgan scored three times.

Clemson also suffered from better fingers, suffering three losses to interceptions and five to fumbles. Tulane's Wyatt Washington put the game away on a 76-yard return of an intercepted pass.

Clemson finally managed a touchdown on Steve Fuller's third period pass to Craig Brantley.

Navy tailback Gerry Goodwi equalled a modern day Academic record with four touchdowns against the Cavaliers. Virginia did all its scoring in the second period on a 22-yard run by David Sloan and a 10-yard pass from quarterback Scott Gardner to flanker Tommy Fadden.

Virginia finished with 318 yards total offense, about two-thirds of which came from Gardner's passing.

Gardner completed 18 of 38 aerials for 203 yards.

Next Saturday, Maryland plays at North Carolina in the only ACC game of the day. Other games involving ACC teams pit South Carolina at Duke, VMI at Virginia, Appalachian at Wake Forest, Florida at N.C. State and Clemson at Alabama.

Pats' Rebellion Teeters On Brink Of NFL Strike

By LARRY SIDONS, Associated Press Writer
DOVER, Del. (AP) — There have been a lot of rumors lately that Richard Petty is about to retire. But the stock car racing king feels he has too much luck going for him to hang up his helmet.

"Anybody as lucky as I am would be foolish to quit," Petty said Sunday after coming back from near elimination because of mechanical problems to win the Delaware 500 Grand National stock car race.

will likely determine the outcome of the players' latest rebellion.

The Patriots, in a show of solidarity, voted to strike and forced the cancellation of their Sunday exhibition against the New York Jets in the belief that others would follow their demand that NFL owners and the players' union reach agreement on a new labor contract.

The followers did not materialize over the weekend and now the Patriots face a lockout by management if they attempt to resume practice Tuesday for this weekend's NFL opener against Houston.

Team after team announced Sunday they supported the Patriots. The St. Louis Cardinals even voted 30-16 to strike, but decided that vote was not strong enough and went ahead with their exhibition game against Denver, which the Broncos won 21-17.

"We do not enjoy this task which we have taken upon ourselves," said Randy Vataha, player representative for the Patriots, who voted 39-2 to strike. Vataha, holding a news conference in a restaurant parking lot in Foxboro, Mass., Sunday, called on the other 25 NFL clubs to join the Patriots on the strike line.

But with one week remaining before the NFL season opens—when the players begin drawing regular checks—there were no immediate takers. Player representatives for four teams—Buffalo, Denver, Cincinnati and Dallas—said their teams would not vote to strike, and others said they had no immediate intentions of taking strike votes.

Hovering over the Patriots and any other team which strikes is this management statement: any team which strikes will not be paid and may not practice or play a game until a contract is signed or until the players union delivers a no-strike pledge.

Washington quarterback Billy Kilmer said players across the league were concerned that the Patriots not be punished for their actions. He noted that the Redskins would meet today to discuss what action they should take, and he said he would vote to strike.

In Washington, Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, huddled with aides throughout the day Sunday. Sargent Karch, executive director of the NFL Management Council, did the same in New York. Both said they were willing to negotiate; both said no new sessions were scheduled.

All of which only escalates the hard feelings which have developed since Jan. 31, 1974 when the last contract between the union and the league expired. A strike last summer dissolved in failure without bringing a new agreement.

"This is an outrage," said Cleveland owner Arthur Modell, and others in management had similar comments about the latest strike.

The impasse which started the problems remain: the union insists that league rules which bind a player to one team are illegal and should be settled in the courts; the league insists they must be negotiated. From those stances, the two sides have never budged.

The players' pension fund, to which the league and its clubs have not contributed since the last contract expired, could go broke this year if there is not a new agreement. Additionally, the union has lost members since clubs quit deducting dues from checks and Garvey has acknowledged it is possible the union "will be busted."

Vataha said, "We ask the other 25 clubs to commit themselves to the effort to precipitate meaningful negotiations. Without such a united commitment, the NFLPA (the union) can no longer be considered a viable bargaining agent for the players."

Karch said the league had no intention of backing down from its statement barring striking teams from practicing or playing and said it was possible the NFL would open this week with 12 games instead of 13, meaning the New England-Houston game would be cancelled.

"We don't believe that football fans should have to be on pins and needles every weekend wondering whether there is going to be a game," he said.

Sources said the NFL's stance could be altered if one or more additional teams voted to strike. Of St. Louis' decision on Sunday, Karch said, "We're obviously very happy that they chose to play. If they had not, it would have made the situation more difficult."

Tom Banks, player rep in St. Louis, said the Cardinals "completely support the Patriots' move and reject management's efforts to punish them in any way."

He said the players wanted a 75 per cent vote—they got 63 per cent—before they went on strike and added that "one consideration for playing was that the fans already were on the way to the game. There wasn't enough time to be right with them."

The fans were already in the Orange Bowl in Miami Saturday night when the New York Giants voted to delay the start of their game with the Dolphins for 30 minutes. That brought a succession of speakers to their locker room, including club president Wellington Mara, Dolphin Coach Don Shula and Miami quarterback Bob Griese.

The Giants were convinced to change their minds, and the game began eight minutes late. "It was the worst thing I ever heard of or thought about in sport," Shula said. "There was no way I was going to let the fans sit for 30 minutes while they were demonstrating."

Among the first losers of the strike were the Jets and CBS. The club estimated that it would have drawn a crowd of 15,000 for the Patriots game in New Haven, Conn., and that it lost between $50,000 and $75,000.

CBS had been scheduled to televise the game nationally. Instead the network showed portions of two Saturday night games.

No Petty Retirement While His Luck Holds

By LARRY SIDONS, Associated Press Writer
DOVER, Del. (AP) — There have been a lot of rumors lately that Richard Petty is about to retire. But the stock car racing king feels he has too much luck going for him to hang up his helmet.

"Anybody as lucky as I am would be foolish to quit," Petty said Sunday after coming back from near elimination because of mechanical problems to win the Delaware 500 Grand National stock car race.

When the green flag came out with six miles left to run, Petty pushed the accelerator of his fluorescent red and blue Dodge to the floor, zooming into the lead and holding on to beat Parsons by less than 100 feet.

"One bad break put us behind, then another break (the caution flag) gave us a chance to win," Petty said. "I don't think I would have been able to catch Parsons without that yellow flag near the end."

Some of Petty's competitors, however, questioned the timing of the final caution flag.

They noted that the car that brought out the yellow, a Plymouth driven by Richard Arrington, had been parked on the track's apron for several laps before the caution was called.

"We didn't deserve to win, but we deserved a chance to win," said Parsons, whose Ford rolled nose out Brooks's Ford for second place.

NASCAR officials said they would investigate Arrington, who said he pulled off the track because of steering problems. They added, however, that the final results of the race would stand.

British Win In Wightman

CLEVELAND (AP) — The British were calling it a Golden Jubilee after their third-ranked woman tennis player, Glynis Coles, swept past America's Mona Schallau 6-3, 7-6, and clinched a Wightman Cup tennis match.

The 5-2 triumph on Sunday marked the first time in 50 years that the British had prevailed away from home in the competition that began in 1923.

Miss Cole's victory was the visitors' fourth in the best-of-seven series for U.S.-British women's tennis supremacy. Later she shared in a final doubles victory that left the score 5-2 in her homeland's favor.

"Winning twice in a row strengthens the rivalry between the U.S. and Great Britain," said British captain Virginia Wade. "We won twice just to prove we could do it."

The Yanks took a 38-8 advantage into the 1975 matches, although they lost last year 6-1 at Deeside, Wales.

The home team began play Sunday down three matches to one. Miss Cole wrapped up the victory after Chris Evert kept American hopes alive with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Miss Wade.

Slowly, the Randleman, N.C., ace gnawed away at the deficit, and with less than 20 miles to go pulled within striking distance of front-running Benny Parsons and Richard Brooks.

Then, Petty got a break from the officials. The yellow caution flag went up, and Petty, with fresh tires and a full load of gasoline, moved up even with Brooks and Parsons.

Finds Youth Training School Programs Intolerable

By DOLLIE L. SMITH
UPI Capitol Reporter
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Human Resources Secretary David T. Flaherty, in a series of surprise visits, has found living conditions and the lack of programs at North Carolina's youth training schools "unbelievable" and "intolerable."

Since the Division of Youth Services was transferred from the Department of Corrections to his sprawling agency Aug. 15, Flaherty has made unannounced visits to three of the seven schools in an attempt to find and correct, where possible, administrative and personnel problems.

During his most recent visit, to the C.A. Dillon school at Butner Thursday night, Flaherty was appalled at housekeeping and maintenance at the coed maximum security facility that houses about 57 offenders between the ages of 10 and 17.

Accompanied by his administrative assistant, Bill White, and a UPI reporter, Flaherty visited a boys' and a girls' cottage, chatting with the night shift staff and examining living and recreational quarters, including showers and bathrooms, nine-by-13 foot sleeping cubicles and kitchens.

He saw roaches crawling up walls; flies hovering over toilets open without lids in the locked sleeping cells; sheetless mattresses; mirrors, towel bars and toilet paper holders ripped off bathroom walls; and un-screened, open windows.

While the school's grounds and the building exteriors looked well kept, much of the cottages interiors needed painting and the ceilings needed repair in many places.

Both cottages were half filled, with only 12 girls and 13 boys, all bedded down at 10 p.m. in quarters that contained a single cot, a toilet and a sink. Toilet articles and books were on the floors.

"The thing that is amazing to you is that you look at our mental hospitals and M.R. (mental retardation) centers which have been criticized in the past for lack of maintenance and housekeeping, and they look like palaces compared to these places," Flaherty said. "There's no sense for dirtiness."

Youth Services Director David D. Jordan, a former legislator who has held the post since December, said the problems were being "checked into."

"The housekeeping certainly shouldn't be that way and we have adequate maintenance staff," he said Friday. "In most cases we strive to keep these places clean."

While there should be screens and air conditioning at the schools, he said, toilet lids could become potential weapons for the youths whose offenses range from simple truancy to murder.

About half of the youths are committed as truants or runaways. The rest are either felons of "kids who just don't fit into the other schools."

"Some of the starkness and bleakness is done for the protection of the kids and the staff," said Jordan.

Unlike the torrid temperatures that greeted Flaherty at the Richard T. Fountain school in Rocky Mount, the weather was rainy and cool during the Dillon visit. But Dillon staff members told him, like the unair-conditioned cottages at Fountain, temperatures in the sleeping cubicles soared to as high as 110 degrees in the summer.

Flaherty assured staff members that air conditioning for the cottages would be a top budget priority.

"If you're uncomfortable and have had no rest because you've been awake all night tossing and tumbling in the heat, you've got to be less than receptive to what people are saying to you the next day," Flaherty said.

In his visit to the third center, Swannanoa, he said he found "a third of the kids sleeping in their classes" and was told "they were over-dressed."

Flaherty said he found the youths housed in "old army barracks that smelled like urine and were firetraps" because the school didn't have the $28,000 to buy "security screens" for its new buildings. After his visit, the money was "found" for the screens.

Since his visits Flaherty has relaxed a ban on cigarette smoking by minors at the schools. It was ordered enforced by Corrections Secretary David Jones before the transfer of the agency and was based on an opinion by the Attorney General on a law banning the sale of cigarettes to minors. Flaherty said he has asked for another ruling on the law.

What Flaherty has been finding is not too different from what Jones described after his visits soon after he took office. Nor are the conditions much changed from those found by Dr. James R. Tompkins, former head of the Governor's Youth Advocacy Commission, after spending three days at Dillon in October, 1973.

Tompkins, now a professor at Appalachian State University, called Dillon "a desperate situation for children" who were "shuttled around like cattle."

Most Dillon staff members were reluctant to talk with Flaherty until he said, "You don't have to worry about anything. There's no retribution."

"I am concerned to find out what the problems are as early as I can so I can speak to them. You can't speak to them if you don't know what's bothering them."

The main problem that has plagued the training school program for years has been its lack of leadership and direction.

Jordan said there was "youth disaffection" among youth services employees because the division "has been reorganized four times in four years."

"It needs some stability to start moving in any direction," he said.

Flaherty said when the 1975 General Assembly shifted the 700-member division and its $9.2 million budget to his agency to remove the stigma of prisons and emphasize rehabilitation, "they came over without a program."

He said Jordan and other key staff members told him "they didn't have a plan for one year, much less five years."

"That's what they're concentrating on right now," he said. "How can you run a program without knowing where you're heading?"

Flaherty said the division administrators said they had "an excellent program but they didn't have anyone at the facility level to carry it out."

So Flaherty is backing Jordan's proposal before the new nine-member Youth Services Commission that makes policy to reassign about 18 psychologists now at Fountain and Swannanoa to the other five schools.

The proposal, expected to be ruled on Monday, would leave a team of psychologists at both diagnostic and evaluation centers and, through an arrangement with local mental health centers, have the bulk of the evaluation handled at the community level.

This, he said, would give the schools the professional help they need for rehabilitation, and, by having mental health centers do the screening, keep the youths from being sent away from home for three weeks.

"Once the court sends a kid away to become evaluated, he's gone to prison as far as the community is concerned," Flaherty said. "I'm quite excited about this concept."

Population at the schools has fallen steadily since 1972 from an average daily count of 2,000 to about 1,000, said Jordan. The main reason, he explained, is a 1971 law requiring judges to exhaust all community level alternatives before committing a youthful offender to a training school.

The current school population stands at 700, but Jordan said the "high commitment season" during the school months has just begun. Last year, he said, population at the schools hit 1,470.

Both Flaherty and Jordan indicated the declining population will eventually lead to the closing of some of the schools with the facilities being turned over to other state agencies for use or to local communities for mental health or correctional programs.

Complement U.S. Study

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — American and Soviet exploration of the planet Venus is proceeding on complementary lines, without eliminating a competitive spirit between the two nations, says an American scientist.

Harold Masursky, who works at the U.S. Geological Survey's Center of Telegeology at Flagstaff, says two Soviet spacecraft heading for the planet, a quarter of a million miles from earth, will gather data that will complement information hopefully to be gathered by an American probe of Venus in 1978.

Masursky, a member of the 1978 Venus Pioneer team, returned recently from a series of meetings in Moscow.

The two Russian spacecraft currently heading for Venus, Veneras 9 and 10, both will be landers, he said, and will attempt to analyze the chemistry of the planet's surface.

Obtaining that information from Soviet officials, he said, indicates a new sense of cooperation on the part of the Russians.

In the past, he explained, Soviet scientists always have been reluctant to talk about the existence or purpose of a space mission until the mission actually had been accomplished.

Masursky said the two Russian spacecraft are unmanned, and are scheduled to land in October. Data from those craft won't be available until sometime after that, he added.

Americans have given Russian scientists in recent years a constant, broad overview of plans for Venusian exploration, he said, and probes anticipated for the two Russian spacecraft show the Soviets are trying to cooperate in the exploration program.

The Russians, he said, have agreed to tell Americans where to project landing sites for the two crafts. With this information, he said American scientists can make plans to gather supplementary photographic data on the planet's surface by use of various giant, ground-based radars. Combining that information with the Soviet on-site probe, the scientist said, will provide new and valuable data about Venus.

"Since Venus is so difficult to explore," said Masursky, "we think that's a real fine idea."

Advices No Rush For Fertilizer

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Soil expert Ray Ward says farmers might save the cost of some expensive fertilizer by not being in a rush to decide whether they need it.

Ward, who heads the soil-testing program at Oklahoma State University, says nitrogen supplies often are found two feet below the surface, much deeper than the normal "plow depth" tests of about eight inches.

"Many wheat farmers may already have nitrogen in their soils, at least enough to eliminate a part of their normal application," Ward said.

He said wheat growers should give stubble time to decompose before testing for nitrogen.

"Decaying vegetative matter left in soils after harvest ties up available nitrogen," he said. "When the matter has decomposed, the nitrates become available for the new wheat crop."

Buying Lighters Of Solid Gold

NEW YORK (UPI) — People are buying lighters for $3,000 as if they were solid gold — which they are.

Tim Huber, U.S. marketing manager for S.T. Dupont of Paris, reports a marked increase in sales of 18-karat gold lighters, possibly as a result of new interest in gold stimulated by the new law allowing private ownership of bullion.

Each Fear Is A Cause Of Crisis

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Mercy, the new season is innovative. In CBS' new "Three for the Road," one lad had a fear of heights. In ABC's "Swiss Family Robinson," a young boy had a fear of water.

Each fear was the cause of crisis in the shows the networks scheduled as the newcomers began their Sunday night run in hope of wresting ratings away from NBC's durable "World of Disney."

The better-produced and photographed show was the CBS entry, which stars Alex Rocco as a widowed photographer who travels about in a large camper with his two sons, one teen-aged, the other preteen.

The plot concerned hang-gliding, which Rocco was covering for a national magazine, and the effort of his older boy (Vincent Van Patten) to overcome his fear of heights and try the sport.

Somewhere in all this was a subplot about No. 1 son getting sweet on a hang-gliding college student (Kathleen Cody) who, after trying to catch his attention, almost left him just hanging there.

There was a lot of ominous music, a must for critical moments, but the plot was thin, likewise the dialog.

Still, Rocco, who vaguely resembles NBC's Tom Snyder, was an appealing sort of father, and his two TV sons — the younger is played by Leif Garrett — are reasonably competent actors.

The show may turn good in time if it gets better scripts and keeps up the good scenery. Last night's scheduled outing costarred the beautiful beach country near Monterey, Calif.

"Swiss Family Robinson" is based on the classic shipwrecked-family novel by Johann Wyss, although ABC calls the show "Irwin Allen's Swiss Family Robinson" because Irwin has adopted them.

Irwin is the man who gave us "The Poseidon Adventure," a big-screen disaster film. With "Swiss Family," he has a small-screen film disaster.

Martin Milner, fresh from "Adam-12," is stranded as head of the Robinson clan, which includes one parrot, one wife, three kids, and an old, bearded salt, played by Cameron Mitchell.

You know Mitchell is an old salt because when a typhoon starts whispering through the palm trees, he rasps to the kids, "Mates, we better batten down the hatches. There's a big blow comin'."

Prior to the big blow, we learn that Fred, the oldest child, has been afraid of water ever since he nearly drowned during the shipwreck he can't forget.

He keeps having daymares about almost drowning but overcomes his fear to save his kid brother from doom on the family raft.

I know it's a family show and not much is required of it, but "Swiss Family" is so child-like in writing, acting and production it gives infantile a bad name.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1975, The Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A936 ♥85432 ♣82

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid four spades. You have excellent spade support and an unbalanced hand which is just what this bid shows. Three spades would suggest a hand with greater high-card strength, while two spades would not do justice to your playing strength. A double of two hearts might not be all that profitable and runs the risk that the opponents might uncover a diamond sacrifice against your spade game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ106 ♥A6 ♣954 ♣J732

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four clubs. Partner's reverse bid has shown a strong hand, and slam is a distinct possibility. It is obligatory for you to do more than merely give a preference, and only a jump raise will describe your holding.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK865 ♥93 ♣AQ106 ♣99

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. You are not strong enough to introduce your diamond suit at the three-level. That action, known as a "high-reverse," would show a hand equivalent to 19 points.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K73 ♥J7 ♣K9542 ♣J6

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♣ 1 ♥ 1 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid two no trump. You have 10 points and a good six-card suit, that should provide a source of tricks. Partner's free bid of one no trump shows an above-average hand, for he would have passed West's overall with a minimum opener. To rebid your diamonds would suggest to partner that your hand was unsuited to no trump, which is not the case.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ7 ♥954 ♣J72 ♣AQ82

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dbie. Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—Two no trump. You have 12 good points and two stoppers in the enemy suit and a jump in no trump is indicated. It would be poor tactics to jump in your club suit, for it is most unlikely that you could make eleven tricks in clubs when three no trump would fail.

Q.8—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ863 ♥7 ♣J105 ♣872

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ 2 ♣ 3 ♥ 3 ♣ 4 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. Your preemptive jump overall described your hand exactly, and you should leave any subsequent bidding decisions to partner. He might have offered a spade raise purely to jockey them into four hearts, which he intends doubling.

Says Spider Beneficial

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — If spiders have been unpopular house guests since little Miss Muffet had her dinner interrupted, an Oklahoma State University entomologist says it also could be that spiders find humans somewhat revolting.

Entomologist Ken Pingston said spiders avoid contact with man as much as possible.

"In general, we have nothing to fear from most spiders," he said. "Some will bite in self defense if accidentally touched, but the venom of most spiders is relatively harmless to humans."

But, he said, if a black widow or brown recluse should bite you, "it's best to head for the doctor. Take along the spider that caused the bite for positive identification, if possible."

Pingston suggested brushing down webs and crushing the cocoon-like cases, which contain eggs, to control household spiders.

"Many of them are actually beneficial, however."

"They feed on flies and other household insect pests," he said.

State Acquires Prairie Areas

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Missouri Conservation Commission says four tallgrass prairie areas have been acquired by the state.

Natural areas are ecological systems, often so rare and fragile that very much disturbance would ruin them. The four newcomers bring the total natural area system to 42, with a total of 5,038 acres.

750-Acre Farm Run By 20-Year-Old Woman

By MARTHA MANGELSDORF MAPLE HILL, Kan. (UPI) — A place in the country might seem the ultimate dream, but for a single girl, running a 750-acre farm singlehandedly is walking a thin line between ecstasy and despair.

A PLACE IN THE COUNTRY might seem the ultimate dream, but for a single girl, running a 750-acre farm singlehandedly, it's walking a thin line between ecstasy and despair says Nancy Crenshaw. (UPI Photo)

"It's a good life if you love it, otherwise it will break you," says Nancy Crenshaw, 20, a 110-pound blonde who bought half a partnership in the farm at the edge of the Flint Hills west of Topeka in March.

She moved into the three-story frame farmhouse after graduation from Colby Community College with a degree in animal technology. She was raised on a farm south of Manhattan, Kansas, but none of that completely prepared her for the work and heartache of running her own place.

"I'll be scrounging three years or better to get this place really going, especially if the market doesn't go up," Nancy said in an interview. "It's discouraging to send calves in and only get $200 for them."

She figures it takes about $320 to make expenses feeding calves to 800 pounds.

"The banks own most of us," she said. "I'd have liked to hold my wheat but I had to sell to pay a note."

She sold her 30-acre wheat crop at $3.35 and the market climbed to $3.60 a bushel.

Nancy refused to admit she has nearly been beaten by drought, low markets and calves dying in the last five months.

"If you keep thinking about things it'll drive you crazy," she said. "I guess you sort of just start accepting things. I cried more that first week than ever. I fought it so hard and it seemed everything went wrong. I guess that's the nice thing about being a woman. You're allowed to cry anyway, but I never let anyone see me."

Nancy lost two calves. One she had treated five days and it appeared improved enough to turn out. But the next day it faltered and died.

"When we lost calves at home it bothered me, but it really never occurred to me the money and time that went with them," she said. "I lost one I treated and one that was a week old and I don't even know why."

"Now I've got a cow to feed for a year that won't give me anything. I wonder sometimes how in the world anybody makes it on a farm."

Drought and weeds nearly ruined her 40 acres of milo. The milo, needed to feed her 135-head of registered Angus, was destined for silage "because it's hopeless."

Nancy's day begins outside about 6:30 a.m. and ends 14 or 15 hours later when work inside renovating the house, starts.

Nancy handles most vaccinating, treatment, delivery and artificial insemination for her cattle. Commercial artificial insemination costs about $100 and neither her fences nor her pocketbook can afford owning good bulls. For big jobs she exchanges labor with neighbors or her father.

Her subsistence garden has been neglected but the freezer is full. Except for the one real luxury she affords herself, pop, she buys little at the grocery store.

She admits it's hard to discipline herself not to buy a new pair of jeans or pop or junk food at the store. She would like to make things more comfortable in the house, which currently is furnished with sale items including a $10 couch.

"I would really have liked to buy a pickup truck this summer," she said. "I have to haul everything including the calves in the back seat of the Ford Galaxy. But I just don't have the money."

She's not scared of rabid animals or prowlers. She's already chased one prowler who ran from the house carrying something. She has a shotgun and knows how to use it.

"I really only worry about getting hurt," she said. "I worry that living alone no one would know for a day or so. Well, I don't constantly worry but I don't know what I'd do. I'm more careful that I ever was at home."

Nancy once dreamed about working with animals at a zoo in Phoenix. But the farm sale came up in March and it wasn't something that would wait. A job at the zoo opened a month later. But Nancy was already in debt and she tries not to think about the zoo now. She plans to stick.

"I guess it's pride mostly," she said. "I want to see this place do well. If other people can do it so can I. It's in my blood I guess."

Nancy dreams of the day when she's independent on paper as well and is known for her Angus. She would like to see the day when she can hire help and go on the show circuits. But that is farther away than she had once thought.

"Hope is different now. It's working hard for what you want. It used to be just wishing you'd get lucky. But that's not enough any more."

Urban Masses A Problem In Large Asian Cities

By KEVIN RAFFERTY

London Financial Times-UPI

The Governor of Jakarta has hit on one way of solving the problem of masses of people teeming the Indonesian capital. Every so often his men swoop on vagrants on the streets, truck them outside the city limits, and dump them there.

Jakarta is one of many Asian cities which are growing even faster than the burgeoning general population.

Even more so than in urban America, the growing populations of Asian cities are a major problem. Their huge numbers and the way they are packed together like sardines means that governments must provide expensive infrastructure facilities — sewerage, decent housing, transport, education.

The list of Asian cities trying — and failing — to cope with problems of urbanization is a long one. In Calcutta and Bombay, experts have lost count of the number of people who have no permanent roof over their heads. Some say 100,000 in each city; others would guess as high as a million.

Karachi, Pakistan's main port and largest city, presents a prosperous surface appearance, with many new skyscraping banks and other public buildings. But Karachi has an ugly backside of squatters' hovels which led a group of United Nations experts recently to name it Asia's dirtiest city.

Dacca in Bangladesh had hardly 100,000 people when the British left in 1947; today it has about 2 million. Bangkok also looks prosperous from a distance but threatens to choke on its own traffic and smog.

Pakistan is typical of much of the rest of Asia, with its overall population growing at between two and three per cent a year while its cities grow at five per cent or more. This comes about because as the population in the villages becomes too great, and landholdings too small, people drift to the towns in search of work and the promise of an adequate supply of food from government ration shops.

Usually they are either the poorest and the most hopeless or the relatively well educated who find that the rural environment offers no jobs for which they are suited.

The result often is that the government has to find more food for the urban population, which strains its budget and foreign exchange reserves.

In Calcutta two years ago, a senior official of the city's Metropolitan Development Authority boasted to me of a massive plan to create worthy second-class homes for everyone in the city. It would, he said, set an example for all the world.

When I last saw him a few months ago he was a much sadder man. "We shall be lucky," he said, "if we can manage to create a third-class city."

No one has found a way out of the mass urbanization-poverty spiral. Jakarta certainly has not. Given their free ride back to the countryside, many of the squatters simply turn around and make their way back to town again.

The outline of a solution can be seen, but it is expensive and involves a heavy political price.

Experts say governments could start by raising the price of rice to the urban masses. That in the long run would encourage farmers to grow more food, but in the short run would risk upsetting the urban mobs who have great power to bring down governments.

The government could then resort to land reform and to higher taxation on the prosperous farmers, but that would lead to loss of support from the big landowners who often are their best supporters.

The next step would be to build a system of semi-rural industries to provide an alternative magnet for the landless, and to redesign educational programs so that children are not educated in Western style for jobs they will never have.

But all of that requires dedication, money and planning which government concerned with short-term survival cannot afford.

It probably also would need a massive commitment from the developed world in offering trade markets, and the developed world has not so far shown itself unduly generous in this respect. It has enough problems of its own.

Farm Scene

By Edwin L. Yancey,
County Extension
Chairman

How do you decide on whether its best to store corn or sell at harvest. Between weather conditions that could still change crop output, and indecision about exports, there is plenty of uncertainty as to which decision would be best. Extension grain marketing specialist, Dr. T.E. Nichols, has put together some information that might be helpful, however. According to Dr. Nichols, the 1975 crop is estimated to be 5,687,248 bushels. That's considerably above the record-breaking 1973 crop. North Carolina farmers, on the other hand, will produce 107 million bushels compared with 116 million last year.

Corn harvest is well underway in eastern North Carolina with yields showing considerable damage from the early summer drought. Agriculturists and entomologists report that damage from the corn earworm is severe in some areas and there is a heavier weevil infestation in the fields than normal. (Farmers who plan to store corn in their own bins should plan to treat the grain if a heavy weevil population is observed. One percent malathion dust at the rate of 50 lbs. per 100 bushels of corn, or malathion 57 EC at the rate of 1 pint to 2-5 gallons of water per 1000 bushels is recommended.)

According to Dr. Nichols, the large corn crop in prospect—and the anticipated lower prices—could trigger an increase in domestic use over 1974-75. Corn and other feed grain exports for 1975-76 are still clouded by several uncertainties, chief of which are size of United States crop, general economic conditions in Western Europe and additional Russian demand. Dr. Nichols further stated that even with a gain in domestic feeding, the expected large corn crop would lead to a substantial increase of carryover stocks at the end of 1975-76. In fact, those stocks would more than double the more than 300 million bushel carryover this year. He predicts that harvest price in eastern North Carolina is likely to range around $2.50 per bushel; however, expectations of additional foreign sales are likely to encourage heavy farmer storage of corn and other grains this fall.

As a result of the availability factor, corn prices are expected to decline only modestly at harvest, recover briefly in early winter, then drift irregularly downward as the season progresses. Beginning prices in the summer of 1976 will be heavily influenced by new crop prospects in U.S., Canada, Russia, Europe and Argentina.

Space Colony Ideas Projected

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — A study on how it might be possible to colonize space either on an artificial planet or on Mars is being made by 25 scientists.

The exercise in utilizing engineering, social and economic theories, is an annual engineering systems design project sponsored by Ames Research Center at nearby Moffett Field and Stanford University.

Previous programs have centered on building a communications device to contact other intelligent life forms in the universe and creating new food supplies for earth.

This year project members will devise means to populate either Mars or an enormous man-made space habitat that would measure 19 miles long and four miles across.

NEW YORK (AP) — Concern over rising interest rates dragged stock prices lower again today.

Trading was exceptionally slow.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 4.38 at 804.91, and losers held a 5-3 edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

Wall Street had expected a day of light activity because of the observance of the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur.

Analysts noted concern over a $3 billion offering of 2-year Treasury notes scheduled for Tuesday at an expected interest rate of about 8.5 per cent.

The fear was that those government securities with such an attractive return would tend to drain money away from stocks as well as from savings institutions.

A quarter-point increase in the prime lending rate, began Friday by New York's First National City Bank, meanwhile continued to spread rapidly in the banking industry today.

Citicorp, First National City's parent holding company, was the most active issue on the Big Board, down 1/4 at 27 1/2 and just a notch above its low for the year of 27 1/2. Blocks of 20,000 and 17,700 shares traded at 27 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .18 to 44.08 in the first hour.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .20 at 83.28.

Baby-Saving Bid Failed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—A 2-day-old baby boy who had been taken under court-order from his parents because medical officials said he needed a blood transfusion died late Saturday night.

Hospital officials would not say whether the child had received the transfusion. They also declined to specify the nature of the child's illness.

District Court Judge A. Lincoln Sherk had ordered the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Isley of Reidsville, to turn over the child to the Forsyth County Department of Social Services after its birth Tuesday.

The Isleys are Jehovah's Witnesses and declined to permit the transfusion because of their religious beliefs.

"I considered it a justified use of judicial power to save a life," Judge Sherk said of his order.

Mrs. Isley reported to the hospital several days before the child was born. She was said to be suffering from pregnancy complications.

Rembrandt...

(Continued from page 1) across the painting to the right, slashing a center section about seven feet wide more than a dozen times. Knife marks were more than two feet long, and a piece of canvas about 12 inches by 2 1/2 inches was ripped off.

Two bystanders and guards who rushed in from other rooms helped to overpower the man. According to a guard, Rijk said he had been sent by the Lord to attack the painting.

"I was ordered to do it," he was quoted as saying. "I had to do it."

Police said he had a history of mental illness and had taken the knife from an Amsterdam restaurant where he had lunch. He was held on a charge of wilful destruction.

It was the second knife attack in this century on the painting. A jobless shoemaker protesting his inability to find work slashed the painting before World War I.

After the attack museum visitors poured through the chamber for more than an hour before the painting was screened and a notice posted: "We regret that Rembrandt's Night Watch is not on display due to wilful damage."

Two other artistic masterpieces — Michelangelo's "Pieta" and Pablo Picasso's "Guernica" — have been attacked in recent years while on public display.

Abzug Talking Senate Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Bella Abzug says her chances of running for the Senate next year are "very good."

"The public has been very encouraging in the city and upstate areas," said the Democratic Manhattan congresswoman, who would oppose Republican-Conservative Sen. James L. Buckley.

"If it goes on this way, who knows?" she added.

Lost In Cave 18 Hours, Found Light And Exit

BLUEFIELD, W.Va. (AP) — Three college students who spent a night lost in a mammoth cave said Sunday they felt their prayers had been answered.

The three, students at a church-related junior college in nearby Virginia, said they sang and prayed throughout the night. At dawn, they saw a glimmer of light that showed them the way out.

"We saw light on a rock, it was about the size of a pencil ... and followed it to the hole," said Perry Coffey, 18, of Gladstone, Va.

Because he was the skinniest at 6-1, 170 pounds, Coffey was shoved through the hole and alerted rescue teams to the whereabouts of his buddies, Larry Yates, 20, of Manassas, Va., and Jerry Johnson, 18, of Charlotte, N.C.

The three are students at Bluefield College, a two-year school run by the Baptist Church.

Coffey had squirmed through a narrow hole in the side of East River Mountain about 100 yards from the main entrance to Beacon's Cave where rescue teams prepared to re-enter the cavern.

The rescue came about 18 hours after the trio entered the cave Saturday afternoon. They had only planned to explore for a couple of hours.

Yates, who had been in the cave a year ago, said they followed arrows on the cave wall until they became lost about 4,000 feet inside the cave. Johnson said they had traveled "too far" into the cave when their lights went out. Then, he said, they weren't sure of which way to go.

"God was with us, praise the Lord," Yates said Sunday after the rescue.

Yates and Johnson had been given donuts and flexible plastic bottles of water through the tiny hole to tide them over until members of a team of spelunkers from Virginia Tech at Blacksburg, Va., could reach them.

They were taken back to the college campus for hot showers and food.

Rescue squad members had begun searching the cave, inside Bluefield city limits, before nightfall Saturday. Coffey said the three never heard any of the search teams.

"All we heard was all the hollering we did," he said. During the night, rescuers had found footprints left by the three students.

Beacon's Cave extends for four and a half miles in several directions inside East River Mountain, spelunkers said. The last rescue made in the cave by Bluefield authorities was about a year and a half ago.
